Moody Signs Lease Repeal 15 Minutes After House Passes Bill

BILL RECALLING SCHOOL LANDS BECOMES LAW

Lower House Gives Solid Support to Measure On Lease Sales

LAND INVESTIGATION

Robison's Department to Be Inspected Under Plan Of Legislature

AUSTIN, Jan. 11. (AP)—Moving rapidly, the house today passed without alteration the university land lease repeal bill endorsed unanimously by the senate yesterday and less than 15 minutes later Governor Moody affixed his signature to the measure.

Without delay house members turned attention to an investigation of the general land office as the result of a resolution introduced by Representatives Loy of Sherman and Petsch of Fredericksburg, but not until Representative Beck of Fort Worth attempted unsuccessfully to reject a clause providing that the vote should not be construed as criticism of the department. Speaker Barron held Beck's proposed amendment out of order and the bill was referred to the public lands committee.

House Adjourns

The house then adjourned until Monday in order to enable the speaker to select important committees which will function throughout the 41st session.

Chirman McGill said it was probable that his lands committee would not consider the investigation measure until next week.

As in the senate, there was not a dissenting vote when the Hornsby land lease bill was passed for final reading. One hundred and nineteen members shouted "aye" for its passage.

Election Canvassed

Much of the day's session was consumed in a canvass of returns of the general election by a joint senate and house committee and almost three hours after they began a check of the official returns, the legislature was informed that Governor Moody had received 562,972 votes as compared to 120,504 for his Republican opponent, W. H. Holmes, and that Lieut. Gov Barry Miller polled 583,614 votes. Mrs. Lena Moore, Republican candidate, was given 119,887, the canvass revealed.

One hundred and fifty-two bills and several joint resolutions had been heaped into the hopper when the house ceased activity.

SESSION IN RECESS

AUSTIN, Jan. 11 (AP)—Having passed the only law on which speed was essential, the Hornsby bill to repeal the 1925 leasing law and postpone sale of oil and gas on Texas university lands, the 41st legislature adjourned today until Monday.

SOONER SOLONS TAKE RECESS

Investigations of All Offices Next Week

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 11. (AP)—The Oklahoma legislature today laid groundwork for investigations and recessed over Sunday, postponing start of the inquiries until next week.

The house adopted a resolution calling for investigation of all departments of state and selected a committee to conduct the initial inquiry. The senate set Wednesday as the date for consideration of three resolutions for investigation of rumors and newspaper charges of irregularity by some senators in connection with the sudden adjournment of the attempted impeachment session of December, 1927.

It was indicated that the office of Governor Johnston would be first to receive attention of the house committee. Purported articles of impeachment were voted against him by house members in the unsuccessful session of 1927, and were dismissed by members of the senate, who accepted a supreme court ruling that the house was in illegal session since it had no authority to convene itself.

The house resolution calls for investigation of "charges of willful neglect of duty, corruption in office, habitual drunkenness, incompetence and other offenses, involving moral turpitude, committed in office."

One of the senate resolutions would constitute the entire senate membership as an investigating committee and stipulates that Carl Magee, Oklahoma City editor, would be the first witness. In his editorial column Magee published reports of improper influence on several members of the senate to procure their votes for adjournment of the attempted impeachment session.

50 TRUE BILLS RETURNED BY GRAND JURY

Three Wichita Youths Indicted in Holdup Of Spoonts Store

BONDS SET AT $5,000

Charges Also Returned For Attempted Robbery At Electra

Fifty indictments, including 49 felonies and one misdemeanor, were returned Friday afternoon at the end of the first five days' investigation of the 30th district grand jury, impanelled here Monday. The jury was excused until 9 o'clock Thursday morning, Jan. 17, when its work will be resumed.

Indictments charging three men with robbery with firearms in connection with the recent hold-up of the Spoonts Drug store No. 1, bills naming two defendants on three counts in connection with an attempted hijacking of an Electra garage, and indictments of men and women connected with the seizure in December of a giant whisky manufacturing plant were included in the initial report of the body.

Two negro men were named in indictments charging assault with intent to kill. One defendant was put under seven indictments for forgery and another under five on the same charge. Investigations of the garage holdup in Electra brought charges of assault to rob.

The report included one indictment for driving while intoxicated, one for bigamy, one for aggravated assault, a misdemeanor, four for theft over $50, five for the manufacture of whisky, two for possession and 10 for burglary in varying degrees, three of them against one defendant.

Joe Ireland, R. B. Nichols and Fred Holster, all Wichita Falls youths, were indicted in connection with the Spoonts Drug store robbery. The three are already in

KEEPS COOL

Girl Student Flier Holds Courage After Losing Propeller

NEW YORK, Jan. 11. (US)—Far less concerned than veteran airmen on the ground who watched apprehensively as the propeller of her training plane flew off over Mineola today, Mrs. Neva Paris, a student flyer, brought her plane calmly to the ground.

Amid the plaudits of "Bill" Winston and other noted instructors of Curtiss field, the woman flyer stepped laughingly from the plane, while the airmen remained enthralled at her skill and courage.

Mrs. Paris was flying alone over the Mineola courthouse when the metal propeller flew off the crankshaft. The engine, freed of the big metal blade, roared thunderously, until she cut the ignition switch. Then she brought the plane to a safe landing in an open field opposite the county police station.

SLAYERS AGAIN GRANTED STAY

15 Day Postponement Of Hanging Made

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 11. (UP)—The state supreme court late today granted a 15-day stay of execution to Mrs. Ada Bonner Le Boeuf and Dr. Thomas E. Dreher, scheduled to hang Saturday for the murder of James Le Boeuf, the condemned woman's husband.

The stay was automatic with motion of defense counsel to appeal a ruling of the court refusing writs of mandamus to compel Trial Judge James D. Simon to appoint a lunacy commission to examine the condemned couple.

Four Sign Ruling

Four of the five justices sitting in the case signed the majority ruling, while Chief Justice Charles O'Neil, who issued the stay last Friday, handed down a minority decision.

The majority opinion ruled that Justice O'Neil's stay of execution was null and void "as if it had never been written."

Attorneys for the defendants, who had prepared in advance a petition for a rehearing of the ruling today, presented this to the court after Justice Overton, who read the majority report, announced the 15-day stay, apparently anticipating the request.

The couple, granted a stay of execution a few hours before they were to die last Saturday, sought through the supreme court to obtain a reversal of the trial judge's decision which denied appointment of the lunacy commission.

Notice Causes Delay

The supreme court took the plea under consideration and deliberated all day before announcing denial of the motion. The appeal notice served, however, to delay the execution again. Before the court began its deliberations, Gov. Huey P. Long had announced he would not intervene in the case again.

"They have confessed," the governor said. "That's all that is necessary. I have no intention of again interfering."

GOVERNOR TO ISSUE REPRIEVE TODAY

Special to The Record News

ALTUS, Okla., Jan. 11.—Mrs. Sam Banks, wife of the new sheriff of Jackson county, was fatally injured Friday afternoon when the car in which she was driving with her husband overturned as it swerved to pass another machine on the Elmer road seven miles south of Altus.

U. S. House Passes Bill to Change State Apportionment After Census

Texas and Ten Other States Would Gain Representatives While 17 States Would Lose

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11. (UP)—A reapportionment bill for reallocating its membership according to the 1930 census was passed by the house late today after a bitter debate.

The bill, which results in 17 states losing some of their representation while 11 states gain in membership, passed without a record vote after a motion to recount was defeated 226 to 134.

Representative Dickinson, Republican, Iowa, opened the fight on the measure by offering an amendment which virtually substituted another bill. The Dickinson measure asked the next congress to reapportion the house on a basis of 435 members according to the 1930 census. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 144 to 136.

Iowa Loses

WICHITA LINE TO TAP MAJOR OKLA. SYSTEMS

Railway Plans Bring Cheers From C.-C. Members At Banquet

DIRECTORS NAMED

Over $31,000 Already In 1929 Treasury, Francis Tells Diners

A new railroad for Wichita Falls, extending northeast into Oklahoma and connecting with the Rock Island system and probably with the Santa Fe, was announced Friday night by Frank Kell, chief speaker at the annual chamber of commerce banquet.

The road will be constructed by Mr. Kell and associates, and will extend to Waurika, Okla., for its Rock Island connection, with the probability that the line will be extended from that point to connect with the Santa Fe system, further north in Oklahoma.

Survey Near Completion

Survey is now being completed for the right of way, which runs through one of the richest agricultural sections of the southwest, Mr. Kell pointed out. Application for certificate of public convenience will be filed soon with the interstate commerce commission. Construction will start immediately after the issuance of this certificate, Mr. Kell said. The announcement brought the diners to their feet cheering.

More than 500 persons heard Mr. Kell's announcement at the banquet at the Junior college and a program made up of musical numbers, songs by Dorothy Greathouse, opera singer, and addresses and predictions of continued progress for the Wichita Falls section in 1929.

Six new directors were elected, J. L. Jackson Jr., A. H. Britton, N. H. Martin, J. T. Harrell, Ed Peterson and Luther Hoffman being chosen for the board.

More than $31,000 has already been subscribed in the 1929 budget, it was announced by Charles L. Francis, president and toastmaster.

Kell Sees Progress

"The year 1928 was a material improvement over that which preceded, and unless I misread all the indications, 1929 should be a material improvement over 1928," Mr. Kell said in his address.

"It is up to this chamber of commerce and to every individual citizen to do his duty in making the current year a great year for this city and the surrounding territory. The opportunity is here. There is no reason why we should not all work together, taking advantage of the many opportunities which the year 1929 will present to us, and be able one year from tonight to say that it was the most prosperous and successful in the history of this organization.

A brief review of the general financial and business conditions of the country, the speaker said, indicated that the United States is in excellent condition financially and industrially. The war debt

CENSORS START WAR ON 'NOISIE'

Talking Movie Draws Fire Of New York Board

By SAM LOVE
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—The are-we-men-or-mice battle of the century is on in New York between one of the largest movie concerns and the state board of censors with, in addition to "free speech," a new American liberty at stake—the right of "free sound."

Under the impression that sounds as well as words can demoralize movie audiences, the New York board is fighting grimly for the right to delete any piccolo solo that its members consider lewd, lascivious or detrimental to the uprightness of Roxy patrons.

And should John Gilbert's kiss resound with too thrilling a smack, the censors feel that it would be best for everybody if they have the right to muffle it a little before it gets in its insidious work among the Bronx flappers.

Sound Added to Movie

New inventions bring new perils and the devil is ever on the alert to extend his domain through science. For this reason, a test case is being made out of "Sal of Singapore," a several reeler which Pathe first made as a silent picture and submitted to the censors, where it was duly passed. Then the movie company decided to make a sound, or noisie, out of it and even did the last reel over into dialogue, wherein Singapore Sal and the hero tell each other of their redemption by love. The pictorial matter was not changed and Pathe applied for additional licenses for six duplicates, but failed to give the censors the privilege of hearing the words and music.

The snubbing made the censors pretty mad. If it were allowed to go unchallenged it meant many things, one of which was that they might have no say-so in what some authorities have called "the greatest development in the motion picture art."

Words Attached

"Are we men or mice?" the censors asked themselves. They solved this by issuing the requested licenses with the following words stamped upon their face:

"This license is invalid when the film or any part thereof is used in conjunction with mechanical devices for the reproduction of sound or by the use of persons for the utterance of language."

"Are we men or mice?" queried the officials of Pathe when they saw the new rubber stamp.

Pathe went to the supreme court and got an injunction. It restrained James Wingate, chief censor, from invalidating or revoking the license of "Sal of Singapore," but it was only temporary.

The ultimate decision is pending and meanwhile the future of free speech and free sound in the movies seems to be bound up in "Sal of Singapore," which everybody agrees is a pleasantly innocuous movie, the most devastating menace of which is not its noises at all, but the luscious presence of Miss Phyllis Haver as "Sal."

Alimony League Protests Summons

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (US)—Protest against the practice of wives being permitted to serve summonses on their husbands in marital cases was made today by Edward Apstein, counsel to the Alimony Payers Protective association. The protest was made in an open letter to Chief City Magistrate William McAdoo.

The case of Louis Roud, who on Jan. 7 shot and killed his wife and then attempted suicide, was cited as an example of what the practice may lead to. Mrs. Roud had a summons for her husband. Such summonses, Mr. Apstein contends, should be served by a disinterested person.

COULD HARDLY DRAG THROUGH THE HOUSE

Alabama Lady Was Gradually Getting Weaker—Says Nothing She Tried Seemed to Help Until She Took Cardui.

Loxley, Ala.—"I was in an awful bad state of health," says Mrs. Charles Jerkins, of this place. "I was all rundown and weak as could be. I did not have the strength of a kitten. Some days I could hardly lift my head from the pillow.

"I looked like a skeleton. I was so thin and haggard. It took all my will power to drag myself around the house. I never walked any farther than I had to, for it hurt me to stand on my feet.

"My back and sides hurt me until I thought I could not stand it.

"I saw myself growing gradually weaker and I did not know what to do. I tried several things but nothing helped me.

"One day I read about how other women had been helped by taking Cardui, so I thought I would try it. I found it a splendid medicine. After I began to take it, I soon began to feel stronger and able to do things.

"From that time to the present I have taken Cardui several times when I was run-down in health. It has never failed to help me."

Cardui may help you, too. Try it. —Adv.

Museum Expedition Uncovers New Information in Ancient Ur Cemetery

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 11. (AP)—An ancient cemetery in Ur of the Chaldees has given up to the joint expedition of the University of Pennsylvania museum and British museum additional information concerning the burial rites of Sumerian royalty 5,000 years ago.

Many objects of gold and silver, of priceless archeological value, also have been found.

In reporting resumption of work by the joint expedition, C. Leonard Woolley, director, in a letter made public tonight, said the new discoveries included gold daggers, a cylinder seal inscribed "Mes-Kalam-Dug the King," a painted clay pot belonging to a pre-historic civilization, a copper head believed to be from a statue of a god, gold head-dresses, rings, beads and silver vessels. The copper head was said to have been the first object of its kind found in Ur.

Discovery in Cemetery

The objects were uncovered in the cemetery where the expedition in 1927 and 1928 discovered several royal graves, including the tomb of Queen Shub-ad, and where work was begun again about two months ago at the opening of the seventh season of excavations in Mesopotamia.

Mr. Woolley reported that grave robbers, house builders and layers of drains had "played havoc" with the upper levels of the cemetery, but that it had been possible to observe as never before the vertical relations between successive strata.

"At the bottom," Woolley said, "we found, not the tomb chamber of the king, which must lie under the soil not yet excavated, but the death pit inseparable from it. In this open part of the shaft measuring less than 20 by 10 feet there were crowded the bodies of 39 women and one man lying in more or less ordered rows.

"There were in a subterranian chamber six bodies, of which four were men-servants or soldiers, and the fifth a serving-maid, while the sixth body was that of the woman in whose honor the tomb had been built.

"The bodies in the tomb had been covered with some sort of a wooden canopy and lay on a brick floor above a terracotta drain. The outer court of the tomb has yet to be dug. We know only that outside the stone blocking of the door there were set clay pots of food and the carcass of a sheep. Whether there were other human sacrifices it is impossible to say, but at least we have the servants in the tomb, and, in the filling-in of the shaft, tier above tier of food vessels and meat offerings and human skeletons.

"Other rich graves have been unearthed. One, which might be called the grave of the baby princess, contained the body of an infant and with it a gold headdress which almost is a replica in miniature of that worn by Queen Shub-ad."

Woman Doomed to Die Loses Court Appeal

PARIS, Jan. 11. (UP)—The supreme court today rejected the appeal of Madame Vabre, one of four women awaiting death on the guillotine for murder at St. Lazare prison. She was convicted of stabbing her son to death. The same court recently rejected the appeals of Marie David and Junka Kures, both sentenced to death on the guillotine. The other condemned woman is Blanche Vabre.

TOLSTOY TALKS AT ST. LOUIS

Count Unburdens Mind on American Movies

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 11. (UP)—Count Ilya Tolstoy, second son of the famous Russian novelist-philosopher, came here today and talked about soviet Russia, love, and the movies.

"I'm disgusted with the movies," he said. "They mutilated about 30 per cent of the plot of my father's novel, 'Resurrection,' ignored its art and deleted all the philosophy."

He was asked whether his wife was an American, and replied that she was a Russian, adding:

"I wouldn't take a chance on an American wife. America and Russia have quite different civilizations. If I had an American wife I would be afraid she would always be asking me for money."

Count Tolstoy denounced the soviet regime, which he fled 11 years ago. He accused it of "murdering 2,000,000 people."

"Would your father have been in sympathy with the opposition of the peasants to the bolshevist government?" he was asked.

"He would be in sympathy with their passive resistance, but would not be in sympathy with the killing of soviet officials. His philosophy was one of turning the other cheek."

The philosopher's son maintains a summer home in Connecticut, and spends most of his winters in a Pullman car, alighting in various cities for lectures.

Dancer Tries New Step While Clad In Step-Ins and Loses Her Hubby

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 11. (UP)—A burlesque dance by a three-day bride, before her father-in-law as he sat peacefully in his kitchen, wrecked a marriage here.

The bride's remark to her husband as he sat splashing in a bath tub, that she couldn't give up her friends "just because I married you," didn't help matters at all.

As the natural outcome, Circuit Judge Wilson A. Taylor granted Henry R. Kalz, 20, an outright divorce from Theresa Primm Kalz, 19, pretty chorine at the Liberty theater.

Kalz, senior, testified at the hearing that on the day after the marriage "My son's bride came in wearing just those little short things that reached to here (he indicated a point somewhat above the knee). Then she did a dance."

Mrs. Kalz filed a cross-bill alleging non-support, but she failed to appear in answer to his original suit, so hers was dismissed.

CHICAGO TIRES OF THOMPSON

Voters Issue Statement on Mayor's Misrule

CHICAGO, Jan. 11. (US)—The people of Chicago are tired and disgusted with Mayor William Hale Thompson, according to a statement from the municipal voters league today.

"The citizens of Chicago are thoroughly disgusted," the report read, "with the orgy of misrule indulged in by the Thompson administration. If the 'recall' existed in Illinois Thompson would be recalled with a whoop."

The report continued with a recital of "city money running to waste at every spigot, taxes rising, payrolls padded, improvements half finished and appropriated money all gone; a $12,000,000 deficit in the school funds; another deficit of $11,000,000 in the water funds and other items of alleged mismanagement."

Enslaved Wife Says She Had to Shine Shoes Too

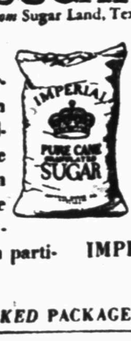

CHICAGO, Jan. 11. (US)—A wife who shined her husband's shoes and who in turn was forced to work in his factories eight hours a day, was granted a divorce today by Judge Joseph Sabath.

The wife, Mrs. Grace Leigh, 18, said her husband, Charles, was president of the General Color Products company and the Eternleigh Color Products company.

Mrs. Leigh said her only vice was chewing gum.

WILKINS ABOUT READY TO SAIL

Lack of Whales Causes Abandoning of Plans

By CAPTAIN SIR HUBERT WILKINS
Commander of the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition
(Copyright, 1929, by the Record News and Universal Service, Inc.)

DECEPTION ISLAND, ANTARCtica, Jan. 11 (Friday). (Via Whaler Hektoria and KUP-San Francisco Examiner wireless station.)—Having decided to postpone further exploration this season, we are now busy storing our supplies and equipment and making things ship-shape for our return to civilization.

The unusual season being experienced here is responsible for our decision to abandon further efforts at the present time. The erratic occurrance of whales in these waters this year has made it impossible for us to ecomonically use, as we had expected, a whale catcher for our late summer work.

Today we have been busy preparing a safe place to store our equipment, the gasoline, oil and food supplies. These will be stored in a snow-proof iron building and so be protected from any possible damage or loss. We have ample supplies for another full season's work.

It will be necessary to remove only the wings from the airplanes in order to store them in the huge hangar-like building loaned to us for that purpose by our ever-helpful friends, the Hektor Whaling company.

In two or three days everything should be snug ashore and well protected from the snow and sleet and high antarctic winds.

Witty U. S. Flappers Amuse Pope Pius

ROME, Jan. 11. (US)—Two Los Angeles girls, Conchita and Carlotta Chapman, were received in private audience by Pope Pius XI today.

His holiness was greatly interested in the witty remarks of the two girls, and one comment by Carlotta gave him especial amusement. When the holy father asked Carlotta what had most impressed her and her sister in Rome, she promptly replied that it was the story of the miracle of the three fountains.

The pope indulged in a detailed explanation of how after St. Paul's decapitation the saint's head bounced three times over the ground. And every time the head touched ground a fresh water spring sprang up from the soil.

Carlotta listened to the story with the greatest attention, and then remarked:

"How wonderful! But I bet he couldn't do that again."

Big Hotels Order Phone Booths Out of House

CHICAGO, Jan. 11. Hotels and drug stores, fighting the order jointly, say they cannot operate the booths on the reduced rate.

(UP)—Leo Willock, convicted of slaying his 12-year-old daughter, Sarah, during a drunken quarrel over the lighting of a lamp in his home, was sentenced to serve from one to 14 years in the penitentiary by Judge George Rush today. The daughter was shot when she threw herself in front of her mother, evidence showed.

WON'T LAY

Roosters Changed Into Hens but They Don't Produce Eggs

CHICAGO, Jan. 11. (US)—Hens have been made to look like roosters and roosters to look like hens—but the transformed roosters won't lay eggs.

This is the problem before Dr. A. V. Domm, of the University of Chicago.

"My experiments changed the hens to roosters and the roosters to hens in appearances," Dr. Domm told the American Society of Zoologists today. "The hens developed comb, plumage and spurs of the rooster and the rooster on reaching maturity lost his ability to crow and discarded his plumage and the customary female plumage appeared—but he wouldn't lay eggs."

WATER BILL IS APPROVED

Woodward Measure Made To Suit Committee

AUSTIN, Jan. 11. (AP)—The citizens' advisory committee on water conservation legislation today endorsed Senator Walter C. Woodward's bill after Woodward had agreed to add a clause protecting the rights of manufacturers to water for use within their plants.

The committee, however, agreed with Woodward that the state's policy should be "to declare that necessary water for domestic and municipal use is primary."

Order of water priority then should be manufacturing other than generation of hydro-electric power; irrigation, development of hydro-electric power and pleasure and recreation, the committee decided. Woodward expressed himself in accord with the committee's views.

The advisory committee was appointed at a conference seeking a state policy governing use of public waters.

Ireland Hampton of Fort Worth, attorney for the Tarrant County Water district, presided over the committee meeting which was attended by Woodward, Homer D. Wade, manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, Representative Leonard Tillotson of Sealy, G. W. Trueheart, assistant attorney general, John W. Gaines of San Antonio, Clarence Ousley of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce, and R. B. Renfro of Boelle.

Josh Lee Presents Characterization At Woman's Forum Friday Afternoon

Josh Lee, noted after dinner speaker and head of the public speaking department of the University of Oklahoma, was presented by members of the literature department of the Woman's Forum in a characterization from Dicken's "Christmas Carol," Friday afternoon at the Forum clubhouse at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Lee's characterization of Scrooge, the principal character, was so realistic that one did not need to use one's imagination to see the character in real life. The scene opeend with the appearance of the ghost of Scrooge's former partner, Jacob Morley, who represented the ghost of Christmas Past. The ghost transported Scrooge to the happy scenes of his apprentice days and reviewed for him the Christmas dance that was so hilairous. Mr. Lee's interpretation of the dance was so realistic that one could almost see the dancers and hear the squeaky fiddles. Following this scene Scrooge is reminded of the girl he was engaged to and hears the conversation when the engagement is broken because of his greed for money.

The ghost of Christmas takes him to the house of Bob Cratchitt, the poor underpaid secretary, and he sees how happy the family is with nothing but the Christmas spirit. He is next transported to the house of his nephew, where everybody is happy, and the scene is given with a very finished touch.

With the ghost of Christmas-yet-to-come, is the scene of Tiny Tim's death which, portrayed by Mr. Lee, brought tears to the eyes of the audience. Not only was the hateful character of Scrooge well depicted but the lovable, generous figure that he became after the visit of the three spirits was as artistically portrayed.

A large and appreciative audience heard the reading. This is the second time Mr. Lee has appeared before Woman's Forum members.

Nutrition Class Shows Skill In Aiding Thrift Boy

Results which are being obtained in a "pattern child" project undertaken last fall by the home economics department of Fairview school at Thrift were recited Friday by Miss Gerda Olson, Red Cross county nutritionist, who assisted with the summer and fall "round-ups" at that school conducted last year by the Parent-Teacher association.

The undertaking of the "pattern child" development program was the outgrowth of the pre-school clinics held at the school, it was stated. The pupil selected was a young boy who had attracted the attention of Miss Olson and the teachers of the school during the spring of 1928 because of underweight, dull eyes, poor posture and enlarged glands and tonsils. According to the examining physician, the boy also was suffering from ricketts. At the fall clinic the child was examined again, and found to have the same scores against his physical well-being, with the exception of bad tonsils, which had been removed during the summer.

One of the home economics classes, under the direction of Miss Thelma Abbey, had assisted in the clinics and had used the reports for class work and study, including the particular case of the boy in question. When the Parent-Teacher association offered to finance the project, the entire home economics department adopted the pupil as the "pattern" for their study. The child's parents gave full consent to the plan, it was said.

The girls in the class found that at home the child had not cared for milk, and had drunk very little water. His consumption of food had been considerably below the normal requirements for a boy of his age.

For several weeks the boy has been served daily lunches prepared by the class in cooking, scientifically planned and served according to approved principles of corrective dieting. The lunch usually consists of one sandwich, one hot vegetable, one green veegtable, or fruit, and one pint of milk. The beverage sometimes varies, being made with a hot milk base, or fruit juices. An apparent enjoyment of his meals and a normal appetite has developed, the report says.

Much interest has been taken by the members of the department in the constantly increasing weight of the boy, better color, clearer eyes, increased vigor and spirit, and a remarkable improvement in his scholastic work. It was stated that the pupil's parents have expressed much pleasure in the development, and the program will be continued by the department throughout the year.

Good Housekeeping Powerful Aide To Husband-Keeping, Dorothy Says

Do Good Housekeepers Make Poor Husband-Keepers?—How to Tell When a Man's in Love. A Young Man Caught by an Age-Old Trick

Dear Miss Dix—Don't you think, as I do, that excessive housekeeping is the reason why most marriages fail? How can a man love a woman who is always cleaning house, cooking, washing dishes, etc. ad nauseam. When a woman is always working she has but little time for loving, which after all, is what most men desire. The reason men so often love the "other woman" is because they never see her cleaning house. They see her when she is at her best. Keeping the house is all very well, but keeping the husband is better and more important.

—AN OBSERVING MAN.

Answer—Even so, brother. It is certainly more important to keep a husband than it is to keep a house, but I greatly fear that the woman who is a punk housekeeper is also a poor husband-keeper.

Perhaps I have been unfortunate in knowing men of a sordid and earthly type and much given to the flesh pots, but I have never yet observed a husband burning incense before a wife who always burned the roast or one who took any interest in holding the hand that was too fine and dainty to sweep a floor or make a bed or do any of the necessary work to make him comfortable.

So far as my observation goes, after marriage, at least, men are more stomach than heart, and no amount of beauty or wit or talent in a woman atones to them for her being a bad cook, a slovenly housekeeper and a wasteful manager.

On the contrary, the woman who is a super-excellent cook can keep her husband eating out of her hand, and not many men roam away from a fireside that is always clean and swept and where, after a good dinner, their own pet chair waits for them flanked by the light that is adjusted at the particular angle that suits their eyes.

I agree with you that few men are reasonable in their demands upon their wives and that most men would like their wives to be miracle workers who could be both household drudges and Lady Loves at the same time; who could do the cooking and cleaning and scrubbing for the family and yet have their hands always immaculately manicured and themselves dyked out in frills and furbelows, and who would wave some sort of magic wand so that the disagreeable subject of bills would never come up.

I also agree with you that the charm of the "other woman" is that a man always sees her when she is dolled up, with her complexion on and her hair curled, whereas he gets a close-up of his wife as she appears at 7 a. m. as she leaps up to get his breakfast and get the children off to school and do the million other chores that call for a good, stout bungalow apron in place of chiffons.

Lady Loves are one thing and wives are another. They cannot employ the same technique, and I am very confident that no wife will improve her standing with her husband by devoting more time and labor and thought to her personal appearance than she does to making him comfortable. Excessive housekeeping may send a few marriages on the rocks, but neglectful housekeeping is the first aid to divorce. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—If in doubt whether a man loves you, what would you do? Can you always tell by their actions? —R. S.

Answer—If I had any suspicion about the state of a man's affections for me I should give him the benefit of the doubt and decide that he didn't.

There is nothing that women kid themselves so much about as they do about men loving them. They are so anxious to be loved, so eager to attract men, that they befool themselves into being what they want to believe. They attribute to men motives that they never dreamed of having. They read deep meanings into the most casual attentions from men. They see a deathless devotion in a common politeness.

Why, women tell me all the time that they know a certain man is in love with them because, although he has never mentioned the matter to them, they can read his devotion in his eyes. Other women tell me that they know that certain men love them, but that they are too shy and timid to tell them so. Still other women are sure men love them because the men have been coming to see them for years.

All of which is utter nonsense. No woman, not even if she is the seventh daughter of a seventh daughter and born in a caul and is endowed with the gift of prophecy, can read what is in a man's eyes. They may tell of the state of his liver, but not of his heart. Nor was there ever yet any man so shy that he didn't have spunk enough to ask for what he wanted. Neither is a man camping in a girl's parlor year after year the slightest indication that he has anything more than a brotherly feeling toward her. Like as not he comes because her mother is a good cook and because her house makes a comfortable free club for him.

Take it from me, sister, that when a man is in love with a woman he doesn't leave her in doubt on the subject. He tells her about it morning, noon and night, and then for fear she may not have understood him, he telephones it to her all over again after he gets home.

He is insistent and persistent and consistent, because he not only makes love the theme of his monologue but he backs up his words by deeds. He is never too busy to take her out. He is never too tired to come to see her. He can think of a million things to do for her pleasure, and has the time of his life in giving her a good time.

Love makes the dumb eloquent, the tightwad a spender, the selfish self-sacrificing, the lazy industrious. Above all and most conclusive of all, it makes a man get out and hustle so he can hurry up his wedding day. Unless a man shows some or all of these symptoms he isn't in love.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young man and for the last six months have been "keeping company" with a girl 19 years old. I do not love this girl and have never led her to believe so or that I had an intention of marrying her, but because I was alone and wished company I showed her a good time in a perfectly respectable way. I am now leaving the state to go into business elsewhere, and she declares that unless I marry her she will kill herself. What am I to do? I have been perfectly honorable in all my dealings with this girl.

Answer—The girl is simply trying to bulldoze you into marrying her, and you will be a poor weak simpleton if you let her do it. Don't be afraid of her killing herself. That is a mere bluff.

Why, son, the game this girl is trying on you is as old as creation. When a woman wants to marry a man who doesn't want to marry her, she pulls this I-can't-live-without-you and I-will-committ-suicide-if-you-leave-me stuff. It is an ancient line, but it works, because the man's vanity is to flattered by the thought of the woman's devotion that he hasn't the courage to say "Nay, nay, Pauline," or take to his heels and run away.

Thousands of men have married women they didn't care anything for because they didn't have the courage and the sense to break away from the clinging arms that held them. Then they were miserable ever after and made the women miserable, for no man who is shanghaied into marriage makes a good husband.

So my advice to you is to beat it while the going is good. Just fade away. And, as you value your life, don't go to tell the girl goodbye and give her a chance to melt your backbone down with her tears.

The man who takes a girl around and gives her a good time has paid his way as he goes, and he doesn't have to marry her, to boot.

—DOROTHY DIX.

jail, two of them having been arrested a few hours after the holdup. R. B. Nichols was arrested a few days later by members of the sheriff's department after he had been located in the city jail. All three were named in two indictments, naming assaults on Harold Diggs and on R. A. Spoonts. Bonds were set at $5,000 each on each indictment.

F. L. (Chief) Eaves and R. C. Pettiett were indicted for assault to rob in connection with the attempted holdup in Electra on Dec. 6. Three indictments were returned against them for alleged assaults on Jack Ogle, Cyril White and L. E. Johnson. A $1,000 bond was set for each of the defendants on each count.

E. G. Fowler, negro, is in jail indicted for assault to kill. The other negro so named by the grand jury, accused of having attempted the slaying of a white man, is under bond.

Quick Liquor Bill

Sam Parks, alias J. L. Sibley, alias Claybrook, alias C. B. Stewart, alias J. L. Bryson, was named in five forgery indictments; seven similar bills were signed against G. W. Dodgen, alias Louis Christie, alias Gregory Dodgen.

One man, Curtis Weaver, arrested on charges of possessing whisky Thursday morning, was indicted before the grand jury adjourned. His bond was set at $1,000.

It was pointed out that although the actual number of bills returned is unusually large for an early report, the number of indictments against single defendants brings the report to within normal limits.

A number of important matters are still to be presented for the action of the body and its next week's proceedings, while not concerned with so many cases, are expected to be even more significant.

The jury reported to Judge Allan D. Montgomery about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The written report, it was explained, is not yet complete and will not be presented until the end of the session.

Report Filed

The bills returned Thursday and the names of the defendants who are already in jail are listed below. Names of defendants not as yet under arrest or at liberty under bond were withheld. The report follows:

Robbery with firearms, two indictments each: Joe Ireland, R. B. Nichols and Fred Holster. Bond set at $5,000 in each case.

Driving while intoxicated: One indictment returned, defendant under bond.

Assault to rob: Charlie King and George Terrett, jointly indicted, bond set at $1,000; T. B. Chambless, bond set at $1,000; R. C. Pettiett and F. L. Eaves, jointly numed in three indictments.

DANDRUFF
Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—Adv.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 11. (UP)—Hope that Mrs. Thelma Sanford, former U. S. customs service operative of El Paso, Texas, who went blind Sunday after drinking poison liquor, will regain her sight, was held here today.

Mrs. Sanford said yesterday that she could distinguish light and appeared to have partially regained sight of one eye.

The 19-year-old girl was stricken after a drinking party Saturday night at which the liquor was furnished by a bootlegger named "Jack." As none of the others were affected, police concluded the poison possibly had been placed in liquor given the girl by an unknown man who visited her before the party, and who was said to have drunk none of it himself.

HARRY ROGERS BEING BOOMED

Legislators Commend Banker for Cabinet

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 11. (AP)—Over the opposition of some Republican members, the Oklahoma house of representatives today adopted a resolution endorsing Harry H. Rogers, Tulsa banker and Republican worker, for a post in the cabinet of Herbert Hoover president-elect.

While no specific post was mentioned, it was understood the authors, Allen Street of Oklahoma City, Democrat, and E. W. Snoody of Alva, Republican, had the secretaryship of the interior department in mind.

The vote on the resolution split the coalition of anti-administration Democrats and Republicans formed to direct the investigation of state departments, including the governor's office.

constitution while Representative Cramton, Republican, Michigan, successfully inserted a line providing no state should have less than one member in the house.

Representative Black, Democrat, New York, appealed to the house for passage of the bill, declaring Chief Justice Taft has been forced by prevailing social conditions to call for a war on crime, "yet in this paramount law-making body we find members insisting on breaking the constitution."

Representative Lozier, Democrat, Missouri, argued for increasing the house membership to 500 or more instead of keeping it at 435.

Representative Tinkham, Connecticut, injected the 14th amendment of the constitution into the argument but was ruled out of order by Chairman Chindblom, Republican, Illinois, who was presiding.

Goes to Senate

The reapportionment bill now goes to the senate, where the fight against it will be continued by members from states who are certain to lose in the reallocation.

States expected to lose representation when reapportionment is made according to the 1930 census are: Alabama 1, Indiana 2, Iowa 2, Kansas 1, Kentucky 2, Louisiana 1, Maine 1, Massachusetts 1, Mississippi 2, Missouri 3, Nebraska 1, New York 1, North Dakota 1, Pennsylvania 1, Tennessee 1, Vermont 1 and Virginia 1.

States expected to gain by the law are Arizona 1, California 6, Connecticut 1, Florida 1, Michigan 7, New Jersey 2, North Carolina 1, Ohio 3, Oklahoma 1, Texas 2 and Washington 1.

A Great Discovery

When Pasteur discovered, in 1862, that the infection of wounds was caused by malignant bacteria, he performed a service of inestimable value to mankind. Since then medical science has been producing better and better antiseptics, to kill these germs that may enter the smallest cut and give us diseases such as typhoid, tuberculosis and lockjaw. Now, all you have to do to be sure that these dreadful germs will not infect a wound, is to wash that wound, however small, thoroughly with Liquid Borosone, the modern antiseptic. You can get Liquid Borosone, in a size to fit your needs and purse, from Miller Drug Store.—Adv.

LINDY TO FLY ON NEW ROUTE

Transatlantic Hero Takes Pan-American Job

service from New York to California. Before making the Central American flight, the colonel said, he planned to fly over the airrail route, accompanied by Casey Jones.

Lindbergh announced his second Central American invasion in the office of J. T. Trippe, president of Pan-American Airways.

It was the first newspaper conference attended by the young hero for a considerable time. He seemed in fine health, and was affable but somewhat shy, flushing with his usual readiness.

"I have made this connection primarily in the hope that it will bring intercommunication between the southern republics much closer than is now possible," he said.

Lindbergh seemed unhappy because he could not recall the names of one of two newspaper men present who had covered the take-off on his flight to Paris and he grinned at reminiscences of his first appearance in New York. When he was suddenly asked, however, if he had any matrimonial plans for the near or distant future, he sharply informed a questioner that the interview concerned the opening of a new air mail route and nothing else.

His connection with Pan-American Airways, it was pointed, also makes him consultant to the Aviation corporation of the Americas, its holding company.

The line he will open up is the fourth to be placed in operation by the concern, linking the New York-Atlanta-Miami air mail route for a direct sytsem through the Americas. The system, over 4,023 miles in length when it reaches Cristobal, is expected to be further extended by the end of the year down the west coast of South America to Santiago, Chile.

Lindbergh's trail blazing itinerary, worked out with his usual clock-like precision, he announced as follows:

Leave Miami, where the airways concern has installed a $100,000 terminal, on Feb. 4, at 8 a. m. Arrive at Havana at 9 a. m., and leave at once for Belize, British Honduras, arriving there at 4 p. m.

Feb. 5, leave Belize for Tela, Honduras, leaving Tela at once for Forrinto, Nicaragua.

Feb. 6, leaving Managua for Puenta Arenas, Costa Rica, thence to David, Panama, thence to Cristobal, Panama, arriving at 4 p. m.

WHAT'S YOUR OFFICE BOGEY?

Daily Editorial

DON'T boast of your bogey if you can't match it with an office score. Golf is primarily a recreation of maturity and success—a process of semi-retirement, rather than a young man's game.

Spend your spare time practicing business strokes. Most of the fellows who can land on the green in one aren't landing bonuses nor are they at the push end of executive bell buttons.

You can't play two games with all your strength and be a champion at either—the drain on mental and physical tissues is too great.

John D. Rockefeller didn't begin to swing at the ball until he had a tidy bank balance.

Andrew Carnegie didn't put on his knickers until the balance sheet assured him that he could risk an occasional afternoon on the links.

T. J. Watson was too busy, before 50, building up the National Cash Register and whipping together the I. B. M. to learn the relative merits of niblick and mashie.

Schiff, Morgan and Harriman found all the exercise they could use in carrying railroads and industries on their backs.

WHEN a fellow club member remarked upon Gladstone's indifferent billiard technique, he retorted that he managed his cue as well as any useful occupied person could be expected to manipulate it.

Few of the gallery's pets are equally popular with the sales-record.

Tourney stars have a consistent habit of slicing their jobs and dubbing the details of critical contracts.

Check the list of sports champions and count how few of 'em are wearing medals or holding prize scores in finance, retailing or professions.

The average play-boy's a dull Jack and shows mighty poor form at every game which calls for imagination, enterprise and resourcefulness.

He squanders so much energy on the links and courts that he has none left for concentration.

An exhausted man can't think straight.

Exercise your muscles, but save some steam for the brain's daily dozen.

Mr. Gladstone wasn't a star cricketer, either. But he had enough vitality, in his eighties, to run the British Empire.

As Told by Them to
FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By HENRY JOHNSON

Henry Johnson is a star pitcher for the New York Yankees baseball club, which has nothing to do with his liking this story.

HENRY JOHNSON

"Two Jewish boys," as Johnson tells it, "named Pat and Mike, were bellhops in an apartment hotel. One morning they were walking down the hall when they decided to look in and see how a certain young sculptor was coming along with his modeling.

"With typical French sagacity the two boys dragged out a stepladder and peered over the transom. The young artist was busy modeling some clay, all the while talking to his beautiful model, who was posing by the window.

"'My, what beautiful shoulders you have—they ought to be gilded. Ah, what symmetrical ankles you have—they, too, should be gilded,' etc., etc.

"About this time the two young Swedes had become so highly excited that they fell off the ladder with a crash.

"'Who's that?' cried the sculptor from within.

"'Two gilders from Boston,' replied the quick-witted Polish lads, as they waited for the door to be opened."

Rum runners who drifted 14 days on Lake Erie when their boat's engine broke down said they didn't drink any of their liquor, even though they nearly died of cold, because they "didn't want to be poisoned." And that, oh guileless reader, is the "bonded stuff" that is fetching $14 a quart once it gets over here.

Chicago man, married 65 years, says he had a happy married life because he never quarreled with his wife. Obviously, neither of them plays bridge.

Movie critic complains that life in newspaper offices isn't anything like what the Hollywood directors think it is. Still, things even up; life in a movie studio probably isn't much like what a lot of editors think it is, either.

Hypocrisy Rampant

IT IS quite possible that future generations will look back on the present period as the great age of national hypocrisy.

Sham and pretense have become two of our greatest national characteristics during the decade since the world war ended. No one can tell how long it will be before we manage to reduce them to their normal proportions; certainly both have some striking manifestations nowadays.

A day or so ago the Washington correspondents sent out some rather excited stories, predicting that President-elect Hoover might take the unprecedented step of demanding that all government officials, from high to low, comply with the national prohibition law.

"This," wrote one correspondent gravely, "is something new. Advocacy of some such executive pronouncement has been occasionally voiced in congress by two or three members known as radical drys, but it has never gone further than that."

Something new, indeed—it surely is. Yet why, if we are not wholly given over to hypocrisy and humbuggery, should there be anything either new or startling in the spectacle of the president of the nation insisting that government officials shall observe the nation's organic law?

Nothing could be possibly more illuminating. Let yourself ponder, just for a moment, on the extent of the sham which the pending issuance of such a request implies.

We have a "dry" government. Neither the present congress nor the one that will succeed it will modify the prohibition law to the slightest extent. In addition there are hundreds upon hundreds of appointive officials, each sworn to observe and protect the law, many of them charged directly with enforcing the prohibition law itself. Yet for a president to demand that all of these individuals honor the law themselves is considered a radical, surprising, breath-taking step.

Could our hypocrisy go further?

It is an extremely unhealthy situation into which we have drifted. We have come perilously close to accepting the creed of the shyster lawyer, that whatever you can get away with is all right. No problem that faces us is of greater importance than this.

No government, and least of all a democracy, can endure without a high standard of integrity among its officials. Unless we can rid ourselves of our growing indifference to sham, we are due for a rather rocky time of it a little later. Regardless of your attitude toward the prohibition law itself, you must agree that this hypocrisy is a force that is menacing the very foundation of our government.

Driving Too Slowly

A NEW YORK man who persisted in driving along a busy street at a very slow speed was arrested and taken to court by a patrolman; and even though the judge was obliged to free him because he could find no law prohibiting slow driving, we're inclined to think that the officer who made the arrest was dead right.

When we talk about the dangers of traffic we usually mention the speeder first of all. But the slow-poke is often just as big a danger—and an even bigger nuisance.

It is the slow-poke who causes people to break out of traffic lanes in an effort to make reasonable time; and this breaking out of traffic lanes causes nobody knows how many accidents. The slow-poke also is responsible for the custom of passing on the right—another source of crashes. On all busy streets he should be eliminated; and if, as in New York, there is no law to cover his case, one ought to be passed, pronto.

40,000 Millionaires

IF YOU have been having any doubts as to the real, enduring achievements of our country during the last dozen years, you may lay them to rest forever now. The country has nearly 40,000 millionaires!

This is on the word of Carl Snyder of the Federal Reserve bank of New York, who recently addressed the American Statistical association in Chicago.

In 1914, says Mr. Snyder, America had approximately 7,000 millionaires. The number has grown to more than five times its original size since then, and is still going up. Much of the increase is attributable to the war; much more to the recent stock market boom.

We may have our problems. Some industries may be stagnant. Textile workers may be underpaid, coal miners may be starving, the power trust may be propagandizing our schools and the farmers may be in despair—but we have 40,000 millionaires, anyway. Doesn't that encourage you?

RIDE 'EM COWBOY

Ranchmen are turning bankers in West Texas, six or seven years of prosperity having changed their position materially in the matter of financing.

Two or three years immediately following the war offered rather precarious times for the rancher and for the banker with ranch loans. But the day has changed. The ranchman now can help the banker a little bit. Prices of livestock have been good over a period of four or five years, in fact have become good and increasingly better during those years, and the rancher has gotten to the point where he can stand alone. We are not surprised to see the lads from the range become bankers. If good times continue, we'll be surprised if they don't change the complexion of Wall street, or even move it out into the ranch country. —San Angelo (Texas) Evening Standard.

FEWER AND BETTER LAWS

Mere multiplicity of laws do not deter the criminal. He will have his gun and his automobile though the statute books sag with enactments forbidding him those commodities. "Freak" laws make all laws less respected. We need fewer laws but with sharper teeth to punish criminals if we wish to check crime, not more laws to destroy rights and privileges of law-abiding citizens.—Breckenridge (Texas) Daily American.

SIDE GLANCES By George Clark

"Take a bite of this and you'll see why I've been married for twenty years."

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—"Where is the hottest place on earth?" asked the weather man.

"At Azizia, 25 miles south of Tripoli, North Africa," responded that wise person. "Azizia is an Italian station, and Italian scientists recently made an observation which stands unchallenged. Their thermometer recorded 136.4 degrees Fahrenheit, in the shade."

"Where is the coldest place?"

"Verkhoyansk, Siberia, within the artic circle. Years ago a test made showed the reading of 90.4 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, the lowest temperature ever recorded upon the face of the earth. There may, however, be colder spots in the antarctic. Byrd may make observations which will constitute new records. No month of the year has a mean temperature below freezing in the antarctic, and there are only two species of flowering plants in the whole vast region. There are 400 species in the arctic, whose mean temperature is considerably higher than that of the antarctic. It is quite conceivable, therefore, that temperatures of 100 degrees below zero may exist in the region to which Commander Byrd and his men are going."

Life in the apartments of the Union Settlement on 105th street, near Second avenue, is always interesting—if not always peaceful. One couple has a delightful small apartment opening on to the settlement playground in the center of the block, with windows on three sides, south and west on to the playground and east into the broad alley between the apartment building and the rear of the Second avenue tenements.

They have become quite used to the unusually strange noises which abound in the neighborhood. However, about midnight a few nights ago they were awakened and startled by what was apparently a revolver shot in the alley. Another report followed almost instantly and then another and another. Arising in the dark room they went to the window and cautiously peeped out.

A woman was standing on the fire escape directly across the alley, scaling large flat boxes down on the concrete the result was a crashing report which simulated a revolver shot. A seemingly endless number of boxes were being handed to her through a window by two small girls in the room behind her.

Looking past the woman into the well-lighted room of the tenement flat, the explanation of all this midnight disturbance was observed in the form of two large hogsheads filled to overflowing with mashed grapes. Alongside the hogsheads stood a grape crusher.

Before retiring the couple in the apartment watched their neighbor throw 40 grape boxes into the alley—and not a single tenant of the tenement house as much as raised a window to shout objection to this midnight bombardment.

"Every time I come down Fifth avenue at about 10 or 11 o'clock at night," said the little old lady who lives in the village, "I always see the policemen standing on the corners in pairs. Particularly down in the Thirties. You wouldn't think they would be patrolling in pairs in that district, would you?"

Her companion smiled. "It's not that they have to patrol in pairs," he replied. "It's just that the cops are lonesome. You know, there are not many places open in that district at night, not even cigar stores where the coppers can chat with somebody. They meet on their beats—the avenue cop and the side street cop—and when you see them together they're just chatting to pass time away. Cops are human, you know!"

The daily commuter had a problem. His friend from out of town was fed up on eating in ordinary places and asked to be taken to a restaurant that was different. The commuter suggested a chop suey, a spaghetti restaurant and a few quaint inns, but all met with disapproval. Finally, as a last resource, he suggested a place where you take whatever you wish from a number of tables that are scattered around the place and after your fill you shout out the price of your meal to the cashier. This sounded different to the friend so they agreed to go to one.

Everything went along smoothly; they took their sandwiches, ordered soup and coffee from the steam counter, found dessert on another table, &c, &c. But when the cashier's cage was reached the out-of-towner became perplexed. He had forgotten what the total of his meal amounted to, so rather than embarrass himself he shouted: "One dollar!"

His hands trembled, his face turned ashen and his blood tinged as on outstretched hand patted him on the shoulder.

"You must be mistaken, sir, your meal was 85 cents," said the owner of the hand, who happened to be a spotter.

The stranger paid and left with his friend.

"That place was certainly different," he remarked, "in most of the other places they even tried to short change us."

As for chewing—chew on the side that is natural. It is best for one to follow his inclination despite the oft quoted 'chew on both sides.'"

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has perfected his invention, the Vicarion, so called because it permits people to live vicariously by showing them completely events out of the past, thus far outdistancing the efforts of Complete Illusions, Inc., the company which then controls all the improvements of the motion picture.

Radley first demonstrates his device to his sweetheart, Phyllis Norman; her father, mother and brother, John; John's sweetheart, Carol Gould, and Brainard's Aunt Relief. While he is showing them a dinner given for a movie actress who had since died, a man suffering from amnesia staggers in the studio, and though he is unable to tell who he is, he calls Phyllis by name. Brainard dubs him Van Winkle.

Brainard shows a scene of Mr. Norman's home being robbed, and then the police, who have been looking in on a similar projection, arrive with the criminal, Kosser, but he escapes. Besides the large machine intended for public showing, Brainard invents a small "receiving set." While looking into one of them Carol faints.

"What?" The man's words brought the face of Carol Gould up before Brainard's eyes as he had not seen it in the actual for weeks. Was the girl changed? But suddenly he was seeing in place of hers the face of Phyllis Norman—and the throb he had tried to still at thought of her, the stir he called tenderness and rebelled against as habit, ran through him like a throb of his blood. This trick of mental vision was becoming habitual with him; Carol, with a record of her willful caprice and its penalty written in her face, flitted across and across the face of Phyllis Norman like a symbol of its own look of unforgiving reproach! Fanciful? Yes. Inconsistent? Was it not—for a man to whom such reproach had become a matter of angry rather than wounded remembrance?

"Of course," Van Winkle was going on, "I'm a mere onlooker. How can I be anything else? But you know, I saw that smart little feminine sweetheart, as I think of her—I saw her snatch a look at life—at what you call Liquid Life—tampering with real things for fun, as her kind claims the right to do. And it was sort of pitiful to see her change the way she did, under our eyes, and drop down in a heap there in front of your machine, as if she was—maimed!"

"You know that she wasn't!"

"I wonder," said Van Winkle. "I wonder what it was she saw."

"Oh, drop it!" cried Brainard. "I don't know what she saw. The location index was lost from the bomb. But what right had the little fool—" He broke off; Van Winkle was regarding him with surprised eyes.

"No," he said. "No, I suppose we never shall know what she—saw. Unless she tells us, which doesn't seem likely."

"Stop it, man!" cried Brainard. He could have seized the other and choked him for his sly harping on the single chord.

But Van Winkle was unstopped; he seemed to drift on without consciousness of Brainard's resentment.

"I suppose, if we really savored the things of everyday life about us, they'd grow too poignant for us soon. Mercifully we seem to live in an anesthetic atmosphere.

"It's queer how the Vicarion seems to wake one up. Sometimes it seems that you've not only condensed life but concentrated it. You feel it as you feel it in a dream—intensified—and wake up envying your sleeping self the experience. You—feel as if you'd been living through a lens! Perhaps, to Carol, it was a sort of—burning glass!"

Brainard turned away from him to the window.

"I take it you're not going to be married right away," said Van Winkle. "June, wasn't it to be?"

The intimacy of this was exasperating. The man was presuming. But Brainard replied coldly.

"I shall hardly be married till Miss Norman is well."

A Sort of God

Van Winkle looked out the window beside him again. "Well, well!" he exclaimed softly once more. "I don't wonder you feel like a sort of—a sort of god, Brainard!"

This was a less unwelcome suggestion, at least. After all, this chap was only a poor, half-crazed innocent. Brainard laughed. "I am a—sort of god, Rip."

"You're bound to be—when every one has to come to you for what they want. But don't forget—you don't forget, do you?—that power is only one attribute of a regular god."

"If you have power you can command most of the other things you want." Brainard was thinking of women whose vision could stride with a man's.

"I suppose a man might become nearly omnipotent and yet be quite a bit short on omniscience," went on Van Winkle.

"Now what?"

"Homer! Why don't you find out where he is?"

"I know."

"You do! With the police hunting for his body ever since that night they failed to find it under your windows."

"Yes. I don't tell the police everything I know," said Brainard. "Homer is downstairs working on one of our condensers—and has been ever since I found out that he jumped into a mop closet instead of out of our hall window!"

"Well, well!" said Van Winkle. Another man might have grown profanely amazed.

"Well enough, now that his beard has grown out so to pretty well disguise him. And so long as he doesn't forget that I hold the vital link in his career."

"You're reformed him?"

"I've bargained with him. Every night he spends two or three hours in the company of Jesse James and the Younger boys. He's happy—and imprisoned for life—just where I want him when I reach certain experiments I plan."

"I should call what you are doing with him an experiment. A link in his career, eh? A missing link? Have you got a missing link in mine, Brainard? Are you holding me to experiment on?"

"Only until I have time to trace you, Rip. Are you sure you want to know your past?"

"I can wait. But how did you—how did you keep Homer's whereabouts secret?"

"Oh, I helped him out of the closet—while the rest of you were thinking about fainting girls."

"And then recorded all the events around the place—except in front of the map closet?"

"Exactly. Nobody guessed what I withheld. Nobody will guess what I choose to withhold—whenever I choose."

"Well, well!" said Van Winkle again. "And the bombs he stole?"

"I persuaded him to bring them back."

"I see—you have remarkable persuasive powers."

He started to turn away, but at the moment a knock sounded at the door. At Brainard's call one of his secretaries opened. She was a young Diana for supplace grace. She crossed the floor with what any man might consider a stride. She always came to within arm's length to deliver a message, Brainard had noticed. He smiled at it now. Even Van Winkle's presence made no difference. A man who had power could have most other things he wanted!

"Mr. Mortimer and Mr. Ballard, of Complete Illusions, to see you," she announced, with gravely respectful concentration upon his wishes.

"Ask them to come in," said Brainard. There were few moments in his life that held the honey for him that this one held. "No, don't go, Van," he added, as the other man started to leave the room. And then he wondered what the impulse was that had prompted such a thing. Was it that he felt the need of friendly support—or merely desired a witness?

Ferdinand Mortimer was a heavy man in a suit that was tailored to him like sheet metal sheathing; it looked as if it might not bend when he sat. He had pink, pendulous cheeks—crab-apple pink—and purple eyes. He had been a gorgeous leading man in the days before he had developed a genius for prehensible finance. He walked as if his feet were about as limber as shoe-trees. He gave the effect otherwise of something physically so soft that it had to be trussed up to the last degree to get about.

"Jerry" Ballard was tall and slim and old rose colored like a fresh-shaven Yankee horse-trader who had been out in a frosty wind. Brainard made his own comparisons, and was aware that, if horse-traders were now rare birds, so also were Jerry Ballards. The epithet "bird" so aptly fitted him that you thought of tail-feathers when he drew aside the skirts of his long coat to take a chair.

"Well, Mr. Brainard!" said Mortimer with a look which many a lesser man had taken for deference. He had nothing to add, except this eloquent look from his deep, lustrous eyes.

"Good morning, gentlemen. Van, there are cigars in the bottom drawer of my desk there. Will you sit down, gentlemen—or shall we stand a moment here by my window?"

"We've been standing by a window, Brainard," said Ballard easily. "We may as well admit it—it will save a lot of preliminaries."

"All right." Brainard smiles. He had wondered sometimes how he was going to feel when this moment should come. He felt like a man who walks out into spring after a long winter. He took out a cigaret. The others accepted cigars from Van Winkle.

"This is Van Winkle, one of my associates," Brainard said.

Mortimer was beginning to light his cigar. Brainard saw that his hand was trembling. He looked down at his own; it was amusingly untremored.

"Nobody can look out at that street, Mr. Brainard," Mortimer said, after a puff or two, "without knowing that you have something that we want."

"I suspected it might prove so," smiled Brainard.

"And of course we must have it."

"That's not so obvious."

"We hope to be able to make you see it."

"Of course you do. But I don't care to waste your time or mine discussing such a possibility. I would prefer to show you how unlikely I am to see anything of the kind."

"How do you mean—show us?" asked Ballard. "Nobody but a fool would fail to know, in your position, that he could command any price he liked for such a—a discovery as you have. And nobody but fools, in our position, would have any notion of not paying it."

"Not for Sale"

"But my discovery, as you call it, is not for sale."

"Of course, we expect you to say some such thing as that. But everything is for sale when the price is right. Have you thought of a price?"

"Nothing that would tempt me to let go of what I have."

"Is it a matter of—millions?"

"No."

"Partnership?"

"No."

"Control?"

"Sole!"

"Do you mean that?"

"Absolutely!"

The thrust and parry stopped for an instant. Then Mortimer began to light his cigar again.

"Of course," he said, "you can't go it alone on such a—such a—"

"All alone!"

"But, man alive—"

"This is a natural monopoly, gentlemen. Nobody else will have a finger in its control until I am gathered to my fathers, and I think I may live to die a natural death."

"I should hope so—I should hope so!"

"Of course you should—but the sooner the better, eh? But you don't realize yet just how natural this monopoly is. That's why I prefer to show you rather than talk about it. If you will come with me into my studio I will show you at one and the same time why you cannot buy me out, why I intend to go it alone, and why I expect to die in my bed. Shall we go in?"

He drew slowly on his cigaret and watched Ferdinand Mortimer's cigar going out again.

"Have a fresh cigar, Mortimer," he suggested. "That one doesn't seem to be drawing well."

Mortimer laid the cigar on a tray. "Now, look here, Brainard," he began.

"No, no, Mortimer!" Brainard interrupted him happily. "Come into the studio and look there."

"But Complete Illusions is prepared to make you any proposition in reason to secure your—your productions!"

"Only until I have time to trace you, Rip. Are you sure you want to know your past?"

"I can wait. But how did you—how did you keep Homer's whereabouts secret?"

"Oh, I helped him out of the closet—while the rest of you were thinking about fainting girls."

"And then recorded all the events around the place—except in front of the map closet?"

"Exactly. Nobody guessed what I withheld. Nobody will guess what I choose to withhold—whenever I choose."

"Well, well!" said Van Winkle again. "And the bombs he stole?"

"I persuaded him to bring them back."

ly at my party—so thoroughly that you will forget all your other troubles for the time being."

Both rose as he crossed the room toward the door. They were both much older than he. They were themselves leaders in monopoly—steeped, perhaps, in the habit of monopoly. It was going to come hard for them to surrender—but they were beaten already. He itched to show them what he had to show.

They crossed through the hall and to the door of the small studio on the other side. Brainard had retained the arrangement of rooms on this floor, merely using two as a private office suite. It suited his whim to live here in the heart of his interests. When his plant should overflow this building, as it would in a week, now that he had given the public a glimpse of his wares, he meant to stay here himself.

He had been country bred. He had inherited a good deal of money. His parents had died during his early boyhood. Relief Brainard had taken him first to her home; and afterward, when he had finished college and launched in his eager, lonely studies, she had come to live near him. He had not wanted the luxury of a large establishment. He was well content with his few rooms and Ushigi. Wealth, now apparently about to flow in upon him in limitless flood, was scarcely an object of desire to him. He had not the background of a life work for science to make the triumph of discovery paramount. Indeed, he considered himself but a raw student. The joy he felt he himself compared humorously now, in this moment of peculiar satisfaction, to the unreasoning elation of a child who is tossed into sudden elevation. What the instinct is that finds happiness in this he could not have told. Being up and looking down—an object of eyes! Was it the eternal human desire to show off that was tickled? There was a spice added to the thrill of power!

Was there a human delight in seeing those fall who had been up before him? The fascination of the teeter! With all his sense of achievement, he knew that his fundamental discoveries had come as sheer accidents to him, as come many of the epoch-making things to which are attached the names of men made famous by them. He was a little amused at the idea of fame for him. Not that he had the slightest intention of dodging it; but he had always thought of fame as something to be won. Yet power—that thing that moved him to deep thrill and blazing exultation, did not account for this that sparkled in him. It was one thing to be drunk—quite another to be merry! Was it that, after all, in this thing he had done there lurked, as others had first claimed, though with different meaning, a mammoth joke?

A joke! He had not himself sensed it before. But these two—these twin emperors of the entertainment world—they were perfect examples of one-half of humanity in relation to the searchlight of the Vicarion. He would show them in a moment. Physically these two were delightful products of the sartorial arts; morally he expected presently to send each man of them sprinting for home in a bagrel!

Van Winkle had seated them. Together the three of them blinked up at him as he turned in the brilliantly lighted room to look at them.

"I have not inquired, gentlemen," he began, "just how much you know about the Vicarion and its—manifestations. Your coming here as you have, and your method of approaching the subject of control leads me to suppose that you have been present at one or another of the public showings. You evidently know that there is going to be quite a lot of publicity about the things that are shown—publicly. But what I am going to show you here I suggest that we keep just among ourselves."

They continued to blink at him. He threw his switches. The white room was plunged in darkness, then aflame with red light. And then, a dozen feet from where Ferdinand Mortimer's cigar was once more going out, another Ferdinand Mortimer suddenly sat smoking furiously! A half-dozen paces from where one Jerry Ballard reclined silent in his chair, another Jerry Ballard paced the floor talking tremendously! And both, who were here apparently comfortably ensconced as guests in Radley Brainard's studio, were there, almost within arm's reach, extremely uncomfortably closeted in their own extremely private office!

And that office, so private that it had probably never been photographed, and buried deep and difficult to access a mile back among Complete Illusions studios, was here miraculously fitted with an open end to an open end of Brainard's little trick room, it's floor on a level with his floor, its tobacco smoke trailing actually out here to the nostrils of a smoker who could not remember to smoke!

Brainard heard Mortimer's gurgle—death rattle of a dying monopolist! Then he listened, as he had last night listened to another condensation of this event.

"I tell you, Mort," Ballard proclaimed—back there, 20-odd hours ago, in yesterday's assurance of privacy—"I tell you, young Brainard may not know it yet, but he has us for the mere cracker of his little toy whip. When he swings it we'll snap! The $150,000,000 invested in Complete Illusions isn't going to be a grain of sand on his private beach!

"The world is going to beg him to take its money. Three months from tomorrow's public exhibitions of his 'Vicarion' they will be making pilgrimages here from Russia and Hindustan and Patagonia and Arkansas! The only hope for us on this little green earth is that Brainard's a fool and doesn't know what he's got. If he does, we might as well touch a match to Complete Illusions studios tonight—and poison off our stock company—they'll be no further use to us, nor to the rest of the world!"

On the broad brow of yesterday's Mortimer, who had never perspired in public in his life, stood the plain sweat of yesterday's privacy.

"Now, now, Ballard!" he protested. "There's a way to handle Brainard. There always is. If it's not money, there are other things men want. And if we can't procure for him just—"

"Don't talk about procuring! Don't you see, the man can take what he wants? He can take it whenever he wants it, wherever it is! He can take it away from anybody who's got it—you and me included!"

FIERY JIM UP AND AT PACT

'Maudlin Sentimentalists' Get Reed's Reply

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (AP)—A proposed agreement to limit debate on the Kellogg anti-war treaty was blocked in the senate today after the veteran "Jim" Reed of Missouri had lashed out with his threatened attack on the pact, which he described as a "Trojan horse."

For more than two hours the fiery Missourian talked on the "treaty of words," on "maudlin sentimentalists" and "pacifists" and concluded with an appeal that the senate assure some form of construction on the pact which he held necessary to protest American rights.

Pacing up and down as he warned that the treaty would lead to the league of nations, Senator Reed turned repeatedly to look at his old ally in the battle against the league, Senator Borah of Idaho, sponsoring the treaty.

When he had concluded, Borah arose to ask that debate on the treaty be limited to 30 minutes for each senator after 3 p. m. tomorrow.

As the necessary unanimous approval was about to be given Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, objected until he could confer with those seeking some form of an interpretation on the pact.

Reed assailed Secretary Kellogg for his insistence that no interpretation of any sort be placed on the treaty and tonight Senator Moses, Reed, and others favoring an interpretation appeared to be holding out in a last effort to get some manner of compromise which would place in the record views expressed on the floor by treaty advocates that the pact did not affect America's Monroe doctrine and her right of self defense.

Referring to the pact as a "Trojan horse," Reed said "they have put inside it the doctrines of the right of balance of power in Europe." "They have put into it," he added, "the right of every nation signing it to be controlled by the Locarno treaty and the league of nations."

Aged Louisiana Woman Seeks Son In Wichita Falls

An 84 year old woman, in search of a son she has not heard from for three years, arrived in Wichita Falls from Arcadia, La., Friday.

She gave her name as Mrs. Fannie McDonald and said she was searching for J. A. McDonald, who was working on a farm 12 miles from town at the time she last heard from him.

Mrs. McDonald told Mrs. L. Chenault, who became interested in her situation, that this is the second time she has made the long trip from Arcadia in search of her son. She spent all day Friday calling at the home of every "McDonald" listed in the city directory, but found no trace of the object of her search.

Traveling alone, the aged mother was anxious to get back into her own home, and was on the point of abandoning her quest Friday night. She left word for the son, urging him to write her at once in Arcadia.

Automobile Mishaps Claim Three Lives

HARLINGEN, Texas, Jan. 11. (AP)—Three persons were killed and four others injured in automobile mishaps here last night and today.

George Harris, 35; Trinidad Luna, 21, and Rodrigo Luna, 10, were killed when a vegetable train crashed into their coupe near McAllen. It was believed the engine of the coupe stalled, since vision of the railroad track at the scene is not obstructed.

A. L. Landry, E. L. Hawley, Gene New and Lloyd Collendar were injured when their automobile was forced into a ditch to avoid collision with a truck.

A Brief History of A Great Triumph

By L. N. CONRAD

Head of Sargon Laboratories Tells How the Idea for New Scientific Preparation Now Sweeping Country Was Conceived and Its Formula Perfected.

IN VIEW of the fact that Sargon, was put on the American market less than six months ago, that it is now the leading topic of conversation in the drug trade and that tens of thousands of run-down, half-sick people have already been rejuvenated by this seemingly magic product, I shall tell here how the ideas embodied in the medicine originated and how they were combined in their present form.

The progress of science during the last ten years has been greater than in the previous ten centuries. This is because the laboratories of a modern investigator contain delicate equipment and instruments of every sort which make possible experiments in bio-chemistry, physiology, etc., utterly impossible a few years ago.

AS HEAD OF A COMPANY devoted to the preparation of medicinal products, I naturally have tried to keep abreast of scientific research in the field of medicine the world over. And the progress made in this particular branch of science, during recent years, has been well worth watching. Yellow fever overcome, typhoid prevented, diabetes held in check, the mortality from diphtheria greatly reduced.

These are all great triumphs which will save countless lives, but they were not of immediate moment to me. For I had in mind the common ailments of mankind, any one of which produces more economic inefficiency, more bodily suffering, more unhappiness than all the more serious diseases combined.

THE WORLD IS FULL of listless, half-sick, run-down men and women who take little joy in play and less in work. Life seems hardly worth living to the self-poisoned victim of indigestion, malnutrition and chronic constipation, to anyone with the lack of strength and ambition which comes from simple anaemia, to tired, dull, plodding people afflicted with what we used to call general debility.

When would modern science, I thought, attack the problem of overcoming these common ailments, and could the problem be solved? The answer was not long in coming. Within a few short years here is what science accomplished. First: It found that the true cause of most indigestion and constipation is insufficient bile flow. Second: It found the true oxygen-carrying agent in the blood stream and that lack of this agent caused simple anaemia. Third: It discovered the importance of glandular secretions to various bodily functions and that lack of secretion in a certain gland reduces both mental and physical alertness.

HAVING DONE THIS, science went further. It discovered a certain harmless substance that increases bile flow and so overcomes indigestion and constipation in the way Nature intended. It discovered a certain combination of mineral and fruit juice which increases the oxygen-carrying agent in the blood and so overcomes simple anaemia. It discovered that the glandular secretions were lacked composed of a certain chemical and that this chemical would increase these necessary secretions when they were deficient.

In other words, science learned of three great mechanisms of the human machine and discovered three medicinal agents which would, in the majority of cases, stimulate and invigorate these organs and fluids—the proper functioning of which is so vital to health.

The result of these three discoveries was of tremendous importance. The three medicinal agents were prescribed by advanced medical thought throughout the world with remarkable and gratifying results. But they were prescribed separately. They had never been combined.

It was then that the idea came to me: Why not combine these three medicinal agents in one formula and so obtain the greatest tonic, stomachic and body builder the world had ever seen?

I PUT THE HEAD CHEMIST of the Sargon Laboratories to work on the idea. He worked six months but could not combine the three medicinal agents in one preparation and make them "keep."

I took a train to New York and put the problem up to a chemist with an international reputation, asking him to try and solve it. The chemist refused. He told me that the chemical action of the three medicinal agents was of such a nature that he did not think they could be combined.

"Who, in your opinion," I asked the New York chemist, "would be the best man in the country to try to do it?"

The chemist named the head of the department of bio-chemistry in a great middle-western university. "If you could get him to tackle it, I think he'd come the closest to it," he said.

I took a train that night for the city in which the university mentioned by the chemist is located. On the following afternoon I explained what I wanted to the distinguished scientist who occupies its chair of bio-chemistry. After some discussion, he agreed to make some preliminary experiments and let me know.

THE EXPERIMENTS WERE MADE. They were not a success. However, the scientist had become interested. He agreed to go ahead. He did so. That was in 1923. In 1927, two years later, he finally succeeded in combining the three all-important medicinal agents in one preparation. His secret method and formula became the property of the Sargon Laboratories. The preparation made from his formula by his method is Sargon. It has enjoyed an immediate and overwhelming success.

People everywhere have been quick to recognize it as a new and epoch-making product. In each of the leading cities where it has been introduced, an average of 50,000 bottles has been required to supply the unprecedented demand, and wholesale druggists are purchasing it in carload lots. Thousands have expressed boundless enthusiasm for what the medicine has done for them and have voluntarily given it their public endorsement.

Sargon is like no other medicinal product ever before made available to the general public. It is the answer of modern science to the demand of thousands of subnormal people for something that will build up the lowered physical tone induced by modern conditions of living.

Sargon may be obtained in Wichita Falls from the Renfro Drug Co. stores, Eighth and Scott avenue and Seventh and Indiana.

550 ATTEND C.-C. BANQUET

Progress of City Told At Annual Meet

problem, he said, has been solved by practical acceptance of the Dawes plan by European nations, and the flow of gold between this and other nations has regained its equilibrium. Every dollar in circulation in the United States, Mr. Kell declared, is supported by from 70 to 75 cents in gold, besides other assets.

A review of current conditions in Texas and in this community supported the expressions of optimism which were included in Mr. Kell's address. More building than has been done in any one year recently is under way for 1929, he said. The opening of the Charles Weeks colonization project near Call field, together with the Johnson Poultry ranch, were described as units in the opening of a great agricultural development from which Wichita Falls will draw her future growth. The dairying interests here are now as extensively established as will be found in almost any other community, the speaker declared.

Praise For Hardins

Prospects for the establishment of a four-year college here were discussed, Mr. Kell stating that the offer of $400,000 from Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Harin of Burkburnett for that purpose was the most generous he had ever seen made.

"I have found in a period of more than 20 years that the money put into the chamber of commerce has been a highly profitable investment," said Mr. Kell in closing.

Josh Lee, public speaking department head of the University of Oklahoma, furnished the large crowd with 30 minutes of entertainment along with occasional paragraphs of appealing philosophy. The audience was for the most part kept in laughter with an endless store of anecdotes and "yarns," many of which were at the expense of Mr. Lee's home state.

The more serious portions of Mr. Lee's speech were on the subject of success and happiness, with subtle observations on methods of their attainment.

"What can you do with what you have, is a question whose answer is the measure of a man's success," Mr. Lee declared.

"Every man longs to find the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, but can not see that pot of gold, because he stands in the arc of his own rainbow. The one at which he is looking is the other fellow's. Our rainbows, and our treasures, are where we are. Our purpose in life, and the reason for life, is to find them."

Charles I. Francis, president of the chamber of commerce, presided as toastmaster, and opened the program of the evening with the president's annual address.

Francis Praises Loyalty

"In all the Southwest there can not be found a more active, loyal progressive group of citizens than those comprising this chamber of commerce," Mr. Francis said.

"There has been subscribed already to the 1929 budget a sum of $31,215, without one personal solicitation having been made. This amount, which is considerably more than half of the entire budget for the current year, has come in entirely as a response to letters sent out to the membership, announcing the new budget."

Mr. Francis discussed briefly the industrial, highway, legislative, agricultural and building promotion activities of the organization during the last year.

"Let's remember in this new year that we are contributing here our fair part to the building of a bigger, better program in the interest of community cooperation, to the end that we may have here a city that justifies the faith of its builders," said the speaker in conclusion.

The last speaker of the evening was Charles Weeks, colonization expert who arrived this week from California to open the development of 2,500 acres of irrigated land near Westmoreland park, and who spoke briefly of his small farm plan.

Miss Greathouse Sings

Entertainment features of the evening included a group of solos by Miss Dorothy Greathouse, operatic soprano who recently opened the Wichita Falls Conservatory of Music here. "Je Suis Titania," from "Mignon," by Thomas, was Miss Greathouse's opening number, and revealed a voice which explained the operatic engagements which have been hers for several years. Prolific applause gained two light encore songs, "Me and My Little Banjo," by Lily Strickland, and "Kiss Me Again," popular waltz song. For her second group, Miss Greathouse chose "My Love Is a Muleteer," Spanish love song which was given in costume, with dramatic interpretation, and encored with "Ramona."

A male chorus of 23 voices, directed by Dr. L. D. Parnell, organized only a week ago for this occasion, sang a group of four numbers and were given prolonged and hearty applause, "Anchored," (Watson), "Volga Boatmen," Russian folk-song, "John Peel," English hunting song, and "Soldiers' Chorus" from "Faust" (Gounod) comprised the group. Personnel of the chorus was: Dr. L. D. Parnell, director; first tenors, F. P. McDougall, A. H. Mahaffey, Claude Young, Bob Spencer, L. R. Thurman, R. B. Shepherd; second tenors, Joel McGregor, Dr. O. T. Kimbrough, W. L. Underwood, F. M. Hansen, J. C. Mathis, Ernest Reeves, H. E. Kurtz, W. M. Brock; baritone, E. M. Baumfolk, Paul Von Allman, W. E. Young, W. P. Lacy, Lester F. Aldrich, Paul Rutledge, Ted Williams; basso profundo, R. D. Ford, J. L. Jackson Jr., Grover Bullington, H. W. Gray, Harry Carson, J. G. Kilgore, H. H. Bridges, Louis Bond, and accompanist, J. S. Pitman.

Following the banquet, the male chorus held a brief meeting and voted to organize permanently at a meeting to be held within the next few days. Officers and a permanent director will be elected, and plans for regular and frequent rehearsals laid.

Before beginning the scheduled program of the evening, President Francis read a number of telegrams, among them messages from Homer D. Wade, manager of the West Texas Chambe rof Commerce; the Association of Commerce, Fort Worth; Munday, Texas, chamber of commerce, and Carl L. Pool, Sherman.

Program Broadcast

Of the six new directors elected, one will be chosen by lot to serve the unexpired one year of the term of the late John W. Bradley; the remaining five will serve the usual term of three years. C. E. Basham, Burton Stayton, R. O. Harvey, J. C. Barnard and Charles I. Francis are the five retiring directors. The new board of directors will meet next Tuesday night, Jan. 15, to elect new officers for 1929.

The entire program of speeches and musical numbers were broadcast over station KGKO by remote cetrol in charge of R. E. Shepherd.

The Junior College orchestra, directed by Leo M. Underwood, played while the vast crowd was assembling in the dining hall, and during the dinner. The musicianship and finishe displayed by this organization was a conspicuous contribution to the evening's entertainment.

The Junior College cafeteria served as the banquet room and was beautifully decorated in green and white colors with balloons and bamboo vines to carry out the setting. A menu of Texas grapefruit, celery, green olives, turkey and dressing, cranberry jelly, candied sweet potatoes, lima beans, pineapple salad, green apple pie and coffee was served as the banquet course.

Banquet Committee

The committees who planned, arranged and executed the annual chamber of commeres banquet with such excellent service were composed as follows: Lamar Fain, general chairman; R. E. Shepherd, Joel MacGregor and W. E. Young, music committee; Mrs. J. L. Jackson Jr., and Mrs. P. A. Welty, banquet service; L. H. Cullum and J. H. Allison, speakers committee; Mrs. T. N. Conrey and Mrs. Bernard Martin, decoration committee; Mrs. Carrie Joline and Mrs. J. A. Kemp, pie committee; Mrs. J. C. Mytinger and Mrs. W. P. Killingsworth, salad committee; Mrs. J. D. Bright and Mrs. Claude Woods, table service; Mrs. Horrace Robbins and Mrs. Carter McGregor, coffee committee; Miss Arnie Smith and Miss Ida Catherine Walker, serving committee.

Dozens of Wichita Falls women and girls gave their services as waitresses and supplied the large crowd efficiently.

J. W. Slaughter, a member of the commissioners court of Dallas county, was introduced by Mr. Francis. He expressed his attitude toward Wichita Falls in a short address by asserting, "My attitude toward Wichita Falls I feel can be best demonstrated by an incident which happened to me after a speech which I made in a Southern town sometime ago when a man came to me after my talk and asked: 'Where in Texas do you come from, Wichita Falls or Dallas, I couldn't tell from your talk'?'

Out of Town Visitors

Among other out of town visitors who attended the banquet were J. J. Simmons of Dallas; Judge Ward, Cliff Gates, J. A. Simmons, and C. P. Dodson of Decatur; Robert Hall, Bill Cross, Jack Nelson, J. # 'MONK' HODGKISS ELECTED 1929 COYOTE FOOTBALL CAPTAIN

TRIBUTES PAID TO M'CALLUM

Courage of 1928 Team Is Eulogized at Banquet

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sport Editor

Martin "Monk" Hodgkiss will captain the Wichita Falls Coyotes on the gridiron next fall. The husky youth whose stellar and courageous line play marked the preps' 1928 season, was chosen as leader in the next campaign by unanimous vote on the first ballot last night at the annual banquet of the gridsters.

Hodgkiss was not only a star player. His unfailing spirit, as particularly exemplified in the Amarillo game when with his comrades he made a heroic stand against tremendous odds, caused him to be one of the outstanding Coyote players of the season. He was chosen on numerous all-star teams for the district.

Denied their annual banquet by whoever should have provided for it the gridsters themselves held the affair last night at the Junior Coffee shop. And what the dinner lacked in color and sumptuous menus of the past, it was more than compensated by the spirit of the players and guests.

Held at Junior Shop

In the cozy setting of the Junior Coffee shop last night, the football boys and several guests talked of the past and the future. And the keynote of those talks was tribute to the fighting determination of the lads of the 1928 team, to the ability and high qualities of sportsmanship of Coach A. Y. "Bud" McCallum and to the idea that Wichita Falls high school shall carry on victoriously on the gridiron in 1929.

There was no attempt to alibi defeats of 1928, in all the talks. And considering the handicaps in the matters of a somewhat inexperienced squad, and in illness, injuries and ineligibilities of various players throughout the season there were as many victories as could be expected.

But triumphant above reversals was the spirit of the lads, "who played the game," as Dr. Allen P. Terrell, toastmaster, pointed out and to the excellent work and inspiration of Coaches McCallum and Bill Morris.

McCallum Is Honored

Talks were made by Miss Juanita Kinsey and Miss Davida Olinger of the high school faculty; Mrs. McCallum, Kenneth Mills, one of the high school's greatest athletes, Dick Hambrick, Howard Scott, Clarence Bains, Captain Pete Powell and Captain-elect Hodgkiss of the football team; Assistant Coach Morris, Miss Marguerite Holland, football queen; Mrs. Terrell, Earl Hutchinson, winner of the sweater presented to the "hardest working Coyote football player," and Coach McCallum.

Bud was presented with a handsome traveling bag by the gridsters in token of their affection for him.

Other lettermen of the 1928 team include Springer Williams, Dale Davis, Ed Bell, Bob Guy, Bob Carstarphen, Thomas Beaty, Morris Lee, Ross Saye, Chick Holden and Lee Davis, manager. Those who won reserve numerals were Goodwin Bray, Rollin Dixon, John Bell, Jack Carstarphen and Jack West.

Young Cowboy Tex Engaged in One Of Texas' Greatest Cattle Drives

11-Year-Old Kid Cowpuncher Alone Guarded a Corpse From Coyotes in That Memorable Trek

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—Tex Rickard's father, Robert Woods Rickard, was a millwright.

He seems to have had none of his oldest son's flare for acquiring money or even a suggestion of the latter's imagination. With him things always seemed going from bad to worse. In the vicinity of Kansas City, Mo., where Tex Rickard was born, there appears to have been little employment for a millwright. When a job did turn up Robert Woods Rickard was usually too sickly to take advantage of it.

There must have been many times during that early Missouri period when the Rickard household was not far from starvation.

It was in the hope of bettering themselves that the family moved to Sherman, Texas, and later to the neighboring town of Henrietta. The father had heard that there was plenty of work for a millwright to do in this new locality. Tex Rickard was 4 years old when this move was made.

But conditions in Texas seemed to be little better than they had been in Missouri, so far as Robert Woods Rickard was concerned. He found little work to do and the family lived a hand-to-mouth existence, not knowing half the time where the next meal was coming from.

When the weary father finally gave up the fight and laid himself down to die in March, 1881, he left George Lewis Rickard, his oldest son, with a title, the head of the family, and his widow with 15 cents.

At the age of 11, when most boys are playing marbles and having a good time, Tex Rickard was faced with the task of supporting his mother and a flock of sisters and brothers.

How He Acquired Poker Face

Perhaps it was these early hardships that stamped Tex Rickard's face with the somber, almost melancholy, lines that deepened into the poker mask that New Yorkers came to know so well. Perhaps these stern realities faced by the boy in those far-off days may have had something to do with the fact that it was always difficult for him to smile and almost impossible for him to laugh.

At the age of 11, Tex was only in the third grade of public school when his father died and left him heir to his misfortunes. There is no record of his ever having had any other schooling. After that he received his education in the hard school of life.

The day after his father gave up the losing battle Tex went to work on the East ranch at a salary of $10 a month. He became a cowboy in the days when cowpunching wasn't an adjunct of the motion picture industry. And right there began a life that was to be filled with romance, color, hardships and thrills. It was the starting point of a long, winding trail that was to lead him to tremendous heights.

Late in life, when affluence had come to him, Tex used to get a great kick out of recalling those cowpunching days.

"Well, sir," he'd say, "that was a great life I led with those Texas longhorns. It was a rough, tough life but you can bet it was a healthy one. Sometimes I'd be in the saddle for days and nights together and you had to be tough to stand it. Many a night I've slept out with nothing over me but the stars. And what an appetite that outdoor life gave a feller! I've hardly ever had a sick day in my whole career and I attribute it to the life I led as a cowpuncher on the plains of Texas."

Rickard always claimed that one of the greatest experiences of his life came when he accompanied a great herd of longhorns on a long trek from Texas to the plains of Kansas. This was one of two historic herds that were driven from Texas into Kansas and which virtually marked the beginning of the cattle business in that state.

Tex claimed that the herd he helped drive was the largest ever gotten together in the history of Texas.

"They still talk about those two herds down in Texas," Rickard once told me. "For days and nights we plodded on and on, northward into the unknown pastures of Kansas. The reason for driving the animals to Kansas was that the bottom had fallen out of the cattle market in Texas. Over-production and feuds between the big cattlemen had just about ruined the business. A virgin market was said to exist in Kansas and that was why those two enormous herds were organized. It was a great adventure. I can remember that at night when we'd go into camp we could hear the wolves and the coyotes howling all around us. They were after the calves that would occasionally stray from the main herd. We lost quite a few animals but we drilled many a wolf, too.

"Game was plentiful in that country then and we frequently sighted buffalo in the distance. We never got near enough for a shot, though.

"Something happened on that long trek that I have never forgotten. We had a cowboy with us named Kerby and another who was known as the Tripper. I can't remember what his real name was. But anyhow, Kerby and the Tripper were both stuck on the same girl. I can't remember her name, either, but I recall that she was supposed to be the prettiest girl in Clay county. She could ride and shoot like a man. The rivalry between Kerby and the Tripper was known all over Clay county. One night the two got in an argument in a saloon down in Henrietta and began taking pot shots at each other. They were shooting at each other from opposite ends of the bar.

"Nobody was hurt except a customer who happened to stroll in for a drink while the shooting was going on. One of the bullets keeled him over right in the doorway and he died a week later. After that Kerby and the Tripper made themselves scarce. And while they were gone the girl married the son of the leading druggist in Cambridge, which was also in Clay county.

"You'd think that those two fellers would have made up and consoled each other after that, but they didn't. They seemed to hate each other worse than ever. How they both happened to be with the gang that took that great herd into Kansas I don't know. But there they were and we hadn't been on the trail two days before they started bickering. One night after we had turned in I heard a shot and we found poor Kerby with a bullet in his stomach. He had his own six-shooter in his hand but hadn't had a chance to use it before the Tripper drilled him.

"The Tripper was gone and we never saw him afterward. I heard years afterward that he had opened a saloon in Chicago somewhere near the stock yards. At any rate, one of the boys knew of a doctor who lived about 30 miles away and the whole gang started to ride like fury for him.

"They thought there was a chance to save Kerby's life, but there wasn't. They left me alone with the wounded man and he bled to death before they had been gone an hour. The boys were gone most of the night and I, only a kid, had to sit there alone with the corpse. The wolves were thick that night and they began to come in closer and closer. I guess they must have smelled poor Kerby's blood. I went over to the cook wagon and got a lantern and a Winchester. When I returned there was a big gray wolf sniffing at the blood stains on Kerby's shirt. I let him have it right through the head.

"So there I sat through most of the night with a dead wolf on one side of me and a dead man on the other. I'll never forget that night if I live to be 100 years old. Every time I'd see a pair of eyes gleaming through the darkness I'd take a shot at them. In the morning we found the carcasses of four coyotes and three wolves lying on the prairie.

"The boys got back with the doctor about dawn but Kerby was beyond any surgical aid by that time. He had been dead for hours.

"Well, we buried poor Kerby under a tree at sunrise and the only funeral service was spoken by a big cowpuncher named Matt who was supposed to be our foreman. He said, 'May God have mercy on poor Kerby's soul and keep the wolves and coyotes from digging him up.'"

FRED GOES UP FOURTH TIME

Haney Gets Another Trial, This by Cardinals

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 11. (AP)—Fred Haney is back in the major leagues, a goal he had set for himself when the 1928 season opened. Had he not attained it, the Indianapolis American association third baseman intended to abandon baseball.

FRED HANEY

Haney will be with the St. Louis Cardinals, National league champions, next season. The Cards paid cash for the privilege of getting Haney back into the majors for the fourth time. Previous sojourns had been with Detroit, Boston of the American league and Chicago of the National.

Haney led the association in base stealing, pilfering 45 in 162 games. He batted .334, and his fielding was largely helpful in Indianapolis' victory in the league race and over the Rochester International league team in the "little world series."

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

SPEAKING OF monopolies, there are two that aren't touched by the famous Mr. Sherman's equally or more famous anti-trust bill. I am referring to the holding of basket ball and baseball championships by the Arkansas Razorbacks and Texas Longhorns, respectively. And respectfully.

Francis Schmidt's Porkers have launched another drive for the conference cage title and judging from play to date the six-footers are going to be hard to stop. They trimmed the Ponies and Frogs in two combats each. Though playing on alien courts, the Razorbacks won all four games impressively.

Texas looms as a foremost contender, it is said by close fellowers of the basket sport. But it's going to take great basket ball on the part of the Steers to prevent the Porkers from repeating.

BASEBALL championships, the University of Texas and Uncle Billy Disch are synonomous. For 15 or 16 years, with a break of only one season, Longhorn nines have won the conference championship. Now, with training a month and a half away, word comes from Austin that another championship dish is being cooked up by Disch.

Some day, when I have time, if an always-hurried newspaper man EVER has time, I am going to look into the matter of holding baseball championships in consecutive years and in numerous years. I know that Texas' record is unequaled in organized baseball; and is, or course, impossible in the professional sport. And I doubt if a college team ever approached the record held by the Longhorns.

BASEBALL holds an obscure place in the athletic scheme of most conferences and colleges. Indeed, the game has been abandoned by some institutions of higher learning. But in a few colleges it still ranks as a major sport.

Holy Cross takes its baseball seriously. The school that sent Jack Barry, Bill Ryan and others to major league baseball always has been a leader on the diamond. Interest over baseball is high at Holy Cross. At Worcester, seat of that institution, that city's club of the Eastern league loses much patronage in the spring until school is out because of the drawing power of Holy Cross nines.

CHICAGO university sends a baseball team yearly on a trip to Japan. The Maroons usually rank as leaders in the Big Ten on the diamond. Incidentally, baseball as played in the Big Ten and Southwest conference may be tested this spring. Disch is endeavoring to schedule Chicago for two games at Austin. Such contests would be of great interest as played between two foremost clubs of collegiate baseball.

Texas Air Transport, Inc., is going to have a brief school of instruction for newspaper men and just when I was preparing to attend, comes a letter from the T. A. T. saying that planes are being concentrated for the course, for newspaper men and COMMERCIAL SECRETARIES.

I'll stay on the ground.

Stribling Is Agreeable But Sharkey Doubtful

By EDWARD J. NEIL

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (AP)—Negotiation to carry on the last fight Tex Rickard scheduled seemed safe and headed for the port of Miami Beach tonight.

With William F. Carey, vice president and former right hand man of the late promoter, at the helm the garden teemed with activity designed to land Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling in the ring in the southern resort Feb. 27.

One-half of the match is safe, Carey announced, after a long distance telephone conversation with "Pa" Stribling, manager of the Georgia youngster. Tonight Carey headed for Boston to talk with Sharkey and the latter's manager, Johnny Buckley. One the outcome of this confab depends the match.

With no legal contract left over by Rickard as a basis for negotiations, Carey undertood to straighten out the tangle over formal terms and financial arrangements. So far as Stribling is concerned, any arrangement is satisfactory, Carey said, emphasizing that the Georgian desired first of all to go through with the match, even at some sacrifice. Sharkey, understood to have been guaranteed $100,000 by Rickard, may be more difficult.

Jack Dempsey probably will handle the reins of promotion, if Carey succeeds in completing the business arrangements.

WELL, GENTLEMEN! It was like pouring "New Works" into the old Bus!

"I thought my car had lost its pep. It knocked, limped on the get-away, and took an almost open throttle on the hills.

"Then I tried Magnolia ANTI-KNOCK Gasoline—well, Gentlemen, it was like pouring new works into the old bus. Now I can throttle down to a crawl, get away instantly and take any hill—and there's never a knock."

Such is the experience of users of Magnolia ANTI-KNOCK Gasoline. It is a pure petroleum gasoline, containing no injurious chemical compounds. It is positively harmless to motor parts.

Health And Diet Advice

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper

DANGER SIGNALS

The desire to live is the most deeply rooted of all instincts and is so universally found among all of the animal kingdom that it has aptly been termed the law of self-preservation.

Man will dodge an automobile; will run out of a burning building; will cling to a life preserver when shipwrecked, and will take along a parachute when traveling in an aeroplane. In fact, he is constantly on the alert to protect himself against bodily injury. He avoids those things which might result in immediate death, but is apt to be careless of those things which do not produce an immediately disastrous effect. You, yourself, for instance, will avoid drinking a strong poison because you know that it is immediately dangerous. And yet, did you ever stop to consider that the food which you are eating day by day may result in a slow poisoning and that you may, as the old German said, eventually eat yourself to death?

You have in the past probably selected your food because it filled you with a comfortable feeling. If the pleasures of the table were the only rules to consider, this way of selecting food would be as good as any, but since the taste of the food has little or no connection with its wholesomeness, it is as important for you to use as much caution in selecting food as you would in regulating any other acts of your life.

My experience in examining and diagnosing thousands of cases each year, over a period of many years, has convinced me that diet is a most potent factor in every disease. An acute disease rarely attacks the body without being preceded by symptoms and warnings long before the actual condition of sickness has been shaped into a disorder which may be called by a special name. The best time to begin a cure is when you first begin to feel these predisease symptoms. You can thereby prevent the danger and inconvenience of the actual sick spell. After most serious diseases, even though cured, the body remains battle-scarred and injured in ways that no amount of after-cure can completely remedy.

It is not wise to be constantly looking for trouble, but it would be folly for one not to pay attention when there is a red light or a warning gong of danger ahead. In your own body there are many danger signals, just as actual as these, which should serve to warn you of impending disaster. Answer these questions to yourself, and then you will be able to judge whether or not you are being warned by nature: Is your complexion pimply? Do you have an over-abundance of stomach and intestinal gas? Are you conscious of distress in your abdomen? Do you feel tired in the morning? Are you subject to constipation or diarrhea? Do you worry, feel unhappy or scold? Are you sleepless? Is your circulation poor? Do you have headaches? These are only a few of the warning forerunners of disease. If you can answer yes to any of these questions, you should immediately begin to care for your health and avoid a more serious diseasee.

Even if you are suffering from some of these symptoms, you should take courage from the knowledge that habits of health may be cultivated as well as the destructive habits which lead to disease. The recognition of the proneness to a disorder may make it possible, by study and application, to evolve an even greater degree of health than that possessed by the average person.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Epilepsy

Question: Young Mother writes: "Lately I have become worried for fear I am losing my mind, as twice while shopping I have found articles in my possession that I have no recollection of buying, but have a receipt to show I have paid for them. The last purchase was some mouse traps and a nozzle for a garden hose for which I have no earthly use. Another time I found myself wandering around the street and had no memory of leaving home. A doctor tells me I have all the symptoms of losing my mind, but assured me it was a thing most women went through with at some time or other and was not permanent, therefore nothing to worry about. But I am in mortal fear of something happening, or of injuring my baby in one of these 'forgetful' moods. Will you please help me?"

Answer: Consult another doctor at once. It is more than likely you are suffering from some form of epilepsy, such at Petit Mal. I cannot write to you personally on this subject because you did not give your name and address.

Losing Voice

Question: B. A. S. writes: "A lady at times loses her voice and after taking a drink of water it returns. What causes this? What is a good diet to correct this?"

Answer: A loss of voice which can be cured by drinking water is doubtless caused through contraction of the throat muscles caused by nervousness. This lady needs an examination by a psychoanalyst as well as a throat specialist. A well balanced diet would be helpful in a general way in overcoming some of the causes of nervousness.

Milk and Buttermilk

Question: G. H. asks: "Is sweet milk best used raw or cooked, or is buttermilk better?"

Answer: Uncooked or raw certified milk is the most wholesome, but it is all right to use a certain amount of milk cooked with vegetables or warmed and poured over vegetables which have been cooked. Buttermilk is a good food but should be used by itself or in combination with figs, dates, raisins or any of the sweet fruits.

Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet addressed to him in care The Times. Enclose self addressed large stamped envelope for reply.

Spinal Curvature

Question—H. R. M. writes: "My little girl, 12 years old, has developed a curved spine within the last two years. She has a mixed diet, attends gymnasium, and seems generally well, but complains of backache and tires easily. What causes this? Can it be corrected? Does it affect the health?

Answer—Be sure that your little girl is having corrective exercises with her gymnasium work and that she is instructed by a competent teacher. It is also well to have an X-ray picture made of her entire spine, and to get the opinion of a bone specialist regarding the condition of the spinal vertebrae. She may be suffering from tuberculosis of the spine, in which case it would be unwise for her to exercise during that time, when the acute changes are taking place in the bones.

12-Day Fast

Question—Mrs. Jean Mc. asks: "If I were to go on an orange juice diet for a period of 12 days what would be the loss in weight approximately?"

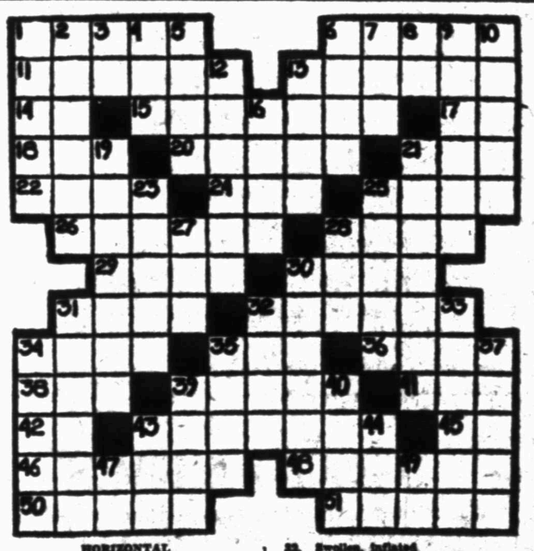

Answer—It would depend upon your weight and also your type. If you are much overweight you would probably lose between 10 and 15

Roasting Ears And New Potatoes Here

The new crop of oranges and lemons which have come on the market recently has made no noticeable increase in the supply and has effected no reduction in prices on those fruits, local dealers state, because of the greatly augmented demand resulting from the influenza epidemic which has been general over the entire country for several weeks.

Influenza patients generally have been instructed to include large amounts of oranges and lemons in their diet, it was said, and the influx of large shipments from the current harvest has no more than equalled the additional consumption.

Roasting ears from the fields of sweet corn in South Texas, and limited quantities of new crop Triumph potatoes are among the latest additions of available produce.

New strawberries remain scarce, only scattered local shipments in small quantity having reached the local market thus far.

Cotton prices remained unchanged throughout Friday.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 11. (AP)—An early decline in response to smaller private consumption figures than expected was followed by advances in the cotton market here today on a belief that the holiday lull in trade had been discounted, and on talk of steadier spot situation in the South. March contracts sold up from 19.89 to 20.18 and closed at 20.04 compared with 20.02 at the close of the previous day. The general market closed steady at net advances of 1 to 5 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 7 to 13 points. The active months showed net losses of about 11 to 14 points during the early trading under liquidation or reselling by recent buyers and some local selling on the estimate of one private authority placing consumption of lint cotton in this country for December at 352,000 bales compared with 611,000 for November.

The market responded quite readily to buying orders which seemed to be coming from trade and Wall street sources. The market firmed up during the middle of the day on covering. January advanced from 19.94 to 20.10, and July from 19.53 to 19.83, making net gains of 15 to 17 points on the active positions. The demand tapered off around noon, however, and the last prices showed reactions of 10 or 15 points from the best under realizing and local selling.

A bullish view of the week-end statistics considered a contributing factor to the afternoon advance. The world's visible supply of American cotton showed a decrease for the week of 123,466 bales compared with an increase of 6,288 for the previous week. For the same week last year there was a decrease of 134,856 bales. Private cables said trade calling and continental buying had been supplied by hedge selling and London liquidation in Liverpool.

Exports today were 19,595, making 5,174,010 so far this season. Port receipts were 20,781, and U. S. port stocks, 2,256,000.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 11. (AP)—Outside buying made itself felt in the cotton market again today when after easing off about 50 cents a bale, prices rallied over $1 a bale from the lows. Realizing, however, developed in final trading and March contracts, which had traded up from 19.28 to 19.54, were off and closed at 19.42 or 2 points net higher for the day. The general market closed steady net 2 points up to 2 points down with distant positions showing the loss.

The market opened easy owing to a private consumption estimate which was construed as bearish and indifferent Liverpool cables. First trades showed losses of 2 to 3 points and selling pressure continued for a time after the start carrying January off to 19.22 and March 19.14, or 11 to 12 points net lower.

Offerings appeared absorbed at the decline and the statement that the smaller consumption figures than had been the daily average thus during November and attributing the decrease to the holiday closing of mills, brought in good outside support which was further stimulated by reports of higher spot demand at interior markets with more buying by mills of the better staples. By noon January had recovered to 19.40 and March to 19.54, or 7 to 14 points above yesterday's close.

During the afternoon session widened liquidation and realizing caused a recession from the highs and active months closed at net gains of 1 to 2 points.

Hester's pointer for mill takings and movement into sight were favorable but private reports said that as to the latter the figures had no visible affect on trading.

Steel Common Displays Vigorous Strength as Other Stocks Descend

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Jan. 11. (US)—Vigorous display of strength in United States Steel common today dominated a stock market which in other sections showed continued irregularity. A fair degree of stability had been displayed in the entire market until call money advanced to 7 per cent which brought out some selling. Steel, however, refused to yield and its continued strength imparted confidence to the remainder of the list.

Demonstration in Steel common was the biggest since prior to its stock dividend. The powerful stock market group which has been responsible for the sustained rise in such speculative leaders as Montgomery Ward, Radio and others, was stated to be the biggest buyer of Steel. They regard the issue as having been neglected during the advances in other stocks, some of which have far less merit than Steel. This year is expected to prove highly profitable for the steel industry, and forecast is made that the first six months of 1929 may return $10 per share for U. S. Steel. Belief is also growing that another revision of Steel corporation's common capitalization is impending, probably a further split-up of the shares. The least that is expected is an extra dividend. Investigation disclosed that amount of Steel common in speculative accounts is the smallest perhaps on record.

Large Consolidations

Large-scale consolidations continued to inspire activity. Standard Milling and Gold Dust both achieved new highs on confirmation of reports that leading interests in these companies desired a merger. Terms offered to Standard Milling common stockholders are as given here. Two shares Gold Dust for one share Milling common. Public utility issues were inspired by latest development toward amalgamation. Consolidated Gas taken in large blocks by leading investment interest on belief it eventually will be taken into gigantic combinations, whether they are effected physically or financially. Tobacco issues, led by Reynolds, continued strong.

Patino Mines added to its gain on continued buying by banking and mining interests. The Guggenheims are stated to have been large recent buyers of this stock in belief that its outlook is brightened not only by cessation of war discussions in South America but also by the firm demand for tin, which shows every likelihood of increasing. Earnings of the Patino company are stated to be substantially above last year.

Warner Bros. Pictures was in heavy demand on semi-official statements that its earnings are materially above the record month of December. There was also some talk of merger developments, but those familiar with Warner discounted these reports. A factor favoring Warner is that several of its recent affiliations, such Stanley and First National pictures, are not being included in its reported income. When their combined profits are announced a favorable surprise is forecast. Hahn Department issues, recently listed, were under pressure. The common stock had a vigorous rise after its introduction to the market.

Rubber Shares Strong

Rubber shares participated with Steel common in the leadership. U. S. Rubber advanced to the highest price in months as greater appreciation was given to the new financial status of the company with respect to its financing. Important developments are pending in this company, which will be favorable for the preferred stockholders, while common stockholders will require greater patience. Rights to subscribe to Rubber's new common stock expired yesterday, so that the common will now sell ex the rights. U. S. Rubber is not involved in any merger negotiations. Stewart-Warner and Stromberg were higher on increasing evidence that this year will be a good one for the motor accessory manufacturers. Stewart-Warner is planning a capital adjustment through a split-up which will mean enlarged dividends. American Water Works and Electric shares had a sharp run-up on an unusual development in its affairs. Engineers drilling for water in California are understood to have struck a substantial oil deposit.

Columbia Graphophone had to withstand profit-taking, although the leading interests sponsoring its rise maintained their optimism that 1929 will prove a record-breaking year. Loew's Inc. was helped by reports other amusement interests were buying its stock. International Nickel finally yielded to the insistent selling by people who regard the stock's advance in recent years as having overdiscounted its prospects for at least a year to come.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11. (AP)—William C. Durant today amplified announcement of his retirement from the management of Durant Motors, Inc., by saying control of the company remains in his family.

"Control of Durant Motors, Inc.," he said, "has been in the Durant family since the company was organized and not a share of this stock has been sold. On the contrary my personal holdings have been increased during the past three weeks by purchase in the open market and private sale by upwards of 60,000 shares."

Montgomery Denies Injunction Asked by Archer County Rancher

A petition asking an injunction restraining Archer county from building a road through the W. M. Coleman ranch was denied after a hearing before Judge Allan D. Montgomery Friday morning.

The petition, presented by John C. Kay, alleged that the county commissioners had failed to comply with all the provisions of the statute before condemning the seven-mile tract through the Coleman land. Compensation totaling a little more than $1,800 and including the construction of a fence on both sides of the proposed road has been awarded Mr. Coleman, who protests that the splitting of his pastures would involve a $100,000 loss in their value.

Notice of appeal was given at the time the injunction petition was denied. Mr. Coleman, owner of more than 14,000 acres of Archer county land, has already filed a claim for $100,000 against the county.

Two months ago when Levine was run down in traffic, he told his wife he thought he would recover and be able to continue the "double" which they had appeared in around the four-a-day circuit.

Elsie, the wife, carried on the act as a single while Hendrik sought to overcome his injury.

Last night Mrs. Levine returned home from her performance to find the body of her husband and a note which read:

"Dear wife Elsie: It is impossible to live any longer. I am absolutely no good. Please forgive me."

375,000 Jars Vicks Now Produced Every 24 Hours

That the public has not forgotten the lesson of 1918 is indicated by its prompt responses to the warning of health authorities to combat the flu by keeping free from colds.

The demand for Vicks VapoRub, the vaporizing salve which proved so valuable during the 1918 epidemic, has already shattered by a wide margin all previous records.

Although the capacity of the Vicks laboratories has been tripled since 1918, they are once more operating night shifts. The present output is more than 375,000 jars every 24 hours.

Mild though it is in comparison with 1918, this year's epidemic has already affected more than a million persons, and it is apparently still increasing.—Adv.
