

City faces full agenda on Tuesday

The Pampa city commissioners will have a full agenda of varied items for consideration at their regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Commissioners will consider five ordinances. To be considered on second readings are ordinances revising the rate structure of Energas and changing the name of Washita Drive to 25th Street.

Tabled from the last meeting for first reading is an ordinance concerning annexation of a tract of land between Harvester and Browning Sts. near the Pampa Country Club.

Also due first readings are ordinances regarding preliminary subdivision plats and providing for cycle billing and security deposits.

Commissioners will consider setting the date for a public hearing on Nov. 13 for a zoning change request from Office District to Specific Use Permit for a clinical pharmacy in a medical building in the Northcrest Addition.

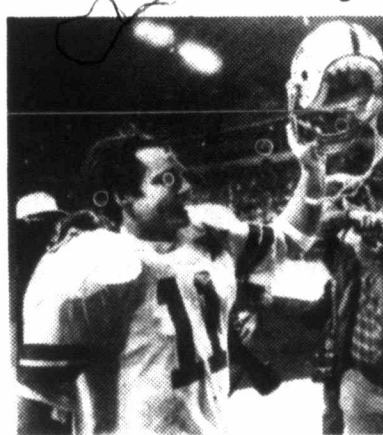

The commission will consider a monthly report from Police Chief J. J. Ryzman concerning the activities and performance of the police department.

Other items for consideration will include partial abandonment of easement and right of way of sewer lines in the Chaumont Addition; final plat approval for the National Bank of Commerce Plaza Addition, and an agreement for the installation of two scoreboards at the Hobart Street Park softball fields.

Commissioners also will consider authorizing payment to Johnson and Riemer for professional services on the improvement projects at M. K. Brown Auditorium, granting a request by Sawatzky Construction for a variance on a driveway ordinance in the Northcrest Addition and awarding of bids for water meters and for stage lighting controls at the auditorium.

The final agenda item will be approval of accounts payable.

Reagan makes pointed response

Reagan claims CIA manual was distributed by mistake

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says a controversial CIA manual for Nicaraguan rebels went through extensive editing to remove references to political assassination, leaving only 12 copies of an unexpurgated version that "some way ... got out down there."

Reagan's account — presented during Sunday night's presidential debate — conflicts with an explanation by a Nicaraguan rebel leader who says the rebels cut out only two of 90 pages and left in a section urging "selective use of violence" to "neutralize" Nicaraguan officials.

Edgar Chamorro, propaganda chief for the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, said in an interview Saturday that about 2,000 copies of the final version containing the "neutralize" section were distributed to rebel fighters in Nicaraguan border areas.

Reagan's explanation also does not appear to square with a statement by a senior administration official who said last week that the manual was produced by a "free-wheeling, free-lancing" low-level CIA contract employee without the knowledge of his superiors. The official insisted on anonymity.

During the first round of questions in Sunday's foreign policy debate, Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale denounced the manual as an "embarrassment" that involved "giving instructions for hired assassins." He said production of the manual "has strengthened our opposition and undermined the moral authority of our people and our country."

"How can something this serious occur in an administration and have the president of the United States ... say he didn't know."

Reagan, however, attempted to minimize the significance of the manual, whose existence was reported by The Associated Press one week ago.

Asked if the manual amounted to "our own state-supported terrorism," Reagan responded that he had ordered an investigation and would take action against any official who had acted improperly.

"We have a gentleman down in Nicaragua who is on contract to the CIA advising supposedly on military tactics" for the rebels, Reagan said. "He drew up this manual, turned it over to the agency head of the CIA in Nicaragua to be printed, a number of pages were excised by the agency head there, and he sent it on up here to CIA where more pages were excised before it was printed."

Emergency meeting

OPEC tries to block price war

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Oil ministers of at least six of OPEC's 13 members are gathering here today to discuss ways of averting a price war and to prepare for a full emergency meeting next week, oil sources said.

The meeting follows unexpected price cutting last week by Nigeria, which belongs to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, and by Britain and Norway, which are not members of the cartel. Sources said the meeting is part of continuing consultations aimed at maintaining OPEC's price.

The outcome of the meeting could be crucial for Western Europe, since lower oil prices could transform a meager economic recovery into a lasting boom, according to some West European analysts.

However, several OPEC ministers have said in the past week that the cartel is more likely to lower production than cut prices. Saudi Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani has expressed confidence that OPEC will not weaken.

Officials at the Intercontinental Hotel, expected site of today's meeting, refused to confirm the arrival of the oil ministers, but a spokesman said "it looks like there will be some sort of consultations between them."

Ministers from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Algeria, Libya and Venezuela were expected to attend the meeting. Others might follow, said sources in capitals of the Persian Gulf countries. The sources spoke on condition they not be identified.

The oil minister from non-OPEC member Mexico may also observe the meeting, the sources said. Egypt's oil minister also said he planned to come.

The talks come at a time when OPEC, which once determined world oil prices, has seen its power diminished by expanding production of non-OPEC members and by energy conservation.

OPEC scheduled the full emergency meeting for Oct. 29 after Norway cut its per barrel price last week by $1.50 to $30. Britain cut its price by $1.35 to $28.65, reflecting downward pressure from the "spot" or free market.

Debt-ridden Nigeria then announced unilateral cuts of $1 to $2 a barrel, lowering its chief export blend to $28 a barrel, within hours of the OPEC announcement.

The move was seen by some analysts as a signal that some OPEC members would not allow non-members to steal their customers.

Debate aftermath

Jubilant GOP senses victory

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Reagan and Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale, attacking each other's judgment and competence in a showdown debate, were heading into the campaign's closing two weeks with Mondale still playing catch-up and Reagan's supporters confident his victory was secure.

Mondale stopped short of claiming victory, but at a post-debate rally he repeated the leadership theme he stressed during their 90-minute televised confrontation Sunday night on defense and foreign policy.

"Tonight, despite all the tragedy in Lebanon, I think I heard the president, the commander in chief, blame it on somebody else," Mondale told about 1,500 people in a downtown hotel.

"Tonight, despite all the embarrassment of that covert action in Nicaragua, which has strengthened our enemies, I think I heard the president, the commander in chief, blame somebody else," he added.

But Vice President George Bush was jubilant. "I think we just wrapped up four more years," he declared after the debate.

A panel of seven scholastic and collegiate debate judges called Mondale the winner by an even wider margin than in the first debate in Louisville, Ky. They gave the Democrat 187 points to 168 for the president. The same panel declared Mondale the winner by a margin of 174 to 157 after the Louisville debate.

"It was a decisive victory for Mondale," said James M. Copeland, president of the National Forensic League and debate coach at Marquette University High School in Milwaukee.

But voters often have far different standards for evaluating political debaters than the technical points used by debate coaches.

An ABC News poll of 695 people who watched the debate said that a narrow margin thought Reagan was the winner. The network reported that 39 percent called Reagan the winner, 36 percent said it was Mondale and 25 percent said there was no clear victor. The margin of error was 4.5 percent, which meant that statistically it was a virtual tie.

Another poll taken for USA Today had a larger percentage calling Reagan the winner. The newspaper's poll of 850 registered voters had 44 percent saying Mondale won and 21 percent saying they tied. The poll by Gordon S. Black Corp. had a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percent.

With 14 days left before Election Day, national polls are saying Reagan's lead is anywhere from 9 to 25 points or more.

Mondale, who got a boost in the polls from his strong showing in the domestic policy debate two weeks ago, was hoping for a similar result from their second and final debate to help him close that gap.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., the Reagan campaign chairman who was clearly upset two weeks ago after Reagan's superb performance in the first debate in Louisville, Ky., was obviously relieved after this one.

"In the worst case scenario, I think it was a draw and in that case ... it was a Ronald Reagan victory," said Laxalt. "Mondale needed a knockout tonight and it was far from that."

Even some Mondale supporters gave the president credit for a far stronger performance than two weeks ago.

"It was less one-sided than the last time, and the president was good on themes," said Democratic Gov. Charles Robb of Virginia. "I'm not sure it will move public opinion very much."

Former Democratic Party chairman Robert Strauss said Mondale "eliminated the question of is he tough enough." But Strauss acknowledged "the president was better tonight than he was two weeks ago."

Reagan was flying to the West Coast today for campaign appearances in California and Oregon. Mondale was heading in the opposite direction for appearances in Philadelphia, northern New Jersey, New York and Ohio.

Did Reagan mean missiles or subs?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Did President Reagan once say missiles fired from submarines could be recalled, or didn't he?

Walter F. Mondale reasserted Sunday night Reagan did. Reagan said he never said any such thing and called on Mondale to stop saying he did.

Here's the record: Reagan was asked at a news conference May 13, 1982, whether he would be willing to include a number of types of nuclear weapons in negotiations with the Soviet Union.

"Nothing is excluded," he said. But he said he was focusing on ballistic missiles because they were the most destabilizing and "the most frightening to most people."

Going on to discuss the problem of possible "miscalculation," he said regarding missiles on silos that "once that button is pushed, there is no defense; there is no recall. And it's a matter of minutes, and the missiles reach the other country."

However, he said, there are other missiles carried on bombers, in ships, including subs.

"You are dealing there," he said, "with a conventional type of weapons or instrument, and those instruments can be intercepted. They can be recalled if there has been a miscalculation."

"And so they don't have the same, I think, psychological effect that the presence of those other ones that, once launched, that's it; they are on their way, and there's no preventing, no stopping them."

White House aides made no effort to deny that the president used those words; but they made a point of providing reporters in Kansas City with a transcript of what they said was an interview Reagan gave selected reporters at a breakfast last Feb. 15.

According to that transcript told reporters inquiring about nuclear arms control talks:

"We originally in the START talks thought that the most destabilizing weapons, the weapons that cause the most fear among people, are the ones in which you push a button and a half hour later the world blows up, and once the button is pushed, there's no retracting or taking back. We viewed bombs and missiles from submarines as being less destabilizing because they were carried by a conventional weapon, you might say, in which — not only could they be called back, but people have a concept from previous wars that those carriers, launchers, planes, submarines, can be intercepted and destroyed."

New criticisms aimed at colleges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell, who last year warned of a "rising tide of mediocrity" in American high schools, is raising new storm warnings over the quality of education on college campuses.

Bell was briefing college presidents and holding a news conference today at George Washington University as he unveiled a critique of America's colleges penned by a group of scholars for Bell's National Institute of Education.

The study was first reported by The Associated Press last Wednesday.

It recommends that all undergraduates take at least two full years of liberal arts courses, even if that forces them to spend more than the usual four years getting a bachelor's degree in business, education, nursing or other fields.

"The strains of rapid expansion of higher education, followed by recent years of constricting resources and leveling enrollments ... have taken their toll," warns Bell's report, called, "Involvement in Learning: Realizing the Potential of American Higher Education."

It criticizes colleges for relying on part-time professors, who now occupy 41 percent of all teaching posts, up from 23 percent in 1966. It warns that college students' average test scores on the Graduate Record Examinations have dropped in most fields since 1964.

"One cannot blame these trends entirely on the decline in the preparation of entering college students. Part of the problem is what happens to students after they matriculate in college," it said.

The report also said one in eight "high ability" high school seniors never goes to college, and half of those who enter college never finish.

It warned that freshmen are "ill-served by too many of our institutions ... They are too often closed out of course selections, treated in an impersonal way and take second place to majors in academic advising."

Manuel J. Justiz, director of the National Institute of Education, appointed the panel, headed by Penn State professor and administrator Kenneth P. Mortimer, last October.

The report lacks the polemical punch of "A Nation At Risk," the stinging report card on America's schools that Bell's National Commission on Excellence in Education produced in April 1983.

But the new study, while couched in more bland, committee-style prose, may be appearing at the right time.

Several other higher education studies are also in the works, including a report due next month from the chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities and an Association of American Colleges study in February on the undergraduate curriculum. In addition, the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching has embarked on its own collegiate study.

"A Nation At Risk" owed part of its success to timing. It came out a few weeks or months ahead of a string of other blue-ribbon reports.

police report

Officers of the Pampa Police Department responded to 46 calls in the 40-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Virgil Hunter, 440 Oklahoma, reported he was assaulted at his residence.

The City of Pampa reported vandalism at Beech Park. A person reportedly drove a vehicle through the park.

Brenda Lucas, 721 N. Naida, reported criminal trespass.

Lil' Speedy Mart, 225 W. Brown, reported theft of gasoline.

A male juvenile reported he was assaulted at Central Park.

Arrests

SATURDAY, October 20
David Carver Jackson, 24, 1240 S. Osborne, in connection with three unspecified warrants. Jackson posted a cash bond and was released.

Sonia Mulanax, 19, 712 Naida, in connection with three unspecified warrants.

Scotty Lee Baker, 21, 217 Canadian, in connection with a charge of driving with his license suspended, failure to show proof of liability insurance and defective equipment. A bail bondsman posted bond, and Baker was released.

SUNDAY, October 21
Larry Mastella, 27, 1008 Neel Rd., in connection with a charge of driving while intoxicated and two alleged traffic violations. A bail bondsman posted bond, and Mastella was released.

Clacey Skipper, 39, 412 N. Somerville, in connection with a charge of public intoxication. Skipper posted a $119 bond and was released.

Prison stabbing total climbs to 319

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Two Texas Department of Corrections inmates were in fair condition today after weekend attacks that raised the number of stabbings in the state prison system this year to 319.

James Scott, 23, serving a 20-year sentence for burglary and escape from Coleman County, was stabbed at 6 p.m. Sunday by an inmate who had entered the victim's cell in the Eastham Unit, said prison spokesman Phil Guthrie.

Scott was stabbed five times in the neck and back with a metal spoon that had been broken, sharpened and placed in a plastic handle fashioned from a cigarette lighter, Guthrie said.

A former cellmate, James Long, 21, serving a 35-year sentence from Taylor County for auto theft and attempted murder, was held for questioning in the stabbing, the spokesman said.

"These two guys are former cell partners and the stabbing is believed to be the outgrowth of an argument over commissary items," Guthrie said.

Recent rains were too little and too late, say experts

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite recent rains over various parts of the state, the year-long drought that has forced some cities to ration water continues, experts say.

South and Central Texas has been deluged by rains during the past two weeks, but experts say the moisture has been too little and too late.

"It's amazing how it snowballs. Once something like a drought hits, it starts affecting everything down the line, and the effects can last for years," Bill Braden, spokesman for the Texas A&M Agricultural Extension Service in College Station, told The Dallas Morning News.

State meteorologist George Bomar said that recent rains fell at the tail end of what is normally the state's second-wettest period.

"And the hopes of getting more rain that is truly substantial are diminishing day by day," he said.

Corpus Christi — which has been under a water rationing plan since August — has received more than 5 inches of rain in the last two weeks. But the drought continues, since much of the rainfall has missed the city's watershed.

The city has cut water usage by more than 50 percent since the plan went into effect and upstream rains last week boosted the city's main reservoir, Lake Corpus Christi, from a level one-third of normal to about half of what it should be, said Dick Kising, a spokesman for the city's water utility.

"But it would take another 10 inches — soon, before the ground dries out again — to put us in pretty good shape," he said.

About 150 miles to the northwest, San Antonio homes and businesses depend upon the underground Edwards Aquifer for drinking water, and nearby farmers rely upon it for crops. The aquifer's levels have been as much as 20 to 40 feet below normal.

Tom Fox, general manager of the Edwards Underground Water District, said that after the rains last week, "the level is beginning to come back up, but we're still short of the average (rainfall) by some six inches or so."

For many of the state's crop and livestock producers, the rains "kind of brightened everybody's outlook, but came too late, really, to help a lot," Braden said.

Braden said the rains came too late to save the summer crop.

Prison board head won't resign

HOUSTON (AP) — Robert Gunn says he won't resign as chairman of the Texas Department of Corrections Board, even though he says Gov. Mark White asked him to almost a week ago.

Gunn told the Houston Chronicle and The Houston Post Saturday that White asked him to resign during a heated phone conversation the two had Tuesday, but White has denied he ever asked Gunn to step down.

Assistant Attorney General Rick Gray, who handles prison matters for the state, said White called Gunn only to request that the board move more quickly on prison reforms.

"The governor wants things done faster than they have been. He and Gunn did talk, and it was a frank conversation," Gray said. "The governor did not ask him to resign, but he asked him to get the reforms done yesterday. He wants swift and decisive action, but he's not asking for his (Gunn's) resignation."

Chairman of the prison board for the past 13 months, Gunn said his discussion with White was "very spirited."

"When you're dealing with prison affairs, it's an emotional issue at times," Gunn said. "We shouted at each other, but I don't intend to leave this job."

"We both said things we probably regret. I have no intention of resigning, and I'm sure anything that was said was said in the emotion of the minute," he added.

The governor said he became upset when he learned that TDC Director Raymond Procnier had taken vacation when two inmates were killed in prison violence the weekend of Oct. 13 and 14.

Gunn said that White and prison board members had agreed to allow Procnier the vacation as a condition for his employment.

Gunn also said White had favored 43-year-old Lane McCotter for the director's job.

Penneys has poster contest

The JC Penney store in the Pampa Mall is kicking off its annual United Way campaign with a poster contest starting today.

Each day after school and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, the firm invites children ages four through 17 to the store to make a poster depicting some form of sharing with others. The young artist with the winning entry will receive a $25 savings bond.

Store Manager Jim Clark said JC

Penny is committed to the United Way as the best method of reaching the greatest number of people in need.

"I'm proud of the support our associates have traditionally shown on behalf of Pampa's United Way," he said. "We are making our campaign public this year to remind others of the great job United Way does in identifying needs and allocating funds to help health and human services."

Tornadoes touch down near Houston

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — A band of thunderstorms riding on the crest of a lingering cold front spawned at least five tornadoes early today along this Houston suburb, causing severe damage to businesses and one apartment complex.

There were no immediate reports of injuries from the twisters, which struck the area within a 1½ hour-span about 1:30 a.m. today, the Department of Public Safety said.

One of the first tornadoes hit an apartment complex on South Shaver street in southeast Pasadena, destroying several carports and shattering many apartment windows. The DPS said there were no reports of injuries to residents.

Another powerful tornado swept through the Alameda Mall, near Old Galveston Road and Interstate 45, between Houston and Pasadena, and "severely damaged" at least seven stores in a three-block area, said Donna Snoddy, a dispatcher at the DPS office in Houston.

Several car dealerships behind the mall were also hit by high winds and large hail, but estimates of damage were not immediately available, Ms. Snoddy said.

Another funnel cloud came down on Beltway 8 and Preston Roads, while yet another tornado swirled through Interstate 45 and Farm-to-Market Road 1959, south of Ellington Air Force Base, Ms. Snoddy said.

Another funnel cloud touched down at the Baytown-Laporte Tunnel, which runs underneath the Houston Ship Channel, but caused no damage or injuries, she said.

Ms. Snoddy said the havoc could have been the work of a single tornado but "had no way of knowing since there were five different (tornado) touchdowns."

"As far as we know, it was five tornadoes," she added.

She said all the service roads off Interstate 45 in southeast Houston were flooded and that the entire southside of Pasadena suffered a power outage.

"One man called to say he's got sheet metal all up and down the street, but it (the tornado) didn't hit any of the houses," she said.

Neighboring Brazoria County, west of Harris County, was under a flash flood watch that also included all of the Houston area, the National Weather Service said.

Harris County was receiving golf-ball size hail and was placed under a severe thunderstorm warning.

Thunderstorms spawn watches and warnings

By The Associated Press
Heavy thunderstorms rumbled through east and southeast Texas Sunday, spawning three tornadoes and causing forecasters to post flash flood watches for areas that have been soaked by as much as 15 inches of rain since Friday.

Shortly before 7 p.m., a twister touched down in Sargent in Matagorda County, damaging two residences but apparently causing no injuries, said sheriff's dispatcher Lela Hale. Sargent is 50 miles southwest of Galveston.

At 7:13 p.m., a second tornado touched down in Cedar Lane near Sargent, said Ms. Hale. There were no reports of damage or injuries.

The National Weather Service said Galveston County had received between 2 and 5 inches of rain with the heaviest rainfall reported in the southern part of the county.

"It looked like it was going to move off shore after 8 o'clock, but it just stopped," said weather service meteorologist Bob Fields in Houston.

Authorities in Texas City, Crystal Beach on Bolivar Peninsula and Alvin said Sunday night many streets were flooded and many cars stalled but they knew of no home evacuation.

In Santa Fe, a dispatcher said some homes were threatened by rising waters, many with water up to their doorways, but no one had been evacuated.

A funnel cloud was sighted about four miles west of Lake Jackson in Brazoria County Sunday afternoon, the National Weather Service reported, but observers said it receded back into the clouds and never touched ground.

On Sunday morning, a tornado touched down about 10 miles east of Lufkin but authorities received no reports of injuries or damage, said Sandy Raines, a dispatcher for the Angelina County sheriff's office.

Ms. Raines said several Angelina County roads were closed briefly after heavy downpours flooded underpasses and covered roads where drainage was poor.

South of San Angelo, thunderstorms also moved through the Edwards Plateau area Sunday.

Parts of southeast Texas, the Concho Valley and the upper Texas coast remained under a flash flood watch Sunday, after 15 inches of rain were reported in some areas earlier Saturday.

The National Weather Service said the severe weather erupted when moist air from the Gulf of Mexico ran into an upper level disturbance containing colder air.

Officials in Round Rock Saturday said about 40 homes were flooded as the water in Lake Creek overflowed its banks. The most severely flooded homes were along the lake, which swirled over its banks after taking on water from Davis Spring Branch.

"Everything's just totaled. There's just a hopeless feeling to come in and see your things looking like this," said Barbara Neely, 27, of the three-bedroom home she shares with her husband.

"The creek had been cleaned but we had almost 7½ to 8 inches of rain in an hour and a half, and if that creek had been 100 feet deep it still would have flooded," said Round Rock Mayor Mike Robinson.

In Sinton, National Guard units were sent home Sunday after flood waters lowered and roads cleared. Earlier, at least 500 homes in Sinton were damaged from flooding caused by up to 15 inches in two hours, the Department of Public Safety said.

In nearby Odem, at least 900 residents fled and 50 homes were damaged after more than 18 inches of rain caused flooding in the area, but officials with the Department of Public Safety in Corpus Christi said most of the residents had returned to their homes by Sunday evening.

Baby injury trial enters second week

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors said they would call physicians to the witness stand this week in their efforts to prove former nurse Genene Jones injected a 4-week-old patient with an overdose of a blood-thinner.

Ms. Jones, 34, is charged with injury to a child in the Jan. 9, 1982, alleged heparin overdose of Rolando Santos.

The alleged offense occurred at Medical Center Hospital in the pediatric intensive care unit, where the child was being treated for pneumonia.

Ms. Jones already is serving a 99-year sentence for murdering a 15-month-old girl in Kerrville with an overdose of a muscle relaxant.

She could get a maximum 99-year term on the current charge. Testimony is being heard by state District Judge Pat Priest in a non-jury trial.

Prosecutors in the first four days of the trial last week called several nurses to the stand to recount the Santos child's stay in the intensive care unit.

Nurses said the child appeared progressing well when Ms. Jones was not attending him. When she came on duty for her usual 3-11 p.m. shift, the nurses testified the child twice suffered life-threatening seizures and bled excessively Jan. 9.

But under cross examination, some of the nurses admitted the child had bleeding problems when Ms. Jones was off duty.

Prosecutor Nick Rothe says he plans this week to call doctors who were on duty when the Santos child was hospitalized.

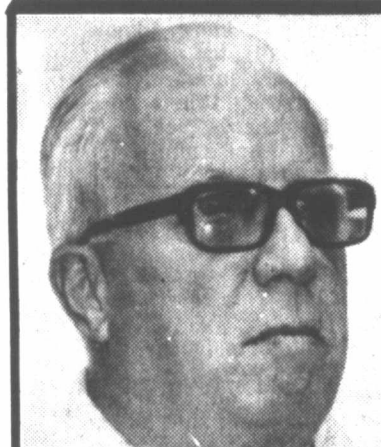

The doctors are expected to provide more detail about the infant's condition, especially during the alleged overdose incident.

The injury-to-a-child charge is the lone indictment handed down by a Bexar County grand jury, which has been investigating suspicious infant deaths at Medical Center for more than a year.

At least 38 lawsuits have been filed in connection with the suspicious deaths.

The San Antonio Express-News reported Saturday it had learned more than 20 of those suits had been settled out of court.

The newspaper quoted unnamed sources as saying the suits were settled for more than $1.5 million.

Chili aficionados to gather

Chili aficionados are preparing for their annual pilgrimage to Terlingua... but once again I won't be there.

What! You've never heard of the gathering at the abandoned quicksilver mine site near the northwestern corner of the Big Bend National Park.

Then, you have never tasted some of the world's best chili. On November 3 several thousand people will descend on the site of the 18th Annual Terlingua Chili Championship which is billed as "the hardest chili cookoff anywhere to qualify for."

Just having a chili cooking team doesn't get you involved in this chili cookoff. Only qualified cooks of the Chili Appreciation Society International will be participating in chili cooking and showmanship competition.

Qualified cooks are those who have earned enough points in society sanctioned cookoffs, placed in the top three in a state, regional or national CASI championships, placed in the top three at Terlingua last year or have won a chili championship previously at Terlingua. Boy, that narrows the field down to only a few of the best.

Terlingua has plenty of sand and rocks, to make the ground lumpy under your sleeping bags. No...there are no modern conveniences, although the sponsors boast of having a 50,000-acre parking lot.

Back in 1967, when the annual event wasn't widely known and therefore not too many people showed up, nobody was allowed to bring but two things — a sleeping bag and a toothbrush.

But nowadays, those persons planning on attending the colossal event which features, in addition to the chili cooking competition, an evening dance and other entertainment, participants are advised to bring other items...some necessary and others for additional convenience.

Although I don't imbibe in strong drink, for those who do it is advisable to take along a bottle of tequila, a shaker of salt and a bag of Mexican limes. Those who imbibe contend chili is not CHILI unless accompanied by these ingredients. I have different ideas and prefer chili without interference.

Although Terlingua is in a desert area, it is advisable to take along rain gear. The annual rainfall is only 14 inches, but if you are there on the day the rain falls the rain gear is needed, as I found out in 1978.

It is also advisable to take along twice as much water as you think you will need — in case you're not there on the day it rains. Plenty of ice is also advisable, to put out the fire from all that chili.

Other suggested items to take to Terlingua include: terantula repellent, high top boots (in case the repellent doesn't work), a big old hat to protect you from the endless sunshine, that toothbrush and a sleeping bag...unless you want to use a "Mexican sleeping bag" — using your back for a mattress and cover up with your stomach.

You had also better take plenty of firewood, trees don't grow in Terlingua, as well as a well-stocked grub box, a well-seasoned iron skillet and coffee pot, and a chili pot. Be prepared to fix your own chow and probably share it with those idiots who didn't know the closest town — Alpine — is 90 miles away.

While it is an enjoyable time for those at the event, chili lovers of the United States really should get Congress to change the national elections which have always been on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. This worked very well until 1967 when the Terlingua event was launched and scheduled on the first Saturday in November.

No matter where you live, it will be hard to get back home from Terlingua aim time to vote. If you are headed west, you will have to stop over a while in Ojinaga and Juarez. Going east, forget it! There's Boguillas and Acuna. It sometimes takes days to get out of Acuna.

The traveling time back to Pampa from Terlingua, with the various distractions along the way, is the reason I won't be at the chili cookoff this year. The boss says I must be here to help with coverage of the elections.

Something must be done. Or national elections must be set on some other date so as not to conflict with the Terlingua Chili Championship.

If you can, go to Terlingua, even though it is a long drive from the Panhandle. When I lived in Odessa I found it an enjoyable way to spend a weekend.

But, the boss says I can't go this year even though he is the same boss I had in Odessa. Is it because Odessa is a lot closer to Terlingua or is he more hard nosed since he moved here?

Doggett says outcome of debate won't affect Texas Senate race

By The Associated Press
U.S. Democratic Senate hopeful Lloyd Doggett predicted the outcome of the debate between President Reagan and Walter Mondale wouldn't affect his race with Republican Rep. Phil Gramm. But Gramm disagrees.

Doggett said while he "supports Democrats from the courthouse to the White House" he believes he can win without Mondale and work effectively in Washington regardless of who is president.

"I think President Reagan's neck is probably a little sore for the debate tonight because Phil Gramm has been hanging around it," Doggett said during a campaign stop in the South Texas town of San Juan.

Seven debate coaches who judged Sunday night's presidential debate for the Associated Press gave Walter Mondale the edge, but Gramm said he thought the president was the victor.

"Walter Mondale's strong points in the debate flew in the face of his record," Gramm said. "He sounded like a man who is saying, 'I'm not a wimp. I'm strong. I can be tough.' But that's not the record of the Carter-Mondale administration."

"If there had been any doubt about the election I believe this debate expelled it," he said. Gramm said President Reagan asked for his support during his recent Texas campaign swing.

"I believe Ronald Reagan will be re-elected Nov. 6 if people in key states like Texas who support the president mobilize those people who share their philosophy and their support for the president's program."

Gramm said he and the president have put people back to work and that's what people will remember at the polls.

"After all in politics and everything else it's performance, not promises," said Gramm, a Democrat-turned-Republican.

The man whom Gramm and Doggett hope to replace in the Senate also said that President Reagan looked better in Sunday's debate than in the first debate in Louisville, Ky.

"I think the president clearly won the debate. He demonstrated he is a great national leader. He seemed more relaxed and at ease — younger and less tired than Mondale," said U.S. Sen. John Tower.

Tower, the Armed Services Committee chairman who is retiring after 24 years in the Senate, said the presidential race will have an impact on the Texas Senate race.

"But Mr. Gramm is a very good campaigner and I think he's (currently) carrying the race himself," he said.

Doggett was in the Rio Grande Valley Sunday during a campaign swing and said he would open an office there if elected.

"You can count on me to work with you as a partner, just as if we were working together in a field, shoulder to shoulder," Doggett told about 300 members of Valley Interfaith, a nonpartisan, predominantly Hispanic coalition of churches and parishes involved in voter registration, lobbying and grassroots political organizing.

At the meeting, a leader of one of the coalition's groups said Gramm has been ignoring the Hispanic community.

"The question I'd ask is who from the Hispanic community is Phil Gramm meeting with," said Ernesto Cortez, spokesman for the Texas Industrial Areas Foundation Network.

Cortez says Gramm has turned down invitations to meet with Texas IAF groups in Houston, El Paso, Fort Worth, San Antonio and, most recently, in the Rio Grande Valley.

But Gramm spokesman Larry Neal said that Gramm has traveled to South Texas and to cities with large Hispanic populations, such as San Antonio and El Paso. He said that Gramm's schedule was already made when the congressman was invited to San Juan.

"I think it's probably unfortunate that one person should stand up and suggest on behalf of a group that represents several thousand members... that something else might be the case," Neal said.

Transfer schemes make us poorer

The Census Bureau has recently analyzed some numbers in new ways, coming up with an estimate that during 1983 nearly 30 percent of Americans—29.6 percent, actually—received direct payments from the government. The figures did not include farmers or farm workers (if it had, it would probably have been higher).

The figure may be taken as a barometer of how thoroughly the United States is being transformed into what economists Terry Anderson and P.J. Hill call a "transfer society."

Anderson and Hill, in a book published by the Hoover Institution, suggest that there are essentially two different kinds of economic activities: productive activities and transfer activities. "Productive activities add not only to the personal wealth of individuals, but also to the total wealth of society," they say. To be productive in an economy based on voluntary exchange, a producer must satisfy consumer desires—produce something that leads a consumer to believe he or she is better off for having acquired the product or service.

By contrast, "transfer activities" add to the wealth of specific individuals or groups of individuals, but reduce the wealth of other individuals or groups in the society. Because transfers consume resources, such activities decrease the total product of society.

A government-enacted transfer is not a costless activity. It is accompanied by legislation, lobbying and attempts on the part of those from whom wealth is being seized to defend their resources—in short, the valuable time of talented people, the one resource that can never be recovered.

"Another way of viewing these activities," say Anderson and Hill, "is to measure the net change in social output. In this context, productive activity is a positive-sum game, or social interaction, that enlarges the pie. Transfer activity is a negative-sum game—a series of social interactions that decrease the size of the pie. There is less after the social interaction than before."

We can see how the pie is reduced by looking at the impact of growing taxation on producers. As the producer members of our society move into higher tax brackets, they receive less return on each additional dollar earned. Finally they reach a point where work no longer becomes attractive. Work and production stop and the producers take longer vacations, or transfer income and capital to non-productive tax shelters.

According to census director John Keane, this new report is designed to help analyze the economic well-being of the U.S. population. The analysis should be rather simple: About a third of what Americans produce is seized by government for activities whose result is to make society poorer as a whole.

From a broad perspective, the solution should be simple. Reduce government-mandated transfer activities to a minimum—approaching zero—to permit society as a whole to become more prosperous. Using a third of our resources for negative-sum activities that decrease the size of the pie is, in the long run, a prescription for pauperism, social conflict and a decline in true charity.

There's a political problem, however. That 30 percent on the receiving end constitutes a powerful bloc in a democratic society, with a short-term vested interest in continuing the game. "Don't bother me with talk about society as a whole, I'm entitled."

So the game goes on.

Why Doggett is unhappy

In addition to bidding to retain the keys to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, the Republicans want badly to maintain their majority in the U.S. Senate. And the race in Texas for the seat being vacated by John Tower is a heated one between Democrat Lloyd Doggett and his GOP opponent, Rep. Phil Gramm.

One thing about Doggett's early life we can easily deduce: His mother never told him, son, if you can't say something nice, don't say anything at all. Or if she did tell him, he promptly forgot: what's the difference? Doggett's senatorial campaign against Gramm runs on raw, unrefined vitriol.

It reminds one well, actually, of Doggett's last campaign, in which he tried to trash the reputation of his Democratic primary opponent, conservative Rep. Kent Hance. Doggett's television ads portrayed Hance as a liar, as well as a "butler" for the Reagan administration.

There - alas! - he goes again. Mad Doggett wishes to convince us that Gramm hates everybody in Texas, including, probably, his children and his dog. So, on television, we get jewels of persuasion such as the following:

(Voice speaking with a soft, Gramm-like Southern accent.) "Look at that! Look at that! They're encouraging people to be handicapped." Cut to a boy in a wheelchair. No hint of the context in which Gramm spoke the words, assuming he spoke them as quoted, during a debate over funding for programs aiding the handicapped.

Anyway you get the idea. Gramm, as Doggett piously explained later, "is so monumentally mean - spirited, so un - Texas, as to be unbelievable."

There's more. Of course there's more! In a fund-raising letter, Mad Doggett calls Gramm "a dangerous extremist" for "cutting" Social Security, raping the environment, resisting "arms control," and opposing the Equal Rights Amendment.

According to Doggett, the National Journal rates Gramm as "the single most conservative member of Congress." Shudder.

Meanwhile it's, ah, invigorating to know that Doggett reportedly has $2 million to spend on more such advertising between now and the election. My brothers and sisters, we are in for a lively time.

Doggett asks, of course, why be civil to such a ruffian as Gramm? Besides which, doing the Don Rickles bit diverts attention from his own claims to represent the thinking of Texans.

Mad Doggett does unmistakably represent the thinking of SOME Texans: whether enough to elect him is much more questionable. The polls give Gramm (at present) an edge of 10 to 15 percent, which probably has as much to do with his and Doggett's contrasting stands on the issues as with anything else. Doggett himself acknowledges, "We disagree on nearly every major issue facing our nation."

Doggett is the archetype of the modern urban liberal - smart, young and blow-dried. If there is a conservative bone in his body, only exploratory surgery could locate it.

Doggett prefers to play up the environmental, feminist, and consumerist issues that attracted him during his legislative service, but he cheerfully lambasts Gramm for opposing the nuclear freeze and for supporting Reagan's economic policies.

The latter seems an especially strange issue in Texas, where unemployment hovers around the 5-percent level. With the major exception of the Rio Grande Valley - whose plight stems chiefly from the godawful state of the Mexican economy next door - Texas is hugely prosperous. Is there really as much demand as Doggett thinks for scuttling the economic policies of the past three - and a - half years?

Another nettlesome detail: the bitter primary victory over Hance left the Democratic party divided and bleeding. In a majority of Gramm's 235 county organizations, former Hance supporters bulk large. The conservative Democrats who watched Doggett defame their candidate last spring will not necessarily stay hitched to the party wagon this November.

Meanwhile Gramm has this going for him: he's possibly the most remarkable talent to hit Texas politics since John B. Connally. (I know, I know. Doggett probably loathes Connally, too.) Not only is Gramm conservative - he's smart, folksy, energetic and devoted to getting things done, which, let's face it, not all conservatives are. I think if I were Mad Doggett I'd despise him, too.

What makes a spy a spy?

Our nation's internal security is the responsibility of the spy-catchers of our FBI.

Now a special agent for the bureau is accused of being one.

It's like a belch in church! How in the world could such a thing happen?

Richard W. Miller has been accused, not convicted, indeed, to the charge of selling classified documents to Soviet agents he pleads "not guilty."

But his arrest seems to surprise least those agents who worked alongside him for 20 years.

It is from them that we can begin to piece together "what makes a spy a spy?"

Miller, 47, portly, does not look like an FBI agent. He does not "fit the image."

He'd been disciplined twice by the bureau - for being overweight and, another time, for selling soap products from the trunk of his car.

Yet, he held a highly sensitive position in counterintelligence, "a wiretap analyst."

And that is how he met Nikolay Ogordnikov and his tiny, pretty blonde Russian immigrant wife.

Miller, with a wife and eight children, had never found his $50,000 FBI salary adequate for his appetites. He commuted home on weekends, to North San Diego County where he tried raising avocados on 10 acres. But the bottom dropped out of the market; he was in debt.

So, if Miller did in fact make a deal with Soviet spies, the lure was both sex and money.

She - Svetlana - had been expelled from the Russian Orthodox Church.

Miller had been excommunicated from the Mormon Church.

Those severed ties surely facilitated rationalization.

Svetlana, with the rank of major in the Soviet KGB, was allegedly able to offer Miller $50,000 in gold and $15,000 in cash to sell his country's secrets to her country.

There are a lot of "secrets" to sell in California, with the greatest anywhere concentration of high-tech defense industry.

And one document Miller is accused of delivering included details relating to our own intelligence and intelligence personnel.

The bureau has clammed up. The DeLoe drug case taught the FBI "restrained procedures."

FBI Director William Webster will say only that, despite one aberration, the bureau has a proud record.

What makes a spy a spy?

Not one bold backward step. Just a lot of little ones.

They had little to celebrate

One of the world's economic powers observed an anniversary the other day.

East Germany was 35 years old, and celebrated with a military parade through East Berlin, ignoring as usual protests of the Western allies that the display violated the post-war four-power agreements under which all of Berlin is supposed to be demilitarized.

There is quite a bit more than military might to show for the years. What originated as the Soviet occupation zone of a defeated and divided Germany has become one of the world's major industrial economies. In the Soviet bloc, it is second only to the Soviet Union itself.

By the standards prevailing elsewhere in the bloc, with the possible exception of Hungary, East Germany is a consumer paradise. Food stores are adequately supplied and many East Germans can find and afford items such as television sets which are dreams elsewhere.

East Germany has also come up in the world diplomatically. No longer a Cold War pariah, it is a member of the United Nations and enjoys somewhat more cordial diplomatic relations with the Western powers - most especially West Germany - than does its Soviet big brother.

But for all that, it is really a nation?

The answer to that question was apparent in September when the long-planned visit of East German state and party leader Erich Honecker to West Germany was canceled. At Soviet insistence.

The Soviets had their reasons. With their propaganda battalions still in the attack mode on the NATO missile issue, it wouldn't do to have client East so openly consorting with a West Germany where all those Pershings were being installed.

Especially when Honecker had already expressed some reservations on the missile standoff. He dutifully endorsed Soviet objections to the Pershings, but said he found "no joy" in the consequence - more Soviet short-range missiles in East Germany.

But a deeper and longer-term German problem undoubtedly is also troubling the Kremlin. The Honecker visit evidenced the East's multiplying ties and growing dependency on West Germany.

The mini-economic miracle in the East is to a considerable extent underwritten in the West. In part by outright subsidies, under agreements guaranteeing unimpeded access to Berlin, West is paying East on the order of $200 million a year.

In part by loans on easy terms from West German banks. One for more than $300 million was arranged last year and another for a reported similar amount is under discussion.

And in part by a trade in bodies neither side wants to discuss publicly.

Since the early '60s, the West has been quietly paying the East to free prisoners and permit dissidents to emigrate. Figures are not available on how much money has changed hands but it is certainly the equivalent of hundreds of millions, if not billions, of dollars.

Even so, West German visitors to the East may wonder what they have really bought. The trip can be, some say, like dropping back in time. With touches such as coal still being delivered by old-fashioned horse-drawn wagons, an East that is the showcase of the communist bloc today is reminiscent of West Germany 30 years ago.

How things look to East Germans themselves was being made dramatically apparent in neighboring Czechoslovakia even as East Berlin paraded.

Scores of East German tourists besieged the West German embassy in Prague, seeking asylum and passage West.

B&PW members attend conference

The 56th annual District 9 Business & Professional Women's Clubs conference was held in Lubbock recently at the Grand Royale Hotel.

Clubs represented were Pampa, Amarillo, Dumas, Lockney, Lubbock, Plainview, Shamrock and Tulsa.

Darlene Watson, third vice president of the Texas Federation of B&PW clubs was state representative. Two guests from District 11, Weatherford, Texas, also attended.

Presidents and district chairmen met for luncheon in the Gold Room at Hemphill Wells. The opening

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — I recently received a notice in the mail that I was the winner of a contest. The prizes were substantial — an automobile, a VCR and a television set, or a collection of gemstones worth at least $300.

When I called the toll-free number, I was told the package would be sent to me, but there would be a modest handling charge. I received the package in the mail with an $80 c.o.d. charge, which I paid. When I opened the package the only thing that was inside was a certificate for some gemstones.

I sent the certificate to the company and, yes, they did send me some gemstones. My jeweler tells me that they might be worth $25 or $30 but certainly not that $300 that the enclosed certificate guarantees them to be worth. Where do I go from here?

— D.A., FARGO, N.D.
DEAR D.A. — Although you didn't say so, the likelihood is that in order to get you suckered into this red-hot proposition, somewhere in the offer was the line "money-back guarantee."

The first thing I would do is exercise the money-back guarantee. Notify the company that you want your money back. In the event that they don't act promptly on a refund, my next step would be the postal authorities.

If the postal folks give you a "We don't have time for this sort of thing," you might remind them that the postal authorities are very interested in having people like me advertise that they, the authorities, are interested and they make this known through public service announcements and so forth. If they still refuse to act upon your complaint, feel free to contact me and I will do whatever I can to stimulate them into some sort of action.

The only way schemes of this kind can be brought to a screeching halt is to have everyone who feels that they have been taken advantage of get on their hind legs and say, "I'm not going to take it anymore."

There is a lesson here, however, and I think you know what that lesson is. Nothing — that's right — nothing is for nothing. Every time you receive a notification that you are the winner of some kind of contest when in fact you didn't even enter a contest, you know somebody is trying to sell you something or take something away from you. You should be on guard.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — My daughter, who is 19, will be opening her first checking account.

When I opened my first checking account it was simple. There were only one or two choices. A special where you pay so much a check or a regular where there is unlimited check writing but a minimum balance. Now it seems that the choices are almost unlimited.

What advice could you give me to

DEAR L.P. — You put your finger on the problem: lots of choices. But having recognized this, it's time to go out and attack it yourself.

There is a whole menu of checking services offered at most banks and, indeed, other thrift institutions. Whether they are called negotiable order of withdrawal, or "NOW" accounts, or by other names, they are for all intents and purposes checking accounts.

What you will find is almost every bank or other issuer of these instruments has one or two accounts they feature and on which they are very competitive. The only way you are going to find out is to check them out.

For example, one bank may give special rates to students, another special rates to senior citizens and a third no minimum balance. I once did a survey on six banks within two blocks of one another, and in every

Study rates driving tasks

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Talking on the new cellular mobile phones is harder than talking with other occupants of a car but easier than looking for a landmark along the road, according to a study reported in a recent issue of Cellular Business magazine.

In a study conducted by Bell Labs and MB Associates, drivers rated the difficulty of various tasks on a scale from 1 to 10, with 1 defined as "no difficulty at all" and

10 as "so difficult I would never do it while driving."

Reading a map rated an 8.75 on the scale, followed in descending order of difficulty by: lighting and smoking a cigarette (5.5); getting change from pocket or purse to pay toll (5.25); dialing the mobile telephone (4.5); tuning a car radio (3.5); looking for a landmark along the road (2.5); conversing on the mobile telephone (1.5); and conversing with other persons in the car (1.25).

case each bank had at least one account that was better than all others.

First, you must ascertain your needs with regard to the number of checks you will write each month, the balances that you will maintain, and so forth. Then go out and shop. Like everything else in life, there is no free lunch. It takes time to find the best account for you, but I must tell you, it's well worth the effort.

In your daughter's case, let her do the initial groundwork. Then the two of you can analyze the data she has collected. The exercise will do her a world of good.

Dear Abby

Man found a second opinion to be of primary importance

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a healthy, active, 46-year-old man whose doctor told me I needed a triple (and possibly a quadruple) bypass heart operation immediately! It came as a shock to me because I had never had heart trouble of any kind. This news came to me on May 2, 1983. On the following day, I read something in your column that I believe was more than just a coincidence. It was as though the good Lord had sent a message to me through you.

I acted on your recommendation and got not only a second opinion, but a third, and both doctors told me I did not need heart surgery. When I told my first doctor about the opinions of the other two doctors, he suggested that since I had so little confidence in his professional judgment, I should find another doctor. I did.

Please read the enclosed column again. And run it every year. Sign me ...

ALSO WISED UP

DEAR ALSO: I will. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Thank you so much for printing the government's Second Surgical Opinion Hotline. (The toll-free number is 1-800-638-6833; in Maryland, it's 1-800-492-6603.) It's easy to see why you titled your column "Second Opinion Likely to Offend Doctor." It's been my experience that asking your original doctor for the name of a second-opinion specialist poses no problem for him. He will simply refer you to someone down the hall, in the same building or belonging to the same country club who will invariably corroborate his own opinion.

I cannot stress enough the importance of seeking out specialists totally independent from one another for second (and third and fourth) opinions in surgical or medical matters. Find a different doctor who will really take an objective look at your case, without regard to ego, fear of loss of control over a patient, his wallet, or any other irrelevant (to you) issues.

WISED UP

DEAR WISED: I deserve no credit (or blame) for the headlines—they're dreamed up either by my syndicate editors or local editors.

Concerning second opinions: The Department of Health and Human Services offers a brochure titled "Thinking of Having Surgery?" It's excellent, and it's free. So if you (or someone you care about) is considering any kind of surgery, write to Surgery, Dept. HHS, Washington, D.C. 20201, and request its brochure. You can also receive the brochure by calling the hotline number and requesting a copy.

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to the Pennsylvania Dutchman's 80-year-old cousin who fathered a son by his 24-year-old wife.

I know of a recorded instance in history where a man 100 years old fathered a child by his 90-year-old wife. His name was Abraham and his wife's name was Sarah. And they named their son Isaac.

This can be documented in the Old Testament in Genesis.

Two incomes affect lifestyle

COLLEGE STATION — Having children, as well as having two pay checks, creates some major lifestyle differences among dual-income families, says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

Researchers have now developed profiles of dual-income families with no children, those with young children, and those with older children, explains Dian T. Welch.

According to the profiles, families with no children have work and spousal relationships as top priorities, says Welch who is a specialist in family life education. Their lives are busy by choice and they are still struggling with the question of when or whether to have children. They spend primarily on material goods and target most savings for short-term goals, she notes.

As might be expected, the research shows that children dominate the lifestyle of dual-income families with young children, the home economist reports. Women take the primary responsibility for home and children, and make the children their number one priority. Men at this stage still find their work a priority, but the family is important to them too.

For many families, these are the years of greatest financial strain, says the specialist. The profiles indicate that many women work outside the home to provide additional income, and that young families often have little discretionary income after maintaining their homes and spending for necessities.

A more manageable lifestyle characterizes dual-income families with older children, observes Welch. While family relationships are important at this stage, many men and women make personal time a high priority. Husbands and older children are also more likely to help out with household tasks.

The research also shows these older families concerned about college expenses and saving for retirement.

The research, sponsored by the Public Issues and Consumer Programs Department of J.C. Penney Inc., is helpful in describing the needs and identifying some potential stresses for dual-income families, maintains the home economist.

"But having children is probably not the only factor that affects the lifestyle of these families," Welch says. Whatever the primary motivation for both spouses working — whether financial need, career orientation or some other objective — will also affect the family's lifestyle and attitudes, she says.

SPORTS SCENE

Cowboys' comeback biggest ever

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Never in their 24-year history had the Dallas Cowboys come from so far behind to win in the fourth quarter.

"We weren't dead but the coffin lid was just about nailed shut," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry after the Cowboys' amazing 30-27 National Football League overtime victory over the luckless New Orleans Saints on Sunday night.

Dallas trailed 27-6 after the third period and thousands of Texas Stadium fans hit the exits.

Those who left missed a fourth quarter which included:

—Dallas blocking its first punt since 1977 to set up Tony Dorsett's 3-yard touchdown run.

—The rehabilitation of reserve quarterback Danny White who came off the bench to throw a 12-yard touchdown pass to Mike Renfro.

—Randy White's sack of Saint quarterback Kenny Stabler which produced a bouncing ball into the end zone covered by Jim Jeffcoat for a score.

Then came overtime.

Dallas won the toss and drove 47 yards behind White to the Saint 34 where Rafael Septien drilled the game-winning 41-yard field goal.

The victory put Dallas, now 5-3, in a tie with Washington and St. Louis for the leadership of the National Conference Eastern Division.

The Saints dropped to 3-5.

"We almost waited too long," said Landry.

"Septien made a great kick under tremendous pressure. You can't ask any more than what he did."

"It was a great game by Danny," said Landry.

"But I know what Danny White can do. He deserved to have that happen to him."

The Saints led 17-6 at halftime on Richard Todd's 36-yard touchdown pass to Tyrone Young, Hokie Gajan's 62-yard scoring run, and Morten Andersen's 49-yard field goal.

New Orleans upped the lead to 27-6 on linebacker Dennis Winston's 43-yard return of a Gary Hogeboom pass and a 50-yard field goal by Andersen.

Exit Hogeboom. Enter White.

"It was a great feeling to come from behind and to win like that," White said. "These are the good times and what football is all about."

He added, "It's a strange feeling to stand on the sideline and have your entire emotion controlled by one little Mexican."

What was Septien doing?

"Sometimes if you think about doing wrong, something bad will happen to you," Septien said.

"So, I wasn't thinking about doing bad."

New Orleans Coach Bum Phillips was in shock.

"The same thing happened to us when we lost 21-20 here last year," Phillips said. "In the final two minutes Stabler was sacked for a safety. We are a victim of our own mistakes as simple as it is."

Stabler replaced Todd who sprained a knee in the third period.

"I never saw White coming," said Stabler of the play that tied the game 27-27 in regulation. "He hit me, I fumbled, and it's as simple as that."

Randy White said, "I don't remember how I got the ball away from Stabler but I remember catching myself jumping up and down."

Danny White's tremendous relief performance brought about questioning of Landry on his No. 1 quarterback next week.

"I don't ever answer questions like that right after a game," Landry said.

"I don't think I deserved to lose the job," said White, but "I don't think he deserves to lose it because of the way he has played. I know what Gary is going through."

Hogeboom was booted off the field after the interception return for a touchdown. It was the fourth Hogeboom miscue returned for a touchdown this year. He has four touchdown passes.

"I don't make those decisions, it's up to Coach Landry," said Hogeboom.

The Cowboys overcame a 20-point halftime deficit to defeat the Washington Redskins in the 1983 season opener.

"This could set us off for the rest of the season," said Landry. "It was that important to us. I think maybe the guys know now just how hard they have to work to get a victory. It has to help."

"It was one of our better comebacks when you consider how far down we were."

The game ended at 12:30 a.m. Dallas time. It had been delayed 45 minutes at the start by the Presidential debate.

"I think we became a team this morning," said Dorsett. "The fourth quarter showed what kind of character and what type of people we have playing on this team."

Oilers come close again

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers fans finally found something to cheer about but San Francisco saved its best for last and the end result was the same — a 34-21 victory for the 49ers and a continuing litany of losses for the Oilers.

Master quarterback Joe Montana riddled Houston for 353 passing yards and threw three touchdown passes Sunday, including an 80-yard bomb to Dwight Clark that ranks high among the talented receiver's best catches.

The victory returned the 49ers to the winner's circle with a 6-1 record after losing for the first time a week ago to the Pittsburgh Steelers. The Oilers dropped to 0-8 and now have lost 30 of their last 33 games.

"You can play a lifetime and not get one (touchdown catch) like that," Clark said of his late touchdown run.

Harvester cagers to begin workouts

Basketball workouts for the Pampa High School Harvesters will start tonight in the school gym.

The team workouts will last from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. each day this week.

Coach Garland Nichols said the public is invited to watch the workouts this week.

Coach Nichols said the Harvesters will have a tough act to follow from team's success over the past two seasons. He said the squad remains "a question mark, since we lost so many kids."

The Harvesters lost all - stater Coyle Winborn to graduation last year and Mike Nelson, who holds most Harvester career records, the year before.

The coach said 77 athletes turned out for basketball this year. He said the new crop may hold some surprises.

"I think we're going to be okay," Nichols said.

Clark came across the middle, won a juggling contest with Oiler cornerback Willie Tullis, who then fell down, giving Clark free sailing to the end zone with five minutes to play in the game.

"Dwight Clark made one of the greatest plays he's made as a football player," 49er Coach Bill Walsh said. "He caught it over the middle and split the defense beautifully."

Clark's catch deflated Houston's last comeback attempt after the Oilers had actually aroused their slumbering fans with a several offensive sparks.

Montana put the 49ers ahead 10-0 on an 11-yard touchdown pass to Russ Francis, and Ray Wersching's 26-yard field goal but the Oilers took advantage of a Steve Brown interception for Larry Moriarty's one-yard touchdown drive.

Trailing 10-7, Houston quarterback Warren Moon started another drive but it ended at the San Francisco 3 with an interception by Dana McLemore, beginning a 97-yard drive that led to Montana's 26-yard touchdown pass to Wendell Tyler and a 17-7 halftime lead.

The Oilers twice cut San Francisco's lead to six points in the second half before succumbing to Clark's gem.

Wersching kicked a 22-yard field goal in the third quarter and Houston matched it with Moon's 45-yard shot to Tim Smith for a 20-14 deficit.

Running back Roger Craig scored on a five yard run and the Oilers came back with Moon's 29-yard touchdown pass to tight end Jamie Williams before Clark took charge.

Despite the down turn at the end, Smith said it was nice to hear cheers for a change from the home crowd.

"I think that was as excited as the Dome's been for awhile," Smith said. "It's nice not to have the game over by halftime."

Pampa volleyball team's playoff hopes still alive

The Pampa High School volleyball team kept its playoff hopes alive with two victories over Lubbock Estacado over the weekend.

The Lady Harvesters, who now own a 4-3 district record, will play Dumas here Tuesday night, with the winner of that match likely to qualify for a playoff for second place in the district. The first and second-place teams enter the state playoffs.

Tuesday's action begins at 6:30 p.m. with the jayvee game. The varsity contest begins about 7:30 p.m.

The varsity won its first match against Estacado 15-12, 16-14, then took the second match 15-12, 14-16, 15-8.

The Pampa jayvee lost 15-5, 1-15, 1-15.

Longhorns lose their goal-line punch

AUSTIN (AP) — Third-ranked Texas has suddenly gone punchless on offense near its opponent's goal line, and Texas coach Fred Akers is not happy about it.

Previously ranked No. 1, Texas fell two places in the college poll after tying Oklahoma 15-15 on Oct. 13 in a game that saw the unbeaten Sooners stop Texas on four downs from the Oklahoma 2-yard-line.

On Saturday, the Longhorns fought off a furious fourth quarter rally by unranked Arkansas to win 24-18 on a touchdown-saving tackle at the Texas 4 as time expired.

Texas wasted three chances inside the Arkansas 10 to score.

In the first quarter, Jerome Johnson fumbled on third down at the Arkansas 5 and the Razorbacks recovered at the 8. A second-down pass by quarterback Todd Dodge from the Arkansas 6 was intercepted in the end zone on the first play of the fourth quarter.

Also in the fourth quarter, 231-pound Terry Orr pounded the Arkansas middle twice from the 1 without scoring and fumbled.

"I am not pleased with our rushing game," Akers said after the game. "Our performance inside the 5 has just got to improve."

"That was the most complete shutdown of our running game that I can remember," Akers said.

Texas finished with 116 yards rushing, and 50 yards of that total came on one run by new freshman starter Kevin Nelson. On 40 other rushing attempts, Texas, once a powerhouse rushing team in the Southwest Conference, had 66 yards.

Steam rose as the sun baked the soaked artificial turf, and 230-pound Arkansas noseguard Tony Cherico said, "We're so small and in such good shape that the heat didn't affect us that much."

Tide has turned for Cards

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The St. Louis Cardinals, who have had more failure than success in recent years, definitely seem to be reversing the trend.

However, the jury is still out on their 6-foot-6 kicker, Neil O'Donoghue.

Before the season, the Cardinals had lost 20 of 23 games to division rivals Dallas and Washington since 1978, but they have beaten both teams in the last three weeks to pull into a tie with the Cowboys and Redskins for the NFL East lead, each with a 5-3 record.

Sunday's 26-24 victory over the Redskins saw the Cardinals outgain Washington 456 yards to 296, but in part because of O'Donoghue's missed extra point and missed field goals of 34 and 40 yards, victory or defeat rested on the accuracy of one last kick in the final seconds.

"I just tried to relax, not to think about anything, really," said O'Donoghue after his chip-shot 21-yarder with three seconds left gave St. Louis the victory. "You just concentrate on your mechanics and your form. If there was anything I was thinking about, it was last year's game against the Giants, when I missed from 18 yards. I just told myself, 'Don't put yourself through that again.'"

"We've come through before. We did it again today," Cards' quarterback Neil Lomax said after passing for 361 yards. "This one took some character. It may have been our biggest win yet."

In other NFL games, it was Miami 44, New England 24; Indianapolis 17, Pittsburgh 16; Chicago 44, Tampa Bay 9; Philadelphia 24, New York Giants 10; Detroit 16, Minnesota 14; Denver 37, Buffalo 7; Cincinnati 12, Cleveland 9; Seattle 30, Houston 21; San Francisco 34, Green Bay 7; New York Jets 28, Kansas City 7; Los Angeles Raiders 44, San Diego Chargers 37, and Dallas 30, New Orleans 27 in overtime.

Tonight, the Los Angeles Rams are at Atlanta.

Dolphins 44, Patriots 24
Dan Marino threw four touchdown passes, giving him 24 for the season and leaving him just 12 short of the NFL record with eight games left, to engineer a 552-yard offensive by Miami at New England.

The Dolphins, the NFL's only unbeaten team at the season's midway point, scored touchdowns on seven of nine possessions, but didn't clinch the victory until the fourth quarter as Tony Eason kept the Patriots in the game with three

TD passes.

Bears 44, Buccaneers 9

Jim McMahon passed for 219 yards and three touchdowns and Walter Payton rushed for a pair of TDs to lead the Bears' rout of Tampa Bay, giving them a two-game lead in the NFC Central.

Payton, who failed in his attempt to become the third runner in NFL history to top the century mark in a record seven straight games, was limited to 72 yards on 20 carries, but he scored touchdowns on runs of 3 and 8 yards.

Seahawks 30, Packers 24
Dave Krieg riddled Green Bay for 310 passing yards, including a pair of touchdowns, but Seattle had to hold off a late rally to hand the Packers their seventh straight loss.

Lawyer banks on odd birds

BIG SANDY, Texas (AP) — Attorney John Curington retired so he could make some money — breeding ostriches.

"I've seen ostrich-skin briefcases that sell for $5,000," Curington said, adding that cowboy boots made of ostrich skin sell for as much as $1,200 — or more.

Curington owns a 35-acre ranch in East Texas, about 100 miles east of Dallas, which boasts of three ostriches — one male and two females, Mae and Fay.

But the rancher, who worked for 20 years as a lawyer for the late Texas billionaire H.L. Hunt, is planning to eventually have a vast herd of ostriches roaming the rolling hills of his land.

Curington, 55, plans to increase his herd to 25 females and three males, and, eventually, he hopes to expand the herd to several hundred birds.

"One good batch of eggs could give me that many," Curington told the Dallas Times Herald.

Curington said he believes the only people in Texas who raise the federally protected ostriches are zoos and wildlife parks. He has obtained federal and state permits to keep the long-neck ostriches, which he acquired from an exotic animal supplier in Virginia.

But so far, ostrich breeding has not been very productive for Curington. In two years, the ostriches have produced 63 eggs. However, only one young ostrich lived, and it later died an untimely death.

"I think a horse kicked it," said Curington. "After it got knocked down I think a dog finished it off. It was kind of a joint conspiracy."

Curington now has a hatch of 35 eggs incubating, but he doesn't have much hope they'll see the light of day.

"I listened to them with a stethoscope and I couldn't hear anything," he said. "With a live egg you can usually hear some movement."

And if the eggs fail to hatch, Curington has an old-fashioned alternative plan — to stop using an incubator and let the ostriches raise their own young in a secluded area.

"They're dumb, dumb, dumb," said Curington.

New crime bill gets tough on hackers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Computer hackers who hanker to fiddle with national security information or financial data that doesn't belong to them had better be aware that the long arm of the federal law is about to descend.

Federal authorities also were given new powers by Congress to deal harshly with unscrupulous manufacturers that counterfeit the trademark of other firms — thus confusing the public about the authenticity of products.

The much talked about "crime package" contains these as well as other measures that will benefit U.S. businesses in the years to come. Consumers, too, are given the hope that federal watchdogs will be able to take a bigger bite out of the "Buyer Beware" tactics of some foreign firms.

Stories of computer whizzes gaining entry into financial network computers and, to some extent, the fictional movie "War Games" — in which a high school student broke into a Pentagon military alert system — made the public realize the freewheeling that can be done by owners of computer equipment.

So in answer to some of those concerns, a new law was passed making it a federal felony to steal national security information through illegal entry into a computer. Other unauthorized access to government computers or to private credit or financial information would be classified as a misdemeanor.

The ever more popular practice of trademark counterfeiting is dealt with by the creation of federal criminal sanctions for trafficking in such bogus goods or services. Courts may grant triple damages or profits for trademark counterfeiting under most circumstances.

Another boon for business is a provision that prohibits the use, production or trafficking in counterfeit credit cards, automatic bank teller machine cards or the equipment designed to produce such cards.

Those using lost or stolen credit or automatic bank teller cards on a big-time basis could be fined up to twice their gains or up to 10 years in prison. It would become a federal offense only if the gain was more than $1,000 in a year or the culprit possessed 15 or more cards.

The anti-crime package also tries to head off some wily foreign defendants from using time-consuming rigmarole to avoid the law. It sets up new, simplified procedures for the admission of foreign business records as evidence in U.S. trials in order to expedite the prosecution of criminals who use foreign banks to launder crime profits.

Reagan not at his televised best during debate, but maybe it was good enough

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Start to finish, Walter F. Mondale pounded Ronald Reagan with the argument he hopes will pierce the president's aura of political invincibility: That he is a commander-in-chief without command of the facts, a leader who leads by committee.

The Democratic challenger pursued that line with single-issue fervor Sunday night in Kansas City and it will be a major theme of his campaign in the final 15 days as he fights for an upset Election Day victory.

While Mondale played his chosen hand to the last card, Reagan played Reagan.

"I know it will come as a surprise to Mr. Mondale, but I am in charge," the president said.

The Great Debate, second and last in the series, was in large measure a replay of the arguments Mondale and Reagan are using every day, in city after city.

Mondale sought to sow voter doubt that Reagan is in command of his own White House. Reagan said Mondale stands on a record of weakness and naivete about the Soviet Union.

An AP News Analysis

Each said the other was wrong. The voters will decide which to believe.

The Kansas City debate was no runaway, in either direction. And if voters view it as anything like the standoff some politicians said they saw, that would work to Reagan's advantage. For Mondale is the challenger battling to overrule the odds-makers, with time running short.

Reagan faltered now and again, but neither so often nor so clearly as in the first debate in Louisville. He lent no comfort to the Democrats who want to make his age an issue; when the question came up, he dismissed it with a typical quip.

"I am not going to exploit ... my opponent's youth and inexperience," the 73-year-old president said, closing the subject as a debate topic.

Mondale taunted Reagan on grounds that the president had said nuclear missiles loosed from a submarine could be recalled if launched in error. Mondale said that to assert command — a word he used eight times during the debate — a president must know better than that.

Reagan denied having said such missiles could be recalled. Mondale insisted he had, and said he could prove it. Reagan said that was a repetition of falsehood.

Actually, both debaters could argue that point, to no clear decision. The Reagan statement Mondale was citing is ambiguous as to whether the president was talking of recalling missiles or of recalling the submarines that carry them.

While Reagan was adamant on that, he corrected himself on one debate statement. Early on, the president said that a CIA agent in Nicaragua edited the controversial manual advising Nicaraguan rebels on actions against the government including assassinations. He disavowed the tactic and the handbook and said that whoever was responsible would be fired.

It was not Reagan at his televised best. But in political terms, it may have been good enough.

Employees suspended in probe

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Officials of the state's Department of Human Resources today were to continue interviewing some of the 130 children enrolled at an Arlington day-care center where allegations of sexual abuse have surfaced.

Meanwhile, four female employees of the La Petite Day Academy have been placed on leaves of absence pending the investigation into allegations that at least 15 of the enrolled children were sexually abused at the facility.

"In any investigation like this, the most crucial thing is finding out what the child says," said Nancy DeWees, program director for the department's child protective services division in Fort Worth. "There are rarely eyewitnesses or physical evidence. So videotaping these interviews is pivotal part of our investigation."

She said the department has videotaped statements by some of the center's children in which anatomically detailed dolls were used to ask the children if they were fondled.

Ms. DeWees said Saturday children interviewed by state investigators had implicated the four workers while describing a number of alleged sexual incidents at and near the center.

The four employees mentioned by the children have denied the allegations in interviews with department officials, Ms. DeWees said.

"At this point there are enough allegations to consider the possibility of criminal allegations," Ms. DeWees told the Dallas Times Herald.

State officials said they had asked Arlington police to join them today in questioning the center's 11 employees. No charges have been filed.

Attempts by The Associated Press to reach Kay Conaway, the center's director, by telephone for comment Sunday were unsuccessful.

Jack Brozman, president of the La Petite chain, based in Kansas City, Mo., said he placed the four employees on leave until the investigation is complete. Brozman, head of the chain 385 day-care centers, said he planned to come to Dallas today to conduct an investigation.

Meanwhile, the center will remain open, he said.

The Times Herald quoted sources in the state agency as saying allegations include charges that employees undressed or forced children to take off their clothes and that they fondled children and forced youngsters to fondle staff members.

"We take outcries from children about sexual abuse very seriously," Ms. DeWees said. "Our problem was that we were having trouble understanding the situation because of the children's limited ability to convey what had happened to them."

Leading film director, 52, dead of cancer

PARIS (AP) — Francois Truffaut, the eminent French director whose revolt against "factory films" produced many of the most acclaimed and popular works of New Wave cinema, has died of cancer. He was 52.

Truffaut, who learned last year that he had a brain tumor, died Sunday at the American Hospital in the Paris suburb of Neuilly, where he had been admitted about 10 days ago. Hospital sources said he spent his final days in a coma.

The short, dark-haired Paris native wrote as well as directed most of his 25 major films and short works, and acted in some of them.

He had been a major force in the film world since the release of his first major picture, "The 400 Blows," in 1959, and was a leader of the group of French directors who revolutionized modern cinema with their more spontaneous and personalized New Wave style.

"Francois Truffaut entered the cinema as one enters the religious life," Lang said. "He chose his family."

Truffaut's 1973 film "Day for Night" earned him an Academy Award for best foreign film.

Among his other well-known works are "The Last Metro" starring Catherine Deneuve and Gerard Depardieu, which won a record 10 Cesar awards, France's equivalent of the Oscar; "Shoot the Piano Player," a tragicomic story of gangsters and star-crossed lovers; "Jules and Jim," a lyrical tale of best friends in love with the same woman, played by Jeanne Moreau; and "The Story of Adele H." about Victor Hugo's insane, love-sick daughter, played by Isabelle Adjani.

His last film, "Confidentially Yours," starring Fanny Ardant and Jean-Louis Trintignant, was completed in 1983 and released in the United States early this year.

Truffaut was often his own leading man — a movie maker in "Day for Night," a benevolent doctor trying to socialize a mute child found in the jungle in the 1970 work "The Wild Child."

In 1977, he did his first acting job for another director — Steven Spielberg — playing a French UFO expert in "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

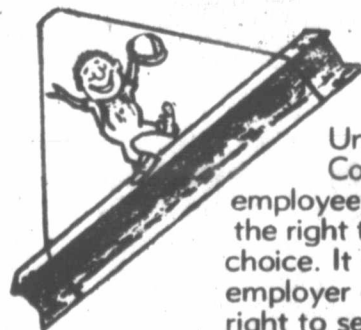

Film critics regarded Truffaut

as the uncontested master of the "film d'auteur" — the highly personal film written and directed by the same individual.

Truffaut and his contemporaries like Claude Chabrol, Jean-Luc Godard and Eric Rohmer believed in authenticity and spontaneity, seeking to make their movies reflect real life.

Truffaut described his films, a landscape of the ordinary lives of ordinary people, as "gentle descriptions of violent emotions."
