Reactor Responds To Scientific Ploy

High Radiation Count Noted In Plant

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Engineers achieved a "dramatic decrease" Monday in a gas bubble that has held a stranglehold on efforts to cool down the disabled Three Mile Island nuclear reactor.

A team of nuclear experts was checking instruments, examining measurements in an effort to determine whether the decrease was a permanent development.

"We believe it would be prudent to sit and wait a little while to make sure it's not coming back," said Richard Vollmer, assistant director for site analysis at the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Reactor Temperature Drops

Plant and federal officials said the hydrogen bubble had shrunk to a much safer size, with less threat of displacing the reactor's cooling water, and the reactor's temperature had dropped significantly.

"I am certain it is cause for optimism," said Harold Denton, Nuclear Regulatory Commission operations chief. He said the bubble was showing "a dramatic decrease in size."

"I didn't expect such a rapid change," Denton said of the bubble. "I think it is safer than yesterday."

Denton and Vollmer both stressed that there was no hurry in attempting to bring the plant to a cold shutdown. "We're waiting to see how stable the systems are," Vollmer said.

Radiation Levels Rise

Denton also said radiation levels of 30,000 roentgens an hour, far above human tolerance levels, had been measured in the reactor building.

Vollmer said this was the maximum radiation measured in the building, but that levels elsewhere, although lower, were still too high to allow people to enter the building and do any useful work.

"Decontamination and the ability to cope with the amount of radioactive fission products that are in the containment is going to be a long-term problem," Denton said.

He added that an instrument on an inactive water circulation system in the building had failed.

(Additional Radiation Crisis Stories, Pages 2, 3, Sec. A)

But Vollmer said instruments in the vital safety systems were designed to withstand these levels of radiation and that if any did fail there would be adequate backup.

Evacuation Plans Ready

Local civil defense officials, hopeful that the changes meant that the five-day crisis here had passed, nevertheless maintained efforts to prepare for a precautionary evacuation of 25,000 residents still within a five-mile radius of the plant.

But the signals were clear: The situation had improved substantially.

On Monday, technicians continued efforts to eliminate the bubble completely, chiefly by the method they have been using all along: letting the gas dissolve in the constantly circulating cooling water and then allowing it to escape from the water outside the reactor.

Technicians also studied options on exactly how to achieve the "cold shutdown" which would go a long way to ending the crisis.

George Troffer, an official with Metropolitan Edison, which operates the facility, said radioactive releases had been halted at the site.

And NRC's Denton said that radiation beaming from the plant was at low levels in a confined area.

The bubble, which had threatened an explosion that could have ripped the lid off the reactor dome and spewed radiation, began shrinking dramatically Sunday and continued throughout the day and night, Troffer said.

The latest developments gave officials more time to cool down the reactor. The critical time for a possible explosion from a chemical reaction within the reactor "has moved considerably out" from the five days Denton had predicted on Sunday, he said.

It was the most encouraging statement to date from the NRC since Wednesday's accident, which had led the governor to urge pre-school children and pregnant women to stay further than five miles from the plant and prompted an estimated 50,000 persons to voluntarily leave the Harrisburg area.

Meanwhile, all schools within 10 miles of the plant were closed Monday, and some state government offices reported up to one-third of their employees stayed home. Factories and businesses were stung by absenteeism and operated with skeleton staffs.

Customers queued up in banks, trying to withdraw money before an evacuation was announced, state banking officials said.

But Denton said it was his opinion that with conditions improving at Three Mile Island, an evacuation was not warranted. John McGreevy, administrator of Polyclinic Medical Center, Harrisburg's largest hospital, said, "I have been told by very reliable sources there are no evacuation plans in the forseeable future."

Meanwhile, the NRC moved to avoid future cooling system breakdowns elsewhere, ordering officials at seven other nuclear plants to explain what they are doing to prevent similar failures. All seven were designed by Babcock and Wilcox Co., the firm which drew up plans for Three Mile Island.

Plant engineers at Three Mile Island shrunk the gas bubble by allowing the hydrogen in the reactor's cooling water to escape into another building.

Threats Of Violence Heat Up City Strike

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

CONTRACTORS estimated Monday that $38.4 million in Lubbock construction projects and 690 workers are being affected by a striking 100-member laborers' local union. Two contractors also said their workers were threatened with death by some union members.

In a different labor dispute, local truck industry spokesmen say a total work halt will continue for local freight line companies until a new contract is negotiated nationally with striking truck drivers of the Teamsters Union.

No loss figures were available from the stricken freight companies.

But a spokesman for the local contractors in the construction union disagreement noted that the cost of affected projects and the number of workers supporting the strike more than doubled during the first day of the walkout.

Spreads To Other Cities

Abel Gonzalez, spokesman for Local 1253 of the Laborers International Union, noted that in addition to 15 Lubbock sites, projects in Midland, Plainview, Levelland, Seminole and Roswell, N.M., also will be picketed today.

Beneath the outwardly peaceful picketing by union members Monday lurked the menace of violence, with a subcontractor and a contractor reporting some of their non-union employees had been threatened with death by strikers.

Jack Wirtz of Page & Wirtz Construction Company confirmed that one of his employees received two threatening telephone calls Sunday night. The anonymous caller told that man that if he worked Monday, he "would be killed," Wirtz said.

The man crossed the picket line anyway. "I think he was more mad than upset. But he was a little unbalanced by it," Wirtz added.

L.C. Burt of Burt Masonry Company said that because two of his employees have been threatened with death, "I think everybody who works for me will be carrying a gun with them in their car for their own protection.

"We're just not going to take any chances," he explained, saying he anticipates the strike situation will "probably get worse as it goes along."

Burt said a labor union member in a car threatened to harm his foreman Monday night. And a general laborer working at a job site at the Texas Tech University recreation center was warned by a union member last Friday that "if you're working here Monday morning, I'm going to kill you."

The man reported the conversation to police, who kept the allegedly threatening striker under periodic surveillance during Monday's picketing, Burt said. He added the threatened man does not want to press charges against his menacer.

Violence Threat Denied

Gonzalez dismissed as impossible the suggestion that strikers would threaten violence against non-union workers.

"Our members would never do that," he said, adding, "it wouldn't help anybody" because the strikers want to live peacefully in Lubbock.

Negotiations between the laborers' union and area contractors appear stalled, with each side refusing to budge until the other makes concessions.

Gonzalez, who said about a month of contract talks with individual contractors broke down last week, added it is up to affected contractors to form a negotiation committee and request a meeting with the union.

But Frank Fuller, executive secretary of the Associated General Contractors, countered, "We talked our heads off for almost six weeks of negotiation. I think the next move is up to them."

The two sides cannot even agree on the cause of their dispute.

Gonzalez claims the contractors are

Juvenile Center Gets Final Okay

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A PROPOSED regional juvenile detention facility has won final government approval, ensuring that Lubbock County and its neighbors soon will have an alternative to putting lawbreaking children in the same jails as adult offenders.

The National Clearinghouse for Criminal Justice Planning and Architecture, last of the dozen agencies required to review the project, has given its OK, Lubbock County officials said Monday.

The decision will allow Texas Gov. Bill Clements' office to release a $500,000 federal-state contribution for construction of the center, said Lloyd Watts, the county's chief juvenile probation officer.

Lubbock County commissioners, who will pitch in the remaining $700,000 in building and equipment funds, probably will award construction contracts next month, Watts said.

"Hopefully we will have construction underway in May," and the center will be completed and in operation early next year, he said.

Unique In Texas

The facility will be unique in Texas for two reasons. First, it will serve the entire South Plains, with about 15 counties sharing the operational costs. Also, it will be designed for long-term and short-term detention of "non-status offenders," youths involved in serious crimes or delinquent acts.

Watts said he was informed by telephone that the national clearinghouse, a branch of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, has approved the architectural plans for the regional juvenile detention facility.

Written confirmation from the agency is expected in a few days, he said.

"We now have all the approvals we need," Watts said.

Only Minor Changes

The clearinghouse approved the plans "basically as submitted," he said. The review group recommended only minor changes — relocation of two bedrooms, modification of toilet areas, and use of a different screening material on some windows.

"As soon as the architects incorporate these changes into the final plans, we'll be laying them before the county commissioners court," Watts said.

If commissioners agree, the county may put the plans out for bids this month, and award contracts in May, he added.

The idea of having a separate detention facility for juvenile lawbreakers has been kicked around for decades here. The 1969 suicide of a teenager in the Lubbock County Jail fueled the campaign, but commissioners at the time insisted the county could not afford such a project.

About two years ago, the South Plains Association of Governments secured a $25,000 grant to study the feasibility of a regional juvenile detention center. Consultants concluded that the concept was valid, if Lubbock County would agree to be the prime sponsor.

Federal Grant Obtained

The consultants, SPAG, the local League of Women Voters and other groups helped sell Lubbock County officials on the proposal. The county and SPAG obtained a $40,000 federal-state

Cargo Ship Sinks; Seven Feared Dead

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A 305-foot Venezuelan cargo vessel sank 200 miles north of Curacao in rough weather, the U.S. Coast Guard said Monday. Seven of the 29 crew members were believed drowned.

Wayne Floyd, the assistant controller of the Coast Guard Search and Rescue Center in San Juan, said the ship, "Venecemos I," sank about noon Sunday.

None of the dead or the 22 survivors were identified immediately.

"We have third-hand information," Floyd said. He explained the report came from a British vessel, the Opalia, which picked up the survivors early Monday. The Opalia was headed for Venezuela, the Coast Guard said.

The 3,499-ton ship, carrying a load of cement, apparently broke up in rough seas Sunday afternoon.

Court Panel Named For School Case

THE APPELLATE court panel that next week will hear the Lubbock school desegregation case is made up of "generally moderate" judges, according to a source familiar with such proceedings.

The source, an Austin lawyer who asked to remain anonymous, said only one of the panel's three members "might be considered as liberal or activist" on desegregation matters.

On Monday, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals announced the names of the judges who will convene in Dallas April 10 to hear oral arguments in the U.S. Justice Department's appeal for systemwide desegregation of Lubbock public schools.

Panel Members

The panel will include Irving L. Goldberg, Charles Clark and Paul H. Roney, a civil docket clerk for the appeals court said. The 14 judges on the 5th Circuit benchdecide among themselves who will hear such cases.

The opportunity for oral arguments was requested jointly by the Justice Department and the Lubbock Independent School District. Both sides say the case is so complex it must be summarized in person.

The New Orleans-based appellate court has scheduled the April 10 hearing to begin at 10:30 a.m. in the federal courthouse in Dallas. Each side will be allowed a 30-minute presentation.

An attorney who has argued school cases before the 5th Circuit said Clark and Roney both are "moderate judges." Goldberg has written "some liberal opinions, but he's pretty fair," the lawyer said.

"Generally Moderate" Panel

Overall, the three-judge panel appears "generally moderate," he said.

Lubbock school attorneys do not expect the 5th Circuit to rule on the local case until the U.S. Supreme Court has decided or clarified desegregation issues involving schools in Dayton and Columbus, Ohio, and Dallas.

STACY SIMMONS

MISS LUBBOCK-USA

Stacy Simmons Wins Beauty Pageant Here

STACY SIMMONS, a brown-eyed, black-haired beauty, outshined her 15 competing conestants Monday night and claimed the 1979 Miss Lubbock-USA title at the Country Squire Dinner Theatre.

Miss Simmons, also Miss Northern Star Seed Forms Corp. and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Simmons of Athens, will be eligible to compete in the Miss Texas-Universe contest in El Paso in August.

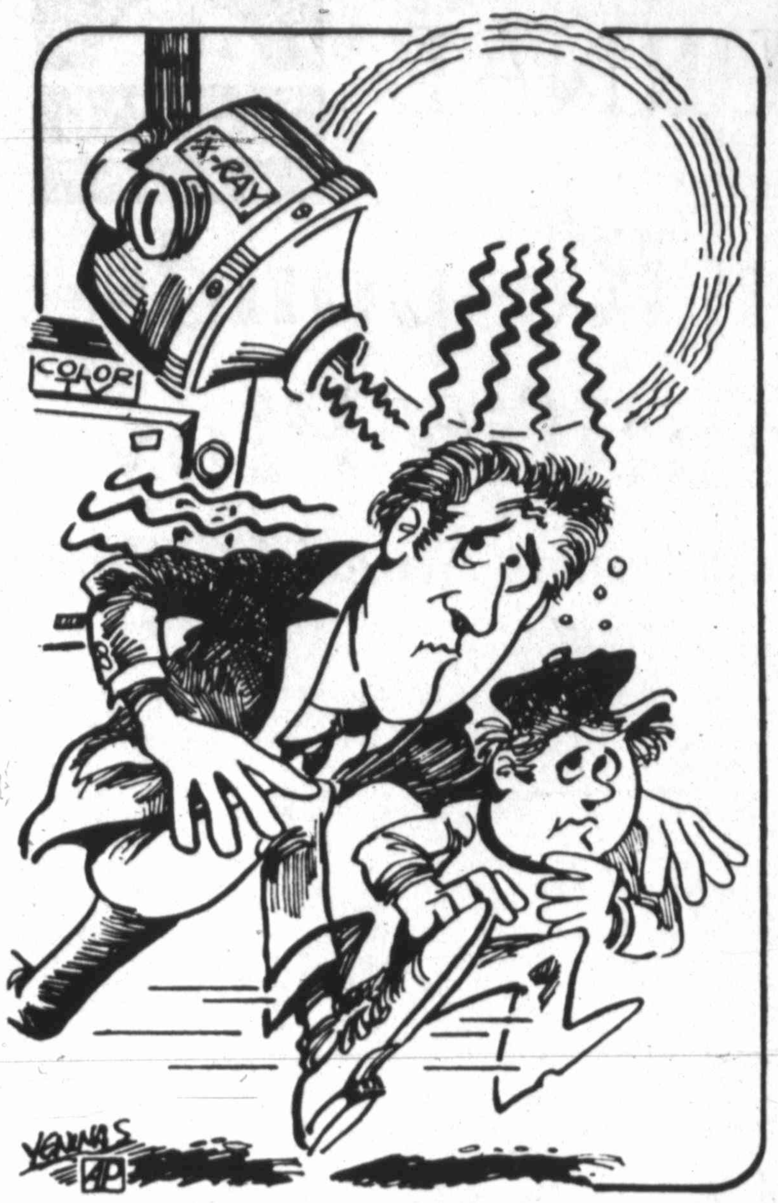
The 20-year-old Texas Tech University sophomore bested the other beauty candidates in three specific areas: A one-on-one interview with each judge, swimsuit and evening gown competition.

The four runner-ups were: first runner-up, Martina Gilmour -Miss Record Land USA; second runner-up, Julie Williams - Miss Stephen Craig's; third runner-up, Kelly Whitt -Miss Dunlaps; and fourth runner-up, Terri Henry -Miss Pagett Construction Company.

Special recognition was given to Leslie Griffin, Miss Chick Fil' A, who was named Miss Amity. All sixteen contestants voted on this honor.

Martina Gilmour was selected Miss Photogenic by representatives of the local media.

The Miss Lubbock-USA Pageant is not affiliated with the annual Miss Lubbock Scholarship Pageant, headed by Cecil D. Caldwell, chairman.



Radiation Absorbed Daily

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

How much radiation are you absorbing every day? How much of it could you avoid?

The accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Harrisburg, Pa., points up the need to weigh the benefits and the risks of radiation and to eliminate uncessary exposure.

The average American gets 100 to 120 millirems of natural background radiation a year. This includes radiation from elements in the earth, from outer space and from substances like potassium 40 in the body.

We also are exposed to man-made radiation, most of it in the form of medical and dental X-rays. Television sets emit a tiny amount of radiation and some smoke detectors contain radioactive materials.

We face a different, but still potentially dangerous, kind of radiation from the sun and from microwaves like the ones in ovens.

The risks from everyday, low-level radiation are minimal compared to the threat posed by a nuclear accident. But scientists do not know whether there is any level of radiation, no matter how small, which is absolutely safe.

"Short of wearing a radiation badge, there is no way of determining what level you've been exposed to," says Allan McGowan of the Scientists Institute for Public Information.

Dr. Solomon Michaelson of the University of Rochester Medical Center adds: "We're always surrounded by radiant energy ...You have to put (the danger) in perspective as to what society really wants."

Here is a look at some radiation sources and ways to minimize risk:

SUN

Radiation from the sun's infrared and ultraviolet rays is particularly dangerous because it is directly absorbed in the skin. The Food and Drug Administration says radiation from the sun is the leading cause of skin cancer. A study by the National Cancer Institute showed that a sunny, southern area — Dallas-Fort Worth — had more than double the skin cancer rate of a less sunny, northern one — Minneapolis-St. Paul. Scientists say 60 percent of the ultraviolet rays striking the Earth reach the surface between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. If you must get a tan, try to do so before 10 or after 2.

X-RAYS

Experts say 90 percent of the man-made radiation we face comes from diagnostic X-rays. You can absorb up to 20 millirems from a dental X-ray and 30 from a chest X-ray. To be safe, the FDA suggests:

—Don't decide on your own to have an X-ray like the ones you get at a mobile unit for detecting tuberculosis. There are safer and more effective tests for the disease and the mobile units often expose you to more radiation than necessary.

—Don't insist on an X-ray when you visit your doctor or dentist. Let him or her be the judge. Tell your doctor or dentist about all previous X-rays; you may not need a fresh set.

—If you are a woman and are pregnant or think you're pregnant, tell your doctor or dentist. Radiation may affect the fetus. If you're male and of child-producing age or younger, ask for a lead shield to protect the reproductive organs.

SMOKE DETECTORS

Ionization chamber detectors contain small amounts of radioactive material. This does NOT mean they are dangerous, says the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission performs a radiation safety analysis on all new models.

TELEVISION SETS

X-rays may be produced when electrons, accelerated by high voltage, strike an obstacle while traveling in a vacuum such as the one in a TV tube. Most TV sets do not give off any measurable level of radiation and a federal standard limits allowable TV radiation to about one-four-hundredth the amount emitted by a dental X-ray.

Look at the back of the TV before you buy for a label or tag certifying that the set meets the federal standard. When your set needs repairs, call a qualified serviceman. The primary cause of increased X-ray emission from TV sets is adjustment of operating voltages to levels above the manufacturer's recommendation.

MICROWAVE OVENS

The microwaves in an oven are generated by an electron tube inside the cabinet. They bounce back and forth and are absorbed by the food, causing water molecules in the food to vibrate and produce heat.

The FDA sets a strict limit on the amount of radiation permitted to leak from the oven wall. It also requires ovens to have two interlock systems to prevent them from operating if the door is not securely fastened. The minute the door is opened or the latch is released, the microwaves stop. There is no residual radiation.

To avoid trouble, do not have the oven rewired so that the interlock system will not operate. If you suspect your oven is leaking, contact your state health department for a possible test. Do not try to test the oven yourself. The FDA says that a number of the devices sold for do-it-yourself tests "are inaccurate and unreliable."

Government Authority In Nuclear Crisis Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a Senate subcommittee on nuclear energy says that there is some "real doubt" as to who's in charge at the Three Mile nuclear plant, a situation that needs to be remedied in the future.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said the federal government has no authority to act in the area. State officials have the authority to handle such matters as evacuation, but the utility company that owns the reactor apparently is in charge of attempting to bring the nuclear plant under control.

"We are talking about responsibilities," Hart said. "The responsibilities of the officers of the utility are primarily to their stockholders. Public officials have sworn an oath to protect the public.

"If you've got a crisis situation, I think it's the public officials that should be making the decisions."

Hart said he plans to sponsor legislation that would authorize the federal government to take over a reactor site during any nuclear crisis.

He said also he will recommend the Nuclear Regulatory Commission order that reactors of design similar to the Three Mile Island plant — seven reportedly are of identical design — should operate at reduced power until it can be determined if there is a flaw in the reactor design.

Hart, speaking on CBS' "Face the Nation," also said that officials of Metropolitan Edison Co., which owns the plant, "haven't been as candid as they should have been" in informing the public of the situation. He said that in part is because nuclear power companies have spent decades defending the safety of their plants, "and you can't change that attitude in a crisis."

Builder Of Three Mile Reactor Under Scrutiny For Equipment

By The Associated Press

Seven nuclear plants in five states that use Babcock & Wilcox equipment similar to that involved in the accident near Harrisburg, Pa., were ordered Monday by the federal government to run a safety check and report on their findings within 10 days.

"This bulletin is being sent to all utilities with an operating Babcock & Wilcox pressurized water reactor. Babcock & Wilcox was the supplier of the Three Mile Island Unit 2 reactor," the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said in an advisory.

A total of nine plants use Babcock & Wilcox reactors, including two units at Three Mile Island, representing 15 percent of the nuclear generating capacity in the country, according to the Atomic Industrial, an industry group in New York.

Babock & Wilcox, a subsidiary of J. Ray McDermott & Co. of New Orleans, is one of only four U.S. manufacturers of nuclear reactors. The others are General Electric Co., Westinghouse Electric Corp., and Combustion Engineering.

A spokesman at Babcock & Wilcox headquarters in Lynchburg, Va., declined to comment on the order, or on reports that the firm might be facing future financial difficulties.

The NRC also said other utilities in the country that don't use Babcock & Wilcox reactors are being provided with information on the Three Mile Island accident but are not required to report to the NRC.

At utilities around the country where 18 facilities planning to use Babcock & Wilcox equipment are under construction or in early planning stages, officials said they were watching developments of the Pennsylvania investigation closely.

One plant affected by the order, the Davis-Besse facility near Cleveland, had already been shut down Friday for routine maintenance.

Cleveland Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich asked the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio to keep the plant shut indefinitely, citing evidence that the plant had been shut 38 times since November 1977. He called the facility "a clear and present danger to the city of Cleveland."

A spokesman for Toledo Edison, which operates Davis-Besse, said the plant was scheduled to be shut down for nine days.

Arkansas Nuclear 1, a Russelville, Ark., facility which uses the Babcock & Wilcox reactor, said it had planned to shut down last Friday evening for routine refueling, but a spokesman said, "we took it down a little bit early because of the uncertainty" resulting from the Harrisburg accident.

The Rancho Seco plant, near Sacramento, Calif., equipped with a reactor similar to the plant in Pennsylvania, was also named in the NRC order. Over the weekend, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. asked the NRC to order Rancho Seco closed temporarily as a precaution. Brown said he would not order such a shutdown himself.

A spokeswoman for Duke Power Co. which operates three plants using Babcock & Wilcox reactors in Lake Keowee, S.C., said: "We made an evaluation that began last week. A preliminary investigation showed there was no reason to question the safety or any of the operating procedures at the plants."

The other plant under orders to report to the NRC was the Crystal River 3, operated by Florida Power Corp. in Red Level, Fla.

Ten other plants in varying stages of construction plan to use Babcock & Wilcox reactors, and eight more have the reactors on order.

A number of utilities with Babcock & Wilcox reactors on order or in the midst of construction said they were monitoring the situation in Pennsylvania, but said it was too early to do anything but wait for more facts.

"I would guess that if the NRC tells us to look hard at the reactors, I guess we will," said Fred Sullivan, a spokesman for Detroit Edison which is planning two nuclear plants in St. Clair County, Mich., in 1989 and 1991 using Babcock & Wilcox reactors.

R.F. Nowakowski, a spokesman for the Washington Public Power Supply System which is constructing Babcock & Wilcox plants due to open in Richland by 1982 and 1984, said: "There really isn't sufficient information yet. When we find out more, we will sit down with Babcock & Wilcox to see if any modification is needed."

However, the Oregon Energy Facility Siting Council has opened hearings in the wake of the Pennsylvania mishap to see if there is any relationship between that accident and two nuclear plants slated for completion in 1987 and 1989 at Arlington, Ore., that would use Babcock & Wilcox reactors.

Locust Plague May Spread To Africa, Asia

ROME (AP) — A year-long desert locust plague is still not under control and now threatens to spread to wide areas of Africa and southwestern Asia, the U.N. Food and Agricultural Organization reported Monday.

The agency said an additional $2 million has been pledged following a special appeal by the FAO last week for a stepped-up battle against the infestation.

The FAO said successful control measures in India, Pakistan, the Arabian peninsula, Sudan and Somalia effectively limited the spread of the locust plague in the past year but that breeding is now occurring on a large scale in countries around the Red Sea, Ethiopia and to some extent in the Iran-Pakistan area.

"Unless appropriate action is taken now, therefore, a further serious spread of desert locusts will take place in the summer months of this year," the FAO director-general, Edouard Saouma, said in a statement. "There is still a danger of swarms spreading to central, west and northwest Africa."

He said the desert locust problem "constitutes a serious threat to the lives and well-being of millions living in a wide swath of more than 50 countries."

"Fasten" and "loosen" have opposite meanings. Yet, attach the prefix "un-" to both and the words mean the same.

Cool, Cloudy Weather Forecast

Unseasonably cool temperatures today, coupled with the fact that April 10 is the average date of the last freeze for the South Plains, may cause some area residents to think twice before packing away winter clothing.

Rain mixed with snow is predicted for the Panhandle this morning, but only a slight chance of rain is in the forecast for the South Plains region.

Area residents can expect cloudy skies and high temperatures in the upper 50s with lows tonight in the lower 30s. Winds will be northerly at 10 to 15 mph.

Warmer weather should return to the area on Wednesday as the mercury rises to the low 60s.

The cold front that brought cool air to the area Monday touched off severe thunderstorms as it moved across the state.

The front, stretching from South to East Texas, dumped heavy rain on places already saturated from past storms, causing the National Weather Service to issue a new flash flood warning Monday afternoon for parts of Southeast and East Texas.

It was the fourth day that heavy thunderstorms have ravaged the state.

A powerful storm with winds up to 80 mph raged in Atascosa County, just south of San Antonio.

County Sheriff Tommy Williams reported the storm destroyed one frame house and turned over a mobile home. Other homes were moved off their foundations, he said, and many trees were uprooted.

Heavy rains caused street flooding in Oakridge North in Montgomery County and a flash flood warning was issued for Tyler.

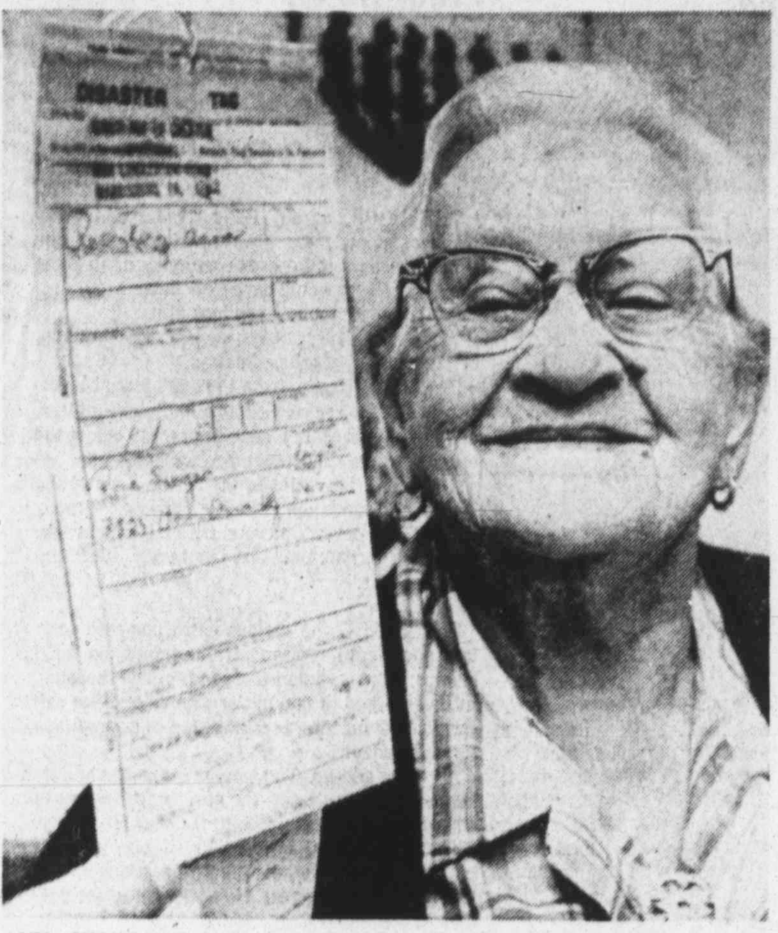
Crisis Fails To Bother Women



ANNA SHOWS HER TAG — Anna Rosenberg, 92, shows her disaster tag at the Harrisburg, Pa., Jewish Home for the Aged Monday. The tags were issued by the state civil defense in case of emergency evacuation due to the accident at the nuclear reactor near Harrisburg. (AP Laserphoto)

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — "Nothing is going to happen, nothing at all, it's all to make an excitement for the world," said 92-year-old Anna Rosenberg. She was among the elderly, the sick and the prisoners who waited for someone else to take them out of danger Monday if an evacuation was ordered.

"People are packing suitcases, but they're not going anywhere," joked Mrs. Rosenberg, a widowed great-grandmother who stopped counting her children's children and their children "after they got over 20."

She was holding court in the lobby of the Jewish Home of Greater Harrisburg with a friend, Mildred Taub, 83. They were posing with disaster tags pinned to their dresses. The tags were prepared by the home's staff to keep track of the residents, some of them bedridden, in case it was necessary to move them to emergency centers in safer places.

"It makes me feel like a piece of furniture," Mrs. Rosenberg said, and she finally took the tag off. "Most of the people are frightened, but nobody is panicking. I pray day and night, but I got to worry like everybody else."

Mrs. Taub, also a great-grandmother, said: "What will be, will be. I trust in God. If God wants us to live, then we'll live, if not we'll go. I'm seriously thinking it's not as bad as they say. Judgment Day isn't here."

Mrs. Rosenberg: "And it isn't coming."

Lawrence Kirschenbaum, the home's executive director, said his big problem was staff. Half had left town with their families — and he was turning to the county manpower pool for help.

"There isn't a health-care facility in the area that isn't running low on staff," he said. "Half of our 51 residents are wheelchair-bound, and the average age is 82. They are concerned, but nobody is really scared."

Not far away, at the Dauphin County Prison, 186 men and 15 women are behind bars for crimes ranging from failing to pay traffic tickets to murder. Most are in their 20s.

"They feel trapped and are very much worried about the possible danger," said Deputy Warden Michael Faust. "They'd like to get out right now but they're prisoners and can't have their way."

Guard Lt. John Yeingst, who already had moved his wife and daughter to relatives in Virginia, said he was caught like the prisoners.

"I'm on the evacuation team," he said. "Even off-duty I have to stay at home, near the phone, to wait for a call. It makes it pretty rough. I'm also trapped, not like they are, but I can't just pack up and go. It's a helluva situation to be in."

Yeingst said what bothered the prisoners, and the guards who stayed on, was the nature of the radiation threat.

"You can't see it, you don't know where it's at or how much is in the atmosphere," he said. "You don't know what may happen five or 25 years from now. That's why the prisoners are worried, like everybody else is worried. And it puts us in an awkward position. They're human beings, but you just can't open the doors and let them go."

So the prisoners waited, listening to radios and watching television.

"We're trying to get a lot of them released early on reduced bail," Faust said. "I sure hope we don't have to evacuate."

Anxiety Prompts Harrisburg Exit

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Anxiety over the crisis at Three Mile Island forced public schools to close throughout a 10-mile area on Monday, while many businesses and factories reported high absenteeism and skeleton operations.

Though it was officially business as usual in the capitol, some state agencies also reported many workers did not show up.

As engineers reported increasing success in reducing a dangerous gas bubble inside the nuclear reactor, the exile of thousands of "voluntary evacuees" left city streets barren of rush-hour traffic and stores empty of customers.

At the city's banks, however, it was a different story.

They were jammed with customers waiting to withdraw cash in case of any evacuation order, and the crowds grew so severe by midday that state officials urged caution.

Area hospitals, hit by staff absenteeism and taking precautions against a possible evacuation order, were admitting only emergency cases. No elective surgery was being performed.

While many workers felt free to act on their personal evaluations of the danger, policemen and firemen, put on a standby basis, "were told they must respond and they are doing so," said Capt. Robert G. Miller of the Harrisburg Police Department.

Despite Gov. Dick Thornburgh's recommendation that only schools within five miles of the plant remain closed, Executive Director D. Bruce Conner of the Capital Area Intermediate Unit said he knew of no schools within 10 miles that opened Monday.

Conner said the additional schools were shut "because a lot of people — teachers, school bus drivers, parents — are just out of town. We'll remain closed for an indefinite period."

State government presented a mixed picture.

"Just walking through the hallways, and looking at the parking lots, it would look like we have better than 50 percent of our employees here," said Bureau Director John Lylo of the Department of Welfare.

And while a third of the Department of Environmental Resources' 921 employees failed to show up, only 1,114 were missing from the Department of Transportation's 29,032-person work force.

But city police Capt. Miller said that, when he called the state Division of Motor Vehicles for an automobile license check, he was told the agency was working on a skeleton basis.

Area industries also had varying reports.

In Middletown, two miles from the nuclear plant, the United Piece Dye Works was "running on a skeleton crew," according to a woman who answered the telephone but who did not wish to be identified. She said the fabric dyeing plant normally has 100 persons working each of two 12-hour shifts. "We're not asking anyone to come in if they don't want to," she said.

But at a Sears Roebuck and Co. department store here, Manager J.E. Krug reported absenteeism among employees totaled "about 10 or 12 percent" of the sales force Saturday and Sunday, while the number of customers dropped to about 70 percent of normal.

As the store opened Monday, he said, "It seems that not everybody is here, but we have a sufficient number of employees to man all of the departments. And most of those on later shifts are calling to say they would be in."

Administrator John C. McGreevy of Polytechnic Medical Center, the largest Harrisburg-area hospital, said "all hospitals in the area are reducing their census (number of patients) as a protective measure."

He said some staff members failed to show up, but added that "on some snow days last winter, we had even less staff because people just couldn't get in."

Religious Leader Challenging FCC

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A former vice president of the PTL evangelical television network says PTL President Jim Bakker is damaging the Charlotte-based ministry with televised attacks on the Federal Communications Commission.

The FCC is investigating PTL on charges it raised money for specific projects but spent the money on other purposes, in violation of FCC rules. Bakker has countered by citing constitutional protections of religion.

"I believe he's doing so much harm (to PTL)," said Robert Manzano, who was in charge of PTL's overseas operations until he resigned in October. "Somebody has got to stop him," Manzano said of Bakker.

He made the remarks in an interview published in today's editions of the Charlotte News.

"Christian leaders, people around the country, are all very concerned about PTL because Jim Bakker is not doing what he does best, hosting a good TV show and preaching the gospel," Manzano said. "He's fighting the government and putting a cloud over all his former employees and that's not ethical," Manzano said.

Manzano said he feared that some of the more than 200 stations that carry the PTL Club show will drop the show if the network takes on the FCC in court.

Anti-Nuclear Protests Staged Abroad

By The Associated Press

Anti-nuclear groups staged demonstrations Monday in Japan and West Germany while a Soviet commentator said the U.S. nuclear accident that prompted the protests was a consequence of American capitalistic "energy monopolies" hunting for profits at all costs.

In the southern West German state of Baden-Wuerttemberg, officials disclosed they have issued special iodine pills to people living within a mile and a half of nuclear plants.

State Interior Minister Guntram Palm said the pills would reduce the amount of radioactive iodine ingested in the crucial minutes between a possible accident and an evacuation order.

Opponents of nuclear power held peaceful demonstrations in Hamburg, West Germany, and Ikata and Shaga, Japan.

The governments of Japan, France, the Netherlands, Belgium and West Germany sent observers to the troubled Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania despite their insistence similar incidents could not occur at their facilities.

However, a leading member of the ruling Social Democratic Party of West Germany said the country must re-evaluate its plans for nuclear power expansion and suspend work on a new plant similar to the U.S. facility.

Japan ordered an immediate inspection of its nuclear facilities, and Japan and West Germany scheduled emergency meetings to consider nuclear safety.

In Russia, nearly a third of the 15-Minute evening program "Today in the World" was devoted to a detailed account of the mishap, including film footage of the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant and an evacuation center for area residents.

Commentator Anatoly Ovsyannikov said "the accident at the atomic power station in Pennsylvania had evoked profound concern and continues to alarm the American public.

"Special indignation has been evoked by the fact that the energy monopolies, in chasing after profits, are not taking proper measures ensuring the safety of the functioning of nuclear power stations,"

Earlier Monday, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda carried on its front page a report on a Leningrad atomic plant which it praised as safe.

The Soviet Union reportedly has had three major nuclear accidents, one of which killed several hundred persons when buried atomic wastes exploded in the Ural mountains in the late 1950s. The Soviet government has never ackowledged the accidents, which were reported by defectors and the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

In Japan, second only to the United States in the use of nuclear power, several hundred persons demonstrated Monday for a suspension of operations at nuclear facilities. The demonstrators said radiation leaks at the U.S. facility show nuclear power is dangerous.

About 500 residents of the southwestern Japanese town of Ikata, who live near a nuclear plant undergoing tests after a cooling water leakage was reported last October, demanded government protection from any potential radiation.

Court decisions were pending in four Japanese prefectures where citizens have sued the government to require revocation of licenses of nuclear plants on safety grunds. The U.S. case was expected to bolster their arguments.

Harald B. Schaefer, a West German parliamentary deputy of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's party, said, "The Harrisburg (Three Mile Island) case forces us to the conclusion that the Federal Republic must develop a strategy by which to solve energy problems without nuclear energy."

He also said, "The Harrisburg reactor was supplied by Messrs. Babcock and Wilcox. The nuclear power plant at Muehlheim-Kaerlich is being built according to that system. Further permission for partial construction must be withheld." German authorities grant or refuse the construction of nuclear power plants as each section is built.

About 150 nuclear power opponents began a sit-in Monday in a church in Hamburg, West Germany, following a weekend demonstration in Hannover that drew several thousand persons. And the nation's leading environmenal group, Citizens Initiative, has called for a halt to new construction of nuclear plants.

Belgian ecologists called on the government to shut down Belgium's two nuclear power plants and launch a parliamentary debate on nuclear energy.

The two plants are of the same type as the Three Mile Island facility, and the Inter-Environment organization of Belgium said the two plants were subject to the same safety regulations as the U.S. facility.

Schizophrenic Cites Normalcy As Goal

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — William Stanley Milligan says he is busy trying to put his life back together, in the hope someday he will return to society.

Milligan, 24, was diagnosed as having 10 distinct personalities. He was found innocent of rape, robbery and kidnapping charges last December, by reason of insanity, and since then he has been a patient at the Athens Mental Health Center. His physician, he says, has helped him fuse his multiple personalities into three identities. He says he does not remember his past.

"My ultimate goal in life is to be an average, normal citizen and to become involved in my community. My ultimate goal is to work with children," the Columbus Dispatch quoted Milligan as saying, in a copyright article.

Milligan says he would like to "continue my life and paint pictures ... Yes, I would like to be married if there's ever a girl who would marry me, considering my charges. I'd love to have my own family, but I'm not going to strive for it because it won't happen. Would you marry a rapist, a kidnapper?"

AN EDITORIAL:

It's Not A Better Mousetrap

ANOTHER EXAMPLE of how Congress says one thing and does another can be found only a stone's throw from where the good gentlemen conduct public business.

While talking of economy in government, balancing the budget and tax reform, Congress has put itself in the position of a family which talks of cutting back on its lifestyle, but builds a larger home.

The point has been made in Sen. John Chafee's failure to persuade a majority of his Senate colleagues to join him in stopping work on a third Senate Office building.

THE COST of the new edifice, originally set at $122 million, has now ballooned to more than $200 million. And there is no indication that that is the last of it.

"We are building monuments to democracy," declared a spokesman for the Capitol Architect in justifying the grandiose structure, which will have an eight-story atrium and five-story Alexander Calder sculpture.

On one point, the Senators are probably correct. They are crowded. But, that is their own fault. They have brought about this situation by voting more and more money for more and more clerks, secretaries, and assistants that multiply like Al Capp's shmoos. Chances are that when the new building is completed, it too, soon will be overflowing.

THE PROBLEM of space in the nation's capital doesn't just affect the buildings.

Visitors for whom the Capitol is a mecca quickly learn that legislative help has preempted the 9,600 parking spaces that exist on Capitol Hill.

The Architect estimates he will have to find 12,800 new spaces if present commuting habits persist, and the total payroll rises from 17,486 now to a projected 33,000.

There is even talk of a disneyland type people mover to shuttle staff and visitors around the Capitol grounds.

ACCORDING TO the Foundation for the Study of Presidential and Congressional Terms, the problem is going to get worse before it gets better.

But, with the economy mood as a lever, some House and Senate members are seeking to persuade the Senate to put a statutory limit on the number of employes. Senior Senators from medium-sized states now may command a staff as large as 100. A total of almost 200 persons work for the Senate Judiciary Committee, most of them responsive to new chairman Sen. Ted Kennedy.

If Sen. Chafee can get some sort of handle on things and block further spending for such things, maybe the next four buildings will not be necessary. If he fails, future historians may record the demise of the nation as starting with grandiose office buildings and more parking lots.

AN EDITORIAL:

Out Of Phase, Fashion, Joint

THE SUPPOSED college fraternity revival, widely attributed to the antics depicted in the film "National Lampoon's Animal House," is misleading.

The fraternity system never has had any lasting membership problems, notwithstanding campus to campus variations.

Even during the turbulent Sixties, national fraternity membership fell significantly below the previous year's total only once—in 1968 at the height of the student-protest movement.

But fraternities then were generally regarded as obsolete.

Joseph Epstein, a member of Phi Epsilon Pi at the University of Illinois in the 1950s, described his reaction to the campus scene when he returned a decade later:

"THEY WERE," said he of his younger frat brothers, "quite simply and quite astonishingly—to anyone who could remember back to what fraternity men had been only a few short years before—out of fashion, out of phase and entirely out of joint."

If Epstein were to revisit his alma mater today, chances are he would find the scene more in sync with his original memories of the place. Thanks partly to the influence of "Animal House," the rowdyism and beer-guzzling associated with fraternity life are considered tolerable if not acceptable activities once again.

But not by educators. Faculty members at Dartmouth have voted to disband the college's 24 fraternal groups and the board of trustees warned the societies last month to clean up their act or close it.

Fraternities, said Dartmouth associate professor James Epperson, "are elitist and anti-intellectual. They are precisely the opposite of what higher education is supposed to be all about."

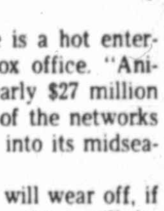
SOME OBSERVERS of the present fraternity scene feel that the pranks and high spirits mask a sense of desperation. The attitude of many members seems to be "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we may be unemployed."

At any rate, fraternity life is a hot entertainment property at the box office. "Animal House" has grossed nearly $27 million since its release. And each of the networks inserted a fraternity sit-com into its midseason schedule.

But eventually the novelty will wear off, if it hasn't already, and fraternities will be looked upon as last month's media obsession. A degree of calm may then descend upon the frat scene. After all, what's the use of doing outrageous things if nobody's watching?

ART BUCHWALD:

It Only Costs A Grand For A One-Night Stand



(First Of Two Related Columns)

WASHINGTON—I have a confession to make. I was invited to the White House for the signing of the Begin-Sadat treaty with my wife, and it didn't cost me a dime.

Please don't get me wrong. I would have been willing to pay $1,000 for the invitation (at least my wife would have), but the telegram arrived and there was no mention of a contribution.

This could mean one of several things: (1) President Carter is very pleased with the suggestions I had made in resolving the pull-back from the Sinai; (2) Jerry Rafshoon is trying to win me over to his man for the 1980 campaign;

(3) THE NAME Brzezinski went in the computer and somehow came out as Buchwald; (4) the Carters wanted to borrow our salad plates for the dinner; (5) I'm the only one in Washington who still thinks Bert Lance is a good banker.

It was a very nice evening as Middle East peace treaty dinners go. There were about 1,400 of us, and it was hard to tell the difference between those who had paid and those on freebies.

We assumed that Begin and Sadat were not asked to contribute, but we weren't sure if the President had made Rosalynn or Miss Lillian kick in a grand.

The lady I sat next to asked, "Are you with Sadat or Begin?"

I told her I was with President Carter.

"Who invited you?" I asked her.

"WE GOT OUR invitations through Ticketron," she said.

I seemed surprised. "How did that happen?"

"Well, we're tourists from Lafayette, Ind., and we're staying at the Hilton. We went to the hotel ticket agent and asked her what was playing in Washington tonight.

"She told us what was at the Kennedy Center, the National Theater, the Arena Stage and the Uptown Movie Theater. She also said she could get us two seats at the White House for a dinner in honor of Begin and Sadat for $1,000.

"My husband went through the roof. He said, 'Isn't that a lot of money for a dinner at the White House?' and the lady replied, 'Sadat and Begin are only playing for one night, and $1,000 takes care of everything including the tip.'

"MY HUSBAND wanted to know where our seats were located, and the Ticketron lady took out a plan of the tables in the tent. She showed us two seats, but they were in the back, quite far from Begin, Sadat and Carter, so he said, 'Don't you have anything better?'

"The Ticketron lady replied, 'I have two over here by Henry Kissinger, but they also happen to be next to the kitchen.'

"So we finally settled on this table. Where did you buy your seats?" the lady asked me.

I was too ashamed to admit I was there on the cuff so I said, "We got ours at the box office in front of the White House. I stood in line for two hours. My wife has never been to a peace treaty dinner before.

"We were going to use the money to pay the orthodontist, but my wife said since he's been waiting six months for his $1,000 he can wait a little longer."

"I'M GLAD I came," the lady confided to me. "We never see Begin or Sadat in Lafayette, Ind. When I get back my friends are going to be green with envy. Every time they've been in Washington and asked to buy tickets to a White House state dinner they were sold out."

"Well, this is sort of a special event," I said. "In the past you had to give at least $10,000 to the Democratic or GOP Party to be invited.

"But with all the large tents on the lawn they were able to reduce the price so the average person could afford it. Would you like some more roast beef?"

"Yes, please. Do you think Begin or Sadat will sing?"

"For $5 billion in military aid, you better believe it."

'Not In The Mood'

NOVAK

BAGHDAD—The strongman of oil-rich Iraq, whose nation is flexing new muscle following the fall of the shah in neighboring Iran, talks boldly about employing all means available, including full use of the oil weapon, to "retrieve the rights of the Arabs from the Zionist entity"—Israel.

Tough, handsome Saddam Hussein, however, failed in an exclusive interview with us to spell out precisely what he had in mind, except as punishment for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in signing what the Arabs call a sell-out separate peace with Israel.

For Sadat, the punishments which militant Iraq hopes to push through the anti-Sadat Arab summit here this week include withdrawal of financial support, transfer of the Arab League from Cairo and other sanctions.

But as to reprisals against the United States for having been indispensable middle man in the Egyptian-Israeli treaty, Saddam Hussein was ambiguous.

"How or when or against whom?" he asked rhetorically. "The enemy is the Zionist entity; we make a distinction between the American people and the Zionist entity.

"We also make a distinction between the American people and their government. We cannot and will not put the American people in the same place as the Zionist entity."

Or, as Tarik Aziz, a top Saddam Hussein strategist, told us separately, "We're not in the mood for cutting oil."

SADDAM HUSSEIN'S official title is vice chairman of the Revolutionary Command Council, but he is de facto leader of the ruling Baath party.

Receiving us in his office in the parliament building, his mood during more than two hours of talks was far less bellicose than his threats.

Virtually ruling out any early effort to invoke oil as a means of persuasion, he spoke philosophically about his long-troubled relationship with the U.S., most of which is directly attributable to the Arab-Israeli struggle and the U.S. alignment with Israel.

"Our policy has to be long-term patience," he said. "We must carefully calculate our actions to make sure the world better understands us and sympathizes with our problem.

"We are not in a hurry. We are not adventurous."

THE IRAQI leader and his Baath revolutionary high command have now given this once-splendid cradle of empires in ancient Mesopotamia an uninterrupted 12 years of highly nationalistic rule, replete with the refinements of a modern police state and a shaky friendship treaty with Moscow—the first indigenous rule since the Ottoman Empire first held sway 500 years ago.

With Iran convulsed in its own revolution and Saudi Arabia straining to find a safe path between its alliance with the U.S. and the Arab cause, Iraq and its immense oil reserves are a major new factor in the Mideast power equation.

That is all the more true with the Egyptian fall from Arab grace. Rivalry for Arab leadership is intense between Baghdad and Cairo.

AS OF TODAY, Iraq has emerged as the foremost Arab leader, now speaking its revolutionary rhetoric in unison with such American friends as Jordan and Kuwait and possibly Saudi Arabia.

Egypt's fall has been Iraq's windfall, and there is no ambiguity about Iraq's scorn for President Sadat or forecasts about his ultimate downfall.

"If President Carter believes that Sadat represents the Arab nation (meaning all Arab states) he is wrong. If he now believes Sadat even represents Egypt, he is misled," Saddam Hussein told us.

"Sadat will soon be an outcast in his own country. It is now inevitable that he will go the way of the shah."

Ignoring the fact that Sadat's triumph in freeing his land of the Israeli invader is certain to be trumpeted day after day in the Egyptian press and seems eventually to enhance his prestige, Saddam Hussin told us:

"THE SADAT revolution will inevitably occur. It is not a revolution made in a factory, but it will come just as it did in Iran."

If the U.S. cannot now influence Israel on the corrosive Palestinian question and, as a result, Saddam Hussein's prophecy comes true in the wake of Arab fury, Iraq could rise further as mobilizer of Arab opinion and an obstacle to Carter's first great diplomatic success—the subject for a future column.

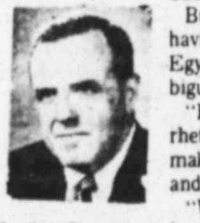
ANDREW TULLY:

Benefits Of Doubt



WASHINGTON—First, kill all the lawyers, Shakespeare wrote. Well, not quite. The movement might become contagious and result in the violent demise of innocent newspaper columnists.

But every once in a while, one wishes for a law that would ban lawyers from membership on the Supreme Court.

If you're a lawyer, the temptation is strong to decide litigation like a lawyer, which is what the highest bench did in deciding that states are free to give strikers unemployment insurance benefits.

The case involved arose from a 1971 nationwide strike against the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. by the Communications Workers of America.

For most workers, the strike lasted only a week, but in New York state 38,000 workers remained on strike for seven months. Under state law, they collected jobless pay after an eight-week waiting period.

THE SUPREME Court ruled 6 to 3 to uphold the New York law.

In so doing, the majority came right out and admitted that the workers' eligibility for jobless pay was a key factor in their decision to stay out on strike, and thus upset the balance of power between workers and their employers implicit in the Labor Relations Act passed more than 40 years ago.

Unemployment benefits are paid out of taxes paid by employers. Although the National Labor Relations Board ruled that the New York strike was illegal, the strikers collected more than $49 million of the telephone company's money.

The company was helping to finance a strike against itself.

Ma Bell sued, and a U.S. District Court judge ruled that the New York law was unconstitutional because it provided for "state intervention on behalf of the strikers...and is in conflict with federal labor law policy."

A U.S. COURT of Appeals then reversed the ruling, holding that there was "no clear...intent" that Congress wanted to prohibit such state legislation. Yep, intent is always hard to prove.

In 1935, a Senate report said states were free to set up unemployment insurance as they wished. In 1947, the Senate rejected a House-passed bill that would have barred benefits for strikers.

In 1969, Congress told President Nixon to get lost when he proposed such a ban.

In its more furtive moments, Congress can ignore fair play, especially with Big Labor looking over its shoulder. The New York law indeed is unconstitutional because it is in conflict with legislation that made federal law supreme.

INDEED, A THIRD U.S. Court of Appeals in 1973 invalidated a Rhode Island law similar to New York's, although finding a lack of "unambiguous Congressional intent."

If a worker knows he'll get jobless pay while on strike, he is much more likely to stay on the picket line. After all, he has the state on his side—acting to crush employer resistance to union demands.

Or as Justice Lewis F. Powell put it in his Supreme Court dissent, the bench's ruling "lays open the way for any state to undermine completely the collective bargaining process within its borders."

That's all right with Congress. Its members never have to be reminded that there are more union voters than corporation presidents.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

No Value To Poor?

THE POOR, as any Bible scholar and every taxpayer knows, are always with us. But one economist says there aren't as many of them as the government would have us believe.

It all depends on how you look at it.

The Census Bureau says there are 24.7 million, or 12.3 percent of the population.

Dr. Morton Paglin, from Portland State University in Oregon, says it's more like eight million, or only 3.6 percent. That's 75 percent below the official figures handed out in Wasnington.

And those, he writes in the spring issue of the Heritage Foundation's Policy Review, "grossly distort" the poverty picture. Official statistics reflect cash income only and ignore any other "in-kind benefits."

THOSE ARE the various extra non-cash services poor families get for free—things like food stamps, rent supplements and public housing, medicaid, food programs for women and the elderly, school lunches, breakfast and milk programs for children, etc.

All these add up. To something like $20 billion. But, says the professor, the government seems to consider them "of no value to the poor."

That $20 billion, incidentally, is only a small part of the 44 different welfare programs on the federal books. This year's bill for help to the needy will come to a staggering $250 billion, equal to half the federal budget.

It's kind of important to know about this because, if you go by the Census figures, you begin to get the idea that all these billions aren't doing much good. That, no matter how much we spend, poverty is still as prevalent as it was some trillion dollars ago.

ACCORDING TO federal statistics, from 1959 to 1968 the number of poor was reduced by 15 million, but from 1968 to 1975 there was no decline at all.

Not so, says Dr. Paglin. There has been a "major reduction in the poverty population." Not only that, the very poor (under half of the poverty threshold) have practically been eliminated.

The real story, he suggests, is that the trend has been going down all the time.

In the first half it was largely because of increased earnings, and in the second by the Great Society's whopping boost of welfare goodies. Or, as government folks call them, "transfers in kind."

"In the official cash-income statistics, poor persons number over 7.7 million," Dr. Paglin writes. "But in the in-kind transfer distribution, they are reduced to 639,000."

THAT'S A big drop, enormously big. But not surprising, the professor explains, when you consider that the food-stamp program alone gives assistance equal to almost one-third of the income for families in the poverty class.

Historically, he goes on, one of the government's main goals is to reduce poverty ("a chicken in every pot; two cars in every garage," etc.) through welfare programs. And it's doing just that, no matter what the government figures show.

That's not all. "In-kind payments," according to Dr. Paglin, are sometimes "superior to an earned-cash income of the same market value."

In plain talk that means, "Why go to work when you can go on welfare?"

There may be some limits on choice of spending, but there are a lot of pluses those who work for a living don't have.

WORKERS SUPPORTED by transfers-in-kind:

1. Have more leisure than working stiffs.
2. Are spared the dull monotony of dead-end jobs.
3. Don't have to shell out for gas or bus or train tickets to get to their jobs, or for clothes suitable for work.
4. Don't have to worry about inflation (their food stamp allotments are revised every six months to keep up with food prices).
5. Don't, if they're in public housing, have to give a thought to exploding costs of fuel, maintenance, property taxes or interest rates.
6. Get free medical care no matter how high medical, hospital and nursing-home costs go.
7. Are spared the risks of being laid off temporarily (because of strikes, bad weather, etc.) or being forced to take a cut in pay.
8. Can have as many children as they please without worrying about whether they can afford it (their transfers automatically go up when their family increases).
9. And, of course, their income is tax-and-deduction-free.

WOULD YOU, the professor asks, "give up your risk-free, inflation-proof package of food stamps, rent subsidies and medical coverage (of, say, a market value of $300 per month) for a job at the minimum wage which, after taxes but before transportation costs, would pay you the same $300?"

Thanks to our "uncoordinated multiple-benefit welfare program," Dr. Paglin says, some cash-poor households are receiving help from so many agencies their combined money and in-kind income may be well ABOVE the poverty line.

So there it is. The welfare program may be, as President Carter tells everybody, "a real mess," but it is (if you go by Dr. Paglin's way of reckoning) cutting down on poverty.

Not that this means your tax bills will go down. But it might make you feel a little better come April 15. It's a cinch nothing else will.

Q. "Why is it the Chinese prefer the short-grained rice to the long-grained?"

A. The short-grained when cooked sticks together better. It's easier to eat with chopsticks.

Q. "What does it mean when a boat out at sea displays a black diamond shape on it?"

A. That it's either towing another vessel or being towed with a line about 650 feet long or longer. Good thing to know, if you're on a boat of your own out there. Those long tow lines may be under the surface.

Mild U.S. Criticism Expressed Over Arab States Boycott

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration criticized on Monday a move by 18 Arab countries to impose an economic boycott against Egypt for signing a peace treaty with Israel.

But the criticism was mild and the door was left open to Jordan, Syria and Saudi Arabia, all seen as potential supporters of Mideast peace negotiations, to eventually support peace efforts.

Foreign ministers from the 18 countries, meeting in Baghdad, Iraq, adopted a series of resolutions Saturday calling for the severing of all diplomatic relations with Egypt and an end to Arab financial and economic aid, trade and oil supplies.

In providing the administration response, Hodding Carter, the State Department spokesman, said the decisions taken at Baghdad were "negative and unhelpful."

He said the treaty is part of a process of bringing lasting peace to the Middle East. "No one else has proposed anything else that has any real prospect of working," Carter said.

At the same time, the administration will take "careful soundings" before reaching any definitive conclusions about what happened at Baghdad.

"We believe that a number of participants in the Baghdad conference have made it clear that they seek a peaceful settlement," he said.

Meanwhile, President Carter asked Congress Monday to begin work immediately on the $4.8 billion package of loans and grants he promised to Israel and Egypt.

He estimated actual budget costs over the next four years will total $1.1 billion. The package is made primariy of loans to be paid back.

The president told Congress in a letter that delay in his initial request for a $350 million appropriation this year could "threaten timely implementation" of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

In helping to negotiate the treaty, the president told Israeli and Egyptian leaders he would recommend a series of financial assistance programs for each nation.

Egypt, with a booming population, is in a dire fiscal situation. Its president, Anwar Sadat, needs to show some tangible benefits from the peace treaty, particularly in light of other Arabs' proposals to boycot his nation.

Israel needs the assistance to help meet the cost of withdrawing from occupied territory and to protect itself without a buffer zone against its Arab neighbors.

The president's proposal includes a $2.2 billion loan to Israel for military purchases and an $800 million grant to pay for withdrawal from two Sinai airbases and construction of two new bases in Israel's Negev desert.

Under the proposal, Egypt would get $1.5 billion in loans for military equipment and a $300 million loan for economic development.

In his letter, the president emphasized three points:

—The financial package is "evenhanded," reflecting the "near-term burdens of the treaty balanced" against each nation's military and economic circumstances.

—The amounts proposed follow "a careful balancing of foreign policy needs and fiscal policy constraints."

—"Piecemeal treatment would threaten both evenhandedness" and the foreign policy-fiscal policy balance.

The letter, made available by the White House, was sent to Sens. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, and Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

It was also sent to Reps. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., chairman of the House Budget Committee, and Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Four Volunteer Sites Offer IRS Assistance

With barely two weeks left to file income tax returns, South Plains residents are reminded to take advanatge of the Internal Revenue's Voluntary Income Tax Assistance Program.

Four volunteer sites still are offering free help in filling out tax forms, such as the 1040 and 1040A, said David Flores of the IRS Collection Division, adding that the number of sites and the volunteer force already has doubled that of last year.

"Last year's volunteers did about 500 tax returns," Flores said, "and we have completed 300 to 400 forms already."

Flores said he expects the usual "mad scramble" of last-minute filers, but is confident that with the available volunteers and the 24-hour local information number, all residents will be taken care of.

The following are sites and times volunteers are available.

South Plains Community Action Center, with sites in Levelland, Post, Tahoka, Brownfield, Littlefield, Muleshoe, Anton, Olton and Morton.

Christian Renewal Center (792-1105): 6 to 8 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays at Fourth Street and Toledo Avenue.

Social Action Service (763-1530): 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday at Zenith Avenue and Bates Street.

Lucky 12 Club: Call Doris Dickens, club president, at 763-1039. This women's organization makes house calls to prepare tax returns.

The 24-hour IRS number is 762-7475. Site locations and names of persons who will make house calls are available.

Flat Rate Favored Over Present Tax System

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Washington, D.C., attorney, who calls himself an "ultra-conservative," hopes to abolish the present income tax system and replace it with a flat 10 percent rate.

Louis Ingram, who is asking ministers throughout the country to help support his campaign, said his proposed system would call for a single tax on an individual's income, with no deductions allowed.

"Deductions, such as those for health care and tuition, all are a myth," Ingram said. "Because of special treatment and deductions the middle income people are wasted and the higher income people are not affected.

"This system is really a progressive one," Ingram explained, because the wealthy would be paying their share.

Under Ingram's proposal, individuals would pay a 10 percent tax on 90 percent of their income, with the remaining 10 percent of their income tax-free. The 10 percent tax would go the state, which would keep one-third of the amount and pass two-thirds on to Washington.

Washington's percentage could only be used for the national defense, maintenance of law and order, running the White House, Congress, courts and for diplomatic missions, Ingram said.

The tax code as it stands now is "altogether too complicated for the average person to understand," Ingram said, adding that personal deductions are the biggest stumbling blocks.

This proposal would "greatly reduce the cost of government and keep government expenditures down, while at the same time government will have the money for truly necessary things," the attorney said.

Ingram's system, which would abolish the IRS and collect the taxes each Oct. 31, means "no withholding tax and puts the date one week before elections."

Ingram said he has no time to form his own organization to help get the proposal passed, but several ministers are using their nationwide newsletters to set up a national organization to collect signatures on petitions.

"I think we can get 10 million signatures in six months in the country through churches," he said. "After we get these base signatures we'll go door-to-door to get the others.

"We need to know if there is a tremendous groundswell against the proposal," he said. "We don't want to cram this down anyone's throat."

China Considers Dropping Treaty

TOKYO (AP) — China discussed scrapping its 1950 alliance treaty with the Soviet Union at the Fifth National People's Congress in Peking, according to Japan's Kyodo news service.

In a dispatch Sunday from the Chinese capital, the news agency quoted unidentified sources as saying the discussion took place during a meeting of the standing committee of the Congress.

The treaty has been inactive since China and the Soviets began feuding over ideological questions in the late 1950s. The Chinese told Japanese leaders while negotiating the 1978 friendship treaty between China and Japan that they would terminate the Soviet treaty when it comes up for renewal in 1980.

Alleged Rapist, Murderer Pointed Out

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Choking back sobs, a 23-year-old Lubbock woman Monday pointed out Gary Lynn Vester as one of the men who shot her boyfriend and raped her April 1, 1978 on a desolate farm road east of Lubbock.

Vester, charged with capital murder in connection with the shooting death of Robert Rios Rivera, 29, sat impassively as the woman sobbingly said, "That's him. The man in the black suit."

The petite woman said she and Rivera had parked in the early morning hours alongside some trees on a county road south of East 19th Street and east of Loop 289.

They were startled, she testified late Monday afternoon, by a loud male voice outside the car saying, "Get out, you Mexicans!"

She said Rivera shouted back, "You black m—f—!"

Then a man she identified as the 20-year-old Vester rushed to the open car window and shot Rivera in the mouth, she said. While Rivera was moaning and holding his hands over his mouth, Vester reached through the window and shot him again, she testified, breaking into sobs.

Presiding Judge Robert C. Wright called a five-minute recess for her to regain her composure.

The woman said the man who shot Rivera ordered her to walk away from the car into the trees, where he raped her. He then brought her back to where the second, taller man had taken Rivera out of the car and stripped him.

"He was telling the one who raped me he had to get rid of me," she said. She added that the other man made her take Rivera's watch off and give it to him and that they mistakenly gave her Rivera's clothes to put on.

After discussing whether or not to kill her, she said, "The one that raped me said he was going to let me go. He said if I told he would get me anyway."

She had gotten back her own pants and shirt by then, she said, but had been made to put on Rivera's boots. The men told her to start walking through the field east of the death scene.

But she said the shorter man called her back after she got into the field.

"I was crying and begging him not to hurt me," she testified. "The other one was saying, 'Let's go, man. Let's get out of here.' He said, 'Keep walking and don't look back.'"

The woman said the boots quickly came off her feet and she stumbled, walked and then ran to a farmhouse and called for help.

She identified Vester first from sheriff's office pictures a few weeks after the shooting, deputies testified in a pre-trial hearing last week.

Her memory also was enhanced by hypnosis on three occasions, the deputies said, and the case is considered a possible landmark case in state district courts because hypnosis never has been used to identify a defendant in a state case.

The only two such cases on record are two federal cases in the 1960s.

Assistant Criminal District Attorney Richard L. Howell, assisted by prosecutor Mark McBride, led questioning for the state after a jury had been chosen Monday afternoon.

Defense attorneys Grady Terrell and Mackey Hancock examined prospective jurors for most of the day, with the woman taking the stand as the first prosecution witness at about 4 p.m.

Testimony is scheduled to begin today at 9 a.m. in 137th District Court.

Missouri Inferno Kills 25, 13 Escape Boarding House

FARMINGTON, Mo. (AP) — Fire raged through a boarding house here today, collapsing the roof and killing 25 persons, many of them trapped by flaming debris.

The dead included elderly persons and some mental patients from the state hospital here, authorities said.

Fire Chief Bob Oder said 37 patients and one attendant were in the Straughan Wayside Inn retirement home when the fire broke out at 5 a.m. He said all 25 victims had been removed from the structure by midday..

Thirteen persons were taken alive from the home, some of them injured, officials said.

St. Francois County Coroner Ted Boyer said 26 initially were believed killed but it was later discovered one victim had been listed twice because of two spellings of his name.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Gene Archer said the roof of the building collapsed soon after the fire began. Bodies were found in the hallways and at the doors of the red granite, single-story structure, a remodeled motel.

The Rev. Robert Babka, pastor of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church in Farmington, said he often visited residents of the boarding house. "It was a solid building. It was clean and well-kept. It's hard to see how a fire could sweep through a structure so quickly," Babka said.

The priest said some of the residents were being treated for mental disorders, alcoholism and drug abuse at the state hospital, located about a mile away. He said they were as young as 21 and all were ambulatory and able to care for themselves.

"Some of them were veterans, and some were people who weren't sick enough to be in hospital but who had no other home," Babka said.

One firefighter said the home was "a total loss." All that remained of the home were sections of brick walls and a concrete floor littered with rubble and charred mattresses.

The home is owned by two brothers, Thomas and Joseph Straughan, neither of whom could be reached immediately for comment.

Most of the residents, still dressed in their nightclothes, were killed by smoke inhalation.

At the National Guard Armory, where some of the bodies were taken, St. Francois County Deputy John Casteel gestured toward the victims.

"These nine that we have here died of smoke inhalation," he said. "One man did have his pants on but only up to his ankles. He put both feet in and couldn't get the pants up before he was overcome by smoke and passed out."

Casteel said most of the nine bodies had been identified, two were unidentified and two persons had died at a local hospital. Thirteen bodies remained at the scene, he said.

Late Monday morning, the coroner walked through the still smoking rubble, marking the places where bodies were found to aid identification later.

Oder said the fire apparently erupted in the kitchen area at the rear of the home and the building was engulfed in flames by the time firefighters arrived. Neighbors said flames were shooting 20 to 30 feet into the air.

"When firemen first arrived on the scene, they were able to get into two front doors and a side door but there was nothing they could do about the back section," he said.

Oder was taken to the hospital with smoke inhalation but signed himself out and returned to the scene.

Spokesmen for local hospitals said at least three persons — including one fireman and the boarding house attendant — were admitted for treatment, most for smoke inhalation.

Firefighters from 10 companies brought the fire under control after about two hours. They had to run hoses almost one mile into downtown Farmington, a community of 6,590 persons, about 75 miles south of St. Louis.

Suit Filed Against INS 'Dragnet' Labor Camp Raids

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A federal court suit in Spokane contends that U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service agents conduct unconstitutional "dragnet" raids on migrant labor camps to search for illegal aliens.

U.S. District Judge Marshall A. Neill has certified the complaint as a class action suit. If resolved for the plaintiffs, who are United States citizens, the impact of the case could ripple from the farmlands of eastern Washington to all parts of the country.

"This case addresses problems which have plagued Washington farm workers for many years," say Stephen R. Sady and Michael J. Fox, defense lawyers. "Through the mere fact of their residence, farm workers suffer intrusions into the most intimate areas of their lives at the hands of the defendants in this case."

The government denies the allegations against the Immigration Service agents.

The suit claims agents violated the right to privacy and constitutional protection against unreasonable searches. It asks for an injunction to stop such activities by immigration agents in, but not limited to, Washington, Idaho, western Montana and northern Oregon.

The seed of the suit was planted in August and September 1977 when, says Charles LaDuke, a farm worker and U.S. citizen, immigration agents searched his Wapato, Wash., living quarters for illegal aliens without a warrant or his permission.

LaDuke, a plaintiff, says that on Aug. 24, 1977, "I was awakened when a flashlight was shined in my eyes (through a window in the tent) and someone said, 'Buenos dias, senor.'

"After I responded and the intruder discovered I was an Anglo, he questioned me as to whether Mexicans had lived in the area and whether anyone else lived in the tent with me," LaDuke says.

"The entire interior of my tent was also flashlight-searched by the intruder, who shined his flashlight through the tent window. At no time did the intruder identify himself as a Border Patrol agent or anything else...And at no time did I give permission to anyone to make a flashlight search of my tent."

The Immigration Service countered in a hearing that the sun was up when the agents came around and they didn't have flashlights.

The second incident occurred on Sept. 13, 1977, LaDuke said. He said he had moved to a nearby cabin. It was dark and he had gone to sleep.

Suddenly, he says, he was "awakened by the rattling of the chain latch on my door. I looked up and saw a hand inside of my door. The hand had passed through a crack in the door and an agent was apparently attempting to unlatch the chain."

LaDuke said the door opened and someone shined a flashlight in his face and that he was questioned about his identity and about whether any Mexicans were in the area.

But the Immigration Service claims that as the agent knocked on the door, it creaked open about two inches and that no one entered the cabin or searched it with a flashlight.

British regiments evacuated Boston in 1776.

Man Saved By Smoke Detector

FARMINGTON, Mo. (AP) — Ralph Steinmetz woke up to a buzzing in the hallway. That smoke alarm saved the 74-year-old boarding home resident from the inferno that minutes later killed 25 friends.

"I heard a buzzer about a quarter to five,," Steinmetz told The Associated Press Monday. "I opened the door, and the smoke just poured in. I picked up my hat and coat and started running out the front door.

"Fire was coming down from the ceiling and it scorched my hair. I couldn't get out the back because it was all on fire."

Steinmetz escaped out a sliding glass door, one of 13 survivors of the blaze that roared through the Straughan Wayside Inn, a concrete and granite building, about 5 a.m. Monday.

"I was scared," Steinmetz said. "I don't feel any too good over it yet. There were some of my friends in there; now they don't exist anymore."

Once he reached safety, he spotted Dorothy East, a cook, waving to him from inside the structure. Mrs. East had awakened some residents of the boarding house, but she was trapped. A shoulder-high window was her only way out.

"She didn't have no time," Steinmetz said. "She was by her window, so me and Raymond (another survivor) pushed the windows open, opened the screen and got her by the arms and shoulders to pull her head first out of the window."

Steinmetz was taken to the Farmington State Hospital, where he had been a patient 26 years, until 1970 when he was placed in a boarding house. He moved to the Straughan home in 1976. Officials declined to say why Steinmetz entered the hospital in 1944.

Officials said he was in good condition and probably would be placed in another boarding home later.

Seven of the fire victims were former patients at the state hospital. Another former patient was in intensive care at a local hospital. Five other former patients, including Steinmetz, suffered only minor injuries.

Marcos Sets Vote On Moslem Issue

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The martial-law regime of President Ferdinand E. Marcos announced Monday that elections will be held May 7 for two state assemblies to represent Moslem autonomous regions in the southern Philippines.

Marcos said the elections would be in compliance with a 1976 agreement signed in Libya, which called for the establishment of an autonomous Moslem region and a cease-fire between Moslem rebels and government troops in the area.

But a group representing the rebels, who have been fighting for self-government since 1972, said they would not participate in the election because it did not include all the provinces they have sought.

Pope Plans Visit To Austria In Fall

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Pope John Paul II plans to visit Austria in September, Turin's Catholic newspaper La Gazzetta del Popolo reports.

The paper, in an article last weekend, quoted Cardinal Franziskus Koenig, the archbishop of Vienna, as saying, "The pope told me that he plans to be in Vienna in September, if possible."

Koenig is credited with being one of the architects of the decision to elect John Paul, a Pole who is the first non-Italian pope in 455 years.

The Austrian trip would be John Paul's third outside Italy as pontiff. He traveled to Mexico in January and is scheduled to visit Poland in June.

In 1935, Hitler renounced the Treaty of Versailles and ordered Germany's remilitarization.

Army Testing Reserve Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army announced Monday it is testing the direct enlistment of young men for combat assignments in the ready reserve manpower pool, which it said is "seriously understrength."

The test will last for six months and will seek to recruit only 1,500 youths from civilian life directly into the Individual Ready Reserve (IRR).

The results of this test, the Army said, "will provide the basis for future decisions regarding the value of implementing" direct enlistment into the reserve pool on a major scale "as a means of reducing the trained manpower shortage."

The individual ready reserve is now made up of men and women with previous active duty service and has never before taken volunteers directly from the civilian population.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, Army chief of staff, recently proposed drafting up to 100,000 young men a year into the individual ready reserve, but he was publicly opposed in this by Army Secretary Clifford Alexander.

Everybody in the Pentagon, and many in Congress, agree that the shortfall in the pool of trained reserve manpower is a serious problem. Rogers estimates the Army's rserve manpower pool is about 500,000 short of its requirements in the event of a war's outbreak.

Since the draft ended six years ago, the IRR is the chief source on which the regular armed services, particularly the Army, must rely for quick strengthening of units in a mobilization and for replacement of casualties in the early weeks of a major war.

It is currently made up of persons filling out the balance of six-year military obligations after finishing active-service enlistments of three or four years.

Its members do not drill regularly, as in the case of National Guardsmen and Reservists in units, but are available for early callup from a master list of names.

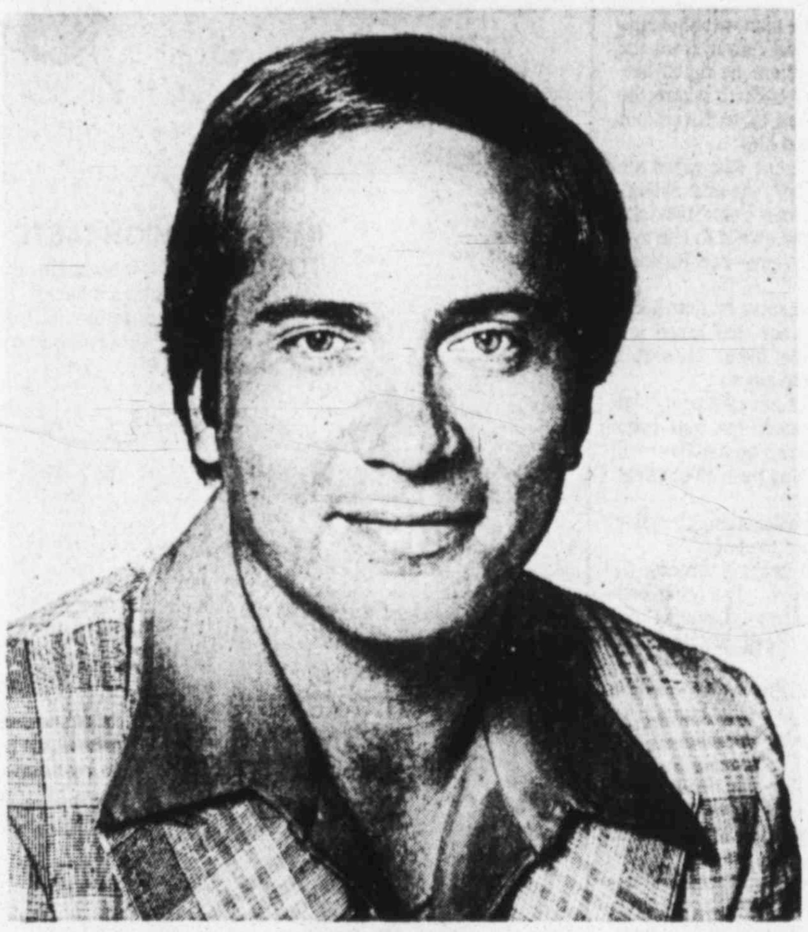
HAVE A CHECKUP. IT CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.



Johnny Bench
During one of my checkups, the doctors found a spot on my lungs. I thought it might be cancer. So did they.
Luckily, it wasn't. Most people are lucky. Most people never have cancer.
But those who find they do have cancer are far better off if their cancer is discovered early. Because we know how to cure many cancers when we discover them early.
That's why I want you to have a checkup. And keep having checkups. The rest of your life.
It'll be a lot longer if you do.

Inspector General Reports Spending Turnaround By HEW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The inspector general for HEW, who touched off a storm in Congress last year when he said the agency had misspent up to $7.4 billion, changed his approach this year, and claimed Monday it is on its way to saving $1.3 billion.

In his second annual report, Inspector General Thomas D. Morris said the department's response to his first report "has been exceptional." But the 385-page document doesn't say specifically how much fraud, abuse and waste have been eliminated.

The report notes that HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. set a target of saving $1.1 billion by reducing error, fraud and abuse in fiscal 1979, which ends Sept. 30. He later increased that target to $1.3 billion.

A spokesman for Morris said the inspector general, whose job was created by Congress as a largely independent watchdog, considered the $1.3 billion figure "a reasonable and good target" for this year. Further savings of $2.1 billion have been targeted for fiscal 1980.

The spokesman, Bob Wilson, said: "That is about all the department can attack next year with present resources and under existing legislation." In the future, however, the report says, the department could reach $3 billion in annual savings without new legislation.

Wilson said further savings are possible, for instance if Congress enacts the administration's hospital cost containment legislation or reduces some Social Security benefits as President Carter has proposed.

A year ago, the Morris report to Califano and Congress said between $6.3 billion and $7.4 billion was a "rough and incomplete" estimate of the amount HEW was misspending of the $148 billion it received. Morris said most of the losses were due to waste and mismanagement rather than actual fraud or abuse of government programs, which he said cost the taxpayers about $1 billion a year.

The report touched off furor in Congress, where some lawmakers suggested slashing the budget for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare by the amount of estimated waste.

Two months later, Califano lowered Morris' first estimate by $838 million and implored Congress not to take "a meat ax" to his budget.

Asked why there was no apparent way to compare the figures in the first report with those in the second, Wilson said the first report "was intended to be an inventory from a variety of sources, many of them quite soft and unreliable."

Some of the so-called soft figures "may have some potential downstream at some point in time," Wilson said, "but they are so speculative that the inspector general does not feel they should be focused in the same way as tangible waste, fraud, abuse and error that can be attacked now."

This year's report therefore eliminates $2.9 billion to $3.9 billion in "rather speculative numbers of unknown authenticity and reliability," the spokesman said.

He gave as examples of losses listed in the first report but not in the second the cost to the government of unnecessary surgery, unnecessary x-rays, surplus hospital beds and state welfare error rates below 4 percent. The government recently set the 4 percent error rate as a target for all federally aided state welfare programs. Wilson said it simply isn't known at this time whether it would be cost-effective to try to reduce the rate below that.

"Most importantly," the report begins, "this second annual report is a 'lessons learned' document."

Human Leg Identity Sought

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — The investigation into the discovery of a human leg bone near Childress several weeks ago is at a standstill, and Sheriff J.E. Benham is not optimistic that its identification will ever be known.

Benham said results of recent tests at a state crime lab recently were returned to Childress, but were inconclusive.

"I found a small amount of dried blood in a toe of the skeletal remains, and had a slim hope that the lab might be able to determine the blood type," Benham said. "However, officials at the lab in Austin said so many other fluids had mixed with the blood before the bone was found that they were unable to determine anything at all."

The skeletal part was observed by a passing motorist on a seldom-traveled dirt road about three miles north of Childress several weeks ago. Benham said the bone was lying in a bar ditch. A thorough search of the area by sheriff's offic als turned up no additional parts of a skeleton.

"We found nothing unusual in our search, although we walked every inch of land for several miles. There were no signs of digging or even tire tracks off the road, which leads us to believe the bone was thrown out of a vehicle," Benham said.

The sheriff speculates that the leg bone is that of a young male, possibly a black man. He bases that belief on the shoe that was still attached to the foot, as well as study of fragments of skin.

The shoe was a light brown, high-heeled ankle shoe with a zipper up the side, which Benham described as a type usually worn by younger men. He theorized that the bone may be that of a black man because bits of skin on the upper part of the foot appeared to be much darker than that on the sole.

"We have no reports of missing persons at the present time in Childress County, and the bone does not fit descriptions of men missing in other nearby counties because of the shoe," Benham said.

He noted that a blue sock also was still attached to the foot.

"I haven't had inquiries from other law enforcement agencies that would give us anything to go on," Benham said. "There seems to be nothing more to do right now except wait and to keep watching for missing reports that match what was found."

Even disposition of the remains poses a problem.

"It's up to my department to properly dispose of the bone," Benham said. "I'll probably arrange for its burial. It's such an unusual case that it's difficult to know just what the correct procedures are."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Before my husband died two years ago, he bought some stocks and took care of all our financial affairs. Since his death, I have been receiving statements from the brokerage house he dealt with. My problem is that I don't understand those statements. I don't know what kind of stock my husband bought, how many shares I have or what they are worth. How can I go about finding out?

A. Do the logical thing. Visit that brokerage firm's offioe. Sit down with the broker who handled your husband's account. Have the statement explained to you. Despite the complaints we often hear about brokers, most of them are reliable people who will bend over backwards to be helpful in cases such as yours.

There's no doubt that a brokerage house statement can be mighty confusing to the unitiated. Although the form of the statement can vary from one firm to another, each statement should show the name and number of shares of each stock or other security, as well as any cash, held in the account.

It's obvious that your husband left stock with the brokerage house, registered in what is called "street name." But you don't provide any hint as to whether the brokerage account was in his name, alone, or in his name and your name.

In order to settle your husband's estate, you have to have the stock transferred to your name and/or the names of other heirs — if any. Frankly, I think you need a good attorney to handle those details for you or, at least, tell you how to go about it.

• • •

Q. How much commission does a broker collect for handling 3,100 shares of a mutual fund? My broker keeps denying being paid anything. I can't find any information about this in the fund's "prospectus."

A. The commission charge — if any — on the purchase of mutual fund shares is printed in large type on the cover page of each fund's prospectus. On most mutual funds, the commission is 8 1/2 percent of the amount you pay in. Some funds have lower commissions. Some — the "no-load" funds — have no commissions at all.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON—MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK–Sure, you "Search For Tomorrow" viewers want sweet young widow Liza Kaslo to "get together" with sweet young millionaire Travis Sentell. But have you noticed the sparks that are beginning to fly between Liza and no-goodnik Nick D'Antonio? The sparks are both fictionally and real-life motivated.

Liza and Travis only met about six months ago. They couldn't very well find love and happiness in that short a time — not on a soap opera. Enter Nick to provide the third point of a triangle. And with Nick's entrance came actor Jerry Lanning, who just happens to be engaged to Sherry Mathis (Liza).

Sherry was born and raised in Memphis, Tenn., where she studied with the Memphis Front Street Theatre while attending the state university. She moved to New York and soon landed a role in the Broadway musical "A Little Night Music." Other Broadway and off-Broadway roles followed; then she toured in a musical version of "Gone with the Wind," as the indomitable Scarlett, which Sherry described as "my dream part, since I'm a Southern girl." She toured in other musicals, including "Camelot" with Rock Hudson, and it was "on the road" that she met a leading man who would later become her "main man," singer Jerry Lanning.

Sherry and Jerry are planning a summer wedding, their soap schedule permitting. Considering their mutual musical interests, it's logical that Sherry should comment on her upcoming marriage by jesting, "One piano is cheaper than two."

But will Nick and Liza make beautiful music together? Tune in tomorrow.

SHORT TAKES:

IN AN EFFORT to spruce up the visual elements of "All My Children," the show recently hired a new producer. Jorn Winter (c.q.) has directed the ABC evening news magazine, "20/20," the Nixon-Frost interviews and has produced and directed numerous nighttime specials, including several "Sonny and Cher" outings. "AMC" also has a new art director, Bill Mickley, who was lauded for designing the new sets last year for "General Hospital." Since that soap has zoomed in the ratings, thanks in large to its new "look," the rush is on at other ABC serials to follow suit. The danger remains that they'll all become carbon copies of "GH" which may be ratings-wise but individuality-foolish.

JOINING "Edge of Night" as assistant district attorney Cliff Nelson is actor Ernie Townsend. Cliff's out to pin a first-degree murder rap on Winter Austen for the murder of Wade Meacham. On another "Edge" front, actor Lee Godart will be sticking around, even though his original storyline as Rev. Elliot Dorn was short-circuited. The producers were wise to involve South African-born Godart in a new plot as Margo Huntington's gigolo.

(Send your questions about soap operas to "Tune In Tomorrow," 230 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017. Questions cannot be answered personally, but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

OLDER AND BETTER

CANNES, France (WNS) — At 71, Lucienne Darmon has more boyfriends than she ever had at 21. "If a woman hasn't learned to please men in those 50 years, she had better give up," said the pint-sized flapper. "I listen to their problems, put them to work decorating my apartment or driving me around town, and give them a good lunch or buy them a cravate." The widow's beaux range in age, she said, from their 20s to their 80s.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Mother is 83. Two years ago she had a bleeding ulcer and had two thirds of her stomach removed. Since then she has had daily bouts of nausea. Her physician calls it the "dumping syndrome." He says nothing can be done for it. Poor mother is ready to climb the walls. Is there such a thing as a dumping syndrome? Is there possibly something that can be done for her? — B.B.W.

This "dumping syndrome" occurs in about 10 percent of people who have had a part of their stomach removed. The cause of discomfort is not entirely clear. It is thought related to rapid emptying of the stomach (particularly of carbohydrates and the build-up of fluid in the intestines. The resulting lower blood circulation is thought to cause the nausea, sweating, irregular heart, cramps and weakness. This is experienced after meals. For some, a lowering of sugar intake can help the problem.

There is really very little else to do to change the new chemical ballgame going on in the intestines, but she can make living with it more pleasant. She should lie down for about a half hour after every meal. Her diet should be high in protein and she should eat smaller, more frequent meals, spacing them evenly during the day.

Certain drugs (muscle relaxers) might give her relief. I believe, though, that with the tips outlined above she might avoid much of her problem. Unless coped with properly the condition can lead to fear of eating and malnutrition. In time the patient adjusts and diet and symptoms become less of a problem.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am a 73-year-old lady. I read in your column how to prevent leg cramps at night by wearing a pair of lightweight socks. I tried this and it really works. I have no had cramps since. I hope you will print this item again so others can benefit from it. — Mrs. C.C.

Glad it helped you. It might others. For other tips on the subject see my booklet.

"How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pain." Send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Is it true that women who have had breast removal may have arm swelling afterward? — Mrs. T.W.

Yes, it happens if lymph glands have been removed. They normally carry away excess fluid. An elastic sleeve and certain physical therapy helps remedy the problem. If this is your problem I suggest you discuss it with your doctor, who can arrange a program for you.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have heard that deep breathing can be harmful, causing the burning of something in the middle of the anatomy. I like to do deep breathing as an exercise, but having heard this I am worried. Can you shed some light on this? — H.S.

Nothing wrong with deep breathing for brief periods of time. I have not seen reports of any harmful effects. Prolonged hyperventilation (rapid breathing) may cause dizziness, pain and cramps in the arms.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: What is niacin? I have heard it's helpful for headaches. True? — G.L.

Niacin is one of the B-complex vitamins. It may have a slight dilating (expansion) effect on blood vessels of the skin increasing blood flow there. It is valuable in many conditions as in a cholesterol-lowering diet and in treating pellagra, which is a niacin deficiency. I don't know where you heard of its headache relieving qualities. It may cause headache in some people. Another name for niacin is "nicotinic acid." That name was dropped to avoid confusing it with "nicotine," with which it has no connection.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I ride an exercise bicycle about 30 minutes at a time each day. I was wondering if the effects would be the same as walking. I am 79. — W.B.L.

The exercise bike is fine, and should be as effective as walking. But don't deny yourself the greater pleasure of a walk out of doors if you are up to that. Congratulations on your 79 year-old vigor.

• • •

Do you often have a stomach ache? If so, your stomach may not be the real trouble spot. The booklet, "Stomach and Other Abdominal Pains: A Checklist," tells you why. For a copy write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: I'd like to address my remarks to "Still Boiling," who is so upset about her husband's friend who urinated under her kitchen window.

Well, I'm a 27-year-old mother of a small child and my advice to this lady is, "Cool it, you ain't seen nothin' yet. I lived in Europe for a few years while my husband was attending school. "Boiling" would have been beside herself if she had seen, as I did, men urinating on street corners, against the wheels of cars and telephone poles — anywhere and everywhere they felt like it.

So tell "S.B." not to fight with her husband over this small incident. Americans are very fortunate to have so many toilets conveniently located. Also, tell her that when the "clod" unzipped his jeans, she shouldn't have been watching! — Seen It All

Dear All: My original conclusion still holds. The guy must have had too many beers. I agree, however, that once he unzipped she should have put her eyeballs back in her head and busied herself with another project.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I started talking to myself after I read that letter from "Worried in the Midwest." Thirty years ago, before "Worried" was born, I gave birth to a "right" baby, beautiful, so perfectly formed physically, bright and precocious that people would stop to stare. She was so lovable and happy by the age of four that our pediatrician complimented us on how well we were raising her.

Everything was fine until high school — then our world exploded. It wasn't drugs that sent our dream child to the first of a series of psychiatrists, four months in a psychiatric hospital, and as of now, ten years of psychotherapy. The problem was caused by an inherited weakness which proved emotionally crippling.

Would we have given this child away if we had known? God no! The mother who wrote to ask to whom she could give her child if he wasn't "right," must be subhuman. We are — At Peace Ourselves In The Midwest

Dear At Peace: Subhuman? No. Just frightened and ill-informed. A great many people wrote to give her hell, but actually the poor girl didn't know any better. I urged her to get some outside help and I sincerely hope she did.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I loaned my small home to a male friend who decided to separate from his wife. It was completely furnished and quite nice. He was so deeply in debt that I charged him no rent but he agreed to pay all the utility bills while he lived there.

Now he has moved out — and I just received the last month's bills, which come to $100. Although this is a lot of money to me, it's nothing compared with the rent he would have had to pay.

We live in a Southern state and I was under the impression that "Southern gentlemen" were to be trusted. I keep getting disappointed in the South. All the TV shows depict the Southern gentlemen as honorable, decent and extremely well-mannered. Is it just a lot of baloney? — Lost $$

Dear $$: Deadbeats live in the North, too. Also the West and the East. Cheapness has nothing to do with geography.

Pay the bill but don't hesitate to remind your friend often that he owes you $100.

Yesterday we saw declarer refuse three finesses because he didn't want to risk giving the defenders a chance to ruff something.

In today's hand, South is looking at two finesses but refuses both of them for the simple reason that he doesn't need them.

West starts with three rounds of diamonds. South ruffs the third and is ready for operation contract.

He is looking at that good club suit in dummy and sees that he can afford to lose one trump trick and, furthermore, that once trumps are out, he is home with the bacon.

So South promptly plays ace and king of trumps. Sometimes the queen drops, but this time it doesn't, so South simply leads another trump. West takes his queen, but South is sure of the rest of the tricks.

The play was really elementary, but the bidding worthy of note. The hand was played in a fairly strong duplicate game and only about 60 percent of the North-South pairs reached the spade game.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

As my family's seamstress, thought I might pass on some ideas which I have found to be of help when doing home sewing.

Since my family has gotten smaller, the best thing I have now is a sewing room all my own. In it I have my sewing machine, ironing board, work table and a small TV. I leave it all set up and ready to go for a quick few minutes of sewing or a few hours.

One of my favorite pieces of equipment is my secretarial chair. It gives marvelous back support at the machine. An added bonus is being able to scoot around on the wheels to reach things.

I find neatness is so important. Everything "put back in its place" is my rule. It takes only a few minutes to clean up and then everything is ready for the next project.

Besides a chest of drawers to hold fabric, etc. I have a nuts and bolts cabinet (found in any hardware store or department). The little drawers are about two by five inches and have a place for labels on the front. Mine is full of buttons filed by color, snaps, hooks, bobbins, machine attachments, etc.

I also find it advisable to buy needed helpers such as a pressing ham, sleeve board, or pressing iron. These all contribute to the beautiful finished look of a garment.

My family (and friends) are so appreciative of my productions. My answer is "My sewing machine and I thank you."

Joyce

I can see why they would be! And you're so smart to be so organized. It makes any job go smoother, and especially sewing.

And gals, if you aren't fortunate enough to be able to use a whole room for your sewing, at least try to fine a corner somewhere and convert it into a sewing center, even if it's on a small scale.

Also, take Joyce's advice and invest in some gadgets to make your job easier. Browse through notion counters at your fabric or department stores if you haven't done so lately. You'll be amazed at the things available to help you make your sewing more professional-looking. Good luck! — Heloise

LETTER OF LOVE

DEAR HELOISE:

Every day your column is a blessing to me with lots of new, fresh ideas to make my most important job as a homemaker a little easier. (I'm also a part-time secretary at a local hospital.)

I've been married for almost two years and have a seven-month-old daughter, so I can use the tips. — Mrs. Dawn Graves

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is an energy-saving tip I read somewhere and find it really works.

When drying the laundry in the dryer, save small lightweight pieces until last.

Many times, the heat leftover from a load of clothes will dry these items without turning on the machine. — Barbara Grant

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

When starting plants for my garden, I place the seeds on plastic meat trays between two pieces of paper toweling. I keep the paper towel moist at all times, covering with wax paper to keep the moisture in. Within a few days, the seeds begin to sprout.

Then, I put soil in egg cartons and in each egg cup I place one sprout. Place on windowsill and water each day and give them plant food every two weeks until the danger of frost is over. Place in garden.

Since all seeds don't sprout, this method avoids guessing whether or not they are sprouting in the ground. — Ann Carlucci

Your Perfect Figure
Pat Walker's

Fay Burton's True Story

When people I'd worked with for 23 years started calling me Fat Fay, I just laughed it off. After all, they were right—I weighed 166 pounds, and my size 16 clothes were getting a little tight.

But my doctor didn't think my weight was funny. He said the problems I was having—tension headaches and back pains—wouldn't get better till I got thinner. His recommendation: go to Pat Walker's.

I took his advice and, using money from my grocery budget, began treatments on Pat Walker's passive exercise unit. It was easier than I thought it could be. I didn't have to change clothes or ruin my makeup or hairdo. And I didn't have to share a treatment room with anyone.

The change that came over me was fantastic. Not only did my weight start going down, but my whole mental attitude improved. If I sometimes felt tense or anxious, I knew all I had to do was go to Pat Walker's to feel relaxed again.

I'm happy to report that I've reached that goal—I now weigh 125 pounds! When I go shopping, it's for size 7's.

I can't imagine what shape I'd be in today if I hadn't taken my doctor's advice. I do know that, at 41, I have a new lease on life...and now, instead of that nickname, I get whistles and compliments.

Call for your free figure analysis and sample treatment. You'll be so glad you did!

Congress Extends Federal Borrowing Authority

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed legislation Monday extending the government's borrowing authority and preventing the nation from defaulting on its debts for the first time in its history.

The vote to accept Senate amendments and to send the legislation to the White House was 209-165. It came after the House rejected, 216-160, a Republican-led attempt to tack on a strong amendment calling for a balanced federal budget.

The White House announced later that President Carter had signed the bill.

The House vote came after Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal claimed in a letter that the Treasury was on the verge of a default and that retirees would be hit first.

About $8 billion in Social Security checks already had been mailed to 35 million Americans, Blumenthal said, and there would be no funds to cover them if the House failed to act. In addition, he said, the Treasury would not be able to pay civil service retirement benefits, veterans benefits and railroad retirement benefits due for collection Tuesday.

Blumenthal last week ordered that no further income tax refund checks be mailed until the House acted.

The vote on a bill to raise the debt ceiling by $32 billion — and thereby extend the government's borrowing power by that amount — was this year's first major battle over deficit spending.

However, it was not exactly a new occurrence in Congress. Attempts to raise the debt ceiling usually go down to the wire and usually are accompanied by reports that Social Security recipients and other retirees will not be paid.

Rep. C. W. Bill Young, R-Fla., accused Democratic leaders of holding the nation's retirees as hostages in an effort to make balanced budget advocates drop their proposal.

"I think the people on Social Security are being blackmailed," he said.

And Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., said the issue could have been settled weeks ago had the House leadership allowed a vote on the Republican balanced-budget amendment.

But Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said he had not engaged in any scare tactics and that Republicans were raising a false issue.

"The question today is whether we are going to allow the nation to default for the first time. The question is whether we are prepared to allow the nation to be dishonored," he said.

And House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, who made a rare appearance on the floor to speak on the subject, said the government's lack of credit was so serious that the government could not funnel needed funds into Harrisburg, Pa., to help persons affected by problems with a malfunctioning nuclear reactor

The House was scheduled to vote on legislation to raise the debt ceiling last Friday but Democratic leaders canceled that vote, thereby allowing the borrowing authority to lapse over the weekend.

Congressional aides said at that time the delay was intended to pressure backers of the balanced budget provision to drop efforts to attach it to the debt ceiling limit.

Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., put it in a slightly different light Monday, saying the vote was canceled because there was not enough support last Friday to pass the debt ceiling limit.

Blumenthal said the full consequences of a default "are impossible to predict and awesome to anticipate" and would have "incalculable effects on the domestic money markets" and on the dollar's value overseas.

The old debt limit of $798 billion expired Saturday, meaning that the government's borrowing power dropped to the previously authorized level of $400 billion.

Pevious attempts to extend the limit had been thwarted by Republican insistence that the House consider their legislation aimed at balancing the federal budget at the same time.

Their amendment would require that all attempts to raise the debt ceiling to pay for unbalanced federal budgets be approved by three-fifths majorities in both houses of Congress. It would go into effect in the budget year that begins Oct. 1, 1980.

Meanwhile, the Treasury Department announced Monday that it would resume its sale of bonds, bills and notes with the sale of $6 billion in 23-day cash management bills on Tuesday.

A Treasury Department spokesman who asked that his name not be used said several more auctions likely would be scheduled for early this week.

Treasury was forced to postpone auctions involving more than $10.7 billion in government securities because of the debt-limit problem.

Committee Democrats Propose $532.6 Billion Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Budget Committee Democrats proposed Monday a $532.6-billion 1980 budget that backers predicted would demonstrate Congress is serious about cutting the growth of federal spending.

Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., chairman of the committee, said if Congress ignores public concerns and "caves in to the demands of the interest groups...it will make virtually inevitable a constitutional amendment" or statute requiring a balanced budget.

But as if to demonstrate how difficult it will be to win approval of the Democrats' consensus, Giaimo himself immediately took issue with the $4.1-billion cut that members of his party had recommended in the defense budget. He said a reduction of $2.9 billion in spending authority would be much wiser and stand a better chance of acceptance.

The House panel traditionally recommends deeper cuts in defense spending than are able to win Senate approval.

Acting separately, the House and Senate Budget committees begin work today to write a budget for fiscal 1980, the 12 months beginning next Oct. 1. Those figures will guide Congress as it considers legislation this spring and summer.

The process is repeated later this year; starting Oct. 1, the figures become a binding limit on federal spending.

The House Democratic proposal calls for elimination of the states' portion of revenue-sharing, a program in which federal funds are sent to state and local governments with few strings attached. It also favors elimination of special government aid to school districts where federal installations are located.

The alternative budget is based on assumptions that the economy will fare somewhat better than most forecasters expect in 1979 and 1980, but not quite as well as the Carter administration predicts.

It assumes the rate of inflation, 9 percent in 1978, will drop to 7.7 percent by the end of 1979; the Carter administration predicts 7.4 percent. The higher inflation expected by Democratic members of the House committee is mainly responsible for the prediction that revenues will be $3.1 billion higher in 1980 than the president expects.

The Democratic plan, spelled out by Giaimo at a news conference, recommends spending $532.6 billion, or only $300 million above Carter's figure. This figure, called outlays, reflects the checks the federal government expects to sign during the year to pay its bills.

With revenues of $505.6 billion, that would leave a deficit of $27 billion, or $1.4 billion under the president's budget.

In "budget authority," or appropriations made for 1980 and beyond, Giaimo's proposal is for $607.7 billion, compared to $615 billion recommended by the president.

In the current year, outlays are expected to total about $493 billion; budget authority will total $556 billion; a $35-billion deficit is anticipated.

Giaimo's plan recommends spending nearly $4.3 billion more for income security programs, such as welfare and Social Security, than Carter proposes, and $1.1 billion more for agriculture. In both cases, most of the increases are due to estimating differences.

The proposal rejects some ot the president's plans for scaling back public-service jobs programs, the main reason for a $1.2-billion increase in the education and employment section of the budget.

If the past is any guide, the biggest fight in the House committee and in the House will be over defense spending. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said the $123.5 billion recommended by Democrats would allow Carter to keep his commitment to boost real spending for NATO defense by 3 percent.

Guerrilla Ship Captured By Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel said Monday it captured a Palestinian guerrilla ship recently without a fight, but the Palestinians said there was a "heroic" three-hour battle in which seven Israelis were killed or wounded.

The Israeli military command said the 500-ton Cyprus-registered cargo ship, the Stefanie, was peparing a seaborne terorist raid into Israel when it was intercepted and captured. The communique said the ship belonged to the Fatah military arm of the PLO.

Six guerrillas and five crewmen were taken into custody without a fight, the Israeli army said.

Later Monday in Beirut, a spokesman for PLO leader Yasser Arafat's high command disputed the Israeli version, claiming the guerrilla ship was hit by Israeli fire after a three hour battle in which seven Israelis were either killed or wounded and the Israeli vessel set afire.

The spokesman would not respond to questions about the fate of the guerrillas, the departure point of the ship or when the battle occurred. He said six PLO guerrillas were aboard the ship when it set sail last Wednesday "toward Israel ... to strke at Zionist targets.".

Israel also did not disclose the date of the incident or its exact location. The military spokesman said the vessel was seized off the coast of northern Israel outside territorial waters.

Israel has increased its naval patrols since March 1978, when Palestinian guerrillas came ashore in two rubber boats and killed 35 people in the worst terrorist attack in the country's history.

Since then the navy has intercepted several Fatah ships off the Israeli coast apparently planning similar operations.

The army said the Stefanie was carrying large quantities of weapons and ammunition, including a submachine gun, a grenade launcher and handheld missile launchers.

Plan To Observe Rhodesian Elections Killed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee voted 9-0 Monday to kill a plan to send a team of independent observers appointed by Congress to report on the April 20 Rhodesian elections.

Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, called the vote "wonderful" and said the United States should withhold recognition of any government to emerge from the elections.

"Our recognition would escalate the fighting in Rhodesia," Young told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee. "A U.N. supervised election is the only hope for Rhodesia." "I think this means that for all practical purposes, the idea of sending observers to Rhodesia has come to an end," said Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y, chairman of the House subcommittee on African affairs. "I think it is quite clear there is no significant support for this in the House."

But Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., a principal sponsor of the observer plan, said its defeat will precipitate a move in Congress for the immediate lifting of economic sanctions against Rhodesia.

Young said the upcoming elections are "totally undemocratic" and unfair and are not likely to produce either a ceasefire with opposition guerilla groups "or a government that could possibly survive."

He said recognition of any regime coming out of the so-called internal settlement in Rhodesia likely would cause neighboring black African states to declare certain parts of Rhodesia to be "liberated" and to call for aid from Soviet-backed Cuban troops.

Solarz said that, given the fact that observers would have to be protected by Rhodesian security forces, "it would be naive to expect them to determine what the reality of the situation really is.

"I think the subcommittee came to the conclusion that in the nature of things, it would be impossible to report objectively on what happens," he said.

He and virtually all other subcommittee members said that sending an observer team inevitably would be taken as a signal of U.S. acceptance of the internal settlement plan of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and would fatally prejudice attempts to work out an agreement with black guerilla groups.

"On balance, I would rather to try to preserve our role as an honest broker and hope and pray for the best," Solarz said.

The idea of sending a team of 25 to 50 neutral observers to Rhodesia originated in the Senate which adopted it, 67-22.

It was backed by a coalition of conservatives and liberals led by McGovern and Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., who contend an observer team is essential to help President Carter determine whether Rhodesia has met congressional standards for the lifting of economic sanctions.

Those standards are that Rhodesia agree to an all-parties conference on the nation's future and that a government be installed after fair and open elections with all population and political groups taking part.

"I have repeatedly warned that an observer team would be the only means of Congress reaching a fair and objective judgment on the Rhodesia sanctions issue," McGovern said.

He said he will oppose all attempts to lift sanctions, but indicated it will now be an uphill fight.

"The killing of this resolution will precipitate a move to lift sanctions in the very near future," McGovern said.

"At that point all of us who oppose the lifting of sanctions will be weakened by lack of objective data from observers who are truly independent and impartial," he said. The subcommittee's action fails to take into account the stark political realities which exist."

Last year, the Senate rejected by only four votes a move to lift sanctions with no preconditions.

Existence Of Vorster 'Slush Fund' Alleged

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — An investigatory commission Monday accused President John Vorster of deep involvement in questionable secret projects to improve South Africa's image in the world, involvement he has steadfastly denied.

The findings added fuel to a movement to impeach Vorster.

The scandal centers on $76 million in secret government funds allegedly spent between 1973 and 1978 on questionable projects to establish a pro-government newspaper in Johannesburg, to try to buy newspapers abroad, to give money to politicians and other "opinion-makers" abroad and to otherwise help tone down international criticism of South Africa's policies of racial segregation.

Some of the money allegedly was spent in the United States.

Vorster, who resigned as prime minister last year to take the largely ceremonial job of president, was the only top government official implicated in a possible misuse of public funds in the report by the government-appointed Erasmus Commission.

The interim report to Parliament said Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha and members of his Cabinet did not know the irregularities in the programs of the now-defunct Information Department.

But it accused Vorster, as prime minister, of not informing his Cabinet of state involvement in one of the major projects — financing the establishment of the pro-government Johannesburg Citizen newspaper — until he was confronted by four Cabinet members.

Vorster resigned as prime minister just three days after his meeting with the four ministers.

The report said the commission investigation found that the Information Department funneled $10 million into a Swiss bank in 1974 in an effort to buy the Washington Star newspaper.

It made no mention of American publisher John P. McGoff of East Lansing, Mich., who the South African Rand Daily Mail newspaper said had used the funds to try to buy the Star. McGoff has denied the Mail's allegations.

Vorster and Finance Minister Owen Horwood, also implicated by junior officials, have denied knowing about the Information Department "slush fund" until it was brought to public attention last year.

The commission's report said Horwood "had no choice but to blindly rubber-stamp secret project money after its spending was approved by the former prime minister, John Vorster."

Then-Information Secretary Eschel Rhoodie, in consultation with then-Information Minister Connie Mulder, decided how to spend the funds, and the projects were then discussed with Vorster, it said.

Mulder has said Vorster knew about the Citizen project from the outset.

All those involved are members of South Africa's long-dominant National Party.

As a result of the earlier disclosures, Mulder was forced to resign his Cabinet post and Parliament seat, and Rhoodie fled to Europe to evade theft and fraud charges. Some South African officials allegedly diverted money from the fund into their own pockets.

The information scandal prompted an investigation in the United States after Rhoodie said the schemes included payments to foreign politicians.

The commission's findings, an interim report, was turned over to Parliament for debate.

The small opposition in Parliament has asked for impeachment proceedings against Vorster, but so far they have been unable to muster the 30 signatures needed to establish a parliamentary commission that would study the impeachment issue.

The constitution of this white minority-ruled nation allows for a president's impeachment when his credibility is in doubt and when he is unable to fulfill his official duties efficiently.

The three-man Erasmus Commission is headed by Rudolph Erasmus, a provincial Supreme Court judge.

Court To Review Officer's Sentences

HOUSTON (AP) — The legality of suspended sentences given three former police officers involved in the Joe Campos Torres case will be reviewed by the 15 judges of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

U.S. Attorney Tony Canales was notified Monday by the New Orleans court that the full court will consider the matter the week of June 4. No oral arguments were scheduled but an April 19 deadline was set for supplemental briefs from the government.

The former officers, Terry Wayne Denson, Stephen Orlando and Joseph Janish, were convicted last year on charges of violating the civil rights of Torres, 23, who drowned in Buffalo Bayou while in police custody after being arrested in a 1977 bar disturbance.

U.S. District Court Judge Ross N. Sterling assessed 10-year suspended sentences probated for five years. The maximum possible sentence was life in prison. The defendants also drew one-year prison sentences on a misdemeanor charge of beating Torres.

Canales and the Justice Department challenged the suspended sentences. By a 2-1 ruling, a panel of the New Orleans court refused to order Sterling to correct the sentences but unanimously agreed Sterling had ignored the meaning of probated law by suspending sentences on the more serious charge.

The government then asked that the full court consider the matter.

Freed Solon, Nixon Swap Visits

MONROE, La. (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Otto Passman, found innocent of selling his congressional influence, said he and former President Richard Nixon agreed to exchange visits during a congratulatory telephone call from Nixon on Monday.

"I'm going to visit him in California in a few weeks and he's coming to Monroe later," a jubilant Passman, 78, told a news conference that followed his acquittal on five charges arising from congressional influence-buying by Korean Tongsun Park.

Passman and Nixon served together in the House. Passman later enjoyed influence at the Nixon White House when he became chairman of a House foreign aid subcommittee.

"We worked well together," Passman said. "He was kind to me. I was able to cut red tape and go to him directly. I think it's nice that he still thinks of his old country friend."

Passman, now suffering from heart trouble, a brain disease, deafness and other maladies, said he was exhilarated by the verdict returned Sunday after 90 minutes of deliberations by a U.S. District Court jury.

"I rolled and tumbled and looked at the clock 75 times," Passman said, describing the sleepless night that followed the verdict.

He was accused of accepting as much as $213,000 from Park in return for allegedly helping the Korean keep his job as sole agent for both buyer and seller in U.S. rice transactions with South Korea.

Passman also was accused of accepting $193,000 in illegal gratuities from Park and with failing to report $143,000 of the money on his 1972 and 1973 income tax returns.

"This has been going on for almost two and a half years," he said Monday. "Naturally, I have been apprehensive, but I had a clear conscience. I've tried to live a normal life. At no time did I develop a complex. There's not a person I couldn't look in the eye.'

Asked his opinion of Park, who testfied as the government's chief witness that he lavished funds on the Louisianan, Passman responded:

"I've got to live my life and he's got to live his. I wish him well. I would have felt a lot better if he had earned his compensation in something other than rice. I've kind of lost my appetite for rice."

Park, who was granted immunity for his testimony, reportedly earned as much as $9 million in commissions on the rice sales.

Passman lost a re-election bid in 1976 after 30 years representing Louisiana's 5th District.

$10 MILLION CREDIT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Development Association, an affiliate of the World Bank, announced Monday the approval of a $10 million credit to Pakistan for primary education.

Cigarette Price Fixing Charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten cigarette distributors and a trade association to which they belong were charged by a federal grand jury in Trenton Monday with price fixing, the Justice Department announced.

The companies were accused with conspiring to fix the price of cigarettes sold to retailers in New Jersey. The department said the companies do about $100 million worth of business each year.

If convicted, each firm could be fined $1 million.

The companies belong to the tobacco distributors' association of New Jersey, located in East Orange.

The companies are Consolidated Service Distributors of Hawthorne; Eisler & Co. of West Orange; Glikin Brothers of Newark; J. Costagliola Inc. of Paterson; J. Minkin Tobacco & Tobacco and Candy Co. of Passaic; Jersey City Tobacco Co. of Jersey City; Metropolitan Tobacco Co. of New York City; Paterson Tobacco & Tobacco and Confectionery Co. of Paterson; Pine Lesser & Sons of Clifton; and William Schoenberg Inc. of Linden.

The indictment said most of the cigarettes sold in New Jersey are produced by six manufacturers outside the state and are shipped into New Jersey through the cigarette distributors named in the indictment.

The government also filed a companion civil suit aimed at preventing continuation of the alleged price-fixing conspiracy, which the government alleged has been going on since at least 1969.

Independence From Mexico

Preparations Under Way For Texas Celebration

By JOHN MOULDER
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A House committee has started the ball rolling for a statewide celebration in 1986 of the 150th anniversary of Texas' independence from Mexico.

The House Business and Industry Committee recommended House passage of Dallas Rep. Chris Semos' HB 1379 to create a Texas Sesquicentennial Commission to begin planning the 1986 celebration.

The commission would have a staff of four. The nine-member commission would be appointed by the governor, House speaker and lieutenant governor.

Semos said the legislation is an outgrowth of an interim study made by a special five-member subcommittee on tourism. Semos served on the subcommittee which held hearings during the past year in Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, El Paso and Amarillo.

Though the Sesquicentennial celebration may be centrally based in a city such as Dallas, Semos said the observances would be statewide in scope. Semos suggested the celebration could start with the Sun Bowl Parade in El Paso and carry its thrust to other cities throughout the state.

Though El Paso and Amarillo may seem remote to other parts of the state, Semos noted that museums at West Texas State University at Canyon and the Universsity of Texas at El Paso were established as a direct result of the Texas Centenniel in 1936.

"We want all 254 counties to participate," the legislator said.

"Some might think we're starting the movement too soon," Semos added. "But with the Legislature meeting every two years, indeed we are not starting too soon. In fact, we may be two years too late."

Man Threatens Cabbie, Captured After Chase

An 18-year-old man, who allegedly pulled a gun on a cab driver about 2:50 a.m. Monday, was arrested after a brief foot chase with a city policeman.

Billie Mullen Draper, 48, told police the man got into his cab in the 1700-block of Parkway Drive and asked to be driven to a residence in the 2300-block of 25th Street.

The man allegedly threatened to pistol-whip Draper after the cab driver requested a deposit on the fare. Reports indicate Draper ordered the suspect out of the cab.

The man, according to reports, got out of the vehicle and pulled a long-barreled revolver just as a police patrol car drove up.

The suspect reportedly ran but was caught by the officer in a nearby vacant field. The man was transported to the county jail and later released on bail.

Jonnette Walker, of Children's Protective Services, told officers she received a call Monday morning from a person who wanted to report an assault which allegedly had occurred Saturday at the Lubbock State School.

The anonymous caller told Mrs. Walker an 18-year-old female resident of the school was having a seizure and an employee at the school took the girl to an office and shut the door.

The caller reported that when the girl came out of the office her eyes were bruised, her hair pulled and she had numerous bruises on her body. Mrs. Walker told police she visited the girl Monday at the school and saw injuries described by the caller.

In another incident, a 19-year-old clerk said a black man assaulted her twice during a dance at a fraternity house in the 2400-block of Main Street about 4 a.m. Sunday.

The victim reported she was dancing with her boyfriend when the suspect walked up to her and socked her in the face. The woman reported the suspect approached her again as she was leaving the dance and hit her several times, knocking her to the ground.

The woman described the man as 18-to-25-years-old, very tall and thin.

In reported break-ins, Jim Coats, general manager for a car dealership at Loop 289 and Indiana Avenue, said thieves removed $900 worth of tires and wheels from two cars in the firm's parking lot sometime Sunday or Monday morning.

Larry Hamilton reported someone removed his $850 vehicle from a parking lot at 1118 29th St. Sunday night or Monday morning.

Jerry Reid of 4104 E. 4th St. said someone carted off his vacuum cleaner and drill, valued at $250, from his home between 9 p.m. Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday.

Police Monday morning were looking for a man who allegedly kidnapped a 26-year-old Lubbock woman shortly before 10 p.m. Sunday and forced her to perform oral sex.

The woman said she was approaching her car, parked behind a doughnut shop near the Texas Tech University campus, when she saw a man in her vehicle.

Reports indicate the man, thought to be about 25 years old, jumped out of the vehicle armed with a knife and forced his victim inside the car.

The woman told police her abductor ordered her to undress as he was driving her car east of the city on a dirt road. She said she did as she was told, and that the man then made her perform oral sex.

Reports state the man drove the woman back to the doughnut shop, and then drove off in the victim's car. The vehicle was later found in the 2200-block of 18th Street.

The woman said the man told her he was from Long Beach, Calif., and that he was wanted by the law.

In other activity, a 29-year-old Lubbock man was arrested about 1 a.m. Monday after he allegedly went for a gun while in confrontation with a city policeman.

Officer Guadalupe Garza said he was off duty and at a convenience store at 40th Street and Avenue A when the suspect drove up to the store's gasoline pumps.

Apparently angered over having to pay for the gas before using the pumps, the man entered the store and reportedly said to the attendant, "How am I supposed to know how much gas to pay for before I put it in? Can you tell me how much gas the damn thing is going to hold?"

Garza, who was in civilian clothes, told the man if he had a complaint he should contact the store owner. Reports indicate the man's reply to Garza was, "You want some ----? I'll give you some ----."

Garza said in his report that the man appeared to be reaching for a gun. The officer quickly pulled his service revolver, informed the irate customer he was a policeman and ordered the man to put his hands on the counter.

Garza said he found a .357 magnum pistol tucked in the man's waistband. The suspect was booked into the county jail.

Britain and China agreed to establish full diplomatic relations in 1972.

Grocery Prices Show Two Percent Hike In March

(AP) — Grocery prices rose just as fast in the first quarter of 1979 as they did in the same period last year, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey which showed an increase of nearly 2 percent during March alone.

The latest check indicated that meat prices continue to climb and, as people seek substitutes, the substitutes are getting more expensive as well.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973 and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list at the end of November 1977 because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The Consumer Price Index went up almost 10 percent in 1978; the price of food at home went up almost 14 percent — the worst increase since 1974. Government economists are predicting a food price boost of about 8.5 percent this year, but they concede that their forecasts depend upon natural factors like weather and on the success of President Carter's program to control inflation.

The latest AP survey showed that the bill for the marketbasket of food and non-food items went up last month at the checklist store in eight cities and down in five. On an over-all basis, the bill went up an average of 1.8 percent during March. That compared with an over-all average drop of 1 percent during February.

Comparing prices today with those at the start of the year, the AP found that the average marketbasket bill at the checklist store increased 4.1 percent during the first three months of 1979. The boost during the same period of 1978 was 4 percent.

Higher prices for chopped chuck, pork chops, eggs and butter contributed to the overall increases. Beef supplies have been declining steadily since last year and are expected to continue to drop for the next couple years as ranchers rebuild herds they pared when cattle prices declined. Pork supplies are expected to rise during 1979, but the impact of the increase on retail prices probably will not be felt until the third quarter of the year.

The latest AP survey showed the price of a pound of chopped chuck went up at the checklist store in eight cities during March. Pork chops went up at the checklist store in five cities.

Prices for eggs went up at the checklist store in 11 cities last month, reflecting increased demand as people switch to eggs as a substitute for beef. Rising demand for cheese — another popular protein alternative — also has meant there is less butter fat for butter and prices of the spread went up at the checklist store in nine cities during March.

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed more increases during March than during February. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available. If the requested size and brand was not available on March 1, 1973, a comparable substitute was selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates were not included in the over-all total.

The AP did not try to compare prices from city to city. Comparisons made were only in terms of percentages of increase or decrease.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Ga., Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Here is a city-by-city breakdown of what happened during March:

ALBUQUERQUE: The marketbasket bill went from $16.26 to $15.34, down 5.7 percent. Pork chops, coffee, tomato sauce and sugar decreased; chopped chuck increased; frankfurters were temporarily unavailable at the checklist store; other items were unchanged.

ATLANTA: The marketbasket total went from $16.77 to $17.75, up 6.1 percent. Coffee, frankfurters, eggs, detergent and tomato sauce all went up. Pork chops, butter, peanut butter and milk went down. Everything else stayed the same.

BOSTON: The marketbasket total increased seven-tenths of a percent, from $18.73 to $18.87, despite a sale on coffee which was priced at $2.49, compared to the regular $2.79. There were no other decreases. Chopped chuck, pork chops, butter and peanut butter increased. The other nine items were unchanged.

CHICAGO: The bill went from $13.85 to $13.71, down 1 percent. Chopped chuck, frankfurters, butter, eggs and peanut butter went up; pork chops went down. Coffee and fabric softener were temporarily out of stock at the checklist store; other items stayed the same.

Other items were unchanged.

Driver, 14, Leads Police On Chase Through City

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Lubbock policeman became suspicious Sunday afternoon when a vehicle which appeared to be lacking a driver pulled up beside his patrol car.

However, the officer later learned it was the work of a 14-year-old boy, all of 4 feet 6 inches tall, who decided to go joy riding.

Police also learned the 80-pound driver of the large Oldsmobile is a hard little man to bring down. In fact, impossible. Police, who chased the juvenile over much of east Lubbock, finally had to rely on the mother's touch.

The confused policeman, in his report, said he was at Fourth Street and Zenith Avenue when the car pulled up. "I couldn't see any driver, but I did observe several small children in the vehicle," he said. The passengers in the car were later learned to be two girls, ages 10 and 13, and two 7-month-old babies.

The officer said that shortly after observing the oddity, he stopped the car and was getting out of his patrol unit to talk to the diminutive driver, who was walking towards him. But apparently the youth decided not to give up so easily.

"Before I could get out of my vehicle (the youngster) turned and ran back to his car and locked the doors," the frustrated policeman said. The chase was just beginning when the boy sped off on East Fourth Street, the officer tailing behind with his emergency lights on and siren blaring.

Another patrolman joined in the pursuit, and the officers attempted to stop the Oldsmobile in the 100-block of Redbud Drive, but again the 14-year-old proved too much for them.

Reports show the youngster was traveling in excess of 60 mph in 35 mph zones during the chase.

However, the joy ride seemed to be at an end when the juvenile failed to negotiate a turn at E. 16th Street and Quirt Avenue and ran into a stop sign.

Police, by this time, were not surprised when the boy jumped out of the car and ran away. "The officers could not catch him," a report states.

However, after questioning the young girls in the car, officers learned the name of the elusive driver. They contacted the boy's mother, who brought her son to the police station. Police, after several hours of work, finally had their man.

It was later learned that the boy had sneaked the car keys from his father's pocket.

Police gave the father a citation for allowing a minor to drive an automobile.

Parents' Study Group To Have Garage Sale

The Developmental Education Birth Through Two (DEBT) parents study group will have a two-day garage sale to raise funds to keep the children's play group going.

The parents of handicapped and developmentally handicapped children will run the sale Saturday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday at Ballenger Elementary School, 1110 40th St.

Money for the play group, which comes from federal grants, is running out, according to counselor Judy Sokolow, and the parents of the handicapped children themselves are raising money to continue the two-year-old program.

Giscard's Russia Trip Postponed

MOSCOW (AP) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's state visit to the Soviet Union has been rescheduled for April 26-28, the Soviet news agency Tass reported Monday.

Tass said an "understanding" had been reached about the dates.

Giscard's March 29-31 visit had been canceled at the last minute. Sources said the reason was that Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev had come down with a serious case of influenza.

The 72-year-old Kremlin leader's latest illness fueled speculation among Western observers here over Brezhnev's capacity to stand up to the rigors of office. But the new dates indicated that Kremlin officials apparently expect Brezhnev to recover by later this month.

Nuclear Stocks Fall

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market in general, and nuclear-power industry issues in particular, declined for the second straight session in moderate trading Monday.

Analysts said last week's accident at a nuclear power station in Pennsylvania had raised new concerns in investors' minds about the energy outlook.

Most of the declines came in the first half of the session, however, and by mid-afternoon prices stabilized.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off about 10 at its lowest point, wound up with a 6.93 loss at 855.25.

New York Stock Exchange volume totaled 28.99 million shares, down from 29.97 million Friday.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials was off .77 at 112.61, and S&P's 500-stock composite index gave up .69 to 100.90.

Chessie System climbed 1¼ to 30½. The company reported a 42 cents-a-share profit for the first quarter against a $67 million loss in the like period a year ago, when there was a lengthy coal strike.

New York (AP) — Monday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues at Consolidated Tape close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Trilogy Traces Kenya's History From Colonization To Kenyatta

NEW YORK (AP) — Watch a few minutes of "Black Man's Land," and it's not difficult to imagine the thrill European colonists must have felt as they arrived in Kenya toward the end of the last century — green rolling hills, lush foliage, clear streams, a pleasant climate.

"It was a land that was indeed comfortable for Europeans," says David Koff, producer of the three films that comprise "Black Man's Land." "But when one talks about a place comfortable to the settlers, Kenya also must be seen as comfortable to Africans."

Koff's observation is, in a sense, the essence of "Black Man's Land," hour-long documentaries tracing Kenya's history through its colonization by the British, the country's war for independence and the ascension and presidency of Jomo Kenyatta.

"Black Man's Land" will be broadcast by many Public Broadcasting Service stations. Air date and time may vary, so check local listings. The series was provided to PBS through KOCE-TV in Huntington Beach, Calif.

"It's easier to understand colonialism if the process is seen as an extension of the social revolution going on in Europe at the time," Koff says. "The feudal population was being forced off the land, and colonies like Kenya were attractive places to resettle.

"Unfortunately, it was all tempered by an additional factor," he says, "and that was racism."

The first film of the three, "White Man's Country," sets the scene for the other two. Historical photographs coupled with excerpts from colonists' diaries leave a clear picture of the British attitude: Kenya was open country, sparsely populated by nomadic tribes, ripe for the taking. To justify the confiscation of the Africans' land, colonialism became a concerted effort to improve the natives' lives.

"It was not all negative," Koff says, "in that it set in motion certain economic and social forces that were inevitable. But did it have to be as brutal as it was?"

Perhaps as destructive as the armed might that was used to separate native Kenyans from their land was the rather subtle force that denied them a sense of history as Africans.

"I knew what my parents told me of African history," says Musido Mwinyipembe, formerly of the Voice of Kenya radio and television system in Nairobi, who narrated the series. "But as far as confirmation of what I knew, in school and so on, it wasn't there."

In fact, the British influence persists despite a return to African rule. Opening scenes of "White Man's Country," for example, include shots of Kenya's military — noticeably British in style.

"The influence of the West is great," says Koff, "but at the same time, there is some continuity with the social structure that existed before colonialism.

"The big cities resemble European cities," he says, "but once one goes beyond them, he finds areas less affected by the colonization. But even there, the continuity with the past is not perfect."

"Mau Mau," the second film in the trilogy, considers the uprising as a political response to economic and social conditions in the country. It destroys the myth that Mau Mau was an anti-white revolt; only 32 of Kenya's 40,000 white settlers were killed by Africans during the four years of fighting.

Finally, there is "Kenyatta," a film biography of Kenya's first president, who died last August. Jomo Kenyatta became his country's first prime minister in 1963, and president a year later.

Hepatitis Strikes Cafeteria Worker

A Texas Tech student worker in the Wells-Carpenter Residence Hall kitchen has been diagnosed as having Hepatitis Type B, a non-contagious strain of the disease, according to Dr. Reagan H. Gibbs, director of student health.

"Individuals using the dining facility at the Wells-Carpenter complex have absolutely no reason to have special concern," said Dr. A.W. Holmes, chairman of internal medicine at Texas Tech University School of Medicine and a specialist in diseases of the liver.

"There has never been any documented evidence that the Type B strain of hepatitis can be spread through direct contact with foods or utensils used in food service. Laboratory tests completed this weekend indicate clearly that the individual concerned has the Type B strain."

CAR UPKEEP RISES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of owning and operating an average, intermediate-sized car is $2,690 a year, or 17.9 cents per mile, the American Automobile Association reports. The figure reflects an increase of slightly more than 7 percent over 1978 costs. The AAA's figures showed variable costs included gasoline and oil, 4.11 cents per mile, up from 3.89 cents in 1978; maintenance, 1.1 cents, unchanged; and tires, 65 cents, down from 66 cents.

Implants Would Aid Diabetics

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A researcher at the Medical College of Virginia here says that tiny insulin factories implanted in the body may someday replace daily injections for millions of diabetics.

The implantations also hold promise of reducing or eliminating the heart disease, blindness, nerve disorders, kidney damage and shorter life span commonly associated with conventional insulin therapy.

"The prospects are tremendously exciting," Dr. Franklin Lim, associate professor of clinical pathology at MCV, told a news conference.

After 10 years of research, Lim said, he recently succeeded in containing living tissue in tiny capsules in such a way that it can continue to live and grow.

A chief benefit of the capsule method, Lim said, is that the cells inside the capsule will produce insulin only at the rate the body needs it.

He said most of the illnesses accompanying diabetes stem from the fluctuation between too much and too little insulin that occurs with the injection method.

Still to be answered, he said, are how long the insulin-producing cells will survive in the capsule and how long the human body will tolerate the capsule.

Although tests have thus far only been conducted on rats, Lim said, the method offers excellent promise that these capsules can be implanted in humans as a new diabetes treatment.

Lim said there will be at least another year of animal research before clinical trials will begin on humans.

He said further experiments will determine how often the implantations will have to be made, but there is a possibility it may be only once in a lifetime.

There are more than 5 million diabetics in the United States alone and most of those afflicted with the disease face a one-third shorter life span.

Lim said it may also be possible to use the same technique in treating liver and blood diseases and hormone deficiencies.

The diabetes treatment, he said, would involve putting insulin-producing cells of the pancreas in tiny capsules about one-fiftieth of an inch in diameter. Exactly where in the body the capsules would be implanted has not been determined.

The first American novel to sell 1 million copies, published March 20, 1852, was "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Effects Surfacing In Truck Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a dozen auto plants went on short shifts Monday and the prospect of product shortages and other disruptions loomed as a trucking industry lockout of up to 300,000 Teamsters took hold across the country.

The lockout, ordered by industry executives after the union launched a limited weekend strike over a contract dispute, could halt a sizeable portion of interstate shipments of general freight — from fresh foods to factory parts — within days, industry officials said.

However, Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons said the industry group behind the lockout was greatly exaggerating the possible impact of a shutdown in order to pressure the government into seeking a back-to-work court order.

Fitzsimmons said shipments of food, heating oil, gasoline, chemicals and medical supplies are unaffected by the labor dispute.

The 70-year-old union leader also charged that President Carter's chief inflation advisers "totally disrupted" the contract talks and "played a major role in causing our strike." He referred to calls for the union to comply with Carter's anti-inflation wage guidelines.

The auto industry was the first to feel the impact of the lockout. The nation's two largest automakers, General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., said more than 60,000 assembly line workers were placed on short shifts because of parts shortages affecting 16 plants. Further production cutbacks were imminent, that industry said.

In Ohio, authorities reported that two trucks were forced off the road at Columbus in what they believed to be a lockout-related incident.

Lockout Compliance Cited

A spokesman for Trucking Management Inc., which had ordered the lockout Sunday, said "virtually all" of TMI's members were complying with the lockout — a labor dispute tactic in which employers refuse to let their employees work. Officials of the Interstate Commerce Commission said it appeared that major truckng firms were shut Monday except in the South, where there is less unionization.

TMI spokesman Norman Walker said TMI's more-than-500 member firms are among the largest in the country and account for 85 percent of the unionized interstate freight business.

Industry Figures Disputed

Fitzsimmons, however, disputed the industry's figures, saying TMI accounts for only "20 to 30 percent" of unionized long-haul business.

In addition, truckers who ship many essential consumer goods are not affected, he maintained. Asked what kind of freight was affected, he said, "straw hats, glasses, shoes, auto parts, alligator coats."

Fitzsimmons added that there are more than 10,000 trucking firms that are not members of TMI, and 300 to 400 of them already have signed interim contracts with the union based on its last wage demand.

Food Stores Affected

Industry officials said most retail food stores operate their own trucks, which are covered under a different Teamsters contract, but many of their warehouses depend on shipments made by TMI members.

Some food stores could run out of fresh foods, particularly meat, within a week, said Robert Dobkin, a spokesman for the retail food industry. "Right now, we'll have to assess this a day at a time," said Dobkin.

The Carter administration has said it would seek a court order under the Taft-Hartley Act to end either a nationwide strike or lockout if the labor dispute poses a national emergency.

There has never been an industry shutdown of this scope for any length of time.

As a result, administration officials said Monday it would take several days for them to determine the impact.

Impact Unknown

The only previous industry shutdown came in 1976, when the Teamsters union struck for three days before settling on its last national contract, which expired this past Saturday at midnight.

Meanwhile, federal mediators said it was unlikely that bargainers for the union and TMI would resume negotiations until Thursday at the earliest, in part because the union's 350-member national bargaining committee is meeting in Chicago on Wednesday.

Talks broke off over the weekend because of a dispute involving President Carter's anti-inflation wage guidelines.

Industry negotiators said they offered a three-year package that would boost wages and fringe benefits by about 30 percent — a figure the industry said was in compliance with Carter's relaxed wage standard.

The union, however, sought additional improvements in cost-of-living protection for workers, a demand the industry rejected as exceeding the guidelines.

The two sides were "awfully close" to settling over the weekend, according to federal mediators. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Sunday the administration hopes the parties will reach agreement soon to make government intervention unnecessary.

The administration has made the Teamsters, the nation's largest union, a key test of Carter's anti-inflation program. The administration also has urged employers to take strikes rather than given in to demands that exceed the wage standard.

FOOD POISONING

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Police said 76 persons, including 20 women and 35 children, were hospitalized Monday in Madurai, southern India, after eating leftover mutton and rice, the United News of India reported. The food, prepared for a wedding party held Sunday, was distributed by a watchman Monday to relatives and friends, the report said.

No Settlement Seen In Building Strike

trying to "kill" the union so they can hire cheaper local labor, such as Tech students and unskilled workers.

Fuller says the contractors are willing to pay more for skilled people. "But the union has repeatedly supplied unqualified people who are not worth an increase or even the current rate," he complained.

He explained the contractors want to initiate a probationary pay rate of $4 an hour for a 90-day training period. The laborers, who assist other skilled workers such as bricklayers and plumbers, then would be paid the full $5.52 an hour, he said.

Nub Of The Problem

Burt agreed the probationary pay is the "nub of the problem."

"It's ridiculous the kind of help they're trying to give us," he said. "And they expect us to train them on the job" at the full rate.

Burt, saying that only two of his 23 laborers are union members, added, "I'm not going to spend my money to train them (unqualified workers) at $6.27 an hour."

Gonzalez sees the issue differently.

"It's funny it took them (contractors) 12 years" to decide the union members are unqualified workers, he scoffed. The union has existed 12 years.

He claimed union members do not join the organization until they have gained sufficient experience working for contractors at lower wages. They sign up with the local to make more money, he added.

The strikers are holding out for a 7 per cent wage increase, which would up their earnings 42 cents an hour to $5.94, Gonzalez said. And that's only a cost-of-living increase.

Contractors never expressed dissatisfaction with workers, he said. "The only indication I got was there are plenty of people in Lubbock who'll want to work at minimum wage."

"Fighting For Survival"

The strikers will not retreat, he vowed. "We're fighting for survival. And we'll go as long as it takes, even if it takes a year," Gonzalez said.

The union has no money to pay the men interim wages during the battle, he acknowledged, adding he doesn't know how they will live until the dispute is settled.

"But we'll never give in because we know what would happen is we would never gain again," Gonzalez said. He added the men fear that if they concede to contractors, they will be paid minimum wage and have no fringe benefits.

In the meantime, he said, he believes the strikers have the public's sympathy and support.

Members of other unions, such as plumbers and masons, honored the picket line Monday. But Fuller and Wirtz noted the support may waver if the strike continues long enough and the non-strikers feel the money pinch.

The Teamsters' nationwide strike against the trucking industry seems to be producing fewer problems locally.

Four city freight lines — T.I.M.E.-DC, Inc., ICX Express, Inc., Yellow Freight System, Inc., and Santa Fe Trail Transportation Company — closed Monday and will continue their shutdown until the strike is settled nationally.

Spokesmen for several affected companies noted, though, that Teamsters strikes seldom last more than several days.

Before it ends, however, residents of Lubbock and surrounding communities may be made aware of the truck drivers' strike by shortages on grocery story shelves.

Gambled On Settlement

Several wholesale grocers indicated to The Avalanche-Journal they did not increase their purchases in anticipation of the strike.

"We were just hoping they'd get it straightened out over the weekend," explained Mike Davis, general manager of Watson Institutional Foods, Inc.

The biggest problem will be with items brought out of state, he said. One item that could be affected easily is meat, he said, adding that a strike "over two weeks could start hurting" other commodities.

Thomas Baldridge, general manager of Sysco West Texas Products, said his company has been stockpiling food "for some time now" because it supplies items to institutions such as schools and hospitals.

If the strike is short — two to three weeks — the company anticipates no supply problems, he said.

Cairo Gives Begin Cool Reception

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin raised his glass Monday and said "hallelujah" for peace in a toast to his former enemy, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. He called on Arab treaty opponents "to relinquish that futile negativism."

The first state visit to Egypt by an Israeli leader was preceded by a mass exodus of Arab ambassadors from Cairo and imposition of Arab political and economic sanctions to punish Sadat for signing the peace treaty in Washington last week.

Begin, in a prepared text, said he was convinced that "in God's good time" the other Arabs would join in the search for a peaceful settlement to 30 years of war and hostility.

"We appeal to those who, for the time being, took, or were misled to take, a negative attitude to relinquish that futile negativism and join us in the peace-making effort for their benefit as for ours," Begin said at a state dinner held Monday night held on the lawn of a former royal palace.

Arab Shadow Darkens Visit

Arab outrage at the treaty signing cast a shadow over Begin's visit, with some Egyptians suggesting he should have waited until Egypt had recovered from the "psychological shock" of seeing Arab moderates join hardliners in an attempt to punish Sadat.

Upon arriving Begin termed his visit "a dream come true" and said he was visiting to convince Egyptians of Israel's wish for a lasting peace.

The 65-year-old Israeli leader said he saw "hundreds of thousands (who) waved at me, smiled at me and greeted me," but Egyptians are known for waving at any passing motorcade. "It was a very friendly reception and I am very appreciative," he said.

But the greeting was in sharp contrast to the joyous greeting President Anwar Sadat received in Jerusalem in November 1977, when enthusiasm for peace was at its peak.

There were no huge, placard-waving crowds that gave Sadat a tumultuous welcome home from his treaty-signing trip only two days ago.

Sadat himself avoided the welcoming ceremonies, sending instead his Vice President Hosny Mubarak and a few cabinet leaders to greet Begin at the airport. Officials said protocol did not require Sadat's presence since Begin is not a head of state.

The state-controlled news media and the public demonstrated little enthusiasm for Begin's 28-hour visit, chiefly because of the tough bargaining stance he took during the negotiations.

Even so, the first state visit by an Israeli prime minister was shown live on Egyptian television and 27 small Israeli flags flew at Cairo airport for Begin's arrival.

Judges Named For Lubbock School Case

desegregation plan, ordered by U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward, requires busing about 2,500 student a day. The plan leaves more than a dozen schools still predominantly minority.

The Justice Department says the school district should be required to implement a systemwide desegregation plan, which school officials say would necessitate busing many more of the district's 30,500 students.

School officials say a systemwide remedy would be improper because most minority schools here have their racial composition as a result of residential patterns, not segregative acts by the school system.

School officials admit their chances of winning at the 5th Circuit aren't the best because that court is known for its pro-integration stance. However, they say they are willing to appeal to the Supreme Court. — JEFF SOUTH grant for architectural work.

Last year, the commissioners court bought a nine-acre tract on the city's north side for the facility.

Meanwhile, the project wound through the governmental maze, getting approval from such groups as the Lubbock County Juvenile Board, county judges in the South Plains region, SPAG advisory committees on criminal justice and natural resources, the SPAG board of directors, the Texas Historical Commission (which has given oral but not yet final approval), various committees in the Governor's Criminal Justice Division, the governor's office itself — and now, the national clearinghouse on criminal justice planning.

The regional center will have "great benefits not only to Lubbock County, but to the entire region," Dorothy Miller, SPAG criminal justice planner, said.

Presently Lubbock and most other counties use their county jails for the short-term detention of delinquent youths and commit them to state training schools for long-term detention.

Because the training schools are hundreds of miles from here, such $150,000 toward the first year's operation. The Texas Youth Council also is providing to each county "community assistance funds" which may be used for the project.

The Lubbock County Juvenile Probation Department will run the center, but each participating county has a representative on the center's advisory committee. The committee is chaired by Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw.

The center will house the juvenile probation department and Project Intercept, the Lubbock Independent School District's alternative school for students with discipline problems.

Tanzanian Bombs Panic Ugandans

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin made a surprise appearance in Jinja on Monday after an air raid on the city, and ordered fleeing workers to return to their jobs, Jinja residents reported.

They said two Tanzanian MiG-21 jet fighters swooped over Jinja, 50 miles east of the capital of Kampala, and dropped three bombs.

In a broadcast over Uganda radio Monday evening, Amin said one of the warplanes, which he claimed was American-made and flown by "Israelis and their agents," was shot down over Lake Victoria. "The pilot must be having a good time with the crocodiles," the beleaguered president-for-life added.

Tanzania Remains Silent

Informed African and Western sources said Tanzania has only Soviet or Chinese-built MiGs. Tanzania has not ackowledged the Jinja raid or a reported strike Sunday by its MiGs against the Entebbe international airport 21 miles south of Kampala.

The sources in Nairobi said their reports indicated all Tanzanian jets returned safely to their bases from both raids.

Amin had not been seen in recent days as his forces, backed by Libyan units, fell back before the Tanzanian invaders and Ugandan insurgents.

Amin Appearance Unexpected

Jinja residents, reached by telphone, said they were startled when Amin arrived at an open-air bus terminal after the bombing and told panicky employees to get back to work.

Little damage was done, they said, but one bomb hit just outside the Libyan Arab Uganda Bank and wounded 15 persons.

In his angry radio statement, Amin called Tanzania's socialist president, Julius Nyerere, a "murderer ... a puppet of Zionists and imperialists."

He acknowledged for the first time over the state radio that the Tanzanians have shelled or bombed Kampala, Jinja and Entebbe, and that he had ordered the Entebbe airport closed "because civil aircraft" were being hit.

The Tanzanians "have caused a lot of destruction to mosques, churches, cathedrals, hospitals, diplomats houses and civilian homes," Amin said.

Exiles in Nairobi said they suspect Amin has been staying in Jinja, which is the headquarters of Libyan troops sent by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy to aid Amin as a fellow Moslem. But diplomatic sources here said there was no indication the Tanzanians knew of Amin's presence in Jinja, Uganda's second largest city, when they planned their attack.

Libya Retaliation Possible

The diplomats said Libya may again use its war planes to retaliate for the Entebbe-Jinja bombings.

Air raids, which had been limited to border strikes during the five-month war, expanded Thursday when a Soviet-made TU-22 bomber of the Libyan air force bombed Mwanza, a Tanzanian port ciy on the southern shore of Lake Victoria.

Sunday's air strike against Entebbe was the first known raid by Tanzanian warplanes, and they reportedly damaged the main runway and a Ugandan Boeing 707.

Invading forces besieging Kampala resumed their shelling of the capital Monday after their artillery reportedly had been driven back by Libyan defenders over the weekend.

Residents and diplomats in Kampala reported by telephone that a series of early morning explosions in the eastern industrial area set a disel fuel storage tank afire and smoke billowed over they city. They said the blaze was extinguished by noon and the city remained quiet for the rest of the day.

In the Tanzanian capital of Dar Es Salaam, the Uganda National Liberation Front said the tank was blown up by saboteurs.

Embassy Attacked In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two rocket-propelled grenades hit the U.S. Embassy on Monday, but officials said no one was hurt and damage was minor. The attack came amid increasing Arab hostility to the United States for its role in arranging the Egyptian-Iraeli peace treaty.

U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean was reported to be having lunch elsewhere at the time of the attack, which occurred at 2:45 p.m. His office is located on the same side but above the office hit.

In 1976 the American ambassador to Lebanon, Francis Melloy, was assassinated in Beirut's leftist quarter in an unsolved murder.

Eyewitnesses said two young unidentified men fired the grenades Monday from high in a building 150 yards from the embassy that overlooks the Mediterranean coast in West Beirut. The men escaped in a small car, the witnesses said.

Palestinian leaders have threatened to attack "American interests" in the Middle East because of the key U.S role in bringing about an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Group Claims Responsibility

In a statement telephoned to leftist newspaper offices in Beirut, a group calling itself "The Arab People" claimed responsibility for the attack. No group by that name has claimed responsibility for terrorist attacks in the past.

"Our shells struck the American godfather of the treaty of treason at his Beirut stronghold," the statement said, threatening more attacks on U.S. "targets and interests everywhere."

Sources inside Palestinian factions based here dismissed the incident as unworthy of them, both in scope and purpose.

Brown Cancels Speech After Political Fracas

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. canceled a speech before a state legislative committee Monday night after the Republican chairman refused to let Democratic Gov. Hugh Gallen speak first.

"I'll just have to come back to New Hampshire again," Brown said at a press conference after being tossed into the middle of a state political squabble.

Brown carried his "non-political" crusade for a balanced federal budget to New Hampshire at the request of House Speaker George Roberts, a Republican.

But six Democrats on the Constitutional Revision Committee walked out of the evening hearing when committee chairman Joseph Eaton, R-Hillsboro, declined to allow Gallen to speak first. Brown then declined to speak.

Gallen is opposed to a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget, and the two Democratic governors later debated the merits of the proposed amendment in front of the news media.

"I don't know why leaders are ducking this issue when three-fourths of the American people are in favor of a constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget," said Brown.

"Everyone is for a balanced federal budget, but you are allowing economic issues to pollute our sacred Constitution," Gallen responded.

Brown has hinted strongly that he may challenge President Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1980, and Gallen — a Carter supporter — said he welcomed Brown as he had all political candidates in the home of the nation's earliest presidential primary.

The California governor's aides said Brown's 3,000-mile pilgrimage to Concord was "non-political."

He said he paid for his own tourist-class flight from California, although it had been reported that the National Taxpayers Union, which supports the proposed amendment, was financing the trip.

Brown's visit attracted wide media coverage — nearly 100 reporters observed the debate with Gallen — and stole the show from Republican presidential hopefuls touring the state.

Brown has been increasingly critical of Carter, and Democratic Party officials and Carter supporters were irked that the Californian came to New Hampshire at the invitation of a Republican House Speaker.

However, they acknowledged the trip was likely to attract attention whether Democrats approved or not.

"He appeals directly to the people. He is comfortable outside the party structure so it shouldn't bother him," said one party official, who declined to be identified.

Government Farm Officials Convincing Federal Advisors

WASHINGTON (AP) — A feeling is growing among government farm officials that their dogged attempts to convince White House advisers that agriculture alone is not to blame for food price inflation is beginning to pay off.

Their position basically has been this: Despite recent high spurts in farm commodity prices, primarily for livestock, it would be a serious mistake to do anything new that would upset free market operations.

According to Agriculture Department officials, such actions would include price controls on agricultural products, opening the door to more foreign meat and other moves in the name of fighting inflation but which might discourage farmers from producing more of what is needed by American consumers.

Although department sources say privately "resistance is still there" in some degree against a hands-off policy for farmers, some recent signals have been raised that show Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland is being listened to attentively.

The most important evidence of this is a new rapport between Bergland and Dr. Alfred Kahn, chairman of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability. As President Carter's chief inflation adviser, Kahn's responsibility includes a search for ways to curb the upward spiral in food prices.

Earlier this year, statements attributed to Kahn and his aides were interpreted — correctly or not — by many farmers and others in the agricultural sector that farmers likely would become a whipping boy in the administration's struggle with inflation.

Bergland and a number of his senior aides, bearing the brunt of complaints by farmers and their organizations, grew increasingly restive about how Carter's inflation policies might develop.

On Monday, March 5, Kahn and Bergland met for more than three hours at USDA in what one source said later was "a time of enlightment, if not jawboning by the secretary" about farmers' incomes, commodity prices, the causes of food inflation and the importance of being even-handed with farmers.

Meanwhile, rumors persisted the administration was on the verge of taking precipitous action on the farm front, ranging from the complete elimination of meat import restraints and domestic price controls to changes in federal crop programs that would boost soybean production this year.

Bergland, fed up with the reports, called a news conference March 21 to dispel the rumors, including one farmers would be allowed to grow soybeans on acres set-aside from production this year.

Further, he said, the farmer-owned grain reserve would not be opened up to 1978 wheat and corn. And there will be no increases in commodity price supports or target prices, nor any change in 1979 acreage set-aside program from what has been announced.

Bergland was able to demonstrate the kind of even-handedness he says farmers deserve.

Significantly, Kahn also was at Bergland's news conference and explained how his council is working with USDA to "mount an anti-inflation program in the food and agriculture sector of our economy."

Kahn said he agreed totally with Bergland "that it is important that we give farmers as much certainty as we can" about 1979 programs. He also said the council had asked Bergland to consider letting farmers plant soybeans on idle acres.

But Kahn added that after Bergland explained the consequences of using set-aside acres, "we agreed that it would not be a desirable thing to do."

Kahn also explained the council and the department are working together to monitor "unjustified price increases and profits on the part of people who produce those inputs that farmers buy" and on the part of middlemen who handle commodities between farmers and consumers.

A reporter asked Kahn about "concern in the farming community" that Carter "seems to have more confidence in you and his White House advisers than he does in the Department of Agriculture" and if he could provide assurance that Bergland and USDA are being given proper consideration in decisions.

"Well, I guess I can't give you any more than verbal assurance, but I mean it," Kahn replied, adding the meeting March 5 was an example of cooperation.

Kahn said if he thought Bergland was "insensitive to my problems...then I guess we might get into some sort of confrontation." But that has not happened, he said.

"That is not to say that there may not be instances in which there may be disagreements," Kahn said.

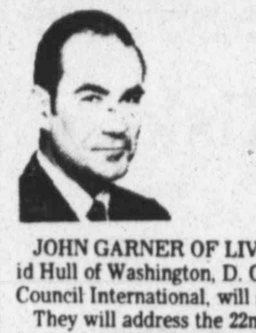
"If that happens, you may be certain that the president will turn to his secretary of agriculture and listen to him very, very carefully, except, of course, when he is wrong — which he is never, as long as he is standing behind me," he quipped.

Despite assurances by Kahn and Bergland that for now, at least, the administration has no plan to intervene dramatically in agriculture, questions continue to be asked.

At a meeting of magazine farm editors here last week, Bergland once again was asked about Carter's beef import policy and whether it might be expanded at a time when producers are making money for the first time in years.

"I'm arguing within the administration that the best thing we can do...is settle down, settle down, don't make any dumb statements about changing the import requirements. It gets people upset," Bergland said.

There will be "no controls on beef prices, none, absolutely none," he said. "People don't believe me. They don't even believe the president when he's said it, several times."



PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

JOHN GARNER OF LIVERPOOL, editor of the "Cotton Outlook," and David Hull of Washington, D. C., associate director of foreign operations for Cotton Council International, will speak here May 2.

They will address the 22nd annual meeting of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. in the Aztec Room of the Southpark Inn. The meeting will begin at 2:30 p.m. and end shortly after 5 p.m.

Emphasis will be on existing opportunities for cotton in foreign markets, how those opportunities can be expanded, and how the High Plains can fully realize its potential in those markets.

THE COTTON OUTLOOK IS A WEEKLY international publication which covers cotton production, consumption, prices, government policies, exports and imports from every country that exerts a significant influence on cotton trade.

Cotton Council International organizes and supervises trade teams, technical services, and various cotton promotion programs in countries around the world, including cooperative advertising programs with about 40 textile mills, garment manufacturers and retailers.

The meeting also will hear reports by PCG president Lloyd Cline of Lamesa and PCG executive vice president Donald Johnson.

Following the membership meeting the 50-member PCG board of directors will elect officers for 1979-80. Current officers are Cline, Joe D. Unfred of New Home, vice president, and Gary Ivey of Ralls, secretary-treasurer.

Each officer has served two years and is not eligible for re-election to the same position. All, however, are eligible for election to another office.

WHILE COTTON CONSUMPTION FELL to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 6.2 million bales in February, National Cotton Council economists say weather was a key factor in the drop.

Heavy snows in some areas resulted in complete mill shutdowns of one to two days, according to the council's monthly publication, "Cotton Economic Review."

The council economists point out that consumption of all fibers on cotton system spindles declined in February for the same reason.

However, cotton's market share improved marginally. A sampling of opinion among mill representatives indicates that consumption of cotton in March will be much improved.

CONSUMPTION FOR THE 1978-79 SEASON could still fall near the midpoint of the council's previously estimated 6.3-6.5-million-bale range, it was reported.

While the annual rate would have to average 6.5 million bales for the season's remaining five months, the economists believe this is possible.

"Textile mills have good fabric bookings through mid-year and the factors which have plagued cotton consumption in recent months — like price disadvantage, imports, and the denim slump — now show signs of changing for the better," it was reported.

Cattle Futures Finish Mixed In Chicago Trade

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 55 points higher to 40 points lower on 25,505 cars Monday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. June was up the most after rising 95 with only distant April lower and at the day's low.

Prices were lifted to one week highs on short covering and other buying touched off by reduced cattle supplies and firmer tone to beef and cash cattle.

There have been 44 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged to up 1 cent at 104½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were up $2.50 to off $4 with the best top $75 per hundredweight which is a one-week high. Omaha's top was $73.

Slaughter was 103,000 head. About 13,700 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 100 lower to 32 higher on sales of 5,039 lots. August was off the most, at the day's low, with only May higher.

The market reacted on late fears that the trucking industry lockout may be prolonged, which in turn would affect beef shipment and consumption. Heavier feeder cattle arrivals and lower prices also created pressure, as did delivery on 38 cars in first tender against open April contracts.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to off $4 with the best top $136 per hundredweight at San Antonio. Receipts at the major terminals are expected to total 1,800 head today.

Hog futures closed 25 to 52 higher with exception of distant June which fell 95. Earlier, the contract was down 100 to a new season's low. Other months climbed 102 to one-week highs. Sales totaled 5,784 contracts.

Short covering and other buying was touched off by short term effects of the trucking strike along with sharply reduced hog runs and mostly higher prices. Firmer tone to pork and reduced kill Friday were also positive.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up ½ cent at 76 to 86¾ cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were up $1.25 to off 50 cents with the best top $47.50 per hundredweight at St. Paul. Kill was 310,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 28,500 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 55 to 75 higher led by August which was up 145 early. Sales totaled 4,153 cars. Prices were steady to higher all day.

Fresh demand continued after Friday's late recovery for the lowest since July. The trucker strike along with light slaughter and storings brought support as did increased bacon slicings and firmer cash bellies at noon.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1 cent at 48 to 51 cents a pounds, f.o.b. river.

Bacon Processing Violations Noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department said Monday its latest preliminary tests showed six violations by processing plants in the amount of nitrosamines found in bacon after it is fried.

According to department reports, nitrosamines formed when bacon is fried at high heat "are considered to be carcinogenic (cancer-causing) since laboratory animals administered these compounds develop cancer."

But some industry groups, including the American Meat Institute, along with some members of Congress object to release of the testing information on grounds it might be misleading to the public.

Also, the institute says the amount of nitrosamines formed from bacon is too small to be harmful.

In the latest weekly report, 27 plants were found to be in compliance with the nitrosamine limits set by the government.

The plants listed as producing bacon that exceeded the limits included: Armour & Co., Memphis, Tenn.; Armour & Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Valleydale Packers, Bristol, Va.; Franconia Meats, Franconia, Pa.; Armour & Co., Mason City, Iowa; and Cauley (Weaver) Packing Co., Waycross, Ga.

One of those — Armour & Co., Memphis — and three others that had previously been found in violation were approved after they made changes in processing procedures, the report said.

The other three were: Sunnyland Food of Alabama, Dothan, Ala.; Howard Johnson Co., Queens Village, New York; and Bridgford Foods of Illinois, Chicago.

Another plant, found earlier in preliminary tests to be in violation, was "returned to normal monitoring" after further confirmation tests showed its bacon to be in compliance. It was identified as Henry Heil Inc., Baltimore, Md.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat and soybean futures declined today on the Chicago Board of Trade while corn and oats prices rose.

Technical or chart-related weakness in wheat triggered selling by commission houses when prices slid below automatic sell-order points, an analyst said. May wheat declined by 5 1/2 cents a bushel, despite commercial buying, after falling below a $3.38-abushel technical resistance point.

Corn futures rose slightly.. Continued wet weather in the Corn Belt threatened to delay the planting season. Barge transportation was rendered difficult by high waters in inland rivers, pushing cash prices higher.

At the close, soybeans were 5 1/4 to 8 1/4 cents lower, May $7.63.

Proposal May Mean Loss Of Federal Workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials told a House panel Monday that many of the government's most talented scientific workers and bureaucrats may soon leave government unless a law that would cut their outside employment chances is amended.

The law, which goes into effect July 1, is intended to halt the so-called "revolving door" in which former government workers use their expertise to help industry cope with government policies the workers helped formulate.

The administration officials said the law as currently written is too broad and ambiguous. No one said it should be abolished, but all said it should be made more precise.

The testimony came as the House Judiciary subcommittee on administrative law and governmental relations opened public hearings on proposed changes in the law.

President Carter, who supported the original law, has agreed that the statute as written creates unwanted and unintended problems and has proposed clarifications.

The section of the law that creates the most problems is a provision prohibiting former government workers from participating for two years in any matter that was part of the employee's "official responsibility."

Some top officials believe this provision, if broadly interpreted, could prohibit them from working in their field for two years after they leave the government.

For example, a college administrator who takes a job as the commissioner of education could find himself barred from going back to his former position since most colleges receive government grants.

Deputy Defense Secretary Charles W. Duncan Jr. said many of the Defense Department's top scientists are afraid they will not be able to find work outside the government unless they leave before the law takes effect.

He said informal surveys "by the managers of our principal scientific and technical activities indicate that we may lose a full one-third of some of our most key components."

"A scientist in some defense specialty like anti-submarine warfare or application of laser technology would be very unsettled about the disruption of his or her professional career that sitting out two years would bring," Duncan said.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said the law "will have the unintended effect of impairing the ability of HEW and other government agencies to attract and retain the kind of people we so badly need. ..."

Califano said the Department of Health, Education and Welfare traditionally recruits people from organizations "that necessarily receive substantial funding through grants and contracts from HEW, such as educational and research institutions," because the department needs their expertise.

He said it is expected these people would return to their field when their government service is over.

Califano said these people "do not take government positions with the intention of using inside knowledge and influence to represent large companies before their former agencies" and that it was unfair to penalize them for serving the government.

He noted that more than 150 of the scientist-administrators at the National Institutes of Health would be affected by the provisions and might find it impossible to take research jobs outside the government.

He said these people "are in demand for these positions not because of the inside knowledge or contacts gained through their government service but because of their skills and professional reputations — indeed, the same skills and reputation that led to their appointment to positions of responsibility at HEW."

Police Investigating Injuries To Children

A 2-year-old Lubbock girl, who police feel may have been the victim of foul play, was listed in satisfactory condition Monday at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The girl, who was hospitalized Sunday morning, has two siblings, an 8-month-old sister and 2-year-old brother, who also are patients at HSCH. The brother and sister also were in satisfactory condition early Monday.

Authorities are not sure how the children received their injuries, but the police department's juvenile division and a child welfare worker are investigating.

Police Lt. Bobby Duncan said the 2-year-old girl had suffered a stab wound in the buttock Sunday morning, and the girl also had a "fairly fresh" burn on the back.

Duncan speculated the burn could have been caused by a hot knife placed across the tot's back. While not ruling out an accident in the stabbing, Duncan said other possibilities were being investigated.

When officers arrived at the hospital Sunday, they were told by child welfare worker Jeanell Edwards that the 2-year-old girl possibly was the victim of an assault.

Mrs. Edwards could not be contacted Monday to comment on the case.

Police were told by other siblings of the injured girl that she was at her grandparents' house between 11 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. Sunday when she sat on a knife, which was protruding from a living room couch.

"We don't know if it was an accident or someone stabbed her," Duncan said Monday. He added that the living conditions of the family, containing eight children all under the age of 13, were not good.

Three of the children reportedly live with their father in a small, hotel room. The others stay at their grandparents' house where the girl was injured Sunday.

Hood-Type Hair Dryers May Pose Risk

WASHINGTON (AP) — The potential health risk posed by hand-held hair dryers may also extend to some hood-type models, the Consumer Product Safety Commission said Monday.

"We have some indication that asbestos may be contained in some of the hood-type models," commission Chairwoman Susan King told a Senate subcommittee.

The hood-type models frequently are used in beauty parlors, although some are used in homes.

The issue of the hand-held dryers was raised last week when Washington television station WRC reported that one-fifth of the devices it tested spewed out asbestos fibers, considered a potent cause of cancer.

After the story was broadcast, the commission began a high-priority investigation of the extent of asbestos used in hand-held dryers and the possibility that humans could breathe the tiny fibers.

Manufacturers have confirmed that asbestos is used as insulation in some models of hand-held dryers.

WRC reporter Lea Thompson testified that other products are similar in that they blow out hot air and contain insulating material. She said these include hood-type hair dryers and clothes dryers, but added that the station has not investigated these products.

Miss King said she discussed the situation during the last week with officials of other federal agencies, including the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. OSHA has jurisdiction over health hazards in the work-place, such as dryers used in hair-styling establishments.

"The exposure could be many times higher for someone who works five or six days a week in a beauty parlor," said Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., the subcommittee chairman. "This may be a mushrooming situation from hand-held hair dryers."

The CPSC investigation announced last week into the hand-held models has two aspects: ordering manufacturers to turn over information on which models contain asbestos and obtaining scientific data on whether the fibers released can be breathed.

"We are getting a list now on which (hand-held dryers) have asbestos. When that information comes in, we'll be able to tell consumers which models have asbestos," Miss King said.

She said the information is expected to be available early next week. Until then, she said, "We can't tell consumers the makes and models that contain asbestos."

The commission also has scheduled a meeting Thursday with manufacturers and retailers, she said. "We are looking to industry to be as cooperative as they can," Miss King testified.

Commission general counsel Andrew Krulwich said the agency hopes for enough data by the end of the month to legally support such actions as a ban on further manufacture and a recall on hand-held hair dryers containing asbestos.

The agency has issued a preliminary estimate that up to 13 million hand-held dryers contain asbestos.

Miss King and WRC reporter Lea Thompson said consumers often can tell if their home hair dryers contain asbestos by looking into the barrel in a direct light. Asbestos is described as a grayish-white fibrous material.

Miss King also suggested that consumers check with their retailers, some of whom have publicly offered refunds for hand-held dryers containing asbestos. These include Sears, Roebuck and Co. and E.J. Korvette.

"A spot survey we have been conducting indicates that a lot of people already are taking them back," Miss King said.

Panel Approves New Tavern Bill

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Affairs Committee Monday approved unanimously a bill that would allow the State Alcoholic Beverage Commission to take administrative action against a tavern operator convicted of an anti-discrimination offense.

SB 685 by Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka was ordered placed on the Senate's uncontested calendar.

Short told the committee the bill was prompted by problems that cropped up in Lubbock, where the city council passed an ordinance making it unlawful for taverns and nightclubs to practice racial discrimination. Short said his bill would give the ABC administrative authority over barowners convicted under the ordinance.

However, said the senator, the legislation would have statewide impact. "Lots of people are being discriminated against in bars throughout the state," he said.

What do David Rush and the Lubbock High Westerners have in common with Tom Seaver and the Cincinnati Reds?

Both Rush and Seaver will be throwing out the first pitches, as Lubbock High and Cincinnati host baseball openers this week.

Today, the Westerners will begin the District 4-AAAA campaign against the Monterey Plainsmen in a doubleheader at Mackenzie Park. The action is slated to get underway at 2:30 p.m.

However, playing preseason favorites Monterey and Coronado back-to-back, Lubbock High coach Bart Hernandez isn't quite sure how the Westerners are going to open the loop season.

"I'm not sure if it's going to be an opener or an ender," joked Hernandez. "Our club is definitely going to find out early what it's made of."

In another 4-AAAA game today, Hereford will be at Plainview, while Coronado has a bye.

The rest of the city high school schedule has Bovina at Dunbar, while Estacado and Lubbock Christian both have open dates.

Monterey will bring the better nondistrict record (11-3) into the competition and is on a nine-game winning streak. Lubbock High sports a 10-4 mark.

Plainsmen coach Bobby Moegle isn't taking the Westerners lightly. He remembers too well that Lubbock High was the last team to knock Monterey from the district top spot in 1976.

"We have a lot of respect for Lubbock High, and we're not looking beyond that game a bit," said a rather-convincing Moegle. "Both teams are really not known for power — although, I suspect that we have a little more than they do."

Rush will bring a 4-1 record to the mound. Monterey is expect to counter with Kent Potts (5-0).

"I don't think what happened in 1976 will have any bearing on the game," said Hernandez . "After all, I wasn't here then and none of these kids played on that team."

Around the infield for the Westerners will have Paul Mendoza at first base, Noel Jaime at second, Andy Vasquez at shortstop and Sammy Chavez at third. Setting the target behind the plate for Rush will be Larry DeLeon.

In the outfield, Terry Brady will be in left, Larry Walker in center, with Thomas Romero in right. Jaime Green will be the designated hitter for DeLeon.

"I think the key to the game will concern our running game," said Hernandez. "We're going to try to hit and run, the double steal, or whatever the situation calls for."

Does that mean Lubbock High will win the game if it's able to run?

"I wouldn't go that far," smiled Hernandez. "If we're able to run, I think we'll be in the game."

Trying to keep the Westerners off the base paths behind Potts for Monterey will be Tom Bevins at first, Randy Ledbetter at second, Stan Zelner at shortstop, with Ricky Pinkerton at third. The outfield from left to right will include Bart Burgess, Andy Barron and David Faulkner.

"The key will be our overall execution," said Moegle. "We have a little momentum coming into the game, but this team isn't playing as good fundamental baseball as the championship team."

It wouldn't bother Hernandez a bit if the Plainsmen have trouble fielding the ball.

"I think it's essential for us to split with both Monterey and Coronado to still be in the district race. We'll be out of it otherwise."

Here's The Pitch

WHEN KAL SEGRIST started to make his pitch, that was the trouble: The pitch.

Segrist, the Tech baseball boss, had watched over his troops all winter and spring, and the way the game has been thus far, the ball has been going out faster than it was coming in.

Or, the opposing batters have been allowed to stroll, at their own pace, to first base.

Pitching, in a nutshell, is where it's at — and where the problem has been.

At a time when the season is reaching that belt-tightening time, Segrist is looking for some solid pitching — from his entire staff. Thus far, he said Monday, the Raiders have had to depend too much on only two men, James Miller, a transfer from Panola JC, and Mark Johnston, a junior from Dallas.

"Miller has thrown well," Segrist commented, "and Johnston has done an exceptional job. He's certainly played like an all-conference player up to now. He's started, relieved, done just about anything we have asked."

What Johnston has done is go 4-0 in conference (4-2 for the year), and Miller has a 1-2 season mark, (0-1 in conference).

• • •

THE SEASON STARTED out in a walk — literally. "We were just walking too many batters," Kal observed. "We kept letting them get guys on base just about every inning, and when they'd get a hit, there'd go two or three runs.

"We've been scoring runs," he added, "but we can't get eight or ten runs a game."

For the year, the Raiders have managed a 12-13 record (6-6 in the league)

Here's the kind of day it was for Lubbock Christian College's baseball team: Gary Swann gave up only five hits and 1 run and struck out seven in the first game of the team's doubleheader with Panhandle State Monday.

He lost 4-3 to a guy who allowed eight hits.

Fortunately for the Chaps, they broke out of their doldrums about the fifth inning of the nightcap, exploding for 4 runs and taking a 6-3 victory for a split.

From the first pitch, it seemed something besides Monday's game was on the players' minds. And it wasn't hard to figure out what.

The Chaps host Texas Wesleyan Friday and Saturday in a pair of make-or-break doubleheaders. That made it difficult to get up for 7-6 Panhandle State.

Because of the upcoming big weekend, centerfielder Brady Brashear sat out the doubleheader to try and rest a chronic injury, and the pitchers were left pretty much on their own as one of the few relievers available, Mickey Crump, came down with a bad dose of flu Monday morning.

Before getting to TWC, however, the Chaparrals will visit Abilene to play Hardin-Simmins in a pair this afternoon.

The first game didn't lack for excitement. With two out in the top of the eighth (an extra inning already by college rules) the teams were tied at 1.

Then Hubba Ryan reached first on an error by shortstop Steve Brigante. He went to second on a passed ball and the next batter in line, Mario Mendoza, walked.

Then came the big blow as Jack Brewster blasted the day's only homer out of the park against a fairly stiff breeze, scoring 3 runs, all unearned.

But that wasn't it. Richard Bowles walked to open the home half and then, with two out, Tim Leslie doubled to left center, scoring Bowles. A single by Kenny Toney scored Leslie and, it's 4-3 with the winning run at the plate.

But Lewis Stephenson, pinch-running for Toney, was tossed out at second, squelching the rally and ending the game.

It looked like the same thing might happen in the nightcap. Tied 2-all in the fifth, Bobby Doe opened the bottom of the inning with a line single to right. Brigante dropped a pretty bunt single that just barely cleared the dirt area around home plate and then Leslie bounced out to first, advancing the runners.

Toney delivered the first of the big blows, banging a double down the power alley in right center. Both baserunners scored before the centerfielder touched the ball.

Scott Wolf kept it going with a single to left. The outfielder mishandled the ball and Toney scored on the error.

Then, with two outs, Karl Mahan caught the centerfielder cheating in and dropped a long triple over his head. That scored Stephenson, and the Chaps led 6-3.

It looked as if PSU might put things together in the sixth. Pitcher Dan Sanders walked the first two batters he faced and then allowed a single to load the bases before he was yanked in favor of reliever Randy Vinson.

That didn't stop the Aggies. Mike Sicord rolled a single inside third base, scoring Larkin and keeping the bags full with only one out.

But then the heart of the Chap defense, Doe, Brigante and Leslie, turned a slick double play to kill any ambitions Panhandle might have had.

Starting for the Chaps today at Hardin-Simmons are David Hanna (2-3 with an 8.22 ERA) in the opener and John Ross (3-3 and 3.23) in the nightcap.

with a team 5.47 earned-run average. In 25 games the Raiders have issued 140 bases on balls, or almost six per game.

And this with the Raiders batting at a .273 clip.

"We've had three pitchers who haven't done as well this year as we'd hoped," commented Segrist. This, he later said, had put the burden on Miller and Johnston. "We've had to relieve with Johnson on Friday and come back on Saturday with him as a starter. It's been tough on him.

"Sometimes it looks like some of our pitchers have been snake-bit. They (the opponents) would bounce a hit off the dirt, bloop one just out of the infield, things like that. At Wichita State (last week), they got men on base, and their best hitter came up. So, we tried to pitch around him. But, he hit one right there (indicating about 6 inches off the ground."

• • •

BUT, FROM THE other side of the plate, it's been a different story; with the bat, Tech has been deadly.

Even though the team sustained a no-hit game, it is batting .273 as a team, and five players are pounding the ball at a clip of better than .300. The SWC batting sheet is peppered with Raiders' names. And they're not just singles hitters, either.

As a team, the Raiders have pounded out 57 extra-base hits (including 16 homers), and that is about one extra-base knock for every three singles.

Larry Selby, who made all-SWC a year ago, is leading the team with a .447 average in conference, .381 overall. And, the list of .300 hitters has Randy Newton, Brooks Wallace, John Keller and Johnny Vestal.

Right now, however, Selby is hampered by a pulled leg muscle, although he should be ready by Friday's SWC game with Arkansas. Hurler Gary Moyer (shoulder problem) and infielder Rusty Laughlin (cut finger) are nursing injuries.

• • •

BUT, THE SERIES upcoming ranks in that crucial class.

"Arkansas could be the most consistent club in the league right now," Segrist estimated. "We're in the home stretch of our schedule with Arkansas, Houston, A &M and then Texas. . .

"Arkansas is the most consistent team in the league right now. . . But Baylor got hot (and cleaned the Aggies over the weekend). . . Texas is getting strong pitching but they're not scoring many runs."

With a 6-6 record, Segrist has his eyes tuned on the post-season tourney which invites but four teams.

"We still have a shot at it, but to do it, we have to win eight of our last 12 games. It'll be a tough month.

"But, if we can get some pitching, with the hitting we have gotten so far, we can compete with anyone in the league."

Thus, the challenge is there: Exactly the same size as the strike zone.

LOYOLA COACH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Loyola-Marymount dipped into the California junior college ranks again Monday to select a new head basketball coach and named Ron Jacobs of El Camino. Jacobs, 36, succeeds Bill Mulligan who cited family health problems to resign after three days and return to Saddleback College. The new coach is a graduate of the University of Southern California and has a coaching record of 110-46 in high school and junior college.

IOC To Get Request For Two Chinas

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — The International Olympic Commitee will be asked this week to recognize two Chinese Olympic committees — one for the Communist mainland and one for Taiwan.

Henry Hsu, IOC member for Taiwan, said Monday: "We are perfectly willing."

But the All-China Sports Federation in Peking, which has applied for IOC recognition, has thus far refused to agree.

(Related Story, Page 3, Sec. B)

The proposal will be made to the IOC session, starting here Wednesday, by Lance Cross, the IOC member for New Zealand, who led a fact-finding commission to mainland China.

Peking, requesting inclusion in the Olympic Games, has demanded that the IOC disown Taiwan and that Taiwanese athletes be made to compete as members of an all-Chinese team directed from Peking.

"Somebdoy has got to give a little if we are to bring mainland China into the Games," Cross said in an interview. "They must be prepared to stop thinking in terms of politics and to think of sport."

Rams' Owner Rosenbloom Drowns In Sea

GOLDEN BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Los Angeles Rams owner Carroll Rosenbloom drowned Monday while vacationing in this South Florida resort city, police said. Rosenbloom was 72.

Police Chief William Henrikson said the football executive was dragged out to sea by a heavy undertow. He said police were called at about 2 p.m. EST.

"When we got to the beach, we saw two men in heavy surf about 150 yards from the beach," Henrikson said. "One man was trying to support the other.

"We took our clothes off and went into the water, but by the time we got there, the other man was near exhaustion. There was no apparent sign of life (in Rosenbloom) when we got to him."

Henrikson said he and another officer brought Rosenbloom back to the beach. "In my opinion, he was dead before we got to him," the police officer said.

"There was a very, very strong undertow," the chief said. "The waves were extremely rough. We were dragged almost 150 yards north along the beach during the rescue try."

The police chief said Rosenbloom and his wife, Georgia, were vacationing at a rented house in this exclusive Miami-area resort city.

Henrikson said when he swam to Rosenbloom, he passed the would-be rescuer, Raymond Tanguay of Montreal, in the water and, "I asked him if the other man was still alive."

"But he answered in French and I didn't understand him," Henrikson said. "When I came back to the beach I saw Tanguay under a blanket on the sand."

"That poor man, that poor man," Tanguay moaned after he returned to his motel room.

Tanguay, who speaks no English, said through his wife Susan, "I wanted to save him. I did everything I could. But it was not enough."

Tanguay, a middle-aged man, said, "The man's face was in the water for five minutes before I got to him."

He said he was standing on the beach when he heard Rosenbloom yell for help.

"But the water was too hard for me. I didn't catch him at a good time. The water was very rough, too much rough.

"I took out a piece of wood. Three times I put the man on the wood, but every time the big rough wave take the man again into the water.

"I don't know how far out I was, but the people looked far, far away," Tanguay said.

When informed of Rosenbloom's death, National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle issued the following statement:

"For 26 years in Baltimore, then in Los Angeles, Carroll Rosenbloom played a major role in the growth and success of the National Football League, both through the performance of the teams he produced and through his active participation in the league's decision-making processes."

Rosenbloom often tangled with Rozelle, who succeeded Bert Bell as NFL commissioner in 1960. It was Bell who was influential in getting Rosenbloom involved in pro football as owner of the Baltimore Colts.

Rosenbloom liked to tell the story of how Bell "forced me in."

He said Bell had tried to talk him into taking over the troubled Baltimore Colts, even though Rosenbloom told him repeatedly he didn't have time for football.

"Bert Bell told the press the only way Baltimore could keep the franchise is if (I) came in as owner," Rosenbloom once said. "So Bert had me on the spot. If I didn't take the team, they'd hang me."

Rosenbloom put up $13,000 for his share of the Colts in 1953. When he traded the franchise, it was worth a reported $20 million.

Rosenbloom always had a vital interest in athletics.

Rained-Out Raiders Host NTS; Coach Adjusts Doubles Lineup

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Texas Tech tennis coach Mark Hamilton isn't the kind of person that can get a used-car salesman drooling at the mouth, or would propose marriage on the first date. No sir, he's the more cautious type, the kind who likes to test the water before he makes his dive.

And Saturday in Waco, Hamilton tested the water and he didn't like the temperature. So the Raider coach pulled his tennis team out of a scheduled match with Baylor.

The action was originally scheduled to take place outdoors but just after the teams had finished warming up, a downpour broke out, cancelling the match. No problem, said the Baylor coaches, we can just move this thing indoors.

"They've got some indoor courts," Hamilton related Monday, "but they're pretty weird, the walls are yellow and there isn't enough room in the backcourt. The Baylor players may be used to it, but I didn't want to take any chances. We can' afford to lose to them."

So the match has been rescheduled for April 25 — and the Raiders are 0-1 in SWC action (after being blanked by SMU last Friday) and 8-8 overall.

But right now Tech has a more pressing problem on its hands — North Texas State. The Raiders host the Eagles at 2 p.m. today on the Tech courts. It is the first home meet for the Raiders since they defeated Hardin-Simmons on March 14.

And although it's a non-conference affair, Hamilton explained that it is an important one.

"Since North Texas is trying to get into the conference, they've scheduled matches against all the SWC teams," he said. "They want to prove that they can compete, and I don't want us to be the first — or only — Southwest Conference school that loses to them."

Although NTSU can hardly be considered a pushover for the Raiders, the match does give the Raiders somewhat of a breather from SWC competition. Currently five SWC schools are ranked in the nation's top twenty — making it the strongest tennis conference in the country in Hamilton's estimation.

"North Texas has really begun building its tennis program," said Hamilton. "They're coming along well, so it should be a good test for us."

After today's action, the Raiders go back on the road this weekend. They face Houston on Friday and then UT Saturday.

Doug Davis, Tech's No. 1 singles player, currently has the best won-lost mark on the squad. Davis is 12-6 for the year in singles and, playing with three different partners, is 14-6 in doubles action.

Davis has teamed with Harrison Bowes to go 12-4 in doubles action, but Hamilton tried other combinations recently that weren't as successful.

"Doug and Bowes are playing together again," said Hamilton. "For awhile I tried some other combinations, we really switched up our doubles teams a lot, but it cost us. So we've gone back to our original pairings."

Chow Wah, a junior transfer from Navarro County JC, is another netter that has pleased Hamilton.

"Chow has done the job for us lately," he said. "He was injured in the fall and didn't play much, and then he was having some problems early in the year. But he has sure turned things around."

Chow, from Malaysia, owns the second-best singles record on the team (9-6), playing mostly in the No. 2 spot.

Other individual records for Tech's singles players who will be playing today: Randy Clayton (9-7), Robert Davis (6-10), Gregg Davis (1-2), Bowes (5-11), David Chrissey (5-12) and Joe Blackshear (0-1).

Old Dominion Standout Named Top Fem Cager

NEW YORK (AP) — The agents call constantly trying to latch on to a piece of her life. Fans phone her in the middle of the night. Writers clamor to co-write her story. Offers abound for jobs in broadcasting and she's been approached about a made-for-televsion movie.

Nancy Lieberman is an operator. And as yet, Nancy Lieberman hasn't made a dime. She is playing hard to get.

The 5-foot-10 point guard for the champion Lady Monarchs of Old Dominion was awarded the Wade Trophy Monday as the nation's top female basketball player.

Miss Lieberman, a 20-year-old junior, had three goals as a basketball nut in Far Rockaway, N.Y.: To play basketball, to play for a championship team and to play for an Olympic champion team. One and two have been fulfilled and the third could be on its way.

"It was the perfect season. It'll probably make a good chapter in my book," said the will-be author. She keeps a daily diary and plans to write her life story.

"There has never been a book about a woman basketball player, on what we go through," she said. "There are so many areas I can go into, like what it's been like going into a sport that is socially unacceptable."

She'd also like to be a sportscaster and might dabble in business of some sort.

But it is for goal No. 3 that she is holding off the flood of riches. Not that she wouldn't like to have them, but the marketing major's business acumen tells her that she can have even more — for herself and the sport — by making 'em wait.

While she bides her time for an Olympic shot, she will try to help the Lady Monarchs repeat as national champions.

"I feel like I've aged 10 years in the last five years," she said Monday. She and Carol Blazejowski, who won the inaugural Wade Trophy last year before graduating from Montclair State, were able to come to New York for just one day.

Both were due back immediately in Knoxville, Tenn., where tryouts were to end today and a team named to represent the United States in the Pan American Games.

Miss Lieberman wears the number "1" around her neck and a "10" on her back, the former a memento from her closest friend, Barbara Wood, who sent along the gold pendant with an "I told you so" when ODU first made it to the top of the polls this season.

The former is a testament to the fact that men still are the role models for many young female athletes.

"I wear No. 10 because it's Walt Frazier's number and because they didn't have Willis Reed's (19)."

In high school she wore No. 24, Bill Bradley's.

"I can't shoot like Bill Bradley," she said with a broad grin. "But my idol always was Willis Reed. I had posters of Willis Reed and I made collages of Willis Reed. I had everything Willis Reed. I've always wanted to meet him. When Willis Reed's leg was hurt, my leg hurt. When he played in a championship, I played in a championship."

Frazier was her defensive model, but Reed sparked the dreams of great offensive feats.

"That's how I developed my left hand," she said. "I'd go outside forever and shoot left-handed."

Miss Lieberman and Miss Blazejowski didn't get the chance to watch many of the women who might have been their guiding lights, but already they are setting examples.

"I average about 300 letters (from fans) a season from kids all over the country and from other countries," says Mis Lieberman. "I answer every one of them."

She has been offered money after games for her sweatbands and T-shirts. She has traveled to almost every state in the union and most of the continents. She even has a lawyer to help her with the decisions that will mold her future.

All this from the days when she played rough-and-tumble hoop games with boys. She never played with girls until she was in high school. Her mother was skeptical, worried that Nancy never played with dolls, never wanted to wear a dress.

At age 15 the fair-skinned, strawberry blonde took to the subways and traveled to upper Manhattan. "Hey, I could have gotten killed. I met a lot of wierdos on those trains late at night."

But it was worth it to play with the Harlem Chuckles. She was the only white among them.

"They were buddies. They really took care of me."

Trail Blazers Find Walton Replacement In Rookie Thompson

By The Associated Press

Have the Portland Trail Blazers learned to win without Bill Walton?

Two years ago Walton led the Blazers to their first National Basketball Association championship. Last year, injuries crippled the red-haired center late in the season and the Blazers made a quick exit during the playoffs.

This season, with Walton on the sidelines, Portland struggled along below .500 until the last month, when the addition of rookie Mychal Thompson to the starting lineup helped the Blazers win 10 of their last 12 games. With one week to go before the playoffs, Portland holds a 2½-game lead over surprising San Diego in the race for the final berth in post-season play.

Three of the four division titles are also up for grabs in the final week of the regular season. At stake, besides the extra money that goes to each division winner, is one week's rest via a bye through the first round of the playoffs.

Defending champion Washington is the only team to have clinched a division race. The Bullets lead Philadelphia by eight games in the Atlantic Division and their 52-25 record is the best in the league.

San Antonio leads Houston by 1½ games in the Central Division, with Atlanta 2½ games out. Kansas City holds a slender margin of one-half game over Denver in the Midwest Division, while Seattle leads Phoenix by two games in the Pacific Division.

The Eastern Conference playoff teams are Washington, San Antonio, Philadelphia, Houston, Atlanta and New Jersey.

Only Seattle and Phoenix are assured of playoff berths from the Western Conference, while Kansas City, Denver, Los Angeles and Portland have the inside track for the other places San Diego, despite being five games over .500, is 2½ games behind Portland and Denver and three behind Los Angeles and Kansas City.

Portland is in its best physical shape of the year. Besides Walton, the only injured Blazer is guard Lionel Hollins, who has a minor knee injury. Forwards Maurice Lucas and Bobby Gross and guard Dave Twardzik are all back in action after early season injuries.

"We've finally got some people healthy," said Lucas, who had 30 points in the Blazers' 109-107 triumph over Cleveland Sunday, "and we're playing much better now. The maturing of our young players has a lot to do with the way we're playing now."

The Blazers' key young player has been Thompson, the 6-foot-10 rookie from Minnesota who was the first player chosen in the college draft. He opened the year as Portland's starting power forward because of an injury to Lucas, then was used as a reserve until coach Jack Ramsay decided to try him at Bobby Gross' small forward position alonside the 6-9 Lucas and 6-10 center Tom Owens.

"Mychal is playing great basketball right now," said Ramsay. "By putting him at small forward we benefit in both directions. Offensively he gives us a force inside, and defensively he's such a good player he gives the best small forwards in the league trouble."

Patriots Release Coach To Post At Colorado

BOSTON (AP) — The New England Patriots announced Monday that wayward coach Chuck Fairbanks, who tried to quit prior to the National Football League playoffs and take a job at the University of Colorado, is free to head west. The Patriots said they have not hired another coach.

Fairbanks' exit, troubled by legal hassles between the coach, the school and the Patriots, was described as "amicable," by Patriots' vice president Chuck Sullivan.

"Fairbanks will be free to undertake the coaching position with the university immediately," Sullivan said. "He probably is en route to Colorado right now."

Sullivan refused to discuss the details of the settlement, but he said that the court cases concerning the dispute had become moot.

Sources close to the club told The Associated Press the agreement came out of three weeks of mediation efforts by Carroll Rosenbloom, owner of the Los Angeles Rams, who died suddenly Monday, and Bud Adams, owner of the Houston Oilers.

The Pats were playoff-bound in December when, just moments before the kickoff of a New England game at Miami, Fairbanks confirmed a well-circulated rumor that he had agreed to quit the NFL and return to college coaching at Colorado.

"We haven't reached a decision on our own coach," said Sullivan. "We are reviewing potential candidates and hope to come to a decision in the near future. The draft is the first week in May, and we hope to have a new coach aboard before that."

The settlement ended one of the most bitter legal confrontations in NFL history.

Fairbanks was suspended by team owner William H. Sullivan Jr. last Dec. 18 for accepting the Colorado coaching job while still under contract at $150,000 a year to the Patriots.

Fairbanks returned to coach the team in its playoff game Dec. 31 as New England lost to Houston. It developed in court later that the Patriots' coach had been recruiting for the university while trying to prepare New England for the playoffs.

Fairbanks admitted in U.S. District Court in Boston Jan. 12 that he had been working for Colorado, piling up recruiting telephone calls from the Patriots' office. U.S. District Judge A. David Mazzone issued an injunction Jan. 15 which prevented Fairbanks from signing a Colorado contract.

The judge acted on a suit filed by Sullivan. Fairbanks and the university filed a counter suit in Boulder which eventually led to a planned arbitration hearing before NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Ban Of Taiwan Ruled Invalid

LONDON (AP) — The expulsion of Taiwan from the International Amateur Athletics Federation last October in deference to Mainland China was ruled invalid by a High Court judge here Monday.

The IAAF, which has 160 member nations, declared that it is bound by the British court ruling because its headquarters are in London.

Mr. Justice Forbes ruled that both Chinas "can be, and are, members of the IAAF simultaneously."

He granted the Republic of China (Taiwan) Track and Field Association a declaration that it remained a Federation member and is entitled to the rights and privileges of membership.

Cheng Chi Reel, secretary general of the Taiwan Association, was not in court to hear the success of her action against Frederick Holder and Adrian Paulen.

Yarborough, Allison See Probations Lifted

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A three-month probation imposed on drivers Cale Yarborough and Donnie Allison after their cars tangled on the final lap of the Daytona 500 last month was lifted Monday.

"Lifting these probations, at this time, is in the best interest of stock car racing," the National Stock Car Racing Commission said in a statement.

The commission functions as an appeals body for the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing.

Yarborough had appealed the probation imposed Feb. 20 by NASCAR's competition Director Bill Gazaway.

The commission's announcement said three members met in Atlanta last Wednesday to consider Yarborough's appeal. Commission Chairman Bob Smith of Daytona Beach said the vote to end the probation was taken by telephone Monday. He said the commission has 11 members but any three can hear a case.

The appeal was heard by Smith, Ken Clapp of San Jose, Calif. and Ralph Ouderkirk of Palatine Bridge, N.Y.

In its formal announcement, the commission said it acted after "reviewing the testimony and taking into consideration the subsequent conduct of the competitors."

Smith declined to elaborate on the decision. "The release contains the entire statement of the commission," he said.

Yarborough and Allison were fighting for the lead of the Daytona 500 when their cars began bumping only a half-mile from the finish. Both spun out and Richard Petty shot past to win the race.

Allison and Yarborough hurled insults at each other, then blows. Then Allison's brother, Bobby stopped his car and joined the fight, photos of the event showed.

The three were fined $6,000 apiece for fighting. But $5,000 of each fine was later suspended for good behavior.

REJOINING TEAM — Bob Horner, 1978 National League Rookie of the Yer who is involved in a contract disupute with the Atlanta Braves, arrives at the Phoenix, Ariz., airport Monday morning for a flight to Florida to rejoin his team on a conditional basis. Only thing, now Horner says he is having arm trouble. (AP Laserphoto)

Even With Sore Arm, Horner To Be Ready

ATLANTA (AP) — Bob Horner, involved in a contract squabble with the Atlanta Braves, has a sore arm. But the National League Rookie of the Year says he will be ready for the Atlanta Braves' regular season opener Friday.

Horner, the blond slugger who blasted 23 home runs in only 89 games last season after the Braves signed him off the Arizona State campus as their No. 1 draft choice, arrived in camp last week after missing 26 days in his contract dispute.

The 21-year-old played for the first time Saturday and again on Sunday and Monday, going hitless in 11 at-bats. He was scheduled to start at third base Monday but played as a designated hitter instead, because of the sore shoulder.

"My arm is a little stiff. I guess I threw too hard, too soon," Horner said Monday in a telephone interview from West Palm Beach, Fla., prior to the Braves' game against Kansas City.

"I was supposed to play (third base) today (Monday) but the shoulder is still tender. I'd hate like heck to go out there and hurt the shoulder real bad," he said.

"I should be ready in a couple of days. I'm ready to go. My swing feels real good. I hit the ball well against Minnesota Sunday.

"Obviously I'm going to be a little behind everybody else but not that much," he said. "It's just a question of getting my timing down."

Manager Bobby Cox also feels Horner will be ready for the season opener Friday at Houston.

"It looks now like he's going to be ready. He's starting to see the ball real good. I'd venture to say he could be in there opening day." Cox said.

If Horner is activated to the roster, rookie Mike Macha, who has had an excellent spring filling in at third for Horner, likely will be sent to the minors, Cox said.

"I'd have to say we can't keep both of them. But if we have to send Macha out, I think we'd find a way to get him back pretty soon. Right now, there's just not room for both of them," he said.

Horner and the Braves have been involved in a contract dispute since November. He was seeking a long-term contract for a reported $250,000 a year while Atlanta has offered $100,000 for one year. The dispute will be settled in arbitration. No date has been set.

"The situation is out of my hands. If we lose, I'll be with the Braves," Horner said.

"If I win and become a free agent I could still be with the Braves," he added. "I wouldn't count out that possibility. But hopefully other teams will be in the bargaining."

Umps Continue Strike; Season Openers Loom

By The Associated Press

Fifty major league umpires remained on the sidelines Monday in their continuing contract dispute as the countdown began for the start of the regular season this week.

The 1979 season gets underway Wednesday with San Francisco at Cincinnati in the National League and California at Seattle in the American. Each league had only one regular umpire under contract with rookie Ted Hendry agreeing to terms with the AL and veteran Paul Pryor signing a two-year contract with the NL.

Hendry has been working spring training games in Arizona with the blessing of the Major League Umpires Association which advised him to fulfill terms of his contract since he signed before the current dispute began. Pryor went to work over the weekend, umpiring the New York Mets-Philadelphia Phillies game at Clearwater, Fla., on Sunday, and moved over to Lakeland, Fla., for Monday night's game between the Cincinnati Rds and Deroit Tigers.

Both leagues have said when the regular season starts they will replace the absent umpires with minor league and amateur officials. Last August, when the umpires staged a one-day strike, amateurs filled in.

Baseball obtained an injunction against that action, charging it was in violation of the current collective bargaining agreement with the umps which still has two years to run.

The umpires claim that their current dispute is individual in nature and not related to their association. That position was upheld in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia last week when a judge ruled he could not order the umpires back to work.

Each of the 50 umpires involved has refused to sign his contract, turning the matter over to Richie Phillips, who heads the union. Phillips, in turn, says he is negotiating for each umpire individually.

Pryor's decision to sign a contract came last week. He explained his action in a prepared statement:

"After much thought, discussion and consideration of the ramifications, my decision was made to sign my contract for two years," Pryor said. "Each person in this dispute has his own individual decision. My relationship with my colleagues is a good one both on and off the field. It is my hope that they will quickly make their own contract settlements and we can begin a new season. Let's play ball!"

Pryor, 51, has been a National League umpire for 18 years. He is No. 3 in seniority on the NL staff, behind only Ed Vargo and Lee Weyer. Hendry, 38, was added to the AL last season to replace the ailing Nestor Chylak and became permanent when Chylak retired.

Chylak and five other retired umpires, John Stevens and Hank Soar of the AL, and Al Barlick, Tom Gorman and Ed Sudol of the NL, will serve as supervisors during the period when substitute umpires are employed.

Also covering the games will be Dick Butler, supervisor of AL umpires, Don Marr, controller of the AL, Blake Cullen administrator and director of public relations for the NL and the two league presidents, Lee MacPhail of the AL and Chub Feeney of the NL.

Roster Cut Hits Hero Of Yankees' Title Drive

By The Associated Press

Jim Beattie, who pitched the New York Yankees to victories in an American League playoff contest and a World Series game last year, was one of several players cut from major league rosters as teams struggled to get down to the opening-day limit of 25.

The American and National leagues both play their openers Wednesday.

Beattie was optioned to the Yankees' Columbus farm team in the International League.

Other veterans who learned they wouldn't be around for the openers included reliever Ken Brett, waived by the California Angels, and pitcher Buzz Capra, who was trying for a comeback with the Atlanta Braves.

"I'm a little shocked. I didn't expect it," said Beattie, who was told by the Yankees that he might be recalled soon. "I don't know what their definition of 'fairly soon' is. I don't know what determines when I come back."

Beattie was 6-9 in the 1978 regular season but beat Kansas City in a playoff game and won the fifth game of the Yankees series against Los Angeles, pitching his first complete major league game.

He was muscled out of the pitching corps this spring by the Yankees' signing of veteran free agents Tommy John and Luis Tiant and the acquisition of Paul Mirabella from Texas.

Yankees president Al Rosen said it was better for Beattie to be pitching every fifth day with Columbus rather than sitting with the Yankees.

The Yanks also sent rookie pitcher Ron Davis and outfielder Tommy Cruz to Columbus, trimming the roster to 25.

Brett, a major leaguer for 11 years, was beaten out by rookie Mark Clear. Brett, who has a year left on his contract with the Angels, was 3-5 last season with a 4.95 earned-run average.

Capra, a 31-year-old right-hander, was cut as he tried to regain his job after surgery that sidelined him for most of last season. The Braves also sent left-hander Jamie Easterly and outfielder Eddie Miller to Richmond of the International League, bringing the roster to 26.

Boston optioned pitchers Allen Ripley and John Tudor and outielder Gay Hancock to Pawtucket of the IL, redcing the ed Sox roster to 26.

Curtis Charles, the young infielder offered a tryout by the San Francisco Giants after his release from San Quentin prison, didn't make it. Charles went to the Giants camp in February, then was sent to minor league camp. The National League team said Monday he did not have major league potential.

The Cincinnati Reds sent .333 hitter Harry Spilman and catcher Don Werner to their Indianapolis farm club. It was the third option for Werner, which means he can't be recalled by the Reds this season.

The Seattle Mariners finished their roster work by sending first baseman Charlie Beamon to Spokane of the Pacific League and adding outfielder Joe Simpson.

Seattle bought Simpson from the Dodgers last week. Bobby Valentine, recently dropped by the New York Mets, also will work out with Seattle without a contract.

The Cleveland Indians placed pitcher David Clyde on the 21-day disabled list because of an ulcer.

Clyde, the former Texas high school pitching sensation, is to return to action April 22, when the Indians play a home game against the Chicago White Sox. That is also Clyde's 24th birthday.

Clyde went into the major league straight out of high school in Houston in 1973. But after two season records of 4-8 and 3-9, he was sent to the Pacific Coast League for the 1976 and 1977 seasons.

Clyde was traded to the Indians from Texas last February. He ended the season with an 8-11 record and an ERA of 4.29.

He also led the American League pitchers last year in allowing the fewest home runs per innings pitched, throwing only four home run balls in 153 innings.

Chisox Pummel Ranger Pitchers

By The Associated Press

Catcher Bill Nahorodny drove in five runs with a pair of homers Monday to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 12-10 exhibition baseball victory over the Texas Rangers at Pompano Beach, Fla.

The White Sox belted Ranger pitchers George "Doc" Medich and Jim Umbarger for four home runs overall. Wayne Nordhagen hit a three-run shot of Medich and Lamar Johnson struck a solo against Umbarger.

Third baseman Kevin Bell collected four of Chicago's 16 hits with three singles and a double.

Al Oliver drove in five Ranger runs with a three-run a homer and a single. Among the features of a 14-hit Texas barrage against four White Sox pitchers was a single, double and triple by designated hitter Oscar Gamble.

The win raised the White Sox's exhibition record to 13-12. Chicago will play Atlanta today in Sarasota, Fla.

The loss dropped Texas to 14-10 in exhibition. The Rangers complete exhibition play today in Miami against Baltimore. The Rangers will open the American League season Thursday in Detroit.

In another game, Dave Parker continued his torrid spring hitting with two home runs and a game-winning single, carrying the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-6 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Parker, baseball's highest paid player at $900,000 a year, belted his eighth and ninth homers of the spring against Minnesota starter Geoff Zahn in the first and seventh innings.

Then the big Pirate outfielder broke a 6-6 tie in the ninth when he tagged reliever Mike Marshall with his RBI base hit.

The game was tied three times, reaching 6-6 in the eighth on an RBI single by Pittsburgh's Manny Sanguillen.

The loss by the Minnesota "A" squad was the second by a Twins' team Monday. The Minnesota "B" team was beaten 2-0 by the Houston Astros as James Rodney Richard and Gary Williams combined on a four-hitter.

Elsewhere, Phil Niekro allowed three hits in seven innings in his final tuneup for the season, helping the Atlanta Braves defeat the Kansas City Royals 2-1.

George Hendrick's bases-loaded single climaxed a two-run rally in the ninth inning as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Montreal Expos 2-1. Jerry Narron hit a one-out homer in the bottom of the ninth inning, leading the New York Yankees to a 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Butch Hobson drove in the tie-breaking run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning, lifting the Boston Red Sox to a 7-6 decision over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Home runs by Ed Kranepool, Ron Hodges and Elliott Maddox paced a 17-hit attack as the New York Mets routed the Toronto Blue Jays 11-4. Jerry Martin's RBI single in the ninth inning gave the Chicago Cubs a 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Toby Harrah's ninth-inning sacrifice fly, his third RBI of the game, gave the Cleveland Indians an 8-7 triumph over the Oakland A's.

The Detroit Tigers got a home run from Steve Kemp and some tight pitching Monday night to earn a 5-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Kemp's second home run of the spring with two mates aboard climaxed a four-run eighth inning to give the Tigers their 14th victory against 10 losses in Florida.

The Reds tallied in the first on a double by Ken Griffey and Dave Concepcion's single. Detroit tied the score in the sixth when Alan Trammell doubled and scored on a two-our error by Joe Morgan.

Ron LeFlore's first hit in 17 trips to the plate ignited the winning rally.

Two walks loaded the bases and with Kemp at bat, LeFlore scored on a wild pitch. The home run followed, giving the victory to Aurelio Lopez for two innings of relief work.

Angelo Golfers Lead LoneStar Conference

WIMBERLEY (AP) — Len Feemster's two-over-par 74 led Angelo State to the first-round lead in the Lone Star Conference golf tournament Monday, played despite cold, rainy weather.

Angelo State posted a team score of 307. Stephen F. Austin was second with 311. Other team scores included Sam Houston 313, East Texas State 316, host Southwest Texas State 319, Texas A&I 323, Howard Payne 336, and Abilene Christian 337.

Carl Baker of Stephen F. Austin tied Feemster for the first-day medalist honors.

The final 18 holes of the 36-hole tournament is set for today. Four 36-hole tournaments will be played to decide the conference championship.

Gillit Entry Cops First Pigeon Race

Pigeon racing is back in season and the Lubbock Racing Pigeon Club opened the season with a race Sunday.

Max Gillit's entry won the first bird race in the time of 1,440.63 yards per second. The club raced its birds from Snyder, and the pigeons averaged 48 miles per hour.

Birds owned by Bill Dodson finished second and Tom Noble was third and fourth. The club flew 187 birds from 13 lofts.

Next week's race will be from Brownwood.

Comer Named As Starter

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Jon Matlack's left arm and Ferguson Jenkins' left leg have made Steve Comer the opening-day pitcher for the Texas Rangers Thursday in Detroit.

Originally, Manager Pat Corrales had planned to let Jenkins have that job, an honor usually reserved for the ace on a team pitching staff, but Jenkins is limping badly from a strained Achilles tendon, suffered a week ago.

Corrales then turned to left-hander Matlack for the opening-day assignment, but Sunday Matlack felt a strange "crinkle" in his left arm, and the team doctor has now ordered him not to throw for at least four days.

So, by elimination, second-year man Comer has become the current, and perhaps temporary, No. 1 man on the Rangers staff.

"I feel good about it," Comer said. "I feel honored Pat (Corrales) has the confidence in me. I'm happy if he thinks I should be out there."

Comer watched last year's opener from the bullpen, and did not begin regular pitching duty until several weeks into the regular season.

Comer finished 1978 with an 11-5 record, one save and a 2.30 ERA. "I have always had confidence," Comer said. "I've never had any question about getting here," referring to his starting role.

Meanwhile, if Corrales is worried about losing his top two pitchers to injury before the regular season even begins, it doesn't show. "I'll wait a few days," he said. "I won't actually know what I'm doing until we see how the two come around."

Jackson Undergoes Medical Examination

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Slugger Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees underwent diagnostic tests for stomach problems Monday, the team said.

Jackson, who was hospitalized Sunday night, has been complaining of feeling rundown and tired. His problem was diagnosed as a stomach viral syndrome.

The club said Jackson would be released from Imperial Point Hospital today and would accompany the team north.

Davis Divorce Trial To Resume Today

FORT WORTH (AP) — The celebrated Cullen Davis divorce trial, in its fifth year of testimony, moves back into the courtroom today with its new judge hoping to conclude the case in a month.

The only thing really at stake is money — estimated at $100 million or more — belonging to Davis, heir to an industrial fortune. Both sides agreed earlier to a no-fault divorce. Davis' lawyers contend the personal property is only worth about $740,000, the rest being his corporate wealth.

The Davis' have drawn nationwide publicity the past three years because Davis, 45, has withstood two lengthy criminal trials — one for capital murder and one for solicitation of capital murder.

State District Judge Clyde Ashworth of Fort Worth, the third judge to hear the case in its five-year history, calls the trial a no-win situation. But he remains confident he can bring the often-postponed feud to a swift conclusion.

"I'm hoping to get this whole thing wound up four weeks from Monday. I may be optimistic," said Ashworth, who was appointed last week to replace retired State District Judge John Barron of Bryan.

Barron declared a mistrial and quit in a huff after reporters from a Fort Worth newspaper questioned him about private meetings with Davis.

"They were going to run a big lurid story that would make me look like a left-handed babboon and I just couldn't stand it any more," said Barron.

"I did nothing in the world another judge would not have done. I do it in practically every case. It is just my way of doing business. I turn every peg I can in an attempt to settle the case," said Barron, explaining he met separately in his hotel room with both Mrs. Davis and Davis in an attempt to reach an out-of-court settlement.

Assistant Tarrant County District Attorney Jack Strickland prompted that judicial tirade when he subpoenaed all the records of the divorce case for a special grand jury session.

Strickland, who was the lead prosecutor in Davis' murder solicitation trial in Houston, said he subpoenaed the documents during the trial because he perceived a "pattern" of preferential treatment developing between Davis and the presiding judge.

Barron was appointed to the case when State District Judge Joe Eidson disqualified himself.

Eidson was the target of alleged murder-for-hire plot and Davis was its purported architect. Davis' Houston trial ended in a hung jury in January.

Prosecutor Strickland is readying the case for retrial.

Davis, who is free on bond, was accused of being "the man in black" who shot two persons to death and wounded two others at the $6 million Davis mansion in August 1976.

An Amarillo jury acquitted Davis in August 1977 of the slaying of his stepdaughter, 12-year-old Andrea Wilborn.

Charges are still pending in the death of Mrs. Davis' live-in lover Stan Farr and in the wounding of Mrs. Davis and Gus Gavrel Jr., a chance visitor to the mansion.

Texas Rulings Upheld By U.S. Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting on a case that originated in Texas, the Supreme Court Monday ruled unanimously that federal government claims do not automatically take precedence over private-sector claims in recovering bad loans.

However, the Court said Congress is free to give government agencies such priority, if it chooses.

The Justices were upholding a lower-court ruling involving defaulted loans taken out by OK Super Markets, Inc., of Dallas in 1969.

OK had borrowed $300,000, with the Small Business Administration guaranteeing 90 percent of the loan, and used some of that money to pay off a portion of a debt it owed to Kimbell Foods, Inc., a major supermarket chain and food supplier in Texas.

The rest of OK's debt to Kimbell remained outstanding, though, and Kimbell sued in 1971, receiving a judgment of $24,000.

Soon afterward, OK sold its three Dallas stores for $86,000. The SBA and Kimbell filed competing claims for that amount, and U.S. District Judge William M. Steger ruled that the SBA claim had to take precedence.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed that ruling, and the Supreme Court upheld that reversal Monday.

Writing for the court, Justice Thurgood Marsshall said, "Because the ultimate consequences of altering settled commercial practices are so difficult to foresee, we hesitate to create new uncertainties in the absence of careful legislative deliberation."

Marshall wrote that state laws must decide whether federal claims take precedence, or a "first come, first served" tadition hould prevail.

In another Texas case, the Supreme Court refused to review a Texas greyhound racer's claim for antitrust damages against a Florida racetrack.

George J. Fulton, a greyhound breeder near Corpus Christi in Nueces County, Texas, claimed Flagler Kennel Club in Miami exercised monopolistic powers in excluding Fulton's dogs from racing there.

In 1972, Fulton testified before the Florida Board of Business Regulation during a hearing on awarding of race days for 4 dog tracks in the Miami area.

Fulton testified there was no appreciable difference in the facilities offered by Flagler and one of the other tracks.

Fulton said Flagler management was so outraged at his testimony that the track refused to renew his race license.

No greyhound racer had ever testified at such a hearing before, and Fulton claimed Flagler management was so outraged at his testimony they refused to renew his racing license.

A federal trial judge and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected Fulton's allegations, and the Supreme Court affirmed that rejection Monday.

CONVICTION UPHELD

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court left intact Monday the attempted tax evasion conviction of a Mississippi lawyer who claims he did not file tax returns for the years 1970 through 1974 because he feared FBI reprisals. The justices, without comment, refused to hear arguments by James Travis Buckley of Bay Springs, Miss., whose appeal contended he feared entrapment by the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service. He said he was subjected to constant FBI harassment since defending several alleged Ku Klux Klan members in a 1960s trial.
