High court upholds abortion buffer zone

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Judges can bar even peaceful demonstrators from getting too close to abortion clinics, the Supreme Court ruled Thursday in a decision anti-abortion advocates said trampled their free-speech rights.

By a 6-3 vote, the court said a state judge did not violate protesters' rights by barring them from gathering near the parking lot driveway and entrance of a Melbourne, Fla., abortion clinic.

The judge ordered protesters to keep 36 feet away from the clinic, effectively forcing them to congregate across the street.

The decision had nothing to do with the right to abortion, but rather the tactics of anti-abortion activists.

The ruling was announced minutes before the court ended a comparatively tranquil 1993-94 term by acknowledging the last day on the bench for retiring Justice Harry A. Blackmun. He authored the 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling that legalized

Jackpot rolls over

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $10 million. The numbers drawn Wednesday night from a field of 50 were: 7, 9, 28, 30, 49 and 50. Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Saturday night's game will be $17 million.

Spare the rod?

WOODSTOCK, Ga. — When a police officer approached Lynn Kivi at a grocery store, she saw no reason to lie: Sure, she'd slapped her son. The boy had been fighting with his sister. Mrs. Kivi was handcuffed and hauled off to jail. Some child-abuse experts suggest police crossed the line. The chief complains police can't win when it comes to dealing with suspected child abuse. And Mrs. Kivi's neighbors warn of sparing the rod, spoiling the child.

Koslow jurors sentence teen to life in prison

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Jurors assessed teen-ager Kristi Koslow life in prison Thursday in the vicious 1992 rampage that left her father seriously injured and her stepmother dead.

The jury deliberated for one hour and 20 minutes before deciding on the punishment.

The judge formally sentenced her moments after the verdict.

The jury of six men and six women could have opted for the death penalty for Koslow for her role in the savage slaying two years ago of socialite Caren Koslow. But they had to answer two questions affirmatively.

Jurors did not find that Kristi Koslow was a continuing threat to society.

Although jurors ruled the 19-year-old caused and intended to kill her stepmother, they did not find she was a continuing threat to society. Therefore, they were required to return a life sentence.

Prosecutors had argued that Miss Koslow should die for her role.

Chief prosecutor Alan Levy, who called the case "a personal tragedy" for the Koslow family, said he felt Miss Koslow's age and lack of criminal record were behind his failure to get the death penalty.

"I think we presented a good case to the jury," he said.

Defense lawyers, citing their clients' age, turbulent childhood and flawless criminal record, had urged jurors to be lenient.

Lead defense attorney Tim Evans said the jury made the "right decision."

The threat of fast-moving wildfires fueled by dry grassland has caused the Midland County Commissioners' Court to declare the county in a "state of local disaster."

The commissioners banned outdoor burning and the shooting off of certain fireworks, specifically "skyrockets with sticks" and winged "missiles," until the danger of wildfires has passed.

Pentagon study blames human error for F-15 attack on U.S. copter in Iraq

■ Controllers fail to warn fighter pilots.

By Eric Schmitt
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — U.S. F-15s mistakenly shot down two American helicopters over northern Iraq in April, killing 26 people, after controllers on an AWACS aircraft failed to warn the F-15 pilots that the helicopters were friendly, a classified Pentagon report says.

The disclosure that some AWACS controllers knew the Blackhawk helicopters were American at the time other controllers were clearing the jets to attack added a new twist to the mystery of how one of the American military's worst self-inflicted losses unfolded.

Many of the early reports focused on the role of the fighter pilots, but, as a result of the inquiry, senior Pentagon officials will now have to consider the performance of the controllers on the AWACS, their superiors at Incirlik, Turkey, and senior commanders in Europe who set the rules of engagement.

Thousands to greet Arafat at government's organized meeting

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Palestinians will throng the roads to greet Yasser Arafat on his return, and the fledgling self-rule government bordered on panic Thursday in trying to organize the magic moment.

"I am suffering from fear and anxiety, of course mixed with joy," said Riyad Zanoun, health minister in the autonomy authority.

Arafat maintained his reputation for rash decisions and keeping everyone in a state of frenzy by constantly changing his plans, his trademark for 25 years of heading the PLO on the run.

Aide Ahmed Tibi announced Arafat would come Friday afternoon instead of the previously stated Saturday so that Israeli troops providing security would not have to desecrate the Jewish Sabbath, a request from a senior rabbi.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Arafat was due at the Rafah border crossing from Egypt around 2 p.m. today.

He is expected to lead a triumphant parade to Gaza City, pray and then make a speech in front of the old Parliament building. He will likely stay three or four days, briefly visiting the self-rule area of Jericho in the West Bank before heading to a Paris summit with Rabin, Palestinian officials said.

Ministers of the self-rule government said they would swear an oath of loyalty to Palestine in front of him and he would immediately convene meetings to get the self-rule government working. Zanoun said the Palestinian agency to distribute aid had received $32 million from foreign donors.

Arafat, a symbol for all Palestinians of their aspirations for a homeland, is the only figure that can make the autonomy work at the street level.

"His arrival will help us start a government here," said Maj. Gen. Abdel Razek Majaydeh, a senior police officer.

"Arafat is the unifying symbol for the Palestinian factions. The opposition must work under the banner of the Palestinian authority, otherwise it will be considered illegal."

Without Arafat's personal attention, attempts to set up a government have been in a holding pattern, and Gazans exhibit increasing anger at the lack of any improvement in their lives.

With Israeli troops gone, they are disappointed that the autonomy has done little to ease chronic unemployment and left thousands of Palestinian prisoners behind bars. The agreement left 4,000 Jewish settlers in place, with a heavy Israeli army presence on main arteries to protect them.

The potential for violence from the settlers was a concern of both Palestinian and Israeli security forces. Any motorcade on the main road would have to pass through the settlement of Kfar Darom that abuts the main highway, and security officials were debating alternate routes.

Rabin on Thursday accused right-wing opponents of incitement and warned that he would use the full power of the state to stop them from turning Jerusalem into a city under siege during anti-Arafat protests.

He said he had information that Jewish settlers might move a right-wing tent encampment from outside the prime minister's office to Arab east Jerusalem to provoke Palestinians.

Opposition leaders have vowed large-scale protests against Arafat. Shmuel Meir, a hawkish deputy mayor of Jerusalem, warned that "we plan to set Jerusalem aflame and then all of Israel."

Settler leaders offered $33,000 for Arafat's capture and intelligence officials reportedly were concerned that Jewish extremists might try to assassinate him.

The potential dangers were underlined on Thursday, when unknown assailants shot and moderately wounded two Israeli soldiers at a Gaza-Israel border point just several miles north of the point where Arafat is to enter the strip.

Diana upstages Charles in papers

LONDON (NYT) — Just hours after millions of his subjects saw Prince Charles admit on television that he had committed adultery, millions picked up their newspapers Thursday to see his wounded princess, Diana, say in pictures if not words that Charles had botched another one.

Judging from press and public responses, Prince Charles' two and a half hour TV effort Wednesday evening to cleanse the image of Britain's future king had fallen flat.

If all that wasn't enough, there was Princess Diana, in living color, blonde hair framed against tanned skin partly covered by clinging chiffon, staring out from every morning paper in a direct public challenge to her estranged husband.

According to the mass circulation Sun tabloid newspaper, Diana's only comment about the documentary, which she had not seen, was, "A senior member of the royal family does not go on TV and admit being an adulterer."

Pirates terrorize ships entering Guyana port

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — The scourge of the 17th century Caribbean has returned to haunt Port Georgetown.

Armed pirates are staging almost daily attacks on ships entering the harbor, and shipping companies are buying extra insurance to make up for losses.

"The ships are actually coming prepared to be pirated and vandalized," Harbor Master Steve Thomas told The Associated Press.

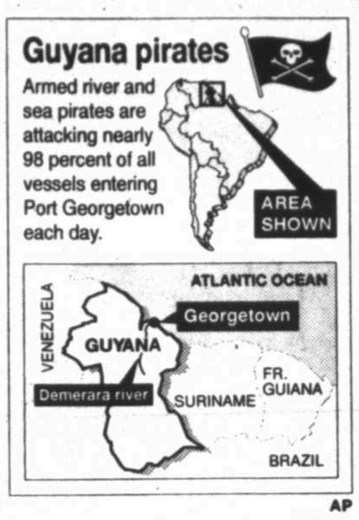

He said the pirating has grown worse in the past year. Sometimes 98 percent of the vessels entering the port each day are attacked, including fishing boats and even a coast guard vessel robbed earlier this year.

"This indicates the extent of the problem. The ship was a military vessel, but the (pirates) could not care less," Thomas said in an interview Tuesday.

About 22 oceangoing ships call at the port each week from New York, Miami, London or the Netherlands to unload cars and other consumer goods.

Georgetown is the export point for local products, including rice, bauxite, wildlife, sugar — and rum.

Thomas worries ships will be reluctant to come to this South American country because of its renewed "17th century trade."

AP

Port Georgetown has been blacklisted in international shipping bulletins, forcing shipowners to buy special coverage for the Guyana leg of any voyage.

Armed groups of mostly young Guyanese men in small boats move up alongside the ships, both in the Atlantic Ocean as far out as 15 miles, and in the Demerara River, which runs seven miles from the harbor into the Atlantic.

The pirates board the vessels, usually at night, and steal everything from radar equipment to sailors' personal belongings. In several cases, pirates have entered a captain's cabin and tried to break into the ship safe.

The pirates sell the bulk of the loot on the streets in this South American country, police said.

Albert Smith, traffic manager of the state-owned Guyana National Engineering Corp., which does a lot of shipping, says the pirates board the ships using rods with hooks attached to pull themselves up onto the bow.

At least two pirates have been killed in the last five years, shot by guards, Smith said. There have been no reports of pirates injuring sailors and the pirates apparently never attempt to take over the ships.

Most of the security measures taken by importers and shipowners have failed, including hiring security firms to protect vessels in the harbor.

The port is vulnerable to piracy because Guyana's marine police do not have enough vessels and its coast guard is more concerned with drug trafficking and illegal fishing.

Serbs take weapons out of U.N. storage

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serbs pulled heavy weapons out of U.N.-monitored storage in Croatia and moved some tanks into neighboring Bosnia, a U.N. official said Thursday. The report fed fears of an escalation in fighting.

The movement of weapons came as mediators began peddling a new peace plan, and it did not bode well for efforts to end nearly 27 months of war.

Serbs took almost 20 tanks and artillery pieces from storage over the past several days, said U.N. spokesman Paul Risley. Some were moved across the border into the Bihac area of northwestern Bosnia, where troops of a rebel Muslim leader are fighting soldiers loyal to the government.

"We are concerned there by the presence of several tanks and heavy weapons belonging to the military of the Serb authorities in Knin, which have recently been deployed across the border," Risley said.

Knin is the self-styled capital of Croatian regions captured by Serbs and held since a six-month war in 1991. They refuse to submit to Croatian authority and hope to unite their regions with Serbia and Serb-held parts of Bosnia.

Risley reported increased shelling inside the Bihac pocket Thursday afternoon which "may indicate the use of these heavy weapons and tanks."

Bosnian radio later reported that two people were killed and 10 were wounded in Serb shelling of Bihac.

There have been recent warnings the war could escalate. In an effort to prevent that, the so-called contact group of Russian, American and Western European envoys began explaining terms of new peace proposals to key players.

Russian diplomat Alexei Nikiforov met Thursday with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and leaders of the Bosnian Serbs in Belgrade.

THREAT: County commissioners restrict usage of fireworks

(From 1A)

The emergency action taken by the court on Thursday was prompted by this week's lightning-ignited grass fires and the dangers inherit in setting off fireworks under dry, windblown conditions during the Fourth of July weekend.

"The firecracking could start a fire just like lightning," said Midland rancher Button Estes. "You can kind of predict lightning by watching the clouds, but you can't predict where the firecrackers are going to shoot."

Midland Fire Chief James Roberts cited the "hazardous conditions due to the extreme (hot-and-dry) weather conditions we've been having.

The sale of fireworks is not affected by the court's order.

"It's important to protect the property-owners' interests," said Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer following the court's action. "We had to balance certain business interests (firework sales) against the property rights of property owners out in the county."

While the county was in emergency session to regulate outdoor burning and igniting fireworks, the Ector County Commissioners' Court was in a similar session.

The lightning-sparked wildfires this week "indicated to us that the conditions are so dry that a fire could just blossom out of hand," said Ector County Judge Jim Jordan. While prohibiting the shooting off of certain fireworks, the Ector County court permitted the public use of the Ector County Coliseum parking lot in Odessa for shooting off fireworks in celebrating the holiday.

The Midland County Commissioners' Court's ban on outdoor burning in rural Midland County — outside the corporate limits of Midland — is in effect for seven days. However, Seltzer said, the ban and disaster declaration will be renewed as long as the threat of wildfires remains.

"People need to realize how dry it is," said Midland County Fire Marshal Dale Little. "The major fires that we have had should show the people that it's so cotton-picking dry that there's no moisture content left in the grass and all (brush and other vegetation).

"The slightest little spark will spark the grass off, and we will have a major fire," Little said. "With the wind that we've got and the high temperatures, it's not going to get any better."

Odessans Jim Harris and Ted Tuminowski, partners in the sale of Truckload Fireworks in the Midland-Odessa area, appeared before the commissioners to protect their business interests and express their concerns over fireworks safety. In the courtroom, too, were Midland ranchers and rural homeowners.

"I've prayed for rain," Harris, an Odessa businessman, said following the session. "And if a rain dance would do any good, I would go out and do a rain dance. I do care about the ranchers. We have ranchers and farmers that are our landlords" at fireworks locations. "We care about our ranchers and our farmers."

But the "safety of (using) fireworks all boils down to common sense," Harris said. "Parents should be with their kids when they are doing fireworks."

Tuminowski, who admitted that missiles "could, potentially, be a problem," said he does not sell missiles and hasn't for three years. However, he does sell skyrockets.

"We do have Roman candles," Tuminowski said. "They are not a missile or a rocket," but "they do shoot out fiery balls."

Of firing a missile, Tuminowski said that "once it takes off, you have no control. In these things (Roman candles), you do have some control. And they don't shoot off that far. They don't go 50 feet into the air."

Tuminowski, a teacher who has been in the holiday fireworks business for 10 years, said Truckload Fireworks' main sales are in "plain, old firecrackers (and) sparklers.

"We encourage everyone to use fireworks properly, to read the warning labels, do them under adult supervision, and make sure you do have a fire extinguisher, water, or shovel" as a safeguard against any fire.

"I don't mind giving up the rockets or the missiles at all," Tuminowski said. "But where is it going to end after that?"

The court's order prohibiting the detonation of "skyrockets with sticks" and "missiles" expires on Sept. 1 or "when the Commissioners' Court finds the threat of wildfires . . . has ceased to exist."

The penalty for outdoor burning under the order is a fine of up to $1,000 or a jail term of up to 180 days.

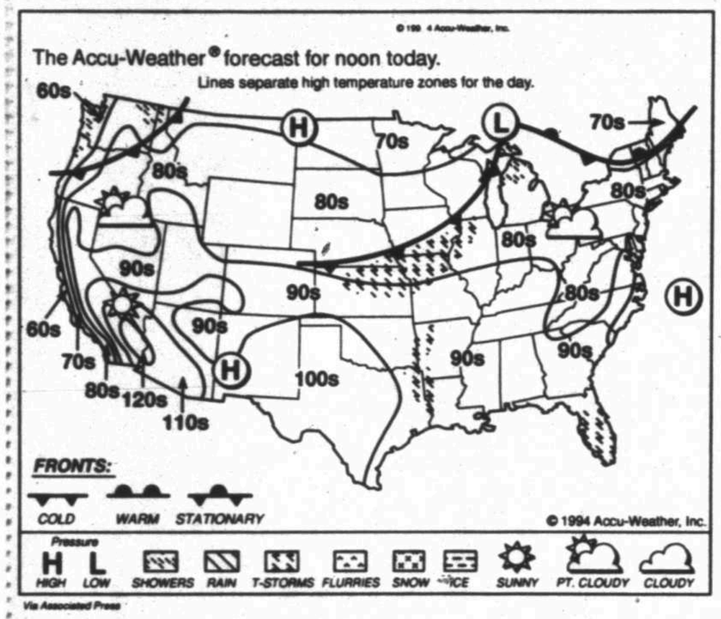

The penalty for shooting off fireworks on county roads and rights of way is a fine of up to $500, which is also the maximum fine for recklessly igniting fireworks or shooting off skyrockets with sticks and missiles.

The order allows the use of fireworks, other than skyrockets with sticks and missiles, on private property in rural Midland County only if fireworks' igniters secure the landowners' permission; if the person using fireworks is not intoxicated; if reasonable fire-prevention precautions are taken in regards to structures and vegetation; if children shooting off fireworks are under adult supervision, and if water or other "proper" fire-extinguishers are readily available.

Expressly prohibited by law within the Midland city limits and for 5,000 feet beyond the city limits in the city's extra-jurisdictional territory are possessing and igniting of fireworks.

Violation is punishable by a fine of up to $2,000, and there is the "possibility of civil liabilities" should property be damaged, according Municipal Court Judge Sharon Ryan.

HOT: No relief's in sight number of consecutive days with temperatures at or above 100. The record is 12 days, set in 1964 and 1980.

National Weather Service forecasters are predicting mostly sunny skies with daytime highs reaching 100-105 through Monday. Overnight skies should remain fair with a low in the lower to mid-70s.

A NWS forecaster said there has been no change in a Pacific high pressure system, which continues to sit over Arizona and New Mexico and keep the mercury high. No movement is predicted in the system through the middle of next week.

Warm conditions contributed to several small fires throughout Midland County Thursday, but none were severe, according to fire officials.

Today's skies are expected to be mostly sunny with a high near 106 and southeast winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low in the mid-70s.

Saturday should be partly cloudy with a high near 105.

Thursday's overnight low was 76, compared to the record low of 60 set in 1967.

NATION

Thunderstorms developed once again Thursday across parts of the Southeast, Northeast and the Mississippi Valley, while extreme heat lin[illegible]

[illegible] of low pressure spanning from the Middle Atlantic States to the Southeast was responsible for producing the showers and thunderstorms.

Record heat in the Southwestern deserts on Wednesday led to very high temperatures overnight. After a record temperature of 128 degrees in Lake Havasu City, Ariz., the mercury fell only to 89 degrees Thursday morning. Phoenix also reported an overnight low of 89.

The nation's cool spots were in Montana, where temperatures in Kalispell and West Yellowstone fell to 40 degrees.

Severe thunderstorms pounded part of the nation and spawned tornadoes in North Carolina's Brunswick County; near Woodstock, Ga.; north of Inverness, Fla.; southwest of Custer, S.D.; and south of Larned, Kan.

The National Weather Service said three funnel clouds tore up roofs, trees and power lines Wednesday afternoon in Desert Hot Springs, Calif., just north of Palm Springs.

The twisters didn't touch down, though wind knocked over stop signs and power poles and downed mesquite and palm trees, one of which hit a car.

In Joshua Tree, about 25 miles to the northeast, four people were injured when a swirling wind picked up a half-ton storage shed and dropped it on them.

The heat has been blamed for a few deaths in the Southern California deserts this week, including two men in their 80s found dead in stifling trailers.

Elsewhere, thunderstorms produced large and damaging hail.

Golf ball-sized hail fell at Oxford, Miss., southern New Hanover County in North Carolina; Philadelphia; east of Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ble for this horrible tragedy," said one senior Defense Department official.

Defense Secretary William J. Perry and his top military and civilian Pentagon aides received a three-hour preliminary briefing on Wednesday on the closely held report, which some officials said would pin responsibility on at least eight people, including the two F-15 pilots.

The ultimate decision on punishment rests with Perry, who is scheduled to receive a full briefing next week. But senior military officials expected some of those responsible to be relieved of their duties and possibly court-martialed.

A Pentagon spokesman, Kathleen deLaski, confirmed on Thursday that Perry had been briefed on the report, but declined to comment on its specific findings.

The inquiry affirmed initial findings that the fighter pilots misidentified the helicopters for Russian-built Iraqi Hind aircraft. It also found that an electronic system on one of the Blackhawk helicopters designed to identify aircraft as friend or foe was operating but emitting the wrong code for friendly aircraft, military officials here and in Europe who are familiar with the report's findings said.

The report also examines how the AWACS plane, a military version of a Boeing 707 with a rotating radar on top of the fuselage, failed.

Inside the windowless AWACS, more than a dozen controllers and their supervisers peer at separate radar scopes that track different aerial regions. In this case, the report says, information that some controllers had was not passed along to others who were in close contact with the fighter pilots.

Accidental attacks on friendly forces is one of the military's greatest nightmares.

The Blackhawk helicopters were shot down in broad daylight and in good weather over the Kurdish enclave in northern Iraq. The United States and some of its allies in the Persian Gulf war are engaged in a combined relief and military operation to assist the minority Kurd population in Iraq and to keep President Saddam Hussein's forces at bay.

LIFE: Mother urges jurors to spare Koslow

(From 1A)

"It would serve no purpose to put Kristi Koslow to death," he said.

Evans called it "a bittersweet experience because we hoped very much that we might get an acquittal."

"Realistically," he added, that was probably too much to hope for. "We are pleased."

When asked about Miss Koslow's reaction, Evans said, "obviously she was relieved."

When pressed, he said, "I think everybody here would be relieved given the option of living or dying."

The jury convicted Miss Koslow of capital murder Wednesday, while deliberations in the punishment phase began after an hour of spirited closing arguments punctuated with this declaration from Levy:

"What greater crime can occur than this defendant has committed: to steal from Caren Koslow her life, her hopes, her dreams, the love of her friends, the affections of her associates and then come into this court and play the victim?"

Mark Daniel, speaking for the defense, reminded the jury of the finality of a death sentence and said: "You can't undo that . . . and that is what's so incredibly frightening."

In a dramatic conclusion to Thursday's testimony, Evans called Paula Koslow, Kristi's mother, as the final witness of the two-week trial.

"Paula, do you love your daughter?" attorney Evans asked.

"Yes, I do," she replied.

"Do you have something to ask of this jury?" he continued.

"Yes, I do," she responded, turning to the jury box as tears streamed down her face.

"Please do not give her the death penalty," she sobbed. "That's all I have to say. Please."

Mrs. Koslow left the courtroom in tears after the punishment was assessed.

Caren Koslow, 40, was beaten and slashed by Miss Koslow's boyfriend and another teen-ager in the early morning hours of March 12, 1992.

She died in the master bedroom of the couple's Rivercrest home.

Jack Koslow, 51, severely beaten with his throat cut, survived the bloody assault and testified as a key prosecution witness. He told the court his daughter should get the death penalty.

"That's what she gave Caren," he said.

At Thursday's end, Jack Koslow, smiled but told reporters he had no comment.

The jury deliberated 3 hours and 15 minutes Wednesday before rendering its capital murder verdict, ruling in effect that Miss Koslow orchestrated the savage assault on her parents.

abortion nationwide.

The ruling also could play a ma[illegible] mounted against a law President Clinton signed last month making it a federal crime to block access to abortion clinics.

"Taken together with the newly passed Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act, the court's decision provides a powerful one-two punch that anti-choice extremists will have a hard time recovering from," said Sally Goldfarb of the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund.

The new law was sparked by the fatal shooting last year of Dr. Da[illegible] Fla., abortion clinic, and acts of violence elsewhere.

Jay Sekulow, a lawyer for the anti-abortion group Operation Rescue, said the decision carries "devastating consequences for the pro-life movement."

"By endorsing a zone of exclusion, the court crushes both the pro-life message and its messengers," Sekulow said.

But the court also ruled, by an 8-1 vote, that the Florida judge had gone too far in preventing some forms of protest near the clinic[illegible] court:

—Ruled in a Florida case that federal voting rights law does not require creation of the largest possible number of minority-dominated election districts.

—Upheld a Georgia county's one-commissioner form of government against a Voting Rights Act challenge that said it diluted black voters' political clout.

—Upheld the death penalty law in California, the state with the [illegible] 400.

—Ruled in a Texas case that federal judges can order a death row inmate's execution postponed until a lawyer can be appointed to help prepare an appeal.

—Spared the United Mine Workers from paying $52 million in contempt-of-court fines stemming from a violent 1989 labor strike in southwestern Virginia.

CASE: Simpson bought knife, witness says

pumped from American Airlines jets at O'Hare International Airport, radio station WBBM reported. The tank is emptied monthly, said city aviation department spokeswoman Lisa Howard.

The knife part has been turned over to Chicago police, who will contact Los Angeles authorities, Howard said.

The bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were found at 12:10 a.m. on June 13. Simpson flew from Los Angeles to Chicago on an 11:45 p.m. flight June 12.

Howard said it was a carving-type knife, not a retractable one. The handle and a bit of the blade were recovered, she said.

"They're trying to get the rest of it, but it's down in this God-awful waste pit."

At Simpson's preliminary hearing Thursday, a merchant testified that Simpson bought a 15-inch knife about five weeks before his ex-wife and her friend were slashed to death.

In other developments, court papers disclosed that a trail of blood was found at Simpson's estate after the slayings, leading from his white Ford Bronco to the mansion's front door.

However, the day's most startling disclosure was testimony that Simpson had purchased a German-made Stiletto knife on May 3, with a 6-inch retractable stainless steel blade and a handle made of deer antlers.

Simpson bought the knife while filming a TV pilot on location in front of the knife shop, said Allen Wattenberg, owner of Ross Cutlery in downtown Los Angeles. Before leaving with his $81.17 purchase, Simpson had the knife sharpened, Wattenberg said.

Wattenberg acknowledged that his brother — the store's co-owner — and a store employee agreed to sell their story to National Enquirer newspaper for $12,500.

Salesman Jose Camacho said Simpson paid with a $100 bill. He got the only receipt, Wattenberg said.

Simpson's lawyer stressed in cross-examination that such knives are "collectibles," suggesting he didn't buy it to kill.

Hovering above Thursday's preliminary hearing was an explosive motion filed by the defense late Wednesday seeking to exclude evidence gathered by police at Simpson's home, including a bloody glove like one found near the bodies and the trail of blood from Simpson's Bronco to his front door.

Detectives who had gone to Simpson's mansion to tell him about his ex-wife's death discovered the trail of blood, according to an affidavit for a search warrant filed by Detective Philip L. Vannatter.

"Blood droplets were . . . observed leading from the vehicle on the street to the front door of the residence," Detective Philip L. Vannatter wrote in an affidavit to obtain a search warrant.

After obtaining the warrant, police returned and found even more blood inside the Bronco, on the driveway, in the bathroom and in the master bedroom, according to police reports and court testimony Thursday.

The glove had been mentioned in earlier news accounts, but Simpson's previous attorney had disputed the reports. Municipal Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell set a hearing on the motion for Tuesday.

The hearing bogged down even before it began. Simpson lawyer Robert Shapiro and prosecutor Marcia Clark clashed over how many hairs investigators may pluck from Simpson's head to compare with strands in a ski cap found near the bodies. Shapiro offered to provide one; Clark wanted about 100.

Kennedy-Powell ruled the prosecution could have between 40 and 100 hairs, drawing laughter in the courtroom.

Shapiro also grilled Michele Kestler, assistant director of the Police Department crime lab, on her qualifications. Shapiro insisted on seeing her resume. The court took a break for her to get her resume from her computer.

Later, he questioned her doggedly about her experience with hair and blood analysis and her familiarity with the technical literature on the subject.

During one sharp exchange, Shapiro accused Clark of "grandstanding" when she announced that she wanted to open what appeared to be phone records she had just received.

Relief agencies find refugees, but few are Tutsis

■ Discovery gives weight to fears that minority group was virtually wiped out by Hutu government.

Associated Press

CYANGUGU, Rwanda — With the arrival of French troops, relief agencies are moving deeper into the most forbidding parts of Rwanda and starting to find the mysterious half-million refugees they knew existed but couldn't locate.

But they say precious few of them are Tutsis, giving further weight to fears that the minority group was virtually wiped out in the one-third of the country controlled by the majority Hutu government.

"We find some minorities but not a lot," said Ariane Tombet, director of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Rwanda. "It's in the hundreds."

A United Nations report Thursday blamed the Rwandan government for planning a genocide of Tutsis and opposition Hutus and recommended international war crimes charges be brought against the Hutu forces.

In this oppressive border town, guarded by abusive and drunken government soldiers and customs authorities, few locals will talk frankly about the anti-Tutsi killings that erupted across Rwanda after April 6, when Hutu President Juvenal Habyarimana died in an unexplained plane crash.

"The militias are not killing civilians as such. What they are doing is looking for enemy soldiers," said Phocas Fashaho, 30, who said he was a former interpreter for U.N. peacekeeping units in Kigali, the besieged capital.

But across the narrow southern tip of giant Lake Kivu, in the Zairean resort town of Bukavu, witnesses and relief officials remember the carnage in Cyangugu.

"We documented about 16,000 to 17,000 killings," said N. Vander Eecken, head of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees delegation in Bukavu. "Outside of Kigali, this is the worst place. They are all killers there."

French troops last week launched their peace-keeping mission in Cyangugu, where Hutus cheered their arrival. They were pleased to see soldiers from a government that helped finance and run their defense of the 1990 Tutsi rebellion.

"We're dealing with the devil. They killed all Tutsis," said Vander Eecken, who has to deal on a regular basis with the Cyangugu authorities.

"Huts were burning in the hills. Trucks carried bodies," he said, describing the view of Cyangugu from Bukavu. "And people were still water-skiing on the lake."

The French troops' first action in Rwanda was to make a carefully publicized visit to a camp in Nyarushishi, where 8,000 Tutsis amazingly survived in the middle of extremist Hutu territory, under the guard of 11 policemen.

Vander Eecken said he believes the camp is probably the biggest anywhere in government territory, and that the people there were being kept as prisoners and bargaining chips.

French troops since then have found only small pockets of hiding Tutsis, none of whom lived among the general population.

Relief workers have complained about France's intervening in a conflict in which it has a historical bias. The aid group Doctors of the World was forced out by the Rwandan government for criticizing the French arrival.

But the aid agencies clearly have taken advantage of the slightly more relaxed atmosphere among the Hutu militias and government soldiers, who are happy to see their old allies just as the rebels had them on the run.

"Before the French came, the (militias) were more intense, more aggressive," said Alison Campbell, a CARE spokeswoman.

Relief agencies and aid workers are pumping one another and journalists for information on where to find the estimated 500,000 people who supposedly were on the run from the rebels' recent advances.

Prosecutor rules Foster's death suicide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Concluding two matters that have pained the White House, special prosecutor Robert Fiske determined Thursday that Vincent Foster's death was indeed a suicide and declared there would be no indictment of administration officials for discussing a sensitive investigation.

Fiske said Foster's suicide had nothing to do with Whitewater.

The latter findings, completing the first phase of Fiske's work, leave it to the Office of Office of Government Ethics to decide whether contacts between White House and Treasury Department officials were proper. But the contacts were not criminal, Fiske concluded.

In all, Fiske said in a statement, he investigated "more than 20 different contacts, either face-to-face meetings or telephone meetings," between Treasury and White House officials. They involved an investigation by federal regulators of Madison Guaranty — the failed S&L once owned by the Clintons' Whitewater business partners, Jim and Susan McDougal.

Fiske's figure represented more communication than the White House has previously acknowledged.

Congressional hearings late next month are expected to focus on the issue.

Another phase of Fiske's investigation will be completed shortly — a review of what the White House did with Whitewater-related documents in Foster's office following his death last July 20. Investigators were not permitted to examine the documents in the days afterward.

Fiske's 58-page report addresses important questions that have lingered after Foster's death.

He said the deputy White House counsel killed himself. But he also said he found no evidence that controversy over the Clintons' Whitewater real estate investment in the Ozarks was a factor.

At the time, the White House had fired seven employees from its travel office and had been accused of pressuring the FBI to open an investigation in order to justify the firings.

One of Foster's colleagues, Associate Counsel William Kennedy, was among several people reprimanded by the White House as a result of the travel office affair.

"By many accounts, Foster was deeply disturbed by the reprimand of Kennedy and what he viewed as a distortion of the facts by the press," Fiske said in his report. Foster put in calls to a psychiatrist.

Referring to Foster's wife, Fiske said, "Lisa Foster believed that the Travel Office matter was the greatest cause of Foster's stress and anxiety in the weeks prior to his death. . . . Foster was angry and distressed that, in his view, Kennedy had been unjustly criticized."

At the White House, special counsel Lloyd Cutler said, "There has been a great deal of irresponsible rumormongering about whether Foster was really murdered, whether there was a hit squad . . . whether his body was moved."

"This report establishes conclusively that was simply rumormongering without any evidence," Cutler said in an interview. "And we hope that both the rumormongers and those parts of the media which published what they were saying will now leave the Foster family in peace."

As for the S&L investigation, prosecutor Fiske said, "The evidence does not justify a criminal prosecution" for the repeated contacts between White House and Treasury Department officials regarding the probe of Madison, an S&L whose collapse is expected to cost taxpayers at least $47 million.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said the Fiske report clears the way for the government ethics office to review "whether any ethics issues or conflicts" were involved in the contacts.

Cutler said he will conduct an internal investigation into whether the aides did anything improper in their contacts with Treasury.

The administration's contacts with regulators were improper even if they were not criminal, said Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., the ranking Republican on the Senate Banking Committee, one of two panels conducting Whitewater hearings next month.

"If the purpose was not to obstruct justice or influence an ongoing investigation then what was the purpose?" D'Amato said. "They were clearly improper. They shouldn't have taken place. What was discussed at them?"

D'Amato said the Senate panel's hearings will thoroughly investigate these meetings.

Democrats used the Fiske report to support their position that controversy about Whitewater is overblown.

The Fiske report "may go a long way toward revealing how much of the Whitewater furor is simply partisan hysteria," said Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, chairman of the House Banking Committee.

O.J.'s hearing draws attention, but interest dwindles

By Robert Dvorchak
Associated Press

OK, so it wasn't as compelling as the prime-time chase scene or the 911 tapes, and some daytime TV viewers longed for their soap operas and sports fare.

Still, O.J. Simpson's hearing on murder charges grabbed extraordinary attention if for no other reason than the fact that it was carried live Thursday by the networks and cable outlets.

"It piques everybody's interest," said Perry Romano at the Sport City Inn, a Buffalo, N.Y., bar owned by Bills quarterback Jim Kelly, where ESPN was upstaged by Court TV. "Look around the area. Every head is focused on it."

The spectacle figured to be followed more closely in the city where Simpson became a pro football legend. Downstate, New York City was at its blase best.

A spot check of six Manhattan bars and restaurants found just one with its television set on, and it had the sound turned down. Three TVs at Houlihan's showed the U.S. Senior Open golf tournament, but no one was watching it either.

At Macy's department store, where New York Rangers goalie Mike Richter drew crowds of autograph seekers on the mezzanine, about 15 shoppers and employees watched Simpson on three big-screen TVs on the fifth floor. Most drifted away at the first commercial.

"Not really a grabber, is it?" shopper Martin Smith said.

And in Baltimore, where people glanced at the tube while standing in line to pay their phone bills, viewers were put off by the plodding pace of the hearing, which lacked the scripted flair of, say, "L.A. Law."

'I'll probably keep track of what's going on, but I'm not going to listen to the whole thing. I'm getting to the point where I've about had enough of it.'

—Ethan Lenz
viewer

"I really want to know one thing, if he did it or not," Delores McKoy said. "They're talking about these hair samples and blood samples and whatnot."

"I'd rather they put the soaps back on," Lee Szczepanik said.

Channel surfers had their options limited, though. Network anchors Peter, Dan and Tom each had their own teams of sideline analysts commenting on the subtleties of the proceedings. They did switch to regular programming when the hearing broke for lunch, however.

Airing the hearing will cost the networks $1 million a day in lost advertising revenue, according to Variety.

Simpson, perhaps the most famous American ever accused of murder, has dominated the TV ratings. But a CBS News poll released Thursday indicated interest may be dwindling. While nearly three of four Americans say they are following the story closely, that's lower than the 92 percent who said they were following it closely last week. And 77 percent feel the media have spent too much time on O.J. Simpson stories.

"I'll probably keep track of what's going on, but I'm not going to listen to the whole thing. I'm getting to the point where I've about had enough of it," said Ethan Lenz of Minneapolis, catching part of the telecast on his lunch hour.

Those who monitor such things say fascination with the case is fueled by a combination of a gruesome double murder, mystery, celebrity and ongoing drama.

"It's painful to watch. But by and large, it's too strong to ignore. People are transfixed. And we want to see how it's going to turn out. It's like a Greek tragedy involving a media god who is flawed," said Frederick Koenig, professor of social psychology at Tulane University who studies the influence of television on society.

The legal arena provided less interest than the World Cup at Stormy's, a sports pub in Norfolk, Va., where none of the 12 TVs was tuned to the hearing.

Panel approves plan to insure every American by '98

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee struck a major blow for President Clinton's health reforms Thursday, approving a sweeping plan to insure every American by 1998 and requiring employers to foot most of the bill.

Rep. Sam M. Gibbons, D-Fla., the panel's acting chairman, boasted it "will guarantee from birth to death . . . that all Americans will never lose their health care."

But barely an hour before the Democrats' narrow victory in Ways and Means, the Senate Finance Committee turned its back on compulsory health insurance. It unceremoniously dumped from Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan's bill a requirement that employers kick in for health insurance if other measures fail.

The senators then voted to tax the richest health benefit plans and set a goal of getting at least 95 percent of Americans covered by 2002.

The 20-18 vote made Ways and Means the third congressional committee to approve legislation overhauling the country's health system and insurance laws. It guarantees a vote by the House later this summer.

The president, watching on television, called to congratulate Gibbons moments after the new chairman had pushed the landmark bill through Ways and Means. Clinton called the panel's action "a giant stride forward" and added: "While the special interests will continue to try and stand in the way of history, they will not succeed."

And a case of Schlitz beer was delivered to Gibbons at the podium in the cavernous committee room. The gift from Hillary Rodham Clinton was a reminder of the two cans of Schlitz that Gibbons carried in his pack when he parachuted into France on D-Day 50 years ago.

Earlier, the president attacked Sen. Bob Dole's substitute proposal, supported by 39 of the 44 Senate Republicans. "It is politics as usual," said Clinton.

"It does a little bit for the poor, it leaves all the powerful vested interest groups with everything they've got, and it walks away from the middle class and small business," Clinton said.

Ways and Means rejected on a party-line 24-14 vote a Republican alternative to help the uninsured with insurance reforms and subsidies, but not require anybody to buy insurance. "We have the answers but you have the votes," said Rep. Bill Thomas, R-Calif.

The Ways and Means bill would require employers to pick up 80 percent of premiums and make employees pay the other 20 percent. Some 60 million Americans — the poor now on Medicaid, the jobless uninsured and low-wage workers in firms with fewer than 100 employees — would get government health insurance through an expanded Medicare program.

In Finance, all nine Republicans and five Democrats joined in the 14-6 vote against a Moynihan provision forcing employers to cover workers in three to five years if voluntary measures fell short.

"The bottom line is that this is a tax ... a delayed tax," said Dole.

Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., said the panel faced gridlock if it tried to force employers to cover their workers.

The Senate panel adopted, 12-8, a proposal to let a National Health Commission recommend remedies to Congress.

Rockers take up crusade against ticket distributer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rockers Jeff Ament and Stone Gossard laughed awkwardly as they took the oath at a congressional hearing investigating rising concert ticket prices.

The leaders of Pearl Jam — on a people's crusade against Ticketmaster — were noticeably nervous playing this House.

They needn't have worried.

"I just think they're darling guys," said Rep. Lynn Woolsey, D-Calif.

Darling the grunge band members may have been — Ament in his turned-around Seattle Sonics cap and Gossard in velvet shorts and rope shoes. But their issue was serious.

One of the nation's biggest moneymaking bands has taken itself off tour to battle the country's dominant ticket distributor over what it calls outrageous service charges.

(For Baby Boomers: This is big. Almost like Paul McCartney and John Lennon were in the 1960s.)

Gossard and Ament said they weren't doing this for themselves. They're not the victims. "We could make a lot more money going on tour," said Gossard.

"The victim is the fan who doesn't have a lot of money to spend on tickets," said Ament.

Outside the House Government Operations justice subcommittee hearing room, young congressional staffers jammed the hall for a glimpse of their idols.

"It's surprising they've taken it this far," said Brad Hendrick, 22, who complained that tickets are getting over the $100 mark.

"Ten dollar service charges. That's ridiculous," said the Long Island University student.

But when Ticketmaster CEO Fred Rosen got his turn at the witness table he called Pearl Jam's complaint "a work of fiction."

The band has filed an antitrust complaint with the Justice Department against Ticketmaster, now virtually the only distributor with nationwide reach.

Rosen said his 12-year-old company doesn't control tick[illegible] concern to us that a rock band can, by virtue of their celebrity status, cause this kind of hearing to take place," he said.

Pearl Jam wants to hold its prices to $18 a ticket, limit service charges to 10 percent and have that charge separately identified on the ticket. No one should pay more than $20 to see Pearl Jam, the band members said.

But Ticketmaster, which has deals with most of the major concert sites in the country, is "unlawfully interfering with our freedom to determine the price and other terms on which tickets to our concerts will be sold," said the band members.

Supporting that viewpoint at the hearing were managers and attorneys for Aerosmith, the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band and R.E.M.

Pearl Jam has experimented with alternative ways to distribute tickets but "Ticketmaster attempted to threaten and intimidate us," said Gossard and Ament in their prepared statement.

"We do not want to force Ticketmaster to do business on our terms, but we believe we should have the freedom to go elsewhere if Ticketmaster is not prepared to negotiate terms that are acceptable to us."

"That freedom of choice — a basic principle of competition in this country — does not effectively exist in the music industry today," they said.

But Rosen said Ticketmaster doesn't control the market. In 1993, of 1.5 billion tickets sold for live entertainment, less than 2 percent were sold by Ticketmaster, he said.

On a $15 service charge, about $10 goes to the credit card company and about $5 to Ticketmaster. And after the company's expenses, the profit is only about 10 cents a ticket, Rosen said.

Sometimes the service charge includes charges set by the arena that are out of Ticketmaster's control, he said.

Year-old massacre that killed 9 leaves behind shattered lives

By Richard Cole
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The first bullets from the gunman's assault pistol shattered the window of the 34th-floor conference room where court reporter Deanna Eaves was taking down a deposition.

Then they shattered her right arm. Then they shattered her sense of security.

Ultimately, Gian Luigi Ferri's rampage through a high-rise law office on July 1, 1993, also helped shatter roadblocks to gun control and prove the National Rifle Association is not invincible after all.

Nine people were killed in the rampage, including the gunman, and six were wounded. Ferri targeted the Pettit & Martin law firm to avenge imagined wrongs ranging from bad business deals to excessive monosodium glutamate in food.

A year later, the public policy implications of the 101 California St. massacre mean little to Ms. Eaves.

"It took away our life," she said bitterly. "I lost my home. I lost my career. I had to move out of the area."

She can't rotate her arm or turn her palm downward. For a while, others had to dress her and cut her food. "The injury to my right arm means I'm no longer able to court report," she said. "I'm not employable."

The dream home she and her husband were building vanished with her income. They live with her parents now. Since Ms. Eaves, 34, was self-employed, she has no disability insurance. She got $2,300 from the state's victims compensation fund.

Michelle Scully's nightmare began the same day, a floor below. After watching Ferri kill one man in the corridor, she and her husband of nine months, John, tried to barricade themselves in an office.

Ferri found them and opened fire. John died shielding Michelle. She was hit in the arm, and as she frantically called 911, she watched John's life ebb.

"In the beginning I had nightmares every single night, of seeing the whole thing happen over and over again," she says. "It would always end with John's face very bloody, with the blood coming out of his nose and his mouth, just like it was that day."

"I ask, 'Why me?' a lot," she added. "It's unfair. I feel really cheated out of a wonderful person and a very wonderful life."

Scully, 28, doesn't practice law anymore. She has trouble concentrating. She forgets routine tasks like paying her bills. She never returned to their apartment. She hasn't been back to their favorite "hole-in-the-wall" Chinese restaurant.

Scully, like many of the 101 California St. families and survivors, made gun control a crusade, forcing lawmakers to stare them in the face and explain why assault weapons like the TEC DC-9 and its 50-round clip and Hell-Fire trigger are in the hands of madmen like Ferri.

With testimony from Scully and others, the U.S. House on May 5 turned its back on the NRA, approving a ban on a list of assault weapons in a 216-214 vote.

"Maybe this type of incident had to happen — white professionals in a prestigious law firm in a major city, before this country really took note of the problem," Scully said.

Both supporters and opponents of the bill — now bottled up in conference committee — said the 101 California St. testimony influenced the vote.

"They put an emotional color on the debate. Definitely," said NRA lobbyist Tanya Metaksa. "Any tragedy that deals with the use of firearms is used by those who would deny law-abiding citizens the right to firearms."

Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., an ardent supporter of gun control, had a personal stake in the legislation. Her son was a close friend of the Scullys, even attending their wedding in Hawaii.

"It was the first peer he ever lost. That's very difficult to accept," the senator said.

Road kill stirs animal cruelty debate

By David Foster
Associated Press

TUMWATER, Wash. — The opossum and her seven babies made the mistake of crossing in front of Steven Garity's car. They got squished. Garity made the mistake of being in front of a police car. He got charged with cruelty to animals.

And so began the Great Possum Debate, with people around here sinking their teeth into a spirited discussion of animal rights: Are opossums such pests that you can't be cruel enough to them? Or do they deserve as much respect as any living creature?

A judge added his opinion Monday, dismissing the case and declaring Tumwater's animal-cruelty ordinance too vague.

But given the possum passions in this southwestern Washington town, the last word on road-kill morality has yet to be heard.

"I'm not a lawyer and certainly not a judge," said Michael Ellis, director of a wildlife rescue center in nearby McCleary.

The case began March 31, when police Officer Johnna Stevens saw Garity, 39, suddenly change lanes and hit a mother opossum and the youngsters clinging to her.

"They're pests," the officer quoted Garity as saying. "All's they do is eat dog food and cat food, and be a pest. They just hiss at you."

Garity was accused of intentionally running down the opossums and was cited under Tumwater's animal-cruelty ordinance, which says it's a crime if someone "purposefully or recklessly subjects any animal to cruel mistreatment."

The offense carries up to 90 days in jail and a $5,000 fine.

Garity's attorney, Ken Valz, contended Garity was swerving to miss another opossum. Valz also argued that the whole case was ludicrous because state wildlife officials consider the opossum a pest.

He cited a Department of Natural Resources brochure that tells how to kill a "problem" possum: After trapping it, "gently submerge the trap in water for 10 minutes."

"Most people are astounded that it's gone this far — that any government would prosecute anyone for running over a possum, intentionally or unintentionally," Valz said.

Classroom to offer youths a chance

Juvenile crime has been on the increase for quite some time now, causing elected officials around Texas to react in different ways hoping to curtail crime by young people. With that in mind, we think it was entirely appropriate for Midland County Commissioners to agree earlier this week to allow the Midland Independent School District (MISD) to move a portable school classroom onto the grounds of Culver Youth Home and to increase from 10 to 30 the number of students who will be receiving instruction there.

From one standpoint, school officials noted, having the portable classroom available at Culver Youth Home will make the computer-assisted instruction provided to students there more cost effective. Another goal, however, is for the setting — inside the 10-foot fence surrounding Culver — to reinforce for students who are getting involved in criminal activity what their future may hold if they don't change their course.

High school or junior high school students who have been expelled for a semester for violation of MISD's policy of "zero-violence tolerance" attend classes at Culver. The expulsion policy also includes students who possess drugs, commit a second offense in alcohol-related acts and who possess firearms or other weapons on an MISD campus.

Those are serious activities that indicate the need for shocking remedial efforts. While some students no doubt will be too far along the road of crime for the new effort to make a difference, MISD and Midland County need to reach the students that they can and at least give them the opportunity to change their life direction.

Moving a portable classroom onto the grounds at Culver Youth Center says clearly that education is the way to avoid falling into the pit of crime. We hope the students at Culver are listening.

Apathetic citizenry cries when government fails

[illegible] runs amok around [illegible] mental agencies spend huge sums of tax money on various projects and programs with virtually no input from the citizenry.

In every school district, city and county, less than 10 people decide how to spend literally millions of dollars. Those people decide local laws and policies.

In short, our lives are ruled by a few.

A mere handful of people spend our money — and ask for more.

And yet, we complain vehemently about it.

Water rates, taxes, utility bills are too high.

When a policy or rule or regulation hits home, we wail and vow to change it.

Complaints are many about elected officials.

The old cry, "Throw the [illegible] but" [illegible] office.

When council chambers are packed it's because an issue directly affects a group of people.

When a courtroom is standing-room-only, it's because testimony is lurid.

When a school boardroom overflows it's because a bunch of people are mad at the folks sitting around the table.

Rarely is anyone around to watch government work on a routine, day-in, day-out basis.

Simply put, it's boring. But it's necessary.

The next time you get ready to complain about something your government did or didn't do or shouldn't do, ask yourself if you did anything about it other than talk.

State lobbyist's activities warrant some investigation

Gov. Ann Richards has trashed an attack on the state's chief Washington lobbyist (Jane Hickie) for overbilling as "politics that we all decry," and her spokesman, Chuck McDonald, calls it "an orchestrated attack on the most effective state-fed office that Texas has ever had."

There is probably some truth in that, but an equal dose of politics as well. . . .

Richards is standing by Hickie, arguing she hasn't billed anything more than any other state-fed office head has since 1983, a period covering two Democratic governors and one Republican.

Republicans want an investigation. We think that is reasonable. If policy authorizes such double-dipping, it should be stopped. If it doesn't, the money ought to be repaid to the state by all present and past "public servants."

Today in History

Today is Friday, July 1, the 182nd day of 1994. There are 183 days left in the year. This is Canada Day.

On this date:

In 1535, Sir Thomas More went on trial in England, charged with treason for rejecting the Oath of Supremacy.

In 1867, Canada became a self-governing dominion of Great Britain as the British North America Act took effect.

Conservative leaves Democrats in dust

WASHINGTON — Rush Limbaugh could never condemn pro-life conservative Rep. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., as a "femi-Nazi," but when it comes to reforming sexual assault and domestic violence laws, Kyl leaves Democrats in the dust.

Anderson

Kyl has long advocated the death penalty in cases of murder committed by sex offenders and would require mandatory HIV testing of anyone accused of a sex crime. Although Democrats claim to champion women's interests more than conservatives, Kyl's strict proposals have put them on the defensive. Democrats deride Kyl's legislation as too "controversial."

Even Kyl's more "moderate" proposals stiffening penalties and broadening victims' rights have been largely ignored. "Our bill has not received the attention that it should," Kyl told us. "It distresses me that some liberals are not willing to have an open mind about ideas that come from more conservative parts of our society — in particular members of Congress."

A look at Kyl's voting record shows why liberals may be leery: Since 1991, he has only voted for two measures that benefited women, according to the National Federation of Business and Professional Women. In 1992, the group rated Kyl a zero out of a possible 100 on issues that they consider important.

However, few people were counting Kyl's own legislation, the Sexual Assault and Prevention Act. The spokeswoman who told us Kyl's dismal rating on women's issues surprisingly had never even heard of the bill.

The Schroeder bill, which was incorporated into the House crime bill, calls for $1.8 billion to be spent mainly on education and prevention programs, but does not include any punishment. Protections for victims reflected in the Kyl bill have been rejected by Schroeder.

Republicans believe domestic violence has fallen victim to domestic politics. "It is a question of the Democrats feeling like they own this issue," according to a Republican staffer on House Judiciary.

The Democrats are more concerned with the rights of the accused than of the victim, charges Kyl. "Anything that appears to be more on the side of tough-on-crime is not something that liberals and Democrats are particularly that interested in," he complains. "Even though we're talking victims rights here. . . it's very hard for us to get their support on these things."

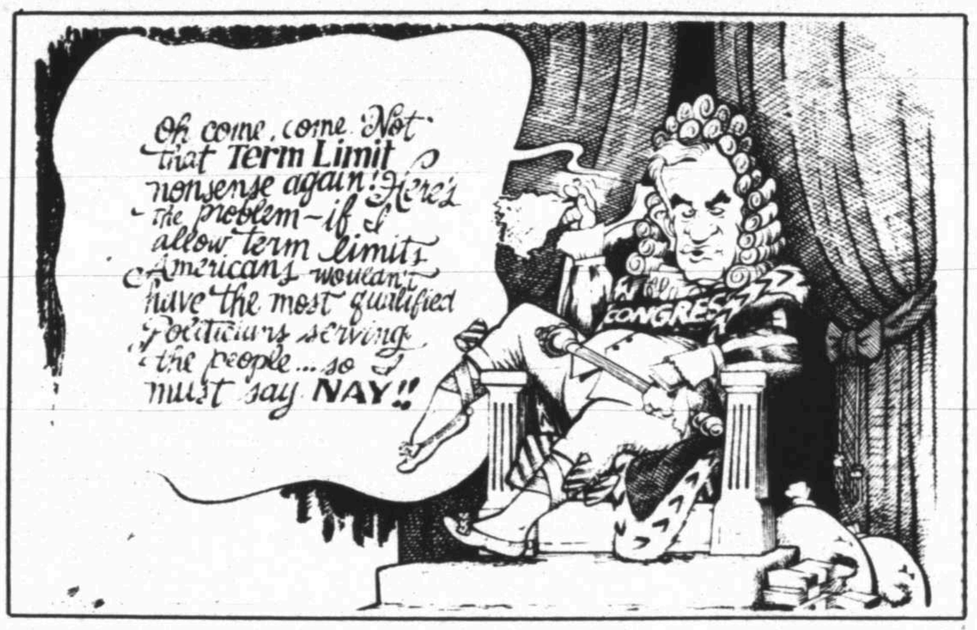

In his race for the Senate this year, Kyl has been scorned for stumping on women's issues just to win votes. Unlike the politicians who have been quick to react in recent weeks to the public concern over stories surrounding O.J. Simpson and wife abuse, Jon Kyl is no Johnny-come-lately to the cause of domestic violence.

As the founding director of the Crime Victims Foundation in Arizona, Kyl started listening more than 10 years ago to women's stories about how they had been beaten by their husbands or sexually attacked. Nicole Simpson's story was tragically familiar.

"You cannot listen to these people (victims) and not be tremendously moved," Kyl told us. "One of the women who had been battered for years by her spouse (told me) why she feels almost imprisoned. . . . I'm sure that was the case with Mrs. Simpson. You could hear it in her voice."

"I think (Democrats) basically ignore me," Kyl told us. "I'm a member of the minority, so they don't have to deal with me."

Beware, media images may distort reality

The O.J. Simpson case illustrates the power of illusion. People who had never laid eyes on the real man acted as if he were a personal friend. Media folks, who had helped create the illusion, acted as if the illusion were the real man.

Reese

The camera is the biggest liar in the world today. The camera can out-lie words like a greyhound can outrun a snail. Photographers and photo editors can falsify the content of a picture, but some camera will always tell the truth. When they lie, it only records light reflected back from surfaces. That contains very little information, and what little it does contain is often distorted.

What people who didn't know the man saw of O.J. Simpson was simply an image. They saw him as a performer in the football business. Later they saw him, carefully dressed, manicured and coiffured, in television advertisements, in movies and in the role of bantering commentator. But all people were really seeing was light reflected from flesh planes and bone structure. The composite image created by the cameras and the scripts was not Simpson.

I don't know the guy and will not judge or analyze him, either as a defendant charged with murder or as a human being. I lack sufficient reliable data — and interest — to make any valid inferences. I cite the case only as a warning to beware of the power of illusions that are continually being manufactured by media, both visual and print.

We do not see reality when we turn on the television set. At best, we see electronic images. Most of what we see and hear, however, are carefully constructed images and specifically chosen words that have a purpose other than to illuminate our lives and minds. Usually, it's just to sell us something — a product, a cause or a persona — or to entertain or promote us.

Because television brings these images into the intimacy of our living rooms and even bedrooms, a peculiar psychological phenomenon occurs. We "connect" to them. If the constructed images are pleasant, it is very easy to begin, after a while, to think of them as one might think of friends one actually knows.

That's why you see that folks, when they get the chance to speak to celebrities either in person or on the phone, nearly always address them by their first names. Fans are not being rude when they do this — their familiarity with the image has just created the feeling of familiarity with the person. They do it automatically, because that's how they've thought of the person while watching the image.

But it is just an image, an illusion. John Wayne looked like a Marine, but he never served in any branch of the service because of a knee injury. Audie Murphy looked like a baby-faced accountant, but he was the most decorated soldier in World War II. Edward G. Robinson, who played snarling gangsters, was a multilingual, well-educated man who collected and loved fine art.

Years ago in New Hampshire I chanced to find myself standing next to Paul Newman, who was campaigning for a politician. He is a small man, I would guess 5-6 or possibly shorter, and at that time [illegible] But his body [illegible] bones and planes are [illegible] lens. He has had a successful career as an actor, often playing heroic characters. So long as nothing in the picture provides scale, the audience cannot tell what size the actor is. A leading man from an earlier era, Alan Ladd, was also short — so short he sometimes had to stand on a box to kiss his leading lady. Yet he made a career playing tough guys.

In a visual age, remain aware of the limitations of visual media. Even our eyes are not that reliable. They cannot detect, for example, reflections of infrared and ultraviolet energy. If they could, the world we see would look strikingly different.

Most of all, try not to confuse illusion with reality.

Mediocre health plan should be reexamined

The "moderate" compromise on health care, now percolating in the Senate Finance Committee, assures us that we can have just "moderate" bureaucratic control with only "moderate" impositions on our liberties — and go perhaps only "moderately" broke in the process. We're supposed to rejoice? Find someone in a more buoyant frame of mind. Like the Clintons, who started this whole legislative nightmare.

Murchison

The "moderate" plan is the shoe that many have been expecting to drop. Pretty clearly, Congress isn't going to pass a health-care plan featuring what are called employer mandates — heavy exactions on employers for the cost of health insurance. Business has argued persuasively that such mandates would drive many businesses to the wall and throw hundreds of thousands of employees out of work.

But congressional "moderates," as is their wont, have for months been playing with the jigsaw pieces, trying to patch together a plan that would split the difference — lighter costs on the one hand, more and bigger government on the other.

Such an approach is well within the spirit of democratic politics, but on health care — involving one-seventh of the United States economy — the risks are immense.

The "moderate" plan is soft-focus socialism. No, there wouldn't be an employer mandate (though Finance Committee Chairman Daniel P. Moynihan continues to play around with one). No, there wouldn't be "global budgets" and price controls. There would be, instead, a target of 95 percent coverage by the year 2000 (vs. 87 percent today). Government subsidies for the poor, combined with insurance regulation and economic incentives to business, would supposedly bring the target into clear view.

As Ted Koppel would say, "Anything wrong with that?" Targets aren't hard and fast. Some you hit, some you miss. This one, however, would be different. There is a penalty for missing. Miss, and a national commission recommends to Congress mandatory measures that Congress supposedly would be hard-put to evade.

How do we like them apples, my fellow Americans? The present Congress hasn't the intestinal fortitude to decide on mandates, so it bucks the decision to a commission whose membership and mission are yet unknown. This, too, isn't without precedent, but, given the stakes, it's also without charm. And when we get there, if we do, what kind of health-care system have we got? What will it look like? How much will it cost? What will our rights be under it? The "moderates" are rolling the dice, expecting their fellow citizens to pay up if the great gamble doesn't work out.

Do we need federal health care that desperately? What Congress changes, it changes forever, or two weeks before. To say that Congress should wait until after the next election — at the earliest — to act may sound self-serving on the part of Clinton critics. "Yaaah, yaaah, you just hope a lot of Republicans will get elected next year and stop the whole thing."

Not necessarily. Membership in the GOP isn't a guarantee of basic common sense, else three of the "moderates" on the finance committee — John Chafee, David Durenberger and John Danforth, Republicans all — wouldn't have contrived the present plan, and wouldn't be expecting our gratitude for cutting, maybe, the Gordian knot. Republicans haven't had their act together throughout the health-care debate. There's no unified approach.

Still, "the whole thing" should be stopped and rethought. Better to kill it by Republican filibuster, even at the cost of letting the president wail all over television about his uncaring, hard-hearted opponents, than let through an ill-conceived plan just for the sake of a plan.

Clinton forms love-hate relationship with talk shows

By Walter R. Mears
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Those aggravating, badmouthing radio talk shows that are irking President Clinton are just the kind of programs he once said had liberated him to broadcast his messages straight to the people.

Different talkers, of course, and different viewpoints. His gripe is with conservative commentators and with attacks from the religious right.

Talk radio and talk TV gained headway as a political force with a boost from Clinton, as candidate and as president. They were the new media forum of the 1992 presidential campaign, and Clinton used them more often than any other candidate. He's done so periodically since, chatting with rush-hour radio hosts and taking call-in questions.

He's frustrated enough by the right-wing broadcast talkers to have complained about Rush Limbaugh by name, on the air.

But that goes with the territory. Left, right or center, the talk programs are unguided forums; they aren't constrained by the tenets of objectivity and fairness that apply in the traditional news media.

The Clinton White House has suggested that they should be.

Communications Director Mark Gearan, in a speech to talk show hosts, and counselor George Stephanopoulos, in their trade magazine, said mistakes ought to be corrected and there ought to be more balance in their programs.

When Clinton went after them himself last Friday it was, appropriately enough, on a talk show: He was interviewed on radio station KMOX as he flew to St. Louis. A question about public cynicism prompted him to complain first about negative news reports, then about "how much of talk radio is just a constant, unremitting drumbeat of negativism and cynicism."

Clinton said in the radio interview he had decided that instead of being frustrated, he'd be aggressive. It is an unequal debate.

"After I get off the radio today with you, Rush Limbaugh will have three hours to say whatever he wants," Clinton said, "and I won't have any opportunity to respond and there is no truth detector."

Limbaugh pronounced that unnecessary. "I am the truth detector," said the best-selling commentator, who broadcasts daily taunts at Clinton.

Ironically, this was on and about a medium Clinton sometimes uses to advantage.

"You know why I can stiff you on the press conferences?" he asked radio and television news correspondents two months after taking office, in banter with a point behind it. "Because Larry King liberated me by giving me to the American people directly."

During the campaign, Clinton made 47 appearances on network and syndicated television talk shows, nearly twice as many as the other two candidates in 1992, according to the Freedom Forum Media Studies Center. There were even more radio talk appearances.

■ Analysis

That didn't always spare him tough questioning. When a Phil Donahue interview turned confrontational, Clinton said: "I just don't let you guys filter me to the voters anymore."

With or without filters, he's not satisfied with the way his White House record is being portrayed now. "I think the people who communicate to the American people need to ask themselves, what are we telling the people?" he said. "Are we telling them the whole truth? Do they know what's good as well as what's bad in this country?"

Pregnant crash test dummy takes lumps for real mothers

DETROIT (AP) — Mrs. Crash Test Dummy is expecting.

The auto industry has developed a crash test dummy that represents a woman seven months pregnant.

"This one is probably the last member of the family to be studied in crash tests," said David Viano, a research scientist for General Motors Corp.

GM already runs crash tests on dummies representing infants, children and adults. It developed the pregnant test dummy with reseachers at the University of Michigan to measure how accidents affect mothers-to-be and fetuses.

She's 4-foot-11, 110 pounds and in her seventh month of pregnancy. Inside is a dummy fetus suspended in urethane gel that mimics amniotic fluid.

By adding sophisticated internal sensing devices, researchers hope to measure the forces that affect a fetus in a crash.

Even low-speed crashes can threaten the health of an unborn child, so reseachers are eager to find out how to best protect them.

"The real question becomes: What is the safest restraint system for the pregnancy itself?" Dr. Mark Pearlman, an assistant professor the University of Michigan and Viano's research partner, said Thursday.

Pearlman said that when a woman loses a pregnancy in a minor crash, it is usually caused by the separation of the placenta from the uterus.

Scientists don't completely understand what causes that to happen, but when it does, it deprives the fetus of oxygen.

The tests on the dummy began two weeks ago. A sled on a track is crashed while the dummy is seated in different configurations: unbelted, belted improperly, belted properly and with and without air bags.

"Because there are rare instances when people are injured by air bags," Pearlman said, "it's appropriate for us to do testing with the dummy tummy."

In the meantime, what should a pregnant woman use while riding in a car?

"It is clear that safety belts save lives," Pearlman said. "It's also clear that when you compare pregnant women who buckle and those that do not, those who buckle suffer fewer injuries in crashes."

Experts agree pregnant women should wear the lap portion of safety belts as low as possible, under the abdomen's bulge. The shoulder portion should be worn between the breasts and off to the side of the bulge.

Sadder-but-wiser inmates reach out to troubled teens

By Chris Whitley
Bryan-College Station Eagle

BRYAN — Dion was 18 years old when he went to prison.

Three years later, Dion and other Texas inmates are traveling to schools, talking to teenagers and children, and sending them a message: Don't make the same mistakes they made.

It's part of a state program called "Operation Kick-It." Nine inmates who currently serve in the Texas Department of Corrections relay their experiences and warn about the dangers of drugs, alcohol and peer pressure. No one in the program uses last names.

Dion, now 21, said he saw a similar program when he was in high school, but he never paid any attention to it. He says now he wishes he had.

"I was off at the top of the bleachers, just laughing and saying, 'Oh, it'll never happen to me,'" Dion said. Now, Dion serves ten years for burglary.

Two other inmates, Henry and Joe, speak candidly about what they have done in the past. Henry, 22, said the incentive is to help people who are at risk and offer a less-than-glamorous version of prison life.

"Even if all this talking that we do helps just one person, then maybe it would be worth it. Because I'd hate to see anybody go through this," said Henry, who received 15 years for burglary.

Henry started drinking when he was five. He said he grew up in a decent family, but he said his alcohol habit turned into an addiction to drugs. He talked about how he and his friends would steal money to afford his habit.

"When I was in the 10th grade, I started getting into drugs pretty heavy," Henry said. "That's when I started stealing stuff. We did it for the money to buy drugs, so that we could have fun and party."

'Even if all this talking that we do helps just one person, then maybe it would be worth it. Because I'd hate to see anybody go through this.'

—Henry prisoner

Program coordinator George Lively said approximately 85 percent of Texas inmates today have had some involvement with drugs and/or alcohol. He also said about that same amount have no high school diploma or GED equivalent.

"Operation Kick-It," which started operation in 1970, is not meant to be a scare tactic, Lively said. Instead, it is a way for children and adults to know the facts about what drug and alcohol abuse and breaking the law can do.

"We're not trying to scare anybody or threaten anybody," Lively said. "Our goal is to warn, inform and educate."

Joe had a boxing career. He won his first two fights in first-round knockouts and says he was on his way to success. Then, he went to a party, where he said friends enticed him to drink beer and smoke marijuana.

Before long, Joe said, he started using cocaine and stealing money to pay for it. He's now serving his third year of a ten-year sentence for delivery of cocaine.

"I find myself saying the same things when the lights go out at night, 'What am I doing in prison? I'm not supposed to be in prison.' I was a professional boxer with a very successful career, which I worked so hard to get. I was on my way to be somebody," Joe said.

Joe said he attributes his criminal past to his addiction to drugs and alcohol, which he said eventually became more important than his boxing or his family.

"Where did I go wrong? I went wrong the night I went out and decided to drink those two beers and smoke that marijuana cigarette," Joe said. "That was the same night I decided to come to prison, where I lost my freedom, my boxing career, and most of all, my relationship with my family."

Dion and Joe have both been approved for parole. Henry goes up for parole in October.

Henry said on the day he gets out of prison, the first thing he will do is see his mother.

Count off one to four: No. 4 to be battered woman

By GAIL K. BEIL
Marshall News Messenger

MARSHALL — Some years I was the public information officer for Sabine Valley Mental Health Mental Retardation. My secretary, Patty, was a battered wife.

At that time there was very little help for the hundreds of battered women in East Texas, so we decided to do something about it.

Personally, I came from a family where my father never even raised his voice in anger. Neither had my husband, so I knew nothing of the kind of anger and desire for control which leads to battering. But I was a public speaker by profession, and I knew how to locate the few resources which were then available. So Patty and I took our show on the road, talking to school classes, civic clubs, appearing to television and radio show, and being interviewed for newspapers. She talked about the violence and the beatings that sent her to the hospital and I talked about the remedies.

We always started our presentation by having all the women in our audience number off from one to four. Then we had all the number fours stand.

"Those of you who are standing represent the number of women in this room who will experience a beating at the hands of the man in your life," I would tell them.

Clearly they thought we were exaggerating. But for the next two years, Patty and I would get phone calls, "Remember when you did that one-in-four thing?" the voice would ask. "Well I'm number four, and I don't know what to do."

The most chilling call I ever got was from a well-educated voice, making a phone call from a pay phone, she said. She told me she had been divorced from a battering husband for seven years, and had been on the run ever since. [illegible] new husband would have to move every six months or so, she said, because her former husband would find them and threaten her. She told me she carried a bullet too close to her spine to be removed — the souvenir of their last encounter.

I had no reason not to believe her. I had heard too many stories too similar to doubt a word.

In the intervening 16 years, Patty established an organization called ETAFAF — the East Texas Association for Abused Families. It is now called the Woman's Center of East Texas. Based in Longview, it serves battered women in several counties in East Texas including Harrison, Panola and Marion. It is under-funded, of course, and perpetually over-crowded, I'm sure. But it exists, and it still meets critical needs. A battered wife may call 903-757-9308 for help 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

What the two of us were saying almost 20 years ago hasn't changed. At that time, one out of four marriages or relationships ended in battering, 80 to 90 percent of women who lived in a home where their mother was battered would be battered themselves and 90 percent of the men who abused their wives or girlfriends saw their father beat their mother and were often abused themselves. Alcohol and/or drugs were a big factor in the abusive relationship, and most of the time, the relationship lasted seven years.

An abusive man was very remorseful when he saw what he had done. The remorse didn't stop him from doing it again and again. Patty said she would get flowers, tears and presents when she ended up in the hospital. And beatings when she got home.

Some women, like the one on the pay phone, can't find a corner of the earth which is safe from a stalking, abusive man. Most stay because the physical abuse follows emotional abuse which serves to convince the women that they are worthless, cannot live without the man, and can't get away if they tried.

Q. Why are the old-fashioned smooth bore nozzles still used even with the advent of fog nozzles?

A. High rise fires are one reason. Smooth bores have features well suited for large fires. They can be set up as master streams which are unmanned streams placed where firefighter safety would be uncertain. The smooth bore allows greater reach, penetration and gallonage to be put on a fire. A two-inch diameter smooth bore can discharge nearly 1,100 gallons a minute.

Questions about emergency medical services or firefighting should be sent to Lights & Siren, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, 79702-1152.

B'nai Brith members back charity, knowledge down through the ages

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The B'nai Brith international service organization has distinguished itself on the North American continent for 150 years. In Midland and Odessa, the Jewish men's civic club has served the greater community, Jews and others alike, since the early 1960s.

B'nai Brith is Hebrew for Sons of the Covenant, and is the name selected for a charitable organization of civic-minded Jewish men (and now women), predating even the venerable Masons as the oldest benevolent organization, explained Midland dentist Frank Kasman.

On a national level, B'nai Brith assists even presidents on matters regarding the American Jewish population, said David

Kids' College at MC makes summer fly by

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

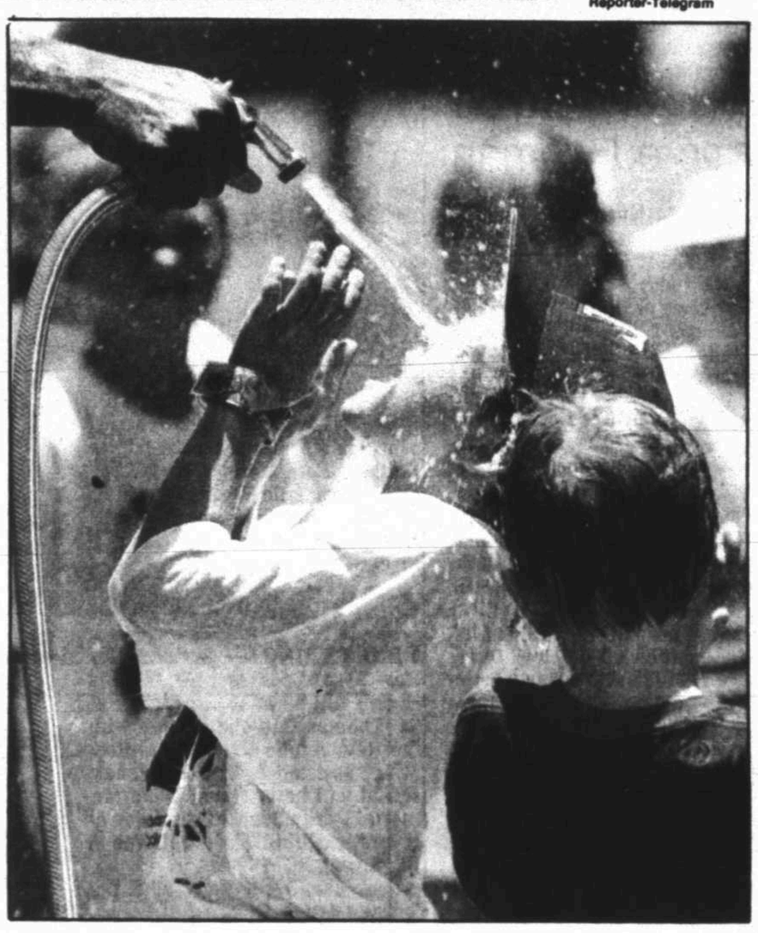

Three "roving reporters" delivered a campus newspaper to classrooms. Several youngsters watched a snake eat a tiny mouse. Even braver thrill seekers played hockey on in-line skates. Midland College basketball players conducted a relay involving putting on rubber gloves, fishing individually wrapped candy out of a bucket and opening the treat while wearing the cumbersome gloves. Elementary school students put on white makeup and performed skits as clowns, and Chase Montgomery, 8, landed in a wading pool after his team lost a match of tug-of-war.

Whew. It was the last day of the first session of Kids' College, the program which kept more than 800 youngsters busy the past two weeks. Despite a lingering heat wave, young "collegians" bustled about the Midland College campus learning everything from

Loverboy to rock W. Texas during speedway's firecracker 4th special

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

An enthusiastic Loverboy fan almost made off with Mike Reno's sunglasses this week in Amarillo. And he was wearing them at the time.

"The audience was stacked on top of each other shoulder high, so you couldn't see the spotlights," Reno said. "And they had to bring in a dozen extra security guards. One guy jumped right past the security guard and grabbed the glasses right off my face. It's no Tony Bennet show, if you know what I mean."

Reno wears sunglasses the first part of the show until his eyes grow accustomed to the lights shining in his face. And, had it not been for a quick security guard, he would have lost his favorite pair. But, in the process of rescuing the shades, the guard almost lost his hat.

"Some guy grabbed his cowboy hat, and I managed to run across the stage and retrieve the cowboy hat," Reno said. "So, we helped each other. He saved my Varnet, and I saved his Stetson."

After taking five years off, the Canadian rockers — original members Reno, Paul Dean, Doug Johnson, Matt Frenette and Scott Smith — are back on the road. Their travels bring them here Monday as the headliner in the West Texas Sizzle on the Fourth of July at Twin Cities Speedway. Also performing will be Night Ranger, Quiet Riot, Dangerous Toys, Dirty Looks and Love-Hate. Admission is $15, with children 6 and under admitted free. Tickets may be purchased at Endless Horizons, Odessa, and Modern Music, Midland. Gates open at noon.

OC president opts for unusual, unpaid working retirement

Staff Report

ODESSA — Philip Speegle, president of financially troubled Odessa College, announced Thursday that he is retiring but will continue to work indefinitely as OC's president in an effort to save the college money.

"I'm still going to be the president of the college," the 56-year-old Speegle said. "The board is still going to invest the same authority in me as it has. I will still be here everyday. People are not going to notice anything different."

Speegle said that — because of financial problems the college is experiencing — he decided he should reduce his $122,458 annual salary, and by retiring, he could save an even greater amount for the college.

Because he will qualify for the college's early retirement plan and will be paid for accumulated sick leave, Speegle's retirement will save the college about $85,000 next year and $107,151 annually after that. After Speegle's retirement Aug. 31, OC will pay him $1 per year. Under the

Austin metal, video award winner likes Mozart to Metallica

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

The Austin-based rockers in Dangerous Toys appreciate music that might surprise those enjoying their records.

"We have a saying: 'We're into everything from Mozart to Metallica,'" said drummer Mark Geary. "We check it all out. There's no sense keeping yourself from hearing something that might be good."

These rockers, all but one of whom are from Killeen, will perform here July Fourth for the West Texas Sizzle at Twin Cities Speedway. Gates open at noon and acts include Love-Hate, Dirty Looks, Night Ranger, Quiet Riot and Loverboy.

"That's a good Fourth-of-July thing: hang out and have a little fun," said Geary, adding that he "especially" likes outdoor concerts. "By the looks of the bands, it looks like a great rock 'n' roll show. If I was in Midland, this is something I would definitely be going to."

Fireworks frenzy fizzles when hand nearly falls off

Todd

About the last time I shot off a firecracker was out by Jay Gentry's country store in Pacio in 1940-something when I, trying to be a "big boy," learned humility.

I don't consciously recall celebrating any holiday. It must have been Independence Day or another holiday fit for popping fireworks.

I remember the day quite vividly. Now, I don't recall how we got the firecrackers, which back then came in dime packages. I remember buying them from time to time. Occasionally, we'd light one fuse tied to a package of firecrackers in hopes of getting that rapid-sound fire of war and weaponry: rat-a-tat-tat, ack-ack-ack, bang-bang-bang, boom-boom-boom.

In my mind's eye, I may have been fighting World World II, which I sort of glorified, especially those American boys who fought for freedom on land, sea and in the air.

The sounds of war were then still strong: the newsreel roar of fighting flying machines and tanks, the terrifying whistling of falling bombs and the sudden-death explosions, the cracking of rifle fire, the thundering fire of cannons on land and on sea, the rattling of machine-gun fire.

I don't recall, then, of ever hearing the agony of death or seeing or sensing the horror of war. War was just an exciting adventure for freedom's cause so that good might overcome evil.

And it wasn't until years later when I discovered that war wasn't imbued with shining glory and harmless excitement.

Years later, across the county line at Roxton, I, still young, became acquainted with a watchmaker who had served overseas in the Marine Corps. He couldn't walk. He was bound to a wheelchair and talked not about the war, his wounds, or his afflic-

Pro-lifers hold convention

HOUSTON (AP) — The apparent split of the Republican Party over the abortion issue and the position of the Clinton Administration and Hollywood will force the pro-life movement to rethink it's current strategy.

That's the word at opening day of the National Right To Life 1994 Convention which kicked off Thursday in Houston.

"We had a Republican Party that was openly championing a right to life platform. Today things are different," said Brent Bozell III, director of The Media Research Center in Alexandria, Va.

"Today we have the most dishonest and pro-abortion president in American history, today we have a Republican party that, let's face it, is running.

"Ten years ago the right-to-life movement was on a roll," Bozell said.

"We had a president who was right-to-life. We had momentum in the Senate,"

ROCKERS: Musician describes wild fans

(From 1B)

They have been surprised by the enthusiasm that has greeted them on this tour.

"It's almost like Beatlemania — and it's something we didn't expect, and its blowing our minds," Reno said, referring to the crowds in Las Vegas, Denver and Amarillo.

"We were like one of the top 10 bands playing in the '80s, and we had audiences that would sing a little bit here and there, like the chorus of the songs. Ever since we've started this tour, the audience sings every word to every song," Reno said, adding that he can't hear himself singing properly over his monitor on stage because his sound man can't turn the equipment up loud enough to overshadow the audience singing.

Loverboy released six albums in the 1980s, and Reno is looking forward to cutting another LP.

"We've all had a chance to mature. I think what your going to hear on the new album is our 17-year-old attitude we can't shake combined with the luxury of being able to take four or five years off to refuel the fire."

When the band chose to disband five years ago, it was by mutual agreement.

"We needed a break. We had been on the road for nearly 10 years. At that point, we had the choice of either going insane or going home so we went home for a while. I think when people see us, they will appreciate the fact that we had a little rest because it really charged the band up. The band is really ready to roll."

The players agreed to walk away when Loverboy was on top, Reno said.

"And it happened to come at a time when rap was coming out and became strong, and then in that five-year period has become part of the norm. And then right after that the sound of grunge came out and became part of the norm.

"And I think in the '90s, good, old-fashioned, straight-ahead rock 'n' roll is coming back strong. And I think that's one of the reasons this band has always been a very powerful band live. The rest was well needed and well appreciated. And we're happy as hell to be back. It's just been great."

Reno has had his hands full these past five years doing a job he calls the "best thing that ever happened to me" and one that "overshadows anything else in my life.

"I've been trying to be the best father I could be, and it hasn't been easy being a single father. I've got one child, Alex — he's 6½ now. He's my buddy. He's coming out to tour with us for a couple of weeks on the fifth of July. I think he'll get a kick out of traveling around and seeing what his dad does for a living. All he's ever seen is me in the studio writing and recording songs."

Although the guys are older, they are still in shape, said Reno who, in addition to riding and building Harley Davidsons, is an avid fisherman and an all-around outdoorsman.

These Canadian rockers still consider Texans to be among their biggest fans.

"Our biggest fans have always been from Texas so we do definitely appreciate the support fans have given us. That's not just idle talk. That's fact. It shows in record sales and attendance at concerts. And I love the way the women talk down there."

JEWISH: Local lodge gets national recognition

(From 1B)

Hoff, a retired Midland businessman. "It is the largest Jewish men's organization in the world," Hoff said.

The local lodge of B'nai Brith recently was recognized "as the outstanding" chapter of B'nai Brith in all of District 7, which stretches from Tennessee west to Texas. "Which is quite an honor, because we are one of the smallest lodges in the district," said Hoff, one of the founding members of the Midland lodge. The honor was bestowed upon the Permian Basin Lodge in a June convention in Houston.

The Midland lodge is about 45 members strong and donates all money raised — from its membership, annual carnival, bingo operations and other fund-raising events — to various local, state and national non-profit, service organizations. "Everything is done for charity," Kasman said.

Locally, the B'nai Brith donates money and other materials and services to Recordings for the Blind, Meals on Wheels, Hospice of the Southwest, the YMCA's After School Care Program, MHMR of the Permian Basin and other non-profit organizations including Boy's Clubs and Big Brothers-Big Sisters. "We've really supported the community across the board," Kasman said.

The local club sends area children to camp and funds organizations that provide scholarships to Jewish students. The local club doubled or tripled its usual donations to out-of-city organizations to help pay for synagogues and other structures damaged in flooding along the Mississippi River.

On a national level, B'nai Brith has established medical research centers for asthma, arthritis — as well as centers for other kinds of treatment. B'nai Brith established the Anti-Defamation League, which has worked to protect Jews from discrimination and has worked to promote understanding between people of all religions, Hoff said.

The B'nai Brith organization itself works to promote understanding between people of Jewish, Christian, Muslim, Buddhist, Hindu and other faiths, Hoff explained.

Each year on Christmas Day, B'nai Brith members fill volunteer positions at Midland Memorial Hospital and Odessa Medical Center, relieving those volunteers who are Christians of the need to come in on Christmas.

In May, Hoff was honored by the Permian Basin Lodge for his 50 years with the organization. Hoff has lived in Midland for the past 40 years and has been a member of the Chamber of Commerce for 35 of those years. He is also a member of the Lion's Club civic organization and is a past Lion of the Year. At a dinner in his honor, a mayoral proclamation extolled his efforts for the lodge and for the community.

Rock fans in the Hill Country are familiar with Dangerous Toys, who won the Austin Chronicle Awards for the Best Metal Band and Best Video in 1989/1990 as well as a Texas Music Association Award the same year. The band cut its first two albums on Columbia Records — "Dangerous Toys," perched on the edge of gold, and "Hellacious Acres," which features "Gimme Me No Lip" and "Line 'Em Up." They had two No. 1 video clips at MTV with "Teas'n Pleas'n" and "Scared."

And they won the Austin Chronicle Awards for the Best Metal Band and Best Video in 1989/1990 as well as a Texas Music Association Award the same year.

Since 1992, the group, which includes guitarist Scott Dalhover, guitarist Paul Lidel, singer Jason McMaster, bass player Mike Watson and Geary, has been divorced from Columbia Records due to irreconcilable differences, and is now recording on dos/DMZ Records, a sister label of Antone's Records.

"Dos/DMZ has given us the support and freedom to do exactly what we want to do," Geary said. "It's different working with a small independent rather than a huge corporate giant, but we definitely see dos/DMZ as a big plus for us. We are finally getting the individual attention that we always wanted while getting away from the shirt-and-tie, where's-my-check, I-know-what's-best-for-you-and-the-world kind of crap we were used to hearing."

Dangerous Toys' third album comes out July 15.

"And it is appropriately titled 'Pissed,' and that's a great title, I think," Geary said. "It just kind of sums it all up. 'Hard Luck Champion' is my favorite (song from the album) to play. It's different from anything else we have."

As for Dangerous Toys's music, Geary said, "You don't have to add adjectives like alternative or heavy metal. We're just straight, hard rock 'n' roll.

"People in Texas know what that means. Coming from Texas, we know what's up with Texas people so we don't have a hard time relating."

FUN: Courses go from sports to art computer keyboarding to twirling batons to wielding a golf club.

Those who missed out on the fun, need not despair, the same classes will be offered again July 18-28.

"The one requirement I asked of teachers, was for classes to be fun," said Donna Hewett, special events coordinator for Midland College. "The courses can have enrichment, but this is not summer school."

She said the element of fun is necessary to convince youngsters to come back into a school environment during the summer.

The sessions are set up so participants can attend up to three courses per day from 12:40-2 p.m., 2:10-3:30 p.m., 3:40-5 p.m. Students attending the sessions must have completed the first grade and be no older than having completed the sixth grade.

Courses have intriguing names such as "Candy Bag Scientist" (using a bag of candy to explore the scientific world), "Noah's Ark" (featuring live reptiles, mammals and insects, courtesy of Midge Erskine) and "Sorcerer's Apprentice" (making magic with chemistry).

Kim Marquez, 12, who will be in sixth grade next year, took the keyboarding course and "Reptiles, Rodents, Rabbits, and More."

As she deftly handled a tiny garter snake, she said she was "a little afraid" of the snakes the first class she encountered them. "We had Reptile Day, Lizard Day and Rodent Day," she said. "The first time I held a snake I was sort of shaky inside."

Under the Sea art — paintings made from using sponges cut into the shapes of frogs, tadpoles and fish — decorated classroom hallways.

"We have a tendency to mess up the campus a little, but Midland College is incredibly supportive of this," Ms. Hewett said. "I think that's why our program is well-known around the state. I go to conventions and hear other people say their colleges dread Kids' College. It's not like that here."

As a matter of fact, the summer program is a community endeavor. Local citizens teach courses in their field of expertise. MC basketball players and students work as assistants in some of the classes, and local high school students are hired as "runners" to round up stray youngsters and serve as campus guides.

The program director said bringing elementary pupils onto campus and having them meet college students takes the fear and mystery out of attending college. Some students, who have attended the program for years, come back to assist when they are too old to be participants.

"This is our 11th year with Kids' College. It's bigger every year," Ms. Hewett said, noting there is a paid staff of 75 offering 72 different courses. With all of the different sessions, it amounts to 221 course offerings.

Last year 1,352 youngsters attended both sessions. This summer, 1,403 have signed up. "And we still have room for more," Ms. Hewett said.

On Thursday parents were out in full force, videotaping and photographing classroom demonstrations.

Roving Reporters handed out their newspaper, "The K.C. Reporter-Telegram." One story, by reporter Terry Lynn Hunt, revealed that a Kids' College teacher taught a course and "admitted she needed the money this year because she is getting married."

Editorial writer Brian Dees, wrote in an opinion piece, that he attended the newspaper course to "beat the heat indoors and not turn into a pile of sludge."

"I mean, the other day, it got so hot in my aunt's car that it melted the box of an audio tape," he wrote.

Other reporters on campus said that the most popular class appeared to be Wild and Crazy Kids. It was the class which featured the tug-of-war that landed third grader Chase Montgomery in the pool. Asked if he cared to take the plunge again, he replied with a curt "nope."

Greenie the Clown (Linda Greene) was master of ceremonies for a demonstration by her young charges who had painted tennis shoes, donned white make-up and huge bowties.

Greenie applauded parents for raising children who have good self-esteem. "These kids have a wonderful self-image. They are not afraid to stand up and let everyone laugh at them," she said.

One future clown, who is preparing to move to Kuwait with her family, gathered addresses from her "clownie pen pals."

After parading into the classroom tooting horns, the young clowns did skits involving stuffed skunks, imaginary tightropes and a flea circus.

At the end of the session, Greenie handed out certificates to children, bestowing them with their official clown names, including Peppermint, Sleepy, Snickers, and Tootsie.

Gathering up their props, one youngster said it was difficult remembering lines for the skits. She said the easiest task was finding oversize shoes to paint. "I just got some out of my dad's closet," she said.

Kids' College course fees are $30 per course.

A few of the other courses teach American Sign Language, flag football, wood carving, weight training, cartooning, cheerleading, golf, American Red Cross babysitting, and Art from Egypt to the Renaissance.

COLLEGE: Retirement aids OC budget

(From 1B)

Teacher Retirement System and the college's early retirement plan, he will receive about $92,000 next year.

With his retirement, the college will still need to reduce next year's budget by about $300,000. Speegle said administrators are continuing to look for ways to trim expenses. The 1994-95 budget can not be finalized until mid-August when the college will know how much interest it will have to pay on the sale of revenue bonds.

Bob Clark, OC Board of Trustees president, said Speegle proposed the retirement to him about a week ago and the board discussed it in an executive session about personnel during Tuesday's regular board meeting. Some final details remain to be worked out.

"I think it's a very generous act on his part, in addition to being good for the college," Clark said. "Odessa College can't afford to lose him now. I think it's a good example. It's kind of unique. I've never heard of anything like this before."

Gary Johnson, immediate past president of the board, agreed.

"He's concerned about the institution and he's willing to do what he needs to do to get the institution back to where it needs to be," Johnson said. "He's more concerned about the institution than he is about himself."

Ralph McCain, the newest board member, said, "I think Dr. Speegle's retirement indicates his concern for the financial condition of the college and his desire to assist the college in improving its current financial problems. It also shows his long-term devotion to OC and its well-being."

From 1971-73, Speegle was president of the OC campus of the Permian Junior College System — a system which included Midland College — and has been OC President since 1973.

Speegle said he consulted the Teacher Retirement System and college attorney Richard Buck to ensure that he could continue working as president after retiring and learned Wednesday afternoon that it would be acceptable.

Under TRS rules, Speegle can not work for the college for one month after retiring. During September, he will be at the college as a volunteer and will not be college president that month, he said.

TODD: Quiet beats out explosions

tion. He, as I remember, was a gentle, kind and bright chap whose suffering I could not then imagine.

But back at the country store at Pacio, amid boys and girls of grade-school age, I recalled what some of the boys had done to bring about harmless shock, fear and laughter, or so I thought. They would toss firecrackers near the feet of the girls to surprise and scare them.

The mischievous ol' boys seemed to get a kick out of it. I doubt that the girls were as impressed with the boys as the boys were with themselves.

So, here was I, sort of pondering how to entertain myself and the boys. And the girls were so country, prettily so, ballpark tomboyish and shy like the lovely girl next door.

So, preparing to celebrate a blast, I struck a match with one hand and lit the firecracker in the other. In my daredevil excitement, I tossed the match and, unaware, held onto the sizzling firecracker. I awaited the explosion and the screams of the girls and the laughter of the boys.

Instead, I simultaneously heard the sound of a 500-pound bomb exploding and felt the stinging, throbbing shock of an injured hand soundly slapped by a holiday firecracker.

Like a injured trooper on the battlefield, I, no longer storming and advancing, retreated in tears and pain to the safety of my grandparents' house.

In time, I recovered and never against tossed a firecracker in mischief.

For me and my vicarious experience in war and hands-on experience at fireworks, there is no joy in celebrating historic holidays by shooting off fireworks and making banging, whistling and exploding noises.

It is with pleasure that I quietly celebrate life and the heroics and good deeds of my fellow Americans of all times: my brothers and sisters. My heart, now humbled, sings praises to their good works.

Add array of stars, stripes for festive flagpole cookies

Associated Press

For a spectacular Fourth of July dessert, serve chocolate "flagpole" cookies. They're easy to make. Just insert a wooden ice-cream stick into balls of cookie dough before baking. After the cookies have cooled, use your favorite red, white and blue decorating icing to create an array of stars and stripes designs.

CHOCOLATE FLAGPOLE COOKIES

¾ cup (1½ sticks) butter or margarine
1¼ cups sugar
¾ cup light corn syrup
1½ teaspoons vanilla extract
2 eggs, beaten
3½ cups all-purpose flour
¾ cup cocoa
¾ teaspoon baking soda
About 1-1½ dozen wooden ice-cream sticks
Decorator icing

Heat oven to 375 degrees. In medium saucepan, combine butter, sugar and corn syrup. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until butter is melted and sugar is dissolved. Pour mixture into large bowl; cool to lukewarm, about 15 minutes. Stir in vanilla and eggs.

In separate bowl, stir together flour, cocoa and baking soda. Gradually add to egg mixture. Stir until well blended. Cover, refrigerate dough until firm enough to handle, about 1 hour.

Lightly grease a cookie sheet. Shape refrigerated dough into 1¼-inch balls. Place balls of dough on prepared cookie sheet. Insert wooden ice-cream stick about halfway into each ball. Using fingers, flatten each evenly to about 3-inch diameter. Bake in preheated 375-degree oven for 6 to 8 minutes or just until set. Cool slightly; remove from cookie sheet to wire rack. Cool completely. Decorate as desired. Makes about 1½ dozen cookies.

Nutritional information per serving (1 cookie, without icing): 260 cal., 3 g pro., 42 g carbo., 9 g fat, 25 mg chol 140 mg sodium, 20 mg calcium.

Grill veggies for July 4th holiday

Associated Press

Warmer weather lures us back outside for grilling, especially on July 4th. Grilled vegetable fajitas have the flavors of hot-pepper Monterey Jack cheese. The vegetables are basted with a butter made with cilantro, chili powder, red pepper and lime juice. For a different taste, you can replace the Monterey Jack cheese with mozzarella and Parmesan cheeses. For this dish, use a buttery baste of fresh basil, garlic and balsamic vinegar instead of the cilantro butter.

Grilled Vegetable Fajitas

1 medium eggplant, cut lengthwise in ¼-inch thick slices
1 medium zucchini, cut lengthwise in ¼-inch thick slices
1 medium sweet red bell pepper, cut in wedges
1 bunch (about 6) scallions (green onions)
⅓ cup Southwestern Butter Baste (recipe below)
8 6-inch flour tortillas
8 small lettuce leaves
2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese with hot peppers

Lightly brush rack of outdoor grill or broiler pan with oil. Preheat grill or broiler. Place batches of vegetables on rack 3 to 4 inches from heat; cook until nearly crisp-tender, about 3 minutes. Turn and brush with Southwestern Butter Baste. Cook until crisp-tender, about 3 minutes longer; remove and place on a large cutting board; repeat with remaining vegetables.

Slice vegetables into bite-size pieces; place in a serving bowl. Drizzle with any remaining Southwestern Butter Baste; toss to coat.

For each serving: Heat flour tortillas according to package directions. Place two tortillas on an individual serving plate; top each with one lettuce leaf. Place ¾ cup vegetables and ¼ cup Monterey Jack cheese down the center of each tortilla. Fold flour tortillas toward center; repeat. Makes 4 servings.

Southwestern Butter Baste: In a small saucepan, melt ¼ cup (½ stick) butter. Add 2 tablespoons chopped cilantro, 1 teaspoon chili powder, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon ground red pepper. Cook and stir over low heat for about 2 minutes to blend flavors. Stir in 2 tablespoons lime juice; remove from heat. Makes 1-3rd cup.

Nutritional information per serving: 454 cal., 17 g pro., 28 g fat (54 percent calories from fat), 37 g carbo., 1,163 mg sodium, 76 mg chol.

For Grilled Italian Vegetable Fajitas, use 1¼ cups shredded mozzarella cheese and ¼ cup Parmesan cheese in place of the Monterey Jack cheese. Prepare as directed above, substituting Scampi Butter (recipe follows) for Southwestern Butter Baste.

Scampi Butter: In a small saucepan, melt ¼ cup (½ stick) butter. Add ¼ cup chopped fresh basil or parsley, 1 teaspoon minced garlic, 1 teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon black pepper. Cook and stir over low heat for 2 minutes to blend flavors. Stir in 2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar; remove from heat. Makes ½ cup.

FAMILY MATTERS

Widow's new relationship dampered by kid's reactions

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I am a 66-year-old widow with a big problem. My husband of almost 45 years died three years ago. I had a very difficult time getting over his death, but through prayer and lots of help from my friends, I did finally begin to get out some. That has turned out to be a problem because I met a younger man at one of the church functions and we fell head-over-heals in love. I never thought I could feel like this but I do!

May

We started dating in February and have seen each other almost constantly ever since. We just have so much in common, even though he is only 53.

I have been so happy that even my daughter noticed the last time she was here visiting. She wanted to know what was going on with me, and I foolishly told her. Instead of being happy for me, she was very upset and critical. She said that dad was "barely in the grave" and that I was acting like an "old fool." She also started asking lots of questions about Bob (not his real name) and came right out and said that she bet he was just interested in my money.

This was at Easter and I still haven't recovered from what she said. Since then, she has talked to her brother and he has called several times to express his concerns. Neither one is happy for me. They have their own lives in other cities and yet they don't want me to have my own life. I do have some money and property that their father left me, but it's only enough for me to live comfortably.

I have been very upset about all of this and have not made any plans to visit either of my children this summer. But I am missing seeing my grandchildren. I usually keep the grandchildren for a week so that my children can go on their own vacations. I haven't called them and they haven't called for almost a month. I do want to go visit them but should I do it if they are going to just attack me for dating Bob?

Bob has been very supportive of me throughout all of this and has encouraged me to call them and go visit. I don't have any intentions of marrying Bob or anyone in the near future, but I don't want my selfish children telling me what I should or shouldn't do. What can I do to get to visit my grandchildren and not have to listen to my children talk to me like I'm a child?
OLD ENOUGH

DEAR ENOUGH: Your children don't seem to recognized that you are a person as well as their parent. The most direct approach is to call each of your adult children and clearly state the position that you have outlined in your letter. Let them know that you would like to see them and your grandchildren; however, they are to respect your boundaries and not mention Bob.

You may find it helpful to write out your talk before calling, and read it to each of them. If they cannot agree to that request, be prepared to not visit them in your normal manner. You may have to arrange several short two- or three-day visits instead.

Adult children often are not prepared for their widowed parent to date and remarry; in fact, they often have difficulty thinking of their parent as attractive or possibly sexually active. They often assume that money is the only reason someone would be interested. However, with each life transition they must learn that life goes on in spite of their beliefs. You have every right to be happy at any age. I encourage you to continue to date Bob as long as the relationship is meaningful to you.

THE FOLLOWING ADDITIONAL GENTLE REMINDERS FOR BUSY PARENTS ARE PROVIDED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

- Share your positive feelings with your child — often.
- For a heart-to-heart talk, go to the child's room or to a quiet place.
- Comments such as "That's no big deal" or "You shouldn't feel that way" make your children believe that their feelings are not important to you.
- Through your daily words and actions, let your children know that they can't be replaced, that each child is very special to you and that you love and value them.
- Apologize to your child if you are wrong or have misinterpreted them or a situation.
- Make your statements to your child in a positive manner — for example use "Put your clothes in the hamper" rather than "Don't throw your clothes on the floor."

Now that summer is here we have more opportunities to interact with our children. Try to make time to play with your children to make summer a special time for the entire family.

DEAR ABBY

Rockets' red glare is best seen some distance away

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Will you please give your readers some advance Fourth of July holiday advice that could save them a great deal of pain and suffering and, perhaps, even save their lives? Leave fireworks to the professionals!

Van Buren

Last year, fireworks caused more than 12,000 injuries in the United States — and those are only the reported injuries. Countless others were treated by private physicians, or at home. Fireworks are not toys. Even sparklers, often thought to be harmless, stay dangerously hot after they've burned out.

Every year we hear horror stories about people who have lost their fingers, their eyesight, or suffered other disfiguring trauma as a result of fireworks. Sadly, most tragedies involve children. These life-threatening, permanent injuries should never have happened.

Abby, please ask your readers to make a smart decision this Fourth of July — celebrate our nation's independence sensibly. Stay away from people playing with fireworks; instead, attend a public fireworks diplay. — GEORGE MILLER, PRESIDENT, NATIONAL FIRE PROTECTION ASSOCIATION, QUINCY, MASS.

DEAR MR. MILLER: I'm pleased to share your holiday safety advice with my readers; forewarned is forearmed.

Readers, fireworks can result in tragic injuries to your children — or you — so please heed Mr. Miller's warning, and on this Fourth of July, leave the fireworks to the professionals.

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a reunion of my late husband's shipmates from World War II. (My husband passed away two years ago.) Most of us are in our late 60s and early 70s.

I was introduced to a very attractive gentleman, and we seemed to hit it off immediately. I was told that he had recently lost his wife. The chemistry between us was unbelievable. Had we been teen-agers, we probably would have run off together!

When we parted, he kissed me goodbye and said he wanted to see me again — soon. (The feeling was mutual.) We live 1,000 miles apart. When I got home, I wrote him a letter and as soon as he got it, he called me. It was apparent that he was as interested as I in continuing the relationship.

Then the bombshell dropped! He said we would have to be careful because he had been a widower for only six weeks when we met, and he didn't want to upset his — or his late wife's — family.

Abby, is there a proper waiting time for us older folks? We both had good marriages, but I know he's worried about what his children and friends might think.

I welcome your advice. — NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: If you want the "go" signal from me — you have it. No one knows how much time he or she has left.

However, it's important for your families to accept this sudden romance, so don't send up any skyrockets or Roman candles yet.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Peggy" to tell her boyfriend that she had slept with his brother was the dumbest advice you could ever give to someone.

Why in the world would she ruin a good relationship with "George," plus ruin the brothers' relationship with each other by telling tales out of school? Obviously, the brother's lips are sealed (as they should be), and he is not stirring up a thing. Peggy should also just seal her lips. If confronted, simply deny it. Just remember one thing: Nobody knows one thing unless you tell them. — BEEN THERE IN PORTLAND

DEAR BEEN THERE: Have you never heard that honesty is the best policy? Well, it is — it always has been, and always will be!

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for six months, and my in-laws insist that I call them "Ann" and "Roger."

I was raised to respect my elders by calling them "Mr." and "Mrs." and I don't feel comfortable calling them by their first names.

They have asked me not to call them "Mom" and "Dad."

Please advise me in your column, which they read religiously. — JULIE

DEAR JULIE: Respect their wishes. Call them Ann and Roger.

Survey: Retirement an anxious time

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two-thirds of Americans nearing retirement age anticipate serious problems trying to live comfortably on their retirement incomes, a survey shows.

"People age 45 to 59 approach their futures with anxiety," according to the summary of the survey entitled, "Concerns of Adults in Their Pre-Retirement Years."

"Few feel well prepared financially for the transitions ahead — retiring from a job, putting a child through college, helping to support a parent," it explained.

And, the survey found, "Virtually no one this age thinks government can be relied upon to help with the challenges ahead."

The survey was conducted for the American Association of Retired Persons by Princeton Survey Research Associates. It involved 1,223 adults aged 45 to 59 polled between last Nov. 11 and Dec. 5 and had a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The survey found that 39 percent of the respondents either had nothing saved or did not expect to have saved enough to meet even basic living expenses in retirement. Twenty-two percent believed they would have just enough to meet basic living expenses.

Only 11 percent believed that their savings would permit them to "live very comfortably" after retiring. An additional 24 percent said they expected to be able to meet expenses "with a little left over for extras."

Forty-six percent of workers aged 45 to 59 say they plan to retire before age 65, the survey showed. Twenty-eight percent plan to retire before the age of 70, 5 percent plan a later retirement and 15 percent say they will never retire.

Sixty-nine percent of workers aged 45 to 59 have begun to save for their retirement, although few believe that their current course of saving and investment will lead to very comfortable lifestyles. And 31 percent are relying on Social Security for most of their living expenses.

But another survey, by the Gallup Organization, found only 30 percent of the 2,002 adults polled in February and March expected Social Security benefits to be available throughout their retirement.

Social Security's trustees have warned that unless Congress intervenes, its trust funds will run out of money in 2029.

Contributing to the pre-retirement concerns expressed in the Princeton survey were:

— Twenty-three percent of the workers polled, excluding the self-employed, worry they may lose their jobs within the next year or so.

■ Twenty-eight percent have a child under 18. Fifty-seven percent of these are saving for their child's college education and 28 percent are already helping to pay college tuition.

■ Forty-seven percent have been unable to save as much because they have given financial help to a relative during the past five years.

■ Seventy percent have a parent, or in-law, still living who may become dependent on them for financial assistance, or need help at some point with the tasks of daily life.

■ Despite this potential need, only 18 percent feel "well-prepared" to provide financial support. Thirty-eight percent are "unprepared" and 44 percent are only "somewhat prepared."

Chances of fall rise as illness progresses

By Dr. Michael Freedman

NEW YORK (AP) — Falls, particularly those occurring in the household, remain one of the leading causes of permanent injury or death for the elderly, a subject often discussed when ailing elderly people are the topic of conversation.

Loss of equilibrium is one of the most frequently encountered problems of aging. When an elderly person also is ill, the chance of a fall increases as the illness progresses, imposing even greater responsibilities on the caregiver who must continually gauge the patient's physical and mental condition.

A fall often leads to a fractured hip, shoulder, wrist, pelvis, skull or other parts of the body. In addition, it also may be accompanied by serious soft tissue damage as well. A head injury, for example, could cause a dangerous subdural hematoma, an accumulation of blood between the brain and the skull.

If an elderly person is prone to falls, the caregiver should collect as much information as possible about the circumstances and report it to his or her physician. When does falling occur? During the day? At night? During or after particular activities? How often?

Many causes of falls, such as a cluttered living space, can easily be prevented. But there are a number of other less obvious causes that produce falls, and for which caregivers should be alert. For example:

■ Causes related to the feet and legs, such as swollen ankles, ill-fitting shoes, loss of sensation in the feet or legs because of nerve dysfunction, vascular problems or arthritis. These factors all influence the pattern of walking and decrease stability.

■ Fainting or giddiness from certain medications, poor eating habits or a sudden drop in blood pressure.

■ Lack of sleep or tiredness from drinking and eating too little.

■ Poor vision, failure to wear eyeglasses or from inadequate lighting during the day or at night or from eye problems such as cataracts.

Incidentally, with aging the keenness of light and color perception decreases, and adjusting to the dark becomes more difficult as a result of decreased vision in dim light.

The caregiver should look for specific disabilities, especially those occurring with specific motions. Some older people, for example, may have difficulty with reaching as a result of impaired vision or arm mobility. Others may have difficulty even when trying to sit down because of difficulties through loss of positional reflexes.

Importantly, many falls could be prevented by improving the older person's environment, such as fixing a loose carpet, getting rid of wobbly furniture, fixing a loose tile and providing nonslip mats for the bathtub.

Dr. Michael Freedman is the Diane and Arthur Belfer Professor of Geriatric Medicine and Director of Geriatrics at New York University Medical Center.

EPA gives Texas grant for border settlements probe

AUSTIN (AP) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has awarded Texas a $150,000 grant to assist in the investigation and litigation against illegal colonias along the Texas-Mexico border.

Attorney General Dan Morales said Thursday that the money would be used by his colonias strike force to prosecute the colonias, which often violate environmental laws and pose health hazards to residents.

Some of the settlements lack sanitary water and sewer systems and have no provisions for the collection and disposal of garbage.

"Colonias have proliferated along the border, where developers promise the American dream but deliver nothing but sand and rocks to those who can afford little else," Morales said.

"We cannot sue the thousands of illegal developments along the border. However, our efforts will be targeted to discourage the development of projects that do not comply with state and local laws and regulations."

State lawmakers seek sobriety checkpoints

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers on Thursday proposed legislation that would sanction sobriety checkpoints in Texas.

Earlier this month, the state Court of Criminal Appeals ruled 6-3 that sobriety checkpoints are unreasonable and unconstitutional under the Fourth Amendment because a governing body hadn't authorized a statewide procedure.

Previously, cities and law enforcement agencies have developed their own policies for stopping motorists who may be intoxicated at sobriety checkpoints.

They have been used infrequently in Texas because authorities have feared their cases will be thrown out of court.

By proposing a single, statewide policy that would be sanctioned by the Legislature, Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, and Rep. Will Hartnett, R-Dallas, the bill sponsors, said they hope to answer the court's concerns.

"We think we have taken care of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals objections just by sanctioning (the checkpoints), and we take care of any objections the U.S. Supreme Court might have in regard to the Fourth Amendment by making this a reasonable search," Sibley said.

Sibley maintains the searches will be deemed reasonable because the legislation requires that:

- Officers must have reasonable suspicion or probable cause in order to pull over a driver or require a sobriety test.
- Motorists may not be delayed more than 10 minutes, and a routine inquiry may not last more than two minutes.
- Law enforcement agencies must publicize the fact that a sobriety checkpoint will occur.
- Officers must be in uniform.
- In the absence of compelling circumstances, a checkpoint may not last more than four hours or occur more than twice a week at the same location.

Attorney Jim Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Rights Project in Austin, said the checkpoints are unconstitutional no matter how many precautions are taken.

"To be able to stop people and search them is basically infringing on everyone's rights," Harrington said.

"Albeit a worthy goal to get drunken drivers off the streets, that's like saying we will search every house in the neighborhood because it will be safer. That's true. But to suspend the normal search warrant procedure is a great concern," he said.

Officials said the checkpoint locations would be selected, in part, based upon areas with high drunken driver incident reports.

Harrington said, "All the cops need to do is post themselves in those areas and look for them. It's not that they can't enforce the laws. They want an easier way to do it."

Robbers stalk travelers on info-highways

AUSTIN (AP) — The quarter-million Texans who travel on the ultramodern information superhighway were warned Thursday to watch out for an old menace: highway robbery.

A variety of illegal and abusive investment schemes — including stock manipulation and pyramid scams — thrive on the computer networks and bulletin board services to which 252,000 Texans already subscribe, said State Securities Commissioner Denise Voigt Crawford.

"Unwary Texas residents who take this wrong turn off the information superhighway will end up getting cleaned out by high-tech schemers," she said.

"It is vitally important that the many potential victims here become aware of this new problem, arm themselves with self-defense tactics and know that they can turn to this office for help if they need it," the commissioner said.

Ms. Crawford joined regulators in other states in issuing warnings due to the growing number of scams perpetrated via connected computer networks, such as the Internet, and the commercial computer bulletin board services.

People use these services and the Internet to conduct conversations via personal computers. Many of the talks are accessible for all to read, and con artists have staged "private" conversations that they intend to be read by others.

The Texas State Securities Board is investigating a case in which an Austin-area retiree sent $10,000 to an out-of-state man who promoted himself on a major bulletin board service as a skilled money manager. The mutual fund he touted didn't exist, and he apparently pocketed the money

"The danger here is that cyberspace (as on-line computer services are called), which could be a beneficial way to do a better job of informing themselves, will instead be discredited as a haven for fast-buck artists," Ms. Crawford said.

The Securities Board issued a special investor bulletin Thursday that details major types of computer service investment fraud schemes. Among them:

- Manipulation of obscure, thinly-traded stocks, such as Canadian gold, silver and diamond mining stocks. "Through a combination of puffery, speculation and breathless claims of supposedly inside information about pending announcements, product innovations and new contracts, the schemers seek to run up the price of a stock," the bulletin says.
- Misconduct by phony unlicensed brokers or investment advisers.
- Promoters who don't disclose their interests. "You have no way of knowing if the person involved is a company official, PR representative or market-making brokerage firm. Has the person hyping the stock been paid to do so, and, if so, has that fact been disclosed?"
- Promotion of "exotic" scams. "Messages have been posted promoting a variety of highly suspect, unregistered investment deals ... as well as flat-out rip-offs" such as pyramid schemes, takeoffs on the chain letter and others.

Recommendations from the securities board on avoiding fraudulent investment schemes include:

- Don't expect to get rich quick.
- Don't assume that your online computer service polices investment bulletin boards.
- Don't buy thinly-traded, little-known stocks just on the basis of computer hype.
- Don't act on the advice of someone who hides his or her identity.
- Don't get suckered by claims about "inside information," including pending contracts and new products.
- Be on the lookout for conflicts of interest. "A growing number of those who analyze stocks online are receiving cash or stocks in exchange for making glowing comments about the companies in question."

Piniella waiting

SEATTLE — Seattle Mariners manager Lou Piniella will have to wait for American League president Bobby Brown to return to New York to find out whether he'll be punished for his tirade on Wednesday night.

"We have not received the umpire's report or the video of the incident," league spokeswoman Phyllis Merhige said Thursday. "Dr. Brown is going out of town so it could be a few days before we have a decision."

Piniella was ejected in the third inning against Detroit after a five-minute outburst during which he threw second base and his cap into the outfield.

The tale of the tape on Piniella's hat toss was about 40 feet, the base went about 20 feet.

With one out and two on, Seattle's Mike Blowers hit a deep drive to right field that was initially ruled a home run.

Pacers trade

INDIANAPOLIS — The reshaping of the Indiana Pacers continued Thursday with a swap of point guards and draft picks with the Los Angeles Clippers.

In a deal agreed to Wednesday, but announced Thursday, the Pacers sent Pooh Richardson, forward Malik Sealy and the rights to Eric Piatkowski to the Clippers for Mark Jackson and the rights to Greg Minor.

"I've talked to Pooh a lot and the consensus of our opinions together was that it wasn't working out, for whatever the reasons," Pacers general manager Donnie Walsh said Thursday, adding Richardson had said he would prefer getting back to his hometown of Los Angeles.

"I told him that's where I'll try to get you. ... If the Clippers weren't willing to part with Mark Jackson that was going to make it more difficult."

Golden State trade

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Golden State Warriors would send Sarunas Marciulionis and Byron Houston to Seattle for Ricky Pierce and Carlos Rogers, the SuperSonics' No. 1 draft pick, according to a published report.

The San Francisco Examiner reported Thursday the deal would go through once legal and technical aspects were resolved, a reference to a freeze on new or adjusted contracts in the NBA until at least July 8. The moratorium is the result of a temporary restraining order issued in U.S. District Court in New York in response to an NBA Players Association antitrust suit against the league.

Warriors president Dan Finnane confirmed Wednesday night that "something was in the works" but declined to be specific.

Wichita boosts series lead

■ New faces, improved pitching keep Wichita at the top of the Texas League Western Division.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

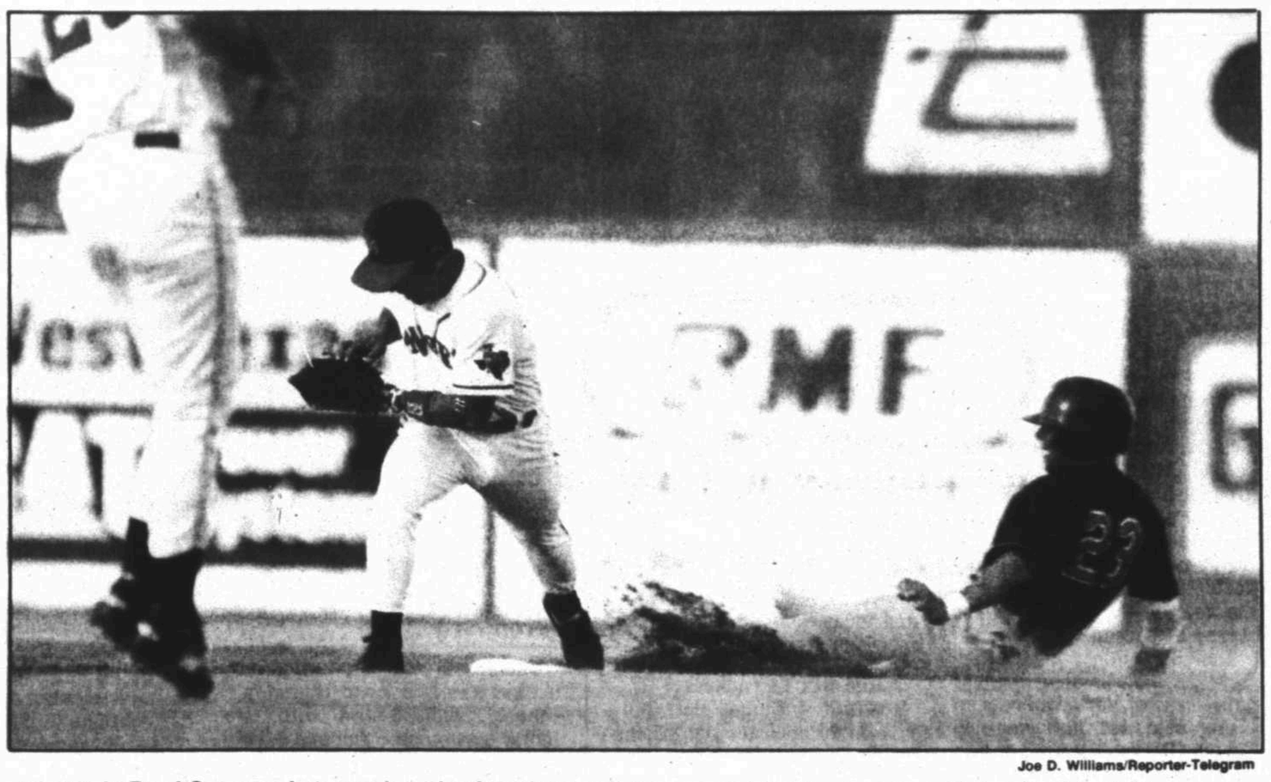

Wichita's Nate Cromwell seems to fit in just fine as a starting pitcher.

Once a reliever, Cromwell was changed to a starter and has given up only three earned runs from that position. None of them came Thursday night as the Wranglers continued their assault on Midland with Cromwell giving up only four hits and two unearned runs to hand the Angels a 6-2 loss at Christensen Stadium.

Wichita, it seems, is a very different team than when Midland took 11 of 16 first-half games from the Wranglers as they finished fourth. Part is due to improved pitching like that from Cromwell on Thursday and Glenn Dishman's near no-hitter on Wednesday.

But Cromwell was quick to point out that recent changes in the lineup, including the promotion of Jason Thompson from Rancho Cucamonga in the California League, have made a big difference in his confidence level.

U.S.A. tries kicks

■ The U.S. team would love to get into a shootout with powerful Brazil Monday.

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — If Monday's game between the United States and Brazil comes down to penalty kicks, the Americans have a 50-50 chance. So each afternoon, U.S. players practice shooting from the mark.

"We're prepared, it's something that can happen," U.S. goalkeeper Tony Meola said Thursday. "I'm sure Brazil doesn't want to be part of a penalty kick shootout in the final 16. They want to win in regulation."

The United States has been involved in just two shootouts in the last 23 years, beating Honduras 4-3 after a scoreless tie in the semifinal of the 1991 CONCACAF Gold Cup and losing to Denmark 4-2 after a scoreless tie this February during an exhibition tournament in Hong Kong.

"If it comes down to penalty kicks, it means we played a great game," U.S. coach Bora Milutinovic said.

Starting in the second round of the World Cup, if a game is tied after regulation and 30 minutes of overtime, five players from each team would alternate taking penalty kicks from the 12-yard spot. If the teams remained tied after five kicks each, the game would be decided by a sudden-death shootout — one team makes a shot in a round and the other team doesn't.

U.S. coaches said they would decide the order of shooters before the game. Asked whom he would consider, Milutinovic mentioned defender Marcelo Balboa, midfielders Thomas Dooley and Tab Ramos, and forwards Ernie Stewart and Eric Wynalda.

American players said they intended to study the penalty kick tendencies of Claudio Taffarel, Brazil's starting goalkeeper.

"Penalty kicks is sort of a flip of the coin," defender Alexi Lalas said. "I'm extremely confident in our goalkeeper. I hope it doesn't come down to penalty kicks."

Shooters make about 80-90 percent of penalty kicks. But there have been instances when famous stars failed to connect: Diego Maradona of Argentina against Yugoslavia in the quarterfinals of the 1990 World Cup and Marco Van Basten of the Netherlands, a three-time European player of the year, against Denmark in the semifinals of the 1992 European Championship.

■ After Diego Maradona is banned from play, Argentina get its first loss, 2-0 to Bulgaria.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Life without Diego Maradona began for Argentina on Thursday night. It looks like it's going to be a little dull around the house for a while.

Maradona

It might also be time to greet a new generation of stars.

With their 33-year-old pacesetter banned earlier in the day in the World Cup's first drug scandal in 16 years, the usually fluid Argentines sputtered and fell 2-0 to Bulgaria at the Cotton Bowl.

They outshot Bulgaria 20-10, and played the last 25 minutes with a man advantage after a Bulgarian player was expelled. But they never cracked through.

That cost them the Group D title, which went to Nigeria. Bulgaria was second, thanks to a goal in injury time by Nasko Sirakov. Argentina dropped to third.

Both Bulgaria and Argentina advanced to the second round, but certainly not the way expected as recently as 24 hours ago.

Argentina, which outscored its first two opponents 6-1 and dictated play, had a 6-3 goals differential, the same as

WIMBLEDON, England — What began as a sentimental journey for Martina Navratilova turned into the fulfillment of a dream, one last dance on her beloved Centre Court grass, one last shot at a 10th Wimbledon title.

Navratilova, arguably the greatest tennis player in history, goes into her 32nd Grand Slam final on Saturday against Conchita Martinez of Spain, appearing in her first.

"It's going to be a happy goodbye either way," Navratilova said. "I'm going to be busting my gut out there to win, but this is what I wanted, to go out in style. And either way, I'm going out in style. I'm going to absolutely enjoy every moment."

On a day of high drama in the semifinals Thursday, Navratilova won a match she dubbed the "Aspen Open," beating Colorado neighbor Gigi Fernandez, 6-4, 7-6 (8-6), before Martinez edged Lori McNeil, 3-6, 6-2, 10-8.

The chances of Navratilova reaching the final of her 22nd Wimbledon — she played her first when Martinez was an infant — seemed remote when she arrived two weeks ago after a miserable year. Navratilova hit a low point last month when she smashed her racket and dumped it in the trash after losing in the first round of the French Open.

But the draw at Wimbledon parted for Navratilova like the Red Sea before Charlton Heston, and suddenly her quixotic quest at 37 seemed like a script for a tennis epic. McNeil knocked out five-time champion Steffi Graf in the opening round, Zina Garrison Jackson beat No. 2 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in the fourth round, and the way was clear for Navratilova to regain the championship she cherishes most and last won in 1990.

The serve-and-volley style that is part of Navratilova's legacy to women's tennis will contrast Saturday with the baseline bashing of Martinez, the first Spanish woman to reach the Wimbledon final since Lili de Alvarez, runner-up in 1926-27-28.

Martina Navratilova ...goes for No. 10 Saturday.

"The Spanish, where I grew up in Spain, they say the grass was for cows," said Martinez, who developed her game on clay. She's content on the grass now, and is pumped up after getting noticed by Spanish King Juan Carlos, a spectator at the French Open when Sanchez Vicario and Sergi Bruguera swept the titles.

"He said now it's only Conchita missing, we'll have to help her to get there."

Tonya loses skating title

By Bob Baum
AP Sports Writer

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — The U.S. Figure Skating Association finally got its chance to pronounce judgment on Tonya Harding on Thursday, and the verdict was harsh.

She was stripped of the national championship she won Jan. 8 in Detroit and was banned from the association for life.

The decision by a five-member disciplinary panel appointed by the association was unanimous.

Harding's actions surrounding the Jan. 6 attack on her rival Nancy Kerrigan "evidence a clear disregard for fairness, good sportsmanship and ethical behavior," the panel said.

William Hybl, the former U.S. Olympic Committee president who chaired the panel, said Harding's March 16 admission that she conspired to hinder prosecution of those responsible for the attack was the most important factor in the decision. But the panel believed Harding's involvement went much further.

"By a preponderance of the evidence, the panel did conclude that she had pri-

Big three strike out; Texas loses

MINNEAPOLIS — Rick Aguilera made the Texas Rangers look bad, which was very good considering the enormity of the task.

tied the game with a two-run pinch triple and scored on a groundout as Boston got three runs in the eighth for a victory over New York.

The win ended Boston's Fenway Park losing streak at 12 games, two less than the record set in 1926. It also stopped New York's winning streak at eight games, two fewer than its longest this season.

Pinch-hitter Otis Nixon led off the eighth with a walk against Bob Wickman (3-3) and stole second. After Wes Chamberlain grounded out, Scott Cooper was safe on an error by third baseman Wade Boggs, who stayed in the game after grounding into a double play as a pinch-hitter in the top of the eighth. Nixon stayed at second.

Then Berryhill batted for Rich Rowland — hitless in three at bats — and drilled a ball to deep center field, scoring Nixon and Cooper. Berryhill scored on Lee Tinsley's soft groundout to first baseman Mike Stanley.

Indians 4, Orioles 2

CLEVELAND — Albert Belle hit a tiebreaking two-run home run off Mark Williamson in the eighth inning Thursday night as the Cleveland Indians beat the Baltimore Orioles 4-2.

It marked the 10th time the Indians have won at Jacobs Field in their last at bat. They gained a split of the four-game series with the Orioles.

Mark Clark (9-2) allowed two runs and 10 hits in his fourth complete game. He's 6-1 at home this year and 12-3 in 21 starts since making a change in his windup following a stint on the disabled list last year.

Brewers 9, Blue Jays 2

MILWAUKEE — Bill Wegman remained unbeaten this season, and Turner Ward snapped an 0-for-19 slump with a double and triple for three RBIs as Milwaukee beat Toronto.

Wegman gave up one earned run on five hits in eight innings. He walked one and struck out four. His 6-0 start is the Brewers' best since Eduardo Rodriguez won his first seven decisions in 1975.

Red Sox 6, Yankees 5

BOSTON — Damon Berryhill save in 20 opportunities as the Minnesota Twins defeated Texas 6-4 Thursday.

Aguilera struck out Jose Canseco, Will Clark and Juan Gonzales less than a day after allowing two runs in the ninth and blowing his second save in three tries.

"Those weren't the first three guys I'd choose to face in the ninth," Aguilera said. "But now that the job is done it sure feels good.

White Sox 3, Royals 2

CHICAGO — Frank Thomas hit his 29th home run and Julio Franco went 4-for-4 night to lead Chicago to a victory over Kansas City.

The win was Chicago's eighth in its last nine games.

Scott Sanderson (7-2) scattered 12 hits, struck out two, didn't walk a batter, but hit one, while working into the eighth inning for his third straight victory.

and Luis Gonzalez hit a three-run homer Thursday night, leading the Houston Astros to a 5-3 win over the Cubs.

Harnisch (3-4), who was activated before the game after being on the disabled list since May 23 with a partial tear of in his right shoulder, gave up two runs, struck out seven and didn't yield a walk.

Todd Jones pitched two hitless innings for his second save.

Gonzalez hit his fifth homer of the season in the sixth to give the Astros a 4-2 lead.

Kevin Foster (2-2) gave up four runs and six hits in 5⅔ innings. He struck out six and walked three.

Glenallen Hill homered for the third straight game for the Cubs.

Trailing 2-1, Jeff Bagwell doubled and Kevin Bass walked before Gonzalez hit his first homer since May 14 over the the right-field wall.

Chicago cut it to 4-3 in the seventh when Sammy Sosa walked, moved to second on Steve Buechele's single and scored on Rick Wilkins' base hit.

Dodgers 4, Phillies 3

LOS ANGELES — Delino DeShields lined a three-run double off Doug Jones with one out in the ninth inning to rally Los Angeles to a victory over Philadelphia.

Rudy Seanez (1-1) got the victory with one inning of relief, despite allowing a run on Kevin Stocker's suicide squeeze bunt in the top of the ninth.

Braves 8, Marlins 3

MIAMI — Kent Mercker stymied Florida for six innings and Ryan Klesko hit a controversial two-run home run as Atlanta beat the Marlins.

Mercker's first pitch was drilled by Chuck Carr for a double, but after that the left-hander retired the next 11 batters — five by strikeout.

Mercker (7-2) won for the fourth time in his last five starts, allowing two run and seven hits. He was relieved in the seventh by Mark Wohlers after allowing back-to-back hits that yielded the Marlins' second run.

Cardinals 9, Rockies 7

ST. LOUIS — Jose Oquendo, who entered the game following a bench-clearing brawl, singled in the go-ahead runs in the seventh inning to give St. Louis a victory over Colorado.

Geronimo Pena and Mark Whiten each homered for the Cardinals, who overcame a 6-0 deficit.

Expos 7, Giants 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Juan Bell hit a two-run homer and Jeff Fassero allowed two runs in 7⅓ innings, leading Montreal to a victory over San Francisco.

Fassero (6-5) won his first game since pitching a near no-hitter June 13. He scattered five hits, including Barry Bonds' 21st homer in the eighth, struck out seven and walked four. Mel Rojas recorded the last four outs.

Pirates 6, Reds 4

PITTSBURGH — Orlando Merced continued to excel with runners on base, driving in the go-ahead runs with a two-run double in a four-run eighth inning and Pittsburgh stayed hot with a victory over Cincinnati.

Carlos Garcia twice scored after singling and advancing on an error for the Pirates, who have won eight straight home games and eight of their last 10 overall to creep within 5½ games of the division-leading Reds in the NL Central.

Mets 3, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — Todd Hundley's hit-and-run double scored the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and rookie Rico Brogna homered for the second straight game as New York ended a five-game losing streak with a win over San Diego.

Hundley's hit made a winner of Bret Saberhagen (8-4), who allowed one run and five hits in seven innings. He struck out nine and walked one.

Padres rookie Joey Hamilton (4-3) matched Saberhagen by allowing five hits in 7⅓ innings, but allowed three runs.

Hamilton struck out a career-high seven and walked three.

ANGELS: Thompson 3-for-4 in Wichita win

(From 1C)

Thompson, who had batted .200 in eight games prior to Thursday's contest, went 3-for-4 with two RBIs, a solo home run and a double to lead the Wichita offense.

"It's kind of nice to be early in the game and you've got a lead so all you have to do is worry about protecting that lead," Cromwell said. "It's more relaxing. That way you can kind of play mind games with yourself about not letting anymore runs score instead of worrying if they score, you might lose."

Despite losing all but one of a six-game series with Midland to end the first half in Wichita, the Wranglers have surged to start the second half and now find themselves in first place of the Western Division — two games ahead of second-place El Paso. Midland and San Antonio are three games back tied for third.

Thompson said he felt like a winning attitude from Rancho Cucamonga was carrying over into the Wichita lineup.

"They brought up five guys from Rancho and we won down there...so hopefully that will carry over," Thompson said. "I felt pretty good today. I've been struggling a little bit but I've made a couple of adjustments...and hopefully I can continue to put it away."

The Wranglers looked like a first-place team Thursday, as they took their third win in four games of the six-game series. The best the Angels can hope for is to even the series at 3-3 if they win today and Saturday.

The Wranglers jumped to a 5-0 lead with one score each in the second and third and then took advantage of a throwing error by J.D. Ramirez to score two of their three runs in the fourth.

The best Midland could do was score twice in the sixth. Center fielder Marquis Riley reached base on an error and then stole second. Tim Harkrider drew a walk before Ty Boykin singled to drive in Riley and pull the Angels to within 5-1. Mike Wolff singled but a throwing error by Sean Drinkwater allowed Harkrider to score.

John Fritz (2-2) was the loser for the Angels, giving up eight hits, all six runs (five earned) and striking out seven in seven-plus innings of work. Cam Cairncross pitched one inning of relief for the Wranglers and picked up his first save.

ANGEL NOTES: Midland pitcher Korey Keling (7-5, 4.14 ERA), named to the American League Double-A All-Star team, will start tonight against Greg Keagle (0-0, 2.70). Wichita's Brad Gennaro is on the National League All-Star roster...

MARTINA: Martinez is 3-1 versus Navratilova

(From 1C)

Martinez said. "He didn't have to say that, but it made me so happy."

Martinez has a 3-1 career record against Navratilova, with all the matches played on clay at the Italian Open.

"I don't have anything to lose," said Martinez, 22. "Just go for it."

McNeil impressed everyone in reaching the semis, and came up just a little short in her bid to become the first unseeded woman in the Open era to make the final.

"I'm happy that I fought the whole match," she said.

There was little of the old quickness and power evident in Navratilova's performance against Fernandez, but there was plenty of grass-court savvy and a sense of how to play the most important points. And when it got down to the end, the aggressive, go-for-broke style of both players was electrifying.

"I played well enough," Navratilova said, satisfied with just that. "I didn't play great, but I made shots when I had to. I'm very, very happy with playing well on the big points, especially in the tiebreak."

Fernandez, her strained left hamstring heavily taped, seemed to be rolling over meekly at the start of the match as Navratilova jumped to a 5-1 lead.

"I knew it wasn't going to be a cruise, even up 5-1," Navratilova said.

"It took me five or six games to adjust to the environment," Fernandez said. "Then I just tried to pretend that we were practicing at the Aspen Club and not think that we were at Centre Court, Wimbledon.

"I couldn't run across the court full speed. That's when it would hurt. But I could shuffle, so I could get in."

As Fernandez warmed up and calmed down, she began to control the match, breaking Navratilova and pushing the first set to 5-4. But Navratilova got some help from a ball that ticked the net cord and trickled over as she held service to close out the set.

Navratilova labored mightily in the second set, overcoming six break-points before yielding on the seventh to fall behind 4-2. But Navratilova produced one of the finest shots of the match, a backhand down the line after charging in from the baseline to scoop up a drop volley and get back the break.

Heavy hitters pack men's semis

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Four heavy hitters equipped with serves that have soared as fast as 136 mph are in Friday's men's semifinals at Wimbledon.

Defending champion Pete Sampras, enjoying a straight-sets cruise through The Championships, meets Todd Martin, who beat him in the pre-Wimbledon warmup at Queens Club, and three-time champion Boris Becker, the center of controversy, plays Goran Ivanisevic.

All have serves that regularly rip over the net at better than 100 mph. At Wimbledon, Ivanisevic has hit 136 and Becker 130.

Sampras, seeking a second straight Wimbledon title, has yet to drop a set and was rarely threatened in his first five matches. He will retain his No. 1 ranking, regardless of Friday's outcome.

"I feel that if I play my best, I'm very tough to beat," he said. "I have filled some holes in my game. I still make an error, a stupid error sometimes, but I've cut that out of my game."

If there are gaps in Sampras' game, they are well hidden. His serves have hit a maximum of 128 mph and he comes into the match against Martin with 87 aces. In the quarterfinals against Michael Chang, he was nearly flawless.

"There was a moment there when everything just clicked, which is the most fun for a player," Sampras said. "I didn't feel like I was in a zone, but I was getting there."

This is Sampras' third straight trip to the Wimbledon semis. He lost to Ivanisevic in 1992, then beat Becker on his way to the title last year. Overall, his record on the grass courts of the All England Club is 18-4.

Sampras is seeking to become the first Wimbledon winner to repeat since Becker in 1985-86 and the first since Bjorn Borg in 1976 to sail through The Championships without losing a set.

Conversely, Martin has become Wimbledon's marathon man, winning four five-set matches, an Open era record for Wimbledon. Only in the second round, where he beat Patrik Kuhnen in straight sets, has Martin not taken a match to the limit.

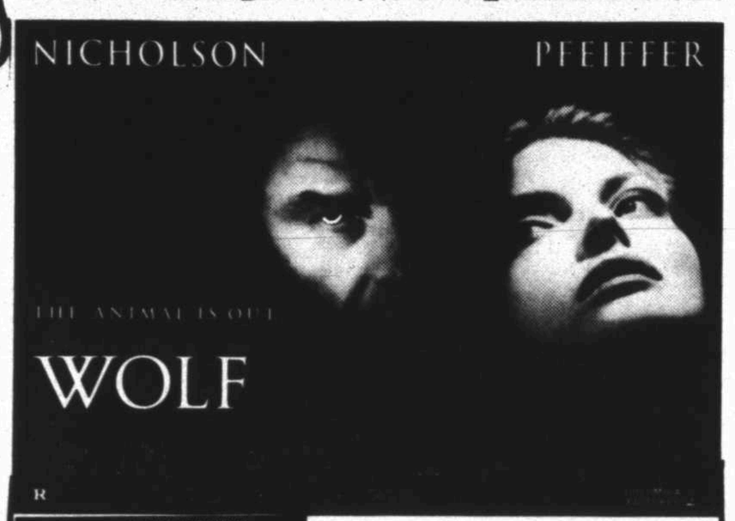

"I'm playing good players and I'm playing well," Martin said. "Unfortunately, a couple of times now I've started fairly well and failed to get the backbreaker. When you fail to do that, there's always one breath of hope for your opponent and before long it's two breaths of hope and it keeps going and going."

His semifinal against Sampras is a rematch of the final at Queens, where Martin won the Wimbledon warmup 7-6, 7-6. In that match, there were no service breaks with Martin winning both tiebreak sets 7-4. He was looking forward to the rematch.

"I'm excited," Martin said. "I'm going to be playing the defending champion, the No. 1 player in the world, on Centre Court at Wimbledon. That's like my second favorite dream come true. Maybe a few days after that, I'll have my first one come true."

Twosome share Senior Open lead

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

PINEHURST, N.C. — A former club pro and a man called Scruffy had a share of the lead and a retired firefighter had the most insightful comment Thursday in the first round of the U.S. Senior Open.

"Personally, I have doubts that I can play with golfers of the caliber you have here," mused Wayne Carey, who retired after 30 years as an Atlanta fireman and now is an assistant greenskeeper at Honey Creek in Conyers, Ga.

Carey, a pro for less than a month, did more than play with them, however.

His opening 3-under-par 68 on the famed No. 2 course at Pinehurst left him only two strokes off the first-round lead and one ahead of a group composed of some of the greatest players the game has known — Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and Ray Floyd among them.

Jim Albus, who resigned his club job after winning his first senior tour title three years ago, and Simon Hobday, a free-spirited South African called Scruffy by his fellow pros, took advantage of ideal morning conditions to set the first-round pace with 66s.

"It was playing pretty soft. To tell you the truth, I'm a little suprised the scores aren't even lower," Albus said after a 5-under-par effort.

The tough old course in the Carolina sandhill country was made vulnerable by overnight rain. At least for the morning half of the 156-man field, the greens were soft and holding, fairways were unusually generous for a U.S. Open course and there was no wind.

"I'd hate to think what it would be like if it was hard and fast and the wind was blowing and the balls kept running off those greens," Hobday said.

As it was, however, "the fire was out of the golf course this morning and we were able to throw the iron shots at the flag," Graham Marsh, a globe-trotting Australian rookie on the over-50 circuit, said after an early 68 that gave him a share of third with Carey.

Western Open

LEMONT, Ill. — Sean Murphy, last year's Nike Tour player of the year who had failed to make the cut 12 times this season, got his putter working and finally found a course to his liking Thursday.

Murphy, whose highest finish in the three tournaments he completed was 44th, shot a 6-under-par 66 and was part of a five-way tie for the first-round lead in the Western Open.

John Huston, Bill Glasson, Phil Mickelson and Bob Gilder were also at 66 on the 7,073-yard Dubsdread course at the Cog Hill Golf and Country Club, about 30 miles southwest of Chicago.

Defending champion Nick Price, Dave Rummells, Andy Bean, Scott Hoch, Greg Kraft, Steve Lamontagne and Mark Calcavecchia were all one shot back .

Campbell again leads Yanks

For the second day in a row former Midland College golfer Chad Campbell led the U.S. team at the World University Games golf tournament in Madrid, Spain.

Campbell, who shot 78 Wednesday, broke par for the first time in the tournament with a one-under 71 in Thursday's third round. Other U.S. scores were 75 by Ben Whitlock, 76 by Jeff Fujimoto, and 77 by Steve Peterson.

The U.S. was well out of contention for the championship Thursday, but no further details about the competition were available. The tournament ends today.

Year number two of Prop 48 keeps pace

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Graduation rates for NCAA athletes in the second year of Proposition 48 generally kept pace with gains noted in the first year, and females did better than men.

The most significant increases continued to be shown by black athletes.

Overall, 57 percent of all athletes graduated who enrolled in NCAA Division I schools in the 1987-88 academic year, NCAA statistics indicate, compared with 56 percent of the general student body.

Released Thursday, the data includes nearly 300 Division I schools and counts only students who received athletic scholarship aid. A 1987-88 freshman was allowed a six-year degree program.

Athletes also graduated at 57 percent in the first class under the controversial freshman eligibility rule, a jump of five percentage points over the previous year.

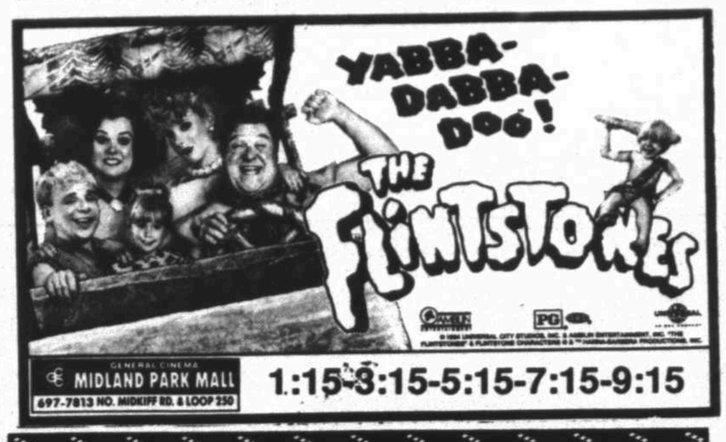

"I am more confident now that the significant increase in freshman graduation rates was due to the imposition of Proposition 48," said Jerry Kingston, chairman of the NCAA's Academic Requirements Committee.

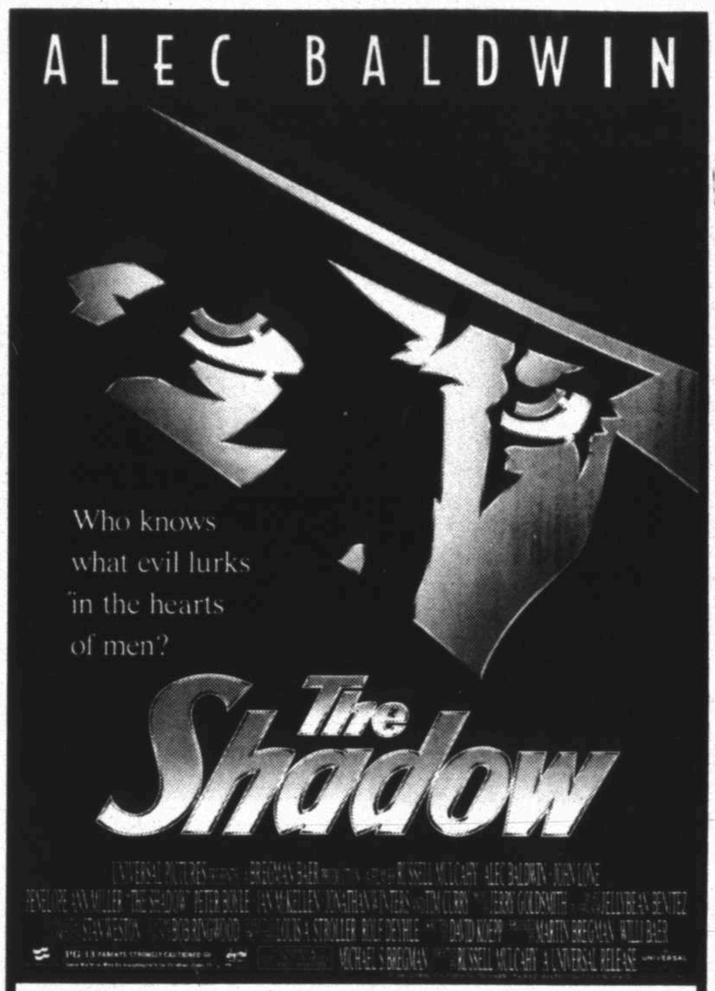

In virtually every major group, athletes held gains they had made in the first year of the new standards.

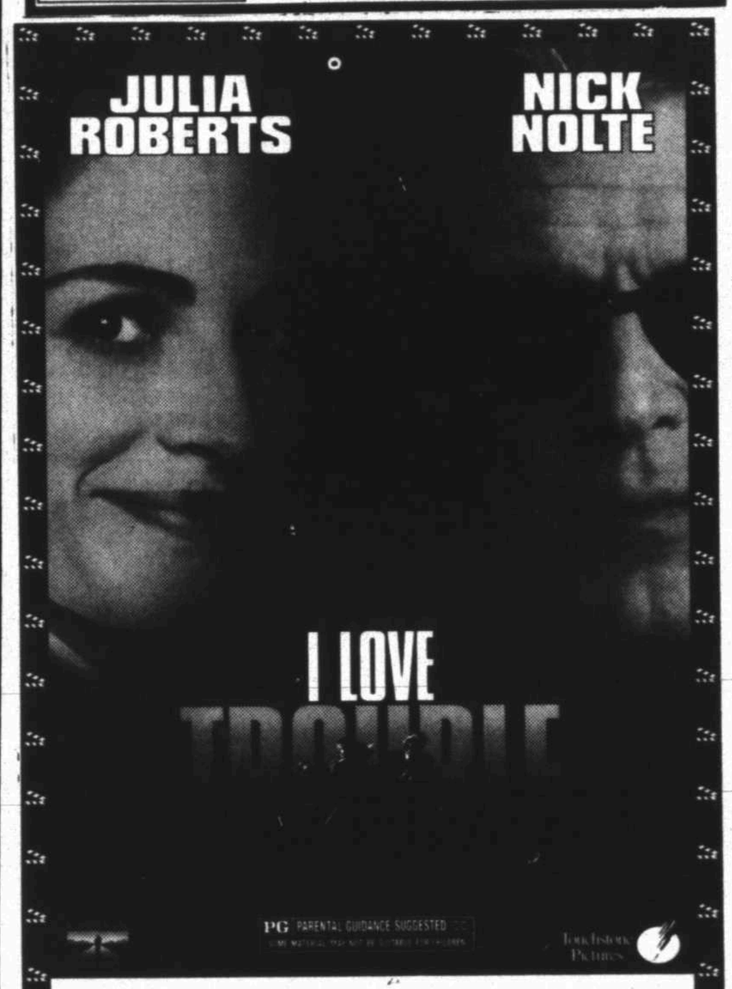

Individually, Marist and Providence moved to the head of the class as the only schools who had been NCAA members since 1987 and graduated 100 percent of their 1987-88 freshmen.

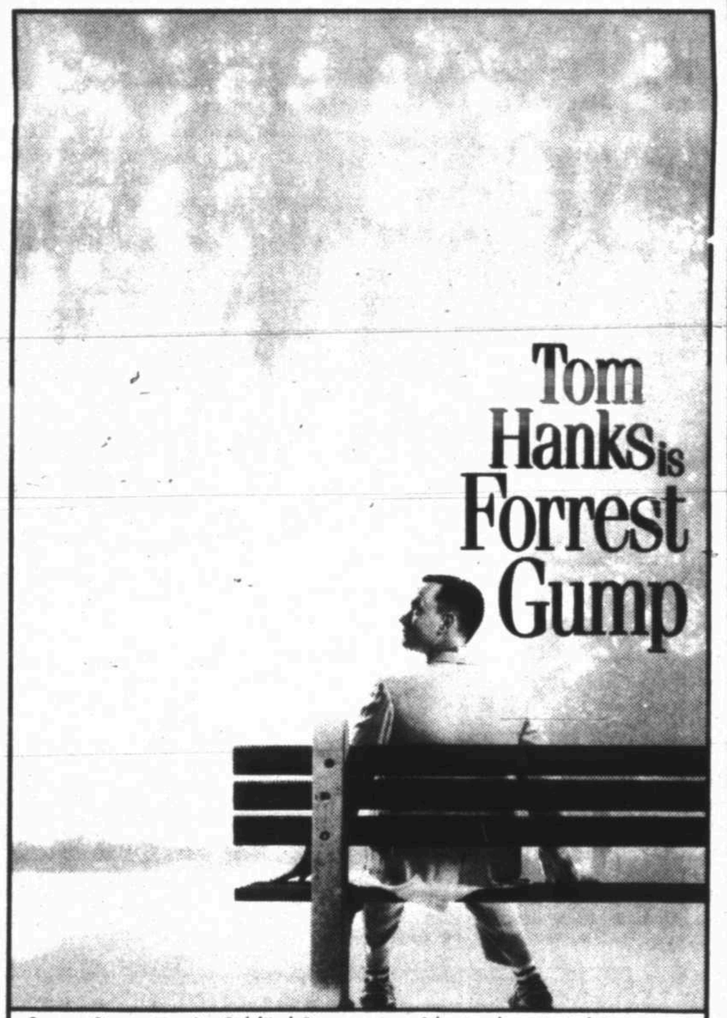

High-achievers also included Holy Cross and Georgetown (95 percent), La Salle (94), Manhattan (93) and Boston College, Colgate, Xavier and Lehigh (92).

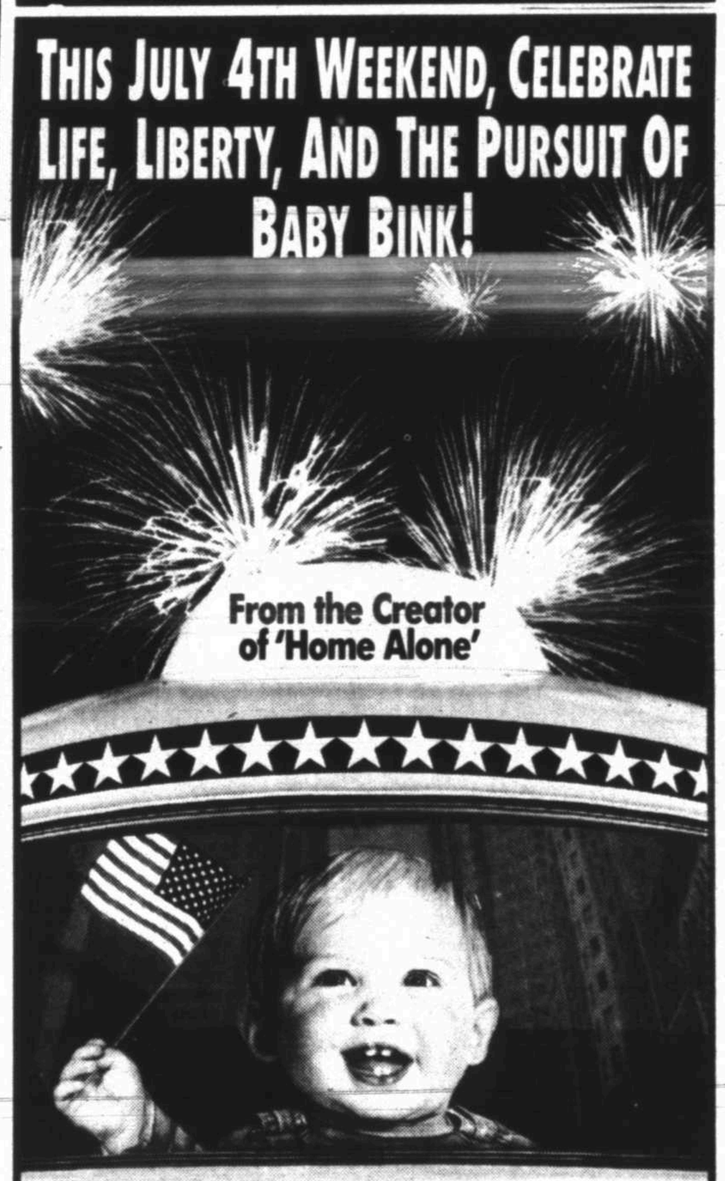

Bringing up the rear was Tennessee State with a 13 percent graduation rate. This was followed by North Texas and Texas Southern at 15 percent, Alabama State (21 percent), Prairie View A&M and Texas-San Antonio (22 percent), Lamar (24 percent), Coppin State (25 percent), Arkansas State and Northwestern State (26 percent), and Alcorn State and Robert Morris (27 percent).

FRIDAY, JULY 1, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR: Short-term projects could produce big financial rewards. Prominent people learn of your special talents and seek you out. The social scene looks particularly lively in November and December. Be careful not to neglect older relatives while pursuing new friendships. The year 1995 ushers in a change in your domestic arrangements. A residential move is likely in early spring. Romance will blossom along with may flowers.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Karen Black, Olympic track star Carl Lewis, dancer Twyla Tharp, actor Jamie Farr.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Practical matters demand your full attention. You will need a lot of determination and discipline to reach a key goal. Hold the line on spending until your income rises; put away the credit cards.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Strong convictions are great as long as you know when to give ground on minor issues. Compromise and diplomacy are vital for success! Celebrate a new alliance over dinner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Work hard during morning hours and you may be able to get away early from work. Guard against being too sensitive to outside pressures. Higher-ups may ask sharp questions if you sound vague or uncertain.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your personal life should begin to settle down soon. Get in touch with those at a distance. A relative's wit and wisdom are inspirational. The love bug will bite when least expected! Be patient.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Planetary trends suggest that today and tomorrow will hold exciting changes. Welcome now developments with an open mind. Remember, first impressions are often indelible!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You continue to be preoccupied with practical, workaday matters — like your upcoming schedule. Plan to relax this weekend with those who know you best.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be receptive to new ideas and suggestions, even though they seem somewhat eccentric or risky. You need to consider every alternative before making a decision.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may feel that you are going around in circles where a community project is concerned. A trip you take today may be partly motivated by business hopes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance makes you feel refreshed! A speech or presentation will go brilliantly. Live up to your reputation. You will soon discover who your real friends are.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be called in from the sidelines now. Others are counting on your leadership skills. Do not disappoint them! A new acquaintance could add glamour to your social life. Be sure to repay invitations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A keen sense of fair play makes you enormously popular with members of the opposite sex. If interested, you could have your pick this weekend! Going back to school could pay big career dividends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Much can be gained if you adopt a more positive attitude. Helping a relative who is in need will make you feel better about the past. Soft-pedal any differences with your peers when talking with outsiders.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Two of ◇

It is a natural instinct to win a trick as cheaply as possible and, by and large, it is correct to do so. Once in a while, though, overriding considerations dictate another course.

North-South arrived at three no trump after a normal auction. With a ruffing value in hearts, North checked on the possibility of a 4-4 spade fit before settling in three no trump, a game that looked to be easy.

West led a fourth-best diamond and declarer could count nine tricks—four spades, three diamonds and the aces of hearts and clubs. There was, however, a snag. After releasing the king and jack of spades from hand, there is no sure entry to dummy to cash the two high spades.

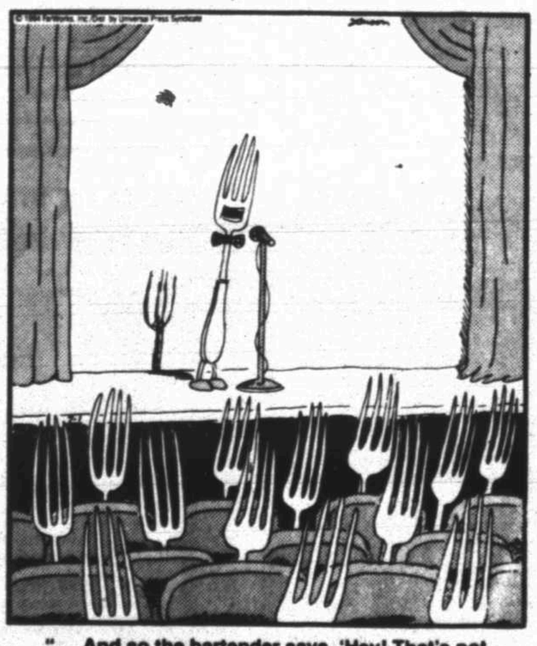

A thoughtless declarer would realize the problem only after winning the first trick with the nine of diamonds. South could free the spades and then try underleading the ace-king of diamonds, but West would surely win the queen and declarer would still be shut out of dummy. Alternatively, declarer might overtake a spade and try the club finesse, but when that fails there are only eight tricks.

As so often happens, the key play comes at the very first trick. Since it is most unlikely that West has led a singleton diamond against three no trump, South should win the opening lead with the king of diamonds, then clear the blocking spades from hand. After cashing the ace of diamonds and continuing the suit, declarer still makes the same three diamond tricks and forces an entry to the spades in diamonds. Now nine tricks are assured.

NEW YORK — Jack Nicholson has a couple of pint-sized reasons for wanting an extended break after his latest movie, "Wolf."

Actor says he'll take a year off to be with his children.

The 57-year-old actor said he's taking a year off work to spend more time with the children he has with Rebecca Broussard: Lorraine, 4, and Ray, 2.

"I do see them all the time of course, even when working," he said in US magazine's July issue. "They came down and visited the sets, and on the weekends I spend as much time with them as I possibly can. But that's one of the reasons I am taking a year off."

ROME — Benetton, the Italian clothing company, defended a magazine ad depicting Ronald Reagan as a victim of AIDS.

"Millions of people wouldn't risk death right now if it hadn't been for Reagan because he could have made sure that we had the best sex-education system around," said Tibor Kalman, editor of Benetton's magazine, Colors.

The ad consists of a doctored photograph depicting the former president with lesions on his face. It is accompanied by a fake obituary critical of Reagan's AIDS policies.

Reagan spokeswoman Cathy Busch condemned the ad this week, saying it exploited human suffering for profit.

Colors was looking for a "global hero" in the fight against AIDS, Kalman said, but "we couldn't find one, so we chose a person who had acted in the exact opposite way."

The clothing store chain is known for its provocative ads, including one depicting priest and a nun kissing.

DARIEN, N.Y. — Is this why they call it head-banger music?

Philip Anselmo, lead singer of the heavy-metal group Pantera, was charged with bashing a concert security guard over the head with a microphone.

The 25-year-old singer was arrested after the Tuesday night show and charged him with assault. He was freed on $5,000 bail.

Joseph Lewis, 25, was treated at a hospital for cuts and bruises. He was among a group of guards trying to keep some of the 4,500 fans from climbing onto the stage at Darien Lake Performing Arts Center, 20 miles east of Buffalo.

Concertgoer Marilyn Baber said Anselmo yelled as the guard tried to stop a rowdy fan, but the guard apparently didn't hear him and a scuffle broke out.

Pantera's latest album, "Far Beyond Driven," debuted at No. 1 on the Billboard charts in March and has sold more than 500,000 copies. The band is known for ear-splitting sound and violent lyrics in songs like "Slaughtered."

Fans often climb on stage at Pantera shows and jump into the arms of those below — an activity known as "stage-diving." The band faces a lawsuit from a fan injured in a stage-diving in Michigan last summer.

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. — For New York Knicks forward Anthony Mason, court this week had nothing to do with hoops, dribbling or slam dunks.

For Mason, court had nothing to do with dribbling.

The pro basketball star, who has a home in nearby White Plains, pleaded guilty Monday to driving without a valid license and paid $125.

Mason, 27, pleaded innocent to speeding — he allegedly was doing 100 mph in a 55 mph zone — and trial was set for July 12.

He holds a Tennessee driver's license, but when he was stopped in November, a computer check showed his New York driving privileges had been suspended for failing to pay a ticket in Maryland, said his lawyer, Don Cronson.

Once the ticket was paid, his driving privileges in New York were restored.

Mason is a member of the Knicks team that was defeated last week in the National Basketball Association finals by the Houston Rockets.

hat was the Princess of Wales doing Wednesday night while her estranged husband, Prince Charles, was on television, confessing his marital infidelity during a lengthy interview?

Just about the time the program went on the air on Independent Television News, the princess was heading into a tent in Kensington Gardens in London.

She was attending a dinner Vanity Fair magazine was giving for the Serpentine Gallery.

Some 200 guests and more than 100 photographers strained for a view of the princess and talked about what her mood might be in light of Prince Charles' television appearance.

KICKS: Meola on list?

(From 1C)

"There's always more pressure on the shooter, because the shooter is expected to make the shot," Ramos said.

Most players said they would decide where to shoot before they began their run to the penalty spot. Wynalda said the perfect spot is a high corner, but low corners were safer to shoot at.

"Before I hit the ball, I'm going to know where I'm going with it," Wynalda said. "If I hit a ball in the corner where I want to, no goalkeeper is going to save it.

Steve Sampson, an assistant U.S. coach, said there might even be a surprise in the Americans' list for penalty kicks: Meola.

"It wouldn't be unrealistic to put him in the lineup as one of those to shoot," Sampson said. "No goalkeeper ever likes to be scored on by another goalkeeper."

CUP: Argentines appear stunned by day's events

(From 1C)

Bulgaria. When Nigeria also scored in injury time to beat Greece 2-0, it gave the surprising Africans first place in the group. Bulgaria, by virtue of beating Argentina, was second.

"We showed the world our generation of soccer players is one of the best right now," said Hristo Stoitchkov, who scored the game's first goal in the 60th minute. "Bulgaria should be very proud of us."

Argentina, two-time World Cup champions, appeared stunned by the day's events.

"After this defeat, it is very difficult for the team to recognize what really happened," halfback Fernando Redondo said. "There is nothing to say about it."

Coach Alfio Basile said his team missed its anchor.

"Their spirits were low," he said. "This was apparent on the field. Of course we miss Maradona very much. He is our leader on the field."

Argentina will play Romania at Pasadena, Calif., on Sunday. Bulgaria, in the second round for only the second time, will play Mexico at East Rutherford, N.J., on Tuesday.

But the Bulgarians will be without three starters — Trifon Ivanov, Zlatko Iankov and Tzanko Tzvetanov — who picked up their second yellow cards of the first round. That draws an automatic one-game suspension.

Tzvetanov picked up both of his in this game and was ejected, but even the man advantage for the final quarter of play couldn't help Argentina.

Nigeria 2, Greece 0

FOXBORO, Mass. — Daniel Amokachi scored in the fifth minute of injury time, giving Nigeria a 2-0 victory over Greece on Thursday night that won World Cup Group D for the Africans.

Nigeria will play Italy at Foxboro Stadium next Tuesday in the second round.

In their debut at the world soccer championship, the Nigerians finished 2-1 in the group, as did Argentina and Bulgaria. But the Nigerians had a 6-2 goal differential thanks to Amokachi's long shot in the dying seconds. That was better than Bulgaria, which beat Argentina 2-0 Thursday night and also got a last-second goal, and Argentina, which had 6-3 differentials.

Amokachi beat two defenders and unleased a 25-yard shot that rocketed into the corner of the net. Goalie Peter Rufai did a somersault as the rest of his teammates celebrated upfield.

Seconds later, the whistle sounded to end the game — and put Nigeria ahead of the Argentines and Bulgarians.

Amokachi's goal came in a wild final five minutes of both games, in which Nigeria and Bulgaria both scored to improve their fortunes.

Nigeria had been headed for Giants Stadium and a meeting with Mexico until the late goal.

Nigeria took a 1-0 lead in the second minute of first-half injury time when Finidi George softly chipped a shot over goalkeeper Christos Karkamanis.

World Cup TV Ratings

As far as television is concerned, the World Cup is a hit. Sunday's game between the United States and Romania got a 6.8 rating, soccer's highest ever on American television.

The Americans' 1-0 loss, televised by ABC starting at 4:05 p.m. EDT, attracted about 22 million viewers, the network estimated Thursday. Nielsen Media Research said the game received an 18 share.

Italy's 3-1 victory over West Germany in the 1982 World Cup final, also televised by ABC, held the previous record rating, a 6.6. Its 22 share remains the record — at least until Monday, when the United States plays tournament favorite Brazil in a Fourth of July second-round game that will be televised by ABC from Stanford Stadium.

The rating is the percentage of televisions in the United States watching a program and each point represents 942,000 homes. The share is the percentage tuned in among those televisions on at the time.

Belgium's 1-0 victory over the Netherlands on Saturday on ABC received a 3.4 rating, Nielsen said, and Argentina's 2-1 victory over Nigeria later that day on the network got a 3.8 rating.

ABC's four first-round games averaged a 4.8 rating and a 15 share, above what Alan Rothenberg, chairman of the U.S. World Cup organizers, said was the network's prediction of a rating between 4.0 and 4.5.

ABC will televise three second-round games, between Germany and the second-place team in Group D on Saturday, between Saudi Arabia and Sweden on Sunday and between the United States and Brazil on Monday. The network also will televise three quarterfinals next weekend.

Golfer defends female athletes

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — Golfer Patty Sheehan says female athletes are being discriminated against.

"We are always looking for players who will speak out on the issue and not sound like we are being complainers or whiners," she said. "We need to talk about it in a positive way. People know it exists."

Asked what she'd change about the LPGA, Sheehan cited the disparity between the men's and women's pro golf tours regarding money, television coverage and overall exposure.

That inequality mirrors the rest of society, she said.

"One of the glaring examples of discrimination I can give you is (golfer) John Daly, who is an alcoholic and has beaten his wife and been a jerk at times. He just signs a $30-million contract with Wilson for 10 years.

"Then you have Jennifer Capriati, who is a young kid who got caught with some marijuana and all her contracts are taken away from her."

Luck helps Earnhardt earn pole

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The luck of the draw helped a patient Dale Earnhardt win the pole position Thursday for Saturday's Pepsi 400 at Daytona International Speedway.

Earnhardt, who drew the last position among the 47 drivers who made qualifying attempts on the 2½-mile, high-banked oval, kept rookie sensation Loy Allen Jr., the top qualifier in the Daytona 500, from winning his fourth pole of the season. It was the first Daytona pole of Earnhardt's career.

The defending and six-time Winston Cup champion turned a fast lap of 191.339 mph to relegate Allen's 190.868 to the outside of the front row and give Chevrolet only its second pole in 15 tries this season.

Qualifying began, after a short rain delay, in the intense mid-afternoon heat and humidity. By the time Earnhardt's Lumina took to the track at 4:40 p.m. EDT, about two hours into the session, both the air and track had cooled, at least a bit.

"We drew a good position," said Earnhardt, who earned only the 16th pole of his career and his first since May 1993 at Sonoma, Calif.

"It's not tough to wait with a good car and knowing the weather conditions are going to get some better," he added. "I'd rather run fast last than fast first and then have to wait to see how everybody else qualifies."

Ford driver Allen, who also won poles in March at Atlanta and two weeks ago at Michigan, said, "Well, Chevy got us today. I couldn't have got beat by anybody any better, I guess. ... He returned the favor for us knocking him off the pole here in February."

Earnhardt, a two-time Pepsi 400 winner, agreed, saying, "We were really close in February down here when I think we got beat by a little bit of trickery."

The Intimidator was alluding to the new Hoosier radial tires that Allen and several others are using this season. Those tires were not used in the 500-miler after proving too slow in Daytona's 125-mile qualifying races.

More Sports/12C

Earnhardt and most of the top teams have remained on the established Goodyears, which have won every race so far this season. Hoosier, a small Indiana racing tire company, has struggled to get competitive.

CBS, QVC close in on merger

■ Action would instantly change TV landscape by giving top-rated network a foothold in cable.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The proposed merger of CBS and QVC Inc. would instantly change the TV landscape by giving the top-rated network a foothold in cable.

In a joint announcement Thursday, the chairmen of the two companies said they are in the final stages of negotiating an agreement under which CBS would acquire the far smaller cable TV operator of home shopping channels. The deal was valued by outside financial analysts at more than $2 billion.

The boards of both companies will meet to consider the deal on July 13. Stockholders of CBS Inc. and QVC Inc. would have to endorse the proposal, which also must be reviewed by federal regulators.

News of the impending deal drew a wildly enthusiastic response from investors. CBS stock, trading in which was halted on the New York Stock Exchange for most of the day ahead of the anticipated announcement, shot up $48 to close at $311 a share. QVC rose $5.62½ to $38 on the Nasdaq stock market.

Speculation on Wall Street that CBS might receive overtures from unwanted suitors was dismissed by Laurence Tisch, CBS chairman, president and chief executive officer.

During a telephone news conference with reporters, Tisch repeatedly stressed that CBS would not be "shopped."

"We think this is the right deal, the right merger ... and the right chief executive for CBS," he said. "I think we're achieving maximum value for shareholders with this merger."

As now envisioned, QVC Chairman Barry Diller would become the combined company's president, chief executive officer and chairman of its executive committee. Tisch would remain as chairman of CBS.

In the view of many industry observers, the deal would correct a serious error in judgment on the part of CBS under Tisch.

During Tisch's tenure, CBS has been criticized for concentrating almost exclusively on network TV and failing to venture into the now huge cable area.

Although CBS commands the country's top-rated TV programs and has been the No. 1 network in U.S. householders for three years, its refusal to diversify into cable or forge other strategic partnerships has left the company vulnerable to becoming a has-been.

Media analysts say CBS has been in danger of losing clout with advertisers.

CBS suffered several setbacks recently that diminished its stature. First, it lost National Football League broadcasting rights to the fast-growing Fox network. The subsequent defection of eight key CBS affiliates to Fox caused more public relations problems.

Diller said during the telephone conference that extending the widely known CBS name into cable will provide numerous programming and other business opportunities. Differences between CBS and the electronic retailer won't obstruct the process, he said.

"I think that there are obvious and natural areas where the companies complement each other," he said.

Besides giving CBS an entry into cable, joining forces with QVC would benefit the broadcaster by giving it access to the vaunted programming and strategic expertise of Diller.

Diller is regarded as a visionary in the industry with a flair for discerning popular programs. He worked at ABC and then developed the Fox television network before moving to QVC. Earlier this year he lost a battle to acquire Paramount Communications.

Prices climb

NEW YORK — An air raid on an oil field in Yemen and a possible strike by oil workers in Norway helped push crude prices higher in futures trading Thursday.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $19.37 per barrel, up 54 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 50 cents to $18 a barrel.

The oil market found reasons to buy early in the session as reports from Yemen said southern forces attacked the country's largest oil field, igniting a fire. Around the same time word came out that Norwegian oil workers would go on strike with no settlement in sight.

Norway pumps 2 million barrels daily from the North Sea. The oil workers strike was due to begin Thursday night.

The market was also buffeted by Thursday's deadline to trade July contracts for unleaded gasoline and heating oil. The expiration can typically set off frenzied trading as dealers try to close out earlier positions before the July contract disappears from the Nymex board.

Natural gas prices were higher, with contracts for delivery in August settling at $2.184 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 0.4 cents.

Dollar slides

NEW YORK — The dollar slid to a third-consecutive postwar low against the Japanese yen Thursday, following bonds and stocks lower, amid fears that the major economic powers won't agree on measures to support the U.S. currency.

The dollar was higher vs. the German mark, while the yen advanced across the board. Analysts said worries in recent weeks about a broad-based dollar collapse have given way to concern about the surging yen, which hurts Japan's export-dependent economy by making its products more expensive overseas.

Gold prices rose. On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery gained $1.00 to $385.80 per troy ounce.

Stocks sink

NEW YORK — Stocks fell sharply Thursday after bond prices plunged amid renewed inflation fears, but small-company issues gave up less than blue chip names.

The Dow Jones industrial average sank 42.09 to 3,624.96.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by nearly 7 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 292.80 million shares, up from 263.89 million Wednesday.

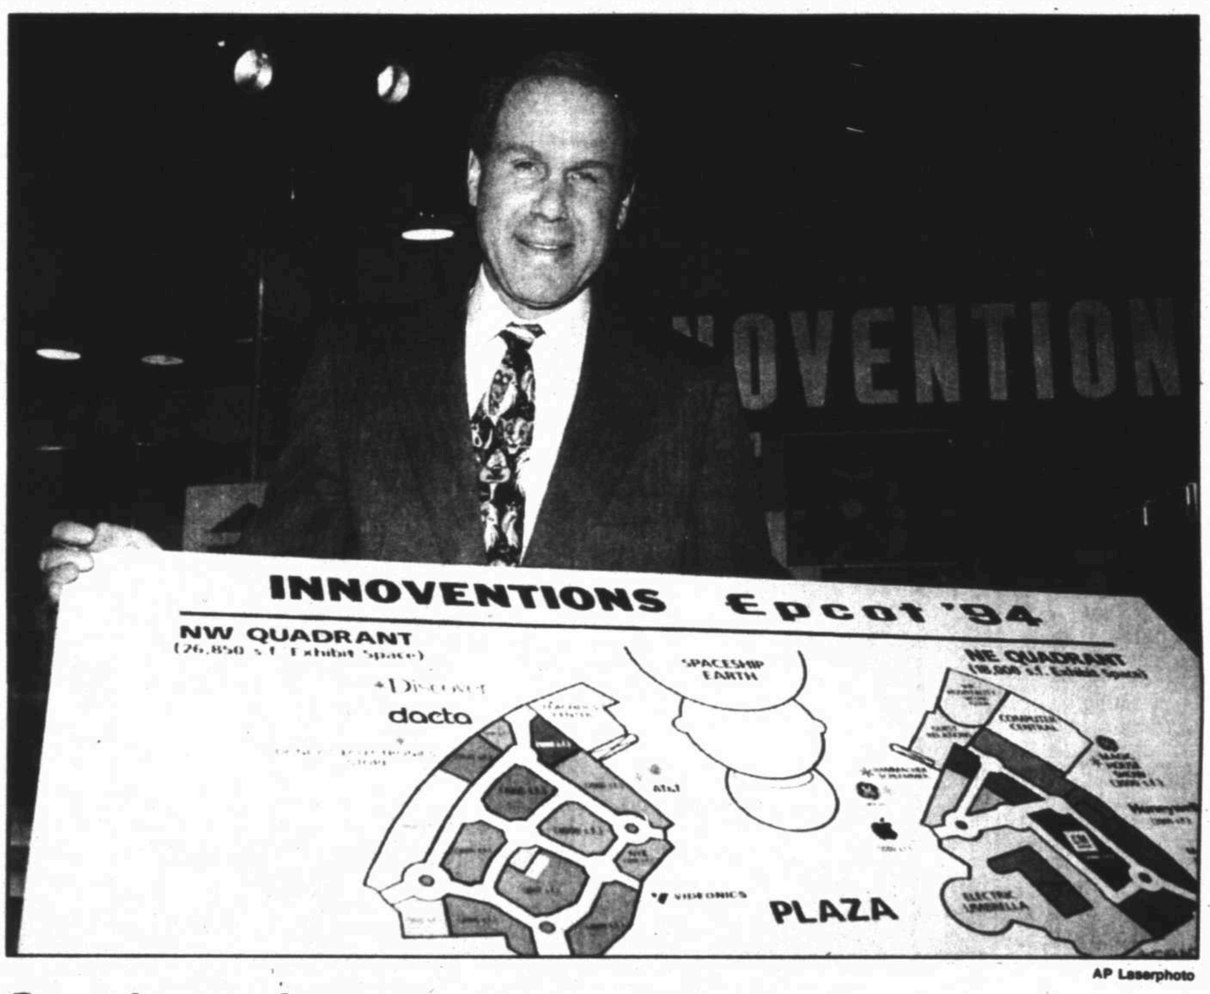

Thursday's selling was concentrated in large-company stocks, and broad market indexes ended mixed. The NYSE's composite index fell 1.56 to 245.16. The Standard & Poor's composite fell 3.36 to 444.27. But the American Stock Exchange's market value index rose 0.27 to 423.75.

Burlington, Santa Fe OK rail marriage

■ Proposed merger calls for stock swap valued at $2.7 billion. Stock owners must approve transaction; deal also must be approved by ICC.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Burlington Northern Inc. and Santa Fe Pacific Corp. have agreed to a merger that would create the nation's largest rail network and give the new company a heightened advantage in international trade.

The proposed $2.7 billion stock swap, announced Thursday, must be approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission and by both companies' shareholders.

Gerald Grinstein, Burlington Northern's chairman, and Robert Krebs, the head of Santa Fe, said they expect the merger to cut costs and streamline operations.

The main reason for the pairing, they said, was to build revenues by blending the railroads' strengths: coal and grain hauling for Burlington Northern and intermodal service — carrying tractor-trailers on flat-bed rail cars — for Santa Fe.

They said the North American Free Trade Agreement helped prompt the agreement. Burlington Northern operates to Canada, while Santa Fe offers service to Mexico.

The proposed merger would create a company with about $7 billion in revenues. Union Pacific's railroad generates the most annual revenues in the business — $4.86 billion.

"I'm very positive on the combination. I think that it gives the railroad the size and the bulk to compete more effectively with the Union Pacific, who I think is the big loser in this transaction," Kidder, Peabody & Co. analyst Scott Flower said.

If it goes through, the union would forge a network of 33,000 miles of track in the Midwest, West and South.

Drew Lewis, president and chief executive of Union Pacific Railroad parent Union Pacific Corp. of Bethlehem, Pa., said the company was studying the proposed transaction.

Income, spending, factory orders rise 4th straight month

WASHINGTON (AP) — The income of Americans rose for the fourth straight month in May and spending nearly kept pace. Factory orders increased, too.

Analysts said the government reports released Thursday, along with the latest data on claims for jobless benefits, demonstrate the economy expanded at a comfortable pace this spring.

"The basic message is that the economy has downshifted to a slower growth pace," said economist Robert Dederick of The Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "I think the consumer will come back. But the great spurt is behind us."

The Commerce Department said Americans' personal income rose 0.6 percent in May — as it did in April — boosted by job growth, a longer average work week and higher hourly earnings.

Consumer spending increased 0.4 percent, slightly higher than anticipated, after dipping a revised 0.4 percent in April. Spending, accounting for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity, has risen in 12 of the last 14 months.

Incomes rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $5.71 trillion in May from $5.67 trillion in April. Spending was up to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.61 trillion from $4.59 trillion.

Disposable income — income after taxes — soared 1.2 percent above the April rate. April's figure was down because of a new federal law requiring the wealthiest Americans to make retroactive tax payments by April 15 of about $30 billion at an annual rate.

The combination of incomes and spending meant that Americans' savings rate — savings as a percentage of disposable income — climbed to 4.7 percent in May from 3.9 percent in April.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Most mutual-fund sellers share commissions

By Bill Doyle

Q: There has been only one mutual fund salesman in our rural area for as long as I can remember. I should say "one at a time," as the guy who now sells fund shares is the son of the salesman who was here when I was young.

Doyle

I guess they have done well. The son drives a car just as big as his father's and has an equally convincing sales pitch. And that set some of us to thinking about the commissions we have paid to this father-and-son team over the years.

If a mutual fund salesman gets to keep the entire commission on every sale he makes, it's no wonder they drive huge cars. What's the story? Does our young salesman pocket the whole commission or does he share it with his bosses?

A: Most likely, he shares it.

It depends on how the sales organization for which he works is set up. There are a multitude of methods for compensating fund salespeople.

Typically, the salesman or saleswoman who closes the sale gets the biggest part of the commission. Smaller chunks go to his or her superiors and to the "underwriter" — the organization that acts as distributor of the fund's shares.

The underwriter usually is affiliated with the "investment adviser" — the outfit that provides the mutual fund with various services, including investment advice on which securities to buy and sell.

Q: A friend of mine brags that his mutual fund "has a very low expense ratio — six-tenths of 1 percent." What does that mean? Is it important?

A: It means the fund in which your friend owns shares has reduced its operating expenses to a point where they are well below the average for the mutual fund industry.

Indeed it is important. Every dollar a mutual fund shaves off expenses is added back to that fund's assets, thereby increasing the value of fund shares.

A mutual fund's expense ratio is best described as a fund's cost of doing business — expressed as a percentage of that fund's assets.

For example, if XYZ Mutual Fund has $1 billion in net assets and its operating expenses for a year came to $10 million, the fund's expense ratio was 1 percent.

An expense ratio is not carved in stone. It can change, depending on how a fund spends money — shareholders' money.

Q: Most mutual funds are classified as "managed investment companies," meaning they actively buy and sell securities for their investment portfolio. In all that buying and selling, they must pay a lot of commissions.

Are the commissions included in a fund's expenses, when calculating its expense ratio?

A: No. A commission or markup is added to the price of a stock when it is purchased and subtracted from the price when the stock is sold.

In that bit of bookkeeping, mutual funds are no different from regular investors. By comparing your total cost (purchase price plus commission) with your sale proceeds (sale price minus commission) you soon find out if you had a profit or a loss.

Mavs counting on Kidd for final piece

DALLAS (AP) — Jason Kidd calls himself a competitor who loves a challenge. That's good considering he's now expected to convert the last-place Dallas Mavericks into a winner.

"I never look at things as pressure situations because pressure is not in my dictionary," said Kidd, whom the Mavericks made the No. 2-overall pick in Wednesday's draft.

"I look at this as a challenge. The challenge is to be successful in Dallas like I have been in the past. I think it will happen."

Kidd joins previous first-rounders Jamal Mashburn and Jim Jackson as the main building blocks in the Mavericks' overhaul. The process has been slow as Dallas won a total of 24 games the last two seasons.

But adding Kidd could really turn things around if he can come anywhere near his billing as the best true point guard since his idol, Magic Johnson.

"He's the third piece of the puzzle," Mashburn said during a Thursday news conference at Reunion Arena during which Kidd received a jersey bearing the same No. 5 he wore at Cal.

The Mavericks knew they wanted Kidd since they got the second pick in last month's lottery.

Then Kidd ran from a hit-and-run accident, was accused of hitting an 18-year-old woman at a party and had a paternity suit filed against him Wednesday.

But after checking Kidd's background, coach Dick Motta said the team found "no red flags" that would scare them away.

"I don't think I should be tabbed as somebody who's going to be crazy or bad or who's going to do wrong all the time," Kidd said. "I think I'm a very good person, and hopefully (Dallas fans) will see that in years to come."

He's already begun showing off a good-guy image by saying he hopes to have his contract signed before training camp opens so he can begin playing with his new teammates.

"I think this is a great opportunity to bring back the winning tradition that was once there," Kidd said. "I don't see myself changing everything. I just want to bring a winning attitude.

"I think if the winning attitude can spread, Dallas will be more relaxed and will have a lot more fun."

Kidd brought all those elements to Cal, leading the Golden Bears back from a Pac-10 has-been to an NCAA Tournament team in both his seasons. As a sophomore, he led the nation last season with 9.1 assists per game.

"We're better right now than we were last year just because of his talent," Motta said. "When you win 13 games, you go another two or three years before addressing all your needs. But we're on our way."

Dallas also drafted two other players expected to contribute immediately.

Guard Tony Dumas from Missouri-Kansas City should back up Mashburn and Jackson, and forward-center Deon Thomas of Illinois will provide frontcourt depth.

Paternity law suit filed against Kidd

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A woman who claims Jason Kidd fathered her child has filed suit against the basketball star, asking for $10,000 a month in child support payments.

The suit was filed in Alameda County Superior Court on Wednesday.

SKATE: Panel is convinced

or knowledge and was involved prior to the incident," Hybl said.

Harding denies that she knew of the attack before it occurred, but Hybl said the panel was convinced otherwise.

"I think it's a cumulative effect of a lot of evidence," he said. "I will tell you that various records — bank records, phone records — and the way they came together to establish a case really were very important to this panel."

Many of the records were acquired by John Bennett, a Portland, Ore., attorney hired by the association to investigate the case

Harding remained in Portland, her hometown, and did not participate in the two-day hearing that ended with Thursday's decision.

"It is difficult when you don't have a person here to defend themselves or you don't have their counsel," Hybl said. "We went to special efforts, I believe, to make sure that the athlete in this case had everything in evidence that we had at our disposal that would be exonerating in any way."

Harding has 30 days to appeal to the USFSA executive committee. Under the organization's bylaws, if she does appeal and is not satisfied, she can then appeal to an independent arbitrator.

Harding's attorney, Bob Weaver, indicated an appeal was unlikely.

"It's been her decision up to this point not to contest these proceedings, but she's made no final decision on the appeal," he told The Associated Press.

Weaver issued a statement on Harding's behalf saying she was disappointed by the decision. He said Harding was not surprised, however, because she did not appear at the hearing to defend herself.

"She categorically denies the statements of Jeff Gillooly and others relied upon by the hearing panel that she had any prior knowledge of or participated in the assault on Nancy Kerrigan," Weaver said.

"Tonya Harding is going on with her life. Whether she skates publicly again remains to be seen. She is grateful for the support and faith of her many fans."

The figure skating association considers the 1994 national championship vacant and its executive committee will decide whether anyone will be named to fill it, USFSA spokeswoman Kristen Matta said. Michelle Kwan finished second in the U.S. championships.

Since Harding's victory at the national championships qualified her for the U.S. Olympic team, the USOC also may take some action against her.

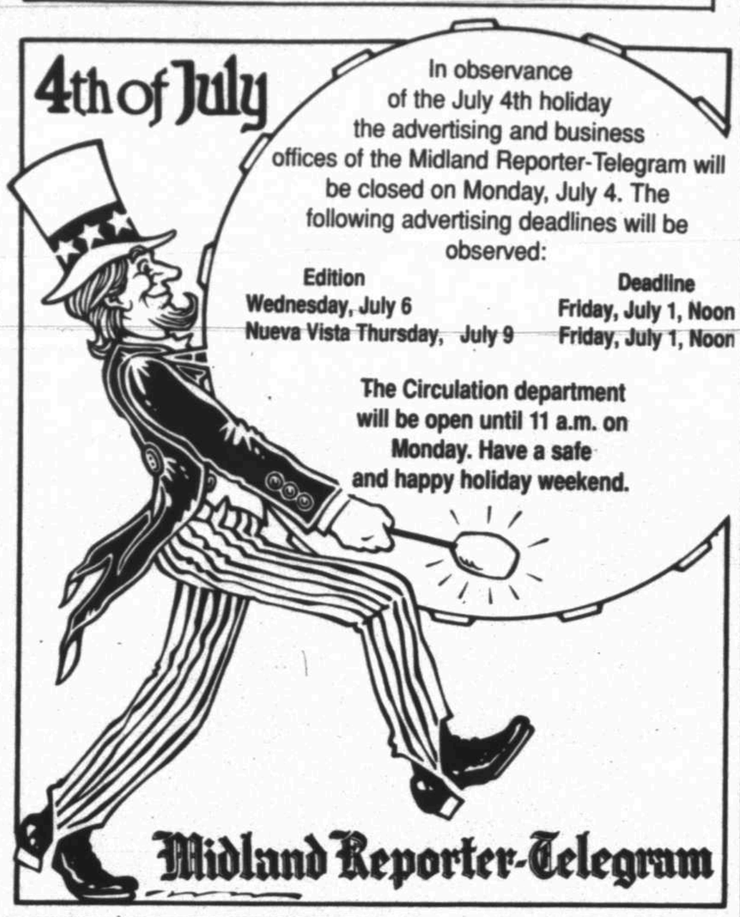

The hearing initially was scheduled for March 9

140 Card of Thanks

PERHAPS you sent a lovely card or sat quietly in a chair. Perhaps you sent a floral piece, if so, we saw it there. Perhaps you spoke words of kindness, as only a friend could say. Perhaps you were not there at all, just thought of us that day. Whatever you did to console our hearts, we thank you so very much. A special thanks, THE ALMER BRACKENS FAMILY.
