C. C. Julian Commits Suicide In Shanghai

Career Closed As Oklahoman Takes Poison

Former Promoter Takes Life During Glittering Party At Shanghai Hotel; Companion Expected To Recover

Woman Waits Until Announcement Of Death And Rushes Back To Hotel To Consume Some Of Same Poison

(By The Associated Press)

SHANGHAI, March 25—(Sunday)—C. C. Julian, one time millionaire oil promoter under fraud charges in the United States, killed himself today with poison taken during a glittering dinner party with a woman companion in the Astor house hotel here.

The woman secretary and confidante of the former Oklahoma and California operator, identified as Louise Levy, also attempted to kill herself. She was still alive and physicians said she would recover.

Financial Trouble

Julian appeared to have been actuated by financial trouble despite that he once handled millions as an oil promoter.

He had lived for the last year in Shanghai in defiance of American authorities and in default of $25,000 bail. He was about 40 years old.

With his companion Julian was dining an elaborate dinner in the Astor house, fashionable downtown tourist haunt.

Takes Poison

Excusing himself soon after midnight, Julian went to a room he had engaged and took a heavy dose of poison, losing consciousness a few moments later.

Miss Levy, waiting at the dinner table, was not aware of what was happening upstairs.

She became alarmed at the delay, went to the room and found Julian already in the grip of the poison. She called hotel attendants and a physician was summoned.

Taken To Hospital

Julian was hurried to a hospital. Death came at 6 o'clock in the morning, five hours after he had taken the poison.

While Julian hung between life and death Miss Levy remained outside his hospital room. Upon learning he had died she rushed back to the hotel and took some of the same poison that killed Julian.

She was given medical attention and taken to the hospital where Julian died.

Attempted Once Before

Ralph Levy, brother of Leonora, a clerk in a Shanghai financial house, said he knew Julian had at-

Dr. Wynekoop Is Denied New Trial

CHICAGO, March 24. (AP) — Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop was refused a new trial today and was ordered to prison for the "operating table" murder of her daughter-in-law, Rhea.

She will be taken to the new institution at Dwight, Ill., with the next shipment of prisoners, probably Thursday. Her attorneys have the usual 60 days in which to appeal, but Harry B. Miller refused a stay of sentence.

Dr. Wynekoop, stronger than when she was tried, accepted the judge's ruling with aplomb.

"The only thing I can say," she said in answer to the formal question, "is what I have already said, I am not guilty."

Farmer Jim Sitting In Highest "Watch Tower" Of His Party In State

Ferguson Is Chosen State Committeeman To National Party Council By Demos

By R. W. BARRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

HOUSTON, March 24.—James E. Ferguson, Texas' only governor who has ever been impeached, was sitting in the pinnacle "watch tower" of his party tonight.

He had been elected state committeeman to the national party council.

Adams Resigns Place

He was recommended by the state Democracy, through the executive committee, representing the 31 senatorial districts of Texas, to take the place formerly occupied by Jed C. Adams of Dallas. Adams resigned to accept a federal appointment.

Adams had tried to resign previously, but the national chairman, James A. Farley, postmaster general, refused to accept his relinquishment papers because there was some turmoil about whom should succeed him.

Hughes Wanted Place

Maury Hughes of Dallas, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee, wanted the place. He was placed at the head of the committee by the state convention when Governor Miriam A. Ferguson was formally nominated two years ago. But, the Fergusons wanted C. C. McDonald of Wichita Falls to have the executive place. McDonald always had been a friend of the Fergusons. He and Hughes now are candidates for governor in a big field.

Hughes quit his party leadership today with the statement:

"I am going into a state campaign that may be spirited."

The committee elevated as his successor J. K. Brim of Sulphur Springs, who had been vice chairman. Ed Hussion of Houston, who had been secretary, was chosen vice-chairman.

No Other Candidates

When former Governor Ferguson's name was placed in nomination, there were no other candidates. He was elected almost by acclamation, the vote being viva voce. There were two who answered "no." They were W. I. Hooks of Itasca and Summers Norman of Jacksonville.

There was a big hand for the gray haired veteran of many campaigns as he mounted the rostrum to acknowledge the compliment. He did not make a lengthy speech. His governor-wife was sitting in the audience and clapped her hands with the others in the audience cheering her husband.

Need Unity Of Thought

He said he hoped he would have "the strength and courage to make myself worthy of this honor."

He said he believed the national government was passing "the most eventful mile post in its history." He said there was need of "unity of thought."

"There should be no division in our duty to uphold Democratic principles and the hands of the greatest Democratic president the world ever has known," said "Governor

Private Funds May Be Asked For City Use

Lubbock Voters Will Be Asked In Election To Approve Or Reject Proposed Plans For Municipal System

City commission, following a called meeting in City hall yesterday, announced it was making plans to interest private capital in construction of a municipal gas system should an application for Public Works administration funds be denied.

Whether the proposed system is financed by PWA or private companies, City of Lubbock residents will be asked in an election to approve or reject the proposed arrangement, City Manager W. H. Rodgers said.

Application Held

The application to PWA still is held in Fort Worth. Since PWA backing would result in a saving estimated at a half million dollars, city officials have been waiting until the government approved or turned down the loan sought.

Should the administration loan be made it would include an outright grant of 30 per cent of the total amount and interest rate would approximate 4 per cent, it was explained. On the other hand, total amount received from private companies must be repaid with 6 per cent interest.

Schedule Presented

City Manager Rodgers yesterday presented to the commission a schedule showing anticipated income from a proposed system to be constructed at a cost of $1,200,000. The system would be paid for in 20 years from revenues. In the revised PWA application, the city sought a loan and grant totaling $1,320,000.

The entire schedule, including anticipated consumers and income, is presented in an advertisement in today's paper.

"The reason the city has been delaying its plans for a municipal gas system is the fact that nearly a half million dollars can be saved if the project is financed by Public Works administration," the city manager said.

"In either case, the voters will de-

Chilling Rains Drench A Large Portion Of State

Mercury Drops Here And Sleet Falls; Need Moisture

(By The Associated Press)

CHILLING rains drenched a large part of Texas Saturday, bringing smiles to the faces of farmers who needed the moisture for spring planting but gloom to sheepmen who suffered heavy losses from the cold in the San Angelo area.

Thousands of young lambs and shorn goats were killed by the cold around San Angelo, reports from that city said.

Rain Reported

There was 1.1 inches of rainfall around San Angelo, to the west ranging up to two inches. Feeding of livestock had been general and heavy rains were needed to provide grass on the range and a ground seasoning for crop planting.

Channing reported light snow whitening the Plains. Flurries of snow and sleet were reported at Plainview, with a falling temperature which already had tumbled to 32.

At Abilene, rainfall had amounted to half an inch and rain continued. More than an inch of rain fell over Shackelford county. Ballinger had 1.12 inch. The precipitation was regarded as highly beneficial to ranges and provided moisture badly needed for spring planting.

Mercury Drops Here

The temperature had dropped to 28 at Lubbock at 8 p. m. Saturday. Skies were cloudy and there was some sleet. Farmers of Lubbock area welcomed the moisture.

Amarillo had temperatures in the last 24 hours ranging from 25 to 29 degrees, but no precipitation.

A light drizzle soaked the Fort Worth and Dallas area. Fort Worth had a temperature of 39 degrees at 9 p. m. Saturday. Dallas reported a low reading of 43.

Freeze Is Forecast

Tyler had a slow rain all day. Coleman likewise had rain. A freeze was forecast for Sunday morning at Coleman.

A norther, accompanied by rain, struck Corpus Christi late Saturday. Additional rainfall and a low temperature of about 45 degrees was forecast for the Corpus Christi region for Sunday.

Weather conditions were unsettled at Galveston, with occasional showers and colder weather forecast.

Little Girl Is Only Pupil In Lonely School Of The Prairie

Trustees Of Tiny School Are Opposed To Consolidation; Spending Own Tax Money

(By The Associated Press)

CLARENDON, March 24.—As the spring winds herd the restless tumble weeds across the "lone prair-e-e-e-e" of the Texas Panhandle, their shrieks blanket the voice of a little girl reciting her lessons.

She has no classmates, no schoolmates. She represents all the grades and all the scholastics of the Bairfield school.

Is Only Pupil

Out on the plains of the Panhandle, an area of tableland the size of Indiana and on the edge of the famous "JA" ranch, which is 90 miles across, is a little one-room, white school house that has one pupil, Ida Mae Wiedman, eight, and one teacher, Miss Zelle Rogers of Clarendon. It has no counterpart on the Staked Plains nor, perhaps, in the world.

Since school began September 4, last, Ida Mae has met her teacher each school-day morning at 9 o'clock. School closes at 2:30 p. m., but an hour for dinner and two recess periods are taken. The teacher and pupil play "ante-over" at recess and Ida Mae has her doll. But during other hours lessons are pursued diligently and with suitable formality.

Sits In Pasture

The plain, high-roofed school building, 14 by 16 feet, sits out in the pasture beside the roadway leading to the "headquarters" of the famous ranch. The late Charles Goodnight, pioneer Panhandle cattleman, founded the ranch for the Adairs of old England. It is still intact.

Clarence Bairfield, bachelor trustee of the Bairfield school, says the district, composed of five property taxpayers, is determined to maintain its school regardless of present-day tendencies to consolidate.

"If we want to spend our tax money for the support of our school who is there to say we shan't?" he asked. Who indeed!

So, Miss Rogers continues to draw her $80 monthly salary for teaching Ida Mae, Rancher Pete Wiedman's daughter, the three R's.

Professor In Czechoslovakia Studies Work In This Area

Dr. Jan Dokladal, professor of agricultural economics in a university at Brno, Czechoslovakia, left Lubbock yesterday afternoon after a two-day stay in the South Plains in a study of agricultural extension work.

Doctor Dokladal attended a home economics club meeting Friday at Shallowater in familiarizing himself with home demonstration and girls 4-H club programs in the county, Miss Hazel Bratley, county home demonstration agent, said.

A beef cattle feeding project at Brownfield and home economics and engineering divisions of Texas Technological college were inspected by Doctor Dokladal. He has been in the United States five months, passing most of the time in Washington, D. C., studying annual reports of farm and home demonstration agents.

Houston Attorney Convicted And Given A Ten-Year Term

GEORGETOWN, March 24. (AP)—Charles E. Heidingsfelder, sr., 61-year-old Houston attorney, slept behind the worn gray stone and steel bars of the county jail here tonight. He was convicted by a district court jury today of embezzlement of $34,500 from a client, Mrs. Adele Pipkin of New York, formerly of Beaumont, and assessed the maximum sentence of ten years in prison.

The jury was out twelve hours and much of that time was spent in sleep. The first trial here last month ended in a hung jury.

Eight Of Dead Are White And Rest Negroes; Victims Lay Groaning In Snow; Burning Flesh Is Sickening

(By The Associated Press)

LYNCHBURG, Va., March 24 — Fourteen wanderers died early today in flames which gutted Federal Transient relief bureau building here.

Seventy-five other homeless whites and negroes were injured.

Gravy Boils Over

Sausage gravy boiled over on a red-hot stove, ignited. The three-story building was a holocaust a few minutes later.

Inmates, trapped and with flames searing their bodies, became panic stricken. Some sought to tear down a high board wall which surrounded windows of their sleeping quarters.

Bones Are Broken

Men, in their underwear, jumped from the third floor to an ice-covered areaway at the back. Many who were not burned suffered broken arms and legs in the fall. They lay groaning and writhing in the blood-stained snow. Odor of burning flesh sickened rescue workers.

Nearly 100 men, who escaped with minor injuries, were herded into the Salvation Army citadel across the street and clothed there.

Patrolmen On Duty

Patrolman Allen was on duty nearby. He heard glass shattering and saw smoke spouting from the windows and turned in a fire alarm. Then he said he saw men jumping into the street. The patrolman telephoned for ambulances and borrowed trucks from a nearby baker to take the men to hospitals.

Floors at the rear of the building collapsed within ten minutes after fire trucks arrived.

Records Are Saved

Night Superintenlent C. F. Anderson of the transient bureau said James Webb woke him and he was able to save the records. The roster showed 190 men were in the building, 83 whites and 107 negroes. They came from all parts of the United States. By checking his records he hoped to identify the dead.

Eight of the dead were white and

Dillinger Mob Is Broken Up

Two Of Its Members Sentenced To Die And Third Is Given Life Term For The Slaying Of Ohio Sheriff

(By The Associated Press)

LIMA, O., March 24.—The old Dillinger gang was formally dissolved here today when two of its members were sentenced to die in the electric chair and a third was condemned to life imprisonment.

Harry Pierpont, brazen, defiant, and Charles Makley, rotund, slow moving, will pay with their lives in the Ohio penitentiary on Friday, July 13, for the murder of Sheriff Jess L. Sarber last October, when John Dillinger was "sprung" from the county jail by his confederates.

Clark Gets Life

Sleep-eyed Russell Clark alone was given quarter by Allen county juries. For his part in the jail break here he drew a verdict of guilty with mercy, obligating the court to pronounce sentence of life imprisonment.

The gang chief, the slippery John Dillinger himself, twice imprisoned and twice liberated by gunplay within seven months, is still on the loose. He walked out of the Crown Point, Ind., jail flourishing a wooden pistol three weeks ago today.

Johnson Says Contention Is Just Nonsense

Possibility Of Agreement Is Seen Today; Conferences To Be Resumed; General Says It's "Damned Nonsense"

BY ELTON C. FAY
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 24.—For at least another day, the outcome of the labor dispute in the automobile industry will remain in doubt.

After hours of talks that had whittled the nub of contention down to such a point that Hugh S. Johnson called it "damned nonsense," the conferences were postponed tonight until tomorrow.

Wouldn't Believe It

"You wouldn't believe it if I told you," he said, when asked what the remaining point of difference was. "I can't tell you but it is damned nonsense."

For tomorrow, Johnson said, "we will go on and negotiate as we have been doing today."

"There's no possibility of any agreement until tomorrow morning.

"I won't give up until I'm licked and I'm not licked yet.

Is Nothing New

"This is nothing new to me. I have been through these things lots of times when they looked much worse than they do now."

The recovery administrator indicated that the conferences tomorrow would begin in the morning but did not venture a guess as to how long they would be.

For hours Johnson had been trying to mediate the dispute. Since late afternoon, automobile manu-

Unrevealed Information On Customs And Life Of Yaquis Will Be Bared

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of two interviews with Ross Edwards, local merchant who returned late Friday from Torin, Sonora, Mexico, where he spent two weeks with the Texas Tech expedition in the Yaqui country. Mr. Edwards' experiences while with the party will be continued in tomorrow's Journal.

TEXAS TECHNOLOGICAL college's expedition into the Yaqui Indian country of Sonora, Mexico, is due to bring back heretofore unrevealed information on those primitive people. Ross Edwards, a member of the expedition who returned to Lubbock late Friday, said Saturday.

An article, relating experiences of a member of the expedition at a Yaqui funeral, written by Chas. A. Guy and also witnessed by Mr. Edwards before he left for Lubbock may be found on page 3.

Mr. Edwards, a candidate for mayor in the approaching city election, left the expedition Tuesday in order to be back here several days prior to the election. He had only planned to stay with the expedition for about two weeks.

Saturday, Mr. Edwards was busy telling friends his experiences on the trip as they called at his store. His daughter, Miss Mary Ross Edwards, was displaying a young Jaguar kitten which Mr. Edwards brought back with him. He purchased the cat from a Mexican at Torin for fifteen pesos. Mr. Ed-

Texas Officers Financially Handicapped In War Against Bank Robbers

Bandits Pick Places Where Loot Is Easy

Widespread Series Of Raids Conducted By Elusive Bands In Last Month And A Half; About $56,000 Obtained

DALLAS, March 24 (AP)—Virtually unmolested by financially-handicapped peace officers, elusive bands of robbers have conducted a widespread series of raids on Texas banks recently, choosing those where the loot was small but the task easy.

They have taken a toll of 12 banks in the last month and a half and made attempts at two others. The loot, ranging from $50 to $22,500, totled $56,000 and in only two cases have officers apprehended suspects. In another instance, however, bank employes killed one of two men who drew pistols on them and brought about the arrest of the other.

Robbers Run Rampant

The robbers have run rampant over the wide expanses of the Lone Star state and their scattered prey indicated no one group, such as the Clyde Barrow crowd, was responsible.

Drastic reductions in travel allowances of Texas rangers and other officers have so handicapped them in their pursuit of desperadoes that robbers now find it possible to be safely out of reach of capture in a few hours. One ranger said that, on the basis of his present permitted expenditures, he could drive only a few hours a day, then would have to wait until the next day to resume the chase.

Capt. R. W. Aldrich, veteran Texas ranger, expressed the opinion that the business of robbing banks flourished in Texas because the offenders were able to pay for protection.

"They get the money and spend it generously for an asylum," he said, "while the county and state officers are helpless to go after them because of lack of finances."

Victims Play Safe

Another factor aiding robbers has been the growing reluctance of bank officials to shoot it out with them. In spite of the fact the Texas Bankers' association has a standing reward of $5,000 for each robber killed, the victims in recent forays have chosen to play safe.

As a means of stamping out the bold maraudings, E. C. Brand, state banking commissioner, suggested that state banks keep only a small amount of cash in their vaults, removing in the main, the goal of burglars or robbers.

In addition, officers of several of the larger cities have put the short-wave radio to greater use. Station KVP of the Dallas police department has extended its range to towns within a radius of more than 100 miles and covers a large part of North Texas. San Antonio plans a similar station and they will work together closely. Sheriffs and constables in the smaller towns and cities then will be in a position to receive quickly bank robbery reports. In some communities, a short wave set always tuned on the Dallas station, has been placed in a central location where someone will hear it 24 hours a day.

The latest series of holdups began Jan. 29 with the $5,000 robbery of the First National bank at Midlothian in Dallas county. Four days later, four men obtained $22,500 at the First Coleman National bank in West Texas. The second largest haul was $13,500 from the First National bank at Whitesboro, in north central Texas.

The two instances where robbers failed to obtain loot were at Alto in East Texas, where one man was killed, and at Paradise in Wise county, where four men worked several hours early in the morning but were unable to enter the vault or safe.

Ninth Annual Vocational Agricultural Event Will Be April 2 For High School Students Of West Texas

The ninth annual vocational agricultural judging contest for high schools of West Texas will be held at Texas Technological College April 2. Contests will be in livestock and dairy catle judging, plant production, and poultry judging, according to Prof. R. C. Mowery, general supervisor.

Tech junior and senior students in agriculture will conduct the event, acting as judges, supervisors, and general superintendents. Last year 32 schools were represented with 61 teams. "This year we expect to have at least that number," Prof. Mowery stated.

Banner To Be Given

A sweepstake banner will be presented to the school with the three highest teams by the Caprock Uniform and Embroidery Co. of Lubbock.

Other trophies are cups, which must be won three different years by the same school before being awarded permanently. The dairy cattle judging cup, won by McLean twice and by Tulia last year, is being presented by the Standard Milling Co. of Lubbock. In the dairy cattle judging contest is also the George P. Grout cup, won last year by McLean.

The livestock judging cup, presented by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, has been won twice by Post.

Additional Cups Offered

Plant production trophy, also being presented by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, was won twice each by Floydada and Post, and last year for the first time by Dublin. Two additional plant production cups are being presented by the Kansas City board of trade. One is the cotton classing trophy, won by Dublin last year, and the grain judging cup, won twice by Post.

All livestock and materials for the contest will be furnished by the Tech division of agriculture.

A luncheon is being planned for the instructors of the contesting teams by Prof. C. Luker, state supervisor of vocational agricultural education. The program will be devoted to a study of recent unpublished data from the state agricultural experiment station at Lubbock.

A buffet luncheon will be given the high school entrants by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce in the Tech pavilion following the contest.

Lubbock Laundry Owners In Attendance At Convention

A good delegation of Lubbock laundry owners attended the 27th annual meeting of the Texas Laundry Owners association at Dallas, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, O. W. McLeod of the Lubbock Laundry, said Saturday following his return. Lubbock asked for the 1935 convention and the executive committee will meet in about 90 days and decide on the convention city, Mr. McLeod said.

In the party were: Lonnie Sanders, of Lonnie's laundry; Harry Bernard, Bluebonnett Laundry; M. Earl Heard, Texas Technological college and Mr. McLeod. They were joined at Fort Worth by Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Walker and C. A. Sheffield. Mr. Heard addressed the convention and asked for the 1935 meeting for Lubbock.

Old officers and directors and the executive committee were retained. Speakers included the National association president, from Des Moines, Iowa; Ben Barnett, Oklahoma City, NRA code chairman for this area and a representative of the national institute at Joliet, Ill.

James Rankin Re-Elected As Ralls School Superintendent

RALLS, March 24 (Special)—James M. Rankin, connected with the Ralls school system for 14 years and superintendent the past two years, was re-elected to that post by the board of trustees. He will begin his new term July 1.

Mr. Rankin's service here has been continuous with the exception of 1925 and 1926. He was principal of the high school when he was named superintendent two years ago succeeding A. B. Sanders, who resigned to go to Brownfield.

Superintendent Rankin holds an M. A. Degree from Texas Tech at Lubbock.

Health Ordinance Is Approved Here

City commission, in a called meeting Saturday morning, passed upon second and final reading an ordinance designed to safeguard the public health by requiring persons of specified vocations to procure certificates that they are free of tuberculosis, syphilis, gonorrhea, or skin eruptions that may be effectuous or contagious.

The certificates will be issued each six months by the city health officer. Persons handling foods, drinks, drugs, laundry, or merchandise, and persons whose work requires physical contact, as that of nurses, barbers, manicurists, and beauticians, must undergo examination. In most instances certificates previously were required. The new ordinance, however, will require blood tests in examination to determine freedom of venereal disease, it was said.

Muleshoe's WTCC Membership Quota Raised In 40 Minutes

MULESHOE, March 24. (Special) Jed Rix of Lubbock, who has the job of obtaining W. T. C. C. memberships in this section, did a lot of "hoppin' around" while here the other day.

It took the Lubbock man and R. L. "Booster" Brown, local director, just 40 minutes to raise the $50 quota, or over a dollar per minute, including stops, walks and talks.

"It's a record breaker," Mr. Rix remarked, "being the quickest time a quota has ever been raised by any town associated with the regional organization."

Horses in Japan wear straw shoes and must be reshod every 10 miles.

Weird Funeral Ceremonial Of Yaquis Seen By Americans For First Time; Tech Expedition Ends 42-Hour Vigil

Aged Woman Buried In Atmosphere Of Pagan Jollity

BY CHAS. A. GUY
Staff Correspondent

TORIN, Sonora, Mex., March 19 —Marking the first time in history that Americans have been permitted to view a Yaqui funeral ceremony in the home country of the Indians members of Texas Technological College's scientific expedition into this area today completed a 42-hour vigil during which they were privileged to see the entire death ritual—the strangest ceremonial of this strange and practically unknown tribe.

The woman who died was Anita Dijejon, 105, but that is of little import here. What is of great import is that the funeral service began with the tolling of bells just before sundown Saturday and was not ended until after noon on Monday, that it was replete in the Yaqui custom of countless generations and that there was plainly visible the influence of the Roman Catholic faith, brought into this area by the padres in the 1,500's, and now superimposed upon pagan rites which forever have been a part of the Indian life.

Nowhere else on this continent could the Yaqui death rites be duplicated.

Ceremony Is Gripping

In fact, it is doubtful if darkest Africa offers anything more weird, more gripping, more sensationally interesting than what the small band of Americans, seeking scientific data concerning a people about whom little or nothing has been learned in scientific circles, watched wide-eyed, in daylight and dark. Witchcraft accompanied at least a semblance of Christian ceremony as tom-toms reverberated their messages through the Rio Yaqui Valley that Death had once again triumphed over a member of the clan.

Anita Dijejon's long life slipped away from her tired body just before 6 o'clock in the evening of two days ago. Related to almost every Indian family in the village, Anita had been expected to die. So a few moments after she breathed her last the oldest man in Torin—it is a custom for the oldest man in every Yaqui village to sound the death signal—climbed the ascent from her river bank home to the Indian church on the hill. There, ring two great bells brought in here by the Catholic missionaries who preceded the conquering Spaniards, he sent out the word and the Indians then began preparations for Anita's last rites, to be engaged in by every Yaqui man, woman and child ranging in age from the cradle to the grave.

Permission Is Granted

A pitchy black night had fallen over the river bottoms when Dr. William Curry Holden, Tech's expedition leader, Bennie McWilliams, interpreter, and your correspondent gave the Mexican military the slip and groped their way to the Yaqui military quarters, half a mile from the garrison where the party is camped. After a deliberate conference, the Indian war chief and his staff agreed to permit their newly found 'amigos' to watch the funeral and the assistant war chief of the tribe was delegated to guide us. With stately palm trees dimly silhouetted against a star-spangled sky, the quartet made its way to the ancient church, there to meet the strangest procession any of the Americans had ever seen.

Plaintive notes of a native flute mingled with the thumping of the deer-hide drum as witch doctors of the tribe, garbed in hideous costumes upon which had been strung belts of dried deer hooves to send out a haunting rattle, danced in the procession's lead. They wore bearded masks and were followed by other Indians bearing ritualistic staffs, flags and spears or rifles. Outside of the witch doctors, whose duty it was to scare away the evil spirits, there was a pistol or a dagger—or both—slung at every hip, held in place by heavy cartridge belts filled with rifle and pistol shells. We followed the marching men through the night, across the one-time plaza of a proud Torin along which gaped the ruins of the city, destroyed in 1913 by the victorious rebel, Madero, ghastly reminders of the past.

Rites In Stockade

On by the Yaqui war camp, through cannon-wrecked streets to the very edge of Rio Yaqui we tramped, right into the section from which we had been ejected at noon on the same day by a Yaqui oldster, who warned that if we stayed down there we "might be killed." Our guide halted us at the entrance of a native stockade, enclosed by closely knit bamboo poles, as the members of the procession moved in. There was another conference concerning our presence but again we were assured of the never-before granted permission and were led into the stockade where there were gathered at least 150 Yaqui braves, all heavily armed and many fiercely mustachioed.

Inside the stockade great preparations were being made. Sections of the bamboo fences were being ripped out, by the light of several bonfires, to give room for what was to follow, for at least an acre of ground is needed for a Yaqui funeral ceremony. Some of the braves were chopping wood, others were standing guard and still others were resting after erecting a temporary bamboo hut, open at three sides and under which reposed the emaciated, white-garbed form of all that remained of Anita Dijejon. The men smoked, spat and occasionally conversed as they worked, apparently unmindful of the need of any sorrow or of the image-laden table [illegible] of the body, draped with a velvet-appearing cloth upon which had been worked, in silver, a replica of the cross. Two tall candles in silver sticks, one at each side of the rude bier fashioned of forked sticks and bamboo, flickered bravely, adding a little light to that afforded by the fires. Dogs roamed at will over the stockade's interior, occasionally snapping at each other or yelping from a kick of a sandaled foot.

Candles At Church

For two hours we stayed among the Yaqui workers, leaving only when they began rolling in their blankets and we were assured that nothing more of interest would happen until Sunday night, when the dancing began. En route to camp we passed the native church where two other candles flickered near what corresponds to the Christian pulpit and a Yaqui priest, aided by several women, attended to other arrangements.

Several times on Sunday the ancient bells were tolled and again, long after darkness had engulfed the valley, Doctor Holden, Dr. Charles J. Wagner and the writer returned to the river bank stockade where the ritualistic work had just begun. The improvised bamboo hut of the night before had been shifted to a new location and the litter, bearing the body, had been moved to the center of the grounds. Under the open walled hut a Yaqui brave was dancing to the music of a flute, a native instrument similar to a violin and several other stringed instruments. Stripped to the waist, which was bound in the deer hoof belt, he wore across his upper limbs a dress from which protruded trouser legs bound in puttees, each of which was beaded and hung with bracelets to give a ringing sound to his rhythmic steps.

Witch Doctors Busy

In the center of the grounds two witch doctors were shuffling about, each bearing a heavy stick in each hand, and wearing a hideous head dress. They made frequent stabs and emotions to scare away any evil spirit which might be hovering about the bier. Occasionally they rapped the sticks sharply together, laid one down and seized a green mesquite branch which they waved over the corpse, this time without the white covering of the evening before and gowned only in a cheap blue dress.

Dancers, both principal and witch doctors, were changed periodically, other similarly garbed celebration participants taking their places after an elaborate series of motions during the change. All the while a funeral jester, whose duty it is to break out as often as possible with witticisms, was offering jokes and funny observations in the Yaqui tongue to keep the 200 men, women and children in high good humor. There was no weeping or mourning, no air of sadness apparent. Instead, more of an atmosphere of jollity.

Food Is Served

At other intervals chanters, four men and an equal number of women would approach the foot of the bier to kneel, form a sign closely akin to that of the holy cross, and then swing into a pagan litany to be followed by a sing-song chant. Ten flickering candles in as many gold and silver sticks, surrounded the litter upon which the dead woman lay and other light was afforded by fires and candles held by the celebrants. Great pots of coffee and native food had been prepared by the women and the Indians, in groups, held candles while others partook of the food, then ate while still others held the light.

At intervals two women, garbed in black hoods, would approach the bier and sprinkle some sort of a sand along the body. Often a mangy, underfed native dog would sniff at the body, only to be kicked or hissed away. In darker corners of the stockade an occasional dogfight would break out but a series of yelps generally signaled that a kick from an Indian brave had put an end to the hostilities.

Dead Are Listed

Directly behind the bier was the table of the night before, still bearing images and the velvet drop with the inscribed cross. On the table, however, was an addition of interest—a great pile of books in which through the generations of Yaqui life in this area, had been inscribed the names of the dead. Back of the table there were thrust into the ground various native spears and flags and the silver staff which is the emblem of the governor's authority—at the present being carried here by Jess Miranda. Crossed spears were driven into the ground at the bare brown feet of the corpse.

Shortly before midnight Doctors Holden, Wagner and the writer were relieved by Dr. R. A. Studhalter, Dr. Carl C Seltzer, W. G. McMillan, Ross Edwards, Bennie McWilliams and Frank Maddox, jr. They stayed through several sequences of the ritual, each of which was a repetition of what has been described here.

Dance All Night

All night long, while a single candle burned in the ancient church, the dancing and ritualistic work went on and it was not until the sun was well up in the morning that the procession of Indians wended its way to the church, four husky bucks and a like number of women carrying the corpse, surrounded by armed guards and led, again, by the masked and strangely arrayed witch doctors. The women of the tribe had gathered, earlier, at the church, to complete arrangements there.

As the procession neared the church, keeping pace with the drumming of the tom-toms and the music of the flute, something similar to America's firecrackers—made of some sort of powder and bamboo cane, were shot off at the rear of the march. That was continued until the marchers entered the sacred grounds of the church, where the bells again were tolling.

Chanting At Church

The services at the church were led by the native priest and consisted largely of chanting. Finally, in the sun-baked yard at the church's entrance a lone Yaqui dug a grave, approximately five and a half feet long, two feet wide and three and a half feet deep. In his digging he cut into the grave of another Yaqui, his shovel disintegrating leg, arm and hand bones which were shoveled out on the pile of dirt which came from the final resting place of Anita Dijejon. These bones, together with the limp form of the aged woman, protected only by a sheet, were placed into the new grave by two men, who then stepped back.

Moving in two circles, each going in an opposite direction to the other, the men and women marched 'round and 'round the grave intertwining one circle with the other, while the grave was being filled. Dirt was shoveled into the grave, right on the corpse which reclined on its back, and, after one layer, was beaten down with a heavy mallet. This was repeated as layer after layer of dry Sonora soil committed to its last resting place the body of a woman who had lived through more than a century of stirring times in a wild Indian country and who had seen the men of her tribe in scores of savage assaults against those who trespassed upon their territory, or tried to place them in subjection.

Children There, Too

For at least an hour after the burial the tribesmen and their broad-hipped, heavy-breasted women remained in the church to chant. As was the case at the two night ceremonials, mothers carried babes-in-arms and little children, gravely quiet as is their manner, took their places and viewed the ritual.

At the conclusion of the church ceremonial the witch doctors, flag and spear bearers and their armed guards marched back to the military headquarters where they dispersed. The women and children, however, went directly to their homes.

Copious notes, covering all phases of the ceremony, were kept by members of the Tech expedition and will be used for bases of various scientific reports, to be made when the party returns about April 15. Fortunate to reach the Yaqui sector at a time when fiestas are frequent and likewise to be present at the hitherto secret funeral rites, members of the expedition look forward now to the possibility of viewing a native marriage and a childbirth, both of which are occasions of community celebrating and are attended by vast throngs and accompanying rituals.

Travelers Are Well

All nine members of the party continue to keep in good health and lively spirits and to push ahead at their various tasks. The party will remain for at least another week in Torin, where connections with the immobile Yaquis are much better than at any other point in the Indian country. The Yaquis, probably due more to the medical work being done for them by Doctor Wagner than to any other one thing, are gradually making friends with their visitors and occasionally offer gifts to them.

Success of the expedition, Director Holden said today, has already surpassed his hopes and the balance of the stay in Southwestern Sonora likely will unfold other information so interesting to anthropologists and ethnologists and essential to a scientific history of the various peoples of the North American continent.

Lubbock County Again Ranks Sixth In State In Production Of Cotton

Decrease For South Plains Sector Shown

This County Leads Area With Lynn Second, Crosby Third, Lamb Fourth, Dickens Fifth And Floyd Sixth

FINAL ginning report for the 1933-34 cotton season, as announced by the bureau of the census, U. S. department of commerce, showed Lubbock county again sixth in the state and leading the South Plains area in production. The report, as of March 1, was announced as the preliminary final report. The 1933 season was only 97,000 bales under the 1932 total.

Nineteen counties in Lubbock's territory, not including Swisher, Yoakum and Borden, showed a total of 518,457 bales for 1933, a decrease of 92,152 bales from the total of 610,609 bales for the previous year. Sixteen of these counties, on top of the caprock, showed 431,785 bales in favor of the previous season.

Lynn County Second

Lubbock county was followed by: Lynn, second; Crosby, third; Lamb fourth; Dickens, fifth; Floyd, sixth. The 1932 rankings were: Lubbock, first; Lamb, second; Lynn, third; Dawson, fourth; Crosby, fifth.

Six counties showed gains: Bailey, Briscoe, Crosby, Floyd, Dickens and Lynn. The other counties either showed decreases or were not shown last year. Castro and Parmer counties did not show ginnings for 1932 as the rule of the bureau is not to show any totals where individual operations would be disclosed. Yoakum county does not have a gin and Swisher was not shown this season. Borden county also is without a gin.

Comparative totals for the two seasons were:

Article By Tech Grad Published

The February number of "Industrial and Chemical Engineering" carries an article of interest to Tech alumni. It is by Dr. Jerome Sanders on the "Catalytic Vapor—Phase Hydration of Ethylene." The article deals with the production of ethyl or grain alcohol by combination of water with the waste gases obtained from the cracking of crude oil. This process gives great promise of future industrial importance, especially in Texas.

With the rapid depletion of the gasoline supply of the country, automobile manufacturers are looking for new sources of motor fuel. This method would give a much greater efficiency in the use of crude petroleum as a source of alcohol.

The work was done under Dr. Barnett F. Dodge, head of chemical engineering at Yale university. In recognition of this work Dr. Sanders was elected to membership in the Society of Sigma Xi, national honorary research society. He is also a member of Alpha Chi Sigma, national professional chemical fraternity, and of the American Chemical society.

Dr. Sanders will be remembered as Tech's first Ph. D. from the division of engineering, having received his degree from Yale in June 1933. He entered Tech in 1925 with the first freshman class and graduated with B. S. and high honors in chemical engineering in 1929. During his senior year he served as assistant in analytical chemistry under Dr. W. M. Craig.

Sanders hails from Haskell. In 1930 he married Miss Mary Greathouse of Tahoka, also a Tech alumnus of 1929. He has a brother Wallace, who is a junior in business administration in Tech.

At present he is doing commercial research with the Calco Chemical company of Bound Brook, N. J.

Initiation Of Green Hands Planned By Future Farmers

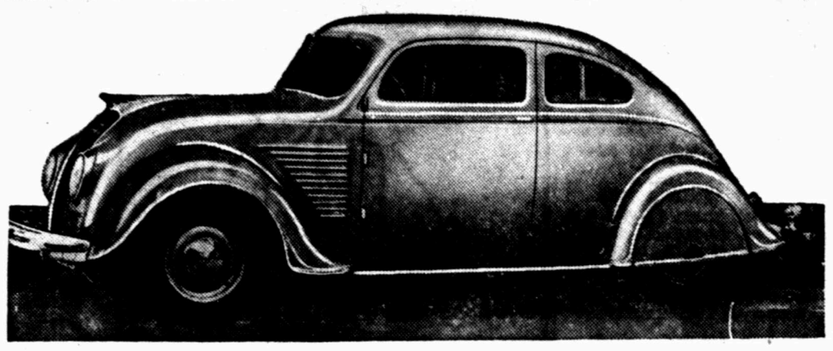

An initiation of "green hands" was planned by members of the C. Luker collegiate chapter, Future Farmers of America, for the third week in April, at a meeting here Friday afternoon in room, 105 of the stock pavilion at Texas Technological college. Members of the chapter include students at Tech taking vocational instruction work.

Date for the initiation will be announced later. The local chapter is the second one in the state, the other being at Texas A. and M., College Station.

Officers for the first time occupied their stations in the meeting with the new emblems displayed. Emblems are: for the president, the rising sun; vice-president, the plow; treasurer, picture of George Washington; reporter, the flag; secretary, ear of corn and advisor, owl's nest.

Along Auto Row In Lubbock

Brief Bits Of News About Automobile Dealers, Sales And Activities Of The Industry In Local Circles

NEW CHRYSLER HERE

THE 1934 Airflow Chrysler, long overdue, made its appearance late last week in Lubbock, and was the center of automotive attraction at the Hub Motor company showrooms. Only one model, a standard sedan, was displayed, but it was enough to give auto fans a comprehensive study of Walter P. Chrysler's latest brainchild. Additional units are expected this week, and indications from the business office were that the first several shipments would find a ready market. The "latest thing" in automobile streamlining, the new Chrysler appears to stand for getaway and speed from the outside and comfort from the inside.

NEW DE SOTOS EXPECTED

Bacon Motor company is expecting a shipment of new De Sotos this week. The De Sotos resemble the Chryslers from a distance, appearing only shorter and more compact, lighter and smaller over all but embodying the latest trends toward streamlining.

OLDS SIX HERE

Another new model to make its debut in Lubbock last week was the Oldsmobile 6. Two of the new machines arrived here and were promptly delivered. The Oldsmobile Eight has been on the market here for nearly two months. With the exception of a shorter wheelbase, the Olds Six from the outside resembles very closely the bigger car.

STANDARD CHEVROLET SHOWN

The Standard Chevrolet also arrived last week. Somewhat shorter and smaller than the Master Chevrolet, the standard model otherwise is built along the lines of the machine which has been delivering here for the last several weeks. The Standard does not include the new knee-action front wheel makeup. Otherwise its appearance and performance is practically the same. It possibly is the lowest priced vehicle delivered in Lubbock at this time. Kuykendall Chevrolet company delivered seven new Master Chevrolets last week and moved nine used jobs. New cars were delivered as follows: Master coupe to R. J. McKowen, master coupe to Cecil Utley, long wheelbase truck to F. C. Broyles, master coach to J. M. Horton, master coach to Lonnie Sanders, long wheelbase truck to B. H. McCarley, and a master coach to A. L. Tapp.

DELIVER NEW PLYMOUTH

A new deluxe Plymouth coupe was delivered last week by Bacon Motor company, agency for Plymouth and DeSoto, to Dr. W. B. Lanning. The company sold three used cars.

TWO BUY OLDS

An Oldsmobile Six touring sedan, first of its kind to arrive, was delivered by Bowen-Ratliff Motor company to Roy Cozart last week, and W. A. Holcomb purchased an Olds Six standard sedan. The Oldsmobile company moved two used cars.

"OPENING" PLANNED

Scoggin-Dickey Motor company, which soon will announce its "opening" at the new location, formerly occupied by Penrod-Toles Motor company, moved three new cars, all Pontiacs last week. No new Buicks were delivered, although a carload was unloaded. Mrs. A. J. Welch bought a Pontiac sedan; Walter Hanna took delivery on a Pontiac coupe and E. D. Parker purchased a Pontiac sedan. The company sold six used machines.

Gus Menninger, district representative for Pontiac, with headquarters at Amarillo, called at the Scoggin-Dickey Motor company place last week.

PENROD-TOLES SALES

Penrod-Toles Motor company, agency for Dodge and Plymouth cars and Dodge trucks, announced the following sales for last week: Dodge pickup to T. A. Dunn of Crosbyton; Dodge sedan to W. A. McLaughlin of Ralls; Plymouth deluxe coupe to I. L. Golden of Dallas; Plymouth deluxe sedan to Mrs. E. E. Earnest; Plymouth deluxe coupe to Russell Morrison; Plymouth two-door sedan to N. L. Gentry of Levelland, and a Plymouth deluxe sedan to R. C. Blair of Tahoka. The company moved three used vehicles.

FORD SALES NEWS

Lubbock Auto company sold two new Ford V-8's last week, a tudor sedan going to E. B. Ward being the 100th 1934 model V-8 delivered by the local company. The State Highway department took delivery on a standard V-8 coupe. The company moved eight used machines.

The new and long awaited "157" parts truck, a heavy duty Ford, arrived last week and will go into service Monday, delivering Ford parts to dealers and service men in 15 South Plains counties, Harry Morris, manager at Lubbock Auto company, announced.

NEW DELIVERIES MADE

One new Chrysler and one new Plymouth were delivered by Hub Motor company last week, the new Chrysler sedan going to Raymond Shook. A deluxe Plymouth business coupe was sold to Allen Farmer. The company delivered five used machines.

Amarillo To Seek WTCC Convention

AMARILLO, March 25. (Special)—Amarillo will ask for the 1935 convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

This year's convention, the 16th, will be at San Angelo, May 14-16. Amarillo will present its bid there, Wilbur C. Hawk, one of Amarillo's three directors of the regional chamber, has announced.

Amarillo has a chamber of commerce, has more regional chamber memberships than it had last year, and has hotel facilities to accommodate the convention, reputed to be the state's largest, it was said.

Preparations for the San Angelo convention are gaining impetus, and temporary headquarters will be established there next month, Maury Hopkins, assistant manager of the regional chamber, said.

New De Soto To Be Shown

t Display Of Outstanding Streamlined Airflow Car Will Be Made Monday By Bacon Motor Company

Revolutionary in design and embodying the latest improvements in automobile manufacture, the new Airflow De Soto is to be displayed for the first time on the South Plains at the showrooms of the Bacon Motor company, 1112 Main street, Monday. Two sedans will be shown.

Designed similarly to the new Chrysler displayed here the past week, the new De Soto upsets all outworn traditions of motor car style and represents the greatest single departure from conventional design that the industry has seen in more than a decade. Scientific streamlining of the body is the outstanding feature of the new De Soto while new standards of beauty, comfort and safety are embodied.

Weight Distributed

Distribution of weight is another feature, the engine being placed over the front axle instead of behind it while the rear seat is moved forward and the passengers ride between the axles giving the car a "floating ride". The frame of the car is built into the body, a network of steel girders extending from front to rear bumper which imparts a rigidity forty times that of the old style frame.

The interior of the new car is totally unlike that of any other previous models of any automobile. Seats are like modernistic chairs, cradled on chronium tubing. Upholstery is a rich Frieze material. In all Airflow models, a large convenient space for luggage is provided directly behind the rear seat, the back of which may be raised up for easy access to the compartment.

Other Improvements Made

Other marked advances, including an entirely new method of steering layout, eliminating wheel fight, etc., an even lower center of gravity, are possible as a result of the new principles of design. An even larger engine to provide maximum power reserve develops 100 horsepower. Improvements include use of inserted valve seats, automatic choke, plain tube downdraft carburetor, intake silencers, balanced armature type generator, positive shift type starter, easy-shift transmission, automatic clutch and control, Hotchkiss drive and scores of other features.

The radiator of the car is concealed by the Airflow lines, the supply tank being mounted on a body panel beside the engine.

Headlights are sunk in the front of the body. A radio antenna is built into the top structure.

Roominess is an outstanding feature of all models.

Health Campaign Being Conducted By C. W. A. Nurse

Anticipating the control of communicable diseases, Mrs. Adele M. Johnson, C. W. A. health nurse in Lubbock county, is waging an educational campaign for health in rural schools and communities. Mrs. Johnson was appointed on February 27 and her work is to continue, at least, until the end of this month. She is hoping that some county agency will then take over the campaign, she stated this week-end.

So far she has contacted 20 schools, made 32 home visits, made six talks on hygiene and sanitation and assisted with 211 diphtheria and typhoid immunizations. She reported that prompt reporting of diphtheria in Shallowater and Munroe resulted in immediate control of the situations by community agreement to school immunizations for diphtheria.

Mrs. Johnson pointed out that prompt reporting of all reportable disease to county or city health officers is the first step in the control of epidemics.

Tech Gridders Start Spring Grid Monday

Sixty Men Expected To Call For Texas Tech Uniforms As Spring Football Training Begins; Coaches Return

With Coaches Pete Cawthon and Dutchy Smith back after a tour of the football camps of the Mid-West, the Texas Tech Matadors will square-off tomorrow for six weeks of intensive spring training.

About sixty candidates are expected to answer the gridiron call tomorrow evening, comprising possibly, the brawniest and most promising squad that ever began the spring grind at Tech.

In the past Matador teams have been more famous for punch than poundage. This year they may have both—and, certainly there's going to be some beef in that line!

Power From Picadors

Up from the Picador team of 1933 is coming a bunch of piano-legged, bull-chested youngsters, who are going to make a stiff bid for first string varsity positions next fall.

There should be considerable of a race for the terminal assignments. Malcolm Martin has one end in the bag if he keeps up his last season standard of play, but the other wing is going to be fought over between Juicy Owen, Braxton Gilmore, Robert Hale and, maybe, Sam Jones and Louis Spear.

Battle At Tackle

But particularly at the tackles is the competition going to be something terrible. The two Browning brothers, Leslie and Jesse, who are built from the ground up with great nicety, the mammoth Bill Holcomb, and big Alvin Katrola, are going to keep life from becoming boresome for such experienced men as Woodrow Wilson and G. B. Morris.

"Tubby" Graves, another Picador, is going to make a nice 210 pound mate for Gaines Davis, and "Tox" Wigginton, clever and powerful Freshman pivot man, will throw himself into the big fight for the center position.

Several speedy and fancy backs in the lower weight divisions were on Dell Morgan's squad last year, the "Nubbin" Reese and Henry Trenary. Jim Neill, the rugged line-plunger from Brownfield, was one of the stand-outs of the fish secondarymen. Big, fast, and brilliant, Neill should do a lot of damage for the varsity before his three year's is up.

Big Spring Makes Plans For Annual West Texas Joust

BIG SPRING, March 24. (Special)—Plans for the entertainment of the tenth annual tournament of the West Texas Golf association on May 24, 25, 26 and 27 were definitely set in motion Wednesday by the members of the Big Spring Country club.

C. W. Cunningham, president of the local club, will act as general chairman for the tourney and Fred Stephens will be local secretary. The meeting Wednesday followed the definite announcement that Big Spring had been selected as the host city for the tenth annual tourney. Other committees appointed were, publicity: Fred Stephens, Mrs. G. I. Phillips, Joe Galbraith; registration: Shirley Robbins, L. Coffee, V. W. Latson; entertainment: Dr. M. H Bennett, Carl Blomshield, W. B. Currie and R. Richardson; program: Joe Kuykendall, R. T. Piner, Fred Stephens; barbecue and refreshments: L. W. Croft, Cecil Wasson, J. Y. Robb, Steve D. Ford, Harry Lees; calcutta: Fred Stephens, V. W. Latson, Joe Kuykendall, R. T. Piner and Shirley Robbins. Plans will be made to entertain at least 200 outstanding golfers of West Texas, and, according to L. W. Croft, chairman of the entertainment committee, when the visitors leave Big Spring they will have been entertained.

John Phipps, who came to camp after starring at the University of North Carolina and in an amateur league at Infries, Va., was released outright. Fred Singfon, outfielder, a former Alabama university grid star, was returned to Albany of the International league. Augustin Dugas, another candidate from Albany, still is in the race for an extra outfield place.

Holders Of Championship Wrestling Belts To Show Stuff On Mat Wednesday

It's a card full of potential thrills and spills that Wrestling Promoter Sled Allen has cooked up for the mat fans this Wednesday night.

Two newcomers to the local ring, two men who have sought and gained fame in other sections of the country before coming to this, one of the liveliest wrestling circuits of the Southwest. They are Ben Hill from Los Angeles and Rod Fenton, also from the West coast.

Hill is scheduled to meet Lubbock's scisorss artist, Dorry Detton, in the main, two-out-of-three-falls event, and from reports drifting to Lubbock from authoritative sources, this is due to be one of the most interesting matches viewed here in some time.

Clean Wrestlers

They are clean, legal and legitimate rasslers, Detton and Hill, and their match will not see any of the rough, "dirty" type of wrestling. There will be plenty of this in the semi-final and preliminary.

Hill comes highly recommended by Pacific Coast promoters and newspapers. He wears a championship belt, a trophy signifying that he is the middleweight champion of the western seaboard. There is the possibility that he may put up his belt Wednesday night, challenging Detton to take it away from him. Since wrestlers are by no means quick to give up championship belts, Hill's challenge is considered something out of the ordinary.

Rob Roy vs. Fenton

"Lightning Rod" Fenton, who also wears a championship belt from another section of the country, will meet Rob Roy, wild buffalo wrestler from Goodnight, Texas, who has received numerous booes and razzberries in previous performances. It will be Fenton's first appearance here. In a recent match at Amarillo, he put up a fascinating, although rough and punishing match against one of the best middleweights of the circuit.

Charley Heard, who rapidly is gaining favor among local ringworms, will be pitted against Lou Kodrick, the biscuit-bodied terror from Strasburg, Austria, in the 20-minute prelim Wednesday night to round out a well-planned wrestling card.

YESTERDAY'S football weather reminds us again that spring training officially starts for the Matadors tomorrow. But P. W. Cawthon and R. T. Smith would remind us anyway.

Tech's coaches came home yesterday after a few weeks of visitation in various Notre Dame spring training camps up in the country where football was made famous. Like a school teacher who spends his vacation attending a teachers college, the Tech board of strategy dropped in recently at the spring training rituals of Purdue, Notre Dame, De Paul and Washington university, picking up points and receiving most hospitable treatment at the hands of Noble Kizer, Elmer Layden, etc. They are home now, and will call out their charges tomorrow for the first of a series of daily workouts to last about six weeks.

Spring training is open to all football and would-be football candidates for next fall's varsity. The gridiron in the springtime is really the proving ground of football material, the research laboratory. Those athletes who demonstrate their potentialities to an appreciable degree will receive letters sometime this summer that will make the vacation all the more enjoyable. These letters bear the signature of Coach Pete Cawthon, and urge the recipients to report in Lubbock September 10 for the fall training grind.

There are no holdouts as in professional baseball. At least, they are not conspicuous. A player who stands the exigencies of spring training is disappointed if he does not receive an invitation to fall training.

YESTERDAY'S football weather did not remind us to pen a paragiraffe or two concerning golf, but a very interesting situation has been revealed along this line. The rumor concerns the possibilities of the building of a new golf course here, with grass greens and everything!

Lubbock has two golf courses, well located and constructed, but neither with grass greens. A couple of years ago Country club and Meadowbrook could well take care of all the golfers in Lubbock. Such is not the case now. If golf grows in popularity this summer like it did in 1933, you can't hold all the players on two 18-hole courses. A third course not only would relieve the congested situation but would increase the number of golfers, create a greater sporting spirit in town and make Lubbock one of the most popular golfing centers of West Texas.

The rumor we are hearing concerns the City of Lubbock's personal interest in a municipally owned and operated course, with 18 grass greens. Such a layout would be expensive, too expensive for the City of Lubbock to build at this time. But that's where the New Deal comes in handily. You've heard of the C. W. A. and its operations. Well, the flower beds are just about completed on the courthouse lawn, a lot of paving has been done and City Hall has a new doornob. And still there is C. W. A. money available. The City commission members turned thumbs down on baseball, but we understand they are not altogether opposed to building a municipal golf course with C. W. A. funds. There is considerable agitation for such a move.

ABOUT all we know, as another well-known writer says, is what we read in the papers or what our stooges tell us now and then, but we have it from authoritative sources that several municipalities have taken advantage of the government's offer of funds with which to improve, repair and construct objects and projects of public interest, such as baseball parks and golf courses. To cite a couple of nearby examples, the Post Golf and Country club, with government funds, has completely overhauled and remodeled its golf course. Big Spring has built a new 18-hole, grass green course with C. W. A. funds. If others can do it, why can't Lubbock? The dough seems to be waiting for somebody use it. If it has to be paid back, Lubbock must pay the same as any town, or at least that's the way General Johnson and FDR explained it to us on our last call at the White House.

A suitable location, we understand, is available for a municipal golf course. The site is sub-irrigated and possesses natural hazards. With a little human aid, Mother Nature undoubtedly could make a go of grass greens. Sand greens, no matter how well kept, are just about as old fashioned as muddy roads, and our local golfers, no matter how good they are on the home courses, can never prosper in out of town tournaments so long as they practice on sand and putt on grass. It is like eating horse-radish at home with a fork and hors d'ouvres in fast company with the fingers.

Horton Smith Holds Lead In Masters Joust

Great Bobby Recovers Putting Stroke To Card Par 72, But Is 10 Strokes Behind Smith As Final Round Starts

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 24.—On the cold soggy battle ground of the Augusta national links today, after a gallant but discouraging pursuit, the great Bob Jones surrendered his last chance of overtaking the flying professional squadron in the $5,000 masters' invitation golf tournament.

Jones today shot the best golf he has exhibited since he began his come-back two days ago after a lapse of nearly four years since his retirement as world champion. He shifted to a rusty old putter his mother has been using and recovered his touch to the extent of taking only 30 putts for the 18 holes, but the "breaks" were against him and his par golf was not good enough to close the big gap between him and the leaders.

Tied For 18th

The Georgian's 54-hole total of 222, although lifting him ten notches up to the list to a tie for 18th place, also left him exactly ten strokes behind the brilliant young leader, Horton Smith of Chicago. Smith shattered par for the second time in three days with a 70. His three-day aggregate of 212 kept him a stroke in front of the field and made him the marked man in a prospective five cornered battle in the final round tomorrow for the top money of $1,500.

While Jones was struggling through the raw, cheerless day in a hopeless chase, unable even to keep stride with his old rival and playing companion, Walter Hagen, the professional pace setters gave par another terrific shellacking.

Bill Burke Is Second

On Horton Smith's heels, alone in second place, was Bill Burke, the man who succeeded Jones as national open champion in 1931. The Cleveland delegate, smoking his inevitable cigar, kept up his steady improvement with a 70 for a 54-hole total of 213. As a result he broke a tie with his playing partner, Ed Dudley, who posted a 71 for an aggregate of 214.

Craig Wood, the big blond sharpshooter from Deal, N. J., leaped into the thick of the fight with a 69, which not only equalled Dudley's course record, set yesterday, but tied him with the home club pro for third place at 214. On their heels came diminutive Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y., no longer worried about playing with Jones as he shot a 71 and moved up to place with a total of 215.

These five, bunched within three shots of each other, looked to have the battle pretty much to themselves. Their nearest possible challengers were Willie MacFarlane, 1925 open champion, and the veteran Hagen, both of whom shot their best rounds today, 70 each, and were tied for sixth at 217.

All 17 of the players leading Jones are professionals, many of whom have been through the big golfing wars with the Georgian. The pace setetrs, Horton Smith, was the last to take Bob's measure, in the spring of 1930.

Tied with Jones in 18th position are Denny Shute of Philadelphia, the present holder of the British Open championship, as well as two of the younger set, Johnny Revolta of Milwaukee and Henry Picard of Charleston, S. C.

Whatever chance Jones had of making a real comeback, with the outside hope of giving his rivals something to worry about on the final round, was dissipated today by a bad "break" on the short third green.

Bob had started strongly with pars on the first two holes, where he was showing more of his old touch on the greens, but was annoyed by a grinding motion picture camera as he addressed his tee shot to the 15-yard third green, lying just across a small creek. He stopped, turned around to ask the cameraman to suspend activity for the moment, and then hurried his stroke. The ball plumped into the middle of the water, cost him a penalty and he carded a disastrous five. From there on, it was all uphill. He hit magnificent wood and iron shots. He ran down two of his longest putts of the tournament—a 15-footer for a deuce on the seventh and a 30-footer for another two on the 13th, but he also missed three short putts.

Jones needed no apologies for his round, even though it left him farther behind the leaders. He looked more like the Jones of championship days than at any time in the tournament. His putting on the whole, with a short-handled club that the elder Mrs. Jones brought today from Atlanta, was much surer, in fact he took seven fewer putts than the day before and with more luck on at least three holes he might well have had a 68 or 69.

Congratulated by his father on his 34 for the last nine, as he came into the locker room, Jones said "Well, I feel a bit better about my game today, whether it means anything or not."

Jones Is Paired With Walter Hagen

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 24. (AP)—Bobby Jones is paired with Walter Hagen again in the final round of the Masters' invitation golf tournament tomorrow. They start at 1:33 p. m. (eastern time).

New Shot Put Record Is Made By Jack Torrance; Hurls 53 Feet, 6 Inches

Leads Masters

If he shoots golf today like he's been shooting it for the last three days, Horton Smith, above, is considered a cinch to win the Masters Invitation tournament over the Augusta national links. His 70 yesterday brought his 54-hole total to 212, ten strokes ahead of Bobby Jones, former world's champion.

Old Record Beaten By Nearly Foot In Carnival

(By The Associated Press)

LAFAYETTE, La., March 24.—Jack Torrance, Louisiana's mammountain athlete, threw the 16-pound shot into the horizon today for a new all-time mark of 53 feet six inches.

The towering 260-pound football, basketball and track star from Louisiana State university, performing in the Southwestern Louisiana institute carnival relays, bested the official world mark of 52 feet 7 7-8 inches by almost a foot. The record was set in 1932 by Zygmunt Helgasz, of Poland.

Only in recent years have burly athletes been toying with the 53-foot distance. Leo Sexton, of the New York A. C., has been credited with a heave of 53 feet 1-2 inch.

Three hundred star athletes of Louisiana and Texas colleges and high schools competed.

Port Arthur Wins

The lion's share of first places in the college division went to L.S.U., while Port Arthur, Tex., led in the high school section.

Tulane, Rice, Texas A. and M., Louisiana normal, Stephen F. Austin and Southwestern collected first places in the college contests.

First places in high school competition went to St. Aloysius of New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Warren Easton of New Orleans, Port Arthur, Commercial High of New Orleans, Beaumont, Tex., and Mangum, Tex.

Rice Wins Relay

Rice institute captured the mile relay in 3 minutes 24.2 seconds. The team was composed of McCain, Hebert, Collida, and Guidry.

Irwin of Texas A. & M. tossed the discus 146 feet, 11 inches to beat the record of 143 feet five inches set in 1933 by Payne of Tulane. Torrance had to be content with second place in the event.

Nebraska Hurdler Beats Own Record

BUTLER UNIVERSITY FIELDHOUSE, Indianapolis, March 24.—(AP)—Heye Lambertus, University of Nebraska hurdler, bettered his own world record for the 60-yard low hurdles in the second annual Butler University indoor relays tonight. In a great burst of speed, Lambertus broke the tape in 6.7 seconds, but a few feet in front of Kenneth Sandbach of Purdue.

The Cornhusker flash, topping the low barriers almost as if they were non-existent, outclassed the rest of the field as he had in the trials earlier when he coasted to easy victory in 6.9 seconds.

Indiana university's two mile relay team, with Ivan Fuqua leading off and Charles Hornbostel running anchor, opened the meet with an easy victory over Michigan State college. Otto Pongrace, anchor of the Spartan quintet, sprinted to the finish to beat off Purdue's challenge for the place. Indiana's time was 7:57.8.

Five Fights Scheduled When Guard Presents Its Third Ring Show; Tech Aces Will Meet Strong Competition

Boxing, featuring professional and amateurs, will claim Lubbock's athletic spotlight Monday night when the 131st Field Artillery unit of National Guard presents its third fight card at the Armory.

Joe Vernon, active young middleweight from Pampa, will meet Mickey Dunivin, 162-pound veteran from Oklahoma City, in the main event, scheduled for 10 rounds. Both have appeared on a previous card at the Armory, but not against each other.

Vernon, although judges called the fight a draw, pummelled the Texas Tech light heavyweight king, Harry Guthrie, considerably in his first appearance here, and made a hit with the fans. Dunivin was on the main event of the same show, which marked the first and only appearance of Jack Dempsey here, losing a decision to Jack Thompson of Amarillo. Although he lost, Dunivin was the most popular of the fighters in the ring that night, his churning left fist pounding against Thompson's body in pleasing fashion.

Four Other Fights

Five fights are booked for the Armory tomorrow night. Kid Hill of Pampa meets Snow Flake of Lubbock in one of the prelims. Buster Span, a middleweight who has performed here before, meets Bill Gay of Spearman in another feature.

Dick Hedgepeth, Amarillo boxer, will make his debut here, boxing Cecil Bradford of Lubbock. John Prim, ranking Texas Tech middleweight, is carded for four rounds with Gordon Park of Pampa.

Tickets, going for 40 cents, general admission, and 80 cents, ringside including tax, will remain on sale Monday morning and part of Monday afternoon at the J. & J. Sporting Goods company store.

The county tennis tournament, some of which already has been played, is to be concluded Tuesday at the Texas Tech courts, beginning at 1 o'clock. Tennis is under the direction of M. F. Stephens.

Witt Is Speaker Before Officials

SWEETWATER, March 24. (AP) — Edgar E. Witt, liuetenant-governor, told the West Texas Judges and Commissioners association to forget new avenues of taxation, find ways to collect delinquents and provide an equitable manner to tax all visible property, including stocks, bonds and vendor's liens.

Judge John P. Marrs of Wichita Falls, secretary of the association, speaking on revision of tax laws, advocated more consideration to property owners and suggested some sort of commission to work out an euitable tax-paying plan.

Judge A. O. Newman of Coleman county, referring to depositors, said the delegates should "forget the interest but be sure your money is safe."

Opposition to the home rule charter plan in El Paso was expressed by Judge McGill of that city. He said the plan was more impractical than good and expressed the opinion that too much power was delegated to a central head and that commissioners would not have power to represent the voters who elected them.

LUFKIN, March 24 (AP)—Officers again were on the trail of Clyde Barrow and Raymond Hamilton today after the bold theft of an automobile here yesterday by a man witnesses identified as Hamilton and the finding of torn deposit slips from the Grand Prairie state bank, robbed of $1,534 recently.

CITY OF LUBBOCK

Meat Show Is Set This Week

Thirty Head Of Hereford Calves From Scharbauer Cattle Company Ranch To Be Exhibited At Affair

Thirty head of pure bred Hereford calves from the Scharbauer Cattle company's ranch, fed for eleven months with several experiments in progress by the Wes-Tex Mill and Elevator company of Plainview will be exhibited at the Quality Meat Show here this week it was decided at a meeting of the show committee yesterday.

This will swell the number of calves to be shown to approximately 200, Dr. I. E. Barr, chairman of the committee announced.

Barns Are Ready

The barns are ready for the livestock and the Women's building where canned and cured meats and dressed capons will be shown is ready for the products.

About a dozen calves will arrive today for the show and other entries are expected Monday. Tuesday evening all the calves and pigs are expected to be in place, however products in the Women's building are not expected until Wednesday, official opening day.

The Wes-Tex calves from Plainview will not be entered for competition, however they will be sold at auction immediately following the selling of the show calves and pigs Friday afternoon.

Work Incomplete

Committees soliciting orders for the calf and pig sale have not yet completed their work. Dr. Barr said last night, and many additional orders will have to be secured before the sale can be assured of success.

A large number of out-of-town buyers from the regular livestock markets, including packers, commission men, their representatives and stock yard representatives are expected to be here to make purchases.

Walter Leur, president of the Leur Packing Company of Los Angeles, will arrive here tomorrow and will remain throughout the show and sale. Leur's company recently established a local buying organization here operating under the name of the Lubbock Hog Company. Leur is expected to purchase a number of calves and a larger number of hogs.

Have Many Entries

The biggest exhibit of country cured meat ever gathered at a show is expected over in the Women's building. Something near a thousand entries of hams, bacons and sausage are expected. A booth will be maintained throughout the show at which the cured meat may be purchased by the general public.

An unusually large showing of canned meat is expected and a small showing of fat capons dressed will be exhibited.

Judging of canned and cured meats and pigs takes place Wednesday, opening day. Calves and capons will be judged Thursday.

Col. Earl Gartin will handle the sale starting at 1 p. m. Friday.

Jim" as his friends like to address him.

The resignation of Mrs. Clara Driscol Sevier of Corpus Christi, woman member of the national committee had not been received, Farley telegraphed the committee. She will remain in that place.

Resolutions Rejected

The committee rejected, for the time being, resolutions proposed by Hughes that the committee give women equal representation on the committee and that it submit in the July primaries the question whether state constitutional prohibition should be repealed.

The legislature had, by resolution, petitioned the committee to permit the electorate to say what its mandate should be with reference to letting the voters decide whether prohibition should be cast aside. The committee will meet in June, however, to make up the ballot and the question may be renewed then.

The proposal to give women equal representation on the committee was intended to follow the system adopted by the national group. There would, under that plan, be a woman and a man from each senatorial district, each with a half vote.

Miss Bertha Kunz of Houston was named by Brim as secretary of the state committee to succeed Hussion after the latter had been elevated to the vice chairmanship. Miss Kunz has been assistant secretary.

Texas Rains

ing continued at intervals throughout the day, with indications Saturday night of heavy rain before Sunday. The rain was much needed for corn crops and stock ranges. The ground had been too dry to finish planting cotton, only 25 per cent of the estimated 6,000-acres of cotton being planted to date.

Total Deposits High

Against $200,000 in U. S. bonds held for circulation, the outstanding currency is $195,720.

Total deposits of the banks amounted to 4,662,274.45, a gain of $162,274.15 over the approximate figure of $4,500,000 for the previous report.

termine whether bonds will be issued."

Either revenue bonds or security bonds will be proposed. Revenue bonds may be paid either from gas revenue or from surplus revenues of other utilities. No tax money will be paid on them. Security bonds may be paid from any source of income.

The city manager was emphatic in stating that the city would continue plans for financnig a municipal gas distribution system should PWA deny the loan application.

"Figures presented in this schedule are based on conservative estimates, so that we know the system would pay for itself and would not require other city funds," Mr. Rodgers said.

According to the schedule, the city would offer gas for domestic purposes at 45 cents per 1,000 cubic feet and for industrial use at 15 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. It was estimated the city system would have 2,200 of 4,200 total possible consumers in 1935. Annual payments on bond principal and interest would range from $72,000 the first year to $118,000. It was estimated there would be a net income, after payment of principal and interest, during all except one year of the 20. This anticipated net income ranged from $3,810.52 to $58,927.29 annually.

The next presidential term begins on Jan. 20, 1937.

Yaqui Customs

wards also brought back a number of trophies from the country including bows and arrows, utensils, baskets, etc.

"Those boys are having the time of their lives and they'll have plenty of scientific information when they return," Mr. Edwards said. He said the success of the expedition, with the exception of a few minor details of anthropology they had expected to find, was assured.

He said Dr. William Curry Holden, leader of the expedition was "a wonderful boss" and that he would bring back enough trophies and data on the trip to "fill a museum." The fact that the Mexican soldiers, who guarded members of the expedition closely, and the Yaquis were enemies prevented them from making greater headway, he said.

The Mexican government is keeping peace with the Yaquis by paying them 42 pesos a month "to be good," Mr. Edwards declared. He said practically every Yaqui in the country was armed "with a cocked pistol" and that about twice a month they came to the Mexican military garrisons, each housing about twenty soldiers, for their pay. On this money, they were able to live without having to work, he said.

The "real bad" Yaquis or renegades of the tribes live up in the mountains and do not draw the pay, he said. He said they kept in contact with the peaceable Yaquis of the villagers in the valley, however, and visit them regularly.

"The ceremonial rites of these primitive people impressed me more than anything else on the trip," Mr. Edwards said. "They have some sort of pagan religion which shows evidence of impressions left by the Catholic fathers of ancient Spanish days on the continent but which looks more like the religion of the savages you read about in Africa. They believe in all sorts of spirits and have their witch doctors and medicine men. And believe me, when they put on one of their ceremonies, it's some sight."

The country "isn't much to look at," Mr. Edwards said. Giant cactuses cover every portion of it and a fog of alkali dust seems to be in the air almost all the time, he said. Of course, this is the dry season, and the dust seemed to be greater. He said it rains there in June and July.

The Yaquis are a suspicious people, especially of members of the expedition when they first arrived and it was only after extensive efforts that they were persuaded to cooperate in the various phases of the expedition's research work, Mr. Edwards said, and that only after they had been convinced that they were in no way connected with the Mexican soldiers.

Everyone in the entire country goes armed, he said, and "there are more guns and less shooting than any place I ever saw before." He said the Yaquis carried American-made guns and amunition, none of which could be bought in that part of Mexico.

E. Scott Jones, a Lubbock resident five years, yesterday announced as a candidate for justice of the peace in precinct 1, place 1.

Jones, a native Texan, said he was qualified to hold the office. He declared he favored impartial trials for everyone.

"I will make the race on my own merits and not on the demerits of my opponents," he said.

Julian Dies

tempted suicide on March 19, unsuccessfully. Friends and physicians denied this, however.

It was not possible to ascertain immediately whether Julian had become aware of the law, aimed at Samuel Insull, which received President Roosevelt's signature Friday and under which American consular authorities were given the power to arrest fugitives in international settlements for charges pending in the United States.

The Levy girl's brother charged that Julian had been borrowing funds from Chinese whom he promised to "make rich" through stock speculations. Levy estimated that Julian owed at least $25,000 in United States currency, none of which he was able to pay back.

Loan Is Revealed

Levy charged that Julian recently got $5,000 in Chinese currency from an unidentified Chinese upon a promise of stock market profits. Levy said he thought Julian used these funds to finance his activities just previous to the suicide.

Foreign-operated Shanghai hotels which Julian had patronized since coming to Shanghai admitted he owed them various amounts totaling a large figure.

Levy stated that the Canadian born promoter recently had tried to raise money by offering for sale part interest in a book he had called "What Price Fugitive," the manuscript of which was supposed to have been enroute to publishers in New York.

Another woman entered the scene shortly after Julian's death. She gave her name as Mary Cantorovich, of Russian nationality.

Learning that Julian was dead she dashed to the hospital and created a stir outside the room where his body lay. She sought to enter, and wept and wailed, and said she was his "dear friend."

This woman said Julian for weeks had been taking drugs to induce sleep, and that he otherwise had given recent evidence of mental uneasiness.

He had been drinking heavily, she added, seeking to dull his brain to troubles.

Cullen F. Thomas Selected Chairman For Centennial

AUSTIN, March 24. (AP)—The Texas centennial commission, designated by law to plan a suitable celebration of the 100th anniversary of Texas independence, met here today in an unofficial session.

Cullen F. Thomas of Dallas, leader in the centennial movement since its inception more than a decade ago, was elected temporary chairman. The commission will operate as an unofficial body until the law by which it was established becomes effective May 29.

five negroes. The race of the other charred victim could not be determined.

Inmates Panic Stricken

Trapped inmates became panic stricken. Some sought to tear down a high board wall which surrounded the windows of their sleeping quarters, others leaped in desperation to the streets 15 feet below and still others swung down by sleet-covered wires. Several suffered broken arms and legs and other hurts.

William B. Pasch, of New Orleans, cook since the federal emergency relief administration opened the building as a lodging house and temporary home in December, was preparing sausage gravy for breakfast when the grease boiled over starting the fire.

Labor Dispute

facturers had been stationed in an office on one side of Johnson's suite and labor representatives in a room on the other, with the administrator passing from one conference to the other.

Must Be Approved

Less than an hour before the work for the night ended, Johnson had emerged momentarily to say that if any agreement came tonight, it would have to be approved by President Roosevelt.

Johnson said if the negotiations were successful, he would go to a dinner at the national press club at which Mr. Roosevelt was a guest to submit the agreement to the president.

As the evening dragged on, indications came that the discussions were gradually drawing the disputants closer together.

A Good Fireman BUT A LOUSY FLORIST

We recall an incident, which happened just before Easter, several seasons ago. It was very amusing to us, and probably you'll enjoy it, too. Here 'tis:

We were rushed with business, and badly in need of some extra help, so we employed a man, whose previous occupation had been on the fire department. He was honest, and admitted that he knew less than nothing about flowers, but was very willing to lear. So . . . we started him to gathering Sweet Peas. He had been doing this for some time when a swarm of customers arrived, necessitating his assistance. Lady he attempted to wait on, wandered around through the greenhouse, and finally stopped in front of some Easter Lilies. She asked the ex-ladder climber, "What kind of flowers are these?" . . . "Just a big Sweet Pea, lady," he answered promptly.

Easter FLOWERS

We will have the largest assortment of Easter flowers between Fort Worth and Denver . . . Be sure and let us take care of your wants. Everyone is cordially invited to visit us, and see this large assortment.

Stocks

WALL STREET REPORT
BY JOHN L. COOLEY
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, March 24.—Stocks found the news more encouraging today and prices improved quietly.

A hopeful view of the automobile labor situation prevailed during market hours, with the result that traders put in some buying orders, partly for short account, on the possibility that settlement of the motor industrys dispute would have been announced by opening time on Monday. Bonds were about steady. U. S. governments being higher in dull trading.

Stocks were rather active in the first half hour or so but volume slackened later and the advance was leisurely. Automotive issue took the lead, but their gains were hardly larger than those of other industrials and several rails. On the whole, the upturn was broad. Sales amounted to 681,510 shares for the two hours.

Net gains of a point or more were established by General Motors, Nash, Chrysler, Hudson, Montgomery Ward, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, Auburn, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Baltimore and Ohio and American Rolling Mill. Metals firmed fractionally and so did a number of utilities.

Cotton

NEW ORLEANS REPORT

NEW ORLEANS, March 24 (AP)—Cotton was moderately active in today's short session and prices improved due to a good advance in stocks and on more favorable prospects for a settlement of national labor troubles. The close showed net gains for the day of 10 to 12 points.

The opening was higher but only a poor response to Liverpool cables which were 7 penny points better than due. First trades showed gains of 4 points. The market soon improved further, however, owing to a firm opening of stocks and continued to advance through the session. In the late trading prices made highs for the day at 12.04 for May, 12.15 for July and 12.27 for October or 13 to 14 points above the previous close. There was a slight reaction at the end of 2 to 3 points on realizing. May closed at 12.01 up 12 points net, July at 12.12 up 10 points net, and October at 12.25, up 11 points net.

Port receipts 12,294, for season 6,757,950, last season 7,569,917. Exports 8,397, for season 5,918,621, last season 5,976,066. Port stock 3,192,543, last year 4,370,552. Combined ship board stock at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 109,337 last year 104,828. Spot sales at southern markets 6,606, last year 7,307.

NEW YORK REPORT

NEW YORK, March 24 (AP)—Cotton was firm today on a more cheerful view of the labor news and strength of outside markets. Prices rallied to net gains of 16 to 18 points on commission house and trade buying, but near the close a little profit-taking appeared. July which has rallied from 12.06@12.16 closed at 12.12, with the general market finishing steady at net advances of 13 to 15 points.

Opening prices were 4 to 8 points higher responding only partially to firmness at Liverpool. There were foreign selling orders principally from Liverpool and the continent.

Trading was moderate active through the short session with prices generally firm. May advanced from 11.93@12.04 and October from 12.15@12.27. Final prices were 2 to 4 points under the highs.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 112,000 against 103,000 last year.

Grains

FORT WORTH REPORT

FORT WORTH, March 24 (AP)—Demand for all offerings on the Fort Worth cash grain market continued fairly good to the close of the week.

Prices ranged as follows, basis car loads on track at Fort Worth, freight paid to delivery point. Delivered Texas gulf ports, export rate, or Texas common points: wheat No. 1 hard 92 1-4@95 1-4. Barley No. 2 nominally 54@55; No. 3 nominally 53@54. Sorghums No. 2 milo per 100 lbs. nominally 1.16@1.18; No. 3 milo nominally 1.14@1.16. No. 2 kaffir nominally 1.04@1.06; No. 3 kaffir nominally 1.02@1.04. Delivered Texas common points or group three: corn No. 2 white 66 1-4@66 3-4. No. 2 yellow 64 3-4@65 1-4. oats No. 2 red 43@43 1-2. No. 3 red 42@42 1-2.

CHICAGO REPORT

CHICAGO, March 24 (AP)—Sensational drought reports from spring wheat state, together with prospective settlement of automobile labor troubles, lifted wheat a cent a bushel today.

Speculative interest regarding grain markets however, did not greatly enlarge, a majority of traders continuing to await more definite developments as to industry and finance. Uncertainty was also shown as to how the workings of the national grain exchange code would affect the wheat market.

On today's advance, wheat reached a new high price level for the week, but because of profit-taking, reacted somewhat at the last, closing unsettled 1-2 to 3-4 above yesterday's finish, corn unchanged to 1-4 higher, oats 1-8 to 1-4 up and provisions unchanged to a rise of ten cents.

Avalanche-Journal To Conduct Chess Tourney; Entries Are In Two Classes

Play Schedule Will Be Announced In Near Future

HERE'S news for Lubbock's chess players.

The Avalanche-Journal newspapers are to conduct a chess tournament, perhaps the first of its kind on the South Plains.

Has Found Favor

Chess, generally regarded as the most perfect game and certainly one of the oldest, has found favor with a number of Lubbock residents.

The tournament was designed to bring together local chess enthusiasts. Few of the players here know many of the others who likewise enjoy a life-and-death struggle across the boards.

Battlefield Strategy

Perhaps one reason for the game's continued popularity after so many centuries—a chess set was found in King Tut's tomb—is the fact that the game furnishes a miniature world of struggle, triumph, and defeat within itself. Its strategy is that of the battlefield, each player a general marshaling his forces.

The tournament will be conducted in two divisions, class A for experienced players; class B for less experienced players and novices. The contestant is given right to select his division.

No Entry Fee

A separate tournament will be arranged for women if a sufficient number is interested.

There is no entry fee. Entries, by filling out the coupon in today's paper and mailing or carrying it to the Avalanche-Journal chess editor, may be made at any time through next Sunday.

Schedule of play will be announced immediately. Each contestant will play two games with every other entrant, color alternating. Won games will count as one point, drawn games as half a point.

Flowerdale Echo Coronis Alta is the leading cow with a credit of 422.2 pounds of fat and 14,199.4 pounds of milk. Her stable-mate, Tech Creamelle Hartog, is crowding this record with a yield of 416.2 pounds of fat and 10,983.7 pounds of milk. Tech Alcartra Fayne has also crossed the five-ton milk mark and has credit for 349.6 pounds of fat.

Small Group To Be Formed

Formation Of Community And County Units Authorized By Texas Agricultural Association At Dallas

DALLAS, March 24 (AP)—Formation of county and community units was authorized by the Texas Agricultural association at the close of its two-day semi-annual conference here.

Organized last fall through merging of the former Texas Farm Bureau federation and other agricultural groups, the association thus far had only a state set-up, its membership being composed of members of local farm organizations associated with it.

To Extend Work

Under its revised plan, the association will seek to develop planned agriculture and farmer cooperation in Texas by extending its work directly into the county and school districts.

Working through both its state and local units, the association will seek to correlate the efforts of crop control committees, credit associations and other government agencies, to assist county and home demonstration agents, and to encourage home demonstration clubs, 4-H clubs and other junior groups.

Improvement of living conditions on Texas farms was advocated by Sam A. Lindsey, chairman of the board of the four farm credit banks in Houston. He also discussed farm credit, as did J. E. McDonald, Texas commissioner of agriculture.

F. F. Triplett of Amarillo was chosen as manager of the Texas wheat growers, who met today in connection with the association meeting. The Texas wheat growers is a marketing group with 1,250,000 acres of wheat land under its control.

Former Crop Loan Supervisor Returns To Farm Credit Work

PLAINVIEW, March 24—F. H. Simpson, former field supervisor of the old crop production loan group in Hale and several other counties, has returned to the service and probably will be stationed in the Dallas office of the emergency crop loan section of the farm credit administration.

Mr. Simpson resigned a little over a year ago from the crop production work to join the Dallas Joint Stock Land bank as an appraiser. He was in the crop production work from its inception until he resigned.

Woman's Day Observance Is Set For April

Seventh District Convention Plans Are Continuing; Club Chairmen Ask For Reports To Be Given In Amarillo

BY BLANCHE BEAN WILSON
Woman's Editor

WOMAN'S Day in Texas has been designated as April 26 by the permanent headquarters committee of the Texas Federation of Women's clubs. On that day all seven districts of the Federation, under the leadership of the presidents, are to raise money for permanent headquarters by means of benefit picture shows and other mediums.

Each club president is being asked to appoint a chairman for Woman's Day, according to an announcement coming from Mrs. W. P. Avriett of Lamesa, seventh district president.

Asks Art Reports

In order that she may have a full report ready for the seventh district annual club convention in Amarillo in April, Mrs. E. G. Rice of Quitaque is urging that all clubs send her a report on art activities and send in donations to the penny art fund.

Mrs. W. E. Davis of Childress, conservation chairman in the seventh district, is asking for a report on all conservation work of club women in the district. This includes the planting of trees, beautification of parks or highways and similar work, she has announced.

Plans are continuing for the entertainment of the district club women in Amarillo on April 16, 17 and 18.

In keeping with the General Federation theme, Dr. J. A. Hill, president of West Texas State Teachers college, will address the gathering on President's evening on "The Redemption of These United States of Ours from the Forces Which Threaten to Overthrow It." Mrs. Volney Taylor, state president, and Mrs. Avriett are also speakers on that evening. Amarillo women will entertain with a tea before the program and dinner.

Clint Small To Speak

Clint Small of Amarillo will address the women on "Beautifying Texas for the Centennial" Tuesday noon at a Texas luncheon at which Mrs. W. E. Davis will be the toastmistress. Mrs. Ewing Leech of Pampa will discuss woman's part in the beautification program.

There will be a permanent headquarters session on the last morning of the convention with Mrs. J. W. Fincher of Houston, state finance chairman and past state president presiding.

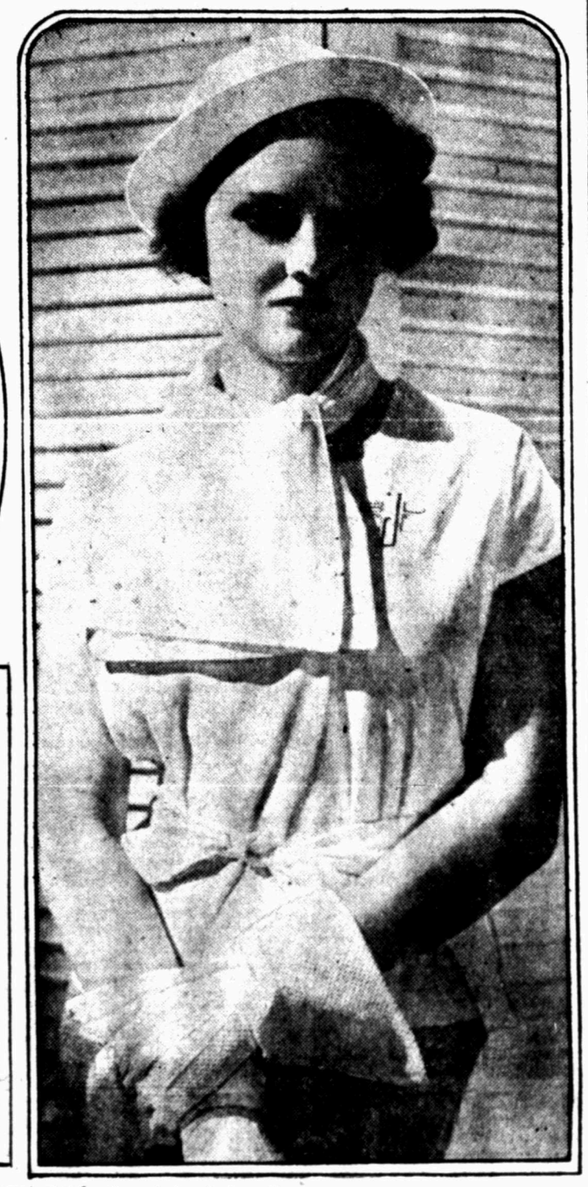

Homes and breakfast are to be furnished the delegates without cost by the Amarillo club women, it has been announced. Railroad and bus lines are offering special rates. Club reports will be limited to three minutes each.

Mrs. T. C. Hunkapillar of Pampa is chairman of the fine arts evening program. There will be a one-

Education-Grams

These education-grams are presented for the interest and benefit of Lubbock and South Plains clubwomen and are furnished by Mrs. J. A. Hill, wife of the president of West Texas State Teachers college, Canyon, who is also Seventh District Chairman of Education, Texas Federation of Women's clubs.

"Education is Texas' greatest business."—L. A. Woods, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Election time is drawing near and economy will again be the favorite slogan. We must watch our schools.

Miss Jessie Gray, president of the National Education Association, recommends that voters "take steps to commit to a reasonable educational program every citizen who seeks public office."

Delinquencies in taxes for schools run as high as $100,000,000.00 in a single state. How much tax delinquency in any state is absolutely necessary?

"Strong resistance must be made in local communities to the efforts of the enemies of education to mask false economies under the guise of tax reduction."—Miss Jessie Gray.

"The depression hit our schools later than it did business. It will linger longer with schools than with business and trade."—Dr. Zook, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

"In this critical year when school expenses are rightly under close scrutiny by anxious tax-payers, every department of the school system must show good reason for its continued claim to public support."—Mary Sawyer, dean of girls, Massachusetts.

A President's Wife Speaks Out

Mrs. Roosevelt's Column

Eleanor Roosevelt Tells Of An Experiment In Prisons

ONE OF the judges in a middle western city recently visited a nearby state penal institution and gave his impressions to the newspapers. Evidently he had visited a modern institution where an attempt was being made to carry out present day ideas of penology for he said that the beds, the cells and the food were as good as at most boarding schools throughout the country, that the men were not cut off from the outside world, could listen to the radio, saw movies or an entertainment three times a week and he heard cheers from the baseball field where the prison team was triumphing over a neighboring college nine. His reaction was that the whole idea was wrong, that men must be punished by being shut off from the outside world and that they must live in discomfort.

MRS. F.D. ROOSEVELT

He gave the impression that he did not even object to dirt and disease and he spoke with some asperity of the doctor's office and the dentist's clinic, and said that the men who fought with him in the war had no such comforts as these. Evidently he was accustomed to sentencing men for punishment alone and in his many years on the bench he had forgotten that these men eventually had to return to some community and that every day they spent in prison cost other well behaved citizens money for their support.

It has been fairly well proven in England that long sentences, if a man is ever to come out, are of very little value. I saw a boy in prison the other day who was about twenty and his sentence would make him well over fifty when he came out through the prison gates, no matter how much time off he earned by good behavior. He was a serious offender against society but I could not help wondering whether it would not be better to say he could never return to society than to say that he could reenter it at the age of fifty-five or sixty. Clearly, the chances of his not committing a second offence were very slight after so many years away from the world.

In one of our states there is a prison without walls and this is one new idea which I think might work out. Men under short sentences—those who are soon to finish out their terms—are sent to this prison where there is a kind of preparation for reentering the world of freedom. It would be easy for them to escape so there is really no glory attached to such a feeling and therefore, since it was built only a little over a year ago only eight men have walked away and two of them came back of their own volition. The cells are not locked, there is a program of vocational work correlated with some academic teaching, the food is good and a large farm affords plenty of outdoor air and exercise. And while we do not know as yet whether this disassociation will cut down the number of people who return to prison after the first term, it seems reasonable to believe that, with a good system of parole, this should materially decrease the number of second and third term offenders.

A short time ago, largely because of the great number of prohibition offences, many of our federal prisons were quite overcrowded. This led to the establishment of some federal camps to which short term offenders and men shortly to regain their freedom were sent just as they are sent to the modern type of prisons of which I wrote in a previous article. In my quest for first hand knowledge I visited some of these camps. One of them had men under thirty, was clean, decent, and being established in an abandoned army camp, the buildings looked somewhat drab and forbidding. It was, however, possible to live cleanly and neatly. The food was adequate. I do not think that anyone would have longed to spend the rest of his days there, but neither do I think that anyone would have been harmed by his stay.

In the federal camp they conducted what was known as a salvaging industry—a man in charge collected everything he could find in the army and navy camps or in any neighboring place which had been rejected for further use. Old iron beds, old automobiles, old plumbing, old blankets and gar-

Challis, Taffetas Are Popular This Year In Fashions

BY MARIAN YOUNG
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, March 24—Spring blouses borrow from the past, making use of the very fabrics that Colonial ladies wore when they waited for their heroes to return from Valley Forge.

Taffeta has rustled into blouses as well as dress fashions and for crisp smartness, it can't be beat. Gay plaid taffetas in such interesting color combinations as red, green and white; blue, yellow and beige or gray, green and orange—what verve and dash they give a suit! And, when you take off the coat to sit down to lunch, how stunning you'll look!

By the way, always keep that not-so-small point in mind when you go about the pleasant task of buying a blouse. Not only should it be flattering under the suit coat but daringly smart and becoming when the coat is removed and has to stand on its own. Don't be like the girl who bought a too-short-in-the-back blouse and then didn't dare to take off her coat, whatever the temperature.

Challis is another old-fashioned fabric that has taken the blouse mode by storm. Of course, it's the same material that your great-great-grandmother usedwhen she made herself a kerchief and gown—and it's as lovely now as it was then. Take a white challis shirtwaist, printed with diminutive pink rosebuds or tiny blue cornflowers—well, you'd better take it before some chic young woman reaches over your shoulder and grabs it first.

And pique — now there's a material that lends itself to the tailored as well as the feminine mode. You wear it made up into suave shirts with buttons up the front and

From The Woman's Angle

BY BLANCHE BEAN WILSON
Avalanche-Journal Woman's Editor

RECIPES are continuing to come in as a result of that request from Miss Buen Perry of Shallowater. Now will she write in and let us know if these are the recipes she wanted—particularly that egg pie—since there has been such a variety.

From Mrs. Jack Jenkins of Levelland there comes another recipe for an egg pie. This recipe makes two large pies or three small ones and is as follows: Six eggs, one and one-half cups of sugar, two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of flour, two cups of milk and one teaspoon of vanilla. Mix the flour with the sugar. Beat thoroughly with the eggs. Add other ingredients. Bake in uncooked rich crust until firm and nicely browned.

FROM SHALLOWATER

ALL three recipes requested were sent in by Mrs. Winnie Belle Parell Hard of Shallowater, who has used the formulas for a number of years and found them satisfactory. They do sound good. Here they are:

For molasses pie use four egg yolks, well beaten, one cup of sugar, one cup of sorghum syrup, two cups of creamy milk; one teaspoon of ginger, allspice and nutmeg. Stir all of these ingredients together and this mixture will make two pies. If you care for meringue, she adds, use the four egg whites, using one tablespoon of sugar to each egg white.

The molasses cookies are made of two eggs, well beaten, one cup of sugar, one cup of syrup, one cup of shortening (lard or butter), one tablespoon of ginger, one level teaspoon of soda dissolved in one-half cup of boiling water. Beat ingredients together and work flour into this mixture until you have a stiff dough, then roll thin and bake in well greased tins.

Her egg pie is made as follows: Four eggs, well beaten, one cup of sugar, two cups of creamy milk. Beat together and add one teaspoon of your favorite extract.

MORE EGG PIES

ANOTHER egg pie recipe has been received from a reader who requests that her name be withheld. This writer hasn't eaten any of her cooking but she has good reason to believe that she is an excellent cook. Here is her method:

Line a deep tin pie pan with plain or rich paste. Beat four eggs slightly, add one-half cup of sugar, one-eighth teaspoon of salt, one-eighth teaspoon of nutmeg and two tablespoons of cornstarch. Pour over slowly two cups of scalded milk stirring constantly. Bake in a hot oven at first to set the crust or rim then reduce heat as this is a combination of eggs and milk and should be finished in a slow oven.

MOLASSES COOKIES

AND here is a simpler recipe for molasses cookies coming from Mrs. G. V. Pardue. One-half cup of butter, one-half cup of sugar, one-half cup of molasses, one-half cup of coffee infusion, four cups of flour, one teaspoon of soda, three-fourths teaspoon of salt (scant), one-half teaspoon ginger and one teaspoon of cinnamon.

Cream butter, add sugar gradually and continue beating until mixture looks curdled. Mix molasses and coffee and add alternately with dry ingredients, mixed and sifted twice, to first mixture. Roll out and bake in a moderate oven.

By now I am inspired to try some molasses cookies, a molasses and a custard pie and baking isn't one of the things at which I have been a howling success. Anyway, we want to know if these have answered the question that came early last week.

ANOTHER PIE

ANOTHER molasses pie recipe has been received from Mrs. F. D. Blake, 1320 Seventeenth street. Hers is made as follows: Three whole eggs, well beaten, one-half cup sugar, three tablespoons butter, one cup syrup, one teaspoon vanilla, a pinch of salt.

Mix the ingredients well. Bake the crust enough to set then pour the mixture in and bake for 40 minutes in a slow oven. Nuts may be added.

Marian Martin Pattern

BUTTON, BUTTON, SMART FROCKS WEAR BUTTONS
PATTERNS 9949 AND 9916

Favorites!—because they're new in line and detail, flattering to their wearers, and as cool, crisp and stunning as can be for any number of daytime affairs. Equally important are the "little things," such as trig buttons and a dash of contrasting color, without which no frock can be a 1934 Summer success!

The becoming raglan shoulder line that fashion is stressing so much this season is adopted by both models sketched here. Pattern 9949 has its sleeves full just above the elbow and pattern 9916 has the short perked out cape effect. We leave it to you whether you prefer a high close-to-the-throat collar, or a crushed scarf to tie engagingly at the back; the clever pointed skirt seaming that continues on up into the bodice or smart slender panels.

The model on the left is best in a printed silk or cotton; the one on the right in linen, pique, shantung, or novelty cottons in monotone or print. There is no in-between about the tones you should wear—choose pale, chalky pastels, or go to the other extreme with striking, dashing colors.

Pattern 9949 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4 yards 39 inch fabric and 5-8 yard contrasting.

Pattern 9916 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 2 7-8 yards 39 inch fabric and 1 1-8 yards 4 1-2 inch ribbon.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Order your copy of the new Marian Martin spring pattern book—a practical Spring sewing guide, offering stunning models for all occasions for grown-ups, juniors and youngsters, and for the woman who needs slenderizing lines. Price of new book, fifteen cents, book and pattern together, twenty-five cents.

ments—in fact anything that had been thrown away as useless—all were stored away in sheds. These things were carefully sorted and made over into the things they originally had been or made into something else which might be useful in one way or another. I can still see an old man polishing a little brass buckle on a bridle which had been mended—the leather had been patched and stitched and the bridle was as good as new. The thought kept running through my mind, "men to be salvaged, salvaging material things." It seemed a peculiarly appropriate industry.

New Blouses

severe necklines with feminine touches. Newest are the pique sets, consisting of hats, gloves, blouses and Ascot scarfs. These are grand for spectator sports, particularly when it's warm enough to go without a coat.

Printed blouses are smart again this season. Try a red and white print with a navy or gray suit or a blue, yellow and white print with a black ensemble. Look for a printed blouse to match the lining of your suit jacket. Grand idea.

For dressier suits, afternoon ensembles and the like, there are silk crepe blouses, so beautiful that they make you wish for cool suit weather all summer. Notice the pleated sleeves, interesting jabots and softly draped necklines. In this category you will find little numbers that are as feminine as Mary Pickford's curls and as becoming to you as those golden locks are to her.

In contrast, you'll see many sweaters to wear with sports suits. Most of them are pastel-colored, pale blue, pink, yellow and seagreen, and here you have a choice between sweaters or twin sets. Either is good this spring.

Bright Accessories Add Blithe Note To Spring Suits; Even A Dull Frock Can Blossom; Straw Set Is Unique

Straw sets the stamp of chic on the accessories worn with this black crepe frock. The pouch bag, the cuffs on the black velvet gloves and the spring hat are of soft, yellow Italian straw. The hat, finished with a black velvet band and a nosegay of bright red flowers, is an adaptation of the child's beret and is worn pulled back from the forehead instead of pulled over it. Accessories designed by Suzanne Talbot.

BY BARBARA BEAUFORT
(Associated Press Fashion Editor)

PARIS, March 24 (AP)—The accessories which go with this spring's clothes are a saga of chic in themselves. They sing a song of smartness which can "make" even a dull frock.

"Glad hand" gloves, crisp cravats and smart bags add a festive air to the costumes which designers have decreed as the last word in smartness for 1934. Such accessories promise to be especially important this spring, since many of the new clothes appear in such shades as navy blue, beige, gray, brown and black.

Straw-Cuff Gloves

Gloves, though less conspicuous than last year, hold one of the spotlights in the accessory scene. Suzanne Talbot takes a black velvet pair and cuffs them with soft, yellow, Italian straw to match the straw bag and beret worn with a black frock.

Black and white striped linen gloves to accompany a Breton sailor and cravat of the same stripe, gay plaid taffeta gloves to match a wide chin bow, white pique gloves cuffed in pique petals to accompany a white petal hat are ready to add life and chic to the simplest black or navy blue frock.

Cravats, rather than soft scarfs, are the favorite throat [illegible]. Lacy white cravats go with black wool suits; black, white and red, checked, necktie silk cravats appear on black alpaca frocks; pastel tinted, feather-tipped cravats of brown crinkled silk are seen on an ensemble of the same material.

Most of these cravats are about six inches wide. They are worn flipped over once, close to the throat, in a manner reminiscent of the Ascot tie, or are spread out in a fan on the chest.

Cravats Go Bright

Suede cravats in bright colors are another accessory novelty. A bright, grass green one, accompanied by a suede hat of the same color, goes with a black and gray tweed suit, and a burnt orange one livens a brown street coat.

Bags to match a novelty hat and cravat are favored by the greatest dressmakers. Straw, plaid taffeta and plain white or striped linen make a number of the smartest designs. For the women of more conservative taste there are many designs in polished leather in sober shades to match the costume. This year's bag is generally a good sized pouch rather than a flat envelope.

Leaf green and daffodil yellow are favorite color accents for brown costumes. White is generally used on black, though forget-me-not blue and sunlight yellow are also smart. Beige is often combined with brown lightened by burnt orange, white navy blue goes out with touches of lacquer red, pink or dead white.

Get Set For Another Real Horror Movie; Karloff, Lugosi Both In It

BY DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, Mar. 24.—There seems to be no limit to these horror pictures. "Dracula," with Bela Lugosi, started things. Then came Boris Karloff in "Frankenstein." And now we are to have "The Black Cat," in which both Lugosi and Karloff will be seen. If it is a "chiller" you want, this will top anything else that ever has been made, according to Universal executives.

Costly Advice

IF Jimmy Cruze doesn't stop giving girls advice on how to dress, he is going to find himself practically devoid of shirts. Evelyn Venable appeared at Jimmy's house the other night wearing slacks and a sweater. Cruze told her that she really should wear his particular type sport shirts with the slacks. Evelyn tried one on—and liked it so well that she wore it home.

Marie Is Growling

MARIE Dressler is growling—which is very unusual for Marie. But she is in earnest now, because her name has been included in a group of 'foreign stars' under investigation by one of those numerous Senate committees.

MARIE DRESSLER

"I have been in the United States ever since I came here from Canada 50 years ago," Miss Dressler declares. "Thirty-five years ago I married an American, George Hoppert, at Elizabeth, N. J. My marriage made me an American citizen and I have been one ever since.

"I have given my time, my energy, my loyalty, my health, and myself to the United States. I'm glad of it and hope I can do a lot more.

"But if there are more references to me as a foreigner, I'm going down to Washington and tell those fellows a thing or two."

Guarding Mae West

THERE are two men in this town to whom Mae West doesn't have to speak her famous line, "Come up 'n see me some time." They are the guards assigned by the district attorney's office to protect the actress from threatened attacks.

MAE WEST

And they take their work so seriously that they even followed Mae into the studio wardrobe department the other day, to watch her try on new dresses. Many fellows wouldn't have to be paid for that!

Fogging The Movies

WHEN you see Ronald Colman's new film, you'll swear that in one sequence he is immersed in a genuine London fog. However the scenes were shot right on a studio stage. The fog was created by piping steam into buckets of glycerin.

RONALD COLMAN

The steam absorbed some of the glycerin as it rose through the thick liquid and the somewhat oily moisture would remain in the air for several minutes—plenty of time in which to shoot a scene. Fresh "fog" had to be created before each scene, however.

Underground Movies

HERE'S one for the book. In the mansion which Marvyn LeRoy and his bride, Doris Warner, will occupy upon their return from their round-the-world honeymoon, will be an underground projection room for the showing of pictures.

LeRoy wanted a projection room so that he could see pictures at home, but he didn't want to cut in on the landscaping. So he is having it built underground.

There are approximately 30 companies manufacturing tires in the United States.

The plot concerns a ne'er-do-well lawyer and a girl filing clerk who gets all of the facts of life from her philandering boss. An hilarious breach of promise trial provides the climax.

LINDSEY— Thursday: "Coming Out Party" (Fox). Frances Dee, Gene Raymond, Alison Skipworth, Nigel Bruce and Harry Green.

A debutante who almost is forced to marry a man she does not love and a struggling young violinist are the principal characters in this picture, which plays a searching light on the debutante racket and offers the lowdown on high life.

BROADWAY—Thursday, Friday and Saturday: "Song of Songs" (Paramount). Marlene Dietrich, Brian Aherne, Lionel Atwill, Alison Skipworth, Hardie Albright and Helen Freeman.

Improved Farm Conditions Of South Plains Reflected In Implement Sales

Tractors Are Being Bought Extensively

Various Dealers In Lubbock Report Good Increase In Number Of Sales; Seek To Lower Production Costs

By J. SAM LEWIS
Avalanche-Journal Staff Writer

IMPROVED agricultural conditions over the South Plains may be gauged by the great increase in sales of farm machinery throughout this territory as reported by Lubbock implement houses. Especially since the first of the year has the business grown to good proportions.

Best business for two or three years or more is the report of dealers who say sales indicate better conditions than have prevailed since 1929 and 1930.

Tractor Sales Heavier

While the greatest increase has been in the sale of tractors to farmers of this section, apparently the sale of horse drawn equipment has not decreased in proportion. Some farmers who have always kept to horses and mules are now turning to tractors. Many are using a tractor for the first time, while a number who gave up the tractor a few years ago, are returning to its use.

Dealers report an increase in the use of rubber tired tractor equipment. Farmers state that with that type of tractor, they can do much more work at less cost and can get in and use a tractor in an emergency when horse drawn machinery cannot get into the field.

75 Per Cent Better

J. H. Hackfield, local J. I. Case dealer, says his sales are "75 per cent above the same period last year," and greatly exceed any year since 1929. "Since December we have placed 39 tractor units, locally," he went on. "Six of these were rebuilt machines and the remainder were new outfits. Many of them included complete row-crop equipment."

The cotton reduction program has greatly accelerated the sale of farm machinery, Mr. Hackfield believes. The trend is toward better farm equipment in this section, with lower production costs. There is a better spirit among farmers than for several years.

106 Listers Sold

Mr. Hackfield reports 106 listers sold since December 1. A majority of the tractor buyers are using that machine for the first time, he said.

The Sherrod Brothers Hardware company, who have handled the Massey-Harris farm implement line for years, report sales better than for a number of years. "Our sales this spring are 100 per cent above last year," a member of the firm stated. While tractors are handled, the concern sells an extensive line of two-row listers and cultivators and reports better prospects than in years.

Row Crop Equipment Sold

Hodges Brothers, who handle the Rock Island line of farm machinery, likewise report increased business. Listers and cultivators and other farm equipment is being sold rapidly, with the demand increasing.

J. O. Ford, local John Deere dealer, has sold more horse drawn equipment than for two or three years or more. His business, he said, "is double what it has been for the past three or four years."

A change is being made in the type of machines manufactured by the John Deere people, with the result that the number of tractors sold here recently has been small, Mr. Ford said. However, orders for new machines indicate better business than last year. The new machines are begining to come in. "There is more pep in the machinery business now than for several years," he added. "We are expecting better conditions."

26 New Tractors Sold

E. K. Hufstedler of E. K. Hufstedler and sons, handling Oliver implement lines, reports this season 26 new tractors sold and 16 used tractors. "In the past two or three months we have increased our tractor business 400 to 500 per cent over a year ago," he added. "The amount of horse drawn equipment sold is about half that of last year. We have sold about four cars where we sold seven or eight a year ago."

Oscar Nislar of the Lubbock Implement company, says conditions are "getting better" and that his prospects are better now than at this season of the year for many years. Most of the sales of farm machinery have been for tractor units instead of horse drawn equipment. Mr. Nislar has been the International Harvester dealer here for years.

Conditions Better Now

"We are doing far more business here than for years," he added. "Conditions are better now. Cotton farmers are much interested in new and better machinery and I look for better crops and better harvesting methods."

The Plains Tractor company has been in business since last July, handling the Allis-Chalmers line. Sale of tractors "has picked up" in recent months for tractors, with the sale pretty well divided between the light and the heavy type.

Sales have been growing better month by month since the opening, it was said. The company has branch agents in several South Plains towns including O'Donnell, Lamesa, Brownfield and Levelland. In these places there has been an increase along all lines handled by the company.

Smith and Leonard, who occupy the former J. O. Ford location at 1308 South H, is another new concern handling farm implements. They handle the Minneapolis-Moline line and report tractor sales so far have been exceptionally good. The complete line is now being handled, a stock of implements having been received the past week.

South Plains Counties Are To Be In Modified Regulations

(By Staff Correspondent)

PLAINVIEW, March 24.—A number of South Plains counties in the drouth area last year, will be eligible for inclusion in areas that will have modified regulations for farm production loans, J. Edwin Brown, state supervisor of the emergency crop loan section of the farm credit administration, said.

"Delegations called on Congressman Marvin Jones and others in Washington, from the North Panhandle and secured modifications," he explained. "The Midland section also included in this.

"I feel sure that in those counties where a drouth prevailed last year, modification of the regulations can be secured. It would be advisable for those counties to see about this."

One modification is that of a change in the limit of a loan. This year loans are not to exceed $250, except where the administration increases the limit to permit farmers who need additional credit to secure more money.

With Breeders And Feeders

VIRTUALLY all milk fed spring lambs from this territory have been shipped to market. While some went to Fort Worth the majority were shipped to Kansas City. Approximately 10,000 head were raised in Hale and Lubbock counties this year, the largest in the history of the sheep industry in this section.

Abernathy shippers received good prices for their milk fed lambs. N. C. Hix, banker, reported the shipment of 1,400 or more sent from there March 9, brought around 10 cents in Kansas City with a car bringing a top of 11 cents a pound. Shippers of the following week received equally as good prices. Kansas City buyers complimented the shippers on the high quality of the lambs sold there.

Fred Snyder is reported to have sold a recent shipment of cattle from his pens west of here for seven cents a pound in Chicago. He made a second shipment of cattle but the price was not announced. The Snyder cattle are all creep fed before going into the feed lots and are finished on the South Plains instead of northern feed lots. Operations are at Levelland and Whiteface.

Olan Ridings, Lockney, who fed out 45 head of cattle sold them recently to buyers there, he reports. He stated that there were a number of small bunches of cattle fed out in western Floyd county this year.

Meade F. Griffin, district attorney at Plainview, fed out a car of cattle on his farm in Castro county this winter.

Earl Murchison, Spur shipper, sold four 358 pound calves at Fort Worth last week for $3.75 per hundred pounds and a 325-pound calf for $3.50.

Broome Cattle company, Roswell, N. M., recently bought two car loads of bulls here for shipment to New Mexico. Some of the animals came from the registered herds of Len McClellan and some from other breeders. Scarcity of high grade bulls for herds is reported by some breeders.

R. C. Bennett of Lockney sold 93 steers and 73 heifers at Kansas City Monday. The steers, averaging 650 pounds, brought $5 per hundred and the heifers, averaging 610 pounds, brought $3.75.

Otis Turner, Hart, sold 36 heifers at Fort Worth Monday that brought $4.75. The animals averaged 713 pounds.

Two car load of bulls were shipped from Lubbock Monday for Roswell, N. M. The animals came from several sections of the South Plains and were purchased as herd bulls for New Mexico cattlemen. Len McClellan, well known breeder, sold some as did several other breeders over the territory.

H. W. Stanton early last week sold five cars of cattle for Illinois parties. Four cars of stockers, sold to L. J. Larry sent to Rossville, Ill., and a car of stockers went to J. C. Bragg at Westridge, Ill.

• • •

J. C. Stanford shipped a car of feeder steers to Grote, Colo.

Spur Carrying On Experiment

One Hundred Head Of Cattle Have Been Fed For Past Year And Experiment Will Close On May 4

By Staff Correspondent

SPUR, March 24.—The most extensive and comprehensive cattle feeding experiment in Texas, if not in the entire Southwest, is under way at the Texas Experiment Station service sub-station here under the direction of R. E. Dickson, veteran feeder and superintendent of the station. One hundred head of high grade Hereford cattle have been on test for more than a year and the experiment is to close at a feeder's day tentatively scheduled for May 4.

With the cattle actually on feed slightly over 60 days, having gone into the pens January 10, this year, the animals now are in better condition than most cattle are at the end of a 120 to 150 day feeding. No weights have been announced by Mr. Dickson, and no net gains have been made known, but the cattle appear to be in the 1,050 to 1,100 pound class. All are big and fat, with firm flesh and sides bulging with fat.

Started March 6, 1933

"Before going on feed, these cattle had been carried on rough feed for ten months, using up a huge surplus of unmarketable feed and sudan and alfalfa pasture," Mr. Dickson said. "They were started on pasture March 6, 1933, and were taken off January 10, this year.

"In that time the steers gained in weight from an average of 413 pounds to 906 pounds, an average daily gain of 1.59 pounds. This was at a cost of $2.93 per 100 pounds of gain. We charged liberally for the unmarketable feed and for the pasture.

Time Must Be Reduced

"Our experiment has shown that we have got to learn to feed intelligently the unmarketable feed, and to reduce the time required to finish cattle in our feed lots with high priced grain. These cattle will be finished in 112 days and they are larger and finer than many groups fed for 180 days."

The 100 steers have been divided into ten pens of ten animals each. Pigs are following each pen, the porkers eating the refuse and receiving no other feed.

Average Gain 3 Pounds

Average gain for steers and pigs is around three pounds per day, with the cattle making a little over two pounds gain and the pigs slightly under one pound.

Studies of the feeding experiments is on the preparation of feeds for use, the use of silage from trench silos and a very large, comprehensive study of the use of cottonseed meal and cotton seed in fattening rations.

Pens are open to inspection by the public. Data on the feeding cost, gains, etc., is being worked up and will be available for distribution at the close of the experiment to interested farmers.

Mr. Dickson is giving the operations his personal supervision. He is at the pens during feeding in the morning and the afternoon and is also there frequently during the day.

The stripe, or lateral line running along the body of a fish, is a sense organ, recording changes in pressure.

There's No Escape

SAMUEL INSULL seems to have taken on most of the aspects of a will-o'-the-wisp. On this side of the Atlantic, black headlines tell the latest news of his wanderings; on the other side he flits about the borders homeless and restless, a fugitive harried by some compulsion whose roots go deeply into subsoil of the land that he has disowned.

Of all the strange figures of these tempestuous years, this self-exiled utilities juggler surely is one of the strangest.

He climbed high and he fell a long way; and although retribution seems quite unable to overtake him, no one need imagine that his tortuous flight is enabling him to escape anything.

CONSIDER what he had a few years ago. He was rich beyond dreams and powerful beyond any man's need. He was an industrialist, a financier, a patron of the arts.

If an ambitious broker's clerk had dreamed a wildly extravagant dream of worldly greatness, it would not have come up to the reality which was Samuel Insull's.

Everything that cleverness and acquisitiveness and ruthless energy could get for a man, in a land where those qualities were allowed to function unchecked, he had won.

All this he had, and all of it has dissolved like the mists of yesterday morning. His principality has shrunk to a rusty Greek freight steamer; his dominion extends to her bridge, but no farther.

THE ship wallows across the eastern seas bound for Abyssinia, or for Persia, or perhaps for Somaliland—it does not matter, for Insull really is hunting a port not to be found on any chart, a place of refuge that this life with its imperfections, never will open to him again.

It makes, indeed, very little difference whether the man ever actually is collared and brought back to America. He carries his own punishment with him; an unquiet shade that must stand eternally at his elbow and remind him of the kingdom that he lost, the reputation that he destroyed.

How can a man run away from a thing like that? Insull cannot; no man can. He can dodge from one out-of-the-way seaport to another to the end of time. It does not matter. Retribution caught up with him a long time ago.

JAPAN'S AIR LOSSES

The United States has been pretty badly disturbed by casualties in its army air force of late. It might be worth noticing that Japan's air force, which has not had to carry any mail bags, has been having an even more difficult time.

During the past month 17 Japanese army and navy flyers have been killed in airplane crashes. The tragedies are the result of vigorous training maneuvers which have been carried out this winter. Japan is bending every effort to get ready for trouble. Evidently she has been putting her airmen through a course of sprouts a little bit too stiff.

Whatever the airmail venture may have shown about defects in American army planes or personnel, it is apparent that Japan's flying corps is in even worse shape. The American air force at least is able to carry on its regular war-training maneuvers without wholesale tragedies.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

Formerly a good neighbor was a quiet and peacable fellow who minded his own business, and did not quarrel with the folks around him.

But we demand something more than that now. The habit most valued now in a neighbor, is the disposition to keep a good looking home place. If his house and grounds are orderly and attractive, his place adds to the value of all those about him. If his place is the reverse, it detracts from the value of all its surroundings.

Naturally people are very anxious for neighbors who maintain a place that is a credit to the neighborhood.

If all women who have "nothing to wear" should join the nudists, the cult would take on huge proportions.

Parents who once yearned to seem "refined" now have children who are content to seem sophisticated.

THE ROAD OF GENTLENESS

"Here is your King coming to you, Gentle and riding on an ass." —Matthew 21:5.

It was on this day that Jesus thus rode toward the cross. On this "Palm Sunday morning Jesus taught the world that there is no road to any kind of lasting power save good will which will suffer to the end, and a meekness which forgets itself in its passion for others. Only gentleness, if it be wise and strong, can win and hold the hearts of men."—Atkins.

The News Behind The News

WASHINGTON
By George Durno

CONGRESSIONAL leaders are more and more convinced that Mr. Roosevelt will sidestep the war debt issue during this session. They've concluded his tariff message was the last important legislative request to be made before adjournment.

The president tells newspaper men at each press conference when he's going to send congress a message on any subject. His stock joke is that anyway it's that much closer to materialization than it was at the last press conference.

On Capitol Hill they agree he'll probably communicate with them on debts in the closing days of the session. But they look for only a factual report rather than a formal proposal for revising and collecting Europe's obligations.

For one thing all our presidents since the war have found the debt question a stick of dynamite when they had to tote it to congress for approval of some move in connection therewith.

Further, as matters now stand, Mr. Roosevelt is going to have congress on his hands longer than he wants. If he tossed the debt problem into the arena the boys would stay here that much longer.

He has plans of his own for this summer which don't inclule sitting in Washington and watching congress wrangle.

It is possible the President has a scheme up his sleeve to be produced after the legislators leave town. Still any agreement he might reach with our reluctant debtors would have to be ratified by Congress before it was worth the paper it was written on.

FOILED: Though the story never has been printed Mr. Roosevelt once upon a time had a grand idea for scotching this knotty problem.

You may remember that right after being elected he was called into conference by Mr. Hoover. The former president also had a plan but he knew only a united front by himself and Mr. Roosevelt would have any effect on congress or the people. Mr. Roosevelt refused any part in the Hoover formula on the ground that his hands were tied until he was inaugurated.

What Mr. Roosevelt planned was to issue a dramatic invitation on March 4—probably while his inaugural parade was going down Pennsylvania Avenue—asking the foreign premiers to come here for a conference that would clear up the debt headache for all time.

It's history now that inauguration day found the banks busting in his face all over the country. The invitation to our foreign brethern was never sent. The President was too busy hustling Congress into special session to salvage the sinking financial ship.

When he did get around to calling in Europe's head men the debt iron had cooled in one of his hands and the London Economic conference was a hot potato in the other.

REBOUND: Republican hopes are on the rebound over the way the tariff fight is shaping up.

A Republican scout has returned to camp with a report that 19 Democratic senators will bolt the president on his wanted power to make his own reciprocal tariff agreement.

Should this come off the administration would be licked. The Democratic majority in the upper house is only 24 and the only so-called Republican votes Mr. Roosevelt can count on are said to be those of Norris, LaFollette and Cutting.

Democratic leaders deny the accuracy of this enemy poll but they're none too happy over prospects. They know that even if they win they're going to be bruised in the battle.

All the top men on the majority side in both houses advised the President against making his tariff request at this session. They said it was merely manufacturing the only issue the Republicans could lay hands on for the coming campaign.

He sent it anyway—presumably in deference to Secretary of State Hull whose official life hasn't been altogether roseate. . . Now the Democrats are forced to take a hitch in their belts and put on the boldest front they can.

NEW YORK
By James McMullin

NEW YORK insiders see the strike threat in the automobile industry as set to be temporarily settled with a gesture. The motor magnates are prepared to treat with any employee organization—whether a company union or not—but not with the Federation of Labor as such. Then the stunt will be to try to keep Federation organizers out of the plants. They will cloud the closed shop issue with a flurry of higher wages.

New Yorkers think labor is likely to accept the compromise as a step in the direction it wants to go, relaxing some of its demands on the theory that it would be unpopular to press for a showdown now. But the word "temporary" is carefully stressed in local discussions. The settlement will be phrased in a way which appears to give labor the victory and labor is due then to sit tight for a while and gather strength for a fresh assault.

The motor industry is putting on a vigorous sales argument behind the scenes with government and labor representatives. The main point is that they'll be forced to cut production unless strike talk is soft-pedalled on the ground that public uncertainty will otherwise bring a relapse in demand.

STOCK EXCHANGE: The stock exchange regulars are planning to use a time-honored device to quiet insurrection on the eve of election. It consists of naming a couple of "new blood" candidates for the governing committee and letting it go at that. These tactics have worked before and may do so again—especially if the rebels can't get down to cases on candidates of their own. Of course two members on the governing committee wouldn't have much influence on Exchange policies.

A middle ground faction of the Exchange membership would like to nominate Frank Altschul of Lazard Freres to succeed Whitney as a compromise candidate. Altschul already stands high among the powers of the Exchange and would not represent a break with the old guard. At the same time he would be a change.

But the move isn't likely to carry through. Altschul has a number of enemies among the Exchange membership himself and critics insist he is too intolerant of outside opinion to be a success from the public relations angle.

TELEPHONE: Well posted local sources agree that Walter Gifford's vehement opposition to the communications bill will boomerang on him. American Telephone has so far been remarkably free from the regulation that has given other utilities so many headaches but it looks as if those days are numbered.

New York understands that the proposed investigation of A. T. & T.'s labor policies may come off soon. Local interest focuses on the question—Will the stockholders rise in the management's defense?

TELEGRAPH: There are wheels within wheels in the telegraph and cable situation. The 51 banks and brokerage houses represented by G. M. P. Murphy think Western Union played dirty pool in inferring they were just a bunch of speculators and are set to retaliate any way they can. They note that J. C. Willever compared them to the 27,000 other cable users in New York but didn't compare the relative volume of business. Now the 51 are paving the way to transfer their business to Canada.

There's also a Canadian background to Postal Telegraph's wish to abrogate railroad contracts. Postal's contract with the Canadian railways has six months to run—Western Union's has 50 years. Abrogation would put Postal on even terms with its rival in bidding for new business.

THE NEW BOOKS

"The Menace Of Japan" By T. O'Conroy Reveals Japs Are Up To No Good And Plan To Capture Large Territories; Alexander Woollcott And Branch Cabell Have New Books This Week

"THE MENACE OF JAPAN," by T. O'Conroy: (Kinsey and Co.)

"THE Menace of Japan," by T. O'Conroy, is a cry of alarm which is almost too shrill to be truly effective.

Prof. O'Conroy has spent 15 years on the faculty of Keio University in Japan. His wife is Japanese; he says bluntly that he himself is "the greatest living authority in the world" on the Japanese people. And in this book he declares flatly that the Japanese are up to no good.

Only The First Step

The Manchurian adventure, he asserts, was only the first step in what the Japanese look upon as a march straight to world dominion. They plan, he says, to seize all China, to seize the Philippines and Hawaii, to take Australia from Great Britain, to subjugate Siam and the East Indies; and, if somebody doesn't do something about it, he believes that they are likely to go ahead and do it.

The trouble, as Prof. O'Conroy sees it, is that the Japanese are, to a man, convinced that they are a superior race. They not only believe in the divinity of their emperor, they believe that the humblest Japanese citizen shares in that divinity, and is set above the finest specimens other races can offer.

They "Know" It

Or rather, he adds, they don't believe this; they "know" it.

Any duplicity, any cruelty, any injustice that they may commit in the scramble for power therefore is justified. And the Japanese as a race are treacherous, cruel, and high-handed beyond belief, says Prof. O'Conroy.

That the author makes out a good case against Japanese policy is undeniable. His book, however, is a little too strident. He makes his case too damning. An indictment as sweeping as this one is bound to have flaws in it.

Good Collection

"WHILE ROME BURNS," by Alexander Woollcott: (Viking, N. Y.)

IN some ways it hardly seems worth while to review Alexander Wollcott's new book, "While Rome Burns." Mr. Woollcott, already having done such a thorough job of reviewing it himself, once over the air and once in the pages of "The New Yorker," anything anyone else could say would seem to be more or less superfluous.

Nevertheless, you may have missed this author's words of appreciation of his own book, so we may as well discuss it here for a time.

Pretty Entertaining

"While Rome Burns," then, is a collection of short pieces by this graceful and talented commentator. Most of them are pretty entertaining.

There is a collection of little horror stories, for instance, very neatly told. There are Mr. Woollcott's observations on Russia, airy and humerous.

There is his recital of the somewhat startled thoughts evoked in his mind by his young niece. There is a reprint of his priceless review of Owen Wister's book on Theodore Roosevelt.

Good For Reading

Witty, urbane, detached, civilized—these, are the proper adjectives to apply to this book. Its a handy thing to dip into after dinner while youre waiting for the people to come in for bridge; it's a nice book to put on the bedside table in the guest room.

If it gets a wee mite precious in spots, the fact remains that Mr. Woollcott is a very gifted teller of tales, and the book is, in the main, pretty good stuff.

Divers Odd Adventures

"SMIRT," by Branch Cabell: (McBride, Philadelphia.)

BRANCH CABELL'S new book, "Smirt," is a book that devoted admirers of this exceedingly talented writer will read with great delight. Other readers, however, may find it rather tough sledding.

Technically, it is a novel; a rovel of the dream world, in which the protagonist, one Smirt, a novelist—got up to bear an extraordinary resemblance to Mr. Cabell himself — goes wandering through the horn gate and has divers odd adventures.

Series Of Essays

Actually, however, it is a series of essays in Mr. Cabell's patented style; essays in which he once again expresses himself on life, literature, the place of urbanity in the arts and letters, and such aspects of life in the republic as he finds displeasing.

He restates his familiar creed — that what an author has to say is of little account, and that the manner in which he says it is all important. He gives vent to his impatience with interviewers, takes a fall out of the critics, and slyly jabs at the state of Virginia by asserting that the finest flowers of her civilization are Peggy Joyce, Bill Robinson, the colored tap dancer, and Charles Gilpin, the colored actor.

Lives Up To Tradition

For the rest, Smirt lives up to the Cabellian tradition by finding ample opportunity for amorous dalliance even in the world of dreams.

In the main (to repeat) the book seems to be aimed exclusively at those readers who dote on Mr. Cabell's lightest utterance. If you are one of that devoted band, you'll like it immensely. If you aren't, it may leave you pretty cold.

Interesting Yarn

"TOO MANY BOATS," by Charles L. Clifford: (Little, Brown, Boston.)

THE soldier who devotes his life to a military career, and then is deprived of the chance to take part in the biggest war of his generation, is apt to develop a severe case of nerves.

When you add isolation, tropical heat, and cantankerous women folk to this, you're likely to have a good deal of trouble.

It's this kind of situation that is described in "Too Many Boats," a novel by Charles L. Clifford.

Missed Too Many Boats

Mr. Clifford presents us with a cavalry outpost in the Philippines. The time is 1918; the officers present have, as the author says, missed too many boats back to the states.

The war is on and they want to fight in it, but they have to stay on the opposite side of the world.

So their nerves begin to get frayed. The life of the post grows strained and abnormal. Officers are irritable and mutually suspicious. Their wives, suffering equally under the strain, develop similar qualities.

Love Triangle Develops

Then, just to bring everything to a climax, a majors wife sets her cap for a young captain—and simultaneously there is a threatened mutiny of the troopers.

Out of all this, Mr. Clifford has made a very exciting book. He not only succeeds in making the morbid, nerve-racking atmosphere of this army post perfectly real and understandable; he also builds up a fine melodramatic narrative.

The result is a yarn which, while it may not win any Pulitzer prize, is interesting enough to keep you reading to the end, once you have started it.

Detective Stories

ONE of the more pleasant of the spring murder mysteries is "Mr Digweed and Mr. Lumb," by Eden Phillpotts (Macmillan).

Here we have two middle-aged hermits occupying adjacent houses in a little English seacoast town. One of them vanishes, leaving his meagre property to the other; mysterious threats on the survivors life then are heard. The local police investigate and get nowhere.

Luckily, one of the cops is in love with the daughter of the village organist, and the organist, something of a logician, gets interested, brings his brain to bear, and figures out the solution.

Harry Stephen Keeler can write the most complicated yarns known to mortal man, and his newest one, "The Mystery of the Fiddling Cracksmann" (Dutton), is right up to standard. It has to do with a safe-cracker who always plays a fiddle when he confronts an unopened safe, and such unlikely ingredients as a young Chinese who is hit by a hit-and-run motorist, and a threat of war between the United States and Japan, are mixed in somehow. It's very dizzy, but it does keep moving.

"Company Unions" Step Into Labor Picture Again After Being In Discard For Years; May Be Center Of Labor Trouble

BY BURTON KLINE
Special Correspondent

THE press has been mentioning of late an institution little known to the public until six months ago. The public will not hear the last of it for six months more. The institution referred to is the "company union." And since it may be the Sarajevo pistol to start the most serious industrial war we ever have had it may do to glance at this thing with the boresome name and the bombshell nature.

Whatever its status now the company union has an honorable history. Twenty-some years ago what labor now damns to its friends as a bane was hailed as a boon by every true friend of labor. Then as now the country suffered a pestilence of strikes—with this dramatic difference. Life now is a hell for millions of idle workers; it then was comparative Paradise for a people nearly fully employed. Yet the strikes of today are back-page piffle. Twenty-some years ago they were front-page war.

Public Footed The Bill

Workers who then were fired from factories turned round and fired the factories. Along with property, lives were destroyed. "Massacres" happened, so deep had become the suspicion between employer and employe, so hot their hatred. Nobody knows what money was lost by these ceaseless strikes, in wages to workers, profits to employers. Naturally the public footed the bills and took to hating them both.

It began to be clear that industry stopped unless this stopped. The question was how. Then suddenly somebody saw a light in the glare of burning buildings at Ludlow, Colorado, and Bayonne, New Jersey. The somebody was John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Three little letters of the alphabet, he learned, had started the war at Bayonne. The cost of living had risen and under its pressure the employes of Standard Oil asked a wage increase of 20 to 40 cents a day. As things then stood the request was justified, as the company later admitted. Drama stepped in ahead.

Neither Side Knew Other

The geographical distance between Bayonne and the company offices in lower Broadway can't be over 3 miles. The personal distance between Standard Oil and its Bayonne workers had reached the dimensions of stellar space. Neither side knew the other except to hate it.

Somehow, in leaping this gap, that wage request took on the three little dynamite letters that did the mischief, put in by somebody stupid, careless, or vicious. The modest request for a rise of 20 to 40 cents a day was read by the directors as a demand for 20 to 40 percent [illegible] day. They voted it down. The workers hated them worse than ever, and hell broke loose.

Distance had done it—the longest distance of all, the personal kind.

Each Ready To Fight

It was natural enough. Business had but recently organized. So had labor. Each was afraid of the other's size, mutually hostile, ready to fight at the drop of the hat. The younger Rockefeller saw this offishness creating wars in industries besides his own and thought out a way to bridge it—for any to copy who would.

The whole idea was to democratize industry, to bring the enemies together. To do this labor should elect from its ranks representatives to sit in councils with the management and have a real voice in running the works. Above everything else the two sets were to get acquainted.

MacKenzie King, later premier of Canada, had ideas of this sort and was drafted to put them in force in Standard Oil. When the director heard of the scheme they fainted to a man. This was communism. And in Standard Oil!

As the plan worked out the hitch was to get the workers to take a swipe at the ball. They were timid, shy. The works had been handed them on a platter and they couldn't believe it.

Understanding Reached

But one thing emerged from the effort to render industry a more sociable undertaking. It cut out the war. It turned the old foes into friends. It stopped the shooting at Ludlow, the burnings at Bayonne. And in stopping this thing it started another. Imitation.

In not very long one industry after another caught on to the mode of forestalling strikes. Westinghouse, Bethlehem Steel, Pennsy Railroad, and many other set up employe representation in running the works. Even this American business had been run by Mussolinis. A town meeting was now to rule it.

All told nearly 700 corporations laid hold of this simple means of getting themselves and their men together. The lion and the lamb had lain down at last. Then two things happened—the World War opened, and so did the eyes of organized labor.

Looked On As Elopement

Organized labor looked on the fraternization of employers and their workers as a kind of elopement. Workers who fell for the representation blandishments were marrying outside the clan. If they

John F. Turner Writes On Twenty-Five Years In Lubbock

Editor, The Avalanche-Journal:

For the past twenty-five years it has been my pleasure to live in Lubbock. They have been happy years, active years.

It has been my privilege and pleasure to witness the development of not only Lubbock as a city but I have also found delight in watching our farm development.

We people who have enjoyed life in the vast region are nearer one blood than you may find in any other portion of this nation. We might, with pardonable pride call ourselves pioneers.

Forward strides have been made easy because we have really been one family. We have gone forward in a solid body. And the work that has been accomplished has been for the good of all the people.

Co-operation has been the motivating force by which we have gone steadily forward into ever widening fields of activity.

Speaking for myself I frankly state that if I could not boost my town and surrounding country I would move to some other section.

For it is a fact as broad as life itself that if we expect to get much out of life we must put much or our best into life.

My coming to Lubbock was voluntary on my part. I was not sent for. Therefore it evolves on me to make good as a citizen if I hope to be a welcome guest.

To me Lubbock is the best place to live that one may hope to find anywhere within the confines of our great nation.

And though I have not traveled so extensively as some, at the same time I have found, by comparison with places with which I am acquainted that Lubbock leads the all in every way, every day.

Cities do not happen. They are the result of continuous labor on the part of people who build. And the place where you live is no better nor worse than you, yourself make it.

It is well, therefore, if someone comes slipping up to you with a tale of dire woe as to just what is happening along the lines of public affairs to look that bird over carefully and see just what he is worth to the community and just what he has added to the general welfare.

People who spend their time knocking what the other fellow is doing, as a rule has no other business, no other vocation.

Constructive criticism is always welcomed. But just old plain, everyday knocking is apt to indicate to advertise to the world that as far as you are concerned you are a failure and you are sore at life because you were not willing to put into it enough real, honest-to-goodness labor to make the wheels go round.

The chronic kicker is a public pest. He is mad at the world and always succeeds in making the world mad at him.

This is election year.

Up to the present time, Lubbock has enjoyed the services of the best men and women of this city in the management of its affairs. And Lubbock has gone steadily forward. The record is clean, outstanding.

It is clearly the duty of those who desire that these conditions continue to use care and caution in choosing new men to take the places of those who are retiring from the city's official family.

Good men have offered for these places, efficient, honest men.

Take a good look at the broom and the fellow who suggests that we clean out the city hall.

You will be more than apt to find that instead of a broom he is carrying a club. Don't be swept off your feet by the loud noise of the knocker.

Here's A Headache For Banks; Two Persons Can Write Identical Hands; Similarity Once Out Of 10,000 Times

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

DURHAM, N. C. March 24 (AP)—Although he says there are 85,700,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 variations possible in writing the figure "1", Robert Saudek announces discovery of the thing experts held impossible—identical hand-writings of two persons.

He has found this handwriting mostly among identical twins. Among 234 such pairs the identical chirographies occurred in five per cent. More remarkable, he discovered one case of identity in unrelated persons. He concludes that this unheard-of similiarity is possible once in about each 10,000 persons.

Saudek is a London psychologist and announces his studies, with pictures of the handwriting, in the international quarterly for psychodiagnostics, Character and Personality, published here at Duke university.

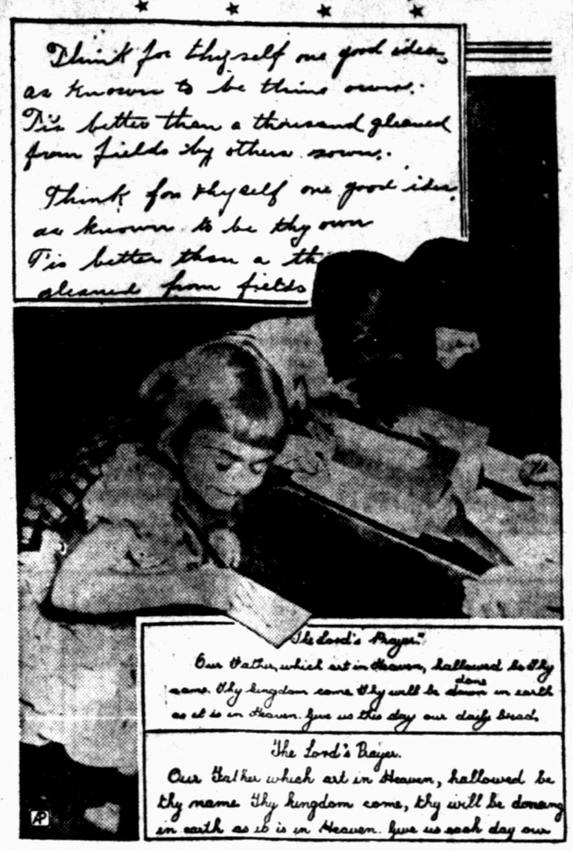

Made Same Errors

The unrelated pair are 11-year-old girls, inmates of the Royal hospital for the deaf in Edinburgh. They were unacquainted until they met at the school. The main difference in their writing, he says, is in size of the script. In writing the Lord's Prayer these two even made the same mistakes. Writing "thy will be done," both got the word "done" wrong and corrected it.

Of one of the examples from identical twins he states "it is out of the question that 10 years ago any expert would have admitted the possibility, even were it only theoretical, that various parts of this specimen could have been written by different persons; and it is quite as inconceivable that any court would have accepted the report of an expert who would claim that it had been written by two persons and not by only one."

The sample is 12 lines, the first six written by one girl, the last six by her sister.

Some of the identical hands he has found, Mr. Saudek says, "would not only mislead the laymen (among whom practically all bank clerks dealing with their clients' signatures must be counted), but also the expert."

A London psychologist has upset the long-accepted belief that no two persons write exactly alike. He found two English school girls, 11 years old and neither related nor close friends, whose penmanship he believes would defy experts. Each girl's written version of a passage from the Lord's prayer is reproduced above. They even made the same mistake. The message reproduced at the top was written by twins; one wrote the first four lines, her sister the last four.

Hollow Concrete Tile Just What He Wants, Farmer Says

SPUR, Mar. 24. (Special)—"That is what I have been wanting to learn," answered Joe Hale, farmer in the Prairie Chapel community in Dickens county when asked if he would make concrete hollow tile to subirrigate the garden and thus cooperate with his wife in being the farm food supply demonstrator for the Prairie Chapel home demonstration club.

"I would like to subirrigate at least half the garden this spring. The strawberries and berries should be subirrigated too. We have good gardens because we irrigate but I can see the advantage of subirrigation and am glad to make the tile for it."

kept up the clan itself would crumble.

Then for the first time you heard this complaint against "company unions"—and promptly forgot it. In the din of war the principle of representative management went by the board and with it the company union.

Now it is back. The Recovery act assigns to the two old foes (who ought to be cronies) the same right to organize—on the biggest scale yet. Industry is about that business—but busier still in blocking union organization. The old happy thought of representative management has come to mind, bringing harmony within the works—and breaking up the clan outside.

So the millennial plan that once made friends of manager and man is making them enemies now. The institution that stopped one war may start another. Mr. Green of the A. F. and L. says the clan, for self-preservation, will fight it out. Senator Wagner backs him with a bill that he warns his colleagues to accept, or look for "collapse."

This is the back-drop behind the drama centered about the company union. If you remember, these Towers have more than once noted that through all the Recovery moves two forces were threading toward each other—capital and labor. This looks like the clash. Mr. Green says labor is ready. Mr. McMullin, in The Whirligig, says business is keeping its powder dry. And yet—

In a world now chiefly engaged in flying to pieces, and when violence here at home never had a better excuse for being, the outstanding characteristic of the people of this nation has been their astounding patience and calm.

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 49

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Akut, with a low growl of excitement, came crashing through the underbrush. He paid no ateention to Meriem and Korak, but with hair bristling began strutting, stiff-legged, about the fallen ape. Something stirred in his little brain. Something which the sight and smell of this great bull had aroused. It awakened in the heart of Akut a longing for the companionship of his own kind. So Korak was not alone undergoing a change.

Of the three, Meriem alone underwent no change. Always she had loved Korak. He was her 'big brother'. She still loved him—as a sister. Very proud she was of him too. Never was there other jungle creature so strong, so brave or handsome as her Korak. Suddenly Akut gave a deeper growl—the one of warning. Korak looked quickly up from the glorious vision of Meriem's sweet face. Now his other faculties awoke. His ears, his nostrils were on the alert.

Something was coming! The Killer moved to Akut's side. The three stood, statue-like, gazing into the jungle's leafy tangle. Presently a great ape broke through the thicket. Seeing them he halted, sending a grunt back over his shoulder. A moment later came cautiously another ape, soon followed by others, both bulls and females with young, until two score hairy monsters stood glaring at the silent group of three. Akut was the first to speak.

He pointed at the body of the dead bull. "Korak, mighty fighter, has killed your king," he said. "There is none greater than Korak, son of Tarzan. Now, Korak is king. What bull is mightier than Korak?" It was a challenge! The apes chattered among themselves, taking counsel. At last a young bull in the prime of his strength stepped forward, bristling, growling, terrible. He was enormous. Even natives seldom see these great, hairy primordial men.

THE SAND STORM MOST REMEMBERED- THE ONE OF THANKSGIVING DAY 1926.

Since that time, thanks to the better building methods, we are able to prevent the worst part of the Sand Storm—the day after.

The House Wife who lives in a house that is properly weather stripped and caulked, need not know a sand storm is blowing. No dust, no snow, no rain or wind can get in such a house. It saves your floors, your furniture and your temper. It also lowers your fuel bill in the winter to a marked degree.

Not every job is satisfactory. It requires the right materials and the best of skill. Our mechanic will gladly refer you to his patrons.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

By Ahern

BUSTER, M'LAD, I WANT TO TELL YOU ABOUT A MYSTERY I ONCE WAS INVOLVED IN — BUT, FOR THE LIFE OF ME, I CAN'T EXPLAIN WHAT IT WAS ALL ABOUT!

YEH?

T.M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

I WAS SPENDING A SHORT HOLIDAY IN THE LITTLE HAMLET OF TWICKBY, IN SUFFOLK —

— THE INN I PUT UP AT WAS CALLED "THE WHITE GROUSE," AND THE THIRD NIGHT OF MY STAY, A STONE, WITH A NOTE ATTACHED, WAS TOSSED IN THE WINDOW OF MY ROOM —

THE NOTE SAID, "YOU ARE A MAN WE CAN TRUST — ON YOUR RETURN TO LONDON, PLEASE CALL AT NUMBER 73 ASHTON ARMS, SOHO, AFTER MIDNIGHT — RAP ON THE DOOR TWICE, THEN ONCE, AND COUGH —

— DO NOT NOTIFY THE POLICE — THIS AFFAIR IS OF NO INTEREST TO THEM — THERE IS NO DANGER TO YOU IN ANY MANNER — FOLLOW INSTRUCTIONS TO THE LETTER AND YOU WILL BE HANDSOMELY REWARDED" — SIGNED — A-37

ON MY RETURN TO LONDON, I WENT TO THE ADDRESS IN SOHO, AND MY KNOCK WAS ANSWERED BY A HAND, THRUST OUT, GIVING ME A CARD

THE CARD INSTRUCTED ME TO ROW OUT TO A CHANNEL BUOY ON THE THAMES — AND ANCHOR FOR THE ARRIVAL OF A COAL BARGE —

AFTER A HALF HOUR OF WAITING, THE BARGE WAS TOWED BY, AND THE SILHOUETTED FORM OF A MAN PASSED A SMALL BOX OVER TO ME, ON THE END OF A POLE —

A NOTE ON THE BOX INSTRUCTED ME TO DELIVER IT, NEXT MORNING AT SIX, TO A FISH MONGER IN BILLINGSGATE, WHO WOULD BE WEARING A BLACK EYE PATCH — — I WAS ONLY TO SAY, "6-B-92".

6-B-92 — RIGHTO, GUVNOR!

I WAS GIVEN A HADDOCK BY THE FISH MONGER, AND IN ITS MOUTH WERE TEN FIVE-POUND STERLING NOTES, AND A CARD SAYING, "THANKS — A-37"

GOSH — WHAT DO YOU SUPPOSE IT WAS ALL ABOUT?

M'LAD, AS I TOLD YOU AT THE BEGINNING — IT'S A MYSTERY I'VE NEVER BEEN ABLE TO SOLVE!

EGAD, YOUR GUESS IS AS GOOD AS MINE, BUSTER!

HAW — THAT'S THE KIND OF A STORY TO TELL THEM! — MAKES THEM GUESS AT ALL SORTS OF SOLUTIONS — AND THEY CAN'T DOUBT MY VERACITY, AS I PURPOSELY TOLD THE STORY AS A MYSTERY — HEH HEH
