Bush's safety

BELTSVILLE, Md. — President Bush, the nation's most protected citizen, on Friday learned how Secret Service agents make sure he stays safe. During Bush's visit to the Secret Service training center in rural Maryland, agents demonstrated how they would save the president in the water, speed him away from a motorcade explosion and intercept weapons from entering a hotel where he was speaking. Bush also rode in a souped-up sedan with an agent demonstrating speed driving and 180-degree spins. The president also fired a Secret Service rifle, aides said.

Slovenia releases soldiers

■ Government troops freed as a way of diffusing crisis in Yugoslavia.

Associated Press

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia — In moves to avert war, Slovenia freed hundreds of captured federal troops Friday, and the head of Yugoslavia's presidency said the army would not strike again at the breakaway republic.

As most of the more than 2,000 released federal soldiers left Slovenia on trains and buses, the republic's information minister, Jelko Kacin, said Slovenia also was complying with other federal demands to defuse the crisis.

In diplomatic developments, the European Community, alarmed by what it saw as a lack of civilian control over the federal army, froze about $1 billion in aid to Yugoslavia. The 12-nation trade bloc also banned arms sales to Belgrade.

It said the aid suspension would be lifted after "normalization."

Meanwhile, the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, meeting in Prague, Czechoslovakia, agreed to support and possibly take part in any EC truce-monitoring mission.

Albania also said it was reinforcing its border with Yugoslavia's Serb-controlled Kosovo province, where ethnic Albanians complain of persecution.

Non-Communist Croatia and Slovenia, the two northernmost republics, declared independence on June 25. Croatia has been spared attacks, partly because it has been more cautious in implementing independence plans.

On Thursday, Yugoslavia's collective presidency ordered Slovenia to withdraw from combat positions against the federal army, release all prisoners, lift blockades of army bases and surrender

Texas jobless rate among nation's lowest

■ Only 5.6 percent of Texans unemployed in June, Labor Department reports.

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Texas boasted the lowest unemployment rate among the nation's leading industrial states last month, with just 5.6 percent of the state's workers out of work in June, the Labor Department said Friday.

That was down from 6.4 percent in May, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said in its monthly report on joblessness nationwide. Massachusetts suffered the highest unemployment in June, with 9.5 percent of its civilian population out of work, the report said.

The trend in Texas ran counter to the national unemployment rate, which rose to 7 percent last month from 6.9 percent in May. The June rate is the highest level in nearly five years and means 8.7 million Americans are out of work. In Texas last month, 482,000 workers were jobless, while 8,061,000 reported having some kind of job.

But labor economists warned that economic recovery is far from complete in Texas.

"The jobless rates in Texas have been volatile recently," said Susan Shank, an analyst with the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "While it's true the rate dropped last

Midland may soon annex windowpane

■ Southeast Midland community has water and sewer lines being installed and now has trash pickup.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

A Midland windowpane area, an almost forgotten block of streets in a largely run-down part of southeast Midland, is getting closer to city annexation as water and sewer lines are installed and trash pickup is implemented.

"It will be good for the community," Midland County Commissioner Louisa Valencia said Friday. "People already have taken pride in cleaning up that area.

"They needed the tools, which were water and trash pickup. They've got them."

The county is laying the groundwork to seek a governmental grant to finance sewer lines in the east side of that project that already has water lines but no sewer lines.

The governmental funding would be through a Texas Community Development Program grant to improve conditions of low- and moderate-income persons.

Midland County will be vying for a portion of the $1.22 million allocated for the 17-county area covered by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

Earlier in the 1980s, Midland County secured funds to finance the installation of water and sewer lines for much of an area bounded by Gist, Longview, Terrell and Baird streets and just south of Mid-

Haley regales crowd on his 90th birthday

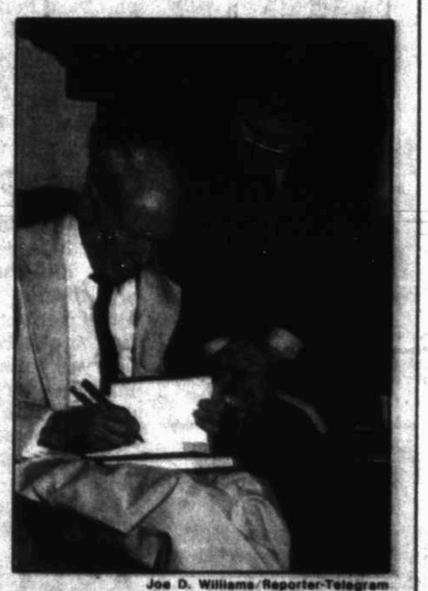

By Bill Modisett
Staff Writer

Friends, family, book collectors and acquaintances from throughout the Southwest congregated at the Plaza Club in Midland's Texas National Bank Friday evening to wish a happy 90th birthday to historian and author J. Evetts Haley.

The historian, who has been in failing health for several years, did not disappoint the crowd, as he took the speaker's podium for half an hour and related a number of humorous stories from his experiences. Haley entertained his fans, telling them, "If I get going too long, just start throwing the dishes!"

Haley explained that his son, Evetts Haley Jr. had asked him before the party to "be brief" in his remarks. Obviously enjoying himself in the role he occupied so many years as a public speaker, the author chuckled and said, "If after 90 years I get the chance to speak to a group like this, how the hell do you expect me to be brief?"

Fewer people die than DPS had predicted

■ Seven people die on Texas roads during holiday.

Staff Report

A total of seven Texans died in traffic fatalities during the 30-hour July Fourth holiday period, according to DPS Trooper Erwin Ballarta.

"That's much lower than the 12 predicted," Ballarta said. "This may be a record low. We had 19 fatalities for the same time period last year."

The counting period began at 6 p.m. Wednesday and continued until midnight Thursday, July 4.

During last year's July 4th holiday period, the DPS tabulated 15 deaths. The final count was 19, because of deaths due to critical injuries.

"In 1990, 89 percent of Texas fatalities during July 4th occurred in accidents where speeding over the limit or driving while intoxicated were a factor," according to Col. Joe Milner, state DPS director in Austin.

Ballarta noted that only one of the fatalities this year was an alcohol-related incident. Also, only two of the victims

MBCE to sponsor New Guinea dance troupe

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Future plans for the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, Inc., have taken on an international flair as chamber members this week firmed up bringing Les Ballets Africaine to Midland.

"We are extremely excited about the challenge to bring this international group here as a cultural exchange activity," said James Fuller, MBCE vice president.

The New Guinea dance troupe was formed by choreographer Keita Fodeda and was originally known as the National Ensemble of the Republic of New Guinea, following the republic's independence in 1958.

"Ketia Fodeda is a counterpart to Alvin Ailey," Fuller said.

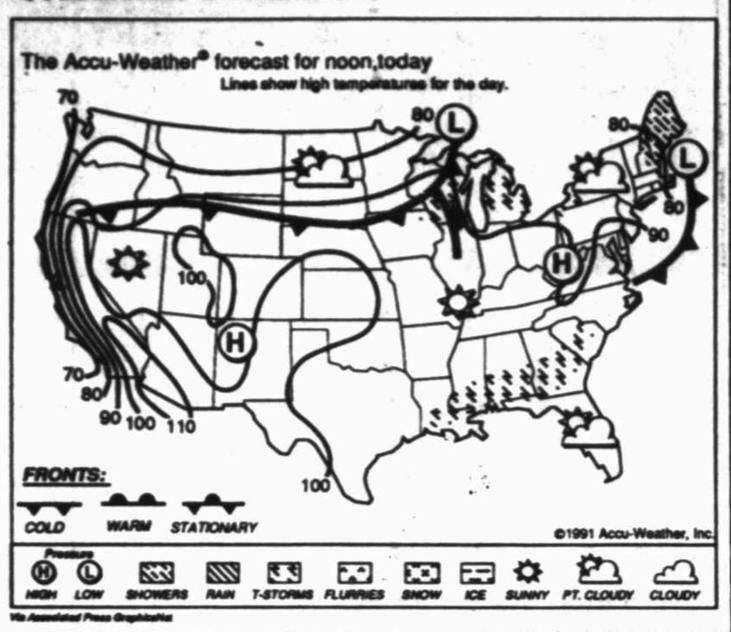

The dance troupe will initiate its U.S. tour — which is being coordinated by Columbia Artists — at the Kennedy Center in Washington D.C. The dancers will perform in Midland at 8 p.m. Nov. 8 at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado St.

Officer charged with assault

FORT WORTH (AP) — A police officer was charged Friday with assault with a deadly weapon after his beating of a car theft suspect was captured on videotape.

Officer Edward James Parnell III was relieved of duties after the Wednesday incident.

He surrendered to police late Friday after an arrest warrant was issued, Police Chief Thomas Windham said.

"We expect the district attorney will make a determination whether or not he is to be prosecuted," Windham said.

The police chief said he expected Parnell to be released on his own recognizance. A charge of aggravated assault carries a prison sentence ranging from two to 10 years, plus a $1,000 fine.

Parnell had arrested Ernest Alvin Anderson on suspicion of car theft and was driving him to a police station when Anderson kicked out a rear window and tried to jump out on Interstate 30.

Parnell stopped the car, removed Anderson from it and was videotaped striking the suspect 28 times with a baton. A woman videotaped the beating from a home near the highway.

The woman gave the tape to a television station, whose broadcast of it was reminiscent of the March 3 Los Angeles incident in which law officers beat a speeding suspect.

Unlike the beating in Los Angeles, which involved a black suspect and white police officers, both Parnell and Anderson are black.

Anderson, 21, was treated at a hospital for cuts and bruises before being jailed.

He was released from the Tarrant County Jail after posting $2,500 bond Friday morning.

Books open at 10 a.m. The final feature will be an 8:30 a.m. Sunday Cowboy Church Service, led by cowboy-minister Leonard Cotten of the C (Chicago) Ranch, at the Rodeo Arena.

HALEY: Crowd honors renown Midland historian

(From 1A)

When the gathering broke into laughter, Haley quieted them by adding, "You have my deepest gratitude." The historian was visibly moved by the outpouring of affection.

Robert Carr Vincent, a longtime Haley friend and official with the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, thanked the library founder "for all you've stood for and still stand for."

Remarking on Haley's longevity and influence in varied aspects of society, Bill Murchison, a columnist with The Dallas Morning News, told those present that Haley is one of those "fixed points in a changing society.

"Here is a man who was a literary fixture before I was born ... who sat with Col. (Charles) Goodnight ... and here he is tonight."

Then the columnist added, "Twenty-five years from now when we gather to honor Evetts on his 115th birthday, he won't have noticeably changed!"

Haley was born July 5, 1901, in Bell County. He came to Midland in 1906 at the age of 5 with his parents, John A. and Julia Evetts Haley, and has written more than 25 books and literally hundreds of magazine and newspaper articles in his 50-year writing career.

He also ranched in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma. In 1956, he ran an unsuccessful campaign for governor of Texas — an endeavor he says was not completely in vain. He helped to bring issues to the forefront for the public's consideration.

Then in 1964, Haley published "A Texan looks at Lyndon: A Study in Illegitimate Power," an expose on how Lyndon Johnson gained the presidency. It brought Haley astounding notoreity and eventually sold 5½ million copies. In recent years the charges Haley leveled in his book were further substantiated by other authors.

Haley's best-known work, however, is probably his biography on Goodnight.

Master of ceremonies for the evening birthday celebration was B. Byron Price, executive director of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City.

The birthday celebration for Haley was one of three events held Friday involving the Haley Library. The other two were the opening of a one-week art exhibit at the library, featuring the work of Western artist Tom Ryan of Midland, and a birthday reception for Haley at the library.

In addition, a new book published by the Haley Library went on sale. Entitled "Vintage J. Evetts Haley: A Reader's Handbook," it contains excepts from Haley's writings over his entire career. It was compiled and edited by Evetts Haley Jr. The book sells for $10 in paperback or $50 in hardback.

Friday's activities were in recognition of Haley's 90th birthday, the 15th anniversary of the Haley Library opening in Midland and the 30th anniversary of the founding of the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library Trust.

A&M petroleum engineer dies in accident

BRYAN (AP) — W. Douglas Von Gonten, a nationally known petroleum engineer, died Tuesday night after being run over by a tractor several times.

Von Gonten, the head of Texas A&M University's Petroleum Engineering Department, was mowing a hay field and apparently fell from the tractor, Robertson County sheriff's investigators said. He was 57.

"Doug was the most widely known and published petroleum engineer in the United States," A&M system regent Royce Wisenbaker said Wednesday. "This is a great loss to Texas A&M, to his family and all the students he's worked with over the years."

Von Gonten's wife, Ann, discovered his body Wednesday morning after she became worried by his absence and drove to their ranch about 5 miles northeast of Wheelock.

"I think probably what happened is that mower hit a stump, and it probably jarred him loose from the tractor," said sheriff's deputy Bob Mathis.

Mathis said the tractor's front wheels became locked sideways. The tractor appeared to have turned up to 25 circles before coming to rest against a fence post where it stalled or ran out of fuel, he said.

An autopsy was scheduled, as is routine in accidental deaths.

Von Gonten was born in Rockdale. He earned bachelor's degrees in geology and petroleum engineering from A&M in 1957 before entering the Air Force. He worked for Mobil Oil Corp. before returning to A&M, where he received a master's degree in 1965 and a doctorate in 1966.

He rose through the ranks from assistant research engineer at the Texas Engineering Experiment Station to become professor and head of the petroleum engineering department in 1976.

He is survived his wife and two children, Rebecca Von Gonten of Bryan, and William Von Gonten of Houston.

Keynote speaker will be Parren Mitchell, a former congressman who structured legislation for the Small Business Administration.

Other symposium notables scheduled to attend include Joshua Smith, president and Chief Executive Officer of Maxima Corp. and presidential appointee of the Minority Business Commission; Les Brown, president of Les Brown Productions; and Joan Jackson of Jackson Products.

Symposium topics will include: "Franchise Agreements," "Financial Analysis and Selection of a Franchise," "Franchises: An Opportunity for Economic Development," "Industries and Job Opportunities in the '90s," "Profile of a Franchisor," "Profile of a Franchisee," and "The Legal Aspects of Franchises."

In new developments, the MBCE announced that B & D delivery Service, owned by M.J. Dixon, joined the chamber this month.

The chamber's Business Development Center, located at 2707 N. Big Spring, has incorporated to form the Midland African American Business Development Corporation, Inc., according to Robbyne Fuller, MBCE president.

"That entity now stands alone," Ms. Fuller said. "We will be able to turn it into a business training center."

Persons interested in utilizing the center's resources are not required to be chamber members, Ms. Fuller said.

"We will have seminars and videos which discuss marketing strategies, developing business plans and other information for people interested in starting their own business," Ms. Fuller said.

The Midland African American Business Development Corporation, Inc., will be open 1-5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Thelma Poole is director of the development corporation.

Fuller said copies of the Entrepreneur Dispatch, the MBCE's newsletter, are available at the chamber office. The first copies of the quarterly publication were distributed at the recent Juneteenth celebration. Copies are available to the public free of charge.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Bomb threat

Staff Reports

A bomb threat made to Midland Park Mall Cinemas earlier this week proved to be unfounded, according to police reports.

The theater received the phone call warning that a bomb had been planted on the premises about 4:15 p.m. Wednesday.

Authorities were notified and the theater was evacuated.

Patrons had the option of getting tickets to a later showing of the movie they evacuated or getting a refund, according to Kelly Garcia, chief of staff.

"We work with law enforcement and national law enforcement agencies on instances like this," said Cory Skinner, Midland Park Mall manager. "Officers were dispatched. They checked the scene and there was no cause for alarm," he said.

Ms. Garcia said theater operations were halted for about an hour and a half.

Grass fires

Fireworks unfortunately can cause grass fires, and Midland fire fighters were called to about 15 such blazes in Midland County Thursday night.

Odessa firefighters extiguished about 23 grass fires the same evening.

No major fires were reported.

JOBLESS: Analysts say state's trends encouraging

month, it might well bounce right back up, like it did from March to April."

The jobless rate in Texas has seesawed during the past quarter, rising from 5.5 percent in February to 6.6 percent in March, to 7.1 percent in April, then downward to 6.4 in May and 5.6 percent last month.

"I really think this is an anomaly, and that we shouldn't take this as really optimistic," said Diane Dobie, an economist with the Texas Employment Commission. "Our rate did go down in June, but it had been much higher just a few months ago."

According to the commission, over 27,000 jobs have been added in local government in the past year, while 23,000 new health-care jobs were created. As the state's communities have grown, new jobs were created for teachers, police officers and other municipal employees.

There was modest growth in the oil and gas equipment industry in the past year, but much of that has been in the export market, officials said.

"Things aren't great here by any means," said Bernard Weinstein, professor of industrial economics at North Texas State in Denton. "Our manufacturing sector is still weak, and I really doubt that we have seen an increase of 61,000 workers on our payrolls in June."

Weinstein said part of the increase may be attributed to Texans who are working part-time, or have taken up cottage industries out of their homes.

Still, the general trends in Texas are encouraging, the economists said.

"We are clearly not being hit as hard as much of the rest of the country," said Dobie, who gave Texas a "C" or "B-minus" for its economic performance. "Our economy is continuing to create new jobs but at a much lower rate than we'd like to see."

Added Weinstein, "There's no question that Texas is consistently outperforming the nation for the first time since around 1983."

DPS: Seven people killed

(From 1A)

were not wearing seat belts.

Ballarta attributed the low incidence of alcoholism and wearing of seat belts to "public awareness and education."

"People are beginning to take these things into consideration," he said.

A list of traffic fatalities during the July Fourth holiday period as reported by the DPS follows:

■ Armando Gonzales, 54, of Lubbock died Wednesday night when he was hit by a car while he crossed the outside lane of northbound U.S. 87 in Lubbock County.

■ Perry L. Mendez, 20, of Grand Prairie was killed late Wednesday after his vehicle overturned, apparently after being hit from behind on West Mansfield Highway in Kennedale. An unidentified passenger in Mendez's vehicle suffered injuries.

■ William Conway, 29, of Irving died Thursday as he tried to merge his motorcycle onto U.S. 183. The man crossed all lanes of 183, and crashed into a median and guard rail.

■ Gonzalo Zamora Lara, 21, of Houston was killed as her vehicle ran off a bridge and landed upside down in a creek bed early Thursday in Pearland. Two passengers were seriously injured.

■ Odis A. Bland Jr., 26, of Victoria was killed Thursday night as his motorcycle left the road and hit a tree in Victoria.

■ Isabel Garcia Castilleja, 48, of Lockhart was killed Thursday night when she was struck by a vehicle as she walked in the center of a Caldwell County farm road.

■ Jerry Philip Groves, 54, of Delphi, Ind., died Thursday evening when his motorcycle rear-ended another vehicle in Beaumont.

WINDOWPANE: Midlanders cleaning up area

(From 1A)

land Freshman High School off Gist Avenue. The area is near Interstate Highway 20 and Rankin Highway.

So far, half of the windowpane area, the west side, between Baird and Fort Worth streets has received water and sewer lines and trash pickup services, said Ms. Valencia.

People in that district "started cleaning up their area," she said.

"It's really looking nice. We went in there and paved all the streets" on that west half of the windowpane area. "And it's looking real nice."

Water lines are being installed on the east side of that area — between Fort Worth and Terrell streets.

More than 100 families live in that windowpane area, Ms. Valencia said. Most are low-income families.

Midland contractor Maximo "Max" Cuellar, who lives on the west side of the windowpane area, said the area was improved when the sewer lines were installed there.

"We got rid of the old septic tanks," he said. They were "running over. We can breathe better now."

However, some people are using vacant lots there for dump-ground sites for abandoned cars, furniture and roofing material, Cuellar said. Mesquite shrubs on street corners often impair the vision of motorists. And street signs and traffic lights and traffic signs are needed through the windowpane area.

"They don't have stop lights, or stop signs," Cuellar said. "It's a mess out here."

The windowpane area is "surrounded by the city, but it's in the county," noted Ms. Valencia.

In recent years, she said, Midland County and city of Midland officials agreed that if the county "got all the utilities in there, the city would come and annex that area to give it all the benefits of the city," including police protection.

CRISIS: Nation's head says army will not attack

(From 1A)

its 27 international border posts by noon Sunday.

Slovenia responded Friday that it had begun a partial demobilization of its militia. Although not declaring compromise, the republic said it was willing at least to discuss the issue of border posts.

Matyaz Kmecl, Slovenia's representative on the presidency, said of the border issue: "Our stance is that (a solution of) all controversial issues must be achieved by negotiation."

Until now, Slovenia has refused to surrender the posts on the Italian, Austrian and Hungarian frontiers, which have become potent symbols of the republic's sovereignty.

The federal army and Slovenian militia fought three days last week for control of the posts, following the republic's declaration of independence. The fighting resumed briefly Tuesday.

Federal army prisoners taken in those clashes began leaving the republic shortly after it announced it would comply with the federal government's demand.

The Slovenian Red Cross said 2,316 federal soldiers had either surrendered, deserted or were captured.

The federal government, for its part, said Friday it would not use force against Slovenia, even if the republic defied its ultimatum.

"The army will remain in its barracks," Stipe Mesic, chairman of the eight-member federal presidency, was quoted as telling Germany's Bild newspaper.

Mesic also was quoted as saying the presidency was prepared to compromise on the border issue.

"The solution is: the Slovenes retain control of the border posts, but customs revenues have to be given to the (Yugoslav) federation," he told Bild. "Slovenia can thus retain its sovereignty."

Mesic said the presidency had reasserted control over the military.

FDA proposes new labeling guidelines

The Nation

N.Y. Times News Service

From June 21 to July 2, the Food and Drug Administration churned out dozens of proposals intended to solve problems with food-ingredient labeling that have confounded the agency for 25 years.

The food agency also proposed voluntary nutrition-labeling guidelines for fresh fish, fruits and vegetables, and is working on mandatory nutrition labeling for all packaged foods.

The proposals would give consumers access to information they have been seeking for years. The new regulations would affect how sweeteners, artificial colors and other ingredients are listed on nutrition labels.

They would also require disclosure information on the waxes used to coat produce, the percentage of fruit in juices and the ingredients in non-dairy creamers. It is hoped the new regulations will resolve a host of controversies that affect consumers' health and pocketbooks.

The regulations are now subject to public comment. Some of them are expected to go into effect as soon as Nov. 8. Additional labeling requirements will become law on May 8, 1993, when nutrition labeling on all packaged foods will be mandatory.

"This is the largest amount of food-labeling activity since the early 1970s," said Elizabeth Campbell, chief of the regulations and industry activities branch in the agency's Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition.

"It was a cumulative effect. For years the agency has been building up steam. A lot more people were having problems with labels. I don't mean just consumers, industry too, and we were having problems because we were finding so many misleading labels."

After years of slow motion, this whirling dervish activity has sent the food industry scurrying to make dozens of labeling changes. The industry says it is going to be very difficult to meet the deadlines because 14,000 companies will be required to modify 94,000 labels. The FDA estimates the total cost of relabeling at $250 million.

"This is FDA's big catch-up balloon act," said John R. Cady, president of the National Food Processors Association. "It's let's get well overnight."

Cady said the food industry did not mean to belittle the agency's efforts, but it should have tried to "get a better sense of what is doable in X amount of time."

Consumer groups have generally applauded the agency's work. Some of the proposals were mandated by Congress, and others were developed at the FDA.

"Their proposed regulations resolve a number of long-standing consumer problems," said Bruce Silverglade, chief counsel to the Center for Science in the Public Interest, an advocacy group that has been lobbying for many of the changes. "They are terrific, as far as they go."

The proposals have produced little argument from industry. "Some of this stuff has been kicking around so long and the industry has been talking privately to the FDA for so long," said Jeff Nedelman, vice-president of public affairs for the Grocery Manufacturers of America. "We are generally supportive of what the FDA is doing."

He said the the only real point of controversy was over the issue of trade secret formulas, referring to the requirement that companies list by percentage the fruit juices they use in their blends.

But Silverglade said that argument was specious. "This information is routinely put on the label for any products American companies sell in Thailand," he said. Thailand is alone among countries in requiring labels to list ingredients by percentage.

The three new changes that are set to go into effect Nov. 8 affect fruit juices, artificial colors and so called standardized foods.

Clarence Thomas must be rejected, feminists say

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Organization for Women announced Friday that it would fight the confirmation of U.S. Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas.

"His nomination is an insult to the life and legacy of Thurgood Marshall and everything that he stood for," declared Patricia Ireland, NOW's national vice president. "He is an extremist. He is out of step with the majority of Americans and he is out of step with the Bill of Rights and the U.S. Constitution."

Ireland, Gloria Steinem and others celebrating NOW's 25th anniversary said Thomas' views would imperil women's rights, civil rights and the right to privacy.

"We're going to Bork him," said Flo Kennedy, a feminist lawyer. "We need to kill him politically."

Robert Bork was nominated to the Supreme Court in 1987 by President Reagan but was rejected by the Senate 58-42. His critics attacked his narrow reading of constitutional protections.

The conservative Thomas was nominated by President Bush to replace Marshall, a liberal and civil rights trailblazer whose retirement will solidify the high court's conservative bent.

"We will not sit quietly by while the Democratic Senate acquiesces to this court-packing strategy," Ireland told reporters. If the court overturns Roe vs. Wade, the ruling that legalized abortion, "both Democrats and Republicans will have to face women at the polls."

Although Thomas has never ruled in an abortion case, abortion rights activists have pointed with alarm to a 1987 speech in which he praised an essay by conservative scholar Lewis Lehrman. In the essay, Lehrman said Roe vs. Wade was unconstitutional and had resulted in a "holocaust."

Texas firm takes blame for phone failures

DALLAS (AP) — A small telephone equipment maker said Friday that a recent spate of phone system breakdowns around the country was caused by glitches in its computer software.

Three telephone companies helped diagnose the problem that cut connections to 10 million customers in the past two weeks, DSC Communications Corp. of Plano, Texas, said in a statement.

The problem shut down phone switching systems in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Washington and Pittsburgh. The last outage hit Pittsburgh on Tuesday.

The companies recreated the problem in a laboratory experiment and designed changes for the software that controls sophisticated telephone switching equipment. Repairs were under way, the company said.

Technicians from DSC, Pacific Bell, Bell Atlantic and the Bellcore research lab worked together to diagnose the problem, the company said. DSC designed and installed switching networks for Bell Atlantic and Pacific Bell.

DSC likened the problem to a power line surge that caused network congestion, with calls backing up until the entire system shuts down.

It was unclear whether the affected phone companies were satisfied with DSC's diagnosis and repair solution.

A software change was being installed in the Bell Atlantic and Pacific Bell systems to eliminate the problem, according to the statement.

"This provides protection much like a fuse on a power line," the company said.

A company spokesman could not immediately be reached for further comment. DSC's headquarters was closed for the holiday Friday.

The company released its statement about the change after the stock market closed Friday. The company's stock closed unchanged at $6.25 in over-the-counter trading, but well off its 52-week high of $13.75.

Some experts who follow the company had speculated the problems with DSC's equipment resulted from rushing it to market without adequate testing.

U.S. to end opposition to exploitation ban

N.Y. Times News Service

The United States will end its isolated opposition to an international treaty imposing a 50-year ban on mineral exploitation of Antarctica, President Bush has announced.

Environmental advocates praised the administration's decision to sign a protocol protecting the Antarctic environment, which had been approved by 38 other nations.

The action appears to have ended an increasingly heated confrontation between the White House, on the one hand, and congressional leaders, pro-environment groups and foreign governments, on the other.

In a statement made on Wednesday at Rapid City, S.D., Bush explicitly supported limits on tourism, waste disposal and marine pollution in Antarctica, as well as "restrictions on mineral activity."

The environmental advocacy group Greenpeace issued a statement saying:

"We are pleased that President Bush has acknowledged the importance of protecting Antarctica." The statement added: "That recognition carries with it a responsibility to lead the way for permanent protection of our last continental wilderness."

'We are pleased that President Bush has acknowledged the importance of protecting Antarctica.'

— Greenpeace statement on administration's decision

The United States has long insisted that mineral exploitation of Antarctica be subject to international regulation in the interest of protecting the fragile habitats along the continent's fringe. But Washington had flatly opposed outright permanent bans on mining, oil extraction and other forms of commercial exploitation.

After long negotiations, however, the State Department tentatively agreed to a protocol to the 1959 Antarctic Treaty that would prohibit mining for the next 50 years, but which would allow any nation signing the treaty to withdraw from the agreement.

Representatives of the 39 nations party to the agreement met in Madrid last month with the expectation of signing it on June 23, the treaty's 30th anniversary.

The accord demilitarized Antarctica, suspended all territorial claims on the continent, and limited activities to scientific research. The treaty was subject to review at the end of 30 years.

But on the eve of the signing of the new protocol, the U.S. delegation said it needed more time, since Bush intended to introduce wording that would allow signing nations to withdraw from the agreement fairly easily, even before the expiration of the 50-year mining ban.

In his statement, Bush did not say when the United States would sign the protocol.

Germany to split Parliament houses

The World

BERLIN (AP) — The federal nature of united Germany got a boost Friday as the upper house of Parliament voted to remain in Bonn while the government and more powerful lower house move to Berlin.

The Bundesrat, whose 68 members are not directly elected but are delegates from the 16 state governments, thus took what some speakers called a risky decision to separate from the government's main organs.

The Bundesrat voted 38-30 to remain in Bonn, but also to review later the experience in cooperating with the government and the lower house, or Bundestag, after they move to Berlin.

The Bundestag voted by a narrow margin on June 20 to move itself and the government to Berlin, the legal capital according to the treaty that united East and West Germany last year.

The lower house's decision capped a scrappy debate weighing the mixed symbolism of Berlin — capital of the old aggressive Germany but also embodying today's hopes for a peaceful, united Europe — against the comfort and economy of staying in Bonn.

By contrast, the upper house decision came after only two hours of unemotional speeches, and Berlin's delegates were among the majority that went for Bonn.

No other European country has tried such a separation of the legislative houses. The decision reflects the deliberate separation of powers and the dispersal of government bodies in West Germany since its establishment in 1949.

While Bonn had the government and parliament, the highest court — the Federal Constitutional Court — went to Karlsruhe. The Bundesbank, or central bank, is in Frankfurt. The anti-espionage agency, the Office for Protecection of the Constitution, is in Cologne, while the Federal Criminal Office headquarters is in Wiesbaden.

The Bundesrat, known as the states' chamber, has a say only on bills affecting the states. Almost all legislation starts in the 662-seat Bundestag, and then the upper house only has the right to reject a bill or suggest changes, which would be negotiated in a two-house committee.

The government has not set a timetable for moving to Berlin, a metropolis of 3.4 million people. Planning is to be completed by the end of this year, and the move is expected to take 10 to 12 years.

Bonn, a Rhine River town of 300,000 people, will keep some federal ministries and remain a national administrative center, though real estate values are likely to suffer as thousands of officials move to the capital.

Bonn Mayor Hans Daniels welcomed the Bundesrat's vote to stay put, calling it a decision that will strengthen federalism and "a clear sign of hope in a difficult time for Bonn."

Eritreans refuse to join new government

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — A transitional government comprising former rebel groups was formed Friday to prepare the nation's first democratic elections, but secessionist Eritrean leaders refused to join the alliance.

The government, which is dominated by guerrillas who toppled former President Mengistu Haile Mariam in late May, inherits an empty treasury, heavy debts and the problem of feeding 7 million famine victims.

Established at the close of a week-long national conference, the new government is to draft a new constitution and hold elections within two years.

The government — an 87-member Council of Representatives — is made up of 27 ethnic and political groups, and is dominated by two of the three former rebel groups that ended Mengistu's 17-year Marxist rule and drove him into exile.

The Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front, a coalition of four parties that has acted as an interim government, received 32 seats. The smaller Oromo Liberation Front got 12 — giving the two groups a majority.

The remaining factions received between one and three seats apiece in a deal forged before the conference.

The conference withheld appointment of six seats to other groups not represented at the Addis Ababa meeting.

The Eritrean People's Liberation Front, which fought for 30 years for the liberation of Ethiopia's northernmost province, declined to participate in the transitional government.

But its leaders attended the conference as observers and came away with support for a U.N.-supervised referendum on independence in Eritrea in mid-1993.

In exchange, the Eritreans promised Ethiopia free access to the Red Sea port of Assab, which handles 70 percent of the country's imports and exports and contains its only oil refinery.

Issaias Aferwerke, the Liberation Front leader, told a news conference that Eritrea is steadily moving toward independence.

"We are told by legal experts that we have a long way to go to achieve independence," he said. "But, I will tell you, as far as I and the people of Eritrea are concerned, Eritrea is independent."

The Eritreans have set up their own provisional government in the province.

Meles Zenawai, the Revolutionary Democratic Front leader who chaired the conference, said the council of representatives would meet for the first time within a week or two.

It will choose the transitional president, who will name a prime minister, who will then select a cabinet. Meles is considered the likely choice to become the transitional president.

8 countries move to shut down bank tied to Noriega

By Cotten Timberlake
Associated Press writer

LONDON — Eight countries joined on Friday to seize assets and shut down operations of a large private bank once implicated in money laundering for deposed Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega.

The Bank of England cited evidence of widespread fraud going back years for the concerted action against the Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA, which operates in 69 countries and has an estimated $20 billion in assets.

Banking authorities in Luxembourg, the Cayman Islands, the United States, Switzerland, Spain, Canada, and France also moved against BCCI on Friday.

Robin Leigh-Pemberton, governor of the Bank of England, said evidence suggested BCCI was loaning money to business executives without expecting to be repaid or was fabricating the existence of loans.

"It is large. It is extensive. It has probably been going on for some time," Leigh-Pemberton told a news conference. "There was concealment of losses, false accounting, and other devices which has been highly deceptive."

In the United States, where BCCI's operations had been curtailed in recent months, banking authorities seized control of the bank's branches in New York and California.

"It's unique as far as we know," said a Bank of England official, speaking on condition of anonymity. "So far as we're aware we can't think of anything that has been as big as far as the number of institutions and the scope."

Not all BCCI operations were affected. The BCC (Emirates), a commercial banking operation based in Abu Dhabi, and Bank of Credit and Commerce Hong Kong Ltd. were still operating, for example.

Britain's central bank said it has referred the case to a British prosecuting agency, the Serious Fraud Office.

BCCI officials had no comment, a London switchboard operator said, referring calls to the central bank.

Once one of the world's largest private banks, BCCI is registered in Luxembourg and based in Abu Dhabi, the largest of the United Arab Emirates. The bank is controlled by the ruler of Abu Dhabi and president of the U.A.E., Sheik Zayed Al Nahayan.

Two divisions of BCCI pleaded guilty in Tampa, Fla., last year to laundering $14 million as part of a $32 million global money-laundering case.

Five former BCCI bankers and a Colombian businessman were also convicted of conspiracy and drug money-laundering counts.

A U.S. investigation of BCCI has showed it laundered money for Noriega, the ex-Panamanian dictator seized by U.S. authorities last year and now facing bribery charges in Miami. The investigation also showed one of the convicted BCCI officers, Amjad Awan, once served as Noriega's personal banker. BCCI itself was never charged with laundering Noriega's money.

Friday's joint action does not affect U.S. banks in which BCCI has a controlling interest, First American Bankshares of Washington, and Independence Bank of Encino, Calif., the Federal Reserve Board said.

First American was known as Financial General Bankshares when it was taken over by Credit and Commerce American Holdings.

The money-laundering scandal has raised questions about the involvement of First American's chairman, former U.S. Defense Secretary Clark Clifford.

Clifford, an adviser to presidents for nearly half a century, has said he and his associates were never told that the holding company had any connection with BCCI.

Clifford now is under federal investigation to determine if he or his associates concealed the BCCI interests.

The accounting firm Touche Ross has been appointed by the British courts to oversee the BCCI's assets, which total about $7.4 billion in Britain and Luxembourg, the Bank of England said.

"The purpose of the actions now taken is to safeguard the interests of depositors, other bona fide creditors and the shareholders themselves," it said. "Without such action there would be likely to be pressure from depositors and other creditors."

BCCI was founded in the early 1970s by Pakistani banker Agha Hasan Abedi and grew over the years. It is the private bank of the Abu Dhabi royal family.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Boxer Akeem Anifowoshe, against his doctor's advice, checked out of Baptist Medical Center Thursday and went back home to Las Vegas.

Anifowoshe, 22, is recovering from brain trauma sustained in his June 15 fight against San Antonio's Robert Quiroga.

The native Nigerian left the hospital at 6:20 p.m., surrounded by his wife Sharon, hospital security guards, friends and relatives.

"Yes, I'm happy to be going home," Anifowoshe told the San Antonio Express-News. "I feel better."

But his doctor said he may be leaving prematurely.

He appeared tired and had to be helped from his hospital bed to a wheelchair. Security guards led Anifowoshe to an alternate exit to avoid contact with the media.

"(Anifowoshe) can handle the flight home well," said Dr. Gerardo Zavala, the neurological surgeon who operated on Anifowoshe. "But why risk something if there is no need to? I wanted him to stay at least until they found a doctor in Las Vegas."

Finals have Teutonic flavor

■ Germans Boris Becker, Michael Stich and Steffi Graf take three of the four spots in Wimbledon's singles finals.

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Welcome to Wimblefest.

Boris Becker, No. 1 again, and Michael Stich set up Wimbledon's first all-German men's final Friday, beating a gutsy young American and the most graceful of Swedes suddenly turned klutz.

Another German, Steffi Graf, goes for her third Wimbledon women's title on Saturday against Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini.

Three-time champion Becker, diving and rolling as ever, beat David Wheaton 6-4, 7-6 (7-4), 7-5 to reach the final on Centre Court for the fourth straight year.

Becker's victory lifted his ranking back to No. 1, replacing Stefan Edberg, but he didn't run from the stadium as he did when he first gained the top spot by winning the Australian Open in January.

"Now, I didn't think about it at all," Becker said.

That reign lasted only a few weeks. This one is likely to last at least until the U.S. Open.

But Becker won't be looking across the net at Edberg in the final Sunday. Edberg beat him in 1988, lost to him in 1989 and beat him again last year.

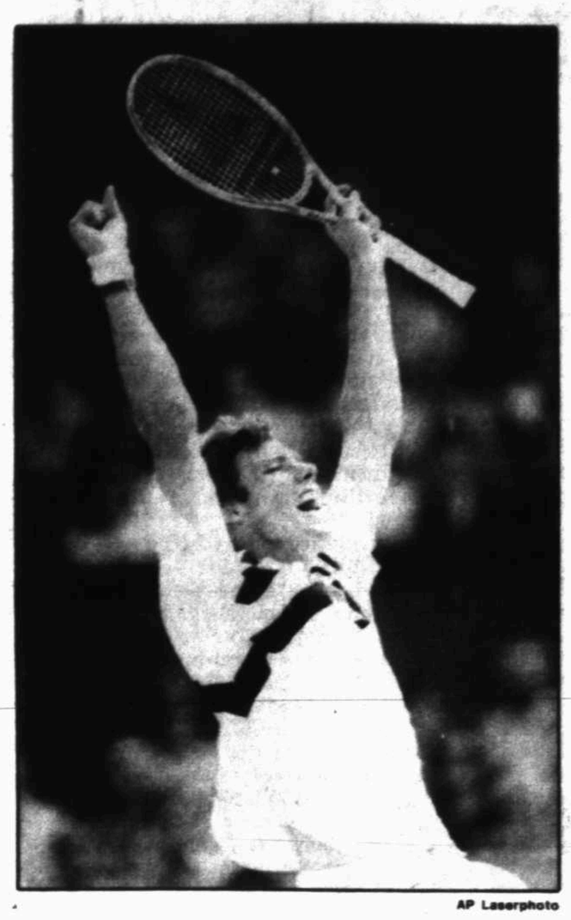

A wild serve, a flubbed overhead and a crazy net cord bounce brought the curtain down on Edberg, a usually elegant performer who looked like a weekend hacker at the most crucial moments.

Stich, so implacable that he even slugged Edberg with a ball in the chest, beat the Swede in three tiebreakers to end three hours of edge-of-the-seat tension.

The Duchess of York — the popular "Princess Fergie" — led the Royal Box and stadium fans in a standing ovation.

Becker watched excitedly as his Davis Cup partner and friend gained his first Grand Slam final, then slapped his hand.

"We gave each other the high fives, and said, 'Let's make an all-German final," Becker said. But he added that he did not relish playing his compatriot in such an important match.

Michael Stich exults over his semifinal defeat of defending Wimbledon champion Stefan Edberg.

"It's not easy because you know each other so well," said Becker, who will be playing his sixth Wimbledon final. "He's a person I know really well. It's much easier to play somebody you hate. Probably the Wimbledon final brings that out."

Stich's 4-6, 7-6 (7-5), 7-6, (7-5), 7-6 (7-2) masterpiece turned on a handful of key points, some fashioned by him, others blown by Edberg.

"I played a few bad shots at important times. That was the whole story of the match," Edberg said. "I gave it away."

Edberg, who hadn't dropped a set in the tournament, never lost his service against Stich but had no quarrel with the tiebreaker system in the Grand Slam.

"Otherwise, we'd still be in the second set out there," he said.

The countdown to Stich's upset began early in the second-set tiebreaker after Edberg had yielded only five points on serve in the opening set and three in the second.

Edberg double-faulted twice in that tiebreaker, the second time clubbing his second serve wildly beyond the doubles lane to fall behind 6-4. He came back with a service winner, but lost the set on a service winner by Stich.

The third set also went with serve all the way, though not without some lost opportunities by both players. Stich had three break points in the 11th game, but he netted an easy backhand at 0-40 that allowed Edberg back in. Edberg ripped off two service winners and two killer volleys to hold, then seemed on the verge of taking the set when Stich double-faulted to 0-30 in the 12th game.

Stich, a semifinalist last month in the French Open, showed his mettle this time by holding with four straight points, the last three on a pair of service winners and an ace.

Edberg jumped ahead 4-2 in the tiebreaker with a brilliant backhand passing shot, then got down on his knee and pumped his fist — his first sign of emotion and an indication that he thought he had turned the match around.

But two points later, Stich made it 4-4 with a forehand return crosscourt that floated safely into the corner while Edberg stared as if it were a treasure he let get away. And so it was.

Madrid hopes to silence critics

■ Though Midland High pitching star James Madrid is playing in tonight's coaches All-Star game, he probably won't get to take the mound.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

As James Madrid prepares for tonight's Texas High School Baseball Coaches Association All-Star game at the Astrodome in Houston, his future looks about as bright as some of the minds he will surely encounter at Rice University come autumn.

Madrid, who graduated from Midland High this year with a 4.45 grade point average (on a 5.0 scale), is coming off his third year as a varsity pitcher for the Bulldogs. He compiled a 21-5 record in that span, while posting a 0.97 ERA his senior year to help the 'Dogs to their second straight bi-district championship.

"I've never stepped up on a mound and was scared of a team — maybe nervous, but never scared.'

— James Madrid

He also will be on an athletic scholarship at Rice, where he said he will primarily be a pitcher.

So local fans are naturally curious when they see him listed as a third baseman for the South team in tonight's game. But the 5-11, 190-pound righthander has an

Owners approve expansion

Associated Press

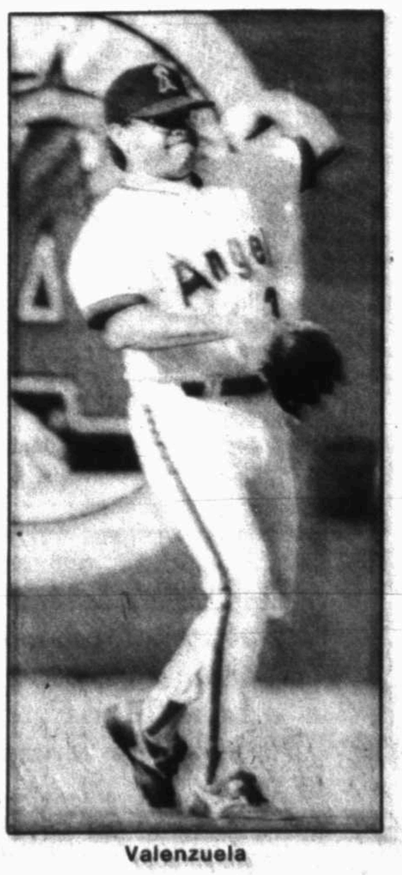

NEW YORK — Denver and Miami were given formal and final approval Friday as the National League's expansion franchises and immediately began preparations for their 1993 debuts.

Denver named its team the Colorado Rockies and Miami will call itself the Florida Marlins. They will be the first new major league teams since 1977 and the first new members of the National League since 1969.

The unanimous decision of the 26 major league owners, who met by telephone conference call, was anticlimatic. The NL expansion committee's recommendation of the two cities became public on June 10 and there was never a doubt that owners would approve it.

"It's been almost a year since this process was set into motion," Rockies chairman John Antonucci said. "When we delivered the expansion application to the

California puts Valenzuela on unconditional waivers

Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Fernando Valenzuela, hit hard in two starts with California and sidelined by a heart problem, was placed on unconditional release waivers Friday by the Angels.

Valenzuela will become a free agent for the second time this year if he is not claimed off waivers by Wednesday. If he is not claimed, the Angels said they would invite him to pitch for Edmonton, their Class AAA farm team in the Pacific Coast League.

The pitcher's lawyer, Richard Moss, said Valenzuela hasn't decided whether he will go to the minors.

"He'll review all his options and decide what to do in a week or so," Moss said, expressing doubt the left-hander would be claimed off waivers.

In two starts — losses to Detroit on June 7 and Milwaukee on June 12 — Valenzuela allowed 10 runs and 14 hits in 6 2-3 innings. He gave up three homers and had an ERA of 12.15.

Valenzuela was placed on the disabled list on June 13 after a physical revealed an abnormal cardiogram test. Additional tests showed he had a rare condition called myo-cardio bridging of the left descending artery, which supplies blood to the heart muscle.

"When the heart muscle contracts, the vessel is crimped periodically," the Angels said in a statement.

Valenzuela, 30, was given oral medication and further testing and was given approval to return to pitching on Monday. Doctors said the condition would not affect his athletic performance.

Moss said even though the tests found no heart problem, the pitcher would have required more than 20 days rehabilitation.

"He's gone through this whole rigamarole, but in the meantime he's lost two or three weeks," Moss said. "We're disappointed because we think Fernando can pitch in the major leagues."

Moss said he believes the Angels, who have been using a four-man rotation since Valenzuela was disabled, want to trade for a pitcher and need

Rangers shred Langston, 8-0

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Jose Guzman outdueled Mark Langston for his third straight win Friday night as Texas trounced California 8-0 and jumped past the Angels into second place in the AL West.

Guzman (4-3) shut out California on three hits for six innings before giving way to Mike Jeffcoat, who pitched three innings for his first save of the season.

The Rangers raked Langston (12-3) for seven hits and seven runs in five innings, including homers by Brian Downing and Jose Gonzalez. Langston, one of the candidates to start next week's All-Star Game, had won his last six starts, including a 6-2 win over Texas on Monday night in Anaheim.

Gonzalez, Steve Buechele and Ivan Rodriguez had two RBI apiece to lead the Rangers.

Guzman worked out of jams in the fourth and fifth. He got Lance Parrish and Gary Gaetti to fly out with the bases loaded in the fourth. In the fifth, with a runner at third and one out, Guzman got Dave Gallagher to fly out, and Wally Joyner lined out.

Red Sox 10, Tigers 1

BOSTON — Jack Clark drove in seven runs, including three with his 11th homer, and Kevin Morton allowed only five hits in his major league debut as Boston foiled Detroit's bid to move up in the AL East standings.

Clark drove in a run with a fielder's-choice grounder in the first, singled home two runs in the second with his first hit with the bases loaded since a grand slam in the season opener in Toronto, and then capped Boston's nine-hit attack on Walt Terrell (4-9) with his homer over the high screen in left in the sixth.

White Sox 4, Twins 2

CHICAGO — Robin Ventura's three-run homer in the seventh inning lifted the Chicago White Sox to a win over Minnesota as Jack McDowell beat Jack Morris in a battle of All-Star righthanders.

McDowell (10-4) went 7 23 innings, giving up two runs on six hits. He has won five of his last six decisions.

Morris (11-6) had his streak of eight straight victories snapped, but tied McDowell for the major league lead in complete games with his sixth. He allowed seven hits.

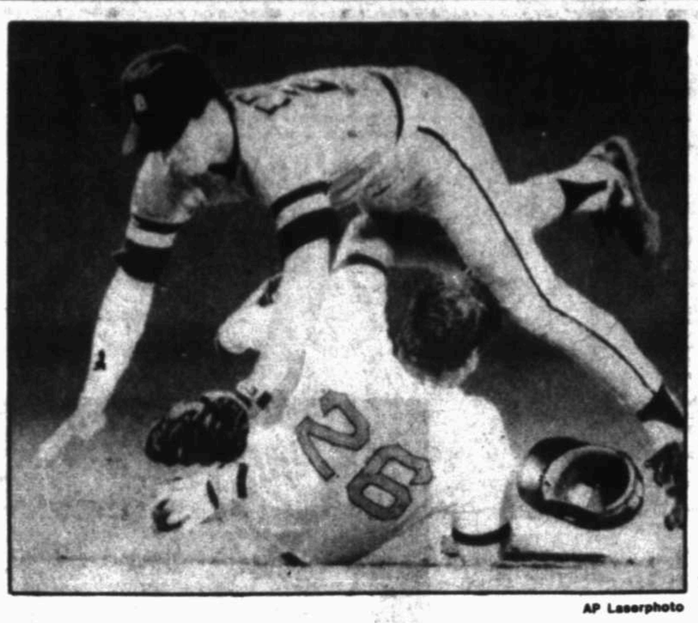

Bobby Thigpen got the last three outs for his 17th save.

Orioles 7, Yankees 4

NEW YORK — Sam Horn and Randy Milligan hit home runs and Baltimore beat New York, ending the Yankees' six-game winning streak.

Horn and Milligan each added RBI singles as the Orioles stopped their three-game losing streak. Baltimore had lost four straight to the Yankees this season and six in a row over two years.

Pat Sheridan's leadoff homer started a four-run burst in the sixth inning as New York rallied from a 5-0 deficit. The Yankees, who had won nine of the last 10, were trying to reach the .500 mark for the first time since the first week of the season.

Athletics 9, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jose Canseco hit a grand slam for Oakland's second slam in as many days and the Athletics capitalized on a career-high seven walks by Kansas City's Tom Gordon to beat the Royals.

Canseco hit the second grand slam of his career in the fourth after Gordon walked the bases full with two outs. The homer knocked out Gordon (5-7), the loser of four straight and winless in his last seven appearances.

Brewers 4, Indians 2

CLEVELAND — Rookie first baseman Reggie Jefferson committed a bases-loaded error, letting two runs score and spoiling his first American League home run as Milwaukee beat Cleveland, ending a six-game losing streak.

Winner Bill Wegman (4-3) pitched eight innings, giving up two runs on six hits, walking one and striking out two. Dan Plesac pitched a perfect ninth for his sixth save.

The Indians lost for the eighth time in nine games.

Blue Jays 2, Mariners 1

SEATTLE — Roberto Alomar's RBI double, his third hit of the game, in the eighth inning gave the Toronto Blue Jays a victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Angels win again, in four way tie for first

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Angels moved into a tie for first place in the Texas League Western Division's second half race Friday night with a 6-4 win over the San Antonio Missions.

The Angels and Missions both have 7-7 records, but then again, so do the El Paso Diablos and Wichita Wranglers. El Paso routed the Wranglers 15-4 Friday to bring on the four-way tie involving each team in the West.

The Angels scored three in the first, two in the fifth on a two-out home run by Don Barbara, and an insurance run in the seventh in a game they never trailed.

Fili Martinez (2-2) pitched 7⅔ innings for the win with Mark Zappelli picking up his ninth save for the Angels. Jesse James (9-5) received the loss for the Missions.

The Missions' Raul Mondesi, in his first game at the Class AA level, was ejected from the game after being hit in the back by a Martinez pitch and charging the mound. A punch was thrown by both Martinez and Mondesi, and Mondesi, considered one of the top prospects in the Dodgers organization, was tackled by Angel catcher Larry Gonzales. Both benches cleared, but no further incidents occurred.

Martinez, who said he was merely trying to "come inside" with the pitch, was not ejected.

Midland's Reggie Williams upped his hitting streak to 12 games and Mark Howie riased his batting average again, finishing with two hits in four trips to the plate. Howie entered the contest at .370, tops in the Texas League among active players.

Dave Shotkoski (3-8) starts for the Angels tonight; Albert Bustillos (2-1), will throw for San Antonio.

Expos end 11-game losing streak by dropping Pirates

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Montreal's 11-game slide — the longest in the majors this season — ended as Dennis Martinez had a complete game and Dave Martinez the decisive hit, giving the Expos a 4-3 victory Friday night over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Expos, who had lost eight straight to Pittsburgh, won for only the second time in their last 14 games and the ninth in 41 against National League East teams. The Pirates, 30-12 against the East, had won seven of nine and 16 of their last 19 against division teams.

Dennis Martinez (10-5) withstood 11 Pittsburgh hits, a botched fly ball and losing pitcher John Smiley's RBI single to become the NL's fourth 10-game winner. Martinez walked two and struck out one in pitching his fifth complete game.

Smiley (9-6) walked Dennis Martinez with one out in the seventh and Marquis Grissom greeted reliever Vicente Palacios with his third hit of a game, a single to left. Expos manager Tom Runnells, playing the percentages, then lifted the right-handed hitting Spike Owen — who had two doubles and two RBIs in three at-bats — for the left-handed hitting Dave Martinez, who doubled in Dennis Martinez.

Andy Van Slyke extended his hitting streak to nine games with a run-scoring single in the first, but Montreal — held to one run or less in its previous 70 innings — took a 2-1 lead in the third on Owen's two-run double.

Reds 1, Astros 0

HOUSTON — Winning pitcher Chris Hammond had two of Cincinnati's five hits and scored the game's only run, leading the surging Reds to a victory over Pete Harnisch and the Houston Astros.

Harnisch (5-7) had 22 consecutive shutout innings until the Reds scored in the third. He gave up five hits while striking out three and walking three in his fourth complete game.

Rob Dibble got his 23rd save in as many opportuities to tie Lee Smith of St. Louis for the National League lead. Dibble allowed three hits — but no runs because catcher Joe Oliver threw out pinch-runner Gerald Young trying to steal second — in the ninth after Randy Myers pitched two hitless innings.

Hammond (7-5) won his fourth straight game, beating Houston for the third time this season as Cincinnati made it nine victories in 11 outings. He allowed two hits in six innings, walked one and struck out a career high six.

Mets 3, Phillies 1

PHILADELPHIA — Dwight Gooden pitched eight strong innings and Howard Johnson drove in two runs as the New York Mets beat the staggering Philadelphia Phillies for their fifth straight victory.

Gooden, who also had a single and scored a run, allowed only three hits while striking out nine and walking three. John Franco allowed a hit and a walk in the ninth, but got his 18th save.

Johnson had a sacrifice fly in the first and a run-scoring double to give the Mets a 2-1 lead in the third off Danny Cox (3-2). Johnson has 61 RBIs to lead the National League.

Gooden (8-6) was knocked out after just 4 1-3 innings Sunday as the Phillies beat the Mets 10-9 in New York. The only run he allowed this time came on a single by Dale Murphy in the first as the Mets handed the Phillies their 10th loss in 13 games.

Cox gave up five hits, and three runs, struck out three and walked four in seven innings.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Ryne Sandberg circled the bases on a two-error play that scored two runs, and rookie Frank Castillo won his first major league game as the Chicago Cubs beat the St. Louis Cardinals.

Castillo (1-0) pitched a six-hitter, walking two and striking out four. Castillo, who allowed a run in the fourth inning, pitched only the second complete game of the season for the Cubs.

St. Louis, the National League's top fielding club (with 44 errors) committed three misplays. Two occurred after Chico Walker opened the game with a double off Jose DeLeon (3-7) and Mark Grace lined out.

Padres 4, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Ed Whitson, bosltered by three solo homers, won for the first time since coming off the disabled list as the San Diego Padres beat the troubled San Francisco Giants.

Giants manager Roger Craig, angered by a local columnist's charges of dissension among his players, called a pre-game team meeting. The Giants have lost four straight games on their homestand.

San Diego got homers from Fred McGriff, Benito Santiago and Darrin Jackson as Whitson (4-6) pitched six innings to win for the first time since May 26.

EXPANSION: Miami team named Florida Marlins

league office in September, we probably were the longest of all long shots. ... But we perservered. We convinced the expansion committee and major league baseball that this city and this region would support major league baseball."

Miami had been considered the expansion favorite since last autumn, when Blockbuster Entertainment Corp. chairman H. Wayne Huizenga said he would become sole owner and pay the entire $95 million expansion fee.

"It's a very exciting and emotional day for us here in the Huizenga family," he said. "We're all enthused and excited about it."

The new franchises will give the NL and the American League 14 teams each. The NL is expected to adopt a schedule in which teams will play divisional opponents 20 teams per season and teams in the other division six times each. AL teams currently play 13 games against division foes and 12 against those in the other division.

Some in Denver had hoped the team would be called the Denver Bears, the former nickname of Denver's minor league team. In addition, some objected to calling the team the Rockies, the name of Denver's failed NHL franchise.

"This is a Colorado team," Gov. Roy Romer said. "What I think of when I think of the Rockies is you're looking from the top down on the rest of them. And after a couple of years, I'm confident this team will be doing just that."

Colorado unveiled its logo, featuring a soaring white baseball against a snow-capped purple mountain backdrop. The Rockies will wear black caps with purple buttons on top. They will have an interlocking purple "C" and "R" outlined in silver.

"The Colorado Rockies are internationally recognized as the prominent feature of our state," Antonucci said. "They represent strength, stability, boldness, majesty and beauty. Our goal is to build a franchise as strong and enduring as the Rocky Mountains themselves."

Florida will unveil its logo on July 18. Its colors are expected to be aqua and orange, also the colors of the NFL's Dolphins and the NBA's Heat.

Colorado will start play in Mile High Stadium, current home of the Zephyrs of the Class AAA American Association. The Rockies are scheduled to move into a 43,000-seat, baseball-only stadium in 1995. The ballpark, Coors Field, will be built in downtown Denver.

The Marlins will play in Joe Robbie Stadium, the home of the Dolphins.

Former Dolphin leads celebrity golf tourney

LAKE TAHOE, Nev. (AP) — Former Miami Dolphins safety Dick Anderson shot a 4-under-par 68 Friday for a 4-stroke lead in the $400,000 Celebrity Golf Association championship.

Anderson shot a 33 on the front nine and then 35 for a CGA championship record in the first day of the event at the Edgewood Tahoe Golf Course.

His performance gave him a four-shot lead over Detroit Pistons center Bill Laimbeer and Steve Bartkowski, former Atlanta Falcons' quarterback.

The 54-hole celebrity golf tournament continues today and Sunday.

"The key to this course is to keep it in play," said Anderson, a former All-Pro safety who finished as the runnerup to Mark Rypien in the inaugural CGA Championship last year. "This year, I thought even-par could win it and I still do, but I'm sure going to try to play better than that."

Laimbeer, a key member of the two-time NBA champions in 1989 and 1990, fired an even-par 72 (35-37) and was tied with Bartkowski, a 12-year NFL veteran who shot a 36 on both the front and back nines.

Denver Broncos quarterback John Elway and actor Jack Wagner of the soap opera "Santa Barbara" each shot one-over par 73s.

Rypien shot a 75 (39-36) to finish seven behind Anderson. Michael Jordan of the NBA champion Chicago Bulls shot a disappointing 19-over 91.

Overall, there were 76 players in the championship.

MADRID: Heat not the only standard for good pitchers

explanation.

"When they turned in all the names from this area, I didn't have as many innings as a lot of pitchers from the Metroplex or Houston areas," said Madrid, whose sore throwing shoulder kept him from pitching more than one non-district game. "That's pretty much what it all goes on, is stats, so they thought I had a better chance going as a third baseman."

Between his single error in the 1991 season and a .538 batting average in 12 District 4-5A games, the selection committee had little room to argue — Madrid can play the game. But there remains a knock against him as a pitcher.

The "book" says that hurlers possessing Division I collegiate or professional potential must be taller than six feet and throw faster than 90 mph.

Madrid's fastball has been clocked as high at 85 mph on the Ray Gun, the slower of the two types of radar guns used to gauge pitchers. But his velocity dropped off after the early-season injury. That's why his scholarship choices were limited to Rice, Texas Tech, New Mexico State, Lubbock Christian and a bevy of junior colleges.

"A lot of colleges didn't think I threw hard enough, but it's not all just throwing hard. I'm a pitcher and I can throw 82-83 the whole game. This year I lost all velocity when I messed up my shoulder," said Madrid, who relied on a changeup, a wicked slider and ball placement to go 7-3 his final high school season.

"A lot of people think of pitchers as being tall, being able to throw 90 mph. I'd like to prove to myself I can throw harder than I do now, I know I can. I'd like to be able to throw 84-85 consistently.

"I'm real excited about playing in the Southwest Conference. It's one of those things when your are young you want to do. It's always been, I guess you could say, a dream or a goal to play in SWC," the softspoken Madrid said.

"They say I don't throw ball hard enough to compete on that type of level. But there are pitchers in the pros right now that don't throw any harder than I do. I guess I can try to prove to them I can make it without throwing the ball over 90 mph.

"I've never stepped up on a mound and was scared of a team — maybe nervous, but never scared — and I've played against some guys who are playing Division I in college and are going to be playing in the pros in 5-6 years, if not sooner."

And though Madrid, who said his tentative plan is to study engineering, claims getting his degree takes top priority, he can't help but foster dreams of a major league career, such as MHS alums Mike Stanton and Mike Timlin before him.

"Anyone who plays baseball will look at a professional career, but I'm just going to work hard at Rice. The main thing is to get my degree," Madrid said. "But if I do well and get drafted, it would be something I would like to try."

But for now, he will be content to hone his study habits for Rice, where the baseball tradition is not so great but the academic requirements are the stuff of legend.

"It's probably one of the biggest challenges of my life. I was looking for a school with high academic standards, and was thinking about going to Texas A&M or Texas just academically.

"But Rice never really entered my mind because they are so selective about who they let in," said Madrid, who was ranked 52nd among MHS' 407 graduating seniors.

FERNANDO: Lefty could earn $300,000 from Angels

(From 1B)

Valenzuela's roster spot.

Valenzuela made three minor league appearances before his American League debut. He pitched twice for Class AA Midland of the Texas League and once for Class A Palm Springs of the California League.

If not claimed, Valenzuela will receive $300,000 from the Angels. The guarantee on his contract would have increased to $500,000 if he remained on the roster on July 15 and $750,000 if he remained on the roster on Sept. 1.

In addition, he received $630,495 termination pay from the Los Angeles Dodgers after he was released in March from a $2.55 million, one-year contract.

Valenzuela debuted with the Dodgers in 1980. In 1981, his first full season, he won the National League's Rookie of the Year and Cy Young awards. He was 141-116 with a 3.31 ERA in 10 years with the Dodgers.

He is eighth in Dodgers history in victories (141), sixth in starts (320), fifth in strikeouts (1,759), eighth in innings (2,348 2-3) and seventh in shutouts (29).

The native of Navojoa, Sonora, Mexico, wowed Hispanic fans, prompting "Fernandomania" in the Los Angeles area. When he was released by the Dodgers on March 28, there was a call to boycott the team by a local Hispanic group.

Olympic Festival played in Peoria, but how about LA?

By Wendy E. Lane
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The U.S. Olympic Festival was a big deal in Minneapolis-St. Paul, Oklahoma City and Durham-Raleigh, N.C. But will it play in LA?

With the start of the 37-sport competition less than a week away, promoters are waiting to find out whether a city obsessed with stars and stardom will turn out to see athletes offering only the promise of future celebrity.

In its 11th year, the festival will showcase more than 3,000 developing American athletes in Olympic sports and boasts its own torch relay and opening ceremonies.

Hoping to conjure up memories of the 1984 Olympics, organizers are billing the nine-day event as an opportunity to see the Carl Lewis or Mary Lou Retton of the future.

But in a town where Magic Johnson, Wayne Gretzky and Darryl Strawberry dominate, will people be willing to watch unknowns — regardless of their potential — compete in an Olympic Festival?

"You're talking about a city that's used to the very best in everything — the Lakers, the Kings, the Olympic Games twice," said Elizabeth Primrose-Smith, the festival's executive director.

Primrose-Smith acknowledges that selling the festival in Los Angeles won't be as easy as it was in the smaller cities where festivals previously have been held. Ticket sales, which started slow, are building, and she recalled the sales surge that came only after the start of the '84 Games.

"It's always an unknown until the end," Primrose-Smith said.

What the festival is up against in Los Angeles is a lack of name athletes, lack of name recognition and a plethora of competing diversions; including one division-leading baseball team and another vying for the lead.

Unlike the 1990 Festival in Minneapolis, where ticket sales started in February, festival organizers here didn't even begin selling until May, fearing people would confuse their event with the arts-oriented LA Festival.

But now they say more than half the 40,000 tickets available to the public for Friday's opening ceremonies were sold by midweek, and finals for figure skating, men's basketball and racquetball are sold out.

"Tickets have been affordable priced in comparison to other major sporting events," said festival chairman Harry Usher, noting that prices range between $4 and $16.

The competition definitely isn't Olympic caliber. That's because each of the 37 sports represented has its own governing body that decides where the festival fits in to the year's competition schedule.

"We end up with a pleasant mix of elite, developmental and younger athletes," said Mike Moran, spokesman for the U.S. Olympic Committee.

This year, for instance, the top U.S. swimmers are pointing toward the Pan Pacific Games, held in late August in Edmonton, Alberta. The festival field features top swimmers under age 18 who are not on any of the national teams.

While the U.S. national men's basketball team is gearing up for the Pan Am Games next month in Havana, Cuba, the festival team is made up of rising college freshmen and high school seniors.

However, several sports view the festival as a key tuneup for later competitions. Women's field hockey is getting in its last test on grass fields before the Pan Am Games, which will be contested on grass.

And the boxing competition, expected to be the best of the festival, serves as the selection tournament for the Pan Am Games and November's World Championships. The field includes two-time world champion Eric Griffin, Oscar De La Hoya, Sergio Reyes and Edward Escobedo, all among the top U.S. amateurs.

"Los Angeles represents our athletes' first stop on the road to Barcelona," USA Amateur Boxing Federation president Billy Dove said.

Fittipaldi takes record, provisional pole

CLEVELAND (AP) — Emerson Fittipaldi blazed a track qualifying record on his final lap Friday to hold off hard-charging Michael Andretti in a hot provisional pole duel for Sunday's Cleveland Grand Prix.

Fittipaldi's fast lap of 139.615 mph came as the checkered flag ended the 30-minute qualifying session on the 2.37-mile, 10-turn temporary road course at Burke Lakefront Airport.

It came a tick before Andretti posted a lap of 138.983, good enough for second place on the tentative grid.

The quick lap of the day broke the record of 139.319 set last year by Rick Mears, now Fittipaldi's teammate, on the circuit that was shortened in 1990 from 2.48 miles.

"This is the first day here and the car ran very, very well," Fittipaldi said. "At Detroit and Portland (the last two Indy-car race venues), I had problems the first day, so this was a big improvement. We were able to make some small changes from the practice that really helped."

Fittipaldi was close behind Andretti on the final trip around the circuit. "I guess he was watching me," Michael said, "kind of like Big Brother."

"It's always nice to be able to do that, to see what your competitor is doing, where he's going," Fittipaldi said.

Both agreed that with another day of practice and qualifying, speeds are likely to improve.

"There's one section out there that was repaved and it's very slippery," Andretti said. "With some more running and some more rubber, that's going to get easier to handle and faster."

Mears was a solid third on Friday at 139.428, followed by Bobby Rahal, who blew the engine in his primary car at the start of the session but managed a fast lap of 137.657 in his backup machine.

Scott Pruett was next at 137.252, with defending series champion Al Unser Jr. at 136.693, Mario Andretti 136.575, Hall/VDS driver John Andretti 134.973, Eddie Cheever 134.868 and Arie Luyendyk 134.704 rounding out the top 10.

Tennessee football camp may be in violation

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Some players who attended say Tennessee's summer football camp was an invitation-only affair, a potential rules violation being investigated by the NCAA.

In a letter of inquiry to university officials in April, the NCAA said it had been alleged that one of Tennessee's summer camps was not properly advertised and open to all, as required by NCAA regulations.

Three players who attended the camp told The Knoxville Journal they understood high school players needed an invitation to the camp.

"Everybody there was invited and understood it was an invitation-only camp," said Bobby Kaylor of Cleveland, Tenn., who later signed with East Tennessee State University.

"A lot of guys had potential to go big time. Most of the guys there were real good. There were not too many borderline," he said.

Wade Newman, also from Cleveland, agreed that the camp wasn't opened tdo all. "There was a very good caliber of players there," Newman said.

Kaylor said he has been told the "senior camp" was different from the five-day camp open to youngsters from 13 years old through sophomores in high school.

"The invitation-only camp was the easiest camp I went to," he said. "I didn't think they were bringing us up there so we could learn to be better. They were bringing us up there to see what we could do."

Norman stormin' on, off course

Aussie shoots a 66 Friday, then fires back at his critics

Associated Press

Western Open

LEMONT, Ill. — Greg Norman took 66 shots on the golf course Friday, then leveled a couple of more at his critics.

"Everybody expects things of me," said Norman, the winner of 1986 British Open and 66 other tournaments around the world — but none in more than a year.

"When I don't win, everybody is making up excuses and reasons — that I'm an alcoholic, that I'm seeing a psychologist, that I'm going to quit the American tour and play in Europe.

"I never said anything like that. How can they write that without checking their facts? I don't know where they get all this stuff," the obviously exasperated Norman said Friday.

"It's ridiculous," he snorted. "It's really kind of sad."

A expression of disgust crossed his face and he made a throw-away gesture with his hands.

"That's all history now," he said. "It's behind me."

Ahead of him, over the final two rounds of the Western Open, is a chance to end the frustrating slump that has been accompanied by rumor, speculation and criticism.

He holds a 2-stroke lead at the tournament's halfway point, with a 9-under-par 135 total he said could have been much better.

"I let a great one get away today," Norman said after finishing with a bogey-6 on his last hole, where the wind knocked his third shot into a bunker.

"I missed out on a real low one. It could have been four shots better. Conservatively, the way I played, a 62 definitely was on," he said.

But the effort, he said, "was great for my confidence.

"I never lost faith in my game or myself. I'm a very positive person. But this helps a lot in regaining confidence," he said.

The 2-stroke lead doesn't hurt.

Mark Lye was second alone at 137 after a 71 over the Dubsdread course at Cog Hill, which replaced Butler National as the tournament site this year after the all-male club declined to comply with a PGA Tour policy requiring open membership practices for clubs hosting its tournaments.

Andrew Magee, lefty Russ Cochran, Gary Hallberg and Fred Couples, a winner last week in Memphis, were next at 138.

Couples included an eagle-3 in his round of 68. Magee shot 69, Hallberg 71 and Cochran 72.

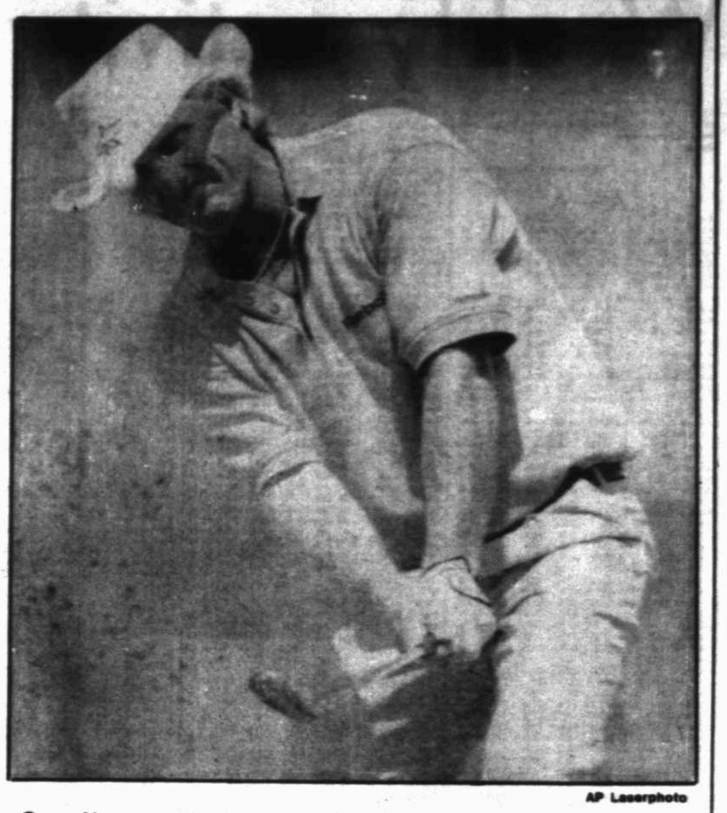

Ray Floyd, one of four tied for the first-round lead, slipped to a 73 and was at 139.

Norman's year-long slump started with a 67-76 drubbing at the hands of Nick Faldo in their third-round head-to-head confrontation at the 1990 British Open. He also missed the cut at the Masters earlier this season, took an unscheduled 3-week vacation when he said he was suffering from burnout, withdrew after 27 holes of the U.S. Open last month.

"A mixed up year. A topsy-turvy last couple of months," said Norman, who takes a daily dose of four over-the-counter pain-killers to combat an aching hip.

The reason for his slump, he said, is very simple.

"Everybody gets into a bad rut from time to time. I just got in one for a while. I hadn't been in one since '81 and I guess it was just my turn," he said. "I'm just glad I'm back. Hopefully, I can keep it going over the weekend."

Seniors

MASON, Ohio — The heralded grouping of three of golf's all-time greats on Friday produced the largest crowd in the history of the Senior PGA Tour, but less than memorable golf.

"I think people got treated to a day you won't see very often," said Jack Nicklaus, whose group included Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino.

"I think it was a very special day to a lot of people in golf because Arnold and myself and Lee have all competed at a high level for a long time. I don't think it was important whether we shot great rounds or not."

The trio drew more than 40,000 people to the first round of the $600,000 Kroger Senior Classic at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center about 20 miles north of Cincinnati.

Nicklaus, Palmer and Trevino had never been in the same group in a tournament, although they had been together for the made-for-television Senior Skins Game.

Of the three, only Trevino broke par on Friday, shooting a 68 which left him two shots out of the lead.

Nicklaus had an even-par 71 over the 6,628-yard Grizzly Course. Palmer, who started the day with a double bogey after hitting his approach into the six-deep gallery, struggled to a 76.

Almost lost in the fuss over the "second coming of senior golf," as one tournament official had called the Palmer-Nicklaus-Trevino threesome, was the play of Dale Douglass, Terry Dill, Al Geiberger and Dudley Wysong, all with 5-under 66s. Larry Laoretti was one shot back.

Defending champion Jim Dent shot a 70.

Richard jumps out early

Associated Press

SYLVANIA, Ohio — A 100-meter sprint is different from a marathon. Deb Richard said its the same with golf.

"I think three-day tournaments are sprints. The thing is to get out of the blocks as fast as you can and you don't slow down," Richard said Friday after shooting a 67 for a one-stroke lead in the opening round of the Jamie Farr Toledo Classic LPGA tournament.

The Farr is the fourth tournament in a row in which Richard has shot a score of 4-under in the first round. But unlike the Rochester International, McDonald's Championship and last week's Mazda LPGA Championship, the Farr is played over three days instead of four.

"In a four-day tournament, you really feel you have a little more play in there," she said. "A great round doesn't help you out as much in a four-day tournament. And a bad round in a three-day tournament will kill you. In a three-day tournament, there's not enough holes to make it up."

Richard, a Florida resident, is having the best season of her six-year professional career. She came into the Farr 11th on the money list with earnings of almost $200,000, more than she had made in any previous year.

She won the Women's Kemper Open and was second in the Corning Classic. That led into her string of 4-under starts.

"My dad keeps reminding me of it," she said. "Well, I guess I can't break my string."

Amateur Vicki Goetze shot a 68 in only her second professional event. She finished 17th in the Nabisco Dinah Shore.

She was joined at 68 by Nancy Rubin, Brandie Burton and Elaine Crosby.

"I didn't qualify for the Open (next week), so I'm treating this like my Open," Rubin said.

Crosby, a native of nearby Birmingham, Mich., said comfort had a lot to do with her 68.

"I like the golf course, I'm close to my home and my family's around cheering me on," she said. "Having grown up in Michigan playing golf, this course is close to what I've played."

After her previous fast starts, Richard finished tied for 16th at Rochester, tied for 24th in the McDonald's and tied for fifth in last week's LPGA Championship.

Another shot back, at 69, were Alice Miller, Carolyn Hill, Diane Heinicke-Rauch and Chris Poling.

Richard had six birdies and one bogey on her card heading into the par-5 18th. She hit her second shot out of bounds, almost holed a 52-yard sand wedge for par and tapped in for bogey.

Goetze, an 18-year-old from Georgia, strung together birdies on the 15th, 16th and 17th holes to finish with her 68. Burton birdied holes 16 and 17, while Rubin and Crosby each birdied the final hole. Crosby missed two par putts from four feet and a birdie putt from the same distance.

Meg Mallon, who won the LPGA Championship last week, was at 1-over 72, and defending U.S. Women's Open champion Betsy King shot 73. Defending Farr champion Tina Purtzer had a 75.

The winner collects $52,500 from a purse of $350,000.

Beware of Sleeping Tigers!

"Dad, come see!" she beckons. "He seems OK. He's soft and he isn't growling at me, but I'm not quite sure."

This young lady may be too young to verbalize these thoughts, but it does appear that she has the need for extra assurance from someone who has more experience and wisdom than she; from someone who can protect her from the "big bad wolves" of the world, especially those who wear the proverbial "sheep's clothing."

Are there "big bad wolves" in your life? Perhaps a situation appears to be harmless and desirable . . . very tempting . . . but you are not quite sure. In the case of this young lady, her stuffed tiger is harmless enough; yet, a sleeping tiger, too, is satiny soft and does not growl. But, what if it awakes!

When you are in doubt concerning whether a deed or a thought is harmful to your spiritual integrity, call upon your Heavenly Father. Worship Him and read His Word. God loves you. He is waiting to protect you. Beware of sleeping tigers.

'God's a good investment'

■ Wall Street money manager John Templeton, who donates $1 million annually to religious enterprises, believes faith is the soundest resource.

By George W. Cornell

NEW YORK (AP) — Having made a lot of money advising people on profitable securities in which to invest, John M. Templeton is putting much of it into enterprises stimulating attention to God.

Templeton

"It's a good investment," he said. "Most others have risk factors, but in my judgment, this is a sure thing."

Templeton, a top Wall Street money manager, a multimillionaire and founder of the world's largest prize for achievement, the Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion, said faith is the soundest resource.

"Trust in God magnifies our life," he said. "It enlarges our perspective beyond surface appearances and beyond our own smallness and limitations."

It also makes for a pervasive sense of gratitude for the blessings of everyday existence, he said, and that gratitude in turn flows out in efforts to help others.

"IF YOU are seeking wholeheartedly to help other people, you cannot prevent rewards coming back to you in terms of friendship, love, esteem," he added in an interview.

"Happiness comes to those who try to give happiness to others. You cannot get happiness by seeking it, but only by trying to give it away."

Templeton, who manages $18 billion in 81 investment funds for 800,000 individual investors and numerous universities and pension funds, tithes 10 percent of his own income to religious and charitable causes.

Yet, from scanty beginnings, he has become an enormously rich man, giving away more than $1 million annually, and recognized in financial circles as one of Wall Street's keenest market analysts.

"In all my lifetime of helping thousands of people, almost every person I've known who tithed for as long as 10 years has become both prosperous and happy," he said.

Each session of his funds' directors, or of large meetings of shareholders, opens with prayer, led by him or colleagues.

"Basically we pray for guidance," he said. "We pray that every thought and every decision be for the benefit of all parties."

TEMPLETON, 78, a trim, gray-haired, 5-foot-9 Presbyterian of gentle manner and voice, works steadily on two fronts, spending half his time overseeing fund transactions, half in promoting spiritual growth.

The spiritual efforts are mainly as a longtime trustee of Princeton Theological Seminary, the Center for Theological Inquiry at Princeton, the Center for Humility Theology at Bryn Mawr, Pa., and through prizes and publications.

A prime aim is to stimulate probing research into religion of the kind characteristic of science, with both fields collaborating when appropriate.

"The accelerating discovery rate in the natural sciences needs to be matched by spiritual progress and discovery," he said. It could happen, he added, if comparable "resources and brains" were put into it.

The Bryn Mawr center has established a clearinghouse for information on scientists doing research into religion. With the Princeton center, his foundation is compiling a "Who's Who in Theology and Science," enumerating 72 joint projects and 800 scientists exploring theology.

While theology once was considered the "queen of sciences," he said most scientists early in this century were disbelievers, but now again "a high proportion are concerned with spiritual realities."

THE KEY to progress, in religion or science, is "humility," he said, a theme he elaborates in one of his several books, "The Humble Approach."

"Humility is the gateway of knowledge," he writes. "To learn more we must first realize how little we already know. ... The more we know, the more we know we do not know. This is what gives life its spice. ..."

He said religious organizations need inquiring, open-minded humility in order to learn from one another and not isolate themselves in self-centered bureacracies and fixed dogmas.

"Even the best doctrines can affect some men like blinders on a horse," he said. "They can create a kind of tunnel vision. No human being should assume that they know even 1 percent of the infinity of God."

A native of small-town Winchester, Tenn., where he visits regularly, Templeton now lives on Lyford Cay in Nassau, the Bahamas, with his wife, Irene. They have five grown children.

Knighted by Queen Elizabeth II in 1987 for his international financial accomplishments, Templeton said that in Britain he is called "Sir John," but back in Tennessee, "It's Johnny."

HE STARTED small on Wall Street, setting up his investment counseling firm in 1940 on savings, with a secretary and a salesman. "For the first two years, I couldn't pay myself any salary," he said.

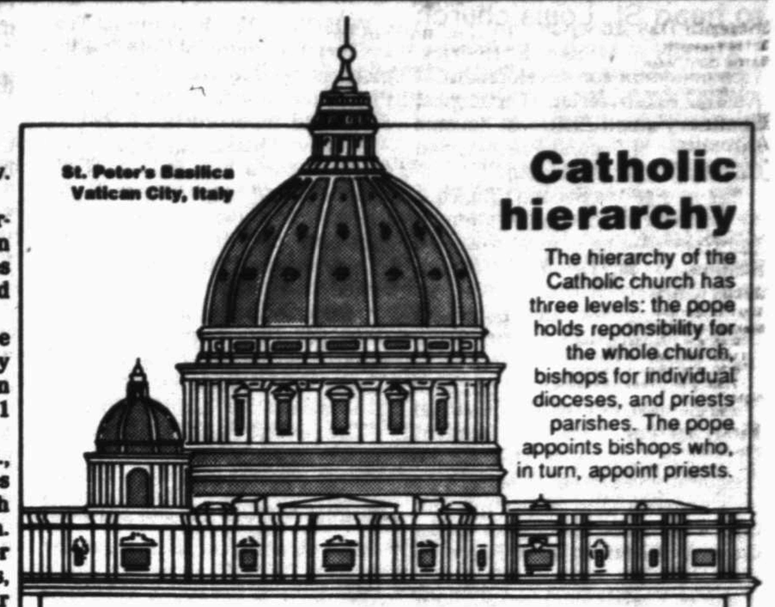

That sparse early working period came after he was graduated in economics from Yale and as a Rhodes scholar in law from Oxford in England. His later Wall Street record with highly successful investment funds won him repeated acclaim.

He was picked as the 1990 Portfolio Manager of the Year by USA Today.

Asked about Jesus' warning about the difficulty of rich men entering heaven, he said, "There's a lot of truth in that. When people trust in something other that God, it's difficult to be truly spiritual. ... Don't fall in love with money."

The same danger applies to other aspirations, such as fame, beauty or intellectual attainments, he said. "Whatever a person puts trust in besides God is a stumbling block. They can be really seductive."

Templeton has provided about $10 million for the annual prizes for religious progress, started in 1972 and funded in perpetuity to always exceed the Nobel prizes on grounds that progress in religion is more important. In 1991, the prize was $800,000. An international panel picks the winner.

Catholic hierarchy

The hierarchy of the Catholic church has three levels: the pope holds reponsibility for the whole church, bishops for individual dioceses, and priests parishes. The pope appoints bishops who, in turn, appoint priests.

THE POPE

He is the bishop of Rome, holding the highest office in the Roman Catholic Church. He is believed to be the representative of Jesus and a successor to St. Peter, the first pope.

CARDINALS

They are generally clergymen appointed by the pope to be his main advisers. As a group, they form the College of Cardinals. They are responsible for electing a new pope. Currently, all Cardinals must be bishops.

THE ROMAN CURIA

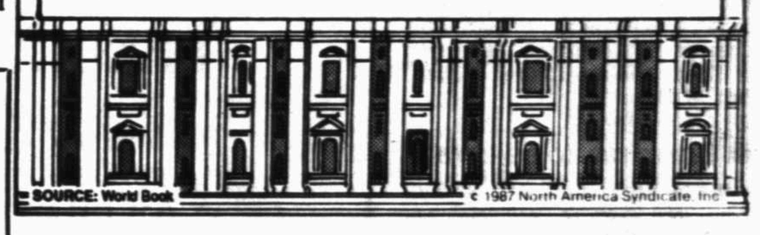

This is the pope's administrative arm, and consists of the Secretariat of State and many other departments. Cardinals usually work in the Curia.

BISHOPS

They are considered succcessors of the Apostles. Bishops are appointed by the pope and are responsible to him. The body of bishops consists of all the Church's bishops, including the pope at its head, and is responsible for teaching and guiding the Church as a whole. The leader of each diocese, or territorial district of the Church, is a bishop called the Ordinary. A diocese is made up of a number of parishes.

PRIESTS

The leader of a parish is a priest or pastor. When the parish is large, and especially when it has more than one Catholic church, then the priest is assisted by associate pastors. The priest officiates at worship, administers a particular church or parish and gives out the sacrament. Priests vow never to marry, and are sworn to poverty and self-sacrifice.

Leaders seek better relations with council

NEW YORK (AP) — Both evangelical and Roman Catholic leaders want stronger relationships with the National Council of Churches, says the head of a committee exploring connections with those groups.

Bishop Herbert Chilstrom of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, said of recent meetings with evangelical and Roman Catholic leaders:

"Both encounters were themselves expressions of the longing and receptivity that exist with other communities to work toward stronger and fuller relationships."

He stressed that the committee's goal was not to get new members of the NCC, which already includes most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, but to enhance relationships with others.

He said the committee wants NCC officers to "express to our sisters and brothers in the Southern Baptist Convention our concern and a word of understanding ... at this difficult time." That denomination, the largest Protestant body outside the NCC, has been embroiled in internal conflict.

Nun took up habit of writing mysteries to relieve stress

By Laura Myers

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Sister Carol Anne O'Marie gave up her habit more than 20 years ago, but the nun who wears street clothes picked up another: Writing murder mysteries starring a sister sleuth.

"I like to write them because they're like morality plays; the good guys always win so you can bring some kind of order to life," O'Marie said recently before regaling a Santa Clara University audience with a talk on "A Habit of Murder: How a Nun Came to be a Popular Mystery Writer."

O'Marie, 58, who believes she's the only nun who writes murder mysteries, has refined her technique with her fourth novel, "Murder in Ordinary Time," due out in October.

"I've learned not to kill off so many people," O'Marie explained, saying she also has softened her approach to death a bit — at least for now — going from violent stabbings and gunshot slayings to poisoning in her latest novel.

"In the beginning I think I was too overzealous. I think nine people died in my first book, which is just too much for most people. Now, I only kill off a few each time."

The protagonist sleuth in O'Marie's novels is Sister Mary Helen, a San Francisco Bay area nun who began solving crimes in "A Novena for Murder" published in 1984 to help raise money for O'Marie's order. Then came "Advent of Dying" and "Missing Madonna."

So far, her convent-setting novels have sold in the modest tens of thousands and have raised $50,000 for her order, including the $25,000 advance she got for her most recent book.

"They're very cozy murder mysteries rather than hard-bitten," O'Marie said of her books that read more like Agatha Christie than Mickey Spillane. "After all, I am a nun."

Some sex scenes have made their way into her books, but the lights always go out before much action takes place — a plot device suggested to her by a fellow student in a class she took to help launch her writing career.

"I took up writing because I thought it would relieve some stress," said O'Marie, of Lafayette, a member of the St. Louis-based St. Joseph of Carondelet order for 40 years.

"I thought I'd write a little poetry, but everybody in class was writing a novel so I thought I'd give it a try," she said. "I like to read mysteries and so I thought I could write one."

Making the sleuth a sister seemed natural. "They told me to write about what I know and this is it," she said.

In researching her books, O'Marie has been known to stalk dark alleys, nightclubs and police stations looking for scene-setting details and plot twists. She can also glean knowledge from her uncle, a veteran San Francisco police officer.

Troops wanted Bibles, chaplain says

NEW YORK (AP) — The Bible was the most sought-after item among troops in Saudi Arabia, says Col. David P. Peterson, who served as the U.S. central command chaplain there.

"We could never get enough of them," he told a recent meeting of the American Bible Society, which had sent 300,000 special camouflage-covered Bibles to the area.

"Never in my life have I seen so many servicemen reading the Bible," Peterson said.

■ Graham to lead school

MOSCOW (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham, who is to lead a massive school for training Soviet evangelists here July 8-13, says the Soviet Union now is "more open than ever before" to religion.

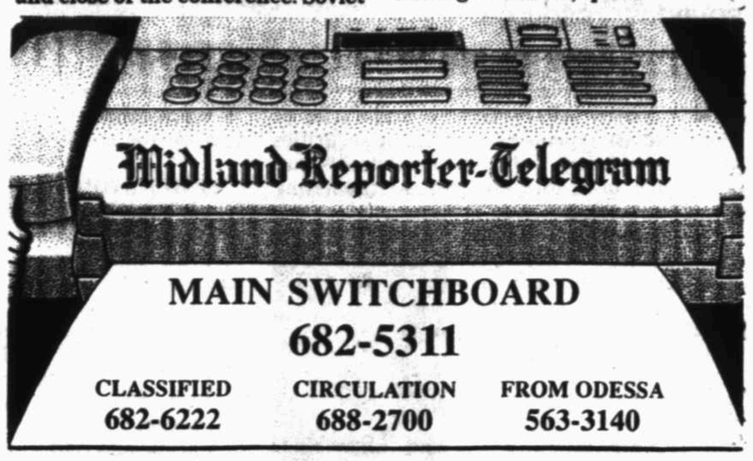

"People are able to take the Gospel and distribute Bibles in schools, prisons — even the military," he said. "That is more than we can do in America."

About 4,500 pastors and lay leaders are to take part in the school, with the main sessions held in Stadium Druzhba, an annex of Lenin Stadium, and seminars in eight halls.

An international team of 20 lecturers will lead the training, with Graham preaching at the opening and close of the conference. Soviet evangelicals, under years of communism, have had little chance for theological schooling.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Inmate hunt expands

TENNESSEE COLONY — The search for an inmate who escaped a week ago from a maximum security prison has been expanded to four states, and a truck he apparently stole was discovered in north Texas, officials said Friday.

Sterling Jarnigan and six other inmates fled the Coffield Unit last Friday, possibly in a pickup truck stolen from a nearby house.

Three of the inmates were recaptured immediately. One other prisoner was found drowned in a lake on the prison grounds. Another was captured in Fort Worth and the sixth was discovered in a tractor shed at the prison.

The search for Jarnigan, being conducted by Texas Rangers and the Texas Department of Public Safety, has been expanded to include the Wichita Falls and Harlingen areas of Texas and California, Missouri and New Mexico.

■ Official receives noose

SAN ANTONIO — A city councilman received a hangman's noose in a letter this week, a San Antonio radio station reported.

The noose was sent to Councilman Weir Labatt and was accompanied by a note reading "Why wait for the next election?"

Labatt and city police are taking the incident seriously and mail is being screened more closely at City Hall, WOAI reported.

Labatt said he thinks the incident was sparked by his position on the Applewhite Reservoir Project. Labatt wants the reservoir built in south San Antonio as an alternate source to the Edwards Aquifer, the sole source of water to the nation's 10th largest city.

■ Man's defender killed

HOUSTON — Kent Myram Smith defended his brother and became Houston's 300th homicide victim of the year.

Smith, 33, was standing outside an apartment complex with a group of men about 2 a.m. Thursday when someone struck his brother, Sam, with a bottle.

When Smith asked who hit his brother, a man identified only as Vincent confessed. As Smith and his brother were confronting Vincent, another man identified as Vincent's uncle Chris shot Smith.

Smith died at Ben Taub Hospital. The suspect fled in a tan Cadillac and remained at large, police said.

■ Cans miss Richards

AUSTIN — A crowd at a Fourth of July concert threw beer cans at Gov. Ann Richards and Austin Mayor Bruce Todd, but the officials were not hit, Todd said.

The incident occurred Thursday night after rock singer Joe Walsh finished performing and before a fireworks display started.

The officials were booed, and four or five beer cans missed their mark before the officials were escorted away.

"We left quickly," Todd said. "The DPS got her (Richards) out of there real fast."

Todd said the incident was just a case of a few impatient people in the crowd.

■ AIDS bill proposed

AUSTIN — A state lawmaker is trying again to pass a law to require physicians, dentists and patients to disclose whether they have tested positive for the AIDS virus before certain medical procedures are performed.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, filed his bill Friday in preparation for the July 15 special legislative session.

He won House approval of the proposal during the regular legislative session, but the measure died in the Senate.

Under the bill, a person who has tested positive to exposure to the AIDS virus could not force a physician or dentist to perform a medical procedure that could expose the health care provider to the infection.

A person who doesn't tell their physician or dentist that they have tested positive for the AIDS virus would face a civil penalty of up to $10,000.

■ Swimming hole closed

AUSTIN — Independence Day revelers seeking a dip in the gurgling blue-green water of Barton Springs, one of Austin's favorite swimming holes, were disappointed to learn that the pool was drained due to a recent heavy rain.

City officials ordered the pool closed on Thursday, after a storm dumped more than an inch of rain at the pool Wednesday.

Court nominee expected to be hot topic at NAACP convention

HOUSTON (AP) — Top officials of the NAACP predicted Friday the nomination of black conservative appeals court judge Clarence Thomas to the U.S. Supreme Court would dominate the civil rights group's annual convention next week in Houston.

"In the hallways, in the corridors, there's going to be more discussion than you can keep up with," NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks said.

Thomas, an appeals court judge from the District of Columbia, was nominated this week by President Bush to succeed retiring liberal Justice Thurgood Marshall, who announced his retirement two weeks ago.

Although the Thomas nomination has no scheduled time for debate during the weeklong convention, William Gibson, chairman of the NAACP board of directors, said he would hold a special meeting later in the week so the board could take a position to endorse or oppose the president's choice.

"Because of the impact of this particular position, I want one meeting to deal with that particular agenda item alone," Gibson said.

"Our staff is doing the basic research from the perspective of his limited number of writings on the circuit court in the past 15 months. And we are doing extensive research on not just the public statements but the actions he took when he was the chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. We also are having people investigate and look into the background of what the man is about."

Gibson and Hooks contended the NAACP investigation was the same as any conducted for a Supreme Court nominee and was not meant especially to target the Bush nominee.

"We've argued with Judge Thomas for years, in public debates, in writings," Hooks said. "There are a lot of things we disagree with. There are a lot of things we wish he had a different opinion on. On the other hand, there are things he has said and decisions he has made that we probably agree with."

Hooks said he was at odds with Thomas' positions on affirmative action and on the role of the federal government.

"He is a believer strongly that if one is aggrieved, personally offended, mistreated, discriminated against, they ought to receive every consideration the law can give," Hooks said. "He is much less apt to believe in group affirmative action remedies.

"Secondly, he has a feeling that the government may be too intrusive on some certain things. And we believe at the NAACP that were it not for the federal government, we'd still be in the back of the bus."

But Hooks acknowledged the problem in seeing Thomas' nomination fail was the unknown factor of who Bush subsequently would propose.

"Do we think President Bush is going to appoint another Thurgood Marshall? There are those who think he will not do that," Hooks said. "So we have to deal with the reality of who will be the replacement and whether what we have is better than what we might get. That is going to require some study."

Hooks said he had hoped the nominee would be a black and share Marshall's philosophy.

"In a two-fold test, George Bush met the first one, but he did not pick an African-American that in our judgment completely fits our second criteria," he said. "We're concerned about the reality. Our good Texas friend George Bush is not the same Texas friend as (former President) Lyndon Johnson."

Johnson appointed Marshall to the Supreme Court.

Gibson said on the convention schedule was discussion about the civil rights bill, which he described as "still in limbo," and talks about discrimination in government employment, particularly congressional staffing. A report on allegations of racial discrimination in the entertainment industry, originally planned for the convention, would not be complete for about two months, he said.

Among those scheduled to speak to the delegates were Rev. Jesse Jackson; Arthur Fletcher, chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights; Texas Gov. Ann Richards; Adm. Frank Kelso, chief of naval operations; and Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who was to receive an award from the group.

DHS touts benefits of eating breakfast

■ Agency develops ad campaign to educate families about balanced diets.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Human Services is starting a campaign to change what many children eat, especially in the morning.

But the DHS said almost any breakfast is better than no breakfast at all.

The department is distributing public service announcements this month to Texas television stations to educate families about the health benefits of a balanced diet.

An evaluation of the "Early Bird" public service campaign is scheduled for the fall.

"Ignorance of the nutritional value of breakfast could be sentencing an untold number of Texas children to a lifetime of unnecessary medical problems," said Claudia Langguth, DHS deputy commissioner for Client Self-Support Services.

She said this week that a survey by the Center for Science in the Public Interest found that most Saturday morning television advertising promotes nutrient-poor foods. The survey urges TV stations to broadcast public service announcements that encourage children to eat more fruits and vegetables while restricting fat and sugar content.

"A decent breakfast is one of the most cost-effective contributions we can make to the health of Texas children," Ms. Langguth said.

A recent study by the American Health Foundation found that children who skip breakfast had cholesterol levels 7 percent to 8 percent higher than children who eat breakfast, she said.

Also, she said, one 1988 study found that students who eat breakfast enjoyed higher test scores, fewer behavior problems and lower absenteeism rates than students who did not eat breakfast, Ms. Langguth said.

The welfare agency works with 20 dieticians who provide training for school food personnel, educators and day care centers on improving children's diets.

"The 'Early Bird' campaign reminds children that any breakfast, including non-traditional foods like breakfast tacos and even pizza, is better than no breakfast," Ms. Langguth said.

The DHS administers several federally funded nutrition programs for children, with more than 1.8 million public school students receiving meals this year through the National School Lunch program and another 531,952 students being served by the School Breakfast Program.

The department also is providing meals to thousands of needy children this summer.

Soviet dog, Laika, leads pack of non-human space travelers

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — For the first time ever, jellyfish flew in space. The 2,478 tiny moon jellies recently shared space shuttle Columbia with 29 white rats and seven astronauts.

The animals were the latest in a long line of non-speaking creatures that have been shipped into space over the past 34 years.

It all started with Laika, a Russian dog. Laika was sent up in a Sputnik II rocket on Nov. 3, 1957, becoming the first animal in space. The dog lived almost two weeks in orbit but died in the rocket's fiery return to Earth.

The first American animal in space — Mia the mouse — rode inside the nose cone of a Thor-Able rocket launched April 23, 1958. The nose cone fell into the Atlantic and was never found.

NASA has since sent up monkeys, chimpanzees, rats, flies, bees, moths, sponges, spiders, fish, frogs and chicken. The Soviets have carried a wider variety of animals into orbit, including tortoises and guinea pigs.

Here is a list of animal milestones in U.S. space history:

■ July 9, 1958 — Laska, a mouse, lives through part if not all of a rocket ride, but the nose cone is lost at sea.

■ July 23, 1958 — Wickie, another mouse, goes up on a rocket and returns alive, but also is lost in the Atlantic.

■ Dec. 13, 1958 — Gordo, a squirrel monkey, rides a rocket into space and is lost. Medical experts say Gordo proved humans could stand a similar trip.

■ May 28, 1959 — Able, a rhesus monkey, and Miss Baker, a squirrel monkey, are flung 300 miles high and 1,500 miles downrange by a Jupiter rocket. They are the first U.S. creatures to survive a rocket ride. Able dies a few days later during an operation to remove electrodes planted under the skin. Miss Baker dies in 1984 at age 27.

■ Sept. 16, 1959 — Fourteen pregnant mice and two frogs die in a rocket explosion shortly after liftoff.

■ Dec. 4, 1959 — Sam, a rhesus monkey, survives a Mercury capsule ride and celebrates with an apple and orange.

■ Jan. 21, 1960 — Miss Sam, another rhesus monkey, survives a rocket ride in a test of the Mercury escape system.

■ Jan. 31, 1961 — Ham, a chimpanzee, is strapped into a Mercury capsule and propelled by a Redstone 100 miles high in a dress rehearsal for America's first manned space flight. Ham performs the lever-pulling tests well in response to flashing lights and gets an apple for the efforts.

■ July 28-Sept. 25, 1973 — Arabella and Anita, common cross spiders, fly aboard Skylab to test the creatures' ability to spin a web in weightlessness. Their webs are finer than those on Earth.

■ March 22-30, 1982 — A colony of insects, including three-dozen caterpillar moths, house flies and honey bees, is carried up by space shuttle Columbia.

USDA wants to know what makes killer bees tick

By Richard L. Vernaci

BELTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Every morning about 10:30 some overnight delivery guy wheels his van up to an old brick building and hands over packages to people who are ready to rip the contents limb from limb.

The boxes are filled with suspected killer bees — dead ones — pickled in alcohol or packed in dry ice, and the soft-spoken U.S. Agriculture Department scientists will tear them apart to identify them.

You see, a bee's not a killer until the scientists in Beltsville say it is. But the autopsies on these angry insects are not for idle curiosity. Tracking the bees' northward trek, the researchers are looking for clues to what makes them tick, how far they might go and what may help tame them.

It takes about four hours, a projector, ruler, microscope and computer to sort these critters out, and at the end of a printout with more numbers than a baseball box score they get odds. That's as positive as the identification gets.

Dr. Hachiro Shimanuki, a microbiologist in the bee lab for the Agriculture Department's research service, has seen them up close and alive.

"I'VE BEEN stung a number of times," he said.

Once, they really scared him. That was in Brazil, where the African bees established their beachhead in the Western Hemisphere in the 1950s. They swarmed up and went right for Shimanuki's face, which was protected by the screened-porch hat that beekeepers wear. The bees flung themselves at the screen "like someone throwing pebbles," he said.

After a while, he said he got used to them and went about his work. Essentially, the scientists say that's what the rest of us are going to have to do now that the bees are in the United States. There's no getting rid of them, so we'd better learn how to live with them.

Shimanuki leaves the room and comes back with a small wooden box with brass latches. It looks like something that good cigars come in. Inside are about a hundred bees, dry, dead and dangling in neat rows from the pins skewered through their hairy little backs.

On the left are killer bees. On the right are regular, docile European bees. The killer bees are somewhat smaller, but the difference is so slight that if you weren't looking for it, you wouldn't see it. Besides, the real difference is in their behavior, and bees spiked to a board all tend to behave the same way.

The Africanized bees even have the same venom as the European bees and can sting only once before they die. What makes them killers is sheer numbers and their willingness to sting.

A RESEARCHER made a gizmo to measure this. It looks like a small plastic bottle with a wire coming out of the top. Whack a hive on the side, hang this thing by the hole, and it counts the number of times it gets stung. European bees average about four stings a second; for killer bees that goes to 24 stings per second.

So are these bees just mean?

"Entomologists don't view insects with personalities," said Dr. Ralph Bram, one of the Agriculture Department's top insect researchers. "It's the way this particular species responds to a particular stimulus."

So the scientists figure muddying the killers' gene pool with calmer cousins may settle them down. In the meantime, Shimanuki said, try not to provide the "particular stimulus" that sets them off.

"People should be concerned about these bees and should tell their children not to provoke these bees," Shimanuki said. "In most cases if you leave the bees alone, the bees will also leave you alone."

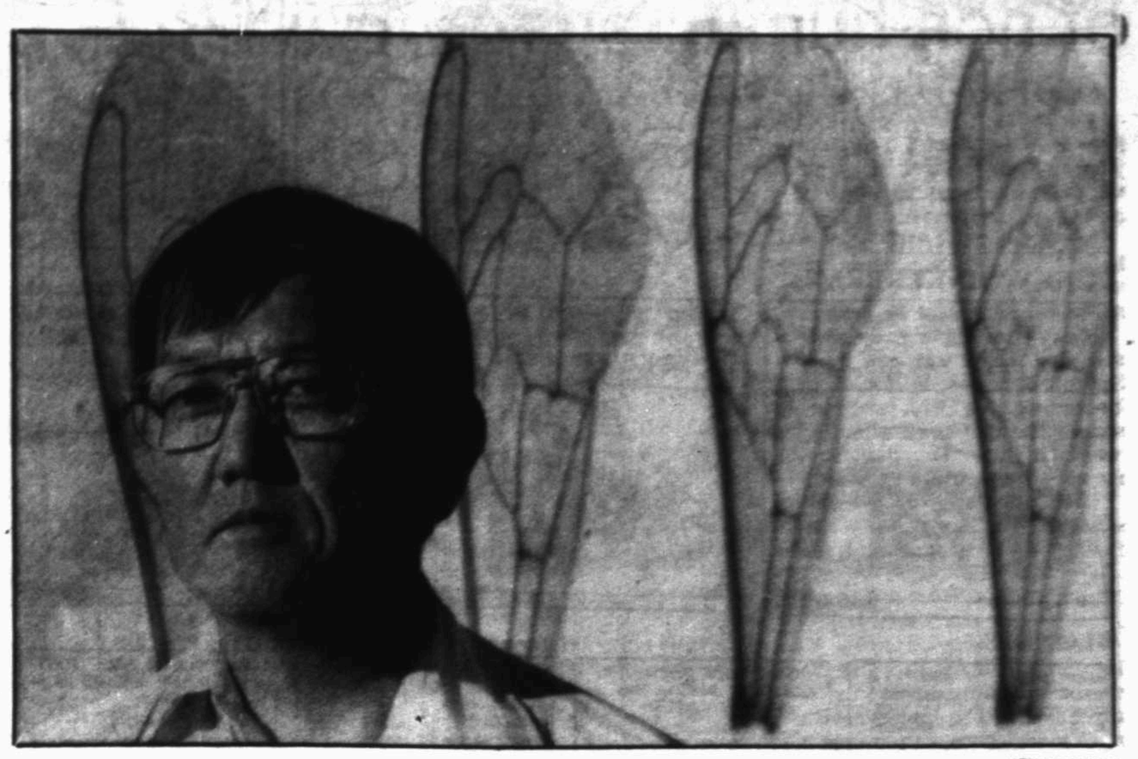

The researchers have come up with an effective way to defend yourself against bee attacks: insect repellant. Really. Repellant laced with deet chases the bees away if you spray it in the air around your head while you're being attacked. Putting the repellant on ahead of time doesn't do any good. You've got to spray them.

Also, and this is important, you should run for your life and keep running until you don't hear (or even imagine you hear) any more angry buzzing.

THE BEES have been moving north about 300 miles a year since they escaped from a scientist in Brazil in 1957 and now are known to be in south Texas. In early June, a gardener there earned the painful distinction of being the first American attacked by killer bees in this country. He lived. They just stung him about 30 times. It could have been a lot worse.

Bees from that swarm were sent to Beltsville for identification.

The Agriculture Department has four field operations in the South and Southwest dealing with the Africanized honeybees, but they do only preliminary screening of suspected killer bees. For final identification they are sprayed with insecticide, carefully packaged and shipped to the Agriculture Department's research headquarters in this Washington suburb.

Hachiro Shimanuki, a microbiologist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's research service, has seen killer bees up close. He looks for clues to what makes the bees tick, how far they might go and how they might be tamed.

At least 10 bees have to be examined to determine whether a suspected colony is killer bees. The lab works seven days a week and gets four or five samples a day that already have been screened by state or federal authorities in the field. They don't want the public mailing their bad bees to Beltsville.

"That's what we're afraid of, that people will just send samples of bees and there might be only one bee and of course we can't identify only one bee," Shimanuki said.

And of course, there's the question of packaging.

"YOU CAN'T just put them in an envelope," Shimanuki said.

The Agriculture Department's scientists are hopeful that there's a way out of this problem. It's just a question of breeding. They think that once the killer bees meet their docile cousins from Europe, they will crossbreed and become more gentle-natured. That's assuming that there are more European bees than killer bees. If it's the other way around, the opposite effect occurs.

They also point out that the Americas are not alone in this problem. Israel is also plagued with its own strain of killer bees. The Israelis call them Syrian bees.

15-year-year-old earns $49,000 mowing lawns

ATLANTA (AP) — David Eilers rakes in the green by mowing it. It's no summer job for this 15-year-old. He says his lawnmowing service brought in $49,000 last year.

He was only 9 when he asked his father to let him start the lawn service.

Six years and a riding mower later, the shy teen-ager with a bent for the mechanical has two adult employees.

"It's a good money-maker," David said recently after his freshman business class at Lassiter High School in suburban Marietta. "There's just going to be unlimited things I can do."

Most of those will have to wait, however, "until I get bigger or until I get my driver's license."

David's Mowing Service was built with a $2,500 riding mower, a slogan penned by his brother and word-of-mouth marketing that has attracted nearly 50 regular customers who pay an average of $60 per lawn.

The boy's company has assets of $21,500 and liabilities of $12,110. David has been recognized by a local business group as Youth Entrepreneur of the Year.

"Isn't he just an inspiration? Wouldn't you like to have been 15 and making $49,000?" asked Faye Worthy, a customer of David's for about two years. He does her lawn every other week for between $35 and $50, depending on the services done.

But business success at an early age comes with a few problems, such as the times when workers didn't want to take orders from their young boss.

"I had a crew that would never listen to me and they didn't respect me," David said. "Over the years, I've learned how to do it. I can handle it pretty well now."

"That was a real problem, because he was a little kid and they were big, grown-up high school kids and college kids," said David's father, Dennis Eilers. "He'd come in and say, 'Dad, they won't do what I tell 'em to do.' I'd tell him to remind them that he was the one paying them."

David currently employs two experienced workers, ages 25 and 30. "They really like me and they respect me, and they're happy to work for me," he said.

His crew mows during the week while David is in school. He works 12-hour Saturdays and sometimes shelves his social life when business calls. He pays himself $7 an hour.

His father said his son showed entrepreneurial tendencies at age 9.

"He said, 'Dad, I want to start a mowing business.' I looked at him and I said, 'Oh, Lord,'" Eilers said. "I told him he had to be 10 and he had to get good grades. ... He got better grades and he came back and asked when we could go get a mower. So, I had to keep my end of the deal."

'Isn't he just an inspiration? Wouldn't you like to have been 15 and making $49,000?'

— Customer Faye Worthy

Eilers and his wife, Gwen, bought their son the mower, with a hitch and a cart for his tools. Another son, Jon, thought up a slogan — "David's Mowing Service: We Can Cut It" — and put it on a sign attached to the tool cart.

With that, David was in business.

The first year, David earned $142 from eight customers whose lawns he mowed with some help from his father.

By the next year, he had added 10 customers and bought more equipment. Sales rose to $16,000, then to $36,000 in 1989.

Now, David's Mowing Service operates with three trucks, a trailer and nine pieces of power equipment that David repairs.

Eventually, David wants to expand into major landscaping jobs and maintenance of apartment complexes.

SATURDAY, JULY 6, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Beneficial changes are about to take place at work and home. Be careful not to injure a loved one's pride in October. After reviewing your debts and assets in November, act on your findings. You will need the good will and support of someone from your past in December. An intelligent compromise paves the way for a prosperous future. A bit of luck will make a special dream come true in early 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: artist James Wyeth, actress Janet Leigh, Nancy Reagan, superstar Sylvester Stallone.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stick to projects already under way. You are on the right track to boost profits. Keep a low profile when around difficult people. Take more pride in your achievements.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be content to handle your regular work today. Extra income can be earned if you tackle routine tasks with enthusiasm. Mate or partner will be very understanding once you explain your goals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Become a better listener and you will avoid needless expense. A true meeting of minds helps you move ahead with a pet project. Long-distance phone calls will bring you some wonderful news.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A sensitive day for financial matters. Be careful if asked to act as a go-between in a business deal. Some unexpected good news may involve travel to foreign shores. Have your passport handy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The vocation you have chosen, or which you feel compelled to follow, could bring you lasting financial security. You must be sure of your facts. Give yourself a pat on the back.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A worrisome morning gives way to a happy afternoon. Get together with those who are dear to you and who can provide comfort. In family matters, shift gears from intellect to intuition.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Further attempts to interest you in a risky venture will be made today. Remain adamant in your refusals. Take time for a sports break. Physical fitness plays a key role in your attitude.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid investments that will make a big dent in your resources. A nest egg is essential! Seek solitude if that is the only way to remain out of reach of persistent people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is only prudent to try and collect any monies owed you. Be flexible if you encounter obstacles. This is no time to go to extremes or issue ultimatums.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): No one can say for sure what the future will bring, but one can guess. Be prepared for big changes. A regular savings program will protect you from any unpleasant surprises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Any deal that sounds "too good to be true" is not for you. Someone who wants a lot promises nothing in return. Guard your assets. This is no time to gamble.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stay alert to any changes in a tense situation and be prepared to take any additional steps that are necessary. Conservative values hold new appeal when the going gets rough.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are very subtle. They know how to get what they want without coming right out and asking for it. Their determination makes these Cancerians' climb up the career ladder inevitable. Anything connected with the sea will attract them. Outgoing and confident, these children tend to have friends from all walks of life. Their love for variety can make them fickle in romance. A late marriage has the best chance of success.

Guns N' Roses blames officers for concert melee

LOS ANGELES — Guns N' Roses lead singer Axl Rose blames security officers for a riot that destroyed the group's equipment and injured nearly 80 people at a concert outside St. Louis.

Guards at the 2-week-old Riverport Amphitheatre allowed fans to carry knives and bottles and even turned on him, Rose said.

"I felt completely uncomfortable with the way the (security staff) was responding," he said. "There was no respect for the band."

Witnesses said the riot Tuesday night began after Rose yelled at some of the 150 unarmed security guards to confiscate a fan's camera, then plunged into the crowd. He and the band soon walked offstage.

About 3,000 of the 15,400 concertgoers, angry at paying $28 for a short concert, went wild. They threw bottles, uprooted chairs, stole or destroyed equipment, tore down fences and demolished two video screens at the site 20 miles west of St. Louis.

At least 64 concertgoers and 15 officers were injured, said Neil Kurlander, police chief for Maryland Heights, Mo.

Police blamed Rose for sparking the riot by insulting the audience and storming offstage, but no charges were filed.

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — When Gov. John Engler had to be in two places at once, his driver pressed on the gas pedal. But the governor's car apparently was going too fast.

Engler

Engler had appeared in Clarkston and was expected at another Fourth of July parade 50 miles away when an officer pulled over the car on Interstate 75, the Detroit Free Press reported Friday.

A few minutes earlier, the car pulled away from a trailing reporter's car in a 55-mph zone and was going an estimated 75 mph, the newspaper said.

After being stooped by police, Engler's driver, a state police officer on security detail, jumped out and displayed a badge. The officer walked to the car, saw the passenger inside and returned to her car, shaking her head and laughing, according to the newspaper.

Engler's spokesman, John Truscott, who was in the car, said the officer joked "everyone else she'd stopped she'd clocked in the high 80s and faster. We were slower than that."

Police said no ticket was issued.

CHICAGO — Football legend Jim Brown has memories of Chicago that date to 1958 and include a college all-star game and his first meeting with "a hard-hitting young man" named Dick Butkus.

The National Football League Hall of Famer now plans to return to Chicago to expand his Amer-I-Can program, founded two years ago in Los Angeles to teach homeless people, gang members and ex-convicts how to lead productive lives.

"We have tremendous problems in this country," Brown said recently. "There is a myth that segments will flourish. But we are a country in decline, educationally and morally."

Brown laid the groundwork for his expansion at a meeting with Craig Hodges of the Chicago Bulls during the National Basketball Association championship series.

He hopes eventually to sell the idea to activists in New York, Detroit, Atlanta, Washington and Syracuse.

Brown, 55, who began by targeting California inmates and street gangs, won a contract to train 2,000 convicts and received $10,000 to clean up graffiti in Los Angeles.

"The key is to teach lobbying and voting, bring their self-esteem up, show them they can be responsible for themselves," said Brown, who played for the Cleveland Browns from 1957 to 1965.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country music singer T.G. Sheppard will take another turn around the track as host of the second annual International Motorsports Hall of Fame induction ceremony July 24, his publicist said.

Sheppard

Sheppard, a racing enthusiast, also was host of the show last year.

The ceremony in Birmingham, Ala., will be broadcast live on The Nashville Network on cable TV, said publicist Kathy Gangwisch.

Sheppard's hit records include "I Loved 'em Every One," "Finally" and "Devil in the Bottle."

MALIBU, Calif. — Party guests, resident celebrities and a thigh-to-thigh beach crowd were all treated to a Fourth of July spectacular towed in by Danny DeVito on a pair of pyrotechnic-laden barges.

Tugboats moved the barges into place Thursday near DeVito's beachfront home and caterers packed in other party supplies before DeVito welcomed such guests as actor Tony Danza, producer Steven Spielberg and their families.

They were then treated to a party on the sand and a 30-minute light show in the sky.

New Orleans works to get Jackson Square out of a jam

By Mary Foster
Associated Press writer

NEW ORLEANS — By 10 a.m. Sunday mornings, the sun is scorching the streets around Jackson Square.

Outside St. Louis Cathedral, near the spot where Pope John Paul greeted the faithful, young men beat on a variety of drums. Nearby, a brass band blares as a juggler works the crowd.

Inside, where Mass is being celebrated, the sounds of the street are loud and clear.

"We've had times when the archbishop was trying to say Mass and the noise from outside was so loud you could hardly hear him," said archdiocese spokesman Tom Finney.

Attracted by the jazz, rap, tap, jugglers and clowns, streams of tourists pack the park and surrounding streets — jamming shop doors, blocking sidewalks, and residents say, adding to the noise.

The din has led to the formation of a mayor's task force to look for solutions. Nobody seems to want to eliminate the performers. But the Rev. Gerard Barrett, rector at the cathedral, told a public hearing that some kind of controls are needed.

"It's turned into Coney Island," said Merrill Domas, who operates an art gallery just off the square. "We're losing what the French Quarter and Jackson Square are all about. There's no longer a chance to enjoy the uniqueness of the area — it's all the street entertainers."

Jackson Square, in the heart of the French Quarter, is a park, flanked by the 1851 cathedral and other historic buildings — the Cabildo, Presbytere and Pontalbo apartments.

"The area has the most central massing of historic architecture in the United States, in my opinion," said Steve Hand, director of the Vieux Carre Commission, one of several official bodies that oversee the French Quarter.

"It is the same as when it was laid out in 1723. What the task force is searching for is a way to let as many people as possible enjoy the square."

Hand, and the other task-force members, have had plenty of help in the search. Fifty-five people spoke at a recent hearing on the issue.

"It was fairly lively," Hand said.

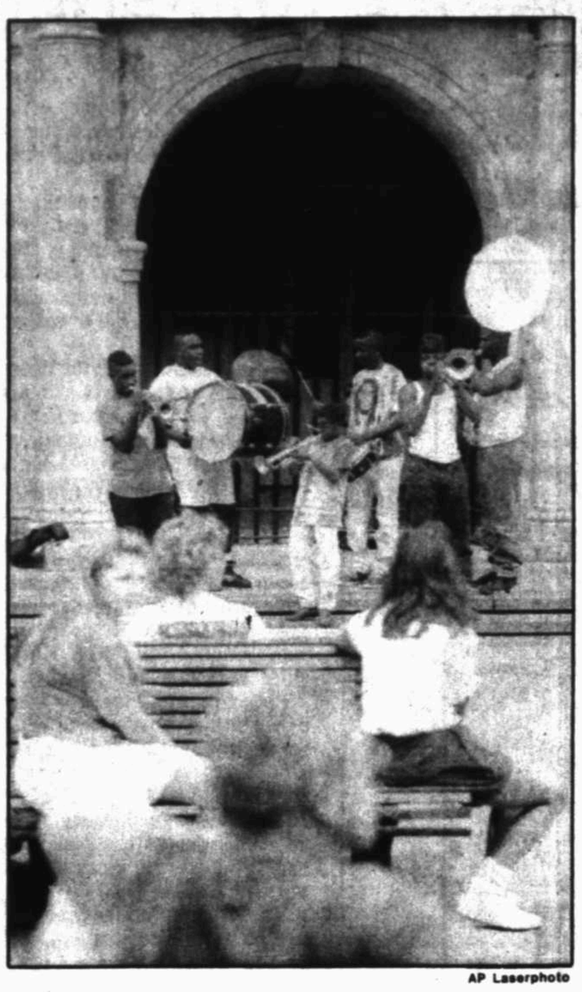

The group will present its preliminary recommendations by the end of July, and another hearing will be held before anything is adopted.

The tradition of street entertainers in the French Quarter is relatively new, Hand said. But this is not the first dispute over noise.

In May 1990, a judge ordered a Bourbon Street jazz club to turn down its sound to comply with the city's anti-noise ordinance, which prohibits outdoor amplification as well as sounds audible over 25 feet away.

But that law has been tough to enforce, especially in a city with a rich tradition of outdoor jazz.

"The Quarter is always a noisy place, but now the weekends have become horrendous," said Barbara Muscott, an artist who has worked beside the park fence for 18 years. "There are big groups of musicians and they seem to compete among themselves to see who can play loudest. I think they should police themselves, but so far they haven't."

AP Laserphoto

The Little Rascal Brass Band belts out a tune on the steps of the Presbytere in the French Quarter of New Orleans.

Hand says there are two problems — the congestion and the noise.

"We have very little space and a lot of people trying to use it," he said. "It's definitely changing the atmosphere of the square to a carnival atmosphere."

There's no thought of banning street entertainers. Hand said officials want to keep the regulations as light as possible.

"This is New Orleans and we tend to let things go as long as we can without intervening," Hand said. "Letting-be is the New Orleans way of handling things. We'd still like to let-be here, but what is on the table is the future of Jackson Square, and we have to work something out."

Frictions haunt civil rights hero

By Peter Applebome
New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — He left his blood on the streets of Selma, Rock Hill and Montgomery for the landmark civil rights bills of the 1960s, and John Lewis believes the moral issues that resonated then must resonate again.

"It is a shame and a disgrace that, in 1991, we are still debating whether or not we should protect our fellow American citizens from discrimination," Lewis, now a United States Representative from Atlanta, said last month as he called on the House to pass the latest civil rights bill.

Lewis, whose balding head bears the scars from beatings he received while being arrested about 40 times in the South in the 1960s, represents as much as any living American the heart and soul of the civil rights battles that changed the nation three decades ago.

And as Congress lurches along in its struggle over the civil rights bill, which the House passed last month, he is also a symbol of the frustrations and contradictions surrounding civil rights issues today.

For Lewis, civil rights is still an issue of morality. When he attended dedication ceremonies this week for the National Civil Rights Museum in Memphis, he marked a continuity of vision that goes from the streets of the South to the halls of Congress.

But the dissension brought out in the debate over the civil rights bill has posed difficult questions even for Lewis: Does civil rights address the core problems facing minority groups today?

Have the bill's proponents erred tactically and philosophically in putting it at the top of the congressional agenda this year? What is the best way to build broad-based support for addressing the problems of the poor?

The questions come quicker than the answers.

Time has rounded out the slender frame that Lewis had in the days of the Freedom Rides. But, at the age of 51, his voice is still rich with the slow cadences of rural Alabama, and he still has the same dogged commitment he has had ever since he first heard the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. preach a scratchy radio sermon in 1955.

Lewis, who was born the son of a sharecropper in Troy, Ala., on Feb. 21, 1940, has made his life a staple of civil rights lore — from his beginning as a shy farm boy who preached to the barnyard chickens to his service on the front lines of the Freedom Rides and sit-ins that changed the South.

Some, like King or Ralph Abernathy, were more dynamic leaders. Others, like Julian Bond, were more eloquent speakers or compelling tacticians.

But Lewis' penchant for putting his body on the line and his almost spiritual commitment to the philosophy of nonviolence inspired extraordinary respect from his peers in the civil rights movement. Over the years he has emerged as one of the most unambiguously heroic figures of the 1960s.

"There were a lot of people who pretended they were civil rights heroes," said Roger Wilkins, a professor of history and American culture at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va. "John was a true hero, an absolute hero, a man of absolute fearlessness and total and utter integrity."

That sense of integrity is his main attribute in Congress, where he is serving his third term after winning a bruising election in 1986 that essentially shattered his longterm friendship with the man he defeated, Bond.

Lewis has no major legislation to his credit and is not regarded as an insider in Congress. But last year he became one of 31 members of the influential House Democratic Policy and Steering Committee. He has also become one of the best-liked men in Congress and is something of a celebrity, frequently stopped and greeted by tourists and working-class people.

But the esteem in which Lewis is held for his role in the 1960s does not necessarily translate into an ability to change people's minds on civil rights in the 1990s.

In the civil rights debate Lewis worked almost nonstop in an effort to convince vacillating members, including some of his best friends in Congress, to support the bill. Some, he says, simply dodged his phone calls.

Others, like Reps. Marty Russo of Illinois and George "Buddy" Darden of Georgia, listened long and hard and then voted the other way.

Russo said that when he finally made up his mind on his vote Lewis was the first person he told.

"John Lewis is a living hero who, along with Martin Luther King, changed the course of history," Russo said. "It's important I have his respect and friendship. But I had to tell him I think this bill just leads to an enormous legal quagmire. I think it's just contributing to more polarization of the races."

Russo, a Democrat who is usually aligned with House liberals, added: "Instead of working on a civil rights bill, we should be working on an economic rights bill. I view this as a bill that helps a small minority of the minority."

Lewis well understands the difficulties the bill poses for Russo, many of whose constituents are working-class whites in the suburbs south of Chicago and who are most vulnerable to racial quotas, the main argument used by opponents of the bill.

What he has a harder time coming to terms with, Lewis said in an interview, is the unsettling familiarity in the nation's racial politics.

In the Southern politics of his youth, pitting whites against blacks was standard fare. Now, he believes, the same process has become a staple of national politics.

He says he finds the tenor of the current debate profoundly troubling, and places the blame squarely on President Bush, whose public comments he compared on the House floor to that of former Gov. George Wallace of Alabama, who had presidential aspirations before being crippled by a gunman in a Maryland parking lot, and Eugene "Bull" Connor, the former Birmingham police commissioner.

"There was not much difference really to what George Wallace did in his campaign and what President Bush has done, or some of the people in his administration," Lewis said.

"No president in modern times, not in the past 40 or 50 years, has ever used the issue of civil rights, the issue of race, the way this president has used it."

Lewis said he was also aware that the debate over the civil rights bill so far had aroused more passion on the part of its critics than its supporters.

"There's been no groundswell of support for it," he said. "We're probably getting at least a hundred letters a day dealing with triple-decker trucks. That's more of an issue in the district than this civil rights bill."

Indeed, Lewis acknowledges a broader lack of passion among civil rights advocates. He says he knows it may be naive to expect the drama and passion of Selma and Birmingham. But he says he also knows that civil rights is doomed unless it connects to a mass of people.

"During the 1960s the movement was from the bottom up," he said. "In 1965 it was people from the black belt of Alabama or the Mississippi Delta literally writing the bill with their feet. In 1990 and 1991, it's the professionals, the people within the Beltway, and you need more than that."

To some critics, including some Democrats, who believe the civil rights debate is doing more harm than good, the problem is deeper than tactics and strategy. They say Lewis represents the degree to which civil rights leaders are fighting old battles with old issues, while the plight of the poor grows ever worse.

"John is truly misguided," said Bob Woodson, a black conservative who heads the National Center for Neighborhood Enterprise, which has pioneered some of the low-income housing strategies favored by Housing Secretary Jack F. Kemp.

"People like him continue to press this as the quintessential issue for black Americans today, and it's not; it's really a middle-class access bill."

Woodson added: "Martin Luther King is always held up as a model, but no one seems to have emulated King in his ability to change with the times and to regroup and refocus his energies.

1. Help your reader visualize the item you have for sale. You will sell your merchandise much more quickly if you include a very specific and accurate description of the item in the ad copy. You should include all of the essential details of an effective one-column ad—age, condition, size, brand name and price.

2. Let your reader know when and where to contact you. There is nothing more frustrating then trying to make a call only to receive no answer. Don't make it difficult for potential buyers to contact you! Be sure to include in your ad the hours you will be home to answer inquiries about the items you have to sell. Remember, a potential customer probably will not call twice!

3. Don't use abbreviations. Nvr. frust. a pot. cust. w. abb. You want to make the process of reading your ad easy for your potential customer. Most readers will not take the time to try to decipher confusing ad copy. Limit your use of abbreviations to the following ten: approx. (approximately), ave. (avenue), blvd. (boulevard), bldg. (building), condo (condominium), rec. room (recreation room), refrig. (refrigerator), rd. (road), sq. ft. (square foot), st. (street).

4. Choose a consistent ad schedule. To insure great results, plan to run your ad for several days. If you run the ad only once, you run the risk of missing the buyer most in need of what you have to offer. If you run the ad for several days, you will draw the maximum response. Remember, you can always cancel the ad as soon as you find a buyer!
