Clockwise from top - The canyon mural over the lanes was the first painted at Harvester Lanes. Ten panels beneath the canyon mural followed later; Shirley Jernigan stands in front of the largest indoors mural in the state. At more than 400 feet, the mural at Harvester Lanes wraps around the interior, ranging from space to canyon lands to seascapes. A spider glows under black light at Harvester Lanes.

Pampa boasts state's largest indoor mural

By David Bowser
 The Pampa News

According to research that Dorothy Clark did when she was at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, it is the largest indoor mural in the State of Texas.

It's over 400 feet, said Shirley Jernigan, who has Harvester Lanes with her husband Keith Jernigan. The Jernigans bought Harvester Lanes in June, 2005.

"We've owned it three years," she said.

Pampa muralist Doug Pollard painted it over about a two-year period.

"The man never had a drawing," Jernigan said. "Doug painted all of it."

She said the only time they ever saw Pollard with a reference was when he painted the space station. He had a photograph of the Hubble telescope.

"When we first bought the center, that was just a plain white wall and my husband hated it."

 owner, Harvester Lanes

The back wall over the lanes was the first part of it to be attempted.

"When we first bought the center, that was just a plain white wall," Jernigan said, "and my husband just hated it."

Her husband told Pollard that he wanted a canyon scene.

"Then Keith walked away," Jernigan said, "and Doug went to painting. We turned him loose, and let him paint."

Then Keith and Shirley Jernigan decided that the side walls were white and plain, and they needed murals.

The result was a sweeping canyon vista that went from a tipi Indian village and buffalo on the south wall across Palo Duro Canyon with the Lighthouse formation over the lanes to Monument Valley and an arch in Utah. Then there are the Anzai cliff dwellings in Colorado.

In the public area on the north and south walls, Pollard painted space scenes with the space shuttle and a spaceman on the south wall and the Hubble telescope on the north wall.

Along the way, the Jernigans had 10 panels painted over the lanes, each 12 long, and hung beneath the canyon scene depicting underwater life.

There are 26 species of fish in the ocean mural, not including Sponge Bob Square Pants.

But there are things a visitor doesn't see -- less the ultraviolet, or black, lights are on.

"We have things in here that literally you cannot see," Jernigan said.

On the caps of the ball returns next to the gutters are spiders, scorpions and a 60-foot Anaconda snake stretching from the foul line to the bowling pins.

"Everyone of them is different," Jernigan said. "There aren't any two that are alike."

Invisible under the fluorescent lights, they come to life beneath the black lights and begin to glow.

"All of them, when we bought the center, were just plain white," Jernigan said. "Nothing fancy."

She said this was done for the kids on Saturday night.

Meeting draws lake concerns

By David Bowser
 The Pampa News

FRITCH -- While a representative of Pampa's Congressman Mac Thornberry held town hall meeting in Stinnett and Borger, Fritch had a special problem.

Paul Simpson, who works out of Thornberry's Amarillo office, said that the major concerns in Stinnett and Border were immigration.

In Fritch, Jerry Foster worried that the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority was going to destroy the recreational use of Lake Meredith.

Foster said the Lake Meredith Recreational Area was suffering because of low lake levels and yet the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority continues to

City to hold public hearing Monday

The Pampa City Commission will hold a public hearing concerning a wireless Internet base station in town in advance of their special meeting Monday.

Centramedia Online Services is requesting permission to place a wireless base station and repeater on a city right-of-way at Chestnut Street and Linda Drive.

The commission is expected to take action on the request during their meeting following the public hearing.

The commission will also consider a customer service agreement between the city and the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

In other business, the city commission will consider a resolution suspending Southwestern Public Service's rate hike set to take effect in October and joining other cities in legal arguments.

The commission will also consider a bid for new scales at the city landfill.

The commission will also hear from Andy Epps concerning Freedom Museum USA.

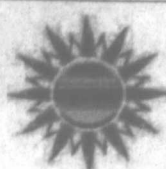

An evaluation of the Interim City Manager Trevlyn Pitner will be held in a closed meeting.

When Dr. Vijay Mohan leaves Pampa to the Amarillo VA Hospital at the end of June, Pampa will lose one of the finest surgeons we have ever known. My wife and I have known Dr. Mohan as a surgeon and friend ever since he arrived in Pampa 30 years ago. He saved their lives by his skill. He is known for his caring and tenderness in all the procedures he performs. In my opinion, every operation that Dr. Mohan has done for me has been perfect. Pampa will truly miss Dr. Mohan and his charming wife, Shanta. The Amarillo VA Hospital's gain will be our loss. Curt Beck

"We turn the black lights on and turn up the music," she said.

The black light is the reason that every one of the stars in the space mural had to be painted twice. Once with regular paint, and once with the black light paint.

The catch was Pollard had to paint all the figures under the black light.

Jernigan said he'd paint for a couple of hours at a time, then he'd have to turn on the fluorescent lights and let his eyes adjust before he went outside.

"For weeks," Jernigan said, "he sat out here on these lanes every day with the black lights on, and he painted."

Dragons come alive on the half walls beneath the canyon scenes on either side of the bowling lanes.

"You can't see them except under the black light," Jernigan said.

That was so nothing would distract their league bowlers.

"We still have some other projects that we have yet to do," Jernigan said. "We're going to do our game room and some others."

But what's already there is unique.

"No other bowling alley has it in the world," Jernigan said. "It's a one-of-a-kind. My husband just hated the white walls that had been in this building 50 years. So we no longer have white walls."

Lake

"There won't be much of a recreation area without water in the lake," Foster said.

Kent Satterwhite, general manager of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, noted that the lake was built as a reservoir in the 1960s to provide water to the water authority's 11 member cities, including Pampa. That is the primary purpose of the lake, he said, and that is the reason that CRMWA continues to pump lake water.

Satterwhite said the lake is at alarmingly low levels and is setting new record lows every day, but if CRMWA's member cities institute conservation measures and cut back on water demand, those cut backs will go back to the water authority's Roberts County well field, not Lake Meredith.

Fritch City Manager Ernest Terry complained about the new electronic voting machines cities are having to buy without funding from the federal government and having to provide resident data to the census bureau. Small communities like Fritch, he argued, don't have the resources to do such things and meet such unfunded mandates.

"Mac struggles with this every day," Simpson said. "Washington DC doesn't understand rural communities."

Crystal Black with the City of Fritch complained about having to print multi-lingual ballots when she said it's never been a problem before.

Margaret Savage said she's worried about Medicare. Her premiums keep going up, but the government is paying doctors less. She said she's having problems finding a doctor that takes Medicare.

"Entitlements like that are taking over the budget," Simpson said. "We're caught between a rock and a hard place."

Daymun White, the Fritch superintendent of schools, said he's got employees who are caught in a predicament of having to choose between Social Security and the Teacher Retirement System.

"It's having a lot of impact on our hourly employees," White said, "if not our teachers."

He said he's also concerned about President Bush's No Child Left Behind initiative. The problem, he said, is in the inner city schools with 4,000 pupils.

"Standardized tests are not the answer," White said. "The result will cause problems."

He indicated he thought private initiatives that make the schools smaller and more responsive to student needs are moving in the right directions.

Others at the Fritch town hall meeting registered concerns about energy and gas prices, health care, education and, as with Stinnett and Borger, immigration.

Thieves targeting farm diesel supplies in Texas, elsewhere

LORENZO, Texas (AP) — West Texas cotton producer Mark Schoepf never dreamed the price of farm diesel would skyrocket so.

But now that it has climbed above $4.15 a gallon, Schoepf decided he needed to protect his investment. The Lorenzo resident recently bought 10 padlocks to affix to tanks that fuel the diesel motors irrigating his fields.

Many of those tanks are visible from a highway bordering some of his fields, making them easy targets.

"Before, we've never kept them locked," said Schoepf, who is able to store up to 5,000 gallons to fuel his farming operation east of Lubbock. "With diesel prices that high, somebody's going to try to get it."

Schoepf isn't alone. As more motorists and truckers buy locking gas caps for cars and other vehicles, farmers and ranchers across the country are realizing diesel fuel is a target thieves are increasingly eyeing.

The cost of farm diesel is less than the diesel used by truckers and the general public and thieves either sell it or use it themselves.

Thieves use syphon hoses and pumps, the latter sometimes built into vans that roam wide-open fields at night to steal diesel.

"If they're out there in the middle of the night, they're up to no good," said Steve Riley, who works at Crosby County Fuel Association. "It's going to get worse."

Sheldon Wilder, who owns a cotton gin 30 miles east of Memphis, Tenn., has endured worse already. Twice in two weeks, he had diesel drained from saddlebag tanks on a truck at his gin. The second time the thieves left the hoses loose and what diesel they didn't steal drained out onto the ground.

"You get irritated, but that's life," he said of the combined 300 gallons taken in the thefts. "It's just people who want some money."

Wilder said there is a quasi black market for diesel that tempts some looking to save a buck or two.

"You'd probably buy it because it'd be a good deal," he said. "A lot of people are hurting. Their purchasing power has been eaten up by the price of gas and food."

Some farmers have had their entire tanks stolen and later found them elsewhere — empty.

Agricultural users pay about 60 cents per gallon less.

Red-dye diesel can be used in agricultural equipment, such as tractors or combines, and on farms or ranches, which includes feedlots, dairy, poultry and timber operations, and commercial orchards and nurseries. A home garden does not qualify.

Diesel designated for non-highway purposes contains a red dye that distinguishes it from regular diesel fuel.

The IRS does periodic and random checks for illegal use of the red-dyed diesel at weigh stations across the country, IRS spokesman Clay Sanford said.

So has the higher price spurred more enforcement?

"I can't confirm or deny we've stepped up (checks), but I would definitely hope that everyone is complying with the law," he said.

The federal penalty for using the off-highway diesel on public roadways is the greater of $1,000 or $10 per gallon of the fuel involved. After the first violation, the $1,000 portion of the penalty, which is additional to any tax imposed on the fuel, increases depending on the number of violations.

In Texas, enforcement is handled by the state comptroller's office, which also does random checks at weigh stations. If caught, violators face Class C misdemeanor charges, comptroller spokesman Allen Spelce said. From Sept. 1 through May, the state collected about $41,000 in fines, he said.

The comptroller's office forwards information about alleged violators to the IRS, Spelce said.

But even regular diesel is getting ripped off. In May, a small, rural school district near Waco was hit by a diesel thief who absconded with about 260 gallons, Hallsburg schools superintendent Kent Reynolds said.

The district, which has just three bus routes for its 112 elementary students, is taking steps to beef up make its diesel tanks more secure, he said.

Investigation shows poor security before blaze

AUSTIN (AP) — A state trooper guarding the Governor's Mansion the night an arsonist torched the landmark was ill-equipped to properly guard the grounds.

That's the word Thursday from an ongoing internal investigation by Department of Public Safety Sergeant Michael Escalante.

Escalante says the one trooper on duty the night of the June 8 blaze was not properly trained to monitor the security system. He says parts of a motion detector system were not working properly and required extra vigilance from the trooper.

The trooper was turned away from the security console in the carriage house behind the mansion and was working on a nearby computer.

Also, just 13 of 20 surveillance cameras were operating at the time.

Idle American: Seeking lodging in high places

What are super-cautious tourists to do? For some, even selecting hotel rooms is daunting. Historically, many guests have opted for rooms on lower floors, in case of fire.

Now, some of the same people, reading about inner city crane accidents on both coasts, are, uh, thinking higher.

One hotel desk clerk — sure he had heard every possible question — fielded a new one from a New York City visitor who had tip-toed into the city. She said she would check in AFTER he determined the height of the tallest crane at a construction site nearby. He made a phone call that yielded the answer: 310-feet. "I want a room on any floor that's at least 320 feet above the pavement," the tourist demanded ...

New York City, the bull's-eye for tourism in the USA, isn't feeling the pinch of a drab economy. Even gasoline pumps — one-armed bandits that are public enemy number one — aren't diminishing the luster of the Big Apple.

Don Newbury
Columnist

A tourism pro explained the NYC scenario this way: Many Americans who typically flock to Europe in the summer months are staying home because the dollar wilts at international monetary exchange counters. So, they're staying home, many of them opting for visits to NYC.

Since Euros are bullies in the American marketplace, Europeans are cashing in on good vacation deals in the USA. So, NYC is hanging strong in the summer tourism derby ...

What a difference a half-century makes! In the 1950's, gasoline priced at 15 to 20-cents per gallon was common, and many service stations passed out trading stamps with each purchase. (Attendants also threw in free windshield cleanings and checks of radiator, tire pressure and oil levels.)

Such stamps went the way of the dodo bird three decades ago.

Now, automobile dealerships are flooding the ad market with promises of $2.99 gas for three years, or tanks of the precious fuel for new-car buyers. This is probably NOT a good time for trading stamps to make a comeback ...

Did you see in the papers where Robbie Knievel — the "Evel" one's son — was successful in his bid to clear 21 Hummers on his airborne motorcycle jump?

Again, timing is everything. If he'd waited a few years, he might have had a hard time finding 21 Hummers to line up!

Oh, and what about that newspaper headline: One called his feat a "Hum-Dinger."...

Perhaps everyone is feeling more pressure per square inch in the living of these days.

No one is spared, not even well-known sports personalities. One example is Ron Washington, manager of the Texas Rangers whose job was in peril a short while ago. Dealing with prima donna athletes (some of whom are living, breathing bobble heads) AND media on a daily basis, Washington may soon be linked with Yogi Berra and the late Casey Stengel in the world of fouled-up oral responses.

The other day, he fended off a barbed question with this answer: "Don't expect me to 'validify' that."

Perhaps he meant "validate," or maybe "verify." When job pressures squeeze, maybe we're lucky if managers and coaches get a syllable or two right ...

A friend lamented the other day that this would be a terrible time for the meek to inherit the earth.

Citing skyrocketing costs across the board, he claims he's not sure how long he can survive in what we've long called a free enterprise system.

He smiled when he spoke of family friends whose last name is Card. They named their newborn son "Maxed Out."...

We're outta here. The wife and I are heading to New York City for a few days, then we're to board Carnival's Miracle, a renowned cruise vessel. We're eager to see if the water's still wet, the Caribbean still blue and buffets still lavish.

We trust we'll encounter interesting people and circumstances along the way. If so, we'll write about them later.

Please notice I didn't call this time away a vacation and made nary a reference to "well-deserved." ...

TODAY IN HISTORY

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, June 22, the 174th day of 2008. There are 192 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 22, 1945, the World War II battle for Okinawa ended with an Allied victory; some 13,000 Americans and 90,000 Japanese soldiers, plus 130,000 civilians, were killed in the nearly three-month campaign.

On this date:

In 1807, a British frigate, the HMS Leopard, attacked and boarded the American ship USS Chesapeake off the Virginia coast in search of Royal Navy deserters.

In 1870, the U.S. Department of Justice was created.

In 1937, Joe Louis began his reign as world heavyweight boxing champion by knocking out Jim Braddock in the eighth round of their fight in Chicago.

In 1938, Joe Louis knocked out Max Schmeling in the first round of their rematch at Yankee Stadium.

The Dallas Morning News on the status AIDS in the world and the United States:

Good news, for once, on the AIDS front: The world will not see a global pandemic.

That's the word from Dr. Kevin De Cock, who heads the World Health Organization's AIDS department. At a United Nations AIDS meeting earlier this month in New York, he confirmed that outside of sub-Saharan Africa, AIDS will not become general in Russia, China or anywhere in the global heterosexual population.

Yet the risk does remain high among gay men, IV drug users, prostitutes and heterosexuals in sub-Saharan Africa.

Why there and not elsewhere?

It apparently has to do with cultural practices especially having multiple concurrent sexual partners and widespread herpes infections, which cause open sores that help transmit HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

Does this mean the rest of the world can turn away from treating AIDS sufferers and fighting the disease among at-risk populations? Absolutely not. Compassion and common sense demand keeping up the battle. An estimated 23 million Africans are believed to be HIV-positive, as are 10 million more around the globe.

What this new awareness does mean is that the public and private money committed to the AIDS fight can and should be rerouted where it is most needed. As University of California epidemiologist James Chin puts it in a recent report highly critical of AIDS agencies and activists for exaggerating the threat, to perpetuate the myth that all people are equally at risk wastes precious resources. Money spent educating schoolchildren in Bangladesh is money not spent educating schoolchildren in South Africa.

Moreover, it leads to a misallocation of general health funding. The Lancet, an authoritative British medical journal, not long ago published a series demonstrating that the world spends far more money fighting AIDS than it does on combating diseases and conditions like the lack of clean water that kill vastly more people.

The AIDS crisis is by no means over. But our understanding of it has progressed a great deal. So should our funding and AIDS-fighting policies. Science, not politics, should guide the world's response. URL: <http://www.dallasnews.com>

Local animal hospital earns accreditation

Easley Animal Hospital in Pampa has again received accreditation from the American Animal Hospital Association. The accreditation came after a comprehensive evaluation that included a quality assessment review of the hospital's facility, medical equipment, practice methods and pet health care management.

Only 15 percent of all small animal veterinary practices in the United States have achieved the association accreditation, a news release stated. In order to maintain accredited status, Easley Animal Hospital must continue to be evaluated regularly by the association's consultants.

"Easley Animal Hospital belongs to a select group of practices that are committed to meeting the highest standards in veterinary medicine," Anna Worth, DVM and association president, said. "AAHA hospitals pass a stringent evaluation of over 900 standards covering patient care, client service and medical protocols. By attaining accreditation, Easley Animal Hospital in Tired of Neck and Back Pain?

"I was experiencing a bulging disc with numbness and pain into the left hip and leg. I had tried other treatment options including physical therapy and prescription medication without substantial relief. I was then introduced to Spinal Decompression therapy and chiropractic manipulations. After only 2 1/2 weeks my pain was diminished to the point of being able to sleep all night in my own bed. After only 2 months of treatment I am pain free!"

Soldiers risk ruin while awaiting benefit checks

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — His lifelong dream of becoming a soldier had, in the end, come to this for Isaac Stevens: 28, penniless, in a wheelchair, fending off the sexual advances of another man in a homeless shelter.

Stevens' descent from Army private first-class, 3rd Infantry Division, 11 Bravo Company, began in 2005 — not in battle, since he was never sent off to Iraq or Afghanistan, but with a headfirst fall over a wall on the obstacle course at Fort Benning, Ga. He suffered a head injury and spinal damage.

The injury alone didn't put him in a homeless shelter. Instead, it was military bureaucracy — specifically, the way injured soldiers are discharged on just a fraction of their salary and then forced to wait six to nine months, and sometimes even more than a year, before their full disability payments begin to flow.

"When I got out, I hate to say it, but man, that was it. Everybody just kind of washed their hands of me, and it was like, 'OK, you're on your own,'" said Stevens, who was discharged in November and was in a shelter by February. He has since moved into a temporary San Antonio apartment with help from Operation Homefront, a nonprofit organization.

Nearly 20,000 disabled soldiers were discharged in the past two fiscal years, and lawmakers, veterans' advocates and others say thousands could be facing financial ruin while they wait for their claims to be processed and their benefits to come through.

"The anecdotal evidence is depressing," said Rep. John Hall, D-N.Y., who heads a subcommittee on veterans disability benefits. "These veterans are getting medical care, but their family is going through this huge readjustment at the same time they're dealing with financial difficulties."

Most permanently disabled veterans qualify for payments from Social Security and the military or Veterans Affairs. Those sums can amount to about two-thirds of their active-duty pay. But until those checks show up, most disabled veterans draw a reduced Army paycheck.

The amount depends on the soldier's injuries, service time and other factors. But a typical veteran and his family who once lived on $3,400 a month might have to make do with $970 a month.

Unless a soldier has a personal fortune or was so severely injured as to require long-term inpatient care, that can be an extreme hardship.

The Army, stung by the scandal last year over shoddy care at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, has been working to help soldiers during

Calcium alone does not reduce hip fracture risk

By ROSALIE MARION BLISS
ARS News

People, especially the elderly, may reach for calcium supplements in hopes of protecting themselves against bone fractures in case of a fall. But a recent analysis of several studies found no reduction in risk of hip fracture with calcium supplementation.

The analysis was supported in part by the Agricultural Research Service (ARS). It comes on the heels of another ARS-funded study suggesting that today's current recommended amount of dietary calcium for American adults may be greater than actually needed. ARS is a scientific research agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Bess Dawson-Hughes and colleagues in academia and medicine researched calcium intake studies that had been published between January 1960 and December 2006. They also systematically searched information from biomedical databases, reference lists and abstracts for the study review.

Dawson-Hughes is director of the Bone Metabolism Laboratory at the Jean Mayer USDA Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University, Boston, Mass. The analysis was published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition.

Among the studies that met the researchers' screening criteria, seven included a total of 170,991 women with nearly 3,000 hip fractures. Five of the studies included a total of 68,606 men with 214 hip fractures. Pooled results from those studies suggest that calcium intake is not appreciably associated with hip fracture risk in women or men. That means the researchers did not find that a higher calcium intake reduced the incidence of hip fractures.

Hip fractures are the most frequent and severe fractures among the elderly, and experts estimate the average cost of care at $29,000 per patient. Increased calcium intake is still commonly recommended as a single fracture prevention strategy, although considerable uncertainty exists regarding optimal intakes of calcium, the authors wrote. For example, for adults over age 50, the recommended calcium intake is 700 milligrams (mg) daily in the United Kingdom, but 1,200 mg daily in the United States.

The authors concluded that the findings do not support an overall benefit from greater-than-average calcium intake.

Future studies of fracture prevention should focus on the best combination of calcium plus vitamin D, rather than on calcium supplementation alone, according to authors.

the in-between period, said Col. Becky Baker, assigned to injured soldier transition at the U.S. Surgeon General's Office.

In a change in policy that took effect last August, the Army is allowing wounded soldiers to continue to draw their full Army paychecks for up to 90 days after discharge, Baker said. It is also sending more VA workers to Army posts to process claims more quickly, and trying to do a better job of informing soldiers of the available benefits and explaining the application process.

"We make certain that we've covered all the bases before we discharge the soldier," Baker said.

She acknowledged, however, that the changes have been slow to take hold across an Army stretched by war. "It's definitely a practice that is new. It takes awhile for new practices to be institutionalized," the colonel said.

Stevens was moved to the Operation Homefront apartment after a social worker at Tripler Army Medical Center in Hawaii, acting on her own initiative, rescued Stevens from a homeless shelter there.

"This is a situation where someone used their common sense and they did the right thing, versus saying, 'This is the rules. We can't do this,'" Tripler spokeswoman Minerva Anderson said of the social worker.

Typically, the first 100 days after discharge are spent just gathering medical and other evidence needed to make a decision on disability, VA officials say. If paperwork is incomplete, or a veteran moves to another state before the claim is decided, the process can drag on longer. Disagree with the VA's decision, and the wait time grows.

"The claims are a lot more complicated than people think," said Ursula Henderson, director of the VA's regional office in Houston.

Amy Palmer, a disabled veteran and vice president of Operation Homefront, which helps newly disabled servicemembers, said: "Nobody's assigned to them. You're on your own once you get out."

Hall is pushing legislation that would force the VA to use compatible computer systems and more consistent criteria and to reach out to veterans better.

"A veteran goes and serves and does what the country asks them to do," the congressman said. "But when they come back they're made to jump through these hoops and to wait in line for disability benefits."

Simon Heine served three tours in Iraq as a tank mechanic before he was discharged with severe post-traumatic stress disorder.

His wife quit college so she could figure out how her four children could live on less than $1,000 a month. Eventually, she moved the family of six into an Operation Homefront apartment so they could finish navigating the bureaucracy and wait out the arrival of Social Security and VA benefits.

"It is like giving you a car and taking the steering wheel off. They say, 'There is the gas and the brake. Just go straight,' and hopefully, you are going in the right direction," Heine said.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing to praise all those friends and family who support their loved ones through and after abusive relationships. A year ago, I ended a 2 1/2-year relationship with a controlling, emotionally abusive man. During those years, I almost completely ignored my best friend. I was never available to see her socially, and our telephone conversations were few and far between. I didn't deserve the generosity she showed me after the breakup. If I was sad or lonely, she was there for me every second of the day. She stayed with me long hours while I adjusted to single life, and even dragged her nauseated self (she was pregnant) out with me while I attempted to resume a social life. I know I am not the only woman who has received friendship, support and love even when they haven't given the same. Readers who have helped loved ones to restructure their lives after an abusive relationship should know that we regard them as angels. They have given us an enormous gift just by answering the phone, sitting with us, or giving us a much-needed hug. I hope all of you know how valuable you are. --

INDEBTED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR INDEBTED: I am printing your letter not only because of your tribute to your good friend, but also because of an important point that may have escaped you. Please stop flogging yourself for being unable to give your friend the attention she deserved while you were involved with an abuser. One of the first things abusers (of both sexes, by the way) do is to isolate their victims from friends and family. It is often done gradually, so the person doesn't realize what is happening until it's too late. After all, when we love someone we don't want to do anything that would make him (or her) uncomfortable, or cause him/her to sulk -- so we allow them to monopolize our time until there isn't any left to give to anyone else. That is what happened to you, and it appears your friend understood that fact. Kudos to her.

DEAR ABBY: I work in retail, and one of my regular customers is a man who stutters. It takes him 10 seconds or more to speak certain words. Would it be considered rude to provide the word for him until he gets caught up? I feel it would relieve him from an uncomfortable situation. My co-worker says it would be rude and would only add to his frustration. Who is right? -

- WANTS TO BE HELPFUL, SOUTH DAYTONA, FLA.

DEAR WANTS TO BE HELPFUL: I agree with your co-worker. Do not finish the man's sentence for him. Not only would it be a breach of etiquette to draw attention to his problem, you could also lose a regular customer.

DEAR ABBY: May I comment on a sensitive issue I have never seen addressed in your column? I have noticed an increasing number of memorials at accident sites along freeways and roads. While I sympathize with the bereaved families, is it necessary to have two places to mourn the loss of their loved one? Isn't the cemetery enough? --

M.H. IN L.A.

DEAR M.H.: The memorials you describe are intended as a gesture of respect, and also to remind motorists that the area can be dangerous. However, if a memorial becomes a distraction, the authorities may order it removed.

Texas 4-H honors bank service

Texas 4-H has given a citation for Outstanding Service to Happy State Bank for its leadership in supporting communities throughout the Texas Panhandle.

The bank, which has a branch in Pampa, was praised for its support in the region for the Texas AgriLife Extension Service programs that help agriculture, families and young people through Texas 4-H.

Besides underwriting 4-H efforts in livestock shows, awards and achievement banquets, the bank opens the doors to its branch offices in nine Panhandle counties for Extension meetings day and night.

Happy State Bank also helped provide start-up funding for construction of a new Extension office in Randall County, which is used for many 4-H meetings and trainings.

The bank was founded in the small town of Happy, and has grown to become the second largest in the Amarillo region. Its president and chief executive officer is J. Pat Hickman.

The service award was given recently during Texas 4-H Roundup, which last week brought some 2,900 4-H members, parents and volunteers to the Texas A&M campus for a series of statewide competitions, scholarship awards and fun.

'Clearwater' eco-friendly barley

By MARCIA WOOD
ARS News

A new barley that benefits the environment as well as farm animals has been developed by Agricultural Research Service (ARS) scientists and their colleagues.

"Clearwater" hullless barley is rich in the kinds of phosphorus — an essential nutrient — that pigs, fish and other single-stomached, or "monogastric," animals can use. That's unlike grain from conventional barleys, which contains more of the phytate type of phosphorus, the kind that monogastric animals find difficult to digest.

Indigestible phosphorus, leached from manure, can sometimes end up polluting groundwater or streams.

Clearwater builds upon decades of research by plant geneticists Victor Raboy, Phil Bregitzer and others at the ARS Small Grains and Potato Germplasm Research Unit at Aberdeen, Idaho.

Raboy uses conventional plant-breeding procedures to chemically tweak seeds' phosphorus makeup. The work has paved the way for low-phytate barleys, such as Clearwater and a hulled type called "Herald," as well as low-phytate rice, corn and soybeans.

Bregitzer, Raboy and ARS plant geneticist Don Obert collaborated in the Clearwater research with Idaho Agricultural Experiment Station co-researchers Juliet Windes and James Whitmore. A recent article in the Journal of Plant Registrations contains more details.

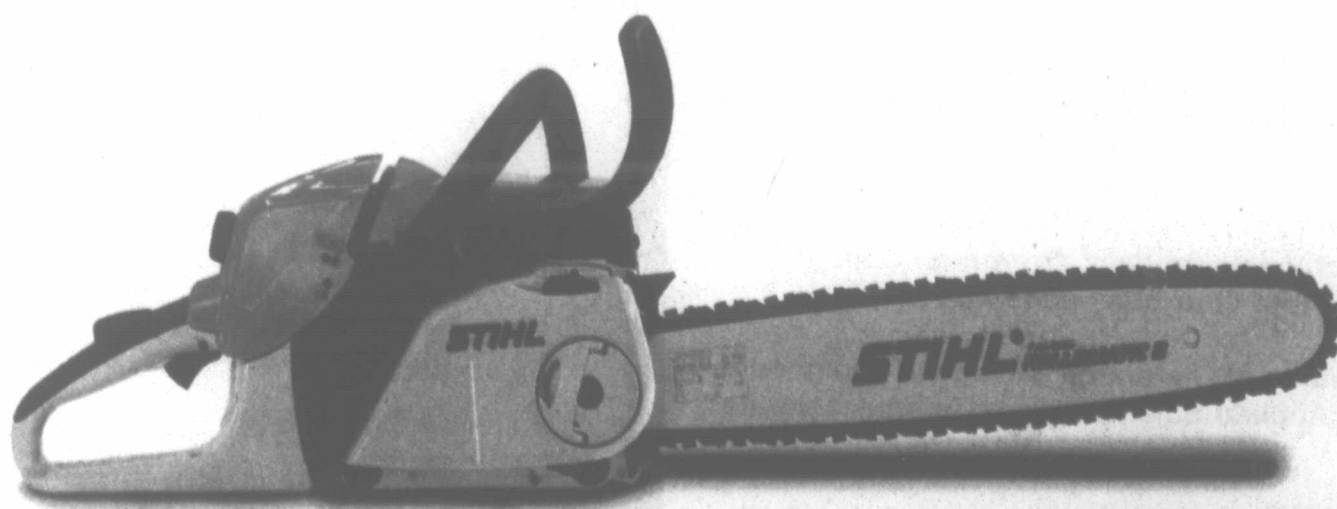

Clearwater yields are about the same as those of other niche-market barleys, according to Bregitzer. One such market — aquaculture feeds — is already being explored. Approximately 46,000 pounds of Clearwater were shipped to Vietnam earlier this year by the U.S. Grains Council of Washington, D.C., and the Idaho Barley Commission to test Clearwater as a feed ingredient for farm-raised fish.

ARS researchers at Hagerman, Idaho, and Bozeman, Mont., will begin similar investigations with farm-raised rainbow trout this month.

The Idaho Agricultural Experiment Station's Foundation Seed Program at Kimberly has offered Clearwater seed for sale since late 2007. Researchers and plant breeders can contact Bregitzer to obtain, at no charge, small supplies of Clearwater or any of several other feed, food and malting barleys that have resulted from ARS and Experiment Station barley breeding research.

ARS is a scientific research agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Austin boxer charged with manslaughter in traffic death

AUSTIN (AP) — A former finalist in the national Golden Gloves championship has been charged with manslaughter in a May hit-and-run accident that left an Austin man dead, police said.

Curtis Lee Meeks Jr., 24, turned himself in Wednesday after police issued a warrant for his arrest, charging him with manslaughter in the death of Jose Fuentes-Reyes, 28. Meeks was released shortly afterward on $15,000 bond.

Police said that on May 2, Meeks rear-ended a Mazda truck sitting at a red light. According to the arrest affidavit, the driver of the Mazda, Ines Marquez-Morales, and his three passengers got out of the car to exchange information.

The affidavit said that Meeks and his passenger also got out of his Chevrolet Tahoe to talk to the other driver.

When Meeks and his passenger got in their vehicle to leave, Marquez-Morales jumped in the back seat, the affidavit said. Meeks began to take off and Marquez-Morales jumped out, it said.

As he accelerated, Meeks struck Marquez-Morales' son, the document said.

Meeks said he thought he was going to be robbed and that he did not know he had hit Fuentes-Reyes, the affidavit said. He did not report the incident to police.

Meeks' attorney, Robert Smith, said the full story has not been revealed.

"There was some actions that caused him and his passenger to greatly fear for their life, and they attempted to escape what they perceived as a very dangerous situation," Smith said in Friday's editions of the Austin American-Statesman.

A phone listing for Marquez-Morales couldn't be found.

Cooking Corner

Most Americans prefer dining at home but lack 'skills'

(NAPSA)—Home is where the happiest meals are. According to the recent "Real Food" survey* commissioned by Hellmann's and Best Foods, 63 percent of Americans believe that eating at home is a better emotional experience than eating in a restaurant. Heightened comfort, intimacy and satisfaction are some of the reasons more than six in 10 surveyed prefer to have the dinner at the family table.

Defining "Real Food" as "food that tastes great-made from simple, wholesome ingredients," Americans crave home cooking. Yet nearly half of adults (48 percent) admit to needing help with everyday cooking. Almost one-fifth of those surveyed would describe their culinary skills as "hit or miss" or just plain "horrible."

To help people bring Real Food to their families, Hellmann's and Best Foods is partnering with acclaimed chef, author and TV personality Bobby Flay to create the "Real Food Summer School." The online show, which can be accessed by visiting yahoo.com and searching for "Real Food," will take three self-proclaimed kitchen-challenged home cooks and give them a crash course with hands-on instruction.

The classes will capture the appeal of Real Food and provide viewers with "cook-along" instruction and tips from Flay to enhance core cooking fundamentals, all as the determined chefs go from "barely able" to "table-ready."

"There is nothing more delicious than good, honest food, cooked simply and with heart," said Flay.

Green Onion Potato Salad

Ingredients:

2 lbs. new potatoes,

scrubbed
Kosher salt
Black pepper
1 1/4 cups Hellmann's or Best Foods Real Mayonnaise
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
1 or 2 jalapeños, finely diced (depending on how spicy you like it)

6 green onions, green and pale green part, thinly sliced
1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro or flat leaf parsley
Directions:
1. Place the potatoes in a large saucepan, add enough cold water to cover the potatoes by two inches and add one tablespoon of salt. Cook the potatoes over high heat until just cooked through (a small paring knife inserted into the center meets no resistance). Drain well, let cool for a few minutes (don't let them get cold; the pota-

Technology provides people with print disabilities access to more documents (NAPSA) — Most people take it for granted that when they see a headline, it helps them find an article on the printed page. Those who are blind, however, have to struggle to find their place because they cannot rely on seeing the type size, page number or font to orient themselves.

Traditionally, those unable to read have turned to talking books: audio recordings on CD or tape.

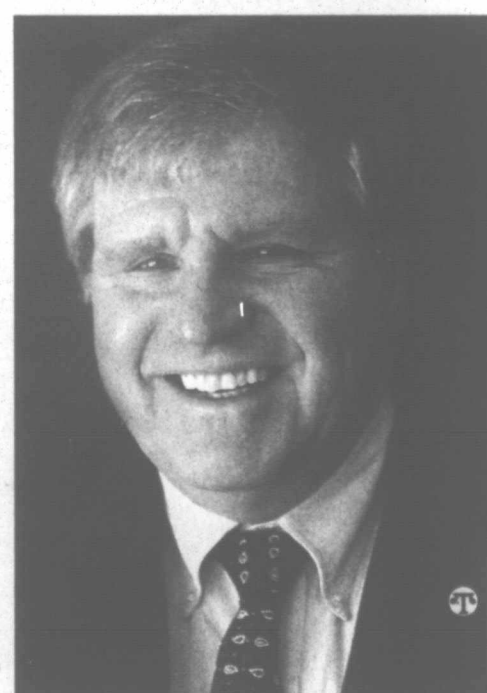

The challenge, though, is that only 5 percent of published material is currently in formats accessible to people with print disabilities and the only way to use this content has been to slog through it, listening from start to finish.

It's a limitation keenly felt by a growing number of people. An estimated 160 million people worldwide are blind or have significant vision impairment, and their ranks in America are expected to balloon as the population ages, with older people more vulnerable to such eye conditions as glaucoma. In addition, there are millions more with cognitive and learning disabilities such as dyslexia.

Now, however, new technologies are leveling the playing field.

Organizations such as the D A I S Y Consortium, a global coalition of talking-book libraries, work to harness digital technology so print-disabled readers can navigate text with all the agility of their sighted peers. For example, there's a way to convert text to digital files that can be synchronized with audio narrations.

George Kerscher, secretary-general of the DAISY Consortium, is blind and advocates for the use of DAISY technology by persons with print disabilities.

"The impact of DAISY is truly profound for people like me with print disabilities," said George Kerscher, secretary-general of the coalition. "The DAISY technology makes it possible to jump between chapters and sections, go directly to pages, and even speed up or slow down a recording and bookmark content. Synchronized enlarged text and presentation on refreshable Braille displays make this extraordinary in the hands of a person with a print disability."

Peace of mind.

Danielle wants her mother to have peace of mind as she ages ... but what about her own? As her mother's caregiver, Danielle worries about her mother's health and quality of life—and about whether she can be there to help mom with her daily living needs. Danielle's mother doesn't need full-time medical attention, so assisted living care at Craig Methodist Retirement Community can be a safer alternative.

They'll find our Assisted Living program is perfect for them both:

- We help seniors remain as independent as possible
- Around-the-clock licensed nursing assistance
- Advanced care available on campus should her health needs change
- Peace of mind that a loved one is secure
- A staff that considers caring for her a privilege

Call today and find out how The Craig can help you with a loved one's care, and give you both the freedom to enjoy life—and each other.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, June 22, 2008:

You make waves this year, whether you intend to or not. In fact, you often keep secrets or opinions to yourself. Though you might choose one confidant or two, somehow the change in your thoughts seems to make waves. Others sense your change of direction. A partnership might be instrumental to your financial well-being. If you are attached, this year will be dotted by a newfound understanding. You bathe in a special softness. If you are single, you might find yourself in a unique, quality bond. Remain open to someone very different. You can count on AQUARIUS.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:

5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

 What was a major deal-breaker yesterday might not be significant today. Gather with others, joining the natural festivities. What is said in a conversation might surprise you. Yes, you have reason to be delighted! Tonight: Forget; live now.

This Week: Not feeling up to snuff until Thursday, consider taking some time off. TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

 Give someone the natural respect he or she deserves. Open up to new ideas, and express yourself in a poetic manner. Financial discussions suddenly prove to be most enlightening. There are answers. Tonight: A must appearance.

This Week: On a roll, focus and zoom in. You can have nearly anything you want if you act before Thursday.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

 What a perfect day for a hike or exploring a museum or special open-air market. Adventure will become you and please you far more than you realize. Don't read your Sunday paper yet; go off and enjoy those around you. Experience. Tonight: Reach out for others.

This Week: Escaping the powers that be could be close to impossible. Work with issues.

Yesterday's Cryptoquote: AS THE EVENING TWILIGHT FADES AWAY, THE SKY IS FILLED WITH STARS, INVISIBLE BY DAY. — HENRY W. LONGFELLOW

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

 Work with a dominant partner who only means well. What you believed was irreparable yesterday is not. You might relax a lot more as a result. Listening, suddenly you see where you are mentally blocked. Tonight: Go for togetherness.

This Week: See beyond the obvious, then act. There is always more to know.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

 Investigate and open up to new beginnings. Someone might make a suggestion that not only causes you to smile but also allows enormous bonding. Why not? Don't always resist change if it comes from an unexpected source. Remember? You are spontaneous. Tonight: Think not of tomorrow but live for today.

This Week: Work with individuals. Look at the gains. If people feel that they are important, they will be more responsive in general.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

 Evaluate, understanding that everyone has limits — you included. With that in mind, judgments — even about yourself — could change. Virgo often feels the need to be a perfectionist. Try to let go of that driving need. Tonight: Easy does it.

This Week: Fun and games head in your direction. Know that you cannot change anyone.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 Your playful side emerges. You have no patience for anything but mirth, flirtation and smiles. Someone quite exotic could walk into your life. Keep your eyes open! (You don't want to miss this person, do you?) Tonight: Act like it's Friday night.

This Week: Accomplishment needs to be the name of the game.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

 Family and home take the highest priority. You might want to rethink a decision more openly with an eye to dynamic change. Think positively. A partner has some interesting ideas that could impact your security. Tonight: A must appearance.

This Week: Creativity floods your life

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, June 23, 2008:

This year you often choose to defer to those with more expertise. A business or personal partner also appears to understand more about funds and where they come from. Build your self-confidence, knowing that you too can earn and become as knowledgeable as you want. Travel and seeing others could earmark your year and make it more adventure-some. If you are single, you could find yourself in a very intense relationship. Every moment won't be easy, but ultimately important. If you are attached, both of you will need to evolve and grow to a new level. VIRGO sometimes rains on your parade.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:

5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

 Let your mind spin out, and ideas will come up. You simply know how to deal with others. Reach for the stars, and make sure you are getting everything you want and more. Your attitude renews, and you feel revitalized. Tonight: Some soul-searching.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

 You might feel that someone has put you on the spot. You have ideas. Others look at you with renewed interest, as you seem to bring the impossible into the world of possibility. Open up to new ideas. Tonight: A meeting might be important!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

 Take in new views. Seek out an expert, or certainly someone who has a very different point of view. If you do, you could be surprised by what emerges.

The more open you are, the better or more together a plan, project or investment can be. Tonight: A must appearance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

 Investigate and understand rather than push. Your ability to see another point of view, especially financially, will help you open up. Checking out ideas with someone in the know proves to be helpful. Tonight: Drop the word "no" from your vocabulary.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

 You might want to revitalize and open up a situation rather than push quite so hard. How you see a personal matter could be very different or dynamic, and others tap into your perspective and/or knowledge. Tonight: Time for a favorite person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

 You know what you can get done, if no one interferes with you. The real question is: Will you be able to do just that? We certainly hope so! Later, meetings and interpersonal matters are highlighted. Know that anything can happen if you believe it. Tonight: Socialize the night away, and it's only Monday!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 Allow more creativity into the many different facets of your life. You might be surprised by what emerges if you just let go — as hard as that might seem. Relax with the moment, knowing full well you will need to make up for lost time. Tonight: The wise will call it an early night.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

 Coming out of your shell could take more than just talent. Consider everything you can and will accomplish if you simply let go. Investigate what needs to happen within your immediate circle. Tonight: You know much more than you realize.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

 Fatigue marks your mood more than you realize, especially as day fades to sunset. You might want to rethink your perspective and approach an issue in a new manner. Tonight: Think about calling it an early night.

AMA issues first report card on health insurers

CHICAGO (AP) — Some health insurance companies rate doctors on their performance. Now doctors are turning the tables.

The American Medical Association issued its first health insurance report card at the group's annual meeting recently. The primary focus is on how quickly and accurately doctors get paid.

"Physicians are spending 14 percent of their total revenue to simply obtain what they've earned," said Dr. William Dolan, an AMA board member.

The report card is an effort to reduce the cost of claims processing to doctors and help them as they negotiate contracts with insurance companies, he said. The report card will help patients if it reduces wasteful administrative costs, Dolan added.

The report card compares Medicare and seven national commercial health insurers on the timeliness and accuracy of claims processing. It is based on a random sample drawn from 3 million claims.

There are no grades like A, B and C, and many of the technical measures may not mean much to most patients. But business leaders and health policy makers are interested in cutting an estimated annual $210 billion in wasted administrative claims processing costs, AMA leaders said.

Four years ago, Dr. Marcy Zwelling got so frustrated with the time and cost of making sure she was paid accurately by insurers that she stopped dealing with them. She now runs a so-called "boutique" practice. Most of her patients pay her an annual fee out of their own pockets.

"The best thing is, I get to be a doctor" instead of a claims processor, said Zwelling, of Los Alamitos, Calif. She says she doesn't make any more money than she did when she accepted insurance, but she has more time with patients.

UnitedHealthcare had the lowest rate of contract compliance, according to the AMA report. About 62 percent of medical services billed were paid by UnitedHealthcare at the contracted rate, compared with 71 percent for Aetna and 98 percent for Medicare.

UnitedHealthcare spokesman Gregory Thompson said doctors and their billing services share responsibility for prompt payment. "Data show there is often a significant lag time between when services are provided and physician claims are submitted," he said.

He said UnitedHealthcare has improved its electronic claims systems and noted the AMA gave the company higher ratings on other measures.

Medicare performed better than the private insurers in most areas, said Dr. Lawrence Casalino, a University of Chicago health economist and former physician.

Commercial insurance plans compete by promising employers that they are tough on holding down the cost of claims, he said.

"There's no question that administrative costs for doctors and the country would be a lot lower in a single-payer system," Casalino said in an interview after the meeting. But a market-based system has advantages of competition, choice and innovation, he said. "Are the benefits enough to justify the cost?"

Peter Lee of the Pacific Business Group on Health welcomed the report card, but said he hoped the AMA would look at a broader range of areas that would be helpful to consumers.

"Increased payments to physicians means increased premiums and increased costs in a system that is spiraling out of control," Lee said.

Susan Pisano, a spokeswoman for America's Health Insurance Plans, said that for claims to be processed accurately and quickly it takes two parties: insurers and doctors.

She complained that while insurance companies that rate doctors generally share the information with doctors before they make it public, the AMA did not share its report with insurers before releasing it online.
