Wait a minute...

By Kerry Craig

Now that school is back in session there are some things that, although we are aware of, we need to be reminded of—kids.

Now I admit that kids are not easily forgotten. I do wonder, sometimes, if other folks have forgotten them.

There is a stretch of North Main Street, a couple of blocks long, that is designated a school zone. At certain times during the day one can see yellow lights flashing at the school zone. These lights mean that lower speed limits are in effect and to watch for kids.

Our police try to patrol these school zones as much as possible however, having one officer on duty and a limited number of patrol cars, it is difficult to be in the school zone all the time. And too, the cops have other things to do besides reminding us to slow down and watch out for the school kids.

I'll bet you didn't know that there folks driving around that don't know that kids walking across the street in the cross walk have the right of way. Well, they do!

We can only hope it doesn't take a youngster to slow the traffic down in these school zones.

While on that subject, drivers are not the only ones who need to be on the look-out around the schools. The kids, big and little, should also exercise caution.

The ones who really need some education about crossing streets are the ones in school for the first time. Either the parents or the teachers, maybe even both, need to teach these little ones to look before crossing a street.

Monday of this week, when I went to pick up my kindergarten kid, just as I was driving away, two little ones, a boy and a girl walked right in front of the car. Fortunately, I was watching them and going very slow.

Seconds later a big, four-door pick up with four tires on the back came bouncing across the speed bumps at a speed that appeared more than allowed in the school zone.

If timing had been the slightest bit different, it would have been tragic.

Speed bumps. I guess they do some good. They really get your attention and have the potential for tearing up a car. Some of them work too good.

The same morning, I watched a half-dozen cars creep across the speed bumps—they had too. And everyone of them scraped on the humps.

Now I know the bumps have been there for quite a while but, there are some that only a Model T could bounce across without hitting high center.

It would help and not hurt for someone to knock these bumps down a mite. It also wouldn't hurt for our police to issue even more tickets for speeding in a school zone.

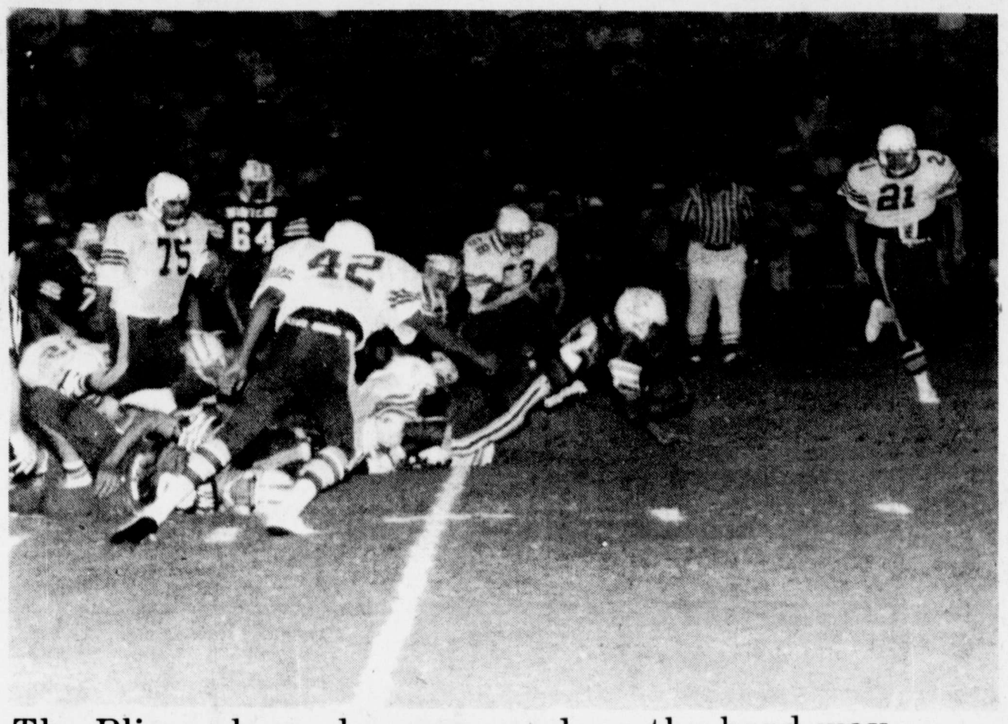

Now while on the topic of Main Street, I sympathize with some of the folks who live on that highway and with any kids that might play in front yards along there.

At least one resident on Main Street has spent several hours for a couple of days picking up bits and pieces of broken, brown glass.

Yup, you guessed it. Some inconsiderate boob threw his beer bottle at the curb and splattered a yard with broken glass.

If we knew who was responsible for these thoughtless throws, we could force them to pick up the broken glass—barefooted.

There is no excuse for such action. Most likely the person that threw this bottle was not even old enough to buy the beverage legally and if he was, he didn't act like it. He must have spent all his money on the booze because he apparently didn't have any sense.

The Blizzards made some yardage the hard way.

Roscoe Plowboys turn Blizzards over 18-7

The Roscoe Plowboys came to town ready to go to work last Friday and defeated the Blizzards by a score of 18-7.

The loss leaves Winters with a record of 0-2 while Roscoe evened their standing to 1-1.

The Blizzards had trouble getting anything started during the first half of the game offensively or defensively.

Roscoe scored early in the game but failed on the extra points and, on a nine yard pass, added another score before half-time.

In the third quarter the Blizzards seemed to pick up some of the pieces and made it into the end-zone early in the final period to make the score 12-7. Chris Rives made the score with a 13 yard run and Richard Lett kicked the extra point.

With less than four minutes remaining in the game, Roscoe added the clincher and ran for the extra points to make the score 18-7.

Winters led in the passing department and the fumbles department. The Blizzards passed for a total of 91 yards while Roscoe picked up only 32 yards in the air. Winters lost only one fumble and Roscoe lost two.

Winters will host the Pied Pipers of Hamlin this week.

Hamlin, 0-2 on the season, was defeated last Friday by the Ballinger Bearcats by a score of 22-15.

The Blizzards will have their work cut out for them with the Pied Pipers who led the Bearcats in scoring at half-time last week.

Game time Friday is 8:00 p.m. in Blizzard Stadium.

The Winters Blizzard Booster Club will meet at 8:00 p.m. each Tuesday to watch the tapes from the previous game.

Sales tax audit is windfall for city

The City of Winters got a surprise when they opened the envelope from the State Comptroller's Office this week. City hall officials expected to find the sales tax check, in the amount of about $6,000 to $7,000.

The check was there but, the amount was over $12,000. About $6,000 represented the city's portion of the sales tax collected during the month of July, the additional $6,000-plus dollars were the result of an audit of a local business by the Comptroller's Office.

City officials said that they received a brief note from the state office explaining the extra money but not identifying the audited business.

City Administrator Chuck MacIlvaine said the extra money was welcomed by the city and that it would help in the current financial difficulties the city is experiencing.

Winters' check in the amount of $12,344.33 this month brings the total for the year, thus far, to $83,433,43. That amount is still about $500 less that received during the same period last year.

Ballinger's check was in the amount of $13,369.39 and the amount indicated a decline in retail sales of 10.99 percent.

Miles received a check for $603.53 for sales tax collected in July a figure that showed a decline of 3.02 percent.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said Friday that checks totaling $56.1 million in local sales tax were sent to 1,309 cities in the state that levy the one-percent city tax.

County Judge proclaims Farm and Ranch Safety Week

County Judge Mike Murchison has proclaimed September 20-16, 1987, as FARM AND RANCH SAFETY WEEK in Runnels County, at the request of James Eggemeyer President, Runnels County Farm Bureau. This year marks the 44th annual observance of National Farm Safety Week; with the theme, "FARM SAFETY MAKES GOOD ENE."

This year, the American Farm Bureau and all State Farm Bureaus are being recognized as co-sponsors with the National Safety Council and the United States Department of Agriculture. According to Jim mersberger, AFBF Director of Safety and Health, Farm Bureau Women's Committees and Young Farmers and Ranchers Committees across the nation have agreed to assume a leadership role in the effort during National Farm Safety Week.

It's no secret that these are difficult times for many in agriculture. And it's no secret that accidents and work-related illnessess impose steep human and economic losses that farmers and ranchers surely can't afford. Considering how little it costs to prevent accidents compared to how much it costs to have them, farm safety does indeed make good $ense!

Ambulance contracts awarded by commissioners

The Runnels County Commissioners' Court accepted bids for ambulance services in Runnels County in their regular meeting Tuesday.

Only two bids were submitted for the services. Bob McDaniel, owner of Ballinger Emergency Medical Service submitted the bid for the ambulance service in Ballinger and the southern half of Runnels County. Randy Nolte, owner of North Runnels Emergency Service, Inc., was the only bidder for service in northern Runnels County.

Both contractors told the commissioners that their contract subsidy requirements would remain the same as their present contracts.

Ballinger EMS will receive a subsidy of $4,500 per month while North Runnels Emergency Service will recieve $4,750 per month.

In their bid presentations, both ambulance operators said that their patient load averaged about one person per day during the past three years.

The new contracts awarded by the county will be for three-year terms. The court, on a motion by Commissioner Robert Virden, agreed to extend the new contracts until December 31, 1990. The action extends the south Runnels County contract three months and the north Runnels County contract two months beyond the three-year contract period.

Randy Nolte told the commissioners, in his bid proposal, that his service had transported over 830 patients during the past three years. Along with the actual care and transportation of patients, North Runnels Emergency Service, Inc., has provided CPR training to over 500 residents and, through a program initiated last year in the Winters Schools, trained approximately 150 students in CPR and first aid.

Nolte also said that his service had upgraded its care level from Basic Life Support to Advanced Life Support with the addition of a cardiac monitor-defibrillator.

The service is presently staffed by Nolte, who is a certified paramedic and the only full-time employee, and a number of part-time, state certified Emergency Medical Technicians.

Plans call for advanced training for a number of the part-time EMT to provide for full ALS care for area residents during the next three years.

Local Talent on Exhibit

Jeff Buxkemper, local taxidermist will show some of his work at the Sportsman's Show held at the Z. I. Hale Museum, Sunday, September 27, from 2 to 4 p.m.

His exhibit will include a bobcat hide, an audad sheep, white tail deer, also a pheasant, some quail and ducks.

Jeff said that he and his brother, Rodney, began hunting bird and deer when he was 12 years old. He became interested in taxidermy about three years ago while living in Lubbock. A man who had been in the business for about 50 years let him sit in his shop and watch him mount all kinds of animals and birds. "I learned more from him than all the books I read," he said.

"When a hunter brings me a trophy I cape it out for him and salt it down. That means taking hide off the scull. Then I skin the body, take the measurements and salt it down; salt preserves the hide until I send it to the tannery. Some people do their own tanning but I don't have time two do two jobs—my other job is working roustabout," Buxkemper related.

He orders styrofoam forms and when the hide comes back from the tannery he takes horns off the old skull and mounts them on forms, then stretches the hide on. Deer hide is soaked six to seven hours before mounting to make it soft. The fine detail work is done after the object is dry.

Fine detail work is filling in and painting around the eyes. This is all on deer and other animals. The hide always shrinks around the eyes. "I fix them like people want, for example a coon on a log or an outdoor background for a pheasant," said Jeff.

Birds are pretty much the same; there is more grooming on the feathers than anything else. The bottom part of the breast is opened and the body skinned out of it. Glass eyes are inserted and bills and feet painted, if they need it.

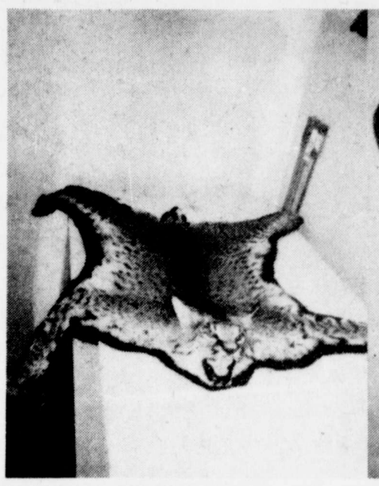

Last year, Jeff displayed a peacock for the Arts and Crafts Festival. He put the feathers in the bathtub and washed them with soap and water. Then he took the blow dryer to the feathers, a three hour job. It was a good days job when it was completed. He has done turkeys for people which takes just as long.

Buxkemper will process about 15 deer heads this year, the same as last year. He gets $200 each for deer heads, $250 for the peacock, and pheasants are $185. He can complete a quail in 1½ hours and they bring $50 apiece. He started out to raise quail but found it was another job to raise birds and he didn't have time for it.

"I do this as a fun job," he said. "It pays for my hunting trips to Colorado and New Mexico. I could, if in the right location, make it a full time job."

Jeff married Leah Pendergrass three years ago and they have a baby daughter named Randi. They moved to their present location on the Novice Highway a little over two years ago.

He has built a shop, his first, and perhaps will soon make the taxidermy business a full time career. He has a real talent for making his birds and animals very lifelike.

Eye care for the elderly

Do you know an older person who needs medical eye care, but cannot afford it?

Ask them to call 1-800-222-EYES, the toll-free Helpline operated by the National Eye Care Project. Eligible callers will receive a referral to a nearby eye physician and surgeon (ophthalmologist) who has volunteered to provide care.

Every patient will be given a comprehensive medical eye examination for eye diseases and any needed treatment to protect vision. Services of the volunteer ophthalmologist are provided at no out-of-pocket cost to the patient. For this project, volunteer ophthalmologists are accepting Medicare and /or other health insurance assignment as payment in full for their services. If the patient has no insurance coverage, medical eye care is provided without charge.

Although there is no financial qualification for the program, the emphasis of the project is to help those who may be without the means to pay--those who need the care the most.

* To be eligible, a person must be of age 65 or older, a U.S. citizen, and no longer have access to an ophthalmologist he or she has seen in the past.

* This is not an eyeglasses program. The National Eye Care Project is designed to provide comprehensive medical eye examinations and treatment to prevent or control eye disease. Eyeglasses are not covered by the program.

* If hospitalization is needed, volunteer ophthalmologists may be able to work with the patient to obtain needed care. Hospital charges are not covered under this program or by the doctor.

* The National Eye Care Project is for needy older persons who do not have an ophthalmologist. It is not a second opinion program.

Older people suffer more than half of the blinding eye diseases in the U.S. --and about half of this blindness could be prevented. If you know someone eho needs eye care, but cannot afford it, ask them to call 1-800-222-EYES today!

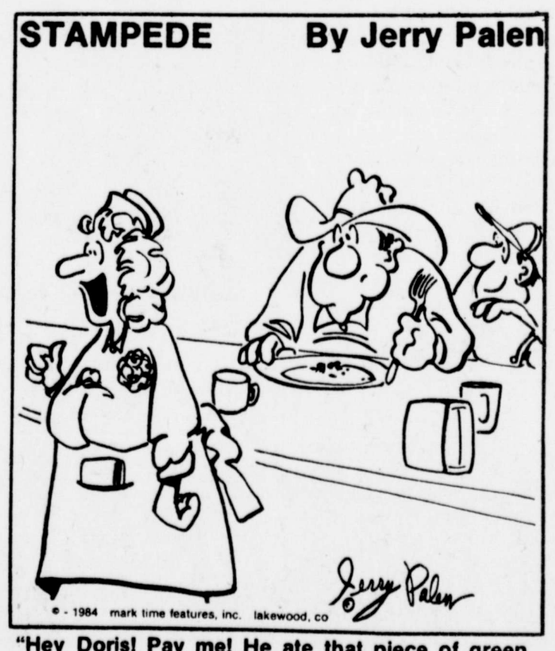

The National Eye Project is sponsored by your state ophthalmology society and the Foundation of the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

Ophthalmologists are medical doctors. They are the only specialists qualified to provide total eye care: medical, surgical and optical.

When your work speaks for itself, don't interrupt.

Design

The exterior of the structure consists of native stone walls with a large porch fronting the main entrance. The large wooden frame windows, located throughout the building, are crowned with a unique stone arch design. The interior has many building features which relfect the designs of this early-day period. The detail trim on the woodwork is an original feature which is highlighted by high ceilings and large doorways. The original oval-shaped hardware is still intact on many of the doors. The building floor plan allows a central corridor which connects both major and minor rooms for a functional community facility.

Older persons beware of salesman

The State Board of Insurance has received reports that some insurance agents are falsely portraying themselves as Medicare representatives to gain entry into the home of older Texans.

According to members of the board's newly appointed Citizens Working Group on Medicare Supplement Insurance, the practice may be on the increase in the sale of such coverage.

It is a violation of federal law for an agent to say that he or she is from Medicare or another Federal governmental program. The practice is a felony, with penalties of up to five years in prison and a $25,000 fine for such misrepresentation.

In addition, such conduct, if proven, could lead to revocation of an agent's license to sell insurance in Texas.

Consumers are urged to report agents who try to sell them Medicare Supplement policies after saying they are from the government.

Reports of these violations should be sent to the Complaints Division, State Board of Insurance, 1110 San Jacinto, Austin, TX 78701-1998.

It also is a violation of the board's advertising rules for insurers to disguise Medicare Supplement advertisements and supplemental material as mailings from the federal government.

Older Texans who receive such mailouts are encouraged to send them to the State Board of Insurance for investigation.

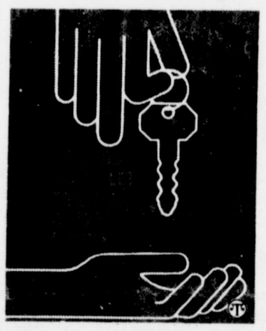

The board also has a tollfree telephone hotline, 1-800-252-3439 for answering consumer questions. A complaint, however, cannot be investigated formally until it has been reduced to writing.

Card of Thanks

My family joins me in thanking our many friends for the prayers, cards and flowers during my stay in the hospital. A special thank you to Dr. Lee, Dr. Thorpe and the nursing staff of North Runnels Hospital. God Bless each one in a special way.

Nursing Home news

"As a new season starts and every one is busy, things are happening everywhere! Several projects are underway or completed. Our front yard fence has been moved thanks to the hard work of Garland Crouch and the gift of concrete by Mr. and Mrs. George Brown. George and Garland formed it up to complete a circular sidewalk suitable for exercise rolling by our residents. The professional finish was given as a gift by Mr. Lucius Wood and his crew. All of us sincerely appreciate the thoughtfulness of both of these gifts."

"Carl Grenwelge responded to a rumor that many of our residents would enjoy reading readers digest if it could be obtained in large print. His thoughtfulness and generosity will make this possible. What a great gift idea for older friends with reduced visual ability. We thank you Carl."

"We would like to welcome Eura (Mamma Jo) Saunders to our home and wish her a speedy recovery and enjoyable stay with us. We will miss Vicki Shaw as she has moved to McCamey near her daughter Kathy at P.O. Box 863, McCamey, Tx. 79752."

"September 24 is Western Day at our home---but guess we have to leave our horse at the barn this time. Everyone dig out your jeans and boots and come visit your friends. Bingo is at 3:00. Carl Smith is the most recent champ and has the banner on his door!"

"We appreciate the flowers from Flowers ETC. and the potting soil from Farmers Feed and Seed. Our resident's birthday party will be Thursday at 3:00 p.m. J. O. Smith's family and friends are invited to join the fun!"

It's true that termites do more than $750 million of damage each year in this country. But, according to International Wildlife magazine, their ecological good may outweigh the economic harm. Of the 2,000 species, only about 10 percent cause any economic damage at all. On the other hand, all of them benefit us because they recycle vast quantities of cellulose, making its atoms available to living plants!

Sinuses cause only trouble

Sinuses seem to have no useful purpose. They probably did at one time, but now these air spaces in the bones behind the nose seem only to make many people miserable.

Problems arise when the mucous membranes of the sinuses become inflamed, a condition called sinusitis, says the Texas Medical Association.

The trouble usually begins when a common cold—a viral infection—is joined by a bacterial infection. These organisms move easily from the nose into the sinuses because the mucous membranes of the nose extend into and line the sinuses.

Most often affected are the pairs of sinuses in the forehead slightly above and between the eyes and the cheeks.

Symptoms of sinusitis occur several days after a cold has begun—about the time it should be clearing up. The blockage in the nose may worsen and a greenish discharge may increase.

The discharge may stop if the passages between the nose and the sinuses become blocked. If that happens, the nose is more stopped up than ever. Breathing through the mouth becomes necessary, speech becomes nasal, and a generally ill feeling sets in.

Depending on which sinuses are affected, a person may have a headache over one or both eyes, and one or both cheeks may hurt. The lower portion of the forehead just above the eyes may feel tender.

Sinusitis is common, but some people never get it. Others get it whenever they have a bad cold. Some people get sinusitis by jumping into water feet first. Damage to nasal bones or a foreign body caught in a nostril can lead to infection and an attack.

Self-treatment involves staying in a room with a fairly constant temperature and a vaporizer to add moisture. Blow you nose gently. To relieve pain, inhale steam from a sink of hot water.

A physician may prescribe an antibiotic, decongestant tablets, nose drops, or a nasal spray. Though further treatment is usually not necessary, a minor operation with local anesthesia can create a new passageway between the nose and sinuses to relieve the blockage.

From A Goldfish Bowl

By Pastor Steve Byrne

A father and his young son were together on an icy sidewalk one day. The little boy, as he walked, wrapped his tiny hand around the little finger of his Daddy's hand. And he held on as tight as he could. But each time his feet would lose their grip, no matter how tightly he had been squeezing his Dad's finger, his tiny hand always slipped off. And down to the ice-covered pavement he went. Jarring the posterior section of his anatomy and causing considerable pain.

After each fall, Dad offered to hold the little boy's hand. But the little boy protested, saying HE wanted to do the holding himself.

Following six or seven meetings with the sidewalk. And the same number of offers from Dad to do the holding, the small son finally agreed. So his Dad wrapped a giant hand, not around the boy's finger. Or even his little hand. But Dad grabbed him around the wrist. A good, safe, firm hold.

The next time the feet went out, the larger, stronger hand and better balance of Daddy prevailed. There was no slam to the sidewalk. No pain. The child was held up. Safe. Protected.

After 11 years of ordination, this story is highly symbolic for me. As I reflect, I recall a lot of sore bottoms. Mainly from trying to hold on to God's hand. I like to feel that I am doing something and mainly in charge of the events and outcomes of ministry and life. Isn't it funny that the only outcomes I can remember when I was holding on to Daddy's hand are sore bottoms and wounded pride?

It was when I let God take my hand, wrist, and whole self. Looked to him for the center, guidance, and stability in my life instead of trying to do it myself. That the events and outcomes yielded more peace and satisfaction and fewer sore bottoms and cases of bruised ego.

And yet—knowing all this—I still wind up with a lot of sore bottoms. Maybe the difference is that now, when I'm sitting there on the sidewalk. Looking up at the Father (Or Daddy-that is what Jesus called his Father when he used the term "Abba.") Even with a sore bottom. I am more likely to laugh than cry.

Laugh at myself. For insisting on doing it "my way." Sometimes we all take ourselves much to seriously, you know. Then, just maybe, I let "Daddy" do it his way. Mabe even before I have compounded the pain in my posterior by repeated sidewalk pounding.

Somehow I think I may not be the only one who experiences this.

Dear Betty Crocker

Q. How do I tell when pancakes are ready to turn?

A. The secret is to turn pancakes as soon as they are puffed and just as the bubbles break.

Q. What's the best way to freeze baked pie shells?

A. Freeze them in the pie plate and they will keep for four months. When it's time to thaw them, unwrap and let stand at room teperature or heat in a 350 degree F. oven for about six minutes. Unbaked shells can be frozen, too. They keep up to two months; bake immediately after removing from freezer.

Q. Are all desserts high in cholesterol?

A. No. Desserts that have no animal fat nor egg yolks are low in cholesterol. Angel food cake is a good example.

Q. Why do my bar cookies crumble when I cut them?

A. It's best to cool them completely in the pan before cutting. If you still have a problem, the amount of shortening in the recipe may be wrong. With too much shortening, bars are too rich to hold together; with too little, the bars are dry.

Fruit rolls not as nutritious as fruit

Commercially prepared fruit rills, wrinkles and bars are conveniently packaged for children's school lunches but, don't measure up nutritionally to dried fruit. "Fruit rolls are high in sugar and starch, and typically contain less than two percent of the Recommended Dietary Allowance for vitamins or minerals. They are, however, often fortified with added vitamin C," explains Dr. Alice Hunt, a nutritionist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service. Fruit rolls don't contain the fiber that is found in fresh or dried fruit either, she notes.

It is an unfortunate fact that the youngsters at summer camp who are the most homesick are those who have dogs at home.

B.A.S.A. SOCCER

By J. F. PSUTKA, M.D.

This was our first full Saturday of soccer. The foul weather held off and we were able to complete the schedule.

The Muppets and Mustangs in the Under 6 group demonstrated a lot of power as each team scored 14 goals on their way to victory. We have reduced the number of players on each playing team to five so that there will be a lot more scoring and ball movement than last year.

The Stingers bolted out of the gate scoring 6 goals in a victory over the hapless Tornados, who managed unfortunately to not score at all. The Stingers look like the power of the Under 8 age group.

Rangers and Mustangs were victors in the Under 10 age group with both teams winning by 2 goals. Mustangs won in a wildly offensive struggle over the Gremlins from Winters. The Rangers methodically disposed with the Rovers, who need more offensive punch. The Spurs were off and are on unknown quantity.

The Cosmos and the Wolverines from Winters won their game in the Under 12 group. The competition looks to be stiff and even in that age group with the powerful Lazers drawing a bye in the first week. The Wolverines-Scorpions match was drawn 2-2 until the shoot out determined the winner.

The Soccer Executive is planning two fund raisers this year. The regular team and individual player photo sessions will take place Sat., Sept. 26, 1987.

The ever important candy sale will begin Sept. 21. This is an important fund raiser for the Soccer Association. We do have an on going expenses with equipment and concession purchases. We also will present an awards program at the end of the season. Each player will be able to compete for proficiency badges in certain soccer skills.

It was a great start to the Fall Season. There were a lot of spectators and we really appreciate the fan interest. It helps to encourage the children in their effort, it makes it all worth while as long as the children have fun.

Saving for money for emergencies

"Regular savers end up saving far more than occassional savers, even when they set aside a small amount at a time," says Nancy Granovsky, a family economics sepcialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service. According to the specialist, the following are ways to get started on a savings plan: every payday put money into a savings account first, before paying other expenses; have a portion of your earnings deducted from your pay and deposited directly into a savings account; when you pay off a loan, save the amount of the old payment instead of putting it back into the budget for spending; or put your change in a home bank or jar. When it's full, deposit the money in the bank.

Kids—take care of yourself—bicycle safety

Riding a bike is lots of fun. But you can also get hurt if you do not follow some common sense rules.

Help you parents check your bike's frame, wheels, tires, pedals and brakes to make sure it is "set to go". The bicycle should also be visible from every angle at night. It should have a front reflector, rear reflector and pedal and spoke reflectors.

Then remember the rules of the road.

* Obey all traffic signals, slow down at intersections and look both ways.
* Ride as near the right side of the road as possible and in the same direction as motor vehicles.
* Ride single file.
* Do not ride double. Riding double makes it easier to lose control.
* Do not "hitch" to other vehicles.
* Get off the street and stop for emergency vehicles to pass.
* Most of all, leave the stunt riding and racing for open areas near your home where there is no car traffic.
* Always keep the bike in good condition.

Remember! Skills for self-care are valuable for all children.

Next week's article will be on "Super Snacks".

Kids—Take Care of Yourself —Emergency First Aid

This is a series of articles designed especially for school age children of working parents to better prepare them for taking care of themselves while left alone. This first article deals with the important issue of first-aid.

Everyone should know about first-aid. It is a good way to keep yourself safe and maybe even help somebody else someday.

First, let's prepare a first-aid kit for use with minor problems.

Use a box (plastic, metal or cardboard) clearly marked FIRST-AID. (Contents will depend upon child's age, maturity level and first-aid skills.) Contents:

* Assorted sizes of bandages (for small cuts)
* Sterile gauze pads (for large cuts)
* Adhesive tape (for gauze pads)
* Small scissors
* Elastic bandage (for sprains)
* Tweezers
* Medication for insect bites
* Peroxide or liquid soap (to clean cuts)
* Small clean wash cloth
* Thermometer (to check fever)
* Ice pack (for swelling)

Next, we need to post emergency numbers by each phone. Include number of Sheriff's Office, Fire Department, Ambulance, Family Doctor, Parent's Office, Nearby Adult and Poison Control Center. Discuss with your parents when to call, who to call, and how to report an emergency by stating your name, address and phone number. Emergenices don't happen very often but those who are prepared manage a crisis with more skill and confidence than those who are not prepared.

Lastly, discuss what should be done for minor first-aid problems.

Cuts or Scrapes

* Stop bleeding by holding a clean cloth against the cut or scrape and pressing gently.
* If the cut is bleeding a lot and cannot be stopped call emergency number.
* Wash out the cut or scrape with soap and water and put a bandage on it.

Insect Stings

* Scrape out the insect stinger, or pull it out with tweezers.
* Put ice on the sting, so it will not hurt so much.
* Wash with soap and water.
* If you are allergic to insect stings, or you start to feel sick or vomit or it becomes hard to breathe, call emergency number.

Nose Bleeds

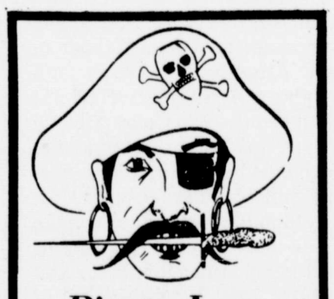

* Do not lie down.
* On the side of your nose that is bleeding, press your nostril against the center of your nose. If both sides are bleeding, pinch the nose together. Do this for five minutes.
* If the nose is still bleeding, call emergency number.

Burns

* For a small burn like you could get from a hot pan, hold the burn under cold water or put an ice cube on it until it no longer hurts.
* Do not put butter of anything else on the burn.
* For a large burn, call an emergency number.

Add any first-aid tips you might need to this list and keep where you can find it. Skills for self-care are valuable for all children.

Next week's "Kids-Take Care of Yourself" will be on Bicycle Safety.

School is down to routine now that Labor Day holiday is past. There are classes, homework, P.E. and science experiments, but best of all is a field trip Wednesday, September 16 to the West Texas Fair in Abilene. All students were presented complimentary tickets by the West Texas Fair and Rodeo.

Monday, September 21, is the day for school pictures to be taken. Everyone come to school looking your prettiest and do not forget to wear your smile.

A new copying machine was purchased for the workroom during the summer. It has more features than the old one, and the teachers are grateful for it.

Reading certificates plus a surprise will be given to students each time one reads and reports on ten library books. Every student is urged to participate in this reading program. It is really fun to see who can get the most certificates.

The school grounds and buildings are looking great. Fresh gravel has been put under the playground equipment. The gym floor has a new finish and it will be enjoyed by all the basketball players and coaches. Boys and girls let's keep the floor in this good condition all year. It is something to be proud of and to enjoy.

Mrs. Derrington, the science teacher, is making science interesting by bringing a working bee hive to the science building so students can see how honey is made.

Don't forget school pictures Monday morning, September 21.

"Can we talk?"

As part of an on-going series, KLST-TV, Pizza Hut, Texas Bank, Shepperson's Southwest, and Angelo Community Hospital asks families:

"Can We Talk?"

"Just because a family can talk and listen to each other, doesn't mean that they don't still face problems...it's when families don't talk out their problems that those problems can grow so large that they seem impossible to solve."

--Malcolm Jamal Warner

Can parents really talk to their kids...When it counts? Can they talk about things such as drugs or sex? What about lifestyles, making the grade in today's world, or just the clothes they wear? Parents and their children can test just how well they are communicating with one another by watching "Can We Talk?" on KLST-TV, Channel 8, on Friday, September 18, 1987, at 7:00 p.m., or on Saturday, September 19, 1987 at 12:00 noon. To help families learn to communicate more effectively, the program brings together stars from two popular NBC 'family' shows--"The Cosby Show" and "Family Ties."

"Can We Talk?" is part of a series of programs KLST is airing as part of "For Kids' Sake," a public service campaign focusing on the problems and opportunities young people face growing up in today's society.

Phylicia Ayers-Allen and Malcolm-Jamal Warner, who portray mother and son on "The Cosby Show" are co-hosts of the Channel 8 special. Michael J. Fox and Tina Yothers, who play Alex and Jennifer on "Family Ties," and Tempestt Bledsoe (Vanessa, "The Cosby Show") will appear in special scenes during the show. Guest experts on the program are Dr. Alvin Poussaint, psychiatrist from the Judge Baker Guidance Center and Children's Hospital in Boston and official consultant to "The Cosby Show," as well as Dr. Lonnie Carton, psychologist from the radio network program "The Learning Center" and author of "Raise Your Kids Right."

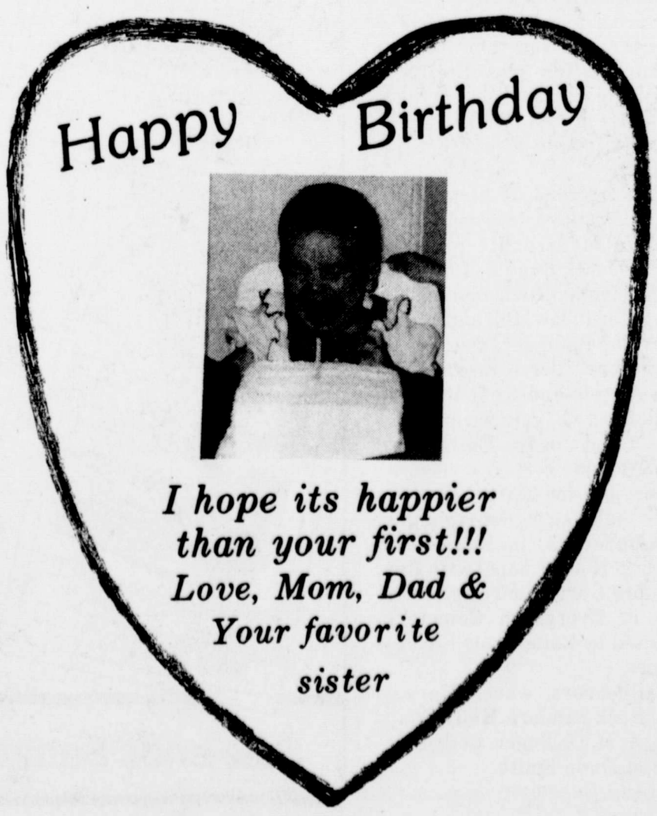

"Can We Talk?" has a unique format made up of two elements: questions which the viewers can answer and score themselves; and re-enactments of some of the problems a typical family might face. The six scenes portrayed by the NBC actors were shot exclusively for "Can We Talk?".

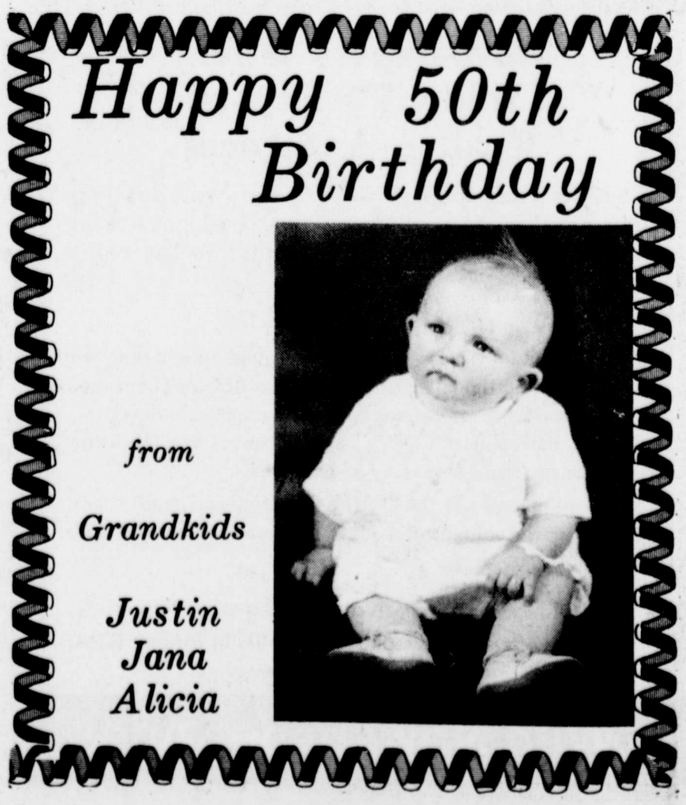

The program was produced by the award winning WBZ-TV Special Projects unit. Joel Rizor, producer; Bridget Harron, associate producer; Francine Achbar, executive producer; and Barry Schulman, program manager.

This week I would like to make a few comments about the State Board of Education and where that body is going in the future.

As you well know the State Board of Education is supposedly the policy-making body for public education throughout our state. The State Board members had, prior to H.B. 72, been elected from 29 districts which corresponded with congressional districts. H.B. 72, through the efforts and influence of H. Ross Perot, changed that Board from being an elected board to at least a temporarily appointed board. The membership was reduced from 29 to 15, in theory, making it more manageable.

As the matter stood the Board would once again become an elected board, with eight members being elected in 1988 and the remaining seven being elected in 1989. It seems Mr. Perot does not trust an elected board so the Legislature was induced (I suppose a man with one billion dollars can do a lot of inducing) to pass legislation which will appear as Referendum No. 1 on the November ballot and, if passed, will allow the State Board to remain an appointed board.

In my opinion the State Board issues was a settled fact. A deal is a deal and Mr. Perot shouldn't be allowed to change the structure that had previously been agreed to. He says we can get better people to serve if they're appointed and don't have to run. The truth is that "better people" is a very subjective term and the question obviously is, better for whom?

I support an elected State Board as planned and intended and I would hope we do not prove once again that a billionaire can arrange state government to suit himself.

Free shade trees for fall planting

The National Arbor Day Foundation is giving ten free shade trees to everyone who joins in the nonprofit Foundation during September 1987.

A Sugar Maple, Weeping Willow, Red Oak, Green Ash, Thornless Honeylocust, Pin Oak, Silver Maple, Tuliptree, River Birch, and Red Maple will be given as part of the Foundation's campaign to encourage tree planting.

The trees were selected because they provide beautiful orange, red, and yellow autumn colors and cooling summer shade, according to John Rosenow, the Foundation's executive director.

The Foundation will give the ten free trees to members contributing $10 during September. The six-to-twelve inch trees will be shipped this fall between October 15 and December 10 when conditions are right for planting. They will be sent with enclosed planting instructions, and are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free by the Foundation.

To become a member of the Foundation and to receive the free trees, a $10 membership contribution should be sent to TEN SHADE TREES, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410, by September 30, 1987

Choose dried fruit over candy

Dried fruit can be a sweet and nutritious alternative to a candy bar for your child's sack lunch or after school snack. "Like candy, dried fruit tastes sweet and has a chewy texture which appeals to children, but it also contains fiber and some vitamins and minerals," says Dr. Alice Hunt, a nutritionist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service. "Most dried fruits have 3-5 grams of fiber per 100 calories, so they can make a real contribution to the 20-30 grams of fiber needed each day," she explains. "A 100-calorie serving of dried fruit also provides 3-11 percent of the Recommended Daily Allowance for iron." Hunt adds that some dried fruits, including apricots, peaches and prunes, contain significant amounts of vitamin A. "One big advantage of dried fruits over candy is that they contain virtually no fat and do not have artificial colors or flavors," she adds.

Labor of love help Saragosa residents to start putting their town back together

The Labor Day weekend became a labor of love for more than 670 volunteers who helped a tornado-ravaged West Texas town experience physical and spiritual rebirth.

In an around-the-clock effort September 5-7, the volunteers—most of whom were Texas Baptists—sought to rebuild Saragosa, an Hispanic community of 350 that was leveled by a tornado on May 22.

About 80 retired couples, ages 57 to 81, and at least 150 Hispanic Baptist Men joined more than 300 other builders in the project. By sundown September 7, Baptist, Mennonite and other volunteers had repaired 30 homes, completely built two new homes and brought 19 other new homes to within 80 percent of completion.

"Wisdom is seeing Saragosa as God sees it; understanding is responding to the needs here as God would," Bob Dixon, exexcutive director of Texas Baptist Men, told volunteers. "When Jesus walked the earth in His physical body, He went where people were hurting. As the body of Christ today, we should be found around the world in places like this."

"When it is all over and the people of Saragosa think back on this weekend, my prayer is that they will remember a group of people who loved God and showed His love to them," said William M. Pinson, Jr., executive director of the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Manuel Galindo, liaison between volunteers, government agencies and the Saragosa citizens building committee, said the true measure of the work done during the Labor Day weekend will be seen in the lives of Saragosa residents.

"The people say now, 'we know the unconditional love of Christ is real because we have seen it. We have seen a sermon walking and working as we've seen our houses go up.'

"The volunteers are leaving behind more than just nails and boards and a little sweat. The hammering away that they are hearing now will continue hammering away in their hearts."

Haskell Chamber hosts Second Annual Automobile Show

The second annual Automobile Show, sponsored by the Haskell Chamber of Commerce, will be held Saturday, October 17 at the Fairgrounds in Haskell.

Many antique automobiles will be on display, along with a show of the fall line of new cars. An added feature will be the participation of area Rod Run Associations who are also sponsoring races and games for the public.

Buddy Lane, chairman of the one-day event, states that other areas of the Fairgrounds will be used to feature farm equipment ad boats and "anything else on wheels."

The large Civic Center will be filled with exhibits by related businesses, concessions, arts and crafts.

Lane reported that early entries indicate that the event will be larger than the first year's show which attracted hundred of people to Haskell.

"Anyone interested in entering an antique automobile is asked to contact the Haskell Chamber of Commerce at 817/864-2477 for further information," he concluded.

A camel named Golda is outshining cows in milk production. She produces 70 pints of milk each day, compared to the average cow's 32 pints. According Ranger Rick magazine, milk-producers like Golda could be an important source of food for peoples living in the dry parts of Africa. Although scientists are only beginning to learn how to breed and raise camels to produce more milk, they have high hopes of producing more champion milkers as good as Golda!

Governor of Texas

GREETINGS: AUSTIN, TEXAS

The contributions of Hispanic Americans have always been vital to the development and progress of Texas and our Nation.

Today, Hispanic heritage is so much a part of our State's history that it is difficult to separate the two cultures. We see the contributions of Hispanic Americans reflected in the names of our cities and streets, in the ranks of teachers who are so important to shaping the character of our children, in the growing roster of Hispanic leaders in city, state and federal government, and in the roll call of military heroes who have served our Nation and brought military honors home to Texas.

Hispanic Americans make intellectual, spiritual and cultural contributions which are significant as well as enduring. Every Texan can learn from the examples set by the Hispanic culture; a culture which holds a deep and abiding respect for the family and for hard work and achievement.

Hispanic leaders have played a pivotal role in creating greater social justice in our Nation and state.

Therefore, I, William P. Clements, Jr., Governor of Texas, do hereby designate September 13 through 19, 1987, as:

HISPANIC HERITAGE WEEK

in Texas and urge appropriate recognition thereof.

In official recognition whereof, I hereby affix my signature this 8th day of Sept., 19 87

W. P. Clements, Jr.
Governor of Texas

Q. Can I use my mixer for kneading bread dough?

A. When you use a dough hook on a standard countertop mixer, the dough will be kneaded enough for satisfactory bread but volume may be lower than those kneaded by hand. Loaves mixed with a heavy-duty mixer will have higher volumes than with a standard model. Follow manufacturer's directions for best results.

Q. How can I clean my wooden cutting board?

A. Clean wooden board surface regularly with a solution of one teaspoon chlorine bleach and ½ teaspoon vinegar to two quarts of water. Keep a plastic cutting board on hand to use with raw meat or poultry because plastic is more easily cleaned.

Do you have a question? Write Dear Betty Crocker, Box 1113, Dept. Betty, Minneapolis, MN 55440.

Dear Betty Crocker

Q. My muffins are often soggy. What's the solution?

A. Remove from muffin cups right away so they don't steam. Muffins are best served warm, anyway. wrap leftovers tightly and store in refrigerator.

Wildlife Damage Control has new name

A service agency concerned with animal damage control in Texas got a new name on September 1.

It is now designated as the Texas Animal Damage Control Service, a change from its previous name of the Texas Rodent and Predatory Animal Control Service.

The Texas animal damage control program is a cooperative effort involving the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) at the federal level, the Texas Animal Damage Control Service at the state level, and the Texas Animal Damage Control Association at the county and private level.

The organizations cooperate with funds, facilities and personnel to conduct wildlife damage control work, which varies widely in nature but includes protection of both rural and urban areas. The Animal Damage Control Service is assigned for administrative purposes to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, headed by Director Zerle L. Carpenter.

Carpenter said that the name change, approved this summer by the Texas A&M University System Board of Regents, should be appropriate as it will lead to greater uniformity as reflected by the federal portion of the program, and less confusion overall regarding program identity.

Donald W. Hawthorne of San Antonio is state director of the Texas Animal Damage Control Service, which has a staff of about 106 personnel including specialists, field operations personnel, and support staff.

The cooperative animal damage control program was created by and is supported by the Texas Legislature in recognition of the need for the protection and well-being of property of citizens from damages and losses caused by predatory animals and rodents.

Goals of the cooperative animal damage control effort are fourfold, said Hawthorne.

He said the goals include:

—Protection of human health and safety through animal control to reduce transmission of wildlife-borne diseases and control of birds or other animals that threaten human safety.

—Protection of urban and rural areas where it is necessary to reduce and control hazards, damages and economic losses in residential, industrial or other areas resulting from mice, rats, birds or other wildlife.

—Protection of forest and ranges where control is necessary to attain the management objectives of forest and range management including reforestation, range restoration, watersheds and wildlife management.

—Protection of crops and livestock where control is necessary to reduce damage to growing and stored agricultural crops, and to protect livestock from depredation and wildlife-borne disases.

The animal damage control program achieves these objectives through technical assistance programs and direct control operations, Hawthorne said.

Soil Conservation

Conservation practices on rangeland benefit many people other than the rancher that is carrying out the conservation practices. When anyone eats a steak, buys a wool sweater, goes water skiing, fishing or gets a drink of water, he is consuming a product influenced by the management of rangeland. About half the land in Runnels County is land that is not suitable for cropland and must be managed as rangeland.

Conservation work on rangeland is a series of chain reactions. The steak sold at the supermarket comes from beef produced from grass that was produced from air, sunlight, water and soil. Starting at the bottom of the chain, if the grass is destroyed, less rainfall soaks into the ground, less grass is grown and less beef or other products are produced from the land. Not only does the runoff from bare ground carry sediment that pollutes water supplies, but the underground water supply does not recharge. The result is that the flow of springs and rivers is reduced. This affects the municipal water supplies.

Mother Nature will always try to put cover back on the land. If overgrazing caused the bare ground, a tougher, hardier plant that is more resistant to grazing and more adapted to harsher environment will establish. This is one reason mesquite has successfully invaded much of Texas rangeland. Research has shown it takes four times as much water to produce a pound of mesquite that it takes to produce a pound of grasses. SCS assist ranchers to evaluate the extent of their problem and what the best solution might be for them.

Knowing how Mother Nature works, ranchers apply conservation practices to put the brush back into the proper balance with the grass. They know that more grass, forbs and the proper amount of brush will make more effective use of rainfall, return water to the aquifer, reduce pollution, improve wildlife and produce more food and fiber.

There have been many instances where ranchers applying brush control practices have promoted streams that had dried up to flow. The most notable instance in the West Rocky Creek northwest of San Angelo that feeds the municipal water supply of San Angelo.

Armed with the knowledge that plants make their own food in their leaves and that too much leaf removal will kill the good plants, ranchers install the most important practice they can in grassland restoration: the planned grazing system. These pasture rotations provide a rest period for each pasture on a ranch to allow the better plants to increase. Planned Grazing Systems strengthen the bottom portion of the chain and reduce the need for future brush control.

Conservationists are trained in how to evaluate this chain reaction that scientists call ecological succession and to make recommendations on how to change the succession for the benefit of the rancher as well as the urban dewllers. The quality of urban life is dependent upon how effectively conservation work is done on area rangeland.

Converting range into a profit

In today's ranching, the bottom line often is that "many of us are competing in single events when it is the all-around title that's important."

That's the opinion of Dr. Dale Rollins, a wildlife specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"Too often, the same fellow who can look at a cow and tell you her bloodlines and guess her weight within 10 pounds can't distinguish between big bluestem and silver bluestem or other native grasses," Rollins said.

A recurring theme of range-livestock management is that "the whole is grater than the sum of the parts," Rollins, who is based at San Angelo, said in explaining the concept which may be known locally as "integrated resource management" or "total ranch management."

Rollins was among the key speakers addressing the range management section of the International Rancers Roundup that was staged in Kerrville at the Y. O. Ranch Hilton, August 24-27.

"Integration is the greatest power available to ranchers in seeking to improve their operations. This requires an individual to take inventory, seek information, investigate and innovate production alternatives, and finally integrate these in a manner to insure that any inefficiencies are corrected," Rollins explained.

Just as farmers must use green plants to convert solar dollars into cash, so must the rancher convert solar dollars into cash by way of livestock, Rollins said in his talk on "Converting Range Into Profit Through Livestock."

Ranchers and farmers are faced with the same dilemma: to convert solar energy into a form of chemical energy so that it can be used for human food at a cost that is competitive in a world market, Rollins added.

He suggested that the "in" approach in ranching might include a model that contained net income, inventory, information, innovation, insurance, inefficiency and integration.

Rollins explained that the "inefficiency" represented the process of converting sunshine to hamburger, which is "grossly inefficient but it's still the best way available."

In making management decisions, ranchers should remember that to every action there is an equal and opposite reaction, a basic law of physics.

"When you decide to clear brush, what will be the impacts on cash flow? Wildlife? Other enterprises? It is well to attempt to determine the impacts of management decisions before moving ahead," Rollins said.

Social Security sets September visit

Small Grain Production program slated

"Small Grain Production—How do I make this crop pay?" This will be the subject of a program scheduled for Monday, September 21 at 7:30 p.m. at the Ballinger Vo Ag Building.

Dr. Willis Gass, former Extension Area Agronomist and currently State Extension Soils Fertility Specialist, will be one of the featured speakers. He will be discussing the fertility needs of small grains and how they can best be made.

Charles Stichler, Extension Agronomist from Ft. Stockton, will be talking on alternative crops that might fit into a grain or grazing scheme such as Barley or Turnips. (Turnips are being widely used as a forage crop in certain areas of the State).

Bill Shaw, cattle feeder from San Angelo, will be providing information on what he looks for when putting cattle on small grain or pasture.

Rodney Flanagan, local rancer and Manager of the Coleman Production Credit Runnels office, will talk about his experience of running cattle on small grain.

"We know that $2.20 per bushel wheat is not making money and we need to explore every possible avenue to make farming more efficient," states Allen Turner, Runnels County Extension Agent-Ag. "This will be an excellent program to collect information on how to make our small grain crops more profitable."

Quality forages basic for beef cattle

Quality forages will continue to be the base for future successful cow-calf and stocker feeding programs.

This was the major focus of a special workshop on "Growing Quality Forage for Beef Cattle" conducted during the International Ranchers Roundup by two forage specialists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Workshop instructors were Don Dorsett and Dr. David Bade.

In general, the better a ranch's forage system is managed, the greater the resulting animal production, Dorsett and Bade said.

"Successful forage systems provide the quantity and quality of forages needed to meet the cattle's nutritional needs throughout the year and from year to year, and require both long and short term management. They are designed to meet quality demands in grazed pastures as well as for forages harvested as hay or silage," the specialists said.

"Stocking rate is an integral part of forage management regardless of the type of pasture," they added.

A key to a successful forage program is to balance the following elements throughout the year:

* Quantity and quality of forages available.
* Animal's seasonal requirements.
* Minimal supplemental feeding programs.

"The success of matching these three requirements on a day-to-day basis will result in animal performance such as greater calf weaning weights, average daily gains, animal condition, percent calf crop, calving intervals and other factors," Bade and Dorsett said.

Failure to produce the needed forage quality and quantity throughout the year can be "covered up" by supplemental feeding, but this is an expensive alternative, the specialists emphasized.

Pasture forages for beef cattle can be divided into warm-season perennial or permanent pastures, warm-season annual pastures, cool-season perennial or permanent pastures, cool season annual pastures, and legumes for pastures, they added.

"Livestock producers can benefit by combining two or more forage plants into a ranch's forage system, since no grass meets the production and quality requirements of livestock on a year-long basis.

"By having adapted summer and winter pastures or by overseeding summer pastures with winter species, producers can furnish grazing for most of the year. Achieving this does require management and planning but provides benefits through reduced haying and feeding," Dorsett and Bade said.

Finding contentment in old age

Finding contentment in old age is no easier than finding satisfaction at any other stage of life, says gerontologist Dr. Judith Warren.

"Research on life satisfaction, morale, successful aging and hapiness has produced no magic formulas," she says. "But sufficient income, reasonably good health and someone to talk to and confide in, are factors identified with contentment in old age."

Some adult children think an aging parent would be happier living with them, although research studies indicate that most older people prefer to live close to but not with their children, Warren notes.

Elders in good health may prefer to live independently and to have their own friends, who are more often found among the old than among the young, observes Warren, who is a specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economics program.

Duplicating coverage may be waste of money for Senior Citizens

The State Board of Insurance urges older Texans to think carefully before buying more than one Medicare Supplement policy.

Some Texas seniors have been persuaded to purchase more policies than they need—sometimes as many as six or seven.

In reality, most people are better off buying just one Medicare Supplement policy—the most comprehensive one they can afford.

Duplicating coverage generally is a waste of money.

One reason for this is that the price of each policy includes company expenses and overhead. A consumer who buys just one policy pays for these expenses only once. Diminishing returns quickly set in with additional policies, however, and the consumer is better off keeping the money in his or her bank account than spending it on additional Medicare Supplement policies.

Moreover, it is a felony under federal law for an agent to knowingly sell a Medicare Supplement policy that substantially duplicates health benefits to which an individual already is entitled.

Federal law provides penalties of up to five years in prison and a $25,000 fine for agents convicted of this practice. An agent convicted of a felony may also lose his or her license to sell insurance in Texas.

Consumers with insurance questions are encouraged to call the board's tollfree hotline, 1-800-252-3439.

To receive a formal investigation, a complaint must be submitted in writing to the Complaints Division, State Board of Insurance, 1110 San Jacinto, Austin, Texas 78701-1998.

Governor honors patient representatives

Gov. Bill Clements has designated Sept. 22, 1987, as Texas Patient Representative Day in recognition of patient representatives in Texas and their contribution to the better health of all Texans.

Clements proclaimed that "patient representatives serve as an essential liaison and channel of communication among patients and their families, physicians, hospital staff, and the community." He also stated that "patient representatives seek to humanize and personalize health care provided to patients in Texas."

Texas Patient Representative Day is sponsored by the Texas Society of Patient Representatives (TSPR) and the Texas Hospital Association (THA). TSPR is an affilliated society of THA with 100 members, who represent patient representatives throughout the state. Based in Austin, THA is the hospital trade association and has more than 5,000 members.

First, the good news: The Environmental Protection Agency reports that the level of lead in our air dropped 32 percent during 1985, due to tough new federal standards limiting the amount of lead in gasoline. According to International Wildlife magazine, other major pollutants, such as carbon monoxide, dust and soot, also declined. The bad news is that nearly 80 million of us still live in areas that do not meet the public health standards for ozone—our most persistent air pollution problem.

Under current law, the legislature is not allowed to exercise any powers in executive matters under Article II of the Texas Constitution, which provides for the "separation of powers" into three distinct departments.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment permitting the legislature to include the speaker of the house of representatives or the speaker's appointee in the membership of an executive agency or committee."

PROPOSITION NO. 22 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 53 proposes a constitutional amendment to allow the legislature to limit the term of office of a gubernatorial appointee to a vacancy in a state or district office to a partial, temporary term if the appointment is made on or after November 1 of the last year of the governor's term and the governor is not reelected. Under this amendment, the legislature may provide that the tenure of such an appointee would end sooner than the term would normally expire.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to allow the legislature to limit the authority of a governor to fill vacancies in state and district offices during the end of the governor's term if the governor is not reelected."

PROPOSITION NO. 23 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 54 proposes a constitutional amendment to authorize the Texas Water Development Board to issue an additional $400 million in water development bonds. Of the $400 million authorized, $200 million would be designated for conservation and development of water resources, $150 million would be designated for water quality enhancement, and $50 million would be designated for flood control. The amendment also authorizes the legislature to provide for review and approval of the issuance of the bonds and the use of the bond proceeds.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to authorize the issuance of an additional $400 million of Texas Water Development Bonds for water supply, water quality, and flood control purposes."

PROPOSITION NO. 24 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 83 proposes a constitutional amendment to allow a county to use county equipment and personnel to perform work, without compensation, for another governmental entity if the commissioners court finds that the work will not interfere with the performance of county work and approves performance of the work. The governmental entity must be located wholly or partly in the county, and the governing body of the governmental entity must file a written work request with the commissioners court.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to permit a county to perform work, without compensation, for another governmental entity."

PROPOSITION NO. 25 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 5 proposes a constitutional amendment to allow the Legislature to authorize Randall County to levy a tax for the benefit of the Amarillo Hospital District. Any such tax could be levied only on property located outside the City of Amarillo and outside the South Randall County Hospital District. The tax could not be more than 75¢ per $100 property valuation and would be effective only upon approval by the voters in the area to be taxed. If the tax is authorized by the Legislature and approved by voters, the Amarillo Hospital District is to serve residents of part of Randall County. If a tax is levied under this provision, Randall County must repay the State for the cost of publication of this amendment.

The proposed amendment also permits the legislature to authorize a hospital district to change its boundaries or jurisdiction if the district was created or authorized by a constitutional provision that includes a description of the boundaries or jurisdiction of the district. Any change in the boundaries or jurisdiction of such a hospital district would become effective only upon approval of the voters in the district.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to permit the Amarillo Hospital District to serve certain residents of Randall County, to authorize Randall County to provide financial assistance to the district, and to authorize certain hospital districts to change their boundaries or jurisdiction with voter approval."

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT FOR STATEWIDE REFERENDUM NO. 1

Senate Bill 86 submits to the voters the question of whether the 15 members of the State Board of Education should be appointed instead of elected. If the proposition passes, the Governor will appoint a member of the board for each district, with the consent of the Senate. If the proposition fails, the members will be elected from these districts.

The referendum will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The State Board of Education shall be composed of members who are appointed from districts instead of elected, with equal representation throughout the State of Texas."

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT FOR STATEWIDE REFERENDUM NO. 2

The Texas Racing Act submits to the voters the question of whether pari-mutuel wagering should be legal in Texas on a county-by-county local option basis. If pari-mutuel wagering is adopted by the voters statewide, a county must also pass a separate proposition on pari-mutuel wagering at an election held in the county before any such wagering may be conducted in that county.

The referendum will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The legalization of pari-mutuel wagering under the Texas Racing Act on a county-by-county local option basis."

Attitudes toward aging influence contentment

Contradictory attitudes about aging can often interfere with feelings of contentment in old age, says Dr. Judith Warren, a gerontologist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economics program.

"Some elders feel that they ought to act a certain way or dress a certain way because of their age. These age norms can inhibit them from being themselves and being as outgoing as they might be."

She observes that older people are also advised to "stay active" as the way to be happy in old age. "While this formula may work for some, many older people do not feel like being active, busy and responsible to others," she maintains. "They may want to pull away and will be more content not doing what they did in the past. Or unforseen circumstances may require the older person to redefine what having an active life means."

Nurses Aides receive pins

During inservice Tuesday at the Senior Citizens Nursing Home, five more nursing aides were awarded with their certification pins and certificates.

Pinned were: Renay Thomas, Lorena Ontiveros, Lucie Baldonado, Mary Low Ortiz, Susan Rodriquez.

Susan Rodriquez was given special recognition for her high test score.

They were pinned by Mrs. Lydia Luz, training coordinator. During their weeks of training with Mrs. Luz the students were instructed in topics including: vital signs, good body mechanics, resident and employee safety, symptoms of illnesses, and proper procedures in caring for the elderly patient.

At the end of the training course they were required to demonstrate what they had 'earned from the course by direct contact care of the residents under supervision of the licensed personnel. They were additionally required to pass a written examination to achieve their certified nursing assistant status.

We would like to congratulate all the aides who received their certification.

Mrs. Luz has submitted her resignation and will be working at Overall-Morris Memorial Hospital in Coleman.

Mrs. Gaylene Clough will be taking over the position of training coordinator.
