Watergate babies

WASHINGTON — They were elected 20 years ago next month, and brashly barged into the House replete with long sideburns, knitted vests and a thirst for a cleaner, more open government. This January, no more than nine of the 92 freshmen of the Class of '74 will remain in the House, plus seven others who have migrated to the Senate. And just as clothing styles have grown more conservative, so has the mood of the voters and the changes they want to see in Washington — to the chagrin of many of the so-called Watergate babies./4A

The Federal Aviation Administration began special safety inspections of Hawaiian tour operators in July, and last month imposed an emergency safety rule for those flights./7A

■ Administration officials hint that if Hussein attacks, U.S. will not let him off hook.

WASHINGTON — The United States assigned 54,000 troops to the Persian Gulf and put 15,000 more on standby Sunday to back up a warning to Saddam Hussein that another attack on Kuwait would result in certain defeat.

Moreover, administration officials hinted that if the Iraqi leader repeats his actions of 1990, the United States will not "repeat the mistakes of the past" and let him off the hook.

Military leader to resign today; 14 die in attack

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The last of Haiti's three top military leaders will step down today, clearing the way for President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to come home. But 14 people were killed Sunday as attacks on pro-democracy supporters continued.

Army leader Raoul Cedras will transfer power to the army's No. 2 commander, Maj. Gen. Jean-Claude Duperval, Col. Jean-Robert Gabriel, a spokesman for the Haitian high command, confirmed Sunday.

Brig. Gen. Philippe Biamby, the army chief of staff and a co-leader of the September 1991 coup that ousted Aristide, presented his resignation to Cedras last week, and Cedras accepted it on Saturday, a diplomat said Sunday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The military transition plan was approved Saturday in Washington by Haitian officers and Aristide representatives. The resignations would pave the way for Aristide's expected return from exile next Saturday.

Duperval's appointment as army chief was temporary, the diplomat said.

Gabriel, speaking to reporters from the second-floor balcony of army headquarters, said the ceremony would be held this morning. He declined to elaborate.

Lt. Col. Michel Francois, the feared police chief and another leader of the 1991 coup, fled on Tuesday to the Dominican Republic.

Defense Secretary William Perry and Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, had met with Cedras on Saturday in Port-au-Prince, but U.S. officials had no immediate comment on Cedras' resignation date.

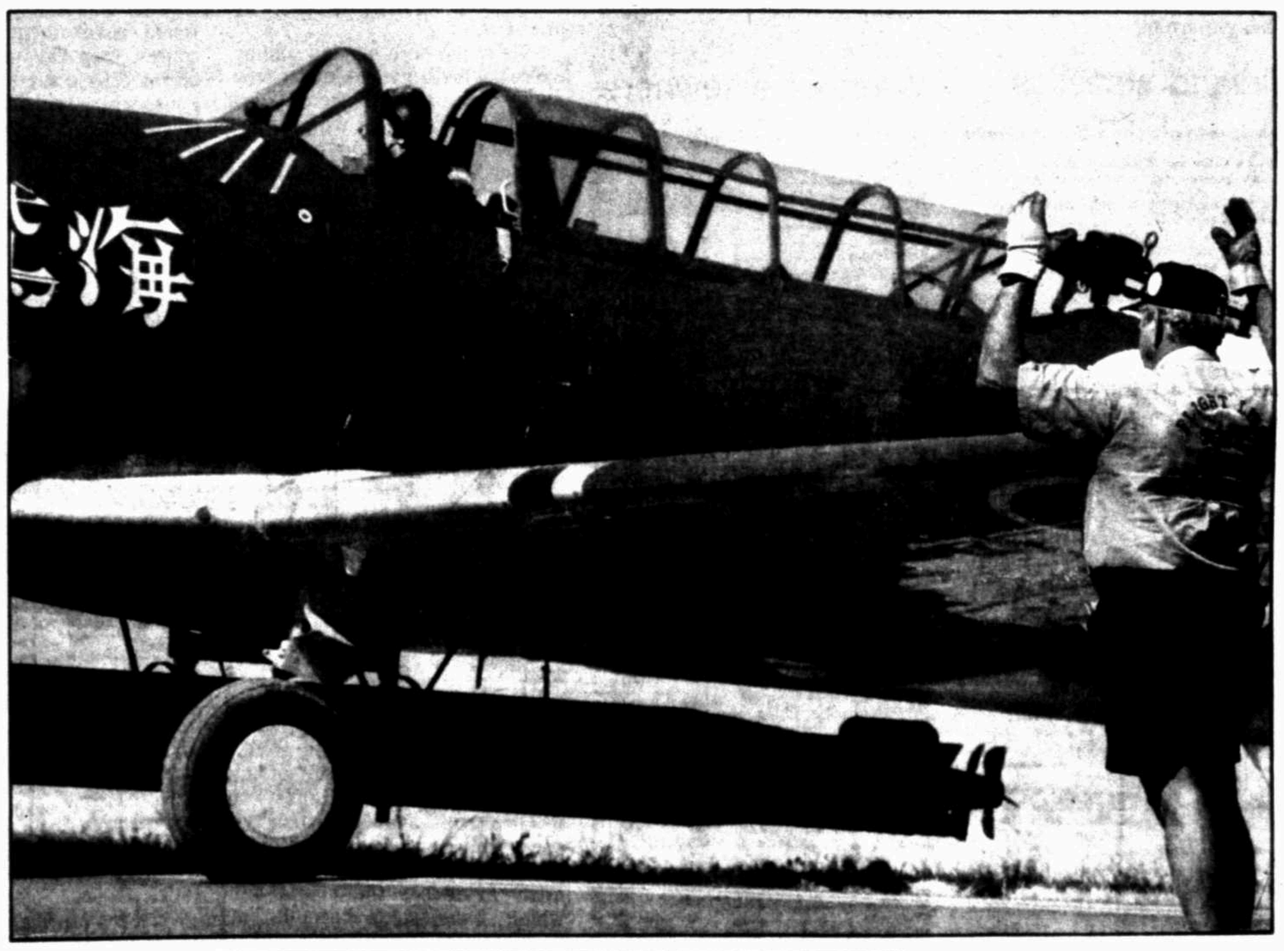

"Nothing is clear until he does it," one Clinton administration official said on condition of anonymity.

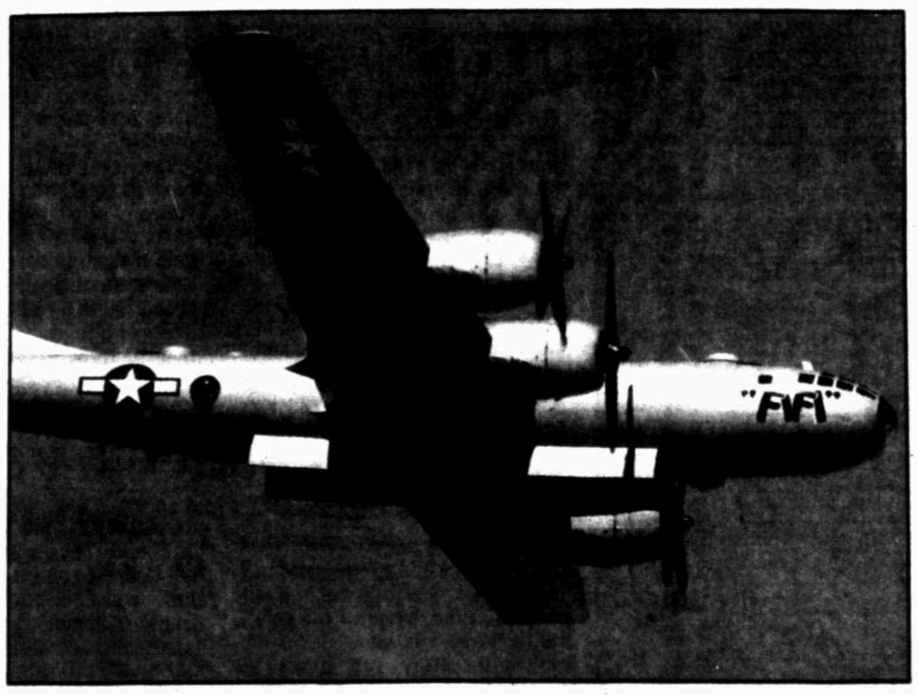

Perry and Shalikashvili did not discuss whether Cedras would leave the country, although U.S. officials have said they expect both he and Biamby eventually will do so. Cedras has vowed to remain in Haiti.

WEATHER WATCH

Sunny skies ahead for today

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-70s and southeast winds at 5 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be clear with a low in the lower 40s.

Tuesday is expected to be sunny with a high in the upper 70s.

After an overnight low of 41, Sunday's high was 72 compared with the record high for that date of 92 set in 1965. The record low for today's date was 38 set in 1990.

STATE

Some lingering cloudiness and areas of light rain persisted over portions of the coast on Sunday, while the rest of Texas enjoyed clear to partly cloudy skies and cool north winds after two days of rough weather in parts of the state.

Temperatures were generally in the upper 60s and lower 70s over North and South Texas and in the 60s in West Texas.

Today's forecast for North Texas calls for clear to partly cloudy skies over the western and central portions of the region with a chance of rain in the east. Highs are expected in the mid 60s and 70s with lows in the 40s and 50s.

In South Texas, scattered light rain continued along the Coastal Bend, while elsewhere skies were partly cloudy to cloudy. Brisk north winds ranged from 15 to 25 mph and are expected to gradually decrease to 5 to 15 mph.

Today should be partly to mostly cloudy with a chance for isolated showers along the coast. In the Hill Country and South Central Texas, skies should be mostly fair. Highs are expected in the 70s.

West Texas skies were mostly clear Sunday with temperatures on the cool side. Variable winds measured 5 to 15 mph.

A high pressure system will continue to keep the region dry and mild. Sunny days and clear nights are expected through Tuesday. Highs should be mainly in the 70s with lows mostly in the 30s and 40s.

NATION

A cold front with showers swept into the East on Sunday, while clear skies and seasonably cool weather stretched from Nevada to Missouri.

Showers and thunderstorms hung over the East Coast from the central Gulf Coast states northeast into New York state. Heavy rain fell in parts of southern Texas.

In Florida, moisture and highs near 90 combined with sea breezes to spawn scattered thunderstorms.

Rainfall for the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT included 1.3 inches in Birmingham, Ala., and 1 inch in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Much cooler air and even some snow showers were moving across Michigan's Upper Peninsula, but the snow wasn't sticking thanks to above-freezing temperatures.

The central states saw typically cool fall weather, with hardly a cloud in the sky and temperatures mostly in the 50s and 60s.

Clear skies and light winds meant frost was likely overnight from the western Great Lakes to the central Plains.

The temperature fell to 17 at Shirley Basin, Wyo., on Sunday morning.

Farther West, weak Santa Ana winds blew across Southern California, producing very warm temperatures.

Temperatures were already in the 80s and lower 90s near the coast Sunday morning.

Perot takes calls, blasts Clinton

DALLAS (AP) — To a folksy, up-tempo fiddle tune, independent Dallas billionaire Ross Perot began his new weekly radio show Sunday with the words: "Good evening, this is Ross. We're gonna shake 'em up tonight."

During the first broadcast of his weekly national call-in show, "Listening to America," Perot spent much of his time taking swipes at President Clinton, particularly criticizing his lack of military background. Last week, Perot urged his supporters to vote Republican this fall.

The subjects Perot picked for discussion were Iraq, Haiti and the world trade agreement negotiated under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, known as GATT. Perot opposes the accord. He introduced each topic by outlining his own assessment, then opened the phone lines.

Perot criticized Clinton's handling of the U.S. military involvement in Haiti, Iraq and Somalia.

FORCES: 15,000 more troops go on alert for gulf duty

fied by name, said the king assured Clinton he was "prepared to be supportive throughout" whatever develops. Saudi Arabia has agreed to allow U.S. military craft use of its air bases.

"It looks as though there is hostile intent," said United Nations Ambassador Madeleine Albright, pointing out that Iraq had massed 60,000 to 70,000 troops near Kuwait — some within miles of the border — and that tanks were positioned to "indicate hostility, rather than just parking there."

"The main message ... to Saddam Hussein is, 'Do not make a mistake. Do not cross that border. Do not create circumstances that will force us to act," Albright said in an interview on CNN's "Late Edition."

At the White House, national security advisor Tony Lake told reporters Clinton had been told that close to one division of Iraqi soldiers were poised within two kilometers (1.2 miles) of the demilitarized zone separating Iraq from Kuwait.

"We have Marines on alert to go at an appropriate time. We have deployed many squadrons of tactical air — F-15s, F-16s, A-10s, AWACS," Defense Secretary William Perry told reporters. "All in all, this is a formidable military force."

Appearing on CBS's "Face The Nation," Perry said two of Iraq's premier Republican Guard units were still moving into position and would not be ready to mount a strike against Kuwait until the end of the week.

Asked whether U.S. forces might attack Baghdad, Perry declined to answer, saying only, "We're prepared to respond with robust force, and we would be very successful in that response. ... If the Iraqis enter Kuwait, they will be soundly defeated."

Other administration officials — at home and on the road — echoed determination to be ready to meet force with force.

"We are not going to allow the mistakes of the past to be repeated," White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta told NBC's "Meet the Press." He said Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein "shouldn't underestimate the resolve or the will of the U.S."

Asked about the Bush administration decision not to go after Saddam himself after defeating the Iraqi forces in Desert Storm, Panetta repeated, "I'm not going to go into the details of what a military mission might be if we have to face that fact, but I can tell you this: We're not going to repeat the mistakes of the past, either."

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, speaking in Jerusalem, noted that in 1990, Iraq's leader "showed himself to be a master of miscalculation, and he may prove to be again. But I wish he would step back and see what he might have learned from his miscalculation."

At the Pentagon, a senior Defense Department official said late Sunday that in addition to 18,000 Marines from Camp Pendleton, Calif., that will be sent to the Gulf, an additional 12,000 members of the Army's 24th Infantry Division from Fort Stewart Ga., will see duty in the Gulf. While formal orders have yet to be issued for the additional 30,000 Marines and soldiers — still technically on alert status — the official said the decision has been made to dispatch them.

In addition, the official said the Pentagon "will also be alerting additional ground forces on a divisional scale," meaning that up to 15,000 additional forces could be called to support the deployment of the other divisions.

Some 4,000 members of the 24th began flying from Georgia to Kuwait on Sunday.

As of Friday, there were about 12,000 soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines in the Gulf region. Over the weekend, some 2,000 Marines entered the northern Persian Gulf and some 6,000 Navy men and women were slated to enter the Red Sea on board the USS George Washington and its battle group.

After the additional buildup disclosed Sunday evening, the size of the U.S. force either in the region, en route, awaiting orders to leave or on alert increased to 69,000.

Over the next several days, administration officials said, about 180 U.S. warplanes and support aircraft will be in position around Kuwait, ready to unleash an airborne attack against any Iraqi armored units that might cross the border.

They also have made a point of emphasizing that 200 Tomahawk cruise missiles capable to striking downtown Baghdad are being positioned.

Ross Perot, the former presidential candidate, accused Clinton on Sunday of engineering the troop buildup for political gain.

"The White House wants military action to show the strength of the president," Perot said on CBS. "It is rotten. It is wrong."

On Saturday, Clinton warned Iraq not to misjudge "American will or American power" and ordered the first contingent of 4,000 Army soldiers from the 24th Infantry Division based at Fort Stewart to head to Kuwait.

Troops from that unit have held joint exercises with the Kuwaiti military, and have tanks, armored troop carriers and other heavy equipment based in the emirate.

The shift of aircraft into the region is reminiscent of the buildup in Saudi Arabia that took place after Iraq's August 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

Saudi Arabia has more than half a dozen high-tech air bases that served as jumping off points during the Persian Gulf War.

MILITIA: Members plan, train for fight against tyranny

(From 1A)

foreign-dominated police state are already spreading throughout the continent.

The militiamen are taking no chances.

They and other hard-core gun activists around the nation are organizing, planning, training for the day when their guns will be weapons of war.

"We're not here playing soldier, we're not foolishly looking for trouble. ... But tyrants should know that they will be met with force," says Norm Olson, commander of the Northern Michigan militia.

It's unclear how many self-styled militias exist nationwide. The FBI keeps no list and would monitor them only if they were suspected of violating federal law or planning to do so, says agency spokesman Hank Glaspie.

But mainstream groups on both sides of the gun-control debate agree that the militia movement is for real.

"In some cases, they're setting up what I'd call legitimate groups to lobby and pressure local governments," said Alan Gottlieb, chairman of the Citizens' Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms.

"But you're also seeing the more extreme elements ... who feel the only way to take back the government is through armed resistance."

The militias, says Ray Southwell of the Northern Michigan group, are led by spiritual heirs of the Revolutionary-era citizens who took up arms against British tyranny. Only now, he says, the U.S. government is the tyrant.

His evidence: the crime bill, which bans some assault-type weapons; the Brady Law's national waiting period for handgun purchases; the "murder" of David Koresh and his Branch Davidian followers in Texas, said to be proof that the government will do anything to take guns from civilians.

"We need to take a stand ... before all our liberties are gone," he says.

Some see gun control as part of a broader conspiracy to bring about world government. If that day comes, they say, Americans will be ruled by a socialist United Nations, which will abolish freedom of religion and speech. Foreign troops will occupy U.S. soil, confiscating private weapons and property.

"Am I nuts? Am I paranoid? Maybe, but I'm seeing things that scare me and I want to find out what's going on," Southwell says.

He's not alone. Randy Trochman of Noxon, Mont., believes in the world-dictatorship conspiracy. He is a member of the Militia of Montana, which has been forming local chapters since February and is assisting similar efforts in Idaho and Washington state.

"Our objective is to get organizations similar to ours in every county in the country," he said. "People are getting together to defend themselves."

In Florida, the militia movement is picking up "like a snowball rolling down a mountain," said Robert Pummer, a member from Stuart.

This summer, commissioners in four Panhandle counties authorized citizens to form militias. Commissioners said their resolutions were symbolic messages to Washington to get off gun owners' backs.

Northern Michigan's "First Brigade" formed last April and has inspired spinoff groups in 11 counties, Southwell says.

The First Brigade meets once a month. Olson, the commander, owns a gun shop in Alanson. He's also pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church.

During assemblies, First Brigade members (65, at a recent meeting) discuss ways to mount guerrilla-style resistance, if necessary. They have "field exercises" such as fire building and compass reading.

Each is required to own a rifle, at least 100 rounds of ammunition and a knapsack containing a mess kit, sleeping bag and first-aid supplies.

Members take an oath to defend the Constitution against enemies "foreign and domestic." Their conduct code demands a willingness to die for their liberty and a promise never to surrender or divulge information about the militia if taken "prisoner of war."

To outsiders, this might seem the stuff of a B-grade movie farce: gun-toting men in military fatigues, some with faces blackened for combat, preparing for doomsday in rural northern Michigan.

But it's no joke to Mary Hessel, mayor of Pellston, population 580. She feuded with the militia this summer because members were bringing unloaded rifles to meetings in local parks.

"We don't need this kind of thing. We're just a quiet, peaceful little community," Mrs. Hessel said. "I had one person ask me, 'What's next, the KKK? The neo-Nazis?'"

Olson says ordinary citizens have nothing to fear from the militia. "We are here to protect their liberties and ours," he said.

The militiamen say the nation's founders believed citizens should arm themselves to keep government in line. They cite the Second Amendment reference to a "well-regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state."

And they say laws in Michigan and many states sanction an "organized militia" — the National Guard and other professional forces — and an "unorganized militia," consisting of able-bodied civilians.

"If Patrick Henry or George Washington were here today, there's no doubt in my mind they would be forming their own militias," Southwell said.

Dennis Henigan, general counsel for Washington, D.C.-based Handgun Control Inc., says people charged with firearms law violations sometimes claim membership in the so-called unorganized militia. But courts have ruled the "militia" in the Second Amendment means an arm of state government, he says.

"What seems to be going on in Michigan is formation of something akin to a private army," Henigan said. "It would be profoundly threatening to our constitutional system if people thought they had a right to start shooting if they felt government was becoming oppressive."

Hessel fears that a flare-up between the militia and police could escalate into a Waco-type showdown: "Who knows what might set it off?"

Southwell said, "My hope is that we can turn this country around without firing a shot. But if not, I'm afraid ... at some point the government will cross the line and it will be neighbor coming to the aid of neighbor. Just like at Concord and Lexington."

TEEN: Insurers to ask Legislature for new restrictions

dent in which police say her 18-year-old boyfriend, Wade McFarland, had been drinking before he lost control of his car and hit a tree.

"You look at how many teenagers are dying down there, hopefully that'll make people stand up and take notice, increase our chances for success," said insurance association spokesman Joe Annotti.

The association — which has lobbied for similar legislation in other states — seeks to impose a curfew on teen-age drivers, to make it illegal for them to have any alcohol in their systems while driving, to improve licensing and testing procedures and to make driver's education mandatory.

"One key reason everyone is looking at it so strongly is that states that have implemented similar provisions have seen a dramatic reduction in nighttime fatal crashes," said Bob Sherouse, national director of public policy for Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

Maryland imposed a curfew on teen-age drivers in 1977 and saw a 5 percent drop in the number of crashes involving teens, according to the insurance association.

But Lonnie Rannels, inspector of driver's licenses for the Texas Department of Public Safety, said the state has already had several safety provisions struck down because of infringements on drivers' rights.

According to 1993 DPS statistics, drivers between ages 15 and 18 died at a higher rate than older drivers, but so did those 21 to 25, Rannels said.

"If you can't prove that the death rate is higher, you can't go with a different standard," he said in Sunday's editions of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

CEDRAS: Leader to transfer power today

(From 1A)

ers Sunday, killing 14 people. U.S. Special Forces officers on the scene said the driver of the small, multicolored bus known as a tap-tap deliberately ran down the marchers. It wasn't immediately known if there were arrests.

Aristide supporters also were saddened by news Sunday that an outspoken pro-Aristide artist, Stevenson Magloire, was beaten to death in broad daylight. There were no immediate arrests in that attack.

Under a U.S.-Haitian agreement that averted an invasion, Cedras and Biamby have to leave power by Saturday.

Haitian sources said Cedras was working Sunday on final preparations for the power transfer.

He met for 45 minutes with Lt. Gen. Hugh Shelton, the U.S. military commander in Haiti. He also met with provisional President Emile Jonaissant. Details weren't disclosed.

A leading business backer of Cedras told The Associated Press that Cedras' continued presence in Haiti was necessary to assure Aristide's opponents they would be safe from retribution under the new civilian administration.

Other close supporters have told the military leader that he, his wife, Yannick, and three children should leave the country, at least for a brief period.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the transition would "pick up even more momentum and steam" this week.

"I am confident they'll be leaving office and I think that as a practical matter that they will be leaving the country," he said in Jerusalem, referring to Cedras and Biamby.

Parishioners at St. Gerard Roman Catholic church cheered when the Rev. Gerard Jean-Juste, an official in the Aristide government that was toppled three years ago, announced Cedras' imminent departure.

"Tomorrow we should hear that Cedras has left," Jean-Juste said. "But don't clap your hands too much, there is still much work to do."

In a sermon, Jean-Juste accused Haiti's military leaders of "sucking the blood of the people before going into hiding" by taking wealth obtained through corruption with them.

He urged parishioners to remain peaceful this week during pro-democracy demonstrations leading up to Aristide's return.

Anti-army sentiment was high Sunday in Cap-Haitien, Haiti's second-largest city, when U.S. soldiers tried to swear in the first five members of a new trainee police force.

An enraged crowd of some 500 people accused the inductees of being part of Haiti's military apparatus and forced them to flee. U.S. officials said the training for the five would be ended.

Amnesty or retribution? Haitians face tough decision

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — In the dead of the tropical night, as he lies awake and in pain, Ernst Charles cannot forgive the policemen who bound him up like a ball of flesh and beat him bloody and numb.

Can this entire nation, at the dawn of a new democracy, officially forget at least some of the pain of recent years and move on?

Haitians are the latest to agonize over the choice between amnesty and retribution, between an instinct for revenge and a need to rebuild.

In an age of transition, the question of amnesty has troubled Latin Americans who cast off soldier tyrants, East Europeans emerging from Communist police states, Africans trying to preserve fragile democracies.

The answer to the question is clear to Charles, 29, a peasant activist who was secretly jailed by Haiti's military police in August 1993, beaten severely for three days, then dumped on a Port-au-Prince street.

"If a blanket amnesty is declared, then we'd have to look for our own justice," he said ominously in an interview.

Human rights advocates estimate that in the three years since elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was deposed in a military coup, about 3,000 Haitians have been killed by soldiers, paramilitary groups and police. Countless others have been beaten or otherwise terrorized.

Now that Aristide is scheduled to return to power this week under a U.S.-engineered plan, his government must decide how widely and intensely it will pursue the guilty.

The Haitian Parliament last week approved an amnesty law to protect from prosecution those involved in the Aristide coup itself. It also establishes a "truth commission" to investigate human rights abuses, possibly for prosecution of people like Charles' tormentors.

But the legislation may be vague enough to allow a later extension of amnesty — if not a blanket amnesty, at least impunity for some crimes. In addition, it may take a year to build a new, trustworthy judicial system to press the cases. By then, the political climate may have changed.

Haitians seem destined to repeat the debate that has obsessed others elsewhere: How long should we pursue them? How far down in the ranks of oppressors should we reach? How hard should we push, if it risks provoking the military into sabotaging our newborn democracy?

"It's an incredibly complicated issue," said an authority on recent democratic transitions, Marc F. Plattner, editor of the Washington-based Journal of Democracy.

For his part, Plattner feels that all-out revenge, though sweet, may be dangerous: "I think some measure of reconciliation, of forgiving is necessary to ... enable a new democracy to exist."

Human rights activists also struggle over retribution and its repercussions.

"From the beginning, we objected to offering the Haitian generals this carrot of amnesty to leave," said Juan Mendez, general counsel for the Americas Watch group in Washington. "When it comes to that kind of crime, the state has an obligation to provide a remedy for people."

But Mendez said it should be a "very orderly process of truth and justice," not rushed into in a vengeful atmosphere. And eventually a nation, "ready for healing," may call a halt to prosecutions.

The World in brief

■ Armed Arabs wound 5 on cafe-lined sidewalk

JERUSALEM — At least two heavily armed Arabs ran down a cafe-lined sidewalk in downtown Jerusalem late Sunday, shooting and throwing hand grenades. Five Israelis were wounded, Israel radio reported.

One of the Arabs was shot and killed and a second was caught, Jerusalem police spokesman Avi Zelba said. A possible third suspect was thought to be hiding in the busy area, he said.

The area was closed off and police barricaded the streets outside the King David Hotel where Secretary of State Warren Christopher was staying, less than a mile from the site of attack.

Zelba said the area was rigged with explosives and grenades and cautioned against trying to enter the area.

Army radio said the assailants, armed with Soviet-made rifles, grenades and explosives, ran down the street firing at people sitting in cafes and pubs.

Long bursts of automatic gunfire were heard at The Associated Press office, about 100 yards away. Small explosions — apparently grenades — were heard periodically.

Police and special forces crowded the area and Israel radio said Israelis and tourists began fleeing.

There were no immediate reports of dead and Israel radio reported five Israelis wounded.

■ Christopher visits Mideast in search of peace

JERUSALEM — Three years after Mideast peace talks opened, Israel and Syria are distant on all the key issues that stand in the way of a peace treaty.

"We have a process that offers a way to begin to narrow the gaps on those issues," was the most one of Secretary of State Warren Christopher's top aides would say about the tortuous U.S.-directed search for peace that brought Christopher back for the fifth time since May.

"The fact is, at this point we don't have an agreement on any one of those key issues," the aide said.

The issues are as basic as they are elusive.

Israel wants a "warm peace" from Syria — an exchange of ambassadors, economic and cultural ties, all the trappings of normal relations that translate into acceptance.

Syria wants to recover the Golan Heights — the strategic enclave it lost in the 1967 war. The Golan Heights was annexed by Israel in 1981 and is home now to 13,000 Jewish farmers and merchants. Recovery of the Golan is a point of honor for President Hafez Assad.

■ Yeltsin's untimely nap revives drinking stories

MOSCOW — Boris Yeltsin's untimely nap at Ireland's Shannon airport and his comic attempt at leading a band in Germany have reawakened stories that the Russian president has a drinking problem.

Yeltsin, 63, has been dogged throughout his political career by persistent stories of ill health and alcohol abuse. His staff and doctor insist that he is fine.

But two former advisers and an opposition politician, in rare personal criticism, have now publicly reproached Yeltsin for his erratic behavior during two recent trips abroad.

When Yeltsin returned from his summit with President Clinton on Sept. 30, he failed to get off his airplane for a meeting with Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds, who was left standing awkwardly on the tarmac.

Yeltsin said later he overslept. His chief of staff, Sergei Filatov, added: "It's very hard to fit this president into any protocol. Yeltsin is Yeltsin."

Last month, after an official champagne lunch in Germany, a red-faced Yeltsin stumbled, blew kisses to the crowd, sang boisterously and led a German band with a wild flourish.

Reports claim cult was front for criminal activity

GENEVA (AP) — The investigation into the cult deaths of 53 people in Switzerland and Canada has spread to France and Australia amid unconfirmed reports that the group's leaders were involved in arms trafficking and money laundering.

Adding to the mystery surrounding the murders and possible suicides, the passports of Joseph di Mambro, a cult leader, and his wife, Jocelyne, were delivered to the French Interior Ministry in Paris.

The ministry would not say if it knew who sent the passports or why.

The bodies of 48 cult followers, some of them shot in the head and hooded with plastic bags, were discovered in the rubble of fires at three chalets and a farm in Switzerland. Five other bodies were found in a charred chalet the cult leaders owned north of Montreal.

Some of the victims were obviously murdered, but Swiss officials left open the possibility that some took their own lives.

Authorities have suggested the fires were set to hide evidence of the deaths. It is not known whether di Mambro, a French-Canadian who lived in Switzerland, and the cult's other leader, Luc Jouret, a Belgian physician who lived in Switzerland and Canada, were among the dead.

The French connection first surfaced Saturday when police uncovered an intricate incendiary device at an empty villa the cult used in southern France.

The device, which could have been triggered by a coded telephone call, was like the bombs that set off the fires last week in Switzerland and Canada.

None of the victims' names has been released, but on Sunday, Swiss police spokesman Beat Karlen said three Canadians were among the 23 who died at the Swiss farm.

In Canada, investigators said Antonio and Nikki Dutoit and their 3-month-old son, three of the victims in Quebec, had been stabbed to death several days before the fire.

Mrs. Dutoit's mother, Jill Robinson, said at her home in England that her daughter and son-in-law had quit the cult. Canadian officials said Dutoit, 35, of Switzerland, had worked as a gardener for di Mambro.

There were unconfirmed news reports from Canada and Australia that the two used the group as a front for arms trafficking through Australia and money laundering in Swiss banks.

An official of the Royal Bank of Canada in Ottawa said the bank tipped off Canadian police in July about suspicious activity in an Ottawa account of a cult member.

Bank spokesman David Moorcroft said he was prohibited by law from releasing the account-holder's name, but he said the movement of hundreds of thousands of dollars without evidence of legitimate sources could trigger such a report to police.

Constable Gilles Deziel of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police confirmed that Canadian authorities were investigating reports of money laundering involving members of the Order of the Solar Temple, the cult's name in Canada.

Radio-Canada, citing unidentified sources, said the cult moved hundreds of millions of dollars through some of the world's largest banks from Switzerland to Ottawa, where it said di Mambro had a bank account and his wife signed papers. The di Mambros are listed as tenants in a suburban Ottawa apartment.

Jouret and di Mambro are also linked to other property in Canada.

Canadian police would not comment on the report that the cult was involved in arms trafficking.

Security taped Diana, officer, tabloid reports

LONDON (AP) — Security services videotaped Princess Diana having sex with an army officer in his garden in 1988, a British tabloid reported Sunday.

The News of the World quoted a former Royal Marines commander as saying he was ordered to carry out surveillance, apparently for security, when Diana secretly visited Maj. James Hewitt's home in Ebford, in southwestern England.

In a book published this week, Hewitt, 36, alleges he had a five-year affair with the wife of Prince Charles. Hewitt maintains the liaison started in 1986 and ended after he returned from the Gulf War in 1991.

Diana, 33, and Charles, 45, formally separated in December 1992 after 11 years of marriage.

The News of the World quoted the former sergeant, Glyn Jones, as saying he coordinated a five-member surveillance team that set up two observation posts with video cameras in a ditch and a hedge at the Hewitt cottage one night in the fall of 1988. They also put a microphone in the back garden.

Dwindling Watergate class of '74 disdains many of today's reforms

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — They were elected 20 years ago next month, and brashly barged into the House replete with long sideburns, knitted vests and a thirst for a cleaner, more open government.

This January, no more than nine of the 92 freshmen of the Class of '74 will remain in the House, plus seven others who have migrated to the Senate. And just as clothing styles have grown more conservative, so has the mood of the voters and the changes they want to see in Washington — to the chagrin of many of the so-called Watergate babies.

Back then, an appalled public watched the disgraced President Nixon's downfall and concluded that it was time to invigorate Congress. Today's cynicism is aimed more at Congress, and restrictive proposals such as term limits and a balanced budget amendment are in vogue.

"When I came to the Congress, a large percentage of the public thought Congress was fixable," said Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C., among the six Class of '74 members ending their House careers this year. "I guess maybe today, they're not so sure."

Derrick was among 75 Democrats and 17 Republicans first elected to the House in November 1974. Although Republican Gerald Ford sat in the White House, the election brought the Democratic edge in the House to an overwhelming 291-144 margin, a dramatic 43-seat pickup. The Senate also went Democratic by 62-38, and party leaders proclaimed an era of "congressional government."

With Watergate fresh on the nation's psyche and the Vietnam War still being fought, the new House Democrats knew what they wanted. They were against the war and big defense budgets, and for environmental and social programs.

To help achieve that, they took on several of the party's old, conservative leaders, dumping three committee chairmen and helping to enact rules changes that shifted power from leaders to the increasingly liberal rank-and-file. They succeeded because they agreed to vote as a bloc, a move that made them a potent force.

"Smaller classes can have the same missionary zeal, but not have the same impact we had by our force of numbers," remembers Rep. John LaFalce, D-N.Y.

Not only were they more liberal than most veteran lawmakers, but they were generally a lot younger. Six of them were under 30, and collectively they brought the average age of House members below 50 for the first time since World War II.

Of course, things did not always go smoothly.

When the freshman Democrats began demanding that committee chairmen explain why they should continue heading their panels, sparks sometimes flew. Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., recalled one session at which his fellow freshmen were grilling 73-year-old Chairman F. Edward Hebert, D-La., of the House Armed Services Committee.

"He said, 'All right, boys and girls, let me tell you what it's really like around here,'" Mineta said last week.

Soon afterward, Hebert and two other longtime committee chairmen lost their jobs.

Despite Democrats' big congressional majorities, things were just as rocky when it came to legislating. The limp economy and energy shortages were the big issues of mid-1970s, and Democrats did succeed in enacting tax cuts and some jobs programs.

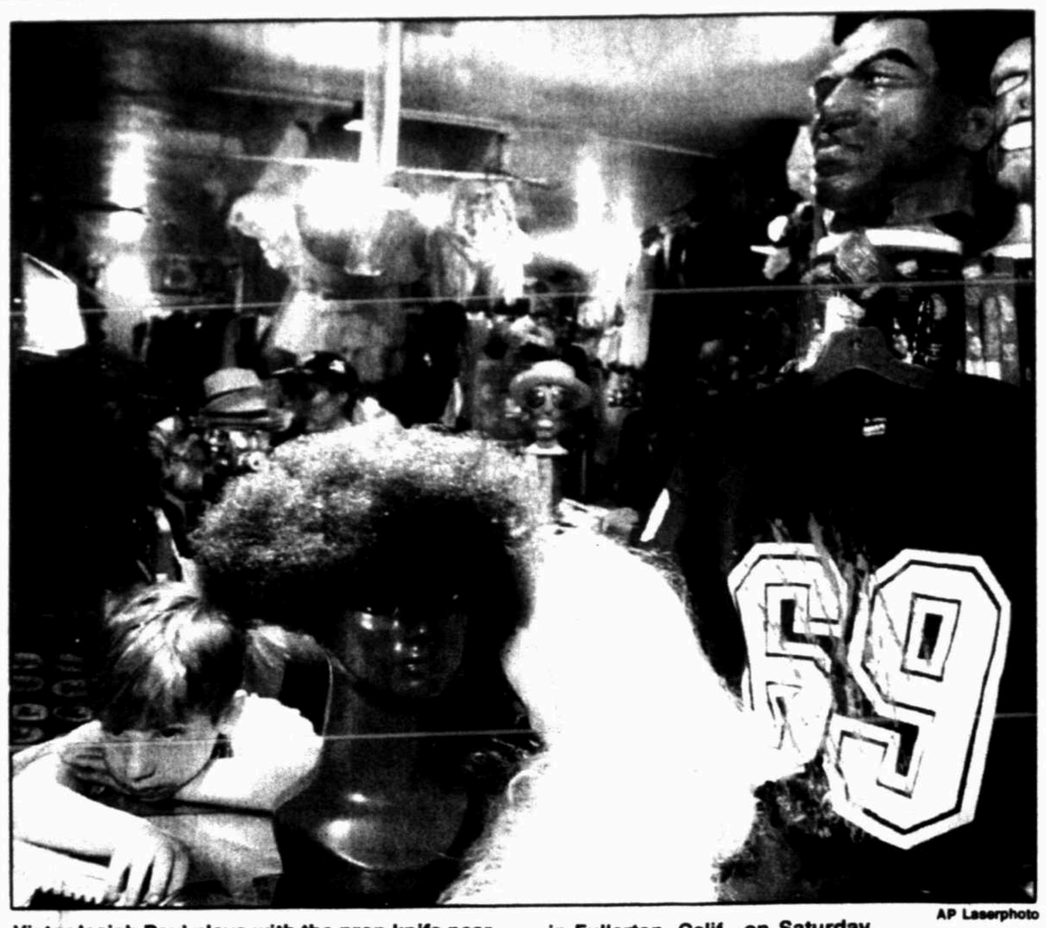

But Ford vetoed 32 bills in 1975 and 1976, arguing that Democrats were too eager to spend money, and Congress overrode only eight of the vetoes. And it took years for members of the Class of '74 to enact some of the environmental bills they wanted.

"The legislative process didn't work as rapidly as I'd hoped," said Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., a class member who is departing.

The years have come and gone, and the rebels of '74 have blended in with the rest of their colleagues — for good and for bad.

Of the class's 13 Democrats still in the House, Derrick is a chief deputy whip; Mineta and Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., are committee chairmen; and the remaining 10 head subcommittees. The two Republicans, Reps. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., and William Goodling, R-Pa., are also influential.

But of the original 92, at least 10 have faced important legal or ethical accusations while in Congress, and at least two served time in prison.

Halloween shoppers snap up O.J. costumes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Halloween revelers are snatching up O.J. Simpson masks, plastic knives and jerseys splattered with fake blood, the latest bizarre twist in the slayings of Simpson's ex-wife and her friend.

The Ragztop-Vintage store has already sold about 20 rubbery Simpson masks at $20 each, employee Victor Pahl said Sunday, adding that sales have been "incredible."

"We're almost sold out of the original shipment," he said.

Shoppers can pick up a complete costume — a sweatshirt splattered with fake blood, a mask and a plastic knife — for $50 at the store in Fullerton.

"There is a tragedy to this," Pahl said. "Maybe you've got to laugh at tragedy."

A blonde wig and some imagination made up a Nicole Brown Simpson costume, at least for one customer, Pahl said. The woman put a wig together with a dress from the store's vintage clothing collection.

Other Southern California costume shops also are capitalizing on the slayings, selling accessories including Afro wigs and black-and-white prison shirts with No. 32 written on them, the same number Simpson wore on his football jersey.

Requests from three or four customers prompted Gilbert of Hollywood Costumes to start designing a Simpson outfit that will rent for $75 to $100. The outfit includes a football jersey, a mask and other accessories.

"We satisfy the public's demand, that's all," Gilbert employee Morgan Paris said. "They had Jim and Tammy Bakker a few years ago. ... The more macabre the sense of humor for Halloween, the more popular."

Once fallen quiz show contestant becomes star

By Judie Glave
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Imagine being remembered as a fashion faux pas on grainy black and white tape, the bad guy, the nerd who took game show star Charles Van Doren down. Herb Stempel doesn't have to imagine. He's lived it.

With the release of Robert Redford's movie "Quiz Show," about the 1950s game show scandals, the 67-year-old Stempel is getting a chance to tell the world he's neither a nebbish nor a villain.

Flip the remote and catch Stempel telling Conan O'Brien how the show's producers picked out his ill-fitting clothes and told him how, and when, to mop his brow.

Open a newspaper or magazine and see his crooked smile staring back, along with his oft-repeated challenge to meet the reclusive Van Doren in a quiz show rematch for charity. Any time, any place, he says.

These days he's even got an agent to book appearances and negotiate interview fees.

"Newspapers and wire services, I do gratis but theme programs are different," he explains in a recent (gratis) interview.

He was a consultant for the Redford movie and gives rave reviews to the director and actor John Turturro, who plays him a bit too enthusiastically for Stempel.

"I'm pretty much of a low-key guy. They made me look frenetic," he says. "There's also a certain ethnicity played up there that I don't really have. . . . I'm just not that Jewish."

But that's Hollywood, he says. "I understand dramatic license."

After all, his quiz show days were scripted from start to finish. And although he was given the answers, he says he knew most of them anyway.

"I took a 3½-hour trivia examination to get on the show," Stempel says, "and I got 251 out of 363 correct.

"Had I played honestly, played fairly I probably would have won," he boasts matter-of-factly. "But that's just one of those things we'll never know, will we?"

Thirty-seven years after the scandal, perhaps the $64,000 question is this: Is Herb Stempel bitter?

Not in the least. In fact, Stempel, who lives in Queens with his second wife, Ethel, and works as a litigation researcher for the city Transportation Department, is happier than he's been in, well, 37 years — thanks to his newfound fame.

Stempel was reigning champ of the popular quiz show "Twenty One" for six weeks when producer Dan Enright discovered Van Doren — a handsome, aristocratic man, the antithesis to the Jewish-born, working-class Stempel.

"The first time I saw Van Doren, I was standing in the wings. I saw this tall, thin, Waspy-looking guy," Stempel recalls. "When I realized who he was — that his father was the Pulitzer poet, his mother was famous, his uncle was a famous writer — I knew I was a dead pigeon."

Flashback to 1957. The tall, square-shouldered man in Clark Kentlike glasses and GI-issue haircut bites his lip and mutters, "I don't remember. I don't remember."

The question: What movie won the Oscar for Best Picture in 1955?

Encouraged by host Jack Barry to guess, Stempel blurts, "On The Waterfront?"

"I remember the moment like it was yesterday," Stempel says, his black hair now a shock of gray in front, the square glasses replaced by more fashionable aviator frames.

"I balked when Enright told me what question I would miss. I said, 'If you're forcing me to do this, let me take a good dive on a difficult question ... not on 'Marty,' my favorite movie which I had seen three times."

But Enright wanted to pump the audience up, Stempel says. "You know, watch the great genius muff an easy one so the audience could pat itself on the back and say, 'I knew that.'"

Van Doren went on to win $129,000 and the nation's adoration. He graced the cover of Time magazine and met his future wife, Geraldine, after she was hired to answer his fan mail.

Stempel left with his $49,500 in winnings and a promise from Enright that he would get a $250-a-week job on another quiz show. The job never materialized and the money disappeared in some investments.

Stempel's anger festered for two years until he read about the Manhattan district attorney's investigation into alleged quiz show fraud.

Suddenly Stempel was the star again.

He testified at the 1959 congressional hearings and after Stempel's stinging testimony, Van Doren finally admitted the show was fixed.

State takes boys from home, says they were caged

HALIFAX, Mass. (AP) — Three boys were removed from their home after social workers learned that at least two of them were regularly locked in dog cages.

The three, ages 4, 6 and 7, have been placed in foster care, said Lorraine Carli, spokeswoman for the Department of Social Services.

No charges have been filed against the children's mother, Dianne Fabiano, or their grandmother, Virginia Steele, who lived with the children in a home about 30 miles southeast of Boston.

Social workers and police who entered the home on Sept. 21 found the 6-year-old locked in a portable dog cage in his bedroom, Carli said.

Maize and non-edible pumpkins, above left, await use as fall decorations at Sepulveda Produce south of Midland, while cushaws, above right, are popular in pies and empanadas.

Weighing 60-75 pounds, the classic jack o'lantern pumpkins catch the slanting light of late afternoon. The large pumpkins go for about $20 retail.

GREAT PUMPKINS! THEY'RE OUTTA THEIR GOURDS!

A decorative basket of maize, miniature pumpkins and yellow-and-green gourds resembling squash are popular in schools and offices.

STORY AND PHOTOS BY JOE D. WILLIAMS

One of Joe Sepulveda's fond memories from childhood is carving pumpkins into jack-o-lanterns in elementary school, often, he said, paid for out of his teacher's own pocket. That's why, he said, he sells them to teachers at wholesale prices at his produce market south of Midland.

Mostly from Floydada, the self-proclaimed Pumpkin Capital of the World near Lubbock, the pumpkins — giant Big Max, non-edible miniatures, pumpkin squash relatives and the classic jack-o-lanterns — cover the ground and tables at Sepulvada Produce. From there they will wind up in local supermarkets, schools and offices. They will be eaten and used for decorations for Thanksgiving, drawn on and painted and carved up for Halloween.

Along with other squash, the pumpkin was an important vegetable for food and ceremony for many Native Americans, according to Roland Roberts, a horticulturist with the Texas A&M Extension Service in Lubbock.

Pumpkin is a reliable crop and the heat and early rains this summer reduced the numbers produced, Roberts said. This was mostly because the bees were too busy keeping their hives cooled off to help pollinate the put-upon pumpkin plants, he said.

Other varieties finding their way into local markets, Sepulveda said, are white "ghost" pumpkins, Mexican candy pumpkins — brownish orange and shaped like a butternut squash, they weigh from 15 to 25 pounds — smallish "pie pumpkins," pink banana squash, and Blue Hubbards — "One of the nicest winter squash for cooking, but they're ugly."

Sepulvada's grandson, Victor Rodriquez, 2, examines a Big Max. The giant pumpkins weigh up to 150 pounds and retail for as much as $40.

Interest increasing in city recreation

Increasing interest in recreational development for Midland only makes good sense for the community, coming as it does on the heels of heightened interest in retail business development. Both are necessary to meet the needs of a growing city.

In recent months there has been expressed interest in additional golf driving ranges in north and west Midland, as well as a putt-putt golf course, batting cages, and possibly a development to include bumper boats and race cars. A group of investors also has purchased the old Wild River Canyon property in west Midland and has plans to construct an in-line skating track and hockey rink that might also include simulated rock climbing walls, a mountain bike trail and archery range.

Meanwhile, the city is constructing more parks to accommodate local soccer, baseball and softball associations. Plans are also in the works for bike-hike trails and a new swimming pool. A group of Midlanders is also spearheading an effort to add nine holes to Hogan Park Golf Course.

We view this growth and development with excitement. It brings vitality back to the community, giving the citizens something to look forward to. Midland is growing and developing again and that gives the community a sense of progress and cohesion that we like.

Mayor Bobby Burns spoke about the development surge recently when he said, "It all ties in with what we see with the rest of the city. Midland wants that golf, that putt-putt, those restaurants, that Best Buy."

The mayor is correct. This is free enterprise at its best.

Former hostage frowns on North's actions

WASHINGTON — Republican Senate candidate Oliver North is seeking to rewrite his role in the arms-for-hostages scandal from liar to liberator. But former American hostage Terry Anderson contends that North's covert and illegal operation prolonged his captivity.

Anderson

"When you agree to pay for hostages, what (the terrorists) do is go out and get some more hostages," Anderson explained during a recent interview. "I know Col. North was trying to get me out of prison. I am grateful for his concern, and President Reagan and everybody involved. It was just a big, bad mistake that, in some judgments, cost the rest of us a couple more years in prison."

Anderson believes that by creating a "market" for hostages, North had unwittingly provided an incentive for the kidnapping of additional Americans in the Middle East: "By paying for hostages you make the kidnapping of Americans worthwhile. It should have been the predicted result. That kind of action puts every American at risk."

North is under fire from his two political opponents for his role in arranging secret weapons sales to Iran in exchange for the release of American hostages, and later lying to Congress about it. He's seeking to deflect criticism by arguing that his excesses were "noble" because they were done in an effort to save American lives.

Anderson, who was working as an Associated Press reporter in Beirut when he was kidnapped by the Islamic Jihad in 1984, has until now kept his own counsel about North during this year's Virginia race. Despite 2,454 days of captivity -- much of it spent in filthy basements, chained to his bed by the leg -- Anderson is remarkably free of rancor. He says he's fond of North and respects his record as a Marine.

But on a political level, Anderson assails North as dangerous and unfit for the Senate: "Ollie North is an ideologue. And when he is in pursuit of his goal he is perfectly willing to sacrifice any principle or law in order to achieve it. I happen to think he is a personable man and a likable man, but I wouldn't trust him not to break any laws that he thought inconvenient." Anderson is not supporting either of North's political opponents, Sen. Charles Robb, D-Va., or former Virginia Attorney General Marshall Coleman.

In 1985 and 1986, North had been a key player in an operation in which profits from the secret Iranian arms sales — essentially ransom for U.S. hostages — were funneled to anti-Communist guerrillas in Nicaragua. North's 1989 criminal convictions in federal court, for lying to Congress and other wrongdoings, were later overturned on a technicality.

Anderson initially learned of the arms-for-hostages negotiations from his captors, and in the last year of his captivity from radio reports after the Iran-contra affair had been exposed.

"They always thought they were going to win," Anderson says of his captors. "They always thought they were going to get what they wanted. The arms for hostages dealing gave them some indication we were willing to deal. In the end, it took a long time to convince them they were not going to get what they wanted, they were not going to get anything for us (remaining hostages)."

UNDER THE DOME — The dog-eat-dog political fight over health care reform has not been for naught.

While Congress failed to pass a health care bill to cover the 37 million Americans without insurance, health reform for animals sailed through Congress in the waning days of the session thanks to the efforts of Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala.

Heflin's bill — which he says will give veterinarians "more flexibility in the way they treat their patients" — is an ironic end to the second year of the do-nothing 103rd Congress.

Wedding band still shines three years later

It was about three years ago that I got a call from a lovely young woman, pleading for help in an unusual and romantic emergency.

Royko

Irena Haramic and Max Popovich, both 22, were getting married in three days.

The reception was going to be very big, a Croatian banquet with a Croatian band strumming mandolin-like instruments and playing the traditional kolos, while everybody joined hands and danced.

But the emergency was that the band had just canceled. The leader had learned that Max, the groom, was Serbian and Max's many Serbian relatives and pals would be at the wedding.

Because of the unpleasantness in Yugoslavia, the Croatian band leader feared that an ethnic mini-war would break out on the dance floor.

Irena was crushed. As she said at the time: "I get married once. I planned everything. I booked this band in March. My big thing was to have an ethnic band. Now that is shot."

So there she was, without a Croatian band.

Could I do something to help, Irena asked?

In truth, no. If I could play tamburitza music on a bugarija, I gladly would, but I can't. I offered to come to the wedding and sing "Mairzy Doats and Dozy Doats and Little Lamzy Divey," but she declined.

So all I could do was write a column describing the sad situation and calling for world peace and understanding so these problems would not arise in the future.

And to my surprise, that did the trick. No, we have not achieved world peace and understanding. I have my limitations.

But several tamburitza musicians, Serbian and Croatian, volunteered to put a band together and play at the wedding.

"It was wonderful," Irena recalls. "One guy read the column and drove in all the way from Wisconsin. They serenaded us as we walked in the door and they played all night long and we danced and danced and danced. And they didn't charge us. And when people asked them who was Croatian and who was Serbian, they wouldn't tell. They said it didn't matter. And nobody was killed."

That was three years ago. Recently I was filing away some old columns and I wondered what had happened to the tall, lovely Irena and the taller and handsome Max.

I have to admit that the possibilities intrigued me, especially if she turned into a terrible shrew, he became a doofus, and they were now fighting it out in court. Surprise endings can make for a fun column.

So I tracked them down in Valparaiso, Ind., where they live in a pink brick house and Max works as a technician at the university.

Now they are three. She's 14 months old and her name is Gabriella. And Irena says they are happy.

But in the beginning, it wasn't easy.

"The first year it was really hard because of the war. I'm very argumentative and every day there was something terrible on the news and I was so angry.

"I'd visit my parents and my mom would say, 'Oh, gosh,' and my dad would say, 'Oh, they bombed this,' or 'They bombed that,' and I'd get upset and I'd go home all furious and yell at my husband. Once when a hospital was bombed, I went home and I yelled at him: 'How can your people do this?' I'd walk in the door and be a monster.

"Luckily, he looks at both sides. He'd stay calm and he'd calm me down. Then, really, because of the baby, I just stopped paying attention to it. The first years of marriage are hard enough without a war between two people. There's nothing I could do except in my own little world, and we're doing the best we can. I stopped harping on it. I stopped griping. I realized I had to, because of the baby. If I kept it up, that kind of attitude, she'd be torn and I couldn't have that.

"What I've learned is you cannot let outside influences tear you apart. Before anything, we're two people. We're human beings before we're anything else. As two people, we are very compatible and love each other so much. I'm not a mush person and I never expected to do this whole love thing. But I could not find a more perfect half for me. And that comes first.

"If you're trying to build a life together, you cannot let other people color your ideals, your values. He taught me that. My husband taught me that."

Max says: "For someone of my generation to hate someone for a crime committed by his grandfather, it's got to stop. Really, it's the family that teaches hate. A child is born innocent, and it's our job to teach them. Anyway, she gets her good looks from her mom, but her good nature from me."

I don't want to hear any more complaints about the young members of Generation X.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.

TEC cooperates with many types of agencies

This is to clarify information in the "Another View" editorial reprinted in the Sept. 25, Reporter-Telegram.

The Texas Employment Commission has cooperated with the "Operation Jobs" program in Dallas and is working to resolve issues with the other agencies involved. When TEC is notified by the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) that unauthorized workers have been removed from a job site, TEC reviews current openings listed with the agency. If the employer has an open order, TEC will continue to refer workers to the employer. If the agency does not have an order, TEC will contact the employer and offer services to recruit workers. TEC will not refer workers without the employer's authorization. Recently the agency helped a Dallas/Ft. Worth area employer replace 50 workers in a similar situation.

TEC does cooperate with all types of agencies. Because of the large number of employees and applicants who use TEC services, cooperation benefits them and such organizations as Private Industry Councils/JTPA, Texas Department of Human Services, Texas Rehabilitation Commission, local services, area chambers of commerce and industrial developers. Cooperation requires an understanding and agreement so that laws and regulations that govern the parties are not breeched. Often this aspect of cooperation is the most difficult to understand and attain. Eddie Cavazos, TEC chairman, and representatives from INS in Dallas will meet in the next few days to resolve any remaining issues.

Employers are encouraged to use TEC placement services because it makes good business sense. Employers have paid for the service through their FUTA Tax. A nationwide pool of applicants can have access to the employer's opening. Assistance in training workers and tax incentives are available through TEC linkages. A redesign of placements services will give employers access through their personal computer and modem. Meeting the needs of employers in a more efficient and effective way will also benefit Texas workers.

Airborne sightseeing tours under fire from federal agency

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Millions of Americans take to the skies every year to enjoy the thrill of seeing Hawaii's volcanoes or the Grand Canyon from above — but are those jaunts safe?

The Federal Aviation Administration began special safety inspections of Hawaiian tour operators in July, and last month imposed an emergency safety rule for those flights.

And the National Transportation Safety Board — which has been pushing for stricter air tour regulation — is holding hearings on safety issues Tuesday in Phoenix and Thursday and Friday in Honolulu.

"Flying into a valley for a look at a volcano or a waterfall is unique," said safety board member John Lauber. "There are regulatory holes."

Because the air tour category isn't clearly defined in federal rules, accurate safety statistics are hard to come by.

Timothy P. Forte, the safety board's director of the Office of Aviation Safety, told a congressional hearing in 1992 that the industry seems to be improving.

In 1981, the accident rate for air taxis — a larger category that includes many tour operators — was 1.38 fatal accidents per 100,000 flight hours, he said. By 1991, that was down to 0.80 fatal accidents.

But that was still double the rate for scheduled commuter airlines, and 10 times as high as larger airlines.

There currently are no specific operating rules for the majority of air tour operations, complained Lauber, who will conduct the field hearings.

He said board investigations into a pair of helicopter accidents in Hawaii last July have revealed several "significant safety issues ... that are also applicable to the entire U.S. air tour-sightseeing industry."

The companies involved in those accidents have responded to board recommendations, the agency said. Its hearings will focus on such matters as operating specifications, emergency equipment, how close aircraft operate to one another and search-and-rescue procedures.

In announcing its emergency safety rules, the FAA cited 24 fatalities in Hawaiian air tour accidents over the last three years.

The rules set height and speed limits, require safety briefings for passengers and say only amphibious aircraft or those with floats can operate over water and that passengers on such flights must wear flotation gear.

Safety over water became a particular concern after a crash in Hawaii on July 14 in which three people drowned when engine failure forced a helicopter to ditch in the sea. Four other people made it to shore.

A safety board investigation of a 1983 Hawaiian accident in which a plane flew into the side of a cloud-covered mountain found that the pilot was incompetent and lied about his qualifications to get a job.

But the problem goes beyond pilots who make mistakes or take unnecessary risks, said Robert MacIntosh, a board investigator who wrote the report on that crash.

For example, MacIntosh said, some operators are setting up makeshift helicopter pads near scenic areas to circumvent FAA rules that apply to flights of more than 25 miles.

The safety board estimates that the air tour industry serves about 2 million passengers a year, about half in Hawaii.

The FAA imposed tighter safety regulations on Grand Canyon flights in 1987 after a series of crashes, including the deadliest sightseeing accident on record. Twenty-five people died in a 1986 collision of a tour plane and helicopter over the canyon's Crystal Rapids.

While Hawaii and the Grand Canyon are the focus of the current hearings, air tours are popular in many parts of the country.

Lauber said that for most of the country, the FAA has not set route or altitude rules for tour flights, has no rules for how close tour planes can follow one another and has no standard air traffic control procedures.

Meanwhile, the government is pushing a separate investigation the noise from tour aircraft over national parks.

Officials are seeking ways to stifle the overhead din that frightens animals, annoys hikers and may even damage ancient American Indian structures.

Clinton stays tough on Kuwait

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

The lessons of 1990 are playing out in the Clinton administration's direct and powerful response to the massing of Iraqi troops near the Kuwaiti border. There is no whiff of compromise, no diplomatic ambiguity, no teasing overtures.

Nor is the administration wasting any time trying to read Saddam Hussein's mind.

"I would counsel looking at the facts and reacting to the facts," said Secretary of State Warren Christopher in Jerusalem at the start of another burst of shuttle diplomacy that includes a stop in Kuwait.

The facts are that Iraq is making another ominous push toward Kuwait. And the White House believes that is reason enough to respond.

"I am not sure how valuable speculation is," Christopher said Sunday. But the speculation continued, some of it within the Pentagon.

Maybe Iraq figured rushing parts of two divisions to the border would cause the U.N. Security Council to buckle and lift a painful trade embargo and a ban on oil purchases.

Or, like the Romans did with bread and circuses, maybe Saddam is trying to distract his people from shortages and other deprivations.

Where the Bush administration tried diplomatic reconciliation — symbolized by Ambassador April Glaspie's assurances to the Iraqi leader that the United States would not interfere in inter-Arab affairs — the Clinton administration has spoken directly and forcefully to Saddam.

In clear language, it has told Saddam his thrust toward the border would not intimidate the United States or the U.N. Security Council into easing sanctions imposed on Baghdad during the Persian Gulf War. Aggression will be met head-on. And Israel, which Iraq attacked with Scud missiles, would be protected.

■ Analysis

President Clinton said Friday that another attempt to annex Kuwait, which Iraq considers to be its 19th republic, would be a "grave mistake." And Christopher told the Iraqis on Sunday they "would pay a tremendous price if they were foolish enough to miscalculate again."

The rush of troops, planes and warships to the gulf underscored the message.

Critics of the Reagan and Bush administrations have blamed Washington for Saddam's miscalculation in 1990. The United States had extended hundreds of millions of dollars in agricultural credits to Iraq. The country was removed from the State Department's terrorism list. Diplomatic relations were re-established. And the United States soft-pedaled allegations of Saddam's poison gas attacks on Kurds.

But most vivid was Glaspie's call on Saddam a week before Iraqi troops poured into Kuwait. Accounts vary and it is still not clear whether the experienced diplomat was closely following instructions or freelancing.

Having tilted toward Iraq in its war with Iran, the United States was trying to coax Saddam Hussein into a working relationship with Washington. Many analysts are convinced the Iraqi leader took those overtures to mean he would not be opposed if he carried out Baghdad's historic claims on Kuwait.

He was wrong.

President Bush and James A. Baker III, his secretary of state, built a powerful coalition of Arab and other nations to wrest Kuwait back from Iraq.

The Clinton administration hopes by moving with unambiguous force now, it will not come to that again. But if Saddam crosses the border, he is bound to face a another bloody showdown.

Astronauts steer to within 100 yards of earlier orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Endeavour's astronauts steered Sunday to within 100 yards of where they were in orbit the day before — and the day before that — for their detailed radar survey of Earth.

"It's absolutely incredible that you can go 17,500 miles an hour and repeat a position in space that closely," astronaut Daniel Bursch said.

Since Friday, Endeavour has been maneuvering to repeat its orbital path every 24 hours so its powerful radar can map mountains, forests and deserts from the same place in space at the same time of day.

These radar images, taken from slightly different angles 127 miles up, will be combined to produce 3-D topographic maps capable of revealing changes in terrain as small as a half-inch. That kind of detail could allow scientists to one day predict earthquakes and volcanic eruptions.

The biggest gap between duplicated orbits was 440 yards. The average was 100 yards.

"Everyone is just flabbergasted that it's worked this well," said Mike Sander, project manager at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif. "It's beyond our wildest expectations."

Endeavour's closest repeat pass was over the Kamchatka Peninsula in Russia's Far East on Saturday. There was virtually no difference, Sander said.

Mission Control uses a combination of ground-based radar and satellite data to determine the shuttle's exact position.

Some of the radar observations — from a few minutes to 10 hours — were lost when one of three radar-data recorders failed Saturday, Sander said.

Military begins officers' trials

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — As the U.S. military mobilizes against the threat of another Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, the Air Force prepares for hearings on the "friendly fire" deaths that resulted from the last war with Iraq.

Five Air Force officers are charged in the downing of two U.S. helicopters over Iraq on April 14. Investigative hearings that are the military equivalent of a grand jury convene Tuesday at Tinker Air Force Base, where four of the officers are based.

Twenty-six people died when American F-15 fighter planes shot down the Blackhawk helicopters, mistaking them for Soviet-made Iraqi Hinds.

The officers were members of an Airborne Warning and Control System radar plane monitoring a restricted flight zone established to protect Kurds from Iraqi air attack.

An Air Force report alleges the AWACS crew failed to tell fighter pilots that the helicopters were American, failed to ensure the aircraft used the right identification codes and failed to monitor the no-fly zone properly.

Maj. Douglas Martin, Maj. Lawrence Tracey, Capt. Jim Wang, 1st Lt. Joseph Halcli and 2nd Lt. Ricky Wilson are charged with dereliction of duty. All have denied criminal conduct and said their actions were based on training.

"I am deeply disappointed and outraged that I have been accused of criminal offenses," Tracey, the mission crew commander, said in a statement last month. "I feel great sadness for the families of the persons killed in this tragic accident, however, I did nothing wrong."

Martin, who is based at Langley Air Force Base in Virginia, has said the AWACS crew did not know the helicopters were still flying. He said in a statement the crew assumed the pilots had followed standard procedure in the security zone and landed.

The helicopters carried 15 Americans and 11 foreigners who had worked with the Kurdish minority in Iraq since the Persian Gulf War in 1991.

After the hearings, which could take weeks, Lt. Gen. Stephen Croker, will decide if the five officers will be court-martialed, disciplined or cleared.

DEAR ABBY

Home sprinkler system is families' best insurance

By Abigail Van Burne

DEAR ABBY: It is a national disgrace that the United States has the highest fire death rate of any country in the industrialized world.

Van Buren

In recent months, we have all heard or read about devastating fire deaths. A number of firefighters have been killed this year, and recently eight children under 14, who were left home alone in Illinois, died in a house fire. As president of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, I am asking your readers to think seriously about fire prevention.

Every October during Fire Prevention Week, we encourage the public to change the batteries in their smoke detectors ("Change your clock, change your battery").

But you can do more to protect your family and home. I urge your readers to consider installing residential fire sprinklers. There has never been a multiple loss of life due to fire or smoke in a building equipped with a sprinkler system. For less than what homeowners pay to install carpeting, they can install an instant firefighting system that could save children, adults, senior citizens — even the family pet. (Part of the cost can be recouped through reduced homeowner's insurance premiums, but more important, sprinklers are the best life insurance policy money can buy.) It is a small price to pay to protect the lives of loved ones.

Abby, your readers should also be encouraged to stay in motels and hotels equipped with sprinkler systems. They should demand that facilities such as nursing and retirement homes have the same fire protection. Every year, senior citizens in these facilities die needlessly because they can't move fast enough to escape.

For readers who may think that sprinkler systems are conspicuous and ugly, or fear they may go off accidentally and ruin their homes, the newer systems are inconspicuous, and the chance of a sprinkler going off accidentally is only one in 16 million!

Individuals and families must take responsibility for their own lives. Installing a sprinkler system is the BEST way of fulfilling that responsibility. — CHIEF TOM SIEGFRIED

DEAR CHIEF SIEGFRIED: The fact that there has never been a multiple loss of life due to fire in a building with a sprinkler system is one that every family should take into consideration.

Readers, for a free copy of "Fire Sprinkler Facts," write to: Operation Life Safety, 4025 Fair Ridge Drive, Fairfax, Va. 22033-2868.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the grandmother who resented people asking how old she is:

I, too, am a grandmother, and I also look younger than I am; but when people ask me how old I am, I give them my sweetest smile and say, "I'm old enough to know the score, and young enough to enjoy the game." -- MARY IN HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: Regarding people who ask how old I am, I have a ready answer. I add five years to my age; then they say, "Really? You look great for your age!" I smile and say "Thank you." — SIDNEY KONIGSBURG, HOLLYWOOD, FLA.

P.S. I'm only 76.

Probe focuses on payments to congressmen

HOUSTON (AP) — Investigators have confiscated documents that show three current and one former Texas congressmen received payments exceeding federal limits from a recently indicted moving company operator, The Houston Post reported Sunday in a copyright story.

The federal probe focuses on the relationship between Sherwood Van Lines of San Antonio and Democratic Reps. Greg Laughlin of West Columbia and Bill Sarpalius of Amarillo. Also being looked at are Rep. Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs and former Rep. Albert Bustamante of San Antonio.

All deny wrongdoing.

The Post said it obtained documents relating to the investigation suggesting that:

—Each received a $2,500 check for attending a 1989 convention held in Las Vegas by Sherwood President Leslie Alfred Taber, although each reported receiving $2,000 — the congressional honorarium limit at the time.

—Each received more than $1,000 worth of gambling chips at the convention but never reported it.

—Laughlin, Sarpalius and Phil Duncan, Sarpalius' top assistant, paid less than full price for their moves by Sherwood from Texas to Washington, D.C.

Taber was indicted last month by a federal grand jury in San Antonio for allegedly illegally funneling $11,000 in Sherwood corporate funds to Laughlin, Sarpalius, Chapman, Bustamante and five other Democratic members of Congress.

All have pledged to return any illegal contributions.

As for the convention, Laughlin, Chapman and Bustamante reported $2,000 payments. Sarpalius didn't report anything until December 1993, after it became public knowledge Taber was under investigation.

Sarpalius said that jogged his memory about the honorarium. He said he found no tax document showing he had been paid but acknowledged receiving money for his speech that he did not disclose.

The Post obtained copies of the invoices and check duplicates dated Dec. 28, 1988, from Sherwood. Each member's check was for $2,500. Laughlin and Sarpalius questioned whether that proves anything because they are not original canceled checks.

Sarpalius said he was not sure of the amount and did not rule out the possibility it could have been more than $2,000.

Laughlin said he "never got a $2,500 check from them. To my knowledge. I don't recall getting it."

Bustamante denied getting a $2,500 check. "I remember them giving us a check for $2,000, and, of course, they paid the expenses there," he said.

Chapman's chief of staff, Billy Moore, said the congressman received $2,500, but that the extra money was returned.

One item obtained by The Post that has been given to authorities is a copy of a list allegedly handwritten by Taber that details this distribution of gambling chips: $1,500 each to Laughlin, Chapman and Duncan, $1,300 to Bustamante, $1,100 to Sarpalius.

Atomic vets' survey finds legacy of retardation

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — One researcher is blaming atomic bomb testing for mental retardation in the grandchildren of American military veterans unwittingly used as guinea pigs.

Thirty-one percent of more than 200 veterans surveyed had mentally retarded grandchildren. Those surveyed were either veterans of the bomb tests or were in Hiroshima or Nagasaki postwar, said Rudy Florentine, a researcher for the National Association of Atomic Veterans.

The study "showed more females were affected than males (overall)," said Florentine, who served aboard a Navy ship in Japanese waters after the atomic bombs were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki to end World War II.

His research also found that 23 percent of the grandchildren suffer from live-birth genetic defects, 13 percent from bone and skull abnormalities or disorders and 31 percent from a combination of respiratory, muscular, dental, skin and stomach disorders.

"The government doesn't know what we (parents and grandparents) are going through," Florentine said. "We obeyed orders which damaged our lives and our children forever."

Two of Florentine's three children were physically affected by his exposure to radiation and fallout, said Oscar Rosen, national commander of the 5,000-member organization, which is holding its annual convention here through Saturday.

Nearly 200,000 U.S. military personnel participated in the post-bomb occupation of the two Japanese cities, according to newspaper reports. In addition, more than 200,000 veterans were exposed to more than 200 atmospheric tests of nuclear weapons, mainly in the 1950s.

Tragedy turns homecoming into time of mourning

RICHARDSON (AP) — J.J. Pearce High School went ahead with its homecoming dance this weekend, but many wore the dark colors of mourning.

Hanging on the school's marquee were reminders not to drink and drive, part of an ongoing effort at the suburban Dallas school.

The lesson was learned tragically with the death of popular drill team captain Laura Welborne in an accident that police say involved alcohol.

The 17-year-old senior died on a rain-slickened road about 2 a.m. Saturday after she and her boyfriend, former Pearce football star Wade McFarland, left a post-game party.

McFarland, 18, was driving his Mitsubishi 3000 GT when it spun out of control and hit a tree. The Louisiana State University freshman walked away from the wreck and called paramedics.

Police say he had been drinking. He has been charged with involuntary manslaughter.

School officials considered cancelling Saturday's homecoming dance, but Ms. Welborne's parents asked them not to.

Still, none of Ms. Welborne's Pacesetters teammates was there. Other girls came in dark dresses.

Earlier in the day, hundreds of Pearce students attended a prayer service in her honor at Waterview Church of Christ.

Also Saturday, McFarland's father arrived at the Melborne home to beg forgiveness, according to Ms. Welborne's sister, Jayme Welborne-Jones.

"He fell to his knees. He was crying because that shattered their lives," she said. "He said, 'I'm so sorry. I can't believe this happened.' "

The younger McFarland also called the family after being released from jail on $2,500 bond.

Ms. Welborne's father said all he could do was listen.

As students arrived for the homecoming dance Saturday night, still displayed on the outdoor marquee was the message "don't-drink-and-drive."

School officials and the local chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving had tried to make the message relevant last week. On campus they displayed a car in which four students from Garland were killed in a 1991 accident that involved alcohol.

Stressing out

Stress management training sessions, seen by many companies as a way to help workers cope with the pressures of their jobs, often don't work and actually may do harm than good, according to Working Smart, a newsletter about workplace issues. The publication says the pep talks help employees feel better for about a week, but many later feel guilty because there was no lasting effect. Real stress reduction comes from workers learning how much work they can handle, setting limits on what they'll do and pacing themselves, Working Smart said.

Don't touch the dial

Stick to the remote control, it's more fun. In fact, one out of three Americans say watching television wouldn't be nearly as pleasurable without the device, according to a survey by Philips Consumer Electronics Co. The survey of 1,013 adults also found that one out of three liked the personal control that went along with using a remote, though 62 percent found it rude when the remote handler constantly channel surfs. Philips' poll coincided with the recent introduction of its Magnavox Remote Locator, a beeping device that allows TV viewers to locate lost remotes.

Free software

Washington University says it's giving high school seniors free computer software that allows them to apply electronically to the St. Louis school. About 650 colleges nationwide accept on-line applications via the CollegeLink program, including Harvard, Stanford and Duke universities. "We are concerned about the application process and the way it affects the students in their senior year," says Harold Wingood, dean of Washington University's undergraduate admissions. "The hoops through which we make students jump are too burdensome and don't add to the academic experience. This helps them have a better senior year and gives us better data and cleaner applications more quickly."

Fine for now

About two-thirds of Americans feel they're financially better off now than they were a year ago, but most are becoming increasingly fearful of running out of money in their retirement years. Those were the results of a recent poll commissioned by the International Association for Financial Planning. Fifty-two percent of the 1,100 people surveyed said they were saving more and are in less debt than a year ago. Fifty-nine percent said they were very or somewhat concerned that they haven't provided sufficiently for their retirement. In a similar poll five years ago, only 43 percent expressed those concerns.

Do-it-yourself wills do the trick for some

Superstition, fear of lawyers hold some back

By Vivian Marino
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — You know you can't take it with you. Yet even though most people are aware of the need for an orderly distribution of wealth after they're gone, about two-thirds of all Americans never get around to drafting a will.

The legal self-help industry is working to change that with manuals, do-it-yourself will kits and computer software, all of which can do the job adequately and inexpensively for many folks.

"Some people are reluctant to go to a lawyer ... because they feel they may end up paying more than they need to," said Steven R. Elias, an attorney and associate publisher of Nolo Press Inc. in Berkeley, Calif., which sells legal guidebooks for consumers.

"There's also some superstition involved; some feel that if they make out a will, it will somehow hasten their death," he said.

Elias — who admits to not having made a will himself until just two years ago — says average individuals who don't have substantial estates and plan to leave everything to their spouses can often achieve the same results with a self-help kit as a lawyer can, as long as they carefully follow instructions.

Besides, he says, most lawyers use the same standardized forms found in legal stationery stores or publications like Nolo's $17.95 "Simple Will Book" or $14.95 "Wills" legal form kit.

Nolo also has a brisk-selling software program, "Willma-

Will Requirements

Basic legal requirements for a valid will:

- Age. You must be at least 18 years old in most states, although some lower the age restrictions for those who are married or in the military.
- State of Mind. You must be of "sound mind." That simply means you understand a will is being drafted and you're aware of the property you own and know whom you're leaving it to. All this must be done of your own free will.
- Purpose. You must have at least one substantive provision, such as disposing of property, making gifts or appointing a personal guardian for minor children.
- Executor. You must appoint at least one executor, or personal representative, to supervise the distribution of your property and see that your debts and taxes are paid after death.
- Signing and witnessing. You must date and sign the will. At least two adults who are not beneficiaries must witness your signature, then sign the will as your official witnesses.

Courting trouble

Examine all angles before taking legal action

NEW YORK — Sometimes it seems like suing a company is guaranteed to make a plaintiff a millionaire.

A secretary is awarded $7.1 million in a sexual harassment lawsuit against the Chicago law firm Baker & McKenzie, although she worked at the firm for just three months.

An 81-year-old woman receives a $2.9 million jury award against McDonald's after suffering third-degree burns from the fast-food chain's hot coffee.

Big awards like these grab big headlines. But the public often hears little about the aftermath — a judge cut the award against McDonald's to $480,000, and the Baker & McKenzie decision is likely to be appealed.

The sense from media reports is that the number of individuals suing companies and winning is increasing and that jury awards — especially in the emotionally charged areas of employment law and product liability — are climbing into the stratosphere.

The reality, however, is more complex.

Yes, juries are sending messages to employers that discrimination and harassment at work are not acceptable. The number of awards is growing. But that's because jury trials and punitive damages in such cases weren't allowed before 1991 amendments to the Civil Rights Act.

"It took time for those cases to make their way through the pipeline," said Christine Carty, a litigator with Schnader, Harrison, Segal & Lewis who works in employment law.

In product liability law, despite some large, well-publicized awards, the number of suits has actually declined since the mid-1980s and consumers are finding juries less sympathetic to their causes, legal experts say.

Furthermore, one in two awards is either reversed or reduced by juries or judges, said Michael Rustad, a professor at Suffolk Law School in Boston.

State courts, which handle about 100 times the case load of federal courts, say that while 18 million new lawsuits are filed each year, less than 2 percent are tort cases — those involving wrongful acts, injury, negligence or damage.

In federal court, of the more than 200,000 civil suits filed, only about 6 percent are product liability cases.

And product liability filings in federal courts, with the exception of asbestos cases, declined by about 36 percent between 1985 and 1991, according to the American Bar Association. All tort filings fell by about 20 percent, also excluding asbestos cases, over the same period.

But in discrimination and harassment cases, the changes in the Civil Rights Act have prompted individuals and lawyers to file more suits, said Ronald Green, a partner at Epstein Becker & Green, a firm that represents many companies.

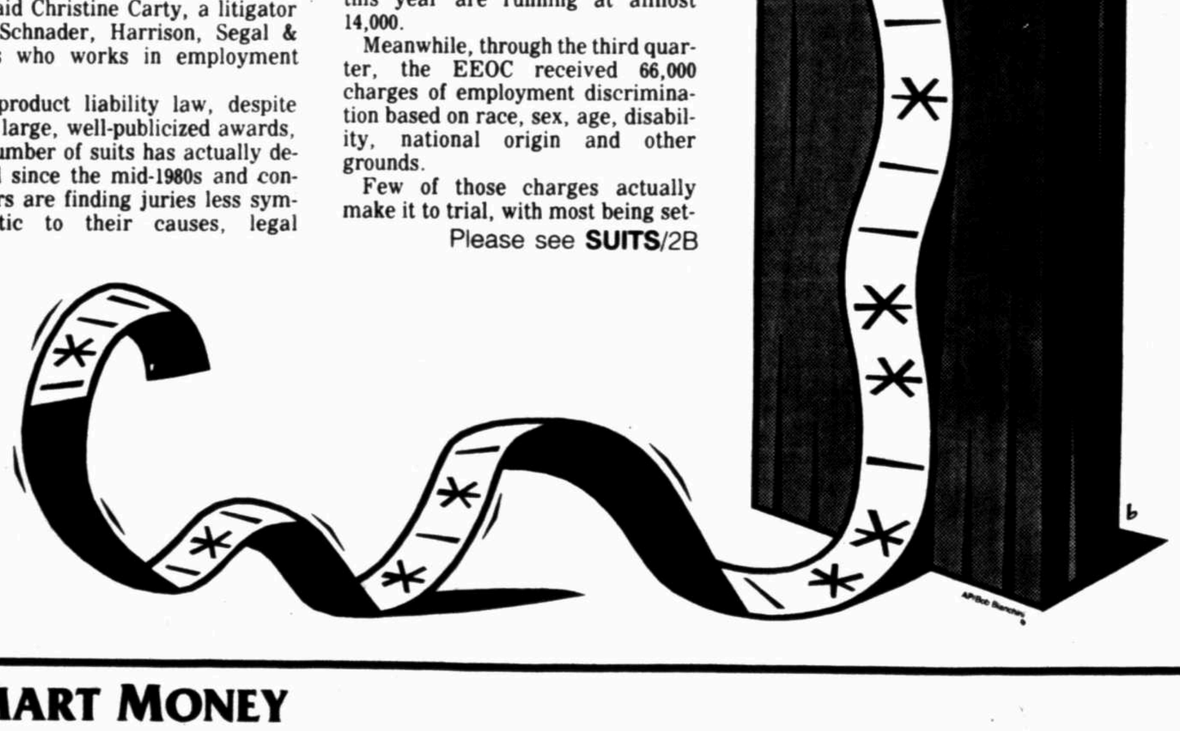

In addition, Anita Hill's accusations against Clarence Thomas during his 1991 Supreme Court confirmation hearing have helped make the public more aware of sexual harassment, he said.

In 1989, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and local Fair Employment Practices Agencies received 5,623 charges of sexual harassment, while projections for this year are running at almost 14,000.

Meanwhile, through the third quarter, the EEOC received 66,000 charges of employment discrimination based on race, sex, age, disability, national origin and other grounds.

Few of those charges actually make it to trial, with most being set-

Despite losses gold still has avid following

By Chet Currier
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — For an investment that has turned in a dismal performance over the past 15 years, gold still has a remarkably large fan club on Wall Street.

Here is a commodity, trading lately at just under $400 an ounce, that is still more than 50 percent below the peak of about $875 it reached in early 1980.

With all that has happened in the financial world through the early 1990s, the gold price now stands right about where it was at the start of 1991, when it had a brief runup in advance of the Gulf War.

Yet many analysts are recommending it — not only the specialized "gold bugs," but a number of respected strategists who watch the broad range of investments available in markets around the world.

"Gold is a good hedge against something nasty happening," says Barton Biggs at Morgan Stanley & Co., who has 4 percent of his recommended global investment portfolio invested in it.

"Gold is probably one of the most universally traded commodities, and thus provides a type of de facto universal diversification," says David B. Bostian Jr., chief economist at the New York brokerage firm of Herzog Heine Geduld Inc.

Gold has been touted lately as a potential beneficiary of revived inflation, should a strengthening world economy exert upward pressure on prices and wages.

It has also been talked up as a safe harbor should the opposite problem, deflation, arise, perhaps as a result of the Federal Reserve's credit-tightening this year in an effort to stave off inflation.

Gold can be viewed as a "hedge against financial instability," Bostian says.

Whatever its virtues as a store of value, however, gold also carries with it some distinctive risks and drawbacks that demand attention from anyone who is considering investing in it.

First of all, in bullion or coin form, gold pays no interest or dividends. This may not be a fatal flaw, but it does mean that the price must appreciate about 5 percent a year just to equal the return you can get currently on Treasury bills. In many years it has failed to meet that conservative standard.

Gold may, in fact, incur what amounts to negative interest in the form of the cost of delivery, storage, insurance and assay.

Keough plan withdrawals

Q. When I set up a Keogh plan in 1964, only half the contributions were tax deductible. I contributed $5,600 each year from 1964 through 1967. I am 68 and retired with an account of over $105,000. How do I take out the after-tax money?
— Merritt P. Weiss, Sandpoint, Idaho

A. When the legislation authorizing Keoghs was passed in 1962, it permitted deductions for only half of the annual contribution, initially limited to $5,000, confirmed Seymour Goldberg, a lawyer at Goldberg & Ingber in Garden City, N.Y., who specializes in retirement plan distributions. Although no longer the case, that applied for tax years 1963 through 1967.

Goldberg advises clients in your situation to ask the institution that holds the Keogh to issue a check for the after-tax money, in your case, $2,800 each year, or $14,000. Also ask the institution not to issue a form 1099, which reports income, on that money.

"If they insist on issuing the 1099, then you must include the form with your income tax return and explain why the money is not taxable," Goldberg said. You also must have your old tax returns to prove you did not deduct the $2,800 each year.

Raising fund minimums

Q. Last year, I put $1,000 in a Twentieth Century mutual fund. I recently received a notice from the fund that the minimum was rising to $2,500 and that I must either sell my shares or buy more. Does the fund have the right to change the rules like that?
— Betty Gellis, Boynton Beach, Fla.

A. Yes. Twentieth Century raised the minimum to $2,500 on March 1, giving shareholders who have accounts until Dec. 10 to bring their balance up to that amount, said Gunnar Hughes, a company spokesman.

You have two choices: Either send a check for the missing amount or sign up for an automatic monthly deposit of at least $50. If you take no action by Dec. 10, Twentieth Century will mail a check for the balance in your account.

Deciding to raise the minimum has been difficult, Hughes said, but maintaining small accounts was "a drain on the service system."

Skip the annuity

Q. Is it a good idea to purchase an annuity with the proceeds from a 401(k) plan? What options are available? What are the tax consequences?
— Connie Rathbone, Los Angeles

A. Skip the annuity, advised Lynn Hopewell, a financial planner in Falls Church, Va., and the editor of the Journal of Financial Planning.

"The proceeds of a 401(k) already have tax-deferred status, which you can preserve by rolling into them into an individual retirement account," Hopewell said. "That gives you all the benefits of an annuity with none of the cost." An annuity's costs might amount to 1 percent to 2 percent of assets a year.

Minority discounts

What kind of professional do I need to use if I plan to file for a minority discount for business gifts to family?

If you plan to use a minority discount to make gifts of your business to family members, you must start with an independent appraisal of the business.

Estate planning lawyers recommend someone with the designation of accredited senior appraiser, ASA, from the American Society of Appraisers in Herndon, Va., (1-800-ASA-VALU) or MAI, a designation that is given by the Appraisal Institute, in Chicago (1-312-335-4100 for a free directory).

When a company buys back its stock

By Pamela Yip
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — When a company starts buying back its stock because it says it's "undervalued," should you believe it?

Not necessarily.

This can be a sign of a bargain that the stock market's overlooked. But it also can be a situation where the market sees problems that a company's management is hoping to paper over by pushing up its stock price with buybacks.

"By itself, it's cosmetic in nature," says Aimee McCrory, president of McCrory Associates Investment Management in Houston, a money management firm. "They can signal that management's intent is simply to treat the symptom, rather than tackle the longer-term problem" through ways such as cost-cutting.

"This is a lazy man's approach to the problem," she adds.

In any case, a recent study by a Rice University assistant professor shows that buybacks can be used as a starting point for picking winning stocks.

Over a four-year period, investors who bought and held stock tagged for repurchase had average gains of more than 12 percent above the gains of similarly sized companies without buyback programs, according to David Ikenberry, assistant professor of administrative science at Rice, who co-authored a recent research paper on how investors react to stock buyback programs.

The control portfolio consisted of all firms listed on the New York and American stock exchanges, whose characteristics were similar to those of a firm that had a buyback program in place. Ikenberry's team then sorted the control group according to market capitalization and used them like indexes to compare firms of similar size that had buyback programs. The control firms didn't have buyback programs.

A stock buyback is "a signal to begin more research into this company to see if these are really expensive stocks or a bargain," Ikenberry says.

In general, stock buybacks are good news for investors. They reduce the number of shares outstanding, thereby bolstering the share price.

By shrinking the number of shares, a buyback boosts per-share profits, unless profits also decline.

If you are looking to invest in a company with a buyback program, there's been plenty to choose from lately.

As of Sept. 27, corporations have announced $46.4 billion worth of buybacks this year, surpassing the $38.3 billion tallied for all of 1993, according to Securities Data Co. in Newark, N.J., a financial information company.

A major trigger of the buybacks was rising interest rates, which hurt the stock market, says Robert Liu, analyst at Securities Data.

"Also, a lot of companies have cash on their balance sheets," he says. "If they strategically don't see a good fit for an acquisition, they'll go and spend money buying back their own stock."

The winners in the stock buyback game are normally companies that have gone through some difficulties but have gotten them in hand, though earnings might not yet reflect that comeback.

"The successful stock buybacks appear to be cases where in the recent past, they may have had some problems, but overall, the business is sound and it appears to be a relative bargain," Ikenberry says.

You can pass over stock buybacks done for executive compensation programs or to have stock available for employee benefit programs or dividend reinvestment plans.

"They wouldn't be looking at it totally from the investment standpoint," says Martin Skala, senior editor of The Outlook, an investment newsletter published by Standard & Poor's Corp. "They're not making the decision in isolation — 'Hey, we've got some cash, our stock is really cheap, I want to buy some.' They've set up option programs and they have to buy the stock."

Don't feel rushed into investing in a company just because it's announced a buyback program. Ikenberry's study shows you have time to do your homework.

"The market is surprisingly slow to respond to the announcement of many stock buybacks," Ikenberry says.

After a company announces a stock buyback, investors' average response only increases the stock's price by 3.5 percent, Ikenberry says.

"Because of this substantial delay in market response, there is a significant time for investors to buy undervalued stocks that will tend to increase in value over the next four years," he says.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

When inherited property is taxed

By Bill Doyle

Q: We inherited land and a rental house from my parents, who died in 1989 and 1993. We sold that house and land in 1994. I have read in financial columns and an attorney has told me "inherited property is not taxable." However, the instructions that come with income tax returns give many details for reporting capital gains and losses on Schedule D. If inherited property is not taxable, why should we be concerned about Schedule D?

Doyle

A: We had better back up and start over.

Inherited property, whether it be real estate, securities, or any other "capital asset," is not counted as income and is not subject to income tax at the time it is received.

However, if you sell inherited property at a profit, that profit — not the entire proceeds from the sale — is a capital gain and is taxable as such.

Of course, if you sell inherited property at a loss, you have a capital loss. Capital losses can be used to offset capital gains. And, if capital losses exceed capital gains, those losses can be used to offset up to $3,000 of ordinary income annually. Either way, capital losses can reduce your federal income tax obligation.

The profit or loss on the sale of inherited property is the difference between the proceeds from the sale and the "basis" — cost for tax purposes — of that property. The basis of inherited property generally is the fair market value of that property on the date of death of the person who left it.

You are required to report all capital gains and capital losses on the Schedule D you file with your Form 1040 federal income tax return. The Internal Revenue Service receives copies of that schedule and all other "information returns." That's the reason you should be "concerned about" that schedule.

Q: This past August, I sold a rental property for $58,000. I bought that property for $49,000 in 1986 and assumed I would be liable for long-term capital gains tax on the $9,000 profit.

In settlement, I received more than $18,000, due to the fact I made a substantial down-payment in 1986.

Should I pay tax on $9,000 or $18,000? My accountant thinks $18,000, but I want a second opinion.

A: Probably on neither — but on some other number.

Because it was rental property, you should have depreciated it during the years you owned it. Depreciation reduces the tax you pay on rental income — and also lowers the basis.

Every dollar by which you reduced the basis through depreciation added a dollar to the profit you realized from the sale. You don't even hint what the depreciation amounted to. So, it is impossible to say what your "adjusted basis" was.

Assuming your accountant has been preparing your tax returns all along and has been following the rules correctly, my advice is to do as he says.

If you want a second opinion, take your story — with complete dollars and cents details — to another accountant. You simply do not provide enough details for this column to provide an accurate answer.

Q: I worked for a small country bank for 35 years, during which I purchased the bank's stock — two shares, here, five shares there, etc. I have no record of my purchase prices.

This bank has merged with a large city bank. We received one and a half shares of the large bank's shares for every country bank share.

I recently sold some of the merged bank's shares. What is my basis for tax purposes?

A: That is an unanswerable question. The IRS will be satisfied if you list the basis as "zero," thus paying capital gains tax on the full proceeds from the sale. But that would penalize you.

Check at that bank to see if any records are available.

which costs $69.95. The program tailors each document to the user's state laws and provides for, among other things, the designation of a guardian for minor children, an important reason for having a will in the first place. Elias says the computerized will-making process takes anywhere from 15 minutes to two hours.

Several other publishers offer wills as part of larger legal software packages. Parsons Technology's top-selling "It's Legal" program, for example, has more than 50 legal forms, including simple wills customized by state. It sells for $29. Overdrive Systems' "Home Lawyer," which also sells for $29, has similar forms, although only its living-will document is state-specific.

Document centers like Doc-U-Pro Processing Inc. in Taunton, Mass., also use computer programs to produce and sell dozens of standardized legal forms.

Doc-U-Pro, which has 25 branches in New England and New York, charges $45 for creating a simple will that's notarized and witnessed, based on the answers to a five-page questionnaire. The company also sells forms for uncontested divorces for $125 and prenuptial agreements for $65.

"Why should people pay $150 to $200 for a lawyer when they can get the same thing (form) for so much less?" said Richard Lewis, Doc-U-Pro president. "Some lawyers will tell you a simple will will only cost $100, but then when you tell them you have children ... or you own a house, they say, 'That's not simple any more.' There's nothing simple for a lawyer."

But the problem, most legal estate planners maintain, is knowing when a situation is truly simple enough to do without an attorney.

"You may not be doing your family members or heirs any favors by the do-it-yourself approach," said Thomas J. Stikker, a San Francisco lawyer specializing in estate planning. "All you're doing is leaving them a legacy of expense and confusion."

Clearly, there are situations in which an attorney should be contacted. (Average legal fees for a will range from $200 to $500.)

Denis Clifford, author of the "Simple Will Book," advises consulting a lawyer if an estate exceeds $600,000, since it's likely to be subject to federal estate taxes. He said legal advice also is warranted if you wish to establish a trust, attach contingencies to a gift, disinherit a spouse, leave part of a small business you own, make arrangements for long-term care for a beneficiary, or if you fear someone will contest your last wishes.

If you die without a will or other legal device to transfer property, the job of divvying up your wealth or providing for debts to be repaid falls to the state in which you reside.

Stikker says many of the do-it-yourself kits will produce adequate bare-bones documents that will be accepted by probate courts. But he warns individuals must be willing to invest the time to read and follow the detailed instructions that come with them.

"The trouble is, not everyone is willing to do that," Stikker said. "(But) you are less likely to botch things up with these (kits) than you are if you sat down and wrote one by hand."

Handwritten, or "holographic," wills, which must be signed but need not be witnessed, are permitted by about half of all states. In certain circumstances, states also will accept oral, or "nuncupative" wills in the presence of appropriate witnesses.

Phoenix lawyer and estate-planning specialist John C. Lincoln (a distant cousin of the president, who, by the way, died without a will) says these unconventional wills are often riddled with problems and subject to months of scrutiny in probate court.

Two of the most common errors in them, he said, is the failure to name alternate beneficiaries and to provide a so-called residuary clause, which simply means specifying who gets everything else in your estate after you listed who gets the house, the jewelry or the Elvis records.

Even improper punctuation can sometimes doom a will to months in probate.

"It's funny how if you leave a comma out in one place, you can change the meaning of a phrase," Lincoln said.

SUITS: Many cases are often frivolous tled before lawyers are even contacted and others settled before a trial date is set.

Still, once a case makes it to court, the stakes are high, Green said. Companies are often unwilling to settle in the hopes of discouraging other such actions, while plaintiffs who prevail can receive awards running into six figures, he said.

Although some observers have charged that many cases are often frivolous, with employees lured by dollar signs, Green said that is not usually the case.

Lawyers, whose compensation is often based on whether they succeed, will usually bring only the cases they think they can win.

Moreover, for plaintiffs, litigation is often lengthy and costly. And it's increasingly intrusive — a plaintiff's sex life can become part of public record, a considerable deterrent to frivolous suits.

"Anyone bringing a harassment or discrimination suit should be prepared for possible character assassination," said Philip Kay, a San Francisco lawyer who won the California state court jury decision against Baker & McKenzie.

Filing suit against a company can also do serious damage to a person's future chances of employment if the case is lost, Green said. Lawyers for the defendant may try to prove a plaintiff is mentally incompetent, for example.

"If you shoot at the king you'd better kill him," Green said.

For those who do win, the rewards can be significant.

Juries have a greater understanding than they used to of the issues involved, said Gordon Griller, court administrator for Maricopa County in Phoenix, Ariz.

In particular, "women are more aware of their rights than ever before," said Denise Hummel, a Boulder, Colo. lawyer who specializes in employment law.

Verdicts such as the Baker & McKenzie award, "are not about compensating the victim, they are about sending a message," Griller said.

In contrast, negative publicity about large product liability awards may have helped limit payments, said Ted Eisenberg, a professor at Cornell University's law school.

"There has been a concerted effort by large companies and the insurance industry to convince the public that product liability is out of hand — and it has worked," Eisenberg said.

Changes in the interpretation of tort law in the early to mid-1960s opened the way for plaintiffs to sue for damages in the case of product defects. Before the early 1970s such suits were virtually nonexistent. Previously, a product had to be extremely dangerous for a plaintiff to have any recovery, Rustad said.

Despite the recent trend toward limiting awards, industry lawyers say the issue of product liability represents a significant cost in legal expenses and jury awards for corporate America. That, they say, hurts America's competitive advantage.

Companies are worried. So a year ago, some of America's largest corporations formed the Civil Justice Reform Group to work toward tort law reform. The group has more than 25 members, most contributing $100,000 each to the effort. The companies are from a wide variety of industries including oil, drug, food, auto and insurance, according to Jack Martin, chairman of the group's steering committee and general counsel at Ford Motor Co.

Juries aren't necessarily the problem. A study by Eisenberg and Kevin Clermont, also of Cornell, showed that of product liability cases going to trial, plaintiffs experienced greater success before a judge than a jury between 1979 and 1991. Judges sided with consumers in 50 percent of the cases, while juries sided with them in only 30 percent.

But Rustad points out, for awards that are excessive or lack foundation, there are a number of judicial reviews and controls.

"It is not a case of juries handing down awards like lightning strikes," he said.

Savings rate continues fall

By John Cunniff
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Americans earned more and spent more in August than in July, adding further evidence that the economy is indeed continuing to grow. But there's more to the story than that.

The chief "more" is that the savings rate fell to 3.8 percent of after-tax income, one of the worst rates in the post-War era, a period during which monthly rates sometimes ranged well above 8 percent.

Savings aren't just an indicator of household security; they are the economy's catalyst, the ingredient that stirs the economic chemistry into motion and keeps it going, producing a higher standard of living.

Savings become investments — in education that raises the quality of workers; in capital equipment that raises productivity; in infrastructure to assure smooth communication and distribution of products and services.

With only slight exaggeration [illegible] might say that savings are everything to the economy.

Dallas dissects Buddy system

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING Buddy Ryan's seven-game hex on the Dallas Cowboys ended Sunday in a humiliating rout that had the fans sarcastically chanting "Buddy, Buddy, Buddy" even before the first quarter was over.

Emmitt Smith, playing despite a sore right hamstring, scored twice and Troy Aikman threw two touchdown passes as the Cowboys (4-1) snapped a seven-game losing streak to Ryan with a 38-3 victory over the Arizona Cardinals.

It was the Cowboys eighth consecutive victory over the Cardinals (1-4), and the 35-point differential tied a 45-10 whipping of St. Louis in 1973 as the largest defeat inflicted on the franchise by Dallas.

Ryan dominated Dallas when he was at Philadelphia and went into the game with an 8-2 record against the Cowboys. But his pregame boast that the Cardinals would handle the defending world champions looked silly. And quickly.

He gave the booing crowd a big thumbs up before the game started, but his head was hanging down by halftime. His offense produced only two first downs, and his second-ranked NFL defense looked dog-tired.

Mario's last lap not a victory one

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

MONTEREY, Calif. — On a day when Mario Andretti and Nigel Mansell bid farewell to Indy-car racing, Paul Tracy scored a convincing victory Sunday in the season-ending Bank of America 300.

■ Bank of America 300

Andretti, driving in his 407th and last Indy-car race at age 54, had a frustrating day, damaging his car in a first-lap accident and winding up 18th after after his engine blew just three laps from the end. He wound up watching from the pits as Tracy took the checkered flag.

"I'm just going to have to find out if there is life after driving after all," Andretti said. "And I'm sure there is."

Chargers silence Chiefs to stay perfect

San Diego receiver Alfred Papunu drops this pass, but the Chargers catch Kansas City down Sunday.

By Bernie Wilson
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO — The last time the San Diego Chargers were this good, it was 1961 and they were wearing the same sky-blue jerseys they wore Sunday.

With Natrone Means running for a career-high 125 yards and one touchdown on 19 carries, the Chargers celebrated their final "throwback" weekend and remained the NFL's only undefeated team with a 20-6 victory over the Kansas City Chiefs.

■ NFL Roundup/2C

"It definitely gives us confidence, because I guess this is the game that a lot of people were really judging us by," Means said. "This game kind of sends the message around the league that the Chargers are for real."

The Chargers (5-0) had been 0-8 in regular-season games against Kansas City since sweeping the series in 1989. Their only victory over the Chiefs was a 17-0 wild-card playoff win in 1992.

The Chargers are 5-0 for the first time since 1961, when they started 11-0 and reached the AFL championship game. On Sunday they wore their '61 "throwback" uniforms of sky-blue jerseys and white helmets with yellow lightning bolts. Kansas City wore its 1963 uniforms.

The Chiefs (3-2) have lost two straight games for the first time since Joe Montana moved over last season from San Francisco.

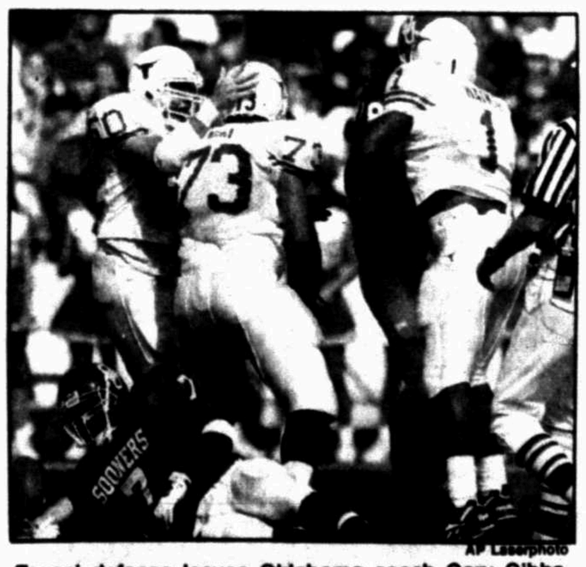

The Chargers needed a huge game from Means to eat up the clock and keep Montana off the field, and they got it.

The second-year pro from North Carolina had runs of 25 and 23 yards on the decisive 77-yard fourth-quarter drive. The march was capped by Stan Humphries' 5-yard TD pass to Mark Seay that set the final score with 7:47 left.

Means bruised a rib at the end of the 23-yard run, but returned.

Texas' defense leaves Oklahoma coach Gary Gibbs and running back Jerald Moore (above) frustrated.

Texas remains spur under Gibb's saddle

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Texas Longhorns continue to make life miserable for Oklahoma coach Gary Gibbs.

The Longhorns, underdogs for the sixth straight time in the annual border battle, beat Gibbs and the Sooners for the fifth time during that stretch, 17-10 Saturday.

The heroes for No. 12 Texas (4-1) were a redshirt freshman quarterback making his first start, and a beleaguered defense that came up with two goal line stands in the fourth quarter.

"It's a very disappointed locker room," Gibbs said. "I thought the key to the game was the play of James Brown. You definitely have to acknowledge his play. That and our inability to get the ball into the end zone is what killed us."

Brown, who had only played 11 downs and hadn't thrown a pass entering the game, started for injured Shea Morenz and played brilliantly. He completed 17 of 22 passes for 148 yards and a touchdown, and ran for the Longhorns' other TD.

He killed the Sooners (3-2) with his bootleg passes and his ability to run — he finished with 51 yards on nine carries.

"I didn't want to be a failure," said Brown, who found out he was starting just minutes before kickoff. "I was more anxious than scared."

Brown showed tremendous poise, especially considering it was his first start and it came in one of the most emotional games on both teams' schedules.

"We couldn't be more pleased and happy for him," coach John Mackovic said. "We said all along we could not afford to get away from our main game plan. I think James played every bit as well as we could have hoped for."

Brown got off to a rough start, throwing an interception on his fourth pass of the day. But he settled down after that and directed two long, time-consuming scoring drives that gave Texas the lead in the third quarter.

Thomas busts loose on Fins

■ Thurman Thomas rushed for 129 yards to move Buffalo into a first place tie with Miami.

Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Bryan Cox held his temper but couldn't hold onto Thurman Thomas.

Thomas broke free from Cox's grasp for a 26-yard touchdown late in the third quarter for his second touchdown Sunday as the Bills beat Miami 21-11.

The win moved Buffalo (4-2) into a first-place tie with the Dolphins (4-2) in the AFC East. New England (3-2) played at the Raiders later in the day.

It was the first win for a home team in the last seven meetings between Miami and Buffalo, who have now met 21 times with the division lead on the line. With so much at stake, the rivalry has gotten ugly — but never more so than last year, when Cox responded to alleged racial slurs with an obscene gesture to the Rich Stadium crowd.

Thomas, who sat out last week with a sprained knee so he would be ready for the Dolphins, ran 32 times for 129 yards — his fourth consecutive game with more than 100 rushing yards.

Jets 16, Colts 6

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - The Jets snapped a five-year home losing streak against Indianapolis with a victory.

Nick Lowery made three field goals, moving into second place on the NFL career list with 336, and backup runner Adrian Murrell provided a boost for New York in the fourth period.

The score was tied 6-6 at halftime and stayed that way as the Colts' usually reliable Dean Biasucci missed a field goal from 35 yards in the third quarter.

Murrell then sparked the decisive march, rushing for 15 yards and turning a short pass into a 12-yard gain on third down despite having little blocking on the play. Lowery's 37-yard kick came with 6:23 to go and left him behind only Jan Stenerud (373) on the field goal list.

Bears 17, Saints 7

CHICAGO — Thanks greatly to the sandbox known as Soldier Field, Steve Walsh remained unbeaten as Chicago's starting quarterback.

Playing his third straight game for injured Erik Kramer, Walsh directed two long second-half scoring drives and the Bears took advantage of their torn-up turf for a victory over New Orleans.

Lewis Tillman rushed for 100 yards and a touchdown for Chicago (4-2), which goes into its bye week with a half-game lead over Minnesota in the NFC Central. The Vikings play today at the New York Giants.

Soldier Field, ripped up by football games and rock concerts early last month, had been resodded and was in good shape until Alabama State played Jackson State in a steady rain Saturday evening.

That game left the middle of the field looking like a barren wasteland — more sandy than muddy — and New Orleans (2-4), which plays its home games in the Superdome, obviously was affected.

Packers 24, Rams 17

GREEN BAY, Wis. — If this was Reggie White vs. Jerome Bettis, score one for the defense.

Led by White, the Green Bay defense held Bettis to 65 yards rushing on 22 carries and provided great field position for the offense in a come-from-behind victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

Bettis entered the game as the NFL's second-leading rusher after four consecutive 100-yard games.

Robert Brooks returned a punt 85 yards for a touchdown, and the Packers (3-3) scored 21 straight points in the second half to overcome a 17-3 halftime deficit.

Chris Miller finished 18-of-29 for 166 yards, two scores and one interception — Lenny McGill's end zone pick with 47 seconds left in the game.

■ NFL Roundup

Eagles 21, Redskins 17

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Eagles have to believe Charlie Garner was worth the wait. Now, they may have to wait for him again.

The rookie from Tennessee, who ran for 111 yards and two touchdowns in his NFL debut last week, ran for 122 yards on 28 carries as the Eagles won their fourth in a row, beating Washington.

Washington (1-5) got touchdowns passes of 27 and 41 yards from Heath Shuler to fellow rookie Tydus Winans and a 47-yard field goal by Chip Lohmiller.

Randall Cunningham, 22-for-39 for 261 yards, ran 20 yards for one touchdown and threw a 49-yard touchdown pass to Fred Barnett.

49ers 27, Lions 21

PONTIAC, Mich. — The San Francisco 49ers gave rookie William Floyd a chance, and he gave them all they needed.

Floyd scored his first two NFL touchdowns, caught several passes and provided Steve Young with enough protection to guide the 49ers to a victory over Detroit.

Young, who was sacked 15 times in the first five games, was sacked just twice by the Lions (2-4), who lost their third straight game. The 49ers (4-2), rebounding from last week's 40-8 loss to Philadelphia, won their fifth in a row against the Lions.

Floyd, starting at fullback ahead of Marc Logan, carried eight times for 35 yards, including two 1-yard scores.

Ricky Watters had 44 yards on 16 carries, including a 4-yard touchdown, and Jerry Rice caught five passes for 36 yards.

But mistakes by Detroit's special teams, which cost the Lions 14 points a week earlier at Tampa Bay, opened the door for San Francisco and the 49ers struck for two quick touchdowns for a 14-14 tie at halftime.

Falcons 34, Buccaneers 13

ATLANTA — Ironhead Heyward scored two touchdowns in his first start of the season and Vinnie Clark returned interceptions 74 and 21 yards, leading Atlanta past Tampa Bay.

The Falcons (4-2) won their third straight game. Tampa Bay (2-4) failed again to win two in a row for the first time since the first two games of the 1991 season.

Jeff George threw two touchdowns passes to offset two interceptions and a lost fumble. Heyward rushed for 87 yards and a pair of short touchdowns as Atlanta took a 24-0 lead late in the first half.

It was Atlanta's biggest margin of victory since beating the Buccaneers 35-7 in Tampa on Dec. 13, 1992.

George threw TD passes of 36 yards to Andre Rison in the first quarter and 32 yards to Terance Mathis in the fourth.

Raiders 21, Patriots 17

FOXBORO, Mass. — Drew Bledsoe picked up plenty of passing yards again Sunday. Unfortunately for the Patriots, three of his throws were caught by Raiders cornerback Terry McDaniel.

One was returned for a touchdown and another set up the deciding score as Los Angeles stopped New England's three-game winning streak.

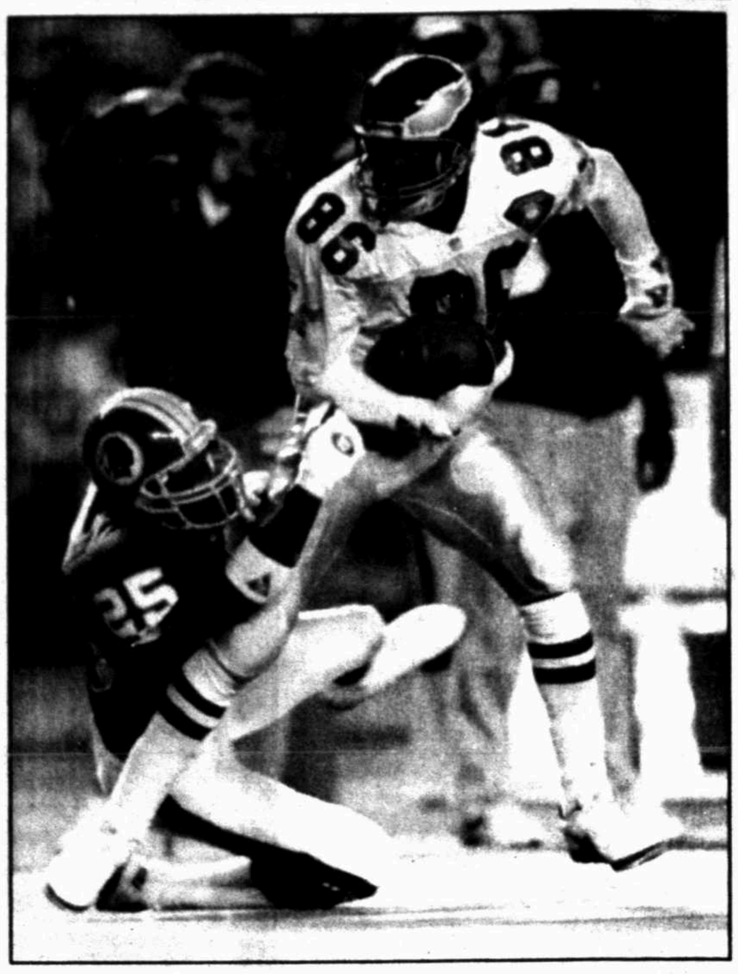

McDaniel returned his first interception 14 yards for a touchdown that gave the Raiders (2-3) a 7-3 lead. It was his second interception return for a score this season.

Broncos 16, Seahawks 9

SEATTLE — John Elway scored on a short run and Jason Elam kicked three field goals as Denver finally got its first victory of the season by beating Seattle.

It was a long time — nine months and 21 days — between wins for the Broncos (1-4), who broke a seven-game losing streak over two seasons. Denver's last victory came last Dec. 18 at Chicago.

Elway's touchdown proved to be the difference as Elam booted field goals of 26, 33 and 37 yards.

DALLAS: Defense leads Pokes to win

(From 1C)

The Cowboys rocked the Cardinals with four touchdowns in the first half, three of them following interceptions of Jay Schroeder by the No. 1 defense in the NFL.

Dallas rolled 83 yards in 8 plays on their first possession, aided by four penalties for 44 yards against the over-aggressive Arizona defense. The payoff came on a 2-yard touchdown pass from Aikman to fullback Daryl Johnston, who beat linebacker Seth Joyner in the flat.

Then came a succession of errant throws by Schroeder. Darren Woodson picked one off at the Arizona 23. Aikman hit Alvin Harper for 18 yards and Smith scored on a 3-yard run.

Larry Brown intercepted a second bad throw and returned it 14 yards to the Arizona 18. Aikman hit Jay Novacek for 13 yards and Smith scored on a 1-yard run.

Woodson snared a third interception off Schroeder at the Arizona 26 and the Cardinals paid again when Aikman found Michael Irvin on a 12-yard scoring pass. Schroeder hurt his shoulder on the play and was replaced by former Cowboy Steve Beuerlein, who was intercepted by Brown and James Washington.

Smith ran only nine times for 22 yards before retiring at halftime, turning duties over to Lincoln Coleman. Smith has started 73 consecutive games for Dallas without missing because of injury.

Aikman completed 16 of 22 passes for 231 yards before letting Rodney Peete play the fourth quarter.

Ryan's special teams allowed Kevin Williams to dash 87 yards for a third quarter touchdown on the kickoff following a 42-yard field goal by Greg Davis, who pulled a hamstring trying to catch Williams.

Ryan said before the game his domination of Dallas "wasn't bragging. I'm just stating facts."

But there was a loser in town Sunday. It was Buddy.

CHARGERS: Means bulls through Chiefs defense

(From 1C)

West the first time through, got only two first downs on three third-quarter drives.

But on the big drive, "we got back to basics, doing what we do best, and that was running the ball, pounding it at them," Means said. "I think that opened up some holes for us because you could feel the arm tackles coming up."

Means scored on a 9-yard counter run with 2:56 left in the second quarter to give San Diego a 13-3 lead that held up at halftime. Means carried on all five plays in the drive, picking up 38 yards, plus five more for a facemask call on Tracy Simien.

The Chargers forced two Montana turnovers, and safety Eric Castle deflected a fourth-down pass at the goal line with 4:20 to play. The Chiefs got to the San Diego 1 in the closing seconds, but Lonnie Young sacked Montana, who then threw two incomplete passes to the end game.

Humphries was 16-for-25 for 171 yards and no sacks. Montana ws 37-for-55 for 310 yards with one interception and two sacks.

TEXAS: Longhorns baffle Sooners coach

(From 1C)

Oklahoma had the ball for just 2 minutes, 20 seconds in that quarter. Meanwhile Texas drove 12 plays for a field goal and 14 plays for a touchdown to take a 10-7 lead.

The Longhorns made it 17-7 on Brown's 2-yard scoring pass to tight end Pat Fitzgerald two minutes into the fourth quarter. Then the Longhorn defense took over.

Oklahoma drove from its 20 to the Texas 11-yard line in 12 plays. But the Sooners gained just six yards on the next three runs and settled for a 22-yard Scott Blanton field goal.

After a missed 48-yard field goal by Phil Dawson with 3:16 to play, Oklahoma had its final chance to tie. A 41-yard completion from Garrick McGee to P.J. Mills put the Sooners at the Texas 17, and three plays later they had first-and-goal at the 6.

A run by fullback Jerald Moore moved the ball to the 3. Then McGee had a pass knocked down and nearly intercepted. On third down, he scrambled for no gain.

On their final play, the Sooners put tailback James Allen in the right slot and handed him the ball on a reverse to the left side. Texas linebacker Robert Reed came up and forced Allen to turn inside, where noseguard Stonie Clark tackled him at the 1.

"You let us be one-on-one with somebody, and I don't know what else you could want," offensive coordinator Watson Brown said. "I'm not sure James wouldn't have got it, if somebody else hadn't came back and got him.

"Whether it's a good call or not, I don't know. It wasn't a good call because it didn't work."

Allen said the Sooners had worked on the play during practice last week and it worked as designed.

The Sooners, who dropped from No. 16 to No. 22, wound up with 440 total yards, nearly 100 more than Texas. But they fumbled five times, losing one, had two interceptions and were penalized five times on offense.

Fehr ends drought with win

Associated Press

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Rick Fehr ended an eight-year victory drought on the PGA Tour on Sunday, shooting a 4-under-par 68 to win the $1.1 million Disney Classic by two shots over Fuzzy Zoeller and Craig Stadler.

Fehr, who has finished second at seven tournaments since 1991, had not won since capturing the B.C. Open in 1986.

He had three birdies Sunday on his front nine at the Magnolia course and clinched the victory at No. 17 with his only birdie on the backside while the only remaining challenger, Stadler, had a bogey.

Stadler, who shared the lead with Fehr heading into the final day, reeled off four straight birdies to catch Fehr at 18-under with five holes left. But he bogeyed Nos. 15 and 17 to fall from contention for the $198,000 champion's check.

Zoeller, who began the round four shots back, pulled within a stroke of the lead before taking a bogey at No. 15. But he closed with his ninth birdie of the day to go along with three bogeys and was in the clubhouse one shot back to await Fehr's play on the last two holes. Zoeller matched his opening-round 66 Sunday.

Steve Stricker, who also started the round four back, fired a 67 and finished three back along with Trevor Dodds with a 16-under 272. Second-round leader Dave Stockton Jr. finished eight back after a 73 Sunday.

Fehr, 32, missed going wire-to-wire with the lead after a second-round 70. He opened with a 63 and shot a 68 Saturday to reclaim a share of the lead heading into the final day.

Dunhill Cup

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — Canada took advantage of blunders by Tom Kite and Fred Couples to upset the defending champion United States and win the Dunhill Cup team golf tournament.

Kite, two strokes behind Dave Barr after 16 holes, lost his match by one after making a double bogey on No. 17. Couples missed a 3-foot putt on No. 16 and also ended up one stroke behind Ray Stewart.

The two Canadian victories made Curtis Strange's 7-shot victory over Rick Gibson meaningless. Strange closed with a sizzling 67 on Sunday.

Canada had never before advanced as far as the semifinals.

The Canadians earned $150,000 each, the U.S. players $75,000.

In the semifinals, the Americans swept England 3-0 and Canada downed South Africa and U.S. Open champion Ernie Els, 2-1.

Transamerica Seniors

NAPA, Calif. — Kermit Zarley took advantage of Isao Aoki's poor tee shot on the first playoff hole to win the Transamerica Golf Championship.

The victory marked Zarley's first triumph in three years on the Senior PGA Tour. Silverado Country Club also was the site of his first PGA Tour win 26 years ago.

This was the first time a playoff was required in the tournament's six-year history.

Zarley birdied the par-5 playoff hole, while Aoki settled for par after pulling his tee shot into the trees. The two players finished regulation in 12-under 204.

Defending champion Dave Stockton, Gary Player and J.C. Snead fell two strokes short of Zarley and Aoki. Six players finished at 207, three strokes off the pace.

World Amateur

LA BOULIE, France — An American team led by 46-year-old Allen Doyle and 18-year-old sensation Tiger Woods ended five years of frustration for the United States, running away with the World Amateur golf title.

The combined Britain-Ireland team finished second at 12-under 849, followed by Sweden with an 855 total and Australia with an 858.

New Zealand, the defending champion, was fifth with an 860.

champion, departing after two seasons on the Indy-car circuit, stayed with the leaders throughout the 84-lap race on the 2.214-mile, 11-turn Laguna Seca Raceway road circuit. The 1993 Indy-car PPG Cup champion wound up a lap down in eighth.

The Briton will return to Formula One for the final three races of this season, leaving immediately after the race to begin readying himself to run in the Grand Prix of Europe next Sunday at Jerez, Spain.

Tracy was unbeatable in earning his second straight victory at Laguna, third of the season and the eighth of his budding Indy-car career.

Only Penske teammate Al Unser Jr., who clinched the series title with two races remaining in the season, appeared to have even a remote chance of catching Tracy, but Unser's transmission broke on the 75th lap.

Tracy, the record-setting pole-winner, cruised to a 21.33-second victory over runner-up Raul Boesel. Jacques Villeneuve, the rookie who started alongside Tracy on the front row, wound up third, followed by Emerson Fittipaldi, the third Penske driver, Teo Fabi, Arie Luyendyk and Adrian Fernandez, the only other competitors on the lead lap.

Andretti was feted throughout the weekend and got a special sendoff Sunday, with wife Dee Ann and twin brother Aldo giving him the singular command: "Mario, start your engine" several seconds before the rest of the 29-car field roared to life.

Andretti led a pace lap before falling back into his 12th-place starting spot as a huge Laguna Seca Raceway crowd roared and waved handkerchiefs and hats.

The day quickly turned from one of nostalgia for the Andrettis to the brutal realities of racing. On the third turn, Michael Andretti, Mario's eldest son, was sidelined and the father's car was damaged in a multi-car melee.

The incident began when Robby Gordon, who started fifth, tried to pass Unser, who started fourth. The two bumped front tires, sending Unser's car sliding off track and through the dirt.

Cars packed up behind them moments after the start began braking and taking evasive action, and a series of events caused considerable damage.

Dominick Dobson ran into the rear of Mario's car and Michael, going off into the dirt, spun. The younger Andretti's car was sitting backward on the track when he was hit by Bobby Rahal.

The accident put Michael and Rahal, both former series champions, out of the race and left debris scattered over the track, bringing out the first of four full-course cautions.

Jarrett snaps winless skid at Mello

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Dale Jarrett broke a 55-race winless streak Sunday by shooting past Morgan Shepherd with less than four laps left and holding on to win the Mello Yello 500 in a wild finish at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

His third career victory, and first since the 1993 Daytona 500, came one week after Jarrett had failed to qualify for the race at North Wilkesboro, N.C.

"I was at the bottom of the ocean last Sunday," Jarrett said. "We have too good a team to not at least make a race. But I think that gave everybody a good wake-up call."

Shepherd wound up second and Dale Earnhardt, who finished third, took a big step forward in his bid for a seventh Winston Cup season driving title.

Earnhardt, who came in leading Rusty Wallace by 208 points, holds a 321-point advantage with three events left. Wallace broke a timing chain on lap 256, relegating him to a 36th-place finish.

"I hate to gain 'em that way," Earnhardt said. "I'd like to gain 'em racing."

Earnhardt could tie Richard Petty with his seventh championship by leaving the next race, Oct. 23 in Rockingham, N.C., with a 371-point edge.

Jarrett, who is driving with a special cast on his left arm because of a broken bone suffered during a wreck last month, was second behind Shepherd when the race went back to green on lap 330 of 334.

But Jarrett took the low groove in his Chevrolet Lumina as the two exited the second turn on Charlotte's 1.5-mile trioval, and he roared past Shepherd as they went down the backstretch.

Shepherd was unable to pull even again, and his hopes were dashed when the seventh and final caution flew with less than two laps left after Michael and Darrell Waltrip wrecked on the backstretch.

Both drivers were treated at the infield care center and released.

The caution bunched the field for a four-lap shootout, with Shepherd followed by Jarrett, Schrader, Brett Bodine and Lake Speed.

A racing legend leaves the track

By Tim Keown
N.Y. Times News Service

MONTEREY, Calif. — There is still a hint of the old country in Mario Andretti's voice, serving as a reminder of how it all came to be. His story is the immigrant's story, the story of limitless opportunity arising from desperation. It's the story of America and a different time, with a context that folds history into sport.

Andretti's racing career will end Sunday afternoon. The career started in the early 1960s, when Mario and his twin brother sneaked into stock-car races in their hometown of Nazareth, Pa., without their parents' blessing or knowledge.

He leaves at 54, still competitive, still a factor after 30 years in Indy car racing. His name is inextricably bound to speed, synonymous with car racing. A 1989 poll showed the name Andretti to be more well known in the United States than Petty and Foyt combined. When he walks off the track Sunday after the Bank of America 300 at Laguna Seca Raceway, he will take a piece of the sport with him.

"If I was taking the weight off my shoulders, that would be one thing — but I'm not," Andretti says. "I love the weight I've had to carry. When I'm out, I'll have to deal with it. I'm sure there's life after motor racing, and I guess I'll find out.

"I wish the season would have lasted longer, but here it is and I have to deal with it."

There may not be another story like his, if only because he was very much a product of a particularly momentous time.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Constructive changes are in the wind. Breakthrough related to your work or financial security will be achieved by Christmas. Use your communication skills to win over influential people. Early in 1995, travel and fun social activities will lighten your workload. If contemplating a residential move, secure the approval and cooperation of your romantic partner. A trip to the altar is likely next summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: country singer Tanya Tucker, dancer Ben Vereen, actress Helen Hayes, jazz legend Thelonious Monk.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You and a partner need to reach an agreement on basic issues. Be honest. Refinancing a loan could be the best way to lower monthly expenses. Launch a bold venture with a close ally's assistance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Investing in your home is a wise move. Any improvements you make now will pay off later. You could exacerbate a work situation by concentrating too much on emotional issues. Be practical.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Others depend on you more than you realize. Getting better organized is the best way to handle a heavy workload. Romance heats up. There could be strings attached to a "generous" offer. Go slow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your judgment in financial matters is superb. Nevertheless, you may want to seek a legal opinion before making a final decision. Avoid jumping to conclusions about an investment proposal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If someone is reluctant to make a commitment, you need to find out why. Be understanding if a young person intrudes on your privacy tonight. A change of focus will not alter your conclusions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Differences of opinion are par for the course. Avoid overreacting. Find time for private pursuits that raise your spirits. This evening, count on receiving the kind of cooperation only your family can give. Be affectionate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Concentrate on long-term goals rather than spur-of-the-moment decisions. The more efficient you are, the greater your chances for success. A financial venture will soon turn the corner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not let a new moneymaking idea distract you from finishing a job you recently started. Romance could be a hot topic tonight. Heed your instincts; it may be too soon to make a commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Try not to let your personal life interfere with your work today. Your head may be in the clouds. Keep your feet on the ground! Sticking to a game plan will impress potential allies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Try not to scatter your energies too widely. Mistakes could be made unless you remain unflappable. Do not let a legal technicality affect a friendship of long standing. At all costs, avoid a showdown.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A lighter, brighter mood takes over at work. A major social event or business trip could demand the lion's share of your attention. Putting your employer's interests first will make you popular with higher-ups.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Close friends can be worth their weight in gold. You feel much more optimistic after talking with business associates who are friendly and outgoing. A daily period of meditation could help banish negative thoughts.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 4 ♡A K Q 7 6 5 2 ◇A Q ♣6 3

The bidding has proceeded:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
Pass	Pass	Pass	?

What is your opening bid?

A - You have a good hand offensively, but on defense you might not even take two tricks. Since partner is a passed hand, give up all thoughts of slam and open four hearts.

Q. 2 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 4 ♡A K Q 7 6 5 2 ◇A Q ♣6 3

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A - Do not make a pusillanimous jump to three hearts — partner might think that you need a modicum of heart support to push on to game. With 8 1/2 playing tricks in your own hand and a self-sufficient suit, jump to four hearts.

Q. 3 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 3 ♡7 6 2 ◇K 8 7 ♣K Q J 10 3

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

What action do you take?

A - Don't panic and pass because you think you are a little light for your two-over-one response. You have a good suit, a fit for partner and a ruffing value, and partner has heard your pass. You owe partner another bid and a raise to four diamonds is a standout choice.

Q. 4 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 3 ♡K Q 7 4 ◇10 7 6 ♣A K J 6

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

A - True, you do not have a perfect hand, but it is far safer to act now than to try to balance should the enemy auction die at two spades. Double for takeout.

Q. 5 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q 10 9 ♡K 10 3 2 ◇Q 10 3 ♣A Q 7

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A - Your minimum 4-3-3-3 shape and stopper in every suit suggest a one-no-trump rebid, and indeed that's the call we would recommend over any other suit response. However, it is too dangerous to suppress good four-card support for partner's major. Raise to two hearts.

Q. 6 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J 10 ♡A J 10 5 4 ◇4 ♣Q J 6 5 2

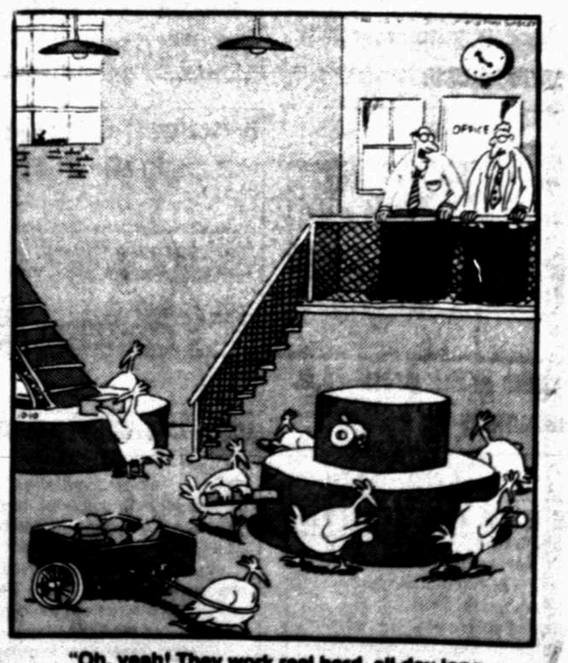

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?

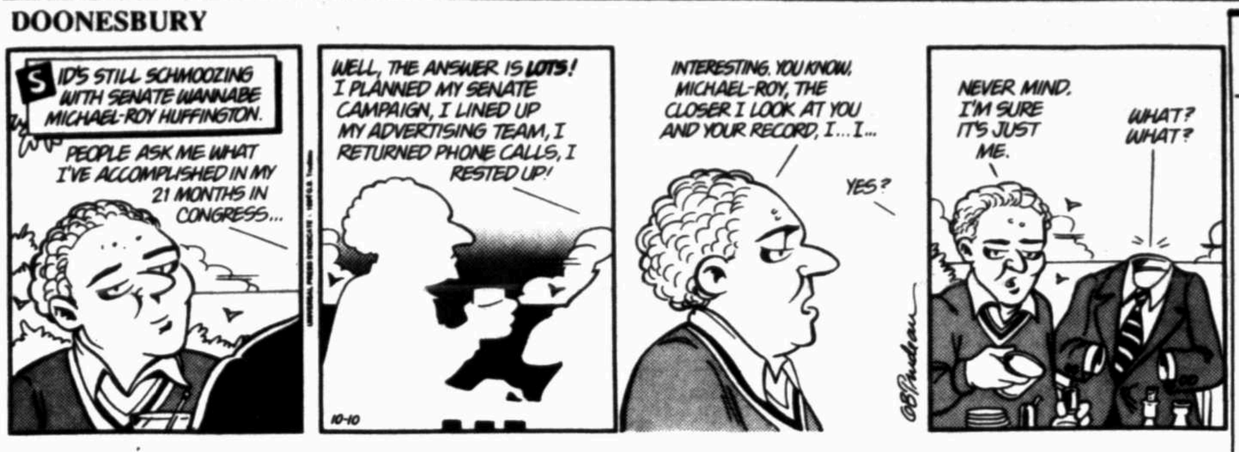

A - At first glance it might seem that three no trump is automatic. However, with two secondary honors in partner's first-bid suit, a singleton in his second and an ace, a spade contract could easily be your best spot. Bid three spades and await developments.

Gilbert calls off marriage to Boxleitner second time

RADNOR, Pa. — Life was so much simpler on the prairie. A melancholy Melissa Gilbert has called off her marriage to actor Bruce Boxleitner for the second time.

But she'll have at least one memento.

"Last time I returned the ring. This time, I'm keeping it. It's mine," the star of the old NBC series "Little House on the Prairie" told TV Guide in its Oct. 9 issue.

Although she says she knew she and the co-star of "Scarecrow and Mrs. King" were fundamentally different, it's been tough without without him.

"My friends say, 'You'll find someone else. You're wonderful, you're smart, you're funny.' And I say, 'Yeah? Then why am I alone again?'"

Gilbert also laments the loss of her former fiance, actor Rob Lowe. On her 30th birthday, Gilbert recalls reading that Lowe had cheated on her during their six-year relationship and engagement. He has since married.

"Why couldn't he have straightened out his life with me?" asks Gilbert, mother of a 5-year-old from her first marriage.

LOS ANGELES — Tim Allen can hit the nail on the head, but he won't hammer Kelsey Grammer.

Tim Allen plays down ratings victory over Kelsey Grammer's show.

The "Home Improvement" star is playing down his ratings victory over his new prime-time rival in NBC's "Frasier."

"That's between NBC and ABC," Allen said.

Both shows were among last year's highest-rated programs. The head-to-head Tuesday night schedule began last week.

"I called him (Grammer) the day before all this happened and I just said, 'No matter what you read in the press, I like your show. I think you're a very talented man, and I'm sorry this happened,' " Allen is quoted as saying in Sunday editions of the Los Angeles Times.

ABC's "Home Improvement" won a 22.7 rating last week, while "Frasier" had a 14.9 rating.

CHICAGO — Hugh Hefner showed up with a luxury bus, bodyguards and TV cameras at his 50th anniversary high school reunion, where classmates remembered a boy very different from the Playboy man.

"He was thin, scrawny almost," one classmate who requested anonymity said at the party Friday. "His best friend, a football player named Joe Brophy, got all the girls."

In the early '50s, Hefner founded Playboy magazine and soon became known for hanging out in pajamas surrounded by buxom beauties and famous friends.

Members of the class of 1944 at Steinmetz High School can still picture Hefner hanging out at the soda fountain at Guy's Drugstore.

So can he.

"I can't believe its been 50 years," said Hefner, 68. "I don't remember last Tuesday, but I remember my time here just like yesterday."

LOS ANGELES — Lauren Bacall is sounding the alarm for an endangered species.

"We've got to realize that 50 percent of all movies made before 1950 are gone," said the 70-year-old actress, who starred in plenty of them. "We simply can't let that happen with any of the others."

Bacall hopes to rally support for efforts to preserve aging film classics, which were shot on nitrate-based film that deteriorates over time.

The American Movies Classics cable channel is working with director Martin Scorsese and The Film Foundation to raise money to transfer many of the classics to acetate to preserve them.

"The tragedy is that there just aren't enough people involved to really turn the tide for preservation," Bacall said in an interview Sunday in the Daily News.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Some sported cowboy hats. Others wore spiked hair in unnatural colors. But no matter what was on their heads, their hearts were all for Elvis, as Melissa Etheridge put it.

"I don't know of any rock musician who wasn't influenced by Elvis, or influenced by someone who was influenced by Elvis," said Etheridge, one of dozens of singers at a concert Saturday devoted to the King's music.

Presley's daughter, Lisa Marie, was there with new husband, Michael Jackson, as were 18,000 other people as well as performers as different as Tony Bennett, Dwight Yoakam and Aaron Neville.

"He opened the door for all of us," said Carl Perkins, who wrote the Presley hit "Blue Suede Shoes."

"Elvis' appeal just blew the doors down and a bunch of us walked through," he said. "The hotter he got, the more it spread."

Also among the 33 singers and groups on the concert bill were: Jerry Lee Lewis, Bryan Adams, Chet Atkins, Michael Bolton, Cheap Trick, Billy Ray Cyrus and Iggy Pop.
