Painting party

Students from Lee and Midland high schools slapped on a statement Sunday as they painted over the grafitti which adorned The Wall, a student hangout. The Wall is a 150-foot stretch at the north end of Whitney Drive.

Students paint over Wall's grafitti

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Tired of being thought of as drug-abusing teenagers, a group of about 30 to 40 students from both Midland high schools made a statement Sunday.

It wasn't something written out in black and white — instead, the effect was larger — and more colorful.

The Wall, long used as a hangout for beer busts by a predominantly Lee High School group, was repainted.

Located at the north end of Whitney Drive, The Wall stretches about 150 feet behind an undeveloped residential area. The approximately seven-foot high structure has been adorned with drug-related slogans, album cover logos and a variety of grafitti over the years.

"I live here and I don't like having to look at it all of the time," said Brenda Adams, instigator of the paint party, as she gazed at "I'm a Lez" scrawled in red.

According to Ms. Adams, her family moved across from The Wall in September. Tired of the obscene writings, drug and alcohol busts and the recent publicity from drug usage surveys and series, she approached friends at a Young Life meeting Wednesday.

With only four days to organize, she was pleased with the turnout.

"We want people to know that teenagers could do something good instead of something bad," she said.

She approached an official with Magnatex Industries, developers of the area, who enthusiastically offered to supply the paint.

Students used their own designs for the freshly created artwork. A bright yellow Pac-Man, a baseball, names of colleges, and Classes of '84s slowly crept across the faded symbols.

Spending a sunny Sunday covered with paint made these students a little more defensive about desecration of their personal statements. However, a group said laughing, the section proclaiming MHS's football victory over Lee High last fall probably will see some additional painting in the future.

Still, the students hope their artwork will deter printed profanity and, perhaps, the flow of future drug and alcohol busts.

"A lot of people come out here just to paint on The Wall," Ms. Adams said.

That the paint party will prevent gatherings of both high schools at either of the student meeting places is doubtful, some of the group said.

"A lot of people don't go out there to drink," said Chelle Sanders, a MHS junior. "A lot just go out there to socialize."

The high school gatherings at The Wall and MHS's out-of-town hangout at the end of A Street probably will continue — it's part of student life.

But at least at The Wall, the meetings will be held under the colorful contributions of some students who said they care about the community.

U.S. needs global competition, says forum of leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's high standard of living will be undermined unless U.S. industry improves its ability to compete in the global marketplace, according to a group of 78 business and academic leaders.

"Our society must develop a consensus that industrial competitiveness on a global scale is crucial to our social and economic well-being," the Business-Higher Education Forum concluded in a report issued Sunday.

The leaders urged President Reagan to lead a drive to increase exports by revitalizing the nation's industrial capacity. The report recommended a variety of ways to reverse economic stagnation, including more tax incentives, less government red tape and an effort to mobilize public opinion.

"The central objective of domestic policy for the remainder of the decade must be to improve the ability of American industry and American workers to compete on an international scale," concluded the group's report, "America's Competitive Challenge: The Need For a National Response."

"Unless we rebuild the American economy and strengthen our educational system, it will be increasingly difficult — if not impossible — to maintain a just society, a high standard of living for all Americans and a strong nwtional defense," the leaders said in the report, which was commissioned by the president's science advisor, Dr. George Keyworth.

The panel includes top executives from such corporations as AT&T, General Electric, and the Ford Motor Co. as well as the presidents of Harvard, Notre Dame, Carnegie-Mellon and other major universities. The group plans to discuss its recommendations with the president during a May 26 meeting.

While proposing ways to make U.S. industry more competitive overseas, the report warned against erecting trade barriers to keep out foreign goods. "Our mandate must not be to punish or retard the competitive gains made by other nations but to do a better job of competing ourselves," the report said.

The nation's competitiveness in the world market, however, is becoming increasingly important because international trade now accounts for more than 25 percent of the gross national product, compared to less than 10 percent in 1960. The nation's foreign trade deficit last year was $42.7 billion, the report said.

The report noted that the U.S. economy in the last 12 years "has suffered three major recessions, each worse than the last" and that more Americans — 11.3 million — are "out of work than at any time since the Great Depression."

"Our aim is really to alert the whole nation that this is not just a series of isolated problems," said Bob Anderson, chairman of Rockwell International Corp. and co-chairman of the forum.

The report also observed that:

—While the U.S. economy stagnated, the Japanese and Europeans captured major shares of the world markets for autos, steel, machine tools and other manufactured goods. Since 1960, the U.S. balance of trade in these older industries has plummeted from breaking even to a deficit of $35 billion a year.

Son of Solidarity supporter beaten

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Uniformed police detained and fatally beat the son of a Solidarity supporter who works in a Roman Catholic relief center where six church workers were beaten earlier this month, family friends said today.

Grzegorz Przemek, the 19-year-old son of relief worker and author Barbara Sadowska, was picked up in Warsaw's old town Thursday afternoon, taken to a police station, severely beaten and driven to a psychiatric clinic, the friends said. Mrs. Sadowska took her son home from the clinic to the Solec Hospital, where he died Saturday, they said.

Polish and Western observers said the beating appeared to be part of an escalation of police violence against Solidarity supporters designed, in part, to terrorize union activists, and in part to worsen Church-state relations in the weeks leading up to the June 16-23 pilgrimage by Pope John Paul II.

Government and Communist party sources, speaking privately, said the beatings were apparently carried out by a hard-line faction within the government which opposes Polish Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's decision to allow the pope to visit the predominately Roman Catholic nation.

The duty officer at Warsaw police headquaters confirmed that a youth picked up Thursday had died, but said he understood the young man had been drunk.

Deputy government spokesman Andrzej Konopacki said he had no knowledge of the affair, adding, "It's not a government matter."

Doctors at the Solec Hospital confirmed the young men had died there but declined to answer any further questions, referring a reporter to the prosecutor's office.

The family friends said the young man told his mother he had been beaten by police, who, talking among themselves, had said they were under instructions to hit him in the abdomen in such a way as to leave no external mark.

Doctors there told Mrs. Sadowska that damage to the liver, spleen, and lower intestine was so severe that his life could not have been saved even if he had received immediate treatment, family frineds said.

The incident comes less than two weeks after a gang of men armed with clubs, and carrying at least one police style two-way portable radio, beat six workers at the relief center at St. Martin's Church and abducted four of them. One of those abducted remains in serious condition, sources say.

The church has demanded an official investigation of the May 3 incident, which took place while the area around the church was under heavy police guard during a Mass in nearby St. John's cathederal.

Police used lead-filled rubber batons and water cannon to disperse a crowd of worshippers who marched peacefully through downtown Warsaw after the Mass.

On May 1, uniformed police officers entered St. Martin's to check the identity papers of young men guarding the church doors during a demonstration outside.

Hospital morgue mixes up bodies of dead men

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A mixup at a hospital morgue sent a grieving family "into pieces" and erased another man's wish to help medical science after a funeral home mistakenly embalmed his body, officials said.

The error was discovered Saturday by one of Denver Duff's sons who went to the Long & Fisher mortuary in Charleston to "see if everything was all right," said Henry Duff, a nephew.

"He went in and looked at the body, then went to see his mother and said, 'He's got dad's suit, dad's glasses and dad's casket, but it's just not dad,' " Duff said Sunday.

The Duff family learned that their relative's body was sent to a Lewisburg research laboratory, while the corpse of a man who wanted to donate his body was sent to Long & Fisher's.

Richard Long, one of the funeral home's owners, declined comment.

Duff's funeral, set for Sunday, was rescheduled for today and the other body — the name was not released — was returned to the hospital for funeral arrangements.

But for about six hours Saturday, Duff's body could not be found.

"They all just went to pieces. His daughter went into hysterics. They went up to the hospital, and they didn't know where he was at. They didn't know whether he was cut up or what," the nephew said.

"They couldn't give his wife any satisfaction, so she just started tearing the place up."

Duff, 66, had entered Charleston Area Medical Center last week for a "minor" prostate operation, but doctors later found that he had had an aneurysm, a sac caused by a weakening in the wall of an artery, his nephew said. He died Friday.

His family arranged for his funeral and the body meanwhile was stored in the hospital morgue, where a Long & Fisher employee was sent Friday night, Duff said.

"Apparently when the funeral home came to pick up the body, it picked up the wrong one," said hospital spokesman John Brown. "This is a very rare occurrence. We have no way of knowing what happened. It's never happened here before."

At about 6:30 p.m. Saturday, or six hours after the mixup was discovered, the family was told that Duff's body had been found at the Lewisburg lab and that it would be sent back to Charleston by early Saturday, the nephew said.

"But by then, time had lapsed and we didn't know where he was at," Duff said. "To us it's pretty much a tragedy. His daughter thought his body might have been cut up. We just didn't know what happened.

"Death is death. I know that. I just don't understand how they can make a mistake like that."

Duff said he also felt badly for the other man. His wish to help others by donating his body to science can't be fulfilled, according to the funeral home.

"They can't use his body. It's been embalmed," Duff said.

The National Weather Service forecasts snow and rain for the Southwest on Tuesday. Rain is also forecast for the New England coastal area.

Warm conditions to return to area

After unusually cool weather during portions of the weekend, the National Weather Service is calling for warm and windy conditions to return to Midland tonight and Tuesday.

According to the NWS forecast, tonight should be fair and mild with the low in the low-60s and southerly winds at 10-20 mph. Tuesday is expected to arrive sunny and warm with the high reaching the mid-80s and winds gusting from the south-southwest at 15-25 mph.

Sunday's high of 80 fell easily shy of the record 101 set in 1937. The overnight low of 52 came within 10 degrees of the record low 42 for this date set in 1945.

From 6 a.m. Sunday to 6 a.m. today, Midland received a trace of precipitation, although not enough to alter the yearly total, which stands at 1.67 inches.

Sunset tonight is at 8:39 p.m.; sunrise Tuesday comes at 6:50 a.m.

Ship heads for plenty of good work

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — A 70-year-old vessel has embarked on a private aid mission to the Caribbean, its hold packed with farm equipment, medical supplies and soybeans for poverty-stricken island nations.

The Fri, long associated with environmental and world peace movements, left St. Augustine on Sunday for some of the poorest countries in the Western Hemisphere.

The 105-foot vessel, built in 1912, carried solar water heaters, tools and equipment for island schools, vitamins and members of PLENTY, a volunteer group on its own Caribbean initiative.

"We're just trying to do something real and sane in a world that's not too sane sometimes," said Sean McCarthy, a seven-year resident of the Farm, a Tennessee commune where PLENTY was started.

McCarthy and 15 others, including a child, are making the one-month voyage to the islands, where they say most of the population is undernourished or starving.

They plan to visit St. Vincent, St. Lucia, Dominica, Antigua and Haiti, where PLENTY has been involved with Mother Theresa's order, the Missionaries of Charity.

Food, farming tools and grinders used to convert soybeans to milk and cheese are among supplies included in the project, conceived before President Reagan announced his Caribbean Basin Initiative in February 1982.

"Three weeks before Reagan came out with his Caribbean Initiative, we came up with the idea," said McCarthy, who once ran for the Republican nomination for Congress in San Francisco with a platform of turning the Army into the Peace Corps.

"In each port we'll stop and have an alternative energy demonstration. Part of our idea is that we're not only delivering this stuff but also serving as demonstrators," said David Purviance, PLENTY's international director, who spent two years in Bangladesh in a similar project.

The islands to be visited are largely agricultural, but with a one-crop economy — bananas. The volunteers hope to introduce cultivation of soybeans.

Purviance, who is not making the voyage but plans to fly down later, said that on Dominica the main protein supply is "chicken necks and backs imported from the United States."

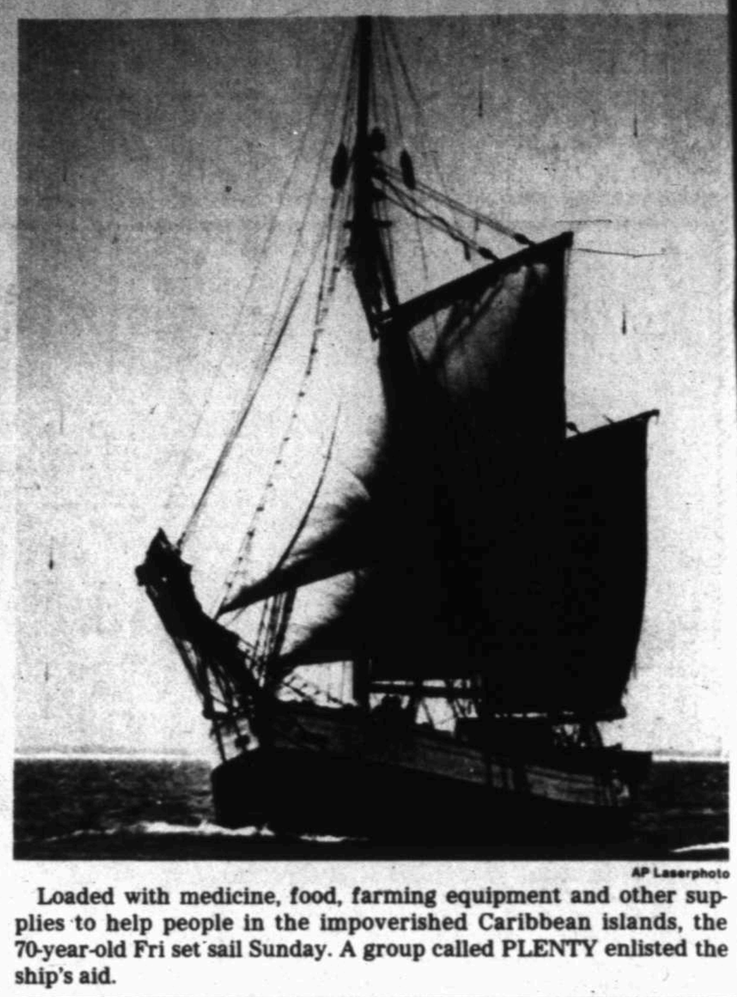

Christine Kilgour, who lives on PLENTY's Ontario, Canada, farm, will show islanders how to soak and grind soybeans into a white milk, and curd it into cheese.

"It's a very versatile thing. It's very savory," Ms. Kilgour said.

Other equipment include sporting goods, auto-mechanic and woodworking tools for schools on St. Lucia, sailcloth and a large fishing net for a Carib Indian fishing cooperative on Dominica, and vitamins, diapers and children's toys for the Missionaries of Charity on Haiti.

PLENTY has received recognition in the past for projects including volunteer work in Guatemala and an ambulance service in the South Bronx in New York City.

The Fri, a 105-foot vessel built in 1912, has sailed in campaigns on behalf of the environment and world peace. PLENTY enlisted its help through associations with the Greenpeace environmental group.

Baalbek worries war will come

By ROBERT H. REID

BAALBEK, Lebanon (ap) — Bright yellow tractors scoop up the red soil of the Bekaa, making earthworks to protect Soviet-built tanks. Throughout the valley, which runs through heart of Lebanon, Syrian soldiers are digging new positions.

"Do you think war will come to Baalbek?" asks a young man in this Syrian-Palestinian stronghold. "If it does, we will be hurt. There are too many armies."

On a recent day's drive from Baalbek south, past the towns of Rayak and Terbol to the Beirut-Damascus highway, Syrian men and equipment could be seen constructing new installations. The work is underway as the Lebanese government calls on Syria to remove its estimated 40,000 soldiers from Lebanon and thus clear the way for Israel to withdraw its troops as well.

For now, Israeli and Syrian troops confront each other, and the Israelis are reluctant to pull back until the Syrians do likewise. Shored-up Syrian positions could come in handy in case the Israelis decided to attack from their positions to the south and west in an attempt to drive the Syrians from Lebanon.

Farmers work the Bekaa also, tending their grain fields and orchards, which stretch across the valley toward snow-capped mountains. Residents say the Syrian army has been telling farmers to shut off their irrigation equipment, and the implication is that tanks maneuver better on dry ground.

In Baalbek, residents say the Syrians and Palestinians have been reinforcing their garrisons during the past two weeks. U.S. officials have reported that about 1,500 Palestinians as well as some Syrian troops have entered Lebanon from Syria during the past 10 days.

Some of the Palestinians are believed to be from PLO units evacuated to Syria from Beirut last summer following the Israeli siege of the city.

"Every day they are building new positions," one resident said. "We are seeing new faces here all the time."

In the hills outside of town is a unit of Iranian Revolutionary Guards. Israeli frontline positions are less than 30 miles to the south.

Residents had heard rumors of dissension among Palestine Liberation Organization units in the area but had no first hand information on any mutiny as alleged by PLO sources in Damascus who oppose PLO chairman Yasser Arafat.

PLO commanders have been refusing to see Western reporters who come to the Bekaa to check out the reports.

Baalbek, a city of 100,000, once known for its magnificent Roman ruins and a flourishing hashish trade, has become a center for many of the combatants in the Lebanese drama.

Around the city and on its streets, Syrian army regulars man sandbagged checkpoints, draped with pictures of President Hafez Assad. PLO guerrillas from various factions drive around town in new Japanese trucks, many bearing Syrian license plates.

Yet civilian trucks and cars can pass down main roads unimpeded except for periodic checkpoints. Troops often wave motorists by without checking identity papers. Most of the time, the soldiers are Syrian. Lebanese guards are rarely seen.

The Bekaa is the stronghold for Syrian forces that have been in Lebanon since they were dispatched under an Arab League mandate to police an armistace to the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war. Israeli troops have been squared off against them since last summer's invasion to drive Palestinian guerrillas from southern Lebanon and Beirut.

Congressmen campaign to save public utilities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The television interview was going smoothly until Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa., used the word "infrastructure." That's when the reporter turned to the cameraman and said, "You can turn it off."

Infrastructure. A catch-all word that ignites passion in urban planners and ennui in everyone else.

"It's the sort of issue where you see their eyes glaze over in three minutes," says Rep. Bill Clinger, R-Pa. He pauses. "Three seconds."

Infrastructure. A 14-letter word for the nation's underpinning: roads, bridges, water and sewage systems, ports, locks and dams, mass transit, airports, Veterans Administration hospitals and other public buildings.

"The word smacks of bureaucratese and double-think. It's just a bad word," sighs Clinger.

Clinger and Edgar are leading a crusade to rescue the country's public facilities from rust and ruin. But their bandwagon is moving about as fast as an 18-wheeler crawling up a potholed mountain highway.

Stories of waste and deterioration, impassioned pleas before academic, civic and professional groups — all have failed to arouse much enthusiasm for a 10-year public investment that would cost anywhere from $500 billion to $3 trillion.

The two Pennsylvania congressmen think they know why.

"A lot of us take our surroundings for granted. We live in a generation that has never seen life without the ability to flush a toilet," explains Edgar.

"Most of it's so invisible," says Clinger. "It never intrudes on people's consciousness. Unless it's backing up in their bathrooms or filling up their cellars, they don't worry about it."

AP Laserphoto

A construction worker on a concrete form on the Thompson Run Bridge in Duquesne, Pa. U.S. Steel Corp. pays more than $1 million a year to detour its trucks around the closed bridge.

Horror stories and hype are their primary weapons in a war on yawns. Some examples gleaned from Edgar, Clinger and various federal studies:

—New York City has two water tunnels, 35 and 50 years old. If one malfunctioned, one-third of Manhattan would be without water for three to five years. Neither has been checked for maintenance because neither can be closed.

—A 30-foot hunk of a bridge on the Washington, D.C. beltway dropped off and 15 cars fell into the hole onto metal spikes.

—U.S. Steel Corp. says it pays $1 million a year to detour trucks 18 miles around a major bridge near Pittsburgh that was closed two years ago for lack of repair.

—More than 40 percent of the 41,000-mile interstate highway system needs repair.

Edgar even tries what he considers a stirring analogy to the window of vulnerability used to describe U.S. defense deficiencies and justify higher weapons spending.

"We become more and more vulnerable to economic decline if we allow the infrastructure to deteriorate," he argues.

"It is a boring subject," he adds defiantly. "But let's say we ignore it. What kind of a society will we have in the year 2000? Do we begin to shut down whole communities because we can't supply them with water? Do we close down whole sections of cities because a bridge is out?"

After a two-year fight, Clinger and Edgar managed earlier this month to win Reagan administration backing for a limited capital budget bill. The measure requires an annual list of the nation's major public assets, their conditions and their repair needs over a five-year period.

U.S. industry needs global marketplace, leaders say

—Competitors are winning major market shares "in the rapidly growing, high-technology and service industries of the future," including computers, aerospace, insurance and financing. In the past decade, "America's share of world exports in these industries has declined from 25 percent to 20 percent."

—American universities are saddled with obsolete labs and equipment and have trouble filling vacancies on their engineering, computer and electronics faculties.

—Between 3.5 million and 4 million jobless workers are "faced with the permanent loss of their old jobs because of shifts in the economy," the report said.

The forum proposed a national displaced workers program to provide education or training benefits along the lines of the G.I. Bill. A trust fund supported by workers, employers and the federal government could also provide money for job retraining, the report said.

The report also urged more cuts in the capital gains tax on long-term investments, the removal of anti-trust constraints on cooperative research, and revisions in the Freedom of Information Act to prevent information submitted by companies to federal agencies from being obtained by foreign competitors.

The Clean Water and Air Acts should be amended "to ensure that they are compatible with the needs of our economy to remain competitive."

Woman reports burglary of items valued at $21,000

Midland police are investigating burglaries reported this weekend, including pit barbecue, heirlooms and stereo equipment.

Kevin Leede, 707 N. Pecos, reported Sunday that a 600-pound pit barbecue was missing from his residence. According to reports, the barbecue was taken sometime over the weekend and is valued at $4,000.

Shirly Hood, 905 Country Club, told police Sunday her home was broken into sometime between Thursday and Sunday. According to police reports, Ms. Hood's neighbors discovered letters and papers scattered in the alley. Ms. Hood reported $21,000 worth of items taken from her home upon returning from a trip. Those items include a heirloom silver flatware valued at $6,000; rifles and pistols, $7,000; a pearl necklace, $1,000; a color TV, $300; binoculars, $100; and $300 in cash.

In other reported burglaries, George L. Wright, 3100 N. Fairgrounds, told police Sunday stereo equipment valued at $1,120 and a necklace valued at $300 were taken from his residence.

Also Sunday, Melanie Brown reported about 10 a.m. that $415 worth of household furniture was taken from 704 S. Atlanta. About 11:30 a.m., Ledale Wiggins, 1608 Washington, told police a $250 air-conditioner was taken from his residence.

Later Sunday afternoon, police were called on two auto burglaries. About 2:31 p.m., Russell Owens, 802 Harvard, reported stereo equipment valued at $546 taken from his car. At 2:35 p.m., Terry Lloyd, 2100 W. Wadley, told police that $505 worth of stereo equipment was taken from his car.

Police arrest merchant who provided fake Hitler diaries

FRANKFURT, West Germay (AP) — Police have jailed the Nazi-relics merchant who provided the fake Hitler diaries and have seized some possessions of the reporter who bought the journals for Stern magazine.

Hamburg state prosecutor office spokesman Peter Beck said Sunday that Stuttgart shopkeeper Konrad Jujau, 44, was in "investigative custody" and police were interrogating him in connection with the diaries hoax. No charges were filed, however.

Beck also disclosed that Stern reporter Gerd Heidemann's Hamburg home, office and yacht were searched over the weekend and some items confiscated, although he would not specify what.

Kujau, who sold the so-called secret diaries of Adolf Hitler to Heidemann, surrendered Saturday and was picked up at the Austrian border. He had dropped out of sight two weeks earlier, after federal archives experts exposed the diaries as "obvious fakes."

Under West German law, he can be held without bail in investigative custody for up to three months without charges. Beck was unable to say how long Kujau would be held or when he would appear before a judge.

Beck said no one else has been taken into custody in the case and that no other warrants are outstanding.

Stern, a Hamburg-based weekly, gave Heidemann $3.7 million to buy the purported diaries from Kujau and began to publish excerpts, calling them a major journalistic scoop that would reinterpret history.

After the government declared the journals forgeries, two top Stern editors resigned and the magazine fired Heidemann, its top investigative reporter.

Stern also filed criminal fraud charges against him, promised its readers an explanation for the scandal and pledged to repay publications who bought syndication rights.

In a four-page statement Kujau released through his lawyer Saturday, he denied allegations he forged the diaries, claiming he could not read or write the old German script used to pen the 62 volumes.

Beck said Kujau had not given authorities a formal statement. He was unable to explain the mysterious "Mr. Mirdorf" whom Kujau claims gave him the diaries in East Germany.

"We are investigating," he said, "but at this point we don't even know if this Mr. Mirdorf even exists."

Heidemann, 51, said Kujau was the middleman in the diaries deal. Both have insisted they believed the documents were authentic.

Kujau's apartment and Stuttgart shop were searched Friday and reporters saw investigators remove bags of books, pictures and papers. Beck said it could take investigators weeks to sift evidence and conduct tests.

Fraser urges delegates to back 'U.S.-made' rule, unionize plants

DALLAS (AP) — In his final keynote address to the United Auto Workers, union president Douglas A. Fraser urged delegates to support legislation requiring cars sold in America to be built fro: U.S.-made parts.

With a quavering voice and tears in his eyes, Fraser said goodbye to the workers he led for the past six years as he addressed more than 5,000 delegates Sunday at the opening of the UAW's 27th constitutional convention.

The 66-year-old immigrant from Scotland, a central force in the auto worker movement for the past 30 years, will step down Thursday along with six other top union officials because of a rule prohibiting the re-election of officers after they reach age 65.

But he exhorted UAW members to support the "U.S.-made" rule and urged them to spare no effort in unionizing labor forces at several new Japanese auto plants being built in the United States.

The "U.S.-made" legislation would require companies selling 100,000 cars a year to build autos having 10 percent of their components made in the United States. That percentage gradually would escalate, with companies selling 900,000 cars a year required to use 90 percent American-made parts in each vehicle.

The legislation would mean hundreds of thousands of jobs to U.S. autoworkers, as well as those in related industries, Fraser said, and he dismissed claims that it would interfere with free trade.

"Free trade is a myth," he said. "To have free trade, you have to have fair trade."

Fraser also pledged that the UAW would "send in as many organizers for as long as they're needed" when Japanese automakers begin operations at their U.S plants.

Honda and Nissan are opening American plants, and Toyota has entered into a joint ventu:e with General Motors to begin manufacturing at a GM plant in Fremont, Calif.

Toyota is resisting efforts to rehire the 6,000 GM workers laid off when the plant closed, Fraser said, and he vowed the union will make sure its members get their jobs back.

"Not one single car will roll off that assembly line unless the former GM workers are on that line," Fraser said.

Current UAW President Douglas Fraser, right, chats with incumbent Region Five Director Ken Worley in Sunday's opening of the UAW's 27th Constitutional Convention in Dallas. Fraser will retire from office at the convention, which ends Friday.

Fraser's successor, to be elected Wednesday by more than 2,500 UAW delegates, is expected to be Owen Bieber, vice president in charge of the union's General Motors Corp. department.

Bieber was chosen the president-designate late last year by the UAW's executive board.

Traditionally, the president-designate is formally elected by the delegates with only token opposition.

Fraser said he does not fear for the UAW's future, although it has been widely noted that he and the other top UAW officials retiring this week are the last who worked with Walter Reuther.

Reuther, the late former UAW president who died in a plane crash in 1970, largely was responsible for forming the union into what it is today.

New leader 'not going to be a Fraser'

DALLAS (AP) — Some United Auto Workers union members say they are concerned that the union is losing its strong leadership as it prepares to elect Owen Bieber as president to succeed Douglas A. Fraser

Some UAW officials at the union's constitutional convention in Dallas said Sunday they are unhappy about the selection of Bieber to head the 1 million active members and an additional 380,000 retired members.

"He's not going to be a Fraser," a convention delegate from Local 867 in Boston said. "Fraser was just a natural leader. He was a good leader. I'm sorry to see him go."

The delegate, who asked that his name not be used, said he expects Bieber to "be soft" in his duties as president.

Bieber, 53, is vice president of the union's General Motors Corp. department. Fraser, 66, is stepping down after reaching the union's mandatory retirement age of 65.

"Maybe it happens to all bureaucracies," another union leader who requested anonymity said. "You wake up one day and it ain't what it used to be."

"You look around, you assess the whole team and you realize the caliber of talent has fallen off. It couldn't happen at a worse time," the leader said Sunday.

Election of the 26-member executive board this week will mark the first time in the union's 47-year history that the board will not contain someone who served with UAW founder Walter Reuther, who died in an airplane crash in 1970.

"We've lived off the good reputation of this union. Now we have to pick up our own agenda for the future," said UAW Secretary-Treasurer Raymond Majerus, 58.

Other union officials agree, and they focus their criticisms on UAW leadership.

"For so long, there were so many people at the top who were so good that we could afford to place people on the staff who we knew were mediocre," said a union vice president who asked that his name not be used.

"Now the power and the brains are gone and the mediocrity remains."

Odessan's capital murder trial begins

OZONA (AP) — Attorneys who completed the tedious two-week long process of selecting a jury were ready to open the capital murder trial today of an Odessa man accused of stabbing a woman and her daughter.

A six-man, six-woman jury was selected last week to here the case of Michael Eugene Sharp, 28, who is on trial for the stabbing death of Brenda Kay Broadway, 31, of Kermit.

A conviction on a capital murder charge carries a possible maximum penalty of death by injection. Sharp already has been sentenced to life in prison for his murder conviction in the death of the daughter, 8-year-old Christie Elms.

State District Judge James H. Clack of Kermit, who granted a change of venue in the trial, will preside.

Sharp was convicted of murder in Lubbock on Nov. 17 in connection with the death of the girl. The slain girl's sister, Selena Elms, testified against Sharp during that trial, and is expected to testify again in Ozona.

Sharp is accused of abducting Ms. Broadway and her daughters from a Kermit car wash shortly after midnight on June 11. The women were taken to a remote area about 200 yards inside the Ector County line, where Ms. Broadway and Christie Elms were stabbed to death, authorities said.

Selena Elms escaped during the stabbings, authorities said. Naked and with her arms bound, she ran five miles before finding help at an oil rig, she testified.

Sharp was arrested five days after the bodies of Ms. Broadway and her daughter were found.

Police have said Sharp is a suspect in several other West Texas killings.

Police get little help in search for pastor

HOUSTON (AP) — Police in a Houston suburb say they're getting little help from the congregation of an Egyptian sect whose pastor has been missing for a month.

The Rev. Marcos Askiti, minister of St. Mark's Coptic Orthodox Church, has not been seen since April 15, said detective D.L. Oglesby of the Bellaire police department. Bellaire is a suburb surrounded by Houston.

Askiti, whose congregation is made up entirely of Egyptian immigrants, vanished in the midst of a battle over his right to lead the congregation. Police say they have been called to the church several times to break up quarrels between warring factions.

"It's just been real hard working with those people," said detective Oglesby said. "The church is divided. One group wants the pastor out. The other wants him in and the people just aren't saying anything" that will help the investigation.

Askiti's car is also missing, Oglesby said. He said Bellaire police have "no idea where he (Askiti) is."

Church member Mohsen "Benny" El-Raheb had actively sought Askiti's ouster and asked the church's ruling council in Cairo to send another priest. One of five bishops on that council sent a minister to replace Askiti last year.

That priest formed a separate church when Askiti refused to leave.

Oglesby said Raheb has told him there were moral and political reasons he asked for a new minister. But Oglesby said Raheb has offered police nothing substantive about the morals charges.

"They make those accusations, but they won't provide any witnesses or victims and they can't back up what they say," Oglesby said.

St. Mark's, founded in the 1970s, split a year ago in a dispute over Askiti. The Coptic Orthodox Church has its own pope, Shenouda III, and has between 6 million and 10 million members.

Shenouda is under house arrest in his monastery 70 miles north of Cairo. He was removed from power by the late President Anwar Sadat, who turned over Shenouda's authority to a five-man council of bishops.

Nuclear waste dump hearings begin

HEREFORD (AP) — A proposed nuclear waste depository in Deaf Smith County, one of nine possible sites for such a facility, faces stiff opposition from residents and numerous state and local officials.

The Department of Energy scheduled public hearings today on the $8 billion project, which federal officials say would be used to bury nearly 1.5 million pounds of high-level nuclear waste a half mile underground each year.

"That's a prize we're not sure we want to win," Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Vice President F. Michael Carr said in a recent interview.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said he won't stand quietly by the wayside because the "federal government wants to sweep its nuclear trash under the lush agricultural carpet of Deaf Smith County."

'Parents' learn to let go

HOUSTON (AP) — Zillah Berry, who has been a foster mother to 100 abused and neglected children, admits she always has an urge to take care of her wards permanently.

"Just at the last moment, just before you turn loose of a child, your heart tells you nobody can take care of it like you can," said Mrs. Berry, who with her husband Pat has been caring for foster children since 1961. "But you know it's time and you have to let go."

The Harris County Child Welfare Unit has sent more children to the Berrys than to any other foster parents, said Sue Brightman-Glover, a foster parent development worker. Ms. Brightman-Glover says her agency aims to reunite parents and children as quickly as possible.

Most of the children return to their natural parents within nine months, Ms. Brightman-Glover said.

That promise of deprivation is one of the reasons few foster parents are as helpful to the agency as the Berrys, officials said.

Ms. Brightman-Glover said only about 30 percent of her agency's foster parents are willing to accept babies and 2 percent care for handicapped babies. The Berrys take in children with physical defects and those who have been injured by their parents.

Mrs. Berry said many of the children she and her husband care for have been taken from their parents because of "failure to thrive" — agency jargon for underfed.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, May 17, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Director Dennis Hopper, boxing champion Sugar Ray Leonard, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, actress Margaret O'Sullivan and baseball's Carlos May celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: the late journalist and author Stewart Alsop. The more direct you are in the year ahead, the more successful you will be. A family member really does love and admire you. Stand up to an employer or supervisor who is wrong. Someone seeks your services as a consultant, but feels he cannot afford you full time. Think about starting an at-home business. This may be the time to put a property on the market.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make the best of a decision in which you had no say. A homemaker's hobby could bring in extra income. Try to combine a vacation with a business trip.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Others break dates. Do not let their behavior alter your plans. Business partners need to reassure one another. Attend seminars that will give you the edge over a competitor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Loved ones will support your ideas if you are open about your goals. Friends mean well but give bad financial advice. Romance more than lives up to your expectations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): One of those rare days when business and pleasure can be successfully combined. Be prepared if someone in authority should challenge you. Get caught up on any paperwork.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel broadens your horizons and improves your chances for launching a new romance. Partner is pleased to go along with the changes you wish to make. An excellent day for bargain-hunters.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Try to uncover some information that has been deliberately hidden from you. A so-called friend may be at the bottom of a deception. Do not try to bulldoze employer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An excellent day for working at home. Banking and tax matters enjoy favorable influences. Follow your instincts. Secrets are shared in the late afternoon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A need for greater self-discipline becomes obvious. Be firm. A brother or sister offers a helping hand in an emergency. Make intelligent concessions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be diplomatic today and you will make new friends. You need more time alone to think about your career. Someone's lack of interest could be what is really bothering you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take a good look at how others live. You could learn a valuable lesson! Refuse to take "no" for an answer. Stick your neck out and ask a special favor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Complete a business deal. Quiet efforts will improve conditions at work or home. You can sidestep an argument if you are discreet. Get several bids on a home repair project.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Loyalty and dedication count big now. Your chances are excellent for putting a foreign connection on a firm footing. Imagination and creativity have tremendous financial value.

Motown special airs tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — Berry Gordy started Motown Records in Detroit a quarter-century ago, and his artists — their "Motown sound" rooted in gospel, rhythm 'n' blues and pop — soon won fame and following.

NBC celebrates the anniversary Monday night with "Motown 25: Yesterday, Today, Forever." The two-hour special was taped earlier, during a five-hour performance at the Pasadena Civic Center.

"What we went for was the power," says Smokey Robinson, the singer, songwriter and Motown vice president who was musical director for the TV show.

The show has performers like Stevie Wonder, who has recorded for Motown through his whole career; the Temptations, who left Motown and came back; Jose Feliciano, recently signed; De Barge and Hi Inergy, two young, new acts on Motown, and Diana Ross, who now records for RCA.

Miss Ross, who performs now as a solo act, sings on the special with Mary Wilson and Cindy Birdsong in her original show business incarnation — The Supremes.

"Right now, Motown is in negotiations to re-sign the Four Tops," Robinson says. "The Temptations went off the label and came back. Most people do go off and come back. We have very seldom had anyone leave who has not at least tried to negotiate to come back.

The original Jackson Five group appears on the special. These days, Jermaine Jackson — who married Gordy's daughter — is signed to Motown, solo. Michael Jackson, also now singing solo, is on Epic Records.

Robinson, 43, who has been a Motown vice president for 20 years, was in the Motown scene even before Gordy incorporated the record company 25 years ago. Robinson, Bob Rogers, his cousin Claudette Rogers — since 1963 Mrs. Smokey Robinson — Ronald White and Pete Moore started singing in school in 1955. They called themselves the Miracles.

They met Gordy, who had writen a song, "Come to Me" — a hit for Marv Johnson — and was writing at the time for Jackie Wilson. In 1958, Gordy, Robinson and Tyronne Carlo, Wilson's cousin, wrote a song called "Got a Job." The Miracles recorded it — Motown Records' first record — and Gordy, who didn't have a distribution system set up yet, sold it to End Records. Gordy later bought it back.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠87532 ♢J9653 ♣1076
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

A.—Not only do you have nothing to contribute in the way of defense, but your length in partner's suit detracts from his trick-taking capabilities in that department. There is no telling what the opponents can make—not even a grand slam can be ruled out! Make it as difficult as possible for them to get together. Jump to four spades—a preemptive action.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠97542 ♡4 ♢J8763 ♣105
Partner opens the bidding with three diamonds. What action do you take?

A.—If partner has a classic three diamond bid, the enemy are laydown for at least six hearts. Again, you should do what you can to disrupt their auction. The least you should do is jump to five diamonds, but we favor a full-blooded jump to six diamonds. That shouldn't prove expensive if doubled, and should make it difficult for them to judge the best action.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ85 ♡9 ♢AQ63 ♣KJ107
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Dble	Pass	2 NT
Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—The first thing you should realize is that partner is unlikely to have four spades, so there is no point in trying for a spade contract. For his jump to two no trump, partner should have 11-12 points and at least two stoppers in the enemy suit. Raise to three no trump.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠9863 ♡K1092 ♢A72 ♣63
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Since three clubs would be forcing, partner's jump to four clubs shows a second suit and slam ambitions. With four good trumps, an ace and a ruffing value, you have no reason to be ashamed of your hand. Indeed, we recommend that you cooperate with partner's slam effort, especially since you can do so below the level of game. Bid four diamonds.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠542 ♡1093 ♢87 ♣AKQ62
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Despite the fact that your holding in hearts looks better than that in spades, you must take a preference to partner's first-bid suit. It is quite probable that partner has five spades and only four hearts. Bid two spades. Forget about clubs—the only future for that suit is as a source of tricks at no trump.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ5 ♡AKJ106 ♢KJ8 ♣K5
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Partner's raise to game is preemptive, not strength-showing. Like all preemptive actions, it denies a hand that contains two aces. Since you know that your side has at least two fast losers, any move toward slam by you is asking for trouble—it could result in five hearts down one.

Government's role

Little Ashley Bailey of Clyde will get the liver transplant she needs because a number of concerned private citizens, state legislators and the federal government recognize the value of life.

The 8½-month-old child would have died in several weeks without the operation. Her parents have no medical insurance and cost of the operation was a staggering $140,000.

Volunteers raised about $75,000 and the remainder of the funds needed to cover cost of the infant's medical treatment will be provided by state and federal funds.

Certainly there are those who will question the validity of the state and federal governments stepping into this case. After all, government cannot provide medical treatment for all those needing it. Is it fair that one child will obtain treatment through special consideration while others may go lacking?

We believe the decision of the Texas House of Representatives and the federal government to get involved in Ashley's case and to make certain she receives the treatment she needs is justifiable and laudable. To refuse the aid would be signing the child's death warrant. What greater purpose for a government is there than to provide life-saving assistance whenever possible when no other hope exists, all the time realizing that alternative won't be available on every occasion?

President Ronald Reagan and his White House staff were quick to praise Texas officials and volunteers for their selfless gesture. We join the chief executive in that heartfelt thanks.

It was the kind of gesture that makes you realize this truly is a government for the people.

More good figures

Retail sales are a key barometer for those who keep an eye on the nation's economic weather. No two economists are likely to concur precisely how to read it, but there should be general agreement on the readings for March and April.

The trend is upward. Retail sales for March rose 1.7 percent, which was considered highly encouraging in view of bad weather in some parts of the country, and a few other negative factors. April's increase of 1.7 percent also said something about the nation's progress toward recovery after an 18-month slump.

These percentages were reported by the U.S. Commerce Department, which also provided figures on total retail sales for the two months. The volume for March was $92.74 billion and, in April, retailers sold $94.22 billion worth of goods.

These favorable figures suggest others that may not be readily apparent. When retail sales go up, factory production has to go up to keep pace. And when production goes up, unemployment eventually comes down, all of which might be called the "domino theory" of economics.

There are still weak spots in the economy and it would be unrealistic to overlook them. It would be equally unrealistic to ignore the positive contributions to recovery made by retail sales in March and April. The Commerce Department's Under Secretary Robert Dederick put it this way:

"These back-to-back surges are clear evidence of renewed vigor in the consumer sector."

What happened in March and April bodes well for what can happen in May and the rest of the year.

Another View:

Hitler's ugly revival

Not surprisingly, there are now all sorts of dark hints about the source of the fake Hitler diaries. One target of suspicion is neo-Nazis trying to rehabilitate the Fuehrer; another is the Soviet KGB disinformation machine which thereby was said to be seeking to create divisions in the West; a third is said to be the East German Hitler memorabilia industry (which, in fact, may be the same thing as the KGB) that has been supplying a lively underground market around the world.

The chief culprit, however, is no spooky communist source, much less a gang of old Fascists trying to rewrite history; it's a combination of plain old capitalist greed and journalistic irresponsibility. Three major news organizations — the West German magazine Der Stern; the Sunday Times of London and Newsweek magazine — ran with material which begged for the most thorough checking and which, in fact, received no more than a cursory once-over from hired experts who were never allowed to get close enough even to try.

What was clear in the handling of the fake diaries was that fear over leaks or over the possibility of being beaten by a competitor weighed much more heavily than the effort to test the authenticity of the documents. It would not have taken much to show, as West German government experts did the other day, that even if the text hadn't been so questionable (and at times revealingly inaccurate), the paper, cover, binding, glue — all the material — was manufactured after World War II.

Probably the most appalling aspect of the whole affair, however, was Newsweek's closing statement in the article in which it prominently featured extensively promoted excerpts from the diaries: "Now the appearance of the Hitler diaries — genuine or not, it almost doesn't matter in the end — reminds us of the horrible reality on which our doubts about ourselves, and each other, are based."

That incredible statement — that "it almost doesn't matter" — was, of course, a hedge from a publication not quite sure about what it was presenting. That hedging, needless to say, should have taken place in the decision to publish and promote, not as an afterthought in the article.

What's at stake here is not merely the strong possibility that this palpable fake would have generated new rounds of neo-Nazi revisionism (and may still) but an attitude of monumental indifference to the standards of decent journalism and reliable history that's as dangerous to free inquiry as the outcome of this affair is embarrassing. Undoubtedly, everyone will now investigate and sue everyone else. In this case, they all deserve to lose.

CHARLEY REESE

Book gives insight into 'far right'

The name of the book is "God, Guts and Guns, a Close Look at the Radical Right." The author is a young man by the name of Phillip Finch. You should mark that name. In an age when too many authors are nothing more than political pamphleteers, Finch is an honest and competent reporter.

Charley Reese

In the past, two things usually happened when a liberal tried to write about the radical right. One, he lumped everyone from the right of Adlai Stevenson all the way to Ku Klux Klan together. That tactic, of course, is known as guilt by association.

Second, the liberal writers let their imagination run wild and painted the Radical Right as some vast combine of interconnected and cooperative individuals and organizations. That is what is known as building a straw man.

Finch, to his great credit, got out of his office and went into the field to look for himself and to talk to the people involved on the far right of American politics. Many times in the book, he allows them to speak for themselves. Always he is fair. So what you get is, for the first time to my knowledge, an accurate look at the liberal's favorite bogey man.

The first thing Finch did was to distinguish between right of center, but essentially mainstream, movements and the truly radical. The Moral Majority, he points out, is not part of the Radical Right. The John Birch Society is, but only barely, in his words. None of the so-called New Right political organizations belongs to the radicals.

What you have are the true radicals — the Posse Comitatus, the Klans (there are several), the Nazis, the Liberty Lobby, the Minute Men, the Christian Patriots Defense League, and the strange Christian sect known as the Identity.

Finch also discovered that, contrary to claims of any vast network, the Radical Right is almost by definition so extremely individualistic that it is really a menagerie of fragments that not only do not cooperate but often war with each other.

This certainly gibes with my experiences. The kind of person you find in the Radical Right organizations is what I call a 100 percenter. He has a definitive explanation of the world and definitive solution, and, if you deviate one-half of one percent from his vision, you are automatically suspect. The Radical Right can take one fact and leap to more conclusions than a bionic kangaroo.

On the other hand, Finch discovered that many, if not all, of the people are basically decent and good folks. Describing his experiences camping out with the Christian Patriots Defense League, Finch writes:

"They are nice people. The Radical Right has a bewilderment of surprises for the ignorant outsider, and that may be the greatest of all: They are nice people who would probably make fine next-door neighbors if you happen to be white and Christian...That is an outrageous generalization, of course, but one that has stood up to a year of observation. It is their ideas, not they, which are strange and baffling."

Finch found that, with the exception of the Birch Society, most of the Radical Right organizations are racist and anti-Semitic. Confused and frustrated by a world they see as shedding their cherished values, they reach out for scape-goats.

More important, however, than a fine beautifully written description of the variegated Radical Right was Finch's observation that these groups, however far outside the mainstream they are, have exerted influence on the mainstream by nudging the nation a bit more toward the right.

Almost all of the Birch Society's positions, which back in the 1960s were greeted with scorn, have now been accepted by some people who shrivel up at the thought of being in agreement with "Birchers." Nevertheless, many, many Americans agree that the United Nations is a bad organization, that the Warren Court did go too far in protecting the rights of criminals, that an establishment does influence American foreign policy, that the Federal Reserve System does need to be reexamined.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Oil payments may prove illegal

WASHINGTON — One of the nation's major oil companies has made multi-million-dollar payments to officials close to the Sultan of Oman in apparent violation of the law, according to internal company documents.

Jack Anderson

The company, Ashland Oil, has conducted a massive internal investigation of the payments, which were allegedly made between 1979 and 1982 to ensure that the sultan would sell crude oil to Ashland on a long-term basis at favorable prices.

Ashland executives have good reason for concern. According to a legal memorandum to the board of directors, one of the payments "created a serious risk that Ashland... might be exposed to possible criminal prosecution for violation of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977...."

The law forbids American companies to bribe foreign officials to obtain business favors. In fact, Ashland was one of several U.S. companies that signed a consent decree with the Securities and Exchange Commission in 1979, agreeing not to make such payments to foreign officials.

An internal memo points out that the payments constitute, at the very least, a "violation of the consent decree." The internal documents were meant to be seen only by Ashland's board of directors and top executives, but my associate Indy Badhwar has obtained copies of them.

The documents identify the principal Omani official involved as Yehia Omar, the sultan's financial adviser and until recently Oman's ambassador-at-large in Washington. According to the documents, Omar had a close relationship with Orin Atkins, Ashland's recently retired board chairman.

A legal memo prepared for the board says that most of the questionable transactions were "proposed by Mr. Omar, (and) several... were consummated by Ashland at the direction of Mr. Atkins."

Payments were made through Ashland Development Inc., a subsidiary formed in 1979 ostensibly to undertake capital investments for the parent company. Atkins assigned Bill E. McKay, an Ashland executive, to handle the subsidiary's investments.

The worrisome nature of the payments first surfaced in 1980, when McKay informed board members and senior company officers that — over his objections — Atkins was insisting on making deals that could lead to criminal liability for Ashland and its board members.

Here's how one such transaction was spelled out in a legal memo to the board: "At the end of 1980 Mr. Atkins directed the execution of an agreement for the payment of $1.35 million to Mont D'Or, a Liechtenstein entity designated by Mr. Omar as the recipient of commissions for his purported assistance to Ashland in connection with the purchase of crude oil from Oman... It was to cover the first six months of a potential multi-year obligation."

Unable to persuade the board to block this particularly blatant deal, McKay flew to New York with two company lawyers to put the matter to Sam Butler, a prestigious corporate lawyer who is also a member of the board.

At Butler's suggestion, Ashland rescinded the contract and got the $1.35 million back from Mont D'Or. Finally jolted into action by Butler's concern, the Ashland board authorized a thorough internal investigation. It was conducted by Charles Queenan, a Pittsburgh attorney.

McKay, one of dozens of witnesses interviewed, spent three days being questioned by Queenan and his investigators in June 1981. He turned over more than 500 pages of chronologies and other documentation.

The result of Queenan's investigation remains one of the most closely guarded secrets in the annals of Big Oil. I'll report additional details in a future column.

EXPENSIVE DINNERS: A civil rights official at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board used government funds to buy tickets for a $150-a-head fund-raising dinner for the Congressional Black Caucus Foundation — and wound up having to pay for the tickets herself.

Adean King, director of the bank board's minority affairs office, used government purchase orders to buy a pair of tickets to the black-tie affair in both 1981 and 1982. She attended herself and gave the extra ticket to another employee of the office.

But agency investigators faulted King for stating on the purchase order that the $300 was to pay for a Black Caucus workshop held the same weekend as the fancy dinner. In fact, the workshops were free.

FOGGY BOTTOM FUROR: Reagan administration officials are puzzled and upset at the Greek government's response to statements by Assistant Secretary of State Richard Burt supporting increased U.S. military aid for Turkey. Burt was in Turkey recently, and remarked that the longstanding ratio of U.S. aid — $10 for Turkey vs. $7 for Greece — was not carved in granite.

This so incensed the Greeks that they withdrew their invitation to Burt to visit Greece. What baffles the people in Foggy Bottom is that Burt had said the same thing at public hearings in Washington.

But sources at the State Department acknowledge that Burt's pro-Turkish remarks have "screwed things up" in the negotiations with Greece over renewal of leases for U.S. military bases there.

INSIDE REPORT:

CIA blamed for operations vote

WASHINGTON — The failure of the Republican-controlled Senate Intelligence Committee to vote approval of the Central Intelligence Agency's covert operations against Marxist Nicaragua is being blamed on machinations within the CIA itself.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

CIA Director William Casey is all for the Nicaraguan operation. But key career officers agree with Casey's predecessor in the Carter administration, Adm. Stansfield Turner, that the risky activity threatens disaster for the agency.

Well-placed sources on the Intelligence Committee attribute the strange behavior of the committee's chairman, Sen. Barry Goldwater, to influence exerted on him by those Turner-allied CIA elements. Although secret head counts showed a vote in Goldwater's committee — at least 8-to-7 and perhaps better — for continuing the operation, the chairman prevented a vote from being taken.

KIDDIEGATE KILLS

Congressional resentment over nepotism in the U.S. Information Agency (USIA) led to a stunning bipartisan vote in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that seriously threatens modernization of the Voice of America (VOA) international broadcasting programs promised by President Reagan in his 1980 campaign.

Disclosure that USIA Director Charles Z. Wick, a close personal friend of the president, had given well-paid posts in his agency to young relatives of Reagan administration personages (immediately labeled "Kiddiegate") ruffled feathers of both parties on Capitol Hill. Recipients of "plum" jobs included relatives of national security adviser William P. Clark, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and former secretary of state Alexander Haig, among others.

None worked for VOA, but the broadcasting service paid dearly for the nepotism anyway. When the Foreign Relations Committee voted 10-to-5 to cut $65 million from the USIA budget, it wiped out the long-promised modernization program for the badly antiquated VOA.

COLORADO DEMOCRATIC HIGH

Belief that Democratic Gov. Richard Lamm of Colorado may be inching away from his past refusal to even consider a race for the Senate has raised fears among Republican national operatives for the future of one of the Senate's and the party's brightest conservative young lights: Sen. Bill Armstrong.

The national concern stemmed from private comments made at a recent Republican gathering in California by Howard (Bo) Calloway, the party's Colorado state chairman. He advised that Lamm may permit his arm to be twisted gradually and that the governor is the one Democrat who Armstrong might not be able to defeat.

A footnote: Early 1984 re-election prospects for Sen. James McClure of Idaho, a possible candidate for Senate Republican leader in 1985, have brightened because of two developments: a private Republican poll showing McClure to be the state's most popular politician; and news that former Interior secretary Cecil Andrus will pass up a shot at McClure's seat, possibly to run for governor or senator in 1986.

N.Y. GOP FEUDING

Simmering poor relations between New York's two ambitious supply-side Republicans, Rep. Jack Kemp and defeated governor candidate Lewis Lehrman, flared up again when Kemp did not show as scheduled to address Lehrman's May 4 fund-raiser at Manhattan's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Kemp canceled out because of floor votes in Congress that night (as did another scheduled Lehrman speaker, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker). Nevertheless, Lehrman complained bitterly in a New York-to-Washington telephone conversation, and Kemp shot back that he had warned Lehrman about the dangers of mid-week speaking engagements for members of Congress.

A Lehrman aide said his boss would not retaliate by boycotting Kemp's international monetary conference in Washington May 17, explaining: "We don't have any votes." Nevertheless, the tender relations between them were not improved by the incident.

48-year-old runner dies in seven-mile race

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A human river, 80,000 strong, ran through San Francisco in the Bay to Breakers race, a lighthearted contest that was marred by the death of one participant less than a mile from the finish line.

New Zealander Rod Dixon won the 7.4-mile race Sunday for the second year in a row, with a time of 35:01. The crowd was so huge that as the 32-year-old Auckland man neared the Pacific Ocean, other runners were just beginning at San Francisco Bay.

George Adams, 48, of Redwood City, was pronounced dead at the scene after he collapsed in Golden Gate Park. An autopsy was scheduled today for Adams, whose wife told coroner's deputies he was in good physical condition and had no medical history of heart disease.

Some used roller skates on the route, others pushed strollers carrying bewildered babies and still others rolled in wheelchairs. About 54,000 people registered for the race and paid the $7.50 fee, but thousands more showed up.

Some wore outlandish and clever costumes — a 132-foot replica of the Bay Bridge, a human saloon, a tuxedoed bridegroom and white-laced bride, Santa Claus and his bell-jingling reindeer — while others chose standard running gear.

Residents and well-wishers offered sprays of cool water for runners on the alternately sun-drenched and windy streets, directed pulsating quadraphonic speakers toward the pavement and shouted encouragement.

Paul Cummings, 29, of Provo, Utah, the 1974 NCAA mile champion, came in second with a time of 35:06. In the third spot was Craig Virgin of Lebanon, Ill., a two-time Bay to Breakers winner who finished in 35:15.

In the women's division, Laurie Binder, 35, of Oakland, won her fourth Bay to Breakers victory in 41:24. She was ahead of Nancy Ditz, 28, of Menlo Park, who posted a time of 42:17, and New Zealand cross-country and road-racing star Heather Thompson, 36, who came in with 42:39.

Test-tube twins doing fine after natural birth

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — The nation's second set of test-tube twins, born to a woman whose two previous pregnancies failed, were "doing fine" after a natural birth, hospital officials said.

"We're so glad the babies are here and healthy," said their happy father, 33-year-old Robert Duda. "We hope our experience will encourage others."

After 12½ hours of labor, Patricia Duda gave birth to a 7-pound, 6-ounce girl at 5:01 p.m. Saturday and a 4-pound, 13-ounce boy exactly an hour later, said Barbara Traeger, spokeswoman for Evanston Hospital.

The infants were named Danielle Marie and Christopher Michael.

Student gives three organs

AYER, Mass. (AP) — The death of a 16-year-old high school student in a bicycle accident two weeks ago has given a new chance for life to three patients who needed organ transplants.

Recalling a letter about organ donations from a "Dear Abby" newspaper column more than 10 years ago, Barbara Roberts ordered the eyes, heart and kidneys of her son, Dana, donated to the New England Organ Bank.

His heart went to a 27-year-old man in London, Ontario; a kidney went to a 51-year-old man at New England Medical Center in Boston, and the other kidney went to a 21-year-old woman at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. A recipient still is being sought for the boy's eyes.

Mrs. Roberts doesn't know the recipients' identities, but she and her husband have been told that all are progressing satisfactorily.

"I just want to fantasize that they're all doing great," she said in an interview published Sunday. "I just want to think of them all as alive and well."

After the teen-ager's accident two weeks ago, Mrs. Roberts said she remembered the letter tucked away in her jewelry box.

It told of a motorcycle accident victim who carried in his wallet a card giving permission to donate his eyes and kidney to an organ bank in case of death.

"It was something that struck me at the time, so I cut it out and kept it in my jewelry box," she said. "I had it for years and years. But I never really thought about it until the accident."

When doctors at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center determined that Roberts was brain-dead, Mrs. Roberts, her husband, Jean-Pierre, and their two other teen-age children decided to donate the organs.

Mrs. Roberts said medical center officials told her that only about four such "universal donors" — people who donate all organs — are found in New England each year.

"We were really shocked when we learned how few people do this," she said. "We just think that if people understand how much they could help other people by doing it, more of them would consider it."

Under an agreement between the medical center and the organ bank, the donor and recipients were to remain anonymous. But Mrs. Roberts said she disclosed her identity in hope that other people would choose to become universal donors.

Lightning kills two

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Lightning struck nine spectators at the Mason-Dixon 500 auto race, killing two people and seriously injuring two others, authorities said.

Police Col. Robert Conschak said lightning apparently struck the victims as they walked across an open field between the grandstand and horse stalls around 4:30 p.m. Sunday, shortly after the race ended.

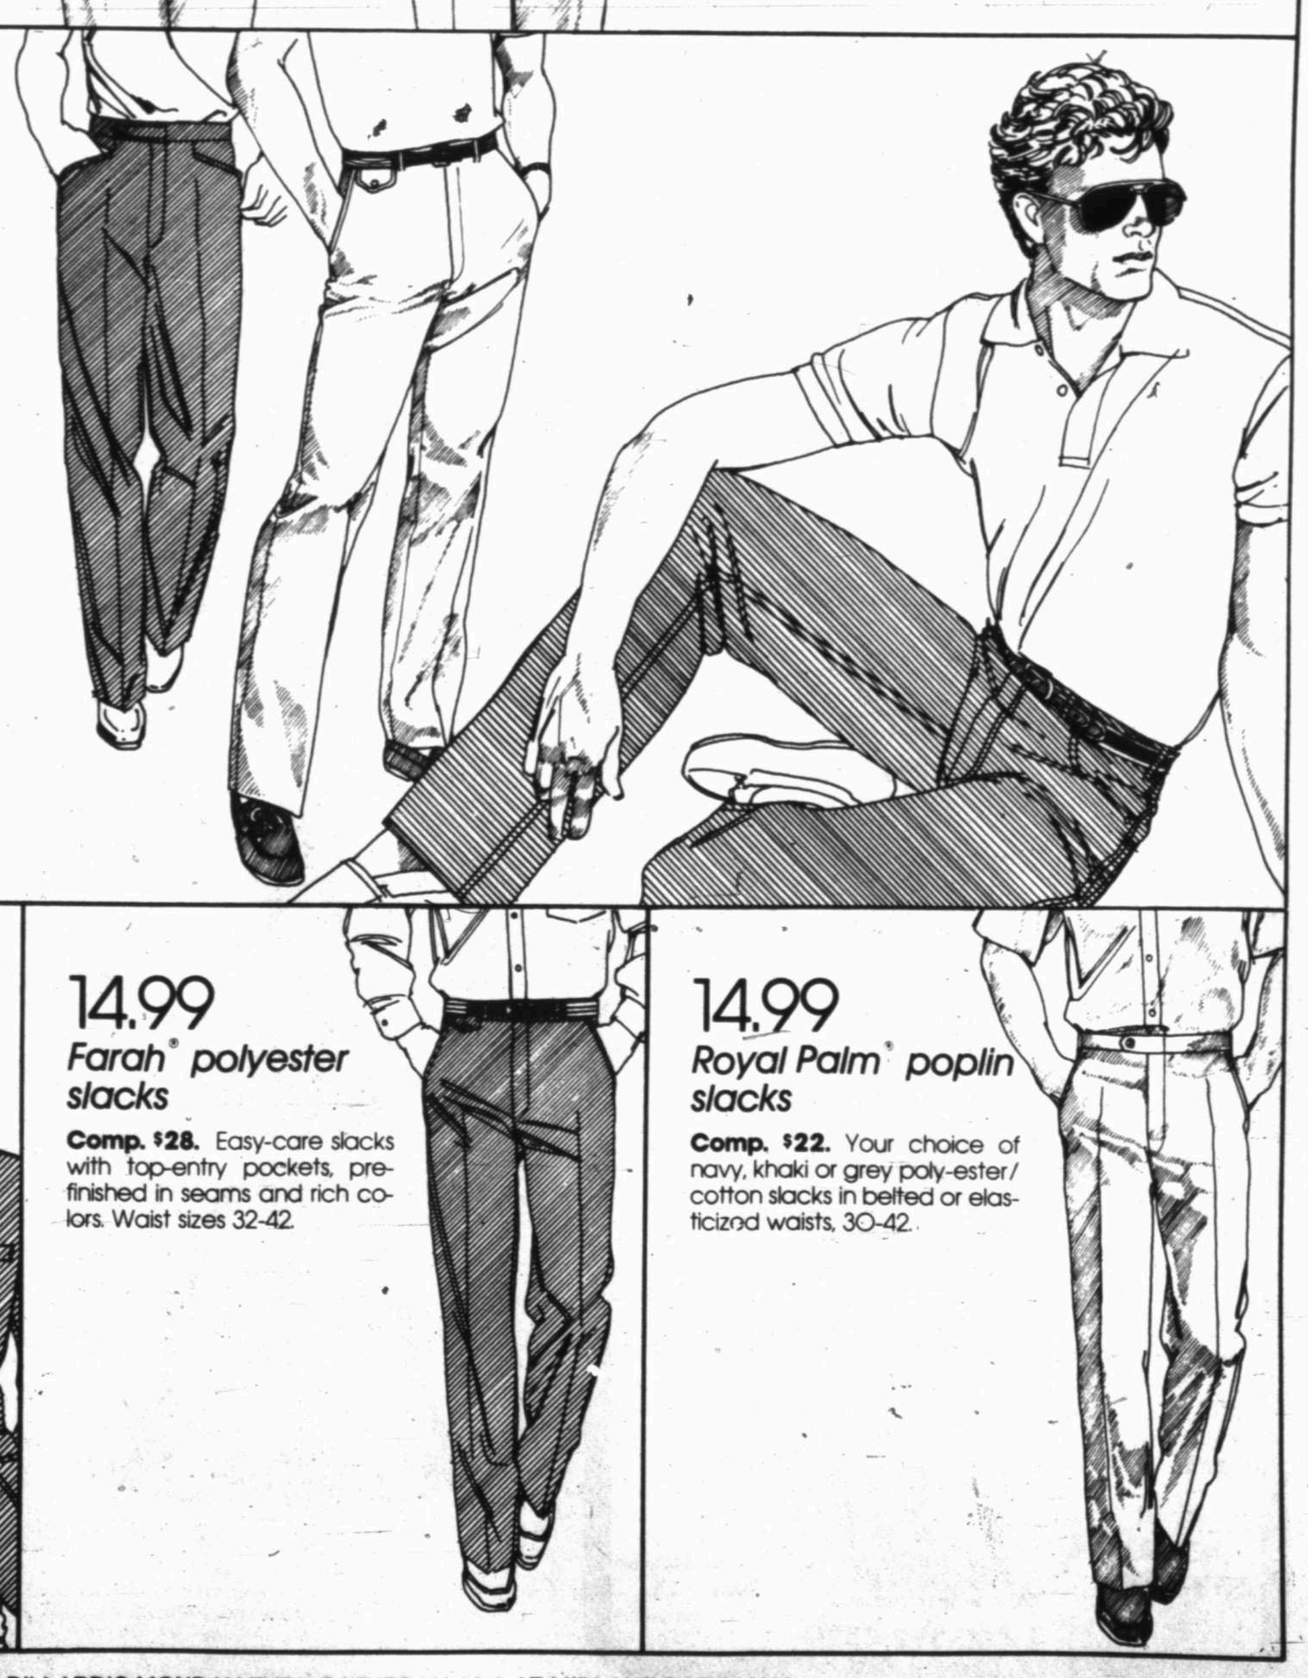

Killed in the electrical storm were a 34-year-old man and a 22-year-old woman, both from Westminster.

Former Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo cradles young Chuck Smith as he marches in the South Philadelphia Mummers Parade in Philadelphia Sunday. Rizzo, a candidate in the Democratic primary race for mayor, faces W. Wilson Goode in the May 17 election.

Rizzo, Goode coax voters in mayoral race

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former Mayor Frank Rizzo drew cheers when he ventured into a black neighborhood in a plea for unity, a theme sounded earlier at a black Baptist church by Democratic mayoral rival W. Wilson Goode.

On the final weekend before Tuesday's mayoral primary, Rizzo was greeted by several hundred supporters at a jazz club in west Philadelphia. Goode, a deacon seeking to become the city's first black mayor, got a standing ovation from his congregation Sunday.

"You know, they're saying I'm going to get skunked in the black community. I don't believe that," said Rizzo, speaking Sunday from the stage of Herb's Second Step while a platoon of unneeded bodyguards stood by. "Winning is one thing. I want to win. But I want to win with everybody in this city helping me."

The rally was held a block from the site where hecklers attempted to disrupt a campaign stop on Thursday night. An unruly crowd shouted racial slurs at Rizzo in the only confrontation in a campaign that has escaped the racial bitterness of the Chicago election earlier this year.

This time, one lone female voice cried: "Boo, Rizzo. We don't want you as mayor."

Goode, a sharecropper's son who plowed farm fields until he moved to Philadelphia at age 15, got a warm welcome from 250 people at the First Baptist Church of Paschall, where he has worshipped in southwest Philadelphia for three decades.

Rizzo, 62, a former police chief attempting a comeback after being forced to retire because of a city provision prohibiting more than two consecutive terms as mayor, also went back to his roots. He was parade marshal in a fund-raising event for youth athletics through the streets of his south Philadelphia boyhood.

Reagan's ideas wanted in budget stalemate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Sen. Robert J. Dole and two House Democrats are urging President Reagan to get involved in congressional attempts to agree on a 1984 federal budget, with Dole observing that the stalled process is "not a spectator sport."

Frustrated Senate Republicans couldn't agree on a compromise budget plan last week and ordered the Budget Committee to come up with another plan by this Tuesday.

But new attempts to compromise won't succeed if Reagan doesn't involve himself in the issue, Reps. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., and Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"It is absolutely imperative that the Senate Republicans get a budget ... and that means the president must become involved," Gephardt said.

"We will have a budget that's actually between the two parties — a compromise — if and only if we can get the president engaged in the budget process," Wirth said.

Dole, appearing on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," was saying much the same thing.

"In my view it's time for the president to become part of the budget process. He is the president," the Kansas Republican said. "...I hope the president might indicate he'd like to be a party to the budget process, even though it's a congressional discipline. It's not a spectator sport," Dole added.

Reagan and Republican leaders in the Senate backed a plan last week that would have saved this year's individual tax cut, but at the cost of high budget deficits. A rival group of Republicans, however, wanted the tax reduction limited to $500 per taxpayer and refused to go along.

While awaiting a breakthrough on the budget, the Senate is turning its attention to the problem of illegal immigration.

Debate was scheduled today on nearly 20 amendments to legislation overhauling the nation's immigration laws. A final vote on the bill is scheduled Tuesday.

The Senate also was taking up the nomination of William D. Ruckleshaus to be administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency today. The controversial nomination of Alfred S. Regnery to be administrator of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention is set to be considered on Tuesday.

The budget is scheduled for the docket Wednesday, followed by the MX missile proposal by the end of the week, if it clears committee.

Fuel consumption to increase

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Economic recovery will spark an increase in trucking that will send diesel fuel consumption soaring by the end of the decade, an oil industry analyst says.

Mark Emond, quoted in this week's Lundberg Letter, said diesel fuel consumption now makes up 13 percent of all motor fuel consumption. By 1990, he said, that figure could increase to 23 percent.

Publisher Dan Lundberg said the nation's fleet of diesel vehicles, primarily trucks, could increase fourfold by 1990.

Quake hits four Midwest states

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Chandeliers shook and windows rattled or broke as a mild tremor hit four Midwest states, but authorities said no one was injured and only minor damage was reported.

The quake, which measured a moderate 4.4 on the Richter scale and was centered about 50 miles east of St. Louis, was the first in the area in about four years, said Leroy Irby of the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

Residents in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas reported feeling the quake when it hit around 12:27 a.m. Sunday. In East St. Louis, Ill., some windows broke during the quake, police said.

Hotel demolished for new offices

BOSTON (AP) — Thousands of spectators cheered as the 19-story Hotel Madison was blasted away to make room for a $78 million federal office building to be named for House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill.

The demolition Sunday of the 53-year-old hotel, which closed in 1976, is part of a $500 million renewal project.

Mayor Kevin White was present at the early morning "implosion," along with an estimated 26,000 spectators who braved a chilly drizzle to see the building go.

Pay raise, security avert strike

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A pay raise and job security for senior workers helped avert a strike today by 10,500 government employees in Rhode Island, where both sides had been negotiating for almost a year.

Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy said representatives of the state and Council 94 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees reached a tentative contract agreement Sunday. A ratification vote could come as soon as Wednesday.

The plan includes a $17-a-week pay raise and a proposal to give senior workers job security when the state abolishes jobs. The old contract expired last June 30.

Moon's church owes $121,000

NEW CASTLE, N.Y. (AP) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church is $121,000 behind in property taxes on its 98-acre Westchester County estate, officials say, and the town of New Castle intends to take legal action to collect.

The town will begin foreclosure proceedings in an attempt to recover back taxes owed since 1980, town officials said Sunday.

Town Supervisor Lois Mitchell said the church has until May 22 to pay at least part of the money. If not, she said, the town will seek to ake over the property, which includes a 120-room mansion.

Families in dioxin-tainted trailer park begin moving

GRAY SUMMIT, Mo. (AP) — Fifteen of 29 families from a trailer park where dioxin levels are up to 1,100 times higher than considered safe have moved to hotels or found other housing, federal officials say.

About half the residents at the Quail Run Mobile Manor in this community about 45 miles southwest of St. Louis took advantage of a free interim housing offer Sunday, two days after being told about the contamination, officials said.

The others returned home to ponder their next move, said Mike Cole, an official with the Environmental Protection Agency.

Cole, on loan to the Federal Emergency Management Agency from the EPA's Kansas City regional office, closed a federal center Sunday that had been set up at a nearby motel to register families for the free housing.

Officials had urged the residents to leave their homes and offered free temporary lodging at hotels and other places for up to six months while the EPA determined the best way to clean up the dioxin.

"Things have happened to them very suddenly," Cole said. "Today they're trying to digest options that they weren't even aware of two days ago. Some of them really don't know what they are going to do yet."

Cole said that with the Gray Summit center closed, all residents have been given toll-free telephone numbers for the EPA, FEMA and the state Division of Mental Health in case they had further questions.

"We know what we're going to do," said Georgann Herbst, who represents one of three families who had come to Quail Run after being evacuated from dioxin-contaminated Times Beach. "We're staying as long as we can while we petition the government to buy us a new trailer court nearby on clean ground. I don't want to move into another home."

She said the entrance to the trailer park already is barricaded and manned by guards. Plans eventually call for a six-foot fence around the site.

Resident Gary Edelen said, however, that the government offer was better than none.

"I feel they've done pretty good so far," Edelen said Sunday after FEMA agreed to pay rent at a vacant house near his son-in-law's farm in southern Missouri.

Soil test samples taken in the park earlier this year and announced Friday showed dioxin levels as high as 1,100 parts per billion, four times higher than those of Times Beach.

Bucks use hot little gun to stay alive in playoffs

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks are still alive in the playoffs, thanks to the smallest player in the National Basketball Association.

Charlie Criss, a 5-foot-8 reserve guard, sank nine of 10 free throws, including four in the last 11 seconds Sunday. He also contained Philadelphia playmaker Maurice Cheeks as the Bucks defeated the 76ers 100-94 in the Eastern Conference playoff finals.

The 76ers lead the best-of-seven series 3-1 and can clinch with a victory in Philadelphia Wednesday night. But while no team in NBA history has won a series after having been down 3-0, the Bucks regained a large measure of confidence after three narrow defeats.

"This is nothing but positive because we were overdue," Bucks' forward Alton Lister said. "We were playing them close and losing in the last minutes. Today we got over the hump, and Charlie had a lot to do with that."

"Charlie Criss has a heart as big as Bob Lanier's feet," Bucks' Coach Don Nelson said.

That would be size 18½ EEE, and Criss' prominence was proportionately large. Besides helping to hold Cheeks to 4-of-14 shooting, he directed the Bucks' offense which played at a faster tempo than in previous playoff games.

"MY ROLE is to get us going, to spark us," said Criss, who played a season-high 34 minutes. "We wanted to set a little quicker tempo to get more of a flow. That created more isolation situations for our shooters.

"Defensively, I tried to beat Cheeks to position and turn him all the way around the floor so he couldn't dribble a straight path," he said. "We wanted to make them eat some clock so they would have less time to get the ball to their big guns."

"Charlie was really active," Bucks' Coach Don Nelson said. "I decided to use him a little more today because it's no secret that Brian Winters has trouble with Cheeks."

"You look mainly for Winters to shoot," Cheeks said. "Criss gives them another look because he can penetrate as well as shoot."

Lanier, the former All-Star center who may retire because of damaged knees, contributed 17 points in 31 minutes in his second game in as many days. Lanier also helped check 76ers' center Moses Malone, whose 17 points and 12 rebounds were well below his averages.

"This could have been my last game," Lanier said. "I wanted to be productive.

"People had written us off and sent us to the funeral parlor," he said. "We said the heck with it. If we were going to go down, we wanted to be competitive. We were going to be sure we wouldn't be embarrassed."

"They beat us down the stretch the same way we beat them in the other three games," 76ers' Coach Billy Cunningham said. "They were very aggressive defensively and created things with their defense. We allowed them second opportunities on the boards and we weren't able to convert."

ANDREW TONEY scored nine of his 24 points in the third quarter to help the 76ers open a 73-66 lead, but the Bucks took the lead to stay at 89-88 on a baseline jumper by Marques Johnson with 4:42 to play.

Lanier tipped in a rebound moments later, then slapped the ball away from Malone. Paul Pressey retrieved the loose ball and fed Sidney Moncrief for a layup for a 93-88 Bucks' lead. A hook by Lanier made it 95-88 with 1:42 left.

Two baskets by Julius Erving and two free throws by Toney pulled thee 76ers to within 96-94 with 17 seconds left, but Criss clinched the Bucks' victory with his four free throws.

Colbert listens to voice in sudden death victory

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Time and again, Jim Colbert heard a voice from the crowd telling him: "You can get him, kid. It ain't no big deal."

Well, the guy was half right.

It took six holes of a sudden death playoff Sunday before Colbert gunned down Fuzzy Zoeller to win the $400,000 Colonial National Invitation golf championship.

And for Colbert, it was a very big deal.

"The guy was trying to relax me and I guess he really did," grinned Colbert, winning at 42 what he called the most important of his seven tour titles.

"This is the biggest championship I've won, because of the tradition and the golf course ... This course is a hell of a challenge."

A national television audience had been tuned out by the time Colbert rolled in a 6-foot par putt at the 18th green and 24th hole to capture the $72,000 prize and his first victory in three years.

"Hell, I'd have given him the money," Colbert quipped. "I just wanted the title."

"You should have told me," laughed Zoeller, who cushioned his disappointment with a $43,200 consolation check. "I would have taken it."

BOTH ZOELLER and Colbert lipped out birdie putts on the first playoff hole, the par-3 16th. Zoeller missed from 20 feet, Colbert from six.

"That ... putt blew my mind," Colbert said. "It disappeared and then appeared on the other side of the hole. I was in total shock."

They parred the next four holes before arriving at the 18th for the third time.

"I just got tired of looking at that hole," grumbled Zoeller, whose three tee shots on the 434-yard 18th Sunday were poor.

"I was zero for three," he sighed.

Bruce Lietzke, with a closing 71, and Lon Hinkle, with a 70, tied for third a stroke behind the leaders and each picked up $23,200.

It is bitterly ironic that a whiffed tap-in putt by Lietzke on Thursday would eventually provide the one-shot margin that knocked him out of the playoff.

It was that kind of tournament.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus opened with a 66, came back with a 75 and a 74 and then, with a 69, was only one of four players to break par on Sunday.

Colbert and Zoeller entered the final round at 4 under par and tied for the lead with Peter Jacobsen, Mike Reid and Bobby Wadkins. Jacobsen and Reid led briefly but, like Wadkins, closed with 74s and ended in a three-way tie for fifth at 280.

As Colbert said, "It was really tough out there today."

ZOELLER, THE 1981 Colonial champion, caught a tree off the 18th tee, trapped his approach shot and then missed a 12-foot putt to bring the drama to a close.

"I'm glad it's over with," said Zoeller. "I know that's a helluva thing to say when you've lost, but I was getting tired."

It was an exciting, but hardly artful conclusion for the first sudden-death playoff in the tornament's 37-year history, and an unlikely one at that.

With three holes to play, Colbert was cruising along at 5 under par and nursing a 2-stroke lead. He bogeyed all three for a 2-over-par 72.

"It's hard to explain, but I knew I wasn't choking," he said.

At the par-4 18th, Zoeller socked his tee shot under a bridge while Colbert's approach shot caught the water, and both carded fives.

Zoeller could have won it with a 6-footer but, as he so graphically explained:

"I threw up on my putt on the 72nd hole. The tournament was mine for the taking but I pulled the putt and missed the cup by three inches."

Zoeller also closed with a 72 and the 278 total was but 2 under for four trips around a course nicknamed 'Hogan's Alley" because of Ben Hogan's five victories.

Spurs not out of picture yet

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — It was a "must win" game for the San Antonio Spurs and they didn't, but guard George Gervin cautions not to take the Spurs out of the NBA championship picture yet.

The Los Angeles Lakers need only one more win to clinch their Western Conference final series with the Spurs and move on to the National Basketball Association title game.

Los Angeles snuffed out a fourth-quarter San Antonio rally Sunday to grab a 129-121 playoff win and jump to a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"The game kind of slipped away in the last four minutes," said Gervin, who finished with 20 points. "They made some easy hoops and some fast breaks. I'm confident we can beat them."

Game five shifts to Los Angeles on Wednesday, where the defending NBA champion Lakers will continue their quest to become the first team to win consecutive titles since the Boston Celtics did it in 1968-69.

"The Lakers came out here ready to play — the way we should have," San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck said.

LOS ANGELES' Earvin "Magic" Johnson played true to his nickname Sunday, racking up a team-high 31 points, 17 assists and eight rebounds. He was in double figures in those categories Friday.

The Lakers' Michael Cooper and San Antonio's Gene Banks were ejected with 11:01 left in the game when they got into a shoving match at Los Angeles' end of the court and had to be pulled off each other.

Earlier, Cooper and the Spurs' Edgar Jones exchanged heated words and were warned to cool down or head for the dressing room.

The Spurs battled back to whittle a 12-point halftime deficit to two at the end of the third quarter with the help of 10 third-period points from Mike Mitchell, who was game-high with 35 points, and 11 points from center Artis Gilmore.

Gervin was held to eight points in the first half, four in each quarter, and the Spurs trailed 71-59 at halftime. San Antonio was behind 36-29 after one period.

The Spurs tied the game 98-98 with a Billy Paultz jumper that opened the scoring in the final period, but Los Angeles built up a nine-point pocket, 120-111, with 2:45 left in the game.

Mitchell hit a three-pointer to cut the lead to eight with 2:10 remaining, but the Spurs got no closer the rest of the way.

THE LAKERS' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 26 points and grabbed six rebounds, to Gilmore's 19 points and nine rebounds.

Jamaal Wilkes finished with 25 points for the Lakers, while Bob McAdoo had 14 and Nixon 13. Cooper scored 12 points for Los Angeles before he was thrown out of the game.

Johnny Moore, playing with a painful bruised left calf, finished with 21 points and 17 assists. Banks had 11 before he was ejected.

If you think Mike Mosley was fast at Indy before...

He's back with even faster — if not best — equipment

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Mosley, a 20-year-old lead-foot when he first came to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway 16 years ago, seemed likely from the start to win the Indianapolis 500 one day — or die trying.

He's been seriously injured at the Speedway, and he briefly retired because of the danger of the sport and the tremendous pressure it put on him. But he is back in pursuit of his life's only real interest with the fastest — if not best — equipment of his long career.

"It is a very dangerous business. I know that as well as anybody," said Mosley, reflecting on his career Sunday as rain washed out scheduled qualifications for the second day in a row. "I've thought about retiring. I did quit for six months in 1975 because the pressure got to me.

"But I decided racing was my calling, so to speak, so here I am."

Mosley's top speed in practice last week was 204.1 mph, the third-fastest among 14 drivers who topped 200 mph. The rainouts over the weekend left this coming Saturday and Sunday for time trials to fill the 33-car starting field for the May 29 race.

ONLY SIX of this year's drivers were in the starting lineup when Mosley made his rookie appearance at the track in 1967 — including former winners A.J. Foyt, Gordon Johncock, Mario Andretti, Al Unser and Johnny Rutherford. Mosley, who started driving three-quarter midget racers in 1961, crashed for the first time during practice here and did not make a qualification attempt.

The next year, Mosley qualified 27th and made an impressive debut with a charge to an eighth-place finish, completing 197 of the 200 laps. In 1969, starting 12th, he climbed to third place before an overheated engine forced him out on the 162nd lap for a 13th-place finish.

Mosley continued his by then famous charges in 1970, moving from 12th to fifth near the midway point of the race before a cracked block gave him a 21st-place finish. His first champ-car victory came at Trenton in 1971, but he was severely injured at Indianapolis the next month in a fourth-turn crash with 40 laps to go.

The next year, Mosley was leading the race when his right front wheel came off as he was coming out of the fourth turn, and his car struck the outside wall. After that, he never finished higher than 10th until 1979, when he wound up third behind Rick Mears and Foyt.

"I'm very proud just to be here," says Mosley, who did not drive here last year after finishing 32nd and 33rd, respectively, the previous two years. "Many drivers over the years never got here at all. I've had some bad luck here and some good luck. I think this year, we'll turn it around with some good luck."

MOSLEY PRACTICED at Indianapolis in 1982 but did not even make a qualification attempt.

"We had six motors and blew all of them. I didn't have a chance to get in the qualifying line," he said. "I did consider trying to get another car, but it was just too late and things didn't work out."

Mosley, who has driven in 14 Indy races, now has the use of two new Cosworth-powered March race cars entered by the Kraco team. "We've done a lot of testing, 3,000 miles even before we got here. It looks like it's paid off so far," he said. "We're prepared."

The 204.1-mph lap was in the backup car. His primary racer has had a top lap of 202.9.

"We're going to stay with the No.1 car," Mosley said. "We've made some changes with it and have it as fast as the backup. I feel more comfortable in it now."

Mosley predicted it would take 195-196 mph to make the starting lineup, compared with last year's slow speed of 194.5. He said the pole-position speed could possibly be as high as 206.

The last time the opening weekend of qualifying was rained out completely was in 1978.

Tom Binford, the chief steward of the race, said if the weather is bad again next weekend, the procedure for getting a race field is all spelled out in the rules.

"If we didn't get any qualifying next Saturday and Sunday, it would be extended until everybody in the original line had an opportunity," Binford said. "It's all hypothetical, of course.

"If we got rained out all four days, the only protected qualifying positions are the ones who drew (last) Friday night. They're the only ones who are protected (with a guaranteed chance to make a qualification attempt).

"If we have a sunny day Saturday all day long, it's my feeling anybody who is here will have an opportunity to qualify. Certainly, if we have all weekend."

MEARS, LAST year's record-breaking pole winner and second-place finisher to Johncock, said, "It makes no difference to me if we have to wait a week to qualify. I'm a little disappointed that we've gone to all the trouble to build up an advantage, and now it looks like the other teams will get an extra week of practice. But it's not going to affect how we do."

Tom Sneva, a former track record-holder and runner-up three times in the race, noted another drawback in the delay of qualifications.

"If you have problems in your first qualifying attempt, they might not have time to get back to you," he said.

Muraoka doesn't struggle to UVB Classic win

SUFFOLK, Va. (AP) — Lenore Muraoka, who by winning the $150,000 United Virginia Bank Classic became the first Hawaiian to win on the LPGA tour in 25 years, says "I've been struggling a lot, struggling this year."

But the 27-year-old Muraoka, who began playing golf at the age of 19 only because she injured her ankle playing basketball, was one of the few who didn't struggle Sunday. She fired a 3-under-par 69 for a 54-hole total of 212 and a three-shot victory.

"This is only the fourth cut I've made in 11 tournaments — not a good batting average," said Muraoka, who was six shots behind Dot Germain when the final round opened over the 6,200-yard Sleepy Hole Golf Course.

"I don't know if it's sunk in yet," said Muraoka, who earned a first prize of $22,500 — $20,000 more than she'd won in earlier tournaments this year. "I can't imagine what $22,500 looks like."

Her closing round was more than good enough to beat out three 215 shooters — Debbie Massey and first-day leader Alice Miller, who had 73s, and Stephanie Farwig, who shot a 74 on the windy course.

Germain, who had shot an 8-under 64 Saturday to take a four-stroke lead, had eight bogeys and just one birdie for a 79 that left her tied at 216 with five other players.

"I was getting frustrated that I wasn't making any birdies," said the 35-year-old Germain. "Then I made four consecutive bogeys. The four consecutive bogeys didn't bother me as much as two consecutive three-putts (on the seventh and eighth holes)."

Also at 216 were Sarah LeVeque, whose 68 was the best round of the day; Janet Coles, who had a 70; Catherine Duggan, who shot a 71; Silvia Bertolaccini, 72; and Betsy King, 73.

Bertolaccini was tied with Muraoka at the 15th hole, but knocked her tee shot out of bounds and wound up with a triple bogey that took her out of the running.

The 5-foot-3 Muraoka, a former point guard at the University of Hawaii, caught Germain at the turn with birdie putts of 10, 15 and 10 feet on the fourth, seventh and eighth holes. Germain had bogeyed the sixth through ninth holes.

Muraoka's charge was stemmed somewhat with a bogey on the 10th, where she three-putted, but she then threw a steady string of pars at the field and Germain had bogeys on 12, 13, 14 and 16 before she got her only birdie on the next-to-last hole.

The first Hawaiian winner since Jackie Pung captured the Jackson Open in 1958, Muraoka didn't realize she was leading until she looked at the scoreboard at the 16th hole.

"That was a mistake," she said. "I hit a bad tee shot (after looking at the leader board) and I had to sink a 6-foot putt to save par."

Anderson makes impressive debut

By The Associated Press

USFL

The United States Football League found a new star in its 11th week as Gary Anderson of Tampa Bay made an impressive debut after turning his back on the San Diego Chargers.

Anderson, playing with only four days of practice, gained 99 yards in 18 carries, scored a touchdown and caught four passes for 54 yards to lead the Bandits to a 20-14 victory over Arizona Sunday. The triumph, combined with Chicago's 31-24 loss to Philadelphia, left Tampa Bay in first place in the USFL's Central Division with an 8-3 record.

Three games are scheduled tonight — New Jersey at Michigan, Denver at Boston and Washington at Oakland.

"The coach had briefed me, and I just came on the field and did it," Anderson, who starred for the University of Arkansas. "I had been ready to play since it all worked out with the USFL."

Anderson was a first-round draft choice of New Jersey in January, but failed to sign until after he was drafted in the first round by the Chargers of the National Football League. The Bandits traded a draft choice to New Jersey for the rights to him.

"I had to get adjusted at first," Anderson said. "I had to get a feel for how fast the linemen move so I'd know what to do and where to look to run."

Anderson had several dazzling plays in the game, including a zigzagging 31-yard run up the middle, a 26-yard dash after taking a screen pass from quarterback Mike Kelley, a 15-yard sweep of left end and a 12-yard sweep to the right on which he pranced untouched into the end zone for a touchdown.

Kelley, a former Georgia Tech quarterback who took over for the injured John Reaves and Jimmy Jordan, also stood out for the Bandits. He completed his first six passes and tossed a 4-yard touchdown pass to Eric Truvillion that gave the Bandits a 10-7 lead they never lost.

Kelley went on to complete 21 of 39 passes for 249 yards.

Kelvin Bryant ran for two touchdowns and Chuck Fusina scored another in a 21-point fourth-quarter explosion as the Philadelphia Stars won their 10th game in 11 starts by downing the Blitz.

The Blitz, who went into the game tied with Tampa for the lead in the Central Division, led 24-10 entering the final period. But Bryant scored early in the quarter on a 3-yard run.

Then Chicago quarterback Greg Landry, who threw two touchdown passes earlier, fumbled twice inside the Blitz 20 to set up a 5-yard touchdown run by Bryant and a 17-yard scamper by Fusina.

In a Saturday night game, Birmingham beat Los Angeles 35-20 as Bob Lane threw for three touchdowns and set up two others. Jim Smith, who left the Pittsburgh Steelers to sign with the USFL, caught nine passes and Ken Talton ran for 147 yards on 25 carries.

Battered, bloody but not beaten

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — His face was covered with blood oozing from three cuts from the fifth round on and his left eye was swollen shut. But Bobby Chacon, the World Boxing Council's super featherweight champion, said he never believed that his fight against top-ranked Cornelius Boza-Edwards would be stopped.

Chacon, who knocked Boza-Edwards down twice, once in the final round, survived the bloody cuts to take a unanimous 12-round decision in the non-title battle.

"The referees know me; they're not going to stop the fight," Chacon said. "Another fighter, yeah. But not me. They see the way I fight, I'm a danged fool."

The action-filled fight appeared on the verge of ending several times from the fifth round on as ring doctor Edwin Homanski examined Chacon's swollen eye and cuts in the corner at the end of each round.

Referee Richard Steele stopped the action twice in the late rounds to have Homanski look at Chacon, but both times he allowed the fight to continue.

"They kept saying I could go one more round, but they said it for seven rounds," the 31-year-old champion said. "After the sixth round, I knew they wouldn't stop it."

Boza-Edwards, a former WBC super featherweight champion now ranked No. 1 by the organization, did not complain about the unanimous decision.

"We fought a good fight and Bobby did everything he could to retain his title," he said. "I give him credit for that."

Judge Duane Ford scored the bout 115-113, judge Lou Tabat had it 115-112, and judge Dave Moretti scored it 117-111.

The fight, which was temporarily halted last week when rival promoter Don King won a court injunction stopping it, went on after a California appeals court stayed the motion. King had claimed Chacon had signed a contract with him to defend his title against Hector Camacho for $210,000.

Chacon's left eye began closing in the fifth round and in the sixth, an apparent butt opened a gash under his right eye. The champion began taking control in the late rounds and in the 12th, two straight rights put Boza-Edwards on the canvas.

An exhausted Chacon could not, however, finish off the challenger.

Chacon, of Oroville, Calif., earned $450,000 for the fight, which was televised by NBC from Caesars Palace. Boza-Edwards, a native of Uganda now living in Las Vegas and a former super featherweight champion, received $110,000.

The 31-year-old Chacon held the WBC featherweight crown in 1974 and 1975 and took his current crown last December when he decisioned Rafael "Bazooka" Limon in Sacramento.

But the WBC refused to sanction it as a title fight and also threatened to strip Chacon of his title if he fought Boza-Edwards.

Chacon, 129¾, started quickly, buckling Boza-Edwards' legs in the first round and forcing him to take a standing 8-count.

Cut over his left eye in the second round, Chacon came back to floor Boza-Edwards for the first time late in the round.

But in the third round, a Boza-Edwards left hook dropped the champion, although Chacon quickly got up.

Texas error gives Hogs 5-4 victory

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A misjudged fly ball with the bases loaded enabled Arkansas to score four runs in the sixth inning and defeat Texas 5-4 Sunday night and force another clash on Monday for the Southwest Conference championship.

The three-base error by Texas right fielder Alan Brown came with two outs in the sixth in a game that would have given the Longhorns their fifth straight title in the SWC double-elimination tournament had they won. Arkansas' victory left both teams with a loss.

Arkansas, ranked no. 12, had advanced by eliminating Houston 9-7 earlier Sunday. The Razorbacks will play sixth-ranked Texas for the SWC tournament title Monday night.

THE RAZORBACKS, who have been to the SWC baseball tournament in each of its seven years, are seeking their first title.

Jose Tolentino of Texas lashed a three-run double in the third, and the Longhorns scored an unearned run in the top of the sixth when Arkansas catcher Tom Pagnozzi ran over base runner David Denny for a 4-0 Texas lead. Denny was trying to steal home when Pagnozzi interferred.

Arkansas put five runs on the board in the sixth. The first run of the inning came on a walk, passed ball and a single by Brett Harrison off Texas starter Roger Clemens. After Pagnozzi struck out, Clemens hit Norm Roberts and Mike Loggins singled to load the bases with two out.

Mark Berry then lifted a high fly to right and Brown circled under the ball and lunged for it. But all three runners scored when it bounced away for a three-base error.

Barry went to third and scored on Arkansas' fifth run on Ralph Kraus' triple.

Lester Lancaster, 8-3, got the win in relief of Arkansas starter Rick Huntze, who left after Tolentino's triple. Lancaster allowed the Longhorns only six hits in 6 2-3 innings. He struck out seven.

Clemens, 9-5, got the loss while giving up only four hits and stricking out eight.

Arkansas cracked 16 hits in the first game Sunday against Houston and scored three runs on bases-loaded errors by Corky Swindell and Mike Boaz to eliminate the Cougars from the tournament with a 9-7 victory.

Arkansas trailed 5-3 going into the top of the sixth inning, but loaded the bases with nobody out on three singles, including a two-strike bunt by Jim Ward.

Former champion Nelson Piquet of Brazil placed second in a Brabham-BMW and took the lead in the 1983 drivers' race with 21 points over France's Alain Prost. Prost was third in a Renault turbo and has 19 points.

BASKETBALL

NEW YORK — Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers of the National Basketball Association won the ninth Walter Kennedy Citizenship Award — given by the Professional Basketball Writers' Association of America for service and accomplishments in the community — by the widest margin in the history of the balloting.

Allison wins Mason-Dixon

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Bobby Allison said he knew from the start that he had competitor Darrell Waltrip beaten in the Mason-Dixon 500 stock car race.

Allison won the event Sunday at Dover Downs International Speedway, beating Waltrip by a half-car length in a race completed under caution because of rain.

Allison became the first to win the 15-year-old race back-to-back since he did it in 1970 and 1971.

Before a record crowd of 43,000, Allison and Waltrip dueled for much of the final 100 laps on the one-mile speedway, and were the only drivers to finish on the lead lap. Pole winner Joe Ruttman finished third while Bill Elliott was fourth.

A thunderstorm, which hovered over the speedway for the final 50 miles, finally hit on the 495th lap as the caution flag went out giving Allison his second NASCAR Grand National victory of the season.

Lightning struck nine people minutes after the race was completed, killing a Westminster, Md., couple and injuring a Delaware man and his 14-year-old son. The others were treated at Kent General Hospital.

"I thought we had Darrell beat all along," said Allison. "We were taking it easy because I could see the rain was coming," he added. "But the only thought I had was beating him to the finish line."

Allison's average speed in his Buick Regal was 114.440 mph for 500-lap event. It was the sixth victory at Dover for the Hueytown, Ala., driver, tying him with Richard Petty for most victories ever at the high-banked oval.

Although Waltrip had won three of the last four Grand National races, the victory moves Allison into the Winston Cup standings lead by 41 points over of Harry Gant.

SMU beats Clemson 5-4 despite losing top player

NCAA Tennis

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Top-seeded Southern Methodist, despite having its top player knocked off by Clemson's Rick Rudeen, squeezed past the Tigers 5-4 Sunday and into the semifinals of the team competition in the 99th NCAA Tennis Championships.

Defending national champion UCLA was beaten by No. 4 seed Pepperdine, 5-4.

Second-seeded Stanford and third-seeded Southern California each clinched victories in No. 3 singles matches to advance to the semifinals.

Stanford downed seventh-seeded Arkansas 5-4 and USC beat sixth-seeded Trinity 5-4. The two Pacific-10 Conference teams will face each other in the first semifinal contest at 10 a.m. Monday.

SMU and Pepperdine tangle in the 2 p.m. match.

"It feels really good to win," Rudeen said after beating Rodney Harmon of SMU, the No. 3-ranked player in the country, 6-3, 6-4. "I knew that Rodney is a great player, but I think he's felt a lot of pressure since's been playing so well. There's a lot of pressure on when you're expected to win."

Both Stanford and Southern California wrapped up their victories in the singles matches and defaulted three doubles matches each.

Scott Davis took a straight set 6-4, 6-2 victory over Arkansas's Peter Doohan in the No. 1 singles match, but the Cardinals clinched the victory in the No. 3 singles when Dan Goldie outlasted Pat Serret 10-8 in the tie-breaker of the final set for a 6-0, 5-7, 7-6 victory.

Stanford lifted its record to 22-1 and Arkansas completed its season at 24-9.

USC, 32-4, clinched the victory over Trinity when Tim Pawsat beat David Egdes 7-5, 7-5 in the No. 3 singles. Matt Anger of the Trojans won the No. 1 singles 6-3, 6-2 over Tomm Warneke of Trinity, 22-8.

The Pac-10 thus is assured of a finalist as the conference seeks its 23rd national title in the last 24 years. Trinity broke the streak by capturing the 1972 title.

Blackledge wants KC to pay more

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Todd Blackledge wants to be a National Football League quarterback, but the Kansas City Chiefs must offer the Penn State star more money before he will sign a contract with the club, his agent says.

"They feel we are very high. Likewise, we feel they are very low," Ed Keating, agent for Blackledge, said of the difference in the Chiefs' and Blackledge's contract proposals.

"It's a big gap, but it is not insurmountable."

"I wonder if they're trying to tell me something--paying me in Travelers Checks?"

Islanders can win fourth championship Tuesday

Stanley Cup Playoffs

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Through three games of the Stanley Cup finals, a total of 180 minutes of play, the Edmonton Oilers have led for exactly five minutes and 42 seconds.

Unless the National Hockey League's highest scoring team — a record 424 goals this season — can find a way to get in front of the New York Islanders and stay there, the finals will end here Tuesday night. They will end in a four-game sweep for the Islanders, who would become only the second NHL franchise to win four straight Cups.

"We are not putting the puck in the net when we get the oppportunity," said Oilers captain Lee Fogolin. "If we can get a lead, then we can play our style of hockey game. It's tough always trying to come back."

Especially against an experienced, patient outfit like the Islanders. In Game 1, New York got an early goal from Duane Sutter and, thanks to the magnificent goaltending of Billy Smith, protected it for almost 55 minutes until defenseman Ken Morrow — who has been superb throughout the playoffs — scored into an empty net for a 2-0 victory.

AFTER JUMPING ahead 1-0 in Game 2 on Dave Semenko's shot, the Oilers saw the Islanders score three times in under five minutes later in the first period, then twice in 38 seconds in the middle session to put away that contest, 6-3.

And Saturday night, the Islanders blitzed the Oilers for four goals in the third period, turning a tight 1-1 game in which Edmonton clearly was the aggressor into a 5-1 romp.

"Every one of these games, we've had lapses when we go back to the slow checking style of the Islanders," added Oilers defenseman Randy Gregg. "We have to keep up our fast checking style that no one can beat us at.

"If we can play that way we can be going back to Edmonton for Thursday."

It would seem that Wayne Gretzky will have to erupt as well for Edmonton to prolong the series.

"This is the first time I remember going three important games without a goal," said Gretzky, the record-shattering center who already has set a Stanley Cup mark with 25 assists and 37 points.

Though he has managed three assists on Edmonton's four goals in the series, Gretzky has not bee anything close to the dominant factor he usually is.

"I'm concerned about not scoring," he added. "But I'm getting the opportunities. They just haven't gone in and I have to score to help us win.

"You can't get frustrated. You have to go over what the problems are and try to solve them.

"Smith has been exceptional the whole series. He's made the big saves every time. They're a great team playing exceptionally well.

"It's a big hill to climb but it's not over yet."

THE ISLANDERS, who have won eight straight games in the finals and are on the verge of their 16th successive victorious playoff series, aren't getting overconfident. But they admit to being anxious to get No. 4 and equal the string of the 1976-79 Montreal Canadiens. Montreal won five titles in a row from 1956-60.

"Well, the fourth game means either the Cup for us or a trip back to Edmonton," said Mike Bossy, "and I know which one the guys on our team prefer.

"We've been through a lot of adversity this year. People counted us out, said we didn't have what it takes any more. We had a poor regular season for us (96 points, tied for sixth best in the NHL).

"We're working to prove everybody who said those things were wrong. We only need one more win to prove it and we certainly want it to come here, in front of our fans."

And in four straight against a team that was generally favored to dethrone the champions when the series began.

"We have 19 guys playing their hearts out," Smith noted. "We've said all along we were going to just go out and play our best and hope for the best.

"The best is just one victory away."

Dent strikes 'Gold' with wet rally

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Jim Dent was all smiles despite having spent all day playing golf in the rain. He had just earned $27,000 for winning the Chattanooga Gold Cup Classic.

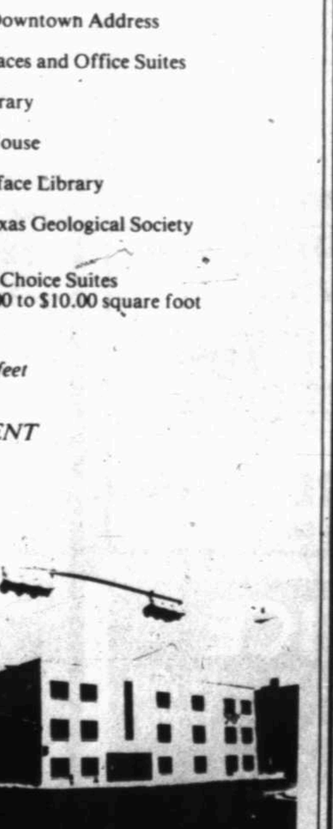

Dent, of St. Petersburg, Fla., who marked his 44th birthday Wednesday, said his victory Sunday at the rain-soaked Valleybrook Golf and Country Club was more than a welcome birthday present. It would please his son, Jim Dent Jr.

"My son asked me the other day, 'When are you going to put your name up top?' So I put it up top for him," Dent told reporters.

He began Sunday's final round at 7-under par 206 for 54 holes, five strokes behind leader Charlie Bolling, who held a two-stroke lead over Gavin Levenson. But while Bolling faded with a bogey on the 12th hole and a double bogey on the 14th, Dent birdied the 14th, 15th and 18th holes to finish at 12 under at 272.

Lance Ten Broeck emerged from the 73-man field to shoot a 3-under par 68 and finish second, a stroke behind Dent, to earn $15,600. Tommy Aaron, the 1973 Masters champion, carded a 1-under 70 to finish third at 274 and win $9,800.

New rules may make prospectus friendlier

By DAVID DIETZ
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Anyone who has ever invested in a mutual fund knows that reading a prospectus is an exasperating chore. Rather than stimulate investor appetite, the documents' clumsy jargon and intimidating appearance tend to spoil it.

Matthew Fink, general counsel of the Investment Company Institute, trade group for the $270 billion mutual fund industry, uses a joke to make the point. "A lot of people who get prospectuses in the mail think they're being sued, instead of being solicited for an investment," he says.

Some relief — but certainly not enough — seems to be coming. After extensive discussion between government regulators and the industry, the Securities & Exchange Commission is soon likely to revise prospectus guidelines with an eye toward providing investors with a clearer, more concise package.

The package is welcome — any reform is better than none at all — but the plan is well short of ideal from an investor's standpoint. Most importantly, it fails to recognize the profound need for reform in the manner in which funds report investment performances.

Rookie investors will continue to have difficulty discovering how successfully a fund has put money to work. The performance of net asset value per share — the bottom line for mutual funds — most likely will remain buried in financial tables. The reason for this is no mystery. When they strike out, funds don't like to see it in bold print in the box score.

Although the industry insists there are legitimate legal hurdles and other problems, funds should be required to report the worth of a hypothetical investment over time — for instance, $10,000 invested 10 years ago was worth $16,000 at the end of 1982, assuming reinvestment of capital gains and dividends — or show how they have performed against key market averages and the rate of inflation. Investors seeking this critical information now must turn to advisory services, which are often difficult to obtain.

So much for the objections. The plan before the SEC does have a few things to recommend it.

If the commission concurs — and it appears likely to — a mutual fund prospectus will be divided into two parts, one essentially containing the important material and the other providing various supplementary information to meet technical requirements. Investors will be provided the essential information automatically. Unless the fund chooses to include it, the shareholder will be required to ask for the additional material.

The main document will be written in plain language and kept short, probably around 12 pages. Among other things, it will contain the purpose of the fund, its investment record, how to acquire and redeem shares, how the adviser is paid, who runs the organization, information on special investment programs such as individual retirement accounts and other disclosures which the government considers "material."

If, for instance, the adviser has been disciplined by securities regulators within the last decade, the principal document will be required to say so. Legal proceedings potentially affecting the fund also will have to be dislosed.

"You'll get nuts-and-bolts things about dealing with the fund's shares," says Mark Mackey, the institute's assistant general counsel. "Hopefully, it'll be a lot less tortured."

The recent makeup of the fund's portfolio, legal matters and technical material will generally be contained in the supplementary package. Fink describes much of it as "language that lawyers have thrown in over the years to protect themselves."

The industry sees the changes as helping it to conduct direct-mail marketing of funds, a power recently won from the SEC.

There is no timetable for adoption of the prospectus changes, although Mackey said he expected the revisions by fall. The formal period in which the public is permitted to comment on the changes has expired, but it's not too late to express an opinion that could sway commission thinking.

An SEC official said the agency has heard little from investors on the proposed changes. If you wish to comment on the issue, write the commission's Division of Investment Management at 450 Fifth St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20549.

PLO chief Yassar Arafat has called for a new war to "redraw the political map of the Middle East". Arafat's remarks were reported by the PLO news agency WAFA.

Hotel owner leads in Haiti's mayoral election

CAP HAITIEN, Haiti (AP) — A hotel owner who has denounced corruption led Cap Haitien's government-backed mayoral candidate today in unofficial returns from Haiti's first free local elections in 26 years of Duvalier family rule.

No incidents were reported in the voting Sunday, but government sources said police seized anti-Duvalier legislator Alexandre Lerouge on election eve and took him to Port-au-Prince, the capital, because they feared he would "stir up" the voters in Cap Haitien, a northern resort town.

Lerouge had campaigned for mayoral candidate Willson Borjella, a 45-year-old hotelier who deplored "corruption on all levels." Borjella also described himself as an independent "friendly with the government."

With more than 50 percent of the estimated 20,000 ballots cast in Cap Haitien counted, unofficial returns showed Borjella with 9,358 votes compared with 3,558 with his only opponent, former appointed Mayor Emmanuel Maisonneuve, the government's choice. The incumbent mayor did not seek reelection.

Official results were expected later.

There were few campaign issues, and candidates in all mther races were considered loyal to President-for-life Jean-Claude Duvalier. He pledged "free and honest elections" in April 1982 because of heavy foreign pressure to relax tight political controls and curb human-rights abuses.

Duvalier became president-for-life after his father Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier died in 1971. The elder Duvalier was elected in 1957 and decreed himself president-for-life shortly afterward.

Sunday's elections were the second round of nationwide municipal balloting, held in six of Haiti's nine departments or counties. Three northwest departments held elections in the first round April 10.

Thousands of Haitians cast ballots in the elections, observed by government officials, the French and U.S. embassies and three-man team sent by the U.S. Congress' Black Caucus.

Voters chose from ballots with the campaign colors of the different slates of candidates. The government said it used colored ballots because millions of Haitians are illiterate.

Officials said 1.2 million Haitians were eligible to vote in the elections for mayors and councilmen.Anyone 18 or older was eligible to vote, but had to register in advance.

Duvalier has yet to set the election date for Port-au-Prince, where one-third of Haiti's 5.5 million people live, including leaders of a small dissident faction.

The United States has said Duvalier must improve human rights conditions to continue receiving its $40 million annual aid package. Haiti is considered the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere.

The posts at stake Sunday carry some local administrative responsibility, though they are answerable to the central government in Port-au-Prince, which sets their budgets.

Members of the 58-seat legislative assembly were elected in 1979 in government-controlled balloting and the assembly has little authority.

Arafat group blasts withdrawal accord

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Yasser Arafat's faction in the Palestine Liberation Organization denounced the Israeli-Lebanese troop-withdrawal plan today and admitted discipline trouble in at least one guerrilla unit in eastern Lebanon.

In a statement released after a six-hour meeting, the central committee of the Fatah group said the U.S.-mediated withdrawal agreement "is dangerous and directly affects Lebanon's sovereignty, pan-Arab security and imposes Israeli dominance over Lebanon."

Fatah said it supported leftist and pro-Syrian elements in Lebanon "who refuse this agreement."

The statement came one day after the PLO news agency WAFA reported Arafat said "the way out of this present deadlock is taking a decision to wage war to change the balance of power."

Arafat's group, largest of the eight factions in the PLO, also said in today's statement that the meeting dealt with "the undisciplined behavior" within an unspecified unit in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and the "misleading and suspicious press campaign which has exaggerated the news."

The statement followed reports in Damascus and Libya that some Fatah units in the Bekaa had refused to follow orders of Arafat and his deputy military commander Khalil Wazir, better known as Abu Jihad.

The reports said the rebel Fatah fighters accused Arafat of trying to compromise the Palestinian cause by agreeing to peace negotiations with Israel, the United States and pro-Western Arab states.

The Fatah statement said Arafat had visited Lebanon twice in connection with the "undisciplined behavior" and the central committee was now satisfied the problem was under control.

Two pamphlets said to have been published by the rebels were delivered early today to The Associated Press in Damascus.

The documents, printed on paper bearing the Fatah seal, accused Arafat of "plotting to sell out the Palestinian cause to the U.S., Israel and Arab reactionary regimes."

They urged other Fatah fighters to join the rebellion against Arafat to "protect your revolution and your cause."

Lebanese parliament endorses agreement

By The Associated Press

The Lebanese Parliament unanimously endorsed the U.S.-mediated troop withdrawal agreement with Israel today, despite Syrian objections that will delay its implementation. The Israeli Knesset convened in Jerusalem to consider formal approval of the accord.

Lebanon's state radio said all 80 members present out of the 91 members of Parliament voted in favor of the Lebanese government signing the agreement. Authorities had ordered extra security for the session, and police sealed off approaches to the mid-city Parliament building.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel did not need the Parliament's approval to sign the pact, because of special powers the body granted him last year and renewed last week. But he wanted the vote as a sign of broad support for the agreement, for which Gemayel is trying to rally Arab backing.

Israel's Parliament conducted what was expected to be a long debate in Jerusalem in preparation for a vote to approve a signing, which could take place Tuesday. Criticism of the agreement cut across party lines, but Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government was expected to win approval for the accord.

"It is not absolutely good, but it can always be said that an agreement could be better," legislator Michael Kleiner of Begin's dominant Likud Party said, defending the pact.

Opposition Labor lawmaker Victor Shemtov criticized the agreement, saying the clause formally ending the state of war between Israel and Lebanon "is not worth the blood of one Israeli soldier."

The parliamentary sessions came one day after Israeli and Lebanese negotiators agreed on the final text of the pact, which calls for Israel to withdraw its 25,000 troops from Lebanon when Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization pull out their forces. Israel says it will consider the agreement void without a Syrian and PLO withdrawal.

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel-Halim Khaddam objected anew to the pact in an interview published today in Beirut's As-Safir newspaper, saying: "This agreement will not pass and will not be implemented because we will not allow it to be passed irrespective of how matters in the region develop."

PLO chairman Yasser Arafat told leaders of his Fatah guerrilla faction Sunday in Damascus that "the way out of this present deadlock is taking a decision to wage war to change the balance of power."

The PLO news agency WAFA, which reported Arafat's remarks, said he exhorted followers to battle the "Zionist-American enemy" and declared that "an effective war is the only way to redraw the political map of the Middle East."

Arafat's forces were forced out of Beirut last summer and dispersed throughout the Arab world as a result of Israel's invasion of Lebanon. PLO sources opposed to Arafat's policies said he has been facing increased dissent from subordinates who think he has compromised the Palestinian cause.

The sources said some Fatah fighters based in eastern Lebanon are defying orders from Arafat's command. They said Arafat called the meeting with subordinates partly to discuss how to quell the defiance.

Fatah issued a statement in Damascus today that repeated denunciations of the troop-withdrawal accord and conceded discipline problems with at least one guerrilla union in eastern Lebanon. The statement did not elaborate on the problem but said it had been solved.

The troop-withdrawal agreement would in effect make Lebanon the second Arab country to recognize the Jewish state. Egypt and Israel normalized relations in 1979.

The pact also calls for joint Lebanese-Israeli patrols in a 28-mile-deep security belt in southern Lebanon to prevent PLO guerrillas from returning to launch raids against northern Israeli towns.

Sources close to the negotiations, who declined to be identified, said the pact does not specify a role for Maj. Saad Haddad, the breakaway Lebanese army officer backed by Israel. They said his status will be covered in unpublished "understandings" accompanying the accord.

In Lebanon, Haddad said the Gemayel government should declare a "war of liberation" against Syria if it refuses to withdraw its troops from eastern and northern Lebanon.

Syria and the PLO contend the withdrawal agreement violates Lebanese sovereignty, threatens Syrian security and gives Israel the military and political goals it sought by invading Lebanon last June 6 to smash Palestinian guerrilla bases.

Syrian President Hafez Assad has refused to compromise despite Lebanese diplomatic efforts, raising the prospect that Syria's 40,000 troops in Lebanon will remain entrenched.

The PLO says it will not withdraw unless Lebanon guarantees the safety of the estimated 400,000 Palestinian civilians there. But it is unclear where the PLO fighters would go.

'Semi-War' alert ends

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea said today it has ended a "semi-war" alert that had been in effect since the start of joint U.S.-South Korea military exercises on Feb. 1.

The Communist nation's state-run Korean Central News Agency said in a dispatch monitored in Tokyo that North Korean President Kim Il Sung canceled the alert. It did not specify when.

Funeral held for ex-president

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid and other top government officials were among those gathering at funeral services for former President Miguel Aleman, who was modern Mexicio's the first non-military head of state.

Aleman, who was president from 1946 until 1952, died of a heart attack Saturday at his Mexico City home. He was 79.

At the funeral ceremony Sunday, de la Madrid stood at attention on a raised platform flanked by his military chiefs of staff while a 21-gun salute echoed in the distance. A six-man guard of honor stood beside the coffin that was draped with the Mexican flag.

Communist leader returns home

PEKING (AP) — Chinese Communist Party leader Hu Yaobang returned to China today after a two-week visit to Romania and Yugoslavia.

The official Xinhua News Agency said Hu, the party general secretary, was greeted by regional party and local leaders during a stopover in China's northwest Xinjiang province.

Vice Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, who accompanied Hu, left Yugoslavia to begin his own visit to Hungary, Poland and East Germany.

More than 300 killed last week

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A Roman Catholic church leader said 364 people were killed in El Salvador during the past week — making it one of the bloodiest weeks during the 3½-year-old civil war.

Monsignor Gregorio Rosa Chavez, auxiliary bishop of San Salvador, did not say how many of the victims were civilians and how many were soldiers or leftist guerrillas. But in the weekly sermon at the Metropolitan cathedral, he condemned terrorism by both left- and right-wing Salvadorans and told worshipers, "The dignity of our brothers has been stepped on once again."

Human rights groups estimate that at least 42,000 people have been killed in the war.

Picasso exhibit to be held

PEKING (AP) — Chinese authorities, although still discouraging their own young painters from producing abstract art, are sponsoring a Picasso exhibit this month that has drawn tens of thousands of people.

On Sunday, 15,000 people visited Peking's Fine Arts Museum to view the 30 oils and graphics of Pablo Picasso, the Spanish-born master who lived in France and was an innovator of cubism and other abstract art forms.

French President Francois Mitterrand opened the exhibit on May 5. It is the first showing of Picasso's works in China and the first abstract exhibit by a Western artist that has not run into trouble here.

Officially, China places no restrictions on art. But the government in practice does not tolerate the production of works that don't lend themselves to socialist ideals or are deemed anti-socialist.

New party formed in Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A group of retired military officers, former government officials and businessmen today announced the formation of Turkey's first new political party since military rule began three years ago.

The Nationalist Democracy Party was registered at the Interior Ministry in accordance with a new law governing political parties which took effect April 24. Elections are scheduled for November.

Heading the new party is Turgut Sunalp, 66, a retired general whose last job was serving as Turkey's ambassador to Canada. Among the founders are two former Cabinet ministers, Ali Bozer and Rifat Bayazit.

According to its leaders, the new party intends to be broad-based and centrist — advocating national unity, economic development and preservation of the westernizing reforms of Kemal Ataturk, founder of the Turkish Republic 60 years ago.

The party supports Turkey's membership in the Atlantic alliance, eventual membership in the European Economic Community and expansion of relations with Arab and other Moslem countries.

These centrist policies of the party and its founders are believed to have the approval and support of Turkey's ruling generals. Sunalp has said that President Kenan Evren endorsed the party's goals.

Elections are scheduled for Nov. 6. Until then restrictions will be imposed on political activities.

The generals have power to "to weed out undesirable elements" among the new parties' leaders.

Wife of Chrysler Corp.'s Iacocca dies at age 57

AP Laserphoto

Mary Iacocca, wife of Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacoccoa, died Sunday morning at William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak, Mich., from complications of diabetes.

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (AP) — The wife of Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee A. Iacocca, who once said she was proud of her husband's success but prouder of his devotion to his family, is dead at age 57.

Mary Iacocca died Sunday morning at William Beaumont Hospital in the Detroit suburb of Royal Oak, where she had been a patient since April 27, hospital spokesman Mike Killian said.

The cause of death was listed as complications from diabetes, a disease from which she had suffered for more than 35 years.

Mrs. Iacocca was with family members when she died. She and her husband had two daughters, Kathi, a Washington public relations account executive; and Lia, a student at Albion College in Albion, Mich. She also is survived by four brothers.

Partly due to poor health, Mrs. Iacocca had led a private life, enjoying gardening, cooking, redecorating and plumbing work in the couple's Bloomfield Hills home as long as her health permitted. Mrs. Iacocca called herself her household's "Miss Fixit" in a 1980 interview, although her family employed a cleaning staff.

"I have my own life," she said at the time. "My greatest desire was to have a happy family life and to raise our children. I'm a housewife."

Mrs. Iacocca met her husband in 1949 when she was a receptionist and he was beginning his career at Ford Motor Co. They married in 1956.

Iacocca was fired in 1978 as president of Ford after 32 years at the company and later that year took over the helm at Chrysler, where he is credited with saving the automaker from bankruptcy.

Mrs. Iacocca once said she was proud of her husband's aggressive efforts at Chrysler, but prouder of his devotion to his family.

Funeral services were scheduled for Tuesday in Bloomfield Hills, with burial in the nearby Detroit suburb of Troy.

NEW YORK (AP) — Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys says he's making a comeback after shedding 100 pounds and dispelling some bad vibrations with the help of round-the-clock therapy.

"I've been through a great deal of mental anguish," the 40-year-old pop star said. "I felt like a fat slob...I used to go onstage and it was scary. Now I'm getting used to it. I feel a little more confidence in myself."

Wilson said he has kicked alcohol and a three-pack-a-day cigarette habit and is sticking to a diet that has brought his weight down to the "low 200s" on his 6-foot-2 frame.

Archibald Cox

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Archibald Cox, the special Watergate prosecutor fired by President Nixon after demanding incriminating tape recordings, says he went deaf in his right ear the morning he received a call to take the job.

Cox, a visiting professor at the University of Colorado School of Law, said he had to cradle the telephone in his left ear to hear U.S. Attorney General Elliot Richardson when he called to tap Cox for the special prosecutor's job.

Cox, now 71, said he told Richardson he would need more time to consider but did not tell of his hearing loss earlier that morning.

Cox said he later found out the hearing loss was permanent and told Richardson before taking the job.

"I didn't think it was wise to begin my Watergate investigation with the cover-up," he said in a recent interview. "I told Elliot Richardson about the problem and he still urged me to take the job. So I did."

Maureen Reagan

SEATTLE (AP) — Maureen Reagan, the president's 42-year-old daughter, says if American women want something done about feminist issues, they should do it themselves.

"We need more shelters for battered women, more rape-crisis clinics and more help for working women with children to support, and there's nobody out there to do it for us but us," Ms. Reagan told the Washington State Women's Political Caucus on Saturday night.

She said she lobbies her father, but denies she has any special clout.

"As far as he's concerned, I want every member of the Cabinet to be a woman," she said. "We discuss these things often. I wouldn't say I have real clout, but I do bring up the subject and I say 'thank you' a lot."

Ms. Reagan was defeated in a bid for the California Republican nomination for the Senate last year.

Any drug can cause adverse side effects

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father started taking drugs for high blood pressure about a year ago. The drugs made him very drowsy so the doctor switched him to another drug and my father did OK. Now he has started taking some medicine for arthritis, and he has become depressed and irritable. Is it possible that he's depressed because of the arthritis, or can the trouble be with the drugs again? — Mr. B.W., Boston

Dear Mr. W.: Any drug can cause adverse side effects, including depression and irritability, and this includes drugs used in the treatment of arthritis. As you and your father know from his experience with antihypertensive medication, a change in the medication or in the dosage may be sufficient to eliminate these side effects.

I suggest that your father's physician be made aware of your father's complaints. If the medication is responsible for the symptoms, a similar change in the drug or in the dosage may be all that is needed.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was one of a group of young women (all of us under 28 years of age) at a social gathering and we got to discussing the Pap test. We all agreed it was a good idea to go for the test periodically, but there was disagreement about how often it should be done. Each gynecologist seems to have a little different recommendation. Isn't there agreement on how often a Pap test should be done. — Vi, New York City

Dear Vi: As you have learned, there are differences of opinion over the recommended intervals between Pap tests. The American Cancer Society has recommended that Pap smears be done every five years for women under 30 years of age, but not all physicians are in agreement.

Dr. Ralph Richart of the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City maintains that the five-year interval is excessively long and would increase the risk of death from cervical cancer. He notes that the number of sexual partners a woman has is the most important risk factor for cancer of the cervix, and, for many women, early intercourse with multiple partners has become the rule. On the other hand, women who are celibate or who have only one sexual partner have relatively no risk of cervical cancer.

Since not all women have the same risk of cervical cancer, it follows that the intervals between Pap smears should not all be the same. The specific interval is best determined by each woman's gynecologist on the basis of her specific risk factors.

For Ms. M.M., New Haven, Conn.: Exposure to rubella (German measles) infection during the first three months of pregnancy will result in a spontaneous abortion in about 50 percent of women. The remaining fetuses, as you note in your letter, are at risk for a variety of disorders.

The possibility of damage becomes less likely as the pregnancy progresses and the fetus matures. There are no known adverse effects from exposure to rubella during the third trimester.

Animators make cartoons old-fashioned way

CASTLE SHANNON, Pa. (AP) — Animators Jim Allan and Phil Wilson are making children's cartoons the old-fashioned way, one painstaking frame at a time, in a two-man battle against "that Saturday morning stuff, that herky-jerky 'Flintstones' look."

Allan and Wilson, disciples of the first super-hero of cartoons, Walt Disney, own a fledgling animation studio in suburban Pittsburgh, one of the few American studios producing "full animation" cartoons for kids.

"We're trying to put the quality back in cartoons. Cartooning of old is a lost art," Wilson said in a recent interview. "It seems everyone is going to the Saturday morning stuff and so the kids are only seeing the junk. They just don't know good animation."

Allan, 43, and Wilson, 34, quit their government graphic arts jobs four years ago to open their studio. They have produced two feature cartoons, three public service commercials and a one-minute opening to a television cooking show.

Their first 24-minute cartoon, a Christmas-theme feature called "A Star for Jeremy," took a year to produce and has been played six times on a national cable television channel.

Their second effort, titled "Allison and the Magic Bubble," a cutesy feature about a little girl meeting a space alien, took two years of work and $500,000. It has yet to be seen publicly.

"We'll never be like Disney. We'll never have classics like a 'Fantasia' or a 'Pinocchio,'" Wilson said. "But we want to be successful and hold onto the highest quality we can."

"Full animation" cartoons like the famous Disney productions use at least 12 new drawings for each second, or 24 frames, of film. In full animation, some drawings can be used for two frames.

"With two drawings in a row, the eye sees the action smoothly," Wilson said. "But with real fast action, like a cat pouncing on a mouse, you may need a new drawing every frame to show fast and furious action."

A 24-minute fully animated cartoon can use more than 17,000 individual drawings over about 34,000 frames of film.

Most modern cartoons save on time and production costs with "limited animation." This technique uses as few as six drawings per second and often results in stuttered action.

"When you watch the Saturday morning stuff and you know what to look for you can see spots that suddenly appear and disappear, mouths that suddenly aren't there, buttons that change color," Wilson said. "The kids don't notice this and, even if they do, they're likely to laugh at it."

To make cartoons, a soundtrack is produced first, locking in the action for the animators who must make their characters conform to the sound. Individual drawings are penciled and videotaped to check the movement for smoothness.

The characters are redrawn onto clear acetate sheets and colored with acrylic paint. The sheets, one for each frame, are layered over a painted background and then photographed one at a time on 35mm film. Eight seconds of action might take an hour just to film.

"Everything is so precise," Allan said. "You have to have every action thought out in advance."

Allan and Wilson's small studio in an old garage employs up to 21 workers who help draw, paint and photograph the cartoon over many months. Between cartoons, the studio is nearly vacant.

In contrast, the acknowledged leader of full animation cartoons, Walt Disney Studios of Burbank, Calif., has more than 500 people working on "The Black Caldron," its next movie-length feature set for release in 1985, according to a Disney spokeswoman.

Allan and Wilson concede Disney is their idol and say Disney's studio is their corporate role model. Wilson once spent $160 for Disney's autograph.

"But if we went out to work with Disney, we'd be just a drop in the bucket," Wilson said. "We'd rather be our own bucket."

Meanwhile, the animators said they are expanding and learning with each cartoon. Their first cartoon had stars in the sky; the second had stars with a twinkle.

They plan to begin a third cartoon shortly, an Easter or Halloween special for 1984.

"We're trying to keep the violence down, to keep it wholesome, to provide a moral or a lesson for the kids," Wilson said. "If we have good guys against the bad guys, we make sure the good guys win."

Horowitz shows that he's still master of piano music

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz wound up a concert Sunday night zipping through the fast passages of Chopin's "Polonaise in A flat major" in a speed that might be called reckless.

But if the 79-year-old Horowitz wanted to show that he's still master of piano music of the Romantic era, he did just that at the Metropolitan Opera.

After intermission, he played all Chopin — "Polonaise Fantaisie," three etudes and the "Polonaise in A flat major." There was lightning and thunder, dazzling speed, power and volume. But there also were lyrical passages taken with a featherweight touch, evocative melodies that stir memories, pulling at vague feelings of melancholy and longing.

The sold-out concert began with Beethoven's "Sonata in A major." Horowitz seldom plays Beethoven or anything from the classical period. Program notes refer to this piece as Romantic and the most intimate and informal of Beethoven's last group of five sonatas. Horowitz played as Romantic music and not classical.

When he moved on to Schumann's 21-part "Carnaval," the masterful sound of Horowitz asserted itself for the first time and remained to the end of the concert.

Horowitz, who often uses brief sections from "Carnaval" in encores, played the entire work brilliantly.

To insure that no sound was lost on the stage, the piano was on the raised orchestra pit, the Met's stage curtain was closed behind him and a tall wooden screen ran across the stage in front of the curtain.

Drug may suppress desire to drink

CHICAGO (AP) — Lithium, a drug normally used to treat manic-depressive disorders, could be effective for alcoholics by "suppressing the desire to drink," according to a new study.

Research conducted at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center indicates that lithium appears to biologically weaken a person's desire for alcohol.

"We really started the study to test the effect of lithium on depression in alcoholics but found instead that it affected their craving for alcohol," said Dr. Jan A. Fawcett. "It probably acts on the brain to decrease the initial positive response to alcohol, thereby suppressing the desire for alcohol."

Lithium is a soft, silver-white metal that contains biological properties similar to those of iron and zinc. It is the lightest of all metals and its biological use must be closely monitored to avoid side effects.

Author carries readers 'somewhere over the Pecos'

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

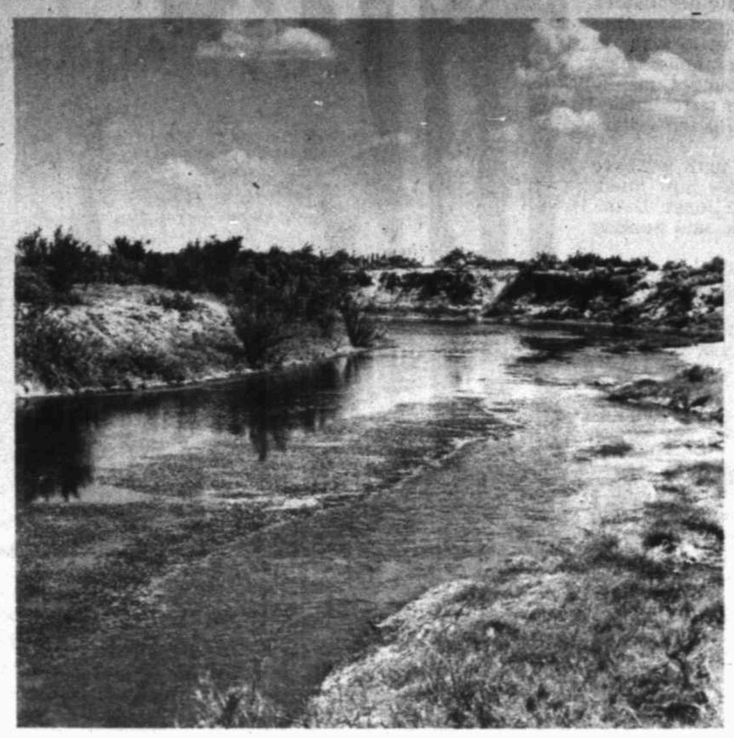

CRANE — His books are dust devils which carry readers "somewhere over the Pecos" to never-never lands born of folklore and satire.

To a wide spectrum of West Texans, he's known simply as "Paul" or "Mr. Pat," this 74-year-old historian, tale-teller and novelist who has spent a lifetime exploring the humor and legends of Pecos pilgrims. Behind his byline of "Paul Patterson," those anecdotal slices of reality become the offbeat, the unforgettable.

Take his as-yet unpublished novel, "Sheepherder: the Saga of a Slow, yet Steadfast, Lover", which typifies the Crane resident's tongue-in-cheek perception of West Texas. "This sheepherder comes from a farm down in East Texas out here and starts herding sheep for a big ranch," recounted Patterson, taking a break from research in Crane County Library. "He's as pure as driven snow, bashful and has no sense of humor — on the order of Gomer Pyle."

But the most distinguishing characteristic of this sheepherder, said Patterson, is his "peculiar power over horses, women and snakes, though he doesn't realize it."

Like a true pioneer, his protagonist "wins a girl's hand in marriage against all odds."

It's the land of the Pecos of which Paul Patterson writes, that rugged stretch of West Texas through which a once-treacherous river courses. "I once lost a hundred people leading 'em to Horsehead Crossing," he reflected, tongue-in-cheek, on the time an organizational outing went astray.

REALITY BLENDED with fantasy and spiced with West Texas tradition — they're the factors which tickle Patterson's broad funny bone.

"A real cowboy wouldn't be caught dead reading Pecos Bill because it doesn't ring true to Texas tradition," said Patterson, whose characters in his 1947 novel "Sam McGoo and Texas Too" (The Naylor Company, San Antonio) don't suffer the same pitfalls. "For example, Sam and his friend Willie went down to Santa Elena Canyon on the Rio Grande. They needed a bath like they always did, so ol' Sam dived off into this canyon 1,800 feet and hollered back up at Willie, 'Dive in! The water's fine!' Willie was so chicken he rode up the river to where the bluff was only a thousand feet high and dove off."

Patterson says he never got very far in life — just 27 miles from Upland where he started school. The town became a ghost when the railroad bypassed it for Rankin, an event which launched Patterson and his family on a long circle.

"We moved 36 times in a covered wagon — one time from Roscoe to Balmorhea which is about 250 miles," he recalled. "Down at the Folklife (Festival in San Antonio), they have a covered wagon that they take these kids around on...They pay a dollar and a half an hour. I felt like going out there every hour and giving 'em that dollar and a half because I DIDN'T have to ride it."

Patterson returned to his homeland in 1920 and attended Rankin High School. "You couldn't call me precocious, because I was 21 years old when I got out of high school," he remembered. "We'd go out and cowboy a while, come back, and go to school. Then I went to Sul Ross, and I was 26 years old when I got out of there."

THE WRITING bug already had bitten Patterson by then, urged on by the folklore of the Pecos. "I heard a lot of real good stories," he said. "Some stuck in my memory, some didn't. I saw I never was gonna set the world on fire by writing, so I began to gather these stories and put them down...Some of the most gripping stories I ever got were from people that said 'Nothing ever happened to me.' "

Though he had written a few stories in high school, his first publication came as a student on the Davis Mountains campus of Sul Ross. "Whiz Bang Magazine was quite daring in those days, and times were real hard," he recalled. "In 1933 I got a four-line rhyme in Whiz Bang and they paid me $2.50. Like James Thurber, I started burning with a hard, fume-like flame.

"But, like they say, fortune takes something out of a person. So in one bright, galvanic flash I guess I'd written myself out, 'cause it was nine years before I sold anything else."

That "anything else" was an article in The Cattleman for which Patterson received $20.

Meanwhile, an entire generation of West Texans was beginning to benefit from Patterson's affability. In 1937 he found himself the emcee of a "hillbilly" radio program in Fort Worth at $18 a week. It only lasted three months, he said, because "those farmers preferred their corn on the cob rather than on the air. But it was a good experience — it taught me that I oughta be teaching school."

HE PROCEEDED to do just that for the next 40 years, endearing the name "Mr. Pat" in the hearts of students in Sanderson, Crane and Sierra Blanca. "I taught Spanish, I taught journalism, I taught civics, I taught history — sort of a miscellaneous," he said. "It's a wonder I didn't have to sweep out."

His first booklength work, "Sam McGoo and Texas Too," was begun in the most unlikely of locales — war-torn Africa. Upon its publication, it carried illustrations by a then-little known Crane native and former Patterson student: Elmer Kelton, now a noted western novelist.

Patterson tried slapping leather for his next project, a shoot-'em-up western entitled "Louder than Guns." Unable to find a prospective publisher ("rejection slips roll off me like water off a duck's back," he said), Patterson opted for vanity publication in 1956.

This longtime member of the Texas Folklore Society, who said he's tried to name every book he's ever written "Pecos Pilgrim's Progress," found that society to be a ready sponsor for his 1967 work, "Pecos Tales." The hardbound volume is an anthology of profiles of the colorful pioneers with whom he has crossed paths.

MEANWHILE, the stories lurking in the recesses of his memory began to gnaw at him, finding ultimate expression in a book which explores the Pecos as it once was.

"Times change; people change," he reflected in consideration of the work. "The more people there are, it seems like the more they change. I was astounded and amazed at how little people knew how things were in the old days, especially out here. Used to be, there wasn't any entertainment except what people made themselves...

"I knew a man named Buck Harmon who would stay in a line camp out here eight months and never see a man, woman or child, never saw anybody. The longest I ever stayed out by myself without seeing anybody was nine days. Of course, I had two tom cats and I got to talking to them, but that wasn't so bad. When they got to talking back to me, well, I needed company."

But today, he said, such occurrences are unknown.

"People are just crowded in with people and it makes them different. Some of the women out here actually lost their mind, lost their reason, from pure loneliness. In 1907 a bunch of nesters came out here, thought they could farm. It was too dry to farm...They all went broke and went back east. But meantime a lot of the women lost their minds. They supposedly found one poor woman that lost her reason crouching up on the rafters of a nester's shack."

PATTERSON HAD three older brothers, who often drew upon that legend to keep him in a state of semi-hysteria as a youngster.

"They had me believing all those nester's shacks that'd been abandoned had crazy women in them. I was especially afraid of crazy women because they were supposed to have such incredible strength — it took four or five men to bring in this little woman they found."

That legend tempered with Patterson's philosophical insight reached fruition in "Crazy Women in the Rafters," published in 1976 by The University of Oklahoma Press.

And then, said Patterson, are those manuscripts which still gather grains of Pecos sand on his shelves. "I couldn't call 'em homing pigeons; they're more like homing turkeys — about six," he said.

Park Service reaches halfway point in two-year study of mountain lions

Staff Writer

PINE SPRINGS — Amid controversy and lawsuits, the cries of animal lovers and curses of predator haters, the National Park Service has reached the halfway point in a two-year $30,000 study of the habits of mountain lions in Guadalupe Mountains and Carlsbad Caverns national parks.

Confronted by reports by ranchers in the vicinity of the parks of cougar-related deer losses as well as sheep and calf losses, NPS officials want to alleviate a dearth of solid evidence regarding the cats. The original contract was let a year ago to Harvey and Stanely Associates, Inc. of Alviso, Calif., to accumulate information so an environmental assessment statement can be made.

"We're about to let the contract for the final year of the study," noted Jim Walters, NPS resources management specialist. "It's going very well as far as the park service is concerned."

The project consists of a trapper treeing the mountain lions with dogs so they can be tranquilized and outfitted with radio telemetry collars.

"We've collared a total of five, and one was recently killed by a neighboring rancher," said Walters. "So now we have four collared. We'd like to put additional collars on some more animals in this next year's efforts."

The NPS, he noted, would like to collar as many as 15 mountain lions.

Already, said Walters, information regarding the habits of the animals is being gained.

"We're beginning to learn some basic information regarding basic numbers, home range and movement, though right now it's all just preliminary information," he said. "We want to learn as much about the ecology of the mountain lion as possible, his food habits, his distribution range. What we're basically trying to do is get some reliable information to make a national recommendation."

While ranchers and others close to the ranching industry claim the area has seen a tremendous increase in mountain lions in the past decade, Walters indicated that with no prior study ever having been undertaken, such claims have no hard data to back them up.

"We find for the most part there's an awful lot of guessing taking place without any reliable biological data regarding impact to draw conclusions from. We've found that the lack of information on all aspects of this problem has been a major handicap in trying to find a solution to it."

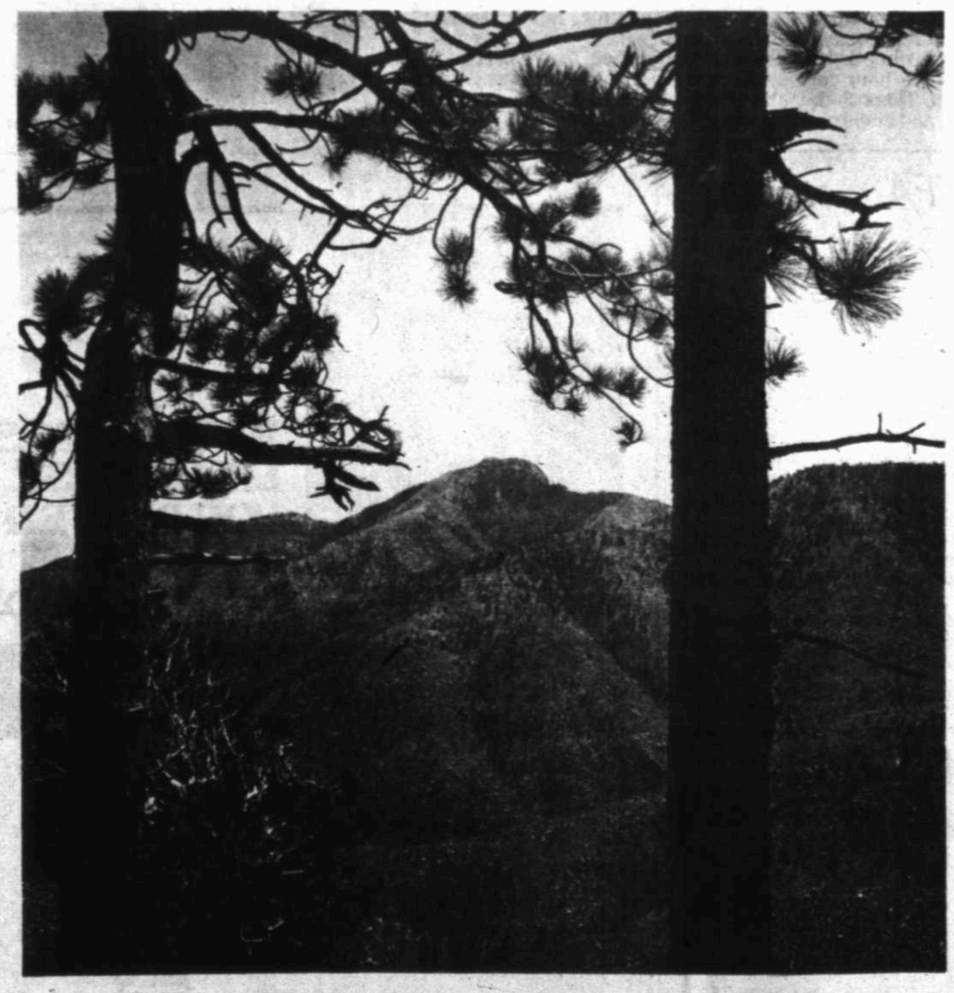

"We find for the most part there's an awful lot of guessing taking place without any reliable biological data regarding impact to draw conclusions from," he said. "We've found that the lack of information on all aspects of this problem has been a major handicap in trying to find a solution to it."

Because of that lack of information, Walters said the NPS is not really sure whether the mountain lion population has increased.

Faced with reports by southeastern New Mexico ranchers of stock losses, New Mexico Game and Fish Department officials have expressed desires to pursue mountain lions into Carlsbad Caverns National Park and kill them. At the opposite end of the spectrum, however, lies a lawsuit filed by Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund and Defenders of Wildlife challenging the right of anyone to slay or collect mountain lions on national park lands.

"It's a complicated issue," said Walters.

"By principle, wildlife is preserved and protected within a park," Guadalupe Mountains and Carlsbad Caverns national parks superintendent William Dunmire has said. "But if this becomes a crisis situation we're going to have to look for ways to assist the ranchers without going into a new policy."

Mrs. Martin died Friday in a Midland hospital following a brief illness.

Pallbearers were to be Ray Drost, Lowell Thurman, Sidney Hart, Charlie Welch, David Darwin and Charlie Dodd.

Legislative negotiators to meet again

AUSTIN (AP) — House and Senate negotiators, determined to keep 1984-85 state spending within present revenue estimates, meet again today as they near the end of a week of compromise talks.

Several major issues remain unsolved, mainly House and Senate differences over state employees pay raises and increased benefits for welfare children.

"I think we will have to wait until we have been through everything and see how much money we have left," Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, head of Senate negotiators, said Sunday after a six-hour session.

"We've still got some more work, but we are getting close to the end," said Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan.

The committee worked both Saturday and Sunday and earlier, there has been hopes the bill could be completed Sunday.

The appropriations bill passed by the House calls for a 4.5 percent increase for state employees one year and 2 percent the next. The Senate bills calls for 4 percent each year.

The Senate bill contains no increase for Aid to Families of Dependent Children while the House bill would raise AFDC payments about $5 from the current average $43 monthly payment.

Neither bill contains increased pay for teachers, in addition to the 2 percent to 9 percent already called for in present law.

Construction and renovation plans at numerous state colleges and universities found no support with the committee on Saturday and Sunday.

Tentative action in striking out appropriations that had been made in either the Senate or House bills included:

— Voting down a $2.5 million field house at East Texas State University but approving a $1.5 million library addition at East Texas' Texarkana branch.

— Cutting a proposed $16 million appropriation for an architecture building at the University of Houston to $12.5 million, plus $2.1 million for demolition of five buildings to make room for the new structure.

Motive lacking in Odessan's death

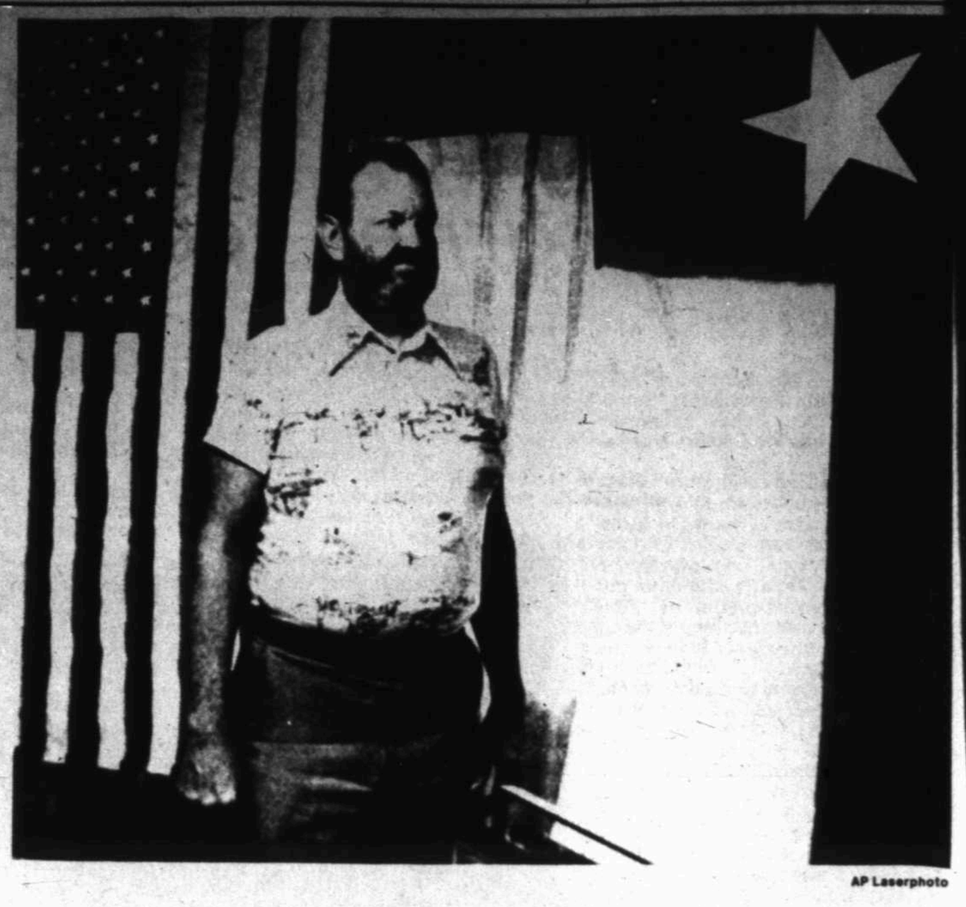

ODESSA — Odessa police have no suspects or motives in the murder of a 28-year-old Odessa man who was found in a car parked outside a lounge Saturday night with a bullet wound to the head.

The man, who later died at Odessa Medical Center, was identified as Gilberto Salinas Casas Jr. of Route 1, Box 198.

According to Lt. Rusty Baker, an unidentified Mexican male ran into the Chihuahua Club, 607 Magnolia, around 9 p.m. and told patrons that a man had been shot.

A woman notified police from a phone next door. When officers arrived, they found Casas sitting in a car with a bullet wound to the left side of the head. He was transported to the hospital where Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee pronounced him dead at 1:15 a.m. Sunday.

An autopsy is scheduled for later today and the investigation is continuing.

Somewhere, somehow, the government of the United States went wrong. And old Mack McGee, of Porter, Texas, is going to set it straight. McGee, standing between flags of the United States and Texas located in his courtroom, have banded together to form what they call Southern District of Texas Township in this small community north of Houston.

Man wants country to return to 'Constitution and God's law'

PORTER, Texas (AP) — Mack McGee wants to do away with income taxes, birth certificates and marriage licenses.

He wants to eliminate standing armies, orphanages, police departments, paper money, licensing of doctors and lawyers, prisons, public schools, the last 16 amendments to the U.S. Constitution and every law ever passed by Congress.

"In order to save herself, America has to return to the Constitution and to God's law," McGee, a bearded man with a paunch, says. "That's all we need. The Constitution and God's Law."

And down here, in an unincorporated community just north of Houston, some people are listening — with results they didn't expect.

McGee and his anti-tax comrades helped create a "government" called the Southern District of Texas Township.

Operating from a garage loft and even printing its own kind of money, the group found it went too far when it tried to haul a municipal judge into its court.

The judge responded — but he brought along law officers and arrest warrants, and led some leaders away in handcuffs to face felony charges of tampering with government documents.

But McGee, 49, of Irving, insisting his government is as legal as any, says, "We have the jurisdiction of law and we are the just government." The group still has typewriters and a copying machine to produce its documents.

The group churns out reams of documents about its mission, sending them to President Reagan, Texas Gov. Mark White and county officials.

The papers all have one theme: The people in the Township are free Americans, bound only by the Constitution, and no officials have any right to do anything to them.

The Township claims about 100 members, many of them unemployed. Those who do work boast they never pay a dime of income taxes. It is affiliated with a Dallas group called the Forefathers, an income-tax protest movement, Montgomery County District Attorney Jim Keeshan said.

The garage headquarters — which also is the courtroom where Judge Joe Kroll of the city of Willis was summoned last week — is crammed with typewriters, the copier, law books, flags and a plywood judge's bench.

Odessa officers slightly injured in scuffle with angry motorcyclist

ODESSA — An Odessa police officer was transported by ambulance to a hospital following a scuffle with an angry motorcyclist who assaulted the two officers who pulled him over for a traffic violation Saturday afternoon.

Taken to Odessa Medical Center was Officer Brad Neighbors, who, along with Officer Bryan Yancey, was treated for bruises and released following the incident.

According to Lt. Rusty Baker, the pair had stopped a Mexican male driving a motorcycle with a young woman holding an infant on the back. The man was "angry and had a cocky attitude," police reports stated.

Baker said the man refused to remove items blocking his plates and vehicle inspection sticker and said he did not have his driver's license with him.

He finally thrust his license at the officers and behaved in an aggravated manner. When the man reached for his license, the officers told him he was under arrest and asked him to step over to the patrol car in an attempt to move him away from the woman and child, Baker said.

The man swung and hit Neighbors in the shoulder and backed up with his fists doubled in the air. When Yancey came over to assist, the man became "violent and was striking the officers with his feet and hands," Baker said.

The man pulled the officers to the ground, grabbed Neighbors' hair and repeatedly beat his head against the pavement. The man tried to get Neighbors' service revolver from his holster, but Neighbors pinned his hand.

The trio was broken up when other officers arrived and Neighbors was taken to the hospital in an ambulance.

The man was jailed and two charges of assault on a peace officer, a charge of not carrying insurance liability and two charges of allowing persons under 18 years of age to ride on a motorcycle without protective headgear are expected to be filed.

They include the aforementioned "Sheepherder," the last chapter of which garnered Patterson an O. Henry award in 1961; "Tour's a Crowd," a character-interplay novel based on a mini-bus trip through Europe in 1957; "Noah's Prairie Ark," a children's book; "Picture of Life's Other Side," an autobiographical work; "Backfire Trail," a western which he said "backfired"; and "Handed-Down History," a montage of true stories he's picked up over the years.

WHEN HE'S not writing or revising or researching, Patterson's pursuing his livelihood as a story-teller, spinning tall tales by the hour for Texas Folklife Festival, Texas Folklore Society functions, and club banquets. "What I lack in depth, I make up for in length," he noted.

While this Pecos River philosopher has the dry wit of a West Texas Will Rogers ("If I let my political persuasions stand in the way, not only would I not have any friends, I wouldn't have any relatives either"), he also has a serious side.

"I don't have much time left, but I don't worry about it," he said. "I'm gonna leave a lot of my manuscripts with my nephew — he has a knack for writing, ("Handed-Down History") will eventually sell, but it might not go in my time."

Maybe. Maybe not. But it seems certain that, within the hearts of those he has touched, Paul Patterson will leave even a greater legacy — the effect of a lifetime of genuine concern.

Midlander hospitalized after one-car accident which damaged utility pole

A Midland man was hospitalized after a one-car accident Sunday morning that damaged a utility pole.

Kevin D. Howerton, 18, of 110 W. Pecan was in fair condition today with a possible hairline fracture to his pelvis, said a Midland Memorial Hospital spokesperson.

According to police reports, Howerton was driving east on Golf Course Road about 6 a.m. Sunday. Apparently when he turned onto Scharbauer Drive, he failed to make the curve, striking a utility pole, police reports indicated.

Howerton's pickup struck a curb, hit a fence, the utility pole and then hit a block wall.

Sara St. Clair, a spokesperson for Texas Electric Service Company, said this morning the pickup apparently broke a pole that was holding up a transmission line.

"Power was lost about three minutes, but it wasn't caused by the pickup," Ms. St. Clair said, adding that electric service was turned off to switch power over to another line while repairs were started.

According to Ms. St. Clair, the replacement pole took six to seven hours.

Masked man robs convenience store

ODESSA — A masked man pulled a small caliber gun on a clerk at an Odessa convenience store and ran off with $2,548.97 Sunday morning, according to Odessa police.

Lt. Rusty Baker said clerk Susan Kirk reported the man, who wore a mask made out of a black T-shirt, entered the store at 7:20 a.m., jumped over the counter, pointed the gun at her and demanded the deposit bag.

The woman said she didn't have the keys, but the man insisted. When Ms. Kirk gave the man the bag, he also grabbed $47 lying on the counter.

Reports indicate the man fled the store, ran down Muskingum to 7th Street and pulled off his mask. The clerk identified him as a 6-foot, light-skinned black male with a reddish-brown afro and glasses. He was slender, weighing about 135 pounds, and in his early 20s. He was wearing blue jeans with a design on the back pockets and a pullover brown shirt.

Big Spring man injured in shooting

BIG SPRING — A 21-year-old Big Spring man was in satisfactory condition in Malone-Hogan Hospital this morning after suffering gunshot wounds to the neck and shoulder Saturday night.

Tony Deel walked into United Health Care Center, a nursing home, at approximately 9:30 p.m. Saturday after having sustained the wounds a block away at Birdwell Park, said a Big Spring Police Department spokesman.

The wounds reportedly were inflicted by a handgun. Officers are continuing the investigation.

Midland FFA members win area recognition

Several Future Farmers of America members from Midland High School were recognized at the Area II convention Friday and Saturday at Angelo State University in San Angelo.

Receiving area awards were Roland Kriethe, star Lone Star farmer agri-business; Johnny Casbeer, star greenhand award; Amber Price, sales and service for production; and Kayla Bryant, sales and service for co-op.

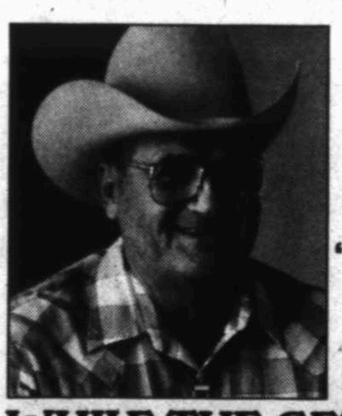

All four qualified for competition at the state FFA convention July 12-15 in San Antonio.

Approved for the Lone Star Farmer degree on a state level were Miss Bryant, Kriethe, Lance Simmons, Steve Sparkman and Steve Mitchell.

DEAR ABBY

Live-in has roommate wanting out

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My best friend, Nora, and I moved into an apartment together, agreeing to go 50-50 on the rent and food. (We're both young women.) When we took this apartment, Nora said nothing about her boyfriend spending nearly every night here in addition to eating breakfast and dinner here. I'm talking five out of seven nights a week, Abby. He comes here directly from work, showers, has dinner with us, watches TV, and then he and Nora go to bed.

At the moment, Nora and I are not talking, except to argue about the grocery bills. She says he is her "guest," but as it turns out, he is "our" guest, and I don't like it. Also, our landlady has been making some nasty cracks about the man who practically lives with "us" and I am tired of them.

I like this apartment and don't want to move. Nora also likes it. We have another seven months to go on our lease. Thanks for any advice you can offer. – THREE IS A CROWD

DEAR THREE: Start talking to Nora. Tell her that when you took the apartment together you didn't count on her boyfriend moving in.

Tell her further that it's not fair and it's not working, and since she's the one who changed the rules, she should either move or limit her boyfriend's visits. If she refuses (as she probably will), it's your move.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle an endless argument we have had going in our family. We agree that the children of our sisters and brothers are our nieces and nephews, and our first cousins are the children of our aunts and uncles. But who are first cousins "once removed"?

I say that they are the same as second cousins, but others in the family say I am wrong. If I'm wrong, please straighten this out and tell me why. – ALL MIXED UP

DEAR MIXED UP: First cousins once removed are the children of your first cousins. A second cousin is the child of your first cousin once removed.

DEAR ABBY: Fifteen years ago I married a girl who was pregnant with another man's child. She had a son (I'll call him John) who thinks I am his father. I divorced John's mother when he was small. I have since remarried and have two sons of my own. We all live in the same town and see John quite often.

I would like to let John know that I am not the real father. I hate living a lie, and believe he has the right to know the truth and look for his real father. I want my two sons to inherit my business.

Several people in this small town know the truth, and I think it would be better if John heard it from me than from someone else. I care very much for the boy and don't want to hurt him. – NO TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO TOWN: Since John is now 15 and there is a possibility that someone else might tell him – the sooner you tell him, the better. You don't mention John's mother or her feelings. She should have a say in the matter.

I hope you are aware that even though you aren't John's biological father, you are his LEGAL father, and as such you may have the same legal responsibilities to this boy as to your other sons. See a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: About battered husbands: Scott Fitzgerald said, "Psychiatrists say, 'Big men make docile husbands' ... and so do big women."

New leads for anorexia

BOSTON (AP) — A newly discovered hormonal imbalance in people who deliberately starve themselves may help doctors understand the causes of the ruinous dieting obsession called anorexia nervosa.

The victims frequently are bright and talented young women who grow dangerously thin because of an irrational desire to lose weight. The cause of their disorder is unknown, and doctors are unsure whether it is strictly a behavioral disorder — the result of their upbringing — or whether it may be influenced by some underlying biological abnormality.

Although the evidence is still far from conclusive, a study published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine provides clues that these people have a hormonal irregularity that could touch off their bizarre behavior.

In a study on 16 anorexic women, doctors from the National Institute of Mental Health and the University of Chicago School of Medicine found abnormalities in their secretion of vasopressin, a hormone that regulates the body's water balance.

Ordinarily, when people eat salt, their brains secrete extra vasopressin. This instructs their kidneys to retain water.

But this regulatory system is broken in anorexic women. The amount of vasopressin in their blood fluctuates, but it does not rise smoothly as salt levels increase.

Dr. Philip W. Gold, who directed the study, said he believes that the erratic hormonal response could be a crucial biological change that turns an ordinary diet into a dangerous obsession.

But whether this actually is the case still is not clear, Gold said, because no one knows how vasopressin affects behavior.

He speculated, however, that victims of the disorder begin by having normal diets. But when their weight loss reaches a certain point, it touches off changes in vasopressin secretions.

"It may be that these women are motivated by perfectionism to lose weight," he said in an interview. "But when they get below some critical weight, that triggers off some biological change, maybe like the one I've reported."

Gold measured the amount of vasopressin in the women's spinal fluid, and found that relative to their blood levels, it was higher than normal.

The hormone has been shown to influence learning in lab animals. Gold theorizes that in anorexic women, it may alter their thinking as well as their appetite regulation.

Gold speculated that when these women reach a low weight, "vasopressin, from its moderately low level, shoots up in the brain and makes them pathologically obsessive. It could be that a percentage of the population has a biological tendency to respond to some weight loss with this kind of alteration."

THE BUTCHER

Mail bag letters prompt search for 'tri-tips'

By Merle Ellis

The nicest part of being a butcher back in the good old days before "self-service" was the service. Talking to customers over the counter, exchanging ideas and cooking tips, swapping recipes, and sampling cheese – those were the fun parts of the job. In a sense, the same is true of this job – writing this column. I enjoy receiving letters; it's like talking over the counter. Keep them coming.

There are a few things several of you have written about in the past few weeks. We'll make today "mail-bag day," answering a couple of questions and passing along a couple of tips.

A few weeks ago, I wrote a column expounding the virtues of a cut of meat called the tri-tip, a small boneless muscle from the sirloin section of the beef that makes an excellent steak.

Many readers have had trouble finding tri-tips. I have received several letters saying: "I have looked everywhere and can't find them," ... "my butcher says you're nuts, there is no such thing," ... "can't find them, is it possible they are called something else?" I was beginning to feel a little insecure. Perhaps the market where I bought mine was the only one that carried them.

Just to make sure I hadn't misled readers, I called IBP, Inc. in Dakota City, Nebraska--the largest meat-packing company in the world.

"Got any tri-tips?"

"How many do ya need?"

"How many ya got?"

"Well," the sales manager said, with something of a thoughtful pause in his voice, "we process around 120,000 head a week; each carcass has two tri-tips. I suppose I could get you 240,000 by the end of the week. Will that be enough?"

Tri-tips are available, and if your butcher doesn't know about them it is only because he does not keep abreast of what's going on in his trade. You might suggest that he check into the Meat Management Seminar offered at IBP or, at the very least, read this column on a regular basis.

Another recent column dealt in part with how to clean an old-fashioned black iron skillet. I recommended "elbow grease," but added that it was worth the work because nothing cooks meat quite as well as iron. Many readers sent me tips for doing it much easier ways. Thank you. They work.

If you have a stove with a self-cleaning oven, you can clean your cast iron cookware simply by putting it on the rack in your oven when you run it through the cleaning cycle. I have tried this and it works wonderfully. A skillet as old and crusty as I am came out looking like new. Reseasoning, by the way, is necessary after cleaning in the oven.

If you don't have a modern self-cleaning oven, you can accomplish the same results the way several people said their grandmothers did. Build a good hot fire in the fireplace, or in the barbecue pit or just "out back," and put the cast iron pan in the fire to burn clean. When it cools, wash it out, reseason it and it's ready for years' more use.

Several questions have come to me regarding the color of chickens. One reader wrote: "My husband is in the military and we travel a lot. Can you explain to me why in New York chickens were yellow, in Arkansas and Oregon they were white and now, in California, they're yellow again. Are they different breeds of chickens or what?"

The color of a chicken's skin has absolutely nothing to do with the quality or the flavor of the meat. Skin color is not even a factor in poultry grading by the USDA.

The only reason that some places have white chickens is that the people in those places want it that way. Consumers in some parts of the country prefer white chickens. In other places, a chicken has to be yellow.

Producers control the color of their chickens with what they feed them. Corn gluten meal and marigold petals are two of the substances that result in a yellow-skinned chicken. Add a little of either of those to the feed and you have a yellow bird. (Copyright Chronicle Publishing Co. 1983)

Dr: Stress from diet harmful

HOUSTON (AP) — Stress from the continuing cycle of losing weight, regaining the pounds and then losing them again may be more harmful than the extra pounds, a researcher says.

"The chances that an obese person will lose to an ideal body weight and maintain it are much less than the cure rates for many types of cancer," said Dr. John P. Foreyt, a Baylor College of Medicine professor of medicine and psychiatry.

Stress from dieting may be harmful to moderately obese people, the doctor said Thursday.

"The process of dieting is a very punitive and negative experience," Foreyt said. "Chronic dieting makes one crave certain foods, particularly carbohydrates and sugars."

Foreyt said the only way most persons can maintain weight loss is to "come to the realization that they must go through the rest of their lives in a state of semi-starvation.

Fewer than five percent of persons who begin diets actually lose pounds and maintain a significant weight loss, Foreyt said.

Germs packed with vitamins

Copley News Service

I was grocery shopping the other day while a very literate little girl went down the aisle reading aloud all the names of the cereals she passed. Most of them she knew well from the Saturday morning commercials which seem to appear every 5 minutes between cartoons.

She rattled off a list of sugary, cutesy names as she passed box after colorful box, until finally she read aloud, "Wheat Germ! Mommy — they're selling GERMS!"

Wheat germ is a sort of germ, but one that's good for you. Actually it's called a germ because it's the part of the wheat kernel which would germinate and grow if planted. This germ is the heart of the kernel and the most nutritious part.

In milled white flours and in refined cereals, the germ of the kernel has been removed, and many of the nutrients along with it.

Wheat germ is high in protein and a great source of B vitamins, including niacin, thiamin, inositol and cholin. The last two are part of the structure of lecithin, needed by the body to digest and absorb certain fats and vitamins.

Another B vitamin, pantothenic acid, helps convert fat and sugar into energy. This is especially needed by the body during times of stress.

Besides B vitamins, wheat germ is also rich in vitamin E and is an excellent source of iron. The average woman needs 18 milligrams of iron a day, almost twice that needed by men. Women should therefore be especially mindful of wheat germ's benefits.

Store wheat germ in an airtight container and refrigerate to ensure freshness.

To toast your own, spread on a cookie sheet and bake at 250 degrees until lightly browned. Light toasting will enhance the nutty flavor and improve keeping quality.

Good all by itself, wheat germ can be added to other hot or cold cereals, to baked goods and casseroles. Sprinkle on ice cream or yogurt for added nutrition.

This is one germ that's good for you!

VEGETABLE-RICE LOAF WITH WHEAT GERM SAUCE

Loaf:

2 tbsps. oil
1 large tomato, diced
1 large stalk celery, diced
2 cups cooked rice
½ cup bread crumbs
1 cup milk
1 tsp. garlic powder
2 tsps. onion powder
2 tbsps. fresh parsley, chopped
Dash dill weed

In a frying pan, heat oil and saute tomato and celery. Add rice, bread crums, milk and spices, stirring to mix well. Spoon mixture into a well-oiled loaf pan and bake in preheated 350-degree oven for ½ hour.

Sauce:

2 tbsps. unbleached white flour
1 cup milk
2 tbsps. wheat germ
2 tbsps. oil
¼ cup water
½ tsp. salt

Combine flour and oil in a saucepan over a low flame. Add milk, water, whea germ and salt a little at a time, stirring constantly to avoid lumps. Serve over Vegetable-Rice Loaf. Serves 4.

Workplace equality

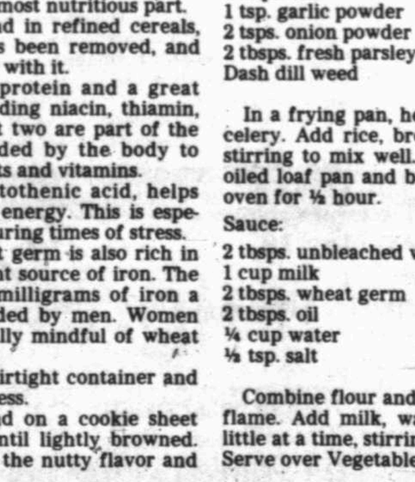

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans agree that — assuming equal skills — men and women make equally good secretaries, according to a survey.

Though 62 percent of the respondents to the Merit Report poll said there would be no difference in the quality of work, a substantial 35 percent declared that women make better secretaries; only 1 percent thought men were more qualified.

Choosing best colors, fabrics important

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. I am about to sign a two-year lease for a studio near where I will be doing graduate work. I want my new home to be light and airy and sophisticated so I'm willing to go out and do some buying.

When I think of studio decorating I remember several of my friends and I living together in a make-do kind of arrangement with assorted families providing the furniture. I do not want that sort of look.

I also recall that studio apartments require using each inch of space.

Please help me with a color scheme that will make this slightly dark studio lighter. — E.M.

A. If you are going to be purchasing a number of pieces of furniture, consider obtaining professional advice in how to get the most out of your new quarters. Choose a designer whose work you admire or select a shop with a competent interior designer on the staff.

Make investments now in fine furnishings that you'll enjoy living with for many, many years. A few exciting pieces of furniture can create a memorable studio.

To make your quarters seem larger, choose a pleasing light color for the walls as well as the floor. Keep furnishings light also to avoid bold contrast that tend to make spaces seem smaller.

For example, let's say you choose a pearl white for the walls, off-white tile for the floors, a built-in platform bed with violet quilt and soft blue pillows, for seating and sleeping, a rug repeating the same off-white, violet and blue. A table with glass top brass-trimmed base and four upholstered chairs in off-white or pale blue or violet would double for dining and relaxing. A wall system of glass shelves and almond laminate bases could provide storage.

Choose window treatment with care, avoiding a fussy style. Give attention to plenty of artificial light for reading and dining as well as for general illumination.

Q. We're moving into a new home that has a real dining room. Our family, which includes teenagers, will use the dining room each evening because we do not have any informal dining space in this house.

I have some dining furniture that has been in my family for years — European in styling. I'm not exactly sure whether it is French or English but it is dark mahogany and has terribly ugly and somewhat worn damask seats and backs.

I'm trying to figure out just what kind of fabric to put on these chairs. They are certainly formal in design, yet our teenagers do not dine in a formal way — at least not yet.

Please suggest some ideas for decorating this room so it will be both functional and aesthetically pleasing. — P.N.

A. You're a modern family, no doubt, with very modern problems. But you can have both looks and function with today's fabrics.

Why don't you choose a plastic laminate fabric for your chairs. Some plastic laminates look like shiny leather, some like patents, others like fine suedes. These fabrics might serve exceedingly well.

Consider whether you want a stately, traditional dining room, or an eclectic one combining your traditional furniture with touches of modern.

If your choice is to go traditional, choose a soft pastel for the walls or carefully add stock molding to the painted wall to create panels. Paint the molding a contrasting color, perhaps the shade of your upholstered seating.

Choose a plain or slightly patterned rug for under your table or wall-to-wall carpeting in a restrained slightly deeper tone than your walls.

If you want to introduce more pattern, consider a patterned wallpaper with soft or bright colors.

Let's say you opt for yellow and white daisies and green leaves in your wallpaper. Then consider shiny yellow vinyl for your chairs — a bold, cheery look.

Good iron key to great sewing

Pressing aids. Do you gotta have 'em? You certainly do. If you are to be a professional seamstress, you must be a professional presser.

Ironing board: Sturdy, padded, covered and clean.

Steam iron: One that does not spit brown water or melt your fabric. It should have has many steam vents. An extra "steam shooter" is essential.

Choose an iron that can be fitted with a Teflon sole plate and one that is self-cleaning. All these features can be found in one iron.

Sleeve board: Padded, sturdy.

Fluorescent lighting saves money

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. Will fluorescent lighting really save me money on my energy bills? — R.D.M.

A. Fluorescent lighting fixtures are considerably more energy-efficient than incandescent lighting. On a particular fixture you may be able to save as much as 60 percent over incandescent fixtures.

Because of their energy efficiency, more and more decorative and custom-type fixtures are equipped with fluorescent systems. There is also a fluorescent-type bulb available which can be screwed into some of your existing features.

Colored lamps also are available including soft colors, rather than the white light.

Fluorescent lighting costs approximately one-third less than incandescent to operate and gives four times the light.

Buyers should be certain that the fluorescent systems contain the "P" rated type, which means that it has been equipped with thermo-protection ballast.

When selecting a new fixture, the buyer should be sure that the fixture selected will provide the needed amount of light because the only way to increase or decrease light output is to replace the complete fixture. It is not like removing a bulb and replacing it with another larger wattage.

Make sure that the system is United Laboratories approved.

Q. We have Mexican tile on our entry hall.

When it was first installed, about a year and a-half ago, my husband applied a two-coat finish to the surface. It was a tedious process as the floor could not be stepped on for 24 hours. The entry had to be done in sections so we could get to other parts of the house.

It has since become dull. I'd like to know if there is another product to clean and give it a slightly waxed look that would take less time to dry. — S.H., Solana Beach, Calif.

A. The richness of the floor can be improved somewhat by waxing the current surface with a solvent-type wax or a water wax emulsion.

One hint sent in by one of our readers was to wash the floors once a week for several weeks with a solution of hot water, liquid wax and ammonia (one gallon water, one cup liquid wax and one-half cup ammonia). It will take several weeks of applications before floors look their best.

The only other solution to your problem would be to completely strip the present finish and apply a good sealer, then wax.

Q. Is there any way to remove water spots from the inside of a large terrarium?

Also, I laid a damp towel on a glass tabletop and that left white spots.

I have tried everything I can think of to remove the spots, to no avail. I hope you can help. — B.L.

A. Your main problem will be cleaning the terrarium, being sure not to damage the plants. Sewing notions and houseware dealers now have a chemical preparation, in a plastic bottle, for removing the deposit inside steam irons. I suggest you try this for removing the spots inside the terrarium, following the manufacturer's directions.

If not available, I suggest you try removng the spots with a solution of oxalic acid, which is poisonous. Apply with a sponge and rinse with clear water.

Either method also should work on your tabletop.

Fishermen get a line on tuna from satellite

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — The first time Art Hawarth went albacore fishing by satellite, he didn't get a nibble. But it doesn't matter because Hawarth, 48, has swallowed the modern technology hook, line and sinker.

"Satellites can be very, very helpful to us in pinpointing the areas where water temperatures are conducive to albacore," said the 20-year veteran hunter of Pacific waters, who went satellite fishing 200 miles off the coast in his 50-foot boat Lady Eve for the first time in April.

It's all part of an experiment being conducted by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, in conjunction with Scripps Institution of Oceanography in nearby La Jolla.

Fish or no fish, the theory behind the project is perfectly logical, insist scientists involved in the project.

Fishermen have long been aware that tuna are attracted to areas where clear blue warm waters meet cooler, murky green waters filled with plankton and other microscopic plants.

But finding these ever-changing areas has, for decades, been time-consuming and expensive to fishing fleets.

So when NASA launched the NIMBUS 7 satellite in late 1978, it was equipped with a color scanner and sensor device that determines relative changes in the ocean's color. Up until now, the technology has been used by oceanographers to study changes in the ocean's surface.

"Biologically, it's very important," said Dr. Robert Bernstein, an associate research oceanographer at Scripps and one of the scientists working on the experiment. "Plankton, the one-cell plants that float around the upper ocean, are at the beginning of the whole life food chain in the ocean. Organisms that live off of each other live off of it. Finding the waters where the plankton is — and where fish are likely to be — is of practical importance to fishing interests."

As the NIMBUS 7 passes over the Pacific Ocean each day, it transmits an image of coastal waters to a Scripps tracking station in La Jolla. Scripps then relays the satellite information to San Diego fishermen by marine band radio, pinpointing the prime fishing spots by latitude and longitude.

The satellite technology could not have come at a better time for tuna. "It'll save us both time and fuel," he noted, and help fishermen survive in the depressed tuna industry.

The color scanner on board the NIMBUS 7 has other important scientific applications, said Bernstein, 38.

He studies ocean currents at Scripps and uses the data supplied by the satellite to learn what forces drive the currents and how the ocean atmosphere interacts with the elements.

"Just because I'm on a fishing boat doesn't mean the fish are always going to cooperate," he pointed out.

SUPERB DINNER FOR TWO

Dinner for two can be as festive a celebration as dinner for twenty. Setting the table with flowers, a carafe of chilled wine, and candlelight sets the stage for the delicious meal to follow. A menu of sophisticated simplicity is indeed easy on the chef.

If features a strikingly different vegetable course, Asparagus Mornay, served along with chicken cutlets in caper sauce and baked tomatoes crowned with herbed bread crumbs. What makes the vegetables so unusual is that the tender green asparagus spears are served in an elegant Mornay sauce enclosed in puff pastry. No long preparation here for the cook because it is one of Pepperidge Farm's frozen Vegetables In Pastry now available everywhere. Besides the Asparagus, there are other favorite vegetables that serve two: Mushrooms Dijon, Cauliflower and Cheese Sauce, Broccoli with Cheese, Zucchini Provencal and Spinach Almondine. They can be taken right from the freezer and put into a hot oven for 20 minutes or so until the pastry crust puffs up golden brown.

A lovely dinner for two that is easy to prepare consists of chicken cutlets in caper sauce, baked tomatoes and Asparagus Mornay in Pastry. These crisp pastry puffs filled with delicious vegetables in a fine sauce can be found in the freezer compartment.

For dessert, fresh pears poached for 15 minutes and served in crystal stemware with a ruby red raspberry sauce, prove a delightful finale to your dinner for two.

Parents bring baby home to die

They get Medicaid for home care

TEANECK, N.J. (AP) — Maria Bitting says her terminally ill daughter is "a little pioneer" whose struggles against bureaucracy may inspire other families who want to bring their children home to die.

Afflicted by a rare form of muscular dystrophy, 5-month-old Suzanne Bitting left a hospital for the first time Sunday after her parents fought to ensure that her treatment at home would be covered by Medicaid insurance that dying babies get automatically while hospitalized.

"We missed a lot of her life, and that wasn't fair," said Mrs. Bitting. "It is bad enough to face her death, but to have to go through the terrible injustice of not having her home is unfair."

To other parents of dying children, Mrs. Bitting offered advice: "If you love your child enough, fight to get her home."

"I wanted her to be home to be part of the family," said her husband, Barry. "We know her illness and we have cried a lot. But we brought her home."

Suzanne, who weighs just over nine pounds, nestled in a pink blanket and wore a delicate eyelet bonnet as she took her first sniffs of fresh air from the Bittings' front porch. Two high school bands greeted the infant, and the family's modest brown frame house was decorated in pink bunting, balloons and a hand-lettered sign reading, "Welcome Home, Suzanne."

When she was born Dec. 17, doctors did not expect her to survive and they think she will not reach her first birthday. But after Suzanne began to breathe on her own after major surgery Feb. 17, the Bittings pledged that Suzanne would leave St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center in Paterson.

With the help of Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., and after an April 29 call from U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler, the Bittings got government approval for Medicaid coverage of Suzanne's home treatment.

The waiver was granted under the "Katie Beckett" exception, written into law after President Reagan interceded to allow a Cedar Rapids, Iowa, couple to receive Medicaid payments for the home care of their 3-year-old brain-damaged daughter. Before that, Medicaid was reserved strictly for hospital care.

The family now regards the Medicaid coverage as backup protection. Since the waiver was granted, the couple's insurance company, the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, has agreed to reimburse them for home care expenses.

"Because of the way you fought, and the determination you showed, other children and other parents may not have this problem," Torricelli told the Bittings. He said home care for Suzanne would cost $10,500 a month, compared to $16,500 at the hospital.

The Bittings "did the most important thing — they didn't take no for an answer," said Torricelli, as he nervously held Suzanne.

Nurses will be in attendance for 16 hours a day but Mrs. Bitting will take over for the 4 p.m. to midnight shift. Bitting will wear a beeper at his job at Pfister Chemical in Ridgefield, so he can be alerted in case of an emergency.

Suzanne's physician, Dr. John Sutter, made a house call Sunday but said his tiny patient should get along fine at home without his constant attendance.

> "We missed a lot of her life, and that wasn't fair. It is bad enough to face her death, but to have to go through the terrible injustice of not having her home is unfair...I wanted her to be home to be part of the family. We know her illness and we have cried a lot. But we brought her home."

Treaty helps protect endangered species

GABORONE, Botswana (AP) — Ten years after its creation, a treaty to control international trade in endangered species has brought some important victories in the fight to save the Earth's most vulnerable animals and plants.

Conservationists and traders agree that serious loopholes still weaken the campaign to prevent extinction of threatened species. But they say the existence of a binding treaty has helped foster a new awareness of the danger, with some tangible results.

"You can't walk down Fifth Avenue today and buy a leopard skin coat," said Israeli conservationist Bill Clark. "You don't find many alligator handbags or python belts."

"This is an organized war against vanity," Clark said.

The Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, formed in Washington in 1973, recently held its fourth review session in Gaborone. About 300 delegates met in a tent to debate whether governments should upgrade or downgrade scores of species covered by the treaty.

The treaty is binding on 81 member states and covers some 50,000 species — four-fifths of them plants — in two categories:

—Appendix One bars all international trade in 600 animal species and several thousand plant species.

—Appendix Two requires export permits and other monitoring but does not forbid trade.

The conference toughened the rules on whale trade, adding two species of great whales and four bottlenose whale species to Appendix One. Canada and the United States lost an attempt to remove bobcat, lynx and other species from Appendix Two. They argued that the listing caused a great deal of paperwork and was unnecessary because the species are not on the endangered list.

But Canada won a campaign to keep 14 species of earless seals from being added to the second group, saying such monitoring was not useful and that the species were not endangered.

Zimbabwe won approval for crocodile ranching, the first time the convention has permitted a ranching program for a most-endangered species. And seven African countries were given permission to export a total of 460 leopard pelts a year under strict conditions — that they be sold singly to individuals and not to the fur industry.

Eugene Lapointe, the Canadian secretary-general of the convention, said the seemingly contrasting decisions reflected a new sophistication and flexibility among member governments. He said the delegates were balancing the need to use wildlife with the need to conserve it, based on scientific rather than emotional arguments.

Ian MacPhail, a British founder of the World Wildlife Fund in 1961, said "for all its weaknesses, if (the convention) didn't exist the situation would be a bloody sight worse than it is today." He said a spinoff benefit has been that "Third World countries are beginning to take wildlife seriously," realizing that they can't exploit their wildlife if it disappears.

MacPhail said one thing he is happy to see disappearing is "the trophy — the head on the wall," a change he attributes to the new kind of thinking that is making alligator shoes a thing of the past as well.

The decision to allow some leopard pelt exports was a sort of vindication of the treaty, delegates said in the debate. Leopard populations have increased dramatically in some areas after nearly disappearing in the early 1970s — allowing minimal exports today. The same was said of the much-lauded Zimbabwe crocodile ranching project.

But most conservationists remain pessimistic about the long-term outlook.

Craig van Note, who runs a Washington consortium of 35 environmental groups, said the rapid disappearance of wildlife habitats under pressure from expanding human populations is as serious a threat as trade.

He also said the right of countries to file "reservations" to trade bans is a serious loophole. Japan has 11 such reservations allowing it to ignore convention decisions.

More married women cheating, survey shows

NEW YORK (AP) — Almost half the married women who responded to a new survey say they're cheating on their husbands, or did in the past — but a majority said they felt guilty about it.

According to "Sex and the Married Woman," a study conducted for Playgirl magazine by the Institute for the Advanced Study of Human Sexuality, 43 percent of the women surveyed have had affairs or are still having them.

That's more than double the percentage found 30 years ago in Dr. Alfred Charles Kinsey's 1953 study, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Female." Kinsey found 19 percent to 20 percent of married women said they had had extramarital affairs.

The survey of 1,207 women in Ohio, California, North Carolina and Washington, D.C., was made through questionnaires given to them by their obstetricians, gynecologists and health care professionals. It will be published by Wallaby Books in July.

Dr. Ted McIlvenna, president of the institute, said he didn't find the figure for affairs "startling."

Based on the responses of women who have had affairs, such a liaison "neither improves or doesn't improve a marriage," he said. "It just doesn't make that much difference."

Most women surveyed said they seek sex outside marriage because they are emotionally dissatisfied with their husbands, with sexual dissatisfaction the second most common reason.

Since the questionnaires were handed out by private physicians, McIlvenna admits to weaknesses in the study. "They were women who could afford to see private ob-gyn (obstetrician-gynecologist) persons," he said. "So we get the type of woman who is rather active and seeking more knowledge."

McIlvenna said he was surprised with the data on how women were handling their sexuality.

"These women seem to feel all right about it," he said in an interview. "I was amazed at how much better they were handling sex. We could see the good fruits of the sexual revolution."

Of those women having affairs, only 38 percent said they meet their lovers primarily for sex. Fifty-two percent said they felt guilt about the affair.

According to Dianne Grosskopf, vice president and executive editor of Playgirl magazine, the study was made because "all media kept focusing on were single men and single women and not the people who have regular sex partners."

McIlvenna said the institute was pleased with the results of the survey. "We have our own study — there are 85,000 people we've done profiles on — and we checked on some of the same questions," he said. "We weren't off by more than 5 percent on anything in the Playgirl study."

The 1,207 women used in the study had an average age of 35.3 and had been married an average of 14.2 years and represented every race, though 91 percent were white. Most of the respondents had attended college and some had done graduate work.

The majority of the women were employed — 33 percent were professional workers and 29 percent held white collar jobs.

Some other findings of the study:

—61 percent of the women said sex was important in their lives, but only 48 percent said they were satisfied with their sex lives.

—83.8 percent said they would like sex more if their husbands had better bodies.

PUBLIC NOTICE

In accordance with the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) of 1982, the chief elected officals for the counties within the State of Texas Planning Region 9 are accepting nominations for representatives to serve on the Private Industry Council.

The Job Training Partnership Act replaces the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), with a new program and delivery system to train economically disadvantaged persons and others for permanent private sector employment. This Private Industry Council (PIC) shall be composed of individuals representing business and industry, educational agencies, organized labor, rehabilitation agencies, community based organizations, economic development agencies, and the public employment service. The PIC shall provide policy and program guidance for all activities under the job training plan for the State of Texas Planning Region 9 which includes the following counties:

Andrews	Loving
Borden	Martin
Crane	Midland
Dawson	Pecos
Ector	Reeves
Gaines	Terrell
Glasscock	Upton
Howard	Ward
	Winkler

Business/Industry nominees, in compliance with the Act, must be owners of business concerns, chief executives or chief operating officers of nongovernmental employers, or private sector executives who have substantial management or policy responsibility. Business/Industry nominations will be accepted only when submitted to The Honorable W.O. "Bill" Pigman, through one following Chambers of Commerce.

Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce
Crane Chamber of Commerce
Ft. Stockton Chamber of Commerce
Andrews Chamber of Commerce
McCamey Chamber of Commerce
Kermit Chamber of Commerce
Midland Chamber of Commerce
Odessa Chamber of Commerce
Pecos Chamber of Commerce
Seminole Chamber of Commerce
Monahans Chamber of Commerce

All other (non-business/industry) nominations shall be submitted to:
The Honorable W.O. "Bill" Pigman
Reeves County Judge
County Courthouse
P.O. Box 749
Pecos, Texas 79772

All nominations shall be submitted in writing by June 2, 1983, and contain the following information:
1. Nominee's
A. Name
B. Place of employment
C. Occupational Title
D. Business Address
E. Business Telephone Number
F. Brief Statement indicating interest in and/or relationship to employment and training programs.
