City takes first vote on midnight curfew

■ Teens 16 and under would have curfew changed from 1a.m. to midnight seven days a week if council passes proposal.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Midland teens age 16 and under will need to be off the streets by midnight seven days a week if the City Council approves in two weeks the changes to the juvenile curfew it approved on first reading Tuesday.

"We live in a different generation now," Mayor Bobby Burns said about implementing a curfew with an earlier time. "1 a.m. is very late. This gives the police a tool to work with."

Two weeks ago, Chief Richard Czech made recommendations to the council that he said were based on a study of curfew violations and juvenile delinquency.

"Our problem is the 11-, 12-, 13-year-olds on the street until 1 a.m.," he said.

On Tuesday, Councilwoman Pat Schneider made an argument, based on a letter she received from a constituent, that the curfew violates the rights of parents because if someone wanted to let their child go to a late movie, they would be breaking the law.

"A curfew usurps the rights of parents. In this case, with the rise of juvenile violence we have no choice," Ms. Schneider said. "The whole community needs to work together to curb juvenile violence and then get rid of the curfew."

Burns said he agrees with Ms. Schneider — who is of the opinion that the weekend curfew should be 1 a.m. — that a parent's rights are being

Church fire

An FBI agent emerges from the Providence Church of God in Christ, which was declared a total loss after a fire early Tuesday. A preliminary investigation revealed there was forced entry into the predominately black church. Authorities are investigating the possibility of arson.

Welfare bill

WASHINGTON — The Senate passed a welfare bill Tuesday that would reverse six decades of national policy automatically entitling the poor to open-ended assistance. Instead, most families would get aid for no more than five years. "A system that is failing in every single aspect will now be thrown away and we'll start over with a new system that gives people an opportunity instead of a handout," said Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M.

School prayer

WASHINGTON — Judges and school districts trying to keep church and state separate often discriminate against students who want to express religious feelings in public, Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said Tuesday. That's why the nation needs another constitutional amendment clarifying the role of religion in public life, he said. Some witnesses testifying before a House subcommittee agreed, urging Congress to approve a Republican plan to guarantee students the right to pray in public schools.

San Angelo oilman to be basin's 1996 Oil Show Honoree

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Frank M. Pool of San Angelo, founder of Pool Co., is to be the 1996 Permian Basin Oil Show Honoree, according to Don Narrell, chairman of the honoree committee.

"We're proud to have Frank Pool as our 1996 Honoree," said W.R. "Bro" Hill, president of the 1996 oil show, the world's largest inland exhibition of oil-field products and services. "Frank Pool's leadership and enthusiasm in the petroleum industry and his community make him an extraordinary choice."

Pool was born in Grandview in 1918. He graduated from Texas A&M University in 1941 with a bachelor of science degree in petroleum engineering. He began his career with Humble Oil and Refining Co. in East Texas the summer before he graduated.

After graduation, Pool worked for Humble Oil as the district petroleum engineer in the Gulf Coast Area until he was drafted in the U.S. Army in 1942. After his discharge Pool returned to work for Humble Oil on the Gulf Coast.

Pool and his family moved to San Angelo in 1948 and established Pool Co. with one rig and a one-room office.

Pool served on the board of Directors for Houston-based Pool Energy Services Co. until his retirement in 1995. He currently is a consultant for the company, which has domestic and international operations based in all the oil-producing states and in 16 foreign countries.

Pool played a major role in shaping the future of the well-servicing industry. In 1956, he and other well-servicing contractors founded the Association of Oil Well Servicing Contractors (AOSC) in Odessa to unify the industry to enable it to meet the challenges of governmental regulators, safety, technology, insurance and contractor/operator relations. Pool was elected the first president.

This year the association broadened the base of membership to include all energy service companies and is now recognized as the Association of Energy Service Companies (AESC).

Pool is a former director of Texas Commerce Bank, General Telephone Co. of the Southwest, the International Association of Drilling Contractors, the Permian Basin Oil Show and the board of trustees of Hardin Simmons University. He was a member of the Well Servicing Task Force Group of the National Petroleum Council's Committee of U.S. women capture historic team gold

By Christopher Clarey
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — The U.S. gymnasts who had just won the first women's Olympic team gold medal in their nation's history filed into the Georgia Dome on Tuesday night for the medal ceremony.

Six of them were walking. One of them, Kerri Strug, was being carried by her coach, Bela Karolyi.

■ Olympic coverage/1C, 4-6C

Only minutes before, Strug had been flying through the air and off the vault with an injured left ankle. The Americans already had clinched the gold medal, but Strug did not know that. All she knew was that her teammate and training mate Dominique Moceanu had fallen on both of her vaults.

Strug had fallen on her first one, too, injuring the ankle in the process. But she wanted this attempt to remove any further doubts in her or her nation's mind.

But what should have been a moment of sheer exhilaration — an end to decades of near misses and medals colored silver and bronze — was instead a moment of intense pain.

Strug dropped to the mat, grimaced and called for help. Moments later, she was carried out of the stadium, while her six teammates sat in quiet disarray, torn between joining in the celebration that was going on through the stands or worrying about the fallen Strug.

"Kerri made an unbelievable move," her teammate Amanda Borden said later. "She came through when it counted."

Odessan keeps Texans in suspense for 2 weeks with winning lotto ticket

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

He doesn't feel like a million bucks, not even 12 million, which is what Horace Gummelt, 77, of Odessa, won when he picked the six winning numbers of the Texas Lottery on July 3.

Gummelt, who claimed his jackpot in Austin Tuesday, will receive payments of $602,000 a year for the next 20 years. For almost two weeks, he kept his win a secret while he and sister set up a trust fund.

He has no children and his wife died a few years ago, so he is splitting the jackpot with his sister, Eula Pearl Wadell, 75, of Odessa.

Gummelt buys about two tickets a week for himself and his sister, who shares his Aug. 28 birthday.

"Sometimes she says she'll pay me later, but I just tell her if she wins she can split it with me," Gummelt said.

Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce honors Jose Cuevas.

Texas association names Cuevas Hispanic Businessman of the Year

By Mella McEwen

Midland businessman Jose Cuevas has been named Hispanic Businessman of the Year by the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce.

"I'm honored," said Cuevas, owner of Jumburrito and a member of the City Council. "Anytime you're recognized by your peers, it's always appreciated, and coming from an organization like TAMACC, it's an honor."

Cuevas received the same honor from the organization 10 years ago. He said that 10 years ago, he was "shocked" to win, and this time found that "being chosen again is exciting."

He tried to put the recognition in perspective.

Siblings separated by war meet after 60 years

By Dafna Lizner
Associated Press

REHOVOT, Israel — Tears welled in Rivka Bromberg's eyes as the younger brother she thought had died in a Nazi death camp walked toward her.

"Sister," Solomon Bromberg said simply, and the two embraced for the first time in 60 years.

The siblings learned of each other's survival three months ago. On Tuesday, Solomon arrived in Israel from Moscow, in time for breakfast with the sister he had not seen since 1936.

The two, both white-haired and walking with canes, held each other in a long disbelieving embrace as they reunited at Rivka's apartment. Solomon kissed his sister's hand three times.

"I can't describe the feeling," he said, holding Rivka's hand. "I want to cry, but that wouldn't be enough."

In 1936, Rivka — then 19 — bid her family goodbye and left Poland for a new life in British-ruled Palestine. After World War II, she learned that her parents had died in the Treblinka death camp and thought her three brothers and sister had been killed, too.

But Solomon had escaped to Russia, where he settled outside Moscow, also believing he was the family's sole survivor.

Last year, Solomon's son Alexander, who was working with an Israeli company in Russia, asked a colleague about locating missing relatives in Israel. The colleague contacted Israel's Jewish Agency, which tries to reunite family members separated during the war.

In April, Rivka received a telephone call with the news that Solomon was alive and living in Russia.

Solomon's wife Anastasia, his sons Alexander and Michael and their wives all accompanied Solomon, now 76, on the trip to Israel.

Hugging and kissing, Solomon and Rivka looked each other up and down.

"You were beautiful," Solomon said to his petite 79-year-old sister.

"I still am," giggled Rivka, who was dressed for the occasion in a black dress trimmed with white lace.

The siblings' emotional reunion quickly turned into a noisy family gathering. Not only had Rivka and Solomon found each other, but their families discovered new uncles and aunts, cousins, nieces and nephews.

"This is amazing, I see them here and it's hard for me to believe," said Sharon Feingold, Rivka's granddaughter, who picked up the newfound relatives at Israel's Ben Gurion airport.

With the Russian side of the family only in Israel for 10 days, Rivka and Solomon wasted no time catching up — looking at Rivka's photographs of their parents and reminiscing about their youth.

"I remember Father was so worried about you going so far away," Solomon said.

"Another hug," said Rivka, beaming, and the two embraced again.

Hundreds, probably thousands of such reunions have taken place since the Holocaust, said John Lemberger, director of AMCHA, a private support organization for survivors and their families.

"We have had cases of survivors mourning years for loved ones and then finding them alive," he said.

Lemberger said about 300,000 Holocaust survivors live in Israel, and 150,000 others are scattered around the world, mostly in the United States, Canada and Australia.

Even today, so many years later, survivors are still looking for their missing relatives, he said, adding, "The element of not knowing is the worst."

After learning that Solomon was alive, Rivka's family, with the help of an American attorney and U.S. Congressman Bob Franks, R-N.J., tried to find out whether any other siblings survived the war and ended up in the United States.

One brother, Abraham, escaped Poland with Solomon but was shot and wounded. He was taken to a hospital in Russia and never heard from again. Another brother, Isaac, joined the Russian army and was killed by the Germans.

The family has no information about what happened to Isaac's twin sister, Rosa.

Still amazed by her brother's presence, Rivka looked around her small apartment Tuesday at her grandchildren and her brother's family.

"Look at this," she said proudly, gazing around the room. "Look at this."

Survivor recalls rebel attack on 1,200 soldiers

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — When rebel mortar fire shattered the nighttime stillness, a teen-age army sentry emptied both magazines of his assault rifle into the darkness. Then, he shinnied up a coconut tree and watched the guerrillas overrun the sprawling army base.

For more than 24 hours, Pvt. W.G. Dhammika hid in the leafy branches. From his perch 50 feet above the ground, he watched the battle rage around him and became one of just 19 known survivors from the base's 1,200 soldiers.

The fall of the garrison appeared to be the worst debacle suffered by the Sri Lankan military of the civil war, which began with a nationwide outburst of anti-Tamil riots 13 years ago Tuesday. The government had seized the rebels' stronghold last winter and expected the war to end soon.

But the rebels have fought back.

Under a hail of rebel mortar, Sri Lankan warships ferried nearly 1,000 soldiers Tuesday to a beach near the base, where the army is preparing for an attempt to retake the garrison. A rebel shell blew up one of the landing crafts, killing 22 soldiers and wounding 28.

In the first eyewitness account of the rebel assault on the base, the 19-year-old private told a Sri Lankan reporter that the Tamil Tiger rebels quickly breached the camp's perimeters before dawn Thursday. The reporter, fearing government reprisals, passed the account to The Associated Press on condition he not be identified.

"The attack came from the sea, the north and south of the camp, and within minutes the Tigers had penetrated our defenses," Dhammika said from his hospital bed in the town of Anuradhapura.

At dawn, he heard rebel leaders shouting orders to guerrillas who were ransacking the camp, driving away trailers full of weapons and ammunition.

Dhammika saw men in fatigues and civilian clothing move into the camp and strip the bodies of their weapons and belongings, before loading them onto trailers and driving them away.

Mortars were still crashing into the base when he descended in darkness and crawled along the shore of the Manthi Kadal lagoon.

He discovered two other soldiers who had escaped, but their flight stalled as military warplanes, helicopters and warships pounded the rebels. The three hid in the lagoon for another day, until they spotted military helicopters landing reinforcements on the beach, south of the base.

Crawling along the lagoon and through scrub jungles, they approached. When close enough, they threw away their weapons, raised their hands and shouted in Sinhalese, before running toward their colleagues.

Arafat, top Netanyahu aide meet to jump start peace process

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu took the first step toward reviving peace negotiations with the Palestinians Tuesday when a top aide held talks with Yasser Arafat in the first high-level meeting between the PLO leaden and the new right-wing Israeli government.

Foreign Minister David Levy and Arafat, the elected president of the Palestinian Authority, met on the Gaza-Israeli border in talks that Levy said "will give a push to the process that is meant to bring peace to Israel and the Palestinians."

"We decided to formalize our relations and to create the proper frameworks for examining the issues and advancing them," Levy told a joint news conference.

Arafat said they agreed to continue contacts "at all levels so we can move the peace process forward on all fronts."

The future of peace negotiations had been in doubt since Israel's May 29 election, when the hardline Netanyahu narrowly defeated incumbent Shimon Peres, chief architect of the Israeli-Palestinian accords.

The two-hour session between Levy and Arafat was designed more for its symbolic value than its substance. The meeting was a breakthrough for Netanyahu's Likud Party, which has vilified Arafat as a "murderer" and a "war criminal."

Arafat and Levy smiled and shook hands for the cameras before the start of their closed-door discussion, prompting an Israeli TV commentator to exclaim: "Who would have believed it?"

The Hebrew daily Maariv wrote in its lead editorial Tuesday: "If the saying goes that politics is the art of the possible, this strange meeting proves that politics is also the art of the impossible."

Appearing buoyant after eight grim weeks since the defeat of his peace partner Peres, Arafat said: "We shall work side by side in order to support this relationship for the benefit of Israel and the Palestinian people."

Palestinian officials hope the meeting will lead to direct talks between Arafat and Netanyahu.

After saying early in his campaign that he would never meet with Arafat, Netanyahu softened his position, saying he will meet with the Palestinian leader if he deems it necessary for the security of Israel.

Netanyahu denounced the Labor-led government of Peres and the late Yitzhak Rabin for making peace in 1993 with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Arafat shared the Nobel peace prize with Rabin and Peres.

Yet as prime minister, Netanyahu has acknowledged that contacts are necessary to fulfill the landmark accords and achieve his own campaign promise of "peace with security."

Still, he faces hardline critics within Likud who said Tuesday's talks should not have been held because the Palestinians have not fulfilled their commitments to the peace agreements.

"I'm asking myself what's the big thing the Palestinian Authority has done which justifies this gesture that we're now making?" said Uzi Landau, chairman of the Israeli parliament's defense committee. "It's a big mistake."

Each side accuses the other of broken promises in their series of accords that granted limited self-rule to the Palestinians and ended Israeli military occupation in much of the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank.

Israel says the Palestinian government is operating illegally in Jerusalem and has not done enough to curb Islamic militants. The Palestinians counter that Israel has yet to withdraw its troops from the West Bank city of Hebron and has failed to live up to economic and trade agreements.

Palestinian officials want to resume "final status" negotiations intended to determine the future of the Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and Palestinian aspirations of creating an independent state with Jerusalem as a shared capital.

The talks were begun in May but suspended because of the Israeli campaign and election.

Netanyahu indicated Tuesday that he would not resume those negotiations until unresolved issues on the existing agreements are decided.

Among the outstanding issues are Israel's promise to withdraw its troops from the West Bank city of Hebron, the only major Arab municipality still occupied by Israel.

"I think this is what we can hope to achieve at this point," Netanyahu said. "I don't think we should go beyond that. Let's achieve this goal, and then proceed step by step."

WEATHER WATCH

Today to be sunny, high near 100

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies and a high near 100 with southeast winds at 10-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service.

Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low between 70 and 75.

Thursday's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies and a high in the upper 90s.

The high for Tuesday was 99, compared to the record high for that date of 105, set in 1995.

Tuesday's low was 71, compared to the record low of 53, set in 1978.

STATE

Powerful thunderstorms roiled across North Texas on Tuesday, causing scattered wind damage and deluging the area with torrential rains.

Carol Hallock, support manager at the Wal-Mart in The Colony, said high winds ripped away a portion of the store's roof Tuesday afternoon, while accompanying rains damaged clothing.

The winds also caused an outdoor sale tent to collapse, she said.

"Nobody was injured, so we were lucky," she said.

Outside of the thunderstorms, partly cloudy skies along with warm and humid conditions prevailed. Sunshine was more prevalent in West Texas.

Winds were southerly from 5 to 15 mph except in and near thunderstorms.

Temperatures varied from 80s in the rain-cooled areas to 90s elsewhere.

At 3 p.m., temperatures across Texas ranged from 81 degrees at Dalhart in the Panhandle to 102 degrees at Fort Hood.

Despite Tuesday's storms, the overall lack of rain continues to take its toll. The Barton Springs-Edwards Aquifer Conservation District said Tuesday that a formal drought alarm continues through its 13th week for southern Travis and northern Hays counties.

The agency said water levels in monitor wells throughout the district show no signs of breaking their steady drop.

The North Texas forecast is for partly cloudy skies today with a chance of thunderstorms. Highs will be 94 to 99 degrees. Tonight through Thursday night will be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms. Lows from 72 to 76.

South Texas is to be partly cloudy with highs from near 90 along the coast to over 100 inland. Lows in the 70s and 80s.

NATION

Thunderstorms that pummeled the Plains early Tuesday rumbled softly across central Nebraska, while the West remained hot and dry.

Wind gusts and hail the size of marbles pelted Wallace, Neb., but caused no severe problems in the state.

Early in the day thunderstorms moving up from Arkansas uprooted trees, blew out windows and snapped power lines in Oklahoma, leaving tens of thousands without electricity in the Tulsa area.

High winds of up to 80 mph gusted through the state and a tornado was spotted near Sapulpa, Okla., but caused no damage. As much as 3 inches of rain fell in an hour in Beaver County.

By afternoon things had quieted, with thundershowers developing along the southern part of the storm complex that were expected to turn into heavy thunderstorms across Kansas.

Another batch of thunderstorms moved into the lower Great Lakes and began raining down on the southern shore of Lake Erie. Hail was expected.

Other thunderstorms developed in the heat of the day in northern South Carolina, and near Denton, Texas, but much of the West remained hot and dry.

City approves bonds for new airport terminal

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Bonds for a new airport terminal building were approved at Tuesday's City Council meeting.

On Tuesday, the council authorized necessary preparations for the issuance of $21 million in "airport subordinate lien revenue and tax certificates of obligation" bonds.

Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca said the city received high ratings — similar to a credit report for Midland — from the rating agencies Standard & Poor's and Moody's.

Standard and Poor's gave the city an Aa rating and Moody's rated the city at AA-. "Those are very good ratings," Menchaca said, explaining the ratings decline down the alphabet.

The ratings were used by the underwriting firms that purchase the bonds to determine the interest rate.

The underwriting firms are NationsBank of Texas, Norwest Investment Services Inc., Alex. Brown & Sons Inc. and Texas Commerce Bank National Association.

The interest rate will be 5.77 percent. The loan is scheduled to be paid back over a 20 year period using money generated by the airport but not tax dollars.

Menchaca said a pre-bid conference is scheduled today with various bidders for the project.

City Councilman Dale Brown asked the bankers if the delay in the project — caused by a petition that put building a new terminal to a vote — cost significant amounts of money because of the change in interest rates.

The underwriters indicated it cost the city millions of dollars.

The petition drive delayed the process by about eight months, Menchaca said.

"During that time the markets changed and the basis points, or percentage, changed .65 to .70 of a percent, so it will cost us more. Over the 20-year period, the delay cost us more than $2 million in additional interest costs," Menchaca said.

The city began accepting construction bids in late May and will continue until Aug. 14. The project will be awarded on Sept. 10 with construction beginning as early as late October.

The new terminal is expected to be completed about 2 1/2 years later.

The multi-phase project will consist of building a new single-level covered parking, access roads and utility work, followed by demolition of existing covered parking and construction of the new terminal. Finally, the present terminal building will be demolished and ramps constructed.

During construction, airport users will be provided with shuttle buses between parking lots and the terminal building.

Total cost of the project will be $33.2 million, officials said. Funding sources will be from airport revenues, passenger facility charges and federal grants.

CHANGE: Teens to have earlier curfew

infringed; however, he said the safety of the community is of greater importance.

Midland's curfew was implemented in December 1994 in response to the growing delinquency problem.

Youngsters 16 and younger are prohibited from being out between midnight and 6 a.m. on weeknights unless they meet specific exceptions, such as being with a guardian, traveling to and from work or school, or being out on an emergency.

Burns said the curfew has been "somewhat effective," but he is still concerned with the graffiti and vandalism occurring in the community.

Councilman Juluis Brooks asked police representatives about any arrests made in the recent rash of vandalism cases and was told several children ages 12 to 14 were taken into custody.

"This curfew is not the answer to the problem ... this just gives police a chance to stop and see what they (the youths) are doing," Burns said.

If council members finalize the changes when they meet in two weeks, the midnight curfew will probably go into effect a month later.

In the first reading, Ms. Schneider was the only member opposed.

WIN: U.S. women's gymnastic team take gold

(From 1A)

Strug did come through, but there was no single American figure who defined this memorable and, in the end, melodramatic victory over the Russians, who won the silver medal, and the Romanians, who won the bronze.

The United States has had its share of women's Olympic heroes: Babe Didrikson, Wilma Rudolph, Jackie Joyner-Kersee, Janet Evans and a spark plug from West Virginia named Mary Lou Retton.

But until now, it has never had a team of women that captured hearts, imaginations and a gold medal on the world's biggest sporting stage. In an era when women athletes are increasingly more visible throughout the world, the American victory was both timely and emblematic.

The seven teen-agers who won the gold were Borden, Amy Chow, Dominique Dawes, Shannon Miller, Moceanu, Jaycie Phelps and Strug. It is safe to say that after Tuesday night, they will be thought of as a group for many Games to come.

"It's the happiest moment in my life and all these kids' lives," said the assistant coach Mary Lee Tracy. "We made history."

This team did it with the support of a large and unabashedly jingoistic home crowd of 32,048 who cheered so enthusiastically for the many U.S. successes that it was often impossible to hear other team's floor music.

This team did it by defeating Russia, the nation that best represents the Soviet legacy of dominance in this sport, and by beating the Romanians, the two-time defending world champions.

"The U.S. is no longer a follower in world gymnastics, we are a leader," said Retton, who was in the stands.

'The U.S. is no longer a follower in world gymnastics, we are a leader.'

— Mary Lou Retton
former gymnast

Until Tuesday night, the U.S. women never had won a team gold in world or Olympic competition. With Retton leading the way, they won the Olympic silver medal in 1984 at the Los Angeles Games, which were boycotted by the Soviet Union. The Americans took bronze in 1992 behind the Unified Team and Romania and bronze again at last year's world championships in Japan.

But the team that came to Atlanta was deeper than any of its predecessors. Even its weakest links, Chow and Borden, are capable of winning medals on individual events.

The U.S. team also had experience on its side with an average age of 18 (compared with 16 1/2 in 1992) and three returning Olympians in Miller, Dawes and Strug, who all qualified for Thursday's individual all-around final.

Whether Strug, who was taken to a hospital, will be able to compete remained uncertain Tuesday night. If unable to compete, Strug would be replaced by Moceanu. However, the Americans were still reflecting on their team victory instead of looking ahead to individual competition.

"I think it helped that three of us had been to the Olympics before and that all of us had been to a world championship before," said Miller, a two-time world all-around champion.

The Americans entered Tuesday night's competition trailing the Russians by a thin margin: little more than a tenth of a point. But from the moment the U.S. team filed in and was met with a burst of applause and flash bulbs, it was clear that the Russians and Romanians would be competing against much more than seven other gymnasts.

The Americans opened on the uneven bars and proceeded to put together six clean and polished sets (only six gymnasts compete on each event). The lowest of the scores was the 9.787 that Phelps, Strug and Miller all received. And though the Russians performed fairly clean efforts on the vault, by the time the rotation ended the Americans led by nearly half a point.

They would never lose their grip on that lead, even when the Russians, led by the stately Svetlana Chorkina, performed superbly on the uneven bars on the next rotation.

The Americans simply responded by getting two fine closing performances from Miller (9.862) and Moceanu (9.85), the two gymnasts who missed the Olympic trials with injuries but looked exceedingly healthy throughout the team competition.

Russian coach Leonid Arkaev, whose men's team had won the gold on Monday night, already was scratching his head and looking puzzled. And on the next rotation, his team knocked themselves out of contention with a shaky performance on the balance beam.

The second Russian up, Yelena Grosheva, nearly fell on her mount and received a 9.437. The next Russian, Oksana Liapina, did fall and received a 9.225, which meant that Grosheva's low score would have to count.

It also meant tears for Liapina.

Meanwhile, the U.S. women were putting together six more clean performances on the floor exercise and expanding their lead to nine-tenths of a point. The Romanians, lacking depth, already had fallen back.

"Certainly, our girls were influenced by the crowd, and they made mistakes," Arkaev said. "But the Americans deserved this victory."

All that remained was the vault. The first four Americans — Phelps, Chow, Miller and Dawes — all received 9.662 or better. But then Moceanu made the first major American mistake of the evening, falling on both her Yurchenko vaults and receiving a high score of 9.2.

"I was just excited from the whole Olympics spirit," said the 14-year-old Moceanu.

Strug was certainly feeling a little of Baron de Coubertin's spirit herself as she prepared for the final vault and final U.S. performance. She, too, fell, injuring her ankle in the process, but the 9.162 she received was still good enough for the gold.

Still, Karolyi was uncertain. "I told her it was close and we needed the second one," he said.

Strug delivered and soon Karolyi was carrying her onto the medal stand and setting her down gently, her lower left leg wrapped tightly. Moments later, she was standing alongside her six teammates as "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played for a team of U.S. women's gymnasts for the very first time.

GOP gathers to spotlight tax cuts, growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top aide to Bob Dole joined Republican leaders Tuesday in embracing the broad goals of tax cuts and economic growth, but gave no hint of specific policies the GOP presidential candidate will propose.

The vague endorsement by Donald Rumsfeld came as former housing secretary Jack Kemp, House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and other Republicans staged what amounted to a pep rally for some familiar GOP ideas. The meeting, opened to reporters for maximum coverage, was in effect a public prod to Dole to support a massive tax cut and a test-run for an emerging campaign theme that the economy should grow faster than it has under President Clinton.

"Sure we need tax relief," Dole aide Rumsfeld said during the session in a Senate office building. "And we need tax reform as well."

But the former top official in the Nixon and Ford administrations declined to provide details of Dole's thinking in preparing his forthcoming economic package. "He's deeply involved in the process of fashioning a growth plan, and it will be a good one," he said.

Dole said he hoped to have his package ready by month's end, or at least by the GOP national convention in mid-August. He is strongly considering across-the-board tax reductions, as well as tax credits for charitable contributions and other revenue changes.

In hopes of preventing Clinton from capturing the steadily expanding economy as an issue he can capitalize on, Republicans at the meeting criticized his record, including his 1993 deficit-reducing tax increases. The economy has expanded for six straight years and the administration projects future growth of 2.3 percent — not good enough, Republicans said.

"The real deficit in America is the gap between the aspirations of the American people and the ability of this economy to perform up to their expectations," said Kemp, who said Republicans should strive to double the size of the American economy by 2010.

Democrats said the meeting illustrated worry among Republicans over Dole's campaign, which has so far left him trailing Clinton in public opinion polls by double digits.

"This is a campaign that seems to be without a purpose, and I think members of the party are concerned and that's why they're getting together," said House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

And mocking their opponents, the Democratic National Committee announced it was setting up a toll-free number that callers could use to offer sarcastic economic advice to Dole.

Among its options: "If you agree with Jack Kemp or Steve Forbes that Bob Dole should propose a broad across-the-board tax or flat tax with no specific cuts to show how it will not blow a hole in the deficit, press one."

HONOR: Cuevas works to raise standards of achievement

ness since the beginning. I'm the fortunate one who gets all the limelight but I have to share the credit with them."

He said that he believes he was chosen because of his community involvement and his work in "raising the standards of achievement for the Hispanic community as well as for the entire community."

Asked if he felt he was a role model for younger generations, he answered, "I think there's a tremendous responsibility, and as I mature I'm getting the feeling for the responsibility I carry. At times it's frustrating but I'm learning to grow into that role.

"I think it is an important role," he said. "The more I talk to kids in high school and junior high school, the more they need someone to look up to and relate to. I started this company when I was 22 and I'm 39 now. This isn't so ancient to them, it's still young, still fresh to them."

Lydia Torres, interim director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber selected Cuevas and submitted his name to the TAMACC.

She said that the award, along with the Hispanic Businesswoman of the Year award, is a coveted one that is spotlighted when TAMACC attends the U.S. Hispanic Chambers of Commerce annual convention.

"The Texas winner is really respected by the community because Texas has a heavy Hispanic population and the community knows how hard it is to do business these days," she said.

"Texas, because of its Hispanic population, is often closely watched by those interested in the progress of Hispanics. This is a great honor and brings tremendous exposure."

Cuevas, who also owns restaurants in Odessa and Big Spring, said he is pleased his restaurants have been well received and he looks forward to continued growth and expansion. He will receive his award Friday at the TAMACC annual state convention in Austin.

he were to win.

He has no immediate plans for spending the money and he said he still can't believe he won.

"When I saw on the TV that night that I had the matching numbers, I didn't know what to think," he said.

He's been playing the lottery for about two years and the most he has ever won was $3, he said.

"The most I've ever gotten right before was three numbers," he said.

He picks his six numbers by using a deck of cards. He numbered the cards one through 50, the amount of numbers used in the Texas lottery. Each week, he shuffles the deck and throws out six cards randomly. The week of July 3 he picked 1, 3, 4, 15, 43 and 49, the winning numbers.

He purchased his winning ticket at a 7-Eleven at 1101 E. 42nd St. in Odessa. The retailer will receive of $120,000 for selling the winning ticket.

EAST MORICHES, N.Y. — Divers descended from the Navy's best salvage ship Tuesday and recovered more victims from the wreckage of TWA Flight 800, but officials acknowledged that nothing found so far in the debris or bodies shows traces of explosives.

Also, Pentagon analysts have found no sign on radar tapes or high-altitude photographs of a missile or anything else that might have brought down the jumbo jet, spokesman Kenneth Bacon said.

President Clinton, traveling in California, said that based on regular reports he's receiving, none of the evidence establishes a cause.

"Finding various traces of things may indicate that something happened and it may not but right now, the people we have looking at this have not drawn a firm conclusion that's been relayed to any of us," Clinton said.

Working over target areas mapped out by sonar equipment, scores of divers searched in the silt kicked up by their own movements Tuesday. To complicate matters, sharks had been seen in the area.

Three more bodies were pulled up Tuesday, and divers believe 60 to 100 more are under the debris, New York Gov. George Pataki said.

"There's a very big chunk of plane on the floor and there are bodies caught within that wreckage," Pataki said.

A portable testing device at the scene initially suggested there might be chemical bomb residues on a piece of wing, but that machine is designed for only the roughest initial screening and is known to display false positives, sources told The Associated Press.

"Nobody would rely on it alone without the full testing," said a federal official in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity. No traces of explosives have been confirmed on either wreckage or bodies, he added.

Two new pieces of plane debris were shipped to the FBI laboratory Tuesday, but it could take until Thursday for sophisticated tests to determine whether or not they contain bomb residue.

Besides the plane debris, material from autopsies was being sent to Washington. Suffolk County Medical Examiner Charles Wetli said "any foreign matter that didn't belong to the human body" — including plastics, wood and metals — was given the FBI for analysis.

"If this was a terrorist attack there's absolutely no doubt in my mind that we will know who did this and where they are," James Kallstrom, the assistant FBI director in charge of the investigation, said. "The only question is, Can we take them around the neck?"

Earlier, White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta had said "chemical leftovers" had been found on bodies and debris from the plane, and investigators were focusing "most closely" on terrorism.

The jumbo jet exploded in the air and crashed July 17 off Long Island shortly after leaving Kennedy Airport, killing all 230 people aboard. It was the second worst crash in U.S. air history.

Officially, investigators have said they are not yet sure whether the explosion was caused by a bomb, a catastrophic mechanical failure or a missile.

The Pentagon has turned over radar tapes and satellite photos of the explosion, but so far they have provided "nothing significant, nothing helpful" to understand what caused the disaster, Bacon said.

"We have not seen any signs on those radar tapes — from our own analysis or from their analysis — of something ... that looks like a missile," Bacon said.

Aside from "some eyewitness accounts that make it sound as if a missile could have been involved," Bacon said, "There is precious else to support that at this stage."

FBI agents were checking into as many as 40 curious or unusual incidents at scores of marinas within reach of the TWA crash site, but another senior federal official in Washington characterized the effort as a normal part of the painstaking investigation.

The search for debris focused on a section of the continental shelf where divers located a 60-by-30-foot piece of fuselage in a "wreckage field" of airp. e parts.

The recovery effort gained momentum Tuesday with the arrival of the USS Grasp, a high-tech Navy salvage-and-rescue ship. The Grasp, which brought 23 additional divers, is equipped with a robot and special video and scanning equipment. It can support divers as far as 190 feet down and lift heavy objects.

Overnight, using sonar equipment, investigators mapped out 14 target areas in the 3-by-4-mile grid to guide the divers working under more than 100 feet of water Tuesday.

Because of the depth, divers were able to work for only a short time before returning to the surface, and had to wait several hours before going for another, even shorter dive.

"This is a slow process," said Robert Francis, vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board. "We're going to be doing this at a speed that guarantees we get the best possible result."

Two key targets were the plane's voice and data recorders, the so-called black boxes. Searchers had not detected the "pings" the boxes are supposed to emit. "Most likely they're shielded in some way," Francis said — behind wreckage or in dirt.

Investigators were anxious for quick recovery of wreckage for two reasons: Clues might be washed away the longer the debris remains in the water and, if the plane was sabotaged, the saboteurs' trail is getting colder.

Nonetheless, "The recovery of the victims takes priority," Francis said. "We are concentrating on the people, we are not concentrating on aluminum."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, JULY 24, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A valuable professional or personal relationship will develop over the next few months. An older person plays a major role in your career plans. Creative writing projects are favored throughout the fall. Try your hand at children's literature, science fiction or a mystery. Early in 1997, the study of theology, sociology or psychology could lead to a career change. February brings travel to a distant locale. Romance should be a source of comfort, not worry. Weigh your options.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: aviator Amelia Earhart, actress Lynda Carter, jazz pianist Billy Taylor, comedian Ruth Buzzi.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make certain you read the fine print before signing contracts. You cannot afford to give your time and services to someone who may not pay you. Diplomacy will improve a workplace relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Confrontational tactics will not work with a partner. Play a waiting game; time will prove you are right. Isolate yourself when tackling complex projects.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A positive attitude and a sensible health routine help combat exhaustion. Although co-workers may be difficult, you need their input. After reviewing your priorities, streamline your daily schedule.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lessons learned in the past have prepared you for today's challenges. Legal negotiations or behind-the-scenes maneuvers will bring out the competitor in you. You emerge the victor!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If a financial deal is on the up-and-up, you should have no worries. An expected bonus or commission may not be forthcoming for a while. Look for ways to cut everyday expenses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Taking an authoritative tone with family members could backfire. Be patient. Listen to what loved one has to say even if you have heard it all previously.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Family members who keep repeating their suggestions only want you to be happy. Speak up if you disagree with their "solutions." Spend quality time with teen-agers; they need your encouragement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A romantic partner wants to play a larger role in your life. Including you in family activities is a vote of confidence. Avoid neglecting your professional reading.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The emphasis now is on finding new outlets for your talents. Broaden your perspective by examining your spiritual beliefs. Showing greater sensitivity to your associates' needs will motivate them to help you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Although new duties tax your energies, you handle them with aplomb. A personal relationship will improve if you express your views with confidence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not be content with having only superficial knowledge of a serious subject. Delve deeper. Refuse to become upset if others seem jealous that yo are developing your creative talents to a higher degree.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Greater personal effort is the key to new accomplishments. Become a dynamo at work! Do not hide your talents, large or small, from the world. A tendency to dominate your loved ones should be curbed.

Opening lead: King of ♣

Study the bidding and play of this deal, then decide who, if anyone, made any error in either phase of the game.

South's jump to two hearts was borderline. Once North showed interest in game, South decided that the fifth heart merited acceptance, and wasted no time in getting to the heart game.

West started with king, ace and another club, declarer discarding a spade from dummy. Three rounds of diamonds allowed declarer to get rid of the remaining club from hand, and a spade to the ace provided the entry to the closed hand to lead the jack of trumps. West rose with the ace and exited with a spade, taken with the king. Declarer tried to get to hand with a spade ruff to repeat the trump finesse, but West overruffed. Down one.

We would have tried three no trump with the South hand rather than four hearts, but would not rate that bidding decision an error. Nor can we fault South for coming to hand with a spade ruff rather than a diamond — we would have done the same in all probability.

South was guilty of a far graver blunder. Instead of crossing to hand with the ace of spades, declarer should first have cashed the king of spades, then led a spade to the ace. Now when West shoots up with the ace of hearts, any return allows declarer to win in hand to repeat the trump finesse and land the contract.

Schiffer claims there is still magic in her relationship with Copperfield

HAMBURG, Germany — Claudia Schiffer says, despite gloomy reports in the tabloids, there's still magic between her and David Copperfield.

Claudia Schiffer disputes tabloid rumors.

Rumors have been floating that the model and the magician, together for three years, are splitting.

"There's absolutely nothing in it," Schiffer told the German tabloid Bild in an interview published Tuesday.

Schiffer said she and Copperfield see each other regularly and are, in fact, planning a Caribbean vacation together.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Guests at a birthday bash for Tipper Gore may have to sing the birthday song a capella unless organizers find a band that's willing to play.

The wife of Vice President Al Gore, a Tennesseean, shares an Aug. 19 birthday with President Clinton and the two will celebrate the day before with simultaneous parties in Nashville and New York.

The bashes also are political fund-raisers and will be shown by satellite hookup at parties in about 80 cities.

The New York party, which the Clintons will attend, is to feature Kenny Rogers and Aretha Franklin. But three country acts — the band BlackHawk, K.T. Oslin and Dwight Yoakam — have declined invitations to play in Nashville, their publicists confirmed.

"A lot of acts shy away from political events," said Evelyn Shriver, a publicist whose clients include Randy Travis, Tammy Wynette and Willie Nelson. "It's thrilling to do stuff with the president, but it generates a lot of angry mail."

So far, singer-songwriter Gretchen Peters has agreed to appear at Mrs. Gore's party.

"I come from a long line of Democrats," Peters said. "My first thought was, my parents are gonna be so proud."

EDINA, Minn. — Two days after his music welcomed the world to Atlanta, producer Jimmy Jam and his wife welcomed a child to the world.

Jam's wife, Lisa, gave birth Sunday to an 8-pound son, Tyler James.

"It feels absolutely wonderful. I've waited a really, really long time to experience this and it's absolutely wonderful," Jam said.

"His nose definitely is my nose. I think his lips definitely belong to Lisa, my wife," he said.

Jam and his co-producer Terry Lewis composed the song "Welcome To The World" for the opening ceremonies of the Summer Olympics, but didn't attend the event Friday because of the baby's expected arrival.

LOS ANGELES — For weeks, Tavis Smiley has been in the fast lane — the one to the far left, that is.

The 31-year-old author and media personality recently passed through town for a book signing, then took off for Washington to debate right-wing icon Oliver North and black conservative Armstrong Williams on talk radio.

His book, "Hard Left: Straight Talk about the Wrongs of the Right," is headed into a third printing, and its promotional tour was extended.

For three weeks, Smiley has been hitting a city a day. But he says he's on a mission.

"I'm tired of the dogmatism of the right," Smiley told the Los Angeles Times. "I want to get a chance in a legitimate forum as a young black man to talk to thinking white people."

ST. PAUL — During the 1970s, Gerald Ford, Valery Giscard d'Estaing, Lord James Callaghan and Helmut Schmidt were busy grappling with worldwide problems like the energy crisis and human rights.

No wonder they didn't have time to pose for a portrait.

Now, the ex-leaders of the United States, France, Great Britain and Germany have been memorialized together in paint by Minnesota artist Mark Balma.

Ford unveiled the portrait Tuesday in the governor's reception room at the state Capitol, the setting for the picture commissioned by the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank in Washington.

The four men never met there, but Balma said he chose the room because of its rich detail: "I wanted to create the feeling that after an intense discussion at the table, the dialogue continues with the vigor of friendship."

Ford, Giscard d'Estaing, Callaghan and Schmidt still meet annually in Vail, Colo.

"It's a unique friendship that developed under very tough pressures and experiences, but it's so genuine that it has gone on and on and on," Ford said.

Search for bodies grueling process

Although the search for bodies in the wreckage of TWA Flight 800 on the ocean floor off New York is a tedious and time consuming task that is racking the nerves of relatives and others, National Transportation Safety Board Vice Chairman Robert Francis is correct to urge patience about the slowness of the recovery process.

During a Monday night news conference, Francis said, "This is a slow process. We're going to be doing this at a speed that guarantees we get the best possible result."

We sympathize with all those involved and especially with the families and friends of the people who died in the explosion and whose bodies still remain unrecovered from the Atlantic Ocean, more than 100 feet below the surface. Yet with that noted, we also understand that much of the volatile criticism leveled at TWA is overreaction coming from confused and shattered loved ones. They're simply looking for someone or something at whom to vent their anger and pain and TWA makes a good target in this instance.

Realistically, however, TWA officials are doing everything in their power to recover the bodies and find out the cause of the explosion.

Francis is absolutely correct. Recovering bodies and parts of the aircraft from a depth in excess of 100 feet in the Atlantic is a slow process. In addition to merely locating and recovering the bodies, investigators are burdened with the additional responsibility of finding the cause of the explosion. It isn't an easy nor painless process under the best of circumstances, but it is made much more difficult because of where the wreckage is located. Correct identification of the bodies and avoiding error in that task are other considerations.

Our sympathy remains with the relatives and friends of the passengers and crew who must endure this grueling process.

Clinton may sign on to pay Dale's legal tab

WASHINGTON — President Clinton has privately urged Senate Democratic leaders to defeat legislation reimbursing $500,000 in legal fees incurred by Billy Dale, the former head of the White House travel office who's been accused and acquitted of embezzlement.

Anderson

Clinton's phone calls to senior Democrats were prompted, according to well-placed sources, by growing congressional concern that the White House wanted the legal expenses paid. Some Democrats were reluctant to mount a fight on such a controversial issue without reassurances from the highest levels that there would be no retreat.

The president's back-stage maneuverings contradict the public statements of his own press secretary. "To be precise about it, (Clinton) said he would sign it if Congress passed it," White House press secretary Mike McCurry told us. "He has not indicated that he's lobbying for it, or encouraging it."

Until recently, senior White House adviser George Stephanopoulos was encouraging Clinton to sign the legislation for Dale's legal fees in a move that one source describes as "solely political." The faster Clinton signed the bill, the reasoning went, the sooner the White House could put the matter behind it. "I don't talk about internal debates," Stephanopoulos responded when reached for comment.

But another White House insider involved in the debate doesn't think the issue can be settled that easily. "Look at what Dale has done in the last few months," this official said. "He's become a poster-boy for the Republicans. Once you pay his fees, Republicans aren't going to say, 'You did the right and honorable thing.' They are going to stand up and say, 'This is confirmation ... this was a frame and a political prosecution.'"

That's been the rallying cry of Rep. William F. Clinger, R-Pa., chairman of the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee. Clinger has charged that Dale was the victim of a political prosecution, and that the FBI harassed Dale on orders from the White House.

In other statements, he's darkly hinted at an Oliver Stone-style conspiracy to get Dale. Nevertheless, when we called his bluff and asked for evidence of how the White House conspired with career FBI and Justice Department prosecutors to wrongly indict Dale, Clinger spokesman Ed Amorosi, acknowledged: "I think documenting evidence of a grand jury conspiracy probably can't be done."

That doesn't mean the Clinton administration has clean hands. Travelgate is a tawdry reminder of the chaotic first year of the Clinton administration. Seven long-time employees of the travel office were summarily fired at the behest of Clinton cronies who wanted a piece of the travel office action, and with the urging of first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, who wanted loyalists at every level.

Nor should Dale emerge as Mr. Clean, however. Since his acquittal, he's graced Republican fund-raisers and press conferences, often acting as a back-drop for Clinger and House Speaker Newt Gingrich as they pound the White House. Dale was acquitted, but the record shows that he once offered to plead guilty to one count of embezzlement, pay a fine and serve no more than 60 days in jail — without acknowledging that he actually stole money. In perhaps its biggest blunder, the Justice Department rejected the deal.

If Clinger's conspiracy theory had anything to it, some smoke might be found in the Justice Department's highly confidential "prosecution memo," which led to Dale's indictment. But the only tinge of politics in the memo was when prosecutors fretted that "Dale will probably make the big-picture argument that this prosecution is simply an effort by the Clinton administration to avoid further embarrassment."

Dale has been making the same argument in the court of public opinion. During the trial, his attorney portrayed him as someone who innocently commingled travel office funds with his own money over the years in a "good faith, but disastrous decision."

If Clinton caves and supports the Dale legislation, many of his key Democratic allies — including Sens. Joe Biden of Delaware and Carl Levin of Michigan — fear that he may be making his own disastrous decision. As one Senate source put it: "We have never, to our knowledge or research, ever paid the attorneys fees for anyone who has been indicted, unless we do it through the public defender system."

In an interview, McCurry dropped hints that Clinton might seek to broaden the legislation to include the reimbursement of legal expenses incurred by administration officials who were essentially innocent bystanders in the Whitewater investigation. They told the truth, and now face six-figure legal bills.

ANOTHER VIEW

City government has big role in education

When many of our nation's mayors gathered at the U.S. Conference of Mayors, they discussed something you usually don't think of having much to do with city hall — public education.

Because the quality of education in a community is the single largest reason people choose to live — or not live — in a city, mayors looking to keep up their city tax bases have a big reason to want top-notch schools.

So city governments around the country are taking an interest in helping ensure schools are able to do their jobs. That's an approach that makes sense when looking at the larger picture of what makes a vital community. ...

It's good to see city governments realize they are responsible for more than making sure the streets are paved. If it takes a village to raise a child, a crucial part of that village is city government.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 24, the 206th day of 1996. There are 160 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 24, 1959, during a visit to the Soviet Union, Vice President Richard M. Nixon engaged in his "kitchen debate" with Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev at a U.S. exhibition.

On this date:

In 1783, Latin American revolutionary Simon Bolivar was born in Caracas, Venezuela.

In 1847, Mormon leader Brigham Young and his followers arrived at Great Salt Lake City in Utah.

In 1862, the eighth president of the United States, Martin Van Buren, died in Kinderhook, N.Y.

In 1866, Tennessee became the first state to be readmitted to the Union after the Civil War.

In 1923, the Treaty of Lausanne, which settled the boundaries of modern Turkey, was concluded in Switzerland.

In 1929, President Hoover proclaimed the Kellogg-Briand Pact, which renounced war as an instrument of foreign policy.

In 1937, the state of Alabama dropped charges against five black men accused of raping two white women in the Scottsboro Case.

In 1969, the Apollo 11 astronauts — two of whom had been the first men to set foot on the moon — splashed down safely in the Pacific.

In 1974, the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously ruled that President Nixon had to turn over subpoenaed White House tape recordings to the Watergate special prosecutor.

In 1975, an Apollo spacecraft splashed down in the Pacific, completing a mission which included the first-ever docking with a Soyuz capsule from the Soviet Union.

Ten years ago: A federal jury in San Francisco convicted former Navy radioman Jerry A. Whitworth of espionage for his role in a Soviet spy ring headed by John A. Walker Jr. (Whitworth was sentenced to 365 years in prison, making him ineligible for parole consideration for 60 years.)

Five years ago: Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced a final agreement on a treaty designed to preserve the Soviet federation while giving more power to the republics. Nobel Prize-winning author Isaac Bashevis Singer died in Miami at age 87.

One year ago: A suicide bomber set off an explosion in a crowded commuter bus in Tel Aviv, Israel, killing six people.

Won't be long before legislators are back in town

AUSTIN — The legislative countdown continues here in the Armadilloplex. Just five months to go before a thundering herd of lawmakers stampedes across the parched landscape into the Capitol for another 140 days of glory.

Already the intrigue is building over personalities and policies. The entire 150-member House and about half the 31-member Senate face re-election Nov. 5. The makeup of the 75th Legislature may be unknown, but the group dynamics already figure to be interesting.

First you have the possibility that the Republicans will approach the magic number of 76 "Rs" needed to elect a speaker from their ranks. They need to add 12 colleagues to do so, but even if they do, many incumbent House Republicans have pledged allegiance to Speaker Pete Laney, D-Hale Center.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, has openly campaigned for the job, and at the recent state GOP convention he was introduced and hailed as the next speaker. Whether that was all just wishful thinking will be clearer Nov. 6, and even more so in early January, when the House organizes and elects a speaker.

The Senate leadership, meanwhile, is not in play, although GOP Chairman Tom Pauken and others have already contemplated scenarios in which Republicans gain a majority, rewrite Senate rules and reduce the powers wielded by Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, the chamber's presiding officer.

A more likely change in the Senate's character and equilibrium revealed itself last week when Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, acknowledged his interest in becoming chancellor of Texas Tech University and the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center. Ouch! What a loss that would be for The Club.

Of course, every session is marked by change and personnel turnover. And there's always some new issue on the horizon, or a tough old issue that resurfaces. Among them: tax reform, school finances, tort issues and ongoing welfare law and penal code tightening.

But the 1997 Bad Penny Award surely will go to congressional redistricting, that gruesome chore that is supposed to be done only once a decade. The 1993 version was declared unconstitutional, and a federal court in Houston must devise a temporary replacement of the racially gerrymandered maps, which will only be good for 1996 elections.

There is no issue more prone to causing political animosity and disrupting other legislative business. One can only hope that our 181 chosen ones will be up to the task.

Even if redistricting weren't on the menu, there would be plenty of emotional issues to make our lawmakers earn their $700 a month. Some of my favorites: smoking and tobacco regulation; the continuing drunken driving crackdown; and affirmative action.

Texas Democrats adopted a platform that addresses several of the above for 1997. The platform states that "local taxpayers must not bear the burden of remedying inadequacy or inequality of funding" public schools. On crime, the party supports "severe punishment for repeat and violent offenders," and something I couldn't find in the GOP platform: planks advocating workplace safety and workers' rights.

The GOP enumerated its 1997 legislative agenda in a document called "A Republican Vision for Texas." Among the policies advocated are a freeze on state government spending and hiring; a reduction in school property taxes; replacement of welfare "with work and marriage"; and equal opportunity without affirmative action.

Of course, every House or Senate member elected in November will face choices on which broad issues to support and which local issues to bring to the table.

With that in mind, it's never too early for voters to be wondering and inquiring about what their legislative candidates plan to do once they get to Austin. They're probably glad to tell you, and later on, they should be held accountable for what they did and did not do.

Some basketball players don't have to play to win

Gregory Sonnabend, center for the Washington Bullets, passed the port as he smoked a $10 cigar. "Did anyone else find the red wine a touch cooler than room temperature?"

Leslie Torbend, forward to the Miami Heat, said, "I'm glad you mentioned it. At these prices, you'd think that the club could afford a decent Haut Brion 1949."

Walter Hildebrand, defense man for the Lakers, said, "I hadn't actually planned to be here this evening, but my Gulfstream is laid up in the shop."

Big Shoes Bogan said, "Weren't you supposed to play the Pistons tonight?"

"Only if I happen to be in Los Angeles at the time. My deal with the Lakers is that I get $1 million each game, whether I play or not."

Nike Nichols of the New York Knicks said, "I used to love basketball until I bought a string of race horses. Now I'd rather win the Triple Crown than beat Michael Jordon in a jump up."

"Where is Michael, by the way?"

"He went to England to be knighted by the Queen as the Most Valuable Knight of the Garter."

"What about Juwan Howard?"

"He's aboard his 150-foot yacht in the Mediterranean."

"During the basketball season?"

"He just flies back on his Lear jet when it's his night to play."

Alonzo Mourning said, "Don't you just love this game? I never thought that tossing a ball into a hoop would give me enough money to buy the Empire State Building."

"Does anyone want to play cribbage for their Pepsi Cola testimonial money?"

Gary Payton said, "I'd love to, but I have to be up early and play polo tomorrow morning."

Shaquille O'Neal, center for the Lakers, lit his cigar and said, "What I hate most about the government is that they're always thinking of new ways to tax the free agents. We do a lot more for this country than the poor."

"The media keeps writing about how much we get paid, but they never say anything about all the free throws most of us make."

"Or how much Gatorade we sell at the A&P."

"I heard that they even object to us having this club with its leather chairs and Michelangelo murals. But if it allows us some privacy they have no right to complain."

One of the players said, "Who wants to go downstairs to the gym and shoot some baskets?"

O'Neal replied, "We've done that already. I'd rather play golf on the club's Robert Trent Jones course."

"Me too. Once you make one slam dunk, it's a waste of money to make any more."

School prayer amendment needed to end discrimination, Hyde says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judges and school districts trying to keep church and state separate often discriminate against students who want to express religious feelings in public, Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said Tuesday.

That's why the nation needs another constitutional amendment clarifying the role of religion in public life, he said.

Some witnesses testifying before a House subcommittee agreed, urging Congress to approve a Republican plan to guarantee students the right to pray in public schools "without government sponsorship or compulsion."

Supporters said the plan is needed to prevent the hundreds of faulty decisions routinely made each year by officials who mistakenly believe the Constitution requires them to stamp out all religious expression in public places.

Opponents said the last thing religious Americans need is a revised First Amendment. Education is the answer, the Rev. Oliver S. Thomas, special counsel for the National Council of Churches, told the House Judiciary Committee constitution subcommittee.

"The amendment before you is fraught with problems," Thomas said. "So much so that to pass this measure would diminish — not expand — the exercise of religious faith."

The proposed amendment seeks to clarify guarantees of religious liberty already in the Constitution but sometimes misunderstood. It was introduced by Hyde, the Judiciary Committee chairman, and House Majority Leader Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas.

"Our problem is not with the Constitution itself, but with courts that interpret the First Amendment in a way that undermines rather than protects religious freedom," Hyde said. "Public school teachers, who accept reports on witches, forbid students from writing reports on Jesus. ... Religious charitable institutions are forbidden from acting like religious charitable institutions when public welfare funds flow through their books."

Hyde said the Housing and Human Development Department once asked a religious group to change the name of its homeless shelter, the St. Vincent de Paul Shelter, because it received federal money for blankets and cots.

"This is simply madness," Hyde said. "And it is madness that is eroding the foundations of American democracy."

Thomas said the amendment now being discussed would restrict religious liberty, not protect it.

Mandating equal treatment and prohibiting discrimination based on religion could take away some of the exemptions religions enjoy today, he said. Conscientious objectors could be required to serve in combat, for instance, he said.

"A guarantee of equal benefits could easily be interpreted to include education," Thomas said. "The result would be the largest unfunded mandate in history."

Religious colleges could be eligible for the same government funding state colleges receive, he said.

"It is no secret that many of the proponents of this amendment would try to use it to obtain public funds to send their children to private religious schools," Thomas said.

Nothing in the amendment would prevent a public school official from leading students in prayers and other religious exercises as long as they were not coercive, Thomas said.

"If one could speak about the weather, one could proselytize," he said. "As a result, each school district would become a battleground where religious groups contend with one another for dominance in the classroom."

Officials suspect arson in fire that destroys mostly black church

PROVIDENCE, Ky. (AP) — Fire destroyed a small church formerly used by a predominately black congregation on Tuesday and investigators who found a kicked-in back door say it might be arson.

However, Kentucky State Police said there was no evidence the fire was racially motivated, and people throughout the town of about 6,000 say there have been no overt acts of racism.

"We're considering the fact it's a hate crime," said Trooper Bryan Pitney. He noted that there was no racist graffiti found and no threatening telephone calls or letters sent to the church.

Arson also was suspected in a fire Tuesday in Arizona that damaged two trailers used for classrooms at the Tucson Full Gospel church, which serves mainly that city's Korean community. The church had received no threats or indications of racial problems, said Pastor John Lee.

There have been more than 70 suspicious fires at church properties belonging to predominantly black congregations in Southern states since 1995. An equal number of fires have been reported at white churches in the region.

There is evidence of racism in at least 18 of the fires. Racial motivation has been ruled out in more than two dozen others.

Also Tuesday, a civil rights group in Texas said a black teen didn't understand his rights when he confessed he set fire to a predominantly black church.

NAACP spokesman Bill Glenn said officers knew 18-year-old Mark Anthony Young was learning impaired. Young faces a state arson charge in connection with a vacant house fire and a federal arson charge for the burning of a Greenville church.

Federal authorities said Young voluntarily confessed "several times" to setting the two fires. He was arrested July 17 in the vacant house fire and charged Friday with the June 10 blaze at the Church of the Living God.

Senate approves welfare bill that ends open-ended assistance

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate passed a welfare bill Tuesday that would reverse six decades of national policy automatically entitling the poor to open-ended assistance. Instead, most families would get aid for no more than five years.

"A system that is failing in every single aspect will now be thrown away and we'll start over with a new system that gives people an opportunity instead of a handout," said Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M.

The vote was 74-24. Democrats split their votes, 23 for and 23 against, while 51 Republicans voted for the measure and one voted against it — Sen. Lauch Faircloth of North Carolina. Faircloth contended the bill was not tough enough. Not voting were Sens. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan.

President Clinton, who vetoed two previous welfare bills passed by the Republican-controlled Congress, welcomed votes in the Senate modifying the measure to meet his objections, but he said he wanted more.

"You can put wings on a pig, but you don't make it an eagle," Clinton said during a campaign stop in Sacramento, Calif.

Later, he said the bill's provisions "that apply to welfare per se are much better and basically pretty good" even though he was still "concerned about the impact of some of the provisions of this on children."

"But I still believe, since it's getting better, I'm optimistic we can make it even better in the conference. And I'll just keep working at it, try to get it done."

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott said the bill would "end welfare as a way of life." He encouraged Clinton to look at it carefully.

"I think what we have here is that there are many that talk about welfare reform, but every time they get up to actually doing something about it, they back away from it," Lott said.

Enactment would put into place the biggest change in the nation's basic program to aid poor families since Aid for Families with Dependent Children was enacted during the New Deal era.

In their key provisions, both the House bill, passed last Thursday, and the Senate version would limit lifetime welfare assistance to five years per family and require recipients to work after two years.

But 20 percent of the families could qualify for hardship exemptions from the time limits. Four major welfare programs would be converted into block grants to states, which would have far more freedom to run their own programs.

In a key vote, the Senate agreed 97-2 to ensure that the poor maintain their current eligibility for Medicaid, indicating that Republicans were not overtly courting another veto.

But Lott suggested that passage of a GOP welfare bill would be a winner for Republicans, no matter how Clinton responds.

"If he signs it, the country will be the beneficiary," said Lott, R-Miss. "If he doesn't, he'll have to explain why."

Welfare reform is popular among voters and Clinton campaigned in 1992 on a promise to "end welfare as we know it" — so both parties have an incentive to see a program enacted.

But Clinton said he wanted to make sure legislation would move people from welfare to work. He said the first congressional efforts to revamp welfare would have penalized children.

Bob Dole, Clinton's likely Republican rival, predicted Monday that the president "will sign anything with welfare on it."

Defense rests in second Whitewater trial

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The defense wrapped up its case in the second Whitewater trial Tuesday after an Arkansas banker denied that $500 he received from his bank in 1993 was used for a $500 contribution the same day to then-Gov. Jim Guy Tucker.

Lawyers for bankers Robert M. Hill and Herby Branscum Jr., concluded testimony after calling 19 witnesses to rebut allegations the two business partners diverted their bank's money into the campaign coffers of Bill Clinton and other Arkansas politicians.

The federal court jury of four women and eight men are expected to begin deliberating Thursday. The jury heard 21 days of testimony.

An 11-count indictment brought by Whitewater prosecutors accuses Hill and Branscum, co-owners of Perry County Bank in Perryville, Ark., of using bank expense checks to reimburse themselves and others for the campaign donations.

They are also accused of concealing from the Internal Revenue Service cash withdrawals by Clinton's 1990 gubernatorial campaign: $30,000 in May that year and $22,500 in November. Federal law requires reporting cash transactions of more than $10,000.

In the first Whitewater trial, Clinton's former business partners, James and Susan McDougal, and former Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, were convicted of fraud on May 28. Tucker resigned as governor July 15 because of his mail fraud and conspiracy conviction.

Clinton was not accused of any wrongdoing in either case, but in both he was called by the defense to testify by videotape. Unlike the first trial, this case has focused on transactions that prosecutors allege benefited Clinton's political career. A top Clinton aide, Bruce Lindsey, was named as an unindicted co-conspirator.

Area's jobless rate rises for June

Officials attribute numbers to seasonal workers entering market

■ Unemployment for city of Midland jumps 1 percent.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Unemployment in Midland-Odessa was sharply higher in June as summer job seekers entered the area job market.

The Texas Workforce Commission reported Tuesday that the unemployment rate for its Odessa-Midland Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) jumped 1.2 percent to 7.1 percent in June from 5.9 percent in May; it was 7.1 percent in June 1995.

For the city of Midland, the unemployment rate jumped 1 percent to 5.8 percent from 4.8 percent in May; it was 5.7 percent a year earlier.

"This is a rise that we expect every year," said Jackie Moseley, manager of the commission's Midland office. "Typically, rates will increase in June as students and seasonal workers enter the labor market."

There was good news in the figures, as the MSA's civilian labor force rose almost 3,000 to 122,800 from 119,900 in May and is above last year's total of 122,100.

Midland's labor force grew to 51,320 from 50,195 in May and is up from 50,981 reported a year earlier.

Total employment in Odessa-Midland rose to 114,100 from 112,800 in May. There were 113,500 area residents employed a year ago.

Total employment was also higher in the city of Midland, with the number of employed Midlanders rising to 48,321 from 47,771 in May and from 48,082 in June 1995.

The bad news in the figures was total unemployment, which grew to 8,700 in Odessa-Midland from 7,100 in May and is just above 8,600 a year ago.

There were 2,999 Midlanders unemployed, up from 2,424 in May and up from 2,899 last year.

"The rate of growth has slowed a little from earlier in the year," said Ms. Moseley, but she said that "overall, the economy of the market is holding steady and it's possible expansion will continue later in the year."

Odessa-Midland ranked 17th among the commission's 27 MSAs. Bryan-College Station had the lowest unemployment in Texas, 3.2 percent, followed by Austin-San Marcos with 3.5 percent, San Angelo with 4.2 percent and Amarillo and Fort

Life in iron lung doesn't stop man or his dreams

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Midlander Eddie Brown favors Mexican food — "the hotter the better." He complains there's not much to watch on television these days. And he enjoys visiting with friends and going out, such as to church or the mall.

The 54-year-old described his activities as "pretty normal." A few seconds later, Brown — all but his head encased in an iron lung — added, "as normal as you can do in this kind of condition."

A victim of polio — which began with a headache when he was 12 and living in Snyder — Brown has since been dependent on an iron lung to maintain respiration.

"I guess I've kinda grown with it. Just something you get used to," Brown said of his fate. "That's about all you can do."

Brown contracted poliomyelitis — an acute infection caused by a virus — in 1954, on the brink of a vaccine being developed. Nowadays, thanks to the vaccine, the disease is rarely seen in developed countries.

Some people exposed to the polio virus have been apparently unaffected or display only mild symptoms including headache, fever, sore throat and vomiting. But oftentimes the disease causes severe muscle stiffness and pain — and paralysis.

City, paramedic accidentally shot during exercise reach settlement

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A Midland paramedic who was shot accidentally during a Midland police SWAT team exercise last year came to a $415,000 settlement with the city of Midland.

Charles A. Hare will receive $265,000 from the city of Midland and $150,000 from the Texas Municipal League, said City Attorney Keith Stretcher.

Stretcher said the municipal league pays like an insurance policy and what they didn't cover the city is responsible for.

The settlement was announced Tuesday during the City Council meeting.

Charles A. Hare to receive $265,000 from the city of Midland and $150,000 from the Texas Municipal League.

Hare was shot in the upper right chest with a .40-caliber handgun during a Midland Police Department SWAT training exercise in an abandoned building at ClayDesta Plaza on April 19, 1995.

Hare had volunteered to participate in the exercise and was pretending to be a criminal.

The officer who shot Hare, Darin Clements, had been primarily using an unloaded shotgun and had to reach for his handgun — which was loaded — during the exercise.

The handgun was a secondary weapon, which means he wasn't using it during the training, police officials said.

A subsequent police investigation revealed that seven officers had loaded weapons during the training and violated an "unwritten procedure" that banned loaded weapons during SWAT exercises.

Clements was penalized three days off without pay.

A Midland County grand jury opted not to take any action against him.

Hare was hospitalized for a few weeks and remained on the city payroll during that time. He received worker's compensation, and the city paid his medical bills, a city official said.

The Midland Police Department Board of Inquiry issued a report, about a month after the shooting, which stated that Clements didn't violate state law, but noted there were several "mistakes in judgment and poor communication."

School uniforms to be exempt from MISD's new dress code

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Speculation among parents of high school students that cheerleader uniforms would be banned during the school day because of the new dress code is unfounded. School uniforms — athletic, football, band, cheerleader and physical education outfits — will be exempt from the dress code, according to Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary education for Midland Independent School District.

The MISD dress code requires hem lengths to be no higher than "three inches above the top of the kneecap" (measured with the student standing).

If applied to school uniforms, cheerleader skirts and physical education shorts would be too short.

"School uniforms will be acceptable," Torres said, noting that the dress code also bans tight fitting clothing. "And football uniforms are tight fitting. We have to draw the line somewhere," he said.

'Football uniforms are tight fitting. We have to draw the line somewhere.'
— Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary education for MISD

The dress code — adopted by the school board — specifies that "a student's attire must not distract from the learning environment, must meet standards of common decency and must not create a hazard to health or safety."

According to the guidelines, "students shall: "

Officials set bond at $300,000 for Hernandez, still in custody

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

ALPINE — Alvaro Hernandez, 44, of Alpine is in custody at Brewster County Jail on charges of aggravated assault of a peace officer, escape and attempted capital murder; bond has been set at $300,000. His mother, Josephina Hernandez, 61, is being held on $20,000 bond on charges of aiding and abetting a fugitive.

The four-day manhunt for Hernandez ended after a shootout with Brewster sheriff deputies and other West Texas law enforcement agencies in which one Alpine officer was injured.

Hernandez, a convicted murderer, had held the Brewster County Sheriff Jack McDaniel at gunpoint and threatened to kill him Thursday, officials said.

On Sunday, McDaniel received a call saying a person was outside the mobile home of Hernandez's mother in Alpine. Deputies

Cicadas announce annual appearance

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The dog days of summer once again have claimed West Texas just as surely as the monotonous, buzzing, shrill chorus of the wide-bodied insect, the perennial cicada, has stirred up the air and the peace.

As nymphs, they spend unobtrusive years underground and suckle on tree and shrubs roots for their nourishing sap. Then, in July and August in West Texas, they emerge only to buzz around for a few weeks, make a little ruckus, mate, go on prolonged fasts, often get eaten by birds, cats, dogs and turtles, and then die quietly.

"Their main job is just to mate and lay eggs," said Midland naturalist Burr Williams.

The male is the noise-maker. Groups of tree-clinging male cicadas vibrate the drumlike membrane on their bellies to attract the females and to gather the boys together. The female lays her eggs on notched-out tree twigs and often dies with the damaged twig.

Eggs turn to nymphs that tumble to the earth, and burrow into the soil to feed on the sap of roots from two to seven years in West Texas.

Depending on their species, they went to the residence and saw no one outside, but asked Ms. Hernandez if they could search the residence.

BOND: Hernandez' mother also remains in custody

She would not allow them to search her home and was acting suspicious, Brewster Chief Deputy Johnny Cardenas said, and then Hernandez began shooting at the officers from a window.

One Alpine police officer was injured with a minor wound on his hand, Cardenas said.

After Hernandez began shooting, about 15 officers ran for cover and began evacuating residents from the area, Cardenas said.

Hernandez held off officials for two hours before he and his mother were arrested.

During the standoff, Hernandez made several calls to 911 in Alpine. "His first call was to warn officers that he had plenty of firearms and ammunition and that he was not giving up," Cardenas said.

In his later calls he expressed concern for his mother and his fears that if he surrendered he would be shot in the back, Cardenas said.

Officers never fired at the residence or at Hernandez, but shot out lights that exposed officers and a tire of a vehicle parked in front of the residence, Cardenas said.

After McDaniel found out Hernandez was repeatedly calling 911, he went to the Alpine police communications center and convinced Hernandez to surrender.

Later, Hernandez threw two guns out the front door — one was the .44 magnum he had taken from McDaniel on Thursday — and with his mother, surrendered to police.

"He was looking haggard," Cardenas said. "You could tell he had been bitten up by mosquitoes, and his clothes were soiled."

Hernandez had fled police Thursday after McDaniel went to issue a warrant for his arrest, the sheriff said.

Hernandez was sought because his bond — in connection with aggravated robbery charges — had been revoked, officials said.

Later, his wife, Imelda Hernandez had dropped him off in Marathon, about 30 miles west of Alpine. She was charged with aiding and abetting a fugitive and is being held at Brewster County Jail in Alpine.

Officials thought Hernandez was heading for Mexico, but instead, he stole a vehicle Saturday morning near Marathon and drove to Alpine where he abandoned the vehicle and made his way back to his mother's home, Cardenas said.

LUNG: Brown hopes to bring fiancee to states

(From 1B)

Brown slowly became paralyzed from the neck down within a week or two after being diagnosed. The young Brown required the help of an iron lung.

"Like most youngsters, I thought I'd get out of it later," he recalled. "I was so sick, I got used to it I suppose. It's so long, I can't really remember."

An iron lung acts as a respirator. The cylindrical tank utilizes a pump to create a vacuum that causes a patient's chest to expand, pulling air into the lungs.

Iron lungs were common — and a life saver — during the polio epidemic in the United States in the 1950s. "They're not used much anymore. They're about obsolete," Brown said.

These days, some refurbished iron lungs remain in use by polio victims. About one-third of patients who suffer paralysis from polio don't recover natural breathing.

During better days, Brown was able to breathe without the iron lung for as many as 18 hours. These days, though, he's confined to the respirator almost around the clock.

That didn't stop him recently from going to church — at the First Assembly of God — or to see the dinosaur exhibit at Permian Mall. Wherever he goes, he has a portable lung in case he develops a shortness of breath.

Brown has long outgrown being self-conscious about his condition. The turning point came in the 1960s from a friend who was paralyzed in both arms.

"I was a little bit apprehensive about going out and meeting people," Brown said. "He said he used to feel the same. He said he was teaching them, the public, about us by going out."

"Ever since I haven't worried about it," Brown said.

In his younger years, Brown's outings away from the iron lung included going to restaurants and going camping. He also attended Odessa College in the late 1960s and studied psychology.

Recently, Brown has come to a new turning point in his life. He wants to get married.

For the last year and couple of months, Brown has corresponded with the niece of fellow churchgoer, Fay Almond. Now Brown wants to marry 23-year-old Marissa Duag, a native of the Philippines.

"We just started talking about it, just like anybody else," Brown said. "I believe it was the grace of God that done it. Most times it wouldn't work like that with someone like me and someone like her."

Brown said he wants to get married for "the same reason anyone else does: to have a companion to love you and to love them."

For obvious reasons, some of the people closest to Brown have questioned the proposed marriage.

"If I thought it was that, it would have never come about ... She's not one of those gold-diggers," he said. "I'm old enough I can see through that stuff."

In May, immigration granted a 90-day period for Ms. Duag to come to the United States. Brown — who has a limited income — hopes to raise her airfare and have immigration approve his financial solvency.

Meanwhile, photographs of Ms. Duag hang on the wall adjacent to his iron lung.

"It's been done before. I'm not the first one who's been married like this," he said.

Brown lives with his sister and her 5-year-old granddaughter.

Brown also has had a daily helper — Maria "Socorro" Enriquez — for the past dozen years. Naturally, the two have become good friends. But she likes to talk more about soap operas than he cares, and he likes to talk more about sports than she does.

Statewide, the unemployment rate was 6.6 percent, up from 5.6 percent in May.

ANNOUNCE: Cicadas are favorite lunch of turtles emerge after a few or several years. Then, they make a rush to a tree to shed their armor-like skin and to buzz away only for a little while before they mate and die.

Not all make it to the tree.

"Turtles really like to eat them," said Williams, who is the education director of the Sibley Environment Learning Center, a project of the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District.

"When they come up out of the ground and if the turtles catch them before they get to a tree to climb to split their skin, turtles will just lunch down on them. They love them."

In Midland, cicadas — which are not to be confused with locusts — may be called "desert cicadas" or "Great Plains cicadas" or otherwise labeled by the number of years they spend maturing underground.

Perhaps not so common in West Texas is the large, dark-skinned, dog-day cicada with greenish markings.

The periodical, or 13-year and 17-year cicadas appear in late May and early June and have red eyes, dark bodies, and wing veins and are not now apparent in West Texas.

The 17-year locusts bear virtually no resemblance to the long-legged grasshoppers of famine-causing appetites of biblical and latter days, said Doug Paxton, who is the Texas Agricultural Extension Service entomologist for Midland and Martin counties.

As ground-borne nymphs, the cicadas "help aerate" the soil "sort of like earthworms" but with bigger and possibly deeper holes, Paxton said.

In Midland, the two-year and seven-year cicadas are not as common as they were in earlier years, such as the 1960s and 1980s, Williams said.

"The big, old cicada-killer wasp came to town (about 1980)," recalled Williams, who said that the large black-and-yellow wasp is about twice the size of the yellow jacket.

Williams said that "like so many wasps," the cicada-killer wasp stings its prey and paralyzes it, takes the cicada underground and lays eggs on or near the cicada. Afterward, the wasp larvae feast on the cicada "while it is still alive and paralyzed."

The wasp "definitely has caused decline" in the cicada population.

Naturally feasting on airborne cicadas are birds, such as Mississippi kites, the Western kingbirds, and mockingbirds, Williams said.

Midland bird rehabilitator Midge Erskine, who noted that cicada nymphs "attack the roots" of shrubs and trees in living off of the nourishing sap, said that cicadas become meals for turtles, dogs, cats and birds after they surface. The insect's abdomen is extremely high in protein.

Mrs. Erskine said that in the 1980s there was a coincidence of high populations of cicadas and Mississippi kites, which is a hawk.

"We never had kites until we had a lot of cicadas," Mrs. Erskine recalled, "and the kites came in, and we don't have many kites now because we don't have many cicadas."

Redistricting changes could lead to complications

WASHINGTON (AP) — Complications will bubble to the surface if a trio of federal judges orders a November special election and December runoff in certain Texas congressional districts, Democrats and Republicans alike agree.

The question before the three-judge panel in Houston is how to remedy the current congressional redistricting map following their finding, upheld by the Supreme Court, that three predominantly minority districts in Houston and Dallas are unconstitutional.

Although the redistricting debate is fraught with endless permutations, the judges essentially have two choices: Allow this year's elections to proceed under the current, unconstitutional lines; or throw out results of the March primaries and April runoffs in some of Texas' 30 House districts, imposing an all-comers, open election on Nov. 5. Districts where no candidate emerged with at least 50 percent of the vote would have a December runoff.

The decision, whatever it may be, is expected by Aug. 8.

The Republican plaintiffs who successfully challenged the current lines, arguing that racial criteria were improperly used, want new lines this year. So do Republican Party officials and GOP congressmen, eager to increase the GOP's representation. Currently, Texas Democrats have an 18-12 edge over Republicans.

Democratic state officials and House members, for their part, would be happy to retain the status quo and allow the Texas Legislature to draw a new map next year.

But even as both sides joust for advantage in the high-stakes fight, they acknowledge that a November special election with a December runoff poses its own set of problems.

Among the possible complications: Texas challengers elected in a December runoff would be disadvantaged in seeking House committee assignments.

Activist recommends cutting double-dosage pills in half to save money amid rising costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A multimillionaire health advocate is using full-page newspaper ads to urge patients to cut double-dosage pills in half to save money. But some medical authorities say the practice may be risky and could change the intended effect of the drugs.

In ads running in more than 40 newspapers Tuesday, self-described "cholesterol crusader" Phil Sokolof calls on heart patients to save money on cholesterol-lowering pills by buying higher-dosage tablets, which then could split to be the equal of lower-dosage tablets.

Sokolof, who last month ran ads accusing a drug company of price-gouging in the sale of anti-cholesterol drugs, said pill splitting could save each patient about $1.60 a day, resulting in tens of millions in total savings nationwide.

A cholesterol-lowering drug called Zocor sells for about the same price for both the 20mg and 40mg dosages, said Sokolof. Patients who are prescribed 20mg, the most common dosage, could buy the same number of 40mg pills and cut each of the larger tablets in half to get two of the prescribed 20mg tablets.

"You've just cut your Zocor bill in half," he said.

But Dr. Atonio Gotto, chief of medicine at Methodist Hospital and at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, said the suggestion is "highly irresponsible."

"These pills are not scored (creased so they can be easily cut)," said Gotto. "They are not meant to be used that way."

As a consequence, he said the triangular-shaped pills cannot be precisely halved, even with a professional pill-splitter tool, and patients may end up getting different doses from day to day.

Gotto also said the pills are coated with a special chemical. When the tablets are broken, he said, the uncoated center is exposed and this could change the way in which the medicine is absorbed by the body as it moves through the digestive tract.

"The is no data testing the effects of the drug if it has been cut in two," said Gotto. "It is pretty serious. I consider the ad to be high irresponsible."

John Doorley, executive director of corporate communications at Merck & Co., which makes Zocor, said the drug has not been tested without the chemical coating.

"We have no idea what happens when people start cutting up tablets," he said. "We don't recommend it."

Some heart doctors, however, said cutting up pills is a common practice.

"It's medically safe," said Dr. Scott Grundy of the University of Texas Southwest Medical Center in Dallas. "Whether or not it would result in savings over the long run is an open question."

NASA funds project to help track fish, ocean conditions from space

BOSTON (AP) — Fishermen and scientists, usually at odds over why fish like haddock and cod are dwindling, will join nets and satellites for a NASA-backed project to study the species and the Atlantic Ocean they live in.

The result could be more flexible fishing regulations, or even a way to guide fishermen to more abundant areas.

Scientists and environmentalists largely blame overfishing for the scarcity of species in the once-rich grounds off New England. Fishermen believe the problem has more to do with pollution and cyclical ocean patterns.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Monday it will pay half the $2.4 million tab for a three-year pilot study to build a database to predict water temperature, current patterns, fish location and plankton levels in the ocean off the northeastern United States.

"If we can predict these changes, and I believe we can, then we can foresee better the ups and downs of fish stocks and better understand how to control fishing efforts," said Brian Rothschild, a University of Massachusetts of Dartmouth scientist and the project's director.

Rothschild runs UMass-Dartmouth's Center for Marine Science and Technology, which is conducting the three-year study with help from Harvard University and Physical Science Inc., a private company in Andover.

Satellite images from NASA's John C. Stennis Space Center will allow scientists to monitor surface temperature and ocean height, track currents and map the ocean floor. The color of the sea as seen from space will determine how much plankton is there to nourish fish.

During the project's first year, dozens of fishermen will attach special sensors to their dragnets to measure temperatures for the entire depth of the ocean.

"After this pilot program begins, I'm confident it will be an example for the entire East Coast and the entire country," Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said at a news conference announcing NASA's involvement.

Fishermen believe government scientists had poor data when they backed the current broad catch limits for haddock, cod and yellowtail flounder — longtime staples of the local fishing industry.

"It's like a jigsaw puzzle," said Jim Kendall, president of the Massachusetts Fishing Partnership. "We are one of the pieces. But anyone who says fishermen are the whole answer is as crazy as someone who says we're not a part of it."

Rothschild said the study will provide new understanding of how environmental factors affect fish stocks.

Other scientists say many of the questions already have been answered.

"Down in this region, there haven't been any measurable large-scale (environmental) changes," said Michael Fogarty of the National Marine Fisheries Services laboratory in Woods Hole.

"The scientific evidence is pretty clear," Fogarty said. It's just that "no one likes what is coming out."

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Natural gas prices rallied Tuesday after falling to a 10-week low the day before on perceptions that America would have ample gas for winter heating.

Natural gas for delivery in August rose 20.9 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange to $2.390 per 1,000 cubic feet.

The buying came on concern that storms off Africa and in the Caribbean will turn into hurricanes and threaten gas platforms in the Gulf of Mexico, said George Ellis, an analyst at GSC Energy in Atlanta. Technical trading strategies also played a role in the rally.

Crude oil and other members of the energy complex rose as well, both on technical trading and expectations supply figures released after the close of trading would show an inventory decline.

September delivery of West Texas Intermediate rose 22 cents to $21.01 per barrel. Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $19.50 a barrel.

After the market closed, the American Petroleum Institute reported the supply of crude oil fell 2.98 million barrels to 311.7 million barrels.

Stocks of gasoline fell 789,000 barrels to 199.9 million barrels, while stocks of distillates, which include heating oil, fell 720,000 barrels to 103.9 million. The percentage of refinery capacity in operation rose 0.2 percentage point to 93.3 percent.

Dollar higher

NEW YORK — The dollar ended marginally higher against most key currencies Tuesday after a Bank of Japan economic report suggested Japanese interest rates won't rise anytime soon.

In New York, the dollar traded at 107.86 yen, up from 107.44 on Monday. The dollar traded at 1.4890 marks, up from 1.4850. The British pound cost $1.5526, up from $1.5505.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday: 1.2130 Swiss francs, up from 1.2078; 5.0365 French francs, up from 5.0245; 1,517 Italian lire, unchanged; 1.3718 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3686.

Energy merger

BRENTWOOD, Tenn. — United Cities Gas Co. will be bought out by a Dallas company in a deal worth $340 million.

United Cities, a multistate distributor of natural and propane gas, said Monday that it is being acquired by Atmos Energy Corp., which provides natural gas service, in a stock swap.

One share of Atmos stock will be exchanged for each share of United Cities stock.

United Cities has 1,300 employees and a current customer base of more than 335,000 in 10 states.

Atmos has 1,650 workers covering six states.

The combined company will have about 1 million customers, making it one of the largest natural gas utilities in the country.

United Cities said its Middle Tennessee employees have been guaranteed employment for one year following completion of the buyout, which is projected to be approved within six to nine months.

United Cities profits for the year ending March 31 were $14 million. Atmos' profits were $26 million for the same period.

No adjustments will be made to the exchange ratio to reflect changes in Atmos' stock price.

"As the industry gets more and more competitive, (and) you look at the strategic alliances that are forming, this just made sense," said United Cities Chief Financial Officer James Ford.

Greenspan fails to reassure markets

■ Fears of higher interest rates continue to roil stock markets.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For the second time in less than a week, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan's testimony to Congress led jittery financial markets to conclude the central bank wasn't planning an immediate increase in interest rates.

His message, delivered Tuesday to the House Banking Committee five days after his appearance before the panel's Senate counterpart, worked on the bond market, which rallied.

But it wasn't enough to help the stock market, where the Dow Jones industrial average fell 44 points as technology shares declined for the third straight session.

"Chairman Greenspan was very careful last Thursday and also today to avoid saying anything that would be upsetting to markets," said economist Allen Sinai of Lehman Brothers.

After Greenspan's Senate testimony last Thursday, the Dow rose 87 points. To the House, he repeated his prediction that the economy will slow in the second half of the year to a level that doesn't presage increasing inflation. But he again noted that the slowdown hasn't occurred.

Business inventories are lean, implying a possible increase in manufacturing activity ahead, Greenspan said. On the other hand, consumers' debt is high and their appetite for buying new goods waning.

"We're watching these carefully to see how the economy evolves," he said. "It's never simple."

He said there have been signs of tightness in regional labor markets for at least a year, both for high-skilled and low-skilled jobs, but inflationary strains haven't emerged as a result.

"We are not in distress, or not enough in distress, to be concerned about it," he said.

Greenspan also sought to offer reassurance about the stock market's gyrations, saying it's not surprising that technology stock prices would swing considerably.

"We know a lot of these companies in five years won't exist. They will have just blown it, they're gone. But they may turn into a Microsoft," he said. "The range of potential possibilities is huge."

Greenspan's testimony last week and Tuesday were taken by analysts as indicating the Fed would not immediately boost short-term interest rates but at the same time wasn't ruling out an increase if later economic developments justified it.

"The chairman's comments ... were artful in indicating there's no panic or abrupt hike in rates coming but that the central bank would move in a deliberate way" if the Fed's forecast doesn't prove accurate, Sinai said.

Fed policy-makers are next scheduled to consider changes in interest rates on Aug. 20 at the policy-setting meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee, one of eight each year.

Over the past several years, the Fed has changed rates only on FOMC meeting days. But, in response to a question, Greenspan said "there's nothing sacrosanct" about that and the Fed would move between meetings if conditions warranted.

He also sought to play down speculation that a new theory — called "opportunistic disinflation" — was influencing the Fed to refrain from increasing interest rates.

The theory, outlined in a Fed staff paper, holds that the Fed "when inflation is low ... should not take deliberate anti-inflation action but rather should wait for external circumstances — such as ... unforeseen recessions — to deliver the desired reduction in inflation."

PaineWebber settles lawsuit on investments

■ Company settles class action lawsuit involving sale of limited partnerships in real estate, oil and gas and others.

N.Y. Times News Service

New York — A federal judge approved an estimated $200 million settlement of a class action suit against PaineWebber Inc. related to its sale of limited partnerships.

Paine Webber Group Inc., the parent company of the brokerage, said the settlement won't cost it anything more than the reserves it already set aside.

The settlement includes $125 million in cash and additional guarantees valued at $75 million, according to Nicholas Chimicles, the attorney heading the committee of law firms that represented 150,000 disgruntled investors.

The value of the guarantees could change as the value of the partnerships fluctuate. Paine Webber guaranteed some of the plaintiffs will get their original investments back by 2000. It guaranteed others, depending on which partnership they invested in, minimum payments by the year 2000.

Investors claimed the brokers misrepresented the risks involved, used fraudulent marketing materials and collected inflated fees.

Paine Webber will pay the $125 million in cash to investors in partnerships without those guarantees, said Chimicles.

PaineWebber brokers sold about $2.5 billion in real estate, energy and other limited partnerships between 1980 and 1992.

Investors claimed the brokers misrepresented the risks involved, used fraudulent marketing materials and collected inflated fees.

The Securities and Exchange Commission investigated whether PaineWebber, the fourth largest U.S. brokerage firm, used misleading sales tactics to attract investors to its Geodyne energy, Pegasus aircraft and real-estate partnerships, many of which lost value during the 1980s.

Paine Webber settled without admitting wrongdoing.

In January, Paine Webber said it agreed to pay $292.5 million to settle client claims, including the $125 million from the class action lawsuit, $10 million to settle with the SEC and state regulators, and $30 million to cover administrative expenses.

The firm, which reserved $200 million in the second quarter of last year, had already set the bulk of the money aside. Paine Webber's second-quarter earnings more than doubled to $92.2 million as general spending and legal costs decreased.

Ski resorts merge into nation's largest

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Vail Associates Inc. announced Tuesday it is merging with Ralcorp Holdings Inc., to create a goliath of a resort company stretching across two counties with five resorts and five million skier days.

"It's enormously significant in terms of marketing," said David Rowan, publisher of Ski Area Management magazine. "The economies of scale will benefit the consumer."

VA President Andy Daly said: "The merger has the potential to transform the ski industry. We will now have five different mountain resorts with different personalities ... all located within a 40-mile radius. No other place in North America, and perhaps the world, will offer such a variety of winter sports and recreational opportunities.

"We will be one of the major tour destinations in the United States," he added in a telephone interview.

Vail, whose owners operate Vail and Beaver Creek in Eagle County, already is the North American leader in skier days. The three Ralcorp resorts of Keystone, Breckenridge and Arapahoe Basis in neighboring Summit County attract nearly as many skiers as the entire state of Utah.

The news was welcomed in Breckenridge, which has been Vail's No. 1 competitor for skier days in Colorado.

"I'm really excited about it. The Breckenridge Ski Area for years has not been an area that has received its proper attention in terms of investment. From what we've seen over the years of Vail Associates they are very aggressive in terms" of improvements on the mountain, said Breckenridge Town Manager Gary Martinez.

Martinez said the town expects to be meeting with Daly this week to discuss some problem areas, including parking.

Daly said Vail Associates' only business is the resort business, and that "should give some comfort" to Breckenridge and the other communities. He also said the Ralcorp resorts make enough money to pay for major improvements.

Joan Christensen, spokeswoman for Winter Park, said it's too soon to say what impact the merger will have on resorts like hers who compete for Denver area skiers.

"I think whenever there is a merger of this magnitude it will certainly have some impact," she added.

Copper Mountain spokesman Kristin Kopplin also said no one can predict the impact of the merger. Copper is in Summit County and had been part of a marketing agreement that sold a ticket good at all four of the county's resorts. Copper set a record this past season with 967,000 skier days.

Daly said Colorado skiers can expect competition for their dollars to remain intense, but added it was too early to say whether a ticket might be offered that would be good at all resorts. Such a ticket probably will be offered overseas visitors.

Daly said the merger will help the resorts compete with publicly funded improvements for the Olympics in Salt Lake City. He said there also is growing competition from the American Skiing Co., which controls seven Eastern resorts with 3.3 million annual skier days, and Intrawest Resorts, Inc. a Canadian ski and resort company based in Vancouver.

"The company will spend in excess of $20 million annually on marketing and promotion and intends to be well-positioned to create vacation packages and build traffic into Denver International Airport and the Vail-Eagle County Airport," Daly said.

John Rutter, executive vice president of ski operations for Breckenridge, Keystone and Arapahoe Basin, said the merger will increase competition for skiers from the Denver metro area. "We believe with the merged company we will be in a better position to offer some exciting opportunities to the Colorado Front Range skier."

He added: "We do not anticipate significant staffing changes as a result of the merger. ... I anticipate that the Breckenridge, Keystone and Arapahoe Basin ski areas will receive a substantial upgrade over the next few years, much as Vail Resorts has already done at Vail and Beaver Creek."

Vail and its real estate partners are spending $150 million this year to upgrade ski and base equipment, and build new housing and entertainment facilities. Vail spokesman Paul Witt said a public stock offering announced in June would be delayed until the fall because of the merger.

That expansion alone had competitors in the ski industry saying it would set new standards.

Papers filed with the merger value Ralcorp's ski and resort operation at more than $310 million. Under the agreement Vail Resorts would assume $165 million of indebtedness for Ralcorp's ski and resort operations and Ralcorp will get about 25 percent common stock interest in the combined company.

StockQuote HotLine

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

NBC ratings

ATLANTA — NBC's prime time Olympic coverage Monday night produced higher ratings than any night of the 1992 or 1988 games.

NBC got a 23.0 rating and 40 share, an increase of 17 percent from the first Monday in the 1992 Barcelona Games, which had a 19.7 rating and 36 share.

It was the highest-rated first Monday of any Summer or Winter Games since the 26.0 in 1976 at Montreal.

NBC research estimates that 92 million people watched all or part of Monday night's telecast, pushing the four-day audience total to 153 million persons, ages 2 and up. That would account for 76.8 percent of all U.S. television households.

The cumulative Atlanta Olympics rating is 21.8 with a 41 share, an increase of 25 percent from Barcelona, which was at 17.4 and 33 through the first Monday.

Each rating point represents 959,000 homes. Share represents the percentage of television sets in use that are tuned to a particular program.

Waiting Bullets

LANDOVER, Md. — Rod Strickland on Tuesday again failed to take his physical for the Washington Bullets, one day before a second deadline was to expire.

The star point guard, believed to be holding out for more money, was supposed to show for the exam Monday but the NBA granted the Bullets an extension.

The physical is the final step in completing the four-player trade on July 15 with the Portland Trail Blazers. The trade sent Strickland and forward Harvey Grant to Washington for forward Rasheed Wallace and guard Mitchell Butler.

ATLANTA '96: THE SUMMER OLYMPIC GAMES

Miracle on Peachtree St.

■ The United States women's gymnastics team shattered decades of Russian dominance by capturing the team gold medal over the Russians.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — All the toughness of a sassy and solid gold American women's gymnastics team could be seen in the pain and joy on the face of Kerri Strug after a final vault into history that ended four decades of Russian dominance.

Her left foot throbbing from a fall on her first vault at the end of Tuesday night's drama, Strug summoned the courage to go for it again knowing full well that this last chance might be the difference between winning and losing.

Strug had been the worrier on the team, the one who put the most pressure on herself, and now she had every one of the 32,048 fans in the Georgia Dome watching her in a breathless silence.

When she spun off the vault and landed hard on both feet, she quickly lifted her left foot and hopped on her right to hold her spot, balancing there precariously while fans erupted with a thunderous cheer.

The United States had won its first women's gymnastics team gold, and the silver medal Russians and bronze medal Romanians were reduced to tears.

As the Soviet Union or the Unified Team of 1992, the Russians had won every gold when they competed in this event since 1952. When they didn't go to the 1984 Los Angeles Games, Romania won.

As it turned out, the American women didn't even need Strug's points after pulling far enough ahead of the Russians on brilliant and gutsy performances from everyone, especially the tiniest, Dominique Moceanu.

Shannon Miller, the most experienced and most honored gymnast, did her part, but she didn't carry the team. Rather, it was Moceanu and Dominique Dawes and Strug who posted the most consistent scores in all four disciplines, and Amy Chow and Amanda Borden who came through when they had to.

But no one knew what the point total would be, with one Russian still on the floor, and nothing could beat Strug's last vault and the tears and cheers and chills she evoked when she was carried to the medal stand in the arms of coach

Mid-City wins Big League championship

By Tom Ruiz
MRT Correspondent

The Mid-City Big League All-Stars of 16 and 18 year olds will join their Midland Little League and Senior League counterparts in Waco for their respective state tournaments.

Mid-City achieved its task by taking the "if" game from Farmers Branch 10-8 Tuesday at Hogan Park's Simon Field. Mid-City won the first game, 9-1 and then held off Farmers Branch in the seventh inning of the deciding game, winning 10-8.

With Midland leading 10-3, Farmers Branch sent 10 men to the plate and scored five runs in the last frame of the deciding game.

With two outs and the score 10-8 and runners on first and third, Midland pitcher Mike Carrasco, who was responsible for the five runs, reached deep down inside to strike out Codei Harrelson to end the game.

"They had pounded my fastball pretty good," Carrasco said. So instead of remaining with the heater, Carrasco did a Keith Lant imitation. Lant had won the first game by keeping hitters guessing at every pitch and several times the big right-hander froze hitters with his breaking pitch.

So Carrasco threw Harrelson three consecutive breaking pitches to end the Running back Eddie George (27), the 1995 Heisman Trophy winner from Ohio State, has set his sights on becoming the Houston Oilers' No. 1 offensive threat this season.

Heisman trophy winner ready to battle Cowboys

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — So far, Eddie George has taken his introduction into the NFL in stride.

He sidesteps comparisons to Earl Campbell with the same deftness that he eludes linebackers, but the Houston Oilers scrimmage against the Dallas Cowboys on Wednesday night has gotten his attention.

"I kind of got my feet wet in minicamp, but this means you're getting everything wet, going against the Super Bowl champions," George said. "I'm really anxious to see what it's all about. I just want to continue learning and get better."

George, the Heisman Trophy winner from Ohio State, capped Tuesday's morning scrimmage with a bullish 60-yard touchdown run that brought cheers from fans and players.

"The big fella showed he's got some speed didn't he?" running backs coach Sherman Smith said.

In four days of workouts, George has shown speed and toughness and now he hopes he's ready for the Cowboys test.

"When I was in college watching the pros, you'd see

Midland is threatening to become the worst team in the Texas League.

One run at a time.

The Angels dropped yet another 1-run game Tuesday. This time 6-5 in 10 innings to the Jackson Generals at Christensen Stadium. Midland has the worst record in the league at 13-22.

They are 15 games below .500 for the year at 44-59 for the worst season-long mark.

But with a few runs here and there the Angels could be the hottest team in the league. They have lost nine of their last 14 games and eight of those loses have come by one run. In all, the count Tuesday rose to 11 Angel 1-run games in the last 14.

Tuesday Midland tied the game at 5-5 in the bottom of the ninth on a 2-out, RBI single by Keith Luuloa that scored Jose Monzon.

But Jackson (14-20) scored a run in the top of the tenth on a manufactured run aided by two wild pitches from Angel reliever Anthony Chavez. General Tim Forkner singled and went to second and then third on the errant pitches.He scored when Angel first baseman Ty Boykin tried to throw him out at third and tossed the ball past Midland third baseman Aaron Guiel.

It was the fourth time in five games the Generals and Angel went into extra innings.

Chavez pitched five innings and gave up only one earned run. But he took the hard-luck loss to fall to 1-2. General reliever Tom Martin was credited with the win in three innings of work to go to 6-2.

Midland tied the game at 4-4 in the fourth inning off starter Ryan Creek with the aid of two Jackson errors. Leon Glenn had a run-scoring RBI. He also stole second base and came home on a General throwing error.

Jackson grabbed a 4-0 advantage in the second on a wild pitch by Angel starter Matt Perisho and three RBIs.

Perisho was making his first Double A start after being promoted from Single A Lake Elsinore.

He walked five batters and the Angels walked eight in all. Three of those batters scored.

ANGEL NOTES: Tonight's game against Jackson is the final regular-season meeting between the two clubs. After Jackson, the Angels host Shreveport in a six-game series at Christensen Stadium beginning on Thursday.

Smoltz wins 17th game

NL Roundup

ST. LOUIS — John Smoltz earned his major league-leading 17th victory, striking out 10 and pitching the Atlanta Braves past the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 Tuesday night.

Chipper Jones and Marquis Grissom each homered as the Braves improved to 5-0 at Busch Stadium this year.

Smoltz (17-4) gave up five hits and walked two in eight innings. He increased his strikeout total to 176, also most in the majors.

Todd Stottlemyre (9-7), who had won his last three decisions, pitched his fourth complete game of the year.

Rockies 10, Mets 7, 1st game

DENVER — Quinton McCracken and Eric Young had RBIs in the eighth inning and Colorado won despite blowing a six-run lead in the first game of a day-night doubleheader.

With one out in the eighth, Vinny Castilla singled off Doug Henry (2-3) and Jayhawk Owens walked. McCracken then singled down the right-field line. Henry walked pitcher Bruce Ruffin (5-3), and Young's grounder bounced over second baseman Jose Vizcaino for a two-run single.

The Rockies had 19 hits, including consecutive homers by Walt Weiss and Ellis Burks, but stranded 14 runners.

Dodgers 7, Marlins 1

MIAMI — Mike Busch hit a three-run double for Los Angeles after Al Leiter walked three straight batters in the fourth inning.

Ismael Valdes (11-5) won his fourth decision in five starts, allowing seven hits and one run in five innings.

Los Angeles broke open the game with four runs in the seventh, helped by an error and a wild pitch.

Cubs 9, Giants 6

SAN FRANCISCO — Sammy Sosa hit two home runs as Chicago rallied from a 5-1 deficit.

Sosa broke a 5-5 tie with his league-leading 33rd home run, a three-run shot in the Cubs' five-run seventh inning. An inning earlier, he hit a two-run homer off San Francisco starter Shawn Estes.

In the seventh, Rey Sanchez singled off reliever Rich DeLucia (3-4), went to third on pinch-hitter Scott Bullett's single and scored on Brian McRae's double. Bullett tied it 5-5 when first baseman Matt Williams dropped Doug Glanville's grounder. An out later, Sosa's homered.

Rodney Myers (2-1) pitched two scoreless innings, and Bob Patterson worked three innings for his second save.

Reds 5, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Barry Larkin homered twice and drove in all five Cincinnati runs, leading Kevin Jarvis and the Reds past Philadelphia for the seventh consecutive time this season.

Pirates 5, Expos 1

PITTSBURGH — Pinch-hitter Mike Kingery hit a grand slam in the sixth inning and Jon Lieber pitched seven solid innings.

Kingery's second career grand slam was the first by a Pittsburgh pinch-hitter since Curtis Wilkerson hit one off St. Louis' Lee Smith.

Padres 7, Astros 4

HOUSTON — Mike Hampton allowed the go-ahead run to score in the fifth inning when he hit a batter with the bases loaded and John Hudek balked home another run as Houston's winning streak ended at four.

Gooden hurls two-hitter at Rangers

Rangers . . .0
Yankees . . .6

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden, in his strongest outing since throwing a no-hitter May 14, allowed two hits in seven innings Tuesday night to lead the New York Yankees past the Texas Rangers 6-0.

Gooden (10-5), who allowed 10 runs and eight walks in less than five innings last Thursday against Milwaukee, yielded only a third-inning double to Mark McLemore and a sixth-inning double to Kevin Elster. He walked one and struck out five.

Mariano Rivera pitched the eighth and Dale Polley recorded the final three outs.

Tino Martinez's RBI single off Roger Pavlik (12-3) in the fourth gave the Yankees a 1-0. Pavlik allowed eight hits and four runs in 6 2-3 innings.

Three of those hits came in the sixth, when the Yankees scored two runs on Ruben Sierra's RBI double and Derek Jeter's run-scoring groundout.

Wade Boggs singled with one out in the seventh and, after Joe Girardi lined out, Dennis Cook relieved Pavlik and allowed an RBI double to Martinez.

Cook, who didn't retire a batter, also issued three walks, including one to Darryl Strawberry with the bases loaded that forced in the fifth New York run. Girardi added an RBI single in the eighth.

Pavlik had won seven of his previous eight decisions entering the game and lost to the Yankees for the first time this season after two wins.

Notes: New York's Melido Perez threw 92 pitches in an eight-inning rehab assignment, allowing four hits and striking out seven.

Steinbach, Athletics slam reeling White Sox

Associated Press

AL Roundup

CHICAGO — Terry Steinbach hit a grand slam and Mark McGwire and Geronimo Berroa had consecutive shots Tuesday night as the homer-crazy Oakland Athletics beat the Chicago White Sox 8-4.

Steinbach's homer was his fifth in three games, while McGwire's major league-leading 35th was estimated as the longest by an opponent at new Comiskey Park since such records started being kept four years ago. It traveled 452 feet.

Berroa followed on the next pitch in the fourth inning with his 25th homer to make it 2-1.

Oakland, which extended its club record to 19 straight games with a homer and its major league team lead to 167, scored five in the sixth inning off Alex Fernandez (9-7). Jason Giambi homered for the A's in the ninth.

The score was tied at 2 when Rafael Bournigal reached on first baseman Dave Martinez's error to start the Oakland sixth. Giambi and Berroa hit singles to put the Athletics up 3-2.

After Scott Brosius walked, Steinbach hit his second grand slam of the season and eighth of his career.

Steinbach had homered twice in each of the previous two games and now has 24 for the season.

Oakland's outburst helped Don Wengert (4-7) to a victory. He allowed eight hits in seven innings, including Robin Ventura's 23rd homer and Ron Karkovice's eighth.

Ray Durham scored Chicago's first run in the second when he raced all the way from first after Karkovice's looping single went off Jose Herrera's glove in center. Durham hit an RBI single in the fourth.

Giambi hit his 19th homer as the A's sent Chicago to its fifth loss in six games.

Twins 3, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Paul Molitor doubled home the tying run in the eighth inning and scored on a wild pitch as the Minnesota Twins rallied to beat the Baltimore Orioles.

Rick Aguilera (3-4) pitched seven innings of five-hit ball for the Twins, who handed the reeling Orioles their 10th loss in 14 games. He struck out four and walked one after entering the game 0-2 with an 11.48 ERA in his previous three starts.

Eddie Guardado struck out the side in the eighth and got one out in the ninth before Dan Naulty finished for his third save. David Wells (6-10) was the loser.

Royals 7, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Kevin Appier, the subject of several rumors as the July 31 trade deadline approaches, won his fourth straight start and the Kansas City Royals beat the Boston Red Sox.

The game was delayed 1 hour, 55 minutes at the start because of rain. Two minutes after it began, Royals leadoff hitter Jose Offerman was ejected by plate umpire Al Clark for arguing a called third strike.

Craig Paquette hit his team-leading 13th homer for Kansas City, which has won seven of nine games. Five of the Royals' runs were unearned because of four errors by the Red Sox, whose 87 misplays are second-most in the AL.

Appier (7-7) gave up two earned runs and five hits in 5 1-3 innings. He struck out six and walked four.

Appier recently turned down a contract offer by the Royals, leading to speculation that the team would trade its ace before the deadline. The New York Yankees and Baltimore are said to be among the clubs interested in him.

Mike Greenwell hit his 125th home run, placing him 15th on Boston's career list. It was his second homer of the season, and first since returning July 19 from a fractured left ring finger.

Aaron Sele (4-7) pitched 5 2-3 innings and gave up seven runs and nine hits. He is winless in six lifetime starts against Kansas City.

Blue Jays 3, Indians 1

TORONTO — After scoring 38 runs for Pat Hentgen in his three previous starts, the Toronto Blue Jays made Hentgen work for his latest win.

Joe Carter hit his 350th career home run and Shawn Green hit a two-run shot, and Hentgen made the runs stand up in Toronto's 3-1 victory Tuesday night over the Cleveland Indians.

Hentgen (11-6) scattered five hits in 7 1-3 innings to snap Cleveland's winning streak at three games. He struck out two and walked six to win his fourth straight start.

Hentgen walked the bases loaded in the first, but needed a visit by pitching coach Mel Queen to calm down. He struck out Jeromy Burnitz to end the threat.

"The first couple innings I struggled a bit with my control," Hentgen said. "I was lucky to make a decent pitch to Burnitz with the bases loaded. Then Mel came out and told me to slow down a bit. It helped."

BIG: Rogers has bases clearing double game.

"Winning this thing is good for the kids in Midland-Odessa, and the Permian Basin," said coach Joe Nobles. "When you make a commitment to do great things, great things usually happen."

But it was the off balance pitching of Lant that baffled Farmers Branch and put Midland in the "if" game.

Lant, who is Howard College-bound in the fall, struck out five, and he had them guessing all night long. Just as the Farmers Branch hitters were expecting a smoking fastball he'd tease them with a bender and freeze them like an Eskimo Pie.

"They didn't give up on anything, and our defense did a great job" Lant said.

The Midland defense did everything it was asked to do. In the fourth inning of the first game with Midland leading 2-1 and Farmer's Branch threatening with a man on first, Lant got Casey Cox to bounce to second baseman Chad Villarreal who relayed to Carrasco at second. He threw to Ross Nobles who then made a scooping grab to complete the twin-killing.

Joey Berma also came up with a spectacular grab in the first when he extended his whole body for a dying looper.

And then there was the business of the hot Midland bats. They pounded out nine hits. Villarreal went to 2-for-3 with a double and Jason Rogers cleared the bases with a double that bounced off the right field fence in the 3-run sixth inning.

Midland scored twice in the third inning, twice in the fourth, and two more times in the fifth.

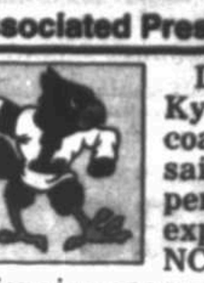
Crum expecting the worst with NCAA announcement

Associated Press



LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Louisville coach Denny Crum said the worst penalty he's expecting from the NCAA for rules violations is a one-year ban from postseason play.

"We might lose a scholarship or maybe we can't go to the tournament for one year," Crum said Monday after an hourlong session before the Louisville board of trustees. "I don't think they (the NCAA Committee on Infractions) will be very stiff. We've spent our own time and money on this, and the NCAA Enforcement staff says they are going to relay that to the Committee on Infractions."

Crum noted the Cardinals self-reported nine of 10 violations listed in the NCAA's letter of inquiry.

Not reported was former assistant coach Larry Gay's use of a car provided by a local dealership. Gay resigned in January of this year.

Crum said he had been assured by the NCAA staff that all but one of the 10 allegations were minor.

Other violations deal with former player Samaki Walker's use of a car and improper contact by Gay and a booster with recruits. Walker turned pro after his sophomore season.

Meanwhile, Louisville president John Shumaker said Crum's job isn't in danger.

"Nobody's job is at stake at this point," Shumaker said. "We just want to make sure we have the internal checks in place to make sure this doesn't happen again."

Crum also expressed optimism because none of the people involved in the violations is currently affiliated with the university.

But an NCAA official said that fact doesn't matter.

"The institution is ultimately responsible for their coaches or administrators when they are there," said David Swank, the chairman of the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

Crum said it was impossible to monitor the all the individuals involved.

BEACH VOLLEYBALL

The U.S. women posted a 3-0 record on opening day of the double-elimination event. The American teams were Linda Hanley and Barbra Fontana Harris, Gail Castro and Deb Richardson, and Holly McPeak and Nancy Reno.

All three U.S. men's teams had byes.

EQUESTRIAN

Jill Henneberg, the fourth U.S. rider on the cross country endurance course, fell with her horse, Nirvana II, while jumping the covered bridge set between ponds at fence 13 and retired from the course.

The United States fell to second with 244.6 penalty points, behind Australia with 183.6.

FENCING

Italy won the gold medal in team epee, beating Russia 45-43 for the title after defeating the United States 45-44 earlier in the day.

FIELD HOCKEY

The American women's team lost 1-0 to England, falling to 1-1-1 in the tournament.

JUDO

ROWING

After Cyrus Beasley's right oar grabbed too much water and messed up his start in the men's single sculls' repechage, the American recovered to edge Italy's Giovanni Calabrese for second place and a spot in Thursday's semifinal.

"I've been in this position before so it didn't bother me much," Beasley said. "I just relaxed ... and tried working my way back by inches."

SHOOTING

American teen-ager Kim Rhode won the women's double trap, overcoming a mild case of jitters to capture the first gold medal in the new Olympic event.

Rhode, 17, sprinted into the stands and jumped into the arms of her father, Richard, moments after firing off the last two shots from her shotgun. She blasted both clay targets with her final two shots to finish with 141 points.

TABLE TENNIS

The U.S. team of Wei Wang and Lily Yip opened the competition with a 21-18, 11-21, 21-11 victory over Emily Noor and Huberta Vriesekoop of the Netherlands.

VOLLEYBALL

The U.S. men's team defeated Argentina 15-7, 15-8, 15-11 to improve to 2-0 in Pool A.

"If we can get out of here in three, we'll take it," captain Bob Ctvrtlik said. "It is a game of emotion. That's where the crowd comes in. If we're in Argentina, that's a lot tougher set to close out. But the crowd gives you that little extra lift."

Brazil's reign as Olympic champion could be over. After losing its opener to Argentina, the Barcelona gold medalists were upset 15-11, 15-13, 15-8 by Bulgaria.

WATER POLO

Mike Evans scored three goals as the U.S. team defeated Romania 10-5 to improve its record to 3-1 and guarantee itself a berth in the quarterfinals.

Three-time champion Yugoslavia beat Germany 9-8 even though Vladimir Vujasinovic had to leave the pool after being punched in the face by German Uwe Sterzik.

WEIGHTLIFTING

Tim McRae, lifting in the 154 1/4-pound division, set American records in the snatch (319 1/2 pounds), clean-and-jerk (391 1/4) and total (710 3/4). But he had no chance for a medal.

The gold medal went to Zhan Xugang of China, who set world records in the snatch (357 pounds), clean-and-jerk (430) and total (788).

WRESTLING (GRECO-ROMAN)

Two Americans won silver medals — Brandon Paulson at 114 1/2 pounds and Matt Ghaffari at 286.

Ghaffari almost pulled off a huge upset. He lost 1-0 in overtime to Russia's Alexander Karelin, who is unbeaten in 10 years of international competition.

"This rips my heart out," Ghaffari said.

YACHTING

Three American groups were in second place in their classes after two days of competition: Mark Reynolds and Hal Haenel in the Star Class; Courtney Becker-Dey in the Europe Class, and Jeff Madrigali, Jim Barton and Kent Massey in Soling.

Americans rack up six more swimming medals

By Howard Ulman
AP Sports Writer

Swimming

ATLANTA — America's swimmers are getting better every day in an Olympic pool where they were expected to struggle.

Jeff Rouse, the world's best backstroker, dominated his 100-meter race. Amy van Dyken fought off a strong challenge in the 100 butterfly. And the United States still hasn't been beaten in an Olympic men's 400 freestyle relay.

Tuesday night's haul was the best yet — three gold medals, one silver and one bronze. The four-day total to 17 — seven gold, eight silver and two bronze. No other country is close.

"This is a team that no one really expected anything out of," van Dyken said. "They weren't looking for us. I said at the trials 'we're going to sneak in there, incognito, and blow the place up.' That's what we're doing."

Earlier, as still another American flag was raised, the freckle-faced van Dyken stood tall on the medal podium, her face aglow with a smile.

Underneath, they all wore white T-shirts with big red letters: "THANK YOU AMERICA!"

In these Centennial Games, the relay team's gold medal was the 100th for the U.S. men in Olympic swimming history.

Loader won in 3:47.97, followed by Paul Palmer of Great Britain in 3:49.00, and Daniel Kowalski of Australia 3:49.39. Loader was first and Kowalski third in the 200 freestyle Saturday.

Of all America's medalists Tuesday night, none has accomplished more than Rouse. He has 18 of the best 26 times in the 100 backstroke. On Tuesday night, he led early and never was threatened.

America's medal-filled night ended in an event it has never lost in the Olympics and world championships. The victory may have been sweeter because Gary Hall Jr. finally outdid Russian star Alexander Popov.

Softball team allows run, still wins 6-1

Softball

COLUMBUS, Ga. — The pitching-strong U.S. Olympic softball staff showed it's human side Tuesday night, finally giving up a run in the third day of competition.

It still didn't matter.

Japan's Haruka Saito hit a solo home run in the fifth, but left-hander Michele Smith shook it off and threw a three-hitter, striking out 11 as the undefeated Americans won 6-1 Tuesday night.

Kim Maher gave the U.S. team (3-0) all the runs necessary with a three-run homer in the first inning. Her drive over the left-center field fence followed one-out singles by Julie Smith and Lisa Fernandez.

Fernandez added a three-run homer in the sixth after Laura Berg was hit by a pitch and Julie Smith singled.

The United States also had a pair of three-run homers in Monday's victory, by Dot Richardson and Sheila Cornell.

The Americans knocked out 10 hits, drew three walks and had two batters hit by a pitch, but wasted several scoring opportunities, stranding eight runners.

Julie Smith had a perfect night, going 3-for-3 with a walk. Berg was 2-for-2 and reached when she was hit by a pitch.

Michele Smith, one of five overpowering pitchers, allowed only a bunt single until the fifth.

After giving up Saito's leadoff homer, she retired the next two before running into further trouble. Noriko Harada drew a walk and Misako Ando reached on an infield single. But she struck out pinch-hitter Kyoko Mochida to get out of the jam.

The United States, favored to take the gold, is the only unbeaten team left in the eight-team field.

Women's Soccer

ORLANDO, Fla. — The United States clinched a berth in the semifinals of the inaugural women's Olympic soccer tournament Tuesday night, paying a price to do so.

Star Mia Hamm left the field with an apparent ankle or leg injury in the 81st minute of the Americans' 2-1 victory over Sweden at the Florida Citrus Bowl. The severity of the injury was not immediately known.

The U.S. forward collided with Sweden goalkeeper Annelie Nilsson going for a header and crawled off the end line, signaling to the U.S. bench for a substitution. She was carried from the field to the locker room on a stretcher.

Tisha Venturini and Shannon MacMillan scored for the United States, which opened the tournament with an impressive 3-0 victory over Denmark on Sunday. Sweden forced the Americans to work harder than the Danes, but didn't have any more luck putting the ball in the net.

The Swedes' lone score was an own goal by American defender Carla Overbeck in the 63rd minute. MacMillan's goal two minutes earlier had given the U.S. a 2-0 lead.

The Americans, favored to face Norway for the gold medal, assured themselves a spot in Sunday's semifinals in Athens, Ga. They will be joined from Group E by China, which plays the United States in its final premliminary-round game Thursday in Miami.

The Americans have been on a mission since heading to last year's world championships in Sweden as the favorite and returning home with a disappointing third-place finish. Tuesday night's victory improved the team's record to 19-1-1 this year.

Home crowd an advantage in volleyball

Men's Volleyball

ATHENS, Ga. — The U.S. men's Olympic volleyball team showed Argentina what it can do when it has the cheering, flag-waving crowd on its side.

Even when Argentina made a run in the third set, closing a seven-point lead to one, Team USA refused to let the momentum change. It held on to sweep Argentina 15-7, 15-8, 15-11 on Tuesday at the University of Georgia to improve to 2-0 in Pool A.

"If we can get out of here in three, we'll take it," captain Bob Ctvrtlik said. "It is a game of emotion. That's where the crowd comes in. If we're in Argentina, that's a lot tougher set to close out right there. But the crowd gives you that little extra lift."

The Americans saw the other side last year, when Argentina got a huge emotional boost from the home crowd in the Pan American Games and beat the Americans twice.

In the gold medal match, a frenzied, overflow crowd sang a fight song through the entire tie-breaking fifth set, which Argentina won 20-18.

"It was the most awesome thing I've heard," U.S. coach Fred Sturm said. "I think a home crowd can really jack up a home team. This is a relatively novel experience for us — a home crowd cheering for us."

Sturm said he thought about making substitutions in the third set, but again used only six players. "We need to test ourselves in that adversity," he said.

Tuesday's crowd wasn't as raucous as the South Americans, but it got louder every time the Argentinians threatened and got on its feet every time Team USA served a set point.

TEAM: Strug brings home USA's gold

(From 1C)

Bela Karolyi.

When he gently let her down, and she hopped two steps up to the gold medal platform with the help of Miller and Moceanu, there was hardly a dry eye in the building.

Mary Lou Retton, winner of the all-around gold in Los Angeles when the women's team took a silver, watched with her eyes glistening and a smile as broad as if she had been part of this team. In a way, she had, paving the way with her triumph and her relationship with Karolyi, the burly Romanian who has coached so many champions for his homeland and his adopted country.

"We've spent a long time waiting," Retton said. "To win in Barcelona would have been marvelous. To do it at home is oh, so much sweeter."

At the start of the night, when the United States trailed Russia by .127 points, Retton described Miller as "the glue to this team." But Strug, she said, was by far the strongest vaulter.

"She's always be second or third or fourth in the lineup and she's never been given the big forum," Retton said. "So I really think she's going to be our clincher."

That's exactly what Strug was.

"Gosh!" Retton exclaimed when she saw that last shaky landing. "That's a tremendous amount of pressure. But she has worked her lifetime to anchor that spot. I was real confident going into the vault. It's usually one of our strongest events. Then I got real, real nervous when Moceanu sat down."

Moceanu, a perky, 14-year-old sprite, had performed spectacularly on the uneven bars, the balance beam and the floor exercise, where she seemed to float on air to the music of "The Devil Went Down to Georgia." Her scores ranged from 9.812 to 9.850.

But on the vault, Moceanu was bedeviled by slips on the landings of both of her attempts and had to settle for a poor 9.200.

When it was Strug's turn, no one knew if that mark by Moceanu would be enough. The team's lowest mark would be thrown out, and all Strug needed was one clean vault to clinch the gold no matter what the remaining Russian gymnast did.

Then, astonishingly, Strug fell on her first landing, getting only a 9.162, and a hush spread through the Georgia Dome. Could the United States lose the gold if Strug fell again? It was impossible to tell from the board, since the Russian's total hadn't been posted.

"Her leg hurt," said coach Martha Karolyi, Bela's wife, who thought Strug might have a stress fracture. "But because of her team spirit, she wanted to go again."

As Strug landed after that last vault, the Karolyis looked up and saw the score: 9.712.

"We got the big one, we got the big one," Bela and Martha shouted to each other.

Centennial Games: Day 5

Seles, Agassi advance in tennis tournament

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — Monica Seles got off to a fast start in her Olympic debut today, beating Li Chen of China 6-0, 6-4.

Seles swept the first set in 22 minutes, and Li double-faulted four times after taking a 3-2 lead in the second set.

Andre Agassi also made a successful debut as an Olympian, losing his serve twice in the first set before rallying to edge Swede Jonas Bjorkman 7-6 (8-6), 7-6 (7-5).

The top-seeded Seles, who was born in Yugoslavia and became a U.S. citizen in 1994, wore a blue-and-white outfit with a red ribbon in her ponytail. The center-court crowd of about 8,000 encouraged Seles with chants of "USA, USA" and gave her a standing ovation after she completed the victory in 59 minutes.

Defending gold medalist Marc Rosset swept Moroccan Hicham Arazi 6-2, 6-3 in the opening center-court match. Third-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, the bronze winner at Barcelona, took the final three games to beat Belgian Dominique Van Roost 6-1, 7-5.

The first seed to lose was No. 15 Carlos Costa of Spain, who was eliminated by Andrea Gaudenzi of Italy 6-3, 6-2.

The eighth-seeded Rosset, who decided just recently to defend his title, won five consecutive games in the first set to take command against Arazi, ranked 80th in the world.

Top pros Boris Becker, Thomas Muster, Michael Chang and Jim Courier skipped the Olympics to concentrate on preparations for the U.S. Open, and Rosset nearly did the same.

Monica Seles waves to the crowd after her straight-set, 6-0, 6-4 win over China's Li Chen in the first round of the tennis competiton.

"I thought maybe two weeks ago that it was not the best solution for me to come here," he said. "It's a tough decision. The Olympics are only once every four years, but you also have to play for your ranking and your career.

"But I won the gold in Barcelona, and I wanted to have that Olympic feeling one more time."

Unlike some of his rivals, Agassi considers Stone Mountain a pinnacle in his career. One reason is that his father, Mike, competed in the 1948 and 1952 Olympics as a boxer for Iran.

"Being here is a great moment in my life," Agassi said. "It is a great honor."

'Pocket Hercules' wins third weightlifting gold

By John Nadel
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — For fans of the 4-foot-11 mass of muscle known as the "Pocket Hercules," stature isn't a function of height.

Turkey's Naim Suleymanoglu made history Monday by becoming the first lifter ever to win a third Olympic gold medal. Though he lifts in the 141-pound division, he was a giant to the dozens of Turks and Turkish-Americans cheering him on.

"He is the biggest!" declared Gazi Aydin, a Turkish-born jeweler who lives in Atlanta.

"We love him very much. We are so proud of him, man," said Tolga Ozbakan, a Turk now studying at Georgia Tech.

Ten lifters had tried previously for a third Olympic gold — and failed. An 11th, super heavyweight Alexander Kurlovich of Belarus, will give it a go next week.

Suleymanoglu, an idol in Turkey since he won his first gold medal at the 1988 Olympics, broke his own world record by combining to lift 738 1/2 pounds in the snatch and clean-and-jerk.

At the medal ceremony, Suleymanoglu shook hands with Leonidis and then kissed him on both cheeks. It was a significant gesture, because Greece and Turkey nearly went to war in January after Turkey laid claim to an uninhabited island in the eastern Aegean Sea that Athens says is Greek.

Vernon Patao, 26, of Wailuku, Hawaii, finished 22nd, and Thanh Nguyen, 32, of Pacifica, Calif., was 32nd.

Daytona Beach, Fla.'s Tim McRae celebrates after setting U.S. records in the snatch, clean-and-jerk and total combined in the 130-kg weightlifting competiton Tuesday.

Another American, Tim McRae of Daytona Beach, Fla., lifted in the 154 1/4-pound division today and set American records in the snatch (319 1/2 pounds), clean-and-jerk (391 1/4) and total (710 3/4), but had no chance for a medal.

McRae, 25, was ranked third out of the 16 lifters who competed in the first two sessions of the day, but each of the 12 lifters scheduled to compete in the third session had higher lifetime bests than his total.

McRae broke the American records he set in the U.S. Olympic trials three months ago.

European media group files protest

By Marc Rice
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — The European Broadcast Union, a consortium that is the second-largest Olympics rightsholder behind NBC, has filed a formal protest with Atlanta organizers over working conditions at the games.

There has been a chorus of complaints from individual media outlets over technical problems in the first days of the Olympics. The entry into the fray by the 65-member EBU, which paid $250 million for the rights to broadcast the Atlanta Games in Europe, was sure to turn the heat up further.

Reports that the union wanted some of its money back were denied today by Jarle Hoeysaeter, an EBU spokesman. But he did not rule out the possibility that the union might seek a refund if the problems are not corrected.

"We will see day by day what happens," he said. "They (EBU members) are mighty irritated. It's very difficult to work here."

Centennial Games: Day 5

All of this, and no really good moo goo gai pan

By Charles J. Hanley
AP Special Correspondent

Atlanta at large

ATLANTA — Not to complain, the Chinese gentleman said, but we're a tad weary of hamburger, sort of cramped in our rooms, turned off by your cheap bazaar, absolutely fed up with your bus system," and WOULD YOU PLEASE DO SOMETHING ABOUT THOSE FIRE ALARMS!

No, the Chinese are not having fun yet at the Olympics — least of all in the race for gold.

China's 495-member contingent came to Atlanta set to score big in swimming and other sports. But in the first two days, only one of eight top Chinese women swimmers even qualified for the finals.

Serves them right, say the Americans, who insist the secret to their past success was high-performance drugs. Seven Chinese women swimmers tested positive for drugs in 1994, leading to more frequent tests that would have discouraged further use.

The Chinese are hardly alone in complaining about the "glitch games," but their litany of woes is impressive:

RING THEM BELLS: Three separate days, fire alarms sounded off mysteriously in the Chinese dormitory at Georgia Tech's Olympic Village. Most unnerving was the 3 a.m. alarm the first morning of swimming competition. Swimmers and others were roused from their beds, stood outside for a half-hour, then tried to get back to sleep.

"College pranks," pronounced village security chief Mike Mizell. But Wei Jizhong is unconvinced.

"This occurred three times, and it didn't happen where the Americans are," said the Chinese Olympic Committee secretary general. "Common sense would tell you it would affect your work the next day."

DESTINATION NOWHERE: Remember the movie "Speed"? The Chinese feel like characters in a bus-horror flick called "Slow."

Chinese basketballers were stranded for two hours after one game, waiting for the olympically confused bus system. Other athletes were left behind while going through standard drug-testing. And when volleyballers wanted to watch the competition play, they were told to cough up $800 for a bus, for a two-mile round trip.

NONE FROM COLUMN A: Among the 16 tons of hamburger, 274,500 cheese slices, 199,000 sandwich buns and 262 gallons of ketchup provisioned for athletes at the village, there's no room for a little moo shu pork or General Chang's chicken.

The Chinese have asked officials to beef up the village cafeteria menu with Asian dishes. "The quantity and quality are good enough, but unfortunately the taste is not for Oriental people," Wei said.

"We're giving them sticky rice every meal, and kimchi 24 hours a day," said food-services manager Lew Sprague.

"Kimchi is for Koreans," Wei retorted.

It looks like they'd better just grin and swallow the burgers and fries. But, wait a minute, why not just order eggrolls "in," like the rest of us?

"Restaurant deliverymen are not allowed into the village," said the security boss.

No mat miracle for 'Rocky' Ghaffari

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Do you believe in miracles? Obviously, Alexander Karelin doesn't.

Matt Ghaffari, determined to pull off the greatest upset in wrestling history, pushed Karelin into overtime Tuesday, shoved him around, even took him to the mat. Nobody does that to the greatest wrestler ever.

But nobody beats Karelin, either.

'...It's like wrestling King Kong.'
— Matt Ghaffari, on facing his finals opponent.

The 28-year-old Russian, unbeaten internationally for 10 years and unscored upon since 1993, came closer to losing Tuesday than ever before. But he held on to beat Ghaffari 1-0 for his third, and by far toughest, Olympic 286-pound Greco-Roman championship.

Not that he didn't try. Ghaffari, 34, of Colorado Springs, Colo., refused to back down or back off against the man known as the Siberian Bear, one who trains by rowing a deserted Russian lake for endless hours.

"This rips my heart out," said Ghaffari, 34, who repeatedly fought off Karelin's gut wrenches and trademark reverse body lifts. "This is my house, my country, and I wanted to beat him here. But I lost to a better man. ... It's like wrestling King Kong."

It also wasn't to be for Brandon Paulson of Anoka, Minn., who reached the 114 1/2-pound finals in his first major international tournament before losing to Armen Nazaryan of Armenia 5-1.

Cubans win first matchup in boxing ring

AP Boxing Writer

ATLANTA — By the time Eric Morel got started against Cuban Maiko Romero on Tuesday, the first defeat for U.S. Olympic boxers bouts was virtually assured.

The three-time Cuban national champion built an 8-1 lead en route to a 24-12 victory at 112 pounds that gave his team an 8-0 record and gave them a 10-5 margin in Olympic matchups with American boxers that began in 1968.

David Reid of Philadelphia then boosted the U.S. record to 7-1 by outpointing Lee Wan-Kyun of South Korea 20-4 at 156 pounds. No other Americans competed Tuesday at the Alexander Memorial Coliseum.

Reid's bout ended amid a chorus of boos after Lee kneed a crouching Reid with 18 seconds remaining. Lee was penalized two points.

Following his defeat, Morel, a 20-year-old Puerto Rican native living at Madison, Wis., said, "All the Cubans are the same, they've got two legs and two arms."

This Cuban had strong legs and quick hands, and the counter-punching Morel found himself in a deep hole when he fell behind 8-1 after one round.

"I thought the first round cost me the fight," Morel said. "I just didn't do my thing. I didn't follow my coaches' instructions. The thing I did in the second and third rounds, I should have done in the first round."

"We know whoever controls the first round, controls the fight," said Al Mitchell, his head coach.

Former Indonesian worker appears at protest

By Landon Hall
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Cicih Sukaesih spent four years working in an Indonesian factory, earning just $1.20 a day to help stitch the Nike athletic shoes she could never afford.

On Tuesday, she was the focus of a protest at the Beaverton athletic shoe and apparel company's downtown Nike Town store. Protesters carried signs denouncing Nike's use of child labor and low wages in developing countries.

Before speaking to protesters, Sukaesih ventured inside Nike Town with her interpreter, trying on a $75, size-7 pair of white and blue tennis shoes.

"I thought I looked very distinguished in them," Sukaesih said through the interpreter, Saraswati Sunindro. "But there's no way I could afford to buy a pair."

Sukaesih spent four years at the Sung Hwa Dunia factory in Serang, West Java. The company now is known as Mitra Footwear International.

She and 23 other workers were fired in January 1993 after a labor strike in which they demanded a raise of about 20 cents per day.

Sukaesih said entry level workers today are paid $2.10 per day, considered minimum wage by the Indonesian Ministry of Manpower.

Nike said there is new management at the factory since Sukaesih and the others were dismissed. But the workers haven't been rehired, and their case is currently before Indonesia's supreme court.

Portland was the fourth stop for Sukaesih on a five-city tour that began in Washington, D.C., on July 15. Her trip is being paid for by human-rights groups Global Exchange and Press For Change.

The groups asked for, and were refused, a meeting with Nike.

"We prefer to engage in dialogue with groups who are interested in constructive, proactive solutions, not those who inform us of their intentions through news conferences and mean-spirited media campaigns," Nike told its employees in a memo.

Report: IBF's Lee rigged rankings

By Jeffery Gold
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. — The head of one of boxing's three major sanctioning bodies reportedly took bribes to rig the rankings and is being investigated by federal prosecutors.

IBF president Bob Lee denied taking payoffs and said he is unaware of any investigation. He said no personal or business records have been subpoenaed.

Lee blamed the allegations on a "racist" vendetta by a leading promoter, Bob Arum of Top Rank Inc.

The New York Post said Tuesday that Arum received immunity from prosecution last week and told investigators he paid Lee to fix rankings, which determine the fighters who get title shots.

Arum denied receiving immunity and said he does not even have firsthand knowledge anyone is investigating Lee, or that Lee extorted money.

"That has been the scuttlebutt around boxing, but I have no proof one way or another," Arum told The Associated Press from Las Vegas. "He never took any money from me in any way, shape or form to rig ratings.

"I never talked to the U.S. attorney's office in Newark, New York, Las Vegas, or anyplace. This is crazy, this story."

An unidentified boxing manager quoted by the Post said he gave Lee payments of $20,000 and $10,000 to get higher rankings for heavyweights.

Lee rejected extortion charges, saying, "I'm paid well enough to do my job, I don't have to take nickels and dimes from these guys."

"By being the highest ranked African-American in boxing worldwide ... but not kowtowing to any particular promoter seems to make it clear that I've become a target for these kind of accusations," said Lee, founder of the IBF, headquartered in East Orange.

Lee said Arum was angry with the IBF because "he didn't get his way with us" on fights involving George Foreman and Oscar de La Hoya, two of the fighters Arum promotes. Arum agreed he and Lee do not get along.

The U.S. attorney's office in Newark, as a matter of policy, cannot confirm or deny any investigation, spokesman Dick Lavinthal said Tuesday.

The Post, citing unidentified sources, said the investigation stemmed from a lawsuit filed in federal court in Newark last year by then contender and now IBF heavyweight champion Michael Moorer. The suit said Lee "solicited bribes and/or extorted money."

Moorer's lawyer, Patrick English, said Tuesday he could not comment on whether there was a pending investigation of Lee.

The lawsuit charged that Lee took bribes to rank South African heavyweight Frans Botha ahead of Moorer for a title fight against Germany's Axel Schulz. That fight is part of the federal investigation, the Post said.

The IBF manipulated its rankings to comply with promoter Don King's efforts to return Mike Tyson as undisputed champion, according to the lawsuit. King was not a defendant in the suit, but is Botha's promoter. Schulz is promoted by Cedric Kushner.

Under a settlement of the lawsuit, Moorer won the right to fight the winner of the Botha-Schulz bout.

Botha won a decision over Schulz for the title in December 1995, but tested positive for steroid use. The IBF fined Botha $50,000 in February and ordered a rematch.

Schulz sued, and a federal judge in Newark stripped Botha of the title March 27. The IBF's failure to disqualify Botha was an "egregious" violation of its own rules, the judge said.

Moorer won the IBF title June 22 from Schulz. The IBF has ordered Moorer to fight Botha by Oct. 22.

Defensive line uncertain for Dallas

By Josie Karp
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

AUSTIN — The Cowboys' defense is continuing to take shape — on the sidelines. Set to join the non-practicing dream team featuring cornerback Kevin Smith and defensive ends Tony Tolbert and Charles Haley is defensive tackle Tony Casillas.

Casillas' agent, Palo Alto-based Kurt Robinson, said Casillas is preparing to report to training camp at St. Edward's University tomorrow. It's one week later than the Cowboys expected the 11-year veteran they signed to play a prominent role in the team's three-player tackle rotation.

A representative for Robinson said Casillas' ailing back, which was surgically repaired in August and started to hurt again last week, is feeling better. But while Casillas is expected in Austin, he is not necessarily expected on the practice field.

That's where defensive coordinator Dave Campo would like to see him.

"That's big for us," Campo said yesterday. "If we can get him, that really allows Hurvin (McCormack) to concentrate on defensive end. If not, unless a (Darren) Benson comes on or a (Kavika) Pittman comes on, that means Hurvin is going to have to be a backup at both positions. That is a concern because of the limited number of reps."

The development of Pittman, the Cowboys' top choice in the April draft, is proceeding slowly. While he might eventually move into a top backup or starting role, McCormack, for now, is the choice to substitute for Haley or Tolbert. And while Tolbert is one of the team's most durable players (he has started 96 consecutive games), history says someone will have to play for Haley eventually. Last year, Haley missed five starts because of back problems.

"Kavika Pittman hasn't had any success yet, and it's frustrating," said Cowboys coach Barry Switzer.

Frustrating for Pittman, too.

"It was real rough on me, getting used to having your whole day nothing but football," Pittman said. "I kind of worked my way through it myself this time. I'm a grown man now; I have to learn how to do things on my own."

At this point, Switzer said, even linebacker Broderick Thomas is a better defensive end than Pittman. Thomas might even be better than McCormack.

"As long as you're thinking, you're not a good football player," Switzer said. "That takes time and experience. That's why it's so much easier for Broderick Thomas to go over to the pass-rush drills that we had this morning and look exceptional. (It's) because of his experience and background and the number of snaps he's had while the younger players who are maybe just as talented aren't as successful."

But Thomas figures into the Cowboys' defensive-line scheme only in certain situations. He is needed, unless a rookie such as Randall Godfrey distinguishes himself, at linebacker.

That leaves McCormack, who started two games last year at tackle, as the top backup at defensive end. Which means, of course, like all players the Cowboys seem to be counting on, that he is injured. McCormack probably won't participate in the Cowboys' scrimmage tonight against the Houston Oilers after spraining his ankle in Sunday's Blue-White scrimmage.

The Cowboys must turn to McCormack, once an undrafted free agent, to play an important role in their defense. With the suspension-induced departure of defensive end Shante Carver, McCormack is the most experienced veteran defensive lineman who is not a starter. Without Casillas in camp, director of scouting Larry Lacewell calls McCormack not only the team's third-best defensive end, but its third-best tackle, as well.

For Campo, the frustration has been talking so much about third- and fourth-best players, instead of starters.

He cannot know for sure what kind of defense he has. His focus centers on a search for backups, rather than fine-tuning a starting corps. The time won't come for that until later, perhaps well into the regular season.

GEORGE: Heisman winner NFL'er now

(From 1C)

these crushing blows, and you're squirming in your chair," Smith said. "Now I'm out there running, and hopefully I won't get hit too hard, but if it happens, hopefully I'll get up and be ready for the next play."

At 6-3, 232, Smith has delivered a few blows, too.

"You don't want to make a mistake or be embarrassed," he said. "You want to do the best you can do and compete. The speed of everything is the difference. I'm going to have to get used to that.

"In college, the hole would open for a second and then close. It's faster than that here. I'll have to get used to that."

Will he get any Cowboys autographs?

"I might do that," he laughed. "It will be an experience, something I can tell my children that I scrimmaged and played a preseason (game) against one of the best teams in NFL history."

Campbell was the 1977 Heisman Trophy winner and the Oilers' first pick in 1978. He led the NFL in rushing his first three seasons, but George isn't expected to carry such a load.

"We've got Rodney Thomas and Ronnie Harmon so there's no pressure on him to come in and be the savior of this team or to help us get a running game going because we've already got that," Smith said. "He's just a part that's going to make us better."

George has remained poised throughout training camp with all the attention he's received.

"I can only be the next Eddie George," George said. "I can't pattern myself after any other running back. I'm just going to work hard and try to live up to my own expectations."

He's already living up to Smith's expectations.

"He has the skills, and physically he knows he has the speed and power, so I've told him not to try to dance because that's not what he does," Smith said. "He's learning every day what he needs to do."

Smith also is telling the long-striding George to make his cut and go upfield.

"In our running game, he'll have to make cuts and react," Smith said. "Rodney Thomas has feet where he can make three or four cuts in a small area.

George certainly got the message in his touchdown run Tuesday.

Oh my garscht! Mavs deal Popeye to Raptors

By Terrance Harris
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

DALLAS — The Mavericks moved a step closer to reacquiring guard Derek Harper yesterday by trading forward Popeye Jones to the Toronto Raptors to clear room under the salary cap.

The Mavericks sent Jones and a 1997 first-round draft pick to the Raptors for guard Jimmy King and second-round picks in 1997 and 1998.

Jones' salary counted $1.6 million toward next year's cap.

"The bottom line is the trade creates some much-needed cap room for us to go back into the free-agency market," Mavericks vice president Keith Grant said. "The money is the big thing we needed right now."

The Mavericks are trying to sign Harper to a two-year contract worth about $3 million. Harper, who starred for the Mavericks for 101/2 years before being traded to New York in January 1994, is intended to be a backup and mentor for point guard Jason Kidd.

The first-round pick the Raptors received yesterday is owned by the New York Knicks. Ironically, it is the same pick the Mavericks acquired two years ago in the trade for Harper.

King will count $330,000 against next year's cap, meaning the Mavericks freed $1.27 million under the cap.

Harper has offers from Charlotte and Detroit and is getting interest from San Antonio, Miami and Indiana, all of whom are trying to clear cap room.

Yesterday's deal also gives Toronto the right to exchange first-round picks with Minnesota next year, unless the pick — which the Mavericks own — is the first overall. In that case, Toronto could exchange picks with the Mavericks in 1998.

Jones did not have a role with the Mavericks after Samaki Walker of Louisville was drafted and free agent Chris Gatling was signed. Jones averaged 11.3 points and 10.8 rebounds last season.

King is expected to compete for a backup spot at the guard position. The former Plano East High School standout averaged 4.5 points in limited playing time for the Raptors in his rookie season.

"This feels great," King said. "It's nice to be back home with family and friends. I was a little surprised with the trade.

"We're a young team, with a new coach and a new look. I think I bring versatility, playing different positions and great defense and a little bit of an all-around type game. I wasn't expecting this at all. I was caught off guard like everyone else. Like boom, there it is."

Grant said King, 6-foot-5, has the ability to earn playing time at both the point- and off-guard positions.

"Down the road, I think he can be a pretty good guard. He brings some things to the table such as defense, which Coach (Jim Cleamons) is going to like. We look at him as a valuable part."

King averaged 9.0 points in the Raptors' final 10 games and was the leading scorer for Toronto's entry in the Doral Arrowood Summer League in New York, averaging 24 points.

"I got a chance to play more at the end of the year," King said. "I think the organization was fair. During the year I sat and learned. And at the end of the year, I was able to incorporate things I learned."

Grant said New York's first-round pick next year might be low in the first round, so he didn't feel the Mavericks were giving up much.

"I hope the Knicks have an extremely good year," Grant said. "The two (second-round picks) we get may be fairly close to where the Knicks' pick would have been, from a numbers standpoint."

Raptors vice president Isiah Thomas said Jones will have a major role with his team.

"We are looking for a player who could bring us consistency under the boards, while adding some frontcourt scoring," Thomas said. "Popeye is that player."

Grant said "Popeye is just one of the most classy players we've ever had here."

Isiah Rider, plagued by sub-par play and high expectations coming out of Nevada-Las Vegas, was dealt by Minnesota to Portland on Tuesday.

By Steve Karnowski

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Timberwolves finally unloaded troublesome guard Isaiah Rider on Tuesday, trading him to Portland for forward Bill Curley, guard James Robinson and a first-round draft pick.

"I think a change had to be made ... for our organization. A change probably had to be made for J.R. Rider," Minnesota general manager Kevin McHale said. "I think those of us who know him know he's not nearly as bad a guy as everybody tries to make him out to be."

Rider led the Wolves in scoring last season, averaging 19.6 points. He averaged 18.8 points in three seasons with the team since being drafted out UNLV. He was Minnesota's team leader with 295 career 3-pointers.

But the 25-year-old's promising career was tainted by numerous off-court incidents and chronic disciplinary problems including tardiness, skipping practices and missing planes.

McHale said the Wolves had done everything possible to make things work out with Rider, who had four years and $17 million left on a seven-year contract.

Sonics' Payton signs $85M deal

SEATTLE — U.S. Olympic guard Gary Payton re-signed with the Seattle SuperSonics on Tuesday, agreeing to a seven-year, $85 million contract.

The Sonics topped offers from the Miami Heat, New York Knicks, Charlotte Hornets, Houston Rockets and Milwaukee Bucks to retain the free agent.

Payton, 28, made $2.7 million last season, the final year on a six-year, $13.5 million contract. He averaged 19.3 points, 7.5 assists, 4.2 rebounds and an NBA-best 2.9 steals last season. He also was selected the NBA Defensive Player of the Year.

Suns to sign top draft choice

PHOENIX — The Phoenix Suns are expected to announce the signing of first-round draft pick Steve Nash on Wednesday. Nash, a 6-foot-3 point guard selected 13th overall, averaged 17.0 points last season for Santa Clara.

Rustic Tomato-Bread Salad can be served as summer picnic salad. The salad is made with tomatoes, onions and dressing, and a dense and crusty French or Italian-style bread.

A piece of Italy

Associated Press

On hot summer days, light picnic-friendly dishes are the order of the day. Rustic Tomato-Bread Salad fits the bill on all counts. Called panzanella in Italy, tomato and bread salad is a favorite summertime lunch dish in the Italian countryside.

For the salad, ripe tomatoes are combined with sweet basil and slivered red onion. The vegetables are tossed together with a simple olive oil dressing. The flavors are left for a few minutes to blend and develop; then handfuls of dense, crusty day-old bread are tossed with the tomatoes to absorb the dressing. The salad can be held at room temperature for several hours before serving.

RUSTIC TOMATO-BREAD SALAD

4 cups fresh tomatoes, diced into ½-inch pieces (1½ pounds, about 5 medium tomatoes)
¼ cup slivered red onion
¼ cup water
¼ cup olive oil
⅓ cup white-wine vinegar
1 teaspoon ground black pepper
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
½ cup shredded fresh basil
6 cups day-old dense crusty bread, cut or torn into 1-inch cubes (about ½ pound)

Combine all ingredients except bread in large bowl; let stand for flavors to develop, about 10 minutes. Add bread; toss well to coat. If bread seems dry, sprinkle with an additional tablespoon or two of water. Salad will hold several hours at room temperature before serving. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

NOTE: Do not refrigerate tomatoes. Cold temperatures cause tomatoes to lose their flavor and turn mushy.

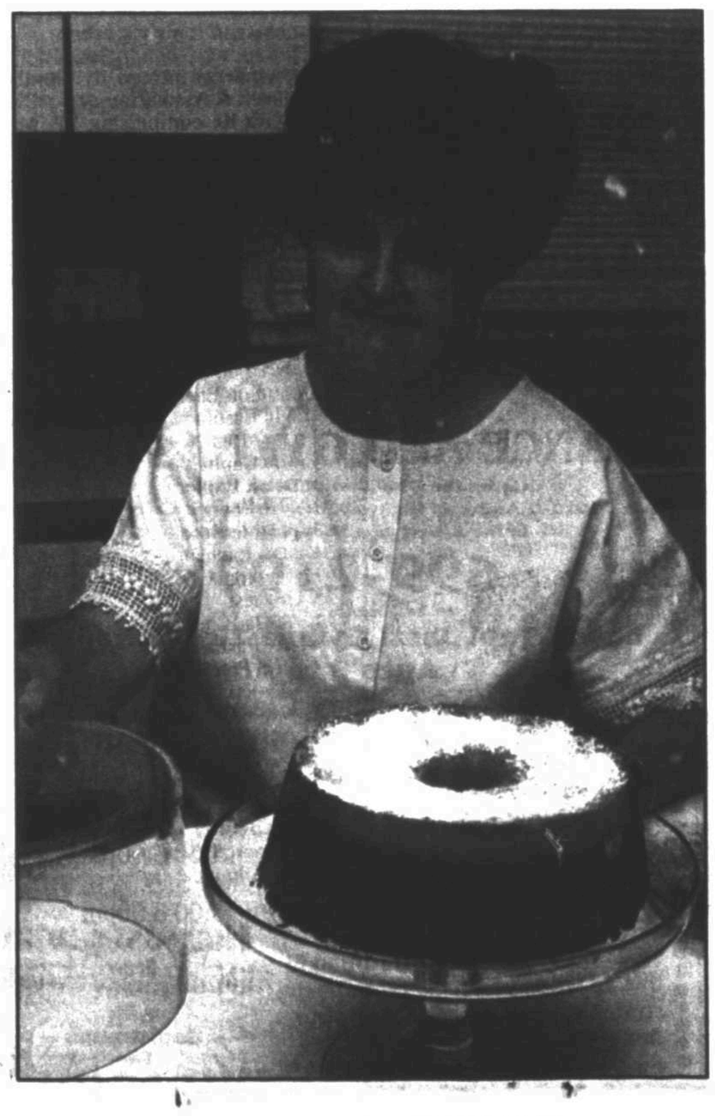
WHAT'S COOKING?



Cook has natural ability in kitchen

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

Some people are just naturally talented gardeners — they are said to have "green thumbs" — but others have that kind of natural ability in the kitchen. The color of their thumbs is secondary — the wonderful aromas coming from their kitchens is what's important.

Jerry Conner of Midland has this kind of skill in the kitchen. Her culinary masterpieces seem to come naturally to her, and the skill seems to run in her family.

"My grandparents raised me, so I learned to cook from my grandmother," Mrs. Conner said. "She would have nothing that wasn't made from scratch. She used butter, whole milk, cream ..."

Mrs. Conner also learned a lot from her mother-in-law, she said. "My husband's mother was one of the best cooks I ever knew. After we married I learned to make biscuits almost — but not quite — as wonderful as hers. She could make biscuits that almost floated to the ceiling, they were so light."

Cooking has always been enjoyable to Mrs. Conner. "I've loved to cook ever since I was a little girl."

And her daughter, who is "finishing up school at UTPB (the University of Texas of the Permian Basin)," is another promising cook, her mother said. "She likes to do exotic dishes ... She is a big help at Christmas time. She likes to bake ..."

Since today the emphasis is on lower-fat foods, Mrs. Conner has had to adjust her grandmother's and mother-in-law's recipes to fit more current eating habits, but the recipes still turn out perfectly.

Mrs. Conner said she has learned to grill, both indoors and outdoors, instead of fry; use fresh fruits and vegetables; and use margarine or oil instead of butter, "and not as much."

"I mainly don't fry like I used to. And I don't marinate (in an oil-based marinade)," but instead use seasonings such as lemon pepper and other spices for flavor.

"I just cook very plain, old-fashioned food," she said. "I'm not a gourmet cook."

But in the past several months,

Jerry Conner has always enjoyed cooking. She learned her culinary skills from her grandmother and mother-in-law, and is passing her knowledge on to her daughter. DEAR ABBY

Childless woman celebrates chance to help others' children

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am flabbergasted at all the letters from people who are desperate to have children.

I am a baby boomer who, like many of my friends, was delighted to discover that getting married and having children was not the only option for women. We went to college, pursued careers, traveled to exotic places and got involved in our communities. Some of us got married, and some of us even raised our husband's children from a failed first marriage. Overall, we've had a great half-century.

Van Buren

I know I owe much of my happy state to the adults — aunts, uncles, cousins, friends of my parents, teachers — who took an interest in me when I was growing up. My immediate family verged on the dysfunctional, but these other wonderful, caring people provided the shelter, laughter and inspiration that my parents couldn't give me. I've tried to return the favor to nephews and nieces, and the children of my friends and neighbors.

In this day and age, an empty womb is not a tragedy — it just means that you have the time and good fortune to make a difference in someone else's life. It's time for childless people to toss those tear-stained pillows away, go to the nearest school, and offer to tutor or help a disadvantaged child. — NO REGRETS

DEAR NO REGRETS: You are a prime example of two profound adages: "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be" (Abraham Lincoln), and "Life is what we make it (William James)."

God bless you for your generosity.

DEAR ABBY: I have read many letters in your column from men who aren't particularly handsome, but would love to meet a decent woman who would appreciate him for what he is on the inside. I feel sorry for those men. However, there must be something wrong when a 30-something, educated professional man can't find someone to love, and says it's because women don't think he's good-looking enough.

I'm not drop-dead gorgeous, but I got married when I was 25. I had about a dozen proposals before Mr. Right came along.

My best friend, brainy and leggy with a wonderful heart, could barely find a date. The reason? She didn't know how to communicate with the opposite sex. Finally, after much encouragement, she went down your list of places to meet decent men and (here is the clincher) she sought therapy.

The therapy taught her a lot about herself. The church and volunteer organizations gave her a place to try out what she had learned.

She met a wonderful man who appreciates her for what she is. Two years ago, I was a bridesmaid at her wedding. Two months ago, I attended the christening of their first child.

Abby, there is hope for those without partners, but blaming others for their being alone will get them nowhere. — TRULY HAPPY IN TENNESSEE

Reduced fat peanut butters OK

By Linda Anderson

I know you don't want to hear this (or maybe you do, depending on how many bored children you have at home and what their ages are), but school is going to start in a little more than two weeks, so it's time to start thinking about all that back-to-school stuff — including packing lunches.

Anderson

And if you've got younger students at home, filling their lunch boxes can mean stocking up on peanut butter, that childhood favorite.

With that in mind, we have been checking out a couple of reduced fat peanut butters — Reduced Fat Jif and Peter Pan Smart Choice — both in creamy style. The young taste-testers are former peanut butter experts, but they have passed that particular torch to the "younger generation," since they are both now teenagers and consider themselves past the peanut butter stage.

However, the taste-testers at the office, who are well past being teenagers, have discovered the joys of peanut butter again and were more than willing to help out.

Both these reduced-fat peanut butters were on sale when I bought them, priced at two for $3, or $1.50 each. Both are packaged in 18-ounce jars.

Reduced Fat Jif is advertised as having "25 percent less fat than peanut butter," while the Peter Pan Smart Choice claims to have "30 percent less fat than regular peanut butter." Both are packaged as "peanut butter spread" with "60 percent peanuts."

The calorie counts are interesting: Reduced Fat Jif has 190 calories in each two-tablespoon serving, with 110 of them from fat, according to its label information; Peter Pan Smart Choice lists 180 calories in a two-tablespoon serving with 90 of them from fat. Neither of those fat-calorie counts are anywhere near the 30 percent of calories from fat recommended by the American Heart Association for a heart-healthy diet, but they are lower in fat than regular peanut butter.

Both show peanuts as their first ingredients, followed by corn syrup solids, sugar, soy proteins and a bunch of other stuff that may or may not be found in regular peanut butter. (Reading ingredients labels can be very informative; it's also very important if you want to know what you're actually eating.)

The taste-test was interesting too. One of the younger testers decided to go ahead and give her opinion, which is that she still doesn't like Jif very much, whether regular or reduced fat, and the Smart Choice tastes "gritty."

The co-workers' opinions were pretty evenly divided — half preferred Reduced Fat Jif, half preferred Peter Pan Smart Choice. However, by the end of the day, the Jif bottle clearly had been "tried" more often than the Peater Pan jar. I thought that both products tasted surprising like their regular peanut butter counterparts.

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Ice cream survey names top licks and picks

OAKLAND, Calif. (SWN)—Men like ice cream plain and women like theirs with nuts. Pizza is the only food that tops ice cream when it comes to indulging in a food, and a surprising 16 percent of ice cream eaters stir the ice cream first before eating it.

These are just a few of the fun facts gathered from a recent survey conducted by Opinion Research Corporation in honor of July being National Ice Cream Month. The survey, sponsored by Dreyer's & Edy's Grand Ice Cream, set out to discover some delicious, unknown facts about ice cream eating. In fact, eating ice cream is so prevalent during the month of July (more ice cream is consumed during July than any other month of the year), that July was named National Ice Cream Month and the third Sunday in July (July 21) was National Ice Cream Day! So, when you are enjoying a bowl or cone of ice cream this summer, remember the following:

Women are more likely to share their ice cream (65 percent) versus the 48 percent of men who are selfish and keep their ice cream all to themselves. A bowl is prefered by 66 percent of ice cream eaters; only 13 percent really like ice cream on a cone.

Ten percent of 18-to-24 year olds admit they eat ice cream straight out of the package, yet the older a person gets, the more likely he or she is to like their ice cream in a float, shake or soda (ten percent).

Almost 20 percent of respondents claimed that if they were going to indulge in a certain food, ice cream would be their first choice. Ice cream was only second to pizza at a close 30 percent. However, those 65 and older wanted ice cream as their first choice of an indulgent food. For 82 percent of ice cream eaters, sitiing is the perfered position.

More women at 19 percent stir their ice cream, versus only 14 percent of men; women tend to like nuts in their ice cream (32 percent) while 32 percent of men like their ice cream plain.

The interesting facts to note are the regional preferences: people who live in the Northeast like their ice cream with pieces of chocolate — such as Chocolate Chip, Mint Chocolate Chip, Chocolate Mumbo Jumbo, Chocolate Fudge Mousse, etc. 35 percent of those who live in the North Central and Southern parts of the U.S. like their ice cream plain and 31 percent of residents on the West Coast like chocolate in their ice cream.

The survey, conducted July 5, 1996, was completed by Opinion Research Corporation and polled 1,005 adults comprising 505 men and 500 women 18 years of age and older, living in households in the continental United States. A complete report on the survey is available by calling 1-800-888-3442.
