Bosnia leaders sign truce

Government, rebel Serbs agree to cease-fire

■ Accord also calls for demilitarization of Muslim enclaves of Srebrenica and Zepa.

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The Bosnian government and rebel Serbs signed an agreement late Saturday for a nationwide cease-fire beginning at noon (5 a.m. CDT) today and the demilitarization of two besieged Muslim towns.

The agreement was signed by rival commanders and French Gen. Philippe Morillon, chief of U.N. peacekeepers in Bosnia, after marathon negotiations at Sarajevo's airport, which was under heavy sniper fire throughout the day.

Many truces have been made and broken in the year-old Bosnian conflict, but the Bosnian Serbs came under increasing pressure this week to stop the fighting.

The agreement would require all forces to withdraw or surrender their weapons to U.N. troops in the eastern towns of Srebrenica — by 5 p.m. Monday — and Zepa, by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

It said the cease-fire was "aimed at a cessation of armed attacks or any hostile acts within the whole territories of Bosnia-Herzegovina."

The Bosnian Serbs appeared increasingly isolated Thursday when Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, under pressure of U.N. sanctions, said he would cut off military aid to the rebels. Milosevic is the rebels' chief patron.

The United States has also been stepping up efforts to get European allies' support for air strikes against the Bosnian Serbs.

Before the cease-fire was announced, The Sunday Times, a London newspaper, reported that U.S. air

Toll booth tragedy

GRAPEVINE — A tanker truck driver fell asleep at the wheel early Saturday, setting off a chain-reaction accident that killed two other people at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport north toll gate, police said. Eldridge Sellers III, 52, was pronounced dead at the scene, while airport employee Maria Absulaziz, 37, died soon after being airlifted to Harris Methodist Hospital in Fort Worth, officials said. Both victims were from Dallas. DFW spokesman Joe Dealey said the driver of the tanker apparently fell asleep and rear-ended a pickup, which went through two toll booths and hit three other vehicles, including a minivan driven by Ms. Absulaziz. Sellers was driving the pickup.

Agents link Iraq to plot to kill Bush

■ Assassination plan was part of scheme to destabalize country, Kuwait says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton is waiting for a report from an investigative team that went to Kuwait looking for evidence that Iraq was behind an assassination attempt on former President Bush last month, the White House said Saturday.

White House spokesman George Stephanopoulos said the team, made up of agents from the FBI and the Secret Service, returned to the United States on Saturday morning. He said their trip was discussed briefly Saturday when Clinton met with top advisers about

Energy tax is necessary, says congressman

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh in a weekly series on energy issues.

By James R. Owen

Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

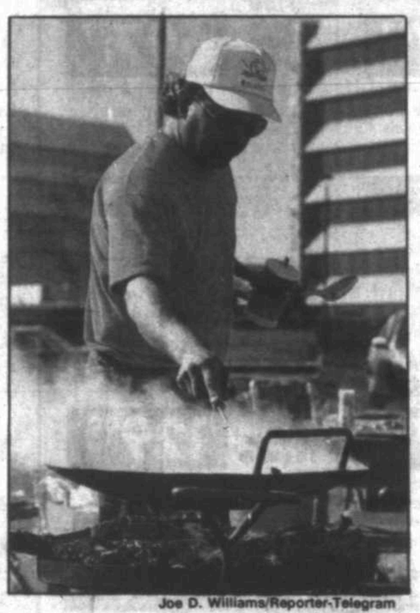

WASHINGTON — One of the hardest things for a lawmaker to do is vote for a tax increase. So when the House tax-writing committee took up President Clinton's controversial tax package last week, few members of Congress rushed to praise it.

Even Democrats, who largely support their president's economic agenda, muttered unhappily about parts of the package, particularly the energy provisions.

But Rep. Sander Levin, a Michigan Democrat, is one who admits that such a tax is necessary if Clinton is to keep his promise to reduce the federal debt by $500 billion over five years.

Nevertheless, supporting it was a

Record-setting cook-off is finale for PBPA event

By John Paul Pitts

Business/Oil editor

The Energy Appreciation Week Blowout oil-patch cook-off had its best year yet on Saturday, drawing 55 cooking teams and more than 2,000 visitors.

Charlie McCoy, coordinator of the seventh annual event, said cooking teams came from throughout the Permian Basin, including Hobbs, Monahans, Sterling City, Odessa and Pecos.

"This is our biggest cook-off to date," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, which sponsors the Blowout — the official wrapup of Energy Appreciation Week.

Other events during the week included a seminar on new Occupational Safety and Health Administration rules and a luncheon at which Texas Railroad Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers was the featured speaker.

Cooking teams from oil companies, oilfield service companies and other businesses competed in four categories — fajitas, brisket, ribs and chili. There was also a media category, and two categories of showmanship, one open category and the Chili Appreciation Society International (C.A.S.I.) category that gives competitors points to qualify for competition at Terlingua.

A light side to the annual celebration is the World's Ugliest Roughneck Contest, sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram , which gives contestants an opportunity to put on their "worst" face. This year was the first year in which there was a tie. Pam Cotti of Marathon Oil Co. and Russell Fiscus of Citation Oil & Gas shared the honor of ugliest roughneck and roughneckette.

Fina took top place in both the open and the C.A.S.I. showmanship competition. Top place winners in the cooking categories went to: DA&S Well Servic-

City hires company to seal-coat streets

City forces will yield to an outside company next month on an extensive street project that should add several years to roads in southeast Midland.

Officials sought contractual bids on the work after determining the project would take too long to be completed solely by city workers.

The $1.2 million total cost of the seal-coating work includes an $828,475 bid from Ronald R. Wagner & Co. of San Antonio.

The bulk of the work will encompass streets south of Golf Course Road and east of A Street — or 1.46 million square yards, said Harvey Hansen, director of engineering.

Official: Sri Lankans ignore violence, become immune to trauma

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (NYT) — A week after President Ranasinghe Premadasa was assassinated by a suicide bomber, there was little to suggest here that Sri Lanka had suffered a human or political trauma of national dimensions.

Within 24 hours of the president's cremation, at a solemn and elaborate Buddhist ceremony, this city's streets were filled with swarms of bicycle riders, people watching colorful puppet shows, and couples strolling hand in hand along the sea front, in what seemed to be a determined effort to ignore the violence of recent weeks and recapture the lost celebrations of the annual Buddhist holiday, Vesak.

"On the one hand, we've really become immune to violence and brutal death," said Sunila Abeyesekar, who works for Inform, a local human rights group. "People have developed an ability to distance themselves from horror. On the other hand, the jubilation on the day the president's death was announced really shocked and horrified quite a few of us, particularly in a Buddhist country."

While much of the violence that has wracked this island has been instigated by secessionist Tamil rebels, many people here also blamed Premadasa for contributing to the climate of political fear. One Sri Lankan journalist who left the country three years ago, when he was threatened for criticizing the president, returned only this week. "It's safer now," he said.

Sri Lanka's new president, Dingiri Banda Wijetunga, a man known for his deference to Premadasa, was elected unanimously by Parliament and sworn in on Friday. In his address to Parliament, he pointed to the violence that many people here believe has insinuated itself into the very marrow of this society.

"Arbitrariness," said Wijetunga, "indiscretion, violence and uncharacteristic intolerance have begun to raise their ugly head, victimizing outstanding men and women who are the glory of our motherland."

But violence on this island of deep jungles, small towns and endless beaches has not come only recently. For more than a decade a vicious civil war has been waged by Tamil secessionist guerrillas in the country's north and east. The guerrillas, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, have pinned down most of the country's army with skilled and savage tactics.

Premadasa, the police have said, was killed by a Tiger suicide bomber.

And in 1988 and 1989, a violent insurgency by a shadowy Sinhalese nationalist group, the People's Liberation Army, was crushed by Premadasa in a wave of torture, death and disappearances that was led by the army and government death squads. In less than two years, as many as 50,000 people died.

Even electoral politics have been marred by violence. The assassination of Premadasa's most outspoken political opponent, Lalith Athulathmudali, just one week before the president's own death, was perceived by a majority here as the work of the president, although there is no conclusive evidence to support that perception.

But several senior diplomats here, both Asian and Western, believe that the government has mishandled the investigation into Athulathmudali's death, and at least one diplomat used the word "coverup" to describe the investigation. Several key witnesses to his death have not been questioned, and the police identified a man whose body they found as the killer, despite the fact that the witnesses to the shooting say he was not.

"There is a personalized anger toward the president as the one who was responsible for a great many deaths that took place during his regime," Ms. Abeyesekar said.

A leading member of the opposition, Gamini Dessinayake, campaigned for his party, the Democratic United National Party, on the day Premadasa's body was cremated.

Pope publicly chides Mafia operations

TRAPANI, Sicily (AP) — Intent on countering charges that clergymen had cozied up to the Mafia, Pope John Paul II came to Cosa Nostra strongholds on Saturday to appeal to pastors and followers to fight the mob with greater fervor.

The pontiff's three-day swing through west and south Sicily cut a swath through a part of the island most reluctant to work with authorities against the Mafia. Sicily is the Mafia's power base for international drug trafficking and extortion operations.

John Paul, the first pontiff to condemn the Mafia explicitly, offered solidarity to everyday Sicilians. But to his bishops and priests, he seemed to send a special message of support meant to boost their morale.

"Your task is certainly not easy — at times you must go against a Mafioso mentality," he told priests and nuns in the Cathedral of Mazara del Vallo.

"In acknowleging what the Sicilian bishopry and clergy have done to heal this island from the Mafia's plague, I exhort all to persevere with renewed faith in this commitment of fundamental importance for the entire community," he said.

The declaration of appreciation for the clergy's efforts was a late addition to the pope's speech, possibly added in response to recent criticism.

A few days before he left Rome for Sicily, Roman Catholic intellectuals, activists and some priests reportedly sent an open letter to the pope urging stronger Church denunciations of the Mafia.

The letter also condemned ties between some churchmen and Mafiosi based on "family traditions, culture, imprudent friendships, common interests or for lack of courage."

Sicilian church hierarchy — as part of a privileged class including businessmen and landowners — had been considered cozy with mob bosses in past decades.

Council urges North Korea to open nuke sites

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — The Security Council plans to take up a resolution in the coming week urging North Korea to open two suspected nuclear weapons sites to international inspectors.

The resolution was drafted by the United States and is supported by Britain, France and Russia. China, which has close though not always easy relations with North Korea, is expected to abstain but not to veto the measure.

North Korea insists that it has no nuclear weapons program and says it will not submit to regular inspections so long as American troops are stationed in South Korea.

Rather than allow inspections by the International Atomic Energy Agency, a U.N. agency, North Korea said in March that it was withdrawing from the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, as of June 12.

The proposed resolution calls on the Pyongyang government to reconsider that decision. Western powers fear that North Korea's defection could prompt the departure of other countries that have signed the treaty but are suspected of running clandestine nuclear weapons programs.

Like the Western powers, China is concerned about Pyongyang's potential nuclear capabilities but has previously opposed Security Council initiatives to act on the issue.

In the past, Washington has urged that economic sanctions be imposed against North Korea, but the proposed resolution makes no mention of them, diplomats said. Instead, it urges other countries to encourage Pyongyang to cooperate.

Cuban groups seek lifting of U.S. embargo

N.Y. Times News Service

MIAMI — With Cuba facing an economic crisis, five of the country's most prominent dissident groups have written to President Clinton pleading for a change in American policies that are deepening the island's political and economic isolation.

In a two-page letter delivered to administration officials last week, the dissident organizations called Washington's economic embargo against Cuba and its policy of encouraging its allies to also adopt trade restrictions "outdated" and "counterproductive."

"We insist that the government of the United States must change its policy toward Cuba," said the letter from the five groups,

With the Cuban economy already reeling from the disintegration of the former East bloc and a cutoff in aid, the letter's authors said the unremitting hostility from Washington results only in "dangerous tensions and narrowing of space for diplomatic and political negotiations."

Analysts of Cuban affairs say the letter to Clinton is the boldest overture so far by the dissidents, who have been issuing increasingly open appeals for months for a new American approach to the island.

Although they say there is little chance that a three-decade-old American embargo on Cuba will soon force the government of Fidel Castro from power, the dissidents have said that the severe decline in living conditions on the island discouraged Havana from considering reforms that would require greater individual liberties.

Moreover, they say, the weakening of the Cuban economy increases the likelihood of a chaotic transition when change finally does come to Cuba.

"Our position is that we must relax the embargo if we wish to see reforms in Cuba," said Rolando Prats, one of the dissidents, who delivered the letter to Clinton administration officials during a visit to the United States. "Some say this will only strengthen Castro, but we don't believe so. If the U.S. makes a first step, Castro will be obliged to make a step as well."

Prats, who spoke from New York by telephone, is the president of a group called the Cuban Democratic Socialist Current.

In recent weeks the economic picture has deteriorated further with reports that a powerful storm in March destroyed already scarce housing throughout much of the island and ruined vital crops from sugar to orange and plantain. Cuban officials have also recently reported the spread of an epidemic of a mysterious eye disease that some have linked to growing malnutrition on the island.

"The economy is only half of what it was in 1989," said Andrew Zimbalist, an economist who specializes in Cuban affairs at Smith College, in Northampton, Mass.

Zimbalist said there were signs that the economy was "bottoming out" after several years of steep decline, but added, "With things as bad as they are and with malnutrition rearing its head for the first time in decades, it is not clear to me what is going to happen."

As their economic situation has grown more difficult, Cuban officials have themselves echoed the dissidents' request that the embargo be relaxed, suggesting that any such move by Washington would be followed by changes in Cuban policy.

In an unusual appeal during a news conference last month, Ricardo Alarcon, the former foreign minister who is now president of Cuba's National Assembly, asked the Clinton administration to "give it a try."

Clinton administration officials have not publicly responded to the dissidents' letter or to official appeals like that one. Calls last week to senior national security officials in the administration were not returned.

Thunderstorms pounded North Texas while wind and rain whipped South Texas, and only West Texas reported some sunshine amid the storms Saturday.

Severe thunderstorms developed in North Texas along a dry line that extended from near Childress to near Sanderson, prompting a flash flood watch in the area Saturday night.

Numerous thunderstorms, some severe, are predicted through Sunday night. Areas central and east are expected to get the worst weather, but rain is predicted throughout the region.

TAX: Levin praises parts of bill task that the 61-year-old congressman, who has faithfully represented the interests of Michigan's giant auto industry since he was elected in 1982, took on gingerly.

"Nobody likes this tax," he said. "I don't like it. But the question is, can you do serious deficit reduction without an energy tax?"

The proposed tax on the heat content of major fuels, could raise nearly $71 billion over five years — a major revenue source for Clinton's economic plans second only in size to proposed increases in personal income tax on the affluent.

When fully phased in by 1996, the energy tax is estimated to raise gasoline prices by 7.5 cents a gallon and add $2.25 a month to the average electric bill.

The Treasury Department says that for a typical family of four earning $40,000 a year the total direct and indirect costs of the energy tax would be about $320 a year.

"Nobody said passing a major deficit reduction package would be easy or simple," Levin said. "But if the Btu tax were pulled out of it, the whole thing would collapse."

The energy tax under consideration would affect virtually every individual and business in the country, although some existing programs to help the poor would be expanded to soften the bite they would feel from the energy tax, the administration says.

Last Thursday, the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, on which Levin sits, rejected an attempt to kill the energy tax. It was a party line vote — 24 Democrats against, 14 Republicans for killing it.

This week, some Democrats will be seeking exemptions from the Btu tax for home-state interests — such as natural gas in the Southwest and the agriculture and aluminum industries in the Midwest and Northwest — setting the stage for more difficult votes for committee members.

Levin, who retains the orthodox liberalism of his first days in politics in the mid-60s, describes himself as a "deficit hawk." But he says he is hearing complaints from voters in his district about the proposed energy levy. "There have been some pretty boisterous town meetings" when the subject has come up, he said.

The fact that the heads of the Big Three automakers, headquartered in Detroit, give the energy tax cautious support helps bolster Levin's courage. He does not have to confront concerted opposition from some interest groups — such as energy producers or farmers — who have mounted major campaigns to derail it.

Levin praises certain aspects of the tax: It is expected to reduce the use of fossil fuels, a cherished goal of environmentalists, and may also stimulate demand for energy from solar, wind and geothermal sources.

"This tax has a considerable environmental component that its critics consistently overlook," Levin said.

But he emphasized that generating new money to help cut the annual deficit between federal income and outgo — expected to top $300 billion next year — is the main goal of the tax bill.

"You can't leave energy totally out of the picture and be serious about deficit reduction," he said. "And I think that a lot of members on the committee, even though they're loathe to admit it, agree with me."

He says the big questions are: "How would we replace the revenue an energy tax would generate?" And, "Are we going to lose our nerve?"

Levin acknowledges that some fine-tuning of the bill may be necessary. He wants to be sure that the energy tax won't cause U.S. manufactured goods to suffer in competing with foreign goods, for example.

But he warned that making too many exemptions could open the floodgates — undermining the whole package.

"There are going to be some tough votes," said Levin. "I just don't see much other choice."

Congress-watchers predict that the Democratic-controlled House will approve the tax package relatively intact, but that it will face stiff opposition in the Senate where Republicans, although outnumbered by Democrats, demonstrated unity last month in defeating Clinton's economic stimulus plan.

BOSNIA: Government, rebels sign truce strikes against Bosnian Serb targets would begin within 10 days. The newspaper, citing unidentified military and diplomatic sources in Washington and London, said hundreds of American aircraft would attack bridges, roads and artillery positions.

Britain has agreed to participate in some attacks, the paper said.

In Washington, White House spokeswoman Lorraine Voles said she could not confirm the report and declined further comment.

U.S. Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher visited London during a European trip this week to drum up support for military intervention.

Shelling and heavy sniper fire continued Saturday night in Sarajevo. Sarajevo radio said two people were killed and 20 wounded in the city Saturday.

U.N. headquarters in Sarajevo was hit twice by artillery fire in the evening. No casualties were reported.

The Bosnian Serbs' military commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic, signed the cease-fire agreement, along with the commander of Bosnian government forces, Gen. Sefer Halilovic. Morillon signed as a witness.

Despite an agreement signed by both sides April 18 to demilitarize Srebrenica, the town is still effectively under siege by Serbs, who pulled back partially and let Canadian peacekeepers enter.

Early Saturday, Mladic had signed an agreement allowing U.N. troops into Zepa, where hundreds of civilians were reported killed or wounded in several days of fighting, and into Gorazde, another besieged Muslim enclave in eastern Bosnia.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic initially refused to go along with that plan, saying its demand that Zepa's defenders be disarmed was tantamount to surrender.

Morillon then held more talks with the warring commanders. The reason for the Bosnian government change of heart on Zepa late Saturday was not immediately clear.

Zepa, Gorazde and Srebrenica were among six mainly Muslim towns declared "safe areas" by the U.N. Security Council on Thursday, after Bosnian Serbs again rejected a U.N.-backed peace plan.

That rejection prompted President Clinton's increased efforts to bring tougher measures — including military ones — against the Bosnian Serbs.

Sarajevo radio said Saturday that Serb attacks on Zepa, about 30 miles east of Sarajevo, were continuing and the town's defenders were making a "superhuman effort" to resist.

It was impossible to verify reports from ham radio operators of widespread destruction in Zepa. Many residents fled to surrounding caves and forests, according to the reports.

"The hospital, resembling piles of bloody human parts, is located in several caves," said a statement by Zepa authorities on Sarajevo radio.

The statement appealed to Morillon for help, saying he was "responsible for the lives of 40,000 people, among them 8,000 children."

After meeting with Izetbegovic, Morillon was blocked from leaving the presidency building for a half-hour by about 70 distraught refugees from Zepa. They demanded he personally protect Zepa as he had Srebrenica, the first U.N.-designated safe haven in Bosnia.

"I saved Srebrenica and I will save Zepa, too," Morillon promised.

Before the latest cease-fire, the Bosnian government had formally requested Saturday that U.N. peacekeepers leave Bosnia. It said international concern over their safety has blocked efforts to lift part of a U.N. arms embargo to let government forces defend themselves against the better-armed Serbs.

Britain and France have expressed fears that air strikes and lifting the arms embargo to Bosnian Muslims would expose U.N. troops to Serb reprisal.

Among other developments Saturday:

■ In Moscow, Russian President Boris Yeltsin cautioned against sudden military intervention and said he hoped the Bosnian Serbs would approve the U.N. peace plan in a referendum called by their self-styled parliament. Yeltsin told reporters any decision on military action could be taken only after the referendum and with Security Council approval.

■ In Berlin, about 5,000 Serbs marched to protest possible American military intervention. Clashes erupted between the Serb demonstrators and Croats who tried to interrupt the march.

SEAL: Project encompasses southeast Midland

(From 1A)

Part of the cost will go toward previously delayed projects, including three square miles west of Garfield Street between Andrews Highway and Illinois Avenue.

"Those are some of the oldest streets in Midland and many are deteriorating quickly. They need immediate work," Hansen said.

"Seal-coating is the most cost-effective maintenance we can apply to the streets. It slows the deterioration of the asphalt, it slows the aging process."

Hansen said asphalt will typically last about 13 to 15 years before becoming brittle. The street work will include a thin overlay to fill in the cracks, before the seal-coating mix is applied.

Last fall, Midland City Council members approved the sale of $4.9 million in certificates of obligation. The certificates are similar to bonds except that their issuance — while incurring debt — does not require a citizen vote.

Unlike past years, the certificates were issued for a three-year period.

The street department had originally requested $1.6 million specifically for seal-coating.

An additional $1,427,000 can be used for other street improvements.

Among planned drainage projects are a large-scale study to determine what channels need to be widened or deepened.

Hansen said work needs to be started on the channel running west of Midland Park Mall to Midland Drive and another running from Big Spring Street at Mission Square to Highway 80.

Other intended uses for the certificates of obligation include unspecified park improvements, $500,000; the purchase of traffic control equipment, $300,000; additional communication equipment that will include the final installation of mobile data terminals into city police cars, $325,000; and the purchase of land and buildings, $950,000.

BUSH: Saudi Arabia claims Iran also plotted

(From 1A)

Bosnia.

"These are serious charges," Stephanopoulos said. "An investigative team has been sent to determine if there is credible evidence to back up the allegations, and that investigative team is working right now."

Kuwaiti authorities said late last month that they had uncovered an Iraqi scheme to destabilize Kuwait, including a plan to assassinate Bush during his three-day visit there. The assassins apparently never got close to Bush.

Meanwhile, a Saudi Arabian newspaper reported there was a second plot, this one backed by Iran, to assassinate Bush during his visit, but the Kuwaiti government denied that report Saturday.

The Saudi Arabian daily Asharq Al-Awsat said Kuwaiti authorities arrested a Filipino and an Afghan who had tried to enter an area where Bush was visiting oil lakes and damaged installations.

The Washington Post reported Saturday that evidence collected by the investigators appeared to link Iraq to the first attempt on Bush's life, but that Clinton's top advisers were uncertain how to proceed.

Some Justice Department officials want the suspects extradited to the United States for trial, according to the Post. Other officials, including deputy national security adviser Frank Wisner and CIA Director James Woolsey, say an attempt on a former president's life requires direct retribution against the government involved, the Post said, quoting unidentified sources.

Chinese support for Khmer Rouge cools as tension grows

BEIJING — Back in 1965, when China was still a deep shade of red, an impressionable Cambodian in his 30s hiked through the jungles from Indochina and began a long friendship with the Chinese authorities.

His name was Pol Pot, and the support he received from China's leadership proved crucial throughout his subsequent career.

Beijing supplied the weaponry he used to seize power in Cambodia in 1975, stood by him as he presided over the slaughter of more than a million Cambodians and supported him diplomatically and militarily after he and his Khmer Rouge forces were deposed at the beginning of 1979.

In a region where alliances are often fickle, the friendship between China and the Khmer Rouge has been one of the most durable. But now that friendship may finally be crumbling, with far-reaching implications for Indochina.

"We've seen more tensions between the Khmer Rouge and China in recent years," said a diplomat from one of China's neighbors. "There's been a cooling of ties. But it's not yet possible to say that there's been a final break."

The problem for China is that while it has abandoned many of its Maoist policies and is now trying on pin-striped business suits, some of its former comrades-in-arms are still wearing camouflage gear. Aside from the Khmer Rouge, Maoist rebels are active in such places as Peru and the Philippines. In December, the Maoist guerrillas of the Shining Path organization set off a car bomb near the Chinese Embassy in Lima to protest against Beijing's revisionism.

'We've seen more tensions between the Khmer Rouge and China in recent years. There's been a cooling of ties. But it's not yet possible to say that there's been a final break.'

—diplomat

While China has gradually been distancing itself from the Khmer Rouge since the peace accords on Cambodia were signed in Paris in 1991, the last few days marked a new low in the relationship.

On Tuesday, troops believed to be from the Khmer Rouge attacked a group of Chinese engineers working in Cambodia, wounding some of them. And on Thursday, the Khmer Rouge boycotted talks in Beijing attended by the three other Cambodian factions.

The Chinese engineers were probably attacked with Chinese weapons, for China has been the main supplier of the Khmer Rouge. The official Chinese news media blamed the Khmer Rouge for the attack, but the Foreign Ministry has said it is still investigating.

"It is still unclear who was behind the bombardment," said Wu Jianmin, the Foreign Ministry spokesman.

Later, the Foreign Ministry was asked whether China's relationship with the Khmer Rouge remained one of friendship. The ministry responded a day later with one sentence stating that the Paris accord should be carried out and the four factions treated equally.

In effect, the answer seemed to be: "Friendship? What friendship?"

Without backing from China, the Khmer Rouge may find it more difficult in the long run to obtain the weapons and international respectability they seek. In time, the lack of Chinese support would erode the Khmer Rouge's strength and perhaps make it easier for Cambodia to end the long turmoil and civil war.

But in the short run, a break with Beijing may free Pol Pot from any restraint. The Khmer Rouge appear, for example, to be stepping up their efforts to intimidate the Cambodian electorate and disrupt the elections scheduled for later this month.

The Khmer Rouge apparently have a considerable stockpile of weapons obtained before China cut off the supply a couple of years ago, and they may now try to turn a political competition into a military one. Thus some diplomats fear that the increased isolation of the Khmer Rouge simply means more danger for Cambodia.

A Chinese history book published two years ago suggests somewhat ruefully that Pol Pot's extremism may derive in part from his fond memories of Maoist China. The book notes that after Pol Pot's initial three-month visit in 1965, he visited again in 1968 and soaked up the excitement of the Cultural Revolution.

Police to charge politician, wife in Hani slaying

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A prominent pro-apartheid politician will be charged in the assassination of Chris Hani, the popular black leader gunned down last month, police said Saturday.

Clive Derby-Lewis will face charges along with his wife Gaye and Polish immigrant Janusz Walus, a white extremist arrested after the April 10 killing, Brig. Frans Malherbe told the South African Press Association.

Walus and Mrs. Derby-Lewis, also a prominent rightist, were charged earlier. All three are scheduled to appear in court Wednesday, when charges are expected to be read in court.

Hani, who was one of the most popular leaders of the African National Congress, was shot to death in his driveway by a white man. Police arrested Walus minutes later and said the murder weapon was found in his car.

The killing touched off riots, but leaders appealed for calm and the backlash was less severe than had been feared.

Derby-Lewis, arrested 2½ weeks ago, is a former member of parliament of the Conservative Party, which opposes government reforms to end white minority rule.

The party, the official white opposition to President F.W. de Klerk's governing National Party, seeks a separate homeland for whites. However, it has distanced itself from violent attacks by white extremists.

Police affidavits accused Mrs. Derby-Lewis of arranging to obtain the addresses of Hani and others whose names appeared on a hit-list allegedly found in Walus' apartment.

The ANC, the nation's most popular political group, blamed the killing on white extremists trying to provoke a race war to end the peace talks.

Negotiators agreed Friday to hold South Africa's first multiracial elections within a year and to try to set a date in the next four weeks.

Representatives of 23 of the 26 negotiating parties, including the government and ANC, agreed to schedule an election "not later than the end of April 1994."

The ANC is expected to win multiracial elections, but it has agreed the first post-apartheid government should be a power-sharing arrangement among all the major parties.

In another development, about 2,500 supporters of the Inkatha Freedom Party, the ANC's main rival, marched peacefully through downtown Johannesburg. The demonstrators, most carrying shields and clubs, protested alleged bias by government-controlled broadcasting against their group.

London fountains dry as officials look for disease source

LONDON (AP) — The fountains in Trafalgar Square were dry Saturday and nearby water cooling towers shut down while authorities checked for the source of a Legionnaire's disease outbreak, which has killed at least one person.

The victim — and two people who recovered from the disease — had been in the area 10 days before the onset of symptoms, officials said.

Each year more than 4 million people visit Trafalgar Square.

Initial tests found no trace of the bacteria that causes Legionnaire's disease. The bacteria breeds in dirty, warm pools of stagnant water and spreads through water vapor.

The disease takes its name from an outbreak at an American Legion Convention in Philadelphia in July 1976, which killed 34 people.

Police capture ex-postal worker in California bar

By John Antczak
Associated Press writer

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. — An ex-postal worker wanted for murder no longer had the mustache and shoulderlength hair shown in his mug shot, but a shave and a haircut didn't fool a bar customer who spotted him wearing a bright Hawaiian shirt and having a drink as he watched television.

The panicky patron alerted the bartender while another man called police.

"He said, 'The postal killer is here. . . . The guy on the news. The postal killer's here. I know it's him. I know it's him,'" said Frank McNaughton, a manager at the sports bar.

Mark Richard Hilbun gave up without a struggle, ending a two-day hunt for the man accused of shooting up a post office and other attacks that left his mother and a friend dead and five people wounded.

"He was very calm. He was cool as a cucumber. He didn't act agitated or anything," said McNaughton, who was tending bar. "They didn't even approach this guy with their guns drawn."

Police Lt. Charles Poe described the colorful Hawaiian-style shirt Hilbun was wearing as a 'here-I-am kind of shirt.'

The peaceful capture was in contrast to the bloody crime spree linked to Hilbun, a 39-year-old former military policeman with a history of mental problems.

Hilbun is accused of fatally stabbing his mother, Frances, and her dog and then killing a letter carrier and wounding a clerk Thursday at the Dana Point post office, where he had worked for four years. Hilbun was fired as a letter carrier last year for stalking a 29-year-old woman co-worker.

Police said that in the hours after he fled, he shot two people he encountered, critically wounding one. Police also suspect Hilbun of a Saturday morning shooting-robbery at an automatic teller machine about 20 minutes before he was arrested. A man and a woman were in good condition with minor gunshot wounds, police said.

Hilbun was booked for investigation of two murder charges and three attempted murder charges. He was held without bail, with arraignment likely Monday or Tuesday, said Rich King, an Orange County deputy district attorney.

The arrest offered some peace of mind for postal workers in Dana Point, a coastal community 20 miles southeast of Huntington Beach.

Letter carriers had been kept off their routes for safety reasons during the search and they were back on their routes Saturday.

"I feel a little relieved," postal worker Ron Lee said. "But I'm still going to have to get over all of this problem."

The post office shooting came just hours after an attack at a Dearborn, Mich., post office garage. Police said postal mechanic Larry Jasion killed a co-worker and wounded two others before fatally shooting himself.

Hilbun's picture, with longer hair and a mustache, was broadcast on television and published in newspapers. Police Lt. Charles Poe described the colorful Hawaiian-style shirt Hilbun was wearing as a "here-I-am kind of shirt."

Vietnam vet with post-traumatic stress syndrome faces execution

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — A Vietnam veteran diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder apparently ran out of legal options to avoid Florida's electric chair Saturday night when the U.S. Supreme Court rejected his appeals.

The nation's highest court denied two separate petitions to review the case of Larry Joe Johnson, convicted of murder and robbery, and the accompanying applications for stays of execution.

Veterans' groups called for officials to spare Johnson's life. The effort succeeded in winning at least one delay, but the governor later said the war stress condition wasn't the cause of the 1979 killing.

Johnson, 49, was condemned for the slaying of James Hadden, 67, who was killed with a sawed-off shotgun during a robbery.

He would be the 201st person executed nationwide since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed states to resume imposing capital punishment in 1976. Johnson would be the 31st inmate to be executed since Florida reinstated the death penalty in 1979.

Johnson came within days of execution in February, but Gov. Lawton Chiles delayed it to review a state Supreme Court suggestion that Johnson had been psychologically damaged by his military service.

But after his review, Chiles issued another death warrant.

"I recognize the Vietnam veteran syndrome," Chiles said last week. "I do not think it applies in this case."

Johnson served two tours in Vietnam in a Navy construction unit, and he joined the Kentucky National Guard after receiving an honorable discharge. His military career ended when he was hit by a smoke grenade in 1974 during a training exercise.

That accident caused brain damage and Johnson, who still receives disability payments, spent years in a military psychiatric ward.

Judge sends man to halfway house for giving haircut

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A man was sentenced to a halfway house for forcing his ex-girlfriend from her car and cutting off her shoulder-length hair until all but a few clumps remained.

Jeffrey Marshall, a sales representative for an airline, pleaded with a judge Friday to reconsider the sentence for simple assault and unlawful restraint.

"I really, really apologize for what I've done," Marshall said. "Please let me have a future and keep my job. I only have this job to fall back on."

Marshall, 27, was convicted of forcing Lisa Nagel, 25, from her car in February 1992, driving her to his house and giving her the unwanted haircut.

The incident occurred about four months after the two ended a seven-year relationship. Despite the breakup, Ms. Nagel said, she and Marshall saw each other occasionally for dinner or a movie.

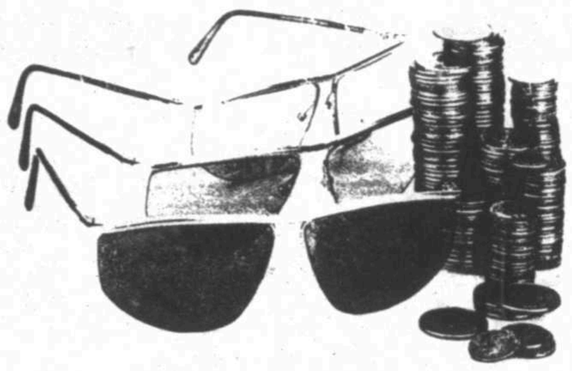

After Marshall cut Ms. Nagel's hair, he asked her how her new boyfriend liked the haircut, according to testimony at the trial.

Ms. Nagel told Common Pleas Judge Kathleen Durkin the incident terrified her to the point that she can't travel alone. She asked that Marshall be punished severely.

"He didn't care what happened to me," she said.

The judge sentenced Marshall to spend three months to a year in a halfway house.

Business leaders urge Clinton to redirect focus, lay off taxes

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Top business leaders are offering this advice to the nation's CEO, President Clinton: Focus on major projects rather than scattering your energies over too broad an agenda — and lay off the taxes.

Members of the elite, and largely Republican, Business Council were uniformly critical of Clinton's approach to reducing the $300 billion federal budget deficit as too dependent on higher taxes. They also worried that his health care reform package, expected next month, would pile on more taxes.

"The only thing that seems relatively sure right now is a suffocating dose of taxes at a time when the economy is struggling. . . . I just wonder whether we can absorb this kind of punishment," said John F. McGillicuddy, chairman of Chemical Banking Corp.

The council's semiannual meeting at this restored colonial village and resort drew 123 active and retired chief executives. They finished their meeting Saturday with a closed session featuring Attorney General Janet Reno.

Afterward, Reno said she told the executives she'd like to use a carrot-and-stick approach to encourage drug users to enter treatment and thus avoid prison. That would open up more prison cells for violent criminals and major drug traffickers, she said.

"It's very frustrating to me to see people getting out after 20 to 30 percent of their sentences because we do not have the prison cells for them. We need to review the federal minimum mandatory sentences to make sure the dangerous offenders are put away and kept away," she said.

On Friday, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton spoke about the administration's health care proposal. Executives said they admired her grasp of the issue but many remained skeptical about what the administration ultimately would propose.

Louis W. Cabot, retired chairman of Cabot Corp. and chairman of the Brookings Institution, said he voted for Clinton but now is disturbed at the direction the administration is taking on health care.

"They seem to be headed more in the direction of having the government take over the whole thing through massive regulation that's going to lead to growing bureaucracy. I don't think that's going solve the problem," he said.

John J. Murphy, chairman, Dresser Industries Inc., predicted Congress never would be able to agree on a health care package anyway.

"Individual companies are going to have to do what they can do to get it under control and its a waste of time to sit back and think the government's going to solve the problem. They're not," he said. "It'll be years before anything happens."

Lawrence A. Bossidy, chairman of Allied-Signal Inc., said Clinton must act more like a business executive and decide what his priorities are and focus on them.

"I think their agenda is too broad and I think they've got to narrow it ," he said.

Robert E. Allen, chairman of AT&T and of the Business Council, said Clinton may have squandered his chance to push meaningful deficit reduction through Congress.

Blimp to take hurricane preparedness to skies

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — The National Hurricane Center is taking hurricane preparedness to new heights.

The Goodyear blimp will take to the skies over South Florida this week with messages that include "move inland in a hurricane" and "stock up now on supplies."

The tire maker offered to display hurricane-related messages for free before the blimp's schedule gets jammed with sporting events, hurricane center director Bob Sheets said.

The Atlantic hurricane season begins June 1 and last year's Hurricane Andrew is still fresh on the minds of South Florida residents.

"We have lessons from Andrew that need to be unlearned," said Jerry Jarrell, deputy director of the center.

The purpose of the blimp's messages is to get residents to ask themselves how ready they are for another big storm.

People should know if they live in an evacuation zone and if they have enough supplies in case a hurricane strikes, Jarrell said. People should store water, food and other supplies to survive for several days.

Some residents were out of food a day after Andrew knocked out power to millions on Aug. 24.

Blimp flights over Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties were set to begin Wednesday. Goodyear plans to make three nightly runs a week through late May, alternating hurricane hints with promotional messages for the company.

Arkansas family raises doctors, nurses, Eagles

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Scalpel. Stethoscope. Tongue depressors. Thermometer.

That could be the supply list for a doctor's office. Or the Christmas list at the Young household.

Dr. Mitchell Young, a general surgeon, and his wife, Donna, a registered nurse, have 10 children, ages 24 to 35. Seven are either in or have graduated from medical school, one wants to be either a doctor or a veterinarian and another is a registered nurse.

Mary, 31, is working on her master's degree in education.

"I've got six grandchildren, and we're expecting the seventh in June," Young said. "I'm sure they will be doctors, too."

Young, 64, has been in practice since 1961 on the Texas side of Texarkana, which straddles the Texas-Arkansas line.

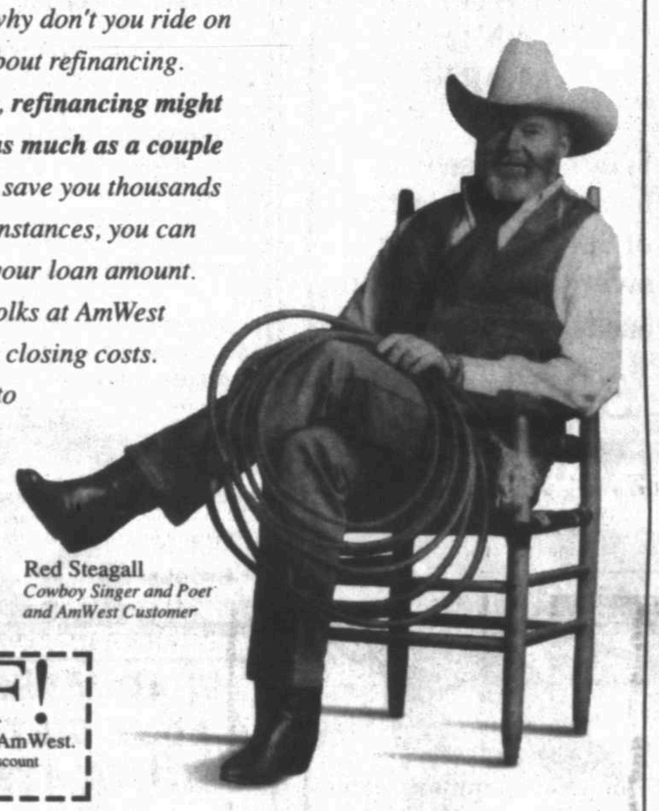

The family also has nine Eagle Scouts, the highest rank a Boy Scout can achieve. Son Chris, 27, said scouting experiences may have helped lead the children to careers in medicine.

"Boy scouting is similar to medicine in that you're helping people," he said. "You're doing good for other people and I think in a way medicine is kind of the next step after that."

Life edges back to normal at school where munitions unearthed

EDISON, N.J. (AP) — The grass is finally growing back outside Robert Fisco's window at Middlesex Community College where the government just a year ago unearthed a startling cache of buried military explosives.

But after 25 years of unknowingly working above thousands of aging munitions, Fisco, the business school dean, assesses the incident matter-of-factly.

"There never was any major concern that we're sitting on a time bomb waiting to go off," he said.

Middlesex Community College occupies a corner of the 3,200 acres of marshy land just off the New Jersey Turnpike that once was the Raritan Army Arsenal, a major shipping point for munitions during World War II.

Today, it is one of the top cleanup priorities for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. It came to the attention of the corps in the late 1980s after a search of military records for former bases where explosives and munitions might still be buried. Raritan quickly became a priority for cleanup because of its extensive history involving work with explosives and because random munitions over the years have been found there.

An Associated Press review of government documents last month found the corps believes aging munitions and explosives may still buried at more than 250 former defense sites across America that now are mostly in civilian hands.

At the former Raritan arsenal, an estimated 25,000 people, about half of them students at the community college, work, study and play. The site now also has two hotels, a teeming industrial center of warehouses and businesses, a park — even a field office of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

For more than a year, Fisco watched from his office window as explosives experts meticulously combed through the dirt. Each week, they unearthed hundreds of 6-inch metal rods filled with TNT, boosters for World War II-era munitions.

The cleanup crews found 83,352 of the leftover rods behind the building. The find was even more astounding because military records gave no hint of their presence. The property has been in civilian hands since the early 1960s.

School officials say sweeps of the campus have uncovered no additional ordnance, although heavy concentrations of lead and other toxic metals have been found under the school's baseball diamond.

The cleanup ended last year outside Fisco's window, but there's still plenty of evidence of the dangers in other parts of the former arsenal next to the Raritan River and a half-hour drive from Manhattan

A triangular tract of land surrounded by warehouses remains cordoned off after tons of loose clumps of TNT were found. A yellow warning ribbon marks off an area recently swept for explosives. Part of the public park has been closed after 83 French rifle grenades were found there.

And not far from a United Parcel Service warehouse, a chain-link fence keeps people out of a 2-acre area of brush where officials suspect World War I-era mustard gas components are buried.

The Army Corps says it has found on the site 113,000 pieces of unexploded ordnance, including grenades, artillery shells, a practice bomb, small arms ammunition and 12,360 tons of loose TNT. The cleanup, expected to continue for several more years, will cost taxpayers an estimated $106 million.

But few if any people who regularly use the area are overly concerned. In the almost three decades since the government transferred the property, there have been no reports of serious injury.

At the EPA offices, where many of the 400 workers are part of emergency response teams sent to Superfund toxic waste sites around the country, workers said they have long been aware of the area's history.

In 1963, when much of the land was transferred to civilian hands, a military survey pinpointed 16 areas where officials warned of likely explosives or toxic chemical contamination and restricted the land's use.

Officials charge college student in father's death

LILBURN, Ga. (AP) — A dispute over college may have led a man to attack his parents with a knife, chasing his father into a bathroom and chopping through the door with an ax when he wouldn't come out, police said.

Charles Mize Sr., a high school football coach in suburban Atlanta, was found dead with multiple stab wounds and his wife was in fair condition at a hospital, officials said.

Their 24-year-old son, Charles "Chip" Mize Jr., was in jail, charged with murder and aggravated assault in the attack Friday at the family's home. The father was found dead in the upstairs bathroom.

Police and neighbors said the family was close but had a long-running quarrel about the son's education.

"Chip really seemed to worship his dad," said Fauve Yandel, a family friend. "The whole family seemed very close . . . this was the all-American, great, close family."

Mother, daughter achieve education goals at Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Solveig Nilsen-Goodin walks to school with the same person every day, shares textbooks and takes some of the same courses. But she couldn't decide what to call her classmate when they passed in the halls.

Finally, she settled on Mom.

Nilsen-Goodin and her mother, Mary Ylvisaker Nilsen, are the first mother-daughter students in the 175-year history of Harvard Divinity School.

"We've become each other's support and help," said Nilsen, who moved from a four-bedroom house in Iowa City, Iowa, to the crowded apartment she shares with her daughter and son-in-law, a graduate student at Boston University.

"It was my concern that I not enter her space and, as kids would say these days, invade her turf," said Nilsen, 54. "I've tried to be very careful about making my own friends and living my own life."

The idea of attending divinity school together "all made sense," said Nilsen-Goodin, 26.

The elder woman is the daughter, granddaughter and wife of ordained Lutheran ministers. She hopes to teach writing in a seminary.

Nilsen-Goodin is working toward ordination in the Lutheran church. Her two brothers already are pastors and one of her two sisters is a seminarian.

Nilsen decided to apply to Harvard during a visit with her daughter last year.

Nilsen has written two books, one about a family coping with a son's addiction. "When a Bough Breaks" is partly autobiographical; the oldest of Nilsen's five children is a recovering alcoholic.

"I dedicated my life to parenting and it went so wrong, but it all came out well in the end," she said.

"Now the rules have changed," Nilsen said, patting her daughter's hand. "This is my parent."

When her mother got an A-minus instead of an A in Greek, Nilsen-Goodin was there.

"It's just hard to see your mom weeping in the bathroom," she said.

Mother and daughter are in different programs of different lengths, but will graduate together next spring.

Teen urges marchers to defend abortion rights

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — The teen-age daughter of a slain abortion clinic doctor came to the city where her father was murdered and urged activists to stand up for abortion rights.

"My father lost his life to the hands of a civil rights opponent who decided to abort a 47-year-old man," Wendy Gunn told the crowd on Saturday. "We must prove to the anti-choice movement that we will not be intimidated by their terrorism."

Michael F. Griffin, 31, a former Pensacola chemical plant worker, is accused of shooting Dr. David Gunn as he arrived at Pensacola Women's Medical Services March 10 in the midst of an anti-abortion demonstration. Griffin is scheduled to go on trial for murder June 21.

More than 1,000 people participated in Saturday's rally for abortion rights, police estimated.

The 18-year-old Ms. Gunn said she was inspired by her father, who performed abortions at several clinics, long before his death. "I wanted to be just like him," she added.

Meanwhile, 16 abortion opponents across town prayed around a vandalized memorial to women who have had abortions. The bronze statue of a woman kneeling in prayer had been smashed overnight.

At the abortion rights rally sponsored by the National Organization for Women, marchers carried signs that read "Former Fetus for Choice" and "We Won't Back Down — Stand up for Justice."

The march was greeted with two anti-abortion signs on their downtown route. A Knights of Columbus hall was adorned with a sign reading "Adoption, Not Abortion."

NOW President Patricia Ireland said at the rally that an "anti-abortion terrorist" may have killed Gunn, but his death only increased commitment to abortion rights.

Authorities search for killer of three 8-year-old boys

WEST MEMPHIS, Ark. (AP) — Investigators checked hundreds of telephone tips Saturday, and the FBI was asked to develop a psychological profile of whoever killed three 8-year-old boys.

Police went door-to-door, talking to neighbors of the boys, who disappeared Wednesday while riding their bicycles.

Their bodies were found Thursday in a drainage ditch about a mile from their homes. The state medical examiner's office said all three died of blows to the head. Police have refused comment on reports that the bodies were mutilated.

Police Inspector Gary Gitchell said the department was using the FBI's national crime database to match the crime to similar ones across the country in an effort to come up with suspects.

FBI behavioral-science experts in Quantico, Va., were asked to develop a profile of the killer or killers.

Sidewalks usually crammed with children at play were mostly deserted Saturday as police expanded their search for suspects.

REVAMPS: Center to take residents in July closed to residents.

CJAD shut down the center's training program for teaching up to 36 men and 12 women how to get their lives in order, how to work honestly and productively, how to organize and manage their time and make a living without committing the non-violent offenses which got them entangled in the criminal-justice system in the first place.

In preparing her 21-member staff for the true test on the effectiveness of her revised program, Mrs. Smith tells her workers simply to do their own jobs faithfully:

"If you've got time to worry about what someone else is doing, then you are not taking care of our own business."

The apparent lack of a well-defined mission and the chaos resulting from a ship without a rudder led to the moratorium.

But the imposition of the moratorium just "reinforced our own evaluation" of what needed to be done, Mrs. Smith said.

G.W. Thompson, agency director of the Community Supervision & Corrections Department (CSCD) under which the center functions, months earlier had requested a CJAD audit to evaluate the restitution center's program.

But CJAD dispatched an eight-person team, which paid an unannounced visit to the center, and scrutinized the center's files, operations and work force for three days in November. CJAD's upshot was an ultimatum: " 'This is what you will do,' " Mrs. Smith said.

CJAD focused on the local center because of various issues and allegations brought to its attention, according to a 32-page report that defined hot spots and other problems and recommended solutions.

"There were a number of complaints (from CJAD)," said Judge John G. Hyde, presiding judge of the 238th Texas District Court for Midland County. He, Judge Dean Rucker of the 318th District Court and Judge George "Jody" Gilles of the 142nd District Court preside over the Midland Judicial District, which oversees the Midland County CSCD.

CJAD cited lax security within the restitution building and the ease of movement of contraband, including marijuana and cigarettes, and a flaw in the building's design that allowed male residents to crawl above the ceiling and to drop into the women's section. "That was a breach of security," Hyde said. "They (CJAD agents) wanted a wire mesh or something to prevent that. It's a very reasonable thing."

The CJAD report also was critical of the fact that the center's "program had been removed from the (direct) authority of the CSCD director" by the district judges, who appointed Chris Davis, assistant CSCD agency director as Thompson's link to Mrs. Smith.

CJAD criticized the center's lack of follow-up paperwork in monitoring the residents' progress in schooling and skills and was disturbed over the high turnover in leadership and staff.

"Under the center's previous leadership, there was dissension within the work force," said Mrs. Smith, who has a varied background in law-enforcement in which she rose to the rank of sheriff's captain in investigative work, attended the FBI Academy, worked as a probation officer and in administration, and taught school.

CJAD cited lax security within the restitution building . . . and a flaw in the building's design that allowed male residents to crawl above the ceiling and to drop into the women's section.

"If you have an administration and line staff that gets kind of crossways, you are working against each other," Mrs. Smith said. "Then you've got major problems — the 'front-office, back-office' syndrome."

Mrs. Smith attributes much of the turnover in staff to relatively low state wages. She hopes to get that pay supplemented by Midland County should her administration be successful.

CJAD's criticism included poor record-keeping, allegations of a "deliberately mis-calibrated" Breathalyzer for testing the blood-alcohol level in residents, discrimination, a staff that lacked focus and that did not fully understand the center's mission, and a program that was void of consistency.

"I don't think any part of it (the CJAD report) hinted at improper conduct," Hyde said. "It was lack of conformity to government standards."

In its report summary, CJAD said that the restitution center's program operations are suggestive of "an environment that appears" lacking in motivation.

"The atmosphere is one of mutual mistrust and disrespect," the report said. "Resident problem areas are rarely addressed, with probation services and case management minimal at best."

Since imposition of the moratorium and cutting of state funding that operates the center, Mrs. Smith has been working with CJAD, the district judges, Thompson, and her revamped staff in reprogramming the center.

The Commissioners' Court is investing additional funds in the building, which it leases to CJAD for $7,000 a month, to take care of security problems.

When the program kicks off again at mid-year, the new crop of residents, like previous classes, will be required to pay for their lodging through day-time jobs. Room-and-board fees are $300 a month for per resident. Transportation fee is $2 a day per resident. The residents also work to make court-ordered restitution to victims of their crimes. They also will be required, by court order, to perform community-service work.

The residents will be learning life skills, gaining their high-school education, and discovering respect for themselves and others, Mrs. Smith said.

"A lot of them don't know how to budget their money," she said. "They don't know how to mend their clothes or take care of themselves."

Davis said that crime has been the livelihood of many of the probationers, who end up in the center, where they could stay for up to a year.

"Very often, the reason these individuals often do crimes is because their lives are frequently out of control," Davis said. "They often come from dysfunctional families: one parent, no parent, maybe raised by their grandma, and always a drug-and-alcohol influence."

Most probationers that judges send to the center are first-time offenders.

"Very frequently, we get them when they just start their career," Davis said. "We're hoping to terminate that."

Davis traces much of center's woes to Mrs. Smith predecessors.

"We had a lot of friction between the front staff and the back staff," he said. "There was no communications. It was the wrong leader, basically. It was the wrong series of leaders. We never really had a director who had sound groundwork in restitution centers."

In re-designing the center's program, Mrs. Smith said "it's very important to present a unified front.

"We have to maintain an equal balance between providing and maintaining security vs. providing a certain amount of opportunities for treatment" for the residents. "We make referrals if they have an alcohol or drug problem." She hopes to hire an in-house counselor.

It is crucial for the residents to have confidence in residential supervisors and counselors.

"Life gets hard for just 'normal' working people," Mrs. Smith said. And the center's residents will be needing "someone to talk to and share their feelings with."

Through educational training and bringing discipline and structure into the lives of the residents, Mrs. Smith hopes to help the residents to "achieve some things in their life and to teach them what the meaning of all of this is. We want them to be successful in life, to become productive citizens in the community."

Since the restitution center has been under the moratorium, a "very important tool of probation" has been temporarily lost, Hyde said.

"It is a vital part of community corrections and an increasingly important part because with the anticipated change in the Penal Code."

That change, which would lower the punishment for certain crimes, would increase Midland County's load of criminals to be jailed here instead of being sent off to the already-overcrowded Texas prisons.

"I believe that restitution centers will become more important within the community, as the Legislature shifts the burden more back to counties and local communities for criminal correction," Hyde said.

Thank You Midland Voters.

Texas Can Solve the School Funding Problem

... in a way that satisfies the courts
... enhances the quality of education
... avoids big increases in your individual taxes.

How? Through a new proposal, one that has not previously been considered by the Legislature or the citizens of Texas — a broad-based business tax that's fair to all Texas taxpayers.

Now You Have A Choice

Last Saturday, Texas voters rejected the Robin Hood plan. Many Texans may now believe that one of four things is inevitable: closing of the schools on June 1; consolidation of school districts; paying for schools by increasing property taxes; or by creating a new personal income tax.

Not so!

The choices are not limited to these alternatives.

The school funding crisis can be solved through a fresh approach:

- Without more increases in your property taxes;
- Without a personal income tax;
- Without sales tax increases, or other individual taxes; and
- Without school consolidation that would remove local control.

In other words, equity can be accomplished without increasing your personal tax burden.

Remember, you can stop the rise in school property taxes and solve the school funding problem ... with a long-lasting solution, not just another short-term fix of an old and obsolete system.

School property taxes have increased more than 60% since 1987, five times faster than county and city taxes, and there's no end in sight. Texas property taxes have grown faster than in any other state.

But now there's a way you can put a stop to those increases, and help the schools at the same time.

Now you have a choice.

There's still time for the Legislature to consider and enact this new approach. But only if you let your state senator and legislator know you want a broad-based business tax to pay for the schools considered.

How can you help?

ALLIANCE FOR QUALITY EDUCATION

The Alliance for Quality Education is a business-led coalition supporting a long-lasting solution to the Texas school funding crisis. Our concept is simple: a broad-based business tax that companies pay in proportion to their economic activity in Texas. It has taken a lot of time and effort to refine this concept for Texas. In the days ahead we will be presenting the details of how our plan works. For now, though, we just wanted you to know there is an alternative.

Inmate scheduled to die for killing officer in 1981

■ Fellow officer believes justice finally will prevail despite lengthy appeals.

By Diane Smith
Associated Press writer

LOS FRESNOS — Every morning David Rodriguez patrols the streets where his cousin, Enrique Carrisalez, was killed 11 years ago.

Despite the dangers, he is proud to take the same risks that took his cousin's life. Rodriguez says the shooting death of Carrisalez reinforced his desire to become a police officer here.

Rodriguez, 25, said law enforcement runs in his blood. He said his desire to help others grew stronger when his cousin was killed on Sept. 29, 1981 by Leonel Torres Herrera. Herrera is scheduled to be executed at midnight Tuesday.

Carrisalez was a 22-year-oldrookie police officer with the Los Fresnos police force when he was shot. Herrera shot Carrisalez after he was stopped for speeding on Texas Highway 100.

The shooting occurred minutes after Herrera shot Department of Public Safety officer David Rucker, who also had stopped Herrera on Texas Highway 100.

Rodriguez was only 13 then, but he still remembers the shock.

"I couldn't believe that my cousin had gotten shot," Rodriguez said. "Just about every other week we talk about him."

With only two days left before the seventh execution date set for Herrera, he said, the old memories and pain are coming back to haunt him.

"If you kill a police officer, something definitely is wrong with your mind," Rodriguez said as he shook his head. "I hope he doesn't get another stay. It's time for him to get executed."

Rucker's former partner, Rolando Castaneda, also wants the case resolved.

Castaneda, who still works for DPS, said that after four months of being Rucker's partner, a unique bond had formed between them.

Castaneda said Rucker was a historian, who researched the history of Port Isabel. He said Rucker was "the type of person that could talk to anybody" and who liked to share his knowledge of history with others.

"It's been since 1981, ... I want this chapter in my life to be over with. It's been a long time," Castaneda said.

Herrera's case has been juggled through the appeals process since Jan. 21, 1982, when Herrera, 45, of Edinburg, was convicted of capital murder in 197th state District Court. He was sentenced to death by lethal injection for shooting Carrisalez.

Herrera pleaded guilty on July 6, 1983, to Rucker's murder and is serving a life sentence in that case.

In January of this year, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in a 6-3 decision that federal judges generally may not stop states from executing death-row inmates who raise new claims of innocence after all other appeals are exhausted.

Rodriguez is not the only Los Fresnos Police officer who would like to see the case come to an end at Herrera's scheduled execution this week.

Hector "Mud" Gonzalez, office manager and dispatcher for the force, was a close friend of Carrisalez. He said the case has been "dragged out" in the courts for too long.

"I don't know where it's going to end," he said.

As the soft drone of a police radio scanning through the channels comes from the next room, Gonzalez recalls memories of Carrisalez.

He said Carrisalez was "a very professional officer ... easy to get along with."

"Every time something comes up, you're opening up old wounds that are in the process of being healed," Gonzalez said.

Gonzalez said he still believes in the justice system.

"There is justice, but sometimes, it takes so long before it's dispensed."

Richards threatens insurance bill veto

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House approved a bill Saturday that Gov. Ann Richards and consumer groups said would gut insurance reforms and lead to higher rates.

The "sunset " bill extends the existence of the Texas Department of Insurance until 2005. After adding several pro-insurance industry amendments, lawmakers sent the legislation to the Senate on a 66-47 vote.

Richards denounced provisions pushed by insurance lobbyists as "trash" and all but promised to veto the bill if it is not changed.

A veto of the sunset bill would mean the insurance agency would be abolished. "Why not just wipe it out?" Richards suggested. "That way, let the insurance industry, if they're going to regulate themselves anyway, let them take the credit for the rates they're going to set."

Insurance industry spokesman Jerry Johns defended the House bill, saying it will make insurance more affordable and available.

He said Richards' comments were "without justification."

"They damage efforts to help consumers of Texas and totally confuse the issue," Johns said.

Under a hotly contested amendment, the bill would allow insurance organizations to provide the data that the State Board of Insurance uses to set rates.

The Legislature in an insurance reform bill two years ago agreed to phase out those organizations from rate hearings.

Consumer groups contend these organizations dominate rate decisions because they provide all the data which state regulators use to set rates.

Rep. Robert Duncan, R-Lubbock, said the organizations are needed to help small insurance companies in trying to determine what rates to propose.

But Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, said the proposal would repeal the 1991 insurance reforms. "It takes out the innards. It makes it bleed. We are retreating with our tail between our legs," he said.

However, Duncan's amendment passed, 62-51.

John Hildreth, of Consumers Union, said, "Two years ago we said the industry can no longer control the information which is used to set rates. The House today said, 'No. We're going to go back and allow the industry to do that.'"

Rep. David Counts, D-Knox City, author of the sunset bill, however, said the final bill will likely be changed as it moves through the Senate and later a conference committee.

Judge: Drunken drivers must give blood or sweat

HOUSTON (AP) — Each week, dozens of people plead guilty in the court of Judge Don Jackson to drunken driving. Now, they have a choice other than working on a road gang. They can give blood, instead.

Jackson, who presides over County Criminal Court at Law No.3, lets them donate blood four times a year in lieu of the community service portion of their sentences, which often also includes fines and probation.

"It's better that they give blood back than spill it on the road (while driving drunk)," Jackson said.

"It started with a man that I gave probation to. He was back 30 days later. It was obvious that the $1,000 fine I levied didn't have much of an impact."

Jackson added that he hopes "having to lie down every 90 days and give a pint of yourself," will help drunken drivers remember to be sober behind the wheel.

Rebs down Coronado

Lee advances with 7-6 win in extra innings

By Bill Price
Staff writer

Overconfident? Maybe just a tad.

But Midland Lee, which handily defeated Lubbock Coronado Friday, came up with the runs when it needed them Saturday, as the Rebels swept the Mustangs in a best-of-three bi-district baseball playoff with their 7-6, 10-inning marathon victory at Angels Stadium.

Lee (25-5) committed five errors and Coronado six, including one that allowed the game-winning run to score, while Mustang pitcher Dakus Geeslin kept the Rebels off guard for eight innings.

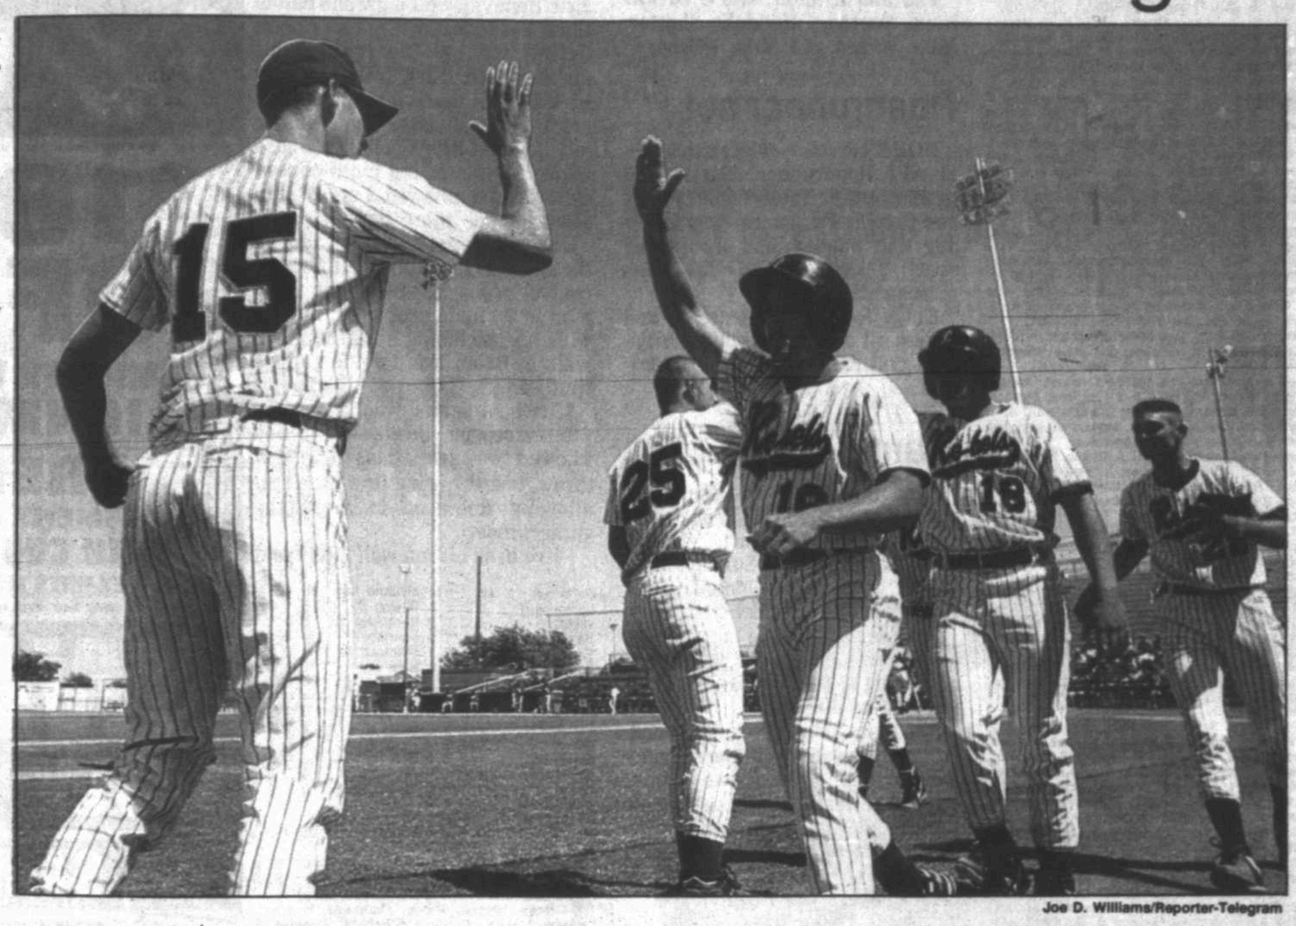

But the Rebs, who beat the Ponies 14-6 Friday, also answered the call in the eighth and ninth innings after Coronado took a one-run lead each time. Both times Lee re-tied the game to put it in a position to win and avoid Game 3, which would have been played immediately afterward.

"If we hadn't have come up with those runs, we would have lost the ball game. It was sure good to be the home team and be able to try to get those runs after they scored. It shows they (the Rebels) can come back and come back with pressure," said Lee head coach Jesse Benavidez.

The win sets up a second round pairing with another school named Coronado, this one from El Paso. The 19-5 Thunderbirds are the District 1-5A champions and drew a bye in the bi-district round.

Rockets put away Clippers

■ Saturday sees the Houston Rockets and Seattle SuperSonics advance in the NBA Western Conference playoffs.

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon provided the muscle and Vernon Maxwell the inspiration that got the Houston Rockets into the second round of the NBA playoffs.

Olajuwon had 31 points, 21 rebounds and seven blocks as the Rockets beat the Los Angeles Clippers 84-80 Saturday to win their series 3-2.

They will begin the Western Conference semifinals Monday at Seattle. The SuperSonics defeated Utah 100-92 Saturday to win its first-round series 3-2.

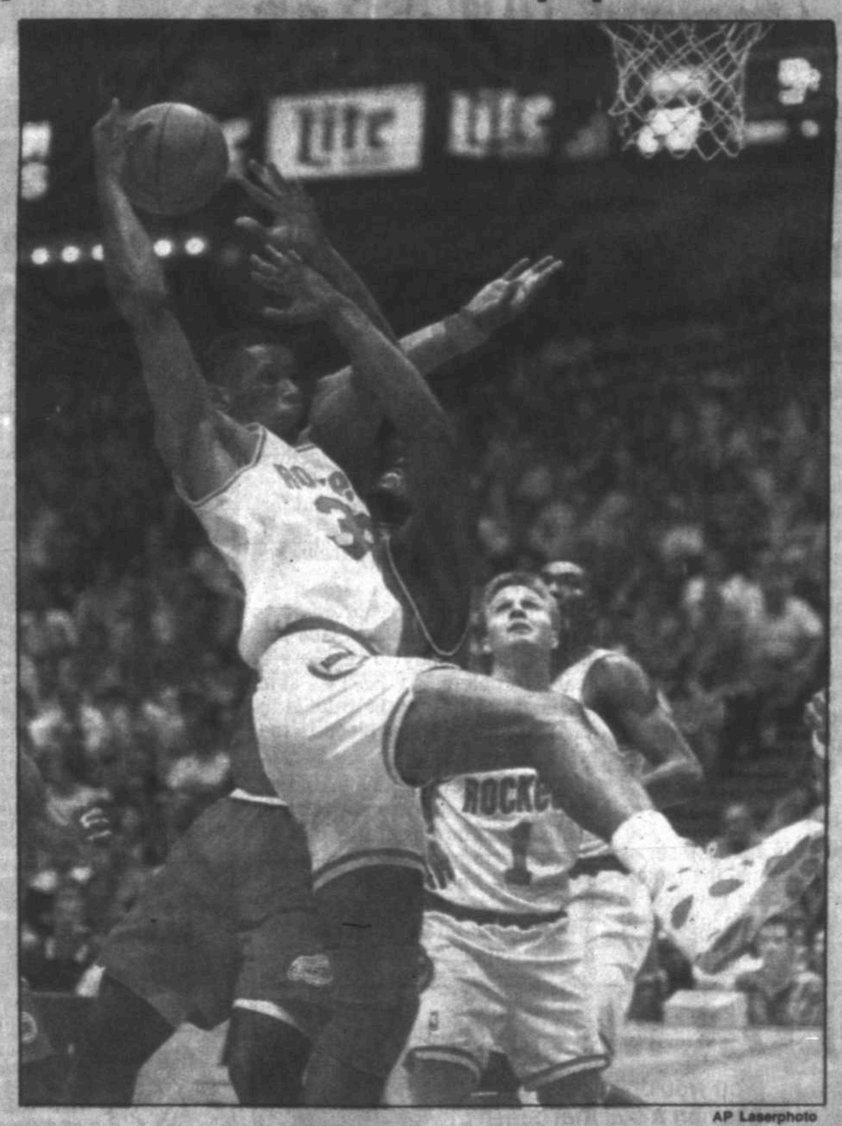

Trailing 79-70, the Clippers scored 10 straight points to take an 80-79 lead on Ron Harper's layup with 1:17 remaining. But Maxwell, in his second game back since breaking his wrist April 17, made a 3-pointer with 56 seconds left to put Houston ahead for good.

"I never got too much out of shape," said Maxwell, who scored 13 points after missing his first seven shots. "I've got a lot of confidence in my game. That's the way I am."

Kenny Smith clinched the win with a breakway dunk with 33 seconds remaining. The Rockets, reaching the second round for the first time since 1987, will play the Seattle-Utah winner in the Western Conference semifinals.

"This is a good feeling," said

Networks to share baseball

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major League Baseball reached an agreement Saturday with NBC and ABC on a unique joint venture that will create a prime-time game of the week and another round of playoffs in 1994.

The agreement, if approved by owners, also would end CBS' four-year, $1 billion foray into baseball.

"We just last night finished some of the discussions with NBC and ABC," San Diego Padres owner Tom Werner, one of three members of baseball's TV committee, said. "The TV committee recommended what we consider to be a very innovative arrangment to our owners this morning."

Owners meet in Chicago on Thursday, at which time they are expected to vote on the new TV contract.

Under the agreement, which reportedly would be for six years, baseball and its two network partners will form a separate venture that "will be responfor the marketing and sales of major league baseball," Werner said.

"It's a real partnership, and it will be a framework for baseball to grow in," Werner said.

For the regular season, Werner said, there will be six ABC telecasts followed by six NBC telecasts once a week in prime time after the All-Star break. A day of the week has not been decided.

"For the first time, all major league games on that date will be available for broadcast and regionalized like the NFL," Werner said.

Stallings, Mills rise to another level

Williamson

Landing a berth in the state track meet is that thinclad pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. It is the most sought after goal of a career. Just planting feet in UT's Memorial Stadium is complete reward.

Heck, the worst you can do in any event is finish eighth. Finishing eighth in the state isn't bad no matter how you look at it.

Still, the state meet becomes more than just getting there for the rare and few elite who actually find gold at the end of the rainbow. Such is the case for Stanton's Jeremy Stallings and Midland Lee's Tanisha Mills.

Stallings and Mills, both seniors, are defending state champions. Stallings already owns three gold medals, winning the 800 meters twice and the 1600 once. Mills won the 400 meters last year and will carry the defending champion role in Austin this year in that event.

For Stallings, the ride at the top has been almost a storybook affair. He is rarely challenged in the 800 while running in Class 2A. Most of the time, Stallings is his own worst enemy. He usually ends up running against a clock that ticks away in his head rather than running against an opponent. In fact, when you have the best time in the state (1:51.13) there aren't too many athletes at any level who can run with you in any given race.

"I know what I want to do and I can tell the time I'm running by where I am on the track at any given time. I've got the whole race in my head," Stallings once said.

But come Saturday, Stallings will be taking his last lap against high schoolers. It once seemed like his era would never end since this is his fourth trip to the state meet. He was in Austin as a freshman. He may have more hours on the UT campus than some Longhorn students. His future is set with the University of Florida, but there is one more loose end to tie up.

He wants to go out with a big bang. He wants more than winning if possible. His dreams are big, maybe even huge.

"By state I would like to break 1:50 in the 800 meters," Stallings says without flinching. "That is really something I would like to do."

Stallings would like that time more than he would

Three of the qualifying teams shot a 65. Bob Glast, Gary Dean, David Warren and Willie Taylor placed first while Rick Gasser, Greg McDonald, Don Hembree and Dave Cox took second. The third place team with the same score was John Duffy, Bill Turner, George McKinzey and Richard Stafford.

The fourth team with a 66 was Rick Seaton, Kendall Shetter, Mike Wilson and Mike Wilson.

The Sand Slam 2 includes bracket for three-on-three coed teams and for men's two-on-two teams. The coed teams may have four persons on the roster and one female must be on the court at all times. The men's teams have three players per roster.

Games are best of three, 15 points per game. There will be a limit of eight teams per bracket for the round-robin event. Entry fees are $50 per team. Entries should be made by calling Ramos at 685-4544 or 685-4701.

MVP awards of $100 for first, $75 for second, and $50 for third in each bracket will be made.

REBELS: Ulrich runs season record to 9-1

(From 1B)

Paso. At press time it was yet to be determined whether it would be a one-game playoff or a best-of-three series, but will likely be played at Cohen Stadium on Friday and or Saturday.

Against the Mustangs, Rebel catcher Brian Graham led off the 10th with a walk for his fourth trip to first in five plate appearances. Then courtesy runner John Robinson, who scored three times running for Graham, was inserted at first and Paul Fuentes bunted him to second.

David Galvan then drove a flyout deep enough to right field to advance Robinson to third, and Eric Benavidez hit a ground ball to third base, where Chance Abbott fielded the ball but rushed his playing hard. Kirk (relief pitcher Kirk Ulrich) came through and we got the clutch hits," said junior left fielder Chris Connally, whose lead-off triple in the ninth chased Geeslin and allowed Lee to stay alive for one more inning.

Jason Baker started the game on the hill for the Rebs, but battled control problems. He didn't allow a hit in 2⅓ innings of work, but did walk six, including a bases-loaded walk to Brian Fox for the game's first run.

Ulrich, a senior who is now 9-1 for the season, then came in and allowed two earned runs the rest of throw, overthrowing first base and allowing Robinson to score the game-winner.

"I've been hitting well lately and I've just wanted to do my job as the No. 8 hitter. That's what I did. Mostly I relaxed," said Graham, who was officially 2-for-4 in the game.

"Every time we came into the dugout we knew what we had to do. Everybody came out of the dugout to support our batters and that gave us a big boost."

"We knew Coronado (16-11-1) was going to get some runs. We just had to come back and keep the game.

"I thought I was warm, but none of my pitches seemed to be working for me early. By the end of the game my junk was breaking a little more. I felt pretty good in the late innings, but I just didn't think it would take that long for us to win," Ulrich said.

After Coronado added three runs in the fifth for a 4-0 lead, a third game seemed imminent. But, in the Lee fifth, Connally reached on a fielders choice that scored Fuentes, and an error on the same play sent Galvan home. In Lee's sixth, the Rebels then tied the game 4-4 on Fuentes' two-run bloop single to right field.

That's where the score stood at the end of the regulation seven innings, and the Mustangs tallied a run in the eighth. But Graham tried a sac bunt and reached on a fielder's choice. Robinson, again running for Graham, was bunted to second, then went to third and scored on consecutive Coronado errors.

The Ponies again went ahead in the ninth, but Connally came home after his triple as Alex Hale singled.

"Both teams came up with big plays and that's what made it a great game. We had other opportunities to score, but Ulrich came up and pitched well and they made some plays in the field. You've got to give them credit," said Coronado head coach John Dudley.

Rumors surround Lewis

Associated Press

BOSTON — While Boston Celtics captain Reggie Lewis continues to undergo hospital tests 10 days after collapsing during a game, confusion surrounds the cause of what doctors call a career-threatening problem.

Officials at Brigham and Women's Hospital, who said doctors are awaiting test results before determining what to recommend for the Celtics' leading scorer, spent Saturday responding to various reports about Lewis.

The Boston Globe reported Lewis was about to have a device implanted in his body to regulate a heart problem. WBZ-TV said Lewis' problem may be related to an artery that carries blood to the brain.

Also Saturday, Celtics president Red Auerbach underwent tests in another Boston hospital a day after suffering chest discomfort. Twiss said Auerbach, 75, checked himself in to Massachusetts General Hospital late Friday after the team's end-of-season dinner.

Isles tie Penguins, 2-2

Associated Press

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Tom Fitzgerald scored a record-tying two shorthanded goals as the New York Islanders outlasted the Pittsburgh Penguins 6-5 Saturday night to tie their playoff series at two games apiece.

Fitzgerald scored in the last minute of the second period and first minute of the third to trigger a wild finish to an otherwise tightly-played game. The teams scored eight goals in the final 20 minutes after combining for only three in the first 40.

Derek King also had the first two goals of his playoff career as the Islanders sent the best-of-7 Patrick Division final back to Pittsburgh for Game 5 on Monday.

Fitzgerald, who had scored only one goal in 13 previous playoff games, became the seventh player in history to score two shorthanded goals in one playoff contest.

Canadiens 4, Sabres 3

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Kirk Muller's slapshot goal 11:37 into the extra period gave the Montreal Canadiens their third straight 4-3 overtime win over the Buffalo Sabres and a sweep of their Adams Division final.

The victory, the Canadiens' eighth in a row after losing their first two playoff games to Quebec, moves Montreal into the Wales Conference final against the winner of the Pittsburgh Penguins-New York Islanders series.

Buffalo, swept in a playoff series for the first time since the Islanders did it in 1977, has now lost to Montreal in the playoffs in three of the last four seasons.

San Antonio's Parra blanks Angels, 6-0

Staff report

SAN ANTONIO — Jose Parra was too much for the Midland Angels to handle Saturday night as the San Antonio Missions blanked Midland 6-0 to end the Angels' short five-game road trip.

Parra came into the game with an 0-3 Texas League record, but he pitched seven innings of four-hit ball and held the Angels hitless until the fifth inning.

It was in the fifth when Midland made its loudest threat, loading the bases only to see Parra strikeout Dan Rumsey to end the inning.

The Missions erupted early off Midland starter David Holdridge (0-4), scoring five runs in the first two innings. San Antonio scored two runs in the first with a leadoff bunt single as the only hit in the frame.

Midland has today off, but will begin a 10-game homestand Monday at 7 p.m. against the Tulsa Drillers.

Hot-hitting Bagwell leads Astros over Reds

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell hit a three-run homer, his sixth homer in his last seven home games, to highlight a 15-hit Houston attack as the Astros routed the Cincinnati Reds 12-1 Saturday night to drop John Smiley to 0-5.

Darryl Kile (2-0) was the winner, going six innings and allowing one run on four hits.

Smiley, signed as a free agent, gave up seven earned runs on eight hits in three innings. He now has an ERA of 7.08.

Houston scored five runs in the first inning. Craig Biggio started things with a double and after a walk to Luis Gonzalez, Bagwell hit his seventh home run of the season. Chris James capped the inning with a two-run homer.

Houston made it 6-0 in the second on an RBI single by Eric Anthony, and the Astros added a run in the sixth when Scott Servais hit his second home run of the season.

Marlins 4, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Jack Armstrong pitched six strong innings and had two hits to help Florida beat New York, the Marlins' first victory ever against the Mets.

The victory moved the Marlins (13-16) two games ahead of the last-place Mets (10-17) in the National League East. New York beat Florida, 4-0, on Friday.

Armstrong (3-3) gave up four hits and two runs, including a solo homer by Eddie Murray. The 28-year-old right-hander, selected from Cleveland in the expansion draft, struck out two and walked three.

Trevor Hoffman pitched two hitless innings and Bryan Harvey finished for his ninth save in 10 opportunities.

Braves 8, Rockies 7

DENVER — Sid Bream's pinch-hit grand slam highlighted a six-run eighth inning and the Atlanta Braves rallied to beat the Colorado Rockies for their third straight victory.

Jerald Clark and Charlie Hayes had hit home runs to give the Rockies and Bruce Ruffin a 6-0 lead through seven innings.

Cubs 8, Padres 6

CHICAGO — Two passed balls by Dan Walters on consecutive pitches resulted in two runs in the seventh inning as the Chicago Cubs rallied to beat the San Diego Padres.

Trailing 5-4, the Cubs loaded the bases with none out off Pat Gomez (0-2) on pinch singles by Rey Sanchez and Willie Wilson and Jose Vizcaino's bunt single. After Mark Grace's sacrifice fly tied the score, Ryne Sandberg was intentionally walked to reload the bases.

Dodgers 5, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Jose Offerman gave Los Angeles the lead with a sacrifice fly in the 12th inning and Mitch Webster followed with a two-run homer as the Dodgers beat the San Francisco Giants.

Phillies 2, Cardinals 1, 10 innings

PHILADELPHIA — Ricky Jordan's pinch single with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning gave Philadelphia a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals, improving the Phillies' record to a major-league best 21-7.

Pirates 10, Expos 9

PITTSBURGH — Tom Foley's run-scoring single in the 10th inning gave Pittsburgh a victory over the Montreal Expos in a game the Pirates tied three times on two-out home runs.

White Sox win on Jackson dinger

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

CHICAGO — Bo Jackson snapped a tie with a solo home run in the fifth inning, and the Chicago White Sox went on to beat the Cleveland Indians 10-7 Saturday night.

George Bell hit a homer and drove in four runs to help the White Sox win their third straight game and ninth in their last 11. Frank Thomas and Ellis Burks also homered for Chicago.

With the score 6-6, Jackson hit his home run to right fielder off reliever Cliff Young.

After Jackson's homer in the fifth, Chicago added three runs on Joey Cora's RBI single and a two-run single by Bell.

Jackson, trying to come back from hip replacement surgery, entered the game with only three RBIs in 42 at-bats.

The Indians, who got home runs from Carlos Martinez and Paul Sorrento, rallied from a 5-0 deficit to take a 6-5 lead.

Jack McDowell (6-1) became the major league's first six-game winner. In six innings he gave up seven runs on eight hits. Roberto Hernandez, Chicago's fourth pitcher, worked the ninth to earn his sixth save.

Orioles 6, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Damon Buford's two-run double sparked a five-run fifth inning as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Toronto Blue Jays.

Rookie Doug Linton (0-1) walked Sherman Obando to start the fifth, Tim Hulett followed with a single and Harold Reynolds walked to load the bases.

Buford then hit his two-run double, but Reynolds was thrown out at the plate attempting to score from first base.

Brewers 6, Red Sox 3

MILWAUKEE — Cal Eldred bounced back from two shaky outings for his fourth victory as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Boston Red Sox.

Eldred (4-3), who had allowed nine earned runs in a combined 7 1-3 innings in his two previous starts, blanked the Red Sox for six innings on five hits. He pitched seven-plus innings and allowed three runs on nine hits.

Doug Henry got the final three outs for his sixth save.

Yankees 10, Tigers 8, 11 innings

DETROIT — The New York Yankees, who let a 6-0 lead slip away for the second straight game, survived this time when pinch-hitter Matt Nokes hit a two-run homer in the 11th inning to help beat the Detroit Tigers.

The Yankees snapped a three-game losing streak.

The homer made a winner of Steve Farr (1-1), the Yankees' fifth pitcher. Farr workes the final two innings, allowing one hit.

Mariners 7, Twins 2

SEATTLE — Seattle hit four home runs, including two by Jay Buhner, and Erik Hanson remained unbeaten as the Mariners beat the Minnesota Twins.

The Mariners have hit nine home runs over their past three games.

Though his record improved to 5-0, Hanson's scoreless innings pitched streak came to an end at 22 1-3 innings over four games.

A first-inning solo homer by Kirby Puckett, his sixth of the season, ended Hanson's streak, the third-longest in Mariner team history.

Athletics 6, Angels 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Mark McGwire's two-run double and a solo homer by Ruben Sierra helped Bob Welch prolong his mastery over California as the Oakland Athletics beat the Angels.

Welch allowed seven hits through 6 1-3 innings, walking one with five strikeouts.

Otis Thorpe had 17 rebounds and 12 points for the Rockets.

Danny Manning paced the Clippers with 24 points and 12 rebounds. Harper, who hurt his knee early in the game, finished with 19 points.

"We gave ourselves a chance to win, but we just didn't get it done," Clippers coach Larry Brown said. "Vernon's 3-point shot was a big factor."

Houston ended the third period with a 22-4 run to take a 67-56 lead. The Rockets increased their lead to 72-56 early in the fourth quarter, but the Clippers then went on a 10-0 run to pull to 72-66 with 6:59 left.

"They knocked us off-balance with their defense, different looks and matchups," Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "I give Larry Brown a lot of credit. They gave us all we could handle."

Harper and Maxwell exchanged taunts throughout the game.

"Max is a very intense guy and he loves the game," Harper said. "He made some key shots for them. We definitely didn't fold. We came back and got the lead and they made some shots."

Maxwell played only six minutes in Wednesday's 93-90 loss to the Clippers, but was on the floor 32 minutes Saturday.

"I like to compete," he said. "He (Harper) said some things about us in LA, so I wanted to come back with something here."

Olajuwon got a bloody nose in the first period and had to leave the game briefly. When he returned, he scored eight consecutive points.

The Clippers led 44-39 at halftime, but they couldn't take full advantage of a 4½-minute scoreless streak by the Rockets.

"The third quarter started the way we wanted, but they were so active and we were tentative," Brown said. "It reminded me of Game 1. We took a lot of bad shots. We're obviously not a good shooting team, but we weren't patient."

The Rockets are 9-0 in playoff series after winning the first game.

SuperSonics 100, Jazz 92

SEATTLE — The Seattle SuperSonics acquired Sam Perkins in a February trade with the Los Angeles Lakers for his inside scoring and leadership. On Saturday, he gave them something else — long-distance shooting.

Perkins made four 3-pointers and the Sonics rallied following a horrible first half to beat the Utah Jazz and win their first-round playoff series 3-2.

After tying a franchise playoff worst with 30 points in the first half, Seattle matched a team playoff best with 70 points in the second half to advance to the Western Conference semifinals against the Houston Rockets.

"We had to do something real quick in the second half," said Perkins, who had 20 points and 13 rebounds. "We decided to drive to the basket and kick it back outside. In the first half, we were just standing around waiting for something to happen."

Utah was eliminated in the first round after reaching the Western Conference finals last season.

"The Sonics did a great job," Jazz coach Jerry Sloan said. "I guess we'll see you next season."

Seattle coach George Karl moved the 6-foot-9½, 257-pound Perkins into the starting lineup after Game 1.

"I don't know if he's a center or a point guard," Karl said. "He's damn good. He carried us confidence-wise early in the third quarter."

Gary Payton had 17 points and seven assists for Seattle.

WILLIAMSON: Mills' region loss stings winning the 800 and 1600 in the same year as he did as a sophomore. Oh, he's back in the 1600, a race his dad, Steve, won at state way back there, but "the 1600 is just a race to give me something else to do," the younger Stallings says.

For Mills, the road has been tougher, but no less rewarding. As a sophomore, Mills missed the state meet by finishing third in the region competition, and it was close, and it hurt.

She came back undefeated in the 400 as a junior, winning that state title, but this year as a senior, she placed second at the region meet, losing her region crown to Tasha Stroman of El Paso Andress.

Mills ran a bad race, not taking advantage of the wind, which should be her strength. She ended up having to make up too much ground. Mills knew it. She was devastated, but not defeated.

"Austin is where it counts," Mills said. "I'll be ready for state. I didn't run very well. It was the toughest race (with Stroman) that I've ever had. But it's at Austin where everyone remembers.

It may sound like these two athletes are putting pressure on themselves to win. It's probably true, but it's also that other level of athlete that show up every year for the state track meet.

Sabatini meets Fernandez in final

N.Y. Times News Service

■ Italian Open

ROME— Gabriela Sabatini combined patience and power here Saturday to defeat top-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, 6-1, 6-3, in the semifinals of the Italian Open.

The Sabatini victory ended Sanchez Vicario's winning streak at 18 matches, and gave the Argentine star a chance to win her third consecutive Rome title. On Sunday, Sabatini will play sixth-seeded Conchita Martinez of Spain, who beat fourth-seeded Mary Joe Fernandez, 7-5, 6-4.

"I decided to play my game today and not to let her get into the match," said the 22-year-old Sabatini, who has yet to win a tournament in 1993. "I was sick at the beginning of the year, and I haven't been 100 percent."

Lakers down to their last chance

Associated Press

■ More Sports/10B

PHOENIX — No matter who wins Sunday's deciding game in the best-of-5 series between the Los Angeles Lakers and Phoenix Suns, the teams will rewrite the NBA record book wholesale.

But that kind of history is lost on Charles Barkley.

"We haven't done anything yet," said Barkley, referring to two Phoenix victories in the Forum which positioned the Suns to become the first team to win a five-game series after falling behind 0-2 at home. "Those don't mean anything if we lose."

The lesson Barkley gleaned from a 101-86 victory Thursday is that the Suns must continue to outrun the Lakers to advance to the second round against San Antonio. Phoenix's point total in an 86-81 loss to the Lakers a week ago was a season-low for the Suns.

"When they tried to run with us the other night, it was tough on them," Barkley said. "They have to make sure the game's slow-paced."

If the Lakers win, they would become the first No. 8 seed in 10 years of the 16-team playoff format to beat a top-seeded team. If they lose, they will be the first team ever to open 2-0 on the road and lose the final three games.

It also would be the first time the Lakers fail to advance beyond the first round in consecutive years.

Los Angeles coach Randy Pfund said he wouldn't change anything, from trying to keep it close to pounding the ball inside to James Worthy and Vlade Divac.

But for some missed shots, he said, his team could have closed out the series in Game 3, a 107-102 Phoenix win.

However, he also portrayed the Lakers as all-time underdogs.

"I read the Bible, I read 'Against All Odds.' I read through all my motivational things, I've gone back through all my history books and looked over the great wars; who were the people that were surrounded. I got to the Wild West and Custer. I closed the book quick," Pfund said, showing the sense of humor which helped him through a 39-43 regular season.

"I think Randy's trying to really play up the underdog role for the psyche of his team," the Suns' Danny Ainge said. "I just hope they believe him — that they're a long, long shot to win. But I don't. I believe it's going to be a great game and a 48-minute battle."

Sedale Threatt, who has set single-game career playoff highs for points (35) and assists (10), agreed.

"Both teams know that ... whoever loses, goes home, so everybody's going to be up," he said.

Threatt, who is averaging 18 points to Divac's 19.5, was the Lakers' top scorer in the regular season with a 15.1 average. The relatively low total underlines the Lakers' balance and what Pfund called a weakness.

"We don't have a 'go-to' guy ... but we try to make that our strength, too, so we're not quite as predictable," Pfund said.

The Suns bring plenty of firepower into the game, with Ainge and Dan Majerle out of the outside shooting slumps which dogged them in the first two games. But no one questions who the Suns' go-to player is.

During a 62-20 regular season, the Suns were 1-5 without Barkley in the lineup. Barkley came into the series as the second-best shooter in NBA playoff history and is fourth now despite an 8-for-24 showing in Game 2 at the America West Arena.

He is averaging 26.8 points, 14.5 rebounds and 4.0 assists in the series.

Elden Campbell of the Lakers forced Barkley into poor shooting in Game 2 with strong defense. Campbell said a repeat could be the key in getting his team past the Suns.

"That's my biggest role in the playoffs, the defensive part," Campbell said.

Lewis wins decision in first title defense

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Lennox Lewis not only is the first British world heavyweight champion of this century, he now is the first one to actually win a championship fight.

Lewis, born in London of Jamaican parents and an Olympic gold medalist for Canada in 1988, knocked down Tony Tucker twice and won a clearcut 12-round decision Saturday night in the Thomas and Mack Center.

"I showed the world how fast I am and the power I have in my right hand," said the 27-year-old Lewis, who resides in London.

How much he impressed the backers of WBA and IBF champion Riddick Bowe is open to question.

The answer may very well be: not much.

That was Bowe's reaction. Contacted at a hotel room in Virginia, Bowe said: "(Evander) Holyfield (from whom Bowe won the undisputed title) beats both of those guys hands down. Take away Lewis' one weapon, his right hand, and he's pitiful. He looked like garbage tonight."

"Nobody can take a punch like Tucker," said Lewis, but his inability to knock out the 33-year-old veteran displeased many fans.

Lewis' victory was workmanlike but certainly not as spectacular as his second-round knockout of Razor Ruddock in an elimination match. That victory earned him WBC championship recognition when that organization stripped Bowe for failing to agree to make a first defense against the top-ranked Lewis.

Bowe, who will fight journeyman Jesse Ferguson on May 22 at RFK Stadium in Washington, still is recognized as champion by a majority of boxing fans.

Lewis will defend next against fellow Briton Frank Bruno on Sept. 18 at London's Wembley Stadium.

Should they keep winning, Lewis and Bowe would figure to oppose each other sometime next year, since it would be the most lucrative fight for either man.

Lewis, a 4-1 favorite, was the second champion to retain his title.

Ryan far from happy with Friday's effort

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — At 46 years old, Nolan Ryan doesn't have many comebacks left.

"I ain't happy with that (performance)," said Ryan, who was rocked for eight runs — four earned — and seven hits over four innings Friday night in his first start since April 14. "It wasn't good."

The oldest player in the major leagues was back with the Texas Rangers after three weeks on the disabled list.

"I keep coming back because I know I can," said Ryan (1-2), who is in his 27th major league season, most in baseball history. "I think it's just timing, rhythm or game conditions (that dictate a game)."

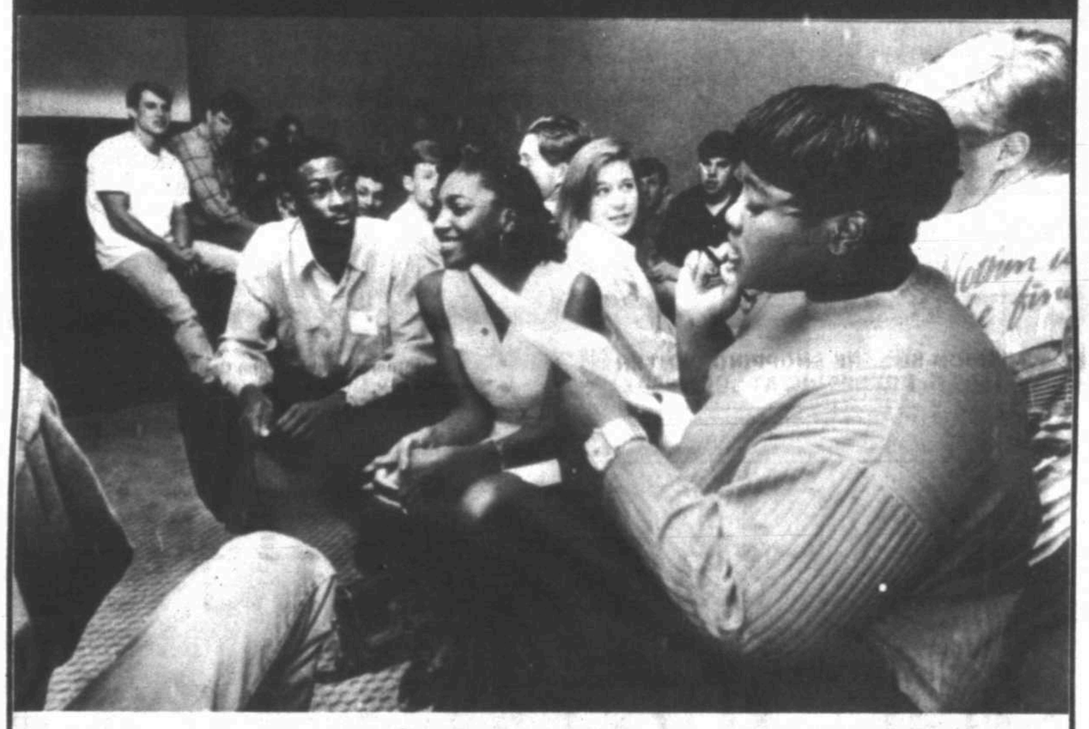

In his career, Ryan has beaten Kansas City 24 times — his most victories against any team. But the Royals scored six runs off Ryan in the first inning en route to a 9-4 victory.

"I got better (after the first inning)," said Ryan, who made 90 pitches, 59 for strikes. "I started getting my curve ball over, my change-up got better as the game went on. But by then, the damage was done."

George Brett saw nothing unusual in facing Ryan, hitting a double off the wall in the second in a battle of future Hall of Famers.

"Nolan Ryan has had a great career," Brett said. "It's fun to play him, it's a challenge to play him. I have all the respect for him in the world. But I can't put Nolan Ryan above any other pitcher."

'Restore Hope' handed to U.N.

Somalia, thanks to the efforts of the U.S. Marines and generosity of the American people, has been clutched from the grip of famine.

Today the starvation of last December and the ruthless killings that swept that land are a bitter memory, nothing more.

Peace and safety have been restored to Somalia. And there is hope.

In coming days and weeks, reports may be made giving the United Nations credit for saving tens of thousands of Somalians from starvation or death at the hands of the roaming bandits that plagued the African nation.

Don't believe them. Marine Lt. Gen. Robert Johnston, who had commanded the military humanitarian effort, only handed over control of Operation Restore Hope to the United Nations Tuesday.

As was the situation in the Persian Gulf War, when a U.S. fighting force led troops from numerous nations into battle against Iraq's Saddam Hussein, there was little hope of a successful effort to save the starving Somalis without heavy U.S. involvement. The United Nations may have wanted to save the starving, but it lacks the clout and the international prestige to put together the massive humanitarian campaign.

When President George Bush in December 1992 committed U.S. Marines to the humanitarian mission of guarding food shipments sent to Somalia and being raided by bandits, he was in effect signaling what the world already knew: that if the Somalis were to be saved, it would be the U.S. military that saved them.

Bush also assured the American people that U.S. troops would come home at the earliest possible moment. Somalia was a country torn by civil war at that time, and the tragedy occurring there was underscored by the deaths of several U.S. Marines killed by snipers — while carrying out a mission of hope.

Operation Restore Hope did exactly what its name stated. Now Operation Continue Hope is left in the hands of the United Nations. The future will judge whether the United Nations is as successful at its mission as were the U.S. Marines.

Leon Panetta: No more Mr. Nice Guy

WASHINGTON — Leon Panetta's immigrant parents advised him to avoid politics in favor of becoming a "doctor or dentist or something with a secure life."

Anderson

Since speaking out publicly about his administration's floundering prospects on Capitol Hill, Panetta may be yearning for a more "secure life" — one safe from trips to the White House "woodshed." Panetta's recent outspokenness about the administration's legislative prospects has become front-page news. In an interview with us three weeks ago, he said that Clinton must pare his agenda to a few key priorities, and then "fight like hell" for them.

As director of the Office of Management and Budget, Panetta's paraciute into the executive branch has been the choppiest of any of Bill Clinton's Cabinet appointments, though not unpredictable. We found Panetta wrestling with his shift from Congress to the Cabinet, from free-agent to follower. Though he talked about the need for the president to effect the transition from candidate to president, Panetta was in the throes of his own tricky transition.

"There's no question that you view things differently," he told us. "(Capitol) Hill is more than just a hill in geography. To some extent the hill gives you the opportunity to rise above. You don't have to get involved in the day-to-day implementing of issues. You can basically speak about issues, put out press releases on issues, pass a law here, pass an amendment there, and then really never have the responsibility to make the law happen. Down here it's a totally different ball game. What is produced up there joins the real world down here to some extent. . . ."

In one telling anecdote reflecting his culture shock, Panetta describes how early in the administration a Cabinet colleague called to obtain his "clearance" of congressional testimony that would be delivered later that week. Panetta was aghast. Such prior review may be a traditional role for an OMB director, but it seemed unnatural for this former chairman of the House Budget Committee who spent so much time debunking testimony delivered by Republican OMB predecessors. The moral: Panetta knows he's now responsible for more than his own words and deeds.

"You have to carry basically the weight of whatever happens," he told us. "I can answer for my own actions. And I can answer for what I do on a day-to-day basis. But when you have to answer for what everybody else does in the administration, that's something else."

If Panetta's future in the administration rests on the personal relationship between himself and Clinton, the outlook is mixed. One senior White House official says that Clinton genuinely enjoys Panetta's company and sense of humor. Despite having bashed Clintonomics during last summer's campaign, Panetta seems to be a Clinton convert.

It's equally clear Clinton had mixed feelings about Panetta, who wasn't expecting a job offer because of his aloofness from the actual campaign and his criticism of Clinton. Then came a call from Little Rock last December summoning him to a meeting.

Clinton brought up OMB for the first time during the last 15 minutes of their two-hour conversation. Panetta essentially accepted on the spot, albeit with "mixed feelings" about leaving Congress. Clinton's feeling was apparently mutual.

Children should come first in funding battle

Legislative officials who led the successful fight against the school-funding amendments in Saturday's (May 1) election have but a brief time to celebrate.

Despite skepticism voiced by those who worked hard to defeat Proposition I, State District Judge Scott McCown's threat to shut off financing for public education on June 1 if a satisfactory funding plan has not been approved was not an idle one.

That means lawmakers have fewer than 30 days to come up with a system that meets the state Supreme Court's standards or the state could be embarrassed by having to close down the schools.

That must not be allowed to happen. . .

Consolidation of school districts is one option to be considered, but there are others. For example, state money currently being used for other purposes- . . .could be rerouted to the schools.

The situation isn't hopeless by any means. But finding a solution will require all involved to quit playing political games and, for a change, put the children of Texas first.

Newton's best sermon blessed L.A.'s streets

The name of the Rev. Benny Newton does not appear in Who's Who, nor does his marble likeness adorn a city square. Society's mistake. For Newton embodied the very best in the human spirit during last April's Los Angeles riots when he interposed himself between a mayhem-bent mob and its victim.

Latino trucker Fidel Lopez was about done for when Newton, who had seen the uprising on TV and sped to its epicenter, arrived. Because of his race, Lopez had been yanked from his truck by a black crowd and worked over with fists and feet. Worse was in store when Newton, also black, covered Lopez's body with his and yelled, "If you kill him, you'll have to kill me, too!"

Facing something more powerful than its hate, the mob retreated. . . .

The Rev. Benny Newton has died of leukemia, his exemplary work on Earth done. He had a small ministry in the inner city. He hosted no TV show and packed no stadiums when he preached. But he delivered the world's finest sermon last April in the lawless streets of South Central L.A.

GEORGE WILL

America could let Europe ride on its own

WASHINGTON — And so in the second 100 days the United States may go to a war. That may mean the United States will go to war.

Will

This nation, most of whose citizens could not locate Belgium (home of the "European Community," a work of contemporary fiction) on an unmarked map, is going to "keep," with many thousands of its troops, the peace in Bosnia. That is, if there is a peace brittle enough to need bolstering by troops but durable enough to last long enough for the troops to arrive.

And there may be more war. A savage civil war of tribalism, the most recent effusion of blood in a centuries-long tableau of savagery, may have been ended by words negotiated by a British peer and backed by the threat of some U.S. bombs. But we had better anticipate U.S. soldiers "keeping the peace" amidst at least low-intensity warfare.

Ten ethnic enclaves, with 1,500 kilometers of borders, in the middle of one of the most densely militarized places on the planet, will require a lot of policing to contain the furies of aggression, revanchism and revenge. If this is humanitarian intervention, where do the troops go next? The roving eyes of television cameras can trouble our sleep from many places. If this is intervention for pedagogic purposes, to teach aggressors a lesson, what makes us think they are ready to receive the lessons of our didactic foreign policy?

The Gulf War was, in part, pedagogic. It was fought so that potential aggressors, bent on changing borders and even swallowing nations by force, would be taught the futility of their plans. But Serbia seems to have skipped school during that lesson. And even Iraq seems uninstructed.

But, then, if exemplary wars against those who seize territory were efficient teaching projects, why did not Iraq learn from Argentina's experience with the Falklands? Syria's unmolested, and almost unprotested, absorption of Lebanon into Greater Syria may have been more instructive for the architects of Greater Serbia.

Americans wonder why America must try to solve a problem in Europe's back yard when Europe is so loath to try. Americans ask: Is it not time to take the training wheels off Europe's bicycle and let that continent learn to ride on its own? But European reluctance is rooted in a sense of the long sweep of things, a sense of the durability of animosities — a sense strong in spite of facile rhetoric about a new era on the old continent.

Seventeen months ago, when the supposedly epochal year of 1992 dawned, there was much chatter about the new, soon to be United States of, Europe. That delusion is a casualty — a fatality — of Europe's first civil war since the one in Greece in the 1940s, and a civil war even more savage than the one in Spain in the 1930s.

The United States — a nation defined by political doctrine rather than ethnicity and tribal memories — is a nation strange to European experience. Hence Europeans, much more than Americans, find it "natural" for war to result (as the First World War, and to some extent the Second, did) because political borders do not fit the distribution of ethnic groups.

The cold comfort we can take from current events is that our sleep can still be troubled. We have not been entirely calloused by this century's coarsening effects. But it takes more than it once did to trouble the world.

Authorities know about eerie cable leakage

Does anybody else here have leaking TV cable? Does anybody here even know that leaking TV cable is a terrible menace? That's right: menace. Airplanes could crash, possibly into your very own house, because your TV cable is leaking.

Baker

I was completely unaware of any of this until Monday when a man came to the door with a TV-cable-leakage detector. He said eerie electronic emissions had been detected from our house, which immediately made me think of flying saucers.

Maybe one had been hovering directly above our house, I suggested.

On returning Sunday night after a week's absence, I had naturally headed immediately toward the gin bottle and been alarmed to find it perilously close to empty.

If extraterrestrials with powerful gin detectors had hovered over the house, they might have taken advantage of our absence to help themselves. Wasn't it possible, I asked, that by entering the house and fiddling with martini equipment they had left behind a telltale electronic residue that was escaping in the form of eerie electronic emissions?

The man with the leakage detector rejected my hypothesis out of hand. The leakage was coming from the cable, he said with that authoritative manner used by people who have been to electronics school when dealing with people whose specialty is Latin poetry.

He was already on his knees with leakage detector aimed at the back of our parlor TV set. Why had I let him into the house? Didn't I realize he might be casing the place as a potential burgling site?

More likely he was an IRS agent in disguise, looking to see if we had unreported cash concealed behind the parlor TV set. To test his credentials, I asked if, since he happened to be in the house, he would be good enough to show me how to program our VCR, which, for the seven years we have owned it, we have never learned to program for ourselves.

He rejected my request in that authoritative manner used by people who understand cable leakage when dealing with people who can't program a VCR.

"Nobody can program a VCR except a 10-year-old child," he said, heading for the kitchen television set. We have a stove vent back there, and it occurred to me that the fan might be sucking electronic dots right off the screen and pumping them skyward where they were endangering mighty jetliners by canceling their automatic flight attendants during the dinner service.

He rejected my idea in that authoritative manner used by people who never get bumped from overbooked flights when dealing with people whose reservations are canceled by electronic glitches before they even get to the airport.

"Vents don't suck electronic dots off the screen," he said. "There's no leakage back here either."

I led him to a radio with a cable connection, without which we would be unable to receive FM broadcasts, which is to say, anything but rockabilly's top 100 hits.

"Aha!" he exclaimed. He'd hit pay dirt, or at least pay static. "Listen to this."

"You've got bad cable leakage," he diagnosed, and treated the condition by disconnecting the cable, thereby leaving us alone in a rockabilly world. Couldn't it be fixed? Not a chance.

Couldn't the cable company do something about it? It was, after all, their cable.

Nothing could be done.

But it had been in use for seven years, so why hadn't the leakage been detected earlier? He said the trouble might be of recent origin. "Maybe lightning," he said.

"You mean I'll never be able to pick up anything but rockabilly for the rest of my life?"

"Electronics is a strange thing," he said with that authoritative manner used by people who can understand the lyrics of rock 'n' roll songs when dealing with people who remember when you could not only hear a Lorenz Hart lyric on the radio but also grasp the double entendre in every word of it.

He left the disconnected radio cable on the floor. Does anybody know if it's safe being in the house with it? If it can bring down mighty jets from above when connected to the radio, what might it do to mere people in the same house with it? We haven't been so worried since the radon scare.

Tenth celebration will always be remembered

It is with great pride that we salute the Assembly of the Arts for the work they did in bringing our community this year's Tenth Anniversary Celebration of the Arts. Where nature created "lemons," the Assembly created lemonade, and this event will be one we will always remember.

We had been impressed with this year's organization prior to Saturday's (May 1) tragedy, but watching and participating in the "clean up" impressed us even more. Friends of the community came to help the artists whose beautiful work was damaged, to assist the food vendors recoup their losses and equipment and clean up and haul debris for the Assembly Committee chairmen. What a wonderful spirit! There wasn't any whining about the losses, only concern that all that could be done to provide for the injured and public was assessed and attended to first. We have never had the opportunity to work with such a distinguished and dedicated group of volunteers. The experience was enlightening and heart warming.

To Andy and Amanda Salcedo and the Khenany Troop who were performing when the wind touched down, please know that we enjoyed your performances and the grace with which you led the participants to safety. Kudos! And for all the dear children, especially Jason at Lamar Elementary, we hope that you will come back to entertain us next year. We know you worked hard and were prepared to shine!

We in the Midland community owe a great deal to the loving and bold leadership of the Arts Assembly's Director, Lucy Woodside. She and her Celebration Committee are the stuff that this "old oil town" is made of — pioneers with the guts to do whatever it takes to make this community all that it can be. Congratulations on a job well done.

Second trial of LA police was travesty of justice

I, for one, take exception to your editorial on April 22, "Was Los Angeles Verdict Justified?" When we re-try people after they have been found innocent by jury trial on the same charges, just worded differently, we show what "mob" rule precipitates.

You, as an editor, should show support for law enforcement. Until you have put on a uniform, badge and gun and gone on the streets trying to enforce our laws when everyone who sees you knows you are a policeman, don't make the judgment you made. The police officers do not have the luxury of criminals being dressed so as to identify themselves.

The second trial of the Los Angeles police officers is a travesty of justice in my opinion. According to the jurors interviewed, they based 80 percent of their opinions on the infamous 81-second videotape. They played the tape six to eight times daily — in slow motion, frame by frame and backwards. I do not believe the tape should have been slowed down, but rather played in real time. The officers involved had to make decisions and take action in real life, in poor lighting and in real time, not slow motion.

Administration shouln't try to add new taxes

I am expecially against any new taxes that would require new regulations and a new collection bureaucracy. Any new taxes should be readily apparent to the final consumer so that everyone is aware of who is having to pay what tax.

I am against the Value Added Tax (VAT) because it opens up a tremendous new tax base for the politicians to raise revenue, much of which is hidden from the final consumer. Since all materials would be taxed as they moved from manufacturer to manufacturer it would greatly disrupt many of our current companies and distribution systems. I am against the BTU tax as presently being proposed because different fuels are to be taxed at different levels. In addition to raising revenue, the tax is going to be used to promote certain environmental theories. Many of the environmental theories, global warming, ozone depletion and etcetera are only theories (it will take several centuries to confirm the theories).

Today we have to compete worldwide so any energy tax would increase the cost of all our products, reducing our competitiveness. The special interests are already calling for all sorts of exceptions to the BTU tax so in the end only the electrical power user and private car owners would pay most of the tax. The administration should not be trying to introduce new taxes. One could suspect that they are wanting everyone to believe that someone else would be paying the tax. If we have to have more revenue, raise the Income Tax or the Social Security Tax.

In the case of the Income Tax we need to cut the bottom two tax brackets. The bottom bracket pays: 15 percent Income Tax; 12.4 percent Social Security Tax and 2.95 percent Medicare Tax for a total of 30.35 percent. The next bracket pays: 28 percent Income Tax; 12.4 percent Social Security Tax and 2.95 percent Medicare Tax for a total of 43.35 percent. The Social Security Tax stops at a salary of $57,600 and the Medicare Tax at $135,000. When Social Security is considered the lower brackets pay an excessive amount of their income for taxes. A fairer approach would be to adjust the tax rates to consider Social Security. Cut the tax rates in the current 15 percent and 28 percent brackets and increase the 31 percent rate plus add a new higher bracket.

As far as basics we need: 1. Tort reform, 2. presidential line-item veto and 3. term limits.

Midlanders should be proud of our servants

We were two of the unfortunate ones to be injured during the storm at the Celebration of the Arts. However, we consider ourselves very fortunate to have had so many concerned, caring and dedicated Midlanders protect us from further injury and transport us to the hospital for treatment.

Not only did Officers Alvin Navarrete, Richard Lewis, Bryan Hintz, Henry Minton, and Kenneth Carter come to our immediate aid, they also gathered our personal possessions, purses, etc., which went flying in the wind, and stayed with us while the paramedics expertly prepared us for the trip to the hospital. Midlanders can certainly be proud of our public servants in the police and fire departments who so ably handled this terrifying incident.

Also, our thanks go to Lucy Woodside, Mary Beth Anton, Dan Anderson, Manny Ribera and many others who were so helpful and concerned about our welfare.

The emergency room staff at Memorial Hospital & Medical Center are also recognized and thanked for their concern and care.

As our injuries heal (a broken ankle for one and broken shoulder for the other), we will have many, many good thoughts of all who came to our aid. Thanks!

How do Texans feel about proposed energy tax?

By Mary Scott Nabers

Attention Texans! Have you called your U.S. senator or representative lately? If not, now is the time to do it. It is critical to let Washington know how we Texans feel about a proposed energy tax that will severely impact this state's economy. Together, believe it or not, it is possible to make a difference, and we had better do it. Otherwise, buckle your seat belts, we are in for a fall in Texas.

How will it affect you?

The BTU tax plan now being considered by the U.S. House Ways and Means Committee might sound like a great idea. We are all in agreement that the federal deficit must be reduced, and the BTU tax would generate more than $72 billion in revenues — one sixth of the total net deficit reduction planned through 1998. The tax could also encourage the use of cleaner-burning fuels, reduce pollution, and encourage conservation. But, the reality is that the BTU tax would be devastating for Texas and Texans.

Proposed energy taxes under this plan will cost the average household anywhere from $301 to $475 a year. Simply put, Texans will be forced to add up to $128 in federal taxes to already rising gas and electric costs. Specifically, that means:

— The average electric bill will be taxed an additional 3.3 percent by July 1, 1996

— The price of gasoline will be taxed an additional 5.7 percent by July 1, 1996

■ Home-heating oil will be taxed an additional 3.5 percent by July 1, 1996

Why will this tax hit us so disproportionately? First, Texas is unique for two reasons — this is a big state, and our industries require more energy than most. Texans do more driving to get from town to town than do any other Americans. And, the industries targeted in the BTU tax are the livelihood of much of our economy. From agriculture to trucking, to manufacturing to petrochemicals, the BTU tax crushes Texas companies and, as a result, impacts jobs, jobs, jobs! It has been estimated that Texans will pay 12.5 percent of the total tax paid even though we have only 6.8 percent of the U.S. population.

The administration addresses the disparate impact on the southwest region with one statement: "While the tax burden on a given region may be higher than the national average on a per capita basis, it is often lower than the national average as a percentage of income." Needless to say, this offers little comfort to Texans who are finally gaining a glimmer of hope that a rebounding oil and gas industry might be a reality.

The conservative measures touted as a benefit of the bill will hit Texas doubly hard. As the lower demand for energy results from the tax hike, oil exploration and drilling will decline. This will weaken an already fragile industry that reported the lowest ever recorded rig count of 721 last year. It is difficult to justify anything that is a disincentive to exploration when this nation is paying $150 million a day for imported oil.

The estimated job loss from a BTU tax is 600,000 jobs, and most of those jobs will come from energy-producing states — i.e.: Texas. Add that to the 160,000 jobs lost in Texas' energy sector over the last decade and one gets a clearer picture of the hit this state will take if the bill is passed. While promoting consumption is a noble idea, any such program must be backed up by efforts to retrain and reinvest in workers who will most definitely lose their jobs.

How can you make a difference?

I travel the state talking to business and consumer groups, and the main message I try to convey is that government belongs to the citizens it serves. Government can be responsive and elected officials are there to represent the interests of the people in their home districts, but government will not be responsive to taxpayers if taxpayers are not vocal!

Already in Washington, associations and special-interest groups have made their voices heard by demanding exemptions and changes to the BTU tax. For example, the administration has agreed to reduce the propane tax down to the level for natural gas, coal and other non-energy sources. There will be no tax on ethanol, methanol and gasoline oxygenates, no tax on jet fuel used in international travel, no tax on coal used to produce synthetic natural gas, and no tax on natural gas used in oil recovery. The collection point for the oil tax has been fixed at the tailgate or exit of the refinery. Therefore, refiners will pay the tax on crude oil and then attempt to pass some of the fiscal responsibility on to consumers. The tax on natural gas will be collected at the city gate to allow producers to ask consumers to share in the burden as well. Each of these changes resulted from lobbying efforts. But, the most influential lobbying effort ever can come from hometown citizens.

Take a moment and think about it. How will this tax affect you? Whatever your feelings are — whether we agree or not — your representative in Washington needs to hear from you as soon as possible.

One proposed portion of the bill that many consumers and businesses have been mostly unaware of until now is a proposed floor stocks tax. This tax would apply to reserves of coal, natural gas, and refined petroleum products. Companies would be discouraged from keeping storage reserves because they would be taxable under the plan. Supply is critically important and we must maintain adequate onsite fuel oil storage for unexpected weather and emergencies. We have faced frightening shortages in the past, and no one wants to experience that again.

Texans deserve fair treatment in Washington. No tax should be imposed that impacts one segment of the country so disproportionately. Yet, if Texans do not do their part and contact congressional representatives, we should not complain about the outcome. If you need addresses to write to your U.S. senators and representatives, or want more information, give me a call at 1-800-RRC-MARY*. I urge you to take 10 minutes out of your day to let Washington know how you feel about this proposed tax. Our economic future depends on some rather serious activity right now.

* After you contact your representative, stay informed and watch for his or her final vote on the bill. It is really important. To find out how your representative voted on this or any other issue, call toll free 1-800-622-SMART.

Chamber shouldn't get money from city

Now that the City Council elections are finally over I would like to congratulate the winners and urge them to remember some of their wonderful campaign promises of more efficiency in city government, holding the line on taxes, and in one case even actually reducing taxes.

With this in mind, I would like to suggest a very significant and easy way to annually save the taxpayers a very large amount of tax money and public funds which are now virtually thrown to the four winds by eliminating any City of Midland contributions to the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The Chamber of Commerce should not be financed by the city! Its benefits to the city are minuscule at best despite claims of great deeds of economic development and other worthwhile feats. Actually, the chamber does maintain an excellent assortment of free city maps and circulars of area tourist attractions such as the Big Bend, Carlsbad Caverns, and the Odessa Meteor Crater.

The local hotel-motel occupancy tax of 13 percent, which mainly finances the Chamber of Commerce is outrageous and should be immediately repealed. Just imagine the advantage our local hotel and motel operators would have over those of competing towns if our rates were that much lower.

I guess that city policies regarding the chamber were set up in better economic times by a more liberal City Council, and I submit it's now time for a great change. I urge the present council to seriously reconsider just where our priorities should be, and I don't think they will include throwing money away to the Chamber of Commerce!

We may as well use 'National Enquirer'

How many of us are sick, sick, sick of political mudslinging? The same tactic can be found in any schoolyard! Instead of going to the expense of holding an election, we might as well have the "National Enquirer" run an expose' on all the candidates.

Now, Bob Krueger intends to "raise questions" about Kay Bailey Hutchison's "integrity." In my mind, that move alone raises a lot of questions about Krueger's integrity. Is he so weak on the issues (which, after all, is what any campaign is supposed to be all about) that he has to play in the mud?

I always vote against any candidate that starts the mudslinging game, and believe that if more voters did so it would put an immediate halt to such juvenile games. We could get down to the issues that are what voters need to make intelligent decisions about matters that are important.

Dale Brown ran his campaign honestly

As the local election is finished, we find ourselves reflecting back on the past few weeks with many mixed emotions and thoughts. We want to begin by congratulating Bill Morrow and Jose Cuevas as they continue their work on the City Council. We appreciate so much being involved with them as well as Bill Rodriguez in a clean campaign void of the usual "mudslinging" that so often takes place between candidates.

To the many wonderful people who supported us, we also feel the need to make a few explanations in response to the negative publicity that Dale received during the last week of the campaign.

First, in response to the front page article published the Sunday before the election concerning Dale's campaign spending, it is necessary to understand that the report included only one of the three required reports about spending. Spending of each of the candidates from the first report were not added to the second report, and consequently the figures reported in the article were not cumulative and therefore were somewhat misleading.

Dale was determined to be meticulously honest in reporting every detail of campaign expenditures so as not to open himself for even a hint of criticism. In an attempt to be totally open and fair, he even reported some unpaid bills that had come in just before he filed the report. We were anticipating very little more in expenditures. The first two reports when added together show another candidate with $11,444 spent. Our actual paid bills to that date were $7,776. When all three reports were compiled, we doubt that our total spending will be out of line with the other candidates, especially when you consider that he was running in a city-wide campaign rather than just in a single district. He was also running as a newcomer and relative unknown against two known incumbents. We were told by some who had experience in running campaigns that it would take a minimum of $15,000 to run a successful campaign under those circumstances.

Second, in response to the several allegations that Dale was backed by this or that special interest group, we want Midlanders to know that Dale represented NO special interest group, except citizens across our city who wanted to support a man of integrity, sound judgment and Christian values for our local government.

In response to the person who was concerned that Dale was in opposition to Sheriff Gary Painter because "Richardson" showed through our signs when they got wet, we assure you that we are in support of Gary Painter and ALL of our law enforcement officers as they work hard to make Midland a safer place for each of us. The signs used in the campaigns of most of all the candidates come from a supply of old signs that are recycled from previous campaigns. New signs are simply pasted over old with no regard for whose old sign is underneath.

In response to the man who discovered that two of the 429 names listed in Dale's endorsement ad were people from Texas National Bank and therefore concluded that Dale's council seat was being "bought" by the bank, we want to assure you that contributions to Dale's campaign came mostly from everyday, ordinary people.

In conclusion, we want to say that Midland is a wonderful place to live, and we were honored to have had the privilege of running for the City Council in this great community.

Thank you, Midland, for caring enough to vote. Even though you chose someone else, we are so proud that you cared enough to exercise your right to vote. We want to pledge to you that we intend to continue to be active in serving this great community where so many still care about having good government.

President Clinton deserves more support from European allies

By William Randolph Hearst Jr.
Editor in Chief, Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — With the Bosnian Serb parliament rejecting the U.N. peace plan and our Congress unwilling to send sufficient ground and air forces to stop the massacre of Bosnian Moslems, the prospects for an early end to war in the Balkans strikes me as dim.

Hearst

If President Bush and some of our European allies had been willing a year ago to do what President Clinton is now planning to do, I believe the lives of many thousands of innocent men, women and children would have been saved.

The appeasing peace plan devised by former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Lord David Owen, the European Community's negotiator, would enable the barbarian Serbs to conquer almost half of Bosnia, a former province of Yugoslavia.

Meanwhile, the war has caused the loss of 135,000 people — dead or missing. That the civilized world, and particularly the Europeans, let it happen is shameful.

President Clinton reacted swiftly to the Bosnian-Serbian parliament's overwhelming rejection of the peace plan. He deserves great credit for calling on the Western allies to join with the United States in acting "quickly and decisively" to stop the slaughter of helpless humans, young and old, despite the reluctance of Congress to become involved militarily.

Congressional leaders of both parties insist Congress must approve the President's plans for military intervention under the War Powers Act. Such a vote — after any American troops have already been sent — would likely support the President. House Speaker Tom Foley last week said: "My overall presumption is that what the President requests, he will receive."

President Clinton deserves greater loyalty from our European allies than he is getting. We stood with the European nations throughout the long Cold War. Now they should join the United States in a joint effort by civilized nations to put an end to the uncivilized slaughter in Bosnia.

As President Clinton said last week: "American has made its position clear. It is ready to do its party, but Europe must be willing to act with us. We must go forward together."

The President has plans for U.S. air strikes at Serbian artillery sites overlooking Sarajevo and other cities and towns in Bosnia. He is also planning to send up to 34,000 troops to participate in a UN peace-keeping force — if a cease fire goes into effect there.

Whatever Congress does, it should be left up to President Clinton to decide how to handle the strategic military decisions after he has listened to the somewhat conflicting advice of his military advisers. The President is Commander-in-Chief of our armed forces. He has the authority to send our military forces anywhere to protect our national interest, as long as he notifies Congress within 48 hours whenever "imminent involvement in hostilities is clearly indicated." Congress then must approve of the deployment within 90 days — or the American forces will be withdrawn.

Search through attic turns up magic putter

■ PGA Seniors

AUSTIN — Steady George Archer, one of the best putters on the Senior Tour but a non-winner this year, took control of the Legends of Golf at the 36-hole mark Saturday as the wind blew away most of his competition.

Archer shot a second consecutive 6-under 66 to seize a four-shot lead in pursuit of the $250,000 first-place prize.

Winner of 11 senior events, Archer has two second-place finishes this year and almost $2 million in total earnings. He avoided disasters that befell his challengers on Saturday, shooting a seven-birdie, one-bogey round for a total of 12-under 132.

"I found an old putter in the attic I hadn't used since the 1980s and it feels good," said Archer, who had seven one-putts. "I'm not as good a putter as I used to be. I was a very good putter for a long time but now I'm hot and cold."

Archer capped his round with a 35-foot birdie putt on the final green.

"I'll have to force myself to be aggressive tomorrow," Archer said. "This is a tricky course and there is no room for mistakes, but it's easy to get too timid."

Skies were partly cloudy in the Austin area, but gusty southeast winds swept the area at 15-25 mph.

Gibby Gilbert, who shared the first-round lead with Tom Weiskopf, shot 71 for a 136 total and was tied with Larry Laoretti and Tommy Aaron, who had 66s. Weiskopf shot even-par 72 and was at 137.

Dale Douglass carded a competitive course record with a 9-under 63 in a brilliant round that included two eagles with putts of 35 and 20 feet.

Don January won the Legendary Division and the $22,500 first-place prize for players ages 60-69. He shot 68 for a 138 total.

■ Atlanta Classic

MARIETTA, Ga. — PGA champion Nick Price of Zimbabwe shot an 8-under-par 64 Saturday to build a one-shot lead after three rounds of the Atlanta Classic.

Price, who won The Players Championship earlier this year, had a bogey-free round on the hilly, 7,018-yard Atlanta Country Club course for a 54-hole total of 200, 16-under-par.

Mark Calcavecchia, who has been struggling all year, birdied the final hole to complete a 67 that left him alone in second place at 201.

For the second year in a row, a Georgia Tech product generated the most third-round excitement. Jimmy Johnston, a rookie who has made only two cuts in 10 events this year, had two eagles in a round of 64 that left him two shots off the lead at 202.

Johnston was tied for third with Dillard Pruitt, who shot 68.

"To tell you the truth, I'm flabbergasted," Johnston said.

"I never shot those numbers in college," he said. "You shoot 4 or 5-under in college, you got a top five finish. Out here, you don't make the cut."

In the third round a year ago, Georgia Tech amateur David Duval led after three rounds after shooting a 66. Duval fell into a tie for 13th the next day when he shot 78.

"I might give him (Duval) a call tonight and see if he has any pointers," Johnston said.

Johnston's best round as a pro came from a sizzling putter. He sank a downhill 30-footer for birdie on No. 9 and a 50-footer for another birdie on No. 15 — two of the toughest holes on the course.

His eagles came on the two par-5s on the back side — No. 11 where he sank a 15-footer from just off the green and on No. 18 where his 1-iron approach left him only eight feet from the hole.

Price, who moved into contention with a 67 on Friday, moved into a share of the lead on No. 13 when Calcavecchia fell one shot back with a bogey.

Mike Springer had a 68-203 and another shot back were Nolan Henke, 68, and Tom Sieckmann, 70.

Second-round leader Billy Andrade fell back into the pack with a 73-206, falling out of contention with a triple bogey-8 on No. 8 when he caught a fairway trap, left it in the trap and later knocked it into a greenside bunker.

Slew of birdies, round of 64 gives Massey lead

Associated Press

■ LPGA

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Debbie Massey had eight birdies and no bogeys in a round of 64 Saturday that gave her a two-stroke lead after Saturday's second round of the $525,000 Sara Lee Classic.

Massey's finish, for two-day total of 133, capped a day that saw the 36-hole cut fall at 1-under 143, the first time on the LPGA tour that every player will enter the final day under par.

The previous low was even-par 144 in 1989.

"I had to play a little bit of bump and run golf today," said Massey, whose last LPGA tour victory came in 1990 at the Mazda Japan Classic. "The greens as hard as they are, any pins in the front, you're going to be looking at a lot of bump and run shots."

Meg Mallon followed at 4-under 68 for a two-day total of 135.

Ayako Okamoto, who entered the round two strokes back, bogeyed No. 17 to fall to 71. She joined Betsy King (69), Lisa Walters (68) and Dana Lofland-Dormann (70) with a total of 136 in the 54-hole event.

Despite three inches of rain Monday, the par-72, 6,311-yard Hermitage Golf Course was playing hard Saturday thanks to summer-like temperatures in the high 80s. Massey said the course was playing much more like a European course.

"Really the pitch and run golf. I've played a lot of golf in England and Scotland. Although our courses maybe aren't specifically designed for it over here, you still have to play it on a lot of holes," said Massey, who won the British Women's Open in 1980 and 1981.

Massey stood at 3-under after a 69 in the first round, but she said she jumpstarted herself by making par on the par-4, 350-yard first after hitting the ball over the green onto the back fringe.

"It was just a hellacious putt," she said.

She then racked up three birdies to move to 6-under and parred No. 10 before linking birdies on No. 11 and No. 12. A pair of birdies followed on the 14th and 15th holes.

Carriers to conduct food drive

Postal employees to collect canned goods for Permian Basin Food Bank Saturday.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Midland postal employees will be picking up more than mail on their delivery routes this Saturday, they will be collecting canned goods for the Permian Basin Food Bank.

Midland Postmaster Stan Sartain is asking for the help of postal customers to make the food drive a success. The food drive is being conducted in conjunction with the National Association of Letter Carriers, which has 200 agencies nationwide that will participate in the collection Saturday.

"We started a couple of years ago . . . the post office employees felt like they wanted to do something to give back to the community and particularly those that are suffering from maybe the economic woes of the city and the country," Sartain said.

He said one of the employees suggested a food drive for the food bank.

"We got to looking around at the people of the Permian Basin . . . that really are having it hard. Not everyone is as fortunate as the postal employees to have a full-time job," Sartain said.

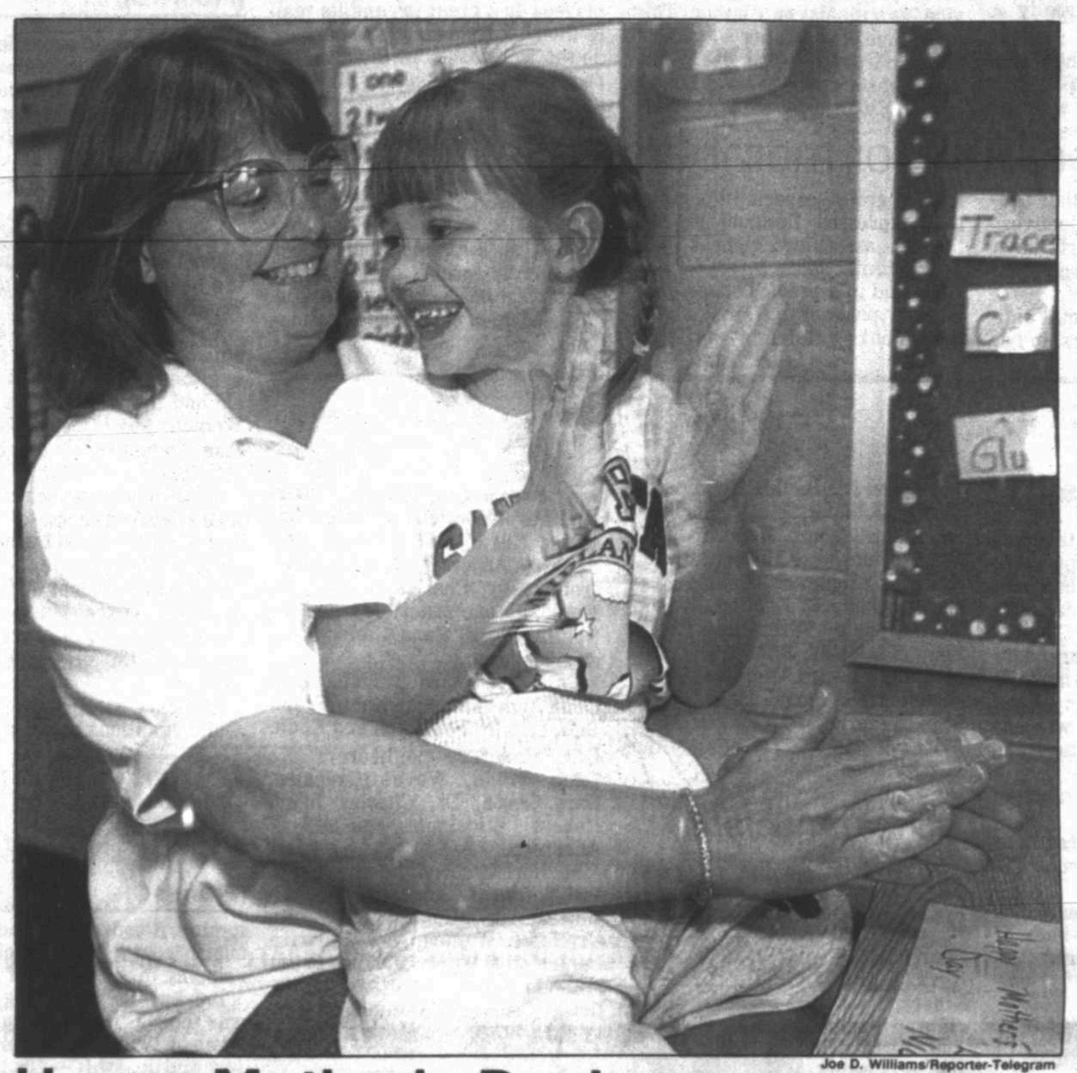

"We do it for the needy . . . there area lot of people out of work these days. Times are real hard. Sharing your good fortune with less fortunate people makes it a worthy thing to do," said postal employee Quincy Wallace, who participated in last year's drive.

The postal employees participate solely on a voluntary basis with many giving up a large portion of their free time to help, Wallace said.

Plus, Sartain explained the extra workload is tremendous for the carriers. He said off-duty volunteers will act as "runners," who will meet the carriers on their routes and pick up the items and take them to a designated spot.

Sartain said local residents are asked to participate

Texas commission presses Klan to give membership information

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — An attorney for Ku Klux Klan leader Charles Lee says the state's attempt to question Lee about Klan membership is similar to the harassment of other groups that expressed unpopular ideas in previous years, such as the NAACP and the Communist Party.

Rife Kimler, a Port Arthur attorney, said he begins to worry when tactics in the United States resemble the oppression of ideas he witnessed while studying Russian in 1986 in the former Soviet Union.

The Texas Commission on Human Rights has filed a suit against Lee, who is grand dragon of the White Camelia

Police hope to be role models

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Sgt. David Garcia believes Midland's youth should have positive role models and those role models should be police officers.

That is why he has undertaken the ambitious task of setting up a Police Athletic League (PAL) program in Midland.

"We have already had a meeting with the coordinator of the PAL program in Odessa," Garcia said. "When we get our volunteers together, we will probably have another meeting. It takes quite a bit of legwork to get this program into place."

The program's premise is simple: organizing officers and other volunteers to supervise sporting activities for young people. However, the structure is more complex.

Garcia said he must first apply to the National Association of Police Athletics Leagues in North Palm Beach, Fla. Then, comes setting up a civilian board of directors, locating facilities, raising

Reports of Koresh's paddlings don't shock me

Ott

The opening paragraph of the story caught my attention.

It stated: "For sins as small as spilling milk, the children said, they were struck by a wooden paddle known as 'the helper.' To train for the final battle, they were instructed to fight each other, and if they did not fight hard enough, they were paddled for that, too."

The story that followed, of course, detailed the various horrors that occurred inside David Koresh's little piece of hell, also known as the Branch Davidian cult compound near Waco.

But when I read that first paragraph — and the word "paddle" — my mind immediately leaped back in time . . . to 1966 and my high school shop teacher, a man by the name of Christopher Columbus Bloodworth who could paddle young men with the best of cult leaders.

Indeed, his "licks," as they were not-so-affectionately called, became legendary throughout Plainview High School. The beating sound, which had a certain foreboding quality that one tends to associate with a nuclear holocaust, would echo through the hallways, causing even the toughest of football players to subconsciously double over and cringe while sitting at their desks.

Let me see if I can explain this better. Imagine this typical scene from your fun-filled high school days:

You are sitting in your sophomore English class, giggling with your buddies, flirting with the girls and basically ignoring what the teacher is telling you about what Herman Melville really meant when he wrote a certain passage in Moby Dick.

Who cares?

"I'll never need this information," you tell yourself, while lobbing a spit wad across the room.

Then it happens. WHAM! A brief silence. WHAM! More silence. WHAM!

The noise reverberates throughout your classroom, even though the actual punishment is being administered some 10 doors down. Instinctively, everyone, including your teacher, knows exactly what has occurred.

Christopher Columbus Bloodworth has struck again.

For several seconds, though it seems like hours, no one speaks. A sense of hushed reverence fills the room. You can't help but wonder who the victim was — someone you knew, an enemy, a friend.

But one thing is certain. Tears have begun to form. No one could suffer the wrath of Christopher Co-

PAL: Police to be role models in new program money for equipment, naming a PAL coordinator and organizing volunteers to serve as coaches and officials.

In order to get an idea of how the program runs, Garcia said he is working closely with the Odessa PAL program.

"Our program won't be a mirror image of Odessa's because obviously we have to tailor it to our needs over here," he said. "But, they are the closest program to us. I think the next closest is Dallas."

Odessa program's started in January 1992 and Garcia is hoping to have the Midland program in place by this fall.

PAL will be open to any Midland children ages eight through 16 years of age.

"If you open it to anyone under eight, you essentially turn it into a baby-sitting service rather than a worthwhile program," Garcia said. "And, at 17, they are basically adults."

Although Garcia hopes for a cross section of Midland children, he said a program such as PAL tends to attract those on the lower part of the economic scale.

"A lot of single parent kids and kids from the lower-income families are attracted to a program like this because it gives them something to do and it has only a token cost," he said, adding that a fee has not yet been determined for Midland, but it would probably been only a $1 or $2 a month.

Garcia said the program would not only give the children something to do, but would give them a sense of teamwork and success.

"It will teach these kids how to fit in and channel their energy away from negative things," he said. "If kids are bored, they will find something to do, good or bad. Hopefully, we can steer them toward something constructive."

The program also allows the children to work closely with police officers, which is the basic reason Garcia said he wanted to start the program.

"We need to show these kids that we aren't the bad guys, that we are there to help," he said. "It's a group that we really aren't targeting and we only see them when they are in trouble. We need to develop a better relationship with them."

FOOD: Postal employees to pick up more than mail Saturday by donating canned goods and nonperishable food items.

He said postal customers with door or curb delivery are asked to leave donations by the mailbox. Customers with neighborhood box units, cluster boxes or apartment boxes are asked to leave donations on the ground by the boxes.

Local drop-off points for customers in Midland will be at the three Albertson's stores from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday. The locations are at 1002 Andrews Hwy., 3317 N. Midkiff Rd. and 4706 N. Midland Dr.

Food bank operations manager Billie Buckminster said last year the area postal employees donated 44,000 pounds of canned goods. She said, "The donation is really a boon for us."

According to Sartain, the postal employees have set a goal to double last year's collection and aim for more than 80,000 pounds of food.

Ms. Buckminster said the food bank distributed more than two million pounds of food last year and she anticipates even more to be given this year.

The donation of the postal service "is a major contribution. This is the time of year when we run out of food from the holidays," Ms. Buckminster said. "Last year we ran out of food by summer. This will assure us of being able to provide to the 126 active agencies we serve."

"We are thrilled and grateful to have the donation," Ms. Buckminster said.

"Its a great opportunity to help the community . . . the postal employees do a great job and its really them — its their idea and they do the work. They're the ones the people have to thank for it," Sartain said.

CASE: Commission presses Klan for membership information

(From 1C)

Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, in an effort to get information about the organization's membership.

The First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution includes freedom of association with other people to pursue common objectives, Kimler said, and the courts have ruled the Klan has association rights.

"Any time a governmental entity is requesting a membership list from a group, especially a group that expresses dissident beliefs, then the association right is invoked," Kimler said.

He said in a previous case, during the peak of the civil rights movement, Alabama officials tried to obtain membership rolls of the NAACP.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that merely turning over a membership list has a chilling effect on the freedom of speech and association.

OTT: Report on paddling children doesn't shock me

lumbus Bloodworth's paddle without at least a hint of moisture developing in the corner of the eyes.

Indeed, the receiving of licks was the No. 1 form of punishment when I was in school. If you screwed up, swift — and painful — action followed. You were either taken out in the hall and beaten immediately or you were sent to the principal's office where you sat for several minutes before finally being pounded on.

It was accepted. No one threatened to sue the school district. Parents didn't file complaints. Students didn't claim physical abuse.

The rules were simple. You acted up. You got punished.

That didn't mean you had to like it, of course, but getting whipped from time to time was more or less accepted as being a valid part of growing up.

Coaches were probably the most notorious paddlers of all. They could flat-out hurt you. Some were known to hit so hard, in fact, that the force of their blow would literally lift the student off the ground. Red splotches would remain on his (or her) fanny for days at a time.

Notice that (or her) reference in the preceding sentence. There were cases when girls were given licks, too. It didn't happen often, mind you, but on occasion they would receive the "ultimate" punishment, though we — the guys — always figured their licks were far less brutal than those administered to us.

But my point remains unchanged. Paddlings — or spankings, or whippings, or licks, or whatever you choose to call them — were a part of a normal childhood. I never considered them to be overly barbaric or sadistic. I tried to avoid them, of course, but the mere mention of the word "paddle" doesn't send chills up and down my spine.

So if you're trying to shock me about David Koresh, you're going have to do better than "he paddled children" stories.

The fact he was a nut who thought he was Jesus might work, but not "giving licks." And, I bet the late Christopher Columbus Bloodworth would agree with me, too.

Local companies to set up shop at Midland Center for EXPO 93

Staff report

■ Please see EXPO 93/Section H

Some 60 Midland companies will set up shop at the Midland Center from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday for EXPO 93, an annual event featured by the Midland Chamber of Commerce as a "business-to-business" trade show.

As many as 1,000 attendees are expected.

Exhibits will range from computer displays to graphic companies, and will include banks, the news media, electronics companies and a variety of service firms.

"It's exciting to see so much activity under one roof," said Garth Wright, volunteer chairman of the Chamber's Small Business Council, which organizes the trade show. "A lot of these companies are known within their own circle, but this is an opportunity for the general public to become familiar with a wide array of services and products that are available right here in the Permian Basin. It's free to attend for anyone 18 and over."

EXPO 93 is sponsored by Texas Commerce Bank and is held in connection with Small Business Week.

The exhibition continues that evening with a complimentary hors d'oeuvers/cash bar Business After Hours Mixer from 5-7 p.m. Food will be prepared by Italiano Catering.

Door prize drawings will be held at 10:30 a.m., noon, 2 p.m., 4 p.m., and 6 p.m. Prizes include six months free basic cable TV and six months premium channel cable television, in addition to a large number of door prizes from the exhibitors.

"For persons who have buying authority for their company, this trade show is a must," Wright said. "It's such a time-efficient, low-pressure way to scan the available goods and services in the Permian Basin. Most business people are trying to work smarter by keeping up with new trends. The EXPO 93 trade show format means the attendee controls the contact with the vendor and can make the best use of his or her time. We've held the trade show for several years now and people always comment on how enjoyable the atmosphere is and how they look forward to coming back."

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Midland College's summer bulletin for credit, non-credit courses is out

By H.A. Tuck

Tuck

Your assignment for this week is to find, read, and keep the college's bulletin of credit and non-credit courses for the summer of 1993.

The bulletin is being inserted into this issue of the Reporter-Telegram. But before you begin that search, however, read the rest of this column for other information.

This is a strange week, one without classes. That happens very rarely, but was necessary to await the arrival of students from other colleges and some high school graduations.

Midland College had its 20th anniversary commencement last Friday evening, a week ahead of most other colleges/universities and two or three weeks ahead of high school commencements.

As a result, the three-week Summer Interim Session won't start until May 17. The interim is popular with college students as a way to get a three-hour class out of the way in three weeks, to make-up a class which was failed, or to accelerate the time spent in college. The interim and two summer sessions can become the equivalent of a regular semester of college in terms of credits earned.

There is a cost, however, in that the interim classes meet for four hours daily Monday through Thursday. The hours will be between 9 a.m.-3 p.m., to be negotiated between the students and the instructors. It's concentrated, but it also immerses students in subjects, so retention is quite high.

In addition to regular three-hour credit courses in such subjects as computers, economics, English, government, psychology, and sociology, there are some special classes. There are two basic classes (one hour credit in each) in math and reading, a class in Interpersonal Communication, a class on Introduction to Film, and a "Sociology of the West Indies" which will be taught aboard a sailboat in the Bahama Islands. Registration for the last already has closed.

Registration for the other Interim Classes takes place at 8 a.m. May 17 in the Chaparral Hall of the Student Center.

Two five-week summer sessions follow. Summer I registration permits are being issued from May 19 with registration June 7. Classes start June 8 and end July 6. Registration permits for Summer II are issued beginning July 1. Registration is July 14, classes begin July 15 and end Aug. 19. These classes also meet Monday through Thursday, but for shorter periods each day than during the Interim.

Three-hour lecture courses meet for two hours daily with labs extra.

At the end-of-school picnic and awards ceremony on April 30, six faculty members received Exceptional Performance Awards, which include $1,000 cash stipends each. Receiving the 1993 awards were: Dennis Sever, business studies; Warren Taylor, fine arts and communications studies; Joe Williams, social and behavioral sciences; Nancy Shaw, health sciences; Margaret Wade, math and science; and Wayne Young, technical studies.

Receiving "Teacher of the Year" awards, as voted on by the students and presented by the Student Government Association, were: Glenda Helton, Margaret Wade, Rebecca Watson, Dale Westfall, and Andrea Zabel.

If you are wandering around the campus this summer, or enroll as a student, you will find the Snack Bar operating from 7 a.m. until 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

The office operations of the college begin their summer operating hours tomorrow. Offices are open from 7 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday, closed on Fridays. The Student Services offices are open evenings during Summer I and Summer II and the Chaparral Center may be open on Friday if concerts or special events require ticket sales or other attention.

TO THE FOLLOWING MOTHERS - A message from your loved one.....

To Nancy Miller:
MY MOM IS SO COOL
She even bought me a big swimming pool
She makes me smile
And I only cry for a very short while
When she cleans the house
She makes sure we don't have a mouse
She's pretty too....
My Mom is so cool

(Who's Birdie Bilbrey?)
The perfect Mom
every day of the year!
Mom, I just want you to know how much I love you. How it would be so hard to live without you in my life. You're the best friend I could ever have. The times in trouble or just the need to talk, you're always there for me. I give God the praise for knowing that I needed not only him in my life, but also needed a mother that had so much happiness, forgiveness and most of all, so much love to give.
Happy Mother's Day
With all my love,
Debbie Brewster

I LOVE MY MOTHER
Because she hugs me and kisses me
She gives me surprises
She says I am her special little gift from God
Ashley Jolly

DELIVERY

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of distributor ship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

Summer Childcare DIRECTORY

As a childcare provider you are well aware of the vital concern for today's children by today's parents. For this reason we will be publishing the Annual Childcare Directory on Sunday, May 16th.

If you have ever wished for a method to reach more parents with information about the services that you provide, the Childcare Directory is your wish come true. Midland parents have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality childcare. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality childcare in the our area and includes a locator map.

You will probably want your facility represented with an ad in this special section, a dot on a location map, a photo and a story about your facility. We have some special packages for this ranging from 8" ads to 18" ads. We also have ads that are not packaged and can run in the section without any of the other special advantages. For more information and to reserve your ad in the Childcare Directory call:

Midland Reporter-Telegram 687-8813

The deadline for the Childcare Directory is Wednesday, May 12 at 5:00 p.m.

Ranch Style Elegance

Text by Kes Wilhome

Jim Leonard started developing land and building custom homes in Midland over ten years ago. Now, over two-hundred homes later, he is in the final stages of building in the last phase of Polo Park.

2102 Wellington is a great example of Leonard's commitment to building quality homes in prestigious locations, he has built homes in most of the eminent areas of Midland such as Greentree and Saddle Club.

His homes display a time-less elegance because of his attention to detail; believing in maximizing floor space for the dollar, great locations and functional designs, Leonard's houses are elegant but also practical with good energy efficiency and plenty of space.

The latest Polo Park development has been built with the same high quality as one has come to expect from such a prestigious location. Not only was Polo Park the first and most successful sub-division but the concept of Polo Park has been used all over the area because of its run away success.

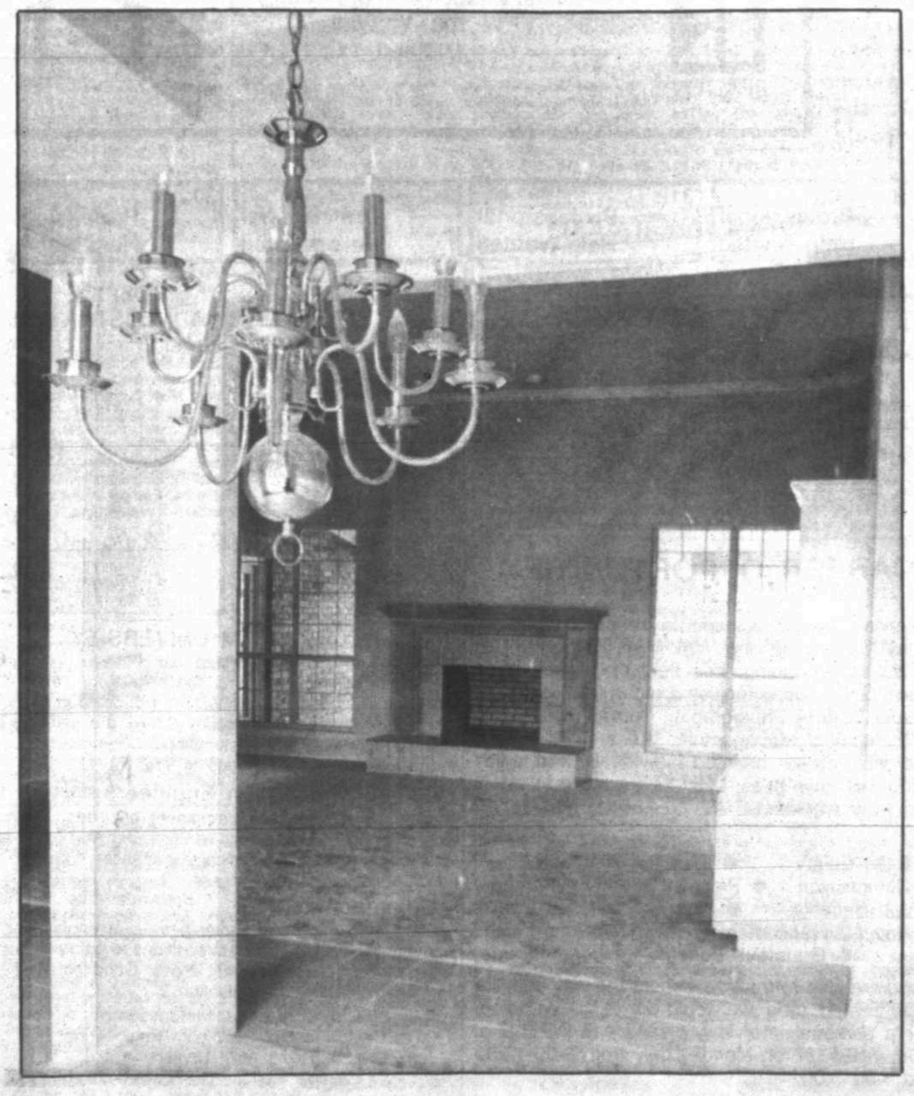

With excellent resale values and a great amount of interest in all properties in this area, the length of time homes spend on the market is minimal, so time is running out.

The latest development at 2102 Wellington exhibits all of Leonard's trade mark features. The relaxed atmosphere of the ranch style house is noticeable as soon as one enters the front door which opens directly into the bright front room. This is the main focus of the house and its open plan in order to maximize the floor space.
Containing a huge fireplace, and window overlooking the covered patio, this is an elegant family room with high ceilings and unique features.

The large fully fitted kitchen leads off from the front room, comes complete with all modern conveniences and all the woodwork is finished in a light pickled ash hue. A large skylight in the high ceiling illuminates the breakfast bar which divides the kitchen space into dining room and cooking area.

The style of this area of the house continues throughout the home, from the four bedrooms and three bathrooms to the three car garage, the whole house is finished to a very high standard and represents very good value at $149,900. For more information about this great opportunity call Mary Jo Drury at the Prudential Adobe Realtors at 694-9548. If a four bedroom house is a little on the large side than the second property Leonard has built in Polo Park might be ideal. Based on the larger home at 2102 Wellington it is priced at $124,900, has three bedrooms and is located at 2219 Bradford Court, and of course it contains all of the same great features. If you are interested in this home call Jerry Holt at Langston Realtors at 685-0400.

There is an opportunity to view both of these great homes today during an open house between 2 and 4 p.m. this afternoon.

Spring cleaning can be fun, profitable

Kay Sutton

Yes, it's that time of year again. Time to put the screens in the windows, clean out the gutters and spend time clearing out the basement, attic, closets or where ever you put all those things you were so sure you would need someday. If you haven't used them in the past year, however, you probably don't really need them.

Now is the perfect time to hold a garage or yard sale. Not only will you clear your home of unwanted items, but you can earn a little extra money in the process. The Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc., offers the following suggestions for staging a successful garage sale.

Begin by selecting a good weekend to hold your sale. Check the newspaper for conflicting activities, and the television guide for major sporting events that might keep buyers at home. Schedule your sale to begin early in the morning and run through early evening. Invite neighbors to join in the sale. The more merchandise offered, the more successful the sale. A group sale also will relieve you of the burden of doing all the work. Make sure each participant's belongings are clearly identified as such. Different colored tags used for each seller's items (available at office supply stores) will provide clear differentiation, as well as help with record-keeping.

Once a date is chosen, plan your promotion. Run an advertisement in the newspaper and prepare signs for posting at key points in the area, directing potential buyers to your sale. Keep in mind that signs must be readable from a moving vehicle. Use bold, block letters and arrows. Does your area grocery store provide a community bulletin board for posting notices? Be creative in your advertising, mentioning unique or special bargains that will be available.

When pricing sale items, remember that you are trying to sell items that are of no use to you. Don't make the mistake of overpricing items because you know their original value or for sentimental reasons. The buyer is oblivious to both. Besides, do you really want to have all that stuff left at the end of the day? Determine your rock bottom price and then add 5%-10% for haggling. Most garage sale shoppers expect to bargain for items.

If you have the luxury of having a garage large enough for the sale, begin a few days ahead of time arranging your merchandise. Arrange items so they can easily be viewed and group them according to a theme: kitchen items, tools, and so forth. Don't put items in boxes on the ground that require the shopper to bend down and dig. Most garage sale shoppers are "impulse buyers," that is, they spot an item they were not looking for and, on impulse, buy it. Place a few large items at the end of your driveway to attract people.

Increase the sale of clothing by arranging items on hangers for easy viewing. Clothing should be clean and neatly pressed with the sizes marked. If possible, offer a dressing area and mirror. Do not, however, let unaccompanied strangers into your home.

Provide access to an electrical outlet (string together extension cords, if necessary) for shoppers to test electrical appliances. Large electrical appliances or other heavy items, may be displayed via a photograph to avoid unnecessarily moving these items, and limits the people you take into your home to those who are seriously interested.

The day before the sale, go to the bank and purchase rolls of change and small bills. Prepare a cash box with a secure lid. An egg carton can serve as an excellent change divider. During the sale, avoid keeping more than $20 in the box and remove all large bills to a safe place. Have a calculator on hand to assist with multiple purchases.

Keep track of all sales, particularly if neighbors have joined in the sale. An hour or so before the end of the sale, slash prices--any sale is better than none at all.

Make arrangements ahead of time with a local charity to pick up all remaining items at the close of the sale. This will keep you from having to move leftover stuff back into your newly cleaned home. Don't forget to ask for a receipt for tax purposes.

Once you've closed down the sale, remove all posted signs. (Make note of their placement when posting them.) Leave one sign in your front yard with the word " CLOSED" printed across it to deter late bargain hunters from knowing on your door. If you have to cancel the sale for any reason, a similar sign will save a lot of confusion for shoppers.

Having a garage sale can be a fun and profitable part of your spring cleaning if you follow these suggestions from the Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc.

Fair price . . . a full-price offer

Vicky Garrett

Homeowners planning to sell tend to price their property to match their own perceived value of the home. The pride they feel in their home is reflected in the price asked. Overpricing may be the result, which is O.K., provided the owners realize its effect on their selling efforts.

The first effect of overpricing is to discourage offers from legitimate buyers. Most buyers see a number of homes, making comparisons of size, location, style, price, etc., before making a decision. Thus, they recognize a home which is overpriced for the market. Even if they prefer the home, they may not make an offer. Their reason? Even if they purchased the home at their offered price, they would not feel they had gained more than a "fair" concession, leaving them with a feeling of a less than successful negotiation.

"Offering your home at the right price instills confidence in buyers who assume that the home offers real value for the price."

Second, if a home is priced just 15% above "fair market value", it will attract the wrong buyers. People interested in a home in that price range will expect to receive the features, size and amenities of a home at that price. Once they realize it does not offer the benefits of other homes at that price, they will leave without making a purchase.

The third reason overpricing is counterproductive is that it helps to sell the competition. Most buyers "shop" a number of properties and will compare the higher priced home to the lower ones in similar homes (your competition), then buy another home.

Finally, say you find buyers who will purchase your home at 115% of its "fair market value". When they apply for mortgage financing, the mortgage lender will have the value of your home appraised. The appraisal will reflect close to 100% of the home's fair market value, not the 115% sale price. As a result, the purchaser would have to produce a higher than expected down payment or risk mortgage rejection. The purchaser probably would ask that the price be reduced.

Because buyers do shop price, consider this alternative to overpricing. Carefully analyze homes which have already sold as well as those for sale now to arrive at the highest "fair" price from the very beginning. The result can be a solid, full price offer with no haggling. Offering your home at the right price instills confidence in buyers who assume that the home offers real value for the price. You benefit from their affirmative decision to purchase your home.

REAL ESTATE Q&A

I am planning to buy my first home. How can I improve my credit rating in order to qualify for a mortgage?

Good credit history is important when securing any loan, especially a mortgage. Avoid disappointment and wasted time by getting your affairs in order before applying for a mortgage.

Some of the things you can do:

- ☐ Establish a history of continuous employment
- ☐ Start savings and checking accounts
- ☐ Pay most bills by check
- ☐ Pay monthly debts on time
- ☐ Keep debts low in relation to income

In addition, it can help to develop a relationship with a real estate agent you know and trust and with whom you feel comfortable as you prepare to apply. Discuss prequalifying for a mortgage with a real estate agent so you will know in advance what your limits are. Look for a an agent who is a REALTOR®.

BRIEFING

Steady prices

A pumpjack brings up crude oil amid a field of wildflowers.

Oil prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange traded in a fairly narrow range most of the week in a market that had little news to influence price direction.

June contracts for delivery of West Texas Intermediate were marginally stronger at around $20.45 per barrel while the posted price was $19 per barrel.

Natural gas futures prices were sharply lower as the buying spree that elevated the May contracts has evidently cooled. June contracts for delivery of natural gas fell to just over $2.22 per thousand cubic feet late in the week.

New drilling tool

Schlumberger Ltd.'s Anadrill division has unveiled a new system that lets a driller "see" into the path of the drill bit, a system hailed as a major advancement in horizontal drilling technology.

Rigs at work

A diesel engine on a drilling rig emits a puff of smoke.

According to Baker Hughes Inc., the Permian Basin and U.S. rig counts were mixed for the week ended April 30.

In the Basin, the rig count slipped four to 96. However, the count remains well above last year's tally of 81 rigs.

Nationwide, the rig count inched up one rig to 609; a year ago the rig count was 634.

Among the nation's major oil producing states, Texas showed the sharpest gain with five rigs, followed by Oklahoma and Wyoming with two each. California, New Mexico and North Dakota showed the sharpest declines, two rigs each.

Tom Brown shares

Tom Brown Inc. has filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission relating to the proposed sale of 5.2 million shares of common stock.

Of the shares to be offered, 3 million will be sold by the company and 2.2 million will be sold by the Prudential Insurance Co. of America. The filing also includes an additional 520,000 shares, which may be issued pursuant to an option granted by the company to the underwriters to cover over-allotments.

The company will use the net proceeds of the offering to retire long-term bank debt and for general corporate purposes, including development drilling and acquisitions.

Salomon Brother sINc., Kidder, Peabody & Co. Inc., Howard, Weil, Labouisse, Friedrichs Inc. and Jefferies & Co. Inc. will serve as managing underwriters of the offering.

ENERGY WEEK

PBPA puts a wrap on energy week

Staff report

The Permian Basin celebrated Energy Appreciation Week with a full round of activities that included a golf tournament, seminar, a visit from Texas' newest Railroad Commissioner and concluded Saturday with the annual Blowout.

The Blowout is a wrapup celebration that includes a full day of barbecue competition, entertainment, a barbecue dinner cooked by M-I Drilling Fluids, and the World's Ugliest Roughneck Pageant, sponsored by the Midland Reporter Telegram.

The championship flight of the Four Man Scramble Golf Tournament was won by L&L Trucking of Andrews, with the assistance of a hole-in-one by Terry Braly on the 17th hole. Other flight winners were: Compressor Systems Inc., Security Division-Dresser, and Miresco Inc.

In other Energy Appreciation Week activities OSHA officials Tuesday outlined a new program which puts additional responsibility on area operators for safety (See the article below), and Mary Scott Nabers, Texas' new Railroad Commissioner told PBPA members and guests at a banquet that TRC would announce Monday that it disapproves of Clinton's idea of a Btu tax.

Energy Appreciation Week, which is sponsored by Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) is endorsed by nearly all the towns throughout the Permian Basin, and even by Santa Fe, New Mexico.

"This is an important week in the Permian Basin," Said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of PBPA, "because it gives the entire area of West Texas and New Mexico to express appreciation for the oil and gas industry, which impacts the well-being of everyone in the Permian Basin."

Drilling activity gaining

■ Drilling statistics in the first quarter point to second half increases.

By Melia McEwen
Staff writer

Energy Appreciation Week brought comforting news to the Permian Basin as first quarter statistics were released indicating a slightly slow start in drilling activity, but continuing expectations for a better second half as 3-D drilling and gas prospecting appear to be leaving their mark on drilling.

Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association said area operators are optimistic about drilling, especially in the natural gas sector.

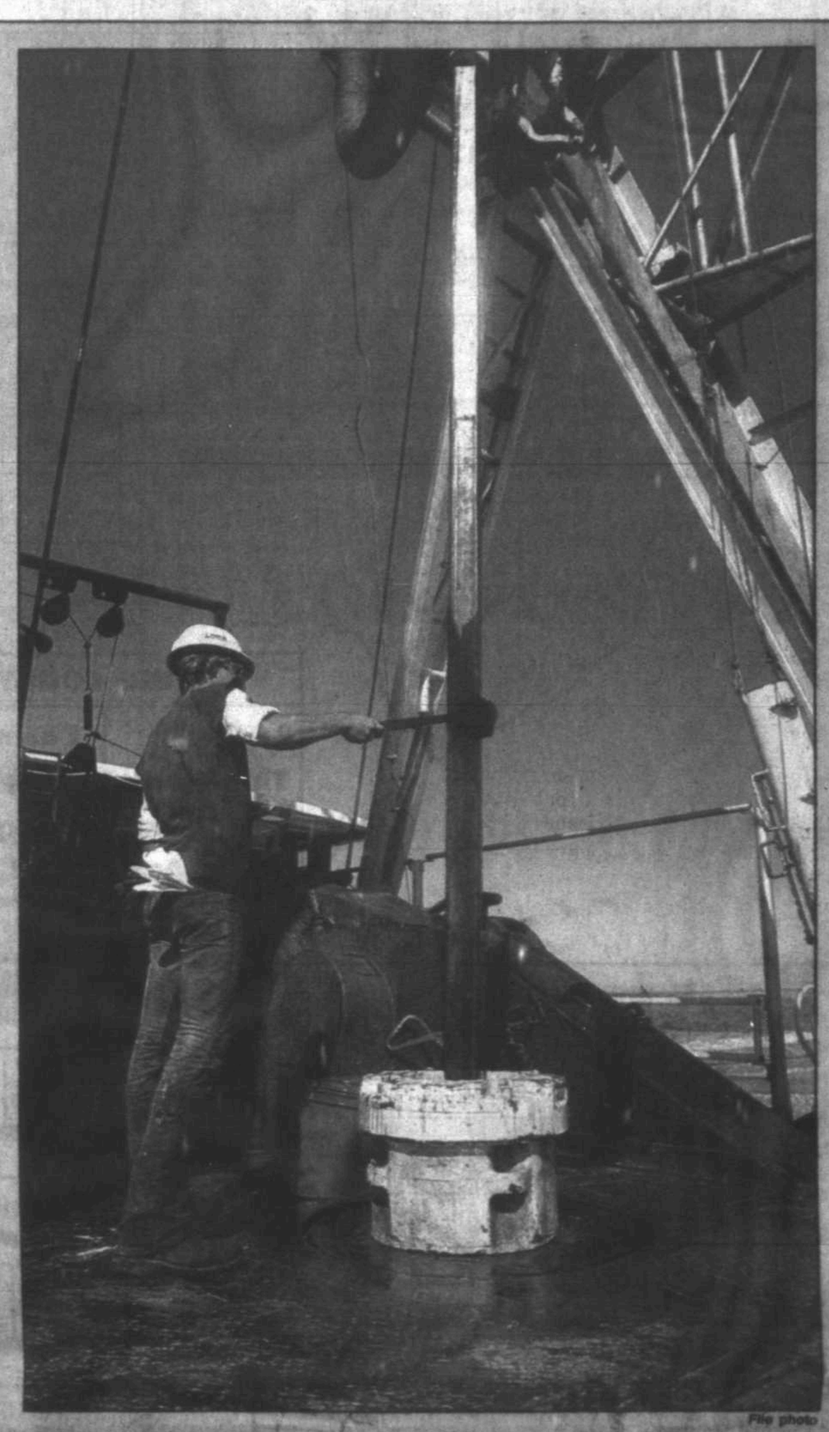

He said that despite the elimination of Section 29 gas credits, the new drilling emphasis will probably be on natural gas. "Things are looking up for the gas industry, but we are still confused about the oil market."

Spannaus said a Btu tax would be a hinderance to both oil and gas and that he would go to Washinton D.C. immediately following Energy Appreciation Week for dissussions on the Btu tax with Treasury Secretary Bentsen and elected representatives.

In the area of drilling permits, the number issued were not that spectacular, but again they weren't that disastrous.

PBPA seminar outlines new OSHA rules

■ New OSHA focus will put more liability and responsibility on area operators.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

A new focus in Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) rules is expected to put a larger load of liability and responsibility for safety on the backs of lease operators, and that has some operators concerned.

The new program, which was outlined at a Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) safety seminar this week was a part of Energy Appreciation Week activities.

Called the Local Emphasis Program, the new program, which was designed by Steve Pedroza, Supervisory Safety & Occupational Health Specialist for the Lubbock office of OSHA, will require each operator to keep extensive records showing that it has identified all hazards on a lease and has informed, in writing, all contractors and employees that work on the lease of the hazards.

It also calls for medical training and a medical response team for lease workers.

"Needless to say, operators are very concerned about the strict requirements of this program," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of PBPA. "The way these vague rules are defined, it may mean that no one will be allowed to go to the oilfield alone unless he has a medically trained safety observor with him."

One operator described the seminar presented by OSHA as a session of "horror stories."

Spannaus said operators are also concerned about no notice, spot inspections, about definitive guidance, and about how to comply with the new program which, he said, takes a shotgun approach to regulation.

In an interview at the PBPA seminar, Pedroza said the intention of OSHA was to eliminate all accidents and fatalities in the oilpatch.

"We are committed to reducing fatalities no matter what it takes in the way of penalties or standards," he said. According to OSHA there were 63 deaths last year in OSHA's Lubbock region, which includes the Permian Basin of Texas.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Irony surrounds unfortunate discovery

Pitts

It wasn't in the Permian Basin, but the same story happened here many times.

It was one of the most prolific and historical wells ever drilled, but a bitter disappointment to those who drilled it.

It didn't find oil, but it did find an industry.

It is an interesting story simply because it is one of the classic tales among the abundance of feast-famine, boom-bust, luck-of-the-draw irony stories that make up the history of the oilpatch.

This bit of irony takes place in Southwest, Kansas, where a gigantic disappointment was drilled in 1920 in Seward County, Kansas on land belonging to Kansas rancher John Boles.

But, according to news accounts, the story began several years earlier in 1916 when J.C. Mahoney of Liberal, Kansas, convinced that the geology of Western Kansas made it potential oil country, joined forces with A.M. White of Los Angeles and W.B. Howard of Claremore, Oklahoma to form a drilling venture to test that part of the state.

After securing a large block of leases, much of it on the Boles ranch, the partners began to drill in 1917, using a Star Rig. After only a few hundred feet it became apparent to the promoters that the rig was not suited to the task and that they did not have enough money to keep it running.

Meanwhile a drilling company had been formed and stock was put on the market. White, who became associated with Traders Oil Co. in California, after much business negotiation, induced the company to come to Kansas and finish the well near Liberal.

A second well was now started only a few feet from where the original well was drilled, but again the well ran into technical problems. Valuable time was lost fishing for tools because of the quicksand encountered in the well.

But eventually the well was drilled to past 2,000 feet, and at 2,575 feet, encountered a showing of oil and gas. No test was made because of mechanical problems and the rig drilled on. Finally, at 2,755 feet, the rig hit a strong gas flow, estimated at 10 million cubic feet per day.

According to a news story in the Southwest Daily News of Kansas, the strike created great enthusiasm throughout the oil country of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. Oilmen traveled hundreds of miles to see the gasser. Thousands flocked around the well and speculation became rampant. The price of leases miles from the well shot up, and were traded over and over on the spot.

Convinced that oil lay beneath the gas, the rig drilled on despite the flowing gas, but at 2,919 feet the well flowed nothing but water and sand. And, finally, on July 20, 1920 the Boles No. I was completed as a gas well.

It was a disappointment to those who had hoped the well would be the first in a great oil field. But as fortune would have it, the Boles No.1 was not a total loss, because it was the discovery well for the Hugoton field — the largest gas field in America.

Borden yields Penn Reef discovery

Staff report

Borden County has gained a Pennsylvanian Reef discovery, a mile northeast of production in the Vealmoor field, 4-1/4 miles west-northwest of Vealmoor.

COLLINS & WARE INC. completed the No. 1 Jeff Good "23" to pump 924 barrels of 40.6 gravity crude, 50 Mcfd and 24 barrels of water from perforations 7,780 to 7,788 ft. The interval was acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Permitted as an 8,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,788 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,780 ft.

Formation tops include the Rustler at 1,237 ft., San Andres at 2,931, Spraberry at 5,778, Wolfcamp at 7,180 and Penn Reef at 7,770 ft.

Location is 2,172 ft. from north and 1,364 ft. from west lines of Section 23, Block 32, T-3-N, T&P survey, Abst. 292.

Queen/Grayburg opened in Ector

Queen/Grayburg production has apparently been opened in the Edwards field of Ector County, eight miles south-southeast of Penwell.

FOSTER EDWARDS INC. tested the No. 3 Mobil Henderson to pump 102 barrels of 30 gravity crude, 45 Mcfd and 26 barrels of water from perforations 3,289 to 3,401 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,150 gallons of NeFe acid and fractured with 24,000 gallons of gelled water, 29,000 lbs. 20/40 sand and 11,000 lbs. 12/20 sand.

Total depth was 4,150 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,148 ft.

The well topped the Grayburg at 3,84 ft. and San Andres at 3,732 ft.

Location is 1,655 ft. from south and 1,652 ft. from east lines of Section 32, Block 44, T&P survey, Abst. 1155.

Lea reentry nets 436-barrel well

The reentry of a vertical well bore has yielded Devonian production in an undesignated field in Lea County, N.M.

MARALO INC. reentered the No. 1 Bonds, testing it to flow 436 barrels of crude on a 10/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 500 psi. The well flowed from open hole interval 12,625 to 12,650 ft. No treatment was reported.

Total depth was 12,625 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 12,625 ft.

Surface location was 1,650 ft. from north and 330 ft. from east lines; bottom hole location was 1,735 ft. from north and 683 ft. from east lines, Section 20, T9s, R35e.

The completion was the reentry of a vertical wellbore; kick-off point was 9,632 ft.

Loving field gains another producer

Loving County's Zuni (Bell Canyon) field gained a new producer, 19 miles northwest of Mentone.

SIETE OIL & GAS CORP. potentialed the No. 1 Zuni "24-A" to flow 100 barrels of crude and 17 barrels of water from perforations 3,544 to 3,563 ft. No treatment was reported.

The well was drilled to 3,544 ft. with rotary tools and then drilled to final depth of 3,563 ft. with cable tools. Casing was 5 1/2 inches set at 3,540 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and west lines of Section 24, Block 56, T-1, T&P survey, Abst. 1135.

OSU course covers selling oil properties

"Environmental and Title Concerns in Buying and Selling Oil and Gas Properties" will be presented Tuesday by Oklahoma State University. The seminar will be at the Ardmore Higher Education Center, 611 State Highway 142 West in Ardmore from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The seminar is designed to provide guidelines on evaluating oil and gas producing properties from an environmental and title perspective and to discuss issues involved in the transaction. Potential legal and environmental problems and solutions will be identified, with the goal of reducing the risk of loss.

The seminar is aimed at producers, mineral owners, landmen, attorneys, or investors interested in selling or purchasing oil and gas producing properties.

Cost is $95 per person, including instructional material and breaks.

Instructor is Timothy C. Dowd, an attorney with the firm of Naifeh & Woska of Oklahoma City, specializing in oil and gas title and litigation matters.

Registration is available by calling 405/945-3278 or 405/945-3332.

"It's not a furnace or air conditioner?" "So how does it heat and cool?"

We understand that a heat pump can be misunderstood. But once you know how it works, it makes good sense the year around.
In summer, the heat pump pumps heat out of your house and replaces it with cool air.
In winter, it uses the solar heat trapped in the earth's atmosphere to keep your house warm and comfortable, even on the coldest days.
Which means you save on energy, natural resources and your monthly bill.
Any more questions? Your heat pump dealer has the answers.

Pennzoil reports earnings fall 80 percent in quarter

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co.'s 1993 first quarter earnings totaled $21.5 million, a nearly 80 percent decline from a year ago when the company's net income was $105 million.

The Houston company noted Wednesday its first quarter earnings last year included a gain of $115.7 million relating to the adoption of an FASB Statement 109 tax gain.

Pennzoil's earnings for the first quarter of 1993 amounted to 53 cents per share, compared to $2.59 per share a year ago.

Revenues for the 1993 first quarter were $651 million, an increase from $548 million in revenues posted for the 1992 first quarter.

"We have sold non-core assets. reduced or refinanced large portions of our debt, and virtually doubled the size of our oil and gas business," said James L. Pate, Pennzoil's president and chief executive officer. "The combined effect of these and other efforts is beginning to improve the financial performance of Pennzoil."

Operating income was $50.9 million in Pennzoil's oil and gas segment, $19.1 million in the motor oil and automotive products division and $2.4 million in the company's franchise operations.

The sulfur segment had an operating loss of $2.8 million. Pennzoil said the loss came as sulfur prices dropped to their lowest levels in more than a decade.

CSI has earned a reputation for first-quality gas compression from fabrication to our rental and service operations. CSI rental compressors exceed 98% average on-line run time - in typically remote locations. That takes more than just reliable equipment, it takes CSI people - in the field. Each of our sales engineers, 10 regional service shops and over 100 experienced service hands with radio equipped, 24-hour on-call service trucks, spend their time in the field wherever they're needed. But they also spend time before they're needed. That is what makes the CSI difference.

So, next time you're thinking about gas compression, call CSI at (915) 563-1170. We're never too far away to respond quickly to your gas compression needs.

Chevron pumps profits; stock reaches all-time highs

By Jeff Pelline
N.Y. Times News Service

Who would have expected Chevron to become a glamour stock again?

The San Francisco-based oil giant suffered from all the ills that afflicted the industry in recent years — and then some. It was over-staffed, it had a lopsidedly large involvement in high-cost domestic oil-and-gas production, it was bogged down in offbeat enterprises such as copper mining, home-and-garden products — even wine.

Its earnings went nowhere throughout the '80s as the company struggled to whittle down a $15.5 billion debt and integrate operations acquired in its merger with Gulf Oil. Analysts and oil executives agreed that Chevron was the laggard in an industry whose glory days seemed long past.

Surprise! Last week, Chevron's stock, which had shuttled between the low 60s and low 80s for more than three years, began hitting new all-time highs on the New York Stock Exchange. It topped out at 86½ and finished the week at 86 1/8.

As the chart shows, it has been a good year for oil stocks generally, but especially good for Chevron.

For the four-year period ended in the first quarter of this year, Chevron's average annual return to stockholders — stock appreciation plus dividends — amounted to 20.5 percent, placing it first among the major oil companies. The annual return had been 12 percent between 1984 and 1988, ranking Chevron near the bottom of the pack during that period. Chevron's annual dividend had stalled at $2.40 per share for five years, but since 1988 it has risen slightly every year and now stands at $3.50.

On Tuesday, when Chairman Ken Derr presides over the company's annual meeting in San Francisco, he may hear plenty of kind words from Chevron stockholders who don't happen to work for him.

Chevron's stock-market resurrection is largely the result of cold, calculated business decisions, which culminated in a massive restructuring and much-ballyhooed cost-cutting effort — with more to come. The latest fruits of that effort were evident last week when Chevron reported that its first-quarter profits jumped nearly 50 percent from a year earlier to $501 million. Analyst Gene Nowak, with Dean Witter in New York, predicts that the company's operating earnings will jump to $5.50 per share this year from $4.39 last year.

There also is luck behind the company's strong stock performance. Natural-gas prices shot up during the cold weather that afflicted the nation during the past winter, and have remained at exalted levels thanks partly to the Clinton administration, which is touting gas as one of the principal clean-air fuels of the future.

Chevron became the nation's largest producer of natural gas when it bought Tenneco's reserves in the Gulf of Mexico for nearly $2.6 billion in 1988. The move at first seemed a bad one, as gas prices remained low. But the run-up to about $2.30 per cubic foot from about $1 a year ago has ignited Chevron's earnings.

As Derr, the first MBA to head Chevron, recently put it: "We're positioned very well for the future in our major businesses. The cost reductions, reorganizations and reduction of people will make us more competitive."

Chevron still faces plenty of hurdles. Oil could fall into disfavor if the Clinton energy-tax program goes through. There also is a threat from that perennial bugaboo, OPEC. Bill Randol, an analyst with Salomon Brothers, cautions that OPEC's ministerial meeting on June 8 could be "stormy," because cash-hungry Kuwait is expected to demand a substantial increase in its production quota for the third quarter. The increase in supply would push prices of crude oil down from $20, where they have remained for some time.

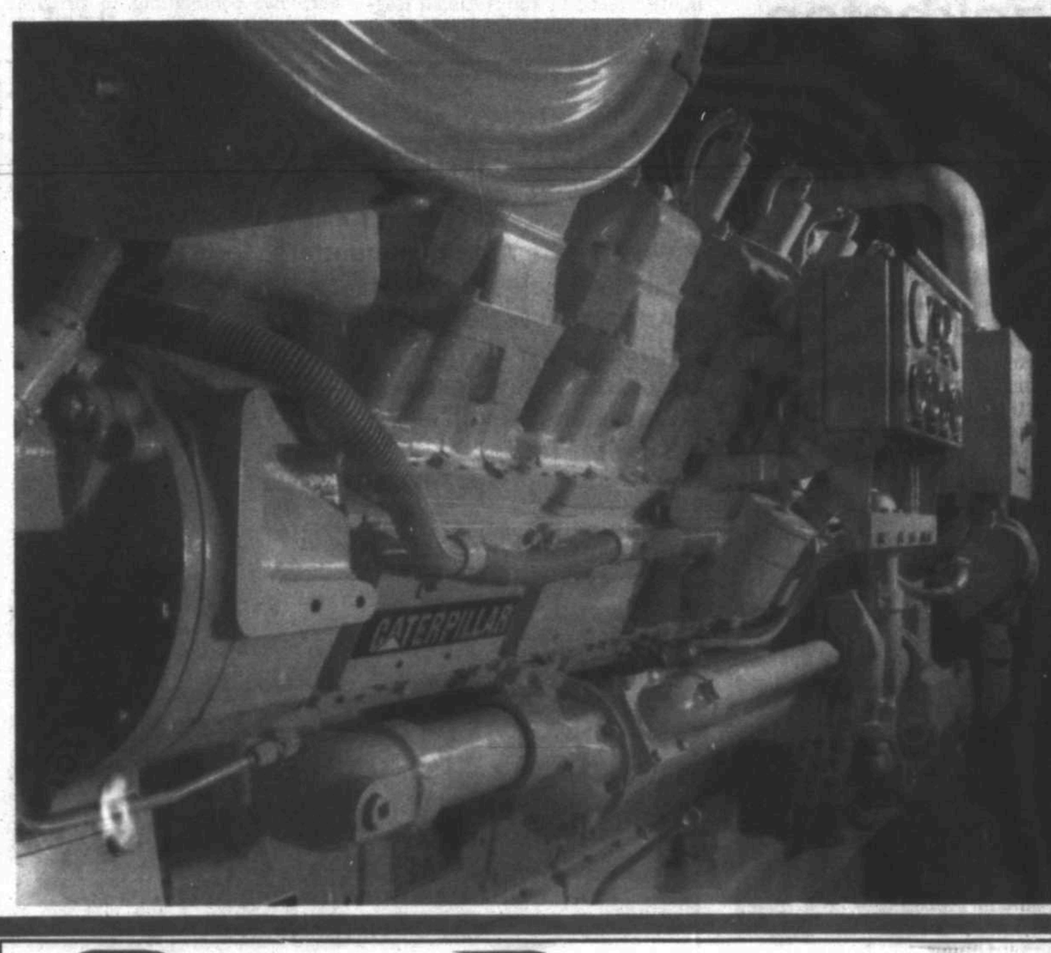

Chevron's workforce, once assured of job security, has been rattled by staff cuts and other cost-cutting measures. And the company's great hope for the future — the recently signed, 40-year, $20 billion deal with the Republic of Kazakhstan to explore the Tengiz oil fields — could be a bonanza — but then again maybe not. It will take years to find out.

Chevron reduced operating costs by $570 million last year and may cut $300 million more this year. It chopped its workforce last year by 5,900 — 11 percent — the steepest cutback by any Bay Area company. Another 1,300 employees will leave this year as a result of cutbacks already announced.

Analysts expect Chevron to announce more cutbacks in its workforce later this year. U.S. refining and marketing operations will be downsized further, just as the domestic production operations were, they say. Company executives confirmed that they are studying restructuring plans for refining and marketing, but said that no decisions have been made.

Chevron has shed 2,300 low-profit domestic oil fields since 1987, many of them acquired when the company bought Gulf Oil in 1984. In the single largest divestiture, the company last year exchanged 8 percent of its domestic oil-and-gas reserves for nearly half of Pennzoil Co.'s 9.7 percent Chevron stake. The trade earned Chevron a tax-free profit of $376 million.

Houston-based Pennzoil had been Chevron's biggest shareholder, and a thorn in its side. It announced the acquisition of its Chevron stake on Pearl Harbor Day in 1989. The announcement raised the specter of a takeover attempt, abetted by Pennzoil and its swashbuckling chief executive, Hugh Liedtke.

Workers face hard conditions in Kazakhstan

N.Y. Times News Service

San Francisco-based Chevron Corp. will tell you that it is easier to get permission to drill for oil in the former Soviet Union than in its home state of California, where opposition from regulators and environmentalists has stymied many a project.

But the Tengiz oil field — the flat, barren site of Chevron's new $20 billion, 40-year exploration partnership with the Republic of Kazakhstan — has some drawbacks of its own. "It's hell on earth," said Chris Santos, a Chevron administrative assistant who will help put together a communications system at the Tengiz site.

Chevron has about 100 employees stationed in Tengiz and will increase its ranks to 200 by year end. The total could reach as many as 400 in the next decade.

Last week, the mud at Tengiz was so deep from a heavy rainfall that it sucked the boots off the feet of some Chevron executives who were inspecting the scene. They can be consoled by the fact that the ground will certainly dry out later this year. In the summer, the daytime temperature at Tengiz tops 130 degrees. (In the winter, on the other hand, it bottoms out around 30 degrees below zero.)

At Tengiz, camels outnumber people. But lest any employees decide to do a little harvesting, Chevron warns: Don't eat camel meat; it can cause plague. "Four cases of plague have occurred since 1991 in Kazakhstan, two of the cases recently in Atyrau," near the Tengiz site, the company notes in a 200-page handbook that it is distributing to employees traveling to Kazakhstan.

Other company tips:

■ Use insect repellent to avoid bites from ticks that carry encephalitis.

■ "Carry a first-aid kit at all times."

Employees will be housed in a camp consisting of single-story buildings. "The living arrangements are definitely dormitory style," the handbook concedes. Two employees each will share the 8-by-12-foot rooms, containing two single beds, a desk, two closets, a small wall mirror and a few wall hooks.

There are no private bathrooms or showers, and the showers are co-ed. Shower curtains were installed only recently.

Meals are dished up in a central din- ing hall. They have been described as robust construction-worker fare, heavy on the meat and potatoes. Chevron plans to add more fresh fruit, vegetables and lean meats. Ram's head, a local delicacy sampled with more diplomacy than delight by Chevron Chairman Ken Derr on a recent visit, is unlikely to appear on the menu.

The dormitory has a library, but the books are in Hungarian, the language of the work crews that have been operating the limited oil-production facilities that exist on the site. Chevron will add English-language books, as well as a videocassette recorder and a selection of videotaped movies. It will install a bar, dart games and a pool table. Eventually, tennis courts may be added.

Chevron recognizes that Tengiz is a hardship assignment, so it is paying its employees higher salaries than normal. The company will not disclose the figure, but premiums in the industry often run between 10 percent and 50 percent of base pay, with higher percentages going to the lower wage earners.

It also will give the Tengiz employees half the year off. They will work no more than 28 days at a time, but they will be consecutive days lasting about 12 hours. After that they will be free to travel or do anything else they want for the next 28 days. Few of them are expected to hang around the dormitory.

Chevron is distributing a 200-page handbook to employees traveling to Kazakhstan.

The oil field is producing 60,000 barrels of crude per day, and the output will rise to 130,000 barrels by the middle of next year and 700,000 barrels by 2010, said Dick Matzke, president of Chevron Overseas Petroleum.

Last week, the company struck a deal with Houston-based Enterra Corp., which will deliver hundreds of tons of oil field services equipment to the site.

Chevron and Kazakhstan expect to spend $1.5 billion in the next three years, and $50 million is earmarked for community projects. High on the list: improving medical facilities and the drinking water supply.

While the partners will share equally in development costs, Kazakhstan will pocket about 80 percent of the income. Much of that money is supposed to be invested in improvements of Kazakh communities.

TWC approves rules for storage tank contractors

The Texas Water Commission has approved new rules requiring the registration of consultants and contactors who perform leaking petroleum storage tank corrective action.

The rules establish minimum levels of competence, responsibility and performance quality.

The rules will make it easier for owners and operators of leaking petroleum storage tanks to evaluate the many specialists offering services. Contractors and consultants now can be hired with more confidence, ultimately improving the environment for all Texans.

Previously there were no regulations governing contractors and consultants for cleanup services, making it more difficult to evaluate their competence.

To qualify as a Corrective Action Project Manager, a person must have at least one of the following qualifications:

■ Pass a written examination administered by the National Registry of Environmental Professionals, possess a bachelor's degree in an environmentally-related subject, and have two years of corrective action experience.

■ Pass the NREP exam along with four years of corrective action experience.

■ Possess a current Texas registration as a professional engineer along with two years of corrective action experience.

The PST program is an enormous undertaking of the TWC. There are more than 161,000 registered tanks at about 60,000 locations around the state.

Since the program begin six years ago, approximately 14,500 tank sites have been targeted for cleanup. Every day an average of 15 new sites are reported. A typical site cleanup costs $94,000.

The new rules are part of a long-range plan to improve the state's PST program and reduce cleanup costs by at least 25 percent. Establishing qualification standards allows the TWC to decertify contractors not conforming to program standards.

OSHA: New program

(From 1E)

Pedroza said it didn't matter if it was a one well lease, the operator would have to submit a written safety program for the lease. The OSHA representative said liability and responsibility was being shifted to the operator, because they had power to control accidents. "If they have the power to control accidents, they have the liability."

He said it would be the responsibility of the operator to inform the contractor of all hazards, and apparently it will be the responsibility of the operator to make certain that the employees of contractors are aware of OSHA regulations. He noted that his office was ready to assist operators in filling out a safety program for the lease.

Leases will be put in alphabetical order and checked on a random basis.

"We will check by lease and not by operator," Pedroza said, noting that any contractor working on the lease would also be checked to make certain he understands the program and that his employees are trained.

One of the first questions raised in the seminar was on the subject of language. One oil company representative commented on the difficulty of training workers who speak Spanish-only in new programs.

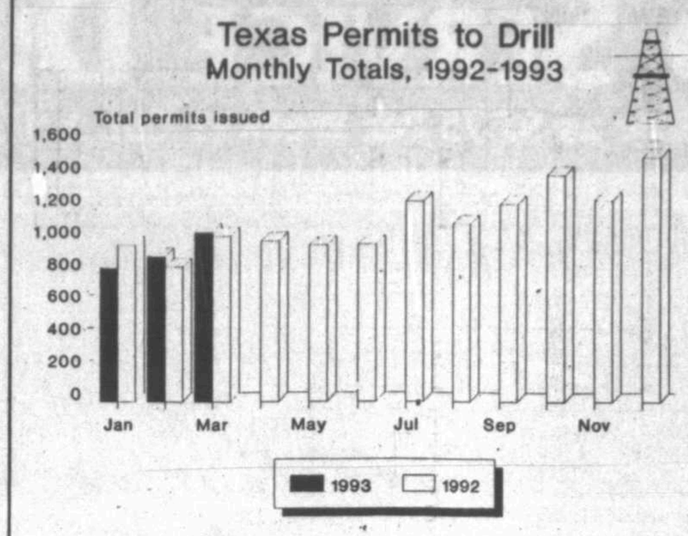

Asked about the English-Spanish controversy in the oilpatch and the role it plays in safety, Pedroza said he was aware of some of the complaints from operators about the problem of speaking two languages in a hazardous situation, like on a rig floor, but he was not prepared to say that people who cannot or do not speak English should not be allowed to work on in the oilpatch.

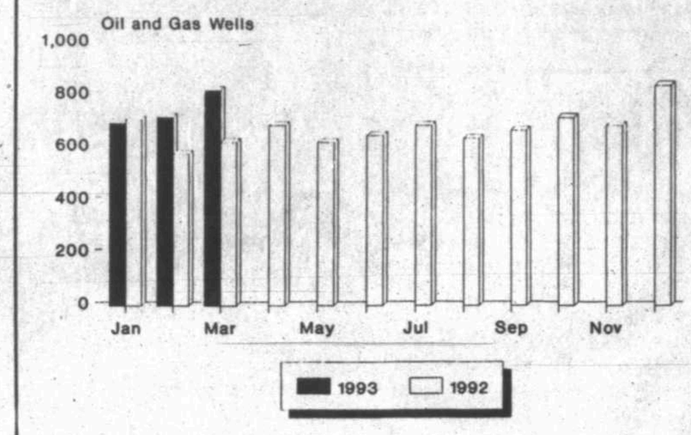

"We don't care what language they speak. It will be up to the operator to determine policy on the matter of language. But they will have to be aware of discrimination laws. We are saying that all workers will have to be trained, we don't care how you do it."

The program will involve 13 areas that will have to be monitored, ranging from sound levels to H_2S; operators would have to physically check the lease step by step and write a program based on the 13 monitored areas.

Pedroza said the LEP would last for one year and after that would be statistically evaluated to see if it is working. He said he had no knowledge of how much the added OSHA responsibility and liability might cost operators in the Permian Basin.

"The majors may be able to comply with this new program, but it will be a real burden to some of the smaller operators," said Spannaus.

Schlumberger debuts horizontal technology

■ New systems allows technician to steer bit along thin intervals.

HOUSTON (AP) — A system that allows an oilfield driller to "see" into the path of the drill bit is being hailed as a major advancement in horizontal drilling technology by Schlumberger Ltd.'s Anadrill division.

Trevor Burgess, Anadrill's director of marketing, said the IDEAL system, an acronym for Integrated Drilling Evaluation and Logging system, should allow companies to steer the bit through thinner, more complex geologic formations with much more accuracy.

"It's like moving the driver's seat from the back of the bus to the front of the bus," Burgess said Wednesday as the system was unveiled at the Offshore Technology Conference. "It opens a new window for the driller."

Conventional systems place the device 60 to 100 feet up the drill string from the bit. Anadrill's new system places it right next to the bit.

Anadrill has tested this system in Texas' Austin Chalk, offshore Italy, the Gulf of Mexico and the North Sea, Burgess said.

Horizontal drilling allows energy companies to drill down, then to the side, enabling them to enter the wellbore from horizontal formations containing oil and gas.

Analysts see the new technology as giving Paris-based Schlumberger an edge in its competition with rivals Baker Hughes and Halliburton in the horizontal drilling business.

John Mehedy, oil field service analyst for Morgan Stanley & Co. in New York, said the new system is a major advance in horizontal drilling technology, one that should give the Paris-based company an edge over market leader Baker Hughes and close competitor Halliburton.

PITTS: Ironic discovery

counties in three states, from Amarillo to Liberal, the field is one of the most prolific in terms of gas production in the nation.

The oilpatch is full of stories about lost fortunes, and even a few about losses that became fortunes — as in the case of the Boles No.1.

Who could have known in 1920 that 73 years later, natural gas would be touted as the fuel of the future, to run American industry, fuel its vehicles, and heat and cool its homes?

John Paul Pitts is business/oil editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

DRILL: Improving

while the 1,045 permits issued in March were above the 1,019 issued in March 1992, year-to-date totals are below 1992 totals. In the first three months of 1993, the commission issued 2,761 permits, down 2 percent from the 2,815 issued in the first quarter of 1992.

March completions, however, were sharply higher. Signs that the gas turnaround may be real were also seen in more gas well completions.

Producers completed 323 gas and 459 oil wells in March, compared to 198 gas and 388 oil wells in March 1992. To date in 1993, there have been 2,232 wells completed, up 15 percent from 1,903 completed in the first three months of 1992.

Brian Schaible, a spokesman for the commission, pointed out that an operator has a year from the time he obtains a drilling permit until he actually has to drill a well.

"That means we may not see a wrinkle in the number of completions based on a rise in the number of drilling permit applications for some time after the application numbers are tallied. We never know at what point in the coming year a drilling permit is going to be exercised, so it's difficult to draw a direct correlation from those two statistics."

He did say that one factor contributing to a boom in drilling permit applications this past fall was the expiration of Section 29 tight sands gas credits, which expired at the end of 1992. Schaible said the commission saw a boom in permit applications last fall and a rush in completions during December as people drilled wells into the tight sands to qualify for the tax credit, a growth in completions that has carried over into this spring.

One statistic he can draw a correlation to is the number of dry holes. In March, according to the commission, there were 192 dry holes drilled, down from 274 dry holes in March 1992. Close-in drilling and good science are usually factors impacting a decrease in dry holes.

Schaible said he believes advances in 3-D seismic is having a positive impact on drilling in Texas. And, he adds, "we've seen a large positive impact over the last couple of years on drilling as a result of new horizontal drilling technology, although that drilling boom is tapering off a little bit. Those are high-technology wells that resulted in a lot of new wells coming on-line in the state that might otherwise might not have been drilled."

And he said he is seeing encouraging signs, mostly in the natural gas market, that could mean increased drilling and completion activity.

Ike Kerridge, chief economist with Baker Hughes Inc., said in a phone interview from his Houston office that his company, too, is seeing encouraging signs.

Kerridge acknowledged that currently "we're seeing flat activity as far as the rig count is concerned."

He said the state rig count fell from its December peak of 332 rigs to a current count of 233 and attributed half the 100-rig decrease to the expiration of the tight sands tax credit and the remainder to a seasonal decline. The state's rig count hovered between 228-233 throughout the month of April.

But, he said, the company expects to see a nice increase in drilling activity in the second half of the year, with most of it increased drilling for natural gas.

"There are two reasons we think this will happen," he said. "First, gas prices are quite satisfactory. And the other reason I'm optimistic is that the independent producers got substantial relief from the Alternative Minimum Tax, which had been causing some of them not to drill exploratory wells. If the rig count follows normal seasonal patterns, it ought to turn up in the next four weeks."

He expects a large number of the additional rigs to be drilling for natural gas. His forecast, based on a four-month actual count and a two-month forecast is the number of rigs drilling for gas in the first half of the year to average 323 nationally and to average 420 nationally for the second half of the year, a 30 percent increase. Overall — both oil and gas drilling — he expects a 21 percent increase.

Kerridge said crude is losing its attractiveness to drillers because most of the major oil reserves — areas of the U.S. where drilling is allowed — have been discovered, major oil companies are shifting activity overseas and natural gas has a better resource base and is more environmentally acceptable.

The Railroad Commission's Schaible credits natural gas's strength to a just-ended winter that brought normal cold weather after several years of warmer-than-normal temperatures, low storage volumes because supplies had to be drawn down to meet demand, and the drive both nationally and in Texas to increase the use of natural gas as a boiler and industrial fuel and in transportation.

Still, he said, operators remain cautious after being battered by a weak market. He said that over the 12 to 18 months, drilling has slowed to record lows and operators were cautious, doing little exploring and drilling infill wells where they knew what they would find.

Industry, government clash on birds

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Birds that mistake oil field pits for watering holes die by the thousands each year in New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas, a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service official said.

John Rogers, regional director of the agency's office in Albuquerque, told an oil industry conference that cooperation with industry has helped reduce the number of birds killed.

But Rogers said about 225,000 birds still perish each year in oil fields in the three states.

The 225,000 figure was questioned by Dan Girand, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of New Mexico. He said a more realistic count was 400 birds.

And he said of the agency: "They talk about partnerships, but they say, 'You guys are crooks' and want to start from there."

The conference, which concluded Wednesday, was sponsored by the Bureau of Land Management and Interior Department in cooperation with two industry associations.

Girand also said government regulations and taxes have become excessive and are hurting the industry.

"We can't continue to digest more regulation and taxes. Folks, we eat these costs, and we're getting indigestion," Girand said.

Girand said the BLM should encourage exploration "because that brings in the most money.

"I hope we can look forward to man being a part of the ecosystem," Girand said.

Darwin Van de Graaff, executive vice president of the New Mexico Oil and Gas Association, agreed that many people benefit from developed resources.

"Government should be aware of that and govern accordingly. Yet, the trend is to reduce development on public lands," Van de Graaff said.

He said the Energy Department "never talks about expanding oil and gas production," although one of the quickest ways to bolster the economy would be to stimulate production.

"MEET OUR ELITE"

Lisa Tolentino is congratulated by Vickey Banks, Manager of Temporary Resources.

Eliza Rebecca (Lisa) Tolentino has qualified as an "Elite Temp" at Temporary Resources. Lisa, a graduate of Texas A&M University, is an intelligent, versatile employee who can handle any situation. Lisa moved to Midland shortly after she and her husband were married. Being the bright, innovative person that she is, Lisa realized her need to acquaint herself with the type of industry that is typical to Midland. Within a few days, Lisa had taken advantage of Temporary Resources refresher course in word processing and was chosen for a long term assignment which gave her a good basic knowledge of the oil and gas business. Lisa says that Temporary Resources "is a great stepping-stone between employees and employers".

When not working, Lisa enjoys reading gothic classics, pastel sketching and participating in various outdoor sports such as basketball and volleyball. Lisa makes the following statement: "Temporary Resources always makes me feel like a valued employee and my representatives have always been attentive and responsive to my employment needs."

Scotsman decries UK oil tax changes

HOUSTON — Len Ironside, chairman of Scotland's Grampian Regional Council, urged Great Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer "to explore all options before rushing into hasty petroleum tax changes June 30 of this year."

The Grampian Region is home to 52,500 of the 64,000 persons the oil industry employs in Scotland.

Ironside says the new change in the United Kingdom's petroleum revenue taxes may discourage exploration of smaller fields by not allowing exploration and appraisal costs to be deducted.

Great Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer has proposed a reduction in the Petroleum Revenue Tax from 75 percent to 50 percent after June 30. Corporations also have a 33 percent corporate tax on field activity and those developed before March 31 also are supposed to pay 12-1/2 percent royalty tax.

In an interview at the 1993 worldwide Offshore Technology Conference held in Houston's Astrohall, Ironside pointed out that oil — Great Britain's largest foreign revenue source — will continue to loom large in the nation's economic future.

But the Chancellor is eliminating certain "cross-field" deductions for exploration and appraisal costs.

The Chancellor has said his "intention is to put in place a tax regime which will encourage further development of the United Kingdom's oil and gas resources by allowing companies to keep more of the fruits of their efforts."

"We all agree with the intent," said Ironside, "but we are less sure about the outcome. We see the tax going up, not down, and exploration of smaller fields going down, not up."

In a study conducted by the Department of Petroleum Economics, University of Aberdeen, the University estimates that the Chancellor of the Exchequer will break even on taxes in 1993, gain approximately $450 million in 1994 and gain approximately $600 million in 1995.

The Petroleum Revenue Tax deduction will help such companies as British Petroleum, Shell and Esso, which have established production. It will hurt a number of independents whose budgets are based on deductions for the exploration and appraisal efforts currently underway in mid-sized and smaller fields, according to Alex Kemp, professor of economics at Aberdeen University.

Companies currently paying at the 83.3 percent rate now will pay at 66.5 percent; or if they pay royalty, their total tax will be 70.7 percent in the new tax scheme.

"That is largely an illusory reduction, because the real rate for a continuing participant in the North Sea was about 16.7 percent due to the ability to write off new appraisal and exploration costs and related costs," said Ironside. "Such write-offs have been eliminated in the new program of 'reductions' and the real tax rate has risen."

The Grampian peninsula on Scotland's northeast coast contains both Aberdeen, offshore energy capital of Europe, and St. Fergus Terminal, processing site of much of the North Sea's oil and gas streams.

The oil and gas industry is a long-term business. High levels of expenditure and risk now may pay off years down the line, said Ironside. Drilling service companies have been hurt by the announcement of the tax change, but they may come back to a higher level of operations once "the spray of confusion" subsides.

Industry figures show 56 United Kingdom oil fields and some 42 rigs running now on the Continental Shelf. Another 15 fields under development should come onstream within three years. Over the next 20 years, the industry anticipates development of an additional 90 fields.

Geophysical Society sets exploration meeting

Staff report

The Permian Basin Geophysical Society will host its 35th annual Exploration meeting Thursday and Friday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa. The theme of the meeting is "Correct and Economic Seismic Imaging, Part II."

The meeting gets underway Thursday with registration from 4 to 8 p.m. and a reception from 6 to 9 p.m.

Friday, registration begins at 8 a.m. with technical programs getting underway at 9 a.m.

Joe Morris, president of the society, will deliver the welcoming remarks.

He will be followed by a keynote address by Marion Bone, president of the Society of Exploration Geophysicists.

The first morning session will get underway at 9:45 a.m. and is entitled "3-D Seismic Benefits From Exploration Through Development, an Exxon Perspective." Presenters are M.G. Johnson and G.M. Gaskins, Exxon Exploration Co. and S.M. Greenlee, Exxon Production Research.

Next, at 10:15 a.m. is "3-D Modeling for 3-D Survey Design" by Dale Stone.

At 11 a.m. the session is "Acquisition Parameter Tests for a Vibroseis 3-D Survey in Upton County" by Gerry H. Schmitt, Chevron U.S.A. and Mitchell S. Craig, Chevron Petroleum Technology Co.

MEETINGS

CO2 foam trial to be topic for SPE group

Doug E. Jasek of Chevron U.S.A. Inc. will be the guest speaker at Thursday's meeting of the Reservoir Study Group of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers. The meeting will be at the American Legion Hall beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Jasek will present a paper he co-authored with S.I. Chou, S.L. Vasicek, D.L. Pisio and J.A. Goodgame entitled "CO2 Foam Field Trial at North Ward-Estes."

The paper describes the design, results and analysis of foam treatment with emphasis on the design methodology for applying foam in grossly heterogeneous reservoirs, characterized by uneven areal and vertical sweep in most patterns. The production of offset wells following the foam trial clearly indicates both areal and vertical diversion of CO2.

Jasek is a registered petroleum engineer with seven years experience as a reservoir and production engineer with Chevron in the Permian Basin. He holds a bachelor's degree in petroleum engineering from Texas A&M University.

AAPG president to discuss Alaska, ANWR

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker Harrison L. Townes will present "The Alaskan North Slope and ANWR." He is president of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

Alaska now contains 30 percent of total U.S. oil reserves. The Prudhoe Bay discovery in 1968 found 12 billion barrels of recoverable oil, the largest field in North America. Other large fields have been found on the North Slope, which can be considered a world class producing province.

The 1002 Coastal Plain portion of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge has been set aside as an area of excellent petroleum potential since its geographic and geologic position makes it an integral part of the North Slope province. Various government studies indicate numerous large undrilled structures in the 1002 area, which is only 8 percent of ANWR. The decision to open the 1002 area for drilling, however, will be a political one since various environmental groups oppose this. The argument that not enough potential reserves underlie the 1002 area to justify drilling is not logical, Townes said.

After working for various companies, he became an independent petroleum geologist in 1967. He formed Toklan Oil Corp. in 1971, retired as board chairman of the company in 1989 and returned the independent practice of petroleum geology.

Cost of the luncheon is $7 per person and reservations can be made by Monday evening by calling 683-1573.

Retiring Arco exec won big gamble

■ Retiring Arco executive George Babikian's big gamble reshaped motor fuel marketing.

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Ten years ago George H. Babikian took a gamble that could have cost him his job as head of marketing at Arco Products Co.

He bet that motorists would rather pay less for gasoline than use credit cards and that they likely would buy gas at a place that sold more than petroleum products.

Babikian won. And motor fuel marketing hasn't been the same since.

The 65-year-old Babikian retires in June as president of Arco's marketing unit after sending shock waves through the oil industry for years. He helped turn traditional service-station repair bays into mini markets and made Arco the low-price leader.

When environmental concerns grew in the late 1980s, he convinced the company to develop cleaner burning gasoline. And when Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990, he won new customers by freezing retail gas prices.

While playing a major role in almost every one of Arco's marketing innovation, Babikian spreads around the credit for the company's growth.

"To gain market share you have to be darn good and the people in the products company are the best in the industry," he said during an interview in his 35th floor office at one of Atlantic Richfield Co.'s downtown Los Angeles towers. "My goal was to do my job as well as I could."

His marketing philosophy always has been fairly basic: sell a high volume of gasoline at a lower price than competitors.

"We felt that we could build the strength to compete at the price end of the spectrum," Babikian said. "It's the most important decision we've ever made as a products company. It's the engine that drives the company today."

Even competitors bruised in tough price battles confess to admiration for his strategy.

Tom Robinson, vice president of Robinson Oil Co. in San Jose, Calif. has been competing with Arco's low prices for 10 years. Robinson's company and Coast Oil Co., a San Francisco Bay Area marketer, operate a chain of independent stations through a partnership called Mission Trail Oil Co.

"Arco certainly has been a leader in a number of things and Babikian has been a very able spokesman for them," Robinson said. "He's a very articulate guy who's not afraid to say what's on his mind. They've done a very good job of focusing on what they want to do."

Said Herb Richards, owner of Coast Oil: "You've got to admire a competitor who does a job better than you do. I don't have any bitterness. I just wish I had the ammunition to compete with him.

"You might not like what he's done but he's been tough in the marketplace.'

With Babikian in charge of gasoline marketing, Arco climbed to the top spot in the Western United States — especially in the Los Angeles area, the world's largest single gasoline market.

Arco has a 28.12 percent share of the Los Angeles market, more than twice that of second-place San Francisco-based Chevron Corp., which has a 13.97 percent share, according to Whitney Leigh Corp., an oil industry market research group in Tulsa, Okla.

Some industry observers credit Babikian with this huge lead on the competition.

"I have the utmost respect for him and his company," said McDonald J. Beavers, Whitney Leigh's president. "Arco, over the last decade, has been an (industry) leader. Often times Arco is a maverick kind of a company ... and they step on the toes of other oil companies ... but then the entire industry has been a benefactor of their wisdom."

Babikian, a native of Fulton, N.Y., served two stints in the U.S. Navy, from 1946 to 1948 and from 1951 to 1953. He graduated from Syracuse University in 1953 with a bachelor of science degree and left graduate school a year later to become a dealer trainee with Atlantic Refining Co.

He spent his career in the refining and marketing operations of what eventually became Atlantic Richfield Co., the big Los Angeles-based oil exploration and production firm. He became Arco Products president in 1985.

Babikian said that he always believed in coupling economies of scale with risk-taking to boost Arco's profits.

For example, he was a district manager for Atlantic Refining in New York State's Finger Lakes Region during his early career.

He sped along back roads through the farm land to shave time between calls on customers in Penn Yan, Watkins Glen and Bath. The risk of a speeding ticket was worth the prospects of one more sale.

Later, while running a marketing unit in the Midwest, he began developing sales strategies that later would come into play at the products company.

"That's the best job I ever had in the company and that's where the basic program for Arco in later years came from," he recalled.

Babikian rose through the ranks and in the early 1970s his bosses put him in charge of gasoline marketing. He began trying to drive Arco to the top of the West Coast gasoline market.

And it was always a fight, both inside and outside the company. Some executives at the parent Atlantic Richfield wanted to unload the products unit in the mid-1970s after it lost millions of dollars.

The Arab oil embargo of 1973 had prompted a four-fold increase in prices, brought about gasoline shortages and long lines at the pumps.

To satisfy demand, Arco locked itself into some high-priced crude oil contracts so it would have enough supply to meet consumers' gasoline demands.

The unit made money during the first half of 1974 but during the last six months of the year intense competition returned to the market place and gasoline prices plunged.

Arco was stuck with the expensive crude and over the last half of the year the company lost 25 percent of its sales volume and $116 million, a staggering amount in those days.

"We were literally fighting for our lives," Babikian said.

At that point, Babikian and James A. Morrison, the units former president, began tinkering with Arco's marketing strategy, deciding to follow the lead of some independent operators by stressing self-service and undercutting the prices of competitors.

They also implemented other cost-cutting measures, such as eliminating sales to unprofitable bulk terminals and paring the company's network of 7,400 stations.

But the biggest risk Arco took at Babikian's behest was discontinuing its credit card in April 1983. After his bosses approved the move, Babikian went home and told his wife he may not have a job the next day.

Arco then literally blew up a model of its credit card during a television commercial broadcast throughout its marketing area and began heavily advertising its low price, cash-only policy.

Meanwhile, other companies continued to accept credit cards and charge a few cents a gallon more for fuel purchased this way.

One reason the tactic attracted Babikian was that it immediately reduced operating expenses by $73 million — and the savings could be passed onto consumers through lower pump prices.

"We were able to take another step toward building volume, a step that to the outside world seemed foolhardy," Babikian said. "We expected a price war for a year, maybe two years as our competitors fought to keep their customers from coming to us. Obviously they thought we had shot ourselves in the foot.

"While they were gloating we accomplished volumetrically in three months what we thought would take two years to achieve."

Some Arco dealers were also surprised by the move.

Arco dealer Charlie Mulcahy remembers receiving a letter via Federal Express that instructed him to stop accepting the credit cards. Mulcahy said that he considered signing on with another company because a lot of his business came from credit card users.

"But I thought we'd better try it because their guys aren't dummies," Mulcahy recalled. "We went from 30,000 gallons a month to an average of over 100,000, and that's at a little station that was only open in the daytime."

Babikian was amazed Arco was able to get away with such a brazen attempt to corral market share.

"We were dumbfounded," he said. "We couldn't believe we could get away with that. But we had already taken the high ground, so to speak, and we weren't going to give it back."

It was expected that major competitors would follow Arco's example.

"We were very surprised that none of the other majors took them on," said Robinson of Robinson Oil Co. "That was a very big advantage to them."

After dismantling the credit card operations, Babikian's staff turned its attention to developing mini markets, a concept pioneered in small, independent gas outlets.

The new retail outlets allowed the company to charge top rents for its facilities, something that rankled dealers. For example, Babikian said station rents averaged about $5,000 a year in 1975 compared with $100,000 today.

He called Arco's AM PM outlets the "most successful convenience operation in the country."

Babikian also made sure Arco in the late 1980s embraced the environmental movement by being the first company to publicly endorse the state's plan to adopt regulations for cleaner burning gasoline.

The company was the first to offer the fuel in the marketplace.

"We're a very good company, environmentally, and we're very proud of that," he said.

Again, there's no argument from the State Air Resources Board.

"They were clearly a leader in being one of the first companies to make a commitment to the gasoline and produce it," said resources board spokesman Bill Sessa. "They did lead the charge in public forums to the point of breaking ranks with other oil companies on the issue."

Babikian's work also has improved the parent company's bottom line. He points out that in 1990, Atlantic Richfield's earnings hit $2 billion with the products company accounting for 25 percent.

He said that the company today has no intention of relinquishing any of its market share that made this possible.

"Winning," Babikian said, "is a hell of a lot better than losing."

BOTTOM LINES

Midland Resources income jumps

Midland Resources has announced results for the first quarter of 1993.

The company announced net income of $1.015 million or 44 cents per share, compared to a loss of $20,000 or 1 cent per share for the first three months of 1992.

Total revenues were $1.053 million, compared to $773,000 in the same quarter a year earlier.

Results were impacted by the Accounting Standards Board's Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 109, "Accounting for Income Taxes." This required a change from the deferred method to the asset and liability method of accounting for income taxes for fiscal years beginning after Dec. 15, 1992.

Midland Resources adopted this standard and has reported the cumulative effect of the change in the method of accounting for income taxes as of the beginning of fiscal 1993.

Guy M. Farmer, vice president, finance, commented "Results for the first quarter of 1993 reflect strong growth. First quarter oil and gas sales increased 38 percent over the same period in 1992, while operating expenses increased 31 percent. Oil and gas production in the quarter increased 7 percent to 34,284 barrels and 76 percent to 199,252 Mcf over the same period in 1992."

Energy Ventures net income shows gain

HOUSTON — Energy Ventures Inc. has announced net income of $807,000 or 7 cents per share on revenues of $52.7 million for the first quarter of 1993.

Net income for the first quarter of 1992 was $554,000 or 5 cents per share on revenues of $43.7 million.

Operating income for the quarter was $2.76 million as compared to $1.12 million for the same period in 1992. Operating income increased at the company's artificial lift and drilling/workover contracting subsidiaries.

Energy Ventures also reported strong demand for its Corod continuous rod and progressive cavity pump product lines and improved sales of its RotaFlex pump drive unit.

The increases were offset by a decline in the operating income at the company's tubular subsidiary and operating losses at the horizontal environmental drilling subsidiary.

Interest expense was $1.64 million for the first quarter of 1993 and $709,000 for the comparable quarter in 1992. The interest expense is mainly attributable to the cost of the company's $34 million Senior Notes which was issued in March 1992 and the proceeds of which were used to acquire Atlas Bradford and for other corporate purposes.

Shell reports first quarter income

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. on Friday said it earned $239 million in the 1993 first quarter, compared with a $452 million loss posted for the same period a year ago.

Revenues for the first quarter were $5.1 billion, up slightly from revenues of $5 billion a year ago.

"This is the highest net income for any first quarter since 1989 and our best quarterly performance since major restructuring efforts began in 1991," said Shell President Frank H. Richardson.

Shell is a wholly owned subsidiary of Royal Dutch Shell Group and does not report per share earnings. The Houston-based company noted that last year's loss included charges of $635 million related to the adoption of financial accounting standards for retiree health care benefits and income taxes.

Shell attributed the first-quarter gain in part to improved crude oil and natural gas prices and lower operating costs this year. Special items benefited earnings by $51 million in the 1993 quarter and $190 million in the 1992 first quarter.

Energy Services boosts Halliburton

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Company reported first-quarter earnings almost twice as high as a year ago, thanks to a jump in domestic wells.

Company officials on Thursday reported earnings of $18.8 million, or 18 cents a share for the three months that ended March 31.

The company reported income of $9.7 million or 9 cents per share in the 1992 quarter before taking an accounting charge of $13.8 million related to future health benefits.

First quarter revenues for Halliburton's energy services group were $689.8 million, a 6 percent increase from the same three months of 1992. Revenues from international markets dropped by 5 percent, but were offset by a 27 percent surge of U.S. revenues.

The Dallas-based company said it benefited this year from wells drilled prior to the expiration of tax credits on U.S. gas wells at year-end 1992. That boosted completion activity during the first quarter, and led to a 27 percent jump in U.S. revenues for its energy services group, the company said.

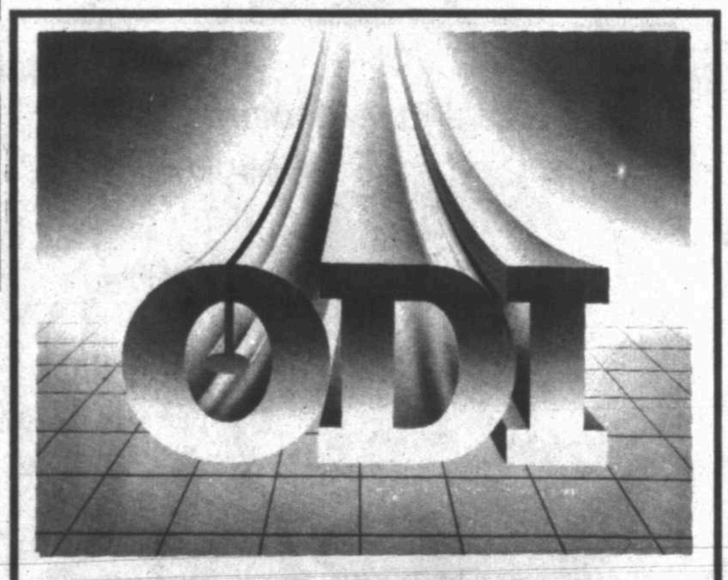

Revenues for the engineering and construction services group were $798.6 million, down 16 percent from a year ago. Operating income was $12.7 million, down 23 percent from last year.

Gas futures growth may be permanent

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — So many traders have swarmed into the natural gas futures pit in the last few months that the New York Mercantile Exchange is about to move them into in a remodeled, expanded trading area.

The exchange is acting none too soon. More contracts were traded for natural gas on April 27 than for any other futures contract that day for a physical commodity on the New York exchange, even more than crude oil. It was the first time that natural gas had led the pack in trading volume since the exchange introduced gas futures contracts in April 1990.

The large swing in prices this year for the spot-month contract is the biggest reason for the trading surge. "The futures are a more reliable and more financially secure means of transacting business" when prices are unpredictable, said Philip K. Verleger, an energy commodities specialist and visiting fellow at the Institute for International Economics in Washington.

The May contract reached a high of $2.758 per million British thermal units when it expired on April 23, compared with the low settlement price this year on Jan. 19 at $1.551 for the February contract. The June contract gained 2.8 cents Tuesday, at $2.317. A year ago, the spot-month contract price was less than $1.60.

Gas marketers and futures traders are unsure whether trading in natural gas contracts can permanently overtake crude oil, the world's most widely traded nonfinancial futures commodity.

Special factors have been driving natural gas prices in the last few months — such as March snowstorms in the East and new accounting rules that prompted pipeline companies to reduce gas inventories in their transportation systems.

Yet natural gas is a vast industry in the United States, and many specialists say this year's trading surge is no aberration. The industry's share of the nation's total energy market is 25 percent and growing. Its price pattern has also been more volatile than the price trend for crude oil, which has been unusually calm for two years. Crude supplies 40 percent of the nation's energy.

Verleger said that gas buyers, producers and Wall Street firms that specialize in gas contracts were behind much of the trading surge, not speculators. Big users of natural gas like steel and auto plants and local utilities use the fixed-price contracts to limit and spread their risks that prices will zoom to financially ruinous levels. For their part, many producers are willing to pledge deliveries at prices more than 60 percent above the depressed levels a year ago.

(STORY CAN END HERE. OPTIONAL MATERIAL FOLLOWS)

AIG Trading, Louis Dreyfus Energy, Morgan Stanley and Paribas Futures Inc. are among the most active Wall Street firms in gas-futures trading. Enron Corp., the big natural gas company, is another major participant.

Contracts on the New York exchange can be bought for delivery on dates as distant as 18 months. Options, swaps and other variations written on those monthly contracts are designed for gas deliveries at a fixed price for 10 years or more.

The current price sequence for monthly gas futures contracts indicates that spot prices will fall to $2.244 this summer. The peak price for the next 12 months is on the December contract, at $2.64. The price average for those 12 months is $2.327 but it can shift rapidly, said Brian Manolis of Paribas Futures. It was below $2 in March.

But some analysts say the spot price cannot stay above $2.50 for long because, at that price, hundreds of large gas users switch to cheaper low-sulfur fuel oil. That should lower demand.

—"To date, we have not seen prices sticking over $2.50 for any substantial period of time," said Jeffrey K. Skilling, chief executive of Enron's gas marketing group in Houston.

Fina honored for aiding wetlands study

Staff report

LAFAYETTE, La. — The Department of Interior's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has honored Fina Oil and Chemical Co. for allowing government scientists to perform wetlands restoration research on land owned by Fina in Terrebonne Parish and for assistance following Hurricane Andrew.

The ceremonies at Fish and Wildlife Services new research facility in Lafayette included Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt and U.S. Sen. J. Bennett Johnston (D-La.)

"The loss of coastal wetlands remains high," said Research Center Director Robert E. Stewart Jr. "Without working in partnership with the private sector, which owns most of the valuable coastal wetlands, we would not be able to perform the research needed to evaluate various marsh management techniques."

The natural barriers between freshwater and saltwater have been breached and freshwater plants are killed by the intruding saltwater.

Fina is allowing the use of a portion of its land in Terrebonne Parish for a five-year study of the effect of marsh management. Fina also donated to the government lodging, construction and more than $20,000 worth of emergency dragline use after Hurricane Andrew.

Fina manages a very successful 8,000 acre wetlands restoration project in Terrebonne Parish. The project, fully implemented in 1985, has halted a 70-acre per year rate of marsh erosion. Water salinity inside the project area now is less than 4.5 parts per million compared with 13,000 parts per million in the early 1980s, and almost 10 percent of the 2,000 acres damaged by saltwater intrusion has been revegetated.

Fina last year launched a similar project on 8,054 acres of Cameron Parish marsh near Holly Beach.

Fina's goal is to reverse the wetlands loss through the use of various water control structures and grass plantings., Levees, bulkheads, earthen closure dams and weirs will reduce water level fluctuations and saltwater intrusion, will help retain a freshwater head in the area, and will provide ingress and egress for marine organisms.

Fina also manages its land for waterfowl, alligator, furbearing animals and fish.

April 21, Fina began its 1993 alligator program during which 7,500 farm-raised alligators were returned to the marsh as part of a joint project with the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries to maintain a balance in the state's alligator population.

Alligator eggs are collected in the wild each year for hatching at commercial farms where they are protected. A portion of the hatch is returned to the original nesting sites after the alligators reach at least four feet in length.

Fina began a project last year to increase the bald eagle population in South Louisiana. The project with Fish and Wildlife Service collects smaller eaglets from nests containing more than one eaglet on Fina property. The eaglets are raised at a wildlife refuge and released when they reach maturity.

Plains earnings rise

LAKEWOOD, Co. — Plains Petroleum Co. reported an increase in operating earnings for the first quarter due to higher natural gas revenues generated by increased volumes sold.

Plains' operating earnings for the quarter were $2.8 million or 28 cents per share, up 12 percent from last year's results of $2.4 million or 25 cents per share.

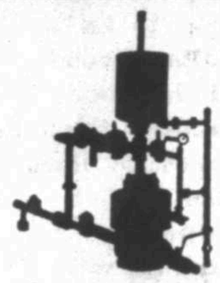

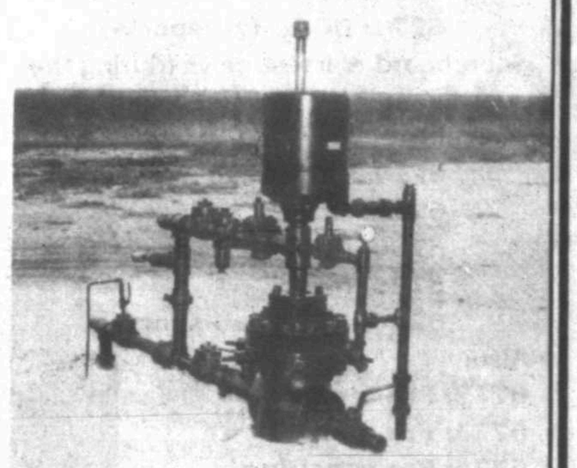

Reported net earnings for the quarter were impacted by the previously announced extraordinary charge related to certain oil properties and the effect of two mandated accounting changes.

An impairment provision of $3.3 million (pretax) was made for certain oil properties located in the Permian Basin in West Texas and southeast New Mexico. A one-time cumulative credit of $2 million for deferred income taxes was recorded to reflect Statement No. 1009 issued by the Financial Accounting Standards Board. This tax credit was reduced by a one-time charge of $800,000 (pretax) to recognize accumulated retiree benefits for Plains as required by FAS 106. Reported net earnings after these three extraordinary items were $1.41 million or 14 cents per share.

Gas production for the quarter was 6.6 billion cubic feet, 27 percent higher than 1992's first quarter. Revenues increased 22 percent to $17.2 million and cash flow of $7.5 million was up 23 percent from the prior year.

Recover very low vapor volumes at a profit
STORAGE TANK EMISSIONS → VAPOR JET™ VAPOR RECOVERY SYSTEM → GAS SALES
Strict government air quality standards now regulate hydrocarbon vapor emissions from oil production storage facilities. For many low volume vapor producers, compliance has become a significant factor in their profitability—or even survival.
To meet air standards, the vapors must be recovered. But the low volumes captured for gas sales often do not justify the cost of a conventional compressor-based vapor recovery unit (VRU).
The patented Vapor Jet system is a simple, cost-efficient and virtually maintenance-free alternative to conventional VRUs. Its ability to handle very low vapor volumes at a very low cost makes it ideally suited for marginal production facilities. In many cases, the system will allow the continued operation of sites where the cost of compliance with air quality standards might otherwise have been prohibitive.
Compliance doesn't have to be an expense. At an operating cost of just dollars a day, the Vapor Jet system can pay for itself with recovered gas sales.
It is easily installed at about 50 percent of a VRU's cost. And with its trouble-free design and minimal maintenance cost, the Vapor Jet system performs at 25- to 50-percent of a VRU's operating expense. For more information call Conoco Specialty Products, 1-800-962-5882.

Young hearts speak their minds

Text by Linda Anderson Design by Elizabeth Edwin Photos by Curt Wilcott

Recently, there has been a lot of news about the Baby Boomers electing a president and vice president in their age group and finally becoming the leaders of the country. Now, the feeling seems to be, the country gets to sit back and see how these formerly-rebellious children run things. After all, Boomers were famous 30 years ago for fighting "the establishment" and shouting about how their parents' generation was doing everything wrong.

But what about the Baby Boomers' babies? The next generation — the children still in elementary school — have some definite ideas about how things should be done and how their parents are messing up. As one fourth-grader put it, "We know more than adults think we do. And we have lots of good ideas."

Some fourth-graders from Gifted Education of Midland (GEM) expressed some of those ideas recently. And they have some very serious concerns.

Rebecca Saunders, 10, believes cleaning up the Earth is a major concern in improving the world.

"If I was president, I would give a bunch of food to Bosnia and that area," said Ben Fisher, 10. "I would try to find homeless people and give them homes and food and jobs."

"You know how there's always wars going on?" asked Jared Thomure, 9. "I'd try to make it where no wars were going on, ... and heal sick people."

Amanda Cox, 10, agreed. "If I was president I would go to other countries and try to make peace and tell them war is not the way to go. That they are not going to get anywhere with war."

"I would want to get rid of all the drugs and make it so no drugs were in the world and get rid of the companies that make it," said Risa Holland, 10.

Hunger and war and drug abuse are of worldwide concern. Some of the kids had ideas that hit a little closer to home.

"I would make it a law that all cities in the United States had to have a dumpster for cans, a dumpster for paper and a dumpster for plastic, and make recycling a regular part of everyday life," said April Adamson, 10.

Rachel O'Field, 9, agreed. "I would stop landfills and have people recycle and stop pollution."

Ashleigh Williams, 10, wants to "send everyone to college." Ten-year-old Ethel Williams agreed, saying "I would have special schools for people who don't have the money" and send poor kids to college.

James Franklin, 10, said he "would have it where kids could get jobs before they go to college so they could learn responsibility before they got to college."

Bruce Doty, 10, and Amanda had the same idea about hiring homeless people and the unemployed to help clean up the environment by picking up litter and recycling, and in that way helping solve two social problems — unemployment and pollution — at the same time.

Jennifer Lee, 9, also worries about the economy and the unemployed. She wants to "pay all the debt that the United States would have and ... lower the taxes and make more jobs for people."

The students also are concerned about the world-wide need for equal rights and freedom including freedom of religion, the destruciton of the rain forest and the waste of natural resources.

"I would send a rocket into space with trash so the Earth wouldn't be trashed," said John Mason, 10.

"I'd try to make a car that doesn't put as much carbon monoxide in the air," said 9-year-old Andrew Killingsworth, who added that his car would run on water or solar power.

Devin Shrode, 10, liked the non-polluting car idea. "I would try to convince people to use the solar car, to walk more than they drive and to use less electricity."

Louis Dominguez, 10, also wants the environment to be cleaner. "I'd stop all the pollution the factories are giving out."

Partygoers celebrate in spite of weather

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

To celebrate May Day, Cindy Botes, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful, and her husband, Peter, an engineer with Texaco, hosted a fun party at their home last weekend.

McKnight-Harrison

Despite the fierce winds earlier in the day and the temperatures which plummeted 20 degrees or so, spirits were not dampened, and the party proceeded as planned, but indoors instead of the backyard, where it was originally scheduled to take place. However, a few brave souls enjoyed visiting outside around a Chimayo, a portable, wood-burning, ceramic stove.

Decorations by Kevin Oyenik included a May Pole with lights, which illuminated the yard, and colorful paper flowers interspersed with lights inside the house.

Guests enjoyed an array of mouth-watering delicacies, margaritas and beer, as they discussed the events of the day, most notable the freakish weather, the election and the state's $50 million lottery.

Among the guests were Liz and Chris Rutter, Sherry and Dave Musset, Sharon Davison, Becca and O.T. Maxwell, Nancy and Chuck Swallow, Liz and Tommy Vascocu, and the Botes' longtime friend, John Colotta from Fort Worth.

THANKS TO Patricia Wettstein, the Yucca Theatre has a beautiful mirrored, mahoganey antique bar that was built in San Francisco in the mid-1800's. Patricia also donated to the Midland Community Theatre three antique fans to be put over the bar. These fans are the same type as those in the famous Jack Daniel Saloon in Memphis, Tenn.

Again thanks, Patricia, from our entire community for this addition to our theatre.

A SEA OF BLUE covered Haley Park recently at the party honoring two high school graduating seniors. The 200 guests invited to the event for Darren Grubb and Jason McKague each received a navy blue T-shirt, decorated with a large white question mark and the words, "Where's the Party?", along with their invitations.

The high school crowd was asked to wear the T-shirts and shorts or jeans for games, burgers and beans. They enjoyed volleyball and whistleball, later sitting at tables decorated with geraniums and balloons for the meal.

Hosts for the party were Ellen and Larry Bell, Susie and Gary Burnett, Nadine and Tom Craddick, Bob Spears, Polly and Ferrell Davis, Susie and Don Evans, Donna and Ted Fergeson, Patty and Tevis Herd.

Also, Bettye and Don Jones, Sara and Bill St. Clair, Lucy and John Woodside, Jeanne and Bill Worley, Diana Younger, Judy and Bud Martin, Linda and Frank Powell, Jane and Jesse Petree, Jan and Joey O'Neill, Jan and Andy Reed and Dr. Charlie Younger.

Darren, son of Cynthia and Dennis Grubb, is a senior at Lee High School and plans to attend Baylor University. Jason, son of Caryl and Art Custer and Bruce McKague, will attend Stephen F. Austin University after graduating from Midland High School.

LONGTIME FRIENDS and First United Methodist members, Angie and Carroll Grafa and Hattie Mae and Roy Jeter, were jubilant grandparents when their granddaughters, Tiffany Grafa and Stacy Pine, were selected to Who's Who Freshman at Texas Tech University. Both girls were honored at an awards banquet hosted by the Texas Tech Student Association.

Stacy is the daughter of Susie and Don Pine of Houston. She is a 1992 Cy Creek graduate and a member of Kappa Alpha Theta social sorority. Tiffany, a 1992 Lee High graduate, is the daughter of Barbra and Trey Grafa. A member of Delta Delta Delta social sorority, she is their nominee for Outstanding Freshman. Her maternal grandparents are Elizabeth and Herbert Blankinship.

MIDLAND HIGH graduating senior Philip Warlick was honored with a graduation dinner recently at Murray's Delicatessen's Party Room.

The hosts were Jan and Andy Reed, Lynn and Joe Lynch, Bette Carole and Bob Koen, Harriet and Paul Stelling and Cookie and Fred Wetendorf.

Guests dined on hamburgers and all the accompaniments at tables decorated with balloons in the school colors of purple and gold.

Special guests were the honoree's parents, Jan and Dr. Phil Warlick. Among others attending were Julie Browder, Mike Melzer, Sheridan Gilkerson, Philip Sublett, Ashley Bunnell and Jimmy Stanton, who came in from Trinity University.

Philip has received an appointment to the United States Air Force Academy, where he will play football for the Falcons.

Wind damaged trees, other plants

By Deborah A. Benge

The Permian Basin has experienced its share of wind and hail the past few weeks, both of which have left marks on the area. In addition to structural property damage, there is plant damage. Trees have broken limbs, vegetable gardens have been leveled and flowering annuals and perennials were crushed.

Benge

Let's take a closer look at the damage done to trees. With respect to landscapes, the most costly plant damage occurred to trees, especially when you consider the amount of time spent in growing a tree and the value it provides to our landscapes.

Trees are very vulnerable to hail damage when they are young, not fully leafed out or evergreen. Depending on the severity of the hail (stone size, wind speed and duration), trees can be defoliated, leaves tattered, bark injured, fruit damaged or knocked off, and small branches broken.

Hail damage to trees is greatest on the top and windward side of the plant. Some of the worst damage occurs when the cells just beneath the bark are bruised or killed from the impact of the stone. These will usually show up as small, elliptical dead spots in the limbs. When damage occurs to the bark and these injuries don't callus (heal) quickly, this increases the chances of decay organisms entering the plant at the injury.

Evergreens don't have the recuperative powers that deciduous trees do, so severely damaged evergreens are very slow to recover from severe hail damage.

Many trees escaped trunk and large limb damage but still suffered leaf loss. Leaves of course are the site of photosynthesis, the place where food for the plant's growth, fruit development and storage for next year takes place. With a reduction in the amount of foods being made, the tree is then weakened. So the possibility of growth being dramatically checked is very real.

If your trees have been damaged by hail, there's little that can be done about it. Good care should follow to help the tree regain a healthy status. Thorough irrigation in the dripline, nitrogen fertilizer applications in February, pruning out badly damaged wood and controlling insect pests will help. Once a tree is damaged from something like hail, it becomes a target for plant pests like borers and some diseases.

Fruit that was on the tree at the time of the hail will usually fall off or be blemished. There isn't much you can do about this problem.

Some of the winds occurring May 1 caused tremendous damage to trees. Almost straight line winds of nearly 70 miles per hour pushed over trees, broke out limbs and split weak trees. Trees with any weak or dead wood commonly had limbs strewn around the yard.

The trees most commonly blown over were evergreen trees, weakened deciduous trees and newly planted B&B trees. Evergreens present a large surface area made up of limbs, needles and/or scales. All of this surface area acts like a sail or solid surface catching a scary amount of wind — more than some trees can hold up to. Another factor that can make some trees more susceptible to blowing over are girdled roots. Many fast-growing evergreen trees will have roots growing in a tight circular pattern, a direct result of improper container growing before being planted. This girdled root system will cause the plant to have a restricted, limited root system and much more likely to blow over in strong winds.

Trees that are blown over can sometimes be salvaged by erecting and replanting. This must take place quickly after blowing over. If there is a delay in replanting, the root system must be protected from drying out and direct sunlight. If the tree blew over in part due to the girdled root system, it should not be replanted, it should be replaced.

Certain trees are more likely to suffer broken limbs and splits than others. Fast-growing trees are generally weak-wooded trees and will have more damage. Siberian elm, willows, cottonwoods, ash, China berry and other soft-wooded trees are examples of this. Another situation of broken limbs would be trees in a weakened state at the time of the hard winds. In either case, broken limbs should be removed properly by cutting back to the bark ridge collar at the base of the limb where it originates from the trunk or a main limb. The bark ridge collar is a slight bulge of tissue at the base of limbs, and cuts should be made without cutting into it.

Correct pruning, consistent proper care and possible tree replacement is the answer to most storm-damaged trees. If you replace or have future plans to storm damaged trees, be sure to ask for the Landscape Plants for the Permian Basin list before making a tree choice. This list is compiled of the best trees for the Permian Basin.

GEM: Concerns are serious, fun

(From 1F)

The students also are worried about all the violence they see in their world. They know about drugs and gangs and weapons in the schools and they are frightened about it.

Aaron Robison, 10, is concerned about the problem in all aspects of life. "They should not put so much violence on TV," he said.

And they know that as children, they still need guidance and discipline. "The teachers should have more control over the kids," said April.

These are all serious concerns, and, as one of their teachers said, "It's a shame our children have to worry about all these things."

But even though these are bright and aware students, they are still regular kids, and some of their wishes are not so serious.

"Let people get their drivers' licenses at the age of 10!" said Risa, to the cheers of her classmates.

Since they do have to go to school, they would like to make some changes in their daily routine.

"On campus there should be some kind of restaurant," said Ben.

"Make school start at 2:30 p.m. and make it end at 3:30 p.m. so we could sleep later," said Leah Johnson, 9, and during their hour-long day, many students agreed there should be an hour for recess.

"No more homework!" shouted Tim Salisbury, 10.

"They should pay us for going to school because this is our job," said Jared.

All the GEM students ride school buses to and from their home schools, and since they spend so much time on the bus, they have some suggestions for that too, such as having bathrooms on the bus, serving food on the bus and eliminating the position of bus monitor.

But for problems they face in the real world now and in the future, these students have some practical ideas.

Amanda likes the idea of sharing information with kids in other communities. "I would set up a communication project where kids could talk to kids about ideas and what's going on in their communities," she said.

Feeding the hungry is a top priority, but "we should feed our own hungry first," said Jared.

Jennifer agreed about facing our own problems first. "Leaders of other countries ... look to us for everything," she said. "That's wrong because they have their own government and should look after their own people and we have our own problems."

Crystal Corona thinks being helpful to other countries should include more education and less handouts. "We need to send for farmers to teach them how to farm and run a business."

Anthony Tarpley, 9, summed it up for all his classmates. "Kids should be able to vote for president because we're people too. If he messes up our world, we're in it too."

'Kids should be able to vote for president because we're people too. If he messes up our world, we're in it too.'

DEAR ABBY

Adoptive, birth mothers together share their joy

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Twenty-three years ago, I gave up my beautiful baby daughter — for her sake, not mine. I was unmarried, very young, and was sent to a home for unwed mothers where I was told I had no other choice. The social worker who handled the matter said I should not expect to see my daughter again. I believed her, and cried many bitter tears.

Van Buren

But thanks to my child's adoptive mother, we were eventually reunited. I thank God that she was secure and open enough in her relationship with my child to allow her to meet me. Few adopted children are given that opportunity.

There is a saying that goes like this: "There are only two lasting bequests we can give our children — one is roots, and the other is wings." I would like to add to that statement that adoptees need BOTH sets of parents if they are to have roots and wings.

I count myself fortunate to have emerged from this experience knowing that I did the right thing for my daughter. It's a very long story, but eventually she also met her birth father (he is now my husband) and her two sisters and one brother. (We have also met our daughter's adopted brother, so now it's as though we have five children.)

This adoptive mother has my love, respect and admiration. There is absolutely nothing I would not do for her. After all, she is our daughter's mother. — BLESSED IN NEW YORK

DEAR BLESSED: Not all adoptive mothers are as courageous, secure and generous as your daughter's adoptive mother. She is to be commended. A very Happy Mother's Day to both of you.

DEAR ABBY: I am 65 years old, and although I'm not rich, I have enough income to buy whatever I need. I am also at an age where I have accumulated more than my home can comfortably hold. There is nothing that anyone can give me — except love.

In lieu of buying objects such as lawn flamingos or clay sheep that sprout alfalfa, and which do nothing more than waste money, I let my children know that I would prefer small favors, such as replacing an azalea plant that died, or washing my living room windows, or pruning my rosebushes, etc.

As a consequence, my children kept making subtle hints about the color scheme of the interior of my home. Unfortunately, the hints were so subtle that I didn't catch on — I didn't realize they were offering to paint it for me. I thought they were trying to tell me that the colors were ugly, so I painted the bedroom myself (three coats), and hired someone to paint the living room, because the piano was too heavy for me to move.

I would love to have my whole family gather to wash all of my windows for Mother's Day, and then stay for some of Mom's good home cooking!

P.S. Abby, if you use my letter, please don't use my last name. I want my kids to surprise me! — CHARLOTTE IN SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

AT WIT'S END

Being a mother means you have to show up

By Erma Bombeck

For the first four or five years after I had children, I considered motherhood a temporary condition — not a calling. It was a time of my life set aside for exhaustion and long hours. It would pass.

Bombeck

Then one afternoon with three kids in tow, I came out of the supermarket pushing a cart (with four wheels that went in opposite directions) when my toddler son got away from me.

Just outside the door, he ran toward a machine holding bubble gum in a glass dome. In a voice that shattered glass, he shouted, "Gimme! Gimme!" I told him I would gimme him what-for if he didn't stop shouting and get in the car.

As I physically tried to pry his body from around the bubble gum machine, he pulled the entire thing over. Glass and balls of bubble gum went all over the parking lot. We had now attracted a crowd.

Donna Reed would have brushed away his tears and granted him absolution on the spot. I wasn't Donna Reed. I told him he would never see another cartoon as long as he lived, and if he didn't control his temper he was going to be making license plates for the state.

He tried to stifle his sobs as he looked around at the staring crowd. Then he did something that I was to remember the rest of my life. In his helpless quest for comfort, he turned to the only one he trusted his emotions with — me. He threw his arms around my knees and held on for dear life.

I had humiliated him, chastized him and berated him, but I was still all he had. That single incident defined my role. I was a major force in this child's life.

Sometimes we forget how important stability is to a child. I've always told mine, "The easiest part of being a mother is giving birth. The hardest part is showing up for it each day."

This is traditionally the day when children give something back to their mothers for all the spit they produced to wash dirty faces, all the old gum their mothers held in their hands, all the noses and fannies that were wiped, and all the bloody knees that were "made well" with a kiss.

This is the day mothers are rewarded for washing all those sheets in the middle of the night, driving kids to school when they missed the bus and enduring all the football games in the rain.

It's appreciation day for making them finish something, not believing them when they said, "I hate you," and for sharing their good times and their bad times.

Their cards probably won't reflect it, but what they are trying to say is, "Thank you for showing up."

Men's obesity linked to marriage

Associated Press

Men preparing to tie the knot better hope that one of their wedding gifts is a membership in an exercise club. Better Homes and Gardens magazine reported that a study links obesity in men to marriage, due to several factors.

Scientists from Cornell University studied a random sample of 3,025 Americans age 20 to 64. Researcher Jeffrey Sobal, a nutritional sociologist, offered several explanations for the post-marriage gain. Men in marriages tend to eat better and lead a less active lifestyle. In addition, social pressures to stay slim decline after marriage. On the plus side, married men tend to be healthier, live longer and report less depression than single men.

Women can help their husbands by reforming their own habits. The Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle found that women who eat low-fat foods are more likely to inspire their husbands to do likewise.

'A Slice of Texas Toast'

Benefit spoofs just take small touch of magic

Texans get roasted in "A Slice of Texas Toast."

"This show is a spoof on Texas," said Betty Barrow, co-director along with her husband, Frank. "It's funny; its tongue in cheek. And, as Donna Trammell, the playwright, said, 'We are laughing at ourselves. We are laughing at the foibles of Texas, but with love and pride."

The production, a benefit for the Regional Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, will be staged at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa, 4300 W. Highway 80. For ticket information call 570-0008 or 1-800-332-2174.

Although this marks the seventh time the Barrows have produced "A Slice of Texas Toast" in 1993, they don't find the production tiresome.

"We never get bored with these shows because it's a different show in every town, and the biggest benefit to us are the people that we meet," Mrs. Barrow said. "They are the cream of the crop because they are people who are generous with their time and talent and who care about the quality of life in their community."

Family faces death in comical manner

Theater couple enjoys 'play' life

Eldest son Ray-Bud Turpin wants to strap his father's body to the top of the Impala for the ride to the cemetery. This unorthodox manner of delivering a body to its final resting place is an effort to help solve a dilemma faced by many families when a death strikes.

The cost of funerals can be staggering.

However, in this case, there is more to the story. When the Rev. Hooker comes to pay his respects to Bud Turpin's widow, Raynelle, he discovers she wants the eulogy to reflect her recently departed husband's mean and sur-

The "Dearly Departed" cast features several Midland Community Theatre veterans, including a couple who are married to each other in real life, but not in the play.

Janet and Corby Considine have been in productions at MCT since they moved here in the mid-1970s. Now, Considine finds himself as Rev. Hooker consoling his wife, who is the widow of Bud Turpin.

When Mrs. Considine joined a play readers-group this year, she had no idea that it would lead to her playing the widow in "Dearly Departed," opening Friday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"For our first outing, I thought I'd pick something fairly light," Mrs. Considine said, referring to the play she choose to read and review for the group. "I read it, and reviewed it for the group, and they liked it so much, they said I ought to try out for it."

When Mrs. Considine was asked by the play reading group what part she would try out for, she jokingly said, "I hadn't thought about it, but I would like to tryout for Ray-Bud."

She is not playing Ray-Bud, but his mother, Raynelle.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

The poet Alexander Pope must have been a whist player. The line: "A little learning is a dangerous thing," had to refer to the players at Bath, England, a resort famous for its high-stake gambling. It certainly applies to South, our declarer at three no trump, on this hand.

The bidding was unremarkable. With a full-bodied 18 points, South wasted no time in accepting partner's invitational raise to two no trump.

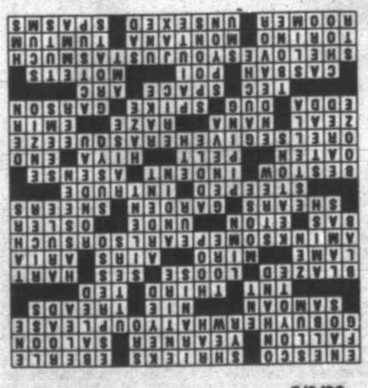

West's lead of the queen of hearts was the mark of a good player. It asked partner to unblock the jack or, if unable to do so, to give count. East's two of hearts showed an odd number of cards in the suit and South followed with the five. This maneuver, known as the Bath Coup, since that is where it originated, forced West to discontinue the suit.

West shifted to a diamond, East played the jack and declarer had a choice of losing options. A hold up of the ace would permit East to revert to hearts and, with the king of clubs in the West hand, the contract was doomed to defeat; winning the ace would set up the diamond suit for the defenders, with the same result.

The Bath Coup is the correct play on many occasions, but obviously this was not one of them. Declarer should have taken the ace of hearts, crossed to dummy with the jack of spades and run the queen of clubs. The best West can do is allow the queen to win, but when East shows out on the next round, declarer rises with the ace and forces out the king. Since dummy's spade ace is an entry, South collects at least four spades, four clubs and the two red aces. Quite a swing!

ENJOY: Couple likes working together

(From 1G)

"We are having a really good time with this play," Mrs. Considine said. "It is very funny. It is a farce. The characters are all exaggerated, but even though they are exaggerated, everyone cay say, 'Oh, I've got an aunt like Aunt Marguerite.'"

She is having fun despite having had her life threatened during tryouts.

"I was having to read a scene with Norval and no one was asked to come sit for that part," Mrs. Considine said. "I said, 'Corby, you come up here and sit and we'll do the part.'

"When we got through he said, 'If I get this part, I'm going to kill you.' And he got it," she said.

She laughed and laughed.

"But he, as the Reverand, gets to speak a lot of very flowery expanded speeches, a lot of hot air," she said, still trying to quit laughing. "He likes to speak. He likes words. He's a word person."

Considine, an attorney with Cotton Bledsoe Tighe & Dawson, had gone to tryouts because there were several characters he was interested in playing. Norval was not among them.

"He just sits there and drools," Considine said. "He's embellished this part a lot where it will be a show-stopper even though he does not speak any intelligible words," Mrs. Considine said.

Mrs. Considine, who enjoys being in musicals and light comedy, traces her interest in theater back to MCT theater school and Art Cole, MCT's founding director.

"I moved away and got married and came back and one of the first things I did was 'Oklahoma,' the second time they did it," Mrs. Considine said.

"Corby started after I did. Someone had to baby-sit, so he baby-sat. Now we don't have any kids at home, and we like to do plays together. It's really a lot of fun especially if you both can do it and enjoy doing it."

"I've always been interested in theater," Considine said. "I did stuff in high school, did stuff in grade school, but don't hold me accountable for anything I did either in high school or grade school. . ."

Considine's fascination with developing a character is part of what draws him to acting.

"I've always liked to develop a character," he said. "That's a challenge. And it does not really matter if that character is the main character or a little-bitty character, if you do it well, you have a certain sense of accomplishment."

He also enjoys being in productions with his wife.

"It's very nice both to share a common interest and to get to work together."

A marriage needs different interests as well, Considine said.

"We're lucky we have both," he said. "She paints and sings. No one wants me to do either of those — at least they don't want to have to see the end result. And I love to run marathons and things like that."

Both find the people they meet in community theater another drawing card.

"This play, like every other play I have been in at MCT, is fun to be in because of the cast and the director," Considine said.

The cast is comprised of "people just like you and they are working hard, trying to learn their lines, making the same mistakes you are making," he said. "Everybody takes a serious attitude toward their role, and you just meet people you enjoy at the theater."

NBC yanks 'Cheers' promos after shooting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC hastily yanked promotional spots Thursday for a "Cheers" episode about a postal carrier thought to have killed his mother — a plot eerily similar to a real-life slaying the same day.

Although the spots promoting Thursday's special hourlong episode of the NBC sitcom were pulled, the show aired as scheduled, said network spokeswoman Pat Schultz.

In the episode, postal worker Cliff Clavin's mother vanishes from the apartment they share and the "Cheers" gang begins to suspect he may have killed her.

Viewers realize early in the show, however, that Cliff (John Ratzenberger) has sent his mother (Frances Sternhagen) to a rest home, Schultz said.

"We pulled the promos that were specifically the Cliff-related promos to avoid any sort of misinterpretation on what the episode is about," she said.

The plot, condensed for 30- and 60-second spots, might have been misleading in light of Thursday's events, Schultz said.

SPOOF: Volunteers work to pull off play of around 100 area residents.

"We appreciate their generosity and we appreciate how busy they are and the fact that this is a volunteer thing they are doing. That's why our work is set so that we do everything in a maximum of four rehearsals."

The Barrows have been traveling Texas staging productions that are usually benefits for local organizations since the sesquencentennial year when they were in Mrs. Trammell's "A Slice of Texas Toast," written as a benefit for the Denton Community Theatre.

"Donna has written all of our shows," Mrs. Barrow said. "She's a very generous person with her talent, extremely creative.

"We now have six that we can take on the road, and she writes these as benefits for the Denton Community Theatre. We do them there. If they fly, then Frank and I take them on the road, sell them, help produce them, then direct them."

It was their daughter's desire to raise money for a small Episcopal private school in Tyler that led to the Barrows second career.

"She asked Donna if we could take the show to Tyler as a fund-raiser. Frank said, 'In that event, your mother and I will come stay with you for a couple of weeks and direct it.'

"And, that's exactly what we did. It was a tremendous success. That small parish organization raised over $20,000 that night. That was about the time the federal funding was cut for the arts. And, we realized there was a need for something like this in Texas."

The first show they sold was in Abilene.

"Believe it or not from that time forward it has been word of mouth. We have not had to get out and sell any more shows. For example, in Midland, Pam Davis, who got us here, was in our two shows in Odessa.

"Now, she's been in three shows we've done for Permian Playhouse. She got the idea it would make a good fund-raiser for the Permian Basin Alcohol and Drug Abuse council."

The Barrows have staged productions for audiences ranging in size from 1,000 to under 500, Mrs. Barrow said.

"Ultimately, when we get there, we work with the place they have found, the cast they have cast, the musicians they have," she said. "It's such a flexible show, it works in a town as little as Center, with less than 5,000 population, and cities like Corpus Christi, Austin and the Dallas metroplex."

In the past six years, the Barrows have done close to 60 shows counting the ones they have worked on in Denton, Mrs. Barrow said.

"Frank and I have had the time of our lives," Mrs. Barrow said. "We were retired. We had taken an early retirement and taken your customary trips to Europe and various places.

"We have been connected with 'show business' all of our lives, most of it amateur, although Frank was professional at one time. We have been involved in every phase of theater — costuming, directing, cleaning the bathroom on opening night.

"But, we feel equally as important as our theater experience is our experience working with volunteers. Frank was mayor of Denton. I am a charter member of several of the service organizations in Denton. We raised a big family, and you know how many thing you get involved in volunteer-wise."

Mrs. Barrow finds volunteers "to be the cream of the crop because they are people who are generous with their time and talent and who care about the quality of life in their community."

Staging a production requires more than one trip to the community, Mrs. Barrow said.

"We go to a town three months before a show, and we meet with all of the chairmen. It takes us three days and we show tapes and literally spoon-feed these people everything we can think of that will help them put on a production. Then we stay in close contact by phone and then two weeks before the show we come to town and stay."

The Barrows begin putting the production together by rehearsing each individual number one time, Mrs. Barrow said. They bring with them most of a simple set and the costumes that aren't hanging in the someone's closet.

"Otherwise people come up with their own costumes," Mrs. Barrow said.

The second week they are in town, they run through Act I the first night, Act II the second night, the whole show the third night, hold a dress rehearsal the fourth night, and then stage the performance the fifth night.

"It looks pretty hairy toward the end, but every show comes off top notch," Mrs. Barrow said. "And the cast itself is the most amazing. It all falls together with a little bit of magic on that last night."

ly nature.

"'Dearly Departed" is a family comedy, but it's not for families," said Rene Brister Chambers, MCT's educational theater director and director for this comedy.

The play begins when Daddy Bud dies. On stage.

"Everyone comes for the funeral, but everyone brings all of their problems and frustration with them," Ms. Chambers said. "And that's where the situation comes from."

Despite their differences and petty grievances, the characters are people audience members will like, Ms. Chambers said.

Hooker and Norval; Janet Considine as Raynelle; Les Reik as RayBud; Kim Young as Lucille, RayBud's wife; Robin Smith as Junior, the younger son; Samatha Talley-Anderson as Suzanne, Junior's wife; Elizabeth Cleveland as Delightful, Raynelle's youngest child who can barely stop eating long enough to speak; Jane Burgess as Bud's Bible-thumping sister, Marguerite and as Veda; Bill Schneider as Marguerite's ne'er-do-well son, Royce, who recently lost his job at the sewage plant; Laura Main as the family's socially superior cousin, Juanita; Gary Hall as Ray-Bud's employer, Clyde; and Denise Boehm-Walters as the Turpins' fertile cousin, Nadine.

Ceasar Chavez

Hispano Americano Lideres

Una vida entera luchando por los derechos humanos fundamentales de todo la gente tuvo su fin el 23 de Abril, cuando Cesar Chavez murió en San Luis, Arizona.

Esa vida comenzó hace 66 años atrás, cerca del pueblo nombrado Yuma, Arizona. El hijo de emigrantes trabajadores campesinos, Chavez viviria por primera vez la terrible experiencia de las condiciones de vida y trabajo de los campesinos, condiciones que él lucharia por mejorar por el resto de su vida. Pero el hombre que su mensaje alcanza a los oidos de todo el mundo, quien con su esfuerzo muchos de nuestros lideres nacionales, fueron motivados para poner mas empeño en los jovenes.

"Yo pienso, que las memorias que tengo de él, la que recuerdo en primer lugar en mi mente es su amor por los niños y su inquietud por los insecticidas dañándolos," recuerda Oralia Corrales, de Midland, que es una de las veteranas de la clase trabajadora campesina, y las campañas de Chavez que organizaban a los trabajadores. "El era un hombre muy humilde, pero muy humilde. Y muy, muy devoto."

Esa humildad y esa devoción a Dios, fue evidente en Chavez insistencia que sus seguidores contrajeron una protesta y resistencia no-violenta. Fue una lección que le fue enseñada por su señora madre, lección que fue reforzada por las palabras y acciones de los derechos civiles Americanos del lider Martin Luther King. Saul Alinsky, el legendario activista social Americano y organizador de los trabajadores, fue otra influencia poderosa en Chavez y novato de la Asociación Nacional de Trabajadores Campesinos y La Unión de Trabajadores Campesinos que seguio.

Pero el centro de todo esto fue propiamente este hombre, incansable, carismatico y totalmente devoto a su causa, no importando el costo. A la edad que muchos se retiran, el siguió viajando, siguió organizando y siguió luchando por las malas condiciones del trabajo y la vida que todavia persiste en los campos agricolas de América.

"Si yo pienso algo acerca de el - y puedo nomas verlo, yo puedo visualizarlo fatigado, cansado, con su piel quemada," recuerda Corrales. "Y su devoción, su total y completa devoción a la voluntad de Dios. Y nunca rendirse, nunca darse por vencido, qúe siempre hay una mejor manera de hacer las cosas."

Es la imagen, la idea, y la influencia que nosotros esperamos y las oraciones de América que nunca se marchitan.

Hispanic American Leaders

A lifetime of fighting for the basic human rights of all people, came to an end April 23rd, when Cesar Chavez died in San Luis, Arizona.

That life began 66 years ago, near the town of Yuma, Arizona. The son of migrant farm workers, Chavez would experience first-hand the terrible conditions in which the 'Campesinos' lived and worked, conditions he would fight to improve for the rest of his life. But the man whose message reached the ears of the world, whose consul was sought by many of our nation's leaders, was motivated by the plight of the very young.

"I think, of the memories I have of him, the one that stands foremost in my mind is his love for the little children, and his concern of pesticides hurting them," recalled Oralia Corrales, of Midland, who is herself a veteran of farm labor, and Chavez' campaigns to organize the workers. "He was a very humble man, a very humble man. And very, very devout."

That humility, and that devotion to God, was evident in Chavez' insistence that his followers engage in non-violent protest and resistance. It was a lesson he was first taught by his mother, a lesson that was reinforced by the words and deeds of American civil rights leader Martin Luther King. Saul Alinsky, the legendary American social activist and labor organizer, was another powerful influence on Chavez and the fledgling National Farm Workers Association, and the United Farm Workers that followed.

But at the center of all this was the man himself, tireless, charismatic, and totally devoted to his cause, no matter what the cost. At an age where many enter retirement, he was still travelling, still organizing, and still fighting the bad working and living conditions that lingered still in the agricultural fields of America.

"If I think of anything about him - and I can just see him, I can just visualize him - it's his worn, brown skin," recalled Corrales. "And his devotion, his total and complete devotion to the will of God. And never giving up, never giving up, that there had to be a better way."

It is an image, an idea, and an influence that we must hope and pray never fades from America.

The Special Bond Between a Child and a Foster Mom

By Jeffrey McDonald

It is a day we honor what is, for many of us, our very first relationship, and the first expression of love we ever experience.

Historians believe the first observance of Mother's Day took place in Grafton, West Virginia, in the year 1908. Since that time, it has spread across the country, and to Canada, Europe, and Australia. It has also grown to become a multi-million dollar industry, as we honor our mothers with cards, flowers, and any of a wide variety of gifts.

But the greatest gift, as any mother would tell you, is the gift of love. And it is the love between mother and child that most defines the relationship, no matter what form that relationship may take. The bond between foster mother and foster child is no different.

"They provide me with the love," explained Juanita Hernandez of Midland, who, with her husband Francisco, has provided a home for six foster children over the years. "Because I had ten kids. When they were all gone, I didn't have anything, you know. And I wanted somebody to love, and to run after, and to help. And I got it with my foster child!"

But love, though it may be the most important part of the relationship between foster parent and foster child, is not the only part, according to Eva Carrasco of Odessa, who, with her husband Jesse, has provided a home for more than twenty foster children.

"That's right. We're only here temporarily, until whatever problem was at home, whatever the need was, has been taken care of, and then they're sent back," said Carrasco. "But I feel good, being there for them when they need another home. I feel real good about that! And for me, it's a blessing."

"While they're with us, I want them to feel secure and loved". They're protected, they're taken care of, they're fed, they're put to bed at a certain time, and you make sure they have enough rest."

It was a responsibility - and a joy - that both couples had become familiar with after years of raising their own children.

"Well, I heard about it [the Foster Care Program] back in New Mexico, but at that time, I had all my kids there, at home," recalled Hernandez. "So when we moved over here, some of our kids stayed over there. I was lonely, and my husband was lonely, and we didn't have any kids running around!"

"I asked him, would he let me become a foster mother? And he said, 'Well, check it out.'"

Inquiries about the Foster Care Program are directed to the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, which is also responsible for training the prospective foster parents, and ensuring that they will provide a good home for the foster child.

"It isn't that difficult, and a lot of people assume that it's difficult," said Carrasco. "It's just a step-by-step method, where you fill out an application, and a lady comes to your home and visits with you - it's called a 'home study'. She comes to your home and you ask her all the questions you want. They answer every single question."

"You're not obligated. You get all this information, and then, if you're still interested, then you go into this training."

During training, which takes about thirty hours, the references provided by prospective foster parents are checked, as well as any criminal records. The health of all who share the home - including pets - is checked as well. There is also a fire and health inspection of the home. At the end of all this comes the certification and the licensing necessary to be a foster parent in the state of Texas.

"It was nothing out-of-the-way, you know," said Hernandez. "It was something that was very simple, really."

"The hardest thing is the waiting, after you're certified, for the first child to come into your home," added Carrasco.

Both women are quick to point out the ease of the application procedure, because they fear that many adults, who might make wonderful foster parents, are frightened away by what they mistakenly believe is a long and complicated process of application and approval. And they believe there are other, commonly held misconceptions.

"You know, I talked to a few people. They want me to recommend them, but they say 'How much do they pay?' If you're going to be in there, it's not going to be for the money," said Hernandez, referring to the stipend that foster parents receive for the care of the children. "We never thought about getting paid, when we came

Un Lazo Escpicial Entre un Niño y Una Madre Adoptiva

Por Jeffrey McDonald

NuevaVista quiere hacer una aclaración relacionada con esta historia. La palabra "Foster" segun en nuestro diccionario en el idioma castellano, significa adopción, por consiguiente en esta historia cuando por ejemplo hablamos de "Foster Mother" hicimos la traducción como "Madre Adoptiva" sin embargo sabemos que "Foster Mother" es una tutora legal temporal.

Es un día que honramos por lo que es, para muchos de nosotros, nuestra primera relación y nuestra primera expresión de amor que jamás hayamos experimentado.

Historiadores creen la primera celebración del Día de las Madres tuvo lugar en Grafton, al Oeste de Virginia, en el año de 1908. Desde esa fecha, se a propagado a través de todo el país y por Canadá, Europa, y Australia. También a crecido de tal manera que es una industria multi-millonaria, como nosotros honramos a nuestras madres con tarjetas, flores y una extensa variedad de regalos.

Pero el regalo mas importante, como cualquier madre te lo dice, es el regalo del amor. Y es el amor entre la madre y el hijo que mas define esta relación, no importando que forma de relación sea. El lazo entre una madre adoptiva y un hijo adoptivo no hace ninguna diferencia .

"Ellos me proveyeron con su amor," explica Juanita Hernandez de Midland, quien, con su esposo Fransisco, han proveido casa a seis hijos. "Porque yo tengo diez hijos. Cuando ellos se fueron, yo me quede sin nada, usted sabe. Y yo quería a alguien para amar, y para correr tras de el, y para ayudarlo. Y lo obtuve con mis hijos adoptivos!"

Pero el amor, sin embargo es la parte mas importante de una relación entre los padres e hijos adoptivos, pero no es la única parte, de acuerdo con Eva Carrasco de Odessa, quien, con su marido Jesse han proveido casa por mas de veinte años a hijos adoptivos. "Esta bien. Estamos solamente aquí temporalmente, hasta que cualesquier problema en el alberque casa cualquier necesidad sea, sea resuelta de cualquier modo, y luego sean regresados," dice Carrasco. "Pero me siento bien, estando ahí por ellos cuando ellos necesiten otra casa. Me siento realmente bien por eso! Y para mi, es una bendición."

"Cuando están con nosotros, quiero que ellos se sientan amados y seguros. Ellos están protegidos, están bien cuidados, bien alimentados, son puestos en sus camas a cierta hora y te aseguras que descansen lo suficiente."

Es una responsabilidad - y alegría - que ambas parejas se hicieran muy familiar con después de años de haber criado a sus propios hijos.

"Bueno, he oído acerca de esto (El Programa del Cuidado de Adopción) en Nuevo México, pero en ese tiempo, yo tenia a todos mis niños aquí, en casa," recuerda Hernandez. "Asi que, cuando nos mudamos hacia acá, algunos de nuestros hijos se quedaron allá. Yo estaba sola y mi esposo estaba solo y no teníamos a ningún muchacho corriendo alrededor de nosotros!"

"Yo le pregunte a él me dejarías ser una madre adoptiva? Y el me respondió, 'Bueno, compruebalo.'"

Preguntas acerca del Programa del Cuidado de Adopción es directamente con el Departamento Protector de Tejas y Servicios Regulatorios, quien es también responsable por el entrenamiento de los padres prospectos adoptivos y asegurando de que ellos proveerán de una buena casa a los hijos adoptivos.

"No es una gran dificultad, mucha gente asume que es de mucha dificultad adoptar," dice Carrasco. "Es solamente un método de paso por paso, donde usted llena una aplicación y una dama llega a su casa a visitarlo, a esto se le llama estudio domiciliario. Ella llega a su casa y usted la hace todas las preguntas que desee. Ella responde a cada una de sus preguntas."

"Usted no esta obligado. Usted obtiene toda la información, y luego, si usted sigue interesado, usted tiene que ir a este entrenamiento."

Durante el entrenamiento, el cual dura alrededor de treinta horas, las referencias proveidas por los padres adoptivos son verificadas, como también los archivos criminales. La salud de todos los que comparten la casa incluyendo las mascotas son inspeccionadas también. También se hace una inspección de incendio y salud del domicilio. Al final de todo esto viene la certificación y la licencia necesaria para ser padre adoptivo en el estado de Tejas

"No es nada fuera de lo común, sabes," dice Hernandez. "Es algo que es muy sencillo, en u

Advice From A Desert Sage

Who Thought The Cactus and Porcupine Were Cousins

By Clyde James Aragón

To many people, the name Pablo Antonio Campanas does not ring a bell, and it shouldn't. His eccentric and somewhat recondite ways kept him in the limelight of obscurity until only recently. And even then, he would have remained forever trapped on the back shelf of history were it not for a Jalisco, Mexico, librarian who became curious over a hand-written manuscript on its way to the paper recycler.

It was this wink of fate that brought to light El Dichonario Tapatío, as it has been dubbed. Campanas was too modest to pick a title, only hinting in its preface that it should be called "The Book of Relevant Dichos," since, if you followed its sage advice, your life would improve dramatically.

Before we wade into the dichos, or sayings, a glimpse at the man and his life would be in order.

The birthplace of Pablo Antonio Campanas remains clouded in mystery. Even he did not know, so we will discard that inquiry.

When he became old enough, he set out on his travels through what is now the U.S. Southwest, looking, as he explained in the book's preface, for the secret of life — or at least directions to where he could find it. This led him to undertake various jobs such as cowboy, prospector, dental hygienist, snake chaser and streetlight cleaner.

Campanas had a scientific streak, as one might find in any man who can be called a great thinker. He was enthralled by biology and taxonomy and spent much time in the Sonoran Desert trying to show that the porcupine and the cactus are related. His research led him to prove that the roadrunner's speed is actually an optical illusion, that the bird merely walks instead of runs.

His major contribution to society was the result of a culinary experiment he performed in 1834 which proved conclusively that if you mix red chili and green chili together, you do not get yellow chili. This settled a dispute that had raged over the years in eateries throughout the New World. With this matter resolved, cooks of the day were able to turn their attention to more pressings concerns such as the development of salsa and the perfection of the chicken fajita.

Campanas, wealth of knowledge, which he stored much like a giant hydroelectric dam holds water, burst forth finally, and in the spring of 1839, shortly before his death, he poured his considerable experience and wisdom into the book of dichos.

Several of these have taken their place honorably in the lexicon of people everywhere. Who has not heard the following uttered in a veterinarian's office?

Perro que ladra no muere — A barking dog is not dead yet.

And this, after a meal at an interstate truck-stop:

Panza llena, camión se encuentra — A full stomach always encounters a big rig.

Pablo Antonio Campanas' dichos and his life are summed up in the weather-stained, sand-encrusted tribute chiseled on his tombstone: Cada charro en su columpio — Every cowboy on his swing. Indeed.

Consejos Sabios de Quien Pensó Que el Cacto y El Puerco-Espín Eran Primos

Por Clyde James Aragón

Para muchas personas, el nombre de Pablo Antonio Campanas no hace sonar a ninguna campana, ni debería hacerlo. Sus modos excéntricos y algo recónditos lo mantuvieron en el foco de la obscuridad hasta hace poco. Y aún entonces, él habría permanecido atrapado para siempre en la repisa trasera de la historia, de no ser por un bibliotecario de Jalisco, México, que se sintió picado de curiosidad por un manuscrito que iba de camino hacia la planta re-elaboradora de papel.

Fue esta vuelta de la suerte lo que sacó a relucir "El Dichonario Tapatío," como se le ha llamado. Campanas era demasiado modesto como para escoger un titulo, sólo esbozando en su prefacio que debería llamarse "El Libro de los Dichos Importantes," debido a que, si uno seguía su consejo experimentado, la vida de uno mejoraría dramáticamente.

Antes de adentrarnos en los "dichos," seria necesario echar un vistazo al hombre y a su vida.

El lugar de nacimiento de Pablo Antonio Campanas permanece oculto en el misterio. Aún el mismo no lo supo, de modo que desecharemos ese asunto.

Cuando llegó a tener la edad suficiente, se dedicó a viajar por lo que es ahora el Suroeste de los Estados Unidos, buscando, como lo explicó en el prefacio, el secreto de la vida — o por lo menos indicaciones para encontrarlo. Esto le llevó a emprender diversos trabajos, tales como los de vaquero, buscador de minerales, higiénico dental, cazador de serpientes y limpiador de faroles del alumbrado público.

Campanas tenia una veta científica, como la que podría encontrarse en cualquier hombre al que pudiera calificarse de un gran pensador. Le fascinaban la biología y la taxonomía y pasaba mucho tiempo en el Desierto de Sonora tratando de demostrar, con bastante futilidad, que el puerco-espín y el cacto estaban relacionados. Su investigación en la zona caliente le llevó a probar que la velocidad del "corre-caminos" es realmente una ilusión óptica y que el pájaro solamente camina en vez de correr.

Su aporte más importante a la sociedad fué el resultado de un experimento culinario que realizó en 1834, el cual probó concluyentemente que si se mezclan el chile rojo y el verde, no se obtiene un chile amarillo. Esto resolvió una disputa que había rugido durante años en los comedores de todo el Nuevo Mundo.

Con este asunto resuelto, los cocineros de la época pudieron volver su atención a preocupaciones más apremiantes, tales como el desarrollo de la salsa y el perfeccionamiento de la fajita de pollo.

La riqueza del conocimiento de Campanas, que el guardaba en gran medida como una enorme represa hidro-eléctrica retiene al agua, explotó por fin y en la primavera de 1834, poco antes de su muerte, el vertió su experiencia y sabiduría considerables en un

E.C.I.S.D.'s First Hispanic Board Member

By Jeffrey McDonald

'Movers-and-Shakers' - it's a phrase you hear occasionally when discussing people and, more importantly, their impact upon the community. People who effect change, through their own example and through their influence over others.

In the area of education, Vickie Gomez would become a 'mover-and-shaker'. As the first Hispanic elected to the Board of the Ector County Independent School District, Gomez drew inspiration from her family, support and political experience from the community, and her own commitment to quality education for all. She would need all of that - and more - to succeed in the years that lay ahead.

"As far as boards or anything, I always got the feeling that, in order for a member of an ethnic minority group to be on a board, you had to be 'qualified'. And you had to have credentials like nobody else's business," recalled Gomez, a graduate of UT-Austin, and now Director of Admissions at UTPB in Odessa. "And I don't mean to be offensive, but you might be a housewife, you know, an Anglo housewife with no education. But she was white, you know, and I always had a problem with that."

"Having been a member of the GI Forum - our motto was 'Education is our freedom, and freedom should be everybody's business' - I'd always placed a great importance on education. I was concerned about the quality of education in south Odessa. It wasn't only the perception, but the reality of things that we weren't getting the same, quality education at Ector High School, as we were in north Odessa."

In 1974, Gomez first ran for a position on the school board. Her bid was unsuccessful, but the knowledge gained from that experience contributed to a successful bid in 1976. But getting elected to the school board was only the first of many challenges that Gomez would face in her twelve-year tenure.

"To begin with, there had never been a minority member elected to the Board," explained Gomez. "I came, needless to say, with a different agenda, from a different perspective. I was a 'persona non grata' when it came to the administration and, to be very honest with you, when it came to my fellow school board members."

But with this realization came the determination to keep doing what was necessary to ensure balanced, quality education for all students.

"Three months after I was elected to the Board, I went in to visit with the young man that was serving as President of the Board. And I explained to him my concerns, that something wasn't jelling right," said Gomez. "And he said, 'In the three months that you have been on the Board, you have asked more questions than all of us have asked in the six years that we have been serving!"

"Well, that didn't bother me because, to me, that wasn't saying very much for them. And I told him, ' I'm asking questions because I want answers! If I'm going to serve on the Board, I want to keep informed. And if you have a problem with that, then that's your problem. It is not my problem.' I did not intend on being any different."

But even longer than the list of challenges that confronted Gomez during her service on the School Board, were the list of her accomplishments, including her two years as President of the Board. Overall she would effect many changes in many different areas of the education process, and the way the Board managed that process.

On procedure at Board meetings: "Before I got on the Board, the public could not come before the Board, and address an issue, unless they had written a letter weeks ahead of time, and all this garbage. And I was a proponent of letting people come to the meeting, and at that time they could address any item on the agenda, as long as they let us know before the meeting began."

On recognition for all schools: "When I was first elected to the Board, you would walk into the Administration Building, and there was a big black panther, and there was a big red horse. But there was no eagle. And we did have three high schools. So after I got there, we had all three high schools proudly displayed."

On accessibility of the Board: "If we had hearings, and there was a Hispanic person who was unable to speak English, I would tell them to go ahead and speak Spanish, that I understood what they were saying. And then I would interpret to the Board. I realize that this was probably not wise, that I should have made the administration have someone there to interpret. But just the fact that I was able to do that, I thought, was important."

Gomez is quick to point out that many of the changes she effected benefitted the entire community, by making Board meetings more open to the general public, for example, and by insuring that copies of the minutes from those meetings were available at the library for everyone to examine.

Gomez is proud of the fact that her service opened the doors for others to follow, particularly single women, members of the minority community, and others to whom those doors had been previously closed. And she hopes that others will continue to follow, to remain active in the community of which they are very much a part, to take their turns at being 'movers and shakers'.

"I want them to become involved and - while I wish they would be Democrats! - I don't care what their political affiliation is," said Gomez. "As long as they're in it because they really and truly believe that that's the area they want to go into, and they feel comfortable with the party's ideology. And that they feel comfortable that whatever they are exposing, is something that's going to benefit us."

"But I'm proud that I had the opportunity to serve on the Board. I make no apologies for any mistakes I might have made! I think it was a great experience. It was very positive. Even with the negative, it was one of the most positive experiences that I've ever had!"

"I am saddened when I see how badly many of our Hispanic students are doing in school. They have so many more opportunities than we ever dreamed of having. It is my hope that parents will began to talk to their children about what the future holds for them WHEN they graduate from college, 'rather than promising them 'a new car IF they graduate from high school!" Vickie Gomez, Director of Admissions at UTPB in Odessa.

La Primera Hispana en el Consejo del E.C.I.S.D. de Odessa

Por Jeffrey McDonald

'Movers-and-Shakers' es una frase que usted escucha ocasionalmente cuando gente discute, y mas importante, el impacto sobre la comunidad. Gente que cambia, sobre su propio ejemplo y a través de su influencia sobre otros.

En el área de la educación, Vickie Gomez se hará 'mover-and-shaker'. Como la primera Hispana elegida al consejo del Distrito de Escuelas Independientes del Condado Ector, Gomez se inspiro en su familia, apoyo y experiencia política de la comunidad, su propio compromiso es calidad educacional para todos. Ella necesitara de todo esto – y mas – para lograr sus propósitos en los años venideros.

"Tan lejos como el consejo, siempre tengo el presentimiento, que en el orden de que un representante de un grupo minoritario étnico pertenezca al consejo, tiene que 'calificar'. Y tiene que tener credenciales como ningún otro negocio," recuerda Gomez, graduada de la Universidad de Austin y ahora Directora de Admisiones de UTPB en Odessa. "Y no quiero ser ofensiva, pero usted puede ser un ama de casa, usted sabe, una Anglo ama de casa sin educación. Pero ella es blanca, usted sabe, y yo siempre tengo un problema con eso."

"Siendo un representante del foro GI – nuestro lema es 'Educación es nuestra libertad y libertad será el asunto de todo el mundo' – siempre he puesto a la educación en un lugar de importancia muy alto. Tengo la inquietud de la calidad de educación en el Sur de Odessa. No es solamente la percepción, pero la realidad de las cosas es que no estamos obteniendo la misma calidad de educación en la escuela Secundaria Ector, como obtuvimos en el Norte de Odessa "

En 1974, fue la primera vez que Gomez se encaminaba para la posición del consejo escolar. Su proposición fue sin éxito pero los conocimientos obtenidos de esa experiencia contribuyeron para el éxito en 1976. Pero siendo electa para el consejo de la escuela fue la primera de los muchos desafíos que Gomez a encarado en sus doce años de ocupación.

"Para empezar, nunca a habido un miembro electo por el consejo de la clase minoritaria," explica Gomez. "Yo vine, con una agenda diferente, con una perspectiva diferente. Yo era una 'persona non grata' cuando vine a la administración y para ser bien honesta con usted, cuando vine con mis compañeros miembros del consejo escolar."

Pero con esta realización me hice la determinación de hacer lo que fuera necesario para garantizar la balanza, calidad para la educación de todos los estudiantes.

"Tres meses después de que fui electa para el consejo, fui a visitar a un hombre joven que fungia como Presidente del Consejo. Y le explique mi inquietud, que algo no sonaba bien," dijo Gomez. "Y el me dijo, en los tres meses que has estado en el Consejo, tu has hecho mas preguntas que todos nosotros hemos preguntado en los seis años que hemos servido!"

"Bueno, esto a mi no me incomodo, porque para mi, con eso no me decía mucho. Y le dije, 'Hago preguntas porque quiero contestaciones! Si voy a servir al Consejo, necesito estar informada. Y si tienen algún problema con eso, eso será su problema. No mi problema.' No intento ser diferente."

Peró aun mucho mas larga la lista de desafíos que confronto Gomez durante su servicio en el Consejo de la Escuela, fue la lista de realización incluyendo sus dos años como Presidenta del Consejo. Sobre todo ella dará un efecto en muchos cambios en diferente áreas del proceso de educación y del modo que se maneja el proceso.

En procedimiento de la reunión de Consejo: "Antes de estar en el Consejo, el publico no podía venir antes del Consejo y dar dirección a un numero, a menos que hayan escrito una carta semanas adelante de tiempo y toda esa basura. Yo siempre permití a la gente atender las reuniones, y en ese tiempo pudieran expresar sus opiniones de cualquier asunto en el orden del día, con tal que nos avisaran antes que la reunión comenzará."

En reconocimiento de todas las escuelas: "Cuando fui electa por primera vez al Consejo, usted caminaba en el edificio de Administración y hay estaba una pantera negra grande y un caballo rojo grande. Pero no estaba el águila. Y teníamos tres Escuelas Secundarias. Entonces después que llegue ahí, teníamos a las tres Escuelas Secundarias orgullosamente desplegadas."

En accesibilidad del Consejo: " Si teníamos audiencia y estaba una persona Hispana que no sabia el idioma Ingles, les decía que continuara adelante hablando Español, que yo entendía lo que ellos estuvieran diciendo. Luego yo traduciría al Consejo. Yo realizo que esto no estaba muy sensato, que debería ver hecho la administración que tuvieran alguien que podría traducir. Pero solamente el

La Celebre Música de Conjunto de Tejas le Debe una Deuda a Los Alemanes y Los Mexicanos

Por Enrique J. Gonzales

Cualquiera que haya conducido alguna vez un auto convertible en un día soleado de primavera a través de la región montañosa de Tejas, en las afueras de Austin y San Antonio, puede atestiguar sobre la belleza de la región. En las colinas onduladas crecen los miembros más irregulares de la familia arbórea — el mezquite, el junípero común (conocido también por cedro), las encinas, los robles y otros — que alfombran al paisaje con una cubierta de vegetación verde.

Aquí, en esta tierra de ranchos, cientos de inmigrantes alemanes vinieron y se asentaron. Los nombres de los pueblos muestran las raíces que ellos echaron. Fredericksburg, New Braunfels y Schertz, para nombrar a unos pocos. Los alemanes trajeron igualmente algo más. El acordeón de botones.

Un acordeón, según el diccionario de Webster, es un instrumento de viento portátil que tiene un fuelle grande para forzar al aire a través de lengüetas pequeñas de metal. Para los tejanos del estado mexicano de Tejas, era algo nuevo.

Los inmigrantes alemanes introdujeron al acordeón a Tejas y Monterrey, Nuevo León — al mismo tiempo aproximadamente, por casualidad, a principios del siglo XIX, de acuerdo con Juan Tejeda, director de música "Xicana" (Chicana) en el Centro Guadalupe de Artes Culturales, de San Antonio.

Los tejanos tomaron al instrumento de los alemanes, pero eso no es todo.

La música empezó a partir de los estilos europeos: El vals, la polca, el chotis, la redova (danza eslava) y la mazurca.

Sin embargo, aquellos mismos tejanos tomaron los estilos y los convirtieron en algo singularmente mexicano. Al agregar el bajo sexto, la guitarra de 12 cuerdas distintamente mexicana, el grupo del acordeón de botones se convirtió en un conjunto.

Los músicos añadían a veces un tambor del rancho, que es un tambor sencillo. "Fué suscitado aquí en Tejas y creado por los xicanos," explica Tejeda. "No se le encuentra en ninguna otra cultura latina."

En 1848, Tejas se convirtió en estado y el estilo llegó a ser parte de la experiencia estadounidense. "Como xicanos, fuimos criados por sensibilidades musicales diferentes," dice Tejeda. "Hicimos algo completamente distinto. Fué música estadounidense original." Vienen a la mente algunos notables del conjunto, tales como Narciso Martínez, del Valle del Río Grande, y Santiago Jiménez, de San Antonio.

A medida que transcurrían los años, la música evolucionó. Los juegos mayores de tambores, los bajos verticales y los bajos eléctricos se convirtieron en partes de los grupos.

En la época de las Grandes Bandas de los decenios de 1930 y 1940, la música tejana dió otra vuelta — con un estilo más parecido al del jazz. Las bandas que abarcaban instrumentos de metal crearon un estilo conocido por "Orquesta Tejana." "Era atractivo para los jóvenes que se mudaban para las ciudades. Era una avenida distinta," dice Tejeda. "Era más urbana que rural."

La música, conocida por conjunto, música chicana, onda chicana, música tejana y otros nombres, empezó a tomar tantas influencias como nombres. Tejeda alega que, en su calidad de personas mestizas que han mezclado a las culturas española e indígena, los mexicanos saben el modo de adoptar a las influencias exteriores como parte de nuestra cultura. La música campesina, los "blues," el "rock & roll" y hasta el "rap" han dejado huellas en su música.

Pero en algún lugar del camino, la música perdió al acordeón. Durante un espacio de tiempo, muchas bandas pusieron a un sintetizador en lugar de los instrumentos de metal y del acordeón de botones. Algunas hacen esto aún.

Tejeda ve ahora un regreso a las raíces del conjunto, con grupos tales como el de Roberto Pullido, que reintegran al acordeón a la música tejana. Otros se les han unido también — La Mafia, La Sombra, Mazz, David Lee Garza y Emilio Navaira. Algunas bandas nunca renunciaron al acordeón. El estilo ha llegado hasta a ganar alguna atención en escala nacional, gracias a las bandas tales como Los Lobos y los Texas Tornados.

"Por último nos hemos reunido como un pueblo," dice Tejeda. "Hemos llegado a un acuerdo con nuestras raíces."

Texas' Celebrated 'Conjunto' Music Owes Debt To Germans, Mexicans

By Enrique J. Gonzales

Anyone who has ever driven a convertible on a sunny spring day through the Texas hill country outside Austin and San Antonio can testify to the region's beauty. On the rolling hills grow the scraggliest members of the tree family — mesquite, mountain juniper (aka cedar), post oaks, live oaks and others - blanketing the landscape with a scrubby green cover.

Here on these ranchlands, hundreds of German immigrants came and settled. The names of towns show the roots they put down. Fredericksburg, New Braunfels and Schertz, to name a few. The Germans brought something else, too. The button accordion. An accordion, according to Webster's, is a portable wind instrument having a large bellows for forcing air through small metal reeds. To the tejanos in the early Mexican state of Texas, it was something new.

German immigrants introduced the accordion to Texas and Monterrey, Nuevo León at about the same time, by chance, in the early 1800s, according to Juan Tejeda, director of Xicano (Chicano) music at the Guadalupe Cultural Arts Center in San Antonio.

The Tejanos took the Germans' instrument, but that's not all. They embraced the European dance styles as well: the waltz, the polka, the schottische, the redowa and mazurka. They took them and turned them into something uniquely Mexican. Adding the bajo sexto, the distinctly Mexican 12-string guitar, the ensemble with the button accordion became a conjunto. At times, the musicians added a tambor del rancho, a simple drum.

"It was raised here in Texas and created by Xicanos," Tejeda explains. "You don't find it in any other Latino culture." In 1848, Texas became a state and the style became part of the norteamericano experience. "As xicanos, we were raised by different musical sensibilities," Tejeda says. "We did something completely different. It was original 'American' music."

Conjunto greats such as Narciso Martínez from the Río Grande Valley and Santiago Jiménez of Texas come to mind.

As the years passed, the music evolved. Larger drum sets, stand-up basses and electric basses became part of the ensembles.

In the Big Band era of the 1930s and '40s, tejano music took another twist — with a jazzier style. Bands with horns created a style known as Orquesta Tejana.

"It was appealing to youth moving into the cities. It was a different avenue," Tejeda describes, "more urban than rural." The music, known as "conjunto," "música chicana," "onda chicana," "música tejana" and other things, began to take as many influences as names. Tejeda claims that, as mestizo people who have blended Spanish and indigenous cultures, Mexicans know how to take on outside influences as part of their culture. Country, blues, rock 'n' roll and even rap have made a mark on their music. But somewhere along the way, the music lost the accordion. For a while, many bands substituted a synthesizer

Non-Profit Organization Offers Programs for Alcohol and Drug Abuse

By Amarante Cordova.

The threat posed by the abuse of alcohol and drugs, is perhaps best illustrated by the wide variety of services and programs offered by the Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse. Programs designed not only to help the abuser, but those close to the abuser.

"Right. The family, the friends. It doesn't affect just the alcoholic, or the drug abuser. It affects everybody," said Stephanie Ramirez, Speakers Bureau Coordinator for the Council. "It affects co-workers, it affects family, friends, the immediate family. It just affects everyone around the circle."

As coordinator of the Speakers Bureau, it is Ramirez who directs the efforts to get the Council's message out to the public. This includes information about the actual role of the Council and its programs.

"We do not do the treatment. We refer the individuals to different places in the Permian Basin," explained Ramirez. "And our services are free here, at the Council. We try to refer the individuals to places that are on a sliding scale, if not free."

"It's a non-profit organization, and it's governed by a board of directors. The office runs on volunteers and staff, and we have VISTA (Volunteers In Service To America) volunteers working in the various offices."

The variety of available programs and services, is indicative of the variety of ways alcohol and drug abuse affects our lives, and our society.

Programs such as 'Just Say No' and 'D-FY-IT' teach young people the value of staying off drugs, and reinforce those lessons with positive peer pressure and activities.

"Another thing that we've just started-up is the 'MIP' program. And what that entails is, when a minor has received an MIP (Minor In Possession), they can go to these classes and have it taken off their record," said Ramirez. "A lot of these kids don't realize that this remains on their record for the rest of their lives. So this gives them a second chance." Adult offenders can also find help through programs offered by the Council.

"We have a DWI [Driving While Intoxicated] class that's for the probationers," said Ramirez. "Persons placed on probation are required to attend eight hours of alcohol- or drug-abuse training. The main focus of this training is the way it affects, not only the person, but their family and their friends."

There are other areas where the Council is fighting drug abuse, and it's consequences.

"We teach at the Battered Women's Shelter of Midland, Midland County Jail, Midland Community Rehab Center, MHMR both in Odessa and Midland, Turning Point, and the Restitution House," said Ramirez. "And we provide education to parents in recovery. Realizing that the children are at risk, we counsel them strongly, suggesting Alateen, Alanon. And those especially high-risk youth are referred to 'Faces', programs of the Permian Basin MHMR."

In addition to these - and many other - programs, the Council has a video lending library, publications and pamphlets in English and in Spanish, and Ramirez' own area, a group of speakers that can make presentation - again, in English and in Spanish - to a wide variety of civic organizations and clubs.

What the Council does not have, is enough volunteers to handle all the work that needs to be done.

"Speaking for myself, I try to recruit people for the Speakers Bureau, for my program," said Ramirez. "And what I'm looking for, is people in the community who are not embarrassed or afraid to go speak in front of a large group of people, and who feel comfortable talking about the different topics."

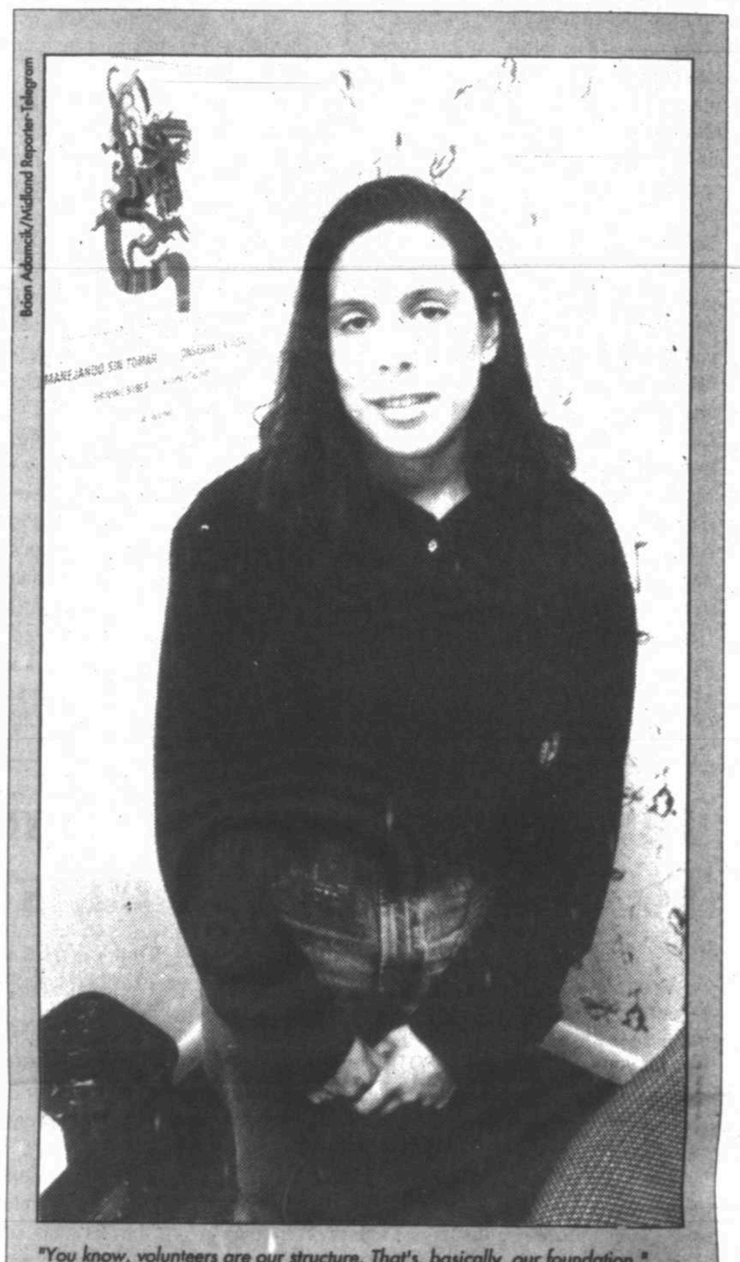

"Another thing is, we're always looking for volunteers for the 'Just Say No' programs. The 'Just Say No' programs aren't only just the schools. We have started to have 'Just Say No' clubs in the housing authorities in Big Spring, Midland, and Odessa. And we're always looking for team leaders. Not necessarily a parent - we'd love to have a parent! - but just somebody who likes working with kids, and would enjoy something like this." Ramirez guarantees that they have a task to match your special skills, no matter what those special skills may be.

"We also have a program called 'Jesse the Clown', and it takes two people, a narrator and someone to dress-up like a clown! And the clown will act out a little skit, with volunteers from the audience," said Ramirez. "We have all the stuff you need to be decorated as a clown, the makeup, the suit, and everything."

"And so, all you have to do is call. And I'm sure we'll find something!" The telephone number to call, toll-free, is 1-800-332-2175. The number to call for the 'Just Say No' program, is 1-800-332-2174.

"You know, volunteers are our structure. That's, basically, our foundation. And we'd be glad to have them," said Ramirez. "Anytime someone says 'Volunteer', I'm all for it!"

Organización para Programas de Alcohol y Drug Abuse

Por Amarante Cordova

La actitud que amenaza por el abuso del alcohol y drogas, es tal vez mejor ilustración por la amplia variedad de servicios y programas ofrecidos por Permian Basin concilio regional de abuso de alcohol y drogas. Estos programas no están solamente designados para ayudar a los que abusan, sino para aquellas personas cercanas a estos.

"Correcto. La familia, los amigos. No solamente afecta a los alcohólicos, o a los drogadictos. Afecta a todos," dijo Stefanie Ramirez, coordinadora por el Concilio de Speakers Bureau. "Afecta a compañeros de trabajo, afecta a la familia, amigos, a la familia inmediata. Punto, afecta a todo el mundo que lo rodea."

Como coordinadora del Speakers Bureau, es Ramirez quien dirige todos los esfuerzos para dar a conocer por medio del Concilio todos los mensajes al publico. Esto incluye información acerca del papel actual que esta tomando el Concilio y sus programas.

"Nosotros no damos el tratamiento. Nosotros referimos a los interesados a diferentes sitios en el Permian Basin," explica Ramirez. "Y nuestros servicios son gratuitos, en el Concilio. Tratamos de referir a los interesados a lugares móviles y gratuitos.

"Es una organización gratuitas y esta gobernada por un miembro de directores. La oficina trabaja con personal y voluntarios y nosotros tenemos VISTA (Servicio de voluntarios para América) trabajadores voluntarios en todas las oficinas."

La variedad de programas disponibles y servicios es indicativo de la variedad de maneras que el abusador de alcohol y drogas afecta a nuestras vidas y nuestra sociedad.

Programas como "Diga no a las drogas" enseña a la juventud valuarse alejándose de las drogas y reforzandose mirando fijamente en lecciones y actividades positivas.

"Otra cosa que nosotros hemos comenzado es el programa "MIP". Lo que envuelve es, cuando un menor a recibido un MIP (menor en posesión), ellos pueden ir a estas clases y que se les sean borrados de sus registros," Ramirez dice. "Muchos de estos muchachos no se dan cuenta que estos registros se quedan por el resto de su vidas. Entonces estos les da una segunda oportunidad."

Los adultos ofensores también pueden encontrar ayuda por medio de estos programas ofrecidos por el Concilio.

"Nosotros tenemos las clases del DWI (manejando intoxicado) estos son para los que están en libertad condicional," dice Ramirez. "Personas que están a prueba se les requiere que atiendan ocho horas de entrenamiento del programa para alcohólicos y drogadictos. El enfoque principal de este entrenamiento es de la manera que los afecta, no solamente a la persona, sino a los familiares y sus amistades."

Hay otras áreas donde el concilio esta lunchando contra la drogadicción y sus consecuencias.

"Nosotros enseñamos en el Albergue de Mujeres Golpeadas de Midland, en la Prisión del Condado de Midland, en el Centro de Rehabilitación de la Comunidad de Midland, en el MHMR tanto de Odessa como de Midland, Turning Point y en la Casa restitución dice Ramirez. "Y nosotros proveemos educación para los padres de los que están en rehabilitación. Darse cuenta de que los niños están en riezgo, aconsejamos fuertemente, sugerimos Alateen, Alanon. Y esa juventud de mayor riesgo es referida con "FACES" (caras) programas de Permian Basin MHMR."

Adicionalmente a estos – y otros muchos mas – programas, el Concilio tiene videos publicaciones y panfletos en Ingles y Español, y Ramirez en su propia área, un grupo de conferencistas que pueden hacer una presentación - devuelta en Ingles y en Español - a una extensa variedad de organizaciones cívicas y clubes.

Lo que el Concilio NO TIENE, es suficientes voluntarios para manejar todo el trabajo que se requiere hacer.

"Hablando por mi mismo, trate de recruir personas para el Speakers Bureau, para mi programa," dijo Ramirez. "Y lo que ando buscando, son personas de la comunidad que no se avergüencen o que no sientan miedo de hablar enfrente de un grupo grande de gente y que se sientan confortables de hablar acerca de diferentes tópicos."

"Otra cosa es, que siempre ando buscando son voluntarios para el programa "DIGA NO A LAS DROGAS". El programa "diga no a las drogas" no es únicamente para las escuelas. Nosotros hemos empezado a tener clubes de "diga no a las drogas" en los albergues en Big Spring, Midland y Odessa. Y siempre estamos buscando líderes de equipos para este propósito. No necesariamente un padre de familia - nos gustaría tener un padre de familia! - pero solamente a alguien que le guste trabajar con la juventud y que goce algo como es esto."

Ramirez garantiza que ellos tienen una tarea que iguale tu destreza tan especial, no importando qué esas aptitudes que tan especiales sean.

"También tenemos un programa que lo llamamos "Jesse el Payaso" y nos toma dos personas, un narrador y otro que se viste como payaso! El payaso actúa en una pequeña escena, con voluntarios de la audiencia," dice Ramirez. "Tenemos todo el material para que uno se pinte de payaso, los cosméticos, el traje, y todo lo demás."

"Y solamente, lo único que hay que hacer es llamar. Y estoy seguro de que encontrara algo!"

El numero telefónico para llamar, llamada gratuita, es 1-800-332-2175. El numero para llamar para el programa "DIGA NO A LAS DROGAS", es 1-800-332-2174.

"Usted sabe, nuestra estructura son los voluntarios. Esto es, básicamente, nuestra fundación. Y estaremos alegres teniéndolos," dice Ramirez. "Alguien dijo 'Voluntario', estaremos con ellos con los ojos cerrados!"

hecho que yo pudiera hacer esto pienso, que era importante."

Gomez es rápida para apuntar que muchos de los cambios que ella puso en efecto beneficio a toda la comunidad, para que las reuniones del Consejo fueran mas abiertas al publico en general, por ejemplo y para asegurar que copias de los minutos de esas juntas estarían disponibles en la biblioteca para que las examinara todos los que quisieran.

Gomez esta orgullosa del efecto que a tenido sus servicios abriendo las puertas a otras que lo quieran seguir, particularmente mujeres solteras, miembros de la comunidad minoritaria y de otras a los que las puertas se las habían cerrado anteriormente. Y ella espera que otros continúen siguiéndola, para permanecer activos en la comunidad de la cual forman parte, para tomar su turno siendo "movers-and-shakers".

"Quiero que ellos se envuelvan y – por mientras quisiera que ellos fueran Demócratas! - A mi no me importa cual es su afiliación política," dijo Gomez. "Mientras ellos están ahí porque ellos real y verdaderamente creen que todo eso es el área que ellos quieren estar dentro y que ellos se sientan confortables con la ideología del partido. Y que ellos se sientan confortables que cualquier cosa que se exponga, es algo que va a beneficiar a todos nosotros."

"Pero estoy muy orgullosa que he tenido la oportunidad para servir al Consejo. No doy ninguna disculpa por algún error de algo que a lo mejor hice! Pienso que fue una gran experiencia. Fue muy positiva. Aun con lo negativo, fue una de las experiencias mas positivas que jamás nunca he tenido!"

"I would like to see how people's minds work, you know, because each one's different," Lena Paredes owner of Fancy Flowers in Midland.

Hispanic Business.... is Good Business

By Amarante Cordova

Every business has a 'rush' period, a time of the year when sales are up, and everyone works harder to meet customers' increased demands. For Lena Paredes, the 'rush' period is right now.

"We had a fantastic Secretary's Week," said Paredes, owner of Fancy Flowers, in Midland. "And we're hoping for a better Mother's Day."

Add Easter, and all of the high school proms, and April becomes one of the busiest months of the year for the shop, which has been in business for eight years.

But Paredes warns that each holiday is different, with it's own special emphasis upon flowers.

"We can't have enough roses for Valentine's Day," she said. "But then, for Mother's Day, people are looking more for mixed bouquets, blooming plants, something she can keep, like a teapot."

In fact, one look at Paredes' inventory tells you that there is no limit to the imaginative selection of accessories that accompany plants and floral arrangements. In addition to the teapots, which are a popular item for Mother's Day this year, there are balloons, coffee mugs, baskets, and stuffed toys.

"One day, it might be all balloons," said Paredes, whose shop, in addition to providing individual arrangements, also decorates for events such as weddings, parties, and birthdays. "The next day, it might be all roses. And the next day, it might be, you know, just going out there and seeing people."

And it's the people, and some of their out of the ordinary requests, that keep the job interesting for Paredes and her staff.

"One request, it was for an 'Over The Hill' bouquet. They wanted a wreath, and they wanted the wreath to have all dead flowers," said Paredes. "We were supposed to go and take it, and display it in front of the door. It was just something real crazy, that we had never done. But it was fun, it was fun!"

"When you're doing dead flowers, I mean it's totally different from doing fresh. It's funny to work with dead flowers, when you have to, because people will request it. And a lot of times they will give you a week in advance, because we don't keep any dead flowers!"

But the creativity to meet these demands is another aspect of the business that appeals to Paredes.

"I think what I like the most is going to different shows, and seeing where people compete," she said. "Like you might have fifty different people competing, and we all have the same type of flowers, and the same amount of flowers. And we all do our thing, and none of them look the same!"

And I like to see that. I like to see how people's minds work, you know, because each one's different."

Still another reward for Paredes and her staff lies in the satisfaction of a job well done, and another happy customer.

"What's most exciting is when people call you, like this morning, when we delivered one to the Courthouse," said Paredes. "And we had a lady that called us back. She said, 'This is the second time that you've delivered flowers to me, and they were beautiful!' And, you know, that really excites us. Because we know we did something great, and the whole day is going to be nice!"

Negocio Hispano... es Buen Negocio

Por Amarante Cordova

Cada negocio tiene un periodo de mucha "prisa", una vez al año cuándo las ventas están en ascenso, y cada uno trabaja duro para complacer al cliente, para que la demanda aumente. Para Lena Paredes, el periodo de mas ventas esta en este momento.

"Nosotros tuvimos una semana fantástica celebrando a las Secretarias," dijo Paredes, dueña de Fancy Flowers, en Midland. Y nosotros esperamos que el Día de las Madres sea mejor.

Agregando la Pascua Florida, y todos los "proms" de las escuelas secundarias en Abril viene siendo uno de los meses mas ocupados del año para la florería que a estado prestando sus servicios por ocho años.

Pero Paredes nos dice que cada día festivo es diferente, con su énfasis especial de flores.

"Nosotros no podemos tener suficientes rosas para el Día de San Valentin," ella dijo. "Pero en cambio, para el Día de las Madres, la gente anda buscando mas ramilletes mezclados, plantas en flor, algo que ella pueda mantener, como una jarrita para té.

En realidad, una sola mirada al inventario de Paredes nos dice que no hay limite a la imaginación de toda la selección de accesorios que acompañan a las plantas y arreglos florales. Adicionalmente a las jarritas para té, que son artículos muy populares para el Día de Madres especialmente este año, también hay globos, tazas para café, canastas y juguetes para rellenar.

"Un día puede ser de puros globos," dice Paredes, de quién su tienda, en adición de proveer arreglos individuales, también decora para eventos como, bodas, fiestas y cumpleaños. "Al siguiente día, pueden ser puras rosas. Y al siguiente día, puede ser, usted sabe, solo ir por allí y ver gente.

Y es la gente y algunos de sus requisitos fuera de lo común, que nos mantiene interesados en el trabajo tanto a Paredes como a su personal.

"Un pedido, era para una persona de 'Over the Hill'. Y ellos quisieron mandarle una corona (de muertos) y quisieron la corona con todas las flores secas," Paredes dijo. "Y se suponía que teníamos que llevar el arreglo y dejárselo en la puerta principal de su casa. Fue algo que fue muy descabellado, que nunca lo habíamos hecho. Pero fue algo divertido, muy divertido!

"Cuando usted esta haciendo un arreglo de flores muertas (secas), pienso que es totalmente diferente a hacerlas con flores frescas. Es divertido trabajar con flores secas, cuando uno tiene que, porque la gente lo requiere. Y muchas de las veces le dan una semana por adelantado, porque nosotros no retenemos flores secas!

Pero la creatividad para realizar estas demandas es otro aspecto del negocio, apela Paredes.

"Pienso que lo que mas me gusta es ir a diferentes espectáculos y ver a la gente competir," ella dice. "Como, usted puede tener mas de cincuenta diferentes personas compitiendo y todas tienen el mismo tipo de flores y la misma cantidad de flores. Y todas hacen su propio arreglo y ninguno se vera igual!"

"Y eso me gusta observar. Me gusta ver como la mente de la gente trabaja, usted sabe, porque cada uno es diferente."

Todavía hay otra recompensa para Paredes y su personal se inclina en la satisfacción de un trabajo bien eleborado y un cliente feliz.

"Y que es lo mas emocionante es cuando la gente la llama, como esta mañana, hicimos una entrega en Casa de Corte," dijo Paredes. "Y tuvimos a una dama que nos llamo. Ella dijo, 'Esta es la segunda vez que ustedes me mandan flores y están preciosas!' Y, usted sabe, esto realmente nos entusiasma. Porque nosotros sabemos que hicimos algo estupendo y todo el día va a hacer agradable!"

for both horns and the button accordion. Some still do. Tejeda now sees a return to the roots of conjunto with groups such as Roberto Pullido reintegrating the accordion into tejano music. Others have joined in, too — La Mafia, La Sombra, Mazz, David Lee Garza, Emilio Navaira. A few bands never gave up the accordion. The style has even won some national attention, thanks to such groups as Los Lobos and the Texas Tornados. "We have finally come together as a people," Tejeda says. "We have come to terms with our roots."

San Antonio's Guadalupe Cultural Arts Center hosts a one-of-a-kind festival of tejano music each spring. The 12th annual Tejano Conjunto Festival is scheduled for May 10-16. "It's our turn," Tejeda predicts. "The world's just starting to take notice."

realidad."

"Lo mas difícil en este asunto es la espera, después que lo certifican a uno, para el primer niño que llegue a su casa." agrega Carrasco

Ambas mujeres rápidamente aseguran que es fácil el procedimiento para la aplicación, porque ellos temen que muchos adultos, que probablemente pueden ser extraordinarios padres adoptivos, están con un miedo que creen equivocadamente que es largo y complicado el procedimiento para la aplicación y aprobación. Y ellos creen que hay otros, comúnmente se apoderan de un concepto erróneo.

"Usted sabe, he hablado con alguna gente, ellos quieren que los recomiende, pero ellos dicen Cuanto pagan ellos?" Si usted va a esta ahí, no va a hacer por dinero." dice Hernandez, refiriéndose al estipendio que el padre adoptivo recibe por el cuidado del niño. "Nosotros nunca pensamos en que nos paguen, cuando nosotros quisimos ser padres adoptivos. Nosotros quicimos ser padres adoptivos, porque necesitamos a los niños."

" Y es lo que quiero que la gente entienda. Cuando usted esta en esto, no lo esta haciendo por dinero. Usted lo esta haciendo porque los niños lo necesitan a usted y usted necesita a los niños!"

"Lo que ellos realmente necesitan es el cuidado de los niños. Usted no necesita tener una grande, enorme residencia, o ser millonario. Usted puede ser gente sencilla, regular como lo soy yo." dice Carrasco, que trabaja como secretaria en el Departamento de Transportación, para el Distrito Escolar Independiente del Condado de Ector. "Yo me preocupe al principio. Pero pensé, necesitas una casa muy elegante y todo eso? O vivir en cierto sector de la Ciudad? No, no es eso! Es mas personal, lo que uno da. Lo que ellos necesitan de uno es el cuidado que se les va a dar a los niños."

Es un compromiso de cuidado por parte de los adultos que adquieren, especialmente aquellos de la comunidad minoritaria.

"He vendido hablándole a la gente de esto. Nosotros necesitamos mas gente Hispana envuelta en estos programas, realmente lo necesitamos," dice Hernandez. "Nomas me gustaría decirle a la gente, únicamente pásenle. Aquí hay muchos niños Hispanos, también. Nosotros los necesitamos, nosotros los necesitamos a todos. Esperanzado, a que todos ellos lean esto y vengan hasta acá, y digan ellos que quieren ser padres adoptivos."

"Oh, yo quisiera que sucediera. Alguna oportunidad que tuviera, algún momento que alguien me preguntara, o algún momento que tuviera la oportunidad, yo quisiera compartir con los demás, con la gente que este interesada, o solamente con la gente que se preocupa por los niños," dice Carrasco. "Siempre la animaré a que se informe. Llama! Es verdaderamente simple. Es solamente una llamada telefónica."

"Y la gente esta necesitada, ellos definitivamente lo están. Todos están necesitados. Seria maravilloso y si los Hispanos llamaran. Si ellos tienen el deseo, quiero que los investiguen a fondo, lo comprueben. Es mas fácil de lo que usted se imagina. Todo mundocree que es sumamente difícil, pero no lo es, realmente no lo es. Entonces, animaré a cualquiera que este interesado en los niños en el cuidado a los niños. Abientate no tengas miedo! Llama al departamento hazles preguntas, pregúntale a otro padre adoptivo. Me sentiré gustoso de compartir esto con cualquiera."

Hay algunas oficinas del Departamento Protector de Tejas y Servicios Regulatorios, quien son responsables por el Programa del Cuidado de Adopción. En Midland, el numero a llamar es 686-2273. En Odessa, es el 368-2667, y el de Big Spring es el 263-7671. Para esos que en todas partes del Oeste de Tejas están, que quieran mas información acerca del programa, hay también un numero a llamar gratuito. Y es el 1-800-233-3405.

En todas partes que usted vea de albergues de adopción, usted vera el lazo de unión que existe entre una madre y un hijo. Usted vera en docenas de fotografías familiares, orgullosamente enmarcada y exhibida, que llena las repisas y los cuadros debidamente colgados en la pared. Y usted vera tarjetas de Pascua Florida hechas en casa, decoradas con listones y dibujos de conejitos, con un mensaje "Felices Pascuas Floridas Mama y Papa- cuidadosamente grabada en el frente.

Y usted lo vera en las manos. Las mas pequeñas y suaves manos de un pequeño niño - manos que algunas veces llevan las cicatrices del abuso y negligencia sufridas en el hogar - agarrándose de las mas grandes y acabadas manos de los padres adoptivos, buscando el amor que ellos desesperadamente necesitan.

"Esto es solamente un poquito de la recompensa que usted obtiene," dice Hernandez. "Como cuando ella me llevo a la escuela y dijo, 'Esta es mi Mami. No es ella bonita?'

Y cosas como esas, son detalles que te hacen amarla mucho mas!"

"Mi papel principal en esta vida es ser MADRE," dice Carrasco. "Yo amo esto! No se. Es nomas eso, cuando ellos te laman 'Mama,' es a mi a la que llaman. Y para mi, es algo muy especial!"

Tal vez hay un espacio en tus manos, en tu corazón, en tu casa, para el amor tan especial de una custodia adoptiva.

and wanted to be foster parents. We wanted to be foster parents because we needed children."

"And that's what I want people to understand. When you're in this, you're not doing it for the money. You're doing it because a child needs you, and you need the child!"

"What they really need is care for the children. You don't have to have a big, humongous home, or be wealthy. You can be just regular, common people, like myself," said Carrasco, who works as a secretary in the Department of Transportation, for the Ector County Independent School District. "I worried about that at the beginning, too. I thought, 'Do you have to have a very fancy home, and all this? Or live on a certain side of town?' No, it's not that! It's more personal, what you give. What they need is for you to care about the children."

It is a commitment to caring that both women wish more adults would make, especially those in the minority community.

"I've been talking to people about it. We need more Hispanic people in this program, we really do," said Hernandez. "I would just like to tell the Hispanic people to 'Come on!' There's a lot of black kids, a lot of white kids, a lot of Hispanic kids out there, too. We need them, we need them all. But hopefully, they'll read this, and come out, and say they want to be foster parents."

"Oh, I wish there was. Any chance that I have, and any time that a person asks me, or any time I have the opportunity, I always like to share with them, the people that are interested, or just care about children," said Carrasco. "I always like to encourage them to check it out. Call! It's real easy. It's a phone call."

"And the people are needed, they definitely are. Everyone's needed. It would be beautiful if more Hispanics would call. If they have the desire, I want them to investigate it, check it out. It's easier than what they think. Everybody thinks it's so difficult, but it isn't, it really isn't. So I would encourage anybody that's interested in children, and care about kids. Go for it! Call the department, ask them any questions, ask any other foster parent. I would be glad to share that with anybody."

There are several offices of the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, which is responsible for the Foster Care Program. In Midland, the number to call is 686-2273. In Odessa, it's 368-2667, and in Big Spring, it's 263-7671. For those throughout West Texas, who would like more information about the program, there is also a toll-free number. It is 1-800-233-3405.

Everywhere you look in the foster home, you see signs of the .bond that exists between mother and child. . You see it in the dozens of family photographs, proudly framed and displayed, that fill the shelves and hang on the walls. And you see it in the homemade Easter cards, decorated with ribbon and drawings of rabbits, with the message "Happy Easter Mom and Dad" carefully printed on the front.

And you see it in the hands. The smaller and younger hands of the child - hands that sometimes bear the scars of the abuse and neglect the child suffered at home - holding onto the larger and older hands of the foster parent, and finding the love they so desperately need.

"That's a little bit of the reward you get," said Hernandez. "Like when she took me to school, and said, 'This is my Mommy. Isn't she pretty?' And things like that, it just makes you love her more!"

"My biggest role in life has been to be a mom, to be a parent," explained Carrasco. "I love it! I don't know. It's just that, when they call you 'Mother', it's me that they're calling. And for me, that's very special!"

Perhaps there is room in your hands, in your heart, and your home, for the special love of foster care.

Local businesses display products, services at EXPO

Think of it as a smorgasbord of the Permian Basin business world.

About 60 Midland companies will set up shop Wednesday, May 12, in Midland Center from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. for EXPO 93, an annual event featured by the Midland Chamber of Commerce as a "business-to-business trade show." Up to 1,000 attendees are expected.

Exhibits will range from computer displays to graphics companies, and will include banks, the media, electronics companies and a variety of service firms.

"Its exciting to see so much activity under one roof," said Garth Wright, volunteer chair of the Chamber's Small Business Council, which organizes the trade show. "A lot of these companies are known within their own circle, but this is an opportunity for the general public to become familiar with a wide array of services and products that are available right here in the Permian Basin," he said. "Best of all, it's free to attend for anyone 18 and over." EXPO 93 is sponsored by Texas Commerce Bank and is held in celebration of Small Business Week.

The exhibition continues into the evening with a complimentary hors d'oeuvres/cash bar Business After Hours Mixer from 5-7 p.m. Food will be prepared by Italiano Catering.

Door prize drawings will be held at 10:30 a.m., noon, 2 p.m., 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. Prizes include six months free basic cable television and six months premium channel cable television, in addition to a large number of door prizes from the exhibitors.

"For a person who has buying authority for their company, this trade show is a must," said Wright. "It's such a time-efficient, low-pressure way to scan the available goods and services in the Permian Basin," he said. "Most business people are trying to work smarter by keeping up with new trends. The EXPO 93 trade show format means the attendee controls the contact with the vendor and can make the best use of his or her time. We've held the trade show for several years now and people always comment on how enjoyable the atmosphere is and how they look forward to coming back."

Free seminars offered to public during all-day EXPO

EXPO 93
Midland's Business to Business Trade Show

If you were thinking about starting a business, or trying to find options to finance your existing business, where would you begin?

One quick, inexpensive place to start is the "business sampler" seminars being offered Wednesday at Midland Center.

The courses – "Starting Your Business" and "Financing an Existing Business" will last approximately an hour, and are being held in conjunction with the EXPO 93 trade show. The seminars are coordinated by the Small Business Council of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Small Business Development Center (SBDC) of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"Starting Your Business" is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Karl Painter, Director of the SBDC, will coordinate the sessions, which will describe the steps to evaluating the marketplace, preparing a business plan, and capitalizing a new venture.

"The business plan is the key thing," said Painter. "Overall, about 50 percent of new businesses fail in the first year," he said. "But for those with a business plan, the failure rate is only about 20 percent. That's because the entrepreneur has thought ahead of the problems and can anticipate them."

"Financing an Existing Business" will be offered at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. and will be led by Garth Wright and Mark Williamson of Texas Commerce Bank. This seminar will review various loan and investment options, including funds from banks and other sources.

The seminars are open to anyone 18 and over. The EXPO 93 trade show features displays by about 60 Permian Basin companies.

The trade show runs from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and up to 1,000 attendees are expected. EXPO 93 celebrates Small Business Week, May 9-15.

For more information, call the Chamber, 683-3381, or the SBDC, 567-5502.

Sales veteran shares networking secrets

Although EXPO 93 goes on all day Wednesday, something special happens at 5 p.m. That's when the "Business After Hours Mixer" begins.

Free hors d'oeuvres are served and a cash bar is set up. But the real attraction is the chance to network with other business people. Just seeing people and being seen is important, but there are some "tricks of the trade" that can make a Chamber networking event even more productive.

According to Jeffrey Gitomer, a 22-year sales veteran, a focused approach can help your networking success:

1. Early in the event, stand by the entrance if possible. This way you can see everyone and establish your "targets."

2. Spend 75 percent of your time with people you don't know. You can visit with friends and coworkers later.

3. Spend 25 percent of your time building existing relationships. Talk to your customers. The better you get to know them, the stronger their loyalty to you and your company.

4. After you give your 10-second introduction, ask the other person what they do before you start talking about yourself.

5. Next, you can either establish rapport or try to arouse interest in your product or service. Let the prospect's earlier comments guide you.

6. Establish some common ground besides business - something you both like or know about.

7. If you want the prospect's card, offer your card first, or give a reason you need the card, such as "If you'll give me your card, I'll mail you some information."

8. Write all pertinent information on the back of the prospect's card immediately. You'll need this for follow-up.

9. Don't try to actually sell your product or service. Just establish some confidence and "sell" an appointment.

10. After you've established the contact, obtained the business card, established rapport and confirmed your next action (mail, call, appointment, etc.) move on.

Be aware of time. Don't spend too much of it with one person or you defeat the purpose of networking. Your objective is to take advantage of the entire room. If you spend three minutes with a prospect, that gives you a possibility of 20 contacts per hour.

The size of the event dictates the amount of time you should spend. The larger the event, the shorter time per contact.

Gitomer says that in his office he has placed a wall calendar marked with all networking events, such as Chamber mixers. He places a small bulletin board next to the calendar, where he posts the event's promotional pieces or invitations. He says if more than 50 people will attend, then he plans to be there, too.

Marketing Assistance Center links local businesses, national contracts

By Bruce Partain

The morning routine for a small business person:

1) run to post office

2) check answering machine

3) review calendar and today's list

4) check fax machine for notices of people wanting us to bid on their projects

Most business people are familiar with items one through three. With the help of the Marketing Assistance Center (MAC), the fourth item can be a reality.

MAC is located at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Center for Energy and Economic Diversification. The service will cost $20 per month, but to encourage companies to explore the service, charges won't begin until Oct. 1, according to Karl Painter, director of the U.T. Permian Basin Small Business Development Center.

The purpose of the MAC is to assist Permian Basin businesses in selling or purchasing goods and services.

Here's how the system works: Businesses seeking new customers subscribe to the MAC Bid Match Program. Working with major purchasers, MAC gathers bid requests and combines them with bid requests from federal, state and local governments, foreign trade and other companies. Computerized matches between sellers and purchasers are made daily and the business opportunity is faxed to the sellers.

Buyers reap benefits

"Purchasing agents can save time and money by sending one bid request to MAC and having us distribute it to the appropriate potential bidders," said Painter. "All potential bidders receive notification of the request within 24 hours."

The system also has advantages for companies seeking bids from minority and other historically disadvantaged small businesses. "These factors are automatically included," said Painter. "Statistical information on the number of these businesses receiving packages can be supplied by MAC."

Purchasing agents can specify bid markets - local area only, statewide or national.

Sellers enjoy features

For sellers, the benefits are manifold. "There are daily publications that describe every government bid request," said Painter. "The problem for the seller is those publications have too much information. The publications are huge and printed in microscopic type, and subscriptions can cost hundreds of dollars per month. With MAC, only bid requests in areas selected by the seller are faxed. You only deal with offers in your specific business.

"The MAC also combines government bid requests and private company bid requests, then sorts by preselected categories. This means each seller receives a customized fax package that is manageable and meaningful."

The MAC notifies sellers of worldwide business opportunities, assists local companies submit bid packages to purchasing agents and helps businesses explore new markets.

For further information, contact Karl Painter at the UTPB Small Business Development Center, 567-5502.
