More refugees heading to West

PASSAU, West Germany (AP) — Thousands of anxious East Germans jammed into resettlement camps today and another 16,000 were lining up in Communist Hungary, waiting to follow a newly opened path to the West.

Residents of this border town filled a convention hall with banners and balloons to welcome the immigrants.

"This reception is really amazing," said Ute Kindl, a young East German woman. "I'm really speechless over the warmness and kindness here."

Resettlement camps were overflowing here today, one day after Hungary broke with East Germany, a Warsaw Pact ally, and allowed East Germans to cross freely into the West.

West Germany's ARD television network said the number of immigrants had reached about 10,000, and Hungarian officials in Budapest said another 16,000 had arrived in that country via Czechoslovakia.

The remarkable path westward was cut by Hungary, which is embracing liberal political reforms and seeking closer economic and diplomatic ties with Western nations.

East Germans have used Hungary's looser borders to flee to the West for years. That stream turned into a steady flood in May, when Hungary removed many border fortications with Western neighbor Austria, and turned into deluge on Sunday when thousands of East Germans vacationing in Hungary were allowed to emigrate en masse.

The refugees, who came through three separate crossings, had completely filled five temporary camps near the Austrian border in Bavaria and officials were seeking more shelter in military barracks.

Chief federal government spokesman Hans Klein took to task East Germany for its public condemnation of the unprecedented exodus.

"It's not Ice Age verbiage, but rather Stone Age verbiage that they have reacted with. If there is a provocation it's the provocation in the attraction of freedom," Klein told a news conference in Passau late this morning.

Most of the refugees arrived in private cars and at least 100 buses bringing them through Austria into the southern West German state.

About 60,000 East Germans were reported in Hungary on Sunday — most of them on vacation — but an Interior Ministry official in Budapest said Monday that 26,000 of them had returned home.

East Germany's Communist government expressed anger at West Germany and Hungary for arranging the exodus, but announced no immediate retaliation.

East Germany's state-owned ADN news agency accused West Germany of "luring away and misleading citizens of our land" through an "unrestrained slander campaign." It said Hungary had "unilaterally suspended" agreements between the two countries regulating movement of people across borders.

Many East Germans here expressed fears that their relatives back home would face reprisals.

"Our parents still don't know for sure what we have done," remarked one young man who arrived with his wife from Leipzig. The couple asked not to be identified by name.

"We just hope this won't hurt them. They (East German security officials) have a way of making life difficult for people whose relatives have fled to the West," the man said.

It was not known how long the exodus of East Germans out of Hungary would last or be permitted. News reports said the East Germans might restrict travel to Hungary in retaliation.

Paddington Bear joins paddling British soldiers

EL PASO (AP) — A bear named Paddington has set out on his latest adventure, but this one is not in a child's storybook.

A stuffed version of the teddy bear from darkest Peru who ended up at Paddington Station in England is accompanying a battery of British soldiers on a rafting trip down the Rio Grande.

The bear and the donated raft named in its honor embarked Monday on the trip that soldiers touted as a leadership training exercise but appeared to be more of a pleasure cruise.

"He's going to travel the full length of the Rio Grande, as far as it is navigable," said Lt. Simon Crane, team leader of the 45th Field Regiment of the Royal Artillery of Clouchester-Essex, England.

The trip is part of a yearly ritual of adventurous training for soldiers of the British Army.

"The main reason we're here is to raft this mighty river, although it's not a bit too mighty here at the moment," said Crane, of Oxford.

In addition to providing leadership and team training for the 27 participating soldiers, who range in age from 18 to 32, the rafting trip should raise about $27,000 for the Action Research for Crippled Children, a research organization that discovered a serum for rubella and developed the sonogram, said helmsman Sgt. Bob Lloyd of Clouchester-Essex.

The charity uses Paddington Bear, created by author Michael Bond, as its mascot.

The 27 soldiers will rotate in shifts of nine for the 1,100-mile raft trip, with the other 18 following in support vehicles.

Commissioners will consider MC referendum

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A proposal to "protect" Midland College while raising the junior college to four-year and graduate-level status as part of the University of Texas System was touted by former Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. in a "drop-in visit" to the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday.

Angelo cited the "on-going saga" of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's academic expansion via politics and his concern over protecting Midland College from UTPB encroachment.

Angelo, an independent oilman and National Republican Committeeman, tendered a proposed non-binding referendum to gauge the public's attitude on bringing MC into the UT System.

"It's a unique opportunity for Midland to become a partner in the University of Texas," Angelo said later Monday. "If you've got the right basis for doing something, you never know what you can accomplish."

Angelo's tentative proposal for the Nov. 7 general election states:

"The University of Texas System would be given title to the campus and facilities of Midland College and would make the campus a full-time part of a four-year and graduate-level university at Midland-Odessa. The University of Texas System would assume all outstanding debt and ongoing operating costs and would, with local input, offer a full program of Vocation-Technical courses on the Midland Campus."

The commissioners set a special session for 9 a.m. Monday to consider whether the proposal should appear on the ballot.

Angelo suggested that the UT System would have two campuses in the Midland-Odessa area: the existing UTPB campus in Odessa and the Midland College site.

MC President Dr. Jess Parrish, however, said that the college's board of trustees "already is on record as opposing" bringing MC into the UT System and losing control of the community college.

Parrish has said the college opposes taking the decision to create a four-year university out of "the proper channels." The decision should be made by the University of Texas Regents and the Higher Education Coordinating Board, "not politicians," Parrish said.

In the event that those boards determined a four-year university is in the best interest of the area, Midland College would prefer to see a UTPB center on or adjacent to the MC campus, Parrish has explained.

If Angelo's proposal gets on the ballot, Parrish said MC would conduct an educational campaign on the benefits of MC carrying out its roles and purposes as a community college.

However, Parrish said he is "100 percent against a referendum on the issue, which does not lend itself to an easy yes-or-no answer.

"It's not that I don't trust the people and their wishes; I don't trust the issue," and making all choices clear in a referendum, the college president said last week.

Angelo said following the commissioners' meeting that the concept, if implemented, "might very well" end some of the Midland-Odessa UTPB feud that dates to the early 1970s and could "bring about a unity of purpose that the area really needs." The feud largely was rooted in the Odessa location of UTPB and how that came about. Midland powers had wanted the UTPB campus midway between the neighboring cities.

Commissioners holding the line on county tax rate

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners held the county's 1989 tax rate to last year's 16.50-cent rate per $100 valuation, hiked the county's 1990 budget to $18 million from 1989's $16 million, and defended their no-raise stance for county employees despite pay-raise assaults.

Commissioners, in counting on additional revenues outside the tax realm, kept last year's tax rate despite a drop in the county-wide tax base to $3.17 billion from $3.92 billion.

"Our ability to maintain the present tax rate was the result of several months of very resolute budget planning with the support of many county officials," including department heads, Commissioner Guy McCrary said following the approval of the tax rate and budget.

The commissioners cited their deference to the taxpayers' burden while they held down the tax rate even amid dropping property valuations.

However, that stance did not bring consolation to two prosecutors, Ralph Petty and Robin Sams, who sought countywide cost-of-living wage increases and not just for those in the criminal-justice system they represented.

Petty, chief prosecutor for the 238th Texas State District Court, proposed a 3 percent pay raise for the county's employees, who number about 425.

"I think that (no pay raise) is not very fair to your employees who work very hard" in various facets of county government and "in the criminal justice system," Petty said Monday before the commissioners approved the budget.

"You are (in effect) giving them a pay cut" by not awarding pay raises due to increases in the cost-of-living, Petty said. "Your employees work hard for you, and you are giving them a pay cut. They are really deserving for a raise."

And Petty, in citing the relatively low salary for prosecutors, said that the District Attorney's Office is "not a training ground for inexperienced prosecutors." Further, said Petty, "We need more people to do the work. We need reasonable pay."

Holt soon will decide on candidacy

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant City Editor

There may be room in the race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination for a second Midlander, says former city councilman Bobby Holt.

Holt said this morning that he will decide whether to enter the race for the governor's mansion within the next week to 10 days.

Holt, co-chairman of President George Bush's inaugural, said he has been receiving calls from Republicans around the state who are being "pressured by other candidates for endorsements.

"They want to know what my plans are," before making other commitments, he said.

"By Sept. 25, I expect to have everything in place to make my decision," said the former three-term councilman.

Bakkers' lavish lifestyle described

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — With testimony in Jim Bakker's fraud trial sounding like a script from "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous," witnesses described the PTL founder's lavish homes, a $5,000 Christmas tree and a two-story, air-conditioned tree house.

Using a wooden pointer and enlarged photographs of Bakker's homes, interior decorator James Taggart on Monday described the decorating work he did for the evangelist.

Taggart's testimony came three days after he was sentenced to more than 17 years in prison and fined $500,000 on tax evasion convictions.

Taggart and his brother David were convicted of evading $525,000 in income taxes on money they received from PTL. Prosecutors have said they might support a reduction in the Taggarts' sentences in exchange for testimony against Bakker.

James Taggart, 35, said Bakker ordered him to give his Highland Beach, Fla., condominium "a very glamorous look." PTL bought and renovated the condo in 1982 at a cost of $500,000.

Taggart said he sought to give the oceanfront unit the "theatrical presence" Bakker liked: plenty of mirrors, and motorized drapes with invisible seams.

Taggart said he decorated the condo for Christmas 1982 with a tree that cost $5,000 and featured hand-blown glass ornaments.

He said he used a special hoist to bring seamless, 25-foot cornices into the condominium. Draperies, bedspreads and headboards were added to a bedroom at a cost of $40,000. The master bedroom draperies could be opened and closed with a switch, he said.

Gabor's day in court nets her gag order

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Zsa Zsa Gabor transformed her encounter with a Beverly Hills cop into street theater, with hairdresser, aristocratic eighth husband and the world press watching the selection of her jury.

On Monday, the actress who appeared in "Moulin Rouge" and "Picture Mommy Dead" was mobbed by about 100 reporters at the courthouse as jury selection began. Only six reporters were allowed inside.

Miss Gabor wore a black Donna Karan dress, a string of pearls, and a flashcube-sized diamond wedding ring as she breezed into court with a trademark "Hello Dahlinks."

She was accompanied by her hairdresser, daughter and eighth husband, Prince Frederick von Anhalt, Germany's Duke of Saxony.

Defense attorney William Graysen estimated a five- to seven-day trial, with jury selection ending today.

Municipal Judge Charles G. Rubin immediately imposed a gag order on the case, attempting to silence the outspoken Miss Gabor and her supporters.

"This is the case of the people versus Zsa Zsa Gabor," Rubin told the first 18 prospective panelists, who included an accountant, a lawyer, a computer programmer and a housekeeper-cook.

Cooler temperatures likely

From Staff and Wire Reports

Mostly cloudy skies and cool temperatures are in store for tonight, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, with a 40 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms. The low will be near 60 and winds will be from the southeast at 10-15 mph.

Wednesday is expected to continue mostly cloudy and cooler with a 30 percent chance of showers and a few thunderstorms. The high will be in the upper 60s and winds will be from the east-southeast at 10-20 mph.

Monday's high of 83 was 19 degrees cooler than the record high of 102 set for that date in 1930. The overnight low of 66 was 15 degrees warmer than the record low of 51 set for this date in 1975.

STATE

A secondary surge of polar air triggered showers and thunderstorms in the Texas Panhandle today as forecasters predicted the system would continue southward movement through the state.

The cold air's leading edge stretched across the Panhandle from Childress to Clovis, N.M., the National Weather Service said.

The remnants of an earlier cold front, now nearly stationary, were situated across Central Texas from Texarkana through near Austin to north of Del Rio.

The storms resulted when moist, relatively warm air overran cold air moving into the area. Other rainfall developed in the South Plains, east of Midland and also off the upper Gulf coast, the weather service said.

Mostly cloudy conditions were reported across the northern half of Texas while skies were partly cloudy over southern sections.

Winds were generally easterly to southeasterly around the state at speeds of 5 to 10 mph, with 10 to 15 mph in the Panhandle.

Bush enrolling school children in war on drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, seeking to enlist the nation's young people in his war on drugs, today declared in a nationally televised speech that refusing drugs "won't make you a nerd."

"Most of you are doing the right thing," Bush told the nation's schoolchildren in his text. "But for those of you who let drugs make their decisions for them, you can almost hear the doors slamming shut."

The president's address was being broadcast live from the library in the White House living quarters and was to be carried by all four major television networks for viewing in classrooms.

The speech came a week after he unveiled a $7.9 billion national drug strategy that calls for more prisons, more prosecutors, tougher sentences and aid to Latin American nations to help combat drug cartels.

Many Democrats have assailed the package as too modest, and Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said he was introducing legislation today to boost it to $10.1 billion. To pay for the increase, Byrd proposed cuts in many domestic and defense programs of 0.575 percent.

"Presidents don't often get the chance to talk directly to students. So today, for each of you sitting in a classroom or assembly hall — this message goes straight to you," Bush said.

The president said drugs were an "equal opportunity destroyer."

"They have no conscience," he said. "They don't care where the money comes from. They just murder people. Young and old, good and bad, innocent and guilty — it doesn't matter. For too many, drugs mean death."

Displaying a badge from a slain 22-year-old New York police officer, Bush added: "I keep this badge in a drawer in my desk to remind me of that."

The badge belonged to New York City police officer Eddie Byrne, who was killed in 1988 while protecting a witness in a drug case. It was presented to Bush during a campaign appearance in New York last year by Byrne's father.

Bush displayed the badge several times during the campaign.

In a speech that aides said was particularly tailored to schoolchildren, Bush said: "I'll let you in on a secret: we all can succeed. If you don't use drugs, you can be anything you want to be ... So don't blow it."

MC

Angelo termed his approach to raising Midland College to four-year and graduate-level status "somewhat revolutionary." But Commissioner Durward Wright said the idea was not new. Wright said he publicly proposed the concept several years ago. Wright also expressed concern over MC's vocational-technical programs were the UT System to take over the Midland campus.

On the Nov. 7 ballot will be some important state-level issues as well as a proposal concerning legalized parimutuel wagering on horse races in Midland County.

Adding the Midland College referendum to the ballot "would give us the benefit of public opinion that heretofore has been conjecture," said Commissioner Guy McCrary.

Commissioner Win Brown said it would be "advisable to have the referendum."

And Angelo said that "Midland is in a unique position" in the Texas Legislature and in Austin academic powers to protect Midland College.

He cited the influences of:

■ Texas Representative Tom Craddick, whom he termed as probably "the strongest state representative" in Texas and chairman of the Republican caucus.

■ Bill Roden, a Midland independent oilman who he called a "strong" member of The University of Texas Board of Regents.

■ And, Frank Cahoon, a Midland independent oilman, former Midland City Councilman and former Texas representative who is a member of the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

In considering the concept of turning MC over to the UT System, Wright expressed concern of MC faculty and staff members of possibly "losing jobs."

Angelo replied that "the mechanics" of the UT takeover "would have to be worked out."

As it now stands, the MC campus is "beautiful," Angelo said, and MC is "a first-class deal."

Midland College, Angelo said, can be a "part of the University of Texas and still preserve the community college. It would be the Midland campus, and you would have an Odessa campus. They would be equal."

Meanwhile, Angelo's said his proposed referendum, would "make sure the community has an opportunity to fully consider this potential opportunity" of bringing MC into the UT System.

Assistant City Editor Allen Howland also contributed to this story.

The soldiers have paid $160 each to take part in the raft trip that will follow the river through Big Bend National Park and is scheduled to end in Brownsville on Oct. 3. The British Army paid one-third of the cost and private groups donated the remaining $18,000 for the trip.

They will be accompanied by three support vans, a U.S. Border Patrol tactical squad and a U.S. Customs agent.

Last November, a group of snipers opened fire on a trio of rafters as they floated through Colorado Canyon, killing a man who tried to shield his wife from the gunfire.

But the fair-skinned soldiers, with noses and ears painted with sun screen, appeared to fear the blazing sun more then sniper attacks.

"We are soldiers," Crane said. "We are quite confident everything's going to run according to plan."

Gus de la Vina, U.S. Border Patrol deputy chief patrol agent for the El Paso sector, was not as confident.

"This river is treacherous, they call it in Spanish the Rio Bravo, and by the nature of its makeup all agents working the Rio Grande know it can be treacherous at the next bend. So there is some hazard and there is some danger," de la Vina said.

"We're always alert for snipers. Two weeks ago we had a shooting; we were pinned down near the black bridge ... That's always a potential. We have no real control on the Mexican side."

De la Vina said Mexican officials have been briefed on the soldiers' trip.

Few responded when asked if their families were concerned. "Their biggest impression is they think we're on a holiday," said Martin Saunders of Wales.

The soldiers have trained for 17 weeks, mostly on their own time, on 1,600-meter, man-made canoe rapids to prepare for the trip.

Their raft, emblazoned with the motto — "What would you do for a pint?" — was sold to the team at half price by a Wales company.

Green King Brewery, the largest independent brewery in the United Kingdom, has paid some of the costs and will provide the warm celebration ale at the end of the trip.

BAKKER

Bakker is on trial in U.S. District Court on 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy. He could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined more than $5 million if convicted. Prosecutors say he used nearly $4 million in ministry funds to finance a lavish lifestyle.

"The Bakkers had a tendency to grow very bored with what they had," Taggart testified about Bakker and his wife, Tammy, who is not charged. "It was not unusual to see something completely replaced more than once."

The Bakkers' five-level Tega Cay, S.C., parsonage underwent extensive redecorating, Taggart said. The master bedroom was changed completely at least twice and the living room three times, he said.

In all, 23 witnesses testified Monday, most describing the Bakkers' lifestyle.

Don Hardister, the Bakkers' former bodyguard, testified that the couple's son, Jamie, had a two-story tree house at Tega Cay that at one time was air conditioned.

Prosecutor Jerry Miller asked what happened to the air conditioner.

"I know who removed it. I took it out and put it in the doghouse," Hardister said.

Other witnesses described details from the Bakkers' opulent lifestyle, including:

■ $140,000 in kitchen and dining room renovations at Tega Cay; a $25,592 garage and atrium addition; a 15-by-18-foot closet added to the master bedroom and a bedroom for Jamie Bakker son at a cost of $92,278.

■ A $570 shower curtain for daughter Tammy Sue's bathroom and $439 worth for throw pillows for her bedroom.

■ An insurance policy that covered more than $158,000 worth of furs and jewelry, including a $45,000 ring. PTL paid the insurance premium, which totaled about $2,500 in 1985.

■ $83,000 in security equipment at the Bakkers' Gatlinburg, Tenn., home.

■ A $10,910 presidential Rolex watch Mrs. Bakker purchased in December 1984.

At least once, Taggart said, Bakker joked about the finances for expensive trips.

During a trip to Palm Springs, Calif., Taggart said, Bakker told those present to "thank the PTL partners."

Outside court, Mrs. Bakker appeared on the "Donahue" show, saying the couple never intended to misuse PTL contributions.

"We know inside we are not guilty," she said in the interview recorded Friday and broadcast Monday. "If I was guilty, I'd hide my head, but when you're not guilty you're not guilty."

If contributions were misused, it was never by intent, she said.

"The wonderful thing about God is he says you give and it shall be given to you. I thought that was what was happening," she said. "I thought it was coming to us as a result of honoring his word."

GABOR

Graysen's first question to the prospective panelists focused on their familiarity with an obscene directive Miss Gabor claims the officer told her and which she allegedly took as an order to leave.

Miss Gabor was mobbed again by a crush of reporters and camera crews as she left for lunch recess.

"I think it's exciting," she said of the proceedings, before leaving for a lunch of black bean soup at the Polo Lounge.

On July 12, Miss Gabor pleaded innocent to charges of misdemeanor battery on a police officer, disobeying a police officer's orders, driving with an expired license, having an open bottle of whiskey in her car and having an expired car registration.

If convicted, she faces a maximum jail term of two years and a $4,000 fine.

She was arrested June 14 after her $215,000 Rolls-Royce Corniche convertible was pulled over for the registration violation, but drove off as the officer was checking for other infractions and then allegedly slapped him when he stopped her again two blocks later.

Miss Gabor maintains she was verbally and physically abused by an officer she contends has a history of harassing celebrities.

In January, authorities said, she spouted profanities when she was taken off an airliner in Atlanta because her two dogs were loose in the plane. A similar incident occurred in 1968 when she illegally took a dog with her to Spain.

HOLT

"Since my days on the council I have ignored the political side, instead concentrating on national fundraising for the president. With that now behind me, so to speak, I now have the opportunity to consider pursuing my long interest in serving Texas from the governor's office," Holt said.

The decision is "right around the corner," Holt said, adding that he doesn't want speculation about a possible bid to go "on and on," the way Amarillo oilman T. Boone Pickens' eventual decision not to run went.

If Holt decides to run, his hat will join those of Midland oilman and rancher Clayton Williams Jr., former Secretary of State Jack Rains of Houston and Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance of Lubbock in the ring.

Duchess of York expecting again

LONDON (AP) — The Duchess of York, daughter-in-law of Queen Elizabeth II, is expecting another baby in March, Buckingham Palace announced today.

The former Sarah Ferguson and her husband, Prince Andrew, were "very pleased" to make the announcement, said a palace statement.

Andrew is the second son of Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh, and the baby will be the monarch's sixth grandchild.

For the royal family, it provided a happy contrast to the announcement Aug. 30 that Andrew's older sister, Princess Anne, is separating from her husband of nearly 16 years, Mark Phillips.

If the new baby is a boy, he will superscede his sister, 13-month-old Princess Beatrice, to become fifth in line to the throne. A girl would follow Beatrice as sixth in line.

The palace said the duchess was "in excellent health," and was expected to fulfill her existing program of engagements, while scaling down her activities toward the end of the year.

Andrew, 29, a navy lieutenant, was attending a refresher helicopter course at Portland navy base in southern England when the announcement was made.

The red-haired duchess, who will be age 30 in October, was attending a literary luncheon, having recently written and published two children's books about a helicopter named Budgie.

"Budgie at Bendick's Point" and "Budgie The Little Helicopter" are dedicated to Andrew and Beatrice respectively.

Sarah and Andrew are both licensed helicopter pilots.

COUNTY

Petty, who draws about $44,000 annually, said he easily could make much more money on "the outside" but that he is dedicated to the criminal-justice system. Some less experienced prosecutors make in the $30,000s. County secretaries and clerks start at $15,000 a year. Deputy sheriffs' base wages may range from about $21,000 up to the mid-$30,000s. Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter draws $42,000 a year, which is on par with most other elected county officials.

The highest paid county official is County-Court-at-Law judge Willie DuBose, who yearly draws almost $70,000, which, by state law, is 90 percent of the salaries drawn by Texas State District Court Judges Vann Culp, Pat Baskin and Dean Rucker. Other higher-paid county officials include County Judge Bill Ahders and County Attorney Mark H. Dettman. Each will be earning $57,500 in 1990.

The commissioners considered Petty's proposal.

"We are not insensitive to what you are saying," said Commissioner Guy McCrary, who draws about $26,000.

In effect, the commissioners expressed deference to "the folks (taxpayers) who are paying the tab" of county government and noted that many people are out of jobs or underpaid and underemployed.

"Are we going to have a criminal-justice system that work?" Petty asked. "You are going to have to pay for it."

In countering some of Petty's contention, Commissioner Durward Wright said that the "cost of living has diminished below zero."

Of the county's $18-million 1990 budget, which still is open to amendments, the majority goes toward salaries.

And the biggest chunk — $4.5 million — is going toward operating the Sheriff's Department and jail. The $4.5 million includes $2.4 million for the new jail. Of that, $1.9 million is going for salaries. Additionally, $2 million, including almost $1.5 million for salaries, goes for operating the Sheriff's Department outside the jail.

Democrats hope to keep Wright, Coelho seats; Koch fights for NYC

Associated Press

Geren Lanier Koch Dinkins

■ Related story Page 3D

Democrats in Texas and California today hope to reclaim two House seats in special elections prompted by the resignation of Speaker Jim Wright and Majority Whip Tony Coelho in a Capitol Hill bloodletting over ethics.

New York Mayor Edward Koch is looking for a come-from-behind victory in the Democratic primary over David Dinkins, who could become the city's first black mayor. And in Detroit, Mayor Coleman Young is expected to brush back a swarm of primary challengers who want to keep him from winning a record fifth term in November.

Among other elections around the country today are mayoral primaries in Buffalo, N.Y., New Haven, Conn., and Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn.

In the congressional races, Democrats are basking in the support of the leaders they are trying to succeed. Although Wright and Coelho resigned because of alleged ethics violations, both remain popular and have been central figures in the campaigns.

Wright has campaigned for Democrat Pete Geren, a Fort Worth lawyer and former aide to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. Geren faces Republican Bob Lanier, a TV medical commentator, who has countered with endorsements from President Bush and former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry.

Lanier said he initially worried that Wright's endorsement would be a major factor in the race but now believes "it hasn't been quite as much as we anticipated."

Still, he conceded that he's "swimming upstream" as a Republican in a district with a long history of sending Democrats to Congress.

In California's San Joaquin Valley, Coelho has endorsed Democratic state Assemblyman Gary Condit in a low-key race against Republican Clare Berryhill, a former assemblyman and state agriculture chief.

Berryhill and Condit are considered the leading candidates among the six running. Unless one candidate gets more than 50 percent of the vote, there will be a runoff.

The New York City race, once considered a lost cause for Koch, has turned into a cliffhanger between the brash mayor and his soft-spoken challenger.

Koch sent out an SOS call to his supporters Monday, saying he needed a big turnout to win his party's nomination for an unprecedented fourth term.

"I'm saying to everybody who understands that expression: 'I need you. Come out tomorrow. Vote for me. Mayday! Mayday!,' " Koch said at a lunchtime rally.

At a school dedication, Koch pulled Dinkins aside to call for a unity rally on Wednesday, no matter who wins.

"I think that's a nice gesture," said a smiling Dinkins, who is the Manhattan borough president. "I mean, he recognizes that the likelihood is that I'm going to succeed, and he offers to help me, I think that's fine."

Koch said it was important for his party to work on defeating Republican Rudolph Giuliani, the former federal prosecutor who leads cosmetic heir Ronald Lauder in the GOP race.

In Detroit, Young faces a dozen challengers, including Rep. John Conyers, a 13-term Democratic congressman who says Young has been mayor too long.

Conyers, who like Young is black, has benefited from the vocal support of Jesse Jackson, who exhorted a crowd Monday to "keep hope alive" by voting for Conyers.

A poll released Sunday showed Young well in front, with Conyers running neck-and-neck with accountant Tom Barrow for second place. The top two finishers in the non-partisan primary advance to November's general election.

Nine candidates are battling to succeed St. Paul Mayor George Latimer, who is quitting after 12 years to become a law school dean. Across the river in Minneapolis, Mayor Don Fraser faces six challengers.

The top two vote-getters in each city will advance to the Nov. 7 general election.

Buffalo Mayor James Griffin, a maverick Democrat, faces two challengers in his party's primary but is also running unopposed for both the Republican and Conservative party nominations.

In New Haven, Democratic state Sen. John Daniels is trying to become the first black mayor of the mostly white Connecticut city. His opposition for his party's nomination in the overwhelmingly Democratic city comes from John DeStefano Jr., the hand-picked candidate of Mayor Biagio DiLieto, who is retiring.

Immigrants accuse official Ethiopian delegation of human rights violations

New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — Fifteen years of pent-up anger against Ethiopia's Communist government erupted in an emotional confrontation between Ethiopian officials attending peace talks in Atlanta and local Ethiopian immigrants, witnesses said Monday.

The Ethiopian delegates to peace talks at the Carter Presidential Center walked out of a meeting with 150 to 200 immigrants Sunday after the local Ethiopians accused them of committing gross human rights violations and urged them to defect, the witnesses said.

Meanwhile, Carter Center spokeswoman Carrie Harmon said the Ethiopian delegation and representatives of Eritrean rebels resumed talks Monday afternoon after a day and a half of separate meetings.

Tegne Haile, owner of an advertising firm in Atlanta, said he asked the Ethiopian delegation's leader, Dr. Ashegre Yigletu, to respond Sunday to charges of corruption and brutality.

"I told him that there is an accusation against you," said Haile. "You are accused by the underground workers' movement as one of the four most corrupt and brutal officials in Ethiopia."

Haile, nephew of Merid Bekele, a member of the government delegation, said the regime executed his brother in 1974 because he advocated a civilian government.

Bekele, Ethiopia's vice minister for information, said the delegation called the informal meeting "to teach the community about the peace initiative, about the peace effort, and, in general, about the objective conditions at home."

Since President Mengistu Haile Mariam's government took power in 1974, Ethiopia has had one of the worst human rights records in the world, according to the U.S. State Department and Amnesty International.

The Sunday meeting in a conference room of the downtown Ritz-Carlton hotel began about 4:15 p.m. and lasted about an hour and a half, Haile and others said.

The crowd became angry after Yigletu, secretary of the Workers' Party of Ethiopia, gave a long speech praising the regime and encouraging them to invest their money in Ethiopia. People who were present said Yigletu also warned the immigrants that criticizing the regime is unpatriotic.

"The tone was condescending and very emotional," said Mentaub Araya, an administrative assistant to Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young. "He said to complain about the truth would make us less Ethiopian. I don't think he has the right to give me Ethiopianness or not."

Haig calls report he's 'Deep Throat' totally untrue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexander Haig today denied as "totally untrue" a published report saying he would reveal in a future book that he was the "Deep Throat" source for many newspaper stories abcut Watergate.

"My efforts then and now have been to preserve the presidency, not to tear it down," said Haig, who was Richard Nixon's chief of staff in his last 16 months in office.

"The story regarding my being 'Deep Throat' is totally untrue," Haig said.

The New York Daily News, quoting unnamed sources, said Haig would disclose that he was "Deep Throat" in his memoirs, to be published in 1992 by Warner Books.

Washington Post reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, who wrote many of the stories that led to exposure of the Watergate scandal that brought about Nixon's resignation, have conistently refused to identify "Deep Throat," who they said was a major inside source.

CNN considers competing with network newscasts

ATLANTA (AP) — Cable News Network today said it is considering an evening newscast to compete directly with the big three TV networks.

The idea under consideration calls for a newscast at 6 p.m. or 6:30 p.m. EDT "to go head-to-head with the networks," and CNN anchorman Bernard Shaw would have a role on the program, CNN spokesman Steve Haworth said.

But he said CNN officials haven't made a final determination of whether a frontal assault on Tom Brokaw, Peter Jennings and Dan Rather would be a good idea.

"There are a number of changes we're talking about, and that's one of the changes," he said.

The proposal calls for a half-hour, stand-alone newscast, unlike CNN's virtually 24-hour, all-news format, in which the news is continuously updated.

CNN currently runs news in the 6-6:30 period and shows the entertainment news program "Show Biz Today" at 6:30 p.m., when NBC, ABC and CBS air the first of their evening news feeds.

Bales of cocaine lead to arrest of Danish crew

MIAMI (AP) — The Coast Guard intercepted a freighter in the Bahamas, found 15 bales of cocaine bobbing alongside the ship and arrested seven Danish crewmen, according to a federal affidavit filed Monday.

Authorities seized 1,100 pounds of cocaine in the capture Sunday of the freighter Nerma north of the Berry Islands, about 40 miles northwest of Nassau, officials said.

The Coast Guard also seized three speedboats found near the ship. Speedboats are often used to carry cocaine shipments from ship to shore.

The Nerma was detected on radar Saturday, according to the affidavit filed in U.S. District Court by Drug Enforcement Administration agent Robert Rowland.

A cutter was sent to intercept the ship, which is registered in Vanuatu, a South Pacific archipelago nation between Fiji and New Caldedonia.

Coast Guardsmen boarded the Nerma after seeing the bales of cocaine, each weighing about 70 pounds, floating alongside, the affidavit said. Each bale consisted of smaller plastic packages of cocaine arranged so they would float together.

After the cutter escorted the Nerma to Miami Beach, another bale was found aboard the freighter, the affidavit said.

The seven men arrested were identified as Bent Nissen, 55; Carl Jensen, 55; Jans Madsen, 63; Bent Mortensen, 47; Carsten Pederson, 32; Brian Rasmussen, 31; and Martin Rasmussen, 41.

They appeared Monday before U.S. Magistrate William C. Turnoff, and were ordered held without bond in pretrial detention.

Authorities said it was unusual for Danes to be arrested in drug cases in the area.

"At first I couldn't find a Danish interpreter," said the head of federal court interpreters for Miami, Irene King-Tomassini. She said a friend suggested the Berlitz language school, "and they put me on to an employee of a cruise ship line who spoke the language."

During the hearing, Turnoff asked Assistant U.S. Attorney William Jung about the ship's registry.

"I have been told that its flag is the nation of Vanuatu," Jung replied. "I understand that's north of the Australian coast."

Asked if he could elaborate, Jung said, "That's all I can tell you. My geography in that area is limited to McHale's Navy."

Cuomo calls Bush's war on drugs 'a joke'

Hearst News Service

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — In a hard-hitting speech in California, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo became the first major Democratic figure to declare that Bush's eight-month honeymoon is over, and called the Republican president's war on drugs a "joke."

He said Sunday night it is time for the Democrats to end their "quiescence" and articulate their positive vision and philosophy.

"It doesn't make much sense to me to wait to see if we have some kind of economic setback or if the president stumbles, and then inherit the catastrophe," he told reporters before a speech at a fund-raiser.

He called Bush's drug war a "joke," because the proposal involves such small amounts of money. He likened it to British Prime Minister Winston Churchill "declaring war against the Nazis but first asking if they could afford the soldiers."

Cuomo referred to his 1984 convention speech in San Francisco, in which he described two cities, one a glittering, shining city on a hill that President Reagan saw and another one of struggle and deprivation that Reagan never knew existed.

Cuomo said that Bush, in speaking of hungry children and AIDS babies and homeless people, has "broken with Reagan. The president has admitted that there is another city," Cuomo said, and has thus "candidly rejected his predecessor's narrow view of life in America."

Bush can follow up and provide government programs to meet great needs in housing, health care, drugs, AIDS and many other areas, Cuomo said, or he can "redefine the old standard of presidential boldness by continuing to speak softly and carrying a big tennis racquet."

Cuomo sounded very much like a potential 1992 presidential candidate, though he won't decide until January whether to run in 1990 for a third term as governor.

He said Sunday he is "not even thinking about" running for president in 1992.

Cuomo said that if Bush does nothing more than "express his sadness and pray to the heavens ... he will be revealed as an unconverted conservative Republican who has simply earned himself some cheap grace by reciting a little Democratic poetry."

U.S. citizens could become targets of drug cartel violence, witnesses say

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the U.S. war on drugs begins to put a crimp in drug lords' operations, Americans may become targets for terrorists both in South America and at home, say government and private witnesses.

"This assassination of government officials, legislators and judges will no longer solely be a Colombian, indeed Andes, problem," said Robert H. Kupperman, a senior adviser at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington.

"The phenomenon may well spread to our borders. The American people must understand the true costs of waging an aggressive campaign.

"With their enormous wealth and easy access to advanced weapons, it is not beyond the realm of the possible that Exocet missiles might be directed against Coast Guard cutters or stingers (anti-aircraft missiles) against U.S. commercial aircraft," Kupperman said Monday.

So far, terrorist acts have focused primarily on Colombians, including a leading presidential candidate, a former mayor of the drug cartel center of Medellin and other officials.

But if U.S. efforts to shut down growing, processing and shipment of cocaine prove effective, Americans are likely to become terrorist targets, a series of witnesses told the Senate Governmental Operations Committee.

If the drug cartels mount a campaign "to have blood running in the streets of America, I can't give you assurances we would be in a position to pre-empt it," conceded Oliver B. Revell, investigations chief for the FBI.

Revell and others said South America's cocaine empires already have shown their ruthlessness and inclination to use the techniques of terrorism when their operations are pinched.

"They have dealt in blood since their inception," Revell said, adding that he expected the first strikes to come against American targets — personnel and facilities — in Colombia, the hub of the cocaine trade.

"It's easier for them to operate there," he said. "But that does not mean we are not vulnerable here in the United States." The cocaine cartels already have elaborate networks in place inside U.S. borders and have carried out assassinations, primarily of other drug traffickers.

Revell noted that Colombian drug lords hired a team in 1987 which assassinated Barry Seal, a former drug pilot and an informant for the Drug Enforcement Administration, in Louisiana.

And cartel operatives enlisted the Colombian urban leftist guerrilla group M-19 in 1985 to storm the Palace of Justice in Bogota and assassinate Supreme Court judges.

If the United States is successful in extraditing drug figures for trial, "It is quite clear that this group ... will respond violently," said another witness, Brian Michael Jenkins of the RAND Corporation.

"We have to anticipate the possibility of hostage-taking. There is no question they have the capacity, there is no question they have the record."

Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, lawmakers were responding to President Bush's anti-drug initiative and making suggestions to beef it up.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., an Intelligence Committee member, said a secret Bush directive authorizes the military "to be physically involved with units in the field where we have been invited to have our law enforcement people."

DeConcini said the military would be able to offer protection to drug enforcement agents and other law enforcement officials in the field in Bolivia and Peru, and also called on the CIA and other intelligence agencies to share information with law enforcement agencies.

Reported Medellin cartel money man denied bail in laundering case

ATLANTA (AP) — The reputed money man behind Colombia's Medellin cocaine cartel has been denied bail after pleading innocent to money-laundering charges.

Eduardo Martinez Romero, the first of Colombia's "Extraditables" brought to the United States without trial, is accused of helping the cartel launder about $1.2 billion in drug profits through U.S. banks.

The cartel, based in the Colombian city of Medellin, is believed to supply 80 percent of the cocaine in the United States.

During an arraignment Monday, U.S. Magistrate Joel M. Feldman ordered Martinez held without bond after prosecutors contended he was likely to flee the country before a trial.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Wilmer Parker III told Feldman that Martinez could easily afford to lose whatever bond amount was set to ensure his return.

Defense lawyers Ed Garland and Oscar Rodriguez said the 36-year-old Martinez was a highly educated businessman with a loving wife and four children.

Historic buildings of Plains preserved in drawings

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Four illustrators and a historian are capturing the flavor of Plains, the friendly town that gained world renown in 1976 when Americans elected a peanut farmer to serve as their 39th president.

Under a program known as the Historic American Building Survey, the five have been working since June 12, studying and sketching historic buildings that eventually may be included in the Jimmy Carter National Historic Site.

"It's a privilege to work on this project," said architect John Westberg of Tempe, Ariz. "He's making a difference on this planet. He seems less concerned about his own life than what he can do for other people."

Westberg, 35, the team's leader, said residents have been helpful and seem to appreciate the efforts to preserve the town's heritage. The five were chosen from hundreds of applicants and are paid by the National Park Service. Their headquarters is an apartment next to the one Carter and his young wife, Rosalynn, rented in 1953 when he returned from the Navy.

They have attended Sunday Bible classes given by the former president and met with the Carters at the couple's home on Church Street. They've spent weeks taking precise measurements of Carter's high school, his boyhood home in nearby Archery, a former store operated by the Carter family, the apartment, and the century-old depot that served as Carter's 1976 campaign headquarters.

The Park Service already owns the depot and high school, but is negotiating for the boyhood home and store. The Carters have donated their home, but will continue to live in it.

From photographs and sketches, Westberg and three others will prepare detailed ink drawings of the five buildings for the National Archives. The Carter home was not included in the building survey.

"It takes a lot of care," said Dana Peak, as she inked a cornice of the high school. "The drawings may be scrutinized by a lot of people," Westberg said. "It's very important that they be accurate."

Ms. Peak, a June graduate of the University of California, Davis, said there's a strong feeling of community in the Sumter County town of 650. "The people have been friendly and supportive."

"The people are very enthusiastic about the Jimmy Carter Historic Site," agreed architect Jason Breyer, 25, of Fargo, N.D.

Dale Waldron, 21, of Preston, Conn., a student at the Rhode Island School of Design, said he welcomed an opportunity to meet the former president. "I found him very open. He's very visible. He goes to a lot of meetings."

The fifth team member, historian Elizabeth Barthold of Crofton, Md., spends her time interviewing residents and wading through real estate records at the Sumter County Courthouse in Americus.

"People here are really proud of Plains and they want to share," she said. "They feel it is special and they're interested in having it recorded."

Ms. Barthold is preparing reports on 23 historic buildings in Plains, including the five that are to become a part of the National Historic Site. She also is studying a pond house that belonged to Miss Lillian, the president's mother, a former hospital where Carter was born and a service station made famous by the president's late brother, Billy Carter.

"At first I was so amazed that Jimmy Carter, president of the United States, came from here. But the Carters are just incredible people."

Ms. Barthold was impressed by the functional design of the old homes. They sit on brick pillars for ventilation and protection from moisture. Many have high steep roofs, high ceilings and hallways running through their entire length for more efficient cooling.

Westberg said the high school is typical of hundreds built during the 1920s with a central entrance, wings on each side and an auditorium in the back.

"It's disintegrating fast," he said. "Water has gotten into the outside walls and it's rotting the floor and ceiling away."

'Frankingstein' seen as newest Capitol monster

By CHRISTOPHER HANSON
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — There's a monster on the loose on Capitol Hill, according to a small band of dissident congressmen.

They call it Frankingstein — their term for Congress's runaway "franking," or free mail binge — and they are seeking ways to restrain the beast.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., has proposed the most radical solution: abolish franked mass mailings entirely. But Wilson has his work cut out for him, with Congress already thinking of 1990 elections as it reconvenes this week after the August recess.

The franking rule, which lets members send out unstamped mail to voters at taxpayers' expense, is an especially prized perk that few would give up lightly.

As the late House Speaker Sam Rayburn once advised: "There are three rules for getting reelected: one is use the frank, two is use the frank, and three is use the frank."

A great many do. Use of the frank surged, and by 1988 about 900 million franked items were sent to constituents. The annual franking cost hit $115 million last year, an inflation-adjusted increase of 86 per cent since 1972.

As 1990 approaches, Senate and House officers are busy planning a 25-acre "mini-complex" in the Washington suburbs simply to print and process members' mail.

Defenders of the frank say mailings are a good way to keep voters abreast of issues. Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., says a franked mailing is the best way to get an effective response to his constituents after a televised speech by President Bush.

Rep. John Miller, R-Wash., favors some restraints on franking costs but says mass mailings are needed to inform voters on important topics that are ignored by the news media.

What kind of topics? A little research yielded the following examples of events that would have gone unreported were it not for congressional newsletters:

■ Golden Bulldogs. More than a few members, including Sen. William Roth, R-Del., reported winning the "Golden Bulldog" award for budget-trimming votes from the Watchdogs of the Treasury organization. Photos of winners with bulldog trophies generally accompanied the reports.

■ Local Heroes. Congressman Rod Chandler, R-Wash., reported that he had created a "Heroes" award "to recognize unsung heroes for their benevolent contributions to society." A recent winner got an American flag as a prize.

■ Newborn Star. Miller reported in his June 1989 newsletter that he had appeared on the Today Show. "I talked with Bryant Gumbel about illegal fishing," he wrote. A photo of Miller on the set with Gumbel ran beside the article.

Some congressional newsletters do contain substantive information, such as a recent pamphlet — sent out by Miller, among others —explaining how the elderly can avoid income tax overpayment.

A few are erudite. In wittily sketching the haphazard way in which his state avoided becoming a nuclear waste dump, Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., quoted Scottish poet Robert Burns — "The best laid plans of o' mice and men ..." — and German statesman Otto von Bismarck — "If you like laws and sausage, you should never watch either being made."

The newsletters of some other congressional members are like ads on the Late, Late Show that repeat, repeat, repeat to sell a product. For instance, a letter to his constituents last summer from Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska, carried 56 references to himself in just four pages, including the phrases "Congressman for all Alaska" (twice) and "Alaska Congressman Don Young" (nine times). Name familiarity helps win elections.

Other vote-trolling techniques include taking credit with headlines such as "Smith Opposes Congressional Pay Raise." Then there is ingratiation engineered by members signing their first names in photocopied longhand.

Taken together, congressional newsletters portray a world in which one individual — your senator or representative — makes a difference day after day, struggles valiantly to unite missing children with their parents, and defends to the death the right of American mothers to bake chocolate chip cookies.

The anti-frank revolt within Congress has been inspired not so much by the smarmy, unctuous tone of the newsletters as by their cost. Republicans such as party whip Newt Gingrich, D-Ga., also have a partisan motive — the frank favors incumbents, a majority of whom are Democrats.

Reagan health still astounding

One has to marvel at not only the exceptional health exhibited by former President Ronald Reagan, but also the optimistic outlook on life that no doubt is a strong contributor to his healthy physical condition. On Friday, the 78-year-old Reagan breezed through brain surgery to remove fluid that had accumulated following a horseback-riding accident two months ago and doctors Monday were saying he may go home soon.

Reagan has always led an active life, spending a great deal of time in the outdoors, chopping wood and horseback riding. It's that activity that led to his current hospital stay. While riding in Mexico in July, Reagan was thrown from a horse and struck his head. Doctors say that is what led to the accumulation of blood on his brain.

The surgery was certainly not Reagan's first since taking office in 1981 and was not, potentially, as serious as that performed in March of that year when Reagan was shot by a would-be assassin. At that time doctors removed a bullet they said was about an inch from Reagan's heart.

Since that time, Reagan has also undergone several surgeries to remove both benign and cancerous polyps from his colon, cancerous skin from his nose and to correct the curvature of his ring finger on his left hand.

Now it's true that the president of the United States, and also all former presidents, have access to some of the best medical expertise available. But even the best medical doctors will tell you that a patient's mental attitude can have a major effect on how they recover from medical procedures.

Reagan's attitude obviously has helped. In spite of all these medical problems — ones that might have darkened the outlook of some individuals — Reagan has maintained his cheerful, progressive and optimistic outlook on life in general, never giving in to that sullen state of mind which marks those who have given up on life.

Always popular with Americans, even those with political beliefs far different from his own, Reagan today remains well-respected.

That view of Reagan just might be the result of the way the former president approaches life.

Another View:

Giamatti described as Renaissance man

A. Bartlett Giamatti, who died so suddenly a few days ago, understood the importance of institutions, whether the institution happened to be baseball or Yale University or civilization itself.

If it functions as it should, each provides the "free and ordered space" — the rules and conventions — within which freedom can thrive. And because he understood that, Giamatti was, deep down, a traditionalist.

He knew that human beings can only find and truly define themselves in the context of historical understanding and structure. That was one of the reasons he detested the gimmicks and glitz that have been grafted on to baseball in the past generation — the exploding scoreboards, the designated hitter, artificial turf and, possibly, in the not-too-distant future, the aluminum bat.

It is also why he would have been so good for the game as its commissioner.

When he died — he was just 51 years old — the sportswriters called him a Renaissance man, a description that no doubt would have embarrassed him. And while he surely was a Renaissance scholar, he was first and foremost an amateur in the original sense — a lover of poetry, a lover of baseball in general and of the Boston Red Sox in particular, and a man who loved learning for its own sake.

When he became president of Yale in 1978 — the youngest man ever to hold the post — he said all he ever wanted to be was president of the American League. That goal eluded him, but he did become president of the National League and, earlier this year, commissioner of baseball — where, ironically, his greatest moment of notoriety would come with the Pete Rose affair, which must have been the last thing he wanted to confront when he took the commissioners's job. Yet he did it — with skill and patience and a determination that grew out of his deep respect for the integrity of his institution. The man who some said was just an Ivy League pantywaist proved he could be as tough as a Medici.

One of the enduring paradoxes of baseball is that it is a game played by children that can best be understood by adults. Giamatti, the professor's son and professor-to-be, was never good enough to play it at any organized level — he was manager of the team at his high school. But he brought far more to it than most — from Dante, from Spenser, from Yale — and used it to illuminate a great many things in our lives far removed from the mown green fields on which he most liked to see the game played — preferably in the sunshine and not under artificial lights. His death thus leaves a far greater gap, and not just in baseball.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 12, the 255th day of 1989. There are 110 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 12, 1609, English explorer Henry Hudson sailed into the river that now bears his name.

On this date:

In 1814, the Battle of North Point was fought near Baltimore during the War of 1812.

In 1880, author and journalist H.L. Mencken was born in Baltimore.

In 1888, entertainer Maurice Chevalier was born in Paris.

In 1913, Olympic legend Jesse Owens was born in Danville, Ala.

In 1918, during World War I, U.S. forces led by Gen. John J. Pershing launched an attack on the German-occupied St. Mihiel salient north of Verdun, France.

In 1938, in a speech in Nuremberg, Adolf Hitler demanded self-determination for the Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia, a demand that would lead to Nazi occupation of the Sudetenland.

In 1943, during World War II, German paratroopers took Benito Mussolini from the hotel where he was being held by the Italian government.

In 1953, Massachusetts Sen. John F. Kennedy married Jacqueline Lee Bouvier in Newport, R.I.

In 1960, Democratic presidential candidate John F. Kennedy confronted the issue of his Roman Catholic faith by telling a Protestant group in Houston, "I do not speak for my church on public matters, and the church does not speak for me."

In 1974, Emperor Haile Selassie was deposed by Ethiopia's military, after ruling for 58 years.

In 1977, South African black student leader Steven Biko died while in police custody, triggering an international outcry.

In 1983, the Soviet Union vetoed a UN Security Council resolution deploring the downing of a Korean jetliner by a Soviet jet fighter on Sept. 1.

CIA could have known of arms deal

WASHINGTON — A secret Senate investigation has uncovered the possibility that the Central Intelligence Agency knew far more than it admits about the 1985 shipment of American missiles to Iran.

Jack Anderson

A former CIA desk officer told two Senate committees this summer that the CIA knew about a September 1985 arms shipment shortly after the missiles arrived in Tabriz, Iran. Testimony before the Iran-contra investigating committees in 1987 implied that the CIA was a latecomer to the operation, not learning about it until November 1985.

The information raises the possibility that the Iran-contra committees in Congress were duped when they tried to piece together the details of the operation to swap arms for American hostages. It also raises the specter of perjury by anyone who knowingly misled the committees to believe that the CIA was not involved until November, after two missile shipments had already been made.

Our sources say those questions are now being secretly investigated by the Senate Intelligence Committee.

As we reported earlier, the Iran-contra wound was secretly reopened this summer when two Senate committees, working with the General Accounting Office, began probing the question of what federal agencies knew about the illegal arms shipments. Sources told our associate Stewart Harris that the FBI had developed information about the September shipment and took it to the CIA, only to be told to back off because it was a "White House operation."

All of that occurred shortly after the September shipment — early October at the latest — the former CIA desk officer has told the Senate committees.

In contrast, the Iran-contra report compiled by the Congressional investigating committees says that then-CIA Director William Casey didn't find out about the arms-for-hostages deal until Nov. 14, 1985, in a meeting with former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane.

National Security Council consultant Michael Ledeen told the Iran-contra committees that before Nov. 14, the NSC had left the CIA in the dark because the White House was afraid the CIA might leak the information.

It has been generally assumed that the CIA joined the arms deal in November 1985 with a shipment of HAWK anti-aircraft missiles to Iran on a CIA airline.

The only record of the earlier contact between the CIA and the FBI was never turned over to the Iran-contra committees. That record is a memo written in 1987 by the same CIA desk officer. At the time, the CIA was scrambling to prepare for confirmation hearings for then-FBI Director William Webster, who had been nominated to head the CIA. Webster was quizzed on what he knew about Iran-contra.

The Senate committees have been told that the memo was written in April 1987, the same month that Webster's nomination was before the Senate Intelligence Committee. That committee discussed the information behind closed doors as part of Webster's confirmation, but never passed it along to the Iran-contra committees that were preparing their own hearings.

Congress, as part of the Iran-contra investigation, asked for all CIA documents about the affair, but staffers for both Iran-contra committees told us they never saw the memo.

CRACKING THE SALMONELLA THREAT — The recent salmonella scare in British eggs has set American food scientists on a busy chase for a remedy, in case the same thing happens here. In Britain, the bacteria were crossing what had been called the "shell barrier" between a diseased chicken and the egg contents. Several American firms have countered by marketing fresh eggs in milk-like cartons. The eggs have been removed from their shells and processed in a way that kills salmonella. So far, institutional buyers have shown the main interest, but at least one firm is planning to try to put a product into the supermarket.

CHARLEY REESE

Frank's judgment, not homosexuality, at issue

When is homosexuality a red herring? When a congressman uses it to distract the voters from the real issue.

That's how quick-witted Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., handled a revelation of an incident demonstrating monstrously flawed judgment. He quickly tried to shift the discussion to his self-admitted homosexuality.

Charley Reese

What's being a homosexual got to do with being a good congressman? he asked. Nothing, he answered.

That's true, but that's not the issue. Let's assume for a moment that Frank is heterosexual as Don Juan. Calling a prostitute from an ad in a sleazy paper, paying for the service, and then bringing the prostitute home and putting the hooker on the payroll shows lousy judgment regardless of the sex of the prostitute.

Frank has shown recently a strong tendency toward self-pity and his claim that he was victimized by the prostitute is baloney. A fool who falls in love with a prostitute may be pathetic, but he isn't a victim. Frank may need counseling.

In the meantime, the voters in his district will have to decide if a man they've shown themselves satisfied with in the past is losing it or if they still have confidence in him.

In arriving at that decision, however, they shouldn't let Frank manipulate them by making it a test of their tolerance for homosexuality. That has nothing to do with it. The issue is judgment and that's the question voters have a right to ask of Frank: can you still exercise mature judgment on issues affecting us (the voters)?

It's been my observation that judgment, unlike skills, cannot be compartmentalized. A virtuouso pianist, for example, may be a perfect fool in his or her private affairs yet still be able to play the piano beautifully. But a person who demonstrates bad judgment in his private affairs is very apt to demonstrate the same bad judgment during his working hours.

It is certainly fair to ask of a man so gullible as to be conned by a prostitute, would he not also be gullible when dealing with lobbyists? If his judgment can be so clouded by libido that he disregards the danger of AIDS by calling up an anonymous male prostitute, can he be counted on not to let his emotions cloud his judgment in a tense, emotion-packed legislative battle?

Frank has spent virtually all of his adult life in politics — as an aide to Boston Mayor Kevin White, as aide to Rep. Michael Harrington, and finally as an elected official himself. Perhaps he's suffering from burnout. People, if they re-elect him, may not be doing either him or themselves a favor.

Lifetime politicians like Frank live on a shoeshine, a smile, a quick wit, and favors done. Some of them have the sensitivity of granite and can go on indefinitely, showing no signs of stress. For all his combativeness and quick retorts in political debates, Frank doesn't seem to be that tough and insensitive.

If I lived in his district, I would naturally vote against him just on the issues. He and I have exactly opposite opinions on most matters, but at least Frank is an honest liberal and not one of those vile opportunists whose opinions change with the polling data.

But Frank's positions on issues are obviously not out of step with a majority of his constituents. Most Massachusetts politicians are liberals because most Massachusetts citizens are liberal and that's as it should be.

Still even politicians who agree with us on the issues must be assessed as to their competence, judgment, and stamina to do the job. Journalists put far more emphasis on issues than voters do but voters are right in viewing issues as not paramount.

These days it's too easy for campaign pros to position candidates based on polling data on the issues. See George Bush as an example.

PEGGY ROBERSON

Lynam fine despite blow to Wright's career

WASHINGTON — Sing no sad songs for Marshall Lynam.

Former House Speaker Jim Wright's right hand man for 27 years — until Wright's career was crushed by an ethics investigation — is doing just fine, thank you.

Peggy Roberson

With the blow of Wright's downfall cushioned by a million-dollar-plus retirement fund, the courtly Texan has now hung out his shingle here as a consultant.

Actually, Lynam had planned to make the move "downtown" from "the Hill" a couple of years ago. But that was before a brash Georgia congressman filed ethics complaints against Wright which eventually caused the speaker to resign.

"I had wanted to try my hand at something else," he said, "but Jim Wright had been so great to me for so many years, I thought it would send a wrong signal to bail out just as all this was happening."

Lynam's office is in a corner of a plush half-block-long suite that is the headquarters of Manatt, Phelps, Granddad lost his farm. I remember people lined up with tin plates on Main Street to get something to eat," Lynam recalls.

Lynam's first political impression came when he was about 10.

"Dad got a package, a cardboard poster with a blue eagle with lightening in one claw and a gear in the other that said 'NRA — National Recovery Administration — We Do Our Part.' And Dad looked at that and said, 'Happy days are here again.' He put it in the window. But, even with confidence that President Roosevelt would save the country, it was too late to save the business."

Lynam considers it "sheer luck" that he had a part in the drama of World War II.

"Never in the history of warfare had there been this gigantic body of thousands of bombers headed toward one target, the middle of Berlin," said Lynam, who saw the German capital through the gun sites of a B-17.

With the war winding down in 1945, Lynam settled on journalism as a career after the Saturday Evening Post paid him $100 for a 95-word anecdote.

Lynam's newspapering career took him all over Texas. After two years at the Texas College of Arts and Industries at Kingsville, he went to work for the Harlingen Morning Star in a neighboring South Texas town. From there he went to the Vernon Daily Record in West Texas.

His next job was city hall reporter, then East Texas editor, then managing editor of the Courier Times and Rothenberg and Phillips, a law-lobby firm headed by former Democratic National Committee chairman Charles (Chuck) Manatt.

"I am an independent consultant to them," Lynam explained. "I share quarters, but I am not a part of the firm."

"The view is not quite the same as the one I had at the Capitol," he grinned, gesturing to a scene featuring air conditioning ducts atop an adjoining building.

This week Lynam will register as a lobbyist. But he does not expect to concentrate on influencing legislation. Instead he will offer himself as a guide for clients trying to find their way through the maze of federal agencies and congressional committees.

Over lunch at the Cozy Corner Cafe — not one of Washington's famed "power lunch" spots — Lynam talked about the turns his life has taken.

Still trim and youthful-looking at age 64, the gray-bearded Lynam said, "I have been a really, really lucky man. I have had a ringside seat at the most momentous events in history."

He explained he wasn't speaking only about happenings in Washington and in foreign capitals, although he thanks Wright for allowing him to witness some of them. The events that shaped him were the Great Depression and World War II.

The depression hit hard in Bishop, Texas, (population 1,000) where he was born. "We were thrown out of our home, Dad had a big Ford automobile dealership and he lost that, Morning Telegraph in Tyler, in East Texas. From Tyler he went to the now-defunct Ft. Worth Press ("an irreverent little rag"). Lynam finally landed on the Ft. Worth Star-Telegram.

In 1962, Jim Wright, the Democrat who represented Ft. Worth, brought Lynam to Washington as his press secretary. After two years, he promoted Lynam to administrative assistant and, in 1987, to chief of staff to the speaker, a position which paid him $86,815 a year — about $4,200 more than the ceiling for other congressional staffers.

For all those years, he contributed 7.5 percent of his salary to a retirement fund to which the government contributed 2.5 percent. The accumulated total he can expect to receive is over $1 million.

"My wife looked at me with new respect when that came out in a newspaper," he laughed. "But she figures I'll have to live to be 90 to get it, and she isn't so sure how she feels about that."

His wife, the former Eddie Ann Forrest, was the ticket seller at the movie house in Kingsville when he was the projectionist while attending college. She retired recently from a longtime position with the Navy Federal Credit Union.

They have two daughters, who live in Virginia, and a son who lives in Texas, and five grandchildren.

Farmers' Almanac hopes to sow enthusiasm for new $1 coin

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — The Farmers' Almanac, renewing its crusade to revamp the nation's coinage and currency, is promoting a $1 coin to replace the dollar bill to pinch a few pennies for Uncle Sam and taxpayers.

The almanac's 1990 edition, just off the presses, also calls for the elimination of the penny and 50-cent piece. The new $1 coin could be called the Columbus Dollar, honoring the explorer who discovered the New World, the publication said.

The almanac endorses a bill introduced by Rep. Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., to direct the Treasury to mint and circulate the Columbus Dollar and halt production of the $1 bill 18 months after the coin is placed in circulation.

Under the new system, the little-used $2 bill likely would become the most popular piece of currency, says almanac editor Ray Geiger.

Geiger maintains that the new system would create a coinage and currency system that reflects contemporary values and lifestyles.

He quotes the Federal Reserve as saying replacement of the $1 bill by the $1 coin would save the Treasury more than $120 million a year.

"It costs approximately 2.6 cents to print a $1 bill and the bill lasts about 18 months before it goes to the shredder. It costs 3½ cents to mint a $1 coin, but the coin will last 20 years," he said.

"The Farmers' Almanac, 173 years old, has always been a champion of the common man, and we think the common man is entitled to protect his right to a coinage that's sensible and realistic," he said in an interview.

Geiger's publication, not to be confused with the 197-year-old New Hampshire-based Old Farmers Almanac, has previously prodded the government to restore city names to postmarks, eliminate the nine-digit ZIP code and print currency in colors other than green.

Geiger, who claims a circulation of more than 5 million, said this year's 48-page almanac contains the usual mix of calendar data, household hints, one-line jokes and inspirational messages.

It also has weather predictions by prognosticator Caleb Weatherbee that are based on "a secret formula based on sunspots, the position of the planets and the tidal action of the moon."

Weatherbee predicts that the winter of 1989-90 will be milder than usual with less snow, while next summer will be pleasant with moderate rainfall.

The campaign for the $1 coin follows last year's proposal for a new coin worth 12½ cents — or one "bit." As Geiger saw it, the bit would bridge the gap between the dime and quarter. That suggestion didn't catch on.

Agencies denounce campaign against use of food pesticides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three federal agencies are denouncing an environmental group's campaign against the use of pesticides on food, saying it pressures grocers to make regulatory decisions better left to the government.

The effort by the National Toxics Campaign "appears to attempt to put the onus for pesticide regulation inappropriately on the U.S. grocery industry," said a joint statement by the Environmental Protection Agency, the Food and Drug Administration and the Agriculture Department.

The Boston-based environmental group Monday announced agreement with a small number of grocery chains to sign a pledge designed to reduce pesticides on fresh fruits and vegetables.

However, the federal agencies said the government seeks "to balance the benefits and risks of pesticides," and accused the environmentalists of ignoring the fact that pesticides rid food products of diseases that could pose serious health concerns.

The grocery industry also attacked the effort, saying the environmental group was "seeking to create a major crisis of confidence" in the nation's food supply. Industry spokesmen accused the group of trying "to pit company against company and retailers against their suppliers."

The use of pesticides on food has gained widespread attention following the uproar earlier this year over Alar, which ultimately was pulled off the U.S. market by its manufacturer after sales of apple products plummeted, costing the industry an estimated $100 million.

Craig Merrilees, director of the environmental group's Consumer Pesticide Project, expressed surprise at the strong industry and government reaction, but said the group is enlisting grocers as allies in the war against pesticides because government regulation has not done the job.

"We've given up on our government's ability to deal with pesticides," said Merrilees.

The companies that signed the agreement represent fewer than 200 stores in the United States, but Merrilees called their participation "a major breakthrough" in getting supermarkets to break ranks with most of the industry on the pesticide issue.

Signing the agreement were four regional U.S. grocery chains and a large Canadian chain, and Merrilees' group said it hopes to convince other chains to join.

Agreement will allow reburial of Indian remains

WASHINGTON (AP) — The skeletal remains of thousands of American Indians will be buried in their native soil under an agreement announced today by the Smithsonian Institution, members of Congress and Indian leaders.

"Today, a process has started that will allow the ancestors of native Americans to at last find their final resting place," said Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs. "It's a day that will be celebrated by Indian leaders throughout Indian country."

Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., an American Indian who was instrumental in achieving the compromise, said the provisions would be included in a bill before the House that will establish a National Museum of the American Indian in Washington.

"Under this agreement, the Smithsonian is going to inventory the human remains and funerary objects, which are those objects that are placed in gravesites with Indian people when they are buried," Campbell said at a news conference.

"Those remains that can be identified, either specifically or by the name of tribe, the Smithsonian will notify the individuals in the tribe and the tribe will be able to have them returned to them."

The agreement represents a change of thinking by the administration of the Smithsonian, which previously had said the bones were necessary for scientific study, said institution Secretary Robert McC. Adams.

"I should make clear there's a deep sense of loss on the part of many scientists at the Smithsonian,"

But Adams said he was persuaded by years of listening to anguished Indians and reading about the atrocities committed against Indians during this country's western expansion.

"That becomes a weight that one ultimately cannot carry," he said.

Suzan Harjo, head of the National Congress of American Indians, said the Smithsonian was setting a precedent bound to influence museums all over the country, which have the remains of an estimated 600,000 Indians.

"There is no doubt about it — the Smithsonian is king of the hill when it comes to setting policy," she said.

The Smithsonian has a collection of the bones of approximately 18,000 Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts, most of which were unearthed during archaeological excavations, construction or erosion. About 4,000 remains came from the Army Medical Museum and were transferred to the Smithsonian at the turn of the century. Many of those were the result of grave-robbing.

Indian groups have sought the return of the remains for several years on religious grounds. But Adams had said the Smithsonian would return only those that could be identified as stolen from graves or traced to living descendants. In the last 18 months, only the remains of 18 Blackfeet were returned, according to Adams.

Inouye and Campbell are sponsoring bills to establish a National Museum of the American Indian in Washington. The museum would be created when the collection of the Museum of the American Indian in New York City is transferred to the Smithsonian.

NATION IN BRIEF

Yeltsin seeks U.S.-Soviet action to save reforms

BALTIMORE (AP) — Soviet maverick Boris Yeltsin, in a speech cut short for a quick trip to the White House, called today for joint Soviet-U.S. action to salvage reforms under way in his country.

"We have to combine our efforts to rescue perestroika, which is in a super-critical situation today," Yeltsin said in a speech at Johns Hopkins University.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Yeltsin would be meeting with national security adviser Brent Scowcroft. "There is a chance that the president will stop by and shake hands, just as a courtesy," Fitzwater said.

Yeltsin also had an afternoon appointment at the State Department with Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

The 58-year-old Yeltsin, ousted as Moscow's Communist Party chief in 1987 but then elected to parliament with overwhelming popular support in a contested election, arrived Saturday on a private tour.

He announced Monday night that he would cut short his U.S. visit to go home to attend meetings on pressure from various nationalities for independence from the Kremlin.

Immigration set at 125,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration will hold admissions of refugees to the United States to 125,000 in the next fiscal year, an increase of slightly less than 8 percent from this year, the chairman of a House panel said today.

The administration, which doubled the allotment for people from the Soviet Union this year to 50,000, has decided the country cannot handle more and will leave the figure the same for the year beginning Oct. 1, said Rep. Bruce Morrison, D-Conn., who heads the House subcommittee on immigration.

But Morrison, speaking at the start of subcommittee hearings about the administration's proposed plan, said the government's proposal only provides funding for 84,000 refugees.

Morrison also expressed concern about the backlog of an estimated 20,000 Soviet emigres in Rome and Vienna awaiting U.S. decisions on their eligibility to enter this country. He said the administration had wasted money through this processing method and changes would have to be considered.

Defense smacks of humor

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — If a jury believes Larry Robertson had Honey Smacks in his cereal bowl, he could spend the rest of his life in prison. But if it was Froot Loops, he could go free.

Robertson's attorney has stirred up this confusion in an effort to clear his client, a four-time convicted felon.

Robertson, 25, is charged with stealing a rifle and a box of cereal from a house in Lake Worth on Oct. 15.

The victim said the pilfered cereal was Sugar Smacks, the puffs of wheat since renamed Honey Smacks. But a neighbor claims he saw the thief wearing a red shirt and blue shorts carrying an M-16 rifle and box of Froot Loops.

Police never located the rifle, but found Robertson around the corner, wearing a red shirt, blue shorts and eating a bowl of cereal.

Robertson said he was eating Froot Loops. Police said they saw "a puffed-rice type of cereal" and charged him with burglary and grand theft.

"We all know cereal gets soggy after a minute or two, and it loses its identity," said Robertson's attorney, Michael Lebedeker.

"My defense is that the victim said Sugar Smacks, and the witness saw Froot Loops."

Blast kills 1, injures 15

MORRIS Ill. (AP) — An explosion and fire struck a chemical plant early today as workers were repairing damage from a blast three months ago, authorities said. One person was killed and at least 15 were reported injured.

At least six of the injured were in critical condition, said hospital officials.

Witnesses said they could see flames shooting into the air from 10 miles away. Others said they were jolted awake by the explosion at the Quantum Chemical Corp. plant near this town 50 miles southwest of Chicago.

The 2:44 a.m. blast was caused by a leak of flammable ethylene gas, said Tim Crowley, Quantum manager of administration. The ethylene unit was being repaired after an explosion and fire that had shut the plant since June 7.

FDA takes closer look at generic drug firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration plans to take a closer look at 11 generic drug companies where inspections turned up serious manufacturing and record-keeping problems.

Irregularities that ranged from falsified records to misrepresentation of test data were found at 11 of the 13 companies that make generic versions of brand-name drugs, Paul F. Vogel, deputy director of the FDA's generic drug compliance staff, told a House subcommittee Monday.

The investigations into the companies where problems were found are continuing, and the FDA is reviewing the operations of 20 more companies and testing samples of the 30 leading generic drugs. One of the companies has admitted substituting a brand-name drug for its own in sampling tests.

"We don't think our job is yet completed," said Vogel.

The investigation, sparked by evidence turned up by the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee, has resulted in charges against three FDA employees, two generic drug makers and former executives at the companies, as well as FDA action to remove dozens of generic drugs from the market.

"We can no longer be sure that generic drugs are safe and effective," said Rep. John Dingell, the subcommittee chairman.

He added, however, "For those drugs with broad therapeutic ranges there is probably little danger to the consumer."

Vogel did not say whether disciplinary action against the companies is being considered. But he noted in the case of one — the Superpharm Corp. — "We are presently considering our options."

Rep. Thomas Bliley, R-Va., ranking Republican on the subcommittee, said the FDA must rein in the generic drug makers as more drug patents expire and become eligible for generic applications.

"If there was already an incentive to pay illegal gratuities, submit fraudulent samples and make false statements on generic drug applications, the temptation to cut corners will grow unless the bad actors are driven out of the industry," he said.

FDA officials said deficiencies were found at American Therapeutics Inc. of Bohemia, N.Y.; Barre-National of Baltimore; Bolar Pharmaceuticals of Copiague, N.Y.; Par Pharmaceuticals of Spring Valley, N.Y.; Pharmaceutical Basics Inc. of Morton Grove, Ill., and Denver, Colo.; Pharmafair of Hauppauge, N.Y., a subsidiary of Bausch and Lomb of Rochester, N.Y.; Quad Pharmaceuticals of Indianapolis; Sidmak Laboratories of East Hanover, N.J.; Superpharm Corp. of Central Islip, N.Y. and Bayshore, N.Y.

Human activities harming wildlife on refuges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wildlife on federal preserves is being harmed by human activities ranging from military dogfight practice to water-skiers, congressional investigators reported today.

Interior Department managers know that secondary uses of refuges are "causing direct harm to wildlife," General Accounting Office investigators concluded.

But they bow to "intense" local pressure for more recreation facilities, or are forced by law to share ownership of the land with other government agencies or private interests such as those with drilling rights, the report said.

The GAO, Congress' investigative arm, reported on the refuges at the request of Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., chairman of the House Government Operations environment subcommittee and Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries environment subcommittee.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service of the Interior Department, which manages the preserves, acknowledged the problems in testimony prepared for a joint hearing.

David Olsen, an assistant director of the wildlife service, said a review is underway to see whether the management system should be changed.

The GAO investigators found that:

■ On the Des Lacs refuge in North Dakota, power boating and waterskiing have disturbed migratory bird nesting and the broods of newly hatched chicks. Duck and other bird production is 50 percent less than it could be.

■ At the Chincoteague refuge in Virginia, off-road vehicles and thousands of visitors on the beaches are threatening the breeding of piping plovers, an endangered bird, and reducing other migratory bird populations.

■ At the Cabeza Prieta refuge in Arizona, military air exercises including air-to-air missile firings are believed to be harming the desert bighorn sheep and the endangered Sonoran pronghorn antelope. The military is authorized to conduct the exercises.

■ Livestock grazing at the Browns Park refuge in Colorado is hampering efforts to improve goose and duck production, disturbing the nesting birds and destroying plant growth necessary to provide optional nesting habitats.

■ Drilling for new gas wells and operating existing wells at the D'Arbonne refuge in Louisiana is destroying the habitat of endangered red cockaded woodpeckers and other wildlife. A federal judge has permitted the continued drilling.

Officials mum on police, fire pay increase

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Midland City Manager Fred Poe doesn't expect to negotiate with police and fire on a much sought-after pay hike.

However, just what action Midland City Council is prepared to take on the issue remains uncertain.

Earlier today, council was expected to adopt a 5.35 tax increase raising the property rate from 50.65 cents to 58 cents per $100 valuation.

Midland's general fund budget — estimated at about $29 million — left no room for the 10 percent hike now being wrangled between city officials and safety forces.

"My recommendation is that we go ahead with the referendum," said Poe, who wants to place the issue before voters on Nov. 7, part of a state constitutional amendment election.

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas said he was uncertain just what direction council would take, given the fact there are a number of viable options that still need to be discussed.

"It's probably the most likely way to go, but we (council) really haven't discussed this yet. We need to talk about it more."

In addition to the referendum, the city could accept and approve the petition for a 10 percent pay hike; or negotiate with police and fire on figures that both sides could live with.

Poe said he's opposed to such negotiations, which pose recognition of a bargaining unit. "When you rule out those two options, all that leaves is a referendum."

City Councilman John Castro said he too was undecided on the prospects of a referendum, although it was his impression that both fire and police would push for a decision at the polls.

"Personally, I would like to sit down and talk with both of them. I'd hate to see this go to a referendum ... what I'm afraid of is, win or lose, someone is going to be very unhappy."

Either way, police and fire will receive at least a 2 percent increase as outlined in the city's budget — the first such across-the-board outlay in four years.

Members of the Fraternal Order of Police and the Midland Firefighters Association garnered 3,684 signatures from a five day petition drive in August. Those signatures have since been certified by the county board of elections.

If council chooses to throw the issue in the laps of voters, the city must request for a ballot position no later than Sept. 22.

However, Poe says a 10 percent increase on top of the 2 percent that already has been granted by the city, is out of line. "It's more of an increase than we should be considering at this time."

Poe claims if an increase is agreed to, either through negotiations or at the polls, the city could spend as much as $913,000 that would add either four cents to the tax rate now or later.

Any immediate action, particularly an agreement on the full 10 percent, is doubtful, given the fact that an additional four cents added to the proposed 58 cent tax rate would clear the road for a possible rollback.

City considering extra ½-cent sales tax allowed by law

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

When the door's closed, try a window.

That, at least, is the premise behind an optional sales tax that could add additional funds to the city's road and bridge fund.

Not to fret.

Taxpayers will get through 1989 just fine without it. But come 1990?

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas said the city is seriously considering taking its half-cent sales tax share.

Although it already receives a one-cent share on sales, under law the city is entitled to one-half cent more.

Assistant City Manager Keith Stretcher said based on the current rate, Midland collects about $8 million annually.

In an action that would take voter approval, city officials could take the added half-cent and reduce the ad-valorem tax accordingly, or use the funds either for mass transit or economic development.

The latter two options became viable during the last session of the Texas Legislature.

Midland and Midland County now take 1½ cents on all generated sales. However, the city is entitled to another half-cent because the set cap is two cents on every dollar.

Stretcher says Abilene already has exercised its option, and plans to use its portion of the tax for economic development. Odessa also is considering a similar measure.

While Midland could move to place the tax on the November ballot, officials here say that's doubtful, given the current state of the economy. "Conceivably, I guess they could, but there hasn't been any talk of it," said Stretcher.

What Midland is interested in are streets and bridges.

"You can't do them if you don't have the money," said Midland City Councilman John Castro. "We know if we attempted a bond issue it would fail. With bond indebtedness you have interest payments. This (the sales tax) is pay as you go. If the voters understood it, I think they would support it."

Castro and other city officials point to a number of bridges around the city that already are being repaired or are scheduled to be repaired.

For example, at Maxwell Street and Haynes Avenue, the city was forced to dip into a 1982 bond fund to pay for two bridges that are being replaced in connection with the Northwest Drainage Channel project.

A third bridge, near the intersection of Lamesa Road and Wadley Avenue, must also be replaced because of its age. Fortunately, 80 percent of that tab is being picked up by the federal government.

Still, city officials note that a number of other bridges, not to mention roads, need to be reconstructed or replaced in the near future.

"I think we have to take a serious look at this (tax), but it may be February (or later) before we can get it together," said Thomas.

MISD has scholarship semifinalists

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

A two-year effort to better Midland students' performances on a national achievement test hit paydirt Monday as the National Merit Scholarship Corp. announced its 1989 semifinalists.

Midland Independent School District had 14 seniors qualify for the honor, while Lee High School, with 10 students placing, having the most semifinalists in school history.

Midland High School had four students make semifinalist, while Midland Christian School had one and Ector County Independent School District had six.

Semifinalist qualification is based on 1988 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test scores. Of the more than 1 million students nationwide who took the PSAT during their junior year, only 15,000 had scores high enough to make semifinalist.

The students represent about half of 1 percent of each state's seniors. About 90 percent of those will be selected finalists in the spring, and more than 6,000 of those will become winners of $2,000 Merit Scholarships.

"It makes me feel pretty good," said LHS Assistant Principal Bobby Dunn, whose school had only three semifinalists last year. "We must be doing something right."

Dunn attributed part of his students' success to a semesterly PSAT course, which started in the 1987-88 school year in MHS and LHS. About 50 at each school take the course each semester, Dunn said.

In addition, students at both schools who score above the 50 percentile range on their ninth-grade California Achievement Test are asked to take the PSAT in their sophomore year.

Students who score in the 70th percentile or higher on the PSAT are asked to take it again their junior year. They also can take a practice exam before they take the junior PSAT.

MHS senior counselor Peggy Callicoatte said couselors encourage all students to take the PSAT.

She said the top 150 or so students in their class are asked to take it, adding that it is good practice for the Scholastic Aptitude Test, which most colleges and universities require as an entrance exam.

MHS students who made semifinalist were Joseph Baressi, Jay Parsons, Laura Setzer and John Sumner. The school had only three last year.

"We had a lot this year who did not qualify for National Merit who had very high scores," Ms. Callicoatte said.

Dunn said he has three students who missed the semifinalist cutoff score by one point.

LHS semifinalists are Rebecca Ainsworth, James Bankson, Bridget Burleson, Phillip Cochran, Gary Griffin, James Murphy, Meredith Rentz, Sarah Van Cott, Timothy Walker and Brian Wojcik.

Walker scored the highest among LHS students. Only 18 students scored higher than Walker.

Christy Boles is Midland Christian School's semifinalist.

Odessa's Permian High School of ECISD has six semifinalists. They are Melissa Goodwin, Shawn Havranek, Raeanne Roper, Sahid Shamsie, Nirav Tolia and Jerrell Watts.

LHS and MHS also had students named National Hispanic Scholars Awards Program semifinalists. Similar to National Merit finalists, the Hispanic students' PSAT scores compete for $2,000 scholarships.

Seniors Daniel Bustillos and Abel Saldana were LHS' Hispanic semifinalists, while Anita Montez of MHS also was a semifinalist.

Texas students' SAT, ACT scores remain stable

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas students' scores on the country's two major college entrance examinations remained lower than the national average this year, but followed a national trend in staying stable since 1988, according to the Texas Education Agency.

State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby expressed concern Monday that Texas scores still are below the national average.

However, he said, the scores are higher than they were when the Legislature enacted sweeping education reforms in 1984.

"I am optimistic that the reforms will enable our students to improve their scores in the future," he said.

The mean score for the state on the verbal section of the Scholastic Aptitude Test was 415 this year, down two points from 1988. The mean SAT math score was 462, the same as last year.

National averages were 427 on verbal, down one point from 1988, and 476 in math, the same as last year.

On the American College Testing program exam, Texas students' average composite score was 17.5 points, down from 17.6 in 1988. The national average ACT composite score was 18.6, down from 18.8 in 1988.

"Our scores on the SAT and ACT have obviously reached a plateau," Kirby said. "This reflects the national trend."

A total of 81,541 Texas students took the SAT this year, 1,434 more than in 1988.

More minority students took the SAT in 1989, and their scores also remained stable, the TEA said.

Black students' verbal scores were down slightly, from 346 to 345, while their math scores increased from 381 to 384, according to figures from TEA. Hispanic students' verbal scores on the SAT increased from 372 to 373, and their math scores increased from 422 to 424.

Students in the state who had taken at least 20 or more academic or college preparatory courses by the time they took the SAT had higher average scores — 475 on the verbal part and 526 on the math section.

However, only 22 percent of Texas students who took the SAT took 20 or more academic courses, compared to 39 percent of the national group, according to the TEA.

Texas students taking the ACT exam totaled 51,609, an increase of 5,321 students from 1988.

Minority scores remained stable on the test, the TEA said. Black students scoring 13.6 this year and 13.4 in 1988. Hispanic students scored 14.8 on the ACT in 1989, compared to 14.9 the previous year.

The state is broadening the scope of the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills test to put greater emphasis on higher-order thinking skills, Kirby said.

"I believe that this will result in improved college entrance examination results for our students," he said. "Both the SAT and the ACT put a much greater emphasis on higher-order thinking skills than our state minimum skills test does."

Students need the help of their parents and other members of their communities to excel academically, Kirby said.

"We need the help and support of parents, business, civic and political leaders, churches and other community organizations," he said. "Education must be a partnership emphasizing excellence and cooperation in order to be successful."

State employee plants flowers along roads

MARSHALL (AP) — Roadways are sear and brown. No rain and late summer heat have taken their toll, and it's hard to imagine that under the thatch cut by huge mowing machines are the seeds for next year's wildflowers.

Jerry Armstrong, maintenance supervisor for 337 miles of state roadways in Harrison County, has just received the wildflower seed for next year — 7,900 pounds of crimson clover plus assorted seed for the flowers that are indigenous to East Texas.

Armstrong

Armstrong doesn't look like someone interested in wildflowers. In jeans and a work shirt, he has the weathered face and calloused hands of a man who has spent most of his life seeing that potholes are repaired and road work crews are actually working. But he is convinced that the flowers make driving safer and deters littering, but frankly likes them for their natural beauty and makes no apologies for his affection.

He developed his interest on his own, Armstrong said, and has been encouraged by Atlanta District Vegetation Specialist Orville Ball. Ball had good reason for his encouragement. Armstrong supervises the Harrison County portion of Interstate 20, eastern gateway into Texas.

He will oversee the Texas I-20 beautification planned for this winter, and has received $14,000 for that purpose. He also will begin planting crimson clover on the Farm to Market roads in his area.

Ball noted that Armstrong, a 26-year employee of the Highway Department, "takes care of business." He does a good job with all his responsibilities, but "is very conscientious, spends a lot of time planting trees."

Armstrong spent time this spring saving trees as well. A number of years ago, crape myrtles were planted on U.S. 59 by a citizens group. A widening project called for their removal, so Armstrong borrowed a tree spade from San Antonio and moved every one of them.

"Looks like we will lose about 10 percent, but we moved from 200 to 250, so we saved most of them," he said.

Armstrong's efforts were rewarded in 1987, when he was one of six finalists for the annual Lady Bird Johnson Award. He didn't win, but intends to someday, he said.

He takes a special interest in the Karnack Highway, because of important visitors to Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant, and because it was the area where Mrs. Johnson grew up and began her own affair with wildflowers.

She wrote in a recent magazine article, "I made friends with wildflowers early in life. My mother died when I was 5, and I grew up rather alone in a rural area of East Texas.

Mexican stonemason completing Alamo flag room restoration

Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Baltazar Espinosa, a Mexican native who will be a U.S. citizen soon, is putting the finishing touches on the third big Alamo restoration project of the decade.

The imposing limestone walls of two Alamo rooms face Espinosa and his work crew as they carefully chisel and scrape away cement put in place in the early 1900s and replace it with a softer mortar.

The work is being done in the state and international flag rooms adjacent to the main entrance to the Alamo, where Mexican fighters besieging the structure during Texas' bid for independence killed an entire garrison of Texans in 1836.

Espinosa, an expert in restoring historic buildings, measures his progress a few feet at a time and not in the quantities of space associated with commercial buildings.

"It's an honor to work in a place like this," Espinosa said of the Alamo. "It's a slow process and it takes a lot of patience and concentration.

"You can't rush anything here," he said. "Everything has to be done just right."

The Alamo restoration project Espinosa works meticulously to complete is of paramount interest to the structure's caretakers, the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, and to Steve Beck, the Alamo's curator.

"It's probably one of the largest efforts in preservation and ensuring the building will be here for future generations," Beck said. "The building is sound.

"This is a form of conservation so we don't have problems in the future."

The project is about 60 percent complete and the interior work now being done will be followed by exterior work on the two rooms, which are located on the Alamo's north side. The smaller room of the project was originally used as a sacristy for religious services, and the larger room where the work is now concentrated was once a monks' burial ground.

The soft mortar Espinosa and his crew are carefully dabbing in was made from Medina River sand and powdered lime. The result is a mortar that is a close resemblance to the type of materials originally used to hold the Alamo's big limestone rocks in place.

The softer mortar allows the limestone walls to breathe and forces excess water seeping up from underground to the surface of the walls, where the moisture evaporates.

The only signs of modern-day equipment in the project are the high scaffolds that stonemasons in the early 1900s did not have.

Austin collector has more than 28,000 comic books

AUSTIN (AP) — When Joyce Cope traveled to a Dallas convention several months ago looking to add more comic books to her burgeoning collection, she took along about $100 — and 50 loaves of fresh-baked banana bread.

She used the dough to buy some books and the bread to bribe the taste buds of comic-book illustrators and authors at the convention. In return for a loaf, she had them autograph copies of their books in her collection.

"It works about 99 percent of the time," said the 62-year-old Austin woman, a retired University of Texas systems analyst who has more than 28,000 comic books and uses a computer to catalog them.

Comic books aren't kid stuff anymore, says Larry Lankford. Adults have been caught up in the funnies craze and that means the buying, selling and trading of comics has become much more sophisticated.

"A lot of people still have misconceived notions about comic books," said Lankford, who owns a Dallas-based company called Bulldog Productions that sponsors collectors' fairs such as one held over the weekend in Austin.

"They think comic books are only for children," he said. "And they did start that way. But an awful lot of comic books out on the market today are geared specifically toward adults."

Mrs. Cope was one of the 500 people Saturday who attended the Austin Fanfair, which featured comic books by the boxload, board game tournaments and presentations on animated science fiction and fantasy flicks from Japan.

As she thumbed through a stack of comics, the grandmother of two said she began collecting the colorful cartoon magazines as a child but discontinued the hobby after meeting her husband and marrying.

"I didn't look at another comic book again until 1981," she said. "Then I saw 'Superman II' and it all of a sudden brought back all those childhood memories and a flood of nostalgia.

"My children thought it was funny that I liked Superman and they started bringing me things home from stores, like Superman pens and notebooks," Mrs. Cope said. "I told them they'd better stop or I'd become a collector."

She cut her comic collecting teeth at flea markets by purchasing books that featured the ever-popular Superman and Batman. Then she found herself scouring used book stores. Now she's known for traveling to collectors' conventions all over the state.

"It's an obsession for most people," said Mike Benton, a collector and author of a soon-to-be released book, "The Comic Book in America: An Illustrated History."

"It's something that can keep you entertained for the rest of your life because in the comic books industry there is a never-ending wealth of material to collect, to study and to delve into," he said.

While Mrs. Cope concentrates mainly on collecting any post-1980 editions and rarely pays more than several dollars an issue, Benton says some collectors pay hundreds, even thousands, of dollars for a single copy.

For instance, Detective Comics No. 27, the 1939 comic book in which the character Batman first appeared, sold for 10 cents when it was first published but today is worth about $25,000, Benton said.

Interest in comic books — which were the subject of a congressional investigation in the 1950s because some parents and teachers blamed them for juvenile delinquency — has been on the upswing since the early 1980s, he said.

Comic books have risen from the "ghetto of second-rate literature to become a viable literary alternative," Benton said. "They are very appealing to a generation that grew up in a visually oriented TV society where people are used to getting pictures and words together."

The reasons Mrs. Cope collects comics are more personal than philosophical.

"They actually molded my life as a child," she said. "Comics, at least the ones I used to read, were very patriotic. They stood for truth, justice and the American way."

DEATHS

Richard Brooks

Longtime Midland attorney Richard S. Brooks, 78, died Sunday at a local hospital.

Services are set for 3 p.m. Thursday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Jim Denison, pastor of First Baptist Church, officiating.

Brooks was born Sept. 24, 1910 in Austin, the youngest son of Victor Lee Brooks and Grace Harrison Brooks. He attended Austin public schools and the University of Texas, where he received his bachelor of arts degree, magna cum laude, in 1931; master of arts in 1933; and, bachelor of laws degree, magna cum laude in 1935. He was elected Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year.

He served as an assistant attorney general of Texas from 1937 to 1939 and practiced law privately in Austin briefly before moving to Midland in 1941.

He commenced practice of law with the firm of Whitaker, Turpin, Smith and Brooks. In 1953, he and Ed M. Whitaker formed the law firm of Whitaker and Brooks, which continued until Whitaker's death in 1973. Brooks continued the practice until his death.

Brooks also was engaged in the oil and gas business, both personally and as attorney and advisor to oil operators David and Inez G. Fasken.

He served as a director of the First National Bank of Midland from 1963 to 1983 and was a longtime member and former president of the Downtown Rotary Club.

Survivors include: his wife, Annie May Kress Brooks; one daughter, Anne Brooks Ramsey of Orange, Calif.; two sons, Richard T. Brooks of Midland; Judge David Brooks of Dallas; and two grandchildren.

R.M. Mayfield

ODESSA — R.M. "Doc" Mayfield, 81, of Odessa died Sunday at a local nursing home.

Services are set for 10 a.m. Wednesday at Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Terry Pierce officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens under the direction of Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Born Feb. 3, 1908, in Waco, he married Beatrice Waldrop April 20, 1947 in Abilene. She preceded him in death on Aug. 13, 1989.

He moved to Odessa 1955 from Abilene. He was a sheet metal worker for 19 years before retiring from Newport Plumbing. He also owned the Frost Top Drive-In Odessa, the Mr. X Drive-In in Midland and Ector Sheet Metal Works in Odessa.

He was an army veteran of World War II.

Survivors include one son, Richard L. Mayfield of Odessa; two daughters, Christine Scott of Midland and Betty Fairchild of Berryville, Ark.; one sister Willie McCarthy of Abilene; 11 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Harold McKee

LOVINGTON, N.M. — Harold McKee, 56, of Lovington, a former Midlander, died Saturday at a Lubbock hospital.

Services are set for 11 a.m. Wednesday at Smith-Rogers Funeral Chapel with the Rev. Harry Tittam, pastor First Baptist Church officiating.

McKee was born Nov. 10, 1932 in Elmore City, Okla. He married Patsy Courtney Dec. 30, 1954 in Anthony, N.M.

The couple had resided in Lovington since 1958.

McKee was a vice president of Willbros Drilling Co. of Midland. He was associated with the company for 12 years.

Surivivors include his wife of Lovington; one daughter, Debra Ann Weems of Hanau, Germany; one son, Larry D. McKee of Lovington; his mother, Mary M. McKee of Elmore City; three brothers, Earl McKee and Troy McKee, both of Elmore City and Bobby McKee of Norman, Okla.; and two grandsons.

Mary Starr

Mary Healey Starr, sister of John H. Healey of Midland, died Monday at her Vancouver, Wash., home.

Funeral services are pending.

Insurer will quit issuing worker's comp policies

AUSTIN (AP) — Key legislative and industry figures say a Dallas insurer's decision to quit writing workers' compensation policies may be a sign that the system is headed toward collapse.

They also say it could prod lawmakers to adopt proposed reforms in the system that have been favored by business.

Dallas-based Texas Employers Insurance Association told policyholders last month it will stop selling and renewing workers' compensation policies because of rising losses. The company is the oldest and largest writer of workers' compensation policies in Texas.

While no one predicted an immediate breakdown in the $3 billion-a-year workers' compensation system, several legislative and industry observers said it is spiraling toward collapse.

"This may point more alarmingly than anything else to the real deterioration of the system," said Kay Doughty, executive director of the state's Office of Consumer Counsel.

Although rates charged to employers have risen 148 percent since 1985, "it may be that rates haven't gone up enough," Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said. The industry has a request for another 34.9 percent rate increase pending before the State Board of Insurance.

The decision by Texas Employers to get out of a market it has dominated in the state since 1913 could tip the balance in the Legislature toward House members who have called for radical changes in how disputed claims by injured workers are resolved.

Lawmakers are scheduled to return in special session Nov. 14 to try for the third time this year to overhaul the system.

Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan, the House leader on the subject, said, "One of the arguments of the opponents of reform is that we don't have a problem, that they (insurers) engineered this problem to drive up rates and get reforms at the expense of workers — that it was all a bluff.

"When the largest, oldest insurer in the state drops its business, that's not a bluff," he said.

Mike Toomey, chief of staff to Gov. Bill Clements, said Texas Employers' action "cuts apart what the trial lawyers have been saying, which is that one of the main problems is that it's been greedy insurers trying to make all these profits."

"Well, obviously that's not true, with a major comp writer ceasing to do business," he said.

The Texas Trial Lawyers Association, whose members represent injured workers in disputed claims, has opposed most proposed changes. It argues that profit-hungry insurance companies and lax job safety standards have caused the high rates and costs of the workers' compensation system.

Joe Woods, association executive director, said he doubts the seriousness of the announcement by Texas Employers, which collects about $180 million in premiums annually and has 1,800 policyholders.

"I think it's not a matter of this company going over under the weight of the system," he said. "It's a matter of them shuffling their policies.

"If it's a bookkeeping change, it may not be the dire marketplace we've heard about. It may be just a sound business move," he said.

Texas Employers said it withdrew from the field because it owed $64 million to the Texas Workers' Compensation Assigned Risk Pool, the debt was growing, and the firm doubted it could keep up without going insolvent.

An employer must get coverage from the pool when other insurers refuse to write policies. The pool's losses have far exceeded income from premiums — by $400 million for 1988.

Companies that write workers' compensation policies share the deficit according to their portion of the total market. Since Texas Employers had the biggest market share — though it had shrunk to about 8 percent — it got the biggest bills from the pool.

Lien placed on property for taxes on marijuana

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas comptroller's officers have placed a lien on property and other assets of a man they say owes the state more than $40,000 in taxes on marijuana police claimed to have found in his car.

Larry Dockwiller, 33, appeared last week before a Georgetown judge on charges of possession of marijuana, a Williamson County jailer said.

The comptroller's office has placed a lien on all assets and property owned by the Austin man, John Bender of the comptroller's tax information office said Monday.

Dockwiller is the first person accused of tax evasion under a new state drug tax law that went into effect Sept. 1, Bender said. Dockwiller owes the state $38,104.50 in back taxes, plus a penalty of $1,905.23 for not buying required drug stamps, he said.

But a public defenders' spokesman says Dockwiller is being denied due process by facing loss of property before he is tried for an offense.

"I think anyone who believes in due process would say, 'Let's have some proof he's guilty' before they take his property," said John Boston, executive director of the Criminal Defense Lawyers' Project. "This needs to be done in a logical, legal manner.

"The tax is only owed if you prove beyond a reasonable doubt that a person is a drug dealer — or at least a possessor," Boston said. "If he's convicted, then we don't have any problem with that."

But Williamson County district attorney Ken Anderson said Dockwiller is not being denied due process, adding that the comptroller's office offered him the chance to plead that he does not owe the tax.

The comptroller's office offers those who receive drug tax bills 20 days to either pay the tax and the fine or ask for an administrative hearing to appeal the bill, said Bender.

FLOWERS

The land, with its varying sights and sounds, provided me with good company."

When the former first lady was informed that the Soviet INF inspection would be passing her home every day on their way to Longhorn, she thought enough of their visit to her flowers to write them.

"Dear visitors from Russia — Through the kindness of an old friend, I've learned that you are at work in East Texas. She thought I would want to know, since I grew up in that area and am always eager for news from home.

"I hope you are enjoying a beautiful spring there and thought you might like to take a bit of it back to your country."

Mrs. Johnson enclosed material and seeds from the Wildflower Research Center in Austin, information that is available to anyone wanting to plant or nurture wildflowers, according to spokeswoman Lisa Nelson.

A list of flowers and plants recommended for East Texas includes Indian paintbrush, coreopsis, Texas bluebell, snow-on-the-prairie, Indian blanket, Drummond's phlox and black-eyed susan.

Also included are two species of bluebonnets, but Armstrong said he has had no success with them. "They just don't like acid soil, and the weeds choke them out."

Armstrong also warned that it is illegal to harvest seeds or dig wildflower plants on the side of the road, a warning the Wildflower Research Center repeats. They point out that wildflower seeds are now commercially grown, and will provide a list of nurseries that have them.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Volunteers do make things happen. The Volunteer Center will show you how. Here are just a few of the opportunities currently available.

■ Reading is fundamental. By tutoring second and third grade students, you can help them develop this basic skill needed for successful learning. Tutors are needed to work with the children either Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m.

■ Crafts and children go hand-in-hand. Share your knowledge with enthusiastic youth in an agency's after school program weekdays or on Saturdays. A volunteer arts teacher is eager to expand her class with aid of an assistant. Days are flexible.

■ Answer a telephone line for children who are home alone. Volunteers are needed at a local agency for two afternoons a month from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. weekdays. Those few hours will go far in assuring the safety and well-being of our children.

■ Help a child make the grade. Now that school has started, children will need assistance with homework. Volunteer to work with small groups of mixed grade-level students at an agency from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Select a day and you can make a positive impact in a youth's future.

■ Upcoming trainings: An evening training for a literacy program is scheduled for September 25 and 26.

■ Volunteer training for parent partners will be held late September and early October.

■ Volunteer Hospice patient care will be offered each Tuesday and Thursday evening during October.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center at 697-8781.

Wrights negotiating for home in Texas valued at $400,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — As voters choose Jim Wright's congressional successor today, a published report says the former House speaker and his wife negotiated a bargain price for a home in an exclusive Fort Worth development.

Purchase of the house in Mira Vista, on Fort Worth's southwest side, hinges upon the sale of Wright's Washington area home in McLean, Va., he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The newspaper said Wright and his wife, Betty, negotiated a contingency contract to purchase the two-story brick home at what sources said is a bargain price of about $400,000. Homes in Mira Vista sell in a range from $300,000 to more than $1 million.

The Mira Vista home, previously unoccupied, is owned by Metropolitan Financial Savings and Loan of Dallas, which acquired it as a foreclosure and placed it on the market with a $415,000 asking price, the newspaper said.

Wright said he has tentatively sold his Virginia home and plans to move into the Fort Worth dwelling in December if the Washington area deal goes through.

The former speaker, who resigned during a House ethics committee investigation of his personal finances, said he hopes profits from the McLean transaction will help him pay off a small remaining mortgage on that house and purchase the Fort Worth property for cash.

"My honest desire is to have no mortgage," he said. "I don't like to owe money. I've been working all my life to get out of debt."

Wright, who purchased the three-level Virginia home for $228,000 in 1983, put it up for sale in mid-July at $644,900 following his June 30 resignation.

A source told the newspaper that Wright got close to the asking price on the McLean home and negotiated a contract to purchase the Fort Worth property for $402,000, including $12,000 worth of improvements.

Mattox accuses Richards of spying

AUSTIN (AP) — To Attorney General Jim Mattox, the 21-year-old college student was a spy who used a window seat at a Chinese restaurant to check on Mattox's political headquarters.

But the student, Evaristo "Carlos" Hernandez, says he was just a curious spectator.

Mattox on Monday accused state Treasurer Ann Richards' gubernatorial campaign staff of engaging in "Watergate-style spying" on his campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor.

"Ann Richards has lost control of her campaign, and they've panicked," Mattox said. He has not yet announced for governor but is a likely opponent to Ms. Richards in the 1990 Democratic primary.

Mattox said Hernandez purposely misled his campaign staff to gain access to confidential documents.

"Luckily, he was not the smoothest secret agent, which is why we caught him," Mattox said.

Ms. Richards, in Waco Monday night for a speech to the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, called the news conference "a pathetic, pathetic attempt to get attention — to get in the press. Apparently he accomplished it," the Waco Tribune-Herald reported.

Ms. Richards' campaign manager,

Mattox

Richards

Glenn Smith, called Mattox's statement a "ridiculous claim." He said that Hernandez, a volunteer for Ms. Richards, had done nothing more than ask at Mattox headquarters for brochures and bumper stickers.

Smith also said Frank Castillo, an employee of the attorney general, had threatened Hernandez with loss of his legal residency status, a lie detector test and a prison term.

Hernandez, who was born in Guadalajara, Mexico, has lived in Laredo, and for the past five years, Austin, where he is a first-year criminal law student at the community college.

According to Mattox, Hernandez came into his downtown campaign headquarters on three occasions and claimed to be a Mattox supporter.

Hernandez later was seen working at a campaign table for Ms. Richards at the Mexican-American Democrats convention, Mattox told a news conference. Hernandez admitted he had been working on Ms. Richards' campaign for about six weeks before coming to Mattox's headquarters, the attorney general said.

"We are fortunate that he was discovered before he gained access to our computers, where the most important campaign information is stored," Mattox said.

"I urge Ann Richards to investigate the unethical practices of her campaign staff and dismiss those on her payroll who are responsible for the misdoings," Mattox said. "We fully expect a full apology from the Richards campaign."

When asked about Mattox's demand for an apology, Richards laughed, then added, "I didn't have anything to do with it."

Hernandez said he went by the Mattox campaign headquarters twice, once at the invitation of a Mattox campaign worker, because "I was just a curious person."

Asked about his window seat at the restaurant, Hernandez said, "Everybody would like to sit by the window. Who wants to sit by the bathroom?"

Hernandez said he never asked about computers and never filled out a volunteer form for Mattox.

Hernandez said Castillo came to his house Sunday night and said, "'Carlos, if you don't cooperate with us, you may lose your legal status, the right to become a citizen. And you also are going to need some lawyers.'"

"He (Castillo) said, 'You might need some therapy, if you become traumatized about this ... who's going to pay for all this?'"

"By that time, I was really scared," Hernandez said.

He said he told Castillo he would take a polygraph. But Smith said, "If he (Hernandez) asks me if he should take a test, I say no."

Hernandez said Castillo told him, "Carlos, you can easily go to jail ... because it looks to me like you were gathering information from this campaign to take it to the other campaign."

"In fact, that's not the truth," Hernandez said. "I just happen to be a curious person walking down Congress (Avenue)."

Billy Horton, field director for Mattox's campaign, said Castillo is a campaign volunteer, and has a good reputation. "I don't think he would have handled himself in that manner," Horton said.

Horton said he believes the accusation is an attempt to turn attention from Mattox's charges.

STATE

A&M one of 4 schools to get supercomputer

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M has become one of four schools in the country to acquire a $5.5 million supercomputer that ranks among the fastest in the world.

School officials Monday activated the Cray Y-MP supercomputer, which is capable of 300 million calculations per second.

The computer will be instrumental in Texas A&M's role in the Texas Space Grant Consortium, said Dr. John J. Dinkel, associate provost for computing and information systems.

Texas A&M is one of 21 Texas colleges joining forces to explore space in the federally funded program announced by NASA earlier this month.

"Texas A&M has a number of space-related research projects going on. The supercomputer will allow us to develop information on space-like conditions quickly and hopefully contribute significantly to the space grant consortium," Dinkel said.

Within a year, the supercomputer will be accessible to all seven schools in the Texas A&M system. Other Texas schools will be able to buy access time on the computer, Dinkel said.

Ed Walraven, a spokesman for the university, said he expects the computer, developed by Cray Systems Inc. of Minneapolis, to attract more research grants.

"A lot of areas of research that require supercomputers have grants available," Walraven said. "At Texas A&M where you have access to so many fields like science and medical, I would certainly anticipate more research grants."

The University of North Carolina, Ohio State University and San Diego State University also have the model, Dinkel said.

Texas A&M president Dr. William H. Mobley said the school needed the supercomputer to compete against leading research universities.

"Such a resource is needed in order to maintain and increase levels of research funding and to recruit and retain the type of faculty, research staff and graduate students who generate this funding," Mobley said.

Geren outspends Lanier in race for Wright's seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrat Pete Geren has substantially outspent his Republican opponent, Dr. Bob Lanier, heading into today's special election for the 12th Congressional District seat held by former House Speaker Jim Wright, according to federal records.

Geren also has raised thousands of dollars more than Lanier in what both sides expect to be a tight race for the Fort Worth seat, which opened up when Wright resigned in June during a House ethics committee investigation of his finances.

According to the Federal Election Commission, Geren reported net receipts of $565,300 through Aug. 23, as well as at least $130,500 in last-minute contributions between then and the end of last week, for a total of $695,800.

Lanier reported net receipts of $340,269 through Aug. 23, and at least $50,000 in last-minute contributions, for a total of $390,269.

Since the Aug. 23 reporting deadline, the candidates have been required to report within 48 hours all contributions of $1,000 or more, but are not required to disclose what they have spent or other details of their campaign finances.

According to FEC records, Geren through Aug. 23 had received $395,134 from individual contributors, $153,640 from PACs, and $5,000 from the Democratic Party. He also has borrowed $11,321, spent $527,880, and has debts totaling $59,957, with cash on hand of $131,410.

FEC records also indicate that through Aug. 23, Lanier had received $240,019 from individual contributors, $35,750 from PACs, and $43,500 from the Republican Party. He also has borrowed $15,000, spent $281,344, and has debts totaling $15,000, with cash on hand of $58,924.

Both candidates have some high-profile contributors giving to their campaigns — with Lanier reporting contributions from Robert Mosbacher Jr., son of Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, developer Trammel Crow of Dallas, and ex-football star Robert Staubach.

Geren has received funds from high-profile Houston attorney Joseph D. Jamail; Robert Abboud, chairman and chief executive of First City Bancorp. of Texas Inc.; Modesto, Calif., vintner Ernest Gallo, and Fort Worth investor Sid Bass.

Howard Schloss, a spokesman for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, said Geren has raised an "impressive amount of money."

"Certainly, one measure of a good candidate is the amount of money he can raise and the people have obviously responded to him," said Schloss.

But John Buckley, a spokesman for the National Republican Congressional Committee, said Lanier's fund-raising effort had lagged because of a perception problem in Washington of the race in the traditionally Democratic district.

"It is clear it has taken the political community longer to see that there is a real race going on down there than it has for the people of the 12th District," Buckley said.

"Many people assumed that because it was a gerrymandered Democratic district, it would be a shoo-in for the Democrat. What they weren't bearing in mind is that Bob Lanier turned out to be a magnificent candidate and Geren has turned out to a dud," Buckley said.

Day care center workers stabbed

DALLAS (AP) — A day care center's director and assistant director were repeatedly stabbed and chased around the facility while horrified children and a parent watched, police say.

The Apple Ridge Private School's director, Charlotte Sue Reed, was in serious but stable condition today at Methodist Medical Center. A hospital official says the victim sustained lacerations and a punctured lung.

The school's assistant director, Felisha Lynette Gibbons, was in fair condition at the same hospital with numerous stab wounds on her face and arms. Two children, ages 2 and 4, and a parent were splattered with blood as they witnessed the attack Monday evening, police Sgt. J.W. Schildt said.

"That was the worst crime scene I've ever seen," said Schildt. "It went from room to room. There were pools of blood by each of the telephones. One of the women tried to jump out of a window — it was broken out from the inside."

Ms. Reed, 45, tried to telephone police as a former boyfriend of Ms. Gibbons began attacking the 25-year-old woman with a knife, said Detective Vincent Golbeck.

He said a second man demanded Ms. Reed's car keys and told her to get off the telephone, then began stabbing her and cut the phone line.

Armed with butcher knives, the men chased the women from room to room as the victims tried to telephone police or escape.

The assailants took both women's purses and drove away in Ms. Reed's car, which was later found nearby, said police. A man who saw the assailants leave the day care center went to the Oak Cliff Bible Fellowship next door to call officers, said David Waldon, a church staff member.

"When he (the witness) came in, he looked kind of out of sorts and I knew something was wrong," said Waldon. "Right then, Sue came in and she was bleeding pretty bad."

As Waldon helped Ms. Reed, others went to the center where they found Ms. Gibbons lying on the floor. The children and mother were unhurt, said Schildt.

Posing in front of San Antonio's Bexar County Courthouse. A notary public with offices in the building for the past 33 years, Mrs. Ellington has kept an autograph book full of history and memories.

Veteran notary recalls job's romantic aspects

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Anita Ellington reaches into her desk and slips out a 30-year-old autograph book full of Bexar County Courthouse history and memories.

A 1964 postcard sent to Mrs. Ellington by a former judge falls out of the book, as does a picture of a deputy constable she knew years ago. This is the way Mrs. Ellington's friends at the courthouse enter her conversations. They slip in effortlessly with every mention of a dear, old friend.

"Other than my family, this courthouse has been my life," Mrs. Ellington said. "There's a lot of wonderful memories in this rinconcito de amor (little corner of love)."

Mrs. Ellington's corner on the first floor of the courthouse is more than her office for a busy notary public business. It also is the corner where courthouse visitors most often come for directions to various offices, or where county employees hang out for a few minutes of friendly chatter.

Over her corner, a dimly lit, black-and-white sign put up in the 1950s reads, "Notary Public, Public Stenio." The old sign has been her companion for 33 years, the same number of years Mrs. Ellington has called the courthouse home.

She is a throwback to the courthouse's pre-1970s days, when the building was an open-air structure with high ceilings and patios lush with beautiful plants.

"It was so romantic," Mrs. Ellington said, rolling her eyes. "The courthouse was like a big, old mansion."

Those were the days with no air conditioning, and when heating during the winter months was generated from a boiler room in the basement. It also was a time when the courthouse had segregated bathrooms, a troubling policy Mrs. Ellington never liked.

Through the changes, she has been there to record it all in her autograph book. There is a 25-year-old note from Bill Hauck, a Bexar County sheriff in the 1960s and a friend Mrs. Ellington treasured for many years. State District Judge Robert Murray stopped by Sept. 26, 1969, to clip a few hairs from his nearly bald head to give Mrs. Ellington as a memento. Twenty years later, the judge's hairs still are taped to a page in the autograph book.

"Little things here and there," Mrs. Ellington said of her collection of memories.

There is little time for recollections during an ordinary workday in Mrs. Ellington's corner. People walk up to her counter in a non-stop procession of questions and ask for directions to the tax office or to an upstairs courtroom.

Young couples, or "young turtle doves" as Mrs. Ellington calls them, come by to ask for information about marriage licenses.

"You never get bored here," she said. "I think the only other places I'd like to work are the Pentagon and the White House."

Mrs. Ellington's years before the courthouse were spent in Seguin, where she grew up as Anita Maldonado. She came to San Antonio in 1955, thinking she would go back to Seguin in a few years. She never did. Her rinconcito became an anchor she could not leave.

Panhandle family tunes out television, finds time to read

CANADIAN (AP) — They say there's at least one in almost every home in America. Its invention unveiled a worldwide communication explosion, and some claim that it is the most important informational source ever created.

They won't get any argument from Canadian school teacher Jim Hawley. He's been proclaiming the virtues of the printed page ever since he switched off the television two decades ago.

"I was raised on the tube, you know, and I didn't read much," said Hawley. That changed when he married his wife, Pennie, also a school teacher, 21 years ago this December. They got rid of the TV set.

"To tell you the truth, I can't recall the moment we decided not to own one. We've never been in the market for one," he said.

He concedes that it is unusual for a 20th century American family to be without a television set, but said they decided to do without the electronic houseguest for two reasons.

"Spiritually, we didn't want the undesirable part of it in our home. Secondly, we wanted to raise our kids in the best educational environment ... we wanted to be readers instead of watchers."

Reading has replaced viewing almost entirely for the family of four. In an average school year, Hawley estimated his family checks out about 600 pieces of literature from the library.

Although he admits the effect a literary diet has had on his children's education can't be verified, Hawley said he suspects the influence has been positive. His oldest daughter, Dena, a sophomore, was ranked first in her class last year and his youngest daughter, Lee Anne, is a fifth-grade honor student.

The girls watch television occasionally at their grandparents' homes, he said, but don't miss something that's never been a part of their lives.

"The kids at school don't believe our kids can live without one. They think they would die."

On occasion, Hawley said, a National Geographic special or other television feature might cause him to tape a program at another location so that he can view it later, but it rarely happens.

"It's not like 'Dallas' is going to tempt us to go tape it," he said.

The Hawleys had been a TV-free family for several years when he began teaching school in rural western Montana, a position he held from 1975 to 1982. The remote area could receive only one television station, he said.

"What was interesting about it was that we had fantastic readers. They're reading level was just tremendous." Hawley said he and his family return to Montana every summer.

"There is a satellite dish beside just about every house now," he said. "I've often wondered what happened to their reading level. I'm sure it went down."

Although he and his wife grew up in television families, his attitude about the box has changed during its long absence. Television, Hawley said, has gone from a companion to a distraction.

State lacks funds to provide AZT, officials say

AUSTIN (AP) — The state has hardly any money to provide thousands of AIDS-afflicted Texans with AZT, a drug recent studies have found helps people in the earliest stages of the disease, officials say.

"We don't have nearly enough money now, and this new mode of treatment will require more money," Texas Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein said.

It is estimated that the number of infected Texans without symptoms is as high as 100,000, based on data from voluntary statewide testing, annual screening of blood from newborns in hospitals across the state and statistics from U.S. Army enlistments in Texas.

AZT costs each patient with acquired immune deficiency syndrome about $8,000 a year.

The effects of AZT recently announced by the National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases come as state health officials begin to sort out what they have been empowered to do under the Human Immunodeficiency Virus Act that went into effect Sept. 1.

Health officials were relying on federal funds to provide AZT to Texans in the final stages of the disease, and the findings about AZT's added usefulness have compounded the state's financial problems in combating the viral disease.

The new law is the state's first comprehensive attempt to meet the challenge of the AIDS epidemic. But Bernstein said it will be impossible to implement fully with the $18.4 million provided by the Legislature for the two-year budget period, far less than the $45.8 million requested.

"All I can say is we'll use every penny of it and fall short in some areas," Bernstein told the Austin American-Statesman. He said the department also will apply this week for continuation of more than $8 million in state AIDS programs previously funded by the federal government.

The new law enlarges many older AIDS programs that the state administers or contracts out to non-profit local groups, and it creates some new ones.

Beginning in January, for instance, Texans applying for marriage licenses will receive a brochure explaining how AIDS is contracted.

Other new programs would help local AIDS services groups by giving them a state clearinghouse for information on federal and charity grants, and letting them apply local tax and charity money toward cheaper bulk purchases by the state of medications for people with the disease. That program could help provide more AZT to more people.

But health officials also must worry about the demise at the end of this month of a federal program now providing about $1 million a month to pay for AZT for 1,720 indigent Texans in the final stages of the disease.

They represent 62 percent of the 2,778 Texans with symptoms of AIDS. As of Sept. 1, 7,236 Texans have been diagnosed with AIDS, and 60 percent of them have died.

"We always have hopes the feds will pick it up. They always have before," Bernstein said.

If they do not, he added, the state has only $2 million from the new AIDS appropriation with which to pick up the cost of the program, enough for two months.

Donaldson video part of UTEP's convocation

EL PASO (AP) — ABC newsman Sam Donaldson says life at his alma mater taught him a bit about broadcasting, how to get up for 8 a.m. classes, something about the French Revolution and how to play poker.

Donaldson is one of the University of Texas at El Paso's most famous graduates. His recollections about the university were broadcast on a video shown Monday during UTEP's fall convocation that kicked off the school's 75th anniversary celebration.

Keeping with the school's anniversary motto, "Shine On," UTEP President Diana Natalicio counted off the school's many achievements since it began as the Texas State School of Mines and Metallurgy.

"We decided to hold this convocation on the first day of National Hispanic Heritage Week to recognize the growing national visibility that UT-El Paso has achieved for successfully preparing large numbers of Hispanics who have contributed significantly to this region and other national and international arenas," Ms. Natalicio said.

Speaking to an audience that included presidents of Mexico colleges, state and local officials and the mayor of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, she pointed out that the first class of 27 students included one from Mexico who also tutored in Spanish. And while there were no English courses at the school, Spanish was a required subject because jobs after graduation usually were in Mexico mines.

The Mexican Revolution contributed to the growth of El Paso and the birth of what is now UTEP as train loads of people headed north after every battle.

"Despite the ravages of war just across the border, there was a dynamic undercurrent of progressive thinking in El Paso. People continued to demand improvements in education and to build institutions for their future," she said.

In its transition from the Texas State School of Mines and Metallurgy to Texas Western College and finally UTEP, the school has had consistent themes, Ms. Natalicio said.

"Particularly salient are the close ties between this university and Mexico," she said. This year, nearly 650 Mexican students are among the more than 15,000 students enrolled at UTEP.

"The theme of this year's convocation, 'Shine On,' reflects both the shining success we have achieved for the past 75 years and perhaps even more importantly our determination to shine on as we pursue our institutional dreams for the future," she said.

She cited the accomplishments of the university in the past year, including approval of a proposed electrical engineering doctoral program, accreditation of the school's business school programs and growth of research grants and awards.

"Just one year ago we were proud to have been able to bring to the university nearly $5 million in extramural funding support."

STATE IN BRIEF

Two teens' deaths ruled murder-suicide

CONROE (AP) — A preliminary autopsy report has classified as a murder-suicide the deaths of two teenagers found shot to death, a Montgomery County Sheriff's spokesman said Monday.

The bodies of Angela Renee Guenther, 15, of Shenandoah, and her boyfriend, Johnnie Weisinger, 17, of Houston, were found Sunday in Weisinger's 1979 sports car near a creek south of Conroe. Each had been shot once in the head.

Sheriff's spokesman Bob Morrison said a small-caliber handgun in the car is believed to be Weisinger's.

"The ME (medical examiner) confirms with our investigation that it indeed was a murder-suicide," Morrison said.

Relatives, however, believe the couple met with foul play.

"He never gave his parents any problems," said Marie Weisinger, the boy's grandmother. "He always had Angela home by curfew. That's what's so sad about all this."

Gravel buries workers

FORT WORTH (AP) — Early morning rains were not believed to be a factor in a construction accident that killed two men who were buried under 28 tons of wet gravel, officials said.

The two men died Monday after a hopper funneling gravel onto a conveyor belt collapsed, spilling the gravel on top of them, officials said.

They were working in a pit beneath a metal hopper at J.L. Bertram Engineering when the machinery gave way and buried them, said Butch Hall, a spokesman for the Fort Worth Fire Department.

A bulldozer dug out Hector Suarez, 24, of Arlington about four hours after the 8:30 a.m. accident. The second man, a 25-year-old Mexican national whose name was being withheld pending notification of next of kin, was removed about an hour later.

911 operators honored

AUSTIN (AP) — Fourteen emergency call operators were honored at a ceremony on the Capitol steps Monday, which Gov. Bill Clements proclaimed "911 Day in Texas."

The Public Safety Telecommunicator Award winners for 1989 are Michelle Abernathy, Travis County Sheriff's Department; Millie Craig, Kingwood Emergency Services; Lora Gounah, Friendswood Police Department; Kimberly Anne Gossett, Garland Police Department; Gary Griffin and Richard Tidwell, Austin Fire Department; and Sandy Jones, Valerie Nelson and Patty Wylie, city of Arlington.

Also Cynthia Partridge, Webster Police Department; Albert Reese, Life Star Ambulance, Arlington; Denise Thomason, Seabrook Police Department; Sue Willis, Mansfield Police Department; and Debbie Yancy, Conroe Fire Department.

Hair, makeup segue into new season

By GLENDA WINDERS
Copley News Service

Unless you've won the lottery, you probably can't afford to replace your entire wardrobe every year. But you'd still like a new look, something different, something that says a new season is here and you're ready for it.

Why not let a saucy new hairstyle and some artfully done makeup work that magic for you.

"Fall's and winter's jewel-toned clothes demand a stronger face palette," says Carol Schatz in Self magazine.

And the cosmetics firms are ready with a whole array of products to help you bring off just the look you want.

The bywords this season are sheer, polished, colorful and vibrant but understated, never overdone. Opalescents are replacing frosts. Makeup is blended to sparkle and shine, enhancing your inner glow.

Good news is that makeup is finally good for you. Cleopatra and Queen Elizabeth I may have been willing to pile on skin-damaging powders and paints in the name of beauty, but the modern woman wants to take care of herself while she is looking good.

In answer to this need, Shiseido has revised its foundation and eye shadow formulas to include moisturizers. Lipsticks include humectants to hold in moisture, and face powders contain an oil-absorbing ingredient.

Estee Lauder has blended Perfect Lipstick, pigments mixed with moisturizers instead of just waxes and oils so that lips become softer with use.

Prescriptives' A Better Powder controls oiliness and dryness and blocks out sun.

Lancome's collection of tinted sunscreens is called Lipstique Solaire.

Recognizing that women like the look of a tan but aren't willing to risk exposure to dangerous rays, Giorgio has come out with Extraordinary Bronzing Powder, which also contains sunscreen and is noncomedogenic.

MAKING IT UP

Start with a clean face that has been properly moisturized for your skin type so that makeup isn't quickly absorbed. Dot on concealer to hide lines and circles under the eyes. One choice is Revlon's Line Concealer.

Next, spot-apply a foundation and blend with a damp makeup sponge. Choose a water-based foundation if your skin is oily.

To get exactly the right color for your skin tone, select Luminique's Color Correct Liquid Makeup or Prescriptives' Custom-Blended Foundation. Once your color is determined, the formula is stored in a computer for quick future refills. Or enhance the colors of your cool-weather wardrobe with the Sahara Chic collection from Max Factor.

Set the base with loose powder that you dust off with a brush or pressed powder, again mixed to your skin type and color.

Then use a fine-quality brush to apply blush. Choose a neutral color — plums and roses are out — and key it to your lip shade. Blend with your fingertips so that your cheeks are just warmed with color.

LUSCIOUS LIPS

Lips that frame your natural smile are your greatest beauty asset, so don't cut corners when choosing and applying lipstick. Select clear, bright colors — berries for day, rubies for evening.

Prime the lips with a moisturizing lip conditioner.

If they are too thin, use a lip liner that is just a shade darker than lipstick and line lips on the outer edges of your natural lip line and fill with a dark shade.

Too full? Outline the inside edges and fill with a lighter color.

Glossy is out and matte is back in. Blot your lips to give them the velvety look of rose petals.

THE EYES HAVE IT

The eyes have been called the windows of the soul, and rightly so, because that's where people look to see who you are, how you're feeling.

This season lots of new products are on the market to make your eyes more beautiful and more expressive than ever before.

Start with the brows. The accent now is on shape rather than color. A well-groomed brow, while both neat and attractive, also draws attention to your eyes.

Anesthetize the brow area with a lotion used for teething babies' sore gums. Then pluck carefully, using the inside corner of each eye as a marker. Remember that the look you want to achieve is natural — arched and slightly angular.

Match your natural brow color as closely as possible with your pencil color. If there are gaps that need to be filled in, choose a shade lighter.

If you overdo with color, brush the hairs backward and then smooth them down again. The artificial look will be gone.

Choose shadow and mascara colors from a neutral palette that will work with your foundation, blush and lip colors for an overall sleek, planned look.

Opt for browns, grays and taupes. Start with a primer, such as Aziza Crease Resistant Eye Shadow Base, so that shadow doesn't crease, cake or fade.

For eyes that are too narrow, brush a light-colored shadow from lashes to brows; then use a slightly darker color to create a new eye crease just above the natural one.

Too closely set? Apply pale shadow to the inner corner of the eye and gradually go darker toward the outer edges.

Stock your purse with the new Colorstix Powder Pencil Eye Shadows for quick fixes when you're away from home.

Thin lashes go plump this season with Max Factor's 2000 Calorie Mascara, with a triple polymer formula that promises to increase the thickness of your lashes 300 percent.

Or try Aziza's Conditioning Lash Primer, a colorless conditioning treatment that goes on before mascara. If you wear contact lenses, shop for Aziza's hypo-allergenic contact lens cosmetics.

Remove eye makeup with a gentle emollient. Warm the cream in your hand and apply with your ring finger, manipulating the fragile skin in the eye area as little as possible.

SHORT AND SASSY

Hairstyles this year are bobbed — short but not boyish. Expert cuts and perms give body — lots of waves and curls. Hair cut above the shoulders is an instant volumizer since it is continuously air-fluffed.

Try some of the products that promise at least to give the appearance of thicker hair — Redken Vivagen Hair Enrichment Treatment, Revlon Nutrasome Supplement for Thinning Hair.

Towel-dry your hair more so that you have to blow-dry less, or invest in heat lamps to eliminate the hair dryer all together. For a rich shine, try some of the new polishing products.

Hairstyles with natural-looking volume, body and color are the perfect complement for this season's straightforward fashions.

Controversial hair length more a matter of style

By ALAN SVERDLIK
New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — Lee Gasaway, whose blond locks hang just below his collar, stood in the drizzle outside Stockbridge High School in Henry County, Ga., and explained why he wears his hair long, in violation of the school's hair code. "I just got tired of the short look," the 16-year-old sophomore said, puffing on a Marlboro Light.

Looking across the schoolyard for his girlfriend, Johnny Leftwich offered a similar rationale for flouting the rules. "My brother had his hair long when he was young, and I liked it," said the 19-year-old, whose strawberry blond mane settles on his shoulders. "I think it looks good on me."

Unlike their 1960s counterparts, for whom long hair was a sort of banner, many of today's longhairs say they are not trying to send society a message.

For them, the decision to let it fly is a matter of cosmetics, not ideology.

In fact, some students defying Henry County's controversial hair code say they began wearing long hair simply to please their girlfriends.

Hard pressed to consider hairstyle anything but a fashion statement, these teenagers view the '60s only dimly, through a haze of generational differences.

"Long hair, peace, drugs, freedom ... something like that," joked Jeff McManus, 18, a Stockbridge senior, as he drove out of the school parking lot one afternoon.

McManus, whose curly red hair dipped below his collar bone before he had 4 inches snipped off, isn't in violation of the school board's policy, which says males can't wear their hair below the bottom of their collar.

That, however, couldn't be said about Leftwich, who says he received six warnings before quitting school to take a job as a bricklayer.

Since he wasn't alive in the '60s, he finds it hard to understand the equation of grooming with a particular political viewpoint.

He wonders, though, whether he would have sympathized with the longhairs of the counterculture.

"If I was around back then," he said, "I don't know which side I'd be on."

Although the '60s was one of the rare times in American history that hairstyles became widely controversial, they have occasionally been at the center of religious and political storms in other countries.

In Jamaica, for instance, members of the Rastafarian sect have long accused the government of harassing them for wearing dreadlocks.

During the '60s and early '70s, hair became a national obsession in the United States — the stuff of hit Broadway musicals ("Hair"), bumper stickers ("Jesus Wore Long Hair") and demagogic attacks on hippies by politicians such as George Wallace and Spiro T. Agnew.

Back then, long hair stood for something — a sort of narcissism and rebelliousness associated with left-wing politics and loud music.

The attitude was memorably captured in the Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young song "Almost Cut My Hair," when David Crosby referred to his unruly mane as "my freak flag." (Alas, Crosby is virtually bald these days.)

The link between hairstyle and politics began to weaken in the '70s.

"Once (long hair) no longer became an emblem of social protest, then it became possible for it to become a purely fashion statement," said Dan Carter, a professor of Southern history at Emory University. "By the '70s, white working class people in the South were wearing mustaches and long hair."

As time went on, long hair was shorn of much of its symbolism. By the '80s, the hairiest men tended to be blue-collar workers, bikers, heavy-metal rock fans and professional tennis players.

Longhairs were as likely to turn up at a Klan convocation as at a nuclear freeze rally.

Long hair certainly has no political significance for James Cameron, 30, an Atlanta bartender whose auburn hair falls several inches below his shoulders.

"Everyone has their own style, and this is part of mine," he said.

DEAR ABBY

Father biased against in-laws' ethnic slurs

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old married man with a fine, bright, 8-year-old son. My wife and I have a wonderful marriage, and for the most part I have fantastic in-laws. The one negative aspect of my in-laws is the way they refer to certain ethnic groups. They are very close-minded, prejudiced people who use offensive words to describe someone's race, color or religion.

I can live with it, but I don't want our son to hear talk like that from people he is supposed to respect.

Is there a tactful way to ask my in-laws to please refrain from making ethnic slurs around our child? Or should I let them say what they wish and continue to dispute what they've said after they leave? — OPEN FOR SUGGESTIONS

DEAR OPEN: Ask your "fantastic" in-laws to please keep their ethnic slurs to themselves in the presence of your son because you are trying to teach the boy to judge people by their character — not by their color or religion. Also ask your wife to join you in keeping her parents in line.

DEAR ABBY: I have some questions that need to be answered concerning several situations. I already have a couple of my neighbors upset with me, so I hope you will help settle things.

The first situation involves inviting other children to go along with my child to the movies, skating, out to eat, etc. Who should pay for the other children's food and entertainment? Should I? Or should they pay for their own?

Also, is it rude to invite only my child's playmate, even though there are three other children in his family?

And how do I handle this situation: A young neighbor boy is always asking to be included, no matter where we're going. He says, "My parents have already said yes."

Please help me, but don't use my name, initials or location. Thank you. — FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: When you invite a child's playmate to go anywhere with your child, the playmate is your guest, so you pick up the tab.

It's not rude to invite only your child's playmate, regardless of how many siblings he has.

Finally, if it's convenient to include the neighbor boy who is "always" asking to go along and says his parents have already said "yes," include him after checking with his parents. The lad appears to be very hungry for acceptance. Be kind to him.

DEAR ABBY: My former fiancee and I have split up and the handwriting is finally on the wall. (No hope for a reconciliation.)

However, a few months before the breakup, she lost the engagement ring I had given her. She claims I should just "deal with it." I say she should reimburse me. I am still paying for the darn ring, which makes me angry every time I think of it.

Who's guilty here? Should I swallow my pride and assume the loss, or should she pay for it? Legally, do I have any recourse? Or am I out $2,200? — STEAMED IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR STEAMED: If you want to know what your "rights" are legally, please consult a lawyer.

Thanks for this opportunity to remind young (and old) lovers wherever they are, that as soon as they become officially engaged and he slips the ring on her finger, the ring should be insured for loss, theft or mysterious disappearance.

Parents, children speak a different language

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

It's always a shock to learn that you and your child do not speak the same language. Their words may be in English, but what they really mean is best left in the hands of a translator.

Let's say the kid is in the bathroom and the door is locked. There is water running and the dog is trying to turn the knob. You ask the child, "What are you doing in there?" and he replies, "Nothing." To you, "nothing" means inactivity. It actually translates as "Call the police."

Through the years I have been able to assemble a list of phrases and their real meaning:

■ "My teacher has never liked me." Expect a phone call before lunch from the teacher informing you that your child has been launching hot dogs by compressing them in a small Thermos and then removing the lid quickly.

■ "In a minute." This is not your basic 60 seconds. Most marriages don't last this long.

■ "You don't understand me." Your daughter is dating a barn-burner 15 years older than she is who drives a pickup truck with an "I love pit bulls" bumper sticker.

■ "Everybody else's mother said yes." Unless this poll was taken for permission to attend an orphan's picnic, forget it. The kid is lying.

■ "I'll do the dishes when I get off the phone." This is an oldie, but a goodie. It was used originally by Miss Havisham in "Great Expectations." You remember the scene — the one where the cake has turned to stone and rats have taken over.

■ "May I borrow your (fill in the blank)." The key word here is "borrow." To an adult, it means a loan of something you expect to see again. To a child, it means a transfer of ownership. The next time you want it back, you must ask permission to borrow it.

A couple in Bellevue, Wash., recently came face-to-face with Child-Speak. They left their home to vacation for a few weeks, and when they returned their son dutifully reported he "had a nice gathering of a few friends" to celebrate his 18th birthday.

Translation: 75 kids were counted just before the younger brother panicked and called 911, bringing four police cruisers to the door. A keg was found in the closet next to the blanket storage bags, a hole in the wall was discovered where some of the guys had been messing around, and a huge pot of apples and cinnamon sticks was brewing on the stove in an attempt to disguise the stench.

The punishment, according to the kid, was "cruel, inhumane and unbearable." In the parents' vernacular: They took away his car keys for a week.

Bell charm bracelets not a new fashion

Associated Press

Although bell charm bracelets seem new in fashion, pre-Colombian Indians wore the first ones centuries ago, according to designer Terrymayer, who says such bracelets are on display in Bogota's Gold Museum.

She also points out historians report it was the custom in Egypt of 800-700 B.C. to wear bells as amulets and on a stick pin as a decorative closure on a garment.

Wrinkle-free cotton is possible, safer

New York Times News Service

A new chemical treatment for making cotton fabrics may pave the way for a wrinkle-resistant natural fabric that needs no more ironing than permanent-press fabrics.

Until now, permanent-press processes have been too harsh to use on anything but blends of cotton and polyester fabrics.

But researchers at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Southern Regional Research Center in New Orleans say they have developed a chemical treatment for fabrics that keeps cotton smooth and is safer for textile workers than chemicals usually used for wrinkle-free clothing.

Dr. Clark Welch, a chemist at the research center, said, "It eliminates the release of formaldehyde vapors into the air, and is therefore safer for industry workers."

Formaldehyde is a toxic chemical believed to cause cancer. The demand for a formaldehyde-free fabric finishing agent has been increasing as the government tightens regulations on worker exposure to potential health hazards.

Permanent-press fabrics now undergo a process called "cross-linking," in which cotton molecules in the fabric are joined to one another to make the fabric permanently flat or permanently creased.

By replacing traditional cross-linking chemicals with butane-tetracarboxylic acid (BTCA), Welch's process not only eliminates formaldehydes, but is chemically benign enough to be used on cotton.

Search for Maid

From Staff Reports

Applications are being accepted through Nov. 17 for the 1990 Maid of Cotton. The woman selected as the new Maid Dec. 30 in Dallas will represent the cotton industry for a year, including a six month tour which includes new stops in places such as Portugal, Italy, Indonesia, Thailand and Singapore, and a $10,000 educational award made possible by a grant to The Cotton Foundation from Ciba-Geigy Corporation.

Applicants must be 19 to 23 years of age who have never been married and must be a resident of a cotton-producing state. Judging will be based on appearance, poise, personality and communications skills.

Application forms are available at National Cotton Council headquarters, P.O. Bos 12285, Memphis, Tenn., 38182.

Japan plays host to major environmental conference

By MARY GANZ
Hearst News Service

TOKYO — Japan is hoping to bolster its bid to go high-profile as a global contributor this week by hosting a major conference on world environmental issues, part of a $2 billion program of environmental initiatives.

But underscoring the controversy surrounding environmental issues and Japan, participants in a "counter-conference" in Tokyo during the weekend were told that Japan's money is more likely to destroy than restore natural environments when it is spent as development aid to Third World countries.

That conference, which drew more than 700 participants from 10 countries, covered topics such as Japan's role in rain-forest destruction, Japan's record preserving animal species and the impact of this country's $10 billion budgeted aid to developing nations.

"Japan is the economic superpower of the 1990s, but at this moment it is also the No. 1 destroyer of the environment of Asian countries," said Malaysia's Martin Kohr of the Third World Network.

Tropical hardwood logging by Japanese interests has "already destroyed most of the forests in Thailand and the Philippines in the last 20 years," Kohr said. "Now they are destroying the forests of Malaysia."

The island nation is trying to clean up its bad image on environmental issues through large donations to environmental programs, development of antipollution technology and sponsorship of global forums.

"If such a power goes unchecked," said Yoichi Kuroda of the Japan Tropical Forest Action Network, "we will not be able to have a 21st century."

Japan is trying to clean up its bad image on environmental issues through large donations to environmental programs, development of antipollution technology and sponsorship of global forums, such as the one that began here Monday.

At the Paris summit of industrialized nations in July, Japan took the lead in putting forward environmental proposals that took up a third of the summit's final report. Japan's promises there ranged from a three-year, $2 billion aid program targeted at environmental problems in "upper middle-income" developing countries to a satellite network monitoring conditions on Earth.

Policy makers here see the environmental sphere as an area in which Japan can begin to shoulder the burdens expected of an economic superpower.

The governmental conference, jointly sponsored by Japan and the United Nations, will examine issues of global warming and environmental protection in undeveloped countries.

"The intention is to invite experts from all over the world on global environmental issues, to identify priority issues for international cooperation and agree on an agenda for action," said Kazuo Matsushita of the Environment Ministry.

Organizers of the "counter-conference," however, sharply criticized Japan for not including independent authorities or members of environmental groups, who might raise issues that could embarrass Tokyo.

These groups increasingly are calling Japan to task for failing to include non-governmental organizations in decision-making.

"The problem here is secret decision-making," professor Kazuo Sumi said after a session in which he listed Japanese aid projects that he said had damaged environments in Thailand, India, Indonesia and other developing nations. "If the Japanese people have a chance to know more, they will get angry at how their tax money is spent."

Israel plans for new wave of immigration

By ZE'EV CHAFETS
Hearst News Service

TEL AVIV, Israel — An expected tightening of America's immigration policy, coupled with the Soviet Union's new willingness to allow Jews to leave, has Israeli planners braced for a massive wave of Soviet Jewish immigrants.

According to forecasts by Israeli government officials, between 500,000 and 1 million Jews will leave the Soviet Union in the next decade.

Until now, Soviet Jewish emigres have been allowed to enter the United States as refugees; in recent years, as many as 90 percent have bypassed Israel for America.

But if the Bush administration goes ahead with its plan to give immigration visas only to those with close relatives already in the United States, most Jews who leave the Soviet Union from now on will almost certainly wind up in Israel.

Officials here are both pleased and concerned by that prospect. "Immigration is the lifeblood of Israel," said Uri Gordon, who heads the Jewish Agency's Immigration Department. "It is what this country is all about."

On the other hand, economic planners worry that the economy, already trying to cope with 10 percent unemployment and chronic "stagflation," may find it hard to absorb "olim," the Hebrew word for Jewish immigrants.

So far this year, at least 4,500 Soviet Jews have arrived in Israel. The government estimates that 100,000 more will come by the end of 1992.

According to Israeli Finance Ministry forecasts, the cost of settling them will be $3 billion. Most of the bill will be footed by already overburdened Israeli taxpayers, but government leaders are hoping for help from U.S. Jewry.

Israel's population is roughly 4 million, and absorbing 100,000 olim is equivalent, in American terms, to taking in 6 million immigrants. The vast majority of Soviet Jews do not speak Hebrew and arrive with virtually no money. Although many are well educated, some — mining engineers and arctic forestry experts, for example — have professions with little practical value in Israel.

Housing also will be a serious problem. Public absorption centers are already full, and private housing is expensive — simple two-bedroom apartments in the big cities cost upwards of $60,000.

Yossi Kucik, former director of the Ministry of Immigrant Absorption, acknowledged the resentment many Israelis feel over the economic sacrifices they will be called upon to make for people they perceive as ungrateful.

"Russian Jews who go to the United States say, 'Thank you, America, for taking me,'" he said. "The ones who come here say, 'You should thank us for coming.'"

Despite economic difficulties and resentment, there is no question that Israel will accept the Soviet Jews. The country's Law of Return grants automatic citizenship to Jewish immigrants who request it, and the "ingathering of the exiles" is a basic Zionist principle.

"Our doors are open, and every Jew is welcome," Foreign Ministry spokesman Yossi Amihud said.

Ideology aside, many officials here see practical benefits to the projected arrival of large numbers of Soviet Jews.

According to Uri Gordon, the estimated $200,000 it costs to resettle each family is a good investment. "At first glance, that seems like a giant sum, but every new family will eventually raise Israel's gross national product by $50,000 a year or more. Immigration stimulates the economy," he said.

Many Soviet Jews simply do not want to live in Israel. There are currently as many as 10,000 Soviet Jews in Italian transit camps, waiting for entry visas to the United States, and their refusal to go to Israel is especially galling.

"They belong here," said Gitit Migeres, spokeswoman for the Public Council on Soviet Jewry. "They have a country to go to. It is a disgrace that they call themselves refugees.

"The Jews in the U.S.S.R. have been subjected to 20 years of anti-Israeli propaganda," Kucik said. "A lot of them believe what they've been told."

That may be changing. For the first time, Soviet Jews are being allowed to visit Israel as tourists, and many find life in the Jewish state radically different from what they expected.

"My relatives were here for two weeks, and they were in a state of shock the whole time," said Benny Michalashvili, who emigrated from Soviet Georgia in 1969.

Johnson, Jones inducted into real world

Landry escapes to Europe to avoid media, emotions

By DENNE FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tom Landry was somewhere in Europe, celebrating his 65th birthday.

Jimmy Johnson was at Valley Ranch Monday, picking up the pieces of the worst opener in the Dallas Cowboys' 30-year history.

It was easy for Johnson to discover what went wrong in a 28-0 whipping by the New Orleans Saints on Sunday in his NFL coaching debut. Johnson needed no film review to know the Cowboys were defeated in every phase of the game.

"I would love to have an experienced and talented football team," Johnson said. "But if the football team had that I probably wouldn't be here."

With new owner Jerry Jones glumly prowling the sidelines, the Cowboys made history with their first season-opening shutout.

Johnson was grim but had expected the worst.

"It's not a good feeling to look across the field and know you have to play your best to have a chance," Johnson said. "We didn't play our best in any area. We weren't as aggressive as I want us to be. We showed no spark."

New Orleans coach Jim Mora said the Cowboys didn't look prepared.

"Jimmy has a long way to go," Mora said. "I don't know if he realized that before this game."

Landry's wife, Alicia, knew she didn't want her husband around to have to deal with the emotional aspect of the Cowboys playing their first game without him as head coach.

She suggested a European vacation, which will last until late September. The intinerary is secret.

Not even Landry's son, Tom, was certain where his father was when the game was played.

"I didn't want to know so I didn't have to answer any questions," he said.

Former club president Tex Schramm wasn't gloating over the disaster.

"It was very difficult for me to watch on television," Schramm said. "But I don't want to comment any farther."

Schramm is the president of the World League of American Football, which will make its debut in the spring of 1991.

It was a big comedown for Jones and Johnson after a 3-1 preseason that gave Cowboys' fans false hope.

As shocking as the futility of the Dallas defense was the lack of production by Herschel Walker.

Walker had a combined 2,109 yards rushing and receiving last season, but he carried only eight times for 10 yards against the Saints. It was his worst game rushing since 1986.

Walker, who caught four passes for 36 yards, couldn't understand his idleness.

"I think I played decoy and blocked more than I have in any game of my career," he said. "This offense is not an offense for a running back. It's a passing offense for receivers and quarterbacks."

Rookie Troy Aikman hit 17 of 35 passes for 180 yards in his NFL debut but suffered two interceptions. He had three passes dropped and a touchdown pass was called back because of holding.

"I thought Troy did a fine job considering the circumstances," Johnson said.

Aikman took the flogging in stride.

"Rookies are babes in a men's game in the NFL," he said. "Who thought we'd go 16-0 this season? You know, we might lose another game."

Jones' preseason prediction also looked in jeopardy. He predicted the Cowboys will win more games in the first third of the season than they did all last year (3).

Sunday's events indicate the new Cowboys will have to hustle harder to do it.

Astros fall to third

SAN DIEGO (AP) — When the San Diego Padres acquired Calvin Schiraldi, it seemed like a trade made with next year in mind. But the right-hander has been an immediate success.

Schiraldi pitched 6⅓ innings of four-hit ball and allowed three runs Monday night to win his second straight start since joining the Padres nearly two weeks ago as San Diego defeated the Houston Astros, 7-3.

The victory left second-place San Diego six games behind the San Francisco Giants, who rallied to beat Atlanta. The third-place Astros fell seven games back in the National League West.

Garry Templeton hit San Diego's club-record fifth grand slam of the season to highlight a six-run sixth inning, when they chased Astros starter Jim Deshaies, 12-9.

"I've been pitching better since the all-star break, but the wins haven't been there," Deshaies said. "It's one of those years where things haven't been falling into place."

Templeton's fifth homer of the year made a winner of Schiraldi, 5-6, whom San Diego acquired with outfielder Darrin Jackson in a five-player deal with the Chicago Cubs.

Vincent to succeed Giamatti

By RONALD BLUM

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Fay Vincent, the former movie studio head who came to baseball last year as A. Bartlett Giamatti's deputy, will be elected commissioner on Thursday, The Associated Press has learned.

Fay Vincent

Vincent most probably will be elected to a 4½-year term, until April 1, 1994, said a source familiar with the owners' plans, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

"It will be smooth, simple. No opposition," the source said on Monday.

A quarterly joint meeting of American League and National League owners is scheduled for Thursday at Milwaukee. Baseball's nine-man executive committee, which has been running the sport since Giamatti's death on Sept. 1, is scheduled to meet today at Milwaukee and the owners from each league will meet separately on Wednesday.

A commissioner can be elected only during a joint meeting of the leagues and must receive three-quarters of the votes, including at least five from each league.

Vincent, 51, is the former chairman and chief executive officer of Columbia Pictures Industries Inc. He joined Columbia in 1978 after David Begelman, the former chairman, was found to have forged checks.

Los Angeles Dodgers president Peter O'Malley and New York Mets president Fred Wilpon both praised Vincent on Monday but declined to predict what the owners would do.

"Although a lot of us have known him only nine months, he has impressed us more and more as we've gotten to know him," said O'Malley.

Giants win at buzzer

By FRANK LITSKY
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In a spectacular finish, the New York Giants upset the Washington Redskins, 27-24, Monday night when Raul Allegre kicked a 52-yard field goal as time ran out.

The Giants seemed on their way to a 21-10 victory in their first game of the National Football League season.

Phil Simms had thrown touchdown passes of 30 yards to Odessa Turner and 62 yards to Dave Meggett, and Ottis Anderson had run 14 yards for a touchdown.

Then, to the screams of a sellout crowd of 54,160 at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium, the Redskins struck back midway through the fourth quarter.

A 66-yard drive ended with Mark Rypien's 6-yard touchdown pass to Art Monk. Two plays later, Monte Coleman intercepted Simms's pass for Mark Bavaro and returned it 24 yards for a touchdown.

That put the Redskins ahead, 24-21. But Allegre tied the score with a 32-yard field goal with 2 minutes 17 seconds left.

Sophs take over in Garden City

Glass, Morales played crucial roles in 39-0 Bearkat win

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

GARDEN CITY — Maybe the Garden City Bearkats don't have the sheer athletic ability or experience that propelled them to a state playoff berth last season.

Then again, folks like tight end Wesley Glass and wingback-defensive back Richard Morales may keep the 'Kats tasting their newfound success.

Glass, a 150-pound sophomore, and Morales, a 140-pound soph, played big roles in Garden City's 39-0 romp over Forsan last Friday. Glass caught touchdown passes of three and seven yards in the first half, while Morales made his high school debut a memorable one with three fumble recoveries and a 24-yard interception return.

GLASS PLAYED in five junior varsity games last season, but his varsity expeirence consisted of bits and pieces of time when the outcome was no longer in doubt.

It's not that way this year. Glass was a key to Garden City's 314-yard attack, but his scoring ability surprised even himself.

"I wasn't at all expecting to get two touchdowns," Glass said.

He scored his first varsity points on a three-yard dump from quarterback Allen Hoelscher with 10:29 left in the first half.

Hoelscher later left the game with a banged-up elbow, but Glass proved it didn't matter who the quarterback was when he caught a seven-yard pass from freshman Shae Scott with five seconds left in the half.

Bearkat head coach Sam Scott said Glass is a definite over-acheiver with a chance for big things in District 8-A.

Wesley Glass Richard Morales

"He doesn't have a lot of athletic ability, but he's a smart kid and a good, solid performer," the coach said. "He did a good job of grabbing the ball out of the air on Friday, which is what a good receiver is supposed to do."

MORALES DID what a good football player is supposed to do — go where the ball is. He recovered a fumble in the first quarter, broke up a potential TD pass in the second quarter to help ruin Forsan's best chance of scoring, picked up two more fumbles in the third quarter, and capped his day with that interception return.

Morales made up his mind to go out for football almost before last season was over. "He came out with us in the off-season and he's been working hard ever since," Scott said.

"I wanted to go out and see what I could do," Morales said. His brothers Juan and Guillermo were members of last year's playoff team. Guillermo was also second in the Class A mile at the state track meet last spring.

"Richard saw that they were having success and just decided to follow," Scott said.

"He's got pretty good instincts even though he hasn't played in a long time."

THE BEARKATS plan several lineup changes for their trip at Grandfalls next week, Scott said. Glass may go at both tight end and defensive end, while soph Eric Seidenberger may start at both fullback and linebacker after gaining 60 yards on nine carries against Forsan. Chad Soles will also play a lot at fullback, since both he and Seidenberger start at linebacker.

GREENWOOD COACH Bob Purser got a good showing from his defense, but little offense in a 17-0 loss to Denver City last week.

The Rangers allowed 290 yards total offense to the host Mustangs, but kept the hosts out of the end zone until the fourth quarter, when Denver City quarterback Brent Chamberlain scored twice.

"We played awfully well defensively," Purser said. "They tried to run to the weakside, away from (strongside tackle) Jason Gardner, (strongside end) Mike Bradford, and (strongside linebacker) Brian Aylor."

That meant cornerback Jerry Gay, weak-side backer Shan Cumba and middle backer Justin Bain got most of the action. Senior free safety Tim Flowers chipped in with an interception and fumble recovery.

But the Rangers also got help from younger players like junior defensive tackle Mitchell Bishop and sophomore strong safety Eric Clutter.

At quarterback, junior Cody Mebane completed three-of-four passes in the fourth quarter after starter Larry Nichols struggled. Purser said he will make a decision on which one starts Friday at Reagan County by the end of Tuesday's practice.

"When a person with no varsity experience comes in and does a good job, it tends to make you think that he might be your best bet," Purser said. "But I won't know for sure until Tuesday."

SHUTOUTS

The Oakland A's have 19 shutouts this season, their most since 1973 when they had 23.

GIANTS

Then New York forced the Redskins to punt and took over on their 29-yard line with 44 seconds left.

Four plays and one pass-interference penalty later, the Giants were on the Redskins' 35 with 6 seconds remaining.

Allegre then kicked the winning field goal, the ball just clearing the crossbar as time and the Redskins expired.

On a hot, muggy night, Washington piled up the yardage. Rypien threw touchdown passes of 48 yards to Ricky Sanders and 6 yards to Monk and completed 22 of 32 for 349 yards. Ricky Sanders had 143 yards and Gary Clark 101 in receptions, and Gerald Riggs rushed for 111 yards.

Simms finished with 11 of 19 for 254 yards, two touchdowns and two interceptions. Anderson carried 23 times for 93 yards.

The day started ominously for the Giants. Five hours before the opening kickoff, a fire alarm forced the evacuation of their suburban hotel.

The players, some awakened from afternoon naps, stood patiently in front of the main entrance while autograph seekers moved in.

Three fire trucks arrived. While a few firefighters entered the hotel and determined there had been a false alarm, several colleagues descended on Simms and posed with him for photographs. That business finished, the firefighters quickly left and the players returned to their rooms.

Two hours before the game, Adrian White, the Giants' strong safety, worked out at the stadium. Coach Bill Parcells wanted to see if White was sound again after an ankle injury. Parcells decided White was sound enough to stay on the active list, though Greg Jackson started for him alongside Terry Kinard.

Jackson became the first defensive rookie to start a Giants opening game since Parcells became head coach in 1983.

In 1981, when Parcells joined the Giants as defensive coordinator, two rookies started on defense: Lawrence Taylor at outside linebacker and Bill Neill at nose tackle. Taylor was still there when the Giants' defense took the field for this game.

Though there were 47 players on each roster, two must be inactivated for each game. Here, the two Giants were Robb White, the backup defensive end recovering from an injured knee, and Jeff Rutledge, the third-team quarterback.

Both teams tried to establish running games from the start, with Ottis Anderson doing the heavy running for the Giants and Gerald Riggs for the Redskins. The first break came on Simms's first pass, intended for Lionel Manuel.

The ball was underthrown, and Alvin Walton intercepted for the Redskins. His 21-yard return put the Redskins on the Giants' 36-yard line.

But two plays later, as Riggs ran 7 yards for a first down, Taylor stripped the ball from behind, a favorite trick of the veteran linebacker. Mark Collins recovered for the Giants, and they moved 72 yards for a touchdown.

The score came on Simms' 30-yard pass to Turner. The 6-foot-3-inch wide receiver leaped for the ball with Darrell Green, the Redskins' 5-8 cornerback.

Birds pull to within two games of Jays

By TIM LIOTTA

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two ingredients — in addition to Cal Ripken — that the Baltimore Orioles must have contributing if they hope to challenge Toronto to the end finally came to life — Mickey Tettleton and Phil Bradley.

Tettleton hit a home run and Bradley had four hits to support Ripken's home run and three RBIs Monday night as the Orioles defeated the Chicago White Sox 6-3.

The victory, the Orioles' sixth in nine games, pulled Baltimore within two games of the Blue Jays in the American League East, and made Jeff Ballard the first AL pitcher to defeat every other team.

In the other games played in the AL on Monday, Seattle beat Boston 2-1 and Kansas City defeated Minnesota 6-1.

"This was crucial,," Orioles manager Frank Robinson said. "To have lost would have been disastrous. If we fell behind four games in the loss column, it would have hurt a lot at this late date."

Just as crucial to the Orioles was the return of Tettleton, who hit his first homer since Aug. 2. This was his first starting assignment since Aug. 4.

"That sure was a shot in the arm, that home run and single," Robinson said of Tettleton. "Hopefully, he can give us a spark and some production out of that position."

Tettleton spent four weeks on the disabled list with a knee injury and had one hit in four at-bats since being reactivated Sept. 2.

"There wasn't any pressure to go out there and try and do something spectacular," Tettleton said. "I was just trying to get something out of every at-bat. I wasn't expecting any miracles."

For Bradley, who had been hitting .206 since the All-Star break, this was the second multi-hit game in 20 games. Prior to this season, Bradley had a .306 career average after the All-Star break.

"I don't want to downplay a 4-for-4 night, but it wasn't my best game swinging the bat," Bradley said. "I try to create a scoring opportunity every time I'm up. It seems like when we sit back and wait for the big hit we don't get it."

The Orioles got it from Ripken, whose two-run home run was just the latest feat in a recent attempt to carry the Orioles with his bat. Ripken, who also drove in Baltimore's first run with a sacrifice fly, has three doubles, three home runs and 10 RBIs, and is hitting .300 over his last nine games.

This was the first time since June 19 that the Orioles got home runs from their third and fourth hitters — Ripken and Tettleton.

AL Roundup

Royals 6, Twins 1

Larry McWilliams, making his first AL start, allowed three hits in six innings and broke a nine-game losing streak as Kansas City beat Minnesota at Royals Stadium.

Kansas City pulled to within four games of idle first-place Oakland in the AL West.

McWilliams was acquired in a trade on Sept. 2 from Philadelphia, where he was 2-11 and had not won since May 13. The 35-year-old lefthander, 1-0 with Kansas City, walked none and struck out four.

McWilliams, who spent parts of 12 National League seasons with four teams, gave up his only run in the fifth when Kent Hrbek hit his 21st homer. Steve Crawford pitched two innings and Luis Aquino got the last three outs.

George Brett drove in two runs for the Royals and Jim Eisenreich hit a two-run triple.

Mariners 2, Red Sox 1

Seattle ended an 11-game home losing streak, beating Boston on six strong innings by Brian Holman and Mike Schooler's team-record 27th save.

The Mariners stopped a six-game losing string and sent Boston to its sixth straight defeat. The Red Sox fell 10 games behind idle Toronto in the AL East.

Holman, 6-9, won for the first time in nine starts. He gave up one run on five hits and Mike Jackson and Schooler finished with shutout relief. Schooler surpassed the Mariners' save record that Bill Caudill set in 1982 and matched in 1983.

ASTROS

Schiraldi was 3-6 for the Cubs this season with a 3.61 earned run average in 55 appearances, all in relief. In 1988, he was 9-13 with a 4.48 ERA in a career-high 27 starts.

"I just ran out of gas early," said Schiraldi, who left the game during the Astros' three-run seventh. "I didn't have enough (stamina) to last."

Greg Harris pitched the final 2 2-3 innings, allowing two hits.

San Diego still has two home games to play before traveling to San Francisco for a weekend series, but Tony Gwynn admits the Padres have reached the scoreboard-watching stage.

"As much as you do it, you hate to rely on the scoreboard so much right now. We do it and (we could) tell the crowd was into it too," Gwynn said.

Pirates 3, Cardinals 1

The Pirates won two straight games in New York before sending the Cardinals to their third consecutive loss Monday. Second-place St. Louis dropped 3½ games behind Chicago, giving the Chicago Cubs their largest lead since Aug. 18.

Neal Heaton, 4-7, gave up one run on two hits in six innings. He had been 1-7 with a 4.32 earned-run average as a starter but went 2-0 with a 1.96 ERA as a reliever.

Rookie Stan Belinda allowed one hit in two innings and 41-year-old Doug Bair finished for his first major-league save since Aug. 8, 1986, when he was with Minnesota.

The Cardinals have scored just four runs in their three losses.

Pedro Guerrero got his career-high 104th RBI in the Cardinals' fourth with a sacrifice fly.

Cubs 4, Expos 3

At Wrigley Field, Jerome Walton singled home the tiebreaking run in the seventh inning and Mitch Williams ended the game with a pickoff play.

Chicago sent Montreal to its seventh loss in 11 tries and dropped the Expos five games behind.

Greg Maddux, 17-11, gave up three runs in 6 1-3 innings. Mark Langston, 11-7, lost for the fourth time in five starts.

Rick Wrona led off the seventh with a double and moved up when second baseman Damaso Garcia made an error on Langston's pickoff throw. One out later, Walton singled to left.

Garcia and Mike Fitzgerald singled with two outs in the ninth against Les Lancaster. Williams relieved and, on a set play, bounced the ball to first baseman Lloyd McClendon, who snuck in behind pinch runner Jeff Huston and tagged him.

Montreal manager Buck Rodgers protested the final play, saying McClendon tried to deceive the runner.

Mets 5, Phillies 2

Kevin McReynolds hit a three-run homer in the first inning and an RBI single in the seventh as New York began a 10-game road trip by beating Philadelphia. The Mets, trailing Chicago by 4½ games, are 28-40 on the road this season.

Ron Darling, 13-12, gave up two runs on five hits in 6 1-3 innings. Randy Myers pitched 1 2-3 innings for his 23rd save.

Bruce Ruffin, 5-9, allowed McReynolds' 20th home run after an error by shortstop Dickie Thon and a single by Howard Johnson.

Giants 3, Braves 2

Will Clark's 105th RBI, a run-scoring single in the bottom of the eighth inning, sent San Francisco over Atlanta. The Giants stayed six games ahead of San Diego, while Houston fell seven games back in the NL West.

Scott Garrelts, 13-3, is 7-0 with a 1.26 ERA in nine starts since June 25. He gave up two runs on five hits in eight innings and Steve Bedrosian finished for his 20th save.

Pinch hitter Bill Bathe opened the eighth with a single off reliever Tony Castillo, 0-1, and Brett Butler sacrificed. After Terry Kennedy walked, Clark singled home pinch runner Mike Benjamin.

Lonnie Smith hit his 20th home run for the Braves. He hit a total of 20 homers in the majors from 1985 through 1988.

Dodgers 8, Reds 2

At Dodger Stadium, Lenny Harris and John Shelby each got four hits and Eddie Murray had a three-run homer as Los Angeles used 16 hits to beat Cincinnati.

Tim Belcher, 12-12, won his fourth straight decision. Ron Robinson, 4-2, had his four-game winning streak stopped.

Murray's 18th home run made it 4-0 in the third. Eric Davis hit his 31st homer and Joe Oliver also connected for the Reds. Davis came close to another home run, but Shelby reached over the center-field fence to make a catch.

Lady Reb spikers improve record

From Staff Reports

Midland Lee moved its volleyball slate to 2-8 for the season after posting a 1-2 mark in the Seminole tournament this weekend.

The Lady Rebels downed the Seminole junior varsity 15-6, 13-15, 15-11 to start the tourney. Then Lee was beaten by Lamesa for third time of the year with a 15-6, 15-10 loss. The Lady Rebs finished tourney action with a 15-1, 15-4 loss to Fort Stockton.

Marcia del Llano and Ronnie Sandoval paced Lee throughout the tournament, according to Elise Wheat, Lady Reb head coach.

"Ronnie and Marcia had a good tournament. We got a lot of leadership from them when we really needed it," Wheat said. "I got a lot of compliments from the other coaches on how well we played. Our kids are improving and putting out everything they have."

Lee and Midland High begin District 4-5A competition at 7:30 p.m. tonight when they play each other in the MHS gymnasium.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will find yourself nearer the summit before the end of 1989. New career and financial opportunities present themselves by early winter. Tensions subside when you find the answers to some puzzling questions. A stranger who enters your life in a mysterious way will play a major role in a decision you make next March. Learn how to say "no" gracefully and you will win new respect. Influential people intervene on your behalf. Follow your heart. A summer romance could turn out to be the real thing.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Nell Carter, melodious Mel Torme, actress Jacqueline Bisset, writer J.B. Priestley, soap queen Eileen Fulton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Distant events will have a powerful effect on your future. Use a conservative financial approach to improve the bottom line. Seize opportunity to break old habits. You win big in a romantic showdown.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Follow your artistic and creative urges today. Free-lancers can land plum assignments. Take an indirect approach when trying to solve a difficult personal problem. Know when to pull back.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Business negotiations are challenging and require much skill. Someone who makes romantic overtures may not appeal to you now. Be gentle. Your first impression could be misleading.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not back down on your promises to others. A teen-ager is relying on you. Address any tax problems by getting in touch with accountants. Avoid anyone who seems manipulative. You know better.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Business propositions come from out of nowhere. Rely on conventional methods only. An authority figure may be testing you; do not come unglued. Participating in sports will help you relieve tension.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get in touch with a college chum who might have the contacts you need to land a business deal. Sign contracts and agreements. An older person is a real romantic possibility.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not let outsiders tell you how to spend your money. A lingering physical problem deserves attention; see a specialist. Go all out to maintain family harmony. Your optimism is contagious!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Renewed enthusiasm helps you deal with stubborn people or a difficult situation. Put your thoughts on paper before entering into discussions with clients. A health problem responds to regular treatment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The day may get off to a slow start. Persevere! Your mate or family is unusually supportive. Overseas contacts could have a far-reaching effect on romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get in touch with former business associates who may want to back your pet project. It will be much easier to deal with someone you already know. Put romance on the back burner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There is more than meets the eye going on today. Use important contacts prudently. Even if you have to make some concessions, the results will be financially beneficial. Seek new investments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Requests for loans are likely to be granted. Be ready for some turbulence in romance. Loved one may be saying one thing but thinking another.

The bidding:

4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣

Sometimes declarer must combine more than one line to achieve an optimum result. Both themes in this hand were discussed individually in recent columns. Can you spot them?

There is nothing to the auction. Once North could do no more than raise to two hearts, declarer had no interest beyond game.

West's jack of clubs opening lead was won in the closed hand. Declarer drew trumps and tried the diamond finesse. East exited with a club. Eventually declarer had to tackle spades, and it took only reasonable care by the defenders to assure themselves of three tricks in that suit and a one-trick set.

Going in, declarer had nine fast tricks. As long as the opponents could be compelled to broach spades, declarer would have to come to one trick in that suit by force. How could that be accomplished?

The only way is to make any other return fatal. After winning the opening lead and drawing trumps, declarer should cash the remaining clubs, discarding a diamond from dummy. Now the scene is set for an endplay.

Declarer must ignore the diamond finesse in favor of playing ace and queen of diamonds. It makes no difference which defender wins the trick—either must present declarer with the contract. A minor-suit return allows declarer to discard a spade from hand while ruffing in dummy. And opening up the spade suit gives declarer his 10th trick by force.

Pacino returning to public view

NEW YORK (AP) — After six years of what he calls "the clandestine thing," Al Pacino is returning to public view.

The star of the two "Godfather" films and "Dog Day Afternoon" says in Vanity Fair magazine's October issue that he spent much of the past six years in dark glasses, false moustaches and disguised stage roles.

Out of sight since filming "Scarface" in 1983, Pacino stars in the upcoming romantic thriller, "Sea of Love," with Ellen Barkin, and plays a surprisingly lighthearted cameo as the bad guy in Warren Beatty's "Dick Tracy."

He also has agreed to play the Michael Corleone for the third time after director Francis Ford Coppola told Pacino he'd come up with a new concept for the third "Godfather" film. Diane Keaton, with whom Pacino has had a relationship for several years, again will play Corleone's estranged wife.

Pacino, 49, said he relished his time in disguise. "There's a feeling that you experience when you put on glasses and a moustache and you blend in," he told the magazine. "I felt so free. I was excited."

Curtis

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Jamie Lee Curtis says motherhood, a happy marriage and a satisfying career have given her "the life I have always wanted."

But getting there wasn't easy, she says in Redbook magazine's October issue. Among the difficulties, she recalled, was having famous parents.

When she was in seventh grade, her father was arrested for marijuana possession and her schoolmates taunted her with the words: "You're father's Tony Curtis and your mother's Janet Leigh, your father just got busted but your mother still is free."

Ms. Curtis' career got off to a rocky start with some ill-fated television shows. After playing the screaming baby sitter in two "Halloween" movies, she starred in a big-budget movie with John Travolta, "Perfect," that bombed.

After starring in a few smaller films, Ms. Curtis came into her own as a comedian in "A Fish Called Wanda," in which she played a sexy con artist.

Ms. Curtis, 30, is married to actor Christopher Guest, with whom she has an adopted daughter. "I have a family I love and the kind of work I like to do," she said. "Everyday I tell myself, 'I did it!' "

• • •

Adjani

NEW YORK (AP) — Isabelle Adjani thinks one actress has cornered the market on English-speaking roles that require foreign accents.

"Meryl Streep is the most effective customs and immigrations officer," the French actress says in Vanity Fair's October issue. "She stands there and says, 'You can't come in — I'll do the accent.' "

Adjani's latest film, "Camille Claudel," was the biggest film in France last year and opens in this country in December.

The 31-year-old actress won a Cesar, the French equivalent of the Oscar, for portraying Claudel, the mistress, muse and competitor of French sculptor Rodin. Claudel was a formidable sculptress and artist herself, but her stern Catholic family had her committed to an insane asylum for the last 30 years of her life.

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Former President Ronald Reagan, recovering from skull surgery, should be able to return home in a few days and in the meantime is working on paperwork and keeping up with the news, a spokesman said.

"Physicians managing President Reagan's care are hopeful that if the present rate of progress continues, President Reagan will be able to return to California at the end of the week," Reagan spokesman Mark Weinberg said Monday.

He said no specific date has been set for Reagan, 78, to be released from the Mayo Clinic's St. Marys Hospital.

Mayo doctors Friday drilled a hole in the former president's skull to remove a buildup of blood. Weinberg said the problem stemmed from a July 4 accident in which Reagan was thrown from a horse and hit his head.

TOKYO (AP) — Officials today said Prince Aya, the second-in-line to the throne, will take as his bride a college student whose humble background gave her the nickname "Apartment Princess."

The announcement by the Imperial Household Council came a day after Kiko Kawashimashe celebrated her 23rd birthday with the prince, the emperor and empress at Akasaka Palace, a far grander home than the simple apartment where she lives with her parents.

Prince Aya's choice of his college sweetheart, who has no noble background and whose family is well-off but not wealthy, has caused a stir among some palace conservatives.

"It will be hard for her because she is the closest person to the general public ever to marry into the royal family," said one palace source, who requested anonymity. "Empress Michiko may have been a commoner, but her family was certainly upper class."

Michiko, the first commoner to become empress, reportedly helped deflect opposition to the marriage.

The idea of 23-year-old Aya marrying before his 29-year-old brother, Naruhito, also had met considerable opposition from palace conservatives, another palace source said.

Gann

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Paul Gann, who helped lead the Proposition 13 tax revolt in the 1970s and fought a losing battle for criminal penalties for those who knowingly spread AIDS, died Monday from the effects of the disease. He was 77.

The self-proclaimed "people's advocate" died of pneumonia "complicated by a problem with the AIDS virus," said Ted Costa, his longtime political aide.

Gann had said he contracted AIDS from blood received during open-heart surgery in 1982, before blood screening for the AIDS virus had been developed.

Gann co-wrote the property tax-slashing Proposition 13 initiative in 1978 with the late Howard Jarvis.

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Watson William Wise, a Texas oilman and philanthropist who was appointed a United Nations delegate by President Eisenhower, died Saturday at age 89.

A native of Ohio, Wise graduated from Yale and moved in 1925 to Texas, where he started Wise Operating, Wise Drilling Inc. and Watburn Oil Co. He later wrote three books about his world travels.

In 1958, Eisenhower appointed Wise a delegate to the United Nations' 13th General Assembly. He later served as special counsel to NATO.

Wise funded the Watson W. and Emma Wise Cultural Arts Center and Wise Auditorium at Tyler Junior College, where he served on the board of trustees from 1950-70.

Another boom for Austin Chalk?

Horizonal drilling opens new exploration play

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

A third drilling boom may be in line for the Austin Chalk as Oryx Energy Co. announced this week plans to launch in that oil producing formation what is probably the largest horizonal drilling program to date in the U.S.

Horizonal drilling which involves drilling horizonal extensions to a vertical well only recently progressed from experimental to limited ise status, but has yet to see wide spread application in the industry. Now Dallas-based Oryx says it will drill as many as 85 horizonal wells in the ailing Austin Chalk formation by the end of 1990, pending favorable spacing and proration rulings from the Texas Railroad Commission.

Oryx's decision to implement the program, which will include 25 exploratory and 60 development wells, comes following the successful completion of a seven well horizonal drilling program in which initial flow rates ranged from 80 to 1,607 barrels per day.

If subsequent wells prove as successful, other operators are expected to jump on the horizonal band wagnon launching another flurry of drilling activity in a producing trend that extends across Frio, LaSalle, Zavala and Dimmitt counties in South Texas.

Extremely quiet since oil prices collapsed in the early eighties, once again a lively land rush reminiscent of the late seventies is spreading across the Austin Chalk as oil companies seek to gain an acreage position in the Pearsall field, which holds the most promise for horizonal drilling.

"The land play is the direct result of the horizonal drilling potential in the trend," says John Brose, operations manager for Clayton W. William Jr. oil interests. Williams has drilled three horizonal wells in the trend with varying success and Brose says the company is seeking to gain a stronger position.

Brose says only portions of the Austin Chalk trend will be suitable for horizonal drilling, but there is plenty of available areas to prompt a new round of activity.

"We drilled two horizonal wells in the Giddings field and did not have much success with either. We suspect it is the nature of the faulting that makes the difference."

If indeed a new oil and gas exploration play does develop in the complicated geology of the Austin Chalk it will be one of the few plays that have developed since the down turn in oil prices.

"We drilled our first well purely as a science play," says Tom Gladney, reserves development manager for Oryx in Houston. "We thought horizonal drilling might improve production in the highly fractured Austin Chalk and we were right."

A red-tinted photo of Mikhail Gorbachev raises a vodka toast as shoppers browse in Bloomingdales Perestrokia Boutique in Rockville, Md. Soviet army jackets are the hot item with teens.

Perestroika boutiques?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under red-tinted photographs of a smiling Mikhail S. Gorbachev raising a vodka toast, American teen-agers are raiding new "perestroika boutiques" at Bloomingdale's for a hot new clothing fad — Soviet military jackets festooned with campaign medals.

If Gorbachev is seeking a vote of confidence from the West for his reform policies, where better to look than Bloomies, the trendy bastion of capitalist consumerism and affluent teen-age customers on buying sprees?

Miraed Smith, publicity director for the New York-based department store chain, reported a heavy demand for Soviet exports of khaki-colored, army-style jackets with fake fur collars and hoods, which retail for $190.

Youngsters decorate them with elaborately colored enamel medals commemorating everything from Lenin to Soviet space exploits and wartime triumphs. The medals sell for $5 to $15 apiece, depending on size.

"The kids think all this is sizzling and cool," Ms. Smith said in a telephone interview from New York.

Bloomingdale's, which takes pride in anticipating fashion trends, believes it has found a "new frontier" in the Soviet market, said Pat Cummings, public relations director for Bloomingdale's two stores in the Washington suburbs of Maryland and Virginia.

She said sales have been brisk since "perestroika boutiques" opened here on Friday. The counters are stacked with Soviet T-shirts, wristwatches and — just the item for the American shopper — credit card holders in red-bordered black leather.

Ms. Smith said Bloomies started selling Soviet goods in May when it bought some black Russian rye bread, which sells for about 30 cents in Moscow, from an unnamed American importer. "Our people tasted it and said it was the most luscious bread they'd ever eaten," she said. "They went absolutely wild over it."

Bush looks to lease Saudi oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is seeking to save money on U.S. emergency oil reserves by possibly leasing — rather than buying — oil from Saudi Arabia and other major producers, sources say.

Saudi Oil Minister Hisham Nazer expressed his government's interest in the idea during private talks last Thursday with Energy Secretary James D. Watkins, although no specific proposals were made by either side, the sources said.

The talks with the Saudis and other potential foreign suppliers — including Norway, Kuwait, Venezuela and the United Arab Emirates — are in a preliminary stage and the United States has made no decision to shift from the current practice of buying and holding title to all the oil put into the oil reserve, sources said.

The main reason for leasing would be to reduce the cost of filling the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, which was created in 1975 in response to the 1973 Arab oil embargo led by Saudi Arabia. Mexico currently is the exclusive supplier under a sales contract due to expire Nov. 30 and providing 60,000 barrels a day.

The oil is held in underground salt caverns in Louisiana and Texas. Congress earlier this year ordered the Energy Department to study leasing and to assess interest among foreign suppliers.

Nazer told Watkins his government was interested in a crude leasing deal as a way of strengthening Saudi ties to the United States, which is the largest market for Saudi crude, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"They're very interested," one source said, adding that leasing was the first subject raised by Nazer in the meeting at Energy Department headquarters.

No details of a possible leasing deal were discussed, and Watkins told Nazer the next step could be a meeting of the two sides' technical experts, the source said, adding that senior U.S. and Saudi officials will pursue the matter further during regularly scheduled talks in October.

James Akins, who served as U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia from 1973-76, said a leasing arrangement would appear to be a good move for the Bush administration.

Black Chamber greets officers

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Members of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs met the chamber's new vice presidents at Monday's monthly meeting.

New vice presidents are Michael Hocker, scholarships; Iris Hall, social concerns; Barbara Yarbrough, adopt-a-school. Clem Johnson is a new board member, representing Mobil, which is the newest corporat member.

This is United Way fund-raising season, and the charity brought its campaign to the chamber meeting.

United Way volunteer Jack Swallow gave members an overview of the United Way, how it operates and what it accomplishes.

He emphasized Project Blueprint. Project Blueprint was designed to both increase minority representation on member agency boards and increase assistance to minority agencies. Swallow told members that Midland was only one of 23 cities chosen nationwide for the initial Project Blueprint program.

He told members that increased minority participation in United Way and its member agencies will go far in helping the agency define Midland's needs and how to meet them.

While the agency needs funds — the goal is approximately $2.3 million this year — Swallow said volunteer help is also needed. "If you have a chance to reach into your pocketbooks to help, that's great. But don't forget the human standpoint."

Upcoming events during the remainder of the year, according to Robbyne Fuller, MBCE president, include a mini-trade show and business card exchange that is in the planning stages.

Events for 1990 include involvement in Martin Luther King celebrations in January and Black History Month in February, the chamber's fourth anniversary, scholarship fund-raising benefits and additional mini-trade shows.

James Fuller, chamber vice president for media, education, economic development and culture, told members that the chamber is working to bring another performing troupe to Midland, as it did the Alvin Ailey dance troupe in 1987. He also reported that Project Excel Youth is still alive, and he has been contacting Midland College students to see if they're interested in participating.

The evening concluded with a reception for the 12 recipients of Men and Women of Valor awards given during the Business Opportunities Symposium Series in Austin late last month. They include James Fuller, Joe Tave, Henry Hammon, Rhiny Williams, Bryan Barrow III, Myrtle Hall, Angela Joiner, Gloria Rawlins, Cheryl Franklin, Barbara Yarbrough, Vanessa Tatum, Gladys Grust, Darlene Gifford and Delores Connor.

U.S. posts services trade deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deficit in the broadest measure of U.S. trade edged up to $30.99 billion from April through June as the country recorded its first deficit in services trade in more than three decades, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the deficit in the current account was up 2 percent from a $30.39 billion deficit in the first three months of the year.

The current account, also known as the country's balance of payments, is the most important trade statistic because it measures not only trade in merchandise but also trade in services. The services category primarily reflects investment flows between countries.

The services portion of the current account fell from a surplus of $1.5 billion in the first quarter to a deficit of $176 million in the April-June quarter. It was the first quarterly deficit in the services category since 1958.

Analysts saw this decline as an ominous warning of what is in store for the United States in the future as more and more of the nation's wealth will have to be transferred overseas to service the debt held by foreigners.

The deficit rose in the spring quarter despite the fact that the balance on merchandise trade showed an improvement, narrowing by 2.3 percent to an imbalance of $27.72 billion in the second quarter.

For the first six months of the year, the current account deficit ran at an annual rate of $122.76 billion.

Williams speaker at SPE meet

From Staff Reports

Clayton Williams will be the guest speaker at the Society of Petroleum Engineers' annual Community Relations night, set for Sept. 18 at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Williams

Williams will speak on "Looking Back, Looking Forward, Looking Better."

He is currently seeking the Republican nomination for governor. He has started 26 companies, among them Clajon, the natural gas company, and ClayDesta Communications, which was recently sold to Advanced Telecommunications Corp. of Atlanta. He has interests in banking through ClayDesta National Bank, real estate, oil, ranching and farming. He has created jobs in more than 50 Texas cities.

The meeting will begin with social hour at 5:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Reservations should be made by Thursday by calling 686-7329.

MARKETS

Oil prices turn lower

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices turned lower as last week's rally apparently loses steam.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, October contracts for West Texas Intermediate were down 8 cents to $19.68 in midmorning trading. The contract gained 1 cent to $19.76. It rose 34 cents Friday.

Among refined petroleum products traded on the exchange, wholesale unleaded gasoline for October delivery lost 0.02 cent to settle at 57.07 cents, after gaining 1.46 cents Friday.

October heating oil, which rose 1.24 cents at the end of last week, finished at 56.01 cents, down 0.73 cent.

"I think today was just basically a correction day (because) ... the market had been up sharply on Friday," said Andrew Lebow, a senior trader at E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc.

He said many traders took profits after prices surged Friday due to internal market influences and reports suggesting demand for oil was strong.

Lebow said concerns of overproduction among members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries put a damper on Monday's trading.

"One has to anticipate higher Iraqi production over the next couple of months as they utilize their new pipeline," he said.

Dollar lower in cautious session

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was lower in cautious trading in Europe this morning as dealers awaited U.S. economic figures to be released later in the week.

Gold prices were mixed.

Traders said the dollar was stuck in a narrow range as market players sifted through predictions and rumors to decide what positions they were going to take before the release at U.S. trade figures for July, due on Friday.

Exchange Rates

- 1.9847 West German marks
- 1.7120 Swiss francs
- 6.6850 French francs
- 2.2335 Dutch guilders
- 1,421.00 Italian lire
- 1.1872 Canadian dollars

"I believe the dollar will find a floor at 1.9750 (West German) marks before the trade numbers come out," said Jens-Uwe Fischer, vice-president at Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. in Frankfurt. At the high end of the range, the dollar was unlikely to rise above 2.0000 marks, he said.

The Bank of Japan was sighted selling dollars early in Tokyo's trading session today, dealers said. The action had little effect on the dollar, they said.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 1.04 yen to a closing 146.73 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a rate of 146.70 yen.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.5486 to buy one pound, more expensive than $1.5450 late Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $358.50 a troy ounce, compared with Monday's late bid price of $358.75. At mid-morning London bullion dealers fixed a recommended gold price of $358.95.

In Zurich, gold traded at a bid price of $359.20, down from Friday's $360.00. Markets were closed Monday afternoon for a holiday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $1.03 to close at a bid $359.93.

Silver bullion prices traded at $5.08, unchanged from Monday's late price.

Stocks fall in quiet trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Sporadic selling pushed stock prices lower Monday in the quietest trading in 10 weeks, extending last week's pullback from record highs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 20 points at midsession, closed with a 5.13 loss at 2,704.41.

The average fell 42.55 points last week.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 126.02 million shares, down from 154.09 million in the previous session and the lightest total since 68.87 million were traded on July 3.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 150.81 million shares.

Analysts said buying interest was limited, as it had been last week, by conoern that the market was due for at least a pause after its sharp rise through the first eight months of the year.

There also has been much talk on Wall Street that the Federal Reserve will be reluctant to relax its credit policy any further over the next several weeks.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Drexel to pay $650 million in fines

NEW YORK (AP) — Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. has pleaded guilty to six felonies and begun paying more than $650 million as punishment for unprecedented securities laws violations.

The plea in federal court Monday had been expected since Drexel and the government reached an agreement on the charges in January but had been delayed by challenges by Drexel's indicted bond trader Michael Milken.

Drexel pleaded guilty to four counts of securities fraud and two counts of mail fraud and agreed to pay a record total of $650 million plus interest and civil insider trading fines to resolve charges dating to 1984.

S&L withdrawals at nine-month low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Net deposit withdrawals at the nation's thrift institutions fell to a nine-month low of $183 million in July, the government said.

The outflow, reported Monday, was the smallest since October and followed a $4.6 billion withdrawal in June.

Business Fact

Average airfares are up

A fall airfare price war could be welcome news to air travelers who saw average fares jump nearly 10 percent from summer of 1988 levels.

LEASE

"From the point of view of the United States it's an extraordinary good deal," he said in a telephone interview. "I can't see anything wrong with it, although I can't see any greater economic benefit for the Saudis."

Leasing rather than buying additional oil could be cheaper and could allow the administration to fill the reserve faster. Some critics have noted that because the nation is importing more of its daily crude requirements, the strategic reserve's value as an emergency fallback is diminishing.

At one point in 1985 the reserve held the equivalent of 115 days' worth of U.S. oil imports. Now it holds 73 days' worth, even though the reserve itself has continued to grow.

The Energy Department has not yet worked out the mechanics of a possible leasing arrangement.

CHALK

The company became convinced following the completion of its Badgett No.13 in the Pearsall field in April of 1988, in which the well initially produced 1,607 barrels daily. After the prolific well was completed, Gladney said Oryx quietly increased its position in the Austin Chalk from about 10,000 acres to 100,000 acres by buying existing production and leases that would be suitable for horizonal drilling.

With a 2,250 foot lateral extension drilled at right angles to the fractures in the formation, the Badgett No.13 is still producing almost 900 barrels daily and since completion has produced over 112,000 barrels — enough at $17 per barrel to return a payout and handsome profit in 17 months, according to this reporter's calculations.

Tom Sullivan, media relations representative for Oryx, estimates the average cost of a horizonal well in the Austin Chalk to be somewhere around $1 million.

"We have had a learning curve in drilling these horizonal wells," he said. "The first well cost us $2.7 million, the second $1.7 million and the third $900,000. One million will probably be the average."

Production increases in all the wells has been phenomenal and directy related to the length of the lateral extension, according to Gladney.

The first test, the Badgett No.7, was a re-entry producing only five barrels daily. After drilling a 240 foot extension, production jumped to 107 bopd and the well is still producing 45 bopd.

A year later, the Badgett No.11 was recompleted with a 140 foot lateral extension, and production jumped from 7 to 80 barrels oil per day. Today it is producing 38 bopd.

In September of 1987, the Badgett No.9 was drilled with a 940 foot extension and produced 338 bopd. Current production is approximately 215 bopd.

To make certain the economics are there for horizonal drilling, Oryx has petitioned the Texas Railroad Commission to change spacing and proration rules for the field. The company has proposed a sliding scale for spacing which would be linked to the length of the lateral extension. An extension of 0-150 feet would remain within the current 80 acre spacing, while a 150-1,654 foot lateral would be granted 160 acre spacing, and 1,655-4,962 feet would require 320 acre spacing.

"If anyone drilled beyond 4,962 feet," said Gladney, "it would be the longest on-shore extension on record."

Allowables would be adjusted by multiples to spacing beginning at 328 barrels for 80 acres.

The horizonal wells are typically completed open hole or with a slotted liner cemented in place. Gladney says there are no special drilling problems and that Oryx has had a high degree of success in hole mechanics.

He says he sees no reason why several lateral extensions could not be drilled from each hole to increase drainage, but added that if they do not intersect the natural fractures of the formation at the proper angle they may be no more effective than a vertically drilled well.

Gladney said if the TRC grants the spacing and proration provisions and other operators engage in horizonal drilling to the extent Oryx intends it could launch even a third Austin Chalk boom. "I was around for booms one and two in the Chalk and maybe, I'll be here for a third."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Waiving mutual fund management fee temporary

By BILL DOYLE

Q. A broker with whom I have done some business has been pushing hard recently to get me to invest in a new money market mutual fund. He stresses two points: 1. There will be no commission charged if I invest in this fund. 2. Fund management has waived its expenses. He says the absence of those two cost items will result in a much higher dividend yield.

What is your opinion on this?

A. First off, there is nothing unusual about the absence of a commission — known in the trade as a "load." No money market mutual fund has a load. Commissions are charged on the purchase of shares of many other types of mutual funds — but not on money market mutual funds. All money market mutual funds are no-load funds.

Doyle

Now to the second point. As is the case with other corporations, all mutual funds have operating expenses. With most funds, the biggest expense is the "management fee," sometime called the "investment advisory fee." That fee pays the people who run the fund. After all, they are not doing it out of the goodness of their hearts.

At the average money market mutual fund, total annual expenses are about seven tenths of 1 percent of fund assets — $700,000 on a $100 million fund and $70 on an individual's $10,000 investment in that fund.

A money market mutual fund collects, as income, interest from the short-term securities it holds in its investment portfolio. The fund then deducts its expenses from that income and passes the rest along to fund shareholders as dividends.

Naturally, the lower the fund's expenses, the higher its dividend — the yield to shareholders. By waiving the management fee, indeed, the fund that broker is pushing can increase its yield.

However, you will probably learn that the management fee waiver is a temporary arrangement. Some newly organized funds do that for a set period of time or until the fund reaches a certain size. After that, the management fee is charged — and the yield drops.

Details about the management fee and other expenses are contained in the fund's prospectus, a copy of which that broker was required to give you at or before the time he made his first sales pitch.

Q. I would like to get a safe investment providing a monthly income to supplement my pension and Social Security benefits. I have about $70,000 I would like to put to work.

Would a money market mutual fund or any other mutual fund be of benefit to me?

A. A money market mutual fund would provide a convenient, virtually risk-free investment. As I write this, taxable money funds are yielding about 8.3 percent; tax-free money funds about 5.4 percent.

All other types of mutual fund carry with them some risks — from small to large. The higher the risk factor, the greater the potential for profit. A retired person in your position should steer away from risks.

Q. I am new to mutual funds and recently invested in a fund that has a 12b-1 fee of 1 percent. You obviously object to 12b-1 fees. What is a 12b-1 fee and why don't you like it?

A. A 12b-1 fee is an additional expense taken out of a mutual fund's assets — and, therefore, out of the value of each shareholder's investment — to pay for "distribution" of fund shares. As a result, established shareholders bear management's costs of selling shares to new investors.

You should also object. That 12b-1 fee is eroding the value of your investment 1 percent annually. If you have, say, $10,000 in the fund, that fee clips you for $100 a year — above and beyond the fund's other expenses.

Methods may be harsh, but Israel winning tax war

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

BETHLEHEM, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israel has gained the upper hand in a tax war with Palestinians who refused to pay taxes as part of their revolt against Israeli occupation.

Israel's army-run civil administration has forced payment of taxes in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip by demanding proof of tax payment for almost all official documents, ranging from birth certificates to travel permits and export licenses.

Soldiers and tax collectors have raided homes to seize television sets and stereos and have seized cars at checkpoints in lieu of tax payments.

Makram Saad, a pharmacist in Bethlehem who has endured a series of tax raids, said Israel's policies have only strengthened his determination.

"You pay taxes to a legal government that is elected and you get services in return," said Saad. "We are getting nothing. We get closed schools, arrests. Why should we pay to have more guns to kill my people?"

But Israel's determination to force tax payments has worn down a boycott launched in early 1988 as part of a civil disobedience campaign.

By both Palestinian and Israeli estimates, most of the 1.7 million Arabs in the occupied lands are now paying income and sales taxes. Underground leaflets no longer insist on compliance with the boycott.

An Israeli military official said more Arabs were paying taxes now than before the Palestinian uprising, or intefadeh, that began Dec. 8, 1987, even though Arab tax collectors quit after being threatened by PLO groups.

Because of a sharp decline in the economy as a result of the uprising's strikes and boycotts, however, the army has not yet collected enough money to finance the pre-uprising annual budget of $239 million of the Civil Administration.

"In real terms. we have succeeded in coming close to what we collected before the intefadeh, but a lot now goes to repairing damaged buildings, utility poles, etc., and little to new development," said the military official, who could not be identified in keeping with army regulations.

Israeli sources said Yasser Arafat's PLO had funneled at least $200 million to the occupied territories in 1988 to compensate Palestinians for losses. But they said the figure was only about $100 million in 1989 because donations from Arab oil states declined, making the continued tax boycott more difficult.

Dr. Abdel Fattah Abu Shokor, a Palestinian economist at An Najah University in the West Bank, estimated the gross domestic prodcut of the occupied lands fell 20 to 30 percent in the past 20 months from about $1.5 million in 1987. The jobless rate is also about 30 percent, up from a pre-uprising level of 10 percent.

He estimated 60 percent of Palestinians avoided paying taxes in 1988, but conceded there was less compliance with the boycott now.

"The Israeli measures are not easy to avoid," he said.

The Israeli military official said the tax battle continues to be a "real war" even though most Palestinians are now paying taxes.

For example, on Aug. 14, an Israeli tax collector was fatally burned and three colleagues injured in a firebomb attack on their car in the West Bank.

Some Palestinians say they will not pay taxes regardless of the pressure.

Saad, 30, whose pharmacy is near Bethlehem's Manger Square, said a squad of soldiers raided his home last year, seizing the family's 22-inch TV set and a 1987 Peugot 104 in lieu of tax payments.

In the past year, tax collectors also raided his store three times to confiscate medicine and cosmetics, finally clearing all the shelves on July 11, he said.

Saad estimates the raids cost him about $100,000 and said he has spent 17 days in jail for refusing court orders to pay taxes.

The pharmacist maintains that some of the property seized belonged to relatives, not to him. A military official, however, said Saad and three other pharmacists, all leftist activists, transferred their property to relatives at the same time in an attempt to fool tax collectors.

What infuriated him most, Saad said, was the raid on his home in nearby Beit Sahour, where he was ordered at gunpoint to sit in the living room while soldiers rummaged through the house looking for valuables to take as compensation for not paying taxes.

"This was an attack on my home, in front of my wife and child. It's harder to take than confiscating things in the pharmacy. It's where you live and sleep," he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Ex-mayor's slaying leads to terror talks

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The government, besieged by daily bombings and slayings in its war against cocaine barons, called an emergency meeting of the National Security Council to debate anti-terrorism measures.

Pelaez

"We are in total anguish over events in Medellin," said Helena Herran de Montoya, governor of Antioquia state, where Colombia's embattled drug center is located.

Officials fear the crackdown launched against the cocaine cartels by President Virgilio Barco three weeks ago is turning Medellin — home base of the country's most powerful drug kingpins — into a war zone.

Pablo Pelaez Gonzalez, a popular former mayor of Medellin, was shot and killed Monday when five or six attackers opened fire as he was driven to work.

His driver also was killed and a bodyguard wounded. The killers fled, police said.

Pelaez was mayor from 1984 through 1986 and founded a local movement called "Love for Medellin," designed to rid the city of drug traffickers.

Near Medellin, invaders on Monday set fire to a farm owned by the head of the government oil company. A similar attack Sunday targeted the ranch of a government official who supports turning over drug traffickers' property to the poor.

Polish Cabinet approved

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lawmakers today approved the Soviet bloc's first government led by non-Communists after Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki urged them to change virtually every aspect of Polish life.

The vote was 402 in favor of Mazowiecki's Cabinet, none against and 13 abstentions.

Mazowiecki, smiling, lifted his hands in the "V" for victory sign that for so long represented illegal opposition to the Communist government. The parliament rose to applaud.

The names of the new Cabinet ministers were read, with the loudest ovation going to Jacek Kuron, the new labor minister who spent nine years in prison for activism.

In Moscow, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov said of the new government: "We are prepared to cooperate with that government and develop our relations with Poland."

After the vote on the Cabinet, Communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski's nominee to head the National Bank, Communist Politburo member Wladyslaw Baka, was approved by a vote of 230 for, 43 against and 83 abstentions.

China welcomes Soviets

BEIJING (AP) — Chinese officials today welcomed the first Soviet parliamentary delegation to visit since the two countries normalized relations in May.

The six-member Supreme Soviet delegation, led by Anatoly Lukyanov, vice president of the body's presidium, will be in China for six days and is also to tour Wuhan and Shanghai, Soviet officials said.

It is the first parliamentary group to come to China since Mikhail S. Gorbachev normalized party and government ties in a May visit, the first by a Soviet leader to China in 30 years. Gorbachev's trip was overshadowed by massive pro-democracy demonstrations.

Since the movement was suppressed in a bloody June 3-4 military assault, China has emphasized its good ties with communist and Third World countries which, unlike the West, have generally withheld criticism of the use of violence to put down the protests.

The head of China's Communist Party International Liaison Department, Zhu Liang, is currently in Moscow to discuss ways to develop interparty ties following the Gorbachev visit.

Kohl wins another term

BREMEN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl has weathered a storm inside his party and won another term as Christian Democratic Union leader, but with the smallest majority of votes in his 16 years as party chairman.

Kohl was elected to the new term late Monday and will be the party's candidate for chancellor again during next year's tough election battle.

But the 59-year-old Kohl, who will be angling for a third term as head of the Bonn government, managed just 77 percent support from his own party faithful despite having no opponent in the vote for the chairmanship.

The sizeable no-vote expressed the discord within the Kohl's party after numerous local election losses over the past two years.

Ligachev goes to Berlin

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin today sent Politburo member Yegor K. Ligachev to Berlin as the East German government pondered ways to stop an exodus of its citizens to the West.

The Tass news agency said Ligachev, thought to be a conservative force on the Soviet Communist Party's ruling body, was invited to Berlin by the Central Committee of East Germany's ruling Communist Party.

It did not say what Ligachev would do in Berlin.

An estimated 10,000 East Germans have fled through Hungary to the West since Budapest opened its western border to them Sunday midnight, and Hungarian officials said 16,000 more East Germans had arrived via Czechoslovakia.

East Germany has bitterly criticized Hungary for allowing the East Germans to leave, but sources say its leaders have been reluctant to take further action because of the reported ill-health of East Germany leader Erich Honecker.

He was reported Monday to be in worsening condition after gallbladder surgery last month.

Mubarak, Arafat meet

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Hosni Mubarak and Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat met Monday to discuss plans for peace in the Middle East.

Neither leader talked to reporters following the talks.

Arafat arrived in Cairo early Monday. It was not clear how long he would stay in Egypt.

Last week, Mubarak met with Arafat during a brief visit to Tunisia and said the Palestinian leader would travel to Cairo for talks on Egyptian ideas for Israeli-Palestinian peace talks.

Egypt is the only Arab country on speaking terms with Israel. The two countries signed a peace treaty in 1979.

Nine survive capsizing

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — A government official said 12 bodies were recovered and only nine survivors were reported Monday from a boat carrying 70 illegal emigrants that capsized last week.

Civil Defense Director Eugenio Cabral said the Dominican Navy discontinued its search for further victims Monday night.

The Civil Defense said the boat set set sail from the Dominican Republic's east coast and capsized on Sept. 5 three miles off Higuey, 145 miles east of Santo Domingo, the capital.

Scores of Dominican illegals try to reach Puerto Rico each week through the Mona Passage, which separates the Dominican Republic from Puerto Rico.

An anonymous source in Higuey said Monday that four bodies were recovered Sunday night and were buried at once in the beach because of their advanced state of decomposition.

The nine known survivors were treated in Higuey Hospital for dehydration, exposure and bruises.

Norway's balance of power changes little

AP Laserphoto

Carl I. Hagen, leader of the Norwegian anti-tax Party of Progress — which more than tripled its support in general elections — gives victorious "thumbs up" in Oslo Monday.

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Despite her governing Labor Party's worst electoral showing since 1930, Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland seems likely to remain in office.

When the dust settled from Monday's turbulent national vote, the balance of power seemed to have changed little because the conservative opposition also lost ground.

Voters had switched allegiances as never before.

A radical right-wing party went into the election with two parliament seats and came out with 22. A far-left party doubled its strength.

"This election clearly shows that the new generation is sick and tired of the old parties," said Trygve Bull, a retired educator and former leftist politician.

As in the 1985 election, Mrs. Brundtland and her allies were left just shy of a majority. But it was unclear if the opposition parties could overcome their disunity to unseat her.

According to official results with all but the absentee ballots counted, Labor won 63 seats in an expanded 165-seat parliament, or Storting, and 17 seats went to its allied Socialist Left Party. The three-party non-socialist alliance — Conservatives, Christian Democrats and Center Party — received 62 seats.

Shunned as a partner by all other parties, the rightist Party of Progress swept up 22 seats in a stunning performance that indicated widespread disenchantment with the social welfare policies of the last 40 years.

A lone independent won a seat on a local list after he broke with Labor.

Labor was hurt by record unemployment of 5 percent and discontent among this country's 4.2 million people with a growing shortage of hospital facilities, day-care centers and care for the aged. About 82.4 percent of registered voters turned out.

Official results showed Labor with 896,717 votes, or 34.3 percent of the ballots, down 6.5 percent from the 39.8 percent it polled four years ago. The Conservatives had 580,425 votes and 22.2 percent of the vote.

The Progress Party won 340,461 votes for 13 percent of the total, nearly triple its percentage from the last election, and the Socialist Left's 261,814 votes represented 10 percent, or nearly double its past percentage.

In a post-election television debate of party leaders, Mrs. Brundtland watched silently while her opponents traded recriminations. "You are the ones creating chaos," one accused the rest.

Auschwitz issue may close groups' contact

LONDON (AP) — The 17-nation European Jewish Congress has endorsed suspending formal contact between Jewish groups and the Roman Catholic Church because of the dispute over a convent at the Auschwitz death camp in Poland.

"At issue is the word of the church. It is difficult to speak with someone when you have this kind of problem," said Theo Klein, who led the French delegation Monday at the annual meeting.

Klein, a former president of the European Jewish Congress, said he has appealed to Jewish organizations to suspend official contacts with the Catholic Church. He said there had been no dissent.

"Each organization is free to make its own policy, so I cannot say to you that all organizations have stopped dialogue, but I think so," said Klein, who helped negotiate a 1987 pact with Catholic leaders to remove the Carmelite convent.

The meeting was dominated by the convent issue, which has split Catholics and revived debates about lingering anti-Semitism in Europe.

Many Jews regard the convent at the camp — where at least 2.5 million Jews were among the estimated 4 million victims during World War II — as offensive.

Under the 1987 accord negotiated between Jewish representatives and officials of the Catholic Church including Polish Cardinal Franciszek Macharski, it was agreed the convent should be removed by Feb. 22.

But the Polish primate, Cardinal Jozef Glemp, continues to back the convent, which was installed in 1984 in a hut where the Nazis stored gas used to murder Jews and other inmates.

Glemp has said the Geneva agreement was not negotiated by "competent people" and, after summer protests by Jewish activists at the convent, angered Jews and non-Jews alike with remarks many people consider anti-Semitic.

Two French cardinals and a Belgian cardinal who helped negotiate the 1987 agreement have rejected Glemp's stance, insisting the pact be carried out.

Klein said he wrote to Cardinal Albert Decourtray, France's Catholic leader and a party to the negotiations, in July announcing that all formal Jewish-Catholic contacts would cease until the convent issue is resolved.

Since then, Klein said, he has refused all invitations from Catholic organizations, including a recent invitation to address a French Catholic student body.

"The Catholics themselves understand it is very difficult to have a dialogue now without having solved this problem of the Carmelites."

Bell Safety urges safety training, planning for businesses

Bell Safety, a division of Bell Petroleum Services, Inc., provides a full range of safety equipment and service for the business community and for the oil and gas industry. In addition, wherever hydrogen sulfide is present, Bell Safety can protect your people and provide equipment to make certain you are in compliance with all federal, state and local safety regulations.

Bell Safety provides four principal services:

- Safety training, including defensive driving and first aid;
- Safety consulting and contingency planning;
- Safety equipment sales/rental/service;
- On-site safety supervision and site testing.

Bell Safety has grown from a limited regional operation to a major full service company.

Bell Safety specializes in safety training. Without well-trained personnel, safety equipment at the worksite is virtually useless. Bell's training programs are designed to allow your personnel to protect themselves and others.

Instructors provide seminars, lectures and "hands-on" training on a wide range of safety related subjects for the business and industry communities. All levels of instruction are available and classes can be taught to one employee or an entire company, either at Bell Safety training facilities, your office or in the field.

Bell Safety provides a wide range of safety consulting services. From the establishment of new safety programs, to the evaluation and modification of existing programs, Bell Safety provides effective safety protection plans for people and equipment.

Bell Safety professionals design, install and maintain integrated safety systems wherever toxic gas is present. After completing a thorough analaysis of your location, Bell Safety will custom design your safety program recommending the proper number and type of breathing apparatus, gas monitor and detector systems, wind socks, resuscitators, warning equipment and other auxiliary equipment to insure safety.

In the field of safety equipment, Bell Safety sells and leases virtually any type of safety equipment available today. Whether your operation is in drilling or in another area of business, Bell can sell you the safety equipment your company needs require. Service agreements are available to insure your compliance with all record keeping requirements.

Experienced personnel provide quality on-site safety supervisorss for potentially dangerous production, drilling and other types of business locations.

These on-site supervisors can provide immediate response to an emergency situation or can make sure operations continue safely when working in highly toxic environments. Site testing includes checking and sampling the exposure to toxic gases on location.

Regular monitoring of hydrogen sulfide levels is essential to providing safe work environments. Bell Safety site testing includes tank battery, treater and transmission locations for certification compliance for state or federal agencies.

Bell Safety's supervision and site testing services can provide a single hand or a complete staff of safety professionals, depending on your company's requirements.

For more information, please call Randy Williams, Bell Safety division manager, at 694-9653.

Shown are Bell Safety technical aids for safety training and contingency planning.

Graham's Pharmacy offers old fashioned service, Hummel gifts

Catering to the entire family in the old fashioned tradition, Graham's Pharmacy is the modern drug store with "old time" service. The friendly staff is made up of service specialists who have been helpful to Midlanders for years.

Located at 319 Dodson, one block west of Midland Memorial Hospital, Graham's is the favorite pharmacy of so many families in the area, and for good reason.

Graham's Pharmacy has a complete line of beautiful and exciting gifts for all ages and for all occasions.

Since it is close to the hospital, Graham's carries a big selection of silk flowers in cheerful, decorator colors for those on your "get well soon" list. Many of the flowers and arrangements carried are hard to find, such as satin textured roses, red and peach colored azaleas and hanging ivy baskets.

A full line of all occasion greeting cards by Ambassador and cards of endearment by Helen Steiner Rice are available.

The popular Southwest look in cards and gifts and Texas memorabilia is in full swing at Graham's Pharmacy. There is a delightful arrangement of gifts and decorating items, including stuffed howling coyotes, bandana necklaces, painted shirts, pottery, note cards and stationery items, placemats and napkins, cup towels, aprons, Indian windchimes, bluebonnet book bags, and a Texas cookbook, "More Tastes and Tales."

A full case of Hummel figurines is one of the first things you see when you enter the store. The colorful children are so finely detailed that they just glow with expression. Hummel plates, clocks, bells and other collectables for various years are also available at Graham's.

Graham's also has the largest selection of Pfaltzgraff pottery in the area. You can choose from seven patterns which are in stock as well as a variety of companion pieces, including clocks, utensils and lamps. A portion of the Pfaltzgraff stock is on sale at almost all times of the year.

Graham's Pharmacy also has a large variety of gifts for children, including the Tinkerbell cosmetic collection for little girls. The Montgomery Schoolhouse wooden toys are a delight, as well as long lasting. These colorful wooden toys are guaranteed for life. These old fashioned, hand crafted toys include airplanes, trains, cars and more.

Doll lovers of all ages will be thrilled with Graham's Effanbee doll series. This special collection includes Rapunzel, Snow White, Little Bo Peep and Wizard of Oz characters. There's even Spanky and Buckwheat dolls for Little Rascals comedies fans!

While in Graham's, why not visit the old fashioned soda fountain for a refreshing treat. Fresh sandwiches and soup are served daily for a lunch that is sure to be a change of pace.

Graham's pharmacy department keeps computerized prescription records for your tax and insurance purposes. They honor PCS and Blue Cross/Blue Shield along with other prescription insurance cards and they accept VISA, Mastercard, Discover and American Express cards. There's free delivery in the Midland city limits.

Store hours are from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and the phone number is 684-0569. Stop in soon and see the Graham's difference!

Metrin skin care offers scientific approach to improved appearance

Like it or not, the initial decisions people make about you are often no more than skin deep. That's why Midlander Shirley Mays and her staff of trained skin care consultants want to introduce you to a skin care program called Metrin.

Metrin is not a brand of cosmetics, but scientific skin care for the entire family. To be of real benefit to the skin, the skin care product should agree with as many of the physical and chemical laws that govern the skin as today's knowledge will permit. Metrin does this.

For more than 56 years, Metrin Scientific Skin Care products have incorporated Retinoic-Acid in the form of natural Vitamin A together with other natural ingredients, without the much publicized negative side effects.

The products work in complete harmony with your body to harness the properties of this Retin-A power house. Metrin normalizes your skin, regardless of the problem. In 21 days, your skin begins to develop its natural glow, known as the Metrin glow.

Metrin Scientific Skin Care products keep the skin at its healthiest, and healthy skin is flawless and fresh-looking without makeup. Not only women use Metrin, but there is a Metrin formula for men to help eliminate shaving irritants, yet maintain a healthy, fresh and young-looking skin.

Yet, Metrin doesn't make wild claims about being a miracle product. It's a simple organic skin care program that has been in use 57 years and has worked.

And Metrin has worked for a young Midland girl. Jessica Maddox, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Maddox, suffered from skin problems before she was two-years-old. Initially, it was thought to be just dry skin, and she was given baby oil and baking soda baths, in addition to lots of lotion.

She reached a point where she would swell so much, it appeared that her skin would stretch and crack open. The irritation would take months to heal, Jessica suffered itching and she scratched to the point of pain.

Doctors diagnosed her condition as eczema and an allergy to the sun, and her outside activities were limited. Metrin has made such a difference! Jessica started using Metrin in February of this year and her skin is now soft and pretty. Even her scars are not as noticebale.

Jessica played in a park for three hours one recent Sunday afternoon, and the only places she itched were where Metrin had not been used. Metrin was applied from head to toe. She still uses a sun block, but Metrin has been wonderful for her skin.

The Metrin unconditional guarantee is that Metrin will give you the results you are seeking or your money will be refunded upon presentation of the sales slip, even if you have used up all the product!

For more information, please call Shirley Mays at 683-7745. Or, come by and visit the Metrin booth at the Permian Basin Fair and Exposition in Odessa at the Ector County Coliseum September 13-17.

Be sure to register in the drawing for a womens's and men's skin care and hair care product giveaway.

Metrin skin care is now offered in the Permian Basin by Betty Cobb, left, and Shirley Mays, center. Jessica Maddox, seated, has used Metrin products to combat an allergy to the sun. Her mother, Debbie Maddox, stands behind her.

VA REAL ESTATE

Now Available to Veterans or Non-Veterans

30 YR. FIXED-RATE FINANCING AVAILABLE

NOTICE
All properties are sold in their "AS IS" condition and the VA makes no warranties expressed or implied, in respect thereto. For inspection of the following homes and assistance in submitting an offer, see your local real estate broker.

CLOSING DATE FOR RECEIPT OF OFFERS IS 4:30 PM SEP. 20, 1989

PM NUMBER	ADDRESS/CITY/ZIP	PRICE	DOWN PMT	BED/BATH/ GARAGE	STATUS/B*
525290	4618 Crockett Ave., Midland 79703	45,000	2,250	3/2.0/2	SR2, SR14
609545	1400 Westbrook, Odessa 79761	60,000	3,000	3/1.7/2	SR2, SR14

SR-1 Qualifies for GI/FHA financing or VA will repair to qualifying condition. VA will also repair defects in the plumbing, heating and electrical systems if reported to the VA Management Broker within 30 days of loan closing.
SR-2 No repairs by VA. Strictly "AS IS." NOT ELIGIBLE FOR GI/FHA FINANCING.
SR-3 VA will make no repairs to swimming pool/hot tub or related equipment.
SR-4 Foundation settlement - no warranty from VA on foundation.
SR-5 Flood insurance required.
SR-6 Water serviced by well. VA does not warrant water or well equipment.
SR-7 Sewer service - septic tank. VA does not warrant system.
SR-8 Liquefied petroleum gas service. VA does not warrant system.
SR-9 Property is condemned and does not meet city code. Property must be repaired to code or demolished.
SR-10 Maintenance assessment to be paid to homeowners' association, not included in mortgage payments. (Information in listing)
SR-11 Water service is by community system. Purchaser must pay all fees, deposits, etc.
SR-12 _____ will be reinstalled at sales closing.
SR-13 _____ will be repaired/replaced at sales closing.
SR-14 On term sales only, for owner occupied properties, seller will contribute 5% down payment on behalf of buyer if offer is submitted at or above listed term price.
SR-15 _____ believed inoperable and VA will not repair.
B A $500 bonus will be paid to broker by VA at closing.

WE NEED YOUR HELP: VA welcomes comments concerning the condition of our properties. Any improprieties should be reported to the VA Regional Office at 817-757-6869.

The offer which best serves the interest of VA will be processed for acceptance. The name of the successful offeror and sales broker will appear in subsequent publications. VA will accept cash offers up to 10 percent below the advertised term sales price. VA also will pay reasonable loan discount points and buyers' closing costs on cash offers when requested on the Cash Sale Addendum to Offer to Purchase. However, the combined loan discount points, buyers' closing costs to be paid by VA and the discount for cash may not exceed 10 percent of the term list price. Offers must be submitted at term listed price when buyers request a new GI loan with $1.00 move-in. Interest rate of available financing is 9.5 percent (APR 9.6 percent).

Purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing (Term Sales) must have VA Form 26-6705B, Credit Statement of Prospective Purchaser and Verification of Employment/Income, as outlined in Sales of VA-Acquired Properties Manual, attached to their VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale. Effective June 8, 1988, all credit underwriting for purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing is being referred to Miller and Davis PC. All brokers are reminded to refer to PM letter #17-88 dated May 25, 1988, outlining these new procedures. Purchase offers not accompanied by the required employment/income verification WILL RESULT IN REJECTION OF THE PURCHASE OFFER.

Prior approval will be required by VA for the transfer of a property secured by a vendee loan if the loan is not paid in full as part of the transfer. Public Law 100-689 also permits VA to charge a one-half of 1 percent funding fee for the transfer as well as a fee for processing the approval of the transfer.

VA has properties for sale statewide. If you desire to purchase properties in other areas, please contact any sales broker located in the area in which you are interested.

FORFEITURE OF EARNEST MONEY DEPOSIT

Prior to signing the offer, broker must deposit in broker's trust account the $500 earnest money deposit. The Earnest Money Agreement (Exhibit "H") must be signed by the purchaser(s) and submitted along with the VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on all offers. The $500 earnest money deposit will be remitted to Miller and Davis PC upon acceptance of the offer. Once a purchase offer has been accepted for processing by VA and subsequently cancelled at the request of the purchaser, the earnest money deposit WILL NOT be refunded and the purchaser will be required to forfeit the earnest money to the VA as liquidation expenses. There will be no exception to this policy. Therefore, the VA suggests that all brokers interview their buyers to assure they want the property prior to submission of an offer to purchase. VA pays 6% sales commission. Offers are subject to the provisions of VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on which all offers must be submitted. VA Form 26-6705 must be submitted in duplicate to:
