DOE to back one-site plan for repository

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

DALLAS — The Department of Energy will support either a continuation of the current Nuclear Waste Policy Act or the initiation of a sequential characterization process, an official said this morning at a meeting of representatives of the states and Indian tribes from the three states under site characterization.

Ginger King, DOE office of policy and outreach, said that Ben Rusche, director of the Office of Civilian Radioactive Waste Management, will be sending a statement to the Senate floor "today or tomorrow that will indicate the DOE strongly supports the intent of the Johnston-McClure bill."

King added that DOE "believes the bill is our best bet for moving forward in the program. We are not only hopeful, but we also expect this bill to pass." The bill (SB1668) would provide for just one state to be researched instead of three and would pay the state that is selected for the repository $100 million annually.

King said there were some questions concerning finances and other points in the bill, "but the DOE is supporting the intent." Tom Isaacs, deputy director of the repository program, said "we believe we can look at three sites and select one for a first characterization by January 1989."

Isaacs added, "We will do what, if any, additional information gathering permitted in the interim, if the bill is approved. If we are unable to do further studies, we would still be able to make a decision based on the information we have today in the Environmental Assessment."

The fact that DOE doesn't have as much site characterization on Texas, said Isaacs, "would mean we would have to adapt regional information and raises a degree of uncertainty about technological information which would be reflected in the decision-making process." He added that "the fact that we have worked more on the Hanford and Nevada sites would not necessarily be a factor against Texas. The DOE is aware of, but does not reflect, the point of view that the Johnston-McClure bill is aimed at picking Nevada."

Phil Niedzielski-Eichner, representing the Waste Deposit Impact Committee of Deaf Smith County at the three-state meeting, Danny Smith is representing the governor's office, and Steve Frishman, formerly with the governor's office, is now representing the state of Nevada. The meeting continues this afternoon with discussions on the budget and its affect on the program.

Retains Friona Industries

Cox selling SIPCO, Val-Agri

Swift Independent Packing Co. and Val-Agri Inc. have been purchased by ConAgra Inc. and Elkhorn Industries, it was announced Wednesday by the companies.

ConAgra announced it had completed purchase of a 50-percent interest in Swift Independent Holding Company, owned by Edwin L. Cox Jr. of Dallas, for $51.5 million in cash. The remaining 50-percent interest in Swift will be purchased by Elkhorn Industries for a comparable price.

The deal joins the nation's second and third-largest meat processors, ConAgra, a diversified food company based in Omaha, Neb., has annual sales of $9 billion. Elkhorn Industries is based in Elkhorn, Neb., and owned by Bob Gottsch.

With the transaction, Kenneth W. Montfort, president and chief operating officer of ConAgra Red Meat Co., will serve as SIPCO's chairman and chief executive officer. Lance P. Wimmer will continue as SIPCO's president and chief operating officer. ConAgra said it has an option to purchase the 50-percent interest of Elkhorn at any time up to four years.

Cox retains his interest in Friona Industries, an agribusiness limited partnership now based in Amarillo. Cox had purchased SIPCO in March 1986 and later merged Val-Agri into the company. SIPCO processes fresh beef, pork and lamb production from 16 facilities, the largest located near Dumas. The Cactus plant in Moore County has just completed a $4 million expansion, bringing operating capacity to almost 4,600 head of cattle per day.

The SIPCO plant at Hereford was closed before Cox purchased the company and has not been reopened. A Guyton, Okla., plant was closed by Swift in March. Swift had annual sales of $4 billion but had recently reported losses on its beef operations and its interest payments were burdensome.

Iraq attacks Iranian ship

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes attacked a tanker off Iran today, and two Iranian speedboats carried out a daylight attack on a Pakistani-flag tanker in the Persian Gulf.

Iranian speedboats were meanwhile reported to have raked two Japan-bound tankers with machine-gun fire in the mouth of the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the gulf.

Minor damage was reported in all three cases, with no casualties.

One of the Iranian attacks was on a tanker partially filled with Iranian crude oil, according to gulf-based shipping executives.

The executives said they could not confirm a report that a third Japanese tanker, the 484,276-ton Nissei Maru, was hit around the same time that the two others — the 237,365-ton Nichiharu Maru and the 236,425-ton Western City — were raided at dusk Wednesday.

The reports came as U.S. warships guided two U.S. Military Sealift Command ships carrying supplies north through the Persian Gulf toward Bahrain, the Pentagon said.

Another convoy of U.S. warships and a reflagged Kuwaiti tanker, the Gas Prince, steamed south through the gulf and was expected to pass through the Strait of Hormuz.

Shipping executives said that at 8:03 a.m. today, radio monitors picked up a message from the 43,429-ton Johar, owned by Pakistan's National Tanker Co., sailing from Karachi to the Saudi oil terminal of Jubail.

The tanker reported that it was under attack by two speedboats near the Strait of Hormuz. It reported minor damage and said it was continuing under its own power, they said.

About three hours earlier, Iraqi jet fighters struck a "large maritime target near the Iranian coast," the Baghdad High Command announced in a war communique. It said the planes returned safely to base.

The raid was "to deprive the Iranian regime of the opportunity to ex-plot the revenues of its oil exports for aggression and continuation of war," added the communique, carried by the official Iraqi News Agency and Baghdad radio, monitored in Cyprus.

Iraq uses the term "large maritime target" to refer to tankers using Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal. There was no immediate confirmation of the strike.

Iran customarily raids ships in the gulf in reprisal for Iraqi air raids on tankers near Iran.

The Reagan administration agreed last summer to reflag 11 Kuwaiti tankers to protect them from attacks by Iran, which accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq.

Iraq has escalated its raids on Iranian shipping lanes since last weekend in an apparent bid to increase pressure on Tehran as it considers a cease-fire demand by the U.N. Security Council. At least six Iranian-bound tankers were struck in Iraqi raids over the past six days.

Shipping executives said Iranian speedboats carried out the attacks on the Nichiharu Maru and the Western City when they were in the vicinity of the Iranian oil-loading terminal at Larak island in Hormuz.

The Nichiharu Maru, which flies the Japanese flag and is owned by Nissho Kisen, had taken on oil at United Arab Emirates terminals. The Western City, which flies the Liberian flag but is operated by Japan Line Ltd., had loaded oil in the U.A.E. and at Larak, according to the executives, who spoke on condition they were not identified.

Japan's Transport Ministry said the communications room of the Nichiharu Maru was damaged by gunfire.

The Western City reported damage to its fuel tank, living quarters and bridge after being hit by missiles, the ministry said.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, reported two ships had been raided,

Sessions swearing delayed

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

The FBI today postponed indefinitely the swearing-in of William S. Sessions as its new director after he became sick and fainted on a flight to Washington. But his wife said he appeared to be "just fine" after a night in the hospital.

Alice Sessions, asked as she entered George Washington University Hospital about her husband's condition, told the AP:

"I think he's just fine this morning. He was very tired and had some air sickness last night" on a flight from Texas.

Neither the White House nor the FBI would discuss Sessions' illness, expect to say that it was not considered life-threatening.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III, asked earlier at the hospital what was wrong with Sessions, said:

"We don't know yet, for sure. They're doing some tests to find out."

Syndicated columnist and television commentator John McLaughlin, riding in the first class cabin of Delta flight 482 with Sessions, said the 57-year-old federal judge had gotten up to go to the bathroom, but became sick and fainted in the aisle.

Several FBI agents and a physician summoned over the plane's public address system attended to Sessions, who came to several minutes later, McLaughlin said. He said the physician, whom he would not identify, had Sessions lie on the floor for 45 minutes as a precaution.

"The physician diagnosed his condition as air sickness after all was said and done," McLaughlin said, adding that Sessions then took his seat and slept until 15 minutes or so before the flight landed.

"I spoke to him. It was clear he knew exactly what he was saying....He was in full possession of his faculties," although he was still quite pale, the columnist said.

McLaughlin said the judge's wife said Sessions, told only two days ago that he would be sworn in today, had been trying to get things organized and had had only one meal on Wednesday.

On Tuesday, Sessions told a reporter he had expected two weeks' notice before the ceremony. "It was a shock," he said of the call from Meese.

A reporter for the San Antonio Express-News who saw Sessions at his office Wednesday said the judge appeared, "very, very tired."

The reporter, Jacques Crouse, said Sessions appeared to be having trouble breathing, as if he were suffering from the flu or experiencing an allergy attack.

Sessions' condition "is not life-threatening," said Deputy White House Press Secretary Leslye Arsh.

She said that Meese had called White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. early today, and that Baker then notified Reagan of Sessions' hospitalization.

The announcement of the delay in the swearing-in was made by the FBI hours before the scheduled mid-day ceremony.

President Reagan was scheduled to attend the searing-in, and was to use the occasion to make another pitch for the confirmation of Robert H. Bork, his choice for a vacancy on the Supreme Court.

Sessions, who had been confirmed 90-0 last Friday to succeed William H. Webster in the top FBI job; was to take his oath in the courtyard of the J. Edgar Hoover FBI Building.

Sessions, a moderate federal judge, was named by Reagan earlier this year to serve a 10-year term as director of the FBI.

Groups seeking pesticide crackdown

AUSTIN (AP) — The federal pesticide law should be strengthened to protect consumers and workers, according to concerned groups who sent a letter to U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza of Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

The danger from pesticides "is as close as our dinner table," Rebecca Flores Harrington, state director of the United Farm Workers, said at a Wednesday news conference with officials of Public Citizen, Consumers Union, Texas Center for Policy Studies, National Audubon Society and Sierra Club.

Tomatoes, beef and potatoes are among the foods identified by the National Academy of Science as possibly cancer-causing because of the presence of chemical pesticides, Ms. Harrington said.

The Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act "is wholly inadequate to protect the American people, both as consumers and workers, from dangerous pesticides," said the letter to de la Garza, D-Mission.

The groups released the letter at the news conference, which marked this month's 25th anniversary of the publication of "Silent Spring."

Although the book by Rachel Carson warning of the dangers of pesticides helped spark the U.S. environmental movement, Sierra Club spokesman Ken Kramer said, "This (See GROUPS, Page 2)

Former official 'trying to help'

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Texas prison system official facing possible extradition to Texas on a theft charge says he was just trying to help when he set up his own company to bid on prison contracts.

J.R. Pitts, 40, was arrested in Sandpoint, Idaho, on a Texas warrant after three years as a fugitive. He faces extradition proceedings on a 1985 Madison County, Texas, theft indictment alleging he stole $17,500 in prison funds through bid-rigging and kickbacks from contractors.

A few hours after an Idaho judge refused to lower his bond, Pitts told the Houston Chronicle Tuesday he believed he could beat the Texas theft charge.

"The paperwork doesn't represent what really happened," Pitts said. "I didn't take any money."

He said he set up a company to bid on Texas Department of Corrections projects to speed up work on court-ordered prison improvements.

"We had to get inmates out of tents in September 1983," he said from a tiny visitors room at the Bonner County Jail in Sandpoint. "All I did was expedite the job."

As a construction superintendent, Pitts, 40, said he was under pressure to complete several inmate cell blocks before the deadline imposed by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

Under state law, three companies must bid on equipment and service expenditures. On some occasions, only one or two companies were available to bid.

To meet the three-bid requirement, Pitts formed J&R Enterprises, a Palestine-based company that would join in the bidding — usually submitting a bid a few dollars higher.

Unfortunately, he said, the other companies sometimes dropped out of the bidding, leaving Pitts' company as the only bidder. He said he then performed the required work.

"Maybe I went at it wrong," he said. "Maybe I should apologize to the state of Texas and the people."

Pitts said he was unaware of the theft charge against him despite repeated trips to Texas to visit his family during the last three years, and only found out about it when he was arrested Sept. 19.

He was taken into custody a few hours before his wedding by a Sandpoint police officer who saw Pitts' name in the wedding listings of a local paper.

Members of Attorney General Jim Mattox's staff told him on two occasions — when he agreed to turn state's evidence in July 1984 and later that year when he testified before a Harris County grand jury — that no criminal charges would be filed against him, he said.

Pitts spent three years as a fugitive to avoid prison officials who he claimed wanted him dead. He declined to identify them or say what information he had.

New law could hurt prosecution

DALLAS (AP) — A new state law allowing victims of sexual assault to use aliases in court will hamper prosecution of sex offenders while having little effect on the number of people willing to press charges against their attackers, prosecutors say.

The law, which applies to crimes committed after Jan. 1, 1988, makes it possible for victims of sex crimes to request anonymity in all official records and court proceedings pertaining to their attack.

The effect will be to keep a victim's name out of records that are open to the public. But the law does not keep the victim's identity from the defendant accused of the crime, Dallas County Assistant District Attorney Howard Wilson said.

The law could cause such other problems as making it difficult for attorneys to question jurors about whether they are acquainted with the victim, he said.

"I don't see the reason for this law," Wilson said. "I don't know who it protects the victim's identity from, except newspapers, and in this area we don't print the victims' names. ... I think we're going to see a lot of headaches with this that we can't anticipate."

However, State Sen. Hugh Farmer, D-Fort Worth, who sponsored the original bill, defended the legislation. Any minor problems the law causes are outweighed by the increased number of sex cases that will be filed because the victim is shielded, he said.

"What you're weighing is bureaucratic inconvenience against protecting the victim's identity and, quite frankly, it's worth it," Farmer said.

A clause included in the law allows the trial judge to protect the rights of the defendant by revealing the victim's identity to jurors or at any other point when the victim's identity is at issue, Farmer said.

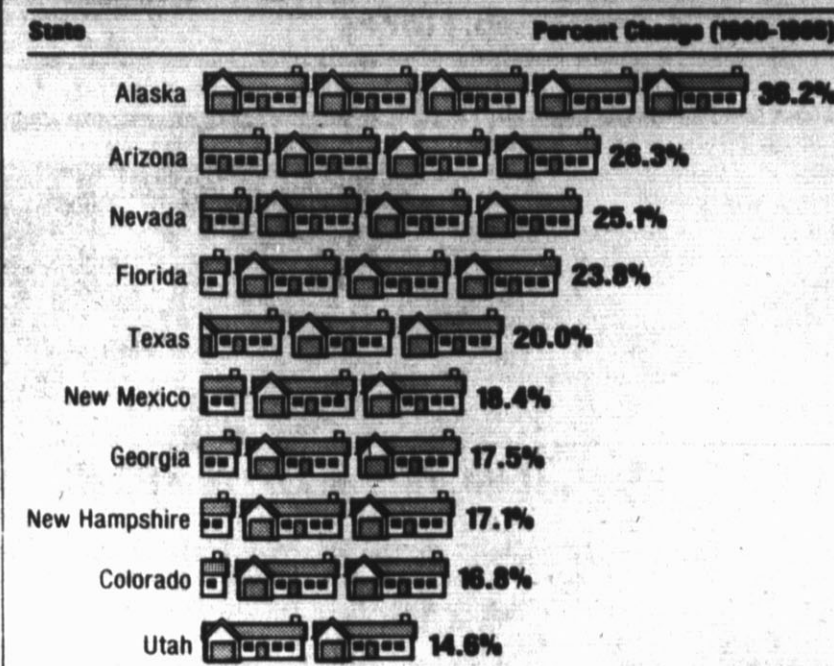

Wright wants energy policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright says problems in the Persian Gulf will continue to plague the United States until it achieves energy independence, a suggestion Texas Gov. Bill Clements says he is pursuing with the White House.

"Nobody in the United States has any sympathy for Iran and the way it has behaved," Wright said at a news conference Wednesday. "The key is to make ourselves energy independent."

While agreeing in principle with a Senate resolution banning the import of Iranian oil, Wright said the coun-

Pickens pushing new group

CINCINNATI (AP) — T. Boone Pickens, the Texas oilman and corporate raider, says that top executives act more like government bureaucrats than businessmen.

Pickens, who has built a fortune raiding undervalued companies, was in Cincinnati Wednesday on a seven-city tour to recruit support for his United Shareholders Association.

Pickens planned to be in New York today when a Delaware judge is expected to rule on his challenge of an effort by Newmont Mining Corp. to thwart his takeover attempt of the company.

In San Francisco, meanwhile, a federal appeals court issued a ruling late Wednesday blocking Pickens' attempt to take over Newmont.

A three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals issued an injunction sought by Newmont to prevent Pickens and his Ivanhoe Acquisition Corp. from pursuing a tender offer or other efforts to try to gain control of the mining company until further court order.

The court said the case would be handled quickly, with oral argument scheduled Oct. 9. The judges invited the Securities and Exchange Commission to take part in written and oral arguments.

Pickens, who built Mesa Limited

Petroleum from just a few thousand dollars into one of the nation's largest independent oil and gas companies, said he has studied corporate leaders and found they are lazy and lack competitive spirit.

"The cause of America's competitive decline is not found on the assembly line or the stock exchange," Pickens told a luncheon audience of about 250 in Cincinnati. "The blame belongs to the Fortune 500's chief executives."

America's corporate leaders, he said, have "become caretakers of business. They're more bureaucratic than the federal government."

Corporations have responded to his criticism with organizations of their own. One, the recently created Coalition to Stop The Raid on America, headed by Former New Orleans Mayor Moon Landrieu, is supported by Procter & Gamble Co. of Cincinnati.

P&G representative Robert Norrish said Wednesday that the takeover attempts by Pickens and other corporate raiders won't help for the U.S. economy.

"It's created a lot of debt and doesn't produce a darn thing," Norrish said.

Pickens countered that it was corporate management that is at fault.

Politicians band together for collider

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Texas is to have any chance of getting the $4.4 billion "super collider," Lone Star voters will have to pass a $500 million bond issue in support of the project, Texas lawmakers say.

More than 20 other states are mounting major efforts aimed at capturing the project, which Texas officials say would bring $1 billion a year for the next 20 years to the victorious state's economy.

"This provides Texas with the chance to become the world leader in high energy physics into the 21st century," House Speaker Jim Wright, a Democrat from Fort Worth, said Wednesday.

Behind Wright, in the Rayburn Room at the U.S. Capitol, stood Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and Phil Gramm, R-Texas; Gov. Bill

Clements; Reps. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont; Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo; Martin Frost, D-Dallas; and Joe Barton, R-Ennis.

"We feel it's a real turning point, a fork in the road for Texas," Clements said. "We are in a no-holds-barred fight with states like Illinois and California."

Stressing that the competition will be fierce, Clements said the word has to get out to the voters that the state must pass the $500 million in general obligation bonds or fall behind the other competitors.

Those bonds, along with $500 in revenue bonds already authorized by the state legislature, make up are the heart of an incentive package offered by Texas to induce the Energy Department to locate the giant atom-smasher at one of its two official sites — Amarillo or Dallas.

Bentsen said voters would have to seek out the resolution, numbered 19, out of a list of 26 proposals to be decided on the Nov. 3 ballot.

"We've had some tough times in Texas, and here's a chance to move out into new frontiers," Bentsen said. "California and Illinois will be going all-out to win it."

Gramm, usually for cutting government spending, joined his Democratic colleagues in support of the bonds, saying it will ensure the state's economic vitality into the next century.

"I don't usually ask people to spend ... but this proposal is an investment. It's seed money. It's a chance to lay a new cornerstone in the economy of Texas," Gramm said.

Brooks, dean of the Texas delegation, called the $500 million an "ante" needed to stay in the game.

"In December, the secretary of energy is going to announce a short list of sites," said Barton, whose district includes the Dallas site. "If we vote no, it's going to be very difficult for any of the Texas sites to make that list."

nation and its citizens ... face a continuing and perhaps in some respects a greater threat from pesticides in 1987."

When "Silent Spring" was published in 1962, U.S. pesticide production was slightly less than 700 million pounds, Kramer said. As of 1986, it had tripled to 2.6 billion pounds, he said.

The volume of pesticides used in Texas alone is not known because the state does not keep records of the usage, Kramer said.

Skip Stiles, staff director of the agriculture subcommittee that has jurisdiction over the pesticide law, said members are working on a rewrite.

The subcommittee has been laboring over proposed changes to the law since the last major amendments were added in 1978, Stiles said. He said U.S. Rep. George Brown of California, subcommittee chairman, hopes to move the bill through the House by year's end.

Consumer and environmental groups, along with agricultural and chemical interests, had input in the present compromise rewrite, Stiles said. The compromise failed to pass the House and Senate in the same form last year, he said.

"We're looking to take last year's compromise as far as we can," Stiles said. "When you get into significant rewrites (of the compromise), you have to open the bill up to everyone."

A major part of the compromise is obtaining health and safety data on pesticides, he said.

GARDEN CITY, Texas (AP) — Farmer Hubert Frerich's swine cooler and wine-makers Frank Bartles and Ed Jaymes' wine cooler have much in common.

Both aim to satisfy customers by keeping them cool and pleased and asking for more.

The swine cooler sprays a fine mist at pre-set times to cool down pigs to help make them more productive and profitable.

Frerich is really from the farm. He lives and works there. And his swine-cooler device is to entice hogs — boars, sows, gilts, barrows, pigs and piglets — to develop sound appetites, to eat heartily, to put on weight and lean pork quickly, and to head for the marketplace from which the pig farmer returns with a profit.

"If you can keep pigs comfortable," Frerich said, "they will eat more and put on more meat. When a pig gets hot, Mother Nature tells the pig to quit eating so much."

And, for example, when sows quit eating, they "can't produce milk for their babies." The babies may turn into runts. Both farmers and pigs suffer.

But the quicker little piglets are through nursing and get onto fattening-up and high-protein rations, the sooner they'll go to market and fatten farmers' pocketbooks.

Pigs with better conformation may spend the prime of their lives as show pigs for 4-H Club or Future Farmers of America (FFA) projects before they become abcon.

"One good show pig will pay for it (the timed-misting system)," said Frerich, whose farm is in Glasscock County. A farmer may sell a good show pig for $100 to $250, he said. Premium show pigs may sell for as much as $1,200.

Frerich, who has farmed in the St. Lawrence and Garden City areas since 1958, demonstrated his swine-cooler rig in Lawrence Jost's farrowing pens in the St. Lawrence community southeast of Midland. There, six mother sows lay contentedly on their sides, as litters of piglets eagerly and possessively had their fill of dinner.

"Each pig pretty well has its own place at the table," Frerich observed of the nursing animals. The pigs may grow up to be slabs of bacon, pork chops, hams, ham hocks, or, if they're really fat, lard.

The farmer noted that some of "these old manias are real good" about nurturing their young. But "some just lay down on a (squealing) pig and won't move. Others will get right up. If they are not very good mothers, they'll kill a bunch of pigs," Frerich said. "You might as well get rid of her." Such a sow would be cutting into a pig farmer's profit.

"Right now, they (hogs) are doing real good (in the marketplace). The price of all livestock is good," Frerich said. The pig market is healthy and stable.

The Frerich-designed swine coolers are equipped with timing devices to activate the misty spray of water when the temperature rises in spring, summer and fall. The system works in cycles. For example, it may spray for one minute and shut down for nine minutes, run for four minutes and be off for six minutes — or whatever timing the farmer selects. In the cold winter months, the timing device may be rigged for activating heat lamps to warm swine.

Frerich, who has rented out his cotton farmland to concentrate on marketing and installing drip-irrigation systems, designed the automatic-misting cycling device three years ago after Glasscock County Agricultural Agent Norman Kohls asked him to "come up with something" that would put out cooling mists in cycles.

And so he did.

Before that, pig farmers could hose down the pigs by hand or manually turn sprinkling devices on and off, but those techniques cut into farmers' productive time. Otherwise, pigs could roll in or lay in muddy water holes to cool down and further stereotype their image as "dirty pigs."

"Hogs don't sweat," Frerich said. "That's why hogs wallow in watering holes."

To hogs' credit, they are "supposed to be real smart — one of the more intelligent animals," Frerich noted.

They're not opposed to devouring with much relish watermelons and cantaloupes grown on Frerich's farmland.

"Oh, they love watermelons," said Frerich's wife, Annette. "The neighbors' pigs get all of our over-ripe ones. Oh, they just go crazy over cantaloupes."

"They're really intelligent animals," Mrs. Frerich said. "They're not dumb. They're really not dirty. They're smart. They don't mess just anywhere," she said. "They go do their business in a certain place."

Swine just like to stay cool when it's hot. That's survival. If that means rolling in a watering hole, they'll wallow. Otherwise, they seem to prefer Frerich's swine cooler.

Cafeteria employees hear guest speaker

Food service personnel of Hereford Independent School District met Monday evening in the junior-senior cafeteria for their first meeting and covered dish dinner of the new school year.

La Plata Junior High and the junior-senior cafeterias were the host schools.

Joan Noyes, vice president, presided in the absence of President Christine Evans and welcomed those in attendance. Tommy Bowling, president of Hereford's TSTA/NEA, was the after dinner speaker. He presented the history, purpose and goals of the associations and also explained special services and benefits that come with a TSTA/NEA membership. The best benefit, however, is that the membership gives the strength and unity to build a better future for all school employees and for education.

Treasurer Frances Kerr gave the treasury report. Other officers are Dottie Harland, secretary, and Beatrice Knabe, reporter. Ruby Williams and Sandra Bridges are the benevolence committee.

Noyes and Harland recognized all new employees and presented each one a corsage. Recognized were Frances Brooks and Laverne Vanlandingham, of Shirley Cafeteria; Johnene Wray and Frances Bossett, Bluebonnet; Army Murphy, Aikman; Mary Butler and Lynn Schroeter, junior-senior cafeteria; and Glenda Drager, West Central.

Trudie Gray, cafeteria supervisor, welcomed all new and old employees to the new school year. She spoke briefly to the 55 employees present.

Noyes advised the group that the next meeting will be held this month at the junior-senior cafeteria. The employees of Bluebonnet and Aikman cafeterias will serve as hostesses. Bob Kennedy of Canyon, area supervisor of the Texas Department of Public Health, will conduct a training course titled "Critical Control of Temperature."

Lapidary Club meeting held

The Deaf Smith County Lapidary Club met Monday in the Flame Room. Vice-president Weldon Roberson presided at the business meeting, when routine business was handled.

Roberson announced that election of officers will be held during the next meeting set for Oct. 26 in the Flame Room. Membership dues will be collected and any interested persons may join the club at that time.

Hosts for the meeting were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hershey, Mr. and Mrs. Baxter London, and Ruth King, who also furnished the doorprize which was won by Hazel Botts.

A film on the Redwood Forest in California was shown by Bub Newell. Twenty-seven members were in attendance.

Communication needed

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A month ago, our company changed insurance carriers and I went to a new dentist. He told me I had a tiny cavity that needed attention.

When I went back to get it taken care of, the dentist positioned me in the chair and went to work.

I am not afraid of pain and paid no attention when he told me I would probably feel a pinch. Before I realize what was happening, he plunged a hypodermic needle into my cheek. After a few seconds he told me to rinse. I let him know that to have administered a shot in such a sneaky way was an insult to my intelligence and an affront to my status as an adult.

He became angry and said he never uses the word "shot" because of the negative connotation. Furthermore he implied that I was some kind of a nut.

Ann, I am a 45-year-old woman who has been going to the dentist every six months since I was a child.

I have never been apprehensive or nervous about dental visits nor am I squeamish about shots. I resent that man's methods and his attitude.

What does your dentist say about this? I am — Still Mad in Simi Valley

DEAR S.M.: My dentist, Dr. Jordan Block, says that the dentist should have told you what to expect, and that if he didn't want to use the word "shot" he could have said, "Now I'm going to give you a little novocaine."

The chemistry between you two has gone sour and the hostility on both sides precludes a positive doctor-patient relationship. Find another dentist.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I burned my toddler's eyelid by accident when he walked into my lit cigarette. I had to bend down to move a friend's baby in a carriage when my son came up from behind me.

Luckily, he blinked and the cigarette did not penetrate the eyelid. Nevertheless, we spent four nerve-racking hours in the emergency room holding this little fellow down as various medicine were put into his eye.

The doctor said he had another 18-month-old patient who had chewed on the filter of his daddy's cigarette. That baby was in a coma. I don't know if he survived.

Often, especially at amusement parks, I notice people holding their cigarettes low—as parents weave their children through crowds in strollers and holding their little hands. I shiver when I see this, but I can't stop everybody and warn them. I did caution one rather friendly-looking papa who had his baby on a hand restraint after I saw the child walk within a foot of a smoker who had his cigarette at the baby's eye level.

The man thanked me and said he didn't realize the danger. Neither did I until I burned my own child. Please pass the word, Ann, and sign me — Cautious Mom in California

DEAR CALIFORNIA: Thanks for the alert. I'm surprised it doesn't happen more often. I'm sure your letter will raise the consciousness of many parents and I thank you for it. P.S. Are you listening, readers? Another good reason not to smoke.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My problem: marriage burn-out. My husband is a nice man. We are both 50, but I'm tired of bickering about the kids, struggling to pay bills, washing, and ironing, cooking and cleaning. Our sex life has become boring.

Too many years invested to toss it overboard, but maybe a six-month split?—JJJ

DEAR JJJ: Stay together and start talking to each other about what is wrong, what is missing, what you want and what you need. Sometimes a third party can open up a dialogue. If you need the help of a counselor, get it.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Bridges" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $2.50 plus a No. 10, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Decoys

A thousand years ago, Indians made the first decoys to trick birds down to within arrow shot. They were made of bulrushes woven and twisted into duck shapes. This Indian invention was quickly adopted by North America's first white hunters. In the Old World, they used live birds to trap wild ones in a cage the Dutch called "ende kool," which the English pronounced "decoy."

Plastic surgeons call fat suctioning largely safe

CHICAGO (AP) — Fat suctioning, America's most popular form of cosmetic surgery, is largely safe and effective, though some variations are riskier than others and some practitioners are poorly trained, a medical group said today.

The American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons said in a report that it had documented 11 deaths and nine non-fatal cases of serious complications in an analysis of 100,000 U.S. liposuction procedures over five years.

Most of the complications were caused by clots of blood or fat blocking vessels to the heart, brain or lungs, the Chicago-based society said.

Fat suctioning, or liposuction, involves inserting a tubular instrument under the skin and suctioning off fat tissue.

The risk of complications increases when fat suctioning is combined with a technique of removing excess skin and fat from the abdomen called abdominoplasty, the plastic-surgeons group said.

However, the society said the procedure has been so greatly refined that it can be used on fatty areas of the face and even improve the looks of the elderly, despite early reservations about them as appropriate candidates.

Meanwhile, the society said fat transplants, a new twist on the procedure in which fat is sucked from one part of the body and injected into another, have had uneven success and should be considered experimental.

Difficulties with liposuction are more likely when it is used for more than two quarts of fat. Such an amount requires the patient to be under general anesthesia, to be watched overnight and to have donated blood in advance in case bleeding makes a transfusion necessary, the society said.

The society also reported that fat suctioning tends to be overused. Practitioners lacking training in other plastic surgery procedures may use liposuction when it is not appropriate, such as in the case of loose skin on the abdomen or under the chin, it said.

A U.S. pioneer of fat suctioning blasted that conclusion and accused the society of engaging in a "turf battle over money" by spreading the impression that only plastic surgeons are qualified to do the lucrative procedure.

"It is absolutely unconscionable what they are trying to do," said Dr. Julius Newman, chairman of cosmetic surgery at The Graduate Hospital, which is affiliated with the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine in Philadelphia.

"Plastic and reconstructive surgeons feel no other surgeons are capable of doing plastic surgery in any part of the body," said Newman, president of the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery, based in Pacific Palisades, Calif.

"Our position is no one surgical specialty can control all of plastic surgery," he said, noting that a French gynecologist, not a plastic surgeon, developed the procedure and taught it to U.S. doctors.

Newman said specialists such as eye surgeons; ear, nose and throat doctors; obstetrician-gynecologists, and orthopedists may in many cases be better qualified than plastic surgeons to do liposuction because they would be more familiar with the body areas on which they would be performing the procedure.

Liposuction was performed 99,330 times last year in the United States, the 2,800-member plastic surgeons group reported previously. The procedure costs $500 to $4,000.

Asceptic packaging now used for variety of products

The aseptic packaging of drinks has some consumers wondering about safely storing and using these products, says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

According to nutritionist Marilyn Haggard, aseptic packaging involves sterilizing the product and container separately. Then the product and package are brought together in a sterile environment where the container is filled and sealed.

Aseptic packaging is now used for a variety of products, including boxes for juice or milk and foil pouches for juice and fruit drinks.

"The aseptically packaged milk does not have to be stored in the refrigerator, and can sit on your shelf for up to 6 months," she says.

"While it's safe and wholesome, aseptically packaged milk does have a slightly different taste, which is often described as 'richer' than regular milk, even after it's been chilled," adds the specialist.

Haggard notes that aseptic juice boxes or pouches can be a special convenience for sack lunches.

"The cartons can be stored overnight in the freezer without the multi-layered packaging tearing as the freezing juice expands. Then if you pack the frozen carton in a lunch, it should thaw, but still be cool by lunch time," she explains.

The aseptic juices have a shelf life of 6-8 months, and like canned food, should be rotated so those bought first are used first, says the specialist.

'Six in a row, one day at a time' is new motto

Herd starts over against Dunbar Friday

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

Starting over is what the Hereford Whiteface varsity football team has to do as a result of the credits computation error that was discovered on an athlete Monday — and the forfeiting of two games, including a District 1-4A victory.

Coach Don Cumpston said, "Our new motto is, 'Six in a row, one day at a time.' Our players have responded well this week.

"We know we have a quality opponent in Dunbar. Dunbar's got good speed and we'll have to play well to beat them. It's going to take a team effort, and I emphasize TEAM."

Hereford and Lubbock Dunbar, both 0-2 in the district standings, battle at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Whiteface Stadium in Hereford. The general consensus is that Hereford must win all six of its remaining district games to be in position for a possible playoff berth.

That trek will take the Whitefaces against Dunbar, Levelland, Dumas, Canyon, Lubbock Estacado, and Borger. The games against Dumas and Estacado are home games.

"If you're a champion, you don't stay down. You overcome adversity. I do believe we have a chance to win the next six games. We were 0-4 in 1971 and wound up in the state quarterfinals. We sure aren't quitting," Cumpston said.

"We're due to have one of our good weeks, and Dunbar is due to have one of their good weeks. So it should be a heck of a ball game," he adds.

Dunbar opened the season with a 20-12 win over Lubbock High, and then lost to Lubbock Monterey 24-19. In the Panthers' district opener, they lost to Canyon 35-14, but the game was a close one in the first half.

Canyon held a 28-14 halftime lead, but if Dunbar had scored from within the five-yard line just before halftime, the Panthers may have had a chance at upsetting Canyon.

Dunbar had 200 yards total offense in that game, compared to 275 by Canyon. The Panthers had 95 yards rushing and 105 yards passing.

The Panthers had several players injured in that game, and had to go against Estacado last week without three two-way starters. And to make things worse for Dunbar, quarterback Keith Gamble was sidelined with a thigh bruise in his team's first series of the second half.

Dunbar managed only 101 yards total offense in losing to Estacado 38-0. Estacado had 437 yards total offense. Dunbar's backup quarterback Jesse Davila failed to complete a pass in nine attempts.

For Hereford this week, as far as injuries are concerned, one player will be out of the lineup with a broken arm — pass receiver Pat Mercer. Mercer caught four passes for 39 yards, including a touchdown pass, in the 23-7 loss at Frenship last week.

"Hopefully, everybody else will be well. We've had some sickness this week, but hopefully everybody will be well," Cumpston said.

The Whiteface head coach said he will continue to do what he has in other weeks this season — announce the starting lineups to the players after workouts today.

Dunbar uses the I-formation on offense and a 4-3 defense. Quarterback Gamble has completed 12 of 49 passes this season for 265 yards, with one touchdown and two interceptions.

The Panthers' leading ball carrier is Craig Ross, with 324 yards in 48 carries for a 6.8 average and one touchdown.

The Whitefaces are averaging 293 yards total offense per game, compared to 213 yards by their opponents. The passing leader at this point in the season is Jason Scott with 22 completions in 51 attempts for 357 yards and five touchdowns, with three interceptions.

Fidencio Cantu is the leading receiver with eight catches for 170 yards and two touchdowns. Rodney McCracken has seven catches for 109 yards and two touchdowns. Mercer's season total, before suffering his injury last week, was seven catches for 73 yards and one touchdown.

Whiteface running back Marcus Brown, who has had some problems with an achilles tendon injury, has played in three of the four HHS games, totaling 307 yards in 38 carries and scoring two touchdowns.

On defense, Hereford's leading tacklers in four games have been linebackers Lee Young and Michael Phibbs, each with 40 tackles. Linebacker Joe Medrano has 31 tackles, and defensive tackles Edward Martinez and Richard Castillo each have 30 tackles.

Derrell Page, who missed one game this year because of a contusion on his knee, leads the Herd in tackles for losses with five.

The HHS defense has intercepted 11 opponents' passes, three each by Keith Brown and Robby Collier and two by Johnny Beltran.

Hereford struggled on both offense and defense last week, and needs to have everything start "jelling," as Coach Cumpston has said before, to begin the trek to qualifying for the playoffs.

A 6-2 district record by Hereford would mean at least one loss for both Canyon and Estacado. At the Hereford Whiteface Booster Club meeting Tuesday night, Cumpston noted that a tie in the Canyon-Estacado game would leave both of those teams with one loss and sent both of them into the playoffs.

Cumpston also said there would be a possibility of no playoff for the Whitefaces if Frenship won the rest of its games this season.

With only two weeks out of nine gone in the district season, there are of course numerous possibilities in the district race. But here is what Canyon's record and Estacado's record would be — not including the Canyon-Estacado game — if Hereford goes 6-2 and Frenship goes 7-1: Estacado 6-1 and Canyon 5-2.

In this mathematical possibility, if Estacado beat Canyon (on Oct. 16), then Estacado would finish at 7-1 and go into the playoffs as the first place team, along with Frenship as the second place team.

But if Hereford and Frenship win the rest of the way, and Canyon wins all its games except against Frenship, then Hereford and Canyon would both be 6-2, with Hereford getting the second place playoff spot.

Friday's game against Lubbock Dunbar will be only the fourth in history between the two schools. Hereford beat Dunbar 28-15 in Lubbock last year.

Dunbar defeated Hereford in non-district games in 1970 and 1971 — 17-14 at Hereford in 1970, and 11-6 in Lubbock in 1971.

Ann Landers

Communication needed

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A month ago, our company changed insurance carriers and I went to a new dentist. He told me I had a tiny cavity that needed attention.

When I went back to get it taken care of, the dentist positioned me in the chair and went to work.

I am not afraid of pain and paid no attention when he told me I would probably feel a pinch. Before I realized what was happening, he plunged a hypodermic needle into my cheek. After a few seconds he told me to rinse. I let him know that to have administered a shot in such a sneaky way was an insult to my intelligence and an affront to my status as an adult.

He became angry and said he never uses the word "shot" because of the negative connotation. Furthermore he implied that I was some kind of a nut.

Ann, I am a 45-year-old woman who has been going to the dentist every six months since I was a child.

I have never been apprehensive or nervous about dental visits nor am I squeamish about shots. I resent that man's methods and his attitude.

What does your dentist say about this? I am — Still Mad in Simi Valley

DEAR S.M.: My dentist, Dr. Jordan Block, says that the dentist should have told you what to expect, and that if he didn't want to use the word "shot" he could have said, "Now I'm going to give you a little novocaine."

The chemistry between you two has gone sour and the hostility on both sides precludes a positive doctor-patient relationship. Find another dentist.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I burned my toddler's eyelid by accident when he walked into my lit cigarette. I had to bend down to move a friend's baby in a carriage when my son came up from behind me.

Luckily, he blinked and the cigarette did not penetrate the eyelid. Nevertheless, we spent four nerve-racking hours in the emergency room holding this little fellow down as various medicine were put into his eye.

The doctor said he had another 18-month-old patient who had chewed on the filter of his daddy's cigarette. That baby was in a coma. I don't know if he survived.

Often, especially at amusement parks, I notice people holding their cigarettes low—as parents weave their children through crowds in strollers and holding their little hands. I shiver when I see this, but I can't stop everybody and warn them. I did caution one rather friendly-looking papa who had his baby on a hand restraint after I saw the child walk within a foot of a smoker who had his cigarette at the baby's eye level.

The man thanked me and said he didn't realize the danger. Neither did I until I burned my own child. Please pass the word, Ann, and sign me — Cautious Mom in California

DEAR CALIFORNIA: Thanks for the alert. I'm surprised it doesn't happen more often. I'm sure your letter will raise the consciousness of many parents and I thank you for it. P.S. Are you listening, readers? Another good reason not to smoke.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My problem: marriage burn-out. My husband is a nice man. We are both 50, but I'm tired of bickering about the kids, struggling to pay bills, washing, and ironing, cooking and cleaning. Our sex life has become boring.

Too many years invested to toss it overboard, but maybe a six-month split?—JJJ

DEAR JJJ: Stay together and start talking to each other about what is wrong, what is missing, what you want and what you need. Sometimes a third party can open up a dialogue. If you need the help of a counselor, get it.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $2.50 plus a No. 10, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Decoys

A thousand years ago, Indians made the first decoys to trick birds down to within arrow shot. They were made of bulrushes woven and twisted into duck shapes. This Indian invention was quickly adopted by North America's first white hunters. In the Old World, they used live birds to trap wild ones in a cage the Dutch called "ende kooi," which the English pronounced "decoy."

Plastic surgeons call fat suctioning largely safe

CHICAGO (AP) — Fat suctioning, America's most popular form of cosmetic surgery, is largely safe and effective, though some variations are riskier than others and some practitioners are poorly trained, a medical group said today.

The American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons said in a report that it had documented 11 deaths and nine non-fatal cases of serious complications in an analysis of 100,000 U.S. liposuction procedures over five years.

Most of the complications were caused by clots of blood or fat blocking vessels to the heart, brain or lungs, the Chicago-based society said.

Fat suctioning, or liposuction, involves inserting a tubular instrument under the skin and suctioning off fat tissue.

The risk of complications increases when fat suctioning is combined with a technique of removing excess skin and fat from the abdomen called abdominoplasty, the plastic-surgeons group said.

However, the society said the procedure has been so greatly refined that it can be used on fatty areas of the face and even improve the looks of the elderly, despite early reservations about them as appropriate candidates.

Meanwhile, the society said fat transplants, a new twist on the procedure in which fat is sucked from one part of the body and injected into another, have had uneven success and should be considered experimental.

Difficulties with liposuction are more likely when it is used for more than two quarts of fat. Such an amount requires the patient to be under general anesthesia, to be watched overnight and to have donated blood in advance in case bleeding makes a transfusion necessary, the society said.

The society also reported that fat suctioning tends to be overused. Practitioners lacking training in other plastic surgery procedures may use liposuction when it is not appropriate, such as in the case of loose skin on the abdomen or under the chin, it said.

A U.S. pioneer of fat suctioning blasted that conclusion and accused the society of engaging in a "turf battle over money" by spreading the impression that only plastic surgeons are qualified to do the lucrative procedure.

"It is absolutely unconscionable what they are trying to do," said Dr. Julius Newman, chairman of cosmetic surgery at The Graduate Hospital, which is affiliated with the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine in Philadelphia.

"Plastic and reconstructive surgeons feel no other surgeons are capable of doing plastic surgery in any part of the body," said Newman, president of the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery, based in Pacific Palisades, Calif.

"Our position is no one surgical specialty can control all of plastic surgery," he said, noting that a French gynecologist, not a plastic surgeon, developed the procedure and taught it to U.S. doctors.

Newman said specialists such as eye surgeons; ear, nose and throat doctors; obstetrician-gynecologists, and orthopedists may in many cases be better qualified than plastic surgeons to do liposuction because they would be more familiar with the body areas on which they would be performing the procedure.

Liposuction was performed 99,330 times last year in the United States, the 2,800-member plastic surgeons group reported previously. The procedure costs $500 to $4,000.

Asceptic packaging now used for variety of products

The aseptic packaging of drinks has some consumers wondering about safely storing and using these products, says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

According to nutritionist Marilyn Haggard, aseptic packaging involves sterilizing the product and container separately. Then the product and package are brought together in a sterile environment where the container is filled and sealed.

Aseptic packaging is now used for a variety of products, including boxes for juice or milk and foil pouches for juice and fruit drinks.

"The aseptically packaged milk does not have to be stored in the refrigerator, and can sit on your shelf for up to 6 months," she says.

"While it's safe and wholesome, aseptically packaged milk does have a slightly different taste, which is often described as 'richer' than regular milk, even after it's been chilled," adds the specialist.

Haggard notes that aseptic juice boxes or pouches can be a special convenience for sack lunches.

"The cartons can be stored overnight in the freezer without the multi-layered packaging tearing as the

The aseptic juices have a shelf life of 6-8 months, and like canned food, should be rotated so those bought first are used first, says the specialist.

'Six in a row, one day at a time' is new motto

Herd starts over against Dunbar Friday

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

Starting over is what the Hereford Whiteface varsity football team has to do as a result of the credits computation error that was discovered on an athlete Monday — and the forfeiting of two games, including a District 1-4A victory.

Coach Don Cumpton said, "Our new motto is, 'Six in a row, one day at a time.' Our players have responded well this week."

"We know we have a quality opponent in Dunbar. Dunbar's got good speed and we'll have to play well to beat them. It's going to take a team effort, and I emphasize TEAM."

Hereford and Lubbock Dunbar, both 0-2 in the district standings, battle at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Whiteface Stadium in Hereford. The general consensus is that Hereford must win all six of its remaining district games to be in position for a possible playoff berth.

That trek will take the Whitefaces against Dunbar, Levelland, Dumas, Canyon, Lubbock Estacado, and Borger. The games against Dumas and Estacado are home games.

"If you're a champion, you don't stay down. You overcome adversity. I do believe we have a chance to win the next six games. We were 0-4 in 1971 and wound up in the state quarterfinals. We sure aren't quitting," Cumpton said.

"We're due to have one of our good weeks, and Dunbar is due to have one of their good weeks. So it should be a heck of a ball game," he adds.

Dunbar opened the season with a 20-12 win over Lubbock High, and then lost to Lubbock Monterey 24-19. In the Panthers' district opener, they lost to Canyon 35-14, but the game was a close one in the first half.

Canyon held a 28-14 halftime lead, but if Dunbar had scored from within the five-yard line just before halftime, the Panthers may have had a chance at upsetting Canyon.

Dunbar had 200 yards total offense in that game, compared to 275 by Canyon. The Panthers had 95 yards rushing and 105 yards passing.

The Panthers had several players injured in that game, and had to go against Estacado last week without three two-way starters. And to make things worse for Dunbar, quarterback Keith Gamble was sidelined with a thigh bruise in his team's first series of the second half.

Dunbar managed only 101 yards total offense in losing to Estacado 38-0. Estacado had 437 yards total offense. Dunbar's backup quarterback Jesse Davila failed to complete a pass in nine attempts.

For Hereford this week, as far as injuries are concerned, one player will be out of the lineup with a broken arm — pass receiver Pat Mercer. Mercer caught four passes for 39 yards, including a touchdown pass, in the 23-7 loss at Frenship last week.

"Hopefully, everybody else will be well. We've had some sickness this week, but hopefully everybody will be well," Cumpton said.

The Whiteface head coach said he will continue to do what he has in other weeks this season — announce the starting lineups to the players after workouts today.

Dunbar uses the I-formation on offense and a 4-3 defense. Quarterback Gamble has completed 12 of 49 passes this season for 265 yards, with one touchdown and two interceptions.

The Panthers' leading ball carrier is Craig Ross, with 324 yards in 48 carries for a 6.8 average and one touchdown.

The Whitefaces are averaging 293 yards total offense per game, compared to 213 yards by their opponents. The passing leader at this point in the season is Jason Scott with 22 completions in 51 attempts for 357 yards and five touchdowns, with three interceptions.

Fidencio Cantu is the leading receiver with eight catches for 170 yards and two touchdowns. Rodney McCracken has seven catches for 109 yards and two touchdowns. Mercer's season total, before suffering his injury last week, was seven catches for 73 yards and one touchdown.

Whiteface running back Marcus Brown, who has had some problems with an achilles tendon injury, has played in three of the four HHS games, totaling 307 yards in 38 carries and scoring two touchdowns.

On defense, Hereford's leading tacklers in four games have been linebackers Lee Young and Michael Pihbs, each with 40 tackles. Linebacker Joe Medrano has 31 tackles, and defensive tackles Edward Martinez and Richard Castillo each have 30 tackles.

Derrell Page, who missed one game this year because of a contusion on his knee, leads the Herd in tackles for losses with five.

The HHS defense has intercepted 11 opponents' passes, three each by Keith Brown and Robby Collier and two by Johnny Beltran.

Hereford struggled on both offense and defense last week, and needs to have everything start "jelling," as Coach Cumpton has said before, to begin the trek to qualifying for the playoffs.

A 6-2 district record by Hereford would mean at least one loss for both Canyon and Estacado. At the Hereford Whiteface Booster Club meeting Tuesday night, Cumpton noted that a tie in the Canyon-Estacado game would leave both of those teams with one loss and sent both of them into the playoffs.

Cumpton also said there would be a possibility of no playoff for the Whitefaces if Frenship won the rest of its games this season.

With only two weeks out of nine gone in the district season, there are of course numerous possibilities in the district race. But here is what Canyon's record and Estacado's record would be — not including the Canyon-Estacado game — if Hereford goes 6-2 and Frenship goes 7-1: Estacado 6-1 and Canyon 5-2.

In this mathematical possibility, if Estacado beat Canyon (on Oct. 16), then Estacado would finish at 7-1 and go into the playoffs as the first place team, along with Frenship as the second place team.

But if Hereford and Frenship win the rest of the way, and Canyon wins all its games except against Frenship, then Hereford and Canyon would both be 6-2, with Hereford getting the second place playoff spot.

Friday's game against Lubbock Dunbar will be only the fourth in history between the two schools. Hereford beat Dunbar 28-15 in Lubbock last year.

Dunbar defeated Hereford in non-district games in 1970 and 1971 — 17-14 at Hereford in 1970, and 11-6 in Lubbock in 1971.

Counselors' Licenses Protect Public

No one seeking professional help in overcoming personal problems should also be the victim of an unqualified or unethical counselor. To protect the public against incompetent or unscrupulous professionals, the Texas State Board of Examiners of Professional Counselors strictly regulates the licensing of persons offering professional counseling to the public.

The nine-member board is composed of five licensed professional counselors and four representatives of the public. It is appointed by the governor and was established in 1981, according to the board's executive secretary, Daniel L. Boone, at the Texas Department of Health (TDH).

Boone said that anyone may legally offer advice and counseling for pay, but the soundness of that advice, and perhaps the safety of the person seeking help, may be precarious unless the counselor has met the minimum qualifications to earn and maintain a license to practice professional counseling in this state. The board currently licenses about 8,400 counselors.

By law, persons licensed to practice professional counseling in Texas must:

- Have essential education and experience (including a graduate degree meeting specific course and training requirements from an accredited university, and two years' supervised counseling experience meeting board standards);

- Pass a rigid competency examination;

- Renew his or her license annually and complete every three years at least 75 hours of continuing education courses approved by the board; and

- Risk losing the license if found violating the law or the board's rules of ethics.

"These are strict rules to help simplify the client's selection of a counselor. It also helps to weed out con artists and charlatans," Boone said. He explained that persons seeking personal counseling are among the most vulnerable prey of unscrupulous advisors and "crackpot therapists."

Unqualified counselors, even with the best intentions, may compound the existing problems of a troubled person, Boone explained, while others may actually swindle or take sexual advantage of their clients.

"Our purpose is to help the public avoid making serious mistakes when choosing a counselor. Even the most competent counseling can be difficult for the client, but a counselor's license is at least proof of professionalism, and evidence that the state has scrutinized the counselor's abilities," Boone said.

The Republic of Maldives, in the Indian Ocean, is about twice the size of Washington, D.C.

Wintering Habitat Lease

James Higgins, left, president of the Hereford-based Texas Waterfowlers Association, Inc., presents a lease check to Gaines Howell of Dimmitt to secure a 60-acre lake on the Howell farm west of Dimmitt, as a waterfowl wintering sanctuary for the 1987-88 season. This year's lease marks the second time the lake has been made a sanctuary for waterfowl.

Texas Waterfowlers Association project

Lake leased for wintering habitat

A waterfowl habitat provision effort in Castro County has been renewed by the Texas Waterfowlers Association, Inc., a non-profit conservation organization founded in Hereford.

The renewal of the lease of a 60-acre playa lake on the Gaines Howell farm west of Dimmitt designates the lake as a waterfowl wintering refuge for the 1987-88 season.

The Texas Waterfowlers Association previously leased the lake in the 1984-85 season. Association president James Higgins and association founder Jim Steiert, both of Hereford, recently made arrangements for the lease.

"We're proud to continue the tradition TWA launched almost a decade ago of preserving and providing wintering habitat for the waterfowl resources of the Texas High Plains. The Howell lake represents the kind of quality habitat TWA is working hard to preserve for the future of our waterfowl," Higgins said.

The Howell lake has a long history of extensive use by waterfowl, and features a large watershed that provides a stable water supply for the lake. The lake is located in prime grain farming country and is surrounded by fields suitable for feeding by wintering waterfowl, Higgins notes.

Waterfowl species that have used the lake have included lesser Canada and snow geese, mallards, pintail, widgeon, and teal. But the lake has taken on more importance as a spring stopover for lesser snow geese headed northward during their spring migration.

Howell said large numbers of snow geese were at the lake in February and March last season.

Under the terms of the lease agreement with Howell, the lake and a quarter-mile buffer zone around it is designated as a sanctuary area. Howell retains all control of hunting outside the buffer zone.

"The Howells have been providing waterfowl habitat for many years and we're proud to work with folks who take such an interest in our wildlife resources," Higgins said.

The Texas Waterfowlers Association was originally chartered in Hereford for the purpose of providing wintering habitat for waterfowl in the region. Efforts have been centered in Deaf Smith County, Castro County and Parmer County.

The association funds its projects through fundraisers, particularly the annual dinner-auction planned by the association.

BELMONT TROPHY

NEW YORK (AP) — The winner of the Belmont Stakes now gets a large and elaborately engraved silver bowl.

Quite a difference from the first trophy in 1873 when D. McDaniel's Springbok won the race. The trophy was a simple silver plate.

One side depicted an Indian spearing a buffalo. The other side had an Indian lassoing a wild horse. Springbok's Belmont was the seventh edition of the race, first held in 1867.

Don Hutson, a member of the National Football League Hall of Fame, led NFL pass receivers in eight seasons.

For crossing NFL players union picket line

White gets $300,000 salary advance

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White received a $300,000 salary advance to cross the NFL players union picket line, a Dallas newspaper reported today.

Several Cowboys players who asked to remain unidentified told the Dallas Times Herald that White gave the advance as one of his main reasons for returning to the team. White has refused to cite specifics for returning, other than to say that contract provisions were motivating factors.

White reportedly owes business creditors $230,000, although he has said his debts are substantially less than that.

White resigned from the NFL Players Association Wednesday and became the third Cowboys veteran to cross striking players' picket line at Valley Ranch.

Defensive end Ed Jones and running back Tony Dorsett were expected to follow White's lead to keep from losing their annuities, which are deferred payments based on length of service.

"There's no great mystery about what I'm going to do," Dorsett said. "What would you do if you were in my situation? I'll see you all at a press conference Friday."

White did not say how much of a role finances played in his decision, but he was very direct in explaining the role of players' negotiator Gene Upshaw.

"I decided to come back in on Monday when I heard Gene Upshaw say the union was in it for the long haul. I realized then he was not representing me," White said. "The financial situation I'm in and some clauses in my contract were a factor."

Players who don't resign from the union and cross the picket line are subject to fines from the union, so White decided to resign. White became the third Cowboys veteran to cross the line, following Randy White and Don Smerek.

Dorsett and Jones got letters from Cowboys President Tex Schramm warning they could lose their annuities if they didn't report.

"My mind was made up for me," Dorsett said. "I have no choice."

Dorsett's annuity, which will pay him $6.4 million between 1990 and 2014, began being funded Feb. 1, 1985, on a monthly basis for five years. It is guaranteed against injury or release, but if he remains on strike today, he would lose the last 28 months of the payments.

Meanwhile, lawyers from the NFL Players Association flew to Dallas Wednesday, concerned about Schramm's letters and hoping to keep the union from unraveling.

But Schramm, who met with a Dorsett representative Wednesday, said he had not heard from the NFLPA attorneys.

Danny White, a 13-year NFL veteran who was an outspoken critic of the 1982 strike, said there could be some ill will against him, but he said the team's union loyalty remained strong.

"When I talked to my teammates, no one indicated that they wanted to come back in with me," he said. "I think the players are strong. My teammates are on my mind, and they're second only to my family. I'm basically supportive of what they're doing and what they're trying to accomplish."

White said he thought he would be ready to start when the Cowboys play the New York Jets Sunday.

Cowboys' player representative

Doug Cosbie said he understood why White, who was losing $45,000 per week, had to return.

"Danny explained his problems to us," Cosbie said. "We will stick together through all of this. The strike is still for the majority and the majority is still out."
