Chamber supports Stacy Dam contract

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Calling the Stacy Dam project a "once in a lifetime chance for Midland," Jim Allsup this morning said the Chamber of Commerce was supporting the long-term contract for water from the dam that will be decided by voters on Aug. 10.

During a news conference at the chamber offices, Allsup as chamber president said a Water for Midland Committee has been formed with Winston Barclay as chairman. This committee of about 50 citizens will encourage Midlanders to vote in favor of the contract with Colorado River Municipal Water District, which will own Stacy Dam and Reservoir.

Barclay, western division manager for Texas Electric Service Co., has appointed W.H. "Bill" Collyns as treasurer of the committee. The group is trying to raise $10,000 to pay for advertising and promotional efforts.

"This is important for Midland," Barclay said. "We'll be using every avenue we can. Water is the single most important resource to cities and their residents and businesses, and this election offers Midland an opportunity to participate with other West Texas cities sharing in the last major renewable water resource to be constructed in West Texas."

Stacy Dam will be located about 25 miles southwest of Ballinger. Plans for constructing the reservoir were started about seven years ago. A permit granted by the Texas Water Commission was appealed by the Lower Colorado River Authority, and the State Supreme Court in November 1984 rejected the permit. But a compromise between CRMWD and LCRA was worked out this past spring and a permit was granted.

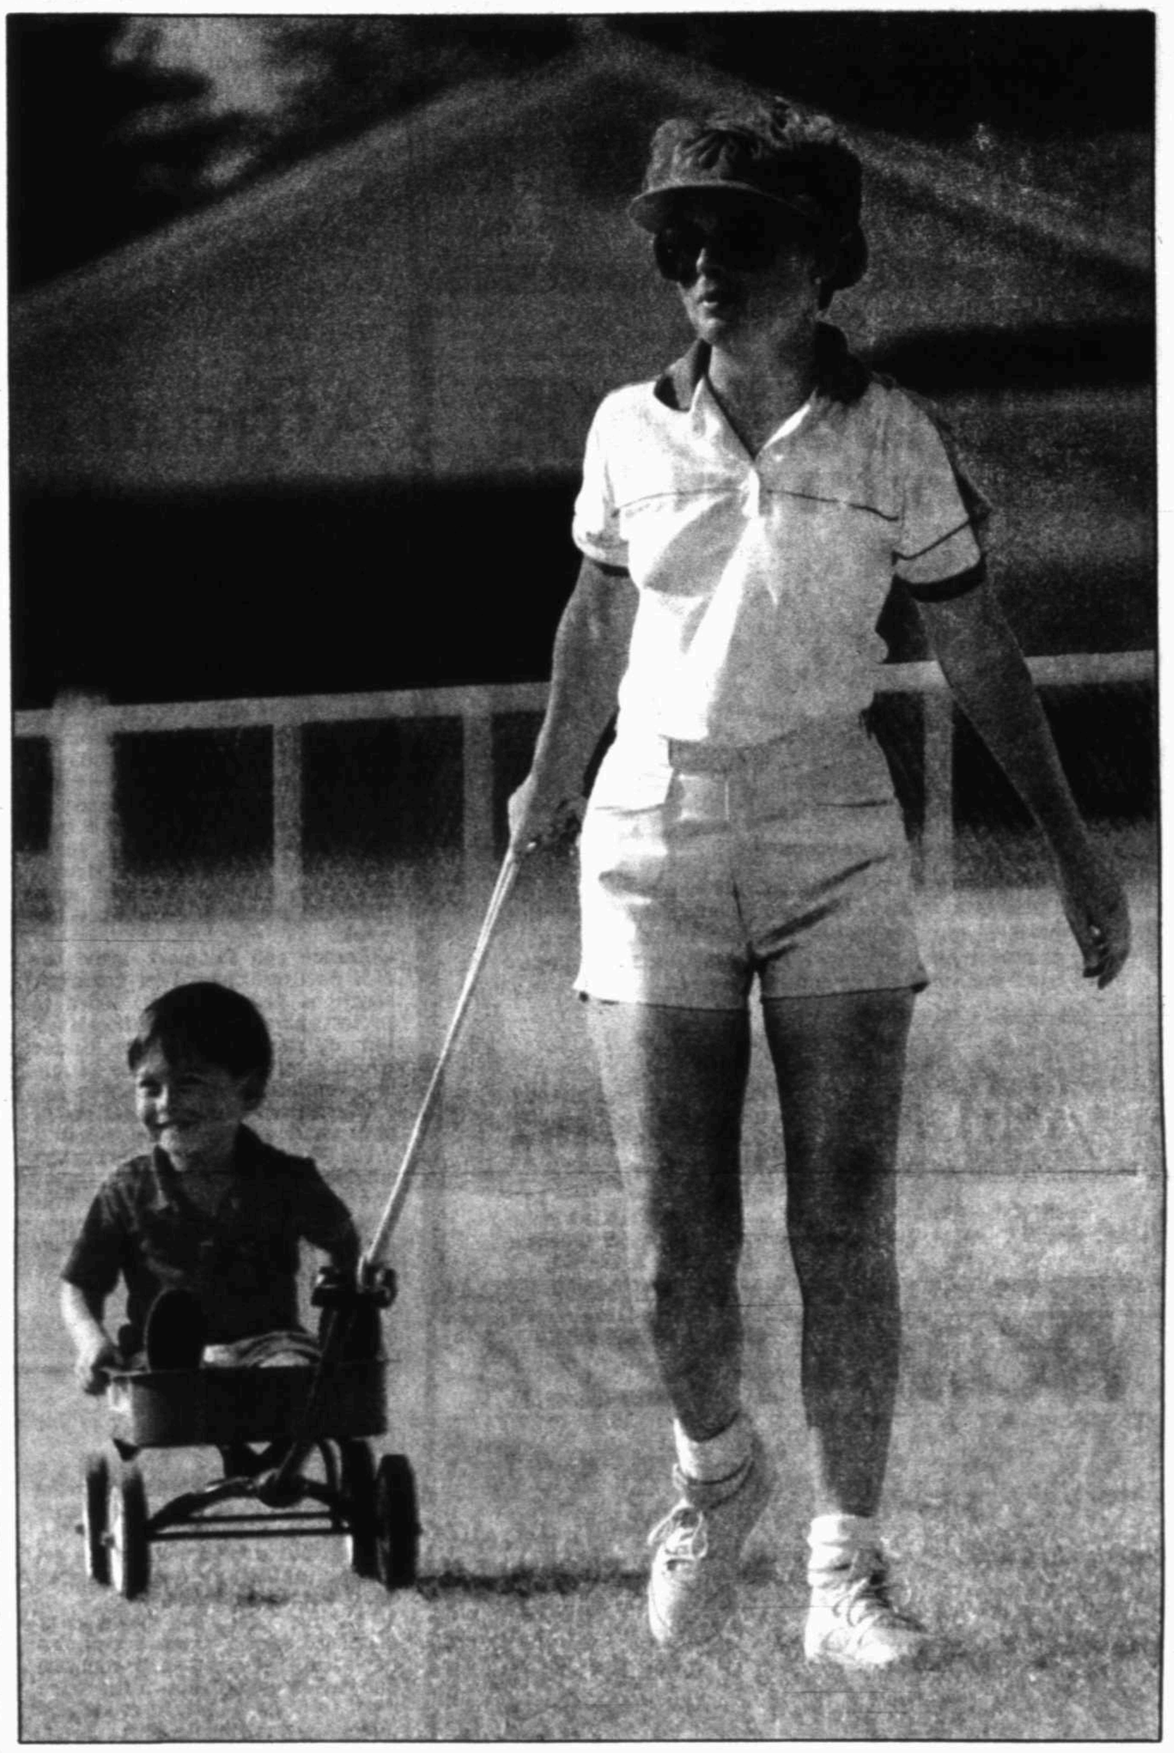

Cost of building the dam is estimated at $68 million and bonds will be sold by CRMWD for the project before the end of this year. If Midlanders approve the long-term contract, the city will pay about $11 million for its share of construction. Midland then will be allowed to purchase a maximum of 15,000 acre-feet of water a year.

Other cities seeking to do the same are Abilene and San Angelo. If voters in all three cities approve the contract, each city will be receiving 16.54 percent of the water and paying for 16.54 percent of construction. Member cities of CRMWD — Odessa, Big Spring and Snyder — also will pay part of the costs, but 51 percent of the water is being reserved for them.

John Lowe, city utilities director, said this morning at the news conference that a renewable resource, such as Stacy Dam, over the longterm is much more desireable than the underground sources Midland has today. With the city's current reserves, its water supply will be adequate until about 1990-95. " At that time we will need to add another source of water to supply daily demands. Stacy Dam would carry the city's basic requirements into 2010-2015. Then we would have to develop our fields," he said. Stacy Dam should be ready to supply water by 1991.

Midland has an undeveloped ground water source about 70 miles west of the city in Winkler County known as T-Bar Well Field.

Oil, gas price uncertainty blamed for loan situation

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business/Oil Writer

Although net loans for the second quarter increased slightly, Midland banks continue to experience a soft loan market.

Bank officials blame uncertainties in oil and gas pricing and federal tax proposals for the weak loan market, but predict an upturn by year's end.

Net loans reported for the second quarter, ending June 30, were $843,165,278. This is an increase of about $11,700,000 over the first quarter 1985 total of $831,441,983.

Second quarter deposits for the city's 11 banks totaled $1,614,575,211, a decrease of $66,200,000 from the previous quarter, when deposits totaled $1,680,849,259.

From the second quarter 1984, loans are up $56,000,000. A year ago, loans were $787,165,982. Deposits are also up $127,100,000 from the 1984 second quarter figure of $1,487,406,871.

It should be noted that Texas Commerce totals are not included in the 1984 totals. The bank opened July 23, 1984.

"The trend in Midland right now is normal for the summer, especially because of the prominent concerns in the oil industry," said Billy Murray, vice president controller of RepublicBank First National Midland. "The Reagan tax proposal as well as the fluxuation of oil prices have many people concerned."

Murray said his bank reported deposits of $680,449,000 for the second quarter and loans of $265,024,000.

David Jones, president of ClayDesta National Bank, said the Reagan tax proposal should not have any affect on the banking industry at the present time. "If the bill is passed, it should not become effective until Jan. 1, 1986, but will probably have some psychological effect now, making investors more reluctant to acquire loans," he said.

The tax proposal would change the way intangible drilling costs are expensed and eliminate percentage depletion.

ClayDesta reported total deposits of $122,429,579 for the quarter and loans of $71,029,040.

Bill Parker, president of Western Bank, agreed that the loan market is weak now and Midland has shown "little if any inventory growth right now, and little if any capital expenditures right now." However, he pointed out that the second quarter is traditionally slow.

Western Bank's loans reached $74,960,168 for the quarter and deposits were $90,551,027.

"The quarter was quite typical. We're on a flat scale right now," said Jim McCain, president of Security National Bank.

His bank reported quarterly deposits of $12,824,102 and loans of $8,015,684.

Texas American President Steven Landy said one reason loan demand is down is because of a lack of consumer loans. "Our installment loan demand has been hurt by 8.8 financing by General Motors. I just can't do it."

Deficit-reduction on hold as budget deadlock continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress' deficit-reduction efforts were on hold today as legislators waited for President Reagan or House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. to blink first on a $338 billion Senate package that would raise taxes and delay Social Security benefit increases.

Senate budget negotiators, trying to break the congressional budget impasse, have ignored previous objections from the two leaders in proposing the new plan.

So far, though, neither the president nor the speaker shows any sign of yielding and the deadlock over a fiscal 1986 budget continues.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., sought to put some heat on O'Neill today, saying the speaker was "waiting for the leaders on the House side to indicate a willingness to negotiate."

As for Reagan, Dole said, "I haven't noted anybody shooting any shots from the White House." He added that until O'Neill shows a willingness to talk, "I don't see any reason for the president to rush to have a meeting."

But Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said, "It would be helpful if we could just find out where the president stands. ...I think we need to know whether or not the president is going to lead the charge."

Earlier, Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said on the NBC-TV "Today" show that, "without the two leaders, joined by some others, making some compromises, I see little chance of anything but serious chaos this year" as the Congress works its way through appropriations bills.

Domenici told House conferees on Thursday that White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan had authorized him to say the administration is "genuinely interested" and "they are willing, at an early date, to sit down and discuss" the new proposal with congressional leaders.

But when Reagan was asked Thursday if he supported an oil import tax — a major provision of the Senate package — he replied, "I'm not for any taxes."

Meanwhile, House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, told Senate conferees that O'Neill, D-Mass., "is not loathe or unwilling to meet with the president at any time."

When O'Neill was asked about adjusting Social Security cost-of-living adjustments every other year, instead of annually — another major part of the Senate plan — he said it was "morally wrong" and "politically wrong."

Defendant gets 45 years for murder-for-hire plot

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Muhammed Majid, who last week refused to plead guilty in exchange for a six-year sentence, received 45 years today after a Midland jury convicted him of plotting murder-for-hire.

After four days of testimony and more than four and a half hours of deliberations, the 238th District Court jury returned a guilty verdict at 9:30 p.m. Thursday. The 28-year-old Majid broke down during the punishment phase, sobbing uncontrollably and then fainting and falling out of his chair, but the jury was apparently unmoved.

"It really didn't have any affect on anybody," said juror Greg Fitzhugh. The jury deliberated about 80 minutes on punishment before the sentence was read by 238th District Court Judge Vann Culp at 12:01 this morning. The penalty range for criminal solicitation for capital murder is five to 99 years or life in prison.

Majid was accused of trying to hire an undercover officer to kill his brother's ex-wife, 24-year-old Lisa Bell of Abilene. Ms. Bell and 30-year-old Khalid Majid are waging a bitter custody battle over their 3-year-old daughter.

Defense Attorney Edward Garza had asked for probation, pointing out to the eight-man, four-woman jury that Majid was in the country illegally and would be deported to his native Bangladesh if he wasn't sent to prison.

"He had nothing, absolutely nothing to gain by his action," said Garza. "He did it because he loved his brother — that's his motive."

Proposed $61 million city budget calls for 3 percent tax increase

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A budget of $61 million, or 7 percent more than for 1984-85, and calling for a tax increase of 3 percent was filed this morning by Mayor G. Thane Akins for public review before the City Council adopts it on Aug. 27.

The mayor explained the three funds comprising the budget during a news conference this morning at the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Akins said the city's economy is still in a "recovery mode" after the rapid growth and steep decline experienced in the local economy over the last three years. He contended the recovery is there, "particularly from the continued increase in sales tax revenues."

It is occurring, though, "at a steady but slow rate. We still have a long road ahead in very careful management of our financial affairs," he said.

The proposed tax increase of 3 percent amounts to 39.88 cents per $100 valuation, instead of 39 cents. This would have the effect of an additional 73 cents per month tax on a $100,000 home.

Even with the tax increase, Akins said the city will be taking about $1 million from its $9 million Fund Balance to show a balanced budget next year. The city has withdrawn money from this fund for the past few years to balance the budget. Akins said if the city continues its current slow rate of growth, the council will have to continue to dip into this reserve for two to three more years to balance the budgets.

The budget is composed of three funds: general, water and aviation.

The general fund reflects an increase of $1,362,842 for a total of $32,074,564. Part of the increase is due to a 3 percent increase in wages, according to Akins, who said employees received a hike of 4 percent last year.

Another $844,000 of the increase is designated for personnel services with 16½ more employees being hired. Departments designated for additional employees are: finance, one; data processing, 1½; internal auditor, one; traffic engineering, one; public works, two; streets, two; parks, two; police, three; court, one; fire, one; and personnel, one.

The water fund shows an increase of $2.25 million, according to Akins. Of this, $800,000 is going into a depreciation reserve fund recommended by the auditors and $882,000 will go for increased debt service if voters approve a contract for Stacy Dam.

Barclay pointed out the $11 million for Midland's share to construct Stacy would mean an increase of $2.70 on an average customer's water bill of $37.70.

"This is not a bond issue," he said. "CRMWD will own the lake and dam and they will issue the bonds."

If Midlanders approve the contract, the city later will have to bear its share of the cost for pipelines from Stacy and for treating the additional water at the plant here, according to Barclay.

Allsup said the chamber feels Stacy Dam "is an extremely important issue for this community and is vital to the future of Midland."

Absentee voting is under way at Midland County Elections Office, 709 W. Washington Ave., from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. today through Aug. 6.

LOANS

Texas American reported second quarter deposits of $140,798,139 and loans of $66,983,690.

Another reason for the soft loan demand is energy investors are "paying down their bank debts or paying them off," said Bill Franklin, president of First City National Bank.

Franklin said his bank's loans for the second quarter totaled $248,542,649, while deposits were $351,038,696.

However, some banking officials are reporting strong second quarters, such as Ann Abbey, senior vice president for Texas Commerce Bank.

"A lot of money is moving in town now," she said. "We've been working on some deals and they're finally finished. We've also started our calling program — we've been spending a lot of time working with our customers."

Texas Commerce reported deposits of $44,488,000 and loans of $20,726,000.

Midland American Bank Senior Vice President Cashier Steve Holt also contributed hard work to his bank's successful quarter.

The bank reported in $12,021,000 in deposits and $8,799,000 in loans.

Bob Gribble, president of Community National Bank, said his bank's growth is due to the bank's location. "We went to where there was a need and it has paid off," he said.

Community showed second quarter total deposits of $23,265,000 and loans of $16,188,000.

UnitedBank also grew during the second quarter. But bank president Don Jones, says he expects the banking industry to keep within the traditional curve, whereby the banking industry will remain the same during the third quarter and loan and deposit activity will advance in the fourth quarter.

The bank reported second quarter deposits of $73,843,668 and loans of $50,424,047.

In addition, RepublicBank Midland reported deposits of $62,867,000 and loans of $12,473,000.

Murray agreed with Jones' predictions. "I don't think we'll see much difference in the next quarter from the previous one. The worst is over but for a big comeback, it would take some uncertainties. We should see improvements by year-end."

"I think the third quarter will be relatively flat but we'll see total deposits grow by year-end," said David Jones. "Deposits should appreciate through year-end and we'll see a high degree of confidence in Midland."

African currency, stock prices plunge

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's currency plunged in value today and stock prices continued a downward slide in reaction to the state of emergency and a French freeze on investment.

Police said today they had detained 96 more people, bringing the total in six-day-old state of emergency to almost 900.

South Africa's Rand fell from an opening of 52.65 cents Thursday to 47.80 cents this morning — a 9.2 percent drop in 24 hours. It later rebounded to 49 cents in chaotic trading. The Johannesburg stock exchange's gold index fell sharply Thursday, and has dropped more than 120 points to 845.9 since last week.

France and Denmark asked the U.N. Security Council for voluntary sanctions against South Africa to protest apartheid, South Africa's system of racial segregation under which 5 million whites rule 24 million voteless blacks.

The Security Council postponed until today action on the request.

The 96 people detained during the previous 24 hours brought the total since Sunday to 891, police said. The number of detentions was down for the second day in a row after averaging more than 200 a day for the first three days.

Police headquarters in Pretoria said there were no new deaths in the three incidents reported overnight — an arson attack against a black school in Port Elizabeth, the stoning of a bus and a home in the same area and the firebombing of a private home near Durban.

Trevor Manuel, a senior official of the United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition, applauded the French decision to recall its ambassador and freeze investments to protest the state of emergency.

But he called on France and other Western countries to put more pressure on the white-minority government. He told a rally in Cape Town that the confidence the government exuded earlier this year had vanished in the face of widespread opposition, and "it is clear they don't know which way to go."

Foreign Minister R. F. Botha said France's actions were "impulsive and opportunistic."

National police headquarters said a soldier fired one rifle round and killed a 16-year-old youth Thursday after blacks stoned an army vehicle in eastern Cape Province.

At least 15 blacks have been killed since the state of emergency was imposed Sunday to quell anti-apartheid rioting in which more than 500 blacks have been killed in the past 11 months.

Officially reported detentions in the first five days of the state of emergency rose to 795. But university professor David Webster, a member of the Detainees Parents Support Committee, said he believed nearly 1,000 people have been seized.

Unofficial sources said scores of teen-agers were rounded up Thursday in Alexandra, on the edge of Johannesburg. Police said they could not immediately comment on the report, but witnesses said they saw an unusually large number of police, soldiers and armored cars in the township.

Michael Beea, chairman of the township civic association, estimated that more than 400 people had been detained in Alexandra, and said some were children ages 8 to 12 whose apparent offense was singing freedom songs.

Most victims of the rioting were killed by police, but many were black local officials and police slain by other blacks who see them as willing tools of the white rulers.

The draft U.N. resolution proposed by France and Denmark called for an end to new investment and participation in nuclear projects in South Africa, and purchases of the nation's gold coins. It also called for an end to the state of emergency and the release of all political prisoners including Nelson Mandela, the leader of the outlawed African National Congress.

South Africa's ambassador to the United Nations, Kurt Von Schirnding, said the internal situation in his country is not a matter for discussion in the Security Council.

U.S. Ambassador Vernon Walters said isolating South Africa could meen "curtailment of external influence to effect change," and even greater suffering for South African blacks.

White business executives said Thursday that France's ban on new investment in South Africa would not significantly effect the economy, but would hurt France's interests and reduce the job market for blacks.

The White House and the U.S. State Department said in Washington that the Reagan administration was "reviewing the situation," but insisted that that did not signal a retreat from U.S. policy of quiet diplomacy aimed at influencing change in South Africa.

State Department spokeman Charles Redman said France's decision to halt new investment could "undermine South Africa's economy and create additional hardships for black South Africans."

MAJID

But the jury gave Majid five years more than Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre had asked for, and "it took some persuading to get it down to that," Fitzhugh said. "Nobody wanted probation."

"The defendant has shown great emotion," said Schorre during his punishment summation. "I would be touched if he had shown the same emotion when he looked at the picture of his dead sister-in-law."

Schorre referred to a faked photograph of Ms. Bell apparently lying dead in a field shown to Majid by Sheriff's Lt. Roy Harrison, who was posing as a hit man.

During closing arguments in the guilt or innocence phase, Garza claimed the state's main witness had approached Majid with the idea of planting marijuana on Ms. Bell to discredit her. Robert Campbell then went to the Sheriff's Office and set Majid up for a murder-for-hire rap, according to Garza.

"He reminds me of a vulture," Garza said of Campbell. Thursday morning, defense rebuttal witnesses testified that Campbell was a dope dealer who referred to the Majids as "sand niggers," suggesting racism as a possible motive for setting the defendant up. The witnesses, mostly coworkers of the Majids' from various Kent convenience stores, also said Campbell resented being forced to pay for gas by Muhammed Majid.

But Campbell denied being dope dealer and said his motives weren't racial.

"My concern was over that child's life and that woman's life," he testifed, referring to Lisa Bell and her daughter Amber.

Off the stand, Campbell said he left town unannounced a month ago because he had received death threats. His absence threatened the prosecution's case, leading Schorre to offer Majid a six-year plea bargain last week.

But Majid turned it down after reporters showed up to cover the hearing, then reportedly turned it down again on the advice of his brother-in-law, Fida Kamal, a Bangladesh lawyer who flew half way around the world to assist with his defense. Then Campbell's unexpected return restored the state's case to full strength.

Garza said this morning he was "disappointed and surprised" by the length of the sentence, and said he intended to appeal on the grounds that as a Bangladesh native and a Moslem, Majid may not have been able to get a fair trial in Midland County.

"I didn't like the way this case was tried in the press," he said.

But Fitzhugh said the jury wasn't motivated by racism or religious intolerance in assessing Majid's penalty.

OPEC ministers don't make major decisionsat meeting

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Despite two meetings in as many weeks, OPEC has managed nothing but a papering over of the cracks in its defense of high oil prices.

As it approaches its 25th birthday in September, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries remains mired in perhaps its greatest crisis ever.

Oil prices are falling, demand for OPEC crude is stagnant and the group has all but lost its once-feared ability to influence the path of the oil market.

In four days of often tumultuous negotiations this week, the OPEC oil ministers could do no better than a majority decision to make minor cuts in some oil prices. Earlier this month the ministers met for three days in emergency session and produced nothing but a lame promise to stop cheating on price rules.

The group announced Thursday that it was cutting by 50 cents a barrel the price of its heavy-grade crude oils, to $26 dollars a barrel. Medium-grade oils were reduced by 20 cents, to $27.20.

The most remarkable thing about the decision was that it required such strenuous and time-consuming bargaining. Industry analysts said the size of the price cuts was so small that it did little, if anything, to improve OPEC's position in the oil market.

"It's almost meaningless," said Paul McDonald, a senior oil analyst at the investment firm of Shearson Lehman Brothers Ltd. in London.

CITY

Other hikes come from increased costs of water from Colorado River Municipal Water District, electricity and five additional employees.

The depreciation reserve, said Akins, is a fund set up to pay for replacing the infrastructure, such as water and sewer lines, without having to rely only on taxes.

Water bills will be increasing, whether or not the Stacy project is approved. Utilities Director John Lowe said instead of $1.35 per 1,000 gallons the price would go up about seven cents to cover additional costs to CRMWD. If Stacy is approved, the cost would be another 15 cents on top of the seven.

The airport fund shows a decrease of $27,264. But because of the depreciation reserve in this category also, there is an overall deficit of $777,000. Without this charge, said the mayor, this fund "would show a net profit of about $123,000." This fund also includes one new employee.

MidTran, the public transportation service, is funded for next year, but at a lower cost. Instead of receiving $556,512, MidTran will be getting $356,900. A report from the city shows that department has 2½ fewer employees and $78,000 less in capital items.

Hogan Park Golf Course is expected to produce more revenue next year, budget for $790,070 compared to $556,512 for this year.

Of the new employees approved, one will be a full-time civil defense coordinator, according to Akins.

In summary, Akins said the city's "financial condition remains good and we intend to keep it that way."

A budget document will be available for public review in the City Secretary's office at City Hall. A public hearing will be held Aug. 27 to formally adopt the budget.

BUDGET

O'Neill, likewise, said he opposed the oil import levy. "All of us in the Northeast oppose it," he said.

House Democrats said they wanted more time to study the new package, but moreover they said they needed a clearer indication of the president's stand on revenues.

Wright said we are "kidding ourselves if we think we can pass this tax over the president's opposition."

The Senate plan, which would reduce next year's projected $230 billion budget deficit by $65 billion, would:

—Make inflation adjustments in Social Security and other benefit programs every two years, instead of annually. For example, cost-of-living adjustments would be made in even numbered years but skipped in odd numbered years. This would save $12 billion over three years.

—Adjust personal income tax rates to account for inflation every two years instead of annually. This would save $7 billion over three years.

—Impose a $5-a-barrel fee on imported crude oil to raise $25 billion through 1988.

—Impose a 2 percent across-the-board reduction in overall spending authority for domestic spending programs, excluding welfare, to save $5 billion over three years.

—Bring state and local government employees not already covered by Social Security and Medicare into those programs to raise $8 billion.

Other cuts, freezes and reforms of government spending, plus savings in interest on the national debt, account for the remainder of the package.

The plan is projected to trim the budget deficit to about $89 billion by 1988, retaining the goal set at the beginning of the year by the administration and congressional leaders to adopt a plan to cut annual deficits in half — to about $100 billion — by 1988.

When House and Senate negotiators held their first bargaining session in a week on Thursday, they did little more than listen to an explanation of the plan and argue over whether Reagan or O'Neill should be the first sit down for talks.

Bodies to be exhumed in nursing home probe

GALVESTON (AP) — A state district judge authorized defense attorneys in the Autumn Hills murder case to exhume the bodies of up to 58 elderly people who died at the Texas City nursing home between 1977 and 1980.

Autumn Hills Convalescent Centers Inc., which is based in Houston, and five of its present and former employees are charged with murder by neglect in the deaths.

Defense attorneys argued Thursday, in a motion to state District Judge Don B. Morgan, that the prosecution in the case should have had autopsies performed on the bodies if there was suspicion of foul play in their deaths.

Defense attorneys are seeking to have the charges dropped on grounds of prosecutorial misconduct.

Morgan adjourned until Monday further consideration on the defense claims of prosecutorial misconduct, but was expected to order two journalists today to reveal confidential sources or turn over notes they used to write stories on Autumn Hills.

The two journalists — who have said they don't plan to comply with Morgan's order — are Michael Berryhill, a free-lance writer and writing consultant for the Houston Chronicle, and Steve Olafson, a reporter with the Houston Post.

The judge indicated he would have them arrested for contempt of court if they refused to comply.

Morgan said if the two would answer questions in private he would seal the testimony, releasing it only if Autumn Hills needed it to support an appeal of their case.

The nursing home must pay the cost for the exhumations, autopsies and re-interments that Morgan approved Thursday. While approving the defense motion to allow the procedure, the judge denied a request that the state be forced to bear the expense, estimated at $100,000.

The process is to be performed under the supervision of Dr. Robert Bucklin, a former Harris County pathologist who now works in San Diego, Calif.

Morgan directed Galveston County District Attorney Mike Guarino to inform as many relatives of the deceased "as he deems appropriate" of the time and place of any exhumations and re-burials.

It was unclear what evidence the defense attorneys hope that autopsies of the exhumed bodies will provide. But physicians designated by the defense to perform the autopsies said they may be able to determine whether the elderly people were abused or neglected.

Bucklin said the autopsies "may very well allow me to identify a cause of death, and it may very well allow me to form an opinion as to whether that past patient was a victim of abuse or neglect."

Likely source of counterfeit collateral found

DAINGERFIELD (AP) — A Secret Service agent says he believes the source of almost $600,000 in counterfeit money used as collateral for loans at the National Bank of Daingerfield has been found.

Larry Neal, resident agent for the U.S. Secret Service in Tyler, said Thursday his investigation into the counterfeit money had lead to what is believed to be an out-of-state source, which he refused to reveal.

Neal did say he could confirm Secret Service agents had sezied $580,000 in counterfeit money — in $20s and $100s — from the National Bank of Daingerfield.

Irregularities surfaced last week when bank Chairman Buck Florence had bank officers investigate a company the bank had loaned money to. Bank President John H. Scott Jr. resigned July 18, bringing a satchel of the counterfeit money into the board meeting with him.

A woman and her son used the money to take out about six loans from the bank, Florence has said. The original loan was made within Scott's authority and within bank policies, but the majority of the rest were not, Florence said.

Neal told the Texarkana Gazette that with the use of a federal search warrant, a private residence in the Daingerfield area also was searched. An additional $40,000 in counterfeit $100 bills and a substance believed to be marijuana were seized in that search, he said.

That search was conducted last Friday, the same day federal authorities took possession of the counterfeit money from the bank.

No charges nor arrests have been filed at this time, Neal said. When the investigation is complete, including the investigation in the district where the alleged source of the counterfeit money is, prosecution will be left up to the U.S. Attorney's Office, Neal said.

Small amounts of money from the same source as that seized in Daingerfield has also been passed in Houston and state of Indiana.

Nursing home patient's death ruled homicide

DALLAS (AP) — The death of a 90-year-old nursing home patient was caused by a blow to the head or by someone shaking him violently, causing a blood clot in his brain, the Dallas County medical examiner's office said, ruling the death of Troy Wimberly a homicide.

"In view of a bruise to the eye, I suspect, though, that someone hit him," said Dr. Roger Fossum.

Officials of Carrollton Manor Nursing Home said they are cooperating with police in their investigation into Wimberly's death as well as pursuing their own inquiry.

State Department of Health officials and Carrollton police said that on Thursday of last week they began investigating reports of possible abuse at the home. A doctor notified officers that two of his patients were covered with bruises.

Dr. Robert DeVries said he discovered Wimberly's injuries during rounds at the nursing home. The patient had a black eye and bruises on his face, neck and arm, the doctor said.

DeVries said he found similar bruises on another of his patients, Bertha Claerhout, who lived across the hall from Wimberly.

Wimberly, a former electrician, began running a high fever two days after the bruises were reported to police and was rushed to Richardson Memorial Medical Center. He died Saturday.

DeVries said Claerhout remained in the home in satisfactory condition.

Carrollton police Lt. Pete Cole said he expects to present a report to a grand jury in about two weeks.

"There will be no arrests until the investigation is complete, and that could be as long as late next week," he said. "When we're finished with the investigation, we'll start cutting down the suspect list from the 100 or so we have now."

Anti-nuclear protesters prepare for pilgrimage

GLEN ROSE (AP) — Anti-nuclear demonstrators from Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma are gathering at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant, where they'll depart Saturday by bicycle and car in a pilgrimage that will end eight days later at the Pantex Nuclear Weapons Plant near Amarillo.

The 450-mile pilgrimage, which will begin at 9 a.m., was scheduled to coincide with the 40th anniversary of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The event's organizers said it is to give them a chance to demonstrate against nuclear power and arms while also holding public education seminars in small towns they travel through on the way to the Pantex facility.

Last year's inaugural pilgrimage drew about 400 people, who camped in Amarillo. This year, organizers said they expect a larger turnout.

The itinerary calls for the caravan to reach Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth by 3 p.m. Saturday. After spending the night in Fort Worth, the group plans to gather at 1 p.m. Sunday at the Bell Helicopter Textron plant to protest shipments of military helicopters and spare parts to Central American nations.

The pilgrimage is scheduled to resume Sunday afternoon, reaching Mineral Wells by Sunday night; Eastland by Monday night; Dyess Air Force Base at Abilene by 3 p.m. Tuesday; Sweetwater by noon Wednesday; Snyder by Wednesday night; Post by noon Thursday; Lubbock by Thursday night; and Plainview on Friday.

Gas station provides full service

TYLER (AP) — The term full-service gas station has taken on new meaning for a Tyler gas station owner and mechanic who helped a woman deliver a baby boy in the station's parking lot, using a pair of scissors to cut the umbilical cord.

The baby was brought into the world with the assistance of Johnny Davis, 40, owner of the Broadway Mobile Tire Center, and Richard King, 28, a mechanic at the station, on Wednesday.

The woman's mother stopped to get gas, apparently running out on her way to Mother Frances Hospital. Her pregnant daughter was in the back seat and a quick call was made to get an ambulance, but it was too late.

"She was really in a panic," King said. "Johnny and I looked in the back seat and saw the baby a good half-way out. It was moaning and the mother kept saying that the baby was dead."

Davis said he got into the back seat with the woman and pulled the baby the rest of the way out. King said he rushed back to the office and grabbed a pair of scissors which were used to cut the cord moments before an ambulance arrived.

Couple enjoys 'being on the road again'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — With a sip of her soft drink, Emma Lou Collins considers the possibility that she has the perfect job.

"Well, my husband and I get to see an awful lot of this country, and we pretty much do what we please," she says. "And we get to get together. I guess that's about 100 percent ideal."

What Robert and Emma Lou Collins do is drive trucks. Big trucks with 18 wheels and 40-foot trailers. And they do it a lot — both have driven about 2.5 million miles without an accident.

"I'd have to say the Lord takes care of us," Emma Lou says. "Of course, we drive defensively, too."

Robert is 68. Emma Lou is 65. For the past 14 years, the San Antonio couple has driven as a team for Church's Fried Chicken Inc., delivering store equipment and supplies to the fast food chain's 1,500 stores.

Emma Lou estimates that she and Robert have seen 46 of the 48 contiguous states. They drive about 150,000 miles a year, following the interstates across the nation.

"The truck is our home," Emma Lou says. "In it, we've got just about everything you need except a bathroom. And frankly, we need to stop for the exercise."

This year, Emma Lou beat out 3,000 men to be named the 1984 regional driver of the year by Ryder Truck Rental. The award is based on recommendations from employers and the driver's safety record. She is the first woman to win the award. Her husband won it in 1982.

"We like to call ourselves commercial tourists," she says. "Anytime we take a wrong turn, that's sightseeing. Now you can't beat that."

Robert, a large man wearing a gimme cap, gets in a rare word: "We've had a pretty good life. I guess we kind of like each other. Of course, living in a 6-by-8 truck cab, we'd have to."

Emma Lou says, "The way I see it, we've been married 96 years. That's 48 years for each of us."

Robert showed his devotion once at a truck stop near Meridian, Miss. Emma Lou had stopped to give the owner some recipes. Robert, who had been asleep, woke and took his turn at the wheel and drove off.

"I got on the CB and called out his handle, which is Superchicken," Emma Lou says. "I said, 'Superchicken, this is Queenbee. You left me at the truck stop.' Some other driver got on the CB and said, 'If Superchicken comes back for her, it must be true love.' Well, he sure did come back for me."

"I was so worried about what we'd talk about after we married," Emma Lou says. "But Robert says I haven't shut up yet."

Americans visit Nicaragua as gesture of solidarity

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — One honored guest at the Sandinista revolution's sixth anniversary celebration last weekend was Mayor Bernard Sanders from Burlington, Vt.

A church ceremony lauding Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto and his two-week-old fast for peace was organized by U.S. citizens living in Nicaragua. Their tribute ended with two women, one strumming a guitar, singing a song whose refrain was "Thanks to the Nicaraguans," and with the Americans chanting a Sandinista guerrilla slogan.

Tens of thousands of such Americans have come to visit the revolution here since the Sandinista National Liberation Front took power in 1979. For most, short visits were enough. Others have stayed to live and work for an extended period. Either way, most have made their trip a gesture of solidarity with the Sandinistas and a mark of opposition to U.S. policy toward Nicaragua.

For many, traveling here confirms an already solid belief in what the Sandinistas are trying to do. Working on a coffee plantation for a few weeks as an "internationalist" provides an opportunity to share in concrete expression of an ideal, much as some American Jewish youths find satisfaction working summers on an Israeli kibbutz.

For others, the backpacking "sandalistas," Nicaragua seems to be a way station on a trip back through the 1960s. One Nicaraguan calls these young visitors "totally confused Americans." Although most Americans here perhaps are not so confused, few appear to make critical appraisals of what they see.

As a result, anti-Sandinista Nicaraguans charge that most Americans come here with pro-Sandinista organizations, arrive with a predisposition to like what they see, willingly believe what they are told by their Sandinista hosts and then return to the United States to get out the "truth."

Some cannot wait until they get back. Visiting U.S. correspondents frequently have been buttonholed in Managua hotel corridors by "internationalists" with insistent suggestions on how to improve coverage of Nicaragua.

Salomon Alarcon, spokesman for the government's Nicaraguan Committee for Solidarity with Peoples, said such testimony by returned U.S. visitors is an important source of support for Nicaragua in the United States.

"Without neglecting the importance of the rest of the world, we think that solidarity from the North American people has a special role to play," he added. "The visitors are...very important, because our objective is not only to have these people pick coffee or build houses, but also to have them inform (the U.S. public) about our process."

Alarcon said 3,000 Americans visited Nicaragua in 1984 through his organization's contacts with sympathetic U.S. groups. Many more visited through church and political groups without contacting the committee, he said, making the number of visitors impossible to estimate.

Bobbie Camacho, a 35-year-old administrative assistant for a legal services group in the San Francisco area, made her visit to Nicaragua for this year's anniversary celebration in a 15-member delegation from Friends of Nicaraguan Culture. The organization describes itself as a network of "artists, cultural workers, intellectuals, opinion-makers and all people who work with ideas" seeking to generate support for Nicaragua.

"We also support the struggles of the peoples in Central America and the Caribbean," including El Salvador and Cuba, Camacho said as she hurried from the d'Escoto tribute to another event.

However they get here, high-ranking Sandinista officials appear to accord importance to the gestures from U.S. visitors. President Daniel Ortega mentioned Sanders' attendance during his July 19 speech.

The government press office sponsored a news conference later that day in which Sanders and several visitors from other countries denounced U.S. policy toward Nicaragua.

In its coverage of the July 19 festivities, under the headline "Worldwide Support for the Revolution," the pro-government Nuevo Diario newspaper listed visits by the U.S. and other solidarity groups to Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, then added:

"Debbie Reuben, representative of the network of Solidarity with the Nicaraguan People, which has offices in all states of the North American nation, called being in Nicaragua very important 'because at this time when U.S. aggression has been continuing to increase, we consider that the friendship between our two peoples has only increased.' "

In addition to the visitors, several hundred Americans live and work here full time. Activists among them, often joined by visitors passing through, gather Thursday mornings for regular demonstrations in front of the U.S. Embassy to protest U.S. policy toward Nicaragua.

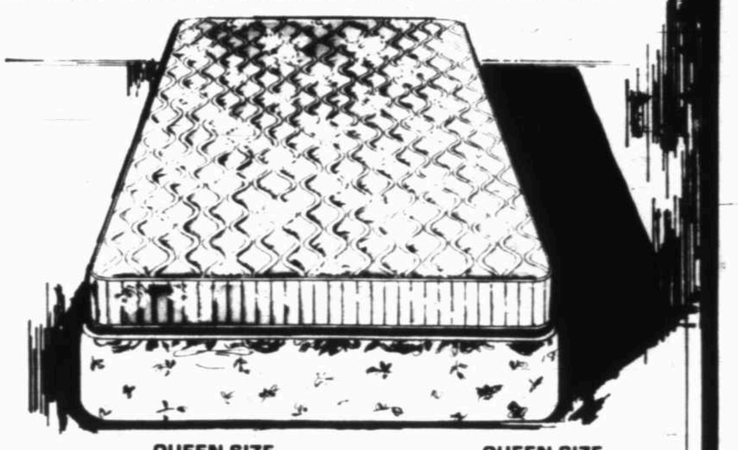

Lin Roth, daughter of a retired U.S. Navy officer, teaches ecology at the Jesuit-run University of Central America and has been here since October 1981. Ms. Roth, a 35-year-old Radcliffe graduate, explains her continued stay here as professional satisfaction accompanied by political commitment.

"I've never been anywhere where what you do can count so much," she said.

Roth, who played the guitar during the song for D'Escotod'Escoto, said she particularly opposes U.S. funding of the anti-Sandinista contra rebels known as contras who have been fighting to overthrow the Sandinista government for more than three years.

"I think that this is the worst problem here," she added. "The other problems are not going to get solved as long as the aggression goes on. My main responsibility as a U.S. citizen is to speak out against this war."

Conference committee approves production of chemical weapon

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators have finally agreed on a defense bill that permits the Pentagon to build new chemical weapons after a 16-year halt, but nerve gas opponents will likely have another chance next week to kill the program.

The 39-member conference committee gave voice vote approval to the huge package late Thursday, ending two weeks of wrangling that reconciled more than 1,000 differences between the House and Senate versions of the bills authorizing the Pentagon's budget for fiscal 1986.

The bill now goes back to the House and Senate floors, where votes are expected next week.

The $302 billion budget would permit Pentagon spending to rise next year at the expected rate of inflation. President Reagan has endorsed the plan, although he originally sought a 5.9 percent hike beyond inflation.

The major controversy involved nerve gas. The United States has not built any chemical weapons since 1969 and the Democratic-led House had refused for three years to approve it, the only weapon denied Reagan as part of his military buildup.

The Senate again this year approved nerve gas, but the House approval included a number of conditions. The key restriction would have blocked production unless U.S. NATO allies specifically asked for the weapon and agreed to store it in Western Europe.

But Senate conferees balked at that, arguing that no other country should be permitted to decide what weapons the United States builds, said congressional sources speaking on condition they not be named.

The House negotiators finally gave in, the sources said, and approved a compromise that only requires that the White House tell Congress that U.S. allies have been consulted about contingency deployment plans during a crisis.

That compromise is likely to be controversial when the House votes on the full bill next week and Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, has agreed to a separate vote on the nerve gas issue, the sources said. But conditions of the vote depend on parliamentary maneuvering next week.

Other House restrictions on nerve gas remained in the bill, including a ban on final-stage production until Oct. 1, 1987, and only then if the Pentagon comes up with a way to dispose of some of the aging weapons in the current stockpile.

Amnesty for aliens rejected

Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Republican-controlled Senate Judiciary Committee Thursday rejected Democratic attempts to insert a guarantee of amnesty for hundreds of thousands of illegal aliens into a pending immigration reform package, setting the stage for an eventual showdown with the House over the touchy issue.

On party-line votes, the Senate panel also turned down other Democratic revisions that sought to scale back a proposed expansion of guest worker programs and to safeguard ethnic Latinos from the increased job discrimination that critics fear might result from new restrictions on the hiring of undocumented workers.

As the committee set more debate for next week on the measure by Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., an even more sweeping immigration bill was introduced in the House by Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., the powerful chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

"As Americans, we must ask ourselves how much longer we are willing to pay the moral, social and economic price of avoiding our sovereign responsibility to control our borders," Rodino said in outlining the rationale for his measure.

"I am fearful that unless Congress acts to address this problem now, the time may come when America is forced to close its doors to everyone," he said.

The Rodino bill, patterned after a package debated but not approved last year by a House-Senate conference committee, sets a schedule of civil and criminal penalties for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens — a practice not currently outlawed and believed responsible for leading many peasants from Third World nations to sneak into this country.

It also gives many aliens who arrived in the United States illegally before 1982 the chance to surface from the underground and legalize their status.

Easing FDA rules should speed development of anti-AIDS drugs

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — Changes in the federal regulations covering experimental drugs will focus government attention on safety issues while giving scientists more freedom to develop medicines, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler says.

Mrs. Heckler, announcing her approval of the regulations Thursday, said the result should be quicker action on new medicines, including research on experimental drugs that may be useful against the epidemic of AIDS.

"These new regulations will give greater freedom to manufacturers during the early stages of drug research to design their own studies, consonant with safety requirements for the research," Mrs. Heckler said at a news conference at Food and Drug Administration headquarters here.

"In addition, in later stages of research, the regulation will provide for closer cooperation between FDA and the drug sponsor to ensure that proper studies are planned," she said. "This will help assure both better data for FDA and quicker review of the new drug application."

The new regulations are intended to simplify the paperwork in getting research approved, by changing the format for applications, and clarifies when FDA can step in to stop research for safety reasons.

Designer drugs may sound too attractive

(AP) — Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., says so-called "designer drugs" need a new name to help dissuade youngsters who might think the dangerous substances are prestigious.

" 'Designer' seems to make people think that they've got to have something on their tennis shoes or something on the back of their jeans," Mrs. Hawkins complained at a Senate hearing Thursday. "It makes it sound desirable."

Robert Roberton, head of California's drug program, told the hearing that officials there prefer the term "synthetic drugs," to avoid the aura of the term "designer drugs."

It exempts some research from the full safety requirements when it involves testing an already-approved drug for a new purpose. In those cases, the FDA noted, the safety of the drug already has been shown.

The secretary said the regulations also will simplify the procedure for approving compassionate use protocols, which allow experimental drugs to be used by terminally ill patients as a last resort, even if they do not have FDA approval.

Mrs. Heckler, in response to a question, said she hoped the new procedures will speed research on one possible AIDS drug known as HPA-23, which is now being tested in France.

"At the present time, there is no application from the drug industry for permission to test the drug," she said. "However, it will be tested and we have three other drugs under testing in our clinical centers."

She also noted that the French tests have shown that HPA-23 "has a very, very serious toxic reaction when it is discontinued." She said she had spoken about the drug with the director of the Pasteur Institute, where the drug is being tested, and "they do not hold any great magical effect to the HPA-23 drug. They are testing it as we are testing others."

Mrs. Heckler's announcement of the experimental drug regulations came as she also released a long-range "action plan" for FDA.

A cornerstone of that plan was put into place earlier this year in new regulations covering final drug approvals. Mrs. Heckler said they will cut the paperwork involved in drug approval from the average 100,000 pages per drug to 30,000 pages and cut the approval time by as much as six months from the current two years.

Shultz nixes Nicaraguan talks

MEXICO CITY (AP) — After "candid" talks with Mexican officials, U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz has rejected an appeal from the Contadora peace group that the United States resume talks with leftist Nicaragua.

"Insofar as the U.S. meetings with Nicaragua are concerned, the conditions that have been set out that would lead us to want to resume those have not been fulfilled," Shultz told a news conference Thursday evening.

He said those conditions center around "Nicaragua's readiness to undertake a dialogue of internal reconciliation" sponsored by the Roman Catholic Church.

Mexico and the other three Contadora nations earlier in the week urged the United States to return to the bargaining table with Nicaraguan officials in an effort to end the violence in Central America.

U.S. negotiators in January suspended discussions with the Sandinista government in the Pacific resort city of Manzanillo, Mexico.

The United States Congress recently voted to resume aid to the Contra rebels fighting to overthrow the leftist Sandinista Front regime that came to power in Nicaragua in 1979. Nicaraguan officials repeatedly have predicted a U.S. invasion.

Shultz, who was leaving Mexico today after a one-day visit to attend a conference of the Mexico-U.S. Binational Commission, said his talks with Mexican officials "on Central America and Nicaragua were candid, frank and the atmosphere of the discussion was a good one, a constructive one."

"Nicaraguans were trying to use bilateral talks with us to undermine the Contadora process" for achieving peace in Central America, he said earlier on the flight from Washington to Mexico.

"We don't see the rationale for saying as a reward for walking off of the job on the Contadora process, Nicaragua should be handed some other kind of a forum," he said.

Shultz has said Central America's problems are being worsened by Soviet and Cuban attempts, working through Nicaragua, to undermine elected democratic governments.

Mexico, Panama, Colombia and Venezuela make up the Contadora group, named after the Panamanian island where they held their first meeting to seek a negotiated solution to conflicts in Central America.

Secretary of State George Shultz is greeted by Mexican Foreign Minister Bernarde Sepulveda upon his arrival Thursday in Mexico City. Shultz met with the foreign minister and President Miguel de la Madrid.

The group's efforts to achieve peace in Central America have been stalled since last fall when Nicaragua accepted a draft peace accord but El Salvador, Costa Rica and Honduras rejected it. Guatemala is the other Central American nation involved in the talks.

Last month's Contadora meeting in Panama was cut short when Nicaragua rejected the formal agenda and demanded the talks to focus on specific problems, especially U.S. support of the Contras.

Shultz arrived Thursday morning to open a conference of the Mexican-U.S. Binational Commission and meet with President Miguel de la Madrid and other government officials.

Representatives from the U.S. State, Commerce and Treasury departments, as well as Harry Shlauderman, America's Central America envoy, accompanied Shultz.

Afterward, Shultz said Mexico's fresh plans for bolstering its sagging economy are "important and significant and should have, from what we can see, beneficial effects both immediately and in the longer term."

He said the discussions had produced "an agreement to set out a framework for trade and investment discussions which will be proceeding." The United States is Mexico's largest trading partner but the two countries have no overall trade agreement to regulate their sales to each other.

Mexico devalues peso 20 percent

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico has reduced the value of its peso by 20 percent and ordered massive cuts in government spending, including President Miguel de la Madrid's salary, to arrest the deterioration of the nation's economy.

In a Wednesday night news conference, the nation's top three economic officials said cuts would include the elimination in the federal government of 15 undersecretary-level offices, at least 50 general-level posts along with salary cuts from 10 to 15 percent for management level employees.

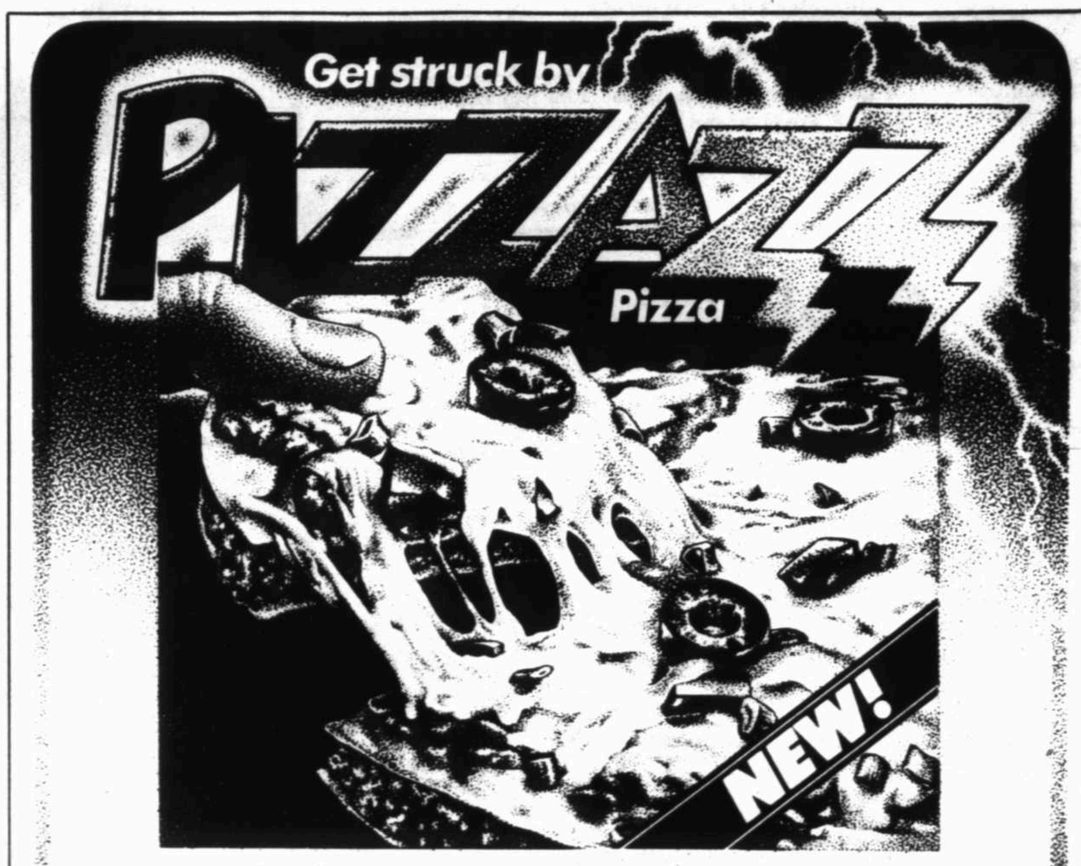

Budget Secretary Carlos Salinas de Gortari said Thursday the cuts would eliminate 51,000 government positions in all sectors, but 23,000 people will be relocated in other government jobs because they belong to unions. He said the other 28,000 people are in high-level, non-union positions and they will lose their government jobs.

Since 1982, de la Madrid's administration has eliminated 651 government offices with 80,000 employees.

The actions were considered some of the strongest taken by de la Madrid since taking office in 1982. Such actions have been suggested by private analysts, but many observers believe the government avoided such harsh measures until after the July 7 national elections.

The cuts include a 10 percent reduction in the president's salary, reported to be about 1.8 million pesos a month, or about $4,800.

It's a state issue

The federal government has particular functions it can serve better than individual states or municipalities. But there are functions better left to local government. That's why taxpayers nationwide should support California Sen. Pete Wilson's effort to amend the federal Fair Labor Standards Act to exempt state and local governments from its wage-and-hour regulations.

Historically, federal labor laws have not applied to state and local governments, which is as it should be in a federal system such as ours. But in February, in Garcia v. San Antonio Metropolitan Transit Authority, the U.S. Supreme Court, by a 5-4 vote, reversed a 9-year-old precedent and decreed that state and local governments indeed were bound by such federal regulations. In effect that meant the court did not buy the separation of state and federal power.

The court majority ruled, in effect, that the 10th Amendment to the Constitution is no longer valid. That amendment reads: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." The 10th Amendment was the basis for a 1976 Supreme Court decision that exempted states and their political subdivisions from the federal wage law.

But there is considerably more at stake here than the two-centuries-old argument over states' rights under our federal system. There is also the matter of about $3 billion a year in taxpayers' money.

This is how much state and local governments could be forced to pay in additional overtime under the Fair Labor Standards Act as decreed in the Garcia ruling. The alternative, of course, would be to reduce overtime. But because most of that overtime is worked by public safety employees — police and firefighters — that's neither practical nor desirable.

For years, state and local governments and their employees have solved the overtime problem through negotiation and the use of compensatory time to offset overtime. This system has benefited public employees and taxpayers alike and should be reinstated.

Congress should move quickly to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act and restore the right of state and local governments to determine their own wage-and-hour standards. It was a realistic procedure which should be retained for the benefit of the states.

Another View:

Taming protectionism

The Reagan administration remains basically committed to free trade, but it is not getting enough help from some of its friends as it seeks to strengthen the policy by resisting demands for extreme measures of protectionism. That reality was starkly dramatized with the collapse Friday of efforts to start another round of multinational trade talks.

The 90-nation council of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade was unable to reach agreement because of a division over an issue of critical importance to the United States — the inclusion of services for the first time in multilateral negotiations. For the United States, with two-thirds of its production and employment geared to the service sector, this is the key to growth in expanded exports. But expansion of the United States overseas in major service sectors — including finance, banking, insurance, shipping and tourism — has been blocked in many countries by protectionist barriers. Those barriers would be the target in a new round of trade talks.

Brazil and India led the opposition, arguing that they and many other Third World countries would be overwhelmed in competition in the service sector with the more advanced service sectors of the industrialized world. Their resistance is shortsighted. Special provisions for Third World nations have been traditionally respected in multinational trade arrangements. To obstruct moving on to broader trade agreements and the inclusion of services at this stage is only to invite an expansion of the already excessive protectionism growing in almost every nation of the world.

Another attempt may be made in September to win GATT agreement on the new round. Failure would make more difficult the task of world leaders, including President Reagan, in resisting the pressures for protectionism.

The extremes of reckless and counterproductive protectionism are evident these days in Congress. Leading Democrats have introduced legislation to try to turn around the staggering trade deficit by applying a surcharge to the goods of nations, like Japan, with huge surpluses in their trade balances. The move holds no promise for expanding export markets for the United States — as Clayton K. Yeutter, the U.S. trade representative, quickly told Congress — while Japan already has offered voluntary export restraints that would be less damaging than recourse to a surcharge. That is not the only bad bill. A dangerous and enormously costly textile bill now has the support of a majority of the Senate and at least 291 of the 435 members of the House.

Reagan stands ready to veto both measures, fortunately. And there is also the likelihood that he will resist pressure to impose shoe-import restrictions recommended by the International Trade Commission. All these proposals would impose extreme costs on consumers to guard only a limited number of jobs or to preserve businesses no longer able to compete in a free market. The first victims of the inevitable retaliation would be American exporters.

"Multinational trade negotiations offer an opportunity to escape from self-defeating protectionism," Allen Wallis, undersecretary of state for economic affairs, said recently. That is true. And that reality makes urgent proceeding to the new round, taming protectionism before it further weakens the already fragile structure of international trade.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, July 26, the 207th day of 1985. There are 158 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 26, 1908, U.S. Attorney General Charles J. Bonaparte issued an order creating an investigative agency within the Department of Justice. The agency later became known as the FBI.

On this date:

In 1775, Benjamin Franklin became postmaster-general.

In 1788, New York became the 11th state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

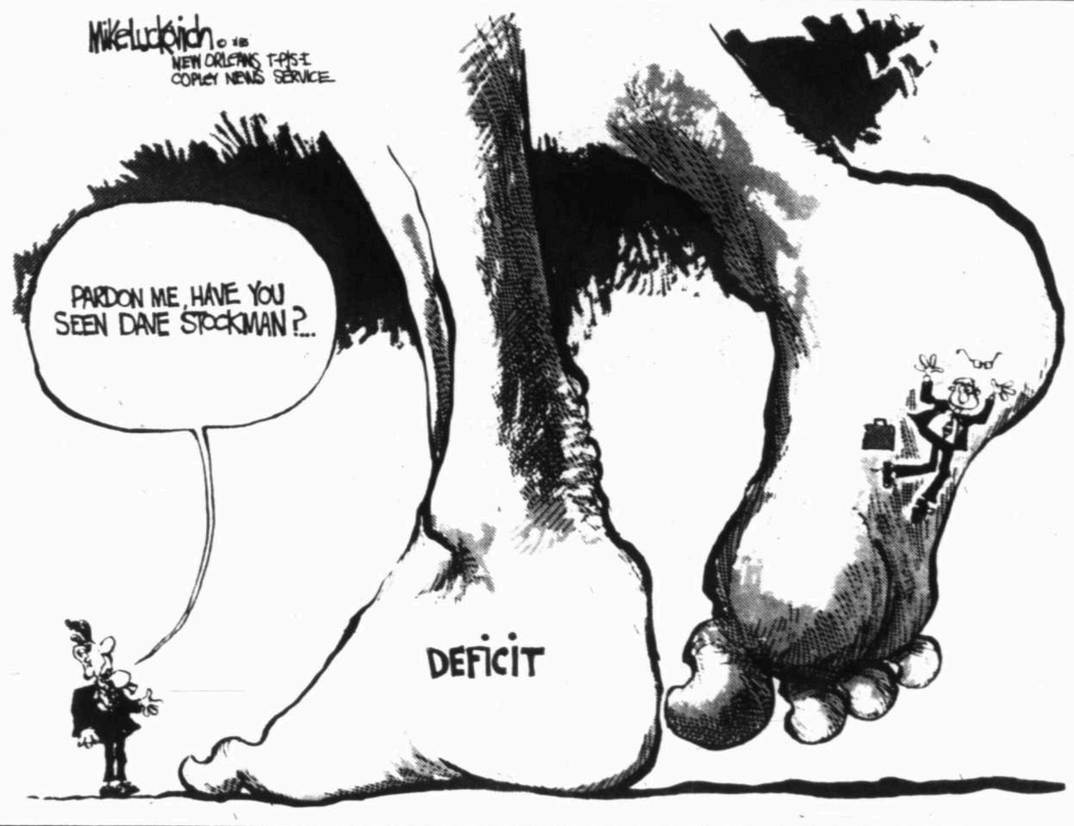

In 1856, playwright George Bernard Shaw was born.

In 1947, President Harry S. Truman signed the National Security Act, which consolidated the Defense Department and created the National Security Council.

In 1952, Argentina's first lady, Eva Peron, died of cancer at age 33.

In 1953, Fidel Castro began his revolution against the Batista regime with an unsuccessful attack on an army barracks in eastern Cuba. Castro succeeded in ousting Batista in 1959.

In 1958, Britain's Queen Elizabeth II proclaimed her son, Charles, the Prince of Wales.

JACK ANDERSON

When a chairman breaks rules ...

WASHINGTON — Among the spendthrift sultans of the House of Representatives, Rep. Tom Bevill, D-Ala., is the pasha of pork.

Jack Anderson

As chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee on water projects, the tall, courtly Alabamian holds the power of life or death over more pork-barrel projects than any other member. His nod of approval can mean a dam or a dredging project in the district of a colleague in need of help for re-election. Bevill's opposition, or even uninterest, can send a representative back to his constituents empty-handed.

So when Bevill lays down a rule for pork-barrel supplicants to follow, they obey it without question. Unless they happen to be the chairman. After all, if the rule maker wants to break his own rule, who's going to challenge him?

Traditionally, a dam or bridge or other pork project is first authorized by the appropriate committee — Public Works, for example. Then, after hearings and debate, the Appropriations Committee must agree to put up the money to pay for it.

But recently, Appropriations has been a little high-handed, using the money bills to write the legislation itself, much to the disgruntlement of the authorizing committees.

Somewhat surprisingly, Bevill made what looked like an altruistic effort to diminish the Appropriations encroachment on the latest bill allocating funds for water projects. Apparently abdicating some of his own power, he passed the word to other subcommittee members that no amendments would be allowed that could be construed as "authorizing legislation."

But lo and behold, while the other subcommittee members were obediently restraining themselves Bevill inserted an amendment directing that a $9.5 million Army Corps of Engineers school be located on the campus of the University of Alabama at Huntsville, next door to Bevill's district.

That might seem like writing legislation by means of appropriation — the very tactic Bevill had forbidden on the bill. But a Bevill aide told our associates Corky Johnson and Donald Goldberg that the money came from a "revolving fund" of corps money that had been appropriated earlier and not spent. So Bevill hadn't really broken his rule.

"Certain technical difficulties" held up the funds. One of those difficulties, according to Bevill's aide, was that the money couldn't just be given to the university; bids had to be solicited from other interested parties. So Bevill's recent amendment will sanctify the university's sole-source contract.

Another problem, one corps official said, is that specific congressional approval is needed for the corps to build a facility on land not owned by the federal government. In other words, the corps wasn't authorized to build the center.

To Bevill's critics, that would seem to put the matter in the hands of the proper authorizing committee, not the Appropriations committee. Bevill was unmoved — and he's the chairman.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., was a bit miffed by Bevill's action. Michel had requested funds for study of a home-state river and had been refused under the Bevill rule. "It sure makes it curious why ours wasn't allowed," said a Michel aide.

Once the pork-barrel bill — with its Bevill amendment — reached the floor of the House, there was no chance that any of it could be challenged. It was protected by — what else? — a special rule forbidding challenges to amendments. This is the traditional procedure used to protect pork projects from being shot down.

Footnote: For what it's worth, the Army Corps of Engineers supports the University of Alabama site for its training center as "probably the most practical location."

WATCH ON WASTE: The Hamilton (Ohio) Tool Co. submitted a bid for a new currency production system to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. But the bureau decided a whole new system would be too expensive, so it would just buy a printing press. The contract went — without competitive bidding — to a German company, with which the bureau had tried in vain to negotiate for the entire system. Hamilton Tool Co. complained to Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, and the General Accounting Office. The GAO decided Hamilton was right; the contract was canceled and Hamilton is ready with a bid for the printing press that's $2 million lower than the German firm's.

DUMPING ON DUMPERS: California generates a big portion of the nation's hazardous waste, but the state's crackdown tactics against polluters are worth copying. A Los Angeles firm, the American Caster Corp., was recently found guilty of illegal dumping. Its president and vice president were given six-month jail terms, and the company was ordered to place full-page ads in local newspapers calling attention to its embarrassment. "The illegal disposal of toxic wastes will result in jail," the ad said. "We should know — we got caught!" The ad described "midnight dumping" of dangerous wastes as "a violent crime against the community."

Tax lunch enhanced opposition

WASHINGTON — While Ronald Reagan recuperated in the hospital July 18, Democratic senators were unwittingly given the mistaken impression by Vice President George Bush that the administration was receptive to at least a new oil import tax and perhaps much more.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Nor was he contradicted by two other senior administration officials present, chief of staff Donald T. Regan and Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III. That surprised and generally pleased Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee, invited for lunch in the White House Roosevelt Room.

Administration spokesmen contend all three officials repeated over and over that Reagan would buy no new taxes. But no such message got through, even if this was just courtesy misinterpreted as assent (as the president's men contend).

Since the luncheon's purpose was to boost the president's tax reform, the affair backfired badly. The Democrats returned up Pennsylvania Avenue not infused with tax reform zeal but enthused by possibilities of White House support for tax increases the president has sworn he would veto.

Always the perfectly discreet vice president, Bush committed no impropriety. He indeed asserted Reagan's opposition to tax increases, adding he would have to seek the president's OK on even so limited a proposal as the oil import levy. But of all the president's proposals, the one that least entrances the vice president is tax reform. However unwittingly, he drilled a small hole in the administration's tax facade.

The timing of the vice president's tax lunch was not propitious. The Senate-House conference on the budget broke up in bitter disagreement the night before. The mood — quickly conveyed to Bush, Regan and Baker — was that the luncheon topic ought to be the budget instead of tax reform. Sen. Max Baucus of Idaho referred to revenue-neutral reform as "rearranging the deck furniture on the Titanic."

Sen. David Boren, a conservative Democrat from Oklahoma who helps the White House on foreign policy and whose views get careful hearing there, thereupon pressed his oil import proposal. It would, he said, not only save the domestic oil industry but raise $15 billion in revenue. Two senior Finance Committee members from oil states — Russell Long of Louisiana and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas — chimed in with support.

Sen. Spark Matsunaga of Hawaii then upped the ante. He contended a revenue-neutral tax bill just would not do. He told Bush that Democratic senators stand ready and willing to push a major tax increase if only they got a green light from the White House. No senator contradicted Matsunaga.

Surprisingly, there was no vigorous rejection by Bush, Regan and Baker. Instead, the vice president's response repeated his rhetoric of a year ago during Walter F. Mondale's tax increase challenge. Elaborating on Reagan's opposition to tax increases that would kill spending cuts, Bush used the abandoned formulation of 1984: tax boosts are "a last resort." Two senators remember the vice president claiming that the president had "never said never" about taxes; a Bush spokesman did not deny the language, but said he was quoting the president.

Surely, Bush was referring only to Boren's oil tax proposal. But one senator thought he meant Matsunaga's broader offer. Indeed, another lawmaker present thought all three administration officials were opening the door to a general tax increase.

Even the oil tax did not get approval from the officials. But Regan, seeking to ingratiate himself with oil-state senators, said that he, as a New Yorker, understood what dropping oil prices could do to Southwestern banks. Should the price of oil drop below $20 a barrel, he said, he would be inclined to Boren's bill.

That sent the senators back to the Hill thinking about a budgetary quick-fix instead of landmark tax reform. But much worse from reform's standpoint are those senators who mistakenly inferred genuine administration interest in Matsunaga's sweeping proposal for higher taxes. That would be deadly to serious tax reform.

The threat to reform is lack of Senate support. That poisons the atmosphere in the House, where backing by Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rosentowksi is the president's greatest asset. Thanks to the overly courteous White House lunch, the Senate threat has been enhanced.

Open policy a 'privilege'

Nag, nag, nag, that's all we've been hearing from students in this city on the issue of the open campus policy. The students keep complaining that the closed campus policy will deprive them of their freedom. C'mon kids, you really don't believe that bull do you? In the last few years, school institutions across this nation have catered to students' wishes. Most of those requests are non-related toward a student's education. It's no wonder that the rate of high school dropouts increases annually.

High school seniors should be more concerned about passing pre-graduate exams that, by the way, goes into effect this school year instead of wasting time on deciding where to eat. The other complaint is that the lines at the school cafeteria are too long. The students probably goof around the first few minutes of their lunch period. I know they do because I used to do it. Okay, enough of their food excuses.

Last week high school students from Midland and Midland Lee held a meeting to discuss the open campus policy and whether it was fair if the school district revoke it. They should have held a meeting a long time ago to stress the importance of keeping that privilege by behaving like young adults while at lunch time. But they didn't hold that meeting and now it might be too late. Yes, I know there were only a few who abused the privilege, but that was enough.

If the school district enforces the closed campus policy, the students will not like it, of course, but they'll either accept it or find a way around it. But I am a believer in second chances. Since no one has come up with a proposal, I have one.

The proposal would be that school district officials not enforce a closed campus policy for the first semester. School officials should then encourage students to clean up their act. During this time if they do not behave well and if complaints keep coming in from citizens about rowdy students, then beginning at the first of the year, the open campus policy would be revoked.

The beef here from the students is that a lot of citizens would complain to the school district about reckless students at lunch time. I am sure the school officials would sort the legitimate reports. After all, the officials are giving students the courtesy of looking the problem over. They could have simply decided to enforce the closed campus policy, no matter what the students said.

The students never earned the privilege in the first place, now may be they will. But if they continue to abuse, they'll probably lose.

Thanks to all for 'labors'

Thank you Midland for a wonderful Birthday Celebration over the Centennial weekend.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the wonderful citizens of Midland who turned out to help us rebuild the booths after the wind erased the days of labor that had been put forth putting the fair booths together. As chairman of the physical arrangements, words cannot describe the defeat that we felt when we turned the corner on Wall Street and saw the booths on the ground.

In the same context, words cannot describe the excitement we felt when the citizens rallied to the cause and rebuilt in three hours what we had spent two full days building. To all those people from "Mummers," from the ballgame at Angel Stadium and from the living rooms about town, I give you a great pat on the back for helping us get everything rebuilt. Next time we have a Centennial, we need to throw the boards in the street at 9:00, get on the news and announce an emergency, and then stand back and see how fast it gets built. The spirit of the community was in full swing that night and for those of you who missed the event, you really missed out on the meaning of community effort.

I would also like to point out the assistance which was rendered by the Midland Police Department and their prisoners who helped the cleanup crew at the oddest hours. The men from the Midland Restitution Center worked untold hours for me and we all had a good time at whatever task was being done. They certainly were involved in the weekend festivities and were a great asset in the success of the weekend.

To each and all of you, a great big "thank you" for putting up booths, picking up trash, tearing down booths, pulling nails, loading lumber, pulling trash liners, driving trucks, moving barrels, putting up and taking down chairs, and all of the other ten million things that everybody eagerly pitched in and helped get done.

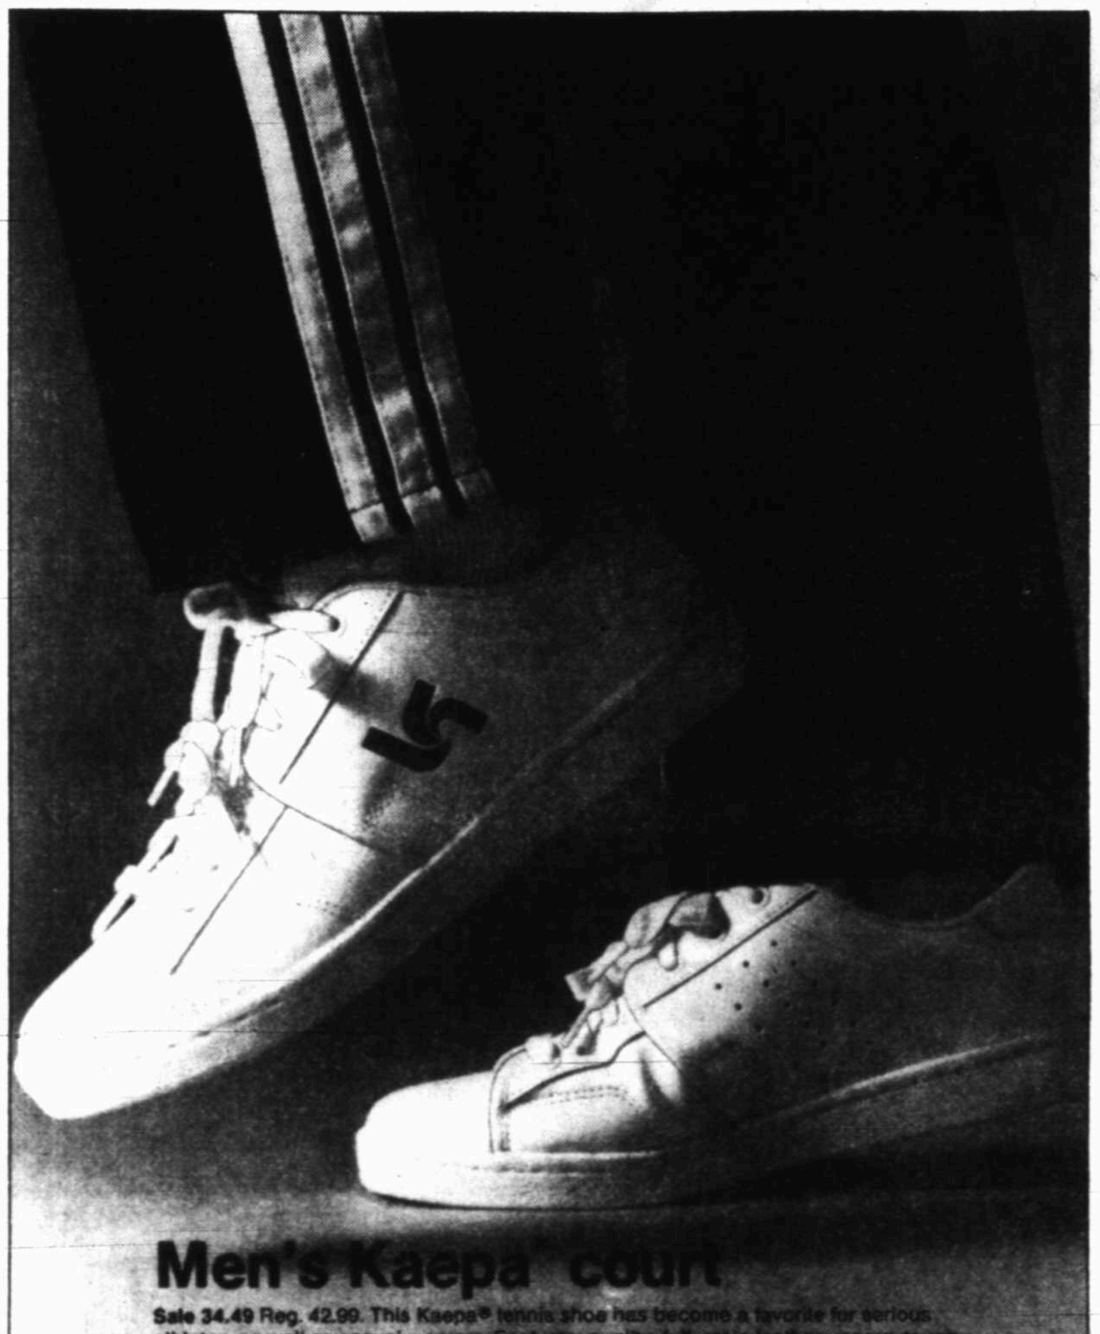

Look at it this way, next Centennial they won't need our help!

Gray skies to continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Gray skies and a chance of thunderstorms are expected to continue through the weekend in the Midland area but temperatures are expected to warm, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms through Saturday with a low in the mid-60s tonight warming to a high Saturday in the lower 90s. Tonight's southeasterly winds at five to 10 mph are expected to increase from the south at less than 15 mph Saturday.

Thursday's high of 87 was 16 degrees below the record set in 1974. This morning's low was nine degrees above the 1933 record of 61.

STATE

Heavy thunderstorms hit widely scattered portions of Texas early today.

The National Weather Service said the line of storms was near a weak cool front that stretched north of the Dallas-Fort Worth area along a line from Texarkana to Abilene and Midland.

Thunderstorms also were occurring along the Red River in North Texas, the South Plains, and southern sections of the Edwards Plateau north of Del Rio.

A lone rain shower was noted in far West Texas over El Paso.

Elsewhere, low clouds dotted parts of the south while higher clouds were visible across the remainder of the state.

A south wind of 10 mph or less breezed portions of Texas south of the cool front boundary. North of the line, winds were variable at 5 to 10 mph.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled along a cold front from the Ohio Valley to New Mexico today, pushing gusty winds and heavy rain after Hurricane Bob rolled ashore and died in South Carolina.

Strong thunderstorm winds blew down power lines near Carthage, Ind., and Toledo, Ohio, got more than a half-inch of rain in one hour. A tornado touched down in southeastern New Mexico near Artesia but caused no damage.

Rain in the mid-Atlantic states was associated with the weakening remnants of Tropical Storm Bob, and thunderstorms also were widely scattered in the central Gulf Coast and southeastern states.

It looked like an ideal situation for a Midland Angels sweep in their Texas League doubleheader Thursday night at Angels Stadium.

Midland had overcome three Jackson leads in the first game of the twinbill and triumphed 11-8 on strong relief performances by Julian Gonzalez, 7-3, and Todd Fischer and had on of their most consistent starters in hard-luck Doug McKenzie going in the second game. And Angel manager Joe Maddon still had Fischer, who threw just two pitches in earning his seventh save in the first game, ready to finish up if necessary.

Midland was on the verge of its first twin-killing of the 1985 season.

Instead, the Jackson Mets continued their torrid hitting off the Midland pitching staff and exploded for nine runs in the fourth inning to blow open a tight ballgame and snatch a 13-4 win and a split in the doubleheader.

"I REALLY felt good going into the game, especially with as well as Doug has been throwing the ball lately. You'd really like to be able to carry over some of that momentum in a double dip like that," Maddon said. "We were in it 3-1 after three innings, then a couple of mistakes and all of a sudden it's 12-1. What can you do? Our pitchers just have not been doing the job.

"We're just going to have to come back out tomorrow and try to hold them to under two touchdowns," Maddon quipped, none too sarcastically.

One thing the Angels have done is activate starter Ken Angulo after a prolonged layoff due to an elbow problem. Angulo is slated to start his first game in more than five weeks tonight against Randy Myers. Angulo will replace lefty Bob Kipper who was moved up to Class AAA Edmonton.

But the return of Angulo came too late to help Thursday.

Even in pulling out a split, Midland pitchers allowed 21 runs, and 29 hits in the two games. Combined with Tuesday's debacle, Midland has allowed 59 hits and 44 runs in the past four games.

BUT IN the opener, the Angels' bats were able to keep the game close enough into the late innings to call on the relief duo of Gonzalez and Fischer who closed out the final 2 ⅔ innings to preserve the win.

The Mets began with three runs in the first off starter Ray Chadwick, but a five-run Midland second erased that gap.

The rally bagan innocently enough with Brian Hartsock reaching first base after striking out as Jackson catcher Barry Lyons first let the ball through him and then threw wildly to first base. James Randall followed with a single and catcher Dave Heath drew a bases on balls to load the bases.

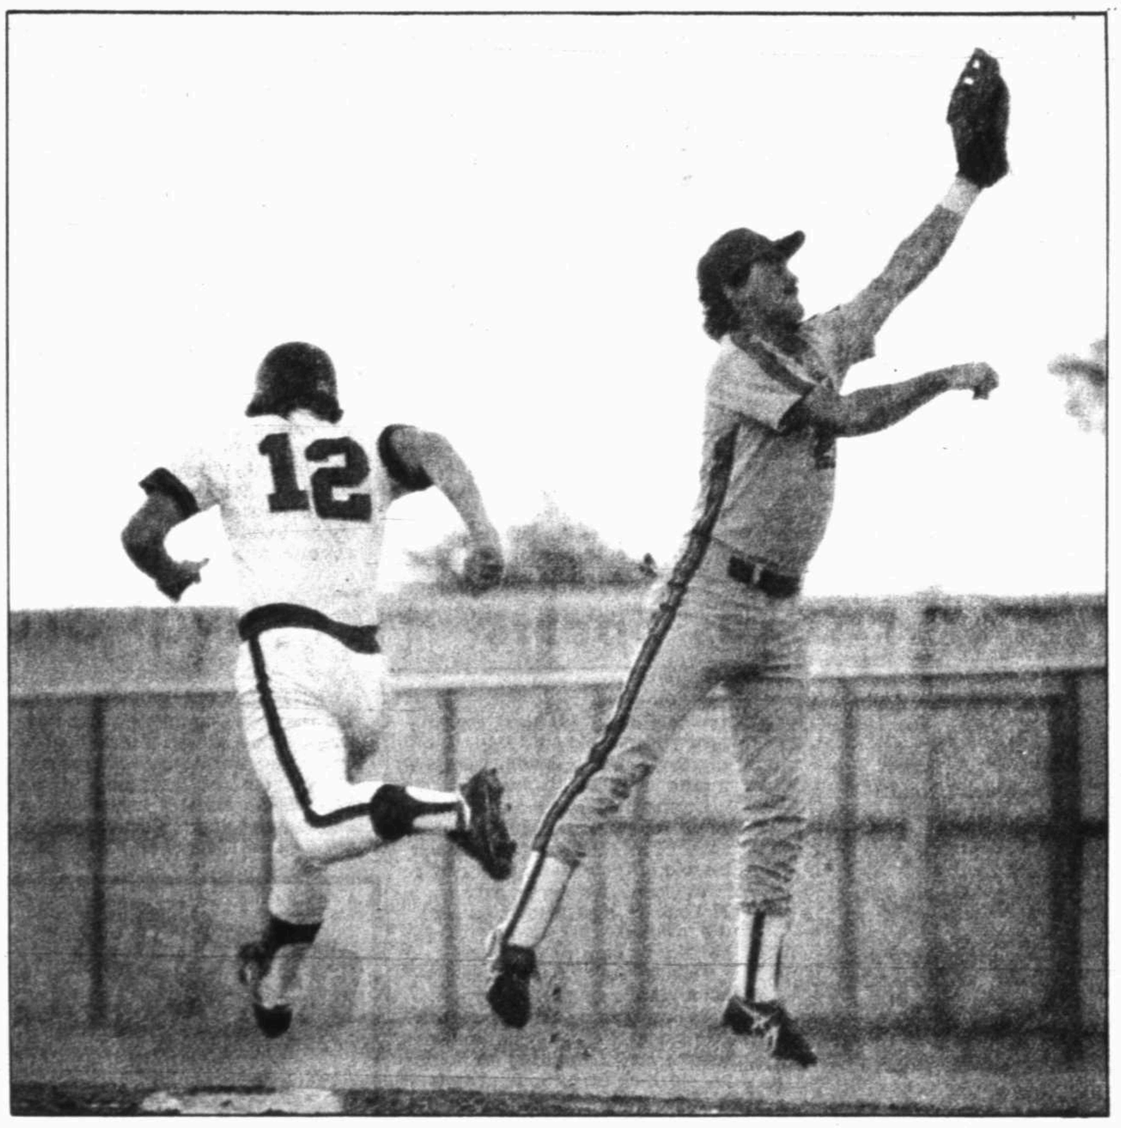

Two outs later, Mark McLemore pushed in one run with another free pass and Billie Merrifield brought the whole gang home with a triple to the wall in right-centerfield. Phil Stephenson banged another double off the wall to score Merrifield but was thrown out trying to strech it to a triple.

JACKSON REFUSED to give in however, scoring a solo run in the third, then finally chasing Chadwick in the fourth with three more runs. Reliever Byron Kemmerling managed to get out of the inning, but was getting roughed up in the fifth when Maddon went to the big guns. In all, four of the six hitters to face Kemmerling got hits.

Meanwhile, the Angels refused to let their pitching woes affect them at the plate, scoring lone runs in the third and fourth to tie it at seven, then took advantage of some Jackson miscues to score four in the fifth to go ahead for keeps, 11-8.

The fifth inning rally was keyed by a bases-clearing double by leftfielder Stephenson, his second two-bagger of the night, and fourth RBI.

Tex Schramm...Dorsett gets until Saturday.

Dorsett gets 'stay'

BY DENNE FREEMAN
Associated Press

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - Tony Dorsett won't have to report to training camp until Saturday night while the Dallas Cowboys' running back works with the Internal Revenue Service on his tangled finances.

A "third party" representing Dorsett called at the deadline Thursday night for Cowboys veterans to report to camp to ask Coach Tom Landry and club president Tex Schramm for a 48-hour extension.

Schramm said Dorsett and his advisers hope to work out an agreement with the IRS to repay back taxes the agency says he owes.

"Coach Landry granted the extension. We are disappointed he is not here, but we are more disappointed about the position Tony has arrived at. It's sad that a player of his ability and personaltiy finds himself in this role," Schramm said.

"It's a sad situation. I just wish Tony had come to us earlier with his problems," Schramm added. "However, he is still under contract and needs to abide by terms of the contract."

Dorsett in the fourth year of a 7-year deal that brings him $400,000 a year.

Dorsett's problems include liens by the IRS.

"The boat Tony finds himself in was caused by poor planning and advice," Schramm said.

"We are looking for a structure where he can play the next three years and have something left. We want him to come out of football in a healthy financial situation. He is a fine young man with a lot of problems. We have a lot of empathy for him."

Dorsett at one time had a 15-year deferred contract at $100,000, but decided he wanted the money up front. Investments turned sour, and trouble with the IRS has drained a lot of the money away.

Teammates were generally sympathetic to Dorsett's financial plight.

"All the players want Tony to get something that will make him happy. We hope everything works to his advantage and wish him the best," quarterback Gary Hogeboom said.

"However, it's already been something of a distraction without him here. We'd be hurt without Tony on the team," Hogeboom added.

Timmy Newsome, who would be switched from fullback to tailback should Dorsett become a permanent holdout, said "We want Tony to get what's best for Tony. We can all be behind him in this case, but it's always a distraction when someone like him isn't in training camp."

Tight end Doug Cosbie said, "Tony should get his personal affairs settled before he comes to camp. That would only be smart."

Dorsett was hit in Dallas with a $400,000 back tax notice by the IRS, which also encumbered two of his houses.

Dorsett was divorced in February, and his wife received a $250,000 settlement.

However, Dorsett has not received a paycheck since last October, when the IRS began to take his paychecks.

Landry said, "The Cowboys are the best friend (of Dorsett), if he doesn't know it. He may recognize it along the way."

Landry said Dorsett needs to get to camp as soon as possible because of the conditioning factor.

"A running back has to be in top condition in our business," Landry said. "When a running back stays out too long he jeopardizes himself with injuries."

Oilers' No. 2 pick tries to adjust to married life, pros

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Richard Byrd, the Houston Oilers second-round draft pick and a solid choice to be starting nose guard this season, is trying to adjust to the radical changes in his life over the past three months.

He was drafted in April, married in June and sheared in July.

The down-home gentle giant from Southern Mississippi was wed June 1 to his college sweetheart, Jayme Collins, daughter of Southern Methodist University head coach Bobby Collins.

On July 19, he reported to the Oiler training camp on the Angelo State campus where he was greeted by nose guard Mike Stensrud, the man whose job he's trying to take.

Stensrud greeted Byrd with a grin and a pair of barber's shears.

As a visible sign of solidarity to help turn the Oilers around, Stensrud, linebackers Gregg Bingham and Brian Sochia, and offensive linemen Bruce Matthews and Mike Munchak shaved their heads prior to the start of training camp.

They thought it only fitting that selected incoming rookies should show the same attitude by enlisting in the burr-head brigade.

Byrd was the first recruit of the brigade, whose motto became "You can run, but you can't hide."

"I guess it was voluntary," Byrd said. "There were about 10 guys around me, so I volunteered."

The whirlwind experience has left Byrd, 6-3, 255, feeling like he must learn his trade all over again.

Byrd will be trying to break into one of the weakest areas on the team, the defensive line.

Rose learned from original

BY GEORGE VESCEY
New York Times News Service

They would go over to quaint Crosley Field, father and son, and root for the Reds against all comers, but when the St. Louis Cardinals came to town, the father would turn to the son and say: Watch the old guy in right field. I want you to play like him.

The old guy in right field was named Enos Bradsher Slaughter, and he never stopped running on the ball field. Ran to his position. Ran to the dugout. Ran to home plate. Ran to first base on a base on balls. Ran over the first baseman's foot if he got half a chance.

The little boy in Cincinnati with the coal-dark eyes and the mop of hair followed his father's advice, and imitated the man from the dreaded Cardinals. Six or seven years from now, Pete Rose will follow Enos Slaughter into the Baseball Hall of Fame.

SLAUGHTER'S day arrives Sunday, when he and the late Arky Vaughan will be inducted into the Hall, in Cooperstown, N.Y., following their selection by baseball's old-timers' committee last March. Lou Brock and Hoyt Wilhelm, who were selected by the vote of the baseball writers, will also be inducted.

Rose's debt to Slaughter is one of the better story lines of baseball as Rose tries to catch another legend, Ty Cobb, in total base hits. One of the glories of baseball, with its century-plus heritage of records and anecdotes, is the overlapping generations of ancestors, an almost biblical parade of spiritual begats.

When Buddy Bell was traded home to Cincinnati last week, he recalled watching not only his own father, Gus, playing for the Reds, but later a swaggering home-grown hero, Rose, first his role model, now his manager.

Baseball's history of lobby-sitting, train-riding, clubhouse-waiting, bench-jockeying, bleacher-sitting and paper-reading brings the past right up to the present. Billy Martin lugs his personal angst to the manager's office, but he is also a product of his mentor, Casey Stengel, which also means that little bits and pieces of John J. McGraw and Wilbert Robinson are floating around in Martin's psyche.

SOMETIMES the influences are hidden away. Stengel always assumed Mickey Mantle, whom he occasionally called "Ignatz," had never given much thought to being a baseball player when he arrived in the major leagues in 1951. Before an exhibition game, Mantle seemed bemused when Stengel tried to tell him how to play the right-field wall in Ebbets Field, not seeming to grasp that Stengel had once patrolled that field.

Mantle was not quite as devoid of baseball background as it might have seemed. A few weeks ago at the Yankees' old-timers' day, Phil Rizzuto interviewed Stan Musial and Mantle, whose affability quotient has improved greatly since he discovered he could make a living by being nice.

Without much coaxing, Mantle told how his father, Mutt, had driven up from Commerce, Okla., to Springfield, Mo., to watch the Cardinals' minor-league team in 1940, and how Mutt Mantle told his 8-year-old son, "Watch this fellow named Musial. He's going to be a major leaguer some day." Musial made his debut in St. Louis barely a year later, giving young Mickey Mantle some incentive to roar like a comet to the major leagues at the age of 19.

The daily winds of baseball for over a century have produced some epic cross-pollination. Musial carries the nickname "Stan the Man" from fans in Brooklyn grown weary of watching him club the Dodgers into submission, and Rose proudly carries the nickname "Charley Hustle," from the sultry Sunday afternoon in Tampa, Fla., in 1963, when two Yankees watched him run during an exhibition.

Ah, but the reader already knows that the two fat-cat Yankees, guffawing at the intense rookie, were Whitey Ford and Mantle.

THE YANKEES of the postwar dynasty were professional about hustling from first to third on a base hit, but they were not awed by exuberance. Stengel obtained Slaughter for his hustle in 1954, and the tough old bird served two hitches with the Yankees. Some of the old-guard Yankees would snicker when Slaughter raced to first base on a walk, but the old boy had earned his respect with the Gashouse Gang of St. Louis more than a decade earlier.

Slaughter had learned his lesson in the minor leagues when his manager, Eddie Dyer, asked him if he was weary because he had not run out a grounder to the infield. Jobs were scarce in the '30's, and Slaughter told the manager that he felt just fine.

He told Billy Southworth he was just fine in 1941, when he ran into a concrete wall and broke his collarbone. He finished the game, but they made him take a month off, until he argued his way back into the lineup. He swung so hard at the first pitch that he tore open the skin where the bone had fractured, turning his uniform as crimson as the picturesque redbird on the front of his shirt.

HE TOLD Dyer he was just fine in 1946, when he took a pitch on the right elbow during the fifth game of the World Series. He wouldn't rub the injury ("wouldn't give 'em the satisfaction," he said) but on the train back from Boston that night, Dr. Robert F. Hylan warned him not to risk his career by playing with the bad bruise.

"Doc, I thought you were smart," Slaughter said. "Man, how in the world do you think I'm gonna miss this one? If I'm breathing, I'm all right to play."

Indy racing...brutish form of sport

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. – Indy car racing is a low brutish form of the sport. It has this broad-shouldered, tough-guy image about it.

It's a game for people who drink beer from the bottle, chew tobacco, talk out of the sides of their mouths, and have American flags and a girls' names tattooed on their biceps.

The cars, like the men, tended, until the mid-'60s, to be swaggering, muscular replicas of the men. They had their engines in front, were made out of iron and they muscled their way around a track, usually oval, with the belligerent ill temper of a hungry lion.

The drivers were human hubcaps, graduates of lube racks with carburetors for hearts and oil for blood and no fixed ambitions to live beyond 40.

European sporty car drivers, on the other hand, leaned more to guys in white scarfs and monocles, people who were in cars combating boredom, not making a living. If a guy was called Duke, it wasn't his nickname.

They ...ed through trees in the Black Forest or villas on the Riviera. They drank champagne out of slippers. They considered oval racing about on a par with eating with your hat on, or drinking coffee with the spoon in the cup.

The twain almost never did meet. A.J. Foyt was not about to go over to race where he might have to kiss someone's hand or have to eat sitting down even when he was in a hurry.

THE EUROPEANS, for their part, considered American circuits to be complicated muggings or 33-car suicide pacts. Russian roulette with all chambers loaded.

They tell the story of the time the great internationalist, Juan Manuel Fangio, went to Indianapolis and lasted only until he saw two Yank drivers go for the same corner in front of him at once. He decided then and there to leave town while he could still walk.

That's why a lot of people don't understand Emerson Fittipaldi at all.

Emerson Fittipaldi was the best of the sporty car drivers of the international circuit. He was so celebrated abroad you were surprised he didn't go to dinner wearing a sword, and so good at the wheel you wondered why he wasn't knighted. He won the world championship twice. He won so many races he was was signed to a $3-million contract.

When he walked away from that and retired to his orange plantation and Mercedes-Benz dealership in Sao Paolo, Brazil, the world of racing figured that if white-wine racing had gotten to be too much for him, he probably shouldn't even watch the gorier macho American version.

Which is why the pit wall perchers almost dropped their lug wrenches and cans of Coors when this elegant Brazilian survivor of the carriage trade circuits showed up at Gasoline Alley behind the Indianapolis Motor Speedway two years ago. He announced that he was going to try his hand at racing where hardly anyone out of Burke's Peerage showed up and the menu of the day was not salmon mousse but fried chicken and ketchup.

The first oval race Emerson Fittipaldi ever drove in was the Indianapolis 500. That's like having your first 10-round fight with Jack Dempsey.

The freest prediction was that it would not only be his first Indy race, but his only. But Fittipaldi confounded the seers by throwing in his future with American racing.

THAT WAS nothing compared to the astonishment this year when, in his second Indy, he all but won it. Only an unlucky stop under a green light, half a lap away from a yellow light – when pit stops are, in effect, on the house – threw him out of the hunt at a time when he was a fast-closing second to the ultimate winner.

Fittipaldi, at 39, learning a new game, has fit right in with Foyt, the Unsers, Johnny Rutherford, Tom Sneva, Mario Andretti and Rick Mears, chauffeurs who have been seeking the short way around ovals since they were in high school.

"American racing is more honest. Formula One (European) racing is full of intrigue." Fittipaldi said. "A race driver is more comfortable here, particularly now with the Grand Prix races through the streets. Driving is driving but I find oval racing stimulating and more full of tricks than you would imagine. I am still learning, but I think I am hooked."

IN THE Irish Hills of southern Michigan for Sunday's Michigan 500 Indy car race, Fittipaldi was asked whether this bucolic racing through the cornfields was a comedown from the glamour of racing along the lidos of the Mediterranean before the crowned heads of Europe and whether it seemed strange driving in front of people named, not titled, Earl.

"The glamour of racing in Europe?" Fittipaldi scoffs. "When you race in Europe, you race with your luggage in one hand. You sleep in airports, not castles."

Europeans have descended on Indy car racing before. Scotland's Jim Clark and Jackie Stewart brought the rear-engine revolution to the Speedway two decades ago, and humbled the pride of American engineering, the front-engine roadster. But they also went back to the royal roads of motor sports.

Fittipaldi is practically one of the good old boys. He means to stay.

"America is a place where you can bring your family with you," he said. "America is a place where you can honor yourself. You need big brass lungs to race in America. But I find it exciting, a test of yourself as well as your car."

Already he's forgotten how to heel-click. And, of course, you don't have to curtsy to an audience in blue jeans. And if you run into a Duke, chances are he's in the Hall of Fame, not the Almanach de Gotha.

Festival drug testing plan tangled in red tape

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The U.S. Olympic Committee's elaborate drug testing program has bogged down in administrative red tape that will prevent the screening of the most visible athletes competing at the National Sports Festival, Secretary General George D. Miller said.

Track and field athletes, boxers and basketball players will not be among the 300 or so athletes subject to random tests for performance-enhancing drugs and chemical training aids, Miller said Thursday.

"Test one, test all," countered Diane Kennedy, 21, a rower from Pipestone, Minn. "It's like they don't want to find a problem."

Her reaction was typical of those who expect to be tested while competing in less visible sports.

"I don't think that's right," said Lenny Layland, 24, a diver from Orlando, Fla. "If they're going to test one, they ought to test them all. I was expecting it.

"It does look bad for the USOC. It's going to look like they might find something (in the exempted sports.)"

ANGELS

The scheme shifted back into Jackson's favor in the final game, however, as Lyons knocked in four runs for the East-Division leading Mets with a pair of two-run singles. Jason Felice added to the damage with his third homer of the series and adding three RBI.

McKenzie, who has been one of the Angels most consistent pitcher despite a dismal won-lost record, was tagged with his ninth loss against just a pair of wins. Relievers Spiro Psaltis (three earned runs while not retiring a batter) and Scott Suehr (three earned runs in 1 ⅓ innings) were unable to cool the Jackson bats, and a late three-run rally futile.

ANGEL DUST: Catcher David Heath was pulled in the second inning of the first game because he strained his back swinging the bat. Heath missed the second game and is not expected to start tonight...Kevin Davis sat out the twinbill with a sprained thumb, though it showed some improvement. He is questionable for tonight's game. Utility infielder Greg Steen took his place at shortstop...

Jackson's Mark Carreon had his 10-game hitting streak snapped, going oh-for-three in the nightcap...Dave Magadan extended his streak to 10 games for the Mets however...

Midland's Greg Key made another appearance on the mound in the seventh inning of the second game, retiring the side without a hit, his third scoreless stint of the series...

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — The University of Florida, which threatened to pull out of the SEC after the Gators were stripped of the 1984 SEC football title, will remain in the 10-school league, university President Marshall Criser said. Criser's statement — released eight weeks after the SEC presidents voted to take the crown because Florida had been placed on NCAA probation — said the Gators' study of alternatives was being terminated, in part, because of speculation over the school's motives. "... if change were indicated, would probably be suspect regardless of its stated rationale Furthermore, existing contractual relationships make any abrupt change impossible,"....

Tennis

PEKING — China's first grass tennis courts have been constructed in the southwest city of Kunming, as the sport's popularity increases among ordinary people, the official Xinhua news agency reported Thursday. The agency said the Chinese used to regard tennis as suitable only for wealthy "ladies and gentlemen," but that's changing. Courts elsewhere are clay or hard surface, foiling Chinese players' fitness for international competition...

ATLANTA — Olympic gold medalist Antonio McKay of Georgia Tech has been named the recipient of the 1985 Southland Olympia Award, recognizing him as one of the top amateur athletes in the nation. "It's an outstanding honor, especially when you review the past winners," Tech track coach Buddy Fowlkes said Wednesday. "We're proud for Antonio and certainly feel it is well deserved." McKay won a gold medal in the 1600-meter relay and a bronze in the 400 meters at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles...

Colts' put kick in Allegre's pact

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — The principle is old, but it works: The more you do, the more you make.

Consider Indianapolis Colts placekicker Raul Allegre. The contract he signed last year gives him $3,000 for every field goal he kicks in 1985. An average year of 20 field goals would mean an extra $60,000.

Colts owner Robert Irsay was agreeable to having incentives written into Allegre's contract. In fact, Irsay suggested the $3,-000 figure, which escalates to $4,000 next year. Allegre also gets $500 for each extra point. That goes up to $1,000 in 1986.

Allegre made just over the NFL minimum salary in 1983, but scored 112 points (30 of 35 field goals) and played a major role in six of the Colts' seven victories.

ALTHOUGH his 1985 base salary of $70,000 is below that given to the league's top kickers, Allegre is not complaining.

"A lot of guys want the money up front or guaranteed," Allegre said at the Colts' training camp. "But I like the idea of earning it.

"A year ago, I would have felt guilty picking up a big check because I wasn't hardly kicking at all."

Allegre was plagued by a hamstring injury in 1984 and made just 11 of 18 field goals. Only six of his attempts, however, came from inside the 40 yard line.

The Colts' last-ranked offense had trouble moving the ball, so Allegre's average attempt measured 43 yards.

Allegre said he will donate at least $100 to charity for each field goal.

Colts receiver Tracy Porter recently signed a one-year contract that includes incentives in increments. He will receive extra money for 40 or more receptions, 50 or more receptions, etc.

He said an outstanding season could be worth as much as $200,000.

"Under Frank Kush last year I had 39 catches and we didn't throw the ball," said Porter. "Under this guy (Coach Rod Dowhower), I don't think 60 catches are out of the question."

Agents such as Ed Sewell, who represents Donald Anderson, and Leigh Steinberg, who represents Duane Bickett, both unsigned draftees, prefer to negotiate guaranteed money for their clients.

PLAYERS who go in the first and second rounds are expected to start and play extensively.

"Injuries could wipe out a guy's chance to make incentives, so you need a good base salary," said Steinberg.

"But incentives can be that cherry on the top," he said. "Occasionally, they can turn out to be incredibly profitable for a player."

In 11 years as an agent, Steinberg has negotiated incentives that range from the exotic to the ridiculous. The strangest one?

"I had a player once who wanted the club too buy him 50 extra-large T-shirts with the team logo," he said. "It didn't amount to much money, but it sure created a problem in negotiations."

ROSE

Batting almost one-handed, Slaughter drove in a key run in the sixth game, and in the seventh game, with the score tied, he led off the eighth inning with a base hit. He then raced all the way from first on the hit-and-run as Harry Walker slapped a hit into left-center, and Leon Culberson and Johnny Pesky did not get the ball home in time. The scorers gave Walker a double, but the reality is that Slaughter won a World Series by scoring from first on a single.

Baseball players should not make the Hall of Fame on the basis of one play, but Country Slaughter hustled like that for 19 seasons, and was batting an even .300 for his career when they took away his uniform in 1959. Rose was in the major leagues four years later, and they'll have to tear the uniform off him, too.

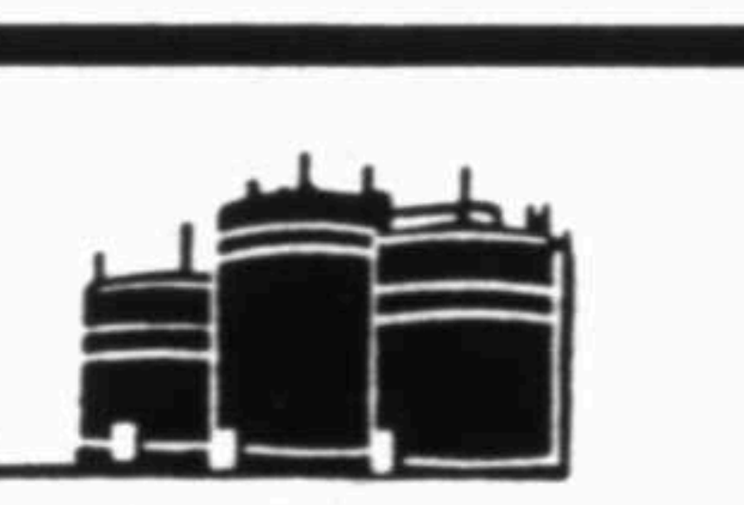

Floyd sets pace in Hartford golf

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Ray Floyd was happy to be leading the $600,000 Canon-Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open going into today's rain-delayed second round. He's happier still to be playing golf.

Floyd had just hit his first shot of the second round this morning when PGA officials halted play.

He scorched the Tournament Players Club of Connecticut golf course on Thursday with a 7-under-par 64 to take a two-stroke lead.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, July 27, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A special response to an employment offer could make this a banner year for you. Travel is part of the picture. The business barometer forecasts better times. Share your beliefs but do not try to force them on others. A family member is on your side. Forget past grievances. Romance is in the air, making you feel young and adventurous. Do what you can to help loved one reach a cherished goal. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: singer Bobbie Gentry, skater Peggy Fleming, Congresswoman Beverly Byron (D-Md.), Betty Thomas of "Hill Street Blues," Phillies pitcher Shane Rawley, actors Donald Crisp and Keenan Wynn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look forward to a day of adventure and growth. Family members draw closer together. You begin to play a more important role in a loved one's life. A change of scenery refreshes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A ball game or social event could trigger new feelings for a member of the opposite sex. Your popularity rises as you become less of a recluse. Take mate along on a business trip.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get a new relationship off on the right foot. A change in lifestyle gives you greater energy. Your allies appear when a dispute breaks out. Avoid issuing ultimatums.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Travel is both invigorating and educational. Take a friend along and share expenses. Get a copyright on a bright idea. A writing assignment will produce extra income if you do not procrastinate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It may be difficult to find a partner who shares your longing for adventure and change. Keep looking. An item you thought lost forever will be found. Seize an unusual opportunity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A project you thought finished needs redoing. Plan accordingly. Invite friends over for dinner instead of going to a restaurant. The food will be better, and you'll save money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Challenge a braggart and he or she will back down. A youngster learns more from the example you set than from lectures. Be a good influence. Curb a tendency to drink too much.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You need to relax today. Make recreation a top priority. A new understanding is possible if you and romantic partner will discuss what is really important to each of you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not judge someone on the basis of one mistake. Anyone can have an off day. Many good times will follow a small disappointment. Take a new approach and romance will flourish.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are more generous than you will admit. You give so much that others may not know how to show their appreciation. Take to heart what an old friend tells you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be patient and you will get the money you need. Avoid pestering people for help. Invite family members to share your good fortune. Being a good listener wins you a friend for life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Double-check vacation reservations to prevent disappointment. The passage of time helps you reach a goal that has eluded you in the past. A love relationship is strengthened by a single act.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

A casual glance at today's diagram might make you think that there is no entry to the dummy. Wrong! There is—if you can enlist some aid from the enemy.

The auction was simple enough. South had 25 points, a balanced hand and all four aces, so he got the hand off his chest with one bid. North had nowhere to go.

West led the top of his heart sequence, and declarer was not enraptured with the dummy that hit the table. He could set up the table's diamonds, but there was no entry to cash them barring the unlikely possibility of a defender having a singleton king of diamonds.

Obviously, declarer would have to enlist the aid of his opponents. If West had started with precisely four hearts and four or more diamonds, declarer might be able to strip him of his exit cards in the black suits and make the hand via a throw-in.

The play required considerable care. Working on the assumption that West had exactly four hearts, declarer's first hurdle was to prevent East from winning the third round of the suit. To accomplish that, declarer ducked the first heart. He won the heart continuation, and then had to decide in which black suit West was most likely to have three cards. Since he had fewer clubs than spades in his side's combined holding, declarer opted to duck a club.

West won and persevered with hearts, but declarer was now ready to execute his end play. He cashed the ace-king in both black suits, then took the ace of diamonds and continued with a low diamond. West could win the king and cash his last heart, but then he had to lead a diamond and present dummy with the fulfilling tricks.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Charles doing unprincely chores

LONDON (AP) — While Prince Charles spends the week down on the farm doing unprincely chores like milking cows and stacking hay, his wife, Princess Diana has been watching her brother-in-law and other young recruits in a different sort of exercise: commando training.

The 36-year-old heir to the British throne is getting some first-hand experience at a 240-acre dairy farm in Cornwall, where the prince has several farms as part of his private estate, Buckingham Palace said.

The Prince of Wales tried his hand at tasks including milking, handling stock and repairing fences, a palace spokesman said.

In adjoining Devon, where the princess watched Prince Edward in the commando exercises, at least one young marine found the royal scrutiny tougher than the grueling course.

Guy Coshall, 18, gasped for breath as he was questioned by the princess.

"She said it looked like a tough course and that I could do with a cool-down," he said. "I was trying not to keep thinking that she was watching me in action. I was frightened to death of falling off an obstacle in front of her."

Edward, at 21 Charles' youngest brother, is a student at Cambridge University and is spending part of his summer vacation training at the base.

NORTH LIBERTY, Ind. (AP) — Feeding the world's growing population is mankind's top challenge, says Earl Butz, secretary of agriculture under President Nixon.

In three years, there will be another 250 million people in the world, "a whole new United States," Butz, 76, told about 300 farmers Wednesday during Conservation Tillage Field Day at a church in this northern Indiana town.

"Starting with the Marshall Plan, the world made a commitment not to permit starvation anywhere in the world. If we can feed them just a little better than today, that means doubling the food production in the world."

Butz, a former Purdue University professor of agriculture, served on Nixon's cabinet from 1971 until his resignation in 1974 following a furor over a racially insensitive joke.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor says women can mix careers and families but have to work harder than their husbands to do it.

"Women generally have a great deal of stamina and strength, and most women are able to handle multiple roles exceedingly well," Mrs. O'Connor said Thursday, when she was attending the national conference of Mortar Board Inc., a national women's fraternity.

"It's still likely that, if you try to have both a career and a family, you will probably have to work harder than your husband to accomplish it."

Mrs. O'Connor is the first woman to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court. She was appointed in 1981 by President Reagan.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Broadway star and director Tommy Tune says theater critics never see the best performance of new shows, because they base their reviews on opening night.

"The cast is overfired and overcharged on opening night," said Tune, 46, who is starring with Sandy Duncan in "My One and Only," in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

"There's no way they can perform their best," he said. "Their intentions are clear, their voices are clear, they know the dances, but their emotions get in the way."

Besides, he said, something bad always happens on opening night, such as at the opening at the Los Angeles Music Center of "My One and Only,"

An annoying hum came over the loudspeaker. It turned out that a cellist had brought an electric fan into the orchestra pit and it was blowing into a microphone.

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

MOSCOW — Bob Dylan looked just a little out of place up on the stage in a Moscow sports hall, seated among a group of international poets behind tubs of potted geraniums and a table set with mineral water.

He was dressed in white from head to foot, with dark glasses and the familiar mop of curly hair. Most of the other 26 poets wore suits and ties, except for the Nicaraguan cultural minister in a safari jacket and beret and an Indian poet in a flowing robe.

And while the other literati recited their poetry, Dylan sang his, after ducking off stage for 10 minutes to tune his guitar. Twangs of "Blowin' in the Wind" and "Hard Rain's Gonna Fall" wafted across the vast airspace of the small sports arena at the Lenin stadium complex, over the heads of a sparse audience seated in aluminum deck chairs lined up on the gym floor.

Dylan received applause, not quite overwhelming but better than polite. More than had been given to, say, the president of the Bulgarian Writers Union, or the Tadzhik poet's recital in Russian of a poem about the battle of Stalingrad, but about as much as was accorded Nika Turbina, a poetical 10-year-old child prodigy.

Clearly, Dylan was something different, something unexpected for the assembled poetry lovers, most of whom seemed not to have had a clue that the famous idol of the 1960s would be in their midst Thursday night.

"We had no idea," said one young man as he left the hall after Dylan finished his three-song act. "We are going to tell all our friends."

Here, where poetry is taken very seriously and poets regarded as popular figures, there was some debate as to whether Dylan is really a poet. "More a singer-bard," concluded the young man.

Dylan's appearance this week in the Soviet Union — his first ever — was low-key to say the least. Even the international poetry reading in which he took part was barely advertised, and as far as anyone knew, Dylan's name never appeared on any billboard or in any newspaper.

One of the organizers said there was concern that people would knock down doors to get in, since by coincidence the poetry reading was scheduled on the eve of the 12th Youth Festival as 20,000 young people arrived in Moscow.

But if Dylan is known in the Soviet Union, it is less among the young generation than among those who remember him from the 1960s. "Those records I have," said the organizer.

Actually, no one seems to remember whether his records were ever officially sold here. Dylan himself said someone at the Soviet embassy in Washington told him he was best known for "Blowin' in the Wind" and "The Times They Are a'Changing."

Shortly after he arrived Wednesday, Dylan said he heard on the radio an instrumental he had once written. "It was the flip side of a single — 'Wigwam,' I think," he said. "Halfway through I thought 'This sounds familiar,' and then I recognized it as something I wrote. It was spectacular: it sounded like Tchaikovsky."

BY MIKE McAllister
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) — Needing a physical education class to complete her 1978 fall semester schedule at Texas A&M, Susan Oakleaf scanned the register of available sports — and suddenly became frustrated at the lack of desirable offerings.

There was no tennis, no racketball, no basketball — nothing that whetted her competitive appetite.

She was miffed. The only class left was handball. But hit a hard rubber ball with her palm in a white square room? For an hour? Banging her head against a wall seemed just as appealing. Oakleaf had no choice, though. Hesistantly, she signed up.

"If something else had been available, I'm sure I would have taken that," Oakleaf remembers.

Then she smiles.

"BUT it's worked out pretty well. I'm not surprised I stuck with it."

No, it's not too surprising — especially when you consider that Oakleaf is one of the best women handball players in the country. So is her doubles partner, fellow Austin resident LeaAnn Tyson. Recently in Tucson, Ariz., the duo won the National Women's Doubles title, sweeping all five of their matches, including an upset of top seeds Peanut Motal and Nancy Molter in the finals.

The title is Oakleaf's second in doubles. In 1981, she combined with Rosemary Belinni to take the crown. But when that pair lost in the finals next year, Belinni refused to accept her second-place trophy. Oakleaf thought it was a poor display of sportsmanship and the duo split. Belinni moved to New York and Oakleaf went searching for a new partner. Quickly, she teamed with Tyson, whose husband, Pete, teaches handball at the University of Texas.

Practicing at Gregory Gym, they started to blend their games. Three years later, they became champions.

But in handball, winning the national title won't make the front page. Or the classifieds. It's a sport that rests in anonymity, shadowed by the more popular racquetball. Handball is closer to a cult sport; its enthusiasts fancying the ambidextrous skills required while wearing only a small padded deerskin glove with which to hit.

OAKLEAF estimated that when she became interested in racquetball after signing up for that 1978 class, there were about 35-40 serious women handball players. Now, she puts that total at around 250.

"I think it's grown more popular because colleges and universities offer it as an option now," said Oakleaf, a printed circuit designer at Tandam Computers. "Plus, YMCAs are starting to promote it for their juniors. I don't know if it will ever as well known as racquetball. But it plugs right along."

"The lack of publicity doesn't bother me as much as people just not understanding handball," added Tyson, an elementary school teacher at Anderson Mill.

"Sure, it's played in the same court as racquetball and basically has the same rules. But it's like comparing chess and checkers. It's the same board but a lot harder because you're using both hands and hitting off a smaller surface."

After teaming up in 1982, the Tyson-Oakleaf pair found success — but not to the degree they desired. They went to the finals before losing in 1983 and lost in the semis last year. Finally, this summer, they broke through.

"The main reason we do so well is that we just like each other," said Tyson. "With some doubles teams, you look at the individuals, maybe ranked No. 1 and 2, and think they'd be awesome together. But most of the time, they just don't play well together. We do.

"There are no conflicts between us. We just have a great time playing together. We have fun and laugh all the time."

"LeaAnn and I have an advantage in that we communicate well with each other," added Oakleaf. "We can interpret each other's moves and anticipate the shots needed for us to win."

Plus, the two have skills that mix perfectly. Oakleaf is the aggressor, the attacker, the one who make the winning kill shot. She ends rallies by blasting drives past her opponents.

Meanwhile, Tyson keeps the team out of trouble, more of the defensive player. She'll scrap in the corner to keep a rally going until Oakleaf has a chance to hit.

Another big advantage is that the two live in the same city. Most doubles teams can't get together at a moment's whim to practice and work out strategy like the Austin pair can.

IN FACT, of the Motal-Moltor team that lost to Oakleaf-Tyson in the finals, Peanut Motal lives in California and Nancy Moltor resides in Massachusetts. They're lucky to practice with each other at all.

"We're probably the only ranked doubles team that lives in the same town," noted Tyson.

Both Oakleaf and Tyson played in the women's singles — Oakleaf losing in the quarterfinals, Tyson in the finals to Motal, a former A&M schoolmate of Oakleaf.

Neither Austin player has won a singles title in the five years since women handballers have held national open championships. Both have come close — Tyson this year and Oakleaf in 1981 and '83, when she reached the semifinals.

Oakleaf's biggest problem, she admits, is her motivation for winning — it's not as great as it should be. She found success early in the sport when many women weren't playing, winning a national collegiate title in 1980 and numerous state and regional championships. But now, because the competition is tougher, she isn't dominating as much. It's starting to grow weary for her.

"I think I've lose some competitive edge, that killer instinct," she noted. "It's disturbing in the fact that I think I have the skills and capabilities to win the national (singles) title but that I haven't. But it's getting better. I'm trying to take all my matches, even pick-up ones at the gym, very seriously."

Seven years ago, the only thing she was serious about was finding an alternative to a handball class. She's glad it didn't happen.

Polk signs with OSU

From Staff Reports

Damon Polk, former Midland Lee High and Odessa College track star, will attend Oklahoma State University on a track scholarship.

Polk, a record setting hurdler and football letterwinner at Lee, graduated from Odessa College this spring and will major in public relations and broadcasting at OSU.

Polk won state in the 110-yard hurdles last spring at Odessa College and was second in the nationals at Fayetteville, Ark.

At Lee, Polk was named Outstanding Athlete of the Year.

Holiday, Midessa clash

ODESSA—Midland Holiday Drillers will meet Midessa in the championship game of the Sophomore District baseball tournament tonight at 6:30 p.m. If Holiday wins, it will be the district champion. If Midessa wins, it will have to do it again in the second game to win the district title.

A double win tonight for Midessa would follow an iron man stunt Thursday when it defeated Trott and Company, 10-9, the Fort Stockton Yankees, 3-2, and the Stockton Panthers, 5-3, to gain tonight's championship game.

And all of Thursday's finishes were as harrowing as the score might indicate. The Industrial Vinyl team rallied with seven runs in the sixth inning to beat Trott with Arturo Ontiveros getting the win. Foy Martinez went 3-for-3 with an rbi and Robert Telemontez had a single and double and two rbi for the winners. Jason Stone singled and homered while Duane Roberts had a single and double and Todd Overand had a single and homer to lead Trott.

Joe Reyes singled home the winning run in the seventh inning of the 3-2 win over the Yankees after Telemontez tied it with a single. Miguel Manuel homered for the Yankees on the second pitch of the game.

Against the Stockton Packers, Terry Hamilton tied it in the sixth with a two-run homer and then Tag Collins won it with a two-run homer. Gabriel Rios got the pitching victory and Sean Almon, despite 11 strikeouts, was the loser.

Holiday Drilling beat the Fort Stockton Packers, 16-6, in its only game as Juan Dominguez got the win and Kenny Keith was the loser. Russell Paige homered, Kyle Greeley singled, homered and knocked in two runs and Doug Thompson singled, doubled and homered to pace Holiday.

In the other game, Fort Stockton beat San Angelo, 5-4 behind the pitching of Jacob Lopez. Manuel Briones and Henry Rodriquez homered amd loser Tom Englert had two singles.

Wednesday Holiday Drilling beat lthe Fort Stockton Yankees, 20-15. Stephen Guerra was the winner and Patrick Mowles and Russell Page homered for the winners. Fort Stockton Panthers beat Midland Trott, 5-3

Dodgers stay afloat

Keep grip on NL West race

Associated Press

National League

The Los Angeles Dodgers, who plied treacherous waters strewn with errors and missed opportunities as they tried to stay afloat in the early going this season, have opened the throttle and are threatening to leave the opposition in their wake.

The Dodgers, 23-25 at one point and 5½ games behind San Diego in the National League West, caught fire in early June and haven't cooled off yet. Their 7-3 victory Thursday night over the Chicago Cubs gave them a 3½-game lead over slumping San Diego.

Pedro Guerrero, who has been on base 10 consecutive times, hit his 22nd home run to help lead Los Angeles to its 31st victory in 45 games. Guerrero is hitting .322, third best in the league, and is the pacesetter in both slugging and on-base percentage.

"I try to be patient and hit my pitch," said Guerrero, who also singled walked, was hit by a pitch and scored three runs. "I'll take my walks. As long as I get on, it doesn't matter how."

The Dodgers, who led the league in errors and stranding baserunners in their lackluster start, have turned it around to the extent that they can win even when their most coveted commodity — pitching — comes up short.

A case in point is Fernando Valenzuela, who walked a career-high eight batters, but got enough support to win his fifth straight game and improve his record to 12-8. Valenzuela won 12 games all of last season.

"With that many walks, it was good to get a lot of runs," Valenzuela said. "I wasn't disappointed about not completing the game. We won, that's what's important."

The Cubs took a 1-0 lead in the third inning, but it didn't last long — Guerrero homered off Ray Fontenot to tie the score in the bottom f the inning.

Mariano Duncan, whose development at shortstop has helped stabilize the Dodger infield, drove in the go-ahead run in the fifth. The Dodgers added two more runs in the sixth on an error by Cub shortstop Larry Bowa and three in the seventh on a run-scoring single by Enos Cabell and Mike Marshall's two-run double.

Cardinals 9, Padres 6

San Diego Manager Dick Williams, whose team has lost five straight games, had reason to be upset after the Padres blew an early 6-0 lead and capped what catcher Terry Kennedy called a "bizarre" game with three ninth-inning errors that help St. Louis score five runs and win its fifth straight.

"I have no comment to make," Williams said. "You saw it, you write it." After Carmelo Martinez dropped a fly ball to allow the Cardinals to tie the game, Terry Pendleton singled in the go-ahead run. Pendleton eventually scored along with Jack Clark, who earlier hit a three-run homer, his 19th, on errors by center fielder Al Bumbry and Kennedy. Relief ace Rich Gossage, 2-2, took the loss.

Cardinal speedster Vince Coleman had four hits, scored twice and stole two bases to run his major-league-leading total to 68.

Graig Nettles hit his 11th homer, and second in two nights, for San Diego.

Mets 6, Astros 3

Gary Carter said he was insulted when Houston walked left-handed hitter Keith Hernandez so right-handed pitcher Mike Scott could pitch to him.

And Carter made them pay for it when he hit a three-run homer, his 12th, to break open a close game and allow Dwight Gooden, 15-3, to breeze to his ninth consecutive victory.

"What the Astros were trying to tell me is that I am the worse of the two hitters and I didn't enjoy that," the New York catcher said. "I knew they were playing the percentages since Keith had two (run-scoring) hits, but I was still insulted.

The Mets remained 3½ games behind St. Louis as Gooden hurled a seven-hitter. He struck out six to boost his major-league-leading total to 162.

The Astros, losers of four straight and 10 of 11, got solo homers from Glenn Davis and Mark Bailey.

Expos 1, Reds 0

Montreal's Razor Shines doesn't believe in guessing with two strikes, and it paid off handsomely for the Expo outfielder, who was recalled earlier this week from Indianapolis of the American Association, where he was leading the league in hitting.

"Any time you have two strikes on you, you don't look for a particular pitch," Shines said after stroking a run-scoring pinch-hit single in the seventh inning. "You just have to look for the baseball."

Bill Gullickson and Jeff Reardon combined on a four-hit shutout. Gullickson, 10-6, went 7 2-3 innings and gave up all four hits before Reardon came on to collect his major-league-leading 25th save. Pete Rose went hitless in one at-bat to remain 30 short of Ty Cobb's record 4,191 career hits.

Giants 4, Pirates 3

San Francisco's Bob Brenly, who didn't expect to play, hit a two out, run-scoring double in the eighth inning. A few hours earlier, Brenly's wife Joan suffered a miscarriage and required surgery. Brenly, realizing the club has only two catchers, made it a point to be at Candlestick Park.

"I didn't want to play," Brenly said. "But with only two catchers you have to assume you might get into the game. The passed ball (that gave Pittsburgh a 3-1 lead in the eighth) was totally my fault. I wasn't mentally prepared to enter the game."

Chris Brown's two-run single tied the game and set the stage for Brenly's double that capped a three-run eighth-inning rally.

Pittsburgh scored twice in the first inning on Bill Madlock's sixth home run of the season.

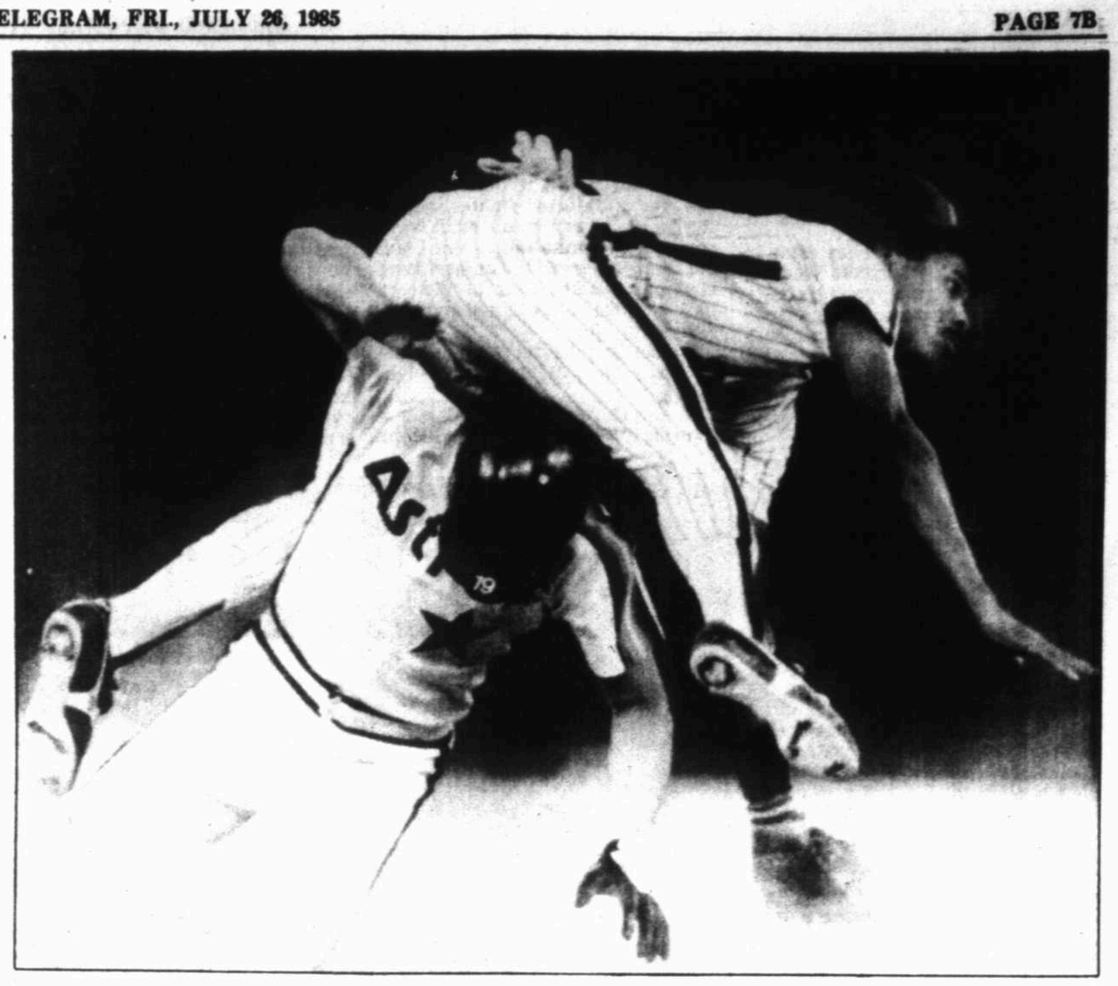

Braves 3, Phillies 2

Atlanta is 9-0 against Philadelphia, and Phillies' Manager John Felske is upset not only with the losses, but they way they're happening.

"We always seem to find a way to give them the game," Felske said after a ninth-inning error by second baseman Derrel Thomas gave the Braves the victory.

Rafael Ramirez scored the winning run when Thomas, who had taken a throw from Mike Schmidt, playing shortstop because of late lineup changes, misfired on an attempted double play.

The game, delayed three times by rain, featured Atlanta's Joe Johnson allowing only three hits in seven innings in his major-league debut. He left the game for a pinch hitter in the eighth with Atlanta ahead 2-1. Bruce Sutter, 6-4, got the victory after allowing the Phillies to tie the game in the eighth.

Gators end losing streak

Associated Press

Texas League

The Beaumont Golden Gators' losing streak had lasted long enough, and they put a win on the boards against the Arkansas Travelers.

But just barely.

Mark Wasinger's eighth-inning single scored John Tutt from second base and gave Beaumont a 1-0 victory Thursday night, putting the Gators in the win column for the first time in 12 games.

The Gators had a nice 13-7 record for the second half and were battling the El Paso Diablos for first place in the Texas League West when the losing skein began. They skidded all the way to 13-18 before finally posting a "W" in the ledger.

Beaumont still is second in the West, but nine games behind El Paso, whose game at Tulsa was rained out Thursday night.

Midland defeated East Division frontrunner Jackson 11-8 in the first game of a doubleheader, but Jackson came back to pound the hosts in the nightcap, building up a 12-1 lead after five innings. Shreveport got by San Antonio, 5-4, on a home run in the bottom of the ninth.

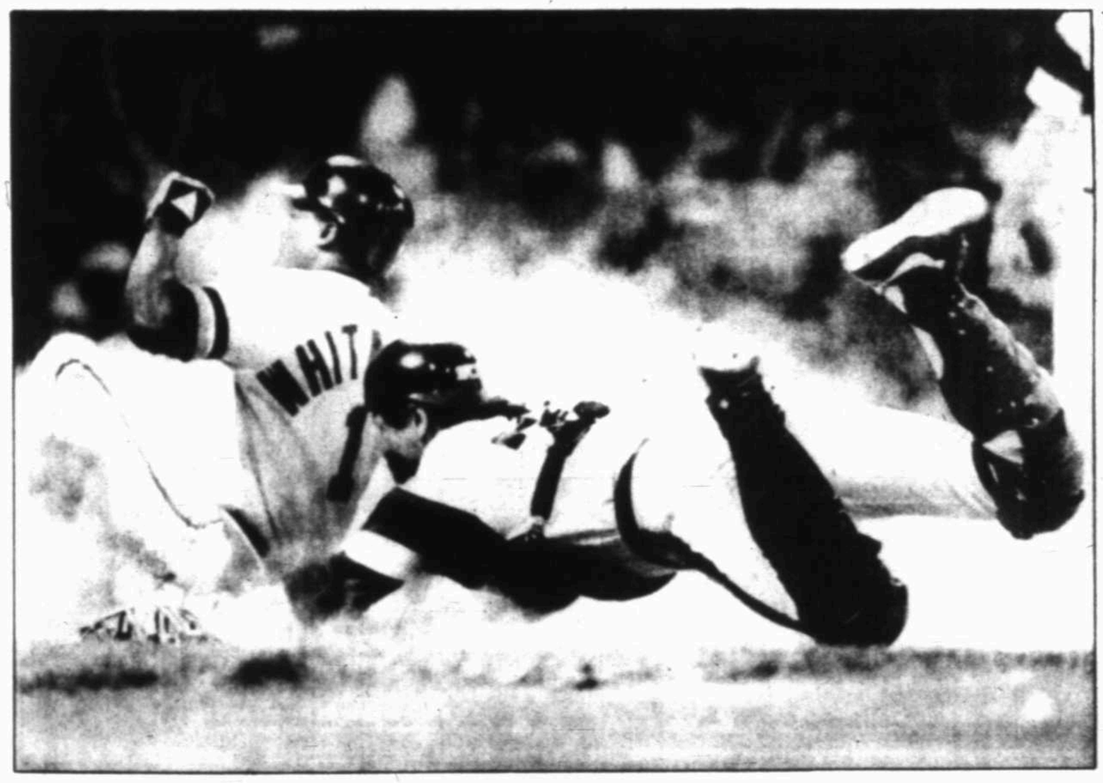

Beaumont and Arkansas were locked in a pitcher's duel until Beaumont's key eighth inning. Arkansas starter John Martin struck out six, walked only one and gave up seven hits before leaving after seven innings.

But reliever Ray Soff took over for the Travelers in the eighth and gave up a single to Tutt, who advanced to second on Greg Smith's sacrifice bunt and raced home on Wasinger's game-winning hit.

Mike Mills got the victory after striking out six, walking three and giving up only four hits in 8 1-3 innings. Mark Poston came on to pick up his second save. Arkansas never got a run past second base.

Shreveport and San Antonio went into the bottom of the ninth tied at 4-all but pinch hitter Matt Nokes led off with a home run that gave the Captains the victory.

San Antonio Dodgers' catcher Todd Gauntlett was taken to the hospital after a collision at home plate.

Flanagan regains touch

Associated Press

American League

The Baltimore Orioles' pitching staff has been struggling this season, but looked more like its old self — at least for one night — with an old friend on the mound.

Mike Flanagan, in only his second appearance of the season, allowed one run on three hits over eight innings as Eddie Murray's grand-slam homer made the Orioles 5-1 winners over the Chicago White Sox Thursday night.

The 1979 Cy Young Award winner tore his left Achilles tendon in the off-season and did not pitch before the All-Star break. Flanagan made one three-inning, five-run outing last Saturday before returning to form Thursday.

"Six weeks ago I wasn't even thinking about being a pitcher. I was just thinking about walking without a cane," the left-hander said. He struck out seven batters and walked only one.

"There were some hard-hit balls," Flanagan added. "If those balls go five or six feet the other way, they're hits."

Therefore, Flanagan concluded, "it's better to be lucky than good."

The original prognosis was that Flanagan would begin running this month, not pitching. His early return was none too soon for the Orioles, who sport an uncharacteristic 4.43 team ERA.

"I worked real hard on therapy, and physically haven't felt this good in a long time," Flanagan said.

Murray's 16th home run was his 11th career grand slam.

Alan Wiggins' fourth-inning double was the Orioles' first hit. Bannister's attempt to pick off Wiggins ended with the ball in center field and Wiggins on third base, from where he scored on a passed ball.

Carlton Fisk's fifth-inning double was Chicago's first hit. Fisk scored one out later on a double by Greg Walker.

Sammy Stewart pitched the ninth inning for Baltimore.

Blue Jays 7, Angels 0

Dave Stieb scattered seven hits and lowered his league-leading ERA to 1.98. He was supported by four double plays.

Stieb, who was shelled for 11 hits in his last outing, improved his record to 10-6 and now has won four of his last five starts. He struck out three and walked one in his second shutout of the season and fifth complete game.

"I wasn't really ready when the game started and I hadn't even thrown a slider or a changeup in warmup," Stieb said.

Damaso Garcia, Lloyd Moseby and Willie Upshaw each had two hits and two RBIs. Ernie Whitt added a solo homer in the eighth, his 12th, as the Blue Jays won their fifth straight game and widened their lead in the AL East over the idle New York Yankees to five games.

Tigers 7, Twins 2

Jack Morris, 11-6, threw a four-hitter as Detroit beat Minnesota for only the second time in nine tries this year. Morris is 14-4 lifetime against the Twins, 9-0 in Minnesota. A St. Paul native, Morris struck out five and walked three to post his 10th complete game of the season.

"It's probably the best stuff I've had all year; certainly the best in the last four or five starts," said Morris, 30, who fanned five to boost his season strikeout total to 121, second in the league to Bert Blyleven's 124. "It's the best fastball I've had in quite a while."

Randy Bush's ninth home run, in the eighth, spoiled Morris' bid for a league-leading fifth shutout. He is tied at four with Blyleven.

Barbaro Garbey hit his fifth home run and added a run-scoring single. Lou Whitaker added a two-run triple.

Red Sox 5, Mariners 3

With just three hits in 26 times at bat and one RBI in six games, Jim Rice drove in three runs with two soft singles to lead the Red Sox to their fifth straight triumph and 11th in the last 15.

Rice broke a tie with a two-out single in the fifth inning, then singled home two more runs in the seventh. Seattle suffered its fifth consecutive defeat.

With one out in the Boston first, Wade Boggs extended his hitting streak to 28 games — the longest in the major leagues since 1980 — with a ground single through the middle on an 0-2 pitch.

"Twenty-eight is not halfway to anything," Boggs said. "It's just one of those things. There is no pressure at all. My job is to get base hits and help win ballgames."

A's 11, Brewers 2

Bruce Bochte cracked a three-run homer and Tim Birtsas scattered eight hits in pitching his first major-league complete game as Oakland snapped a four-game losing streak.

Birtsas, 7-2, was nicked for two runs in the first inning on singles by Paul Molitor and Robin Yount, a sacrifice fly by Cecil Cooper and Ted Simmons' groundout.

Jersey Joe Walcott, for fortitude, he stands alone

BY MICHAEL KATZ
New York Times News Service

ATLANTIC CITY — They came to honor Jersey Joe Walcott Wednesday night at Caesars, giving a testimonial dinner to a man whose breakfasts were paid for with welfare checks when he was in his prime and the country was in a Depression.

Muhammad Ali, Joe Frazier and Marvelous Marvin Hagler were at the $100-a-plate dinner, which, at Walcott's request, was raising money for the South Jersey Cancer Fund. But the great fighters with whom Walcott will always be linked are now dead: Joe Louis, Ezzard Charles, Rocky Marciano.

Walcott should stand alone, a 71-year-old testimonial to fortitude. He was the man who would not quit until he won the heavyweight title. He was the oldest fighter to win the title when, at the age of 37 and on his fifth try, he knocked out Charles, a great boxer who had beaten him twice previously, with one cracking left hook in the seventh round July 18, 1951. As he had promised himself, he thereupon paid back the welfare money.

Walcott suffers from diabetes, heart problems "and just about anything you can mention at this point," he said.

WALCOTT decided to become the world heavyweight champion 28 years before he won the title. One day, his teacher at the black elementary school in Merchantville, N.J., announced that "the great heavyweight champion, Jack Johnson, would be visiting her house the next day."

"He was supposed to arrive at noon, but we kids all got there early, even though it was raining," said Walcott. "He didn't show up until about three, when he pulled up in this great car with two big dogs, Great Danes I think, and he just walked by us. He never said hello. That day, 9 years old, I committed myself to being champion of the world and I promised myself that I'd never ignore my fans, especially the kids."

Life was never easy for Arnold Raymond Cream. The son of immigrants from Barbados, he was born in Merchantville, where he still lives. Money was scarce. He turned pro in 1930 for $15, scoring a first-round knockout of one Cowboy Wallace. Purses never got much better — $15, $18, $21. In 1936, though black, he won a "Great White Hope" tournament in Coney Island, upsetting Lou LaPage, the favored fighter managed by Jack Dempsey, in the final.

"I had been fighting 17 years before I made more than $300," he said.

GROWING up in Merchantville, he had seen a lot of great fighters working out at the black gym — which was next to the white fighters' gym. He even met the original Joe Walcott, a turn-of-the-century welterweight champion who had also come from Barbados.

He was trained for a while by Jack Blackburn, who left for Detroit to work with a promising youngster about to turn pro named Joseph Louis Barrow.

"Blackburn told me, 'Chappy, I want you to come with me,' but before he left, I came down with a case of typhoid fever which laid me up for a year," said Walcott.

A few years later, when Louis was to meet Max Schmeling the first time — when the German knocked out the future champion — Blackburn brought Walcott up to Louis's Pompton Lakes, N.J., training camp.

"I was there for two days and both days I knocked him down with right hands," said Walcott. "Blackburn was laughing and clapping. He had been working with Joe to keep his left hand up, even tied bricks to his arm, and this was like proving his point.

"But after the second day, I was told my services were no longer needed. I went back home and I had five friends who told me, 'We knew you weren't going to stay there long because he's too much for you.'

"I told them, 'I may not be able to beat nobody else, but I can beat Joe Louis.'"

IN 1947, Walcott got his first title shot and knocked down Louis twice and dominated the great champion in a 15-round fight at Madison Square Garden. Louis headed out of the ring, a defeated fighter, before the decision was announced. It was a robbery, everyone felt, when Louis got the verdict, and the embarrassed champion walked over to Walcott, took both his hands in his, and said, "I'm sorry, Joe."

Walcott said he did not mind that he was robbed of the heavyweight title.

"I always figured that I'd win it someday," he said. "All I could think of was getting back 90 miles to our neighborhood club before it closed, so I got in my car. The whole town was there, including the same five guys to whom I had proven what I said back in 1936."

The title would come after Louis, later to become one of Walcott's closest friends, knocked him out in the 11th round of a 1948 rematch and Charles outpointed him in 1949 for the title Louis vacated and outpointed him again March 7, 1951. Four months later, Walcott finally beat his old nemesis by starting a hook to the body and, when Charles moved his right arm down to block, bringing it up to the chin.

Walcott evened the series with his lone successful title defense a year later. The four Walcott-Charles fights, overshadowed perhaps by the Tony Zale-Rocky Graziano or Sandy Saddler-Willie Pep series, could serve as boxing textbooks, magnificent matchups of two of the cleverest fighters in history.

THE TITLE he said he "always felt in my heart God would give me," lasted fewer than 13 more rounds. At the age of 38, though ahead on points and still dominating the bout, Walcott was knocked out by Marciano with one of the greatest right hands in boxing history.

He was stopped by Marciano in the first round in the rematch and retired. He became sheriff in Camden, then chairman of the New Jersey State Athletic Commission until his mandatory retirement last year at the age of 70.

Wednesday night's dinner was the first time he had been so honored. But he has been honored any time he saw the Walcott shuffle imitated by fighters, including Ali and Larry Holmes, or any time another of his dozen or so cute moves were performed by boxers who were young enough to be his grandchildren.

McEnroe says he won't resign

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John McEnroe, the world's No. 1-ranked tennis player, says he won't resign from London's prestigious Queen's Club and isn't worried about threats of expulsion if he doesn't give up his membership.

McEnroe was asked Thursday to do "the honorable thing" and resign from the club following a complaint about his behavior.

"Let them do the things that they feel is necessary. It's not something I'm going to lose a whole lot of sleep over," McEnroe said at a press conference before handing out visors and sweatbands to patients at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh.

McEnroe played an exhibition Thursday night against Vitas Gerulaitis to benefit the hospital. He teamed up later in the evening with girlfriend Tatum O'Neal in a celebrity doubles match against Gerulaitis and a local television personality.

McEnroe beat Gerulaitis in two straight sets and the doubles teams split four games.

The 26-year-old McEnroe, whose clashes with officialdom have blemished an otherwise outstanding career, criticized the decision to expel him from the 99-year-old West London club if he did not offer his resignation.

MONEY

Dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar advanced on foreign exchange markets early today in thin trading. Gold bullion prices were little changed.

A few hours after European markets opened, the dollar was quoted at higher levels against all major currencies except the Swiss franc. However, traders in Frankfurt, West Germany, said market sentiment for the dollar remained unfavorable.

Thursday's report of an unusually large $4.8-billion decline in the basic U.S. money supply appeared to be having little impact.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Thursday included:

—2.8737 West German marks, up from 2.8698.

—2.34575 Swiss francs, down from 2.3510.

—8.7575 French francs, up from 8.7450.

—3.23925 Dutch guilders, up from 3.2350.

—1,921.50 Italian lire, up from 1,917.00.

—1.3510 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3508.

The value of the British pound eased to $1.4077 from $1.4090.

The dollar closed at 239.15 yen in Tokyo, up from 238.85 yen. Later in London, the U.S. currency was quoted at 239.45 yen.

Low interest home loans available Monday

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business/Oil Writer

Approximately $4 million in low interest mortgage loans will become available Monday to Midland home buyers.

The local funds are part of $176 million to be offered to eligible low and moderate income borrowers at a fixed rate of 9.75 percent for 30 years through the Texas Housing Agency's Single-Family Home Purchase Plan, said Melinda Magee, housing agency administrative assistant.

The money will be distributed by numerous lending institutions throughout Texas, including Investors Residential Mortgage Corp. and Mortgage & Trust of Midland.

Magee said the program "will help meet the tremendous consumer demand for affordable homes and strenghten the Texas economy by promoting new construction and sales of existing homes."

She said the loans are financed through the sale of tax-exempt bonds.

The housing agency has established maximum income limits and a ceiling on home prices to direct the program more effectively to households least able to afford conventional interest rates. These include:

■ An individual applicant must have an adjusted gross income in 1984 of $33,000 or less; the combined income limit for two or more individuals (with each under $33,000) or for a family is $42,000.

■ Applicants must also be first-time homebuyers or not have owned a home during the last three years and must have an assigned home purchase contract.

■ Lenders will begin accepting applications on Monday for mortgage loans on homes costing $80,000 or less. Applications on homes priced higher than $80,000 will be accepted beginning Aug. 5, 1985; however for the first 60 days of the program, lenders are required to give priority to applicants buying homes costing less than $80,000.

■ Maximum home acquisition costs in Midland are $77,110 on new construction and $72,380 for an existing home.

■ The program calls for a minimum downpayment of 5 percent. Except for FHA and VA loans, mortgage insurance will be required on loans with a loan-to-value ratio in excess of 80 percent.

■ In addition, a 1 percent origination fee will be charged as well as a 3.5 percent program participation fee.

Magee said no time limit to cut off applications has been set. "We'll take the applications until lenders feel they have more applications than they have money because not all of those who apply will be eligible."

She said 20 percent of the total bond money will be used for targeted areas.

A targeted area is "a determined area where 70 percent of the families earn an income that is 80 percent of the median income in the state," said Bobbye Rose, Mortgage & Trust assistant vice president. She added that Midland does not have any targeted areas, although her company has about $500,000 of the funds allotted for targeted areas.

"We haven't decided what to do about the targeted funds yet. I'm hoping that we can find a target area in Midland so that we can use the funds at home," said Freida Little, Investors Residential Mortgage branch manager. Her company also has $500,000 for targeted areas.

Both companies have $2 million in total Texas Housing Agency funds each.

"In the case that not all of the bond money is used, additional funds could become available at a later date," said Magee, adding that she felt sure that the money would be used because of the program's already high response.

"I've received more than 3,000 phone inquiries already," she said. "We feel that the 9.75 percent financing is pretty attractive."

Home sales highest in five years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes, spurred by continuing declines in mortgage rates, rose in June to their highest level in nearly five years, according to a real estate trade group survey.

The National Association of Realtors said Thursday that existing homes were sold at an annual rate of 3.07 million units in June, a 1 percent advance from the rate in May.

The increase came from strong gains in house sales in the Northeast and Midwest, which offset a decline in sales in Western states.

The June sales level was the highest since October 1980, when existing home sales hit an annual rate of 3.21 million units.

"Lower interest rates clearly are having a positive impact on the nation's housing industry, especially in terms of encouraging more people to place their homes on the market," said David D. Roberts, president of the Realtors association.

Mortgage rates are at their lowest levels in five years with fixed-rate mortgages available for around 12.25 percent and adjustable rate mortgages going for less than 11 percent.

Jack Carlson, chief economist for the real estate group, predicted mortgage rates will remain at these levels or perhaps even go slightly lower in coming months.

Getty forced to sell stock: ex-Pennzoil head

HOUSTON (AP) — A retired Pennzoil Co. president testified that Gordon Getty would not have asked Texaco Inc. to indemnify him and the Sarah C. Getty trust against any claims Pennzoil might make against them, unless an agreement had existed.

Baine P. Kerr testified Thursday in Pennzoil's $15 billion lawsuit trial against Texaco that he believed Gordon Getty, sole trustee of the Sarah C. Getty trust, was forced to sell the trust's stock to Texaco and that Gordon Getty also knew that would cause him to breach an earlier agreement Pennzoil claims it had with him.

A stock exchange agreement with Gordon Getty, admitted as evidence Thursday, shows a Jan. 8, 1984 date, but the day is handwritten, rather than typed as in an agreement with the J. Paul Getty Museum. Pennzoil contends Gordon Getty, one of three sons of J. Paul Getty, signed the document earlier than the date shown.

Kerr said Gordon Getty was not subject to a temporary restraining order when he signed the Pennzoil agreement on Jan. 2, 1984.

He said by the time Gordon Getty wrote his statement Texaco had made a stock purchase agreement with the J. Paul Getty Museum to buy the 11.8 percent of the Getty Oil stock owned by the museum. The stock purchase agreement is dated Jan. 6, 1984.

Tennessee reported as location for Saturn plant

DETROIT (AP) — A Tennessee town with a population of about 1,100 has been selected as the site for General Motors Corp.'s revolutionary Saturn Corp. complex, according to reports published today.

Spring Hill, Tenn., about 30 miles south of Nashville, is GM's final choice, the Detroit Free Press reported in a copyright story. The paper quoted unidentified officials involved in the project who said the site decision would not change and would be announced in the next several days.

GM spokesman Stan Hall said he could neither confirm nor deny the report.

Meanwhile, The Tennessean in Nashville, quoting unidentified industry officials, said today in a copyright story that the choice is "final with one 'if.'"

"The site committee's selection is final, but there are no guarantees," an official told the Tennessean. "UAW rejection of the labor letter could send the entire project back to the beginning of the process."

In Nashville, meanwhile, Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander said he is aware that a Nashville lawyer has taken an option on 2,400 acres of land near Spring Hill for an unidentified industrial client.

"There has never been a time when General Motors has even considered putting anything like that in Tennessee," he said Thursday. "Just to be considered for something about that is a tremendous boost for the state."

General Motors has said it would wait until a labor contract was approved by United Auto Workers leaders before announcing a site.

The UAW's Executive Board plans to meet today in Chicago to review a tentative pact with GM, and UAW President Owen Bieber has said he expects the site decision to be made after that.

However, Bieber has said the union has not and will not be involved in the site decision.

Key to the UAW-Saturn agreement is a formal understanding between GM and the union that the Saturn project is a "special case."

"It does not set a precedent for any other U.S. facility," a union source close to the negotiations told The Associated Press today. "It's a special project aimed at building high-quality, high domestic-content small cars in this country ... to provide jobs for American workers."

The source said the agreement would make current UAW members who work for GM the primary source for recruitment of Saturn workers. Every UAW-GM employee who chose to work for Saturn would have "permanent job security" and the union would have veto power over any GM move to lay off the employees, the source said.

More than three dozen states have bid furiously for the Saturn project and its 6,000 jobs. Kalamazoo, Mich., and a site in Kentucky also had been mentioned as finalists.

GM has said it must build the plant near a community that can absorb the 25,000 increase in population that the Saturn jobs — and the jobs of supplier companies — will bring.

Donoghue's Money Fund Averages (tm)
(Average for all 261 taxable funds)		44	7.00	7.25
30-day average		yield		7.06

Yield columns represent: annualized total return to shareholders for past seven days and 7-day compounded (effective) rates of return. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. (r) -- restricted availability.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 261 taxable money funds as reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 decreased $1.3 billion to $200.7 billion during the week ended July 23, 1985. The taxable funds' 7-day yield decreased to 7.00 percent from 7.01 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 7.06 percent from 7.07 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity shortened one day to 44 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Institutional money fund investors moved $990 million out of the funds this week, while assets of consumer MFs decreased by $285 million. Money fund managers continued to shorten the average maturities of their funds' portfolios. The average maturity for all taxable money funds has shortened by four days since July 2. The downward trend of Donoghue's 7-day Average Yield has slowed, dropping by only one basis point (0.01 percent) this week. This average has fallen only 12 basis points since July 2. In comparison, during the second quarter of 1985, 7-day average yields were falling at a rate of 20-40 basis points per month."

Tenneco reports second strike offshore Norway

HOUSTON--(SWN)--Tenneco Oil Exploration and Production has announced a second potentially significant discovery in the Haltenbank area offshore Norway, where the company is a partner in a Statoil-operated block.

The well, 6506/12-3, flowed at a combined daily rate of 17,588 barrels of oil/condensate and 51.6 million cubic feet of natural gas from zones between 12,540-13,915 feet and 10,375-10,411 feet. Choke sizes ranged from 32/64 inches to 80/64 inches.

Additional drilling will be required to determine the size of the reserves. The well was drilled to a total depth of 14,315 feet. Water depth in this area is 1,000 feet.

The wildcat is approximately 11 miles southeast of the 6506/12-1 discovery on the same block earlier this year. That well, on a separate structure, tested at a combined daily rate of 86.8 million cubic feet of natural gas and 12,666 barrels of condensate.

Statoil, Norway's national oil company, holds 50 percent interest in the block, which was acquired in Norway's 8th concession round. Partners, in addition to Tenneco's 10 percent interest, include Mobil, 15 percent; AGIP, 10 percent; ARCO, 10 percent; and Norsk Hydro, 5 percent.

Hamilton announces producer

DENVER--(SWN)--Hamilton Oil Corp., as operator, Wednesday announced an oil discovery from its initial exploration well on the Mallard Bay prospect in Cameron Parish, La.

The W. Broussard No. 1 well flowed oil at the rate of 490 barrels per day through a 14/64-inch choke with 990 psi flowing tubing pressure. The well was drilled to a total depth of 12,650 feet with perforations in the Siphonina Devisi sand of Lower Miocene age between 10,285 and 10,303 feet. Additional drilling on the prospect is planned.

Hamilton Oil Corp. has a 50 percent interest in the discovery well. Michel T. Halbouty Energy Co. also holds a 50 percent interest.

3. Enter the Stock Code for the stock you wish quoted, the computer will quote the Ticker Symbol, Current Price and Net Change from the previous day's close.
4. After the stock is quoted, the computer will ask you to enter another Stock Code. You have two options:
A. You may request the quote for another stock simply by repeating Step 3, or...
B. You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more depressing the star key (*), in which case the computer will respond with the Price, Net Change, Volume, High and Low. The computer will then ask you to enter another Stock Code (repeat Step 3).
You may enter up to 10 requests per call.

STOCK CODES
All Stock Codes are based on industry standard Ticker Symbols provided by your broker or available from any Standard & Poor's Stock Ticker Guide. Codes are made up of a series of two-digit numbers, each representing one of the letters in the Ticker Symbol.

To determine the two-digit code for any letter of a Ticker Symbol, remember: The first key to be depressed is always the one on which the letter appears. The second key is always a "1," "2" or "3" indicating that letter's position on its own key (first, second or third position). EXAMPLE: "IBM" = "43 22 61"; "BX" = "22 92." Remember to depress the star key (*) after entering each code.

ADDITIONAL ASSISTANCE
Call the StockQuote customer service number (915) 682-5311 (Monday thru Friday 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.) for additional information or to report any problem with the service.

Educators study local impact of reforms

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

It took stacks of paper and loads of study before school officials across Texas finally determined the local impact of last year's education reform package.

Now come the changes.

According to Dr. James Hill, deputy commissioner of education, the changes represent a very "positive" approach to education.

Hill conducted a workshop at Region 18 Education Service Center Thursday in Midland to provide the latest interpretations and financial implications of the reform. About 100 educators were present.

The latest implications, Hill told the group, will determine "how well we are teaching our youngsters. Every dollar will go to improving classroom performance in the state of Texas."

Guidelines for implementing advanced placement tests for all primary grades and each subject at the secondary (sixth grade and above) level will cause the most frenzy, he predicted.

Primary students passing the tests by at least 90 percent can skip a grade and secondary students will receive credit for the class.

According to new guidelines which go into effect this summer, 4-year-old students who speak limited English or who come from low-income families also will be eligible for pre-kindergarten. The preschool is similar to many Headstart programs, the difference being that only financially disadvantaged students now qualify, Hill noted.

Other statewide changes involve testing of students and teachers. By June 1986, all teachers and administrators must take a one-time-only competency test. It will test their knowledge in their area of certification. In addition, prospective teachers will be required to pass a test before they receive certification.

Students will be tested in 11th grade for mathematics and English language arts skills. Both sections of the test must be mastered before a student receives a high school diploma. Districts also must provide a remediation program for students who fail the test.

According to Hill, legislation remaining virtually unchanged is:

- The district must give written notice of students' grades each six weeks, and the notice must be signed by parents and returned to the district.
- Parents must be notified in writing when their child has received an unsatisfactory grade, and a parent-teacher conference will be requested.
- Classes cannot begin until after Sept. 1.
- A discipline management program must be implemented.
- Teachers will be given two days prior to the beginning of school for class preparation.
- The Texas Assessment of Basic Skills test will be administered in grades one and seven, as well as three, five and nine.
- All instructors will be required to teach at least four hours a day.
- The district will have to submit a comprehensive district performance report to the state by Nov. 1. Hill said educators "must be accountable to public to let them know how we're spending their money."

Other legislation remaining unchanged is:

- Minimum score for passing is 70 percent.
- A failing grade will result in the student's suspension from extracurricular activities for the following grading period.
- Interruption of the school day for non-academic activities will be limited as much as possible.
- Districts will be encouraged to instruct and test on grade level. Those unable to do so in 1985-86 will be given a one-year leniancy. By 1986-87, however, all students must master the essential elements on grade level.

Eastside task force members to review CD fund proposals

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland Eastside Economic Development Task Force has assigned two of its members to review duplications in its proposal for Community Development Block Grant funds from the city before Aug. 13. On that date Midland City Council will select the projects that will be funded from the $899,000 in federal monies.

During the MEEDTF meeting Thursday evening, members heard Richard Hennessy, director of planning and community development, review the jobs of the code enforcement department and examine some reasons for delays in getting dilapidated buildings or abandoned vehicles removed from property. The group also urged Hennessy to step up action against the property owners.

Although cleaning up eastside Midland was the focus of the group's discussion, member Manuel Carrasco reminded them not to lose site of the long-term goal, which is to bring economic development into the area.

The task force had presented a request for $490,000 of CD funds during the City Council's Tuesday meeting. The request included $125,000 for clearance, demolition and removal of unsafe or abandoned buildings; $75,000 for trash removal; $75,000 for vacant lot and right-of-way brush clearance; $80,000 for code enforcement; $100,000 for street paving and beautification of Scharbauer Drive east of Big Spring; and $35,000 for an executive director of the program.

Hennessy said he was interested in getting input from the task force members and noted many of their requests fell under his code enforcement department.

"I've been aware for many years of the deficiencies in code enforcement," he said. Code enforcement had been a part of the building code section and there wasn't physical room in City Hall to expand the staff and make it separate. But once two stories were added to City Hall and money appropriated for a staff, code enforcement began taking shape.

The work of that department began in October 1983, Hennessy said. With three officers, one is assigned to eastside Midland on a full-time basis, he said. The other two spend part of their time working there.

"We have a lot of paperwork, a lot of notifications in writing and a lot of research on ownership of property," he said.

Questioned about the lengthy time it took to remove abandoned vehicles, Hennessy said a change in the law by the State Legislature may shorten that time. The law had required the vehicle to be abandoned on the property 180 days and lack both the license plate and safety inspection stickers. The vehicle now must be abandoned 120 days and be devoid of only one form of identification.

The city has a contract wrecker program to pick up the abandoned vehicles, and that includes all the pieces that may be scattered about a yard, according to Hennessy.

Roger Robles said he had been reporting a dilapidated house for two years and nothing had been done about it being removed. "If you need some assistance in getting more contractors for this work, we can get you some contractors," he said.

Hennessy explained as many as 40 or 50 dilapidated structures are put into a package and then bids sought for the work.

Ciro Sanchez suggested the task force work out a "plan of attack. Tell the people that if this work is not done they will be fined." He suggested a major clean-up campaign where volunteers would help people carry their large items to the alley and the city would provide free pickup.

Although Hennessy noted that Clean Midland and the city sponsor such a program in the spring, Sanchez said it needed to be done more often, "not just at a special time but every darn day."

MMH decides against level III neonatal care facility

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Citing a probable $196,000 addition to current expansion costs, a likely eight-to-ten-week delay in construction deadline and the unlikelihood of being able to get the necessary specialized physicians to practice in Midland, Chairman Tom Bruner announced the decision to abort any further plans for providing level III neonatal care at Midland Memorial Hospital.

"After very intensive discussion and examination, the proposed expansion to include level III neonatal care was decided against" said Bruner at Thursday's monthly meeting of the Midland County Hospital District Board of Trustees.

Bruner summarized that the need "was just not there" to merit spending the money to provide local care for critically ill infants.

"The construction for level III care has been anticipated — the square footage is there, but at the present time we don't see a need for the facility, nor do we anticipate the need over the next five years," he said.

Currently MMH is sending infants that cannot obtain the necessary care locally to hospitals in other cities. Lubbock General Hospital and Fort Worth Women and Children's Hospital receive the majority of MMH's level III infants.

"It's a real thorny issue," said Bruner. "We anticipate that we'll continue to send babies to other towns."

Bruner indicated that a possible contract could be in store when Women and Children's Hospital in Odessa begins its level III nursery in the near future.

K. M. Jastrow, chairman of the board of governors for MCHD, echoed continuing concern over the outflow of local tax money to other cities' hospitals, saying he " hated to see all this money going out of town," although MMH President Ray Branson responded by warning of the danger of over-providing the level III care in the Permian Basin.

"It makes no sense to have three level III nurseries," he said. "There needs to be one good one."

Construction of a new 10-bed level III unit is expected to begin in January, 1986 with completion expected in 16 months, according to a MMH report. Women and Children's currently has a pediatric surgeon, a full-time neonatalogist and is actively recruiting another neonatalogist, said the report.

Still another problem with providing level III care in Midland is the difficulty in convincing a highly specialized physician to practice in a smaller community where there is a corresponding smaller caseload, said Dr. Gregory Bartha, president of the MMH medical staff.

"Medicine is a very centralized profession and these extremely specialized physicians can only survive in a large urban area," said Bartha. "There just is not enough cases in a town Midland's size. I doubt that even El Paso is large enough to support these specialists. They don't want to come here and sit with one case per month."

Although space was included in the $77 million expansion currently on-going at MMH, for the a neonatal unit, the actual inclusion of such a unit would add $196,000 to the construction estimates and tag on a eight to 10 week delay in meeting

Clearview readies for state inspection

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Clearview, a new behavorial health center for chemically dependent patients is at the "80 percent level," according to administrator Phil Lundberg.

"Essentially all the areas that are to be inspected by the state health department are ready," said Lundberg. "The mechanical, electrical and life-safety systems are completed."

Lundberg stated that there could be some holdup, however, due to a slow response by the health department in conducting an inspection of the facility.

"We're ready now," he said. "but we've been told that the health department will not be able to inspect until August 1."

Clearview will be inspected by John Griffin, the state inspector for the Midland area, said Lundberg.

The facility is making good progress in other areas, stated Lundberg, a former hospital administrator in Arizona and Utah.

"We've almost completed the hiring of our nursing staff," he said. "We're not doing quite so good with other areas though. We're still looking for counselors, social workers and staff members in our business and support areas."

Lundberg is working closely with a local support group, Families All Coming Together (FACT) in hopes of bringing a key speaker to Midland for the opening ceremonies on October 9 for Clearview.

According to the director, the speaker will be a noted authority in the drug/alcohol dependency field.

Clearview was recently caught up in bureacratic headaches when it was required to refile a certificate of need with the Texas Health Facilities Commission, an agency that is scheduled to be phased out at the end of August.

Rising construction costs forced Clearview to reapply in May, in order to comply with THFC rules that any project cost increases exceeding 20 percent above the original cost estimate be reexamined. The CDU exceeded the original $3.4 price tag by 27 percent.

Some complications and confusion set in, however, when the THFC announced that it would no longer be reviewing new applications which some officials say resulted in a 90-day moratorium on pending applications.

Lundberg indicated last month that Clearview would probably go ahead and file a new application to show "good faith."

The new drug facility ran into some good luck at the same time, however, when state legislators voted in a new law that requires insurance companies to help pay for alcohol and drug abuse treatment, thus making Clearview more accessible to the general public.

The new $4.3 million chemical dependency unit is currently under construction on 10 acres of land donated by the Scharbauer family near the intersection of Loop 250 and Thomason Drive, west of the Loop. The 36,500 square foot facility is a joint project by Midland Memorial Hospital and two Arizona firms.

Clearview is under the administration of Midland Camelback Samaritan Group Inc., an organization formed from the three health groups: MMH, Camelback Hospitals of Scottsdale, Ariz., and Samaritan Health Service of Phoenix, Ariz.

Odessa doctors, hospital reach agreement

By ED TODD

A "take-nothing" judgment entered by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton Thursday put a seal on the $945 million lawsuit which Odessa orthopedic surgeons Dr. Edward Driscoll, 75, and his 41-year-old son, Dr. Stephen Driscoll, had lodged against Medical Center Hospital in Odessa and 25 additional defendants.

In handing down the judgment, which came in a court-approved settlement agreed upon by the horde of attorneys and their clients, Bunton issued a gag order on the case due to its "delicate nature." He said the Driscoll case was "better left alone."

"I'm feeling all right," said the senior Driscoll. "That's the only comment I can make."

"You heard the gag order," said his son.

Both seemed relieved over the conclusion of the case, which started last January when the Driscolls filed the federal suit. They alleged that the Ector County-operated hospital, competing surgeons and insurance companies and adjusters had disrupted their surgical business and libeled and slandered them. The hospital had initiated proceedings to investigate complaints against the Driscolls. The father-son surgeons claimed they were referred to as "knife happy" and that rival surgeons, including Dr. Phillip Zeeck, Dr. Thomas Meek and Dr. Ronald Manicom had injured them by terming their surgical procedures as sometimes "incompetent," "horrible" and "unnecessary."

The hospital had launched hearings to purge the Driscolls from the surgical staff and to deny them hospital privileges. However, Bunton had issued a pre-trial order which prevented the hospital from taking action against the Driscolls. The Driscolls' surgical privileges were still in effect at Medical Center Hospital today, said a hospital spokesman.

"We're just as curious as you are" about the details of the in-court settlement and fate of the Driscolls' medical practice in Odessa, the spokesman said.

After 1½ weeks of testimony, the case had reached the midway point when the Driscolls' attorney, Peter Fulton, and the hospital's counsel, Jim O'Leary, greeted the judge early Thursday morning and announced a settlement between the litigants. The settlement came just as the defense had launched its counter-assault.

"I'm sorry I can't (comment)," said Fulton. "I really can't."

"I'm happy it's over with," said O'Leary. "Everybody is happy it's over with." Because of the judge's gag order, O'Leary said he could say "absolutely zero."

Jury deliberations to begin in Patino trial

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Jury deliberations in the murder trial of 17-year-old Israel Patino were expected to begin before noon today in 70th District Court.

Patino is on trial for the April 2, 1984, fatal shooting of 19-year-old Daniel A. Castillo Jr. He has also been indicted on a charge of attempted murder in the wounding of 17-year-old Terrence Lopez and the aggravated assault of 18-year-old Rene Gomez.

The shooting occurred in the vicinity of West Clements and Summer Street. Taking the stand in his own defense Thursday morning, Patino stated that he started shooting his rifle at the Lopez car only after shots were fired at him.

Responding to questions from his attorney, David Martinez, Patino said he had been shot in the left foot by Lopez and lost his little toe on that foot as a result. He said he didn't know why, but Lopez had been harassing him and his family and that about a year ago Lopez had threatened to kill his brothers and uncles.

Patino said he went to the Odessa police station April 3, the day after Castillo was shot, to report the earlier shooting by Lopez that wounded him. He told Assistant District Attorney Dennis Cadra that he didn't know at that time that Castillo was dead.

The day of the shooting, Patino said, he saw Lopez several times and one time, as their cars passed, Castillo flashed (pointed) a gun at him. Patino said he had gone home and gotten his gun, a 30.06 rifle, and placed it on the front floorboard of his car.

According to Patino, both his car and Lopez's car were on the old TG&Y parking lot on West Clements when someone in the Lopez car began shooting at him. He returned fire, but was only trying to hit the car's bumper and tires, he said.

Cadra asked Patino how the rear windshield of Lopez's 1976 Pontiac Bonneville was shot out if he was only shooting at the bumper and tires. Patino said he didn't know.

Also charged in connection with the shooting are two of Patino's cousins, Robert and Carlos Patino, 20 and 18 respectively.

Patrick Wayne joins local 'Cause for Paws'

From Staff Reports

A well-known actor, a well-known dog and a group of 400 animal-lovers will gather at The Racquet Club at 7:30 tonight for "A Cause for Paws" — a benefit dinner sponsored by The Canopy, a local dress shop.

The event, by invitation only, will benefit the Midland Chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Johna Curie, owner of The Canopy, anticipates the benefit will raise "around $20,000." Featured at the dinner will be guest of honor, Patrick Wayne, a well-known actor seen in many movies including "Shenandoah" and "The Green Berets." Wayne, the son of famous Western movie star John Wayne, was also the host of the television show "The Monte Carlo Show" and appeared frequently in "The Love Boat."

Tickets to the event are $100 per couple. Music will be provided by Queen Cobra, a Dallas group and an informal modeling show will be presented by The Canopy.

Arf, Texas' Best Brave Dog, will preside as chairman.

The local SPCA building was constructed in 1984 at 15 Kerry Road and was designed to offer alternatives to dumping animals in the country or placing them with the city animal control department.

Today, the local organization provides food, shelter, veterinary care and neutering services to hundreds of animals each year across the Permian Basin.

According to SPCA Director Dalton Byerly, the association's primary purpose is to offer educational programs including films and other material to inform persons about the prevention of cruelty to animals.

She died Wednesday at a local hospital from injuries received in an automobile accident.

EASTSIDE

Oralia Corrales, who represents District 2 on the Midland City Council, said the problem of providing free pickup on a daily basis to eastside residents is that the same service must be provided to all people in Midland. "Maybe we could do it for just three months and then stop it," she said.

Felipe Morales testified to the effectiveness of fining citizens for not cleaning up their lots. He said he had two lots and recently received such a notice about being fined from the city. "But it was my neighbor putting all that junk on the lots," he said. Morales told his neighbor to get rid of the junk or he was suing. "I went by that afternoon and half the stuff was gone."

But Carrasco brought the group back to its original purpose of trying to entice economic development there. Ted Kerr responded: "We need to target the area for businesses and market our sales effort to attract this. We may get new sales on the basis we're going to clean it up."

He pointed out the improvements with Community National Bank, Powell Brothers Grocery and M System that opened in new buildings in recent years. "These are a long-lasting effect. There are a lot of things like this that could occur."

The committee consisting of Kerr and Robles will meet with Hennessy and review the task force proposals with what his department already is doing to, as Kerr said, "get $490,000 worth of work for less money."

Midland College offering six short courses

From Staff Reports

The Midland College Department of Community Services has scheduled six short courses to begin Monday. Courses include:

"French Handsewing" will meet from 7-9 p.m. Monday and Wednesday through Aug. 14. French handsewing is the art of delicate construction and embellishment of fine natural fabrics to make clothing and infantwear and furnishings. Techniques include rolling and whipping edges, gathering, attaching lace insertions and edgings, using entredeux, pin tucks, hemstitching and embroidery accents. Students should bring scissors and thimble to the first class meeting. Supplies cost about $20. The class is limited to 15 students and the fee is $18.

"Automotive Service for Women" will meet from 1-4 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday through Aug. 15. This course will be held in the MC automotive shop and is designed to give women an opportunity for hands-on experience in automobile service. Topics include the use of hand tools, lubrication, oil and filter changes and principles of automobile operation. The fee for the course is $30.

"Microcomputers for Business" will meet from 4-6 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday through Aug. 15. The course is designed to provide managers with the background necessary to evaluate the needs and uses of microcomputers in their businesses. Topics to be covered include cost/benefit analysis, criteria for softwar-/hardware selection, purchasing maintenance, contracts and copyrights, uses of microcomputers and other intangibles of the microcomputer environment. The fee for the course is $20.

"Friendly Introduction to Computers — Level III" will meet from 1-4 p.m. Monday through Thursday until Aug. 8. The course is designed to teach students the processes involved in using computers to solve problems and provide entertainment. The structure and syntax of the BASIC programming language will be demonstrated and students should achieve some proficiency in using BASIC I/Q statements, mathematical and string functions. Instruction will be provided in the Midland College Computer Lab. Level III is designed for high-school-age youth. Supply information is available in the Community Services office. Supplies cost about $5. The class is limited to 25 students and the fee is $45.

"Introduction to Horse Psychology" will meet from 7-8 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday through Aug. 8. The course is designed for riders, owners, breeders, trainers or others interested in horses. The intent of the course is to lessen the difficulties of understanding between man and horse and to create more rewarding relationships with the animals. Fee for the course is $12.

"Beginning Modeling" will meet from 7-9 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, Aug. 1. The two-night seminar, devoted strictly to modeling skills, will feature lessons in model stance, simple runaway pivots and background information on the world of career modeling. A discussion of portfolios also is included. The class is limited to 15 students and the fee is $10.

Information on these and other courses are available by calling the MC Department of Community Services at 684-7851, extensions 147 or 216.

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday affirmed the attempted murder conviction and 15-year sentence assessed Mitchell Lee McDonald by a Midland County trial court in a September, 1980, shooting incident.

The court reported that a "small group of men and women" left a Midland drive-in on the early morning of Sept. 28, 1980, with an argument developing between McDonald and another member of the group.

Two Midland police officers arrived on the scene, with McDonald firing at the officers.

McDonald was charged initially with attempted capital murder, but was found guilty of attempted murder.

The Court of Criminal Appeals said the trial court, in charging the jury on attempted murder and attempted voluntary manslaughter, failed to instruct them that they "must find beyond a reasonable doubt" that McDonald had not acted "under the immediate influence of sudden passion arising from an adequate cause."

But the court ruled that such a charge wasn't required under the facts of the case.

That issue, it noted, had not been raised by the State or McDonald on appeal, but was considered by the Court of Criminal Appeals "on its own motion."

Man indicted for indecency offense

From Staff Reports

A former Boy Scout leader convicted in February of indecency with a child was indicted Wednesday by a Midland grand jury for an attempted indecency with a child allegedly committed in June, according to the Midland County District Attorney's Office.

Joseph Gallagher, 37, 610 W. Cowden, was free on bond while appealing his Feb. 28 conviction when the alleged contact with a 10-year-old boy took place June 10, according to police reports. He remains free on that bond and on a $50,000 bond for the newer charge.

Gallagher, a former scout leader, Trinity School substitute teacher, Lee Freshman teacher and participant in Big Brothers/Big Sisters, received a 13-year sentence in February for an alleged incident with an 11-year-old boy.

The penalty range for attempted indecency with a child is two to 10 years in prison and up to a $5,000 fine, the DA's Office said.

Henry Lewis performs at Custer's

Henry Lewis is performing at Custer's, 2800 N. Big Spring St., through Saturday. Performance times are 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Friday and Saturday and 7:30 to midnight Tuesday-Thursday.

A country-western artist, he was born in Dunn, N.C. He now resides at Midland where he owns and operates Burgundy Records. Lewis specializes in guitar and in songwriting.

At the age of 7 he began piano lessons, advanced to violin and then to guitar. At the age of 12 he began composing songs.

A graduate of Duke University with a bachelor's degree in philosophy, Lewis spent about five years in Nashville, Tenn., in the early 1970s. After spending some time on the road, he decided to settle in Midland.

As influences on his style, Lewis cites Jim Reeves, Ray Price, Charlie Byrd, Marty Robbins and Willie Nelson. He prefers ballads, but said his voice is suited to most types of music.

Basin MHMR center head resigns

From Staff Reports

The resignation of executive director Bob Dixon was announced at a Wednesday board meeting of the Permian Basin Community Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Chairman Edward B. Weyman announced the resignation of Dixon, who has been with the MHMR center for 16 years.

"Dixon's work with the center since it first began in 1969 from a small unit serving only Midland to a center serving over 4,000 citizens in several counties is deeply appreciated," said Weyman.

Dixon will be going to work as a consultant for businesses and industry in the area of employee alcohol and drug abuse and counseling, said the MHMR.

Midland man released from jail

From Staff Reports

A 24-year-old Midland man arrested Wednesday night on charges of kidnapping and aggravated assault was released from county jail Thursday after sheriff's investigators found discrepancies in the alleged victim's story, a Sheriff's Office spokesman said.

The man had been arrested after he supposedly threatened the 17-year-old woman's common-law husband with a knife and abducted her from their home on Cotton Flat Road in rural Midland. But after further questioning of the alleged victim, the man was released. The woman was his former girlfriend, according to reports.

DOCTORS

The "take-nothing" judgment, said O'Leary, means that there will be "nothing" in any monetary awards stemming from the case. Judge Bunton ordered the Driscoll case files sealed in the U.S. District Clerk's Office in Midland.

"The details of the judgment are not to be divulged," Bunton said after the mass of attorneys, spectators and reams of depositions and files had been cleared from the courtroom.

All told, 62 witnesses in person and by deposition had testified before the two-man, four-woman jury. Three of the 62 witnesses were for the defense, which had about as many witnesses, including physicians, surgeons and nurses, as the the Driscolls' side of the case. Fifty-nine witnesses, including the Driscolls, had testified for the Driscolls in the plaintiffs' phase of the case.

"It was a complicated case in that it had a number of difficult facets," Bunton said. "The lawsuit had a great number of defendants and lots of sets of lawyers."

"I'm glad it's over with," Bunton said. "Very glad."

In handing down the judgment at mid-afternoon, the judge told the jurors, "I apologize for the delay incurred during the day" while the litigants were honing the wording of the secreted settlement.

"I'm happy to report that the delay has resulted in this matter being concluded."

The jurors had listened to 73 hours of testimony in 1½ weeks.

"Your time here has not been wasted," Bunton said. The judge said he didn't want the jurors to feel "cheated" that they did not get a chance to resolve the case.

Later, he said the charge to the jury likely would have contained about 100 separate issues.

MMH

construction deadlines, according to Jim May, building committee chairman. May provided that estimate by Area Builders, who are contracted for the current construction project, at a July 10 meeting of the executive committee of the board of trustees. Although alternate solutions were examined, including the possibility of converting the existing level II nursery into a level III unit, the Thursday meeting dashed any hopes of providing the care locally.

Problems such as the difficulty of remodeling the level II area, with no place to put the infants using the facility and the lack of specialized physicians were cited when Bruner told the board members that there would be no such unit.

Questions about providing the care at some point in the future were met with projections of high costs.

"A new contract in the future could double the price and it would be a real construction challenge," said Bruner.

Branson indicated that a "less than" level III unit might be possible with the current design, however. In a financial report presented to the board, Ray Moudy, finance committee chairman, told members that the hospital was "on a very good footing."

Vice President of Finance, Ron Peterson, attributed the strong financial summer that MMH has experience to a "higher than expected" collection of indigent care taxes and an increase in the use of outpatient services.

Branson indicated that the decline in patient days brought about by Medicare reforms and Diagnosis Related Groups (DRGs) has possibly ended.

"We think that the DRG-related drop in patient days has bottomed out and that is possibly why we had such a strong summer," said Branson. "People are more comfortable with the Medicare changes now."

Branson stated that MMH occupancy is currently "around 75 percent — a little above the state average but lower than last year."

The drop in occupancy from last year was attributed to stiffer criteria for Medicare admissions that have been implemented, said Bartha.

Peterson said that MMH was ahead on its revenues due to an increase in the use of outpatient services and predicted that that trend would continue.

"We project a two percent increase next year and are budgeting for it," said Peterson. "That trend is continuing very strongly."

Also presented during the financial report was the issue of bond refinancing. Two proposals were submitted — one from Rauscher, Pierce, Refsnes Inc. and another co-package by E.F. Hutton and Underwood Newhouse. Moudy recommended the Rauscher re-financing proposal, citing it was more feasible and would increase savings. The recommendation was accepted although Peterson stated that this does not mean that the proposal has been accepted.

In a report from Allison Cancer Center, an increase in the number of patients seen was noted. Branson attributed the rise in the number of cases to former patients experiencing new bouts with the disease.

"The center is now four years old," he said. "It's now in a mode of recurring cancers that need to be treated again."

The number of treatments have almost doubled from last year at this time, stated Branson.

A report from Midland Memorial Auxiliary Inc., stated that an extra $100 will be added per semester for four-year nursing students at Midland College who receive an Auxiliary scholarship. The scholarship committee voted to add the funds due to a rise in tuition fees at the school.

Loeffler accused of accepting funds from PACs outside his 21st district

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, who has set his sights on the Texas governor's mansion, has come under the scrutiny of a citizens' group claiming he accepts too many contributions from political action committees.

"More than a third of his 1984 campaign contributions — $88,054 — came from special interest groups with political action committees (PACs) located outside your congressional district," a two-thirds page ad in Thursday's San Antonio Light said.

The ad also said Loeffler, who has announced he will not run for reelection to Congress, had $384,684 in his campaign treasury after the 1984 elections.

"What is Rep. Loeffler going to do with $385,000 of leftover campaign money? Take it with him?," the headline on the ad said.

The ad was placed by a Washington-based organization called Citizens Against PACs.

CAP founder Phil Stern was in San Antonio Thursday to promote his cause.

"Why would they (PACs) give money to Congressman Loeffler if not to gain influence with him — at the minimum to gain access," he told The Associated Press.

"Our basic question is why should a lobbyist who doesn't live or vote or pay taxes in a congressional district have favored access to that congressman over his own constituents who can't afford large political donations?" Stern said.

Loeffler was unavailable for comment, but his office issued a statement in response to the ad.

"Political action committees are one way for citizens to participate in the political process as is voting or walking precincts," Loeffler said in the statement. "I welcome their participation."

A spokesman in Loeffler's Washington office said the money left over from the 1984 campaign has remained in campaign coffers.

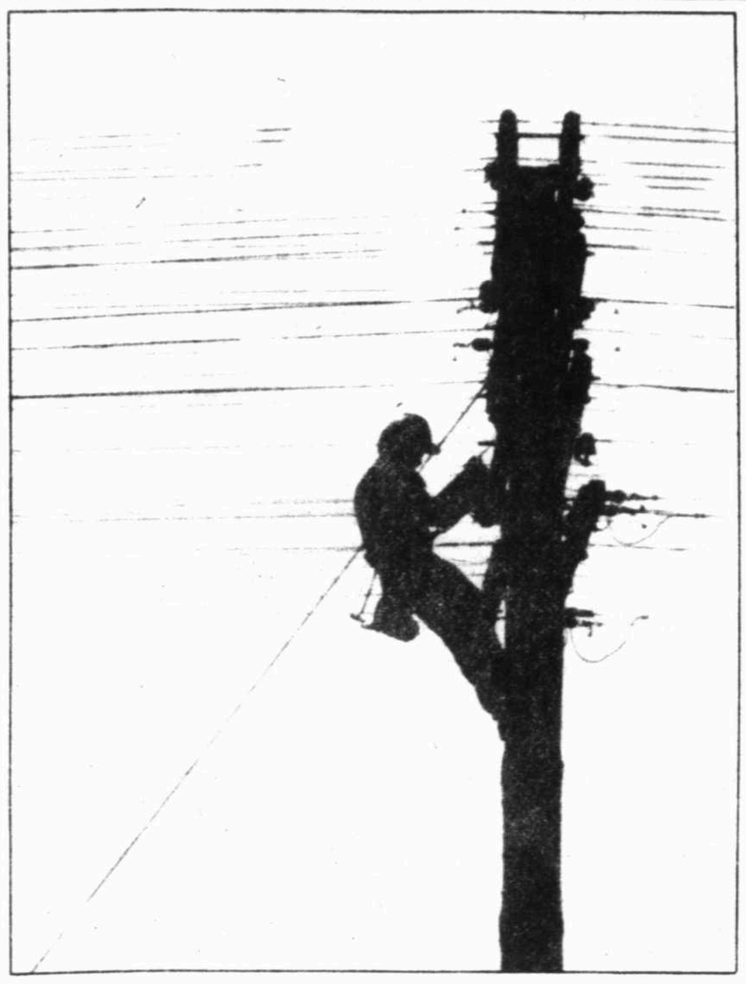

Loeffler, who represents the 21st District, is expected to announce he will run for the Republican nomination for governor.

Stern said he questions why the American Medical Association, the National Association of Home Builders and other PACs have given Loeffler money.

"He doesn't need the campaign money. He hasn't had a close race since he was elected," Stern said.

The PAC system, created in Watergate-inspired campaign finance reforms in 1974, costs consumers money, Stern said.

Special interest groups like the dairy industry or the tobacco farmers form PACs that win federal subsidies for their businesses — pushing up the prices for their products.

Refinements of no-pass, no-play rule won't include lower standards

AUSTIN (AP) — Neither weaker grade standards nor shorter suspensions will be among suggested refinements in the no-pass, no-play rule, Gov. Mark White says.

"I don't think there will be any changes along those lines, and I'm not going to suggest any," White told his weekly news conference Thursday.

Under the controversial new rules, students who fail to score a 70 percent passing mark in any course will be barred from extracurricular activities — including sports — for six weeks.

Some critics have proposed allowing students to play if they achieve an average of 70 in all courses, even while failing one of them. They also have proposed a shorter suspension, such as two weeks, from play.

But White said he doesn't like those proposals.

"We're not going to change that 70 passing (in all classes). We're not going to withdraw on that," he said.

Last week, the governor met with about two dozen high school football coaches, saying afterward, "The ball is in our court. We're not talkinig about any dramatic changes...We're talking about refinements."

White said Thursday his staff is preparing what he called "a communique" to be sent to high school officials and coaches within the next few days.

"We are still communicating with coaches and trying to work to see all the various problems that they have dealt with or dreamed up. As a result, we're going to try to address those in this response," he said.

"The major refinement is we're going to put everybody on the side of trying to get that kid to pass," the governor said.

"We're trying to help build a playbook that we can all work on and follow. That's the way the coaches get their winning teams out there and I'm going to try to help them get a winning team on the field academically as well."

White 'takes a walk' during news conference

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White took a short stroll in the middle of his news conference Thursday, concluding after the walk that reporters and television cameramen have it easier during the weekly quiz sessions than he does.

As always, White began his news conference standing at a podium in the front of his Capitol office reception room.

He introduced two new appointees to the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission, then stepped aside to allow reporters to question Ray Stoker of Odessa and Thomas Dunning of Dallas.

While they met the press, White walked away from the podium.

Taking a glass of ice water from an aide, the governor looped slowly around the large group of reporters and sauntered behind a row of a half dozen television cameras that were filming from positions near the room's rear wall.

"Governor? Oh, governor?" several reporters shouted after the highway commissioners had finished.

A grinning White emerged from the back of the room and headed toward the podium and the questions.

"Ya'll have got it easy on this side of the microphones," he laughed.

STATE in brief

Arson investigators find corrosion in plant's tank

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Arson investigators say they found evidence of corrosion and several alterations on a 3,000-pound ammonia tank that exploded at an ice plant in May, killing four and injuring 21 others.

From our own observations, the tank appears to be quite a few years old and appeared to have been altered several times," said Capt. Daniel Davila, chief of the fire department's arson squad.

The tank burst at the Southern Henke ice plant May 29, killing four workers. Most of those injured were firefighters overcome by ammonia fumes.

The blast left a 20-by-20-foot hole in an outside wall at the ice plant, near downtown San Antonio.

Sea World alters plans

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Sea World of Texas has announced it has abandoned plans to locate on U.S. 90 west of here and will look at another site closer to San Antonio proper.

The announcement Thursday marks the second time Sea World has given up on a proposed site in Bexar County.

The company, owned by Harcourt, Brace Jovanovich of Orlando, Fla., announced plans earlier this year to build a $100 million Sea World aquatic park in Bexar County.

Originally, the park was to have been located in southeast Bexar County. In April, that site was abandoned in favor of a 500-acre location in the southwest section of the county.

Sea World had been negotiating with Concord Oil Co. for the second site, but Thursday officials announced negotiations had broken down.

Board wilts under pressure

AUSTIN (AP) — Wilting under pressure from legislators who said the motto lacks macho, state highway commissioners defoliated the 1987 license plates of the proposed "Wildflower State" slogan.

The wildflower plates, OK'd by commissioners in April, also would have carried a faint outline of the state flower, bluebonnets, across the bottom.

But the floral motif was deemed too sissy by critics, among them 57 lawmakers who urged the three-man commission to abandon its earlier decision.

"I'm so tired of hearing things on license plates I'm going to spit up," Chairman Robert Lanier joked Thursday before the quick 3-0 vote in a room decorated with colorful pictures of the wildflowers.

The decision means the 1987 plates will carry only one word: "Texas."

Lanier aide Bob Neely said critics claimed the wildflower plate was too sissy a slogan for tough Texans.

'Thrill bomber' indicted

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who police say admitted to six "thrill bombing" incidents has become one of two indicted in last month's mosque bombing that did $50,000 in damages.

A federal grand jury Thursday indicted Randy James Jones, 21, and Stephen C. Ahern, 22, both of Houston, in connection with the bombing of the Daar US Salaam mosque on June 22.

Tall City Yacht Club sails to benefit of MARC

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Yachts are the symbol of the obscenely wealthy.

These graceful boats, some with solid oak panelling, gourmet cuisine and palatial accomodations, are part of a lifestyle out of reach for the average person.

Exactly nothing.

Which is why members of one of Midland's newest social organizations christened themselves the Tall City Yacht Club.

This group of young, conservative Midland professional men — including oil men, stock brokers and engineers — began as a group of friends who enjoyed each others' company.

"We started out as an informal supper group," said Kip Hyde, treasurer of the group. "A lot of us knew each other in college."

The original gathering of about 12 friends met once each month in different restaurants.

"Currently there are about 40 members," Hyde said. "Because it grew we decided to make it a formal arrangement."

Even though the Permian Basin has been blessed with some of the world's finest "beaches," a drive to the ocean can take about two days. So what does a yacht club do in Midland?

The Tall City Yacht Club gives parties.

But belonging to a social-only organization is not always enough. Like many other Midlanders, club members wanted to devote some of their time and talent to the community. Because members are expert party-givers, they chose to throw a party for Midland.

But not just an ordinary party — this one was a fund-raiser for Midland Association of Retarded Citizens.

And what a party it was.

Doug Clark and the Hot Nuts, a band which has been legendary on the southern college circuit for about 30 years, entertained hundreds of party-goers recently at the National Guard Armory.

The 1980s generation grooved to the memories of the 1960s as the Hot Nuts performed such "golden oldies" as "Under the Boardwalk" and "Stagger Lee."

Other, more recent, hits — including Culture Club's "Miss Me" — provided an irresistible toe-tapping beat to the gathering.

Club members were pleased to be able to give a benefit for MARC because it is "a local organization. They do not receive United Way funds — they subsist mostly on local contributions" and because MARC, for the most part, serves only Midland citizens, Hyde said.

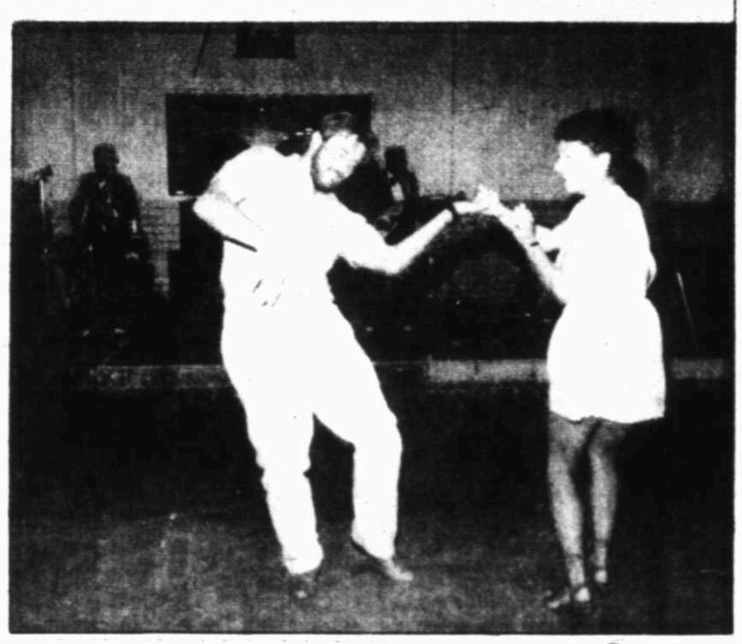

The yacht club hoped to raise between $10,000 and $15,000 for MARC, he said.

"This is our first one (benefit)," said Hyde. "Hopefully it will grow." Suggestions for subsequent benefits have ranged from having other parties to canoe races for children.

But whatever form the gatherings take, the club is determined to demonstrate its commitment to Midland by giving a yearly fund-raising event. "More than anything, we're going to make this our first annual," and "with the support of the community" the club will be able to reach its goal.

After all, if you're going to have a party, why not make it for a worthy cause?

Real Yuppies dread being classified with 'Y-word'

Hearst News Service

There seems to be one thing that people in their late 20s and early 30s can agree on: Nobody want to be labeled what Garry Trudeau's Doonesbury calls "the dreaded Y-word."

The pervasive dread that precedes the world "yuppie" exists for a number of legitimate reasons. First of all, it is a silly-sounding word. Secondly, some of the blame can be heaped on journalists for having a field day with the cutesy term, from captions such as "Yup with sushi," to New York magazine's trumpeted cover line, "The Yupper West Side." And finally, there is Jerry Rubin, the yippie turned yuppie who inspired the word in the first place.

If there are humans who really fit the fast track, money, status, careerist, selfish, materialistic stereotype, let's hurl the Y-word at them. But every baby boomer who has ever driven out of his or her way to get fresh pasta or has quaffed Perrier instead of club soda hasn't necessarily forsaken the spirituality that came out of the '60s, and needn't accept the label.

Syndicated columnist Bob Greene is generally given credit for using "yuppie" in print for the first time.

"You could say I popularized the term," says Greene, who heard it used in a Chicago bar by someone who was talking about former yippie leader Jerry Rubin. He was saying that, now that Rubin, a stockbroker, is staging "networking parties" for young professionals, he could become head of the yuppies instead of the yippies.

"The word has become a put-down," says Greene. "It's always used in a disparaging tone. I don't think anyone would admit to being a yuppie. I don't think many people would admit to being that materialistic."

Jerry Rubin, however, is one who does.

"I consider myself a yuppie," he says. "I can't think of a better word to use instead of that one. However, I want to dissociate myself from the connotations the media put on the word. They do such an embarrassing job of bashing the word yuppie. The connotations are wrong — that a yuppie is soulless, heartless and concerned only with their own lifestyle. I consider a yuppie to be somebody who works hard and achieves, someone who is interested in self-improvement. There is a certain segment of yuppies who are materialistic. But they're no different from Republicans."

Rubin says that yuppies didn't vote for Reagan, rather, they voted against Mondale.

"They no doubt would have voted for Gary Hart if they could have," he says. Rubin himself voted for Mondale. "Hart was the link between entrepreneurial success and social concern."

While Hart acknowledged at the time that yuppies, or yumpies as they were sometimes referred to — "young upwardly mobile professionals" — were the base of his support, these days he's not so crazy about the word.

"He objects flatly to labels," says a spokesman for Hart. "And he doesn't appreciate the fact that people who supported his campaign have been labeled 'materialistic' and are not given credit for having been politically awakened. He doesn't use the word."

But while Rubin claims that yuppies aren't materialistic, he admits that, "Yuppies are interested in accumulation." But he says, "That is so they can then have the power to do something for others. You can be successful and still be moral."

Washington agency makes reservations

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

When out-of-town friends or business associates want the name of a good hotel in Washington or its suburbs, they might consider calling Capitol Reservations, a new local hotel reservations service.

The firm's founder is Thom Hall, an aide to Sen. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio from 1977 until January of this year. Hall says he can book callers into more than 50 Washington-area hotels, often at a price cheaper than individuals could get by calling the hotel directly.

Hall saw a need for the service while he was on Capitol Hill. Constituents frequently write or phone congressional offices for advice on where to stay while visiting Washington, he says. He personally discovered the convenience of a central reservation office while traveling in Europe two years ago. Most airports and railway stations in major European cities have hotel booking services.

For information or reservations: Capitol Reservations, 1201 K St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20005, (202) 842-4187 or (800) VISIT-DC.

Hall's is at least the second hotel reservation service available to Washington visitors. The other, formed in the past year, is the D.C. Central Reservation Center, (800) 554-2220 or (202) 289-2220. It offers a choice of about 30 Washington-area hotels.

DEAR ABBY

Brother, sister differ over request for family keepsake

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently passed away. A cousin who was especially close to her since childhood asked if he might have some kind of memento as a keepsake. His request astonished and offended my brother. I said I thought the request was in good taste and reflected the love and closeness our cousin felt for our mother. Such gifts have been offered to me, in two instances, and I was deeply appreciative of them.

My husband's favorite brother died many miles from us, and his widow sent no keepsake to my husband. My husband wouldn't presume to ask for anything, but I know he was both saddened and hurt by the oversight.

What is your opinion about the practice of giving such keepsakes, and of relatives and close friends requesting same? — NEVER WRITTEN BEFORE

DEAR NEVER WRITTEN: Grieving people have their minds on other things and should not be faulted should they overlook the giving of keepsakes to close friends and relatives.

Most people would rather do without than ask for one, but I think to make such a request is a compliment to the deceased — unless, of course, one asks to be "remembered" with the loved one's valuable stamp collection or diamond brooch.

DEAR ABBY: Last Sunday I prepared an especially good company dinner and invited my mother-in-law. After dinner, my husband and three sons helped clear the table, while my mother-in-law went right to the living room and sat down. She's a young 60 and could have offered to do something, but she didn't.

I'm the type that doesn't like to put things off, so I just dug right in and cleaned up the kitchen myself.

Three times, I heard my mother-in-law say to my husband, "What's taking her so long?"

It took me an hour and a half to straighten up, and just as I was finishing, she came in the kitchen to say she was leaving.

I said, "Can't you stay a while so we can visit?"

She said, "No, I'm tired. And by the way, don't you have a dishwasher?"

I do, Abby, but the dishes have to be scraped, all the edibles put away, floor mopped, etc.

Anyway, she left and I really was hurt. Was I wrong to clean up my kitchen first? I can't relax knowing I will have to do it later. How would you have handled it, Abby? — HURT

DEAR HURT: I would have put away the edibles, joined my guests in the living room and cleaned up my kitchen later.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I want a big church wedding, but we can't afford one, and it would take us four years to save the money, so we have come up with this idea.

We would like to have a Dutch-treat wedding. We could charge $32.60 a couple or $16.30 a person to cover food, drinks and a portion of the other expenses, like the hall, the music, flowers, table decorations, wedding cake, etc.

I am 18 and so is my boyfriend. We are both virgins and want to stay that way until we're married.

I don't know how much longer we can wait, Abby.

Don't you think a lot of folks would pay $32.60 a couple toward getting two good Christians married?

Thank you for any advice you can give us. — IN LOVE IN W. VA.

DEAR IN LOVE: You'll never know until you ask. Poll your friends and you'll have your answer.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Plagues, bad luck sting California agriculture

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Poisoned cheese, tainted watermelons, apple maggots, Japanese beetles, gypsy moths, Mexican fruit flies, fumigant-laced soil and now, exasperatingly, killer bees.

It's been a tough year in California.

"When it rains, it pours," state Agriculture Director Clare Berryhill said Thursday following the discovery of the first U.S. swarm of "killer bees" in a lonely oil field about 150 miles north of Los Angeles.

"I've got to be the most unlucky man in the world."

The Africanized bees, which may have come into the country from Latin America on oil equipment, were found four miles from Interstate 5, California's busiest north-south artery.

Many of the bees were killed by an oil worker, who sealed their hole after they swarmed from the ground and attacked a rabbit. But investigators fear some of the insects — possibly two reproductive queens with accompanying swarms — may have escaped.

The find marks the latest in a string of public health hazards that has plagued California in recent months, ranging from crop-eating pests to a deadly food bacteria — not to mention the worst fire season in California history, in which some 400,000 acres have been charred.

Three weeks ago, authorities ordered a recall of California-grown watermelons and the destruction of tons of fruit after hundreds of people in five Western states became ill from the pesticide aldicarb in some melons.

Watermelons returned to store shelves a week later after Berryhill's agents hurriedly conducted a massive statewide inspection effort, labeling each safe melon with a green-and-white "Passed California Agriculture" sticker.

In June, health officials linked an outbreak of an illness called listeriosis to bacteria found in Mexican-style soft cheeses manufactured by Jalisco Mexican Products Inc. of Artesia.

A related strain — not known to be disease-causing in humans — forced the recall this month of most products of Cacique Cheese Co. of City of Industry.

At least 81 deaths or stillbirths in California and four in other states have been linked to listeriosis. Los Angeles District Attorney Ira Reiner has begun a criminal investigation of the Jalisco case.

Meanwhile, authorities have confronted threats from crop-eating and tree-munching pests. Gypsy moths, which gnaw tree leaves, were discovered in at least a half-dozen Northern California counties.

"It's the most voracious and destructive pest of trees in the United States," said Gera Curry, a spokeswoman for the Agriculture Department. By the end of March, the outbreak was largely eliminated.

The Japanese beetle, a hardy bug with a taste for shrubbery and crops, has been the target of a vigorous — and apparently successful — eradication effort in the Sacramento suburb of Orangevale.

"The beetle is about the only bright spot now," Berryhill said. "Our prople have been on that program for three years.

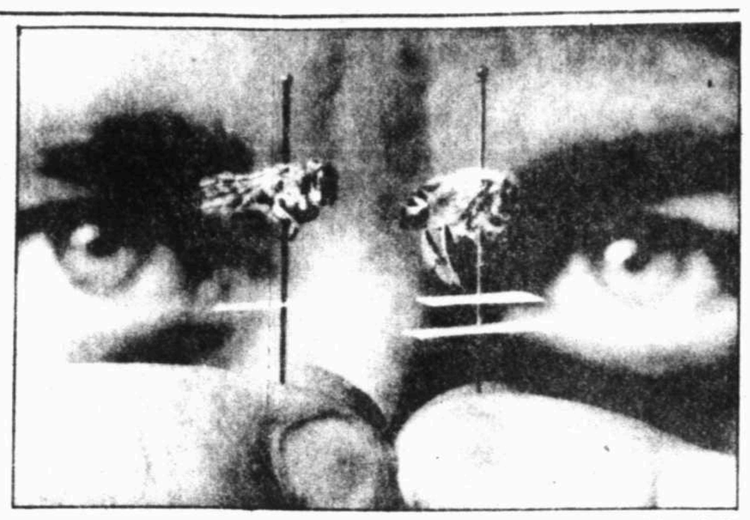

"We pulled them off yesterday and we threw a party for them last night — had some hors d'oeuvres and a few drinks."

Last month, the state banned the import of Mexican mangoes after Mexican fruit fly larvae were discovered in fruit in Sutter and Orange counties. In 1983-84, it cost $2.7 million and five months to eradicate the fruit flies in a 62-square-mile area of Los Angeles County.

A killer bee, left, and a regular bee, right, are examined by Dr. David Kavenaugh, director of research for entomology for the San Francisco California Academy of Science, Thursday.

Swarming inspectors seek 'killer bees'

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Airplanes and earth-moving equipment were dispatched to hunt for "killer bee" infestations as state inspectors fanned out to examine more than 2,000 commercial hives for African bees that apparently swarmed from a mammoth nest.

The search for the bees widened Thursday after scientists determined that the first known U.S. colony of the bees had been in a Southern California oilfield for at least a year and probably had two queens.

"We'll have to intensify the search and work our way out" from the discovery site at Lost Hills, about 150 miles north of Los Angeles, said state Agriculture Director Clare Berryhill.

The bees, blamed for the deaths of animals and people in other countries, were discovered in June by an oilfield worker who tried to seal the hole with asphalt after the bees swarmed from the ground and attacked a rabbit.

Authorities are scouring a 400-square-mile area surrounding the site and have ordered commercial or hobbyist beekeepers not to move any of the more than 2,000 hives in the area. They will take 50 sample bees from each colony to see if any are African.

The African honeybees are popularly called "killer bees" because they are more aggressive and prone to sting than the average bee, although they are almost identical in appearance. They are descended from 26 African swarms that escaped in Brazil in the 1950s, and their spread north has inspired several Hollywood horror movies.

Scientists say the bee's sting is no more toxic than that of domestic bees, but because they are more excitable, a slight disturbance can cause an entire swarm to chase and sting any people or animals within 300 feet.

Norman Gary, an entomologist from the University of California at Davis, dug Thursday into the burrow and found a nest of 20 honeycombs 5½ feet long, a foot high and a foot wide. The nest was so large it probably had been there a year or longer, Gary said.

He also found a queen cell from which a reproductive queen had emerged recently. Experts theorize that the newly hatched queen left with a swarm of bees a few weeks before the burrow was discovered and that the rest of the swarm fled after the worker tried to cover the burrow.

"We're pretty well convinced that we have two queens and their colonies out there and possibly more," Berryhill said late Thursday.

Searchers are using airplanes and earth-moving equipment to look for infestations.

Only 50 bees, none of them queens, were found in the burrow, which was doused with pesticide June 26. An African colony would have 5,000 to 10,000 bees.

There are about 600,000 commercial hives in California, worth up to $100 each. Farmers in the agriculture-rich valley rely on bees to pollinate crops such as almonds, melons, plums and seed alfalfa.

The African bees, if they displaced European honeybees, would not pollinate as many crops, would be difficult and expensive for beekeepers to handle and would carry parasites, said Kern County Agriculture Commissioner Bob Edwards.

Autistic man's death after treatment raises questions

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The death of an autistic 22-year-old man who passed out after being shackled and forced to listen to "white noise" has renewed the controvery over a type of aversion treatment for behavior disorders.

Vincent Milletich, who lived in a group home in Attleboro, Mass., may be the first person ever to die from the controversial therapy, said the American Society for Children and Adults with Autism.

Authorities say Milletich's death Tuesday has not positively been linked to the "white-noise visual screen" treatment. He became unconscious while being treated at a Seekonk, Mass., group home operated by the private Behavior Research Institute.

A preliminary investigation found that "at this time, there is no indication of any inappropriate action by the staff," according to Michael Coughlin of the Massachusetts Office for Children, which licenses BRI's homes.

Autism is a form of childhood schizophrenia characterized by acting out and withdrawal from reality. Symptoms can include bizarre, self-destructive and animalistic behavior in otherwise normal-appearing children — victims have been known to spend hours in repetitive activities such as flushing a toilet.

During the aversion procedure, a patient is helmeted, shackled hand-and-foot, and forced to listen to static through earphones, Coughlin said Thursday.

The therapy is "controversial and frequently misunderstood," said Donna Cone, assistant director for program standards at the state Department of Mental Health. "But I think they've got a very fine program."

She said the institute uses a system to reward positive behavior, including special privileges and physical affection.

Kathryn Gendron, director of student services at BRI, said the duration of the therapy would have depended on Milletich's needs. She said the static treatment is one of about a dozen forms of aversive therapy the center uses.

Why Milletich was given the therapy could not immediately be learned. Psychologist Matthew L. Israel, the institute director, declined comment.

The autism society neither endorses nor condemns treatment programs, but spokesman Ken Laureys said, "The professional field is nearly unanimous with a few exceptions — namely Dr. Israel — in its avoidance of aversive (treatments) and its reliance on positive methods of reinforcement."

NATION IN BRIEF

Grain production won't be controlled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee killed a proposed farmer referendum on strict wheat and corn production controls out of concern that such a move could forever ruin U.S. prospects for recovering lost export sales.

The panel voted 24-17 late Thursday to ditch the referendum idea following hours of sometimes bitter debate over the best way to bolster the income of American farmers. Proponents said limiting output would boost prices, but opponents argued the move would only shut the United States out of overseas markets.

"What makes us for a moment think that we can set the (world) price of wheat for more than a brief period?" asked Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, who led the move to kill the referendum, a politically popular idea in grain states.

'Cop-killers' banned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously approved a bill on Thursday that would ban most sales of armor-piercing, "cop-killer" bullets in this country, and sent it to the full Senate.

Legislation to ban the bullets failed in both the House and Senate last year in the face of opposition from the National Rifle Association. This year, the NRA has remained neutral on the bill.

Law enforcement officials have lobbied for a ban on armor-piercing bullets, since they are capable of penetrating the bullet-proof vests that many police officers while on duty.

The proposed law would ban all commercial sales and transfers of the bullets in the United States, except for sales to government agencies. Manufacture of the bullets would be allowed for export sales.

'Pink Floyd' relevant

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A high school teacher fired for showing the rock movie "Pink Floyd — The Wall" in class says a judge's order she be reinstated comes as no surprise despite a year-long battle to get her job back.

"There was never any doubt in my mind that I was right," Jacqueline Fowler, 36, a three-time Teacher of the Year at Lincoln County High School, said adding she planned to return to teaching Latin and civics.

U.S. District Judge Scott Reed ruled Thursday that the Lincoln County school board violated Mrs. Fowler's First Amendment right to freedom of expression when it dismissed her in July 1984 for showing the R-rated movie.

Reed said the movie contained "important social and political messages and values relevant to young people."

McKoys 'were wrong'

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A woman who won a $1,503 award in a discrimination suit against a rural Virginia restaurant says she made her point that Belvoir Restaurant owners Roy and Patricia McKoy "were wrong and they've got to stop" turning away blacks.

A lawyer for the McKoys called the award "a slap on the wrist," but said he hoped the verdict in federal court Thursday would end the 18-year discrimination battle at the restaurant in Marshall, Va., 50 miles southwest of Washington, D.C.

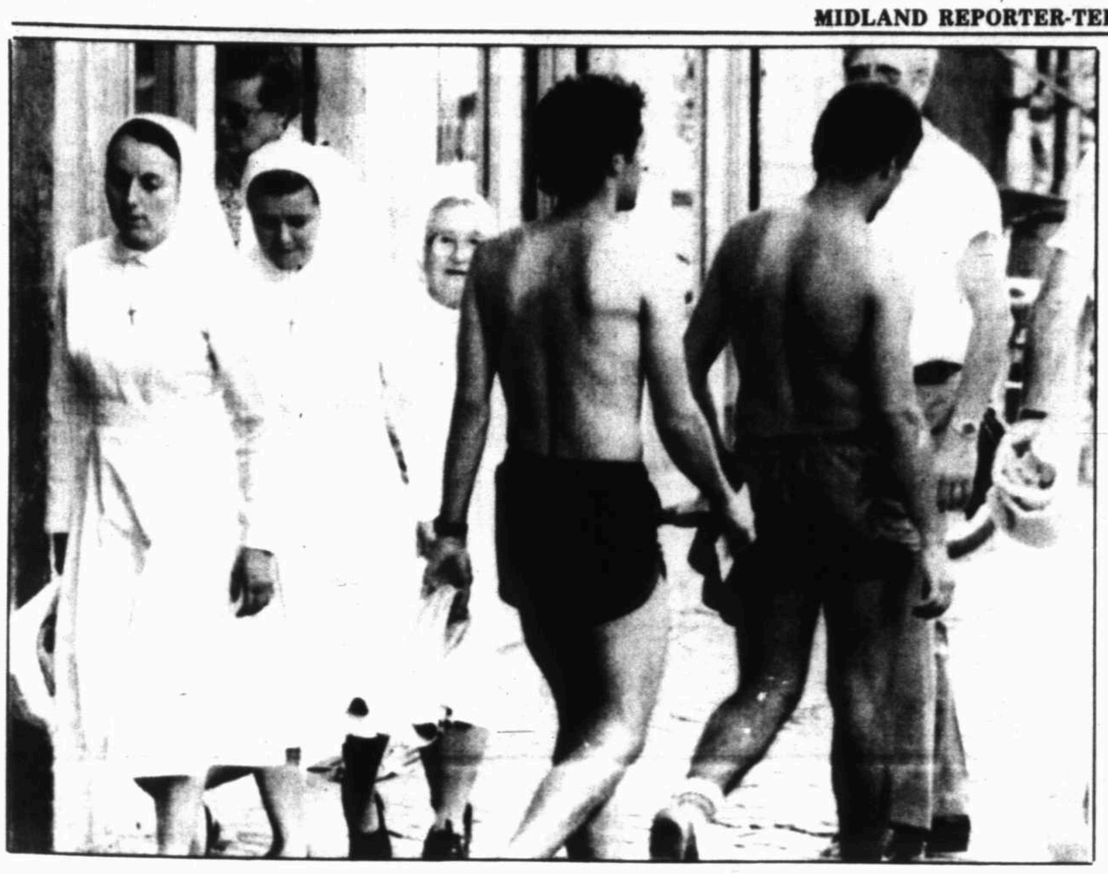

"We hope it lays to rest everything to do with the Belvoir," defense attorney William Beeton said.

The U.S. District Court jury in Alexandria deliberated for five hours Thursday before finding the McKoys had turned away Lori Jackson and two of her daughters on Dec. 7, 1984, because the women are black.

The all-white jury of two women and four men rejected compensatory damages, but ordered the McKoys to pay $1 in nominal damages and $500 in punitive damages to each of the women.

The restaurant has been under a federal order to serve blacks since 1967. Roy McKoy, 61, twice has been sentenced to short jail terms for violating the order. He has also been under order since 1974 to display a sign saying blacks would be served.

U.N. vote on sanctions against South Africa anticipated today

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — African delegates sought a statement condemning President Reagan's policy toward South Africa today in a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for voluntary sanctions against that nation for its racial policies, diplomats said.

The United States and Britain earlier expressed reservations about the proposal for sanctions, introduced by France and Denmark on Thursday.

A vote on the draft resolution was expected later today.

The council adjourned and decided to reconvene later in the day after Claude de Kemoularia, the French ambassador, negotiated privately with African representatives into the early morning hours.

The resolution condemns apartheid, South Africa's official policy of race segregation, and demands an end to the state of emergency proclaimed Sunday in 36 South African cities and towns. The measure denounces the recent arrests of hundreds of blacks under the emergency decree.

The draft urges U.N. members to impose sanctions against South Africa, and suggested five possibilities — suspend new investment in South Africa, halt imports of South African Kruggerands and other gold coins, end guaranteed export loans, end new contracts in the nuclear field, and end sales of computer equipment that could be used by the police or the army.

The measure also calls for the unconditional release of all political prisoners held in South Africa, including Nelson Mandela, the leader of the outlawed African National Congress. The South African government has offered to free political prisoners if they renounce violence.

According to diplomats who spoke on condition they not be identified, the African delegates attempted to include in the resolution an article condemning the U.S. policy of "constructive engagement" with South Africa, and a warning that the United Nations would use force to compel South Africa to give up apartheid.

Diplomatic sources said those elements would draw a veto from the United States and Britain.

Ambassador Guennadi Oudevenko of the Ukraine, the Security Council's president for July, suggested that the parties continue consultations this morning before the council meeting.

Kemoularia told the Security Council the international community expects an effective and realistic reaction to the suffering in South Africa.

Kurt Von Schirnding, South Africa's ambassador, said the internal situation in his country is not a matter for discussion in the council, and nothing it may say or plan will deter his government from doing "what we believe is in the best interests of all the peoples of South Africa."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Caribbean city shut by protest barricade

POINTE-A-PITRE, Guadeloupe (AP) — The largest city and commercial hub of this French Caribbean island was sealed off by old cars, tree limbs, rocks and signboards today — the fourth day of protests backing an independence advocate on a hunger strike in a Paris jail.

At least 10 people received minor injuries in the first three days of protests, most of them hurt by rocks thrown by protesters.

The demonstrators rejected government calls Wednesday for an end to the protests, and government officials refused to comment on the situation Thursday.

The protesters called for the release of Georges Faisan, a native of Guadeloupe and strong supporter of independence. He reportedly has been on a hunger strike in prison since June 3.

Japan to rally army

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Ground-Self Defense Force plans to mobilize some 140,000 personnel next month in its first large-scale army field exercise since World War II, the Defense Agency announced today.

The forces will field about 90 percent of Japan's army at command posts and training grounds for three weeks beginning Aug. 25, said the defense force spokesman, Mitsuo Sakudo.

Chief of Staff Morio Nakamura said the three-week exercises would help improve the coordination of the five major army divisions across Japan, according to Sakudo.

Barbie trial slated

LYON, France (AP) — The trial of Nazi Klaus Barbie will be held before the end of the year, the Lyon Public Prosecutor's office said.

Barbie, called the "Butcher of Lyon" for his World War II Gestapo activities, was seized by French authorities in French Guyana in February 1983.

He was accused of being responsible for the deaths of thousands of French Jews and resistance workers in France.

Investigating Magistrate Christian Riss has built cases based on three incidents called "crimes against humanity" — the roundups of Jews at the headquarters of the Union of French Jews and at a holiday home at Izieu, and the organization of the last trainload of prisoners sent to concentration camps from Lyon in 1944.

Soviet foreign minister Shevardnadze to join international circle in Helsinki

Shevardnadze

MOSCOW (AP) — An international meeting in Helsinki next week offers a chance for the new Soviet foreign minister to meet his colleagues, lay the foundation for November's U.S.-Soviet summit and restate Kremlin claims that the West has ruined detente.

The meeting commemorating the 10th anniversary of the Helsinki accords will draw foreign ministers of the 35 nations that signed the concluding document, including the new Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

The gathering will be the first venture abroad for the 57-year-old Georgian since he was appointed July 2 to replace Andrei A. Gromyko, the Kremlin's envoy to such events for nearly three decades.

Gromyko, 76, was appointed to the largely ceremonial post of Soviet president.

Shevardnadze has little foreign policy experience. However, a Western diplomat who met with him during the past week said the new Soviet statesman was well briefed on international affairs.

In addition, the diplomat said, the new foreign minister's personal style differs from Gromyko's in that Shevardnadze "is not given to sort of sitting there making speeches."

The diplomat, briefing U.S. reporters on condition he not be further identified, declined to discuss the substance of his talks with Shevardnadze, adding it was too early to make broad comparisons between the current and former Soviet foreign ministers.

Foreign ministers from 33 European countries, the United States and Canada begin arriving in the Finnish capital early next week for the Aug. 1 anniversary and various bilateral meetings, including the first between Shevardnadze and U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz.

Neither U.S. nor Soviet officials have said what the Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting might accomplish, but they have noted that it provides a good opportunity to work out an informal agenda for the Nov. 19-20 meeting in Geneva between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Vladimir Lomeiko said last week that the Helsinki meeting would "of course" include discussions on the major issues separating the United States and the Soviet Union, especially arms control matters.

Bilateral meetings like the one between Shultz and Shevardnadze are expected to draw more attention than the anniversary celebrations themselves, although the occasion has given the Soviet press a new chance to state its opposition to U.S. and NATO policies.

A stream of media commentaries and press briefings over the past week has outlined a familiar Soviet theme that missile deployments in Western Europe have undermined the doctrine of peaceful coexistence the Soviets say was embodied in the final act of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Reagan promises to plant $8 million into farm programs

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says it is willing to add some $8 billion to farm spending over the next three years to help offset a bleak agricultural outlook, but senators are finding it hard to fit their new farm bill into even the liberalized spending limits.

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan met with several farm-state Republican senators this week, including Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, and emerged with words of sympathy and promises of help.

"Let's face it, this is one of the most serious problems facing the country," Regan told reporters. "We also know the problem is getting worse," and that is confounding efforts to rein in the cost of new farm programs.

"We're very sympathetic to the plight of the farmer, and what we're trying to do is to see how much and how far we can be helpful to them," he said. "We have spent quite a few billions of dollars over the past few years, we hope to get some more over the next three."

Exact numbers were hard to come by, but Dole and Agriculture Department officials generally agreed that senators could add roughly $8 billion to the $20.5 billion initially earmarked by the Senate for major crop subsidies over the next three years.

A package of commodity programs now being drafted by the Senate Agriculture Committee is estimated to cost about $35 billion over the next three years, well in excess of even the more generous new administration offer.

Agriculture Secretary John Block said while that package achieves an important goal of the administration — lowering price-support levels to allow U.S. goods to compete more freely in export markets — its high price tag for maintaining farm income is still a worry at a time when federal deficits are soaring.

Block met later with Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., who with Dole is sponsoring the farm legislation, and asked him to cut some $7 billion from his proposal by cutting farm income subsidies by 5 percent and making other adjustments. Zorinsky said he told Block, "No way."

The Senate committee is charged in its budget blueprint with saving $5.5 billion over the period 1986-88 on commodity subsidies. But slumping exports and anticipated price-depressing bumper grain crops are pushing up the cost of maintaining current levels of those subsidies.

Don't toss those grass clippings; make them pay off with compost

By EARNEST C. KIKER

Instead of throwing away grass clippings when you mow your lawn, put them to use in a compost pile. Compost is a good source of organic matter for gardens and flower beds. Furthermore, composting is an excellent way to dispose of garden debris, leaves and similar plant material.

Make the compost pile 4 to 6 feet wide and any length, depending on material and space available.

The simplest composting method is to alternate 4-inch to 6-inch layers of plant matter, such as leaves or grass, with 2 to 4 inches of good garden soil. Add manure to the soil layer if it's available, and sprinkle commercial fertilizer on each layer of plant matter to hasten decompostiion. Use a cupful of fertilizer with a 1-1-1 ratio per 10 square feet.

The top layer of the compost pile should be soil and the surface should form a basin to hold water. Water each layer of organic matter before adding the soil layer.

Water the pile thoroughly when completed. Add water as needed to keep the material moist, but not soggy. Leaves decompose slowly if too dry.

Turn the compost every three to four months to aerate the material and speed decomposition. Within six months to a year, your compost will be ready to use and you'll be glad you saved those grass clippings.

The Madagascar periwinkle is one of the most colorful and reliable summer flowering plants for hot Texas conditions. The periwinkle is a shrubby plant that produces white, pink or lavender phlox-like flowers. Common varieties grow from 18 to 20 inches tall.

Periwinkles should be planted in full sun or partial shade in well-drained soils with liberal amounts of organic matter. Fertilizer should be added to the bed before planting and applied additionally throughout the growing season.

Periwinkles are not susceptible to many pests or diseases, and will provide color throughout the hot summer when many other plants need special care to survive. If cared for properly, periwinkles should continue to flower until frost.

Dwarf varieties can be used for edgings for flower and shrub borders. Some of the best varieties of the dwarf or compact types include Coquette and Little Pinkie, which have rosy pink flowers, and Bright Eyes, which has white flowers with red centers. Little Linda is a new variety which has lavender flowers.

Spreading varieties are good for ground cover and in hanging baskets and window boxes. Two of the best spreading varieties, are Polka Dot, which has a white flower with a red center, and Rose Carpet, which has a rose flower with a deep red center.

Transformation of virgin land erratic; Soviet Union still far from self-sufficient

TSELINOGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Three decades after Nikita Khrushchev dispatched workers to transform Kazakhstan's "virgin lands" into the Soviet wheatbasket, drought, erosion and a manpower shortage continue to slow the march toward self-sufficiency in growing grain.

The 1953 campaign that brought short-term glory, then eventual scorn for the volatile Soviet leader has made a measurable contribution to grain production and development of the vast Kazakh steppe in central Asia.

However, Soviet output of bread grains has been erratic and even in the best years has fallen short of national needs, forcing Moscow to import huge quantities of grain.

Wind erosion and loss of topsoil nutrients caused by poor crop rotation have hurt per-acre yield in Kazakhstan since the late 1950s, after the initial boom in the virgin lands.

Farmers and researchers today still criticize Khrushchev's all-out effort to boost grain production by planting every available acre in the virgin lands without regard for soil conservation.

Like the Dust Bowl-era of the 1930s in the United States, Kazakhstan suffered serious topsoil losses in the late 1950s; farmers in the central Asian republic have been battling to replenish it ever since.

Sub-surface tillage, which leaves much of the uppermost soil layer in place while preparing the ground for seeding, gained popularity after Khrushchev was ousted in 1964 and has done much to preserve topsoil, said Alexander Barayev, head of the National Grain Research Institute and a prominent agricultural researcher for nearly 50 years.

Barayev and other researchers advocated soil conservation during Khrushchev's campaign to open the "tselina" — the virgin lands. But Khrushchev pressed for massive plantings, and the country had record grain harvests in the late 1950s. Production in Kazakhstan alone was up by nearly 50 percent from five years earlier.

"Khrushchev had the ability to convince the country to undertake a project it was not fully ready for," Barayev said.

The effects of soil erosion and failure to rotate crops began showing over the next few years; by 1962, the republic's grain yield dropped significantly.

Despite soil conservation practiced in the past two decades, the virgin lands have not produced grain on the scale envisioned by Khrushchev. But the program provided an important impetus to Soviet agricultural expansion at a time when the nation was growing quickly, according to Western analysts.

Kazakhstan accounted for only about 2 to 5 percent of Soviet grains in the years before 1953. The republic's share jumped to as much as 18 percent during the late 1950s, then dropped to an average of 10 to 12 percent, which it maintains today.

Severe drought in the grain-growing region of the country was blamed for last year's poor harvest. Kazakhstan harvested 17.5 million tons, compared to a target of 27.5 million, and the nationwide harvest of 170 million tons was nearly 60 million tons below the target figure.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev noted in a speech in June that weather is not the sole culprit in poor harvests. He has called for more efficient use of farmlands and broader introduction of technology.

This winter's heavy snowfall delayed spring planting until May 25. Although there were average rainfalls in May and June, a recent dry spell worried Kazakhstan farmers about the fate of this year's crop and the chances of meeting their goal of 28 million tons.

The monthlong drought prompted the U.S. Department of Agriculture to lower its forecast in July for 1985 Soviet grain production from 195 million tons to 190 million. About the time of the revised forecast, however, rain fell over the Tselinograd region.

The Soviet Union's grain imports from all foreign sources are expected to reach 37 million tons, the Agriculture Department said in June. Although that figure would be well below the record of 55 million tons imported in 1984-1985, it would still rank as the third-largest in Soviet history.

In their campaign to boost production and lower the need for costly grain imports, Kazakhstan's farmers and Moscow's planners apparently are deciding in favor of the familiar Soviet bigger-is-better theory of farming.

PARIS (AP) — From his Paris hospital bed, film and television star Rock Hudson decided to go public with the news that he is suffering from the usually deadly disease AIDS, says his spokeswoman.

Yanou Collart, who also is a personal friend of Hudson, said Thursday that he had been diagnosed more than a year ago as having AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Doctors at the American Hospital of Paris also have discovered liver abnormalities that have not yet been diagnosed, she said.

Hudson's publicist said in Beverly Hills on Thursday that the movie star was feeling better. "He's lucid. He's talking. He's joking...He's feeling much better and is in quite good spirits," said Dale Olson.

The 59-year-old Hudson's imposing stature, strong presence and good looks made him a natural choice to star opposite some of Hollywood's leading ladies in an acting career that began in 1948 and included more than 50 epics, dramas, Westerns and comedies.

"He decided to make it public," Miss Collart told The Associated Press. "I think what he did today shows what kind of person he is." Miss Collart said Hudson reviewed a statement on his condition with her in his hospital room before she read it to reporters.

The disease is most likely to afflict homosexuals, abusers of injectable drugs and hemophiliacs. It apparently is spread by sexual contact, contaminated needles and blood transfusions, but not by casual contact.

AIDS is an affliction in which the body's immune system becomes unable to resist disease. AIDS can go into remission, but there is no known cure.

AP Laserphoto

Yanou Collart, a friend of Rock Hudson, announces in Paris that the actor has AIDS and was treated at American Hospital for an undetrmined liver ailment.

Asked if Hudson knew how he contracted the disease, Miss Collart said, "He doesn't have any idea of how he contracted AIDS. Nobody around him has AIDS."

Dr. Willy Rozembaum of Paris' La Pitie-Salpetriere Hospital said earlier this week that the mortality rate for AIDS is 84 percent, but that "we have many sick with AIDS and who have been in total remission for three years."

However, a spokesman for the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., Charles Fallis, said: "We know of no patient who has regained the total strength of their depleted immune system. We've observed that AIDS is almost always fatal."

The victim's immune system is further weakened with each new infection "to the point where they eventually die," Fallis said.

The American Hospital was unaware of the AIDS diagnosis when it began testing Hudson, but found "abnormalities in the liver...either suspected to be caused by an infectious problem or were consistent with metastatic liver disease," or cancer, according to Miss Collart's statement. She said a biopsy would be conducted when Hudson was stronger.

Hudson came to Paris to consult with an AIDS specialist, Miss Collart's statement said.

American experts said Thursday that some Americans have gone to France recently for treatment with the drug HP 23 at the Pasteur Institute in Paris. Dr. Samuel Broder, chief of the clinical oncology program of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., said several drugs — including the French drug — can reduce the amount of AIDS virus in the bloodstream of patients but cannot consistently improve their health.

HPA 23 is not yet available for human tests in the United States, Broder said.

Miss Collart said Hudson received hundreds of telegrams and phone calls from well-wishers on Thursday. "Mr. Hudson doesn't have any family alive. Thank God he has a lot of friends," she said.

The American Hospital refused all comment on Miss Collart's statement, as did Hudson's Los Angeles physician, Jeffrey Helfinstein.

After making the statement Thursday afternoon, Miss Collart originally said Hudson had been cured of AIDS. Later she said there had been a misinterpretation, and added: "Mr. Hudson has AIDS."

Doctors: French drug no better than U.S.'

NEW YORK (AP) — American doctors say an experimental AIDS drug being tested in France is no better than drugs under investigation in the United States, even though many American AIDS patients have gone to France for treatment.

On Thursday, Rock Hudson's Beverly Hills, Calif. doctor, Rexford Kennamer, said Hudson had seen doctors at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, which has been treating American AIDS victims.

Ron Najman, spokesman for the National Gay Task Force in New York, said that at least 15 Americans are being treated for AIDS at the Pasteur Institute, and that many other Americans have gone there for treatment and returned.

Dr. Samuel Broder, chief of the clinical oncology program of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., said Thursday that two drugs — including the French drug — can reduce the amount of AIDS virus in the bloodstream of patients but cannot consistently improve patients' health.

Broder, a specialist on experimental AIDS treatments, said he was not familiar with Hudson's case and couldn't comment on it.

Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md., said the French drug, HPA 23, may have more dangerous side effects than a drug Fauci is studying called suramin.

"There really is no indication at all that it (HPA 23) is any better, and it's considerably more toxic, there's no question about it," he said. HPA 23 causes a drop in the levels of blood cells called platelets, which in turn can lead to bleeding disorders, he said.

HPA 23 is not yet available for human tests in the United States, Broder said.

In February, Jean Claude Chermann of Pasteur, one of the drug's developers, reported in New York that the drug had caused the AIDS virus to nearly disappear in the blood of a young hemophiliac.

Chermann emphasized that the drug does not kill the AIDS virus, nor can it be called in any sense a cure.

Researchers in France have not said whether Hudson is receiving the drug, and it was not until Thursday — after days of speculation, rumor, and misinformation — that Hudson's publicists confirmed he was suffering from AIDS, not liver cancer as they had said earlier.

Broder said some 40 patients have now received suramin, but not enough evidence has yet been gathered to determine its effectiveness. Both suramin and HPA 23, he said, "inhibit the virus, but to date we can't say that they get rid of the virus from the body."

When treatment with the drugs is stopped, levels of AIDS virus tend to rise again, Broder said. "Whatever antiviral therapies emerge in the long run, it is likely that they will need to be given for a very long time because the virus has a tendency to stay in the body."

A French drug company called Rhone Poulenc Sante has an agreement with the Pasteur Institute to manufacture the drug. The company said in a statement Thursday that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has shown a willingness to speed the approvals required for human testing of HPA 23 in this country.

Broder warned that isolated cases of apparent recovery — like that of the young hemophiliac described by Chermann — do not mean that a drug is effective.

Stars try to keep their lives private

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It was apparent for several months that something was terribly wrong with Rock Hudson. The once-broad shoulders were stooped, and the face of the former leading man was gaunt, his body ravaged.

But reporters who asked about his condition were told that the actor who once played opposite Elizabeth Taylor and Doris Day had the flu. Or wanted to lose weight.

A few knew better, and when Daily Variety columnist Army Archerd received the confirmation he needed, he decided to print in his column that Hudson was suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome — AIDS.

Hudson's case is the latest in a long series of attempts by celebrities to keep some shred of a private life, an effort that meets with limited success, publicists agree.

"The era of the brick wall is over. This is 1985," said Doug Taylor of the PMK publicity agency in Los Angeles. "The public is too sophisticated to believe puffery" on matters such as illness, he said.

Archerd said he decided to use the Hudson story because he knew speculation was sure to follow once it was learned the 59-year-old actor was under treatment at the Pasteur Institute in Paris. The institute is known for research into the cause and treatment of AIDS.

"It was the most difficult story I have ever had to write in my career," he said Thursday. "I knew it would be only a matter of time before he was recognized."

AIDS is an often-deadly ailment that depletes the body's natural immune system and leaves it open to attack by other diseases. The highest risk groups are homosexuals, abusers of injectable drugs and hemophilics.

Dale Olson, Hudson's publicist, said Thursday he never knew the star of such films as "Giant" and "Pillow Talk" was suffering from AIDS. "The only discussion of AIDS as far as I'm concerned was this morning," he said.

On Tuesday, Olson said Hudson was being treated at the American Hospital in Paris and the Pasteur Institute for inoperable liver cancer.

Publicist Jerry Pam said he advises new clients, "If you don't want to tell the truth, don't tell me, because once I know, I'm duty bound to tell the press."

Celebrities usually find rumors follow a drop from public view, or in Hudson's case, a radical change in appearance. But that doesn't keep stars from trying to avoid disclosure of intimate details.

—When actor Steve McQueen was admitted to a hospital in 1979 after collapsing at his Santa Paula ranch, he told friends in a raspy voice, "I had a little touch of pneumonia." He died of cancer the next year.

—In October 1983, Yul Brynner's publicists denied any knowledge that the longtime star of "The King and I" was being treated for lung cancer. But two months later, Brynner admitted the condition, after doctors said the disease was in remission.

—Rumors abounded that comedian Andy Kaufman was suffering from lung cancer. There was never any confirmation, but he died at 36, shocking his fans who were uncushioned by any official word that he was ill.

—As actor Peter Lawford lay dying at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, his wife ordered hospital publicists to release no information about his condition, even though it was known that Lawford was in a coma and in critical condition.

Vocalist Aimee Mann carries 'Til Tuesday

Associated Press

When 'Til Tuesday was being formed, vocalist and bassist Aimee Mann says, "I wanted to make it clear I wanted to be the leader.

"That should be okay with each one — speak now or forever hold your peace. We discussed how we would split publishing and what we wanted to do strategywise.

"I recently came across a typed list of strategy policies we'd made up. Robert (guitarist Robert Holmes) and I would sit around for hours, planning. We knew we wanted to make a tape. We'd borrow money from so and so and get such and such a studio and get this person to produce it."

"Til Tuesday may need lists of strategies for continuing success but now is too busy to make them. A tour with Tom Petty immediately followed a tour with Hall and Oates.

The band's first album, on Epic Records, "Voices Carry," was No. 16 on the best-selling charts of July 6. The single, "Voices Carry," was No. 10 on the same date. Both were climbing. The next video, for "Looking over my Shoulder," was shot after the Petty tour in a convent in New York City. "In the video it'll be a mansion," Miss Mann says.

The "Voices Carry" video ends in an audience, supposedly at Carnegie Hall. Miss Mann says, "A radio station in Boston, WBCN, put out this call that we needed a bunch of people. It was in an out-of-the-way place, Dorchester, on a rainy night. It required older people and evening dress. We made it look like there were a lot more people than there were."

Of her roots, Miss Mann says, "I wasn't really interested in jazz. I went to Berklee because all the other music schools were classically based.

"Berklee was good. It got me out of Richmond. It taught me a lot about music, gave me the basis so I could set off on my own and write songs and play in a band."

Michael J. Fox, right, plays time traveler Marty McFly in "Back to the Future," a popular new movie in which a 1985 teen-ager, McFly, meets up with his future parents during their teen-age days, played by Crispin Glover and Lea Thompson.

Michael J. Fox 'willed' his back-door success

By TOM SABULIS
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Michael J. Fox likes to joke that his middle initial stands for "genuine" or "genius." Actually, it stands for nothing.

Fox added the initial to his name because there was another Michael Fox in the acting business when he moved to California from Canada six years ago. His decision to pick the letter "J" was inspired by Michael J. Pollard's performance in "Bonnie and Clyde."

With his little joke, Fox also makes a subtle point: As the star of a Top 10 television series ("Family Ties") and one of the summer's few big movies ("Back to the Future") his middle initial can mean whatever he wants it to.

At this stage of Fox's career, the etymology of his name makes no difference whatsoever. One look at that impish face and most people will know it as either Alex Keaton, the ultra-conservative son of established hippies in NBC's "Family Ties," or Marty McFly, the skateboarding teenager who goes back in time to play Cupid for his parents in Universal's "Back to the Future."

On paper, the two characters are worlds apart — one reads the Wall Street Journal, the other plays Chuck Berry — but Fox, 24, says producer Steven Spielberg and director Robert Zemeckis asked him to appear in "Back to the Future" because they liked Alex Keaton so much.

"They made no bones about it," Fox said in a telephone interview recently from London, where he was taping the season opener for "Family Ties." "They said they wanted Marty to have some of the same qualities that Alex had. They wanted that energy and they wanted; that same crazy character."

Of course, Fox was not the first choice to star in "Back to the Future." Originally, Eric Stoltz, who played the disfigured youth in "Mask," was hired to play Marty. However, the actor was fired after filming began because Spielberg and Zemeckis said that he didn't suit the role.

Fox said that he knows little about the circumstances surrounding Stoltz's dismissal. "I'm just flattered that when they started to look around again, they called me."

As it turns out, Fox was not the first choice to play Alex in "Family Ties," either. When asked about a similar turn of events bringing him to his first film, the actor said: "I'm a lucky guy. I hang around the back door, you know, and wait for somebody to open it up. I think I kind of willed them to hire me."

It is fairly unusual for television performers to have a simultaneous hit in the movies. Aside from tough competition for roles, busy schedules often prohibit series regulars from making commitments to films. Fox fulfilled his the hard way. In order to complete the movie, and honor his television obligations at the same time, he agreed to tackle a grueling double shift for two months. From mid-January to mid-March, he worked on "Family Ties" from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and then filmed "Back to the Future" from 6:30 p.m. to 2:30 a.m. On Fridays, when "Family Ties" taped before a live audience, he usually ended up working from 10 a.m. to 6 a.m. the following morning.

Now that "Back to the Future" has opened to near-unanimous critical praise and big box office in an otherwise disappointing summer, Fox feels the movie work was well worth the effort.

"I'm really glad for Bob Zemeckis and everybody," he said, sounding cautiously modest. "I'm happy to see people enjoy it the way we all wanted them to enjoy it. They clap their hands, stomp their feet, hoot and holler."

At the same time, the actor naturally downplays industry gossip that would have him leaving the series for a movie career. Fox said he is "happy" doing "Family Ties" and will continue to work on the sitcom "until they fire me."

"The show is home," he said. "('Family Ties' producer) Gary Goldberg made it possible for me to do 'Back to the Future,' so I can't turn my back on the show now. It would be pretty ugly, and I'm not about to do that. Outside the question of integrity, I love doing "Family Ties." I still feel challenged by it. There's still room for exploration."

How do the "Family Ties" regulars feel about Fox's movie success?

"I hope they're pleased," he said. "We're a real close bunch. But I think we're all real careful not to get into each other's lives outside of "Family Ties" because we don't want to screw up a good thing. They might have been a little concerned that it (the movie) would take away from my work on the show, but it certainly hasn't."

As for differences between his two characters, Fox characterizes Alex as "a little bit more of a catalyst," a guy who "lays his tracks down very carefully." He calls Marty "much less sophisticated and much more wide-eyed" than Alex.

"I hope I add some of myself to Alex and Marty," Fox says. "I'm a little like both — I've always been a rock and roller — and I'm a little not like both."
