Clinton pushes sales blitz

President rallies allies for health-care campaign

■ Administration opens White House lawn for thousands to get health-care plan out of starting blocks.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton dispatched Cabinet members coast to coast and opened the White House lawn to a thousand allies Thursday to get the sales campaign for his health care plan out of the starting blocks. "We have to do it right and we have to do it right now," Clinton declared.

"As much as I wish this to be a celebration . . . I remind you that our work is beginning," Clinton told the show-of-force rally before heading to Florida for a nationally televised town hall meeting.

As Clinton began his push, everyone with an opinion, friend and foe, weighed in with judgments about Clinton's proposal.

"It's going to be a long, long tortuous road," said Senate GOP leader Bob Dole, praising Clinton for his pledge to compromise but criticising the Democrat's plan as "a little over-

Role in government

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Parliament voted Thursday to allow blacks a role in governing South Africa for the first time, and angry white right-wing lawmakers warned the decision could lead to civil war. Marcos convicted

MANILA, Philippines — A Philippine court convicted Imelda Marcos of corruption Friday and sentenced the former first lady to nine to 12 years imprisonment for each of two counts of corruption. The conviction ended the first criminal trial in the Philippines for the widow of former strongman Ferdinand Marcos, who was accused of massive corruption during his long rule.

Passenger: 'Smoke was everywhere; you could hear screams'

By Robert Dvorchak
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, Ala. — In the deepest hour of the dreamy night, 3-year-old Carol Ann Newton slept protected in her grandfather's arms. Dennis Stevens and his mother, returning from an Arizona vacation, dozed in their reclined seats. Australian Bob Bell peered out at the blackness of the Alabama bayou.

Then screeching wheels, mangled metal and desperate cries for help punctured the serenity aboard the Sunset Limited, an Amtrak train that became a death trap on its coast-to-coast run.

"There was a horrible noise and things started flying through the car. All the luggage was on the floor," said Dirk Capel, 60, a Dutch tourist making the trip from Los Angeles to Miami.

"I looked out the window and all I could see was water. I thought we were sinking. People were screaming, 'Oh, my God! Help us! Help us!'" Capel said hours after he was rescued from a passenger car stranded on a bridge to nowhere.

Capel, who had slipped off his shoes to get comfortable for the overnight leg, lost his luggage, money, passport and tickets in the wreckage. By day's end, he was wearing Red Cross-donated sneakers.

The nightmarish wreck occurred about 3 a.m. Wednesday, just minutes after the train's three diesel engines and eight cars had groaned out of the Mobile station.

About 10 miles north of Mobile, at a desolate stretch of backwater named Bayou Canot that is home to water moccasins and alligators, the train started across a 500-foot-long bridge built in 1909 of steel and timbers. Just an hour earlier, a 132-car CSX freight train with three locomotives had negotiated the span without incident.

But the passenger train's locomotives

IPAA official gives suggestions to boost industry

By Mella McEwen

Roy Willis, vice president for government relations for the Independent Petroleum Association of America, keeps a close eye on the powers in Washington.

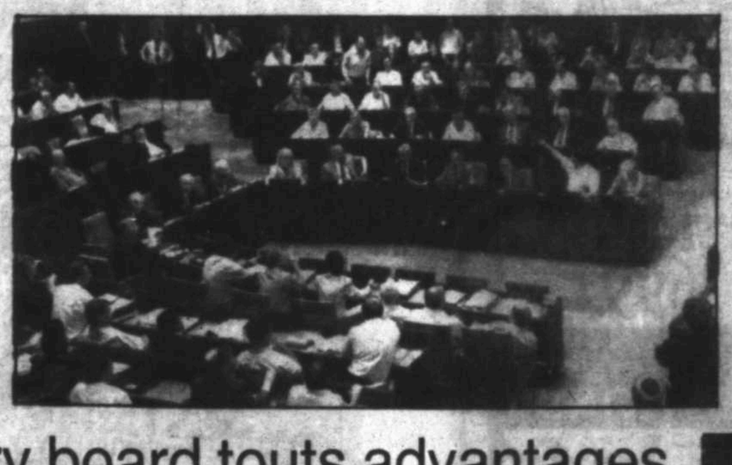

"I thought early on the Clinton administration would be more receptive to our industry than it has turned out to be," he said Thursday at a joint meeting of the Permian Basin chapter of IPAA, International Association of Drilling Contractors, and the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

He warned those attending the luncheon that the administration "is an activist administration on the regulatory front. My message is we can't let our guard down. And we must gird ourselves for massive efforts on the legislative front."

He noted that as a candidate, Clinton spoke glowingly of revitalizing the nation's energy industry and through Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary he has promised an energy initiative that would revitalize the industry and stem foreign oil imports.

To this end, Willis said, the IPAA has come up with several suggestions that would boost the industry and ease the na-

Parliament approves Israeli-PLO peace agreement by 61-50 vote

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin declared he won "freedom of action" to pursue Mideast peace after parliament ratified the historic Israel-PLO accord on Thursday.

Rabin said the 61-50 vote allowed the government to implement the agreement on Palestinian self-rule in the occupied lands and continue attempts to reach peace with Israel's Arab neighbors.

The margin was less substantial than Rabin had hoped for, but it put a convincing end to calls for early elections or a national referendum that would have slowed down the peace momentum.

Advisory board touts advantages of new terminal at town meeting

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

No tax dollars would be funneled into the $29 million terminal-building project at Midland International Airport, a member of the Airport Advisory Board said Thursday night at a town-hall meeting.

Midland Banker Ed Jones advocated investing the $29 million in a new and relocated terminal building rather than putting $13 million into renovating the existing building, which was built in the late 1950s and renovated in 1977.

"To do the right thing you have to spend more money today to save money in the future," Jones said.

Money for the new terminal would include:

Gunmen attack military center; Yeltsin calls early elections

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin called for presidential elections next June and there were signs Thursday of growing government impatience with hard-liners barricaded inside the parliament building.

Yeltsin ordered Interior Ministry police to "secure" public safety after accusing his political opponents of distributing dozens of automatic weapons to anti-Yeltsin demonstrators outside the Russian White House.

Yeltsin's foes seemed increasingly desperate and isolated, denied support by the people, the military and the international community after his decree Tuesday dissolving parliament. Lawmakers ordered the president to "surrender to legitimate authorities or leave the country."

Late Thursday, unidentified gunmen tried to storm the Moscow headquarters of the commonwealth military command and wounded two policemen before being repulsed, news agencies reported. The Postfactum news agency said the gunmen were hard-line army officers who support Russia's parliament.

It was the first violent clash since Yeltsin dissolved parliament on Tuesday.

Yeltsin moved to seize sole control of the government after 18 months of struggle with lawmakers over how to reform the economy and over who should rule Russia: the president or parliament.

The political stalemate has paralyzed the government and crippled the economy. Fueled by fears of turmoil, the Russian ruble plunged 18 percent Thursday to a record low, trading for 1,299 rubles to the U.S. dollar.

More than 1,000 anti-Yeltsin demonstrators remained camped outside the parliament headquarters, known as the White House, for a third day. Small bands formed "self-defense units" and about a dozen carried assault rifles.

Yeltsin warned lawmakers and their supporters that he would punish those ignoring his orders and those possessing weapons without permits.

"Dangerous weapons are falling into the hands of extremists, tramps, the mentally ill, criminals and mafia gangs, who have been gathering around the White House with the aim of getting uncontrolled weapons," presidential spokesman Anatoly Krasikov said in a statment issued on Yeltsin's behalf.

"This poses a serious danger to people's safety," he added. "The Interior Ministry has been given directions on the assumption of a need to secure the safety of citizens."

The Defense Ministry claimed the hard-liners were preparing to attack the ministry, but the improbable claim appeared to be a possible excuse to crack down on the anti-Yeltsin forces.

Yeltsin expressed hope Wednesday there would be no violence.

"We would not like and do not intend to use any force," he said. "We want everything to go peacefully, without blood."

But by Thursday, Dmitry Ardamatsky, a member of Yeltsin's press service, said officials would not rule out the use of force to disarm Yeltsin's opponents.

"The Interior Ministry may use specific methods to neutralize the danger caused by the extremists," Ardamatsky said.

In a move aimed at reassuring Russians that he is committed to democracy, Yeltsin on Thursday called for presidential elections June 12, two years ahead of schedule. On Tuesday, he set elections to a new parliament for December 11-12.

U.N. to deploy special observer force in Haiti

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council set up a 1,267-strong mission of police monitors, army engineers and trainers Thursday to promote human rights and bolster peace accords in Haiti. It deplored the political violence there.

The 15-nation council voted unanimously to create the U.N. Mission in Haiti for six months, at an estimated cost of $50 million.

General Assembly President S.R. Insanally of Guyana told reporters meanwhile that he expected deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to address the assembly in coming weeks. "It is in the cards," he said.

The Haiti mission will be the 15th current U.N. operation. On Wednesday, the council established a 440-member military observer mission for Liberia.

A council resolution expressed concern "about the escalation of politically motivated violence in Haiti at this time of critical political transition" and cited the "urgent need" for the international community to assist.

It called on all factions "explicitly and publicly to renounce and to direct their supporters to renounce violence as a means of political expression."

Hopes for a smooth return to democracy in Haiti have been set back by a rash of political killings blamed on reservists from the army, which is largely anti-Aristide.

The U.N. mission will not be a traditional peacekeeping mission to help restore law and order, and police and military personnel will not replace the Haitian army and police.

Instead, about 570 police observers would monitor Haitian police to help protect human rights. They also would help train a professional police force. Haitian police traditionally were merged with the army, and a major purpose of the mission is to upgrade and professionalize both forces.

A 700-member military component would consist of an army corps of engineers who would reconstruct roads, bridges, hospitals and schools and build new housing.

They also would help train army officers and construction engineers in the poor Caribbean island nation, which has been torn by violence, its infrastructure a mess. All training would be non-combat.

U.S. Ambassador Edward S. Walker told the council, said Haiti's "civic institutions ... must have legitimacy in the eyes of the Haitian people, they must be accountable to the Haitian people, they must operate in behalf of the Haitian people."

The council called for swift deployment, but set no date. France, Canada, Venezuela, other Latin American countries and possibly the United States are expected to contribute personnel.

The council asked the Haitian government to take all steps to ensure the safety of U.N. personnel and their freedom of movement.

Layoffs now threaten workers in Japan

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press writer

SAYAMA, Japan — One need look no further than the parking lots to see company loyalty runs high at Honda Motor Co.'s sprawling Sayama plant.

Preludes, Accords, Civics — most shiny new and many probably made right here — fill row after gravel row.

But ask the workers in this 6,400-employee bastion of blue-collar pride how they feel about their jobs these days and they are likely to echo their American counterparts.

"Fuan," they may say. Insecure.

As Honda, like Japan's once invincible auto industry in general, struggles to survive recession and plunging profits, many of its employees feel they are being undercut. And they see some of the threat coming from American workers.

While U.S. auto workers fret over the possibility of losing work to cheaper foreign labor because of the North American Free Trade Agreement, similar concerns are beginning to be felt in Japan because of the surging value of the yen.

Already in the process of eliminating 3,000 of its 43,000 workers in Japan, Honda this week confirmed plans by March 1996 to produce all of its popular Accord and Civic models sold in North America at its factories in North America.

"To be honest, it's a blow to the pride," Sayama plant worker Tadao Sanada, 48.

He spoke as he and dozens of other workers, clad in their white cotton overalls, wrapped up a day's work and headed off for home in this drab, working-class suburb of Tokyo.

"It just doesn't feel right for work to be going over to the Americans," he said.

Honda spokesmen stress that, in keeping with its policy of local production, Honda's factories in Ohio and Canada produce most of the two models already. Of 393,477 Accords and 219,228 compact Civics sold in the United States last year, only 60,000 Accords and 70,000 Civics were made in Japan.

Croats cling to last village in tough Serb zone

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — Croats clinging to their last village in Serb-controlled land are in danger of being driven out or killed in retaliation for a brutal Croat attack, a U.N. official said Thursday.

U.N. civil affairs chief Cedric Thornberry made the report as tensions rose once more between Croats and Serbs — enemies in a 1991 war that left Croatia independent from former Yugoslavia, but a third of its territory in Serb hands.

The Croatian government demanded Wednesday that 14,000 U.N. peacekeepers, whose mandate expires Sept. 30, pack up and leave in two months if they cannot guarantee Serb-held land will be returned.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said Thursday that he himself had been tempted to recommend withdrawing U.N. troops from Croatia, but said that would result in more conflict.

"I have been sorely tempted, in light of the criticism of (the U.N. force) by both sides, and the dangers and abuse to which its personnel are exposed, to recommend the withdrawal of the force altogether. But I am conscious that such a step could only result in further conflict," Boutros-Ghali wrote.

The original six-month U.N. mandate has been extended three times, but a national consensus has formed among Croats that the U.N. presence has only helped the Serbs.

Rebels down 3rd jet during Georgian siege

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Abkhazian rebels attacked a third passenger plane in three days Thursday at Sukhumi airport as Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze predicted government reinforcements would arrive soon.

Refugees trying to flee the Black Sea city were boarding the aircraft when it was hit by a missile from offshore, Georgian officials said.

Several people reportedly were killed, but the exact casualty toll was not immediately known.

Abkhazian gunners also shot down a Georgian SU-25 war jet, and fighting was fierce around the city again.

Shevardnadze, who has vowed to remain in Sukhumi despite heavy shelling from land and sea, walked the streets in combat gear talking to residents.

"I am optimistic, as I know only a few hours remain before our troops break through" from the south, Shevardnadze said. "The situation then will change rapidly."

The airport — the government's only link to the rest of Georgia — was closed after the the plane was hit. But Georgian officials said their forces had punched a hole through the Abkhazian blockade around the airport. Georgian forces advanced to within half a mile of the airport.

Abkhazian leader Vladislav Ardzinba's appeal Wednesday for talks with Shevardnadze was another sign that Georgian forces might be making progress. Shevardnadze did not respond to the offer, but his chief military adviser, Vladimir Chikovani, called it "cynical" and an effort to buy time.

More than 3,000 people have been killed .

High unemployment, taxes boost Nicaraguan unrest

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Ordinary citizens joined striking transport workers in throwing up street barricades Thursday as a wave of anger over tax increases and economic woes swept Nicaragua's capital.

At least two people have been killed since the indefinite strike began Monday, when 30,000 bus, truck and taxi drivers went off their jobs across the country to protest a new vehicle tax.

On Thursday, thousands of ordinary citizens began streaming to barricades of flagstones and flaming tires all over the city to back demands that the tax be canceled and gasoline prices cut.

"The people are joining in this protest because of the terrible shape of the economy. We don't have jobs and we just can't stand this anymore," said Victor Lopez, 18, an unemployed construction worker.

Estimates of unemployment run as high as 60 percent, three years after the end of the eight-year war between U.S.-backed Contra rebels and the former leftist Sandinista rulers.

Some people expressed fears of a civil uprising, but there was no sign that the government of President Violeta Chamorro was in danger of falling.

Barricades blocked most major roads and highways throughout the capital and the country. Bus service, Nicaragua's principal form of transportation, stopped. Schools, shops, businesses and most government offices were closed.

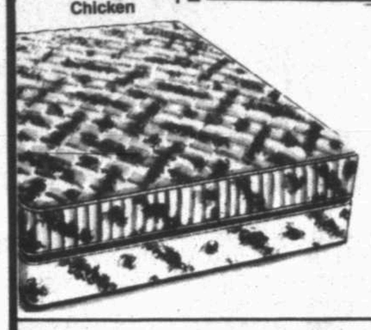

There was no progress being reported from a set of marathon negotiations at the National Assembly involving strikers of the National Transport Commission and members of Mrs. Chamorro's Cabinet.

Hundreds stood about the barricade of flagstones on the Pan-American Highway where a policeman and a bystander were shot dead Tuesday during a clash between strikers and police.

The stench of burning tires hung in the air, and strikers brandished daggers and machetes.

Today to be cloudy, chance of rain

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of rain, a high in the mid-80s and south winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low in the mid- to upper 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be partly cloudy with a high in the lower to mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 66, Thursday's high reached 90, compared to the record high for that date of 99 set in 1933. The record low was 57 set in 1989.

STATE

A weak cold front moved into the southern portions of the Texas Panhandle Thursday bringing some rain to the area.

Skies were cloudy along and north of the front with low clouds and patchy fog. A few showers and isolated thunderstorms also developed near the front.

It was mostly sunny over the remainder of West Texas. Temperatures were in the 50s under the cloud covered panhandles with mostly 80s and 90s elsewhere. Extremes ranged from 55 degrees at Dalhart to 96 degrees at Wink.

In South Texas, showers and thunderstorms moved inland Thursday to the lower valley. Otherwise, skies were partly to mostly cloudy.

Temperatures were well into the 90s across the region with record highs in Austin, Port Arthur and Corpus Christi.

Skies were partly cloudy across North Texas, and temperatures remained warm. Highs were generally in the 90s. Extremes ranged from 89 degrees at Abilene to 95 degrees at Lufkin.

The forecast for West Texas calls for a chance of showers or thunderstorms through tonight. Otherwise, it will be partly to mostly cloudy. Highs will be in the 60s north and 90s south. Lows will be in the 50s and 60s.

In South Texas, skies will be partly cloudy with a slight chance of showers and thunderstorms along the coast. Highs will be in the 90s with lows in the 70s.

There will be increasing cloudiness over North Texas today with a chance of thunderstorms. Highs will be in the mid-'90s with lows in the 60s.

NATION

Torrential rain deluged eastern Missouri and southern Illinois on Thursday, while sunny skies prevailed over the western part of the nation.

Showers and thunderstorms around the St. Louis area in east-central Missouri associated with a cold front slowly crossing the central United States produced nearly 5 inches of rain between late Wednesday night and Thursday afternoon.

Trailer parks were flooded and a highway was submerged under 4 feet of water, adding more misery in a state already battered by summer flooding. A suburban St. Louis woman drowned, and another woman was killed when her house was swept away.

Heavy rain left many roads flooded in Washington and Saint Francois counties. Basement flooding was reported near creeks in Genevieve County, and water was reported flowing through levee breaks in Perry County.

Showers and thunderstorms also produced nearly 2 inches of rain at Columbia, Mo.; about 1½ inches at Paducah, Ky.; and 1¼ inches at Louisville, Ky., and Warrensburg, Mo.

Showers and thunderstorms extended from southeastern Kansas and eastern Oklahoma to Tennessee, Kentucky and southern Indiana on Thursday afternoon, with strong thunderstorms in northern Arkansas and western Tennessee.

Elsewhere, a few showers and thunderstorms fell in south-central Texas and extreme southern Florida. Light rain and drizzle prevailed from Ohio to northern New England.

Skies were sunny across most of the nation west of the Great Plains and over the Dakotas and the upper Mississippi Valley. Skies were partly sunny from eastern Texas to the south Atlantic Coast.

BOOST: IPAA official keeps eye on Washington

tion's dependence on imports.

Willis said the first suggestion is capital formation. He said the problem of imports must be dealt with at the border, and he suggested an import fee be enacted that would help pay for new tax inducements to boost domestic production and new drilling.

Focus is also needed on marginal production, Willis said.

"No other country produces from more marginal wells than the United States," he said.

The country has 500,000 wells that average two to three barrels a day. And the current overproduction by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — which have sharply weakened prices in recent months — means that, unless prices start increasing, marginal wells will be shut in because operating them costs more than the crude they produce, he said.

"We've never imported more oil as a percentage of our total consumption as we have since this past June. And that percentage will rise from 50 to 75 percent if we lose a quarter of the marginal production in this country," he said.

Returning to the issue of an import fee, Willis said IPAA estimates indicate that if the United States raised the current fee — about 10 cents a barrel — to a level equal to what Japan charges on imported oil — about 85 cents a barrel — it would generate $1.6 billion a year.

"This is one way to generate capital to invest in this country. The revenue would let Congress cut the capital gains tax and expand investment credits," he said.

He said another issue is regulatory relief.

"The administration must give some regulatory certainty to this industry," said Willis, adding that IPAA and other industry officials have talked with the administration about streamlining the regulatory process.

"Tell us what your goals are that you hope to achieve in regards to human health and the environment, then let the private sector determine the most efficient means of achieving those goals," he said.

"We need to streamline regulations and cut costs so producers are no longer spending more on environmental compliance than they are on new drilling and production."

There is also the issue of access, not only to public lands onshore and offshore but access to technology, Willis said.

Other issues that are sure to confront the energy industry are Clinton's health-care reform, which was unveiled Wednesday night, and the North American Free Trade Agreement.

He urged members of the audience to help the IPAA develop a proactive agenda by telling state, regional and professional associations what is needed from Washington legislators. And he urged them to help the industry develop a unified set of goals and speak with a unified voice. The industry needs to get the message out about what oil and gas is really about, he said.

"We need to be more proactive in the media. We need to get our message out and we need to be focused and realistic," he said.

generous and underfunded."

Still, with congressional hearings set to open next week, Democrats and Republicans seemed to be competing in their eagerness to get something done.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., urged Democratic leaders to impose strict deadlines, such as a wrap-up of initial hearings by Thanksgiving, committee votes by next April, a floor vote by June and a bill to Clinton by August.

"My hope is that we can do it sooner," countered Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, dismissing the notion of deadlines. "I hope we don't have to wait until next summer to get final passage."

The administration launched its day-after campaign before dawn. Vice President Al Gore went on a morning TV show, and radio talk show hosts, invited by the White House to broadcast from the front lawn, set up shop at 6 a.m.

Clinton, in inviting more than 1,000 supporters to another part of the grounds, asked for help in persuading the public the current system is grossly inefficient. Clinton's plan to provide universal coverage is expected to cost an additional $350 billion over five years — and he hopes to get much of that through savings in the current system.

"It is still sinking in on our fellow citizens," Clinton said of the possibility that savings could be had.

"There's still a lot of people that don't think we're going to get this done," Clinton said. But he also said the system has deteriorated so much that it will be possible to form a national consensus.

"We don't want to rush this thing; it's too complicated," Clinton said. "But we don't want to delay it, using complexity as an excuse."

Clinton asked for help in pressing members of Congress to keep pledges of bipartisanship on the issue.

Hillary Rodham Clinton, who led the administration's health care task force, and Tipper Gore spoke, as well.

Indeed, virtually all of Clinton's Cabinet members were pressed into action. Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen crossed the state of Pennsylvania for tours of a rubber business, then an ice cream company.

Health Secretary Donna Shalala lunched in Los Angeles at a seniors center; Attorney General Janet Reno visited a neonatal unit in Buffalo, N.Y.; Kristine Gebbie, the administration's AIDS policy coordinator, told business leaders in Nashville, Tenn., the proposal "gives us the building blocks for treating this disease."

On Capitol Hill, Democrats were predictably praising. Republicans, while applauding the president's leadership, were a bit skeptical.

The White House showed no patience with GOP complaints.

"As the president made a national call to arms and a bipartisan appeal to join together to solve this crisis, the Republicans failed to respond in the same spirit," said a memo to supporters shipped out by the White House's "War Room" on health care.

Dole, Clinton's chief critic on other issues before Congress, said the president would have to pull together lawmakers from all sides — "otherwise, I'm not certain the bill will pass."

From the left, House liberals still committed to a government-run, Canada-style system warned the White House not to ignore them.

MIDEAST: Parliament OKs peace accord

(From 1A)

It also diminished fears that Israel would be torn by violence and political anarchy after recognizing the PLO, its bitter enemy.

"Now we shall build a new Middle East," Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said after the vote.

Still, hard-line opponents to the accord said that the government's mandate was slim, and they would try to force changes in the accord.

PLO spokesman Yasser Abed-Rabbo praised the result, telling Israel army radio from Tunis it was a "positive step" and that support for the treaty was larger in the street than in parliament.

Rabin had staked the credibility of the peace initiative as well as the future of his government on winning the vote, saying it would constitute a formal vote of confidence.

Eight legislators, including three from the hard-line Likud bloc, abstained from the vote, and one was absent in the 120-seat Knesset, or parliament. The result clearly embarrassed Likud, which failed to enforce party discipline.

One of the three Likud members who abstained, Meir Shitreet, said his party's opposition to a peace deal backed by the majority of Israelis was "political suicide." He said on Israeli radio that seven Likud members backed the agreement privately.

"There is no need for new elections. The parliament very clearly approved the agreement. The margin is very clear," Rabin's spokesman Oded Ben-Ami told The Associated Press.

Rabin said he will now focus on the painstaking task of establishing Palestinian autonomy in the occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho, and on pursuing peace negotiations with Jordan, Lebanon and Syria.

"This gives the government freedom of action to implement what it brought to the Knesset," he said on Israel radio.

Ben-Ami voiced hope for the resumption of Middle East peace talks in Washington next month and for detailed negotiations on what promised to be "a long and bumpy road."

Peres, speaking later on Israel television, said Israel and the PLO hoped to formalize their current unofficial contacts within two to three weeks, with the PLO naming several delegates for face-to-face talks.

As part of the accord, Israel will free 11,000 Palestinian detainees, said Palestinian leader Hanan Ashrawi.

Confirming a report in the Jerusalem Report magazine, Mrs. Ashrawai said the release could not come immediately. Prison services spokesman Dubi Ben-Ami denied the plan but acknowledged that the detainees' fate was still unclear.

Another 2,000 maximum security detainees will be moved from the occupied territories to Israel, the magazine said.

Mrs. Ashrawi also said Jan. 1 "could be a target date" for PLO chief Yasser Arafat's arrival in the areas of future autonomy.

Rabin's opponents, who say the agreement would eventually lead to a Palestinian state and endanger Israel's existence, meanwhile prepared for battle.

AMTRAK: Victims recall tragic rail wreck

plunged off the bridge and exploded, sending flaming diesel fuel across the already horrific scene. Half the bridge was gone, and 16 feet of murky water had quickly swallowed a luggage car, a crew dormitory car and a passenger coach. A second passenger car also tumbled in and was half-submerged, its back end high in the air.

A third coach teetered on the ragged edge of the collapsed bridge but held. Behind it were a lounge car, a dining car and, at the end and still on land, a sleeper.

When the search was suspended because of darkness Wednesday night, 41 bodies had been pulled from the water. The search for the missing and for crew members presumed dead in the wreckage resumed Thursday. At midday, Amtrak and federal agencies were still giving varying estimates on the number of missing.

Dennis Stevens, 33, and his mother, Elvi, 69, were flipped from their seats and her leg was broken when their coach landed on its nose in the water. They had expected to be home in Orange City, Fla., by evening.

"We were asleep, and the next thing I knew we were in the water. It sounded like a big blast," Stevens said. "I pushed out a window and got us out. Fuel was burning on top of the water. Smoke was everywhere. Then a tugboat came and threw some ropes to fish us out. You could hear screams."

In the same car were young Carol Ann Newton of Osyka, Miss., and her grandfather, James Augustus Jones. He smashed a window and pushed the tot to safety. Freeing others from the wreckage, Jones, 39, injured his neck and was hospitalized.

At the University of South Alabama Hospital in Mobile, nurses gave the child a Little Mermaid dress, and a baby doll.

MEET: Advisory board touts new, relocated terminal planement, over 20 years. The city started collecting the $3 PAC fees in January. Boardings in 1992 totaled 538,600. City Manager Mike McGregor said he would be comfortable with a low of 400,000 to 425,000 yearly boardings to help generate revenue for the project.

■ $12 million in Federal Aviation Administration grants over a six- to seven-year period.

Rather than tax money, the FFA funds come from 10 percent of the price of airline tickets, and the FAA in turn doles out those funds for nationwide airport improvements.

■ $4 million in airport revenue over a 20-year period from parking fees, landing fees and concessions.

The project funds would not include any city property or sales taxes, the board member said.

"The airport is really important to Midland, Texas," Jones said at the meeting, which was a non-voting special session of the City Council.

City Council members who attended the meeting at Midland Center were Mayor J.D. Faircloth and council members Pat Schneider, who called the town-hall meeting; Bill Morrow and Buddy Sipes.

Jones said the city-owned airport has "never ever used tax dollars" to build, operate, expand or remodel.

If the decision was to renovate the building, the estimated $13 million for the project would include $7 million in FFA grants and $6 million in airport revenue. PFC funds are not available for renovations, Jones said.

He said the Airport Advisory Board is recommending that the City Council pursue the $29 million building project, which will not be submitted to a vote of the people since no tax money is involved.

However, resident Don Kyser recommended that the council's upcoming action on the project be prefaced by a "binding referendum" of Midland citizens. No one in the town-hall meeting seemed to concur with Kyser.

Edna Walger, president of Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse (CATA), said the City Council can go ahead with the project "without voters having any say-so."

"I want the blessing of the people," Jones said.

"I think there is no other ecomomic alternative," Midlander Hugh White said of the $29-million project.

Midlander Ed Vogler, a former member of the Airport Advisory Board, offered his endorsement of the new-terminal project.

"The airport is Midland's umbilical cord to the rest of the world," Vogler said following the meeting.

The city management, in touting the project, has said that the airport is a "tremendous (economic) asset" to Midland and that aviation safety is a factor in arguing for the project.

Air traffic controllers are unable to see smaller aircraft ground traffic from their vantage point due to the obstruction of the present terminal building, he said.

If the City Council approves the project, the present building would be razed, and the new building would be located to the west at the site of the airport's covered parking. Site of the current terminal building would be an airliner ramp area.

"It has to be a business decision," said Vogler, who noted that the electrical and plumbing systems in the 34-year-old building have deteriorated.

The new terminal building would cover 150,000 square feet, which would be 25,000 square feet more than the present building, and could be expanded.

If the City Council follows through with the project, construction would begin in early 1996 and would be completed by 1998.

Mrs. Walger, in playing the devil's advocate, asked Jones what would happen to the airport and to taxpayers in the worse-case scenario if boardings were down, airport revenue dropped dramatically, and there was not enough money to pay off the indebtedness.

Jones said he was confident the economy, which, like nature, is never in a "straight line," would remain healthy.

"The resourceful people in this area have always risen to the task," he said.

S. Africa votes to end white-only rule; rightists threaten war

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Parliament voted Thursday to allow blacks a role in governing South Africa for the first time, and angry white right-wing lawmakers warned the decision could lead to civil war.

"This makes permanent peace impossible," said Ferdi Hartzenberg, leader of the white Conservative Party, who led his followers in walking out of Parliament after the vote. "We have lost a golden opportunity for peace."

The vote creates a Transitional Executive Council, comprised of representatives from the 26 black and white parties that have participated in the talks on ending apartheid.

The body, which one official said may function as early as next month, will be a watchdog of the government, with some veto powers. It will help oversee the holding of the country's first multiracial election April 27.

The African National Congress, the country's largest black group, hailed the vote as "a major victory for the forces of peace and democracy."

"For the first time in the history of our country, the racist Parliament has approved a bill which is responsible to the will and aspirations of the majority," the ANC said in a statement.

By giving blacks a role in government, the bill set the stage for ANC leader Nelson Mandela to endorse the lifting of remaining international economic sanctions against South Africa.

The move was expected Friday during Mandela's visit to the United Nations in New York.

In Washington, President Clinton applauded the "historic step" and promised to provide voter education and training "to create a level playing field" for all the parties in the upcoming campaign.

The dominant white chamber of Parliament, led by President F.W. de Klerk's National Party, voted 107-36 to create a power-sharing council, agreed upon this month at talks with the ANC and other groups.

The Indian and mixed-race chambers of Parliament approved the bill with no dissent.

But several parties, including the pro-apartheid Conservative Party and the black Inkatha Freedom Party, the ANC's rival, said they would boycott the council. The black militant Pan Africanist Congress also said it would boycott the council because it said it would not have enough power to control security forces.

The council can start functioning as soon as next month, Constitutional Development Minister Roelf Meyer said.

While it will not have absolute power, the panel will have veto power over some decisions — most importantly those involving increased use of the security forces to quell political unrest in black townships.

It also will help oversee foreign, economic and national security policy and the April elections.

It is charged with creating a new National Peace Force, combining the existing security forces with paramilitary and militia groups linked to the ANC and other black parties. The force is intended to quell political violence raging across the country in order to permit a free and fair election.

Mexico asks U.S. labor activists to leave

MEXICO CITY (NYT) — Mexican authorities said on Thursday that a group of 38 American and Canadian union workers were asked to leave Mexico on Wednesday because they had violated the terms of their tourist visas by distributing pamphlets opposing lower trade barriers inside a factory in Tijuana.

The Americans, however, gave a different version on Thursday of what happened, charging that Mexican authorities had illegally detained them for several hours aboard a bus and had harassed them until they were forced to leave.

Coming at a time when the North American Free Trade Agreement among the United States, Canada, and Mexico is being widely debated, the incident was quickly used by opponents of the agreement to show how Mexico treats its workers. Sen. Donald W. Riegle and Rep. David E. Bonior, both Democrats from Michigan who have criticized the trade agreement, called for a State Department investigation of the incident.

Union officials in the United States said a delegation from the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers crossed the Mexican-United States border to check on conditions in Mexican factories to see how a free trade agreement would affect their own jobs. The delegation included a state legislator, John Jeffries, who is chairman of the Black Caucus of the Maryland House of Delegates.

When the Americans and Canadians, accompanied by one person from the Netherlands, entered the Plasticos Baja California plant in Tijuana and started talking to workers the factory owners called Mexican authorities.

Mexican Interior Ministry officials said the visitors did not have permission to enter the plant. They also said that the tourist visas on which they had entered the country did not permit them to get involved in demonstrations.

U.N. confirms new fighting in famine ravaged Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Two aircraft strafed and bombed starving refugees lining up for rice Thursday at a food distribution center deep in the jungle, a U.N. official said. Five people were confirmed killed and 48 wounded.

The wounded were to be evacuated by a U.N. plane, said Augustine Mahiga, chief of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees mission in Monrovia.

He said it was unclear whose aircraft attacked the crowd of people near a rice distribution center in Vahun, a rain forest village in northwestern Liberia's upper Lofa County.

The attack was the most serious violation of a July 25 peace accord aimed at ending a nearly 4-year-old civil war that has killed more than 150,000 people.

The Lofa County region was once controlled by forces loyal to rebel leader Charles Taylor. They were pushed out four months ago by another rebel faction loosely allied with the government's army.

There have been reports of skirmishes between the two sides, but neither side is known to have aircraft capable of bombing. The only known combat aircraft in the region belong to a West African coalition army sent into Liberia in 1990 to put down Taylor's rebellion.

The West African army, though accused in the past of firing on and even bombing relief convoys it claimed were aiding the rebels, would seem to have little reason to bomb a refugee camp during a fragile phase in the peace process.

The coalition, dominated by Nigeria, is anxious for the peace accord to succeed so it can pull out its forces.

The isolated jungle region is home to an estimated 100,000 refugees threatened with malnutrition and disease. Hundreds of children are reportedly dying weekly.

The starving are among an estimated 250,000 people throughout Liberia threatened with death by malnutrition or related diseases.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk reviews a royal honor guard upon his arrival in Phnom Penh Thursday. He is to sign Cambodia's new constitution today, an act that also will reinstate him as king of a nation that has been torn by terrible wars.

Prince Sihanouk returns to throne in Cambodia

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk, shedding tears of emotion, returned to his homeland Thursday to become king again, 23 years after he was ousted as Cambodia's leader in a coup.

The nation has endured revolution and civil war, with hundreds of thousands of deaths, in the intervening years. Sihanouk's return to the throne and the installation of a new government follow a U.N. peacekeeping mission that guided the nation through elections in May.

Sihanouk resumes the throne Friday under a constitution that was adopted Tuesday by the 120-member assembly elected in that balloting.

He stood under a golden parasol at Pochentong Airport as a marching band in starched white uniforms played the national anthem. Both the anthem and the red, white and blue national flag carried by aides date from Sihanouk's earlier years in power.

Foreign ambassadors, senior U.N. officials and Cambodian leaders waited several hours at the airport to greet the 70-year-old Sihanouk upon his arrival from China, where he has been receiving treatment for a prostate tumor.

"To be a king again is not important for me, but it's good for Cambodia to be reunited ... by the royal regime where the king reigns but does not govern," Sihanouk told reporters.

"I think that we can be proud of being, from now on, a genuine liberal democracy, where the people will be the only masters of their destiny and will exercise their power through their legal representatives," he said.

Tears welled in his eyes as Sihanouk got into his black Mercedes Benz and sped off to the Royal Palace.

Kasparov, Short battle to draw in game 8

LONDON (AP) — Garry Kasparov and challenger Nigel Short fought to an exciting draw Thursday in the eighth game of their breakaway world chess championship.

Kasparov leads 6-2 going into the ninth game of the Professional Chess Association match on Saturday.

Short, who has often been the aggressor though he has yet to win a game, was two rooks down at one stage after a series of sacrifices.

Analysts regarded Short as having the initiative after a strong 20th move, giving up a rook for a bishop. But Kasparov, the highest-rated player in chess history, infiltrated his queen into Short's position to force a draw by perpetual check after 41 moves.

In Amsterdam Thursday, Jan Timman and Anatoly Karpov played to an 11-move draw Thursday in their rival title match sanctioned by FIDE, the world chess federation.

Kasparov and Short founded their chess association in February in a dispute with FIDE after qualifying for that federation's championship match.

Health-care plan to affect different families in various ways

By Christopher Connell
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — If you've been skating by without health insurance to make payments on your BMW, the Clinton health plan could mean some big new bills. But if you've been unable to get coverage because your child has a serious illness, you could be in for some help.

President Clinton says "the vast majority" of Americans would pay the same or less for benefits that would be as good or better than most enjoy now. And everybody would win because they would never worry again about losing health coverage, he says.

But there would be individual winners and losers by the millions if and when the nation switched to Clinton's Health Security Plan.

Most of the 37 million uninsured Americans would be winners. A good many are workers whose employers would have to start paying most of the health premiums for them and their families.

On the other hand, Nancy Scola of Towers Perrin, a major benefits consulting company, said workers with "wonderful benefits who pay hardly anything for them now are going to be the financial losers."

By forcing insurers to take all comers, without regard to their age or health, Clinton would drive up insurance rates for the young and healthy, while lowering them for older, sicker folks.

Here are some possible scenarios suggested by Marilyn Moon, a health economist for the Urban Institute. She developed the figures with support from the Kaiser Family Foundation.

The people are fictitious. The figures are based on the White House estimate that the average policy would cost $4,200 for a family and $1,800 for an individual:

UNINSURED FAMILY

Alice and Don Jones are young parents with a one-year-old infant, lots of health bills and no insurance. Jones makes $28,000 a year and works for a small business.

Under Clinton's plan, they would pay $840, or 20 percent of the family premium; his employer would pay the rest. They could choose a below-average cost plan with minimal out-of-pocket costs and the option to go to his heart specialist by paying 20 percent of the bill.

WELFARE FAMILY

Ann Adams, 31, and her three children get by on $9,000 a year in Aid to Families with Dependent Children and are covered under Medicaid. She has found many doctors unwilling to accept her family as patients.

The Clinton health plan would allow Adams to choose from a variety of health plans at or below the average cost. She might have to pay $10 to visit a doctor, but she would have access to far more doctors or a health maintenance organization.

MIDDLE-INCOME FAMILY

Marie and Steven Smith have one child. Both parents work, earning a combined $43,000 a year.

The family has a choice.

The Smiths can stay in an HMO under Clinton's plan and pay less. If the HMO charges $4,100, the Smiths' share would be $740 a year, or less than $62 a month.

The big loser would be Mrs. Smith's employer, who will be liable for roughly $100 a month of the family's premium.

Hillary Clinton's chocolate chips win cookie contest

NEW YORK (AP) — Make room, David, and move over, Mrs. Fields. The nation's tastiest chocolate chip cookies come from the kitchen of Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The first lady's recipe — it first gained notoriety following a campaign faux pas — was hailed as best of the bunch in a test conducted by Consumer Reports magazine.

The Clinton cookies tied for the top spot with the Original Nestle Toll House cookie recipe, the magazine's "trained tasters" said. Ten fresh-baked and 25 packaged brands of chocolate chip cookies were sampled.

The Clinton recipe became public during last year's presidential campaign. The first lady, defending her career as a lawyer, commented, "I suppose I could have stayed home and baked cookies and had teas."

Panel: Officer in King beating should be fired

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An officer convicted in the Rodney King beating and sentenced to 2½ years in prison should be fired, a police administrative panel ruled Thursday after a quick hearing.

Laurence Powell wasn't present at the 30-minute Board of Rights hearing in police headquarters.

The three-member panel deliberated less than 10 minutes before making its unanimous recommendation, adhering to rules that require automatic firing for a policemen convicted of a felony. Powell has been on unpaid leave.

Chief Willie Williams has five days to make the decision final. Powell's attorney, Michael Stone, said he expected Williams to uphold the board's recommendation.

Powell and Sgt. Stacey Koon were convicted in federal court of violating King's civil rights during a videotaped beating after a high-speed chase on March 3, 1991. They were sentenced to 30 months each. Both must surrender to U.S. marshals by noon Monday. Koon has a Board of Rights hearing pending.

Afterwards, Stone told reporters the firing decision was expected. He said Powell didn't attend the session because he preferred to spend his remaining free days with family and friends.

"He's terrified," Stone said. "There's no other way to describe it. He's terrified of things that, you know, we all would be terrified of and it's just a big unknown as to how this thing is going to work out."

Clintons instigate health-care debate

President Clinton's proposal to redesign the nation's health-care system to ensure that every American will be guaranteed comprehensive medical benefits "that can never be taken away" won't please every American or resolve every health-care problem. In fact, the plan — disclosed by Clinton Wednesday evening and brought to fruition by a task force headed by his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton — will likely not be approved by the Congress without major revisions and the necessary give and take of partisan congressional horse trading, and even with those revisions it won't become law before the summer of 1994 at the earliest. The Clintons recognize that fact.

But President and Mrs. Clinton deserve the praise of the American people for bringing the health care issue to the table and initiating what promises to be a lengthy and potentially volatile debate. Health care touches every American in some form and the United States is one of the few developed nations that does not have a national health care program. In that regard, reform of the health care system could well define Clinton's presidency.

During his speech, Clinton stressed six principles that he said were essential for any health plan — security, simplicity, quality, affordability, choice and responsibility. The Clinton plan would require employers to pay 80 percent of the average health premium for their workers, with employees paying the remainder. Small businesses, the unemployed and low-income workers would get subsidies.

Giant insurance-purchasing pools called health alliances would be created in each state to negotiate with doctors, hospitals and insurers, and consumers would buy their coverage through the alliances.

Those pools may be one of the bones of contention in the forthcoming debate because many Americans want to continue to choose the doctor they will see and that may not be completely possible under a national health care plan.

Of course, there will be much debate on the plan in future months. One point is clear: Health-care costs are rising at more than twice the rate of other prices and represent one-seventh of all U.S. spending. The rising cost must be controlled if the United States economy is to see improvement.

Fortunately, the Clintons have now opened the long-awaited debate on health care.

JACK ANDERSON

Perhaps Pentagon should heed Aspin

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Defense Les Aspin recently announced that the military was coming clean: Although Reagan administration officials had allegedly rigged the "Star Wars" defense system's results, this was an isolated incident that wouldn't repeat itself.

Anderson

Aspin can rightly dismiss charges of military deception that transpired before his tenure. But an unreleased General Accounting Office report suggests that officials working on Ballistic Missile Defense, formerly called the Strategic Defense Initiative, may not be heeding Aspin's admonition, according to Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., whose Government Operations Committee requested the investigation.

Just last month, on the longest stretch of white sand beach in the Hawaiian islands, the military launched a Strategic Target System missile know as STARS. Military officials said that the missile, originally designed to test the "Star Wars" defense initiative that would destroy incoming Soviet missiles, could only be launched from the pristine island of Kauai.

"The Kauai test facility is uniquely located to provide the appropriate range to launch the STARS missile into the (test) range," a Pentagon spokesperson told our associate Andrew Conte. A U.S. Army environmental impact statement also refers to Kauai as "the only reasonable option."

Congressional investigators have concluded, however, that the missile could have been launched from a different site — and at a $1.5 million savings. The report also determined that five other launches scheduled over the next decade could be moved from the island.

In a recent letter to Aspin, Conyers protested that "Star Wars" officials apparently misled the public and the Congress on the existence of acceptable alternatives to launching these test missiles from Hawaii.

Activists on the island have protested the launching of STARS from Kauai since launches require the evacuation of an area that the military believes a failed launch could fall into. The hazard area includes 2,000 acres of state land, within which lies 76 acres of a state park and an ancient burial ground. A spokeswoman from the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund on the island explains that in the event of a misfire, the cleanup would be "like running a bulldozer through the Arlington Cemetery."

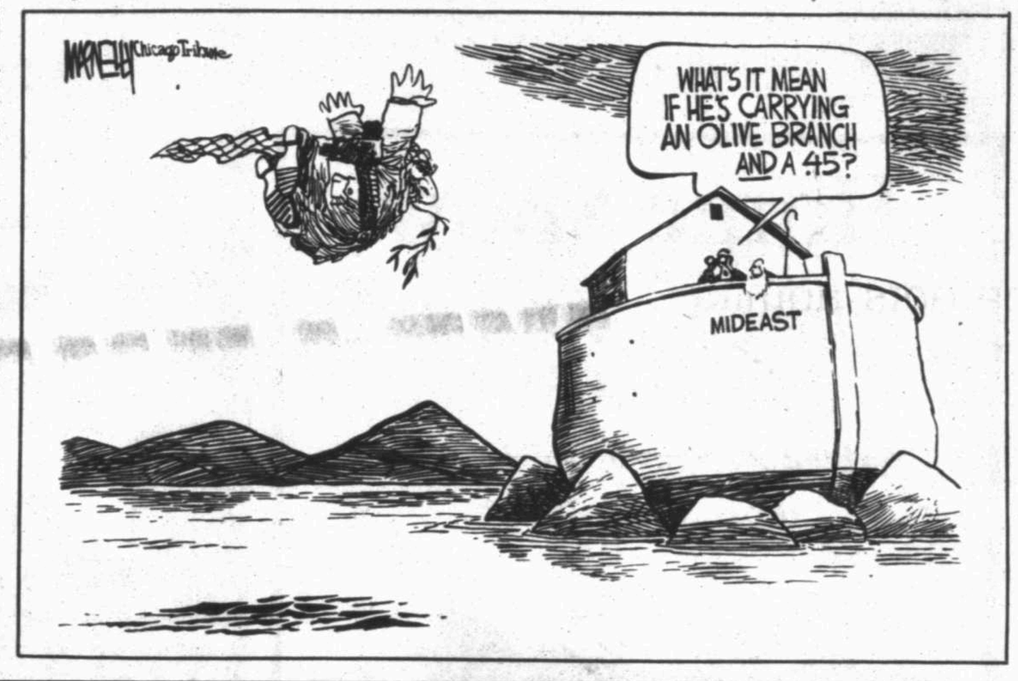

The hazard is hardly hypothetical, considering the mishap last June at Vandenberg Air Force Base in California. After an aborted missile launch, burning debris ignited a brush fire destroying 1,000 acres of property.

Conyers also questions whether the entire STARS program should be shot down. Every system that the military has said STARS was designed to test in the missile's environmental impact statement has either been canceled or delayed by the Pentagon's so-called "Bottom-Up" review.

The Pentagon defends the program, arguing that STARS "supports . . . potential Army and Navy theater missile defense programs and technical application for future potential national defense elements" as well as something called the Midcourse Space Experiment designed to track the flight of ballistic missiles from space.

"In keeping with President Clinton's call to eliminate the obsolete in our government," Conyers counters in his letter to Aspin. "We can save over $160 million by canceling this unneeded system. Why pour more good money after bad?"

CHARLEY REESE

Elite sacrifice economy for foreign policy

The people who have destroyed American prosperity are the same people now trying to finish the job with the North American Free Trade Agreement. The decline of America has not been an accident and it has not been the fault of foreigners.

Reese

From 1893 to 1970, the United States exports consistently exceeded imports. Since 1971, the U.S. has had a trade deficit in 19 of 21 years. In 1991 American workers earned average weekly wages 20 percent below 1972 levels. Let me repeat for the benefit of free trade ideologues. In 1991 American workers earned average weekly wages 20 percent below 1972 levels.

So what happened in 1970? The Kennedy Round of the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs made huge trade concessions — not for economic reasons — but for foreign policy reasons. Americans got free trade all right — and massive unemployment, loss of good jobs, the destruction of cities, the rise of crime.

But don't take my word for it. Go to your local library. Find the 1992 Foreign Affairs quarterlies and then read the article, "Trading American Interests," by Alfred E. Eckes, a former commissioner and chairman of the U.S. International Trade Commission.

Professor Eckes has written a precise history of how American economic interests were deliberately sacrificed by the foreign policy establishment to attain foreign policy goals. In other words, this elitist foreign policy establishment would sacrifice American jobs in order to gain some supposed concession on foreign policy. Since the end of World War II, this has been done over and over and Eckes cites chapter and verse, example after example.

Eckes writes, "From 1947 to 1972 the United States agreed to reduce its tariffs from an average 32.2 percent ad valorem on dutiable goods to a negligible 8.5 percent. Thus by January, 1972, when the Kennedy Round concessions were fully implemented, tariffs no longer sheltered high-waged American workers from low-paid labor abroad."

The results have been disastrous. The arsenal of democracy which was able to perform manufacturing miracles from 1941 to 1945 is now dependent on foreign suppliers for much of its key military components. In the 1940s, imports of goods and services were less than 4 percent of the gross national product; today foreigners control a majority of many U.S. markets — and that always means, make no mistake about it, unemployed Americans.

Check out this statement from the postwar foreign policy elite: "We have an unfavorable balance of trade, unfavorable to the taxpayer and unfavorable to the consumer," said the State Department of our trade surplus. "We must become really import-minded."

So understand: the drive to cut down America's trade surplus came right out of the executive branch of the U.S. Government. As Ross Perot says, "They gave away the store." Time after time, as Eckes documents, U.S. officials made trade concessions while foreign countries refused to reciprocate and then excused the give-away, claiming it was essential for some foreign policy or national security goal.

Time after time, the U.S. Trade Commission ruled American industries were being unfairly injured by imports and deserved protection and time after time, presidents — from Truman to Reagan — over-ruled them. The argument was U.S. needs Japan for cold war reasons — give 'em trade concessions; we need a base in Timbuktu, give 'em trade concessions; if we don't give country X trade concessions, it might go communist.

What happened was that the foreign policy elite deliberate sacrificed the welfare of the American working men and women to achieve its foreign policy objectives, many of which were of dubious value anyway. Japan was never going to embrace the Soviet Union whether we gave it trade concessions or not. A country which had to be bribed to keep it from becoming a colony of the Soviet Union wasn't worth bribing.

Your worst enemies were the American foreign policy establishment. They still are.

ART BUCHWALD

Disarmed PLO leader shoots down gun lobby

I watched the Arafat-Rabin lovefest on the White House lawn with Jekel Hyde, the president of Guns R Us, a weapons lobby dedicated to making sure that average American citizens, as well as members of street gangs, have access to handguns.

Buchwald

As Arafat walked out of the White House with President Clinton, Hyde exclaimed, "Oh, my God, Arafat is not wearing his pistol!"

"That's not anything to get excited about. I've been to many peace signings where the participants left their guns at home," I said.

"It doesn't look good for the gun lobby," Hyde muttered. "There are billions of people watching all over the world. They are going to get the impression that we disarmed Arafat before we let him come out on the lawn."

"That's ridiculous," I replied. "Everyone knows Americans can buy guns anywhere and at any time. I believe the message Arafat is sending is that he doesn't need a gun anymore to settle his troubles with Israel."

"He might be saying that, but it is a lousy photo opportunity. Guns R Us was going to do a documentary on how important handguns were in a safe and sane world, and we were going to persuade Arafat to get off a few shots in the air at the end of his speech. If they take his gun away from him now, who in this country will be safe when he leaves?"

"You had no inkling that Arafat would not come here fully armed?"

"None. I've never seen him without his pistol. To him it is an extra leg. Now, on the biggest day of his life, he is walking naked. I think I'll go home."

"Please don't, Hyde — one unarmed PLO leader doesn't change our gun mentality. Maybe tonight after the ceremonies we'll take Arafat to the TV studio and let him stick up Larry King."

Hyde was not to be mollified. He turned to the man on the other side and asked, "What's wrong with making peace with one hand and holding a Saturday-night special in the other?"

Hyde turned back to me. "Guns R Us is up against the wall. So many citizens keep complaining about all the people being shot and asking that guns be registered. It makes you sick. This is a perfect day and a perfect place for my people to lobby the Senate and House on the Brady Bill."

My heart went out to Hyde. He had been looking forward to peace in the Middle East like no other person in Washington. But in order to get a treaty, Arafat sold out the weapons dealers of America. In one blind gesture, he gave up the gun he wore at the United Nations and spit on the graves of the fathers of our Constitution.

"Maybe he has an Israeli Uzi under his tunic," I said hopefully.

Hyde said, "It would be a step in the right direction."

LETTERS

KMID should air 'NYPD Blue'

I am appalled at KMID-TV and the station manager, Steve Dant, for HIS decision not to show "NYPD Blue." He decided what was best for the viewers based on his beliefs and judgement. Wouldn't it have been better to air the show and then find out what his customers thought?

I also fail to understand all these people that have condemned this show without ever seeing it. How can anyone intelligently make a decision with no knowledge of the subject. I find some of the TV evangelists much more offensive and damaging than any prime time show, but apparently some sanctimonious, self appointed watchdogs think a show they have never seen is bad, while deceiving the public in the name of religion is OK if it saves a soul.

Also, for all the concerned parents, have you turned on MTV? If you don't want your children to watch any particular show then either turn off the TV or change channels.

Why buy high Basin prices?

So you want to know why people do not "Buy the Basin." It's the prices stupid!

Example in point — this summer we purchased a new ceiling fan from a local distributor. This is a very good fan and the distributor gave excellent service.

We are so satisfied with this fan we decided to buy another. Last week an ad for the same fan was advertised in a Dallas paper for $41 less than we paid in Midland. I called the store in Dallas and was told this was not a sale price but their everyday price. They advised me they would ship one for the advertised price plus tax plus $8.00 for shipping.

I contacted the local dealer and asked him if he could sell me one for the same price. He did not answer but said he keeps his money "in the basin." I told him that was why I was calling him. I wanted to get his price. He then said the Dallas company was selling these fans at cost. Now anyone who has walking around sense knows this is nonsense. I did not argue with him but I again asked him how much he would sell me one for. After a long pause, he quoted a price that was over $44 higher.

I am sorry Mr. Midland Distributor you just don't seem to get it! Your attitude is we citizens of Midland owe you our business. Sorry that's not how the free enterprise works.

To paraphrase a former U.S. president, "If you can't compete get the heck out of the business."

Warm thanks to caring folks

I would like to thank the Midland Reporter-Telegram, KCDQ, KODM, KOSA, KWES, KMID and others for their support with stories and advertising for The Kevin Murrell Medical Fund and the Bone Marrow drive held in May.

Also, thank you to a lot of the area churches including First Presbyterian Church, Kelview Heights Baptist Church, First Baptist, Church of Christ, Christian Church of Midland and many others who prayed for us while Kevin was fighting his battle with leukemia.

I have been touched by many people, who didn't even know me or my son, in our time of need. Thank you to those who donated to Kevin's fund and sent us cards and books.

I have lived in such a wonderful community for the past 10 years and it really became evident this past year while my son was ill. My friends and neighbors became my family, strangers became friends. It's something I doubt I'll find anywhere else.

I really hate to leave Midland but the time has come for me to go. My heartfelt thanks go out to all who have helped me in so many ways. Goodbye and God bless you all.

Anyone interested in being a bone marrow donor can contact the National Marrow Donor Program at 800-643-2448 or 817-885-4019.

Gephardt threatens all-out war on NAFTA

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In case the White House was wondering, House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt made it abundantly clear Thursday that he will wage all-out war against the free trade agreement with Mexico.

Previously vague about how actively he would campaign against the proposed North Atlantic Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), Gephardt told reporters at a breakfast meeting here that he will give speeches and write articles driving home his opposition to the accord.

"I'm going to be a part of the debate," he said. "I'm going to continue to state my point of view because I feel strongly about the issue."

Gephardt, a Missouri Democrat with close ties to organized labor, which is fiercely opposed to the pact, said he thinks NAFTA could come to a vote in Congress as early as November. If approved, the accord would establish a common trade zone among Canada, the United States and Mexico by phasing out tariffs and other barriers over 15 years.

With many lawmakers still deciding which way to vote, the White House had hoped that Gephardt would not actively battle NAFTA after he announced his opposition Tuesday. President Clinton said then that Gephardt's opposition "doesn't help, but I don't think it's fatal."

However, Clyde Prestowitz, a NAFTA supporter, said Thursday that Gephardt's persistence could persuade other House members to vote against NAFTA. Prestowitz is president of the Economic Strategy Institute, a think tank here.

Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., who is coordinating the fight for NAFTA in the House, said 63 or 64 of the 258 House Democrats are already committed to the treaty and that the number could rise to 90 or 100. If 90 Democrats were to vote for the pact, he figures, 128 of the 175 Republicans would be needed for it to pass.

But a survey of GOP House members, reported in the Washington Times Thursday, shows that only 79 Republicans are for or leaning toward NAFTA and that GOP support has dropped steadily in the past six weeks.

A spokeswoman for Matsui said Thursday: "There is hope for NAFTA, but it's going to be tight. It's going to come down to a few votes."

Prestowitz added that some Republicans may simply be "playing hard to get" in order to get concessions on the legislation putting NAFTA into effect. "It's just too soon to say NAFTA is doomed," he insisted.

NAFTA foes claim Gephardt's repeated opposition will persuade other members to vote against.

Girl, 11, grabs record for cross-country flying

Sixth-grader pilots small aircraft singlehandedly from Maine to California.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An 11-year-old became the youngest girl to fly cross-country Thursday when her small plane touched down in this city after a short hop over the desert from Phoenix.

Vicki Van Meter stepped out of the single-engine Cessna 172 and stood grinning as city leaders gave her gifts, including a tiny replica of the "Spirit of St. Louis," Charles Lindbergh's plane, which was built in San Diego.

She then headed to Sea World with her parents.

"I feel good about what I've done," Vicki told a crowd of about 100.

"But we just never expected there'd be this many people."

The sixth-grader from Meadville, Pa., set out Monday from Maine, accompanied by flight instructor Bob Baumgartner. She overnighted in Columbus, Ohio; Oklahoma City; and Phoenix.

Thursday's leg of the trip lasted three hours, 25 minutes.

During Wednesday's Oklahoma City-to-Phoenix flight, Vicki had to fight strong headwinds and turbulence that bounced the small plane and made her sick.

"It was a rough ride," Baumgartner said, the roughest the girl has ever encountered in more than 60 hours of flying. "But she hung in there like a real trouper."

The laconic Baumgartner said he never once touched the controls during the trip. He wouldn't have even if Vicki had got in trouble, he said. "I would have just helped her out. She has the skills."

The two didn't chat much during the trip, he said.

Vicki isn't eligible for a pilot's license until she turns 16. She wants to become an astronaut, but may shoot for a commercial pilot's job "if something with NASA doesn't work out."

The youngest person to fly cross-country is Tony Aliengena, who was 9 when he went from California to Boston and back in 1988.

Youth who killed parents admits no threats made

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lyle Menendez, his voice weary in his eighth day of testimony, acknowledged Thursday that neither of his parents said a threatening word before he killed them. But he said he feared them nonetheless.

"Did your father say, 'Tonight you die?'" Deputy District Attorney Pam Bozanich asked.

"No, he never said anything like that," the defendant responded.

"Did he say anything threatening?" she asked.

"I took everything he said to be threatening," Lyle said.

"Your father wasn't doing anything threatening when you came into the room, was he?" Bozanich asked.

"I thought he was going to kill me," the defendant said.

Lyle, 25, on trial for murder with his 22-year-old brother, Erik, has testified that they felt in mortal danger on Aug. 20, 1989, when they burst into the room where their parents were watching TV and opened fire with two shotguns.

Lyle said they had threatened to expose their father's molestation of his sons, a scandal which could ruin the multimillionaire entertainment executive.

The brothers initially told police they suspected their parents were killed by intruders at the family's Beverly Hills mansion.

Prosecutors, who are seeking the death penalty for the pair, allege the motive was simple greed and hatred and that the brothers carefully planned the killings.

On Thursday, Bozanich focused on matters that could help jurors decide whether the crimes were premeditated and evaluate the brothers' claim of self-defense.

To prove self-defense, California law requires that defendants show they were in "imminent danger" when they killed. Experts who will testify for the defense are expected to say such danger can be perceived by an abused family member even though it may not be readily evident to an outsider.

Lyle, the first brother to testify, told of years of sexual and emotional abuse by a tyrannical father and a disturbed mother.

He said his mother, Kitty, told her sons she hated them and wished they had not been born. His father, Jose, he said, would have killed to avoid a sex scandal.

Testifying about the night of the killings, Lyle said he was uncertain whether his mother was wounded or dead when he left the room, reloaded his shotgun with one round, and returned to finish her off.

"What threat did your mother pose to you when you ran out of the room and reloaded?" Bozanich asked.

"Nothing I can remember except the fear that was causing me to act, the same thing that was freaking me out," Lyle said.

Administration softens rules on hard-core child pornography

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration has changed its definition of hard-core child pornography in a Supreme Court case involving videos of young girls who posed seductively while wearing clothes.

In a written brief filed this week, Justice Department lawyers urged the setting aside of a ruling that had upheld a Pennsylvania man's conviction and five-year sentence.

He had been prosecuted under a federal law banning "exhibition" of a child's "genitals or pubic area."

A federal appeals court upheld Stephen A. Knox's conviction and sentence for possessing certain videos, ruling that the law applies "even when these areas are covered by an article of clothing."

■ More nation news/5B

Justice Department lawyers last March had urged the high court to reject Knox's appeal, arguing that the appeals court "correctly found that including scantily clothed displays of the genitals within the meaning of an exhibition leaves the statute directed at the hard core of child pornography."

The brief had been filed before Solicitor General Drew Days took over as the administration's chief advocate before the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court granted Knox's appeal in June, and will hear arguments in the case this winter.

The brief filed this week by Days and other administration lawyers said the appeals court "utilized an impermissibly broad standard" for determining what is child pornography.

"While the court of appeals was correct in holding that complete nudity is not absolutely required . . . the court erred in holding that simply focusing on the midsection of a clothed body may constitute an 'exhibition' of the unrevealed body parts beneath the garments," the government lawyers said.

The law, they said, "requires at least that the body parts themselves be discernible either through or beneath the clothing."

They urged the justices to send Knox's case back to the Philadelphia-based 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for further study.

Knox, from State College, Pa., was convicted after police in 1991 found in his apartment three video cassettes produced by the Nather Co. in Las Vegas.

The tapes showed girls, ages 10 to 17, dressed in bathing suits, leotards and underwear. According to court documents, the camera typically would zoom in on the children's pubic and genital area, which was covered by clothing, and display a close-up for an extended time.

Knox, an honors graduate student of history at Pennsylvania State University, was convicted of receiving through the mail and possessing visual depictions of minors engaging in "sexually explicit conduct."

Dynagen reaches settlement

■ Agreement was signed in the lawsuit filed by Odessa residents that claimed the synthetic rubber plant emitted offensive, damaging odors.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

ODESSA — A three-year battle between Dynagen Inc., and residents who live near the plant apparently has come to an end.

Dynagen officials announced Thursday that an agreement had been reached between the plant and the 1,300 residents who filed a lawsuit against the plant in 1990 over allegedly foul odors emitted by the plant.

"Today, we reached a settlement with the plaintiffs' attorneys and the plaintiffs' committees that handled the suit," said Dynagen plant manager Tim Gorman. "We still felt comfortable that we could win the case, but when we looked at how much time and money it would cost us and the plaintiffs, we felt it would be in the best interest of all concerned to reach this agreement. I mean, what would we have gained if we had gone to trial?"

Gorman said, despite conflicting reports earlier in the day about agreement over the settlement, both Dynagen's and the plaintiffs' attorneys had signed the settlement and an Odessa judge had removed the case from the docket Thursday.

The settlement included a $1.5 million payment to plaintiffs and the establishment by the plant of 15 annual scholarships for students attending Odessa College or the University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

"The scholarships will be for students living within two miles of Dynagen and will cover tuition and course-required textbooks," Gorman said. "The plaintiffs will set up a committee to decide who will receive the scholarships. And, we intend to keep up these scholarships as long as we are in business."

Dynagen, a subsidiary of General Tire Co., came under attack three years ago by neighboring residents who claimed that the synthetic rubber plant was emitting offensive odors. About 1,300 residents filed the lawsuit, claiming physical ailments due to the odors, which were allegedly coming from its solar ponds.

The lawsuit caused three years of turmoil for the plant and the city, with a contempt-of-court ruling against Dynagen in 1990 for polluting the air, battles be-

FRIDAY DAY WATCH

LIGHTS & SIREN

Q. Why are Midland's fire engines yellow and not the traditional red?

A. The exact color is actually lime green, although many years ago Midland did have red colored engines. One reason for the change to lime green was to have higher visibility at night. The color red is harder to detect in poor lighting conditions. Several cities have changed from red to yellow, white or orange for that reason.

Questions about emergency medical services or firefighting should be sent to Lights & Siren, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, 79702-1152.

Education grant

ODESSA — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm has announced that the Able Center for Independent Living is to receive a grant from the U.S. Department of Education. Gramm said the Odessa facility, which provides independent living services to persons with severe handicaps, is to receive $101, 287.

The Brown-Dorsey Medallion Home, located at 213 N. Weatherford St. in downtown Midland, is reputedly the oldest home in the city and contains a houseful of history. The home is owned and maintained by the Midland County Historical Society.

History has home in heart of Midland

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Too often residents overlook treasures in their own back yard and travel many miles to visit historical sites, even though a little piece of history exists in the heart of downtown Midland at the Brown-Dorsey Medallion Home.

Owned and restored by the Midland County Historical Society, the home was awarded a historical medallion by the Texas Historical Commission in 1982 because of its importance to the area as — reputedly — the first home in Midland.

Located at 213 N. Weatherford St. in downtown Midland, the home is surrounded by businesses and parking lots. But, it is guaranteed its safety from the bulldozers because of its historical medallion listing it as one of the many homes in the historical register.

Tours of the home are conducted only by appointment because keeping it open caused utility bills to soar and the upkeep on the home is funded solely by private donations, according to historical society President Nancy McKinley

Mrs. McKinley proudly takes groups through the home, pointing out significant furnishings and explaining the history behind the different pieces.

Z. Taylor Brown and his wife, Sara Mulholland, moved into the home in January 1900. The Brown family came to Midland in 1884 driving a herd of sheep from Navarro County, where they had moved after leaving Illinois in 1877. Brown was a native of Illinois, where he was educated and received two degrees from Blackburn University, one in law and another in engineering, although he used neither.

He entered the mercantile business with Frank Crowley and J.H. Barron in 1890 and later bought a ranch southwest of Midland before entering business with H.M. Garrett and building several businesses on Main Street.

In 1886 he bought the lot on Weatherford Street where a four-room house was already built. After several years the family moved to the ranch and started building a new home on the site.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown lived in the home until their deaths and one of their five children, Sarah Dorsey, continued to live in the three-bedroom home with her husband and seven children.

The house never changed hands until it was purchased by the historical society in 1969, a year after Mrs. Dorsey's death.

The society restored the home after about 10 years of work. The majority of the fur-

City receives $1.27 million

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

The city of Midland was officially awarded a $1.27 million Community Development Block Grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, U.S. Rep. Larry Combest announced on Thursday.

The CDBG program, which serves areas of low to moderate income, will distribute the funds to a variety of programs including public service groups.

Last month, the City Council awarded the anticipated funds for street paving, housing rehabilitation, park improvements, a demolition project, a code-enforcement officer, an emergency housing-repairs program, a homeowner incentive program, and senior nutrition and wellness programs.

This year's grant was awarded to improve poverty conditions in southeast Midland, specifically the area south of Illinois Avenue, east of Midkiff Road and east of Big Spring Street.

The money, to be used in the 1994 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, was a 33 percent increase from the $856,000 offered last year.

"This year, it (the money amount) came out more favorable for Midland," said Sylvester Cantu, CDBG coordinator.

HUD uses census statistics to determine specific allocations. One factor that figured into Midland's grant increase was a rise in the local poverty rate from 6,093 in the 1980 census to 12,774 in 1990.

In a statement released by Combest's office, the repre-

Parents and the Midland community should have more control over the public schools, according to Advocates for Better Learning and Education (ABLE).

The group — which consists of about 30 parents — presented their Quality Education Plan (QEP) at a Thursday afternoon news conference.

Conrad Coleman, ABLE president, said the plan of 20 steps to improve education "is just a blueprint."

Coleman said the parents banded together because "we got tired of hearing why don't they do something about public schools. There is a crisis in our education system and some serious problems in Midland in our own schools."

He said discipline problems are out of control with some students being afraid to venture into restrooms due to student

Insurance can protect you from almost everything

Once upon a time, there were two certainties in the mundane world: death and taxes.

Todd

Now there's one more. Insurance, insurance and more insurance seemingly without limits.

Life Insurance.

Whole-life insurance.

Term life insurance.

Car Insurance.

House insurance.

Funny-bone insurance, I suppose, if you were a comic, or death insurance if you were a undertaker.

Mortgage insurance.
Health insurance.
Burial Insurance.
Crop insurance.
Dreaded-disease insurance.
Fire insurance.
Hail insurance.
Foul-weather insurance.
Malpractice insurance.
Liability insurance.
Aircraft insurance.
Boat insurance.
Air-show insurance.
Race insurance.
Bank-roll insurance.
Livestock insurance.
Flight insurance.
Theft insurance.
Flood insurance.

Fire insurance.

Unemployment insurance.

You probably could insure your fingers if you were a Van Cliburn on the keyboard, your voice if you were a Pavarotti on stage or your wiles if you were a politician out for gain.

Insurance, as we all know, is big, big business, probably in the league of the Big Three automobile makers or the national debt.

Life insurance, like the rest of insurance, is a gamble, sort of like the stock market.

Those who solicit your money in the name of premiums are banking on your living and making those payments while they invest your money and grow rich.

Of course, you're banking on not dying, at least not right away. The payoff is when you die, oblivious to the newly gained fortune, and the company loses your premiums forever. There must be some sort of comfort to that.

Insurance is a risk wherein the big selling point is fear: What if, what if, what if?

It's similar to the preacher who, at revival, poses the question and the threat: What if you get run over by a train tonight on your way home and you failed to get saved this very night?

What if?

You're tempted to press onward and down the aisles to partake of the HOUSE: Historical society conducts tours of city's oldest home

nishings were not from the original home, but were selected to match the time and station in life of the Brown family. Mrs. McKinley said she and another historical society member, Evelyn Scharborough Linebery, selected the furnishings for the home.

Mrs. McKinley said the restoration was done with great pain to keep the original items when possible and restore everything to that period in time.

Two parlor chairs from the home have remained in the front room where photographs of Mr. and Mrs. Brown hang on the wall. Mrs. Brown's reading glasses lay atop an open book on a nearby table.

In the dining room, the Brown family china — donated to the home by a Brown family nephew — adorns the table as if the family were to return at any moment for a home-cooked meal.

Three fireplaces warmed the house with coal that was readily available after the rail lines were in place in 1881.

In another room a photo taken on the wedding day of Sarah Brown and her husband, Hugh B. Dorsey, sits on the mantle of the fireplace in the very room the couple was married.

A unique feature of the home is the wine cellar where Brown made his own wine with the grapes he grew in the arbor south of his home. The arbor has also been restored. Mrs. McKinley said the restoration funds ran out before the wine cellar could be completed, but she hopes it will be redone in the near future.

Brown's own bottle capper sits in the pantry of the kitchen where an icebox, stove and pie safe all sit in their likely positions as when Mrs. Brown cooked her family's meals there.

Up the stairs are three bedrooms and a fourth room decorated as a toy room. Each of the three bedrooms contain items that could have been there in past years including a sewing table, a shaving stand and a trunk with women's garments.

Mrs. McKinley weaves her magic tales as she gives the history and significance of each item that decorates the rooms. With a gleam in her eye she takes visitors back in time to the turn of the century relating how each item could have made its way to the house.

All of the maintenance on the home is done by historical society members. Mrs. McKinley referred to herself as both the upstairs and downstairs maid as well as the groundskeeper.

"Its a lot of work to keep it up . . . and it has to be cleaned just like it is your home," Mrs. McKinley said.

TODD: Policies give protection

preacher's assurance.

As a people, we seem to be getting insurance poor. But in today's litigious society wherein many folk are ready to sue, it's a risk not to have insurance.

So we do insure just in case.

Many years ago when times seemed simpler and insurance wasn't so pervasive, the first insurance I recal hearing about was burial insurance. I know my parents and grandparents had that. It wasn't so much about the undertaker getting his due as it was about not imposing any burden on the children.

That was most thoughtful.

And then there was life insurance, which could hardly assure you of life. Its aim is to take care of the family after you've bellied up.

And that's good.

But it seems that the inclination, were it affordable, is to insure just about everything from your chicken coop to your gold-plated teeth.

Insurance agents exhort you to insure your security, your financial resources. Protect yourself from those who would take you stash of cash for cause or whim.

Protect yourself from the insurance agents who would insure you all the way to bankruptcy court were you to allow it.

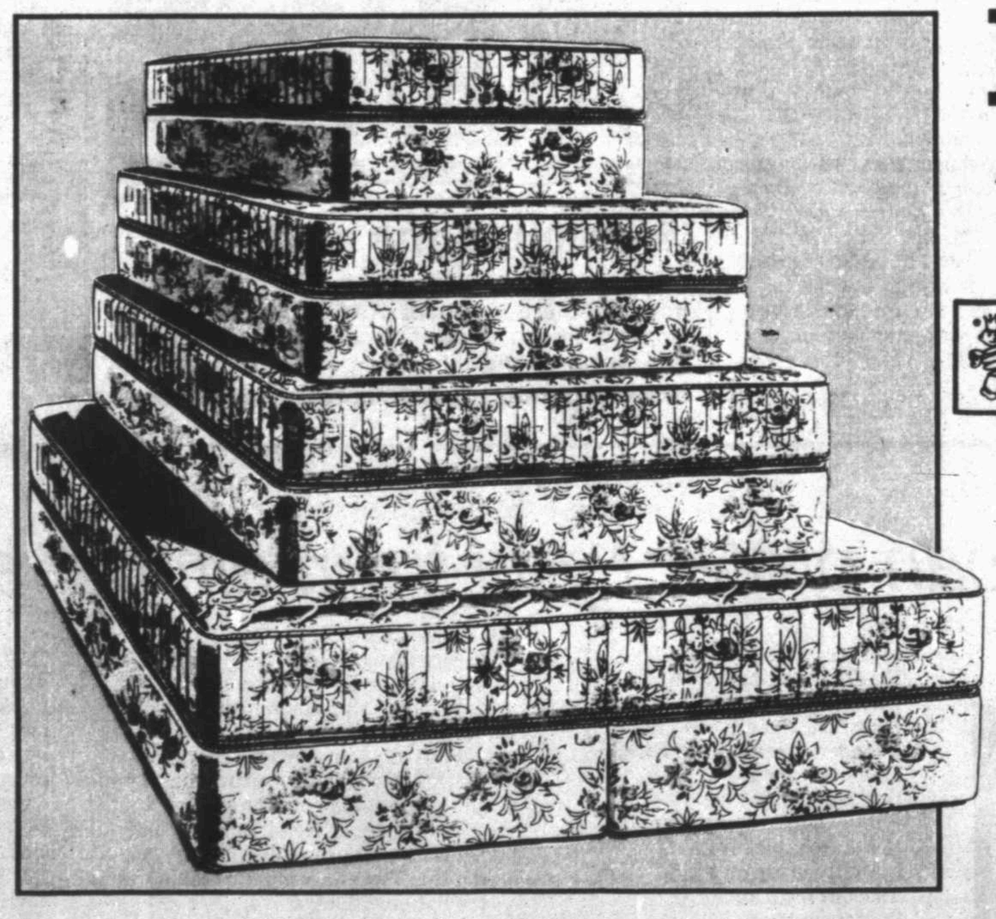

Don't.

ABLE: Group presents education plan violence.

"Also, 58 percent of our students completing the seventh grade failed all or part of the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test. We've got to work to solve that," the ABLE president said.

Coleman called for more parental involvement and said ABLE will host a community meeting at 7 p.m. on Tuesday at San Jacinto Junior High School to drum up parental support for the organization.

He said ABLE was also formed because "there is a feeling among a lot of parents in the community that they have no input. Whatever they say to the school board is not going to matter. Their minds are made up."

Midland school board trustee Gary Willis, who attended the news conference, said he was disappointed that some parents perceive that the board turns a deaf ear to citizens.

"We have had 18 or 19 community meetings and more than 100 school board meetings since 1988," Willis said. "We make a concerted effort to listen to everyone, though we may not agree with them."

Willis said when the board hears opposing opinions on an issue, and then it votes against one side, those parents "say we didn't listen to them."

The school board trustee said when ABLE came out in favor of closed campuses he was "quite willing to close them."

"But the chorus of voices was against it," he said.

ABLE supporter Tom Dragisic questioned parents being left out of the superintendent evaluation process, which resulted in trustees renewing Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr.'s contract when it wasn't up for renewal.

Privacy laws allow personnel matters to be discussed in closed (executive) session.

One item in ABLE's plan called for including parent surveys in the job performance evaluation process for all teachers, principals and campus staff.

Other items in the QEP addressed re-establishing recess time for elementary school children, re-organizing the school district to put sixth, seventh and eighth grades in junior high schools and grades nine through 12 in high school, and enforcing a stricter "zero tolerance" discipline policy.

Persons interested in obtaining more information from ABLE may call 688-3256.

GRANT: City receives improvement monies

sentative said: "I am pleased that HUD has recognized the city of Midland's commitment by awarding these much-needed funds."

"This is a prime example of the taxpayers getting money back from the government and deciding how it will be spent within their community. The people of Midland are directly involved in the allocating of their tax money," he added.

Earlier this summer, the City Council held two public hearings on the distribution of CDBG funds.

Deadline nears for grand jury's investigation of Sen. Hutchison

AUSTIN (AP) — It appears that the Travis County grand jury investigating the state Treasury under Republican U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison will work right up to its Tuesday deadline.

Officials in Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle's office said Thursday that the grand jury would likely conclude its inquiry early next week.

"There probably will be no action taken until next week," assistant district attorney Darla Espinoza said.

Grand jurors have spent the past four months looking into allegations that Treasury employees and equipment were used for personal and political purposes under Mrs. Hutchison, and if documents were destroyed in a coverup.

The panel is set to disband after Tuesday. If the grand jurors can't complete their inquiry by then, a new panel would be sworn in to take up the probe.

Earle has said he expects the grand jury to finish its work before the deadline.

The senator has said the longer the probe goes on, the stronger she becomes.

Major street to be rebuilt

Staff report

A portion of one of Midland's busiest streets, Midland Drive, will be rebuilt this fall, state officials announced this week.

Price Construction Inc. of Big Spring, a Texas Department of Transportation contractor, will be replacing the driving lanes of about a mile of the street from just north of Andrews Highway through the Wadley Avenue intersection.

Crews began replacing some damaged sections of curb and gutter along the street this week, with actual road work scheduled to begin Monday. Price officials estimated that the job will be concluded by early December, weather permitting.

"We realize that no one likes to have their street torn up for any period of time, but that section of road has reached the time in its life when it needs to be reconstructed," said Mike Chetty, the Midland area engineer for the Texas Department of Transportation.

"I want to emphasize that we will not be closing Midland Drive during the construction," he said. "There will always be lanes open and every possible effort will be made to keep traffic moving smoothly."

Handbills explaining the project schedule have been distributed to many of the residents and business owners along the street, he said. Area homeowners, business owners and customers, as well as residents of apartment complexes along Midland Drive should use off-street entrances and take alternate routes whenever possible, Chetty said.

"It won't be done overnight and we know that there will be times when the work will cause some inconvenience for people who use the street regularly," Chetty said. "But we hope to keep those times to a minimum."

A small portion of the roadway — where excavation is under way — will be barricaded at night. Motorists are urged to observe warning signs and posted speed limits.

CONGRESS HAS CHANGED THE TAX LAWS.
AGAIN.
It's frustrating to have the rules changed in the middle of the game, but it's foolish to ignore the changes.

TAXES AND INVESTMENT STRATEGIES
Federal income taxes can be oppressive. They take a bite out of every dollar you earn. That can almost cripple your investment plans. But, short of leaving the country or joining the underground economy, there's not much you can do, right?
WRONG. The fact is there are still a number of strategies you can use right now to lower your income tax liability. We'll be discussing them at a free workshop on taxes and tax strategies.
Comprehensive • No Cost • No Obligation
We'll walk you through all the changes and show you how they'll affect your investments and carefully laid tax plans. Then we'll show you some strategies to help you take advantage of the new opportunities. Come join us!

Ruling could revolutionize communications

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators opened the floodgates Thursday for a surge in wireless communications that the industry says could make cellular phones so inexpensive that half the country will carry them by the year 2000.

In a 2-1 decision, the Federal Communications Commission carved up 160 megahertz of airwaves for companies to create a new, multi-billion industry based on a fresh line of wireless devices.

This includes highly sophisticated pocket phones, palm-size computers and laptops that receive video pictures.

"This will profoundly change the way people communicate," said FCC chairman James Quello.

It was the most heavily lobbied ruling in the history of the FCC, involving virtually every company with an interest in communications, including cable TV, long-distance and regional telephone companies, cellular phone services and computer companies.

"We made an ernest effort to balance all the conflicting interests," said Quello.

As a result of the ruling, everyone may some day carry around a small, personal phone at all times with a number that's individually assigned, just like Social Security numbers.

"By the end of the decade, half the people on the streets in Washington will be carrying a phone," said John Roth, president of wireless services for Northern Telecom.

Wired telephones will seem as old-fashioned as a model-T Ford.

The new bandwidth will enable enough competition in each market to drive prices down

Licenses to use the space will be auctioned to private industry in an effort to raise more than $10 billion for the federal government.

It is space the FCC is taking away from users like utilities, railroads and pipeline companies who communicate from fixed transmitters and could operate at a higher frequencies.

Unlike the current cellular phones which use the more limited analog technology, the new products will all be digital. They'll offer users more privacy and clarity.

Thousands of teens sign convenants of chastity

By David Briggs
Associated Press writer

No sex, please, we're teenagers.

In a rebellion some church leaders hope heralds a new sexual revolution, tens of thousands of young men and women across the country have signed covenants vowing to remain chaste until marriage.

By July, organizers of the "True Love Waits" campaign hope half-a-million teens will have signed on, filling out enough pledge cards to stretch from the Capitol to the Washington Monument.

Adam Allen, 15, of First Baptist Church in Houston, said the campaign offers a long-awaited opportunity for public redemption to teens portrayed in the media and by some government officials as having out-of-control libidos.

"Kids are taught that they're just animals and they're going to have sex — just use a condom," Allen said. "I'm willing to stand by God."

The campaign began in April as part of a Southern Baptist Convention sex education program. Youths were asked to enter into a pact with God before their parents, then in a more public setting at church "to be sexually pure until the day I enter a covenant marriage relationship."

It quickly spread to other denominations and organizations, such as the Assemblies of God and Pentecostal Church of God, The Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Campus Crusade for Christ. At the July 29 closing celebration in Washington, D.C., organizers want to be able to display 500,000 pledge cards.

The first group of 59 covenants was signed at Tulip Grove Baptist Church in Nashville.

Within two months, 329 secondary school students in Houston took the pledge at First Baptist Church. At Brentwood Baptist Church, the adults predicted, "Our kids will never go for that," but in July nearly 100 teens made vows, the Rev. Thomas Walker said. The next week, at a youth rally with five other churches, 194 more kids took the pledge.

At a summer camp in Oklahoma, more than 13,500 teens embraced the program. One, Traci Bixler, said she does not have a boyfriend, but already has written a sealed letter to her future husband telling him she loves him enough to wait.

Teens say the campaign is partly a protest to being portrayed in television, movies and music videos as sex-obsessed.

Protein from chicken bones stops arthritis pain, swelling

WASHINGTON (AP) — A protein from chicken bones stopped the pain and swelling of rheumatoid arthritis for patients in a clinical experiment, and experts say the novel treatment holds promise for control of the crippling disease.

Dr. David Trentham, of Beth Israel Hospital and Harvard Medical School in Boston, said that a collagen solution made from chicken cartilage and swirled into patients' morning orange juice appeared to arrest the progress of rheumatoid arthritis in a small group that was studied.

The technique, which he called "oral tolerization," seems to "teach" the body's immune system to stop inflaming the tissue around joints. Rheumatoid arthritis is thought to be an autoimmune disease caused by rogue cells of the immune system attacking membranes in joints.

Trentham said that swallowing protein that is similar to the membrane of the joints "reinstructs the body to cease the attack on the body's own joints."

All 28 patients taking the collagen during the three-month trial got relief from their disease and four went into remission, said Trentham. The disease became worse in 31 patients who received a placebo.

A report on the study is to be published Friday in the journal Science.

Dr. Arthur Grayzel, senior vice president for medical affairs of the Arthritis Foundation, said he was quite encouraged by the study and believes oral tolerization techniques have the potential of halting rheumatoid arthritis. But he cautioned that a much larger trial of the collagen treatment should be undertaken.

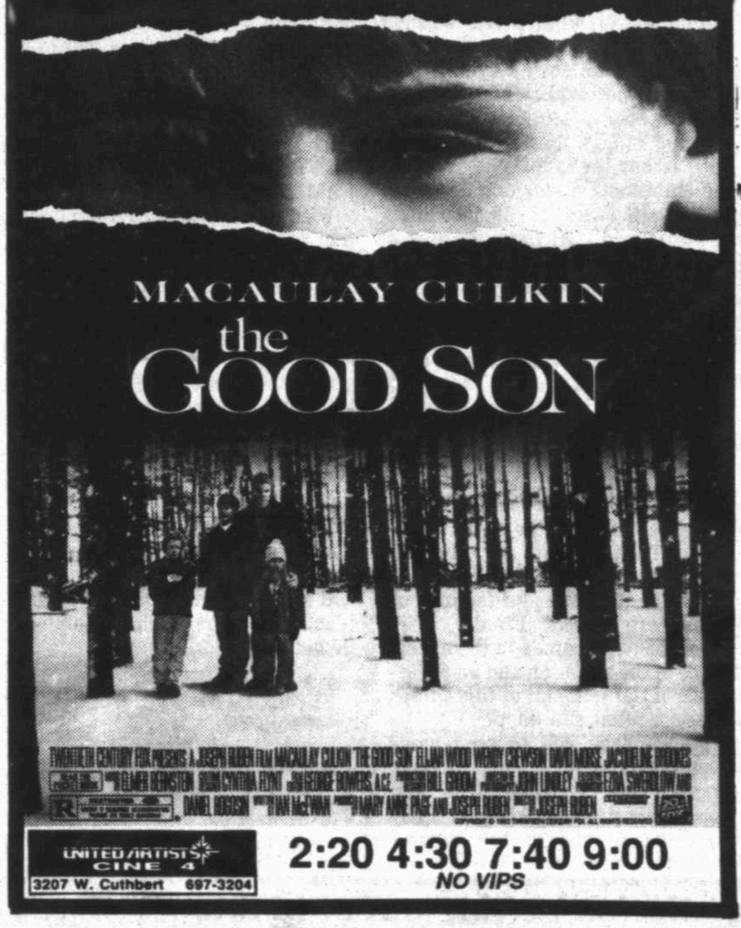

"It has all of the problems of initial studies in this disease and that is that it is in a small number of people studied for a short period of time," said Grayzel. "Nevertheless, it does show promise. If you can get an effect with an oral preparation with no risk it really does stir my interest."

FAMILY MATTERS

Even 'friendly' divorces are painful to participants

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I am at the end of a long and difficult divorce from my husband. It has been very hard on me, even though everything is fine as far as anyone knows. We had known each other most of our lives. Our families were friends, and that has made things more difficult in some ways and in other ways easier. My soon-to-be "ex" just decided that he wasn't getting enough out of the marriage and that I couldn't give him what he wanted.

May

As far as I know, there's not anyone else or anything like that. We went to our minister and to a marriage counselor, but we just couldn't work anything out. I don't think that he ever tried or really wanted to work on the marriage. I'm feeling really hurt and defeated because he couldn't or wouldn't tell me what I've done wrong. He's "nice" to me and I'm "nice" to him, but I'm dying inside.

why would someone just not want you anymore? Everyone tells me that it's his problem, not mine, but I keep asking myself, "Is it?" Our marriage was OK as far as I could tell, at least in comparison to my friends. There didn't seem to be anything wrong to me that couldn't be fixed if we would both just work on it. I just keep asking myself, "why?" and can't get an answer.

I'm having trouble eating, sleeping and concentrating on what I'm doing. My children (teenagers) don't seem to notice, but then they are so busy with their own things. I feel so alone and afraid. Then sometimes I'm so mad that I scream and yell at the slightest thing that goes wrong. My best friend keeps encouraging me to write you about this and so here it is: Can you help me? LOST AND ALONE

DEAR LOST: Divorce usually is very painful and destructive, no matter what the circumstances. Sometimes "friendly" divorces are even harder because one "ex" can be left without any real explanation as to what went wrong. Even though divorce and its effects tend to be downplayed in our culture, the experience can be devastating.

Noted family therapist Virginia Satir likens the divorce process to the emotional stages one needs to go through when a loved ones dies. She observed, "At first, there is a denial of the events that have taken place and a consequent feeling of wanting to isolate oneself from the whole situation. Then anger, wherein one blames someone else for one's predicament. The third level is bargaining; a kind of situation in which one wants to look at the ledger to see that things are equal. This is often manifest over the custody of children and property settlements at the time of divorce. Then comes a period of depression, which is where self-hatred, self-blame and feelings of failure are present. Finally, after all of this, one comes to the acceptance of the situation and an acceptance of the self. Out of this comes hope for what can happen."

I encourage you to seek some professional help — your minister or marriage counselor — to help you in this process. Also, consider enrolling in one of the divorce workshops offered by either Golf Course Road Church of Christ or First United Methodist Church. They usually offer a workshop in the fall. When you are ready, you may find Bruce Fisher's book, "Rebuilding: When Your Relationship Ends," to be of help.

Divorce recovery is indeed a process, and like any other painful life processes, it takes time. You have been through one of life's most stressful events, and answering your questions will take time and work. Continue on your journey. Take the painful steps to seek help and attend a workshop — staying where you are is more depressing than moving forward.

THE FOLLOWING PARENTING TIP IS OFFERED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

With school starting, it is important to stop the "Report Card Reflex" when your child brings home a bad grade(s). You might try the following approach.

- Sit down with your child and look over the report card.
- Praise your child. Find at least one good thing: attendance, no tardies, etc.
- Be calm! Let your child tell you about his poor grades.
- Ask how you can help your child to do better.
- Ask what your child can do to make better grades.
- Make a plan with your child's teacher and your child to help her do better.

Goal was to make ships safer

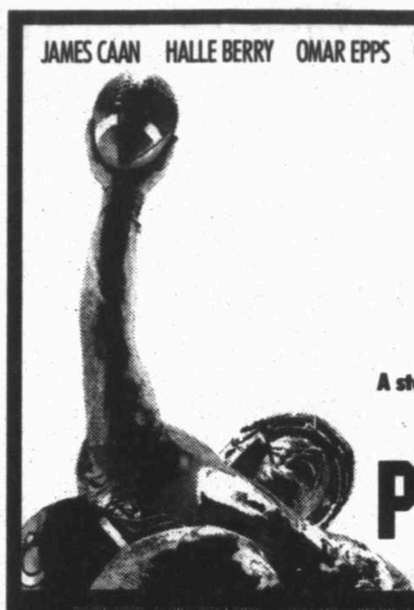

Associated Press

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Samuel Plimsoll, born in Bristol in 1824, was known as "The sailor's friend." As a coal dealer, Plimsoll became interested in he dangerous conditions often endured by sailors on overloaded cargo vessels.

Plimsoll became a member of Parliament in 1868 and helped pass legislation improving the safety of ships.

One of its provisions was for introduction of the so-called "Plimsoll Line" marked on all British ships to inicate the maximum load line. Samuel Plimsoll died in 1898.

DEAR ABBY

Video wedding gets low rating from family critics

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A close relative had been planning a second marriage, but without telling anyone, she and her fiance slipped off and got married with only his family present. (All her relatives live within an easy commute.) She showed her relatives videos of the wedding and the reception at his family's home, and it appeared to be a very gala affair.

Van Buren

Now we're getting strong hints for a wedding gift, but we are still smarting from the snubbing she gave us. She also mentions eventually having a "religious" ceremony and a reception in the future.

Our dilemma: Do we give "Wedding No. 2" gifts now, and a "Wedding No. 2½" gift down the line? Or should we give a major gift now, for the wedding we weren't invited to, later, or none at all — ever?

Her family feels hurt by her, and not for the first time. We need your advice. — ONE RELATIVE, 2½ WEDDINGS

DEAR ONE AND TWO AND ...: Ignore the "hints." Since you were not invited to her wedding, you are under no obligation to send a gift. And even if you are invited to a "religious" ceremony and reception in the future, and you choose to attend, you are under no obligation to send a gift.

Whatever you decide, gifts should come from the heart — and not from the feeling of obligation.

DEAR ABBY: A co-worker related the following incident to me: Several members of her family were at her sister's home. While the children were outside playing, one of them was injured and quit breathing, so one of the visiting adults called 911, but when they asked for her address, she didn't know it.

My co-workers suggested a simple solution: Tape your address on your telephone! If an emergency arises and a visitor needs to call for help, the address will be right there. It makes good sense to me.

Now my address is taped to every telephone in the house.

I hope you think this worth passing along. — WISED UP IN CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

DEAR WISED UP: It is, and thanks for sending it. And while we're on the subject of possible emergencies, make sure your house number is clearly visible from the street in case the fire or police department has been summoned.

DEAR ABBY: I have been known to procrastinate when confronted with certain tasks.

Recently, major decisions and actions were facing me and my word was at stake. Considering the enormity of the situation, I needed focus, so I placed a large sign on my refrigerator door. It read:

THE BEST WAY TO GET THE JOB DONE IS TO START IT!

It worked for me. Perhaps some of your readers may find help in this message. — R.H. PFINGST, SAN DIEGO

DEAR R.H.: It worked (and is still working) for me. I have in my collection of "keepers" the following:

"If you think you can do it, begin it! Begin and the mind grows heated. Begin, and the task is completed." — GOETHE

DEAR ABBY: Apparently, after reading your column about obtaining birth certificates, many people still believe that there is a central office in the United States that has copies of everyone's birth records and can issue these records. Abby, this is simply not true.

The writer to whom you responded was from the state of Florida —and, indeed, the Florida Office of Vital Statistics in Jacksonville can assist people who were born in Florida. However, we cannot assist people who were born in other states. Those people should contact the Office of Vital Statistics in the state where they were born.

The publication titled "Where to Write for Vital Records: Births, Deaths, Marriages and Divorces" is available from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Office (Publication No. PHS 93-1142) and may be purchased from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, at the cost of $2.25 each.

I hope that this will clarify any misunderstanding that may have occurred. — KENNETH T. JONES, OFFICE OF VITAL STATISTICS FOR THE STATE OF FLORIDA

DEAR MR. JONES: Thank you for your informative letter. Readers who are in need of birth, death, marriage or divorce records will appreciate knowing there is such a government publication — and so reasonably priced.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Memo-writing technique can be improved

Associated Press

Recent research has shown that when people dash off a memo it has involved nearly an hour of research and writing.

You can improve your memo-writing technique, Kathy Hunnicutt wrote in an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, if you follow some simple rules:

■ The first step is to determine your purpose and sum up what you hope to accomplish with your memo. One trick of the memo trade is to begin with the phrase, "I'm writing to tell you that..." Follow with what you want to say, then cross out those first six words that led you into the statement of your purpose.

■ Be brief and keep your memo short. Pretend you are sending a telegram and paying for it by the word. The cheaper the telegram, the better the memo. State your case as simply as possible. Aim for clear, concise writing that will impress your readers. Every word should be essential and you should edit your memo to eliminate unnecessary verbiage.

■ Frank Grazian, executive editor of a monthly communications newsletter, warns against trying to impress your readers with stylistic tricks and pretentious phrasing. "Too many business writers strain to appear erudite, cut or flippant," he said.

Getting started is the toughest part of memo writing, according to the majority of executives who responded to a recent survey conducted by Communispond, a New York City consulting firm.

■ One way you can help yourself is to save and keep on hand a few examples of terrific memos that can provide inspiration and guidance when you are up against a deadline and writer's block.

When writing the opening of your memo, it's a good idea not to beat around the bush but instead get to the point promptly. Ask for action up front. No one wants to read a memo looking for clues and not finding the substance until the last line.

"Readers may stick with a mystery novel to learn how it turns out," said Jim Sellers, former director of communications for the Oregon State System of Higher Education, "but your memo probably isn't that compelling."

■ One way to make a memo more compelling is to personalize it. When you are sending the same letter to a large number of people, it is good strategy to jot a handwritten note at the top of the page or in the margin. The recipients find the personal touch flattering and it also gives you a chance to underscore specific points with specific people.

Fight against Alzheimer's continues

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

Because of militant popular demand, further discussion of Alzheimer's Disease (AL) in this column will be temporarily discontinued, but not until recent claims of diagnostic and therapeutic breakthroughs have been noted. Despite these hopeful lights at the end of the tunnel, the disease itself still constitutes "a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma."

Page

One of the most recent breakthroughs hails from the National Institute of Health, whose research stature is above reproach. They report a skin test absolutely diagnosing AL. However, this is not simple like other familiar skin tests, but rather cultures of skin that fail to give, when properly probed, a unique electrical signature characteristic of normal persons. At the present state of medical art, this procedure will prove difficult to emulate in the usual clinical laboratory.

Another new blip on the genetic scanner that constitutes a breakthrough is APOE-4 (apolipoprotein F type 4), a substance noted in patients who develop AL earlier in life. This was noted in half of persons with a history of familial AL and seems to indicate that 90 percent of patients with this mutatient genetic defect will develop the disease itself by age 80. Unfortunately demonstration of this abnormality requires sophisticated tests of blood and brain tissue using high tech equipment, and larger numbers of cases will have to be studied.

Previous promising tests for AL have proved disappointing and the complexity of the above-mentioned procedure makes one concerned about their ultimate validity. If, however, they do fulfill their promise, hundreds of millions of dollars in diagnostic examination could be saved, along with removing the greater fear of all-uncertainty.

From the therapeutic point of view, the exciting news is tacrine (THA, Cognex) for the treatment of early state AL. Nearly 9,000 persons have received this drug showing improved functions and retarded progress of the disease in around 42 percent. The FDA delayed approval until just now (September 1993) because of liver damage in a significant number of subjects; therefore close medical monitoring will be mandated.

So behold that light in the dark tunnel of ignorance. Rather than being an oncoming train, it hopefully represents the dawn of a new day, albeit many years hence, and we will be rid of the riddle!

Age-discrimination suit settled

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines Co. has agreed to pay $1.25 million to settle a class-action suit that accused the carrier of discriminating against older pilots.

The airline reached the settlement with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which filed suit in 1990 alleging the airline had not hired a pilot older than 45 since 1987.

Southwest denied the allegations, saying it had hired 39 pilots over 45 during that time.

However, on Sept. 3, the airline said it decided to settle the lawsuit to avoid the expense of a lengthy trial. It made no admission of past violations and said it made no commitment to hire any pilot whom it hasn't already selected on the basis of qualifications.

Sydney selected

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — Sydney was selected Thursday to host the 2000 Olympics, beating out Beijing for the Summer Games in a choice of stability and modern facilities over the political uncertainty of China.

Olympic officials said the voting went the maximum of four rounds, with Sydney winning by the margin of only 45-43.

After the announcement, fireworks exploded over Sydney Harbor, where an estimated 100,000 people had gathered just before dawn Friday local time to await the outcome. The white shells of the city's famous opera house were illuminated with the five colors of the Olympic movement.

The decision to return the Games to Australia for the first time since the 1956 Melbourne Olympics was announced live to a worldwide television audience.

NCAA rolls Tide

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — The NCAA has informed the University of Alabama that it will conduct an inquiry into allegations that Gene Jelks received illegal benefits to play football for the Crimson Tide.

In a letter received Thursday by university president E. Roger Sayers, the NCAA said it would launch an inquiry into the school's football program.

David Berst, assistant executive director for enforcement, wrote that his staff has been reviewing information "regarding possible violations of NCAA legislation that were alleged in a series of newspaper articles in November 1992" about Jelks' charges that he was paid to play for Alabama.

Lee, MHS battle tonight

■ No. 6-ranked Midland Lee coach Earl Miller's primary concern against cross-town rival Midland High is to keep his team focused and improving.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

When Midland Lee takes to the field against Midland High at 8 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium, one wonders which Rebel team will show up — Air Rebel or Gen. Lee's infantry — or maybe even both.

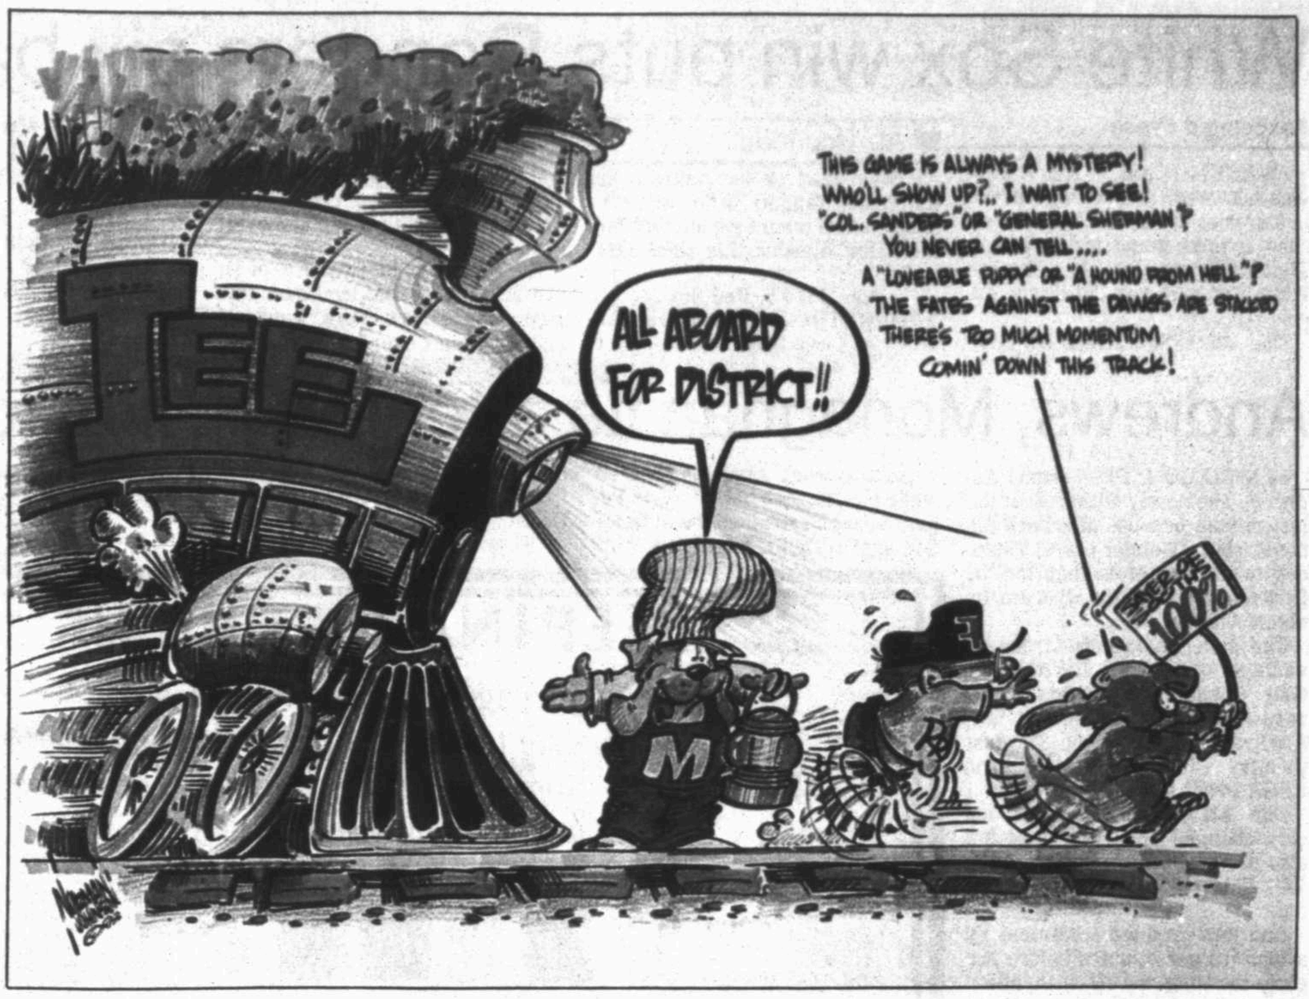

Lee gave its fans a passing game debut of sorts last Friday in a 56-12 romp over Amarillo Palo Duro, showing that a wishbone team can throw the ball and live to tell about it.

Lee quarterback Courtney Turner threw for over 160 yards and three touchdowns and then scored on a long run for another score. And if you got the feeling the ground game was forgotten, forget it. Lee also had 300 yards rushing.

Meanwhile, the Rebels have continued to climb in the state rankings, now landing at No. 6. And tonight, the Rebs take on an MHS team that hasn't found the win column.

There is reason to believe that some

MHS hoping to hang on versus Lee

■ Midland High faces its third 1992 playoff team in four weeks when it plays Midland Lee tonight at Memorial Stadium.

By Bill Petitt
Staff writer

Midland High football coach Ronnie Reeger must feel like a man on the beach. He spends countless hours building the perfect sandcastle, tall and strong in appearance, only to have waves of a perennial playoff teams come crashing on top of it each week.

Despite an 0-3 start Reeger has built his team up for its biggest test of the season against crosstown rival and state sixth-ranked Midland Lee.

"Morale has been good this week," said Reeger. "We are trying to do the things that will make us a better football team. We are trying to do sound things both offensively and defensively that will make us a better football team down the line.

"We can't try to trick anyone with different formations. They (Lee coaches) have been around long enough that you won't get away with things like that."

Midland will try to be more of a pit bull rather than a Bulldog tonight — go for the jugular quick and hang on for dear life. MHS has fallen behind early in its first three games. The Bulldogs have clawed their way back into each game with the exception of last week's Andrews game that MHS lost 40-0.

In last week's loss MHS drove the ball with some success in the first half, converting two or more first downs on three of its first four possessions, but then bogged down as punter Jeremy Hernandez kicked seven times.

Quarterback Johnny Paredes led the Bulldogs in rushing with 80 yards against Andrews. Paredes is tied with Roy Coats for the team lead in rushing with 126 yards through three games. Paredes has not thrown an interception this season while tossing three TDs — two to tight end Michael Jones and one

Young's Building Systems of Midland jumped out to a seven-run lead in the second inning and barely held on for an 11-9 victory over the Smith Funeral Home team from Hannibal, Mo., in the Men's Class C ASA National Slow Pitch Softball Tournament at the Bill Williams Complex Thursday.

Midland's other team in the tournament, The S.W.A.T. Team, fell short in its rally as the Country Sports from King William, Va., held on to it's early nine-run lead to win 13-9.

Young's advances in the winner's bracket and will play at 11:45 a.m. on Field Two today. The S.W.A.T. Team moves to the loser's bracket in a game at 2:15 p.m. on Field A where it will try to make it to the finals in the double-

Nolan Ryan celebrated no-hitter number seven two seasons ago.

No fairy tale ending for Ryan

By Dale Robertson
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — Like a lot of folks down in Alvin, Texas, and points elsewhere around Texas, I had big plans to be in Arlington Stadium a week from Sunday, watching the Nolan Ryan Express pull into the station for the last time.

Except, if life were a fairy tale — it isn't, in case you haven't yet noticed — Nolan Ryan's scheduled final regular-season start of a career that spanned more than a generation would have only been a prelude to the good stuff, like the playoffs and the World Series and maybe even a trip to Bill Clinton's Rose Garden.

It would all have come down to that Sunday afternoon for the Texas Rangers, and Ryan would have pitched them to their first-ever pennant. Not with his eighth no-hitter or anything too ridiculous, just six or seven strong innings, enough to produce a 325th victory, the longest standing ovation in history to match the longest career in history and then lots of free-flowing bubbly in a giddy Texas locker room afterward.

Too much to have hoped for?

OK, forget the pennant and the postseason and the White House visit. It would have been plenty dandy just to see him go out on his feet, looking like the Nolan Ryan we want to remember,

Answers to fly fast, but not today

Before District 4-5A has participated in any loop warfare, there are those who are ready to concede the fact that Midland Lee and Odessa Permian will easily capture two of the league's three playoff berths.

Williamson

That reasoning isn't without basis since No. 1 Permian and No. 6 Lee reside among the state-ranked elite. Also, the district appears to be somewhat top-heavy after completing the majority of non-conference games.

The district owns a meager 11-10-1 overall record against non-conference foes. Six of those wins have come from Lee and Permian. Three more have come from Odessa High, but the Bronchos are still suspect in relation to Permian and Lee since OHS fell at home to Amarillo Palo Duro, 39-32. Lee defeated Palo Duro by a 56-12 margin in Amarillo.

At the beginning of the year, it was said that San Angelo, Odessa High and Abilene Cooper would battle it out for playoff spot No. 3. Little has happened to change that notion.

However, San Angelo (1-2) may have an edge for that No. 3 spot, considering that the Bobcats played Temple and Killeen, two good teams, close. Cooper (1-1-1) has been the most disappointing, but has shown enough offense to keep hopes burning.

Since 4-5A play opens tonight with cross town rivals in Midland, Odessa and Abilene going at it, you would expect to start finding some answers in the overall scheme of things, but you will know little more after tonight than you do right now — unless, of course, there is a major upset pulled off by Midland High, Odessa High or Abilene High, all of which seem very unlikely.

Cooper, however, will learn its fate quickly with Odessa High next week and San Angelo on Oct. 8. San Angelo has Lee next week, then Cooper and Odessa High. After games of Oct. 8 this district may have a clear playoff picture with four weeks of the season still left.

The only excitement down the stretch may come on Oct. 22 when Lee and Permian meet in Ratliff Stadium for the district championship, state ranking glory and the usual bragging rights between the two schools. One will probably still be undefeated after that game.

Still, the real battles to watch are between San Angelo, Odessa High and Cooper. Those matchups will decide No. 3 in another year that appears Permian-Lee dominated.

We had a second consecutive 5-2 week in the District 4-5A picking game last week to push the season mark to 14-7. Here's how the district season begins:

Midland Lee 54, Midland High 7: Whether it be by land or air, the Rebels can put points on the board. Lee leads the series by a 20-10-2 margin.

Odessa Permian 35, Odessa High 14: There was some summer talk that this might be the year for the Bronchos, but reality has set in since then. Permian leads the series 30-3-1 and hasn't lost to OHS since 1964 when singer Larry Gatlin was a junior quarterback.

Abilene Cooper 28, Abilene High 7: Cooper (1-1-1) has been a mild disappointment and AHS (0-3) is living up to pre-season notices. Cooper leads this series 21-10-1.

San Angelo 31, Lubbock Coronado 20: Ironically, this non-conference game may shed more light on the district's third place quest than any of the district games since OHS already owns a narrow win over Coronado this year.

Giants shut out Astros, 7-0

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

HOUSTON — John Burkett became San Francisco's first 20-game winner in seven years and Barry Bonds had three doubles and two RBIs Thursday night to lead the Giants to a 7-0 victory over the Houston Astros.

The Giants, who have won six of seven, remained 2½ games behind first-place Atlanta in the NL West as the Braves reduced their magic number for clinching the division to eight with a 6-3 victory over Montreal.

Burkett (20-7) allowed three hits over eight innings in the Giants' second straight shutout of Houston. He allowed four baserunners, none past first, with two strikeouts and no walks. Kevin Rogers pitched a hitless ninth.

Braves 6, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Greg Maddux bested Dennis Martinez, and Atlanta beat the pitcher they almost traded for last month, defeating Montreal.

The Braves, who reduced their magic number for a third straight NL West title to eight, took two of three in the series, and held their 2½-game lead over San Francisco in the NL West. The Giants played later in Houston.

Montreal fell six games behind idle Philadelphia in the East. The Phillies, whose magic number was cut to five, will play host to Atlanta in a three-game set this weekend.

Reds 11, Dodgers 2

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati ended a 12-game losing streak, their worst in 48 years, as Tim Pugh allowed five hits during seven rainy innings and started the comeback in a victory over Los Angeles.

The Reds scored their most runs since a 14-13 victory over St. Louis on Sept. 7. Pugh rallied Cincinnati from a 2-0 deficit with a game-tying single in the second, and Chris Sabo helped the Reds pull away with a two-run homer and an RBI double.

Kentucky tops S.C.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Randy Wyatt's 64-yard touchdown run began a fourth-quarter comeback that gave Kentucky a 21-17 victory over South Carolina on Thursday night.

The Wildcats (2-2, 1-1 Southeastern Conference) followed with an 81-yard scoring drive consisting of 13 running plays, the last a 1-yard burst by Michael Woodfork with 4:50 left.

The Gamecocks (2-2, 1-1) got a pair of 1-yard touchdown runs by Brandon Bennett.

South Carolina got the ball twice after Kentucky's go-ahead touchdown, but safety Marcus Jenkins secured the victory with a fumble recovery and an interception in the final four minutes.

The Gamecocks drove to the Kentucky 41 but Bennett, who rushed for 132 yards, fumbled and Jenkins recovered.

White Sox win puts Rangers six back

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Ron Karkovice homered, doubled and drove in four runs to help Jack McDowell snap a three-game losing streak Thursday and lift the Chicago White Sox over the California Angels 7-1.

The White Sox stretched their AL West lead to six games over the Texas Rangers, who were off, and reduced the magic number for their first division title since 1983 to five.

Blue Jays 5, Red Sox 1

TORONTO — Roberto Alomar drove in three runs with a homer and two-run triple and Dave Stewart allowed three hits over seven innings night as Toronto inched closer to their third consecutive AL East title with a victory over Boston.

The Blue Jays have won 10 of 11 and hold a 5½-game lead over the second-place New York Yankees and six games over the Baltimore Orioles, both of whom were idle. It also reduced the Blue Jays' magic number to clinch the division to five.

Athletics 2, Royals 1

Andrews, Monaghan tie after LPGA first round

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Donna Andrews, who nearly withdrew at the last minute because of a back ailment, shot a 6-under-par 66 Thursday to tie Kris Monaghan for the first-round lead of the Kyocera Inamori Classic.

The leaders held a one-stroke advantage over Tina Barrett and Gail Graham as golfers found agreeable conditions on the flat, 6,200-yard course at the Stardust Country Club, hosting its first LPGA event since 1974.

The $425,000 tournament not only changed sites this year but also moved from the spring to the fall, finishing the regular season tour.

Andrews credited treatment by a tour trainer minutes before her early-morning tee-off with allowing her to play. She had experienced a flare-up of a strained muscle near her spine during practice.

"I went out not knowing how my back would do and I probably shortened my swing a little bit," Andrews said. "So I tried not to hit too hard. I used just the right irons and hit shots under control."

The chronic injury dates to two years ago when Andrews sneezed while picking up a ball at a Las Vegas event and strained the muscle. She aggravated it again in a tournament last week following her first career victory, at Portland, Ore.

"They say, 'Be wary of the sick.' I won that tournament when I was on antibiotics," Andrews said.

Lee JV stops Midland JV 42-21

The Midland Lee junior varsity converted two Midland High turnovers into 14 points as Lee defeated Midland High JV 42-21 Thursday night at Memorial Stadium.

Alex Strambler scored on a five-yard run in the first quarter to spot Lee at 7-0 lead. John Thurman connected with Isreal Boyd on a 29-yard scoring pass to put Lee up 14-0 after Chris Wheeler's PAT.

In the second quarter, Strambler bolted 58 yards for his seocnd score of the night and a 21-0 lead. Midland High followed with a score to cut the lead to 21-7. Then, Oscar Valdez returned an interception 52 yards for a TD to put Lee up 28-7 at halftime.

Both teams traded two TDs in the second half. Wheeler returned a fumble 31-yards for a score. Midland High trimmed the lead to 35-21 before Thurman scored on a four-yard run with no time remaining.

Lee improves 3-1 on the year and plays at San Angelo in San Angelo Thursday at 7 p.m. Lee will host Rankin next Thursday at 7 p.m.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The secret to career success lies in knowing what you can and cannot do. Remain true to your values and you will find new satisfaction in both your business and personal lives. Early in 1994, an exciting romance could take a nosedive unless you work hard to keep the spark alive. Family and friends come to the rescue when you find yourself in a tight spot late next spring. Help a child develop greater self-confidence.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: novelist F. Scott Fitzgerald, "Muppets" creator Jim Henson, football great "Mean Joe" Greene, sportscaster Jim McKay.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Preserve your credit rating by paying bills on time. You may be asked to take on additional responsibilities or cover for someone who is on vacation. Be a good sport.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An influential person may not be available when needed. Although a friend does you a favor, there are strings attached. Family members could be the cause of a misunderstanding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A crucial career choice surfaces. Postpone seeing someone who is too demanding. Employment opportunities should go without a hitch. Your mate or partner offers a logical solution to a personal dilemma.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Look to higher-ups for assistance only if you run into a difficult problem. Employment opportunities should go without a hitch. Your mate or partner offers a logical solution to a personal dilemma.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): VIPs respond to your research or behind-the-scenes efforts. Your affection for a partner is reciprocated. Periods of calm let your ESP ring clear. A family member shares a special secret.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Fears, doubts or suspicions may permeate the workplace or your thinking. You may not have all the answers; thus, silence and proven methods are golden.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work is excellent therapy for those who feel moody. Tie up loose ends. Writing carefully composed letters could open the door to new employment or valuable social contacts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New duties prove challenging. Meet deadlines on time. You will perform brilliantly when under pressure! Tend to first things first. Thorny issues require diplomatic handling.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial matters need your personal attention. Adopt a conservative approach. You need to be flexible with domestic arrangements. Mate or partner would like to take the lead in social situations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You know what you want and are prepared to work for it. Spend some time relaxing today. Count on the loyalty of your family when you pursue goals important to their financial security.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Deal face-to-face with someone who is spreading rumors. Let go of old prejudices. A teen-ager presents some interesting options. Participate fully in family activities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spend some time getting better organized and you will become more productive. Put your natural talents to work. Humor helps ease an embarrassing situation.

Opening lead: ?

The standard of play in the 41st European Championship, especially in the Women's Pairs won by Bep Vriend and Carla Arnolds of the Netherlands, was especially high. Here's a hand where only women's intuition could have arrived at the winning play.

Vriend, North, and Arnolds arrived at a reasonable six-club contract on the auction shown. South's takeout of three no trump to four clubs was a slam try and North, with a good fit and fair primes, cooperated with a four-diamond cue-bid. Although North discouraged thereafter by bidding four no trump, South pressed on to slam.

On lead was Benedicte Cronier of France. The auction made it clear that whatever heart strength North-South possessed would be in dummy, so she found the devilish lead of the two of hearts! We would hazard a guess that 999 of a thousand declarers would finesse dummy's jack, lose to the queen and then have the defenders cash the ace of hearts for a one-trick set.

Arnolds was made of sterner stuff. She spent a few moments studying the opening lead, then called for the king from dummy! All the tricks came rolling in.

La belle dame sans merci!

Pavarotti believes fans have every right to boo if they want

NEW YORK — Luciano Pavarotti admits he deserved the boos that rained down from the balcony when he failed to hit a high note and his voice cracked during a performance in Italy.

"They give all their love to the opera," Pavarotti said in an interview being broadcast Sunday night on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes."

"I think (they) have the rights to applaud or boo and if you want to know my opinion, they are right."

Pavarotti also discusses his weight — "I am lazy," he admitted — and the many sexual offers he receives from fans. "I feel sorry for the rock star," he said.

MARIETTA, Ga. — Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward pledged $20,000 to a theater that lost funding after it presented a play about AIDS.

Woodward, who lived in Marietta as a child, said she and her husband would give $20,000 if Marietta's Theater in the Square could raise another $20,000, artistic director Michael Horne said Wednesday.

The theater lost its annual $40,000 subsidy last month when the Cobb County Commission voted to drop all arts funding.

Two weeks earlier, the commissioners had approved a resolution proclaiming that the gay lifestyle is incompatible with community values. That measure was prompted by complaints about a Theatre in the Square production of the off-Broadway play "Lips Together, Teeth Apart," which discusses AIDS.

County commissioners said the arts funding was cut to put tax money to better use. Homosexual activists insisted the measure was aimed at their community.

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass. — Arlo Guthrie knows how tough it is to be a farmer.

"My grandfather lost 30 farms in 30 days back during the Depression in Oklahoma. That was his claim to fame," Guthrie said.

The folk singer is headlining a benefit concert Sunday to provide low-income loans for farmers in his home county.

Guthrie also runs programs for abused children and AIDS patients in Berkshire County, and has performed at FarmAid concerts.

LOS ANGELES — Elton John thinks money raised to fight AIDS should go straight to people with the disease. So he's cutting out the middleman and starting his own foundation.

The entertainer was to perform at a concert Thursday to raise money for the Elton John AIDS Foundation. He hopes to raise $2.5 million this year.

"To me the important thing is making sure the money goes to people and that you don't take on too much staff," he said. "We have a staff of two and I pay their wages."

John also said the music industry needs its own representative against the deadly virus.

"There is so much money that needs to be raised that I don't think there can be too many foundations as long as they are operated soundly," John told the Los Angeles Times when asked if a single foundation wouldn't be better.

John said he started the agency because he wanted to get involved on a more personal, day-to-day level.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Sonny Bono is considering a run for several state-wide offices.

The former singer and Palm Springs mayor said earlier this year that he would run for a congressional seat, but he's reconsidering because the incumbent 44th District congressman Al McCandless isn't retiring.

Bono also is interested in succeeding Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy, who is retiring at the end of his term.

"When election time comes, you look at the lay of the land . . . what's available and what's not available, what will disrupt party unity and what won't disrupt party unity."

Bono, 58, better known as half of the 1960s group Sonny and Cher, said he expects to decide on his political plans by the end of the month. He failed in a U.S. Senate bid in 1992.

LOS ANGELES — Olivia Newton-John says she's learned to cope with breast cancer.

"A lot of it is in your mind. You have to decide that you're going to be OK," Miss Newton-John said Tuesday. "I'm healthy, fit and fine now."

She made her comments on KCAL-TV's "Live in L.A." talk show. She did not discuss what type of treatment she received for the cancer.

The Australian-born singer and actress disclosed she had breast cancer in July 1992, saying it had been detected early. About 182,00 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year in the United States, and about 46,000 will die from it, the American Cancer Society estimates.

"It really refocused my life," she said. "When you go through something like that, it puts everything else in perspective. I was trying to be everything to everybody — I was Mom, I was trying to save the world, and I was running a business. I strongly believe that illness is related to your mind and stress and your feelings."

LEE: Rebels should beat MHS

more big Lee numbers will be put on the boards tonight, but that isn't the major concern of Lee coach Earl Miller.

"What we have to keep focused on is getting better each week. We need to do whatever it takes to do that," Miller said. "I was well pleased with the way the team played against a good Palo Duro team, but we had a lot of penalties. We overcame that, but you might not be able to do that against an outstanding team. We've got to cut down on that."

Miller also wants to see improvement defensively, although Lee has given up only 18 points in three games.

"We've got to get tougher defensively," Miller says. "We're smaller on defense than we've ever been and we've got to get raw-bone tough with no size. Palo Duro showed what a big team can do if they run right at you. We were able to stop them on two fourth-down plays or they might have stayed in the game a while. We're getting there, but we've got to stay tough."

Miller also realizes his team is entering a game it should win, but he does know that can turn on you if there is a major letdown.

"I'm sure our kids are smart enough to read the scores," Miller said. "Midland High is 0-3 and hasn't scored many points. And there could be a tendency to let down. But it's hard to get a grip on these kids, anyway. They don't seem to get emotionally concerned about anything. The coaches aren't like that.

"It does seem like Midland High is having some problems and I'm sure they are disappointed about giving up 40 points to a 4A team (Andrews) last week, but I'm sure they will play us hard because they always do. I don't see any reason why that would change."

Playing at home after consecutive trips to El Paso and Amarillo is another factor Miller likes.

"Our kids handled two long road trips better than any other group we've ever had. That's because of the planning by our trainer Charlie Harrington, who coordinates all that stuff for us. We could write a book on how to travel. I hope we have it down to a fine science. It's still good to play at home and we are over the hump there with San Angelo at home next week and just a couple of games in Odessa where we consider it like playing at home."

As the district campaign starts, Miller is focused, even if his team isn't.

"Our major concern this year is to get back to where we were before last season," Miller said. "Our goal is always to win the district, but we've got to start thinking about getting back into the playoffs first. We had a chance to get back into the playoffs against Permian last year and didn't get the job done. If that's what it takes again this year, that's what we will have to do."

Lee isn't without some injury problems. Center Will Shaw will be out again this week with a knee injury, but might return next week. Rex Tucker, tight-end-turned-tackle and now turned center will fill in again after a big game against Palo Duro.

"Tucker had a great game. We didn't have a bobbled snap all night," Miller said. "Our major concern is that defensive tackle Ryan Walker, who was one of our better players on defense, injured a knee last week and is out for the season."

Walker's injury has caused more shuffling as junior Mark Hunter moves into the tackle slot.

"Mark has been a linebacker and a defensive end. Now he's a defensive tackle," Miller said.

MHS: Injuries pile up for 'Dogs to running back Michael Acrey.

(From 1C)

Coats had 40 yards rushing on 10 carries versus Andrews while Acrey added 22 yards on seven carries.

"Some of the kids are doing their jobs," said Reeger. "They are playing a little bit better. We just want them to give a little bit more than they did the last time out."

Defensively MHS — with a depleted secondary — will have to stop a Lee team that passed for 175 yards and three TDs in last week's 56-12 romping of Amarillo Palo Duro. Defensive back and backup quarterback Jeremy Kimbell is out for the year with a knee injury suffered in last week's game against Andrews. Also expected to miss tonight's game are Luis Saucedo (elbow-two weeks) and Blake Henry (hamstring-one week). Defensive end Robert Royals is also expected to be out of action with a knee injury that will keep him sidelined for the next four weeks.

Following tonight's game Midland will go back on the road to face Amarillo High at 2 p.m. next Saturday at Dick Bivins Stadium.

RYAN: Law of nature catches up

presumably need surgery just so he can play catch with his grandchildren someday.

What happened here, I think, is that Ryan fell victim to basic physiology. While he beat the stuffings out of the law of averages, he was not immune to the laws of nature.

Hard work, clean living and extraordinary ability, the likes of which will never be seen again, bought him time, as much as extra decade perhaps. But it must now be written somewhere that middle-aged men, no matter how hard-working, clean-living and God-fearing, cannot throw 95-mph fastballs without suffering consequences.

In the end, Ryan was simply still too strong for his own good. His connective tissues couldn't handle the torque. He was out there doing things he shouldn't have been doing. Pitching, remember, is bad for arms of all ages.

Still, Ryan made a remarkable life for himself by getting more mileage out of his arm than anyone could have dreamed possible. He established records that will never be approached, much less surpassed, and, in the process, he never stopped being a humble, approachable man. He wasn't, for example, a great interview, but he was always an interview.

Amazingly, Ryan's Texas tenure produced just 51 victories, much ado about nothing by conventional standards and hardly worthy of the salaries he pulled down, although he did sell those extra tickets along the way. And, no, he didn't turn the Rangers into winners, either.

But there isn't a ballclub in the major leagues that wouldn't have been proud to have him out there wearing its uniform Wednesday night, even if he couldn't set down a single hitter.

I'm sorry I won't be going to Arlington now. I wanted to see Nolie pitch a final time. Life's too short, its truly great memories too few. That would have been one of them, whatever the outcome.

SOFTBALL: Midland teams split

elimination tournament.

Play in the tournament, which continues until the semifinals on Sunday, resumes today at 8 a.m.

In one of the most exiting games of the night, Gerrato Agency of Bellmore, N.Y. came back from a 9-1 deficit to pull out an 11-9 extra inning victory over Country Cable from Sedro Woolley, Wash. Most of Country Cable's team members played on the 40-over national championship team before coming to the Class C tournament.

The score was tied 9-9 at the end of the regulation seven innings and Country Cable, the visiting team, had the first at bat. Gerrato avoided the loss by ending the inning, leaving three Country Cable runners stranded.

Then, with one man on base, Gerrato third baseman Jeff Silage knocked a line drive past the first baseman that hugged the right-field line and rolled all the way to the fence, scoring the runner and Silage on the in-field home run.

Gary Doan, the pitcher for Young's, said they key for his team was getting the early lead.

"What that did was get us loose so we could play good defense the rest of the way," Doan said. "We hit the ball well and that gets your momentum going."

But Smith Funeral Home took advantage of fielding errors by the Young team and pulled to within 10-8 with a five-run fourth inning.

"They burned us a couple of times because we were giving them some room so they wouldn't hit over our head," Doan said. "But when you're ahead, you have to play defensively."

Smith and Young each added runs in the fifth inning to keep the margin at two runs.

The S.W.A.T. team was down 9-0 going into the bottom of the third when the Country Sports racked up five runs in their bat of the third.

S.W.A.T., however, started its rally with a five-run inning of its own in the bottom of the third.

Down 9-2, S.W.A.T. put two runners in scoring position with two singles to centerfield. Then Randy Tanner knocked a deep drive to right field and drove in the two runs while stretching the hit into a triple with a great display of base running and guts. This rallied S.W.A.T. to within 9-5.

In the bottom of the fourth, George Longe hit a deep drive over the head of the Country Sports centerfielder for a triple. Then Clay Bateman took advantage of a deep hit to right and a fielding error to stretch a sure double into a home run, scoring Longe to pull S.W.A.T. to within 9-7.

But Country Sports was able to get its offense going once again in the top of the fifth when Mike Fritter drove in two with a deep shot to center. David Edwards copied Fritter's shot and drove in Fritter, to give Country Sports a 12-7 lead and the eventual win.

Saudi says it won't reduce pumping

■ Oil minister announces continued production despite sagging prices.

Associated Press

GENEVA — Staking out its position ahead of a key OPEC meeting, Saudi Arabia said on Thursday that it would not reduce its oil production in the coming months to help lift sagging prices.

Hisham Nazer, the kingdom's influential oil minister, made his remarks upon arrival in Geneva for Saturday's meeting of the 12-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The producers, under pressure to halt the slide in oil prices, will be plotting production strategy for the final three months of the year.

Crude prices have tumbled to their lowest level in three years — since shortly before Iraq invaded Kuwait, a crisis that briefly sent prices above $30 a 42-gallon barrel.

The average price of an OPEC marker — an indicator of crude oil price trends — stood at $14.78 a barrel last week, well below the group's $21 target.

The price plunge has been blamed partly on excess production by Iran, Kuwait and several other OPEC members.

Nazer, whose country supplies about a third of OPEC's oil, said Saudi Arabia would not cut output below its current level of 8 million barrels a day. Overall, the nations are supplying about a million barrels a day above their July-September ceiling of 23.6 million barrels a day.

Iran, scrapping with Saudi Arabia for influence in the group, has been exceeding its cap of 3.3 million barrels by more than 300,000 barrels a day.

Kuwait, bouncing back from the Gulf War damage to its oil industry, last June refused to accept an OPEC quota of 1.6 million barrels a day. Its oil minister, Ali al-Baghli, said recently that his country is producing more than 2 million barrels a day.

Nigeria also has been pumping above quota.

In their talks, the nations will try to set a production cap to nudge up crude prices in the October-December quarter. Demand for oil normally rises in the fourth quarter, ahead of the winter heating season in North America and Western Europe.

Venezuelan Oil Minister Alirio Parra has urged the group to set a fourth-quarter limit of 24.5 million barrels a day — and stick to it. OPEC's executive office predicts demand of 25.4 million barrels a day in the upcoming quarter, delegates said.

Oil prices shot up on Tuesday after Russian President Boris Yeltsin dismissed parliament. Markets were concerned that renewed political turmoil could disrupt oil output in that country, one of the world's largest producers.

Prices inch up

NEW YORK — Oil futures prices edged higher Thursday in a whipsaw session following comments from Saudi Arabia's oil minister that the kingdom would not cut production to help lift sagging prices.

Hisham Nazer, the Saudi minister, made his statement in Geneva, where he and other OPEC ministers are gathering for a Saturday meeting.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $17.63 per barrel, up 4 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange. It traded as low as $17.25 a barrel.

Producers comprising the 12-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries have been pressured for some time by sliding oil prices.

The commodity is trading well below OPEC's target of $21 a barrel. The weak pricing has been blamed partly on excess production by Iran and some other OPEC members.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in October settling at $2.066 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 9.2 cents.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against European currencies Thursday amid persistent political unrest in Russia, while gold rebounded from a sharp loss the day before.

The dollar declined against the yen in trading as analysts tried to determine the effect of a Japanese economic stimulus package. In New York, the dollar fetched 105.935 yen, down from 106.175 yen late Wednesday.

In New York, the British pound was quoted at $1.5055, less expensive than $1.51815 late Wednesday.

Stocks slip

NEW YORK (AP) — Small stocks rallied Thursday, resuming their record-setting ways, while other share prices moved mostly higher helped by a decent bond market performance.

Blue chip stocks were the laggards of the session and the Dow Jones industrial average finished with a loss of 7.27 at 3,539.75. Weakness in several cyclical issues weighed down the indicator.

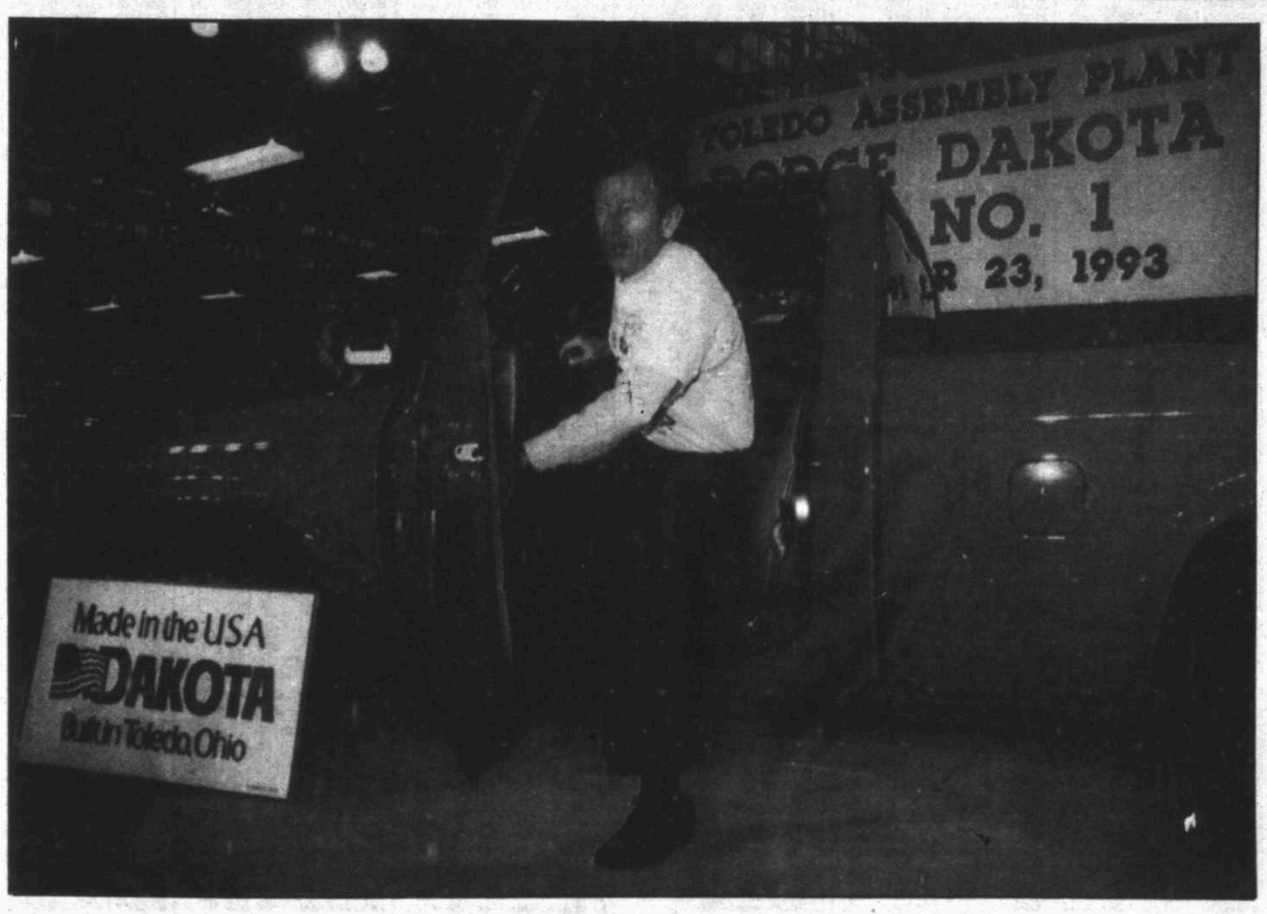

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.86 to 254.13 and the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index increased 1.54 to 457.74.

Shares rising in price outnumbered those declining by about 5 to 4 in the final tally on the NYSE. Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 275.04 million shares, down from 286.75 million in the previous session.

The standout performer of the day was the Nasdaq system where the composite index rocketed to a new high of 752.26, up 6.72. It swept past the previous peak of 749.71 reached on Sept. 3 on strength in computer, communications and biotechnology issues.

New jobless claims rise to 7-week high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of newly laid-off workers filing claims for jobless benefits rose to a seven-week high last week, but analysts said the recent trend still suggests continued employment growth.

"The numbers are still running at a level consistent with more comfortable employment gains than we were getting previously," maintained Robert G. Dederick, an economist at the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

"The jobless claims data continue to point to a firming labor market," agreed economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch & Co. in New York.

First-time claims for unemployment insurance totaled 335,000 last week, up 11,000 from the previous week and more than many analysts had expected. It was the highest level since 339,000 new claims were filed during the week ended July 31.

Economist Michael P. Niemira of Mitsubishi Bank in New York contended that much of the increase was due to a delay in opening New York City's public schools, which left bus drivers and cafeteria workers without jobs. Teachers, he noted, have 12-month contracts.

Excluding the New York factor, he said, "the jobless claims filing pace has stabilized."

Most analysts prefer to track the four-week moving average of claims because it smooths out the spikes often seen in the weekly filings.

The average moved up just 1,000 last week, to 326,500, the first advance in six weeks.

The number of applications filed under a federal emergency unemployment program fell by 4,183 during the week ended Sept. 11, to 22,481.

Eight states and territories had increases in regular claims during the week ended Sept. 11 and 45 had decreases.

The biggest gains were in Illinois, which reported 1,539; North Carolina, 341; Ohio, 144; Arizona, 93, and Colorado, 23.

The largest decreases were in California, 7,434; Michigan, 4,168; Pennsylvania, 1,771; New York, 1,733, and Puerto Rico, 1,534.

The emergency claims and individual state figures lag the overall total and the four-week moving average by one week.

Less-violent toys make come back this year

DALLAS — Parents who've been baffled by playthings that have to be programmed or wired to the TV should be more at home among the toy shelves this year.

Hula hoops, pogo sticks, Barbie dolls, building blocks and Pik-Up Stiks were prominent among the 655 toy lines represented at this week's annual toy show, the last regional show before Christmas.

"Parents are reading about kids killing kids and kids killing adults, and they're scared. So they're running back to the world of the Cleavers," said Theresa Eiguren, a sales representative for Mattel Inc. "We want to bring these toys back because they make us, as parents, feel comfortable."

Parents are exerting more control over what their children play with, and they are buying the classics. Industry experts say this is in part because of reasonable prices, but also because of concern about the influence on their kids of high-tech, sometimes violence-tinged toys. Most of the nostalgic toys are less than $20.

Still, big-name manufacturers like Mattel and Tyco Toys Inc. are counting on some kids to go for the glitter, begging for higher-priced items advertised on television.

"I don't agree with all this back-to-basics stuff, because kids want what they see on television," said Lawrence Lilly, Tyco's vice president of key accounts. "Tyco is still highly promotional and very reliant on television."

The weapons in this year's hottest toy war are Mattel's Baby Walk' N Roll, the industry's first remote-control doll, and Tyco's Giggles 'N Go doll, which scoots around in a battery-operated walker. Mattel's new doll is priced in the mid-$40s; Tyco's is between $35 and $40.

And, despite what is usually short-lived appeal, manufacturers hope to sell lots of toys based on television cartoon or comic-book characters this year. There are products based on Barney, the purple dinosaur of public TV; Dakin's stuffed dog based on "Beethoven's 2nd," a movie scheduled for release before Christmas; and a line of stuffed dinosaurs based on a full-length animated film titled "We're Back."

But with no mega-hit this year to rival the success of Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles toys and Cabbage Patch dolls, toy makers are relying on tried-and-true toys like Slinkys and balls to pay the bills.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Cashing in fund would bring capital gains tax

By Bill Doyle

Q: In 1972, I invested $4,000 in a mutual fund. Since then, I have reinvested all dividends and capital gains distributions to purchase more shares of the fund.

Doyle

Each January, the fund sends me a Form 1099 listing the amount of reinvested dividends and capital gains distributions accrued during the past year. In turn, I report the dividends and capital gains distributions on my annual income tax return.

My fund account is now worth approximately $71,000.

Since I have paid taxes over the years, what tax -- if any -- will I owe if I cash in the fund?

A: You would owe a capital gains tax if you cash in your fund shares at a profit -- as is a virtual certainty.

Your profit would be the difference between your "basis" -- cost for tax purposes -- and the larger amount you receive when you redeem the shares by turning them back to the mutual fund.

Your basis is the $4,000 you originally invested plus all the dividends and capital gains distributions you've reinvested. Let's say, over the 21 years, you reinvested $25,000 of dividends and $25,000 of capital gains distributions. That would make your basis $54,000.

Using those numbers, if you redeem all your fund shares and receive $71,000, your profit would be $17,000, taxable as a capital gain.

Brace yourself for a complicating wrinkle:

The profit on shares owned for more than one year would be taxed as a long-term capital gain -- at 28 percent, unless you are in the 15 percent federal income tax bracket, in which case your long-term capital gain would be taxed at 15 percent.

The profit on shares owned for one year or less would be taxed as a short-term capital gain -- at the same rate as your ordinary income. Because of the recently enacted tax law, that bite can be as high as 39.6 percent.

Q: I have been investing in mutual funds by using automatic monthly withdrawals from my bank account. I anticipate needing most of the money in one of my fund accounts in two or three years. This will be my first time for redeeming fund shares.

What would be the best redemption method, with respect to profit and simplifying my taxes?

A: Redeem shares on which you have high cost basis and have owned for more than a year.

By cashing in high-cost shares, you will have a lower taxable profit than if you redeem low-cost shares. As a result, you will pay less in capital gains tax.

Please note that you will receive the same amount of money whether you redeem high-cost or low-cost shares of the same fund. But redeeming high-cost shares reduces your tax bill.

By redeeming shares owned for more than a year, you will have a long-term capital gain, and the maximum tax on your profit will be 28 percent.

Also, you will have to fill out only one part of Schedule D, Form 1040, on which you are required to report capital gains to the Internal Revenue Service.

Q: Twenty months ago, I purchased more than 3,000 shares of a municipal bond mutual fund that has check-writing privileges. I reinvest the monthly dividends to purchase additional shares.

If I write checks on my fund account, how do I figure out my tax liability?

A: With difficulty. Every time you write a check on that account you redeem full and fractional shares of the mutual fund and have either a profit or a loss, resulting in either a capital gain or a capital loss to report on your income tax return.

You can use any of three methods to establish the basis of the shares redeemed:

- "Identified shares," meaning you pick the shares.
- "First in; first out," meaning the shares you acquired earliest are the ones you redeem first.
- "Average cost," meaning your basis is the total cost divided by the number of shares owned.

South-of-border cuisine becomes choice for shoppers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The tortilla is fast becoming a major food staple in the United States, the latest advance by south-of-the-border cuisine.

Last year, salsa ended ketchup's 100-year reign as the nation's favorite condiment, according to Packaged Facts Inc., a New York-based market research firm. Sales of Mexican sauces reached $640 million in 1992, outpacing ketchup sales, which totaled $600 million.

Now it's the tortilla's turn to catch up with and perhaps even surpass the all-American loaf of bread, the San Antonio Express-News reported.

Tortillas will stand "bag to bag with bread in supermarkets and become a staple in American kitchens and restaurants" in less than a decade, according to Milling & Baking News, an industry newsletter.

"I was brought up with tortillas, and they are like sliced bread to me," said Lisa Wong, owner of two San Antonio Mexican food restaurants, Rosario's and Lisa's.

"My grandmother used to make tortillas and we used them with everything. They are a staple that is catching on with a lot of non-Hispanics," she said.

Some 35 billion tortillas will be eaten in the United States this year, according to the Tortilla Industry Association in Encino, Calif.

That's an average of 140 tortillas per person each year, or about 2.5 tortillas a week, based on the 1990 U.S. census population of 249 million people.

About 60 percent of tortilla sales are wheat flour and about 40 percent are made from ground corn.

U.S. tortilla sales are expected to top $2 billion in 1993 and reach $3 billion by 1995, according to Tortilla Industry Association figures.

"And that's not counting tortilla chips, which account for another $3 billion in sales and is a whole other industry," said Irwin Steinberg, executive director of the three-year-old industry group.

Nationwide, wheat flour tortillas are preferred, but in San Antonio the traditional corn tortillas still are the favorite.

The Tortilla Industry Association said non-Hispanics prefer flour tortillas because they are used to the taste of white (wheat) bread. Hispanics, which comprise a majority of San Antonio's population, prefer corn tortillas.

California and Texas are constantly fighting for title of top tortilla maker, the Tortilla Industry Association said.

The group said U.S. production of tortillas has grown 15 percent a year since the organization was formed in 1990. That year wholesale sales were $1.5 billion.

The association also said sales of tortillas have surpassed all other ethnic and speciality breads, such as bagels, English muffins, croissants and pita bread.

"Tortillas are generally considered the fastest growing bread product in the world," Steinberg said.

The Tortilla Industry Association and other sources attribute the tortilla boom to two principal factors.

One is the continuing immigration of Mexicans and Central Americans to the United States.

According to the Census Bureau, the U.S. Hispanic population increased from 14.6 million, or 6.4 percent of the 1980 population, to 22.3 million, or 9 percent of the 1990 population.

"The other factor is the increasing popularity of both fast-food and sit-down Mexican restaurants across the country, which in turn, acquainted many non-Hispanics consumers with the tortillas' benefits: healthy, tasty and easy to use," Steinberg said.

The U.S. bread industry is keenly aware of the public's growing taste for tortillas.

Media company plans to make public offering

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Harte-Hanks Communications Inc. registered Thursday with the Securities and Exchange Commission for a proposed initial public offering of 6.25 million shares of common stock.

The public offering would be made after an SEC review, which could take two to eight weeks, said Richard L. Ritchie, chief financial officer for San Antonio-based Harte-Hanks.

Proceeds from the stock sale would be used to pay off $100 million in debt, Ritchie said.

Harte-Hanks went private in 1984 in a leveraged buyout initiated by its management. The communications company previously was listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

"We were private for a long time, until 1972, then we were public until 1984," Ritchie said. "Now we're going public again."

Ritchie declined to elaborate on the decision because of Harte-Hanks "registration" status with the SEC. In a news release issued Thursday, the company emphasized that the press statement did not constitute an offer to sell nor was it intended to solicit buyers for the shares.

Of the 6.25 million shares being offered, 5 million will be offered in the United States, and 1.25 million will be offered concurrently outside the United States.

Goldman, Sachs & Co. and CS First Boston will co-manage the U.S. offering, and Goldman Sachs International Limited and CS First Boston will co-manage the international offering.

Harte-Hanks, founded 72 years ago, owns and operates nine daily newspapers; about 40 non-daily publications, including community newspapers and supplemental publications; shoppers zoned into 528 separate editions reaching 6.7 million households in five major markets each week; KENS-TV, a CBS affiliate television station in San Antonio; and a nationwide direct marketing company.

Company sues KFC over new chicken product

DALLAS (AP) — Golden Franchising Corp. filed a lawsuit Thursday against Kentucky Fried Chicken, alleging that KFC's new Rotisserie Gold chicken is an infringement on the trademark of its chicken.

Dallas-based Golden Franchising, which franchises Golden Fried Chicken restaurants, says KFC's Rotisserie Gold will be confused with GFC's Golden Rotisserie chicken.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court in Dallas, seeks damages and an injunction to stop Louisville, Ky.-based KFC from using the name and trademark for its rotisserie chicken.

KFC had launched the roasted chicken product in most of its 5,100 U.S. restaurants after costly advertising campaign, and denied the lawsuit's allegations.

"We don't see any confusion at all between the two names," KFC spokesman Steve Provost said in a telephone interview from Louisville.

"We think this is a pretty transparent effort to get some publicity for a small chain by piggybacking the success of what looks to be the hottest selling new product in fast food."

GFC said consumers would be confused because the product is "virtually identical" to its rotisserie chicken.

The lawsuit says KFC's actions have caused irreparable damage.

Golden Fried Chicken Executive Vice President Victor Erwin said his Dallas-based company had twice informed KFC that its new product would create confusion between the trademarks.

"There is no doubt that they have violated our trademark," Erwin said in a prepared statement.
