Private party erupts into fight; one dead, two injured

A private Halloween party turned to tragedy for a 20-year-old Pampa man Saturday night, with a 16-year-old male suspect being detained as a suspect in the homicide.

Pedro "Pete" Ontiveros of 1005 Neel Road died at Coronado Community Hospital at about 1 a.m. Sunday from stab wounds suffered in a scuffle during a party at the Coronado Inn Starlight Room. Police said Ontiveros was stabbed repeatedly in the back and back of the neck and head.

Also wounded in the fight were James Martin Farrel, 21, 414 N. Gray, who underwent surgery Sunday morning and was listed in stable condition at press time, and Mike Martinez, 20, 1032 Neel Road, who was treated and released.

Police arrested the juvenile in connection with the stabbings.

No charges have been filed yet against the youth. Pampa Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said the Juvenile Probation Department is looking into getting the youth certified to be tried as an adult under Texas law.

Also arrested for questioning was a 19-year-old man, but he was later released on bond after charges of public intoxication were filed. No other official charges had been filed against the man at press time.

The fight broke out at a Halloween party for Long John Silver's Seafood Shoppe employees, according to a spokesman at the Coronado Inn Restaurant, which handles leasing of the Starlight Room.

According to a police report, a call of a disturbance at the inn was received at 11:53 p.m. Saturday.

Police arrived at the scene shortly before midnight and observed a fight occurring at the rear of the Starlight Room. They broke up the fight but not before finding Ontiveros bleeding severely from the back of the neck. Chief Ryzman said.

The fight apparently started inside the Starlight Room and spilled out into the east parking lot, where pools of blood could still be observed Sunday. Police believe at least one stabbing took place inside and another outside.

"It looked like World War III in there," one man said Saturday night as he was led away for questioning.

Police are unsure what caused the fight, Ryzman said.

"Some arguments broke out and it just mushroomed," he said.

Police applied first aid to Ontiveros and sent him by ambulance to the hospital. The other two victims were transported by private vehicle.

Justice of the Peace David Potter ordered an autopsy, which was performed Sunday by forensic pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdman in Amarillo. Ryzman said Potter's official written autopsy report probably would not be available until later in the week.

Police recovered a four-inch bladed hunting knife at the scene. Ryzman said it is believed to be the knife involved in the stabbings.

Two other men were arrested at Coronado Inn in connection with the disturbance.

Martin C. Rodriguez, 20, of 433 N. Crest was charged with public intoxication and disorderly conduct. Ricardo N. DeLeon, 19, no address listed, was charged with public intoxication. Both men have been released on bond.

Services for Mr. Ontiveros, a 1984 graduate of Pampa High School, will be at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church. Officiating will be Rev. Gary Sides, pastor. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Directors.

A rosary will be recited at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Carmichael-Whitley Colonial Chapel.

Mr. Ontiveros was born Nov. 25, 1964, at McAllen. He moved to Pampa in 1971 from Perryton. He was an auto mechanic at the Pampa Auto Center.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Ontiveros, Pampa; four brothers, Julian Ontiveros Jr., Javier Ontiveros and Joel Ontiveros, all of Pampa, and Jimmy Ontiveros, Amarillo; and his grandparents, Estanislada Ontiveros, McAllen; Hipolito Ontiveros, Selma, Calif.; and Mr. and Mrs. Hipolito Suarez, Mission.

Lt. J.D. Laramore demonstrates new phone for deaf.

Telephone updates police communication with deaf

BY PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

In 1976, the Pampa Police Department became the second department in the state to install a teletype machine for communicating with the deaf. The City of Dallas had the first.

The system, donated to the department by Western Union with sponsorship from the Pampa Noon Lion's Club and the Telephone Pioneers, served the department and the deaf well for nine years. But it has recently been bumped aside in favor of a newer means of communication that police on one end of the line and the deaf on the other both agree is more efficient.

Pampa Police Lt. J.D. Laramore recently displayed the department's new system, a phone hook-up with a miniature typewriter keyboard, that is about one-tenth the size of the old machine. The new system cost about $290 from Telecommunications for the Deaf, Inc.

The system operates fairly simply. When a call comes in from a deaf citizen, the police dispatcher is greeted with an electronic beeping sound.

"I've tape recorded it so they all know what it is," Laramore said.

The dispatcher then hooks the phone up to the new system and types a message, which is transported through the telephone lines. Laramore said he is preparing letters to the deaf in town, informing them of the new system and explaining the procedures.

"We want them to call us if they get any kind of problem," he explained.

Laramore said the unit operates on electrical power but switches to battery if the electricity goes out.

"Deaf people are like anyone else," he said. "They want to know what's going on, too."

Laramore said the updated equipment is less cumbersome to operate, particularly for officers who do not have much typing experience. The new keyboard is simple and does not require the use of return or line feed keys like the old teletype did.

And, he said, it should prove to be cost efficient. Paper for the machine is 81 cents a roll, far less expensive than that for the teletype machine.

Laramore said he sees the new machine as part of "a nationwide awareness for the handicapped."

Gordon Crocker, a deaf Pampa citizen, said he feels the deaf will benefit greatly from the new system.

"It is easy to read and it is electronic type," he said in a telephone conversation using the new device. "It is easy to type with others. (I) can call anywhere you can call."

Because Crocker and his wife are completely deaf, their home is equipped with flashing lights that alert them when the phone or doorbell is ringing. Crocker said he can tell the difference between the two "rings" because the light flashes intermittently for the doorbell and more steadily for the telephone.

He has installed similar devices in other deaf homes and recommends the police department let the phone ring at least 12 times to give the answerer time to see the flashing light.

Meanwhile, the old teletype machine has joined the Western Union exhibit at the White Deer Land Museum in Pampa, where it was donated by the Police Department. Clotilde Thompson, curator of the museum, said the machine completes the exhibit.

"We're really glad to get it," she said.

Soviet sailor's fate unclear

BELLE CHASSE, La. (AP) — Customs agents guarded a Soviet freighter today as State Department officials negotiated for a third day the fate of a sailor who twice jumped ship but was returned to the vessel.

State Department officials, aboard the Marshal Koniev since Friday, were trying to determine what the sailor wanted to do.

"There's nothing definite that I can tell you," a State Department officer who spoke on condition of anonymity said by telephone from Washington late Sunday. "The talks are going on, there's no resolution at this point."

As the negotiations went on, U.S. Customs agents and Coast Guard boats kept watch on the freighter in the Mississippi River.

White House national security adviser Robert McFarlane said Sunday the State Department wants to interview the sailor at a neutral site and find out what he wants to do.

"I think we have a responsibility to assure that the wishes of the individual are understood," he said on CBS' "Face The Nation." "I would expect the Soviet Union to understand that is our authority and our interest and I expect it will be resolved."

The State Department officer said a doctor and a State Department official had talked with the sailor but that the department still wanted an interview on neutral territory.

Mike Flad, a U.S. agent for the Soviet vessel, said he saw the sailor Friday afternoon, about 16 hours after he jumped. The man appeared to be in his 20s, said Flad, an agent for Universal Shipping Agencies Inc.

The sailor dove from the ship into the river near Belle Chasse, a small port town downriver from New Orleans in Plaquemines Parish, on Thursday and Friday. Flad said he swam 80-100 yards across river to shore.

Thomas Richard, who works for Universal Shipping, said he received a call Thursday night from the Border Patrol saying that a sailor had jumped ship and come ashore.

Richard said he was ordered to put the sailor back on the ship. The seaman jumped from the boat that was ferrying him back to the Soviet freighter, but was recaptured.

Walker pleads guilty

BALTIMORE (AP) — Retired Navy communications specialist John A. Walker Jr. pleaded guilty today to a new espionage charge of conspiracy, admitting for the first time that he passed Navy secrets to the Soviet Union from 1968 through 1985.

Walker, 48, submitted the plea to a new charge contained in an indictment which had been handed up Friday but was sealed until today.

Prosecutors and government sources previously had indicated that Walker, the alleged mastermind of a family spy ring, had been paid by the Soviet Union for as long as 18 years, but the five-count federal indictment against Walker had covered only evidence for 1985.

Walker also pleaded guilty to two charges contained in the original indictment, which was handed up last May — attempting to deliver national defense documents to the Soviets and attempting to receive military secrets from his son, Navy Seaman Michael L. Walker, 22.

Hurricane Juan batters coast of Louisiana

NEW IBERIA, La. (AP) — Hurricane Juan battered the coast with 85 mph winds today, forcing thousands of people from their homes, stranding hundreds more and throwing offshore oil rig workers into 10-foot Gulf of Mexico seas where helicopter-borne rescuers struggled to save them.

Four people were missing, including two who disappeared when a boat rescuing rig workers overturned, and one death was blamed on the storm.

Eighty workers were forced to go overboard in escape capsules, special 30-foot fiberglass shell lifeboats, when a rig collapsed onto another, and a boat with nine people aboard sent out urgent pleas for assistance as it listed 55 degrees.

"We have located two of the life capsules. There are people in the life capsules, there are people hanging onto the sides of the life capsules, there are people floating in the water," said Coast Guard Petty Officer Thomas Peck in New Orleans.

Helicopters were hoisting the people out of water, while small Coast Guard crew boats attempting to aid in the rescue were tossed by 10-foot waves, he said.

As the hurricane churned off the Louisiana's central coast about 110 miles southwest of New Orleans, about 5,000 people were told to evacuate low-lying areas, but a washed out road kept 1,500 residents of Grand Isle, on the Gulf, from moving inland, officials said.

At 8 a.m. CST, the National Weather Service said the center of Juan was lingering near latitude 29.7 north and longitude 92.4 west, or about 50 miles south of Lafayette.

"Steering currents appear to be weakening," the weather service said. "Motion for the next few hours could be slow and erratic, keeping the center near or over the central Louisiana coast. This will prolong the high tides and winds along the coast."

Officials said Juan's maximum winds of 85 mph posed less threat than the heavy seas and rising tides. Tides were reported 7 feet above normal, reaching U.S. 90 along the Mississippi Gulf Coast and flooding about 200 houses.

Autumn hurricanes are rare, although hurricane season officially runs through November.

Hurricane warnings were posted from Port Arthur, Texas, to Mobile, Ala.

"We've got some families isolated because of flooding in low areas and we've had cars stranded on flooded roads," Robert Boudin, Civil Defense chief for Mississippi's coastal Hancock County, said today.

Using two of the "unsinkable" capsules, 80 oil rig workers went over the side when a rig was ripped from its moorings and smashed into another 35 miles south of Leesville, said Coast Guard spokesman Keith Spangler.

Spangler reported about three dozen maydays at the Gulf Coast rescue center in New Orleans. Most came from the offshore oilfields where workers were caught unprepared when the weekend storm blew in from the west.

Spangler said one man was washed overboard when an supply boat lost power and ran aground near the mouth of the Mississippi River.

Two others were missing and two rescued after a 165-foot oilfield boat capsized.

A windsurfer was also reported missing on Lake Pontchartrain, Spangler said.

Three people were injured when a privately owned helicopter tried to lift them from an Arco platform and 40 mph winds slammed the hoist basket into the side of the platform, he said.

Spangler said the injuries included broken legs and possibly a broken neck or back. He said there were trouble calls from 12 ships, plus several reports of overdue and missing boats and rigs that needed evacuation.

Ten workers were reported stranded on an oil rig that tilted into the water when some of its stabilizing legs collapsed in a fire, Spangler said. Many workers rode out the hurricane on the rigs which can withstand a stronger blow than this hurricane, if properly battened down.

"It's a little scary," said Frankie Husser, a worker on an oil rig about 30 miles out in the Gulf of Mexico who was contacted by telephone about the time the eye of the storm came near.

"We saw a wall of water come through here a minute ago that must have been at least 45 feet. It did a little damage to one of our platforms."

Asked why the rigs did not evacuate, she said, "This came up quickly and developed, and we just didn't have time."

Autumn hurricane are rare, although hurricane season officially runs through November. Alan Johnson, a forecaster at the Slidell weather service office, said this is apparently one of the latest to hit Louisiana, although no one had time to research the records.

"If it's not the latest, it's one of the latest, to move on the Louisiana coast," he said.

He said it carried many characteristics of a summer hurricane, but it also had aspects of a winter storm. "A rare breed," he said. "A kind of hybrid."

Winds in advance of the storm knocked tree limbs onto power lines, leaving 12,000-15,000 people without electricity, said Jim Fort, a spokesman for Louisiana Power & Light Co.

Flash flood watches were called in 42 of Louisiana's 64 parishes, extending across the entire coast and as far inland as Alexandria.

"I think tidal flooding is the most serious nature of this storm," Johnson said.

Tides were reported 7 feet above normal.

In saucer-shaped New Orleans, where flooding is a major concern, officials warned in mid-evening that the high tides in Lake Pontchartrain were stopping the city's giant pumps from moving rainwater out of the drains and into the lake.

However, the crisis passed when rain diminished between 9 p.m. and 11 p.m., allowing the pumps to catch up.

"Because the storm came so late in the season, many people paid little attention to warnings."

Crash hearings to begin Tuesday

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Eyewitnesses to the fiery crash of Delta Flight 191, the jumbo jet's crew, air traffic controllers and some of the tragedy's 29 survivors will meet again to re-enact the Aug. 2 disaster.

Almost three months after the crash of the L-1011 claimed the lives of 137 people, the cast of characters will appear before a five-member National Transportation Safety Board panel and the public to tell their stories.

Four days of investigative hearings are scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Tuesday to search for new information and possibly draw a concrete conclusion to the cause of the crash.

Agency officials say the purpose of the hearing is not to assess blame, but to design safety recommendations that would help prevent further tragedies.

Although recently released transcripts indicated the Lockheed L-1011 encountered a powerful wind shear less than a minute before crashing near the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, NTSB investigators maintain that weather is never the sole reason for a crash.

"No one is denying that weather is involved in the crash," said Ira Furman, an NTSB spokesman. "But that doesn't mean it's the only cause."

Since 1975, the NTSB has attributed six accidents to wind shear, including the July 9, 1982 crash of a Pan Am 727 near New Orleans that killed 153 people.

Problems with post office work

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

Although we have completed the concrete work at the Post Office, we have discovered that in adjusting the flow line of the gutter, the tie-in between the brick and the driveway is about 3 inches too low.

Therefore, we will have to remove about 20 to 25 feet of brick in order to reset the grade and insure a smooth transition from brick to the concrete parking area. This will delay completing the project for about a week.

We are continuing with the reinstallation of the driveway pipes. Because of the delays we have had, we have just hired three additional temporary persons to assist in accelerating this project. We have 186 pipes remaining to be installed, and we hope to complete this project within six weeks.

The Sanitation Department has recently acquired a magnet to help remove nails from the roads within the landfill. We, as well as many users at the landfill, have had a problem with getting flats from the large number of roofing nails that have been left on the roads.

Personnel at the landfill have dug the magnet across the roads and in one pass were able to pick up nine gallons of nails. As a result, we have seen a dramatic decrease in the number of flats to our vehicles.

With the change to Daylight

Savings Time, the landfill will be open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

As you may recall, I indicated a couple of weeks ago that state regulations would appear to limit our ability to keep the landfill open on the weekend. We have found, however, that the regulations do permit exceptions where site operational plans were filled with provisions for hours of operation.

The site access control plan was prepared and submitted in July of 1981 and was very well worded in allowing us the maximum flexibility in operations of the plants.

We have notified the state of the exception, and it appears we will not be subject to the regulations as we had first thought. It will be another month before we know the final ruling in this matter, but we will keep the landfill open over the weekend as we have in the past.

We will be conducting the first of five building code schools as a part of our cross-training program between the Fire Department and Code Enforcement Department. The first school will run from Oct. 29 through Nov. 1.

Besides having local personnel in the schools, we will also have students from Canyon, Amarillo, Dalhart, Canadian and Dumas.

North Texas: Occasional rain and showers over the eastern sections with scattered over the central sections through Tuesday. Partly cloudy west. Highs will range from the upper 60s east to the upper 70s west. Lows will range from the lower 60s east to the lower 50s west.

Coastal Waters: Hurricane Juan in northwest Gulf of Mexico, moving north-northwest. Hurricane warnings in effect for east of Port Arthur to Mobile, Ala. At 8 a.m. CST, Juan located longitude 92.4 west, latitude 29.7 north, about 45 south, southwest of Lafayette, La.

West Texas: Fog and low clouds Panhandle to mostly fair southwest tonight, sunny Tuesday. Lows tonight upper 40s to lower 50s. Highs Tuesday mid- to lower 70s Panhandle to upper 80s southwest.

South Texas: Fair northwest and Rio Grande Valley. Partly cloudy central with occasional showers tonight and Tuesday. Rain southeast, with some heavy rain extreme southeast tonight and Tuesday. Lows mid- and upper 50s northwest to lower 60s southeast. Highs Tuesday lower 70s southeast to mid-80s northwest.

EXTENDED FORECASTS
Wednesday through Friday
 North Texas: No rain is expected Wednesday through Friday. Lows will be in the upper 40s to mid-50s. Highs will be in the low to mid-70s.

West Texas: Partly cloudy with a slight cooling trend Wednesday through Friday. A chance of showers or thunderstorms Friday.

Panhandle: Lows in the 40s. Highs in the 60s.

South Plains: Lows in upper 40s and highs in lower 70s falling to upper 60s by Friday.

Far West: Concho Valley and Permian Basin lows in the 50s. Highs mid-70s.

South Texas: A chance of showers Southeast Texas and along the coast Wednesday and Thursday, otherwise clear to partly cloudy with warm afternoons and mild nights. Lows in the 60s except in the 50s northwest and near 70 on the coast. Highs in the 70s except in the 80s extreme south and southwest.

BORDER STATES FORECASTS
OKLAHOMA: Cloudy east and partly cloudy west through Tuesday. Rain likely extreme southeast, possibly spreading across the remainder of the eastern third tonight and Tuesday. Low tonight near 45 Panhandle to upper 50s southeast. High Tuesday 70 to 75.

NEW MEXICO: Widely scattered showers or thundershowers central mountains westward decreasing late tonight. Partly cloudy and continued mild Tuesday with slight chance for showers or thundershowers central and west. Highs Tuesday 60s to lower 70s mountains and north with mid 70s to near 80 at lower elevation in the south. Lows 30s and 40s mountains and north with 40s and 50s in the south.

Experts: Texas' population growth slowing

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' once-mighty population explosion is fading out along with its famed oil revenues.

Fueled by migration from a faltering Frost Belt, Texas attracted 383,000 people from other states between 1981 and 1982. But census figures show that number plummeted to about 32,000 between 1983 and 1984.

The slowdown in migration into Texas is a turnaround from the early 1980s, when census officials estimated that six out of every 10 new residents moved here from outside the state.

The phenomenon's cause is twofold, officials say. The energy recession has damaged the economy of Houston, the state's largest city and the nation's fourth largest.

Falling oil and gas prices have had a devastating ripple effect on the Texas economy. Lower prices mean less drilling, which means fewer jobs, which in turn means less money to be spent on everything from drilling equipment to home appliances to movie tickets, economists say.

A second factor is that the Frost Belt recession — which spurred many residents of the Midwest and Northeast to move to Texas — is turning around, economists say.

"The economy in Houston took a downturn when the oil industry did the same. At the same time, the auto industry and the chain of industries related to it turned around and people went back to their roots and to higher-paying jobs," said Susan Szaniszlo, coordinator of the Texas Data Center for the state's Commission on Intergovernmental Affairs.

The 1980 census counted Texas' population at 14.2 million. In 1981-82, Texas' population grew 4 percent, a rate four times the national average, according to Census Bureau figures.

But last year, the state's population grew by only 1.3 percent, to 15.9 million. At the same time, the national average growth rate was 1 percent.

Ms. Szaniszlo told the Dallas Morning News that although Houston's population grew by 6.2 percent in 1981-82, it grew by less than half of that — 2.5 percent — in 1983.

"You can see it's slowing down, and since Houston consists of such a large percentage of the state's population, when Houston changes, you see a change in the overall rate of the state," Ms. Szaniszlo said.

"The rest of the state is not changing that rapidly." Texas' fast-paced growth earlier this decade had caused forecasters to believe it soon would overtake New York as the country's second-most populous state behind California.

But there is more at stake than just pride in being second-biggest, said Thomas Plaut of the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas in Austin. The state may face serious economic consequences, Plaut said.

Some of the effects are already being felt. The energy recession has meant oil and gas tax revenues — a major part of the state's budget — have not kept their expected pace.

Adverse effects are more long-term, too, Plaut said. They include education, care for the elderly and a possible shortage of skilled workers.

"When Texas was booming, it was able to gain the highest-trained workers and skilled workers," he said. "Now many of those may have moved back to the Midwest. That loss in the labor force is greater than the sheer numbers would indicate."

But there is a good side to the slowing growth, some believe.

For one thing, it will give the state's large cities an opportunity to improve what planners call the "infrastructure" — the roads, water, sewer, police and fire protection and other services that keep a city functioning.

"It's a chance to breathe," Plaut said. "That is what's happening in Houston, and that's also what will happen in Austin and Dallas as the growth in those two areas slows."

Nuclear energy producers try to sell waste dump idea

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The U.S. Committee for Energy Awareness, a group formed by nuclear energy producers, has made its first footprints into Amarillo.

The group sent two nuclear waste experts to meet with the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce last week.

It has also hired the local advertising and public relations firm Holland, Merriman and Welty Inc. to help provide information about nuclear waste in the Panhandle.

But some critics say what the committee is really spreading is "misinformation" designed to create a receptiveness for the U.S. Department of Energy's plans to build a high-level nuclear waste repository in one of three states.

"We know from what CEA has done in other first round repository states that the first stage of their approach is to hire a local advertising firm," said Don Hancock, director of Southwest Information and Resource Center in Albuquerque, N.M.

"They then set up some sort of local citizens committee (and) bring in outside speakers and begin using those speakers for what they would consider public information."

"I call it misinformation," Hancock told the Amarillo Globe.

The committee also conducts what Hancock said are biased public opinion polls designed to calculate methods of changing public opinion. Then CEA buys advertising from the local media, tailoring the ads according to their opinion polls, he said.

"The goal of all of which is to promote the idea that nuclear power is safe and economic and that nuclear waste disposal is safe and somehow a benefit to local communities," Hancock said.

Dan Welty, of Holland, Merriman and Welty Inc., said the committee would view Hancock's conclusions as biased, just as Hancock would view CEA as biased.

The committee has no plans at this time to buy advertising or conduct public opinion polls in the Panhandle, Welty said.

"The CEA does not want to force-feed the Panhandle on the idea of a nuclear repository," Welty said. "The truth of the matter is that Congress has passed a law that says we will have a method of disposing nuclear waste, and the CEA's objective is to see that this law is carried out."

The Department of Energy has indicated it will choose three sites — one in Deaf Smith County, one in Hanford, Wash., and one in Yucca Mountain, Nev. — for further studies. If all goes as planned, one of these sites will be the nation's first high-level nuclear waste dump site by 1998.

Hancock said CEA, which is fully funded by nuclear industries, is intent on putting the dump site in one of the three chosen states and intent on changing public opinion to welcome the plans.

"You can expect that they will be spending lots of money," Hancock said. "They didn't carry through with it, but they had a proposal before them to spend several millions of dollars a year on this issue in Texas."

"Their normal tactic is to try and discredit the opposition," Hancock said, "which has the potential of creating more tension in the community, rather than really presenting more information to people. The issue is controversial enough without trying to increase community tensions."

The committee sent Robert M. Jefferson, a private consultant and authority on nuclear waste storage and transportation, and John McKleven, professor of engineering at Arizona State University, to meet with the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce's ad hoc committee.

The chamber is trying to form its position on DOE's plans for a high-level nuclear waste repository in Deaf Smith County.

Amarillo attorney Wayne Sturdivant, chairman of the chamber committee, said the group has been meeting with people on the repository issue every Thursday and that the most recent meeting was especially informative.

Members of Serious Texans Against Nuclear Dumping, a citizens group fighting DOE's plans, have expressed concern the chamber committee is biased towards welcoming the dump site.

Business group wants to change makeup of Texas Supreme Court

DALLAS (AP) — A Houston-based committee of business leaders plans to raise millions of dollars for next year's Texas Supreme Court elections to halt a growing trend of court decisions benefitting people who sue corporations.

The committee says discontent with the court is so strong that two of the four contested court races in 1986 could be the costliest ever.

The races will be more important than the gubernatorial election to the business community because of skyrocketing insurance premiums paid by business to protect against such lawsuits, the group says.

Members of the committee, which is called the Texas Supreme Court Justice Committee, said that when they begin collecting money, they can easily raise $1 million each for contested races, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

The group also says its membership, which will be announced after an organizational meeting next month, will include some of the state's most powerful lobbyists and wealthiest companies, drawing key leaders from the insurance, banking, oil, trucking, health and construction fields.

The purpose is to halt what they say is a philosophical shift on the court that is greatly expanding the circumstances under which injured people may sue for damages.

They also say the court is making it harder to afford or even find insurance protection from lawsuits.

"There is a direct relationship between what the Texas Supreme Court is doing and what is happening to ... insurance premiums," said Larry Thompson, an attorney who is heading the committee. "We have tested the waters and have received overwhelming response."

"We are only concerned with putting responsible people on the Supreme Court. We want impartial people, judges who won't be beholden to anybody. We have to at least make sure the plaintiffs (who sue companies for damages) don't end up with two more votes on the court," Thompson said.

"This election will be a whole lot more important than the governor's selection."

In another move, 150 business leaders in Austin planned to lobby the Legislature for protection from damage awards through new laws.

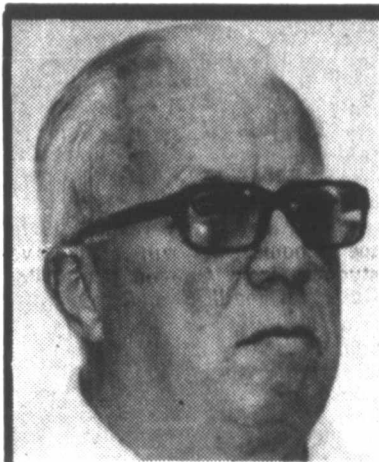

One lobbyist told the Dallas Times Herald he predicts that during the 1987 legislative session, the reform effort will be the most important issue next to the state budget.

George Christian, an Austin political consultant, said, "It is becoming an issue that affects anybody that practices any occupation that deals with the public. It is across the board."

Eight of the nine members of Texas' highest civil appeals court have been elected since 1978.

Most received contributions from members of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association, the group of attorneys who sue corporations, professionals and insurance companies for damages and collect a third or more of the awards, the newspaper said.

Next year, Justices Robert M. Campbell, James P. Wallace, Raul A. Gonzalez and Sears McGee will be up for re-election.

Earn a spot in history

Almost everyone would like to be remembered after his or her time is finished in this mortal sphere.

Goodness knows, plenty of people have made a mark. Some did it through charisma. Movie star James Dean made only a few films before an untimely demise in a traffic accident. But he's a cult hero. Marilyn Monroe committed suicide, yet that hadn't dimmed her stardom a bit.

Others put their lives on the line to earn a niche in history. Wartime heroes and generals get plenty of mention in classrooms, thus earning a measure of lasting fame. Davy Crockett and his coonskin cap wouldn't have grabbed a single headline if not for the Alamo. But without the Alamo, Davy probably would have lived a good deal longer, too.

And a few people even carve out a bit of mention for committing horrible crimes. Lee Harvey Oswald and John Wilkes Booth leap to mind.

But there are easier ways to form a lasting impression. Benjamin Franklin, whose presence hasn't been forgotten, got a handle on one quick way to infamy: "If you would not be forgotten as soon as you are dead, either write things worth reading or do things worth writing."

The first part of the quote is the key. Think how many people have become famous for being great thinkers. Being profound is an art. And if it is done well enough, somebody will remember.

As a prime example, consider Confucius. He lived more than 2,000 years ago, and people are still aware of his ideals. It's a good bet he'll be in the history books just as long as any performer, sports hero or president. Of course, he got some help from all those Charlie Chan movies.

Still Confucius formed concepts that continue to make people think. Take this: "Fine words and an insinuating appearance are seldom associated with true virtue." In other words, watch out for slick-tongued con men.

Naturally, a potential philosopher has to say or write something that is worth remembering. It really doesn't have to make sense, just sound deep, like "No man is an island." That's so profound it falls into the "what is life" category.

There are even ways of embellishing thoughts with great rhetoric to give them a majestic ring. Everybody remembers John F. Kennedy for his historic inaugural statement that was a simple thought dressed up to sound flowery: "Ask not, what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country."

JFK's also the guy who said, "Mankind must put an end to war or war will put an end to mankind." The first impression is, "Hey, wow, that's heavy, man." But a bit of reflection reveals it to be a rather logical statement.

Great thinkers have been passing off basics as great theory for years. Aristotle was a heavyweight in the mind department, so we feel we must hand on his every word. Like this gem: "The vigorous are no better than the lazy during one half of life, for all men are alike when asleep."

Plato, another profound individual, got into the act, too. He's in the quote books with this pearl: "Man — being in search of meaning." Wonder what he meant by that?

Don't forget the wisdom of Socrates. He said, "Wonder is the feeling of a philosopher, and philosophy begins in wonder." Did he mean to imply philosophers don't know their posteriors from a potato?

But we must assume all great men of reason had off days. Take old Benny Franklin, for instance. We all know he was a wise man — the history books say so. But you have to wonder what he was really thinking in 1750 when he came up with "Hunger is the best pickle." Studying that jewel isn't much help. It does, however, evoke several puns about Franklin making a "dill" the historians couldn't refuse.

But it is nice to know that such seemingly inane patter could endure through the ages and actually help give someone a lasting place in history.

How does "Poverty is an onion sandwich" sound?

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

A trade package that would work

President Reagan had a germ of an insight the other day. He pointed out that the best approach to the perception of a trade deficit is not to cringe in the corner and try to keep foreign goods out, but to take steps to increase U.S. exports.

Unfortunately, he's taken a wrongheaded approach to the goal. His recently-announced program to subsidize exports is more likely to enrich a few bureaucracy-savvy operators than create opportunities for innovative entrepreneurs.

Some of our trading partners need to reduce or eliminate the barriers to U.S. imports they've erected. But it is a poor use of the U.S. government's time to lobby against them, especially since the campaign is likely to breed petty confrontations and veiled threats of retaliation. Furthermore, as even proponents admit, such a program is likely to take more than a year to yield tangible results.

A more productive use of presidential resources would be to concentrate on the barriers the U.S. government has erected that make it difficult for U.S. businessmen to export.

For starters, there is oil from Alaska. Japan is almost entirely dependent on foreign oil and would probably be a good market, but the law says that Alaskan oil can't be sold directly to Japan. The law should be changed.

Some pharmaceutical products have been approved for sale by other countries' agencies, but haven't yet worked their way through the tortuous and expensive U.S. Food and Drug Administration approval process. Under present law, U.S. firms can't sell products approved by other countries overseas until they've been approved here. That law should be changed.

Reducing agricultural price supports would improve productivity and almost surely make U.S. farm exports more competitive in world food markets.

The 1977 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, a well-intentioned bit of anti-bribery legislation, has turned out to be a bureaucratic nightmare, hamstringing U.S. firms trying to sell overseas, especially in Third-World countries. It should be repealed.

Repealing the corporation tax would make U.S. businesses more competitive overseas.

Repealing or reducing taxes on savings, capital formation and investment, at least to the levels in Japan, would increase the international competitiveness of U.S. businesses.

That's a trade package that would work—and lead to economic growth at home as well.

"Ka-BOOM or Treat!"

We must go to the source

WASHINGTON - There are two basic lessons to be learned from the recent rash of hostage-takings and terrorist actions in the Middle East, and both of them concern retaliation.

The first of these lessons is that, in dealing with terrorism, it is necessary at some point to go to the source. In the TWA hijacking this June in Beirut, we conspicuously failed to do this. Instead, we let the ultimate source of the problem - Syria's Hafaz Assad - play the role of good guy, supposedly persuading his henchmen to release the hostages, and praised him for his alleged moderation.

Most of the commentary to this effect blandly ignored the fact that Syria itself had long been listed by the U.S. government as a promoter of terrorism, that the Bekaa Valley where the terrorists held forth is controlled by Syria, and that the Amal militia which physically detained the hostages is cheek-by-jowl with Syria. Yet Assad came out of the crisis depicted as the benefactor of the captives.

This Mutt and Jeff routine, letting the major evil-doer disown responsibility for terrorism committed by his agents, is a perfect formula for getting more of it. Small wonder, therefore, that we have seen another version of it in the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship, Achille Lauro. This time it is the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) that disclaims responsibility for the actions of its underlings.

According to the explanations ventilated in the press, the terrorists aboard the Achille Lauro were supposed to use the ship only for transportation to a terrorist assignment in Israel. Something went wrong, however, and they hijacked the ship instead, held the passengers hostage, and allegedly killed an invalid American, Leon Klinghoffer. Just a minor slip-up, supposedly, for which the PLO is not to blame!

Obviously, this kind of thing can go on forever, unless we hold the Assads and Arafats of the world accountable for what is perpetrated by their agents. So long as they can disclaim responsibility - not only fobbing off blame for piracy and murder on faceless agents but getting kudos for supposedly negotiating with those who serve them - we will face still more such horrors in the future.

The second lesson is more generic: That a nation which fails to retaliate for crime against its citizens, as we have done in the past, is a sitting duck for a repeat performance. The Soviets murdered numerous Americans, including a U.S. congressman, in 1983, and we did nothing about it. They killed a U.S. Army officer in Germany and again no action was forthcoming. We watched our citizens being kidnapped in June, and one of them being murdered, without effective retribution.

Against the backdrop, the fact that still more Americans have been taken hostage, and yet another murdered, should come as a surprise to no one. Nor should the fact that the Egyptian government, according to the public accounts, was prepared to let the hostage-takers and murderers go free. Challenged on this source, a spokesman for Egypt pointedly observed that the same thing had been done at the conclusion of the Beirut episode this summer.

All of which means the initial steps pursued by the U.S. government to capture and punish the hijackers of the Achille Lauro, and alleged murders of Leon Klinghoffer, are to be applauded - but should be viewed only as a beginning. By taking this step, the Reagan government has sent an important message: That citizens of the United States can no longer be manhandled with impunity, and that those who do such things will be subject to swift, effective retaliation.

It is equally important, however, that the other basic lesson also be remembered: We must go to the source. The hijackers brought to ground in Sicily are small fry. What is required is not merely to punish them - though that needs doing - but to use the proceedings in which they are tried to get at their sponsors, and to bring these major criminals to justice. Only by such measures can the evils of terrorism be extinguished.

Sloppy airline maintenance

Jetliner mechanics know better than they do. A mechanic certified to repair an airliner knows his stuff. These days most of them come from four years in the Air Force, servicing planes, to an additional year or two of intensive schooling before they even attempt the tough FAA oral and written exams.

When any aircraft mechanic graduates with an FAA Aircraft Airframe and Powerplant Certificate, he knows his business.

But of what value is all that training if he is required to "look the other way," to shortcut line-maintenance procedures, to send crippled planes back into the sky? And yes, he does.

Federal aviation officials reported a lot of improper maintenance to individual air carriers before finally "going public" with its indictment last month.

The $1.5-million fine against American Airlines was unprecedented. It represented the government's frustration with a chronic and growing problem.

Historically, anything wrong with any plane was fixed before its next takeoff. Recently, airlines have postponed fixing things until the next scheduled maintenance period.

One DC-9 continued to make numerous flights despite reports of a malfunctioning left engine. Eventually, last July, that engine failed on takeoff!

It may not sound significant that American allowed a lavatory faucet to leak for as long as six months without fixing it, but it was leaking fluid from a lavatory which caused exterior ice which broke off from the outside of a Boeing 727 last April - ripping away an engine!

American allowed a Boeing 727 to continue flying despite repeated complaints by pilots about a malfunctioning landing gear.

Another 727 flew for weeks after its crew noted persistent vibration.

Some big DC-10s were repaired with a substitute plastic pulley instead of an aluminum wing slat pulley - until one of the plastic parts failed and a slat fell off in flight.

The FAA, after fining American, says the airline is now in complete compliance with FAA regulations. American has hired 250 additional mechanics, will hire another 250.

The public remonstrance and the fine have not gone unnoticed by other airlines; each is auditing its own maintenance program.

The problems on the ground are not readily correctable. Ground crews are under pressure to keep planes in the air and to cut costs.

Rough as that $1.5-million fine may appear, American Airlines will still profit $234 million the first half of this year.

I expect mechanics will remain under pressure to look the other way until you react.

Mexican immigrants don't steal jobs

GARDENA, Calif. (NEA) - Conventional wisdom holds that immigrants, especially those who come into the country illegally, deprive native workers of their jobs, drive down wages and otherwise disrupt the nation's economy.

The principal victims, according to that popular theory, are those Americans - many of whom are black - holding low-skill, low-wage jobs because they must compete with recent arrivals willing to work harder, longer and for less money.

If that's true, during the past 15 years, economic dislocation on a massive scale should have affected native workers holding unskilled and semi-skilled jobs in California generally and in the Los Angeles area specifically.

That's because this state and metropolitan area have become by far the most popular destination for millions of immigrants from Latin America (especially Mexico) and, to a lesser extent, Asia.

The more than 1.8 million legal immigrants who settled in California during the 1970s exceeded the total of foreign arrivals in all previous years throughout the state's history. Between 1980 and 1983, another 610,000 immigrants arrived here.

As a result, a quarter of the country's entire foreign-born population now resides in California. More than half of that group lives in the Los Angeles area, with large concentrations in middle-income communities such as Gardena.

The influx of more than 600,000 Mexicans into the Los Angeles metropolitan area has radically altered the region's character - and that includes only legal immigrants.

According to one recent study, there are more than 2 million "undocumented" aliens in the country, half of whom live in California. About three-fourths of the state's illegal residents are believed to be Mexicans.

Two-thirds of all the Mexican immigrants have no high school education whatever, while fewer than 3 percent are college graduates. Nevertheless, about half of all recently arrived Mexicans have found employment, primarily in the garment and apparel industry as well as other forms of labor-intensive manufacturing.

(A popular myth holds that Los Angeles is populated almost exclusively by television producers, movie stars and other denizens of the entertainment industry. In fact, it provides manufacturing employment for more workers than the states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona and Colorado combined.)

The Urban Institute, a Washington-based organization specializing in public policy research, has launched an ambitious effort to identify the impact of those immigrants here - and the preliminary results have been surprising.

"We found no evidence for the existence of job competition between Mexican immigrants and native black workers in Southern California," says one Urban Institute report.

"The recent influx of Mexican immigrants to Southern California has not resulted in any significant adverse consequences for unemployment rates," concludes another study.

The federal government's unemployment statistics support those findings. During the 1970s and early 1980s, jobless rates for all workers (blacks and whites, adults and teenagers) rose somewhat statewide and in the Los Angeles area - but the rate of increase was substantially lower than it was nationwide.

The Urban Institute studies also conclude that Mexican immigrants may have slightly depressed the wages of other unskilled workers, but have had virtually no impact upon the earnings of semi-skilled and skilled employees.

Finally, the studies suggest - and others agree - that the massive wave of immigrants may actually have strengthened the economy here by providing a large pool of low-skill, low-wage workers needed by industries that might otherwise have fled to other nations in search of such employees.

Gunmen stage spectacular museum holdup; vanish with art worth $12.5 million

PARIS (AP) — French police hunted today for gunmen who held up an art gallery and vanished with nine paintings, including works by Monet and Renoir, that one museum official said showed the bandits had the eye of "connoisseurs."

The thieves, said by police to number at least five, surged into the Marmottan Museum with pistols drawn during visiting hours Sunday. They forced guards and visitors to lie on the floor and fanned out through the gallery.

Within five minutes they were gone, along with artwork estimated to be worth $12.5 million, said Marmottan curator Yves Brayer.

"(It's) as if someone had stolen the 'Mona Lisa,'" said a shaken Brayer. "It's the theft of the century."

Among the canvasses stolen was Claude Monet's "Impression Soleil Levant" (Impression Sunrise), a port scene that gave the late 19th century Impressionist movement its name. Brayer said the painting "has no price" because of its historic value.

Two paintings by another Impressionist master, Pierre Auguste Renoir, were also seized by the gunmen.

A police spokesman said no motive was being excluded, but suggested the possibility of extortion.

One Marmottan Museum official, also speaking on condition he not be identified, said of the bandits, "They are connoisseurs. They knew what they were looking for."

But Brayer said, "I don't understand how you can steal (something) so famous, because it's impossible to sell. It's too well known."

One museum guard said the alarm system was not operating at the time of the theft.

Brayer said everything was "in perfect order." But Estelle Tissier, who lives with her husband in the building, said the alarm was disconnected each day at 8:15 a.m. and reactivated at 6 p.m.

Mrs. Tissier, who was home at the time, said she called police after another museum employee told her the museum was being held up.

Witnesses said the men entered the museum shortly after 10 a.m.

One pointed his weapon at the temple of the chief guard and ordered guards and visitors to lie on the floor, said Brayer.

Bumper pecan crop ready for holidays

GARDENDALE, Texas (AP) — West Texans hankering for the sweet, meaty taste of fresh pecans will find a bumper crop at supermarkets and roadside stands this holiday season, two Ector County nut cultivators predict.

"It's a fine crop," Gardendale pecan farmer John Sims said. Sims' 80-acre pecan orchard, about 10 miles north of Odessa, will be ready for harvest this week, he said.

"A lot of people have already started (harvesting)," said Jake Anderson, whose 20-acre orchard stands nearby. "But really, you need to wait until the biggest part of them on the tree are ready."

Prior to the harvest, pecan producers from an 80-county area converged on Sims' farm Saturday and Sunday for the Third Annual West Texas Pecan Basin Pecan Seminar and Trade Show.

Ector County Extension Agent Jim Mazurkiewicz said the event offers education for the professional grower and useable information for the simply curious.

"We want everybody that's interested in pecans," said

Mazurkiewicz beforehand.

"The pecan tree in the yard is the most beautiful tree you can have," noted Sims of the official state tree of Texas. "It will feed you, and it will shade you."

Favored recipes for the nut include "pralines, (chocolate) millionaires and turtles, pecan pie, cookies, banana nut bread, salads, ice cream and pancakes," said Mazurkiewicz.

"Barbecued pecans are good," he added.

Still, a bumper crop has its disadvantages, growers say.

"Overproduction has hurt the price, just like every other farm product," said Anderson.

He said pecan cultivators can expect to receive about $1.25 per pound for this year's crop.

Producers pocketed the same price per pound last year, he said.

Sims' wife, Nadine Sims, said that selling her farm's products at retail prices to local businesses for company Christmas presents gives them the best return.

"Some buy as high as 10,000 pounds off us," she said.

Congress is mired in farm policy as another money crisis looms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress grapples with farm policy and money issues this week, including a plan to force the swollen federal budget into balance by 1991.

The Senate is resuming work on the 1985 farm bill, a four-year plan for food and agriculture policy that is being criticized by the Reagan administration as a budget-buster that helps wealthy farmers along with those in financial trouble.

"I'm hopeful that somewhere in this chamber we can put together a majority (for a bill) that will not be vetoed by the president," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan.

Dole and other Republicans planned a series of controversial amendments aimed at paring back the cost of the bill, estimated by the Agriculture Department at $20 billion or more annually for the foreseeable future.

High on the list were proposals to scale back the four-year freeze on income subsidies for wheat, corn, cotton and rice farmers to just one year, and to slash the current $50,000-per-farmer subsidy payment limit in half.

But Democrats, who largely controlled the writing of the bill in the Senate Agriculture Committee, predicted they would be able to head off most efforts to cut the bill on the Senate floor.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., said he expected Democrats would get help from between seven and 10 Republicans, particularly Midwestern senators feeling re-election pressure.

The House already has endorsed its own version of the farm bill. Senate consideration is expected to take at least a week, followed by a House-Senate conference to work out differences between the two versions.

House and Senate conferees also were scheduled to meet all week in an effort to draft a compromise version of the Senate-passed plan to force a balanced federal budget by 1991.

Another major money matter, a package of budget savings that cleared the House last week, is stalled in the Senate because of an attempt to attach a textile trade relief bill and a host of other amendments. Leaders were meeting behind closed doors in an What's behind efforts to amend the U.S. constitution?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Big plans are under way to celebrate the 200th birthday of the Constitution, and some of the celebrators want to enliven the party with a debate over whether the document needs some major changes.

Can it be that the Constitution is showing its age? Is a little modernization necessary to put this late 18th-century document in tune with the problems of the late 20th century?

Or is the debate really a question of people wanting to change the Constitution because they don't like the way it's being interpreted and are unhappy with the way government is functioning?

President Reagan says he marvels at "the genius of our founders" and cites the fact that the Constitution is "the oldest still-governing document in the world."

That's the kind of patriotic rhetoric Americans will hear between now and Sept. 17, 1987, the 200th anniversary of when the Constitution was signed and submitted to the 13 states for ratification.

But the president also is among those who talk about the need to change the Constitution — for example, to require a balanced federal budget.

Reagan also has endorsed amendments to legalize school prayer and to overturn a Supreme Court decision that legalized abortions. In addition, he has said he thinks it is time to take another look at the amendment that barred presidents from serving more than two terms.

A bipartisan group called the Committee on the Constitutional System is sponsoring a sweeping examination of how the federal system is working or not working and looking at whether constitutional amendments are necessary.

"We want to find out if it is possible to improve the decision-making process and the accountability of public officials," said committee co-chairman Lloyd Cutler, a Washington attorney who was White House counsel during the Carter administration.

Douglas Dillon, a former Treasury secretary who is another co-chairman of the committee, has talked about "whether we can continue to afford the luxury of the separation of power in Washington."

Cutler and Dillon are not anyone's idea of wild-eyed radicals, but that's pretty strong stuff that bucks a national tradition of viewing the Constitution as a document to be revered and rarely changed.

Historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr. takes issue with Cutler and Dillon. "I believe that in the main our Constitution has worked pretty well," he wrote in an article titled, "Leave the Constitution Alone."

The historian asked if today's problems — with the exception of the threat of nuclear weapons — are any more serious than slavery, the Civil War, and the Depression.

TREATMENT FOR STIFF NECK

If you're suffering from a stiff neck, don't wait for it to take care of itself when treatment is available to correct it.

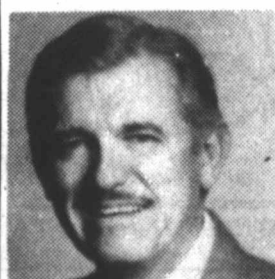

Of all the bones in the spinal column, none are more easily injured or more vulnerable than the seven vertebrae in the neck. None are moved more often. We are constantly turning our heads to look at people and things.

Neck stiffness can have many causes, from sudden and violent accidents to such simple activities as painting a ceiling or just sitting reading a book for a long time. But there's nothing simple about the pain.

A careful examination will reveal the source of the pain and how best to treat it. Any misaligned vertebrae in the spinal column should be properly adjusted so there will be no abnormal pressure on your nervous system. Treatment may also include exercises for the cervical muscles such as gently rotating your head in all directions. This can help restore muscle strength and tone.

"This contract brings to a close the era of concessions," Stepp said at UAW headquarters in Detroit.

"That's why the members are very happy."

A number of veteran UAW staffers and former board members called me ... and they said this is the best contract we've negotiated in 25 or 30 years."

The contract includes an average 2.25 percent increase in base wages the first year, a lump-sum payment of 2.25 percent in the second and a 3 percent wage increase the last year. Chrysler workers now receive $13.23 per hour.

It also offers Chrysler workers immediate cash bonuses of $2,120 each for concessions granted when the automaker was battling bankruptcy in the late 1970s.

"Our demand for parity was nothing less than a demand for justice," UAW President Owen Bieber and Stepp said in a statement. "The fact that this contract achieves every single parity goal in addition to compensating UAW-Chrysler workers and retirees for their past sacrifices represents justice."

Union spokesman Bob Barbee said Sunday that specific vote totals would not be available until at least today because one unit in one of the UAW's 50 Chrysler locals had not reported its tally.

But Stepp said the contract was approved by 87 percent of Chrysler's production and maintenance workers, who make up 90 percent of the automaker's UAW-represented workforce. Smaller units also approved the pact by margins ranging from 81 percent to 90 percent.

"It's the best thing that's happened in many, many years. It's brought the union together," said John Coyne, president of UAW Local 212, which represents 2,800 workers at a Chrysler trim plant in Detroit.

Typical workers will earn $5,650 extra during the pact's three years, assuming a 4 percent annual inflation rate, the union said. Lump-sum payments and profit sharing will total about $4,400 during that period.

Chrysler estimated the contract would cost it more than $1 billion in additional labor costs over the pact that expired Oct. 15.

Historic town honors pioneer settlers

By OLGA FLORES
San Angelo Standard Times

BUFFALO GAP, Texas (AP) — People are friendly here. They smile and wave, even if they don't know you. The sounds of children playing in the school playground and an occasional car driving along the highway are the only noises.

Old, restored houses located on streets such as Mulberry or Elm seem to capture passers-by with a down-home feeling, like going to Grandma's house for Sunday dinner.

With a population of 387, Buffalo Gap is located eight miles south of Abilene. Boasting a few restaurants, an elementary school and several unique shops, Buffalo Gap also has a tourist attraction — Buffalo Gap Historic Village.

The historic village is located in the center of town alongside homes with front porches and large shade trees. Its warm, friendly atmosphere can captivate visitors with its extensive history and its old-fashioned charm.

Virginia Richards, 67, is a clerk at the Buffalo Gap Historic Village Country Store, welcoming visitors that came through the large wooden door.

A resident of Wylie for the past 31 years, she commutes the 8-mile round trip to Buffalo Gap on the three days a week that she runs the store. Items housed in the country store come from the neighboring towns of Clyde and Ovalo. For instance, a portion of the building is the original Texas and Pacific Railroad depot from Clyde and the early 1900s antique fixtures were once in an Ovalo drugstore.

"The white tin ceiling and wooden floor were added to give this place the look of an early drugstore," Ms. Richards said. "People like to come here because it is similar to the way things used to look in the old days."

Other authentic antique features include the drugstore marble counter, barrels of root beer perched on top of the counter, a post office, and an early 1900s music machine equipped with a small accordion-type gadget, drums and cymbals.

"That old music machine was fixed a while back," Ms. Richards said. "It played real nice and loud, and even with a good ol' tone. But, it broke after about a month. No one around here knows how to fix it, so we'll probably leave it like that for a while."

Built to preserve a part of the early West Texas heritage, the historic village is a landmark honoring the pioneers who settled in the area with their families in the early 1800s. The cluster of buildings have been there since the late Ernie Wilson, an Abilene attorney, began the project in 1956 by making a museum of the old Taylor County Courthouse and Jail. After a series of owners through the years, R. Lee Rode, an Abilene physician, purchased the property and restored the buildings.

Open six days a week from 10 a.m.-7 p.m. and Sundays noon-7 p.m., the historic village allows visitors to tour the grounds at their leisure for an inexpensive admission charge. There are discounts for students and senior citizens. Also, group rates are available.

Green hills surround the town, emphasizing the peaceful valleys filled with colorful vegetation of wild flowers and large trees.

"Many years ago, the buffalo made a gap through these hills around here," Ms. Richards said.

Once the seat of Taylor County, Buffalo Gap has some structures more than 100 years old, such as the first Taylor County Courthouse and Jail, a train station, and a small log cabin.

The jail's walls were built with Civil War cannon balls between the large stones for stability and so the prisoners could not chisel their way out. In excellent condition, the courthouse and jail is listed on the National Registry of Historic Places and is a Texas historical site.

Other buildings to be found on the grounds are a blacksmith shop, a wagon barn, a typical doctor's office complete with a display of early surgical tools, a cabinet mill, a bronze casting foundry and the country store.

The wagon barn has an array of displays including stirrup and barbed wire collections, traveling and farm wagons used by early settlers and old-fashioned household necessities such as washers, curling irons, weaving looms, wooden bathtubs and children's toys.

The doctor's office gives visitors a firsthand look at medical tools and furniture used in the early 1900s. It has an interesting exhibit of medical paraphernalia such as a white frame operating table, scalpels, skin hooks, tonsil snares and incision scissors.

The most recent addition to the historical village is the Nazarene Church building which dates to 1902.

"Dr. Rode moved the church to these grounds when he was told he could have it," Ms. Richards said. "It's been restored to look like it once did."

"People from around here know it as the 'sweet church' because it had its own beehive for many, many years," she said laughing. "It is said that they robbed the bees each year and gave the honey to the members of the congregation. I'm sure the church had its share of interesting moments."

Tricky environment for borrowing money

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Many Americans have shared the experience: They apply for a bank loan, fill out a long form, sit through a personal interview and then are told they'll hear the decision in due time.

Some are turned down, but that doesn't prevent them from sharing in the good news the postman delivers from the same bank.

Because of their good credit rating, they are told, the amount of cash that can be advanced to them through their credit cards has been raised. All they need do, they are told, is ask and they shall receive.

The situation illustrates the tricky consumer credit environment today, in which old limitations remain on the books alongside more expansive attitudes that reflect the new, freer-spending attitudes of both lenders and borrowers.

Bank-card credit is growing and so is profit from it.

The Federal Reserve reports that large banks, those with assets of more than $200 million, earned a net of 11.98 percent on credit-card loans in 1984, up from 10.15 percent in 1983.

Not only are the rates high — generally between 18 percent and 19 percent — but annual fees for the convenience and privilege of holding a card, even if not used, almost always are added on.

The fees aren't insignificant, either to card holder or bank.

For the borrower they can mean an annual cost of $40 or more, an amount that sometimes is more than the amount paid in interest, high as it is.

While the service fees might seem small in relation to a bank's assets, they add up because of the thousands and sometimes millions of cards outstanding. According to the Consumer Federation of America, service fees make up 25 percent to 30 percent of bank revenues from credit cards.

Meanwhile, as borrowers pay 18 percent on their bank-card loans, the same banks might advertise loans of under 15 percent, and even under 13 percent, on the equity borrowers have in their homes.

That equity is almost as easily tapped as using a bank-card line of credit. And not only is the interest rate lower, but the repayment terms might be too.

The small borrower might seek to avoid the equity loan, reasoning that it is meant for big deals rather than small transactions. But statistics show that credit-card loans no longer are small-time matters — not when many people have four or five credit cards, all with "small" nuisance loans on them.

With regulations relaxed, consumer credit today may be trickier than ever before, with results that are better or worse for borrowers and bankers, depending on the viewpoint taken.

Borrowers have more and easier access to money, but that freedom imposes on them the responsibility for borrowing and using the money wisely. And lenders have a newer and profitable source of income.

The bad side for the latter is that Congress is scheduled to hear testimony this week on two bills that would limit bank-card interest rates. And it could be bad news for borrowers too if it reduces their access to credit.

CHECKING HEATER

Bill Browning (left) and Danny Kohler check out this heater to make sure of its efficiency.

Bill Browning and Co-Workers Deliver, Install, Maintain Famous Brand Systems

The fun of roasting marshmallows at the fireplace fades when winter chill cools the other side of you.

So Browning Heating, Air Conditioning and Refrigeration on Price Road, 665-1212, sells, installs and repairs heating systems to warm all the home, store, office - efficiently. Efficiency means that you get the greatest amount of heat possible from the fuel.

Bill Browning, owner, handles nationally favorite heating systems, including:

*Ruud, the number one heating system in the nation, delivers heat from over 80% of the fuel consumed. Average of all systems in the nation is 60 to 70%. Parts for the Ruud system are readily available and in case of trouble the Ruud can be repaired quickly.

*Amana: Energy efficiency of the Amana is 94.5% or 95% compared to the national 60 to 70% average. This system also will heat your water heater.

*Mammoth and Bard Water Source Heat Pumps save energy by utilizing the warm temperature of the ground, which even in frigid winter stays up around 50 degrees. Heat pumps use well water, or water circulated through looping pipes in the ground. By circulating water, already at 50 degrees, rather than winter air, at freezing temperatures, these heat pumps save energy - and cut fuel bills. Their Service Energy Efficiency Rating is 16, compared to the air pump average of 10.

*Modine Unit Heaters using natural gas.

*Williams Vented Wall Heaters using natural gas.

*Coleman-Mobile Home natural gas and propane heaters. Also air conditioners.

*Solar Heating: Most all brands available: water source, refrigerant and air. Browning Heating, Air Conditioning and Refrigeration will deliver, install and repair all.

Of course Browning services all types of heating and air conditioning systems.

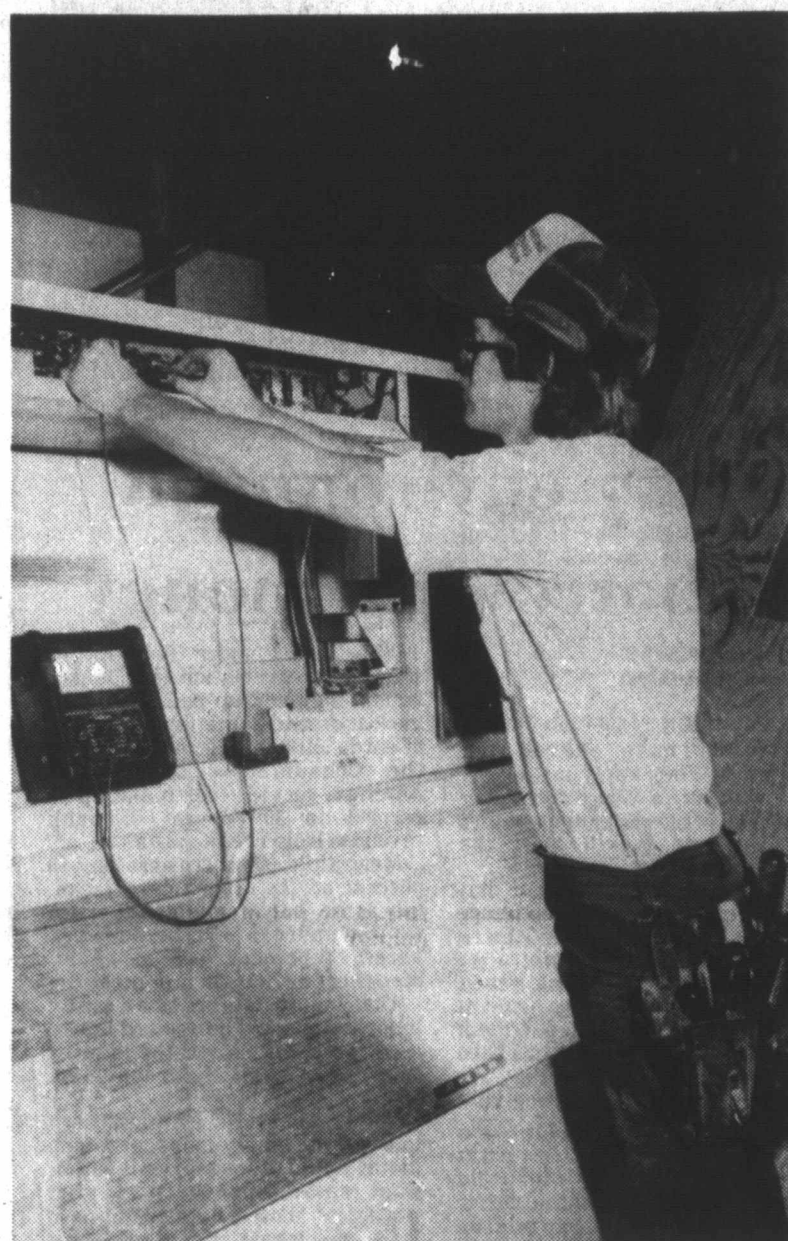

And Browning services all commercial refrigeration systems, walk-in coolers, display cases, freezers, ice makers.

This firm also does sheet metal work: vents, ducts, ventilation caps and other custom work.

Working with Bill Browning to provide professional service are Danny Kohler, Robert Akins, Barbara Stubblefield, Steve Smith and Jean Browning. They are ready to help you.

When you plan for heating or air conditioning or refrigeration, let Browning help you select the most efficient system for your special needs. Call 665-1212 or 665-6095.

Makin' Things: Charlene changes her face

By STEVIE BALDWIN

Remember my recent confession to being a doll addict? Well, here's more proof. Professional counseling might stop me from dreaming up new dolls every week, but I seriously doubt it. They're entirely too much fun!

I'm willing to strike a bargain, though: If you'll bear with me this week, I promise I won't create another doll for at least a month.

It'll be tough going, but a promise is a promise.

Meanwhile, meet Changeable Charlene, a whimsical young lady almost two feet tall, who not only sports changeable felt facial features but also helps kids learn to zip, button and tie! She's very easy to make from fleece, felt and cotton fabrics. Her stylish felt shoulder purse holds her extra facial features.

To make Charlene, you'll need 1/2 yard of fleece for the head and hands; one yard of cotton fabric for the torso, legs and skirt; 1/4 yard of cotton for the shirt and shoes; felt for the purse and facial features; yarn for the hair; lace and ribbons; fiberfill; a button and a zipper.

Charlene's clothing also serves her body, so you don't have to make a body and separate clothing to fit. Cut two torso pieces and applique a shirt - front piece to one of them so that it looks like a shirt underneath. Stitch up two fully gathered sleeves and two fully gathered legs.

Place the legs and sleeves between the two torso pieces and stitch the torso seams, leaving the neck open. When you turn the torso right side out, the legs and sleeves will be on the outside. Gather each sleeve and leg near the open lower end, hem the end and insert a little stuffing inside. Stuff the torso.

Stitch and stuff two large shoes. Insert the ankle edge of a shoe inside the gathered lower end of a leg, making sure the toe points the same way as the applique front torso, and whipstitch around the ankle to secure. Tack the center of a shoelace or ribbon to the top of each shoe. Your child can practice tying and untying the shoelaces.

Make two fleece mitten - shaped hands and topstitch to create the finger lines. Attach a hand to each sleeve as you did the shoes, making sure the thumbs point upward.

For the head, cut two large peanut - shaped fleece pieces. Stitch, turn and stuff the head.

Stitch lengths of yarn to the head along the center part, and tie the yarn on each side into a ponytail. Trim some of the front strands to form the bangs.

For Charlene's non-changeable nose, gather a small circle of fleece around a wad of fiberfill and whipstitch to the face. You can soft-sculpt the nostrils. For the remaining facial features, let your imagination be your guide to cut shapes from various colors of felt.

Glue nylon fastener spots to the doll's face where each eye and eyebrow and mouth should be. Glue matching spots to the backs of the felt features, making sure you use the correct half of the spot so it will stick to the half on the face.

Attach Charlene's head to her torso. The felt purse I made is very simple, with only a single fabric pattern piece that is folded and stitched. It has both a button and zipper closure so your children can practice those skills. Tuck the extra facial features into the purse for safekeeping.

You can make your own version of Charlene with the help of our detailed plans. They include full-size patterns plus complete, step-by-step instructions and assembly diagrams for the doll and clothing. Also included is a section of sewing tips.

If you would like to order the plans, please specify Project No. 1319-2 and send $4.95.

Mail your order to Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

CHANGEABLE CHARLENE - Here's a young lady who never changes her mind - she changes her face! Meet Changeable Charlene, a whimsical stuffed fabric doll nearly two feet tall, who not only sports changeable felt facial features but also helps kids learn to zip, button and tie.

Dear Abby

Here's the right book for Latchkey kids and parents

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: I have just read a wonderful book titled "Alone After School" by Helen Swan and Victoria Houston. It's a complete self-care guide for latchkey children and their parents. Now that more than 60 percent of American mothers work outside the home and approximately 10 million children under 12 years old are coming home to an empty house, this book is a timely treasure.

It tells children what to do about accidents—bumps, bruises, burns, cuts, nosebleeds, poisoning, electric shock, stomach-aches, etc. It covers every imaginable emergency, including what to do if somebody tries to break in; it stresses the importance of having the phone numbers of police, firemen, paramedics, neighbors and the 911 emergency number taped on every telephone. It tells a child how (and how not) to answer the door and telephone. There are simple recipes for children, and guidelines for parents on how to set up rules to keep peace between siblings.

A single chapter titled "Is My Child Ready?" is well worth the price of the book. It contains a checklist for parents to test a child's readiness to be left alone. (Age is not always the determining factor.)

"Alone After School" should be in every home where children are left unsupervised—if for only a few hours occasionally. It's available at your local bookstore for $8.95. If it's sold out, it can be ordered directly from the publisher by calling this toll-free number: 1-800-238-2333. Or send a check or money order to Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632 (add a dollar for postage). You'll be glad you did.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old man with a problem. How can I find a woman that both my mother and I can agree will be the right wife for me?

It seems every time I get serious with a woman, my mother finds at least a hundred things wrong with her.

I want to get married and settle down, but I just can't seem to find anyone my mother thinks is good enough for me.

Can you help?

WANTS TO MARRY

DEAR WANTS: No, but you can help yourself by seeing a counselor to find out why your mother's approval is more important than your own in choosing a wife.

DEAR ABBY: I operate a motel in a college town. I have discussed this problem with other motel operators, and we seem to have the same problem: unregistered guests. We rent a room to one person, and it ends up with more than one occupant.

Our greatest fear? Fire! The thought that we wouldn't know to search the rooms for other bodies in case there had been a fire is terrifying. Right now I have a room rented to a college female on a monthly basis. She's had four different overnight male visitors that I'm aware of, but I have no idea what their names are or whom to contact in case of emergency.

It's not only college students; some parents think because we don't charge extra for small children, they don't have to be registered. Abby, please bring this to the attention of the public, so people will understand how serious this matter is.

WASHINGTON INNKEEPER

DEAR INNKEEPER: Thanks for a letter that I hope will give people cause to pause—and sign the register.

CONFIDENTIAL TO TOMMY IN TAMPA, FLA.: Congratulations. But money isn't everything. Sometimes it's not even enough.

DEAR ABBY: The lady in my life (I'll call her Wanda) is a 36-year-old widow with one child—a 16-year-old son. I'll call him Buddy. He's a good kid, but his mother has spoiled him rotten. He talks to his friends on the telephone for two and sometimes three hours consecutively. Wanda has to interrupt his conversation in order to use the phone—then he rushes her to get off so he can resume his conversation. I have given up trying to call because her line is always busy. Wanda sees nothing wrong with this. She says she "loves" him, and the telephone is sort of a substitute father, so who am I to argue with her?

Right now she's doing Buddy's homework while he's playing a record for someone over the phone.

I think something is terribly wrong here. What do you think?

WANDA'S MAN

DEAR MAN: I think Wanda is setting Buddy up to be ill-equipped to handle life's problems. Children need to learn discipline, responsibility and consideration for others in order to become productive and self-sufficient. That's love.

Letting Buddy goof off while she does his homework is giving him a badly distorted picture of the real world. For all Wanda's good intentions, Buddy will be the big loser in the end. Wanda needs to be wised up.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Smart Money

By Bruce Williams

DEAR BRUCE — Can you tell me if the following is some sort of a legal scam?

When my car was about 1 year old, I was bombarded with brochures from warranty protection companies. They seemed to have the same clauses, word for word. In fact, two brochures contained the exact same picture, but they had different addresses, different telephone numbers and different costs.

For the same protection, the costs of these warranties varied as much as $100. Example: $395 for 36 months (or 32,000 miles) or $305 for 36 months with the same conditions. Since I had considerable mechanical bills with my other car, I thought this protection was a good investment.

When I read the small print, however, I noticed that the warranty began the day I drove the car off the lot, so in reality, I got only 24 months protection instead of 36. I canceled the agreement because the agent did not point out the starting point of the warranty.

Several references were made to a detailed pamphlet that supposedly spelled out exactly what the warranty would cover. I called and asked for the pamphlet and was told that it would be sent in eight to 10 weeks, but I still have not received it.

Is this legal? It seems like a tacky business to me. — G.L., ANGLETON, TEXAS

DEAR G.L. — When there is competition, there are usually variations in prices, and insurance is no different from most other products. In fact, if prices were exactly the same, I would suspect collusion.

In my opinion, extended warranties are a very good deal for certain types of drivers. If you are the type of person who puts on high mileage — 30,000 to 40,000 miles per year — I would not buy the extended warranty, since many of the ills covered by the warranty are as time related as they are mileage related, and higher-mileage drivers tend to put on turnpike mileage, which is the easiest kind of mileage on a car.

If you are the type of person who puts on 8,000 to 9,000 miles a year, however, seek out a 60-month or 50,000-mile plan. That way, the warranty would be in effect for a full five years, and it would be well worth purchasing. I consider it very good insurance against excessive repair bills.

Remember, however, that in most of these contracts you will be responsible for the first $25 each time the car is repaired.

DEAR BRUCE — Recently, I saw a program on television about a system for teaching you to buy homes and other real estate with no money down.

At the end of the program, they offered seminars to tell about the program. Can you tell me if these are wise investments? Do the systems work? — F.Q., CORBIN, KY.

DEAR F.Q. — First of all, what you saw was probably an extended advertisement rather than a program. The cable channels are full of these offerings, and I have received many inquiries about them.

All these programs offer some germs of wisdom. The troublesome part of the equation is that most, if not all, of the people espousing such systems are far more enthusiastic about the viability of the systems than the results warrant.

There is no question in my mind that everything they suggest can be done and has been done. But I seriously question whether it has been done regularly or can be done by most people.

If you approach these seminars with the thought that in return for $400 or $500 you could come away with one or two good ideas, the seminar would be well worth your time and money. If you believe that you will come out of a weekend seminar with the ability to become an instant millionaire, however, you are deceiving yourself. Best save your money.

Consider this: Most undergraduate college programs consist of 120 or more credit hours, and a good deal of the information that college students are exposed to is of limited future value. Even at that, few people would advise everyone to give up college. By the same token, if you can take 10 courses and get 10 good ideas, you will be far better prepared than the person who hasn't had this exposure.

If, and only if, your expectations of what you can get from these seminars are realistic, then I would consider them further.

DEAR BRUCE — I purchased my town house in 1974. The interest rate on the mortgage was 8.75 percent, and I was told that this mortgage was assumable. I am now trying to sell my home and recognize that the 8.75 percent mortgage rate would be attractive to a buyer.

My bank informs me, however, that it has sold the mortgage and the mortgage is no longer assumable. Can the bank change the mortgage from an assumable one to one that is not assumable without my permission? Must I seek legal advice? — R.O., HOUSTON

DEAR R.O. — Where you stand depends on the exact wording of your mortgage. If it contains no due-on-sale clause, I know of no way that the lender can change the rules in the middle of the game. If, however, you were simply advised verbally that the mortgage would be assumable, it may no longer be.

Photographs capture Soviet history

PANHANDLE — Aspects of Soviet life from 1917 to 1945 are to be the focus of a special program and exhibit at the Square House Museum in Panhandle on Nov. 3.

The program centers around the exhibit, "Early Soviet Photographers," from the Museum of Modern Art in Oxford, England. This exhibit, making only four stops in the United States, illustrates the radical changes in the Soviet Union after the revolution of 1917.

Also included in the program will be a concert by the Harrington String Quartet of pieces by Russian composers. Following the musical performance, Dr. Robert Sawvell will discuss Soviet life between the wars. Dr. Sawvell, head of the department of geosciences at West Texas State University, is a recognized authority in Soviet affairs.

The photographic exhibit is scheduled to run concurrently at the Square House Museum and the Amarillo Art Center. It contains the work of 16 famous Soviet photographers who responded to the needs of the revolution to communicate facts and ideas to the overwhelmingly illiterate masses of the new republic. The revolution in society created a revolution in expression. Soviet photography between the two world wars was experimental, enthusiastic, and enchanted by life. The social testimony of Soviet photography became a chronicle of the modern history of the country.

"Early Soviet Photographers," divided between the two institutions will be displayed from Nov. 2 to Dec. 8. The music and lecture program will be only on Nov. 3 at the Square House Museum. Admission is free. For more information, call 537-3118.

The project is partially funded by a grant from the Texas Commission on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts.

DO WHAT YOU CAN

Once a woman had an alabaster jar filled with expensive perfume. She broke the jar and poured the perfume on Jesus' head.

Each of us has an alabaster jar, something we can share with others. The contents of the jar do not have to be grand. Maybe the jar contains a smile or friendly word. Perhaps it's helping someone do something he can't do alone. It might be a meal shared.

Whatever is in your alabaster jar, break it and share it with others. Then you can know that as Jesus said of the woman, so it will be said of you: "She did what she could."

BECAUSE HE CARED, WE CARE.

Rallyin' Royals win World Series

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Royals finally have a crown as big as the one atop their scoreboard. They are champions. Most unlikely ones.

Two years after a drug scandal wrenched them apart, and one night after they received the gift of an umpire's controversial call, 1985's losingest division winners peeled their backs off the wall one final time and staged the greatest comeback in World Series history. They did not just beat the St. Louis Cardinals; they destroyed them Sunday night, 11-0, in the seventh game.

In the 82 years these classics have been staged, no team ever had lost the first two games of a World Series at home and come back to win it all. Now Kansas City has.

"It would take me two or three weeks to tell you about this season," Royals Manager Dick Howser said, reflecting on the late-season charge when they overtook California to win the American League West and the victories that wiped out Toronto's three-games-to-one lead in the AL playoffs.

"No one likes to be behind like we have been this year, and always battling the odds. To put it mildly, we never did anything easy, from the regular season to the playoffs to the World Series."

Not easy, but also not new. The odds were against the Royals even being in the playoffs. No division winner had repeated since the 1981 New York Yankees. And with a week to go in the season, the Royals were a game out of first place. They won.

Then came the American League playoffs, and the Royals were down 3-1 to Toronto, one game from elimination. They won. Finally came the World Series, and the Royals won again, even if Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog can't quite believe it.

"I'll give some credit to Kansas City, but they really aren't that good," Herzog said. "If they were, they'd have won more than 91 ballgames during the season. We won 106 games this year. Nobody else did that. They struggled in a very weak division. They couldn't have won the National League East. They couldn't have won the American League East."

But they won the World Series. While Bret Saberhagen, Kansas City's proudest new father and Most Valuable Player of the Series, silenced the St. Louis batters like so many Little Leaguers Sunday night, the Royals battered John Tudor, the Cardinals' ace, and a few of the pitchers who followed him to the mound.

Saberhagen, who had begun the Royals' comeback with a six-hitter and a 6-1 victory in Game 3, climaxed it in Game 7 with a five-hit shutout that left St. Louis with a collective batting average of .185, the lowest ever in a seven-game Series.

"Having a baby two days ago is my biggest thrill," the 21-year-old Saberhagen said. "This was a close second."

Tudor, who had won the first and fourth games against Kansas City and had allowed five walks and one run in those 15 2-3 innings, was gone after 2 1-3 innings Sunday night, having given up four walks and five runs.

After his quickest exit of 1985, Tudor swung at an electric fan in the Cardinals' clubhouse, requiring a quick trip to the hospital for stitches in his left index finger.

Almost lost in the drama was Darryl Motley's two-run homer in the second inning, the only runs Saberhagen needed. Almost lost was Steve Balboni's two-run single in a three-run third.

By the time the game ended, Herzog was long gone, thrown out by plate umpire Don Denkinger in a raucous fifth inning when the Cardinals paraded a record-tying five pitchers to the mound and the Royals scored their final six runs.

"I really didn't mind leaving," Herzog said. "I'd seen enough."

In the fifth, with the Cardinals' dreams dissolving along with their pitching, Herzog called mercurial starter Joaquin Andujar in from the bullpen.

It was like throwing a hand grenade into an ammo dump.

Andujar gave up a run-scoring single to Frank White — that made it 10-0 — and went to work on Jim Sundberg, who had led off the inning.

When Denkinger called a 2-2 pitch inside, Andujar fumed, waving his arms. Darrell Porter, the catcher, headed toward him.

"That pitch was right down the middle," Andujar said. "I called Darrell and asked him where it was." But Denkinger also headed toward the mound, an argument ensued and Herzog joined it, trying to protect his players. In the process, he happened to mention that he thought the Cardinals should have been celebrating a six-game triumph instead of playing a seventh.

Denkinger said Herzog related all this rather emphatically — obscenely, to be exact. Herzog was thumbed out.

The next pitch also was called inside. Ball four.

Andujar was howling now, flailing his arms.

Goodbye, Denkinger said — or something to that effect. He ejected Andujar, too.

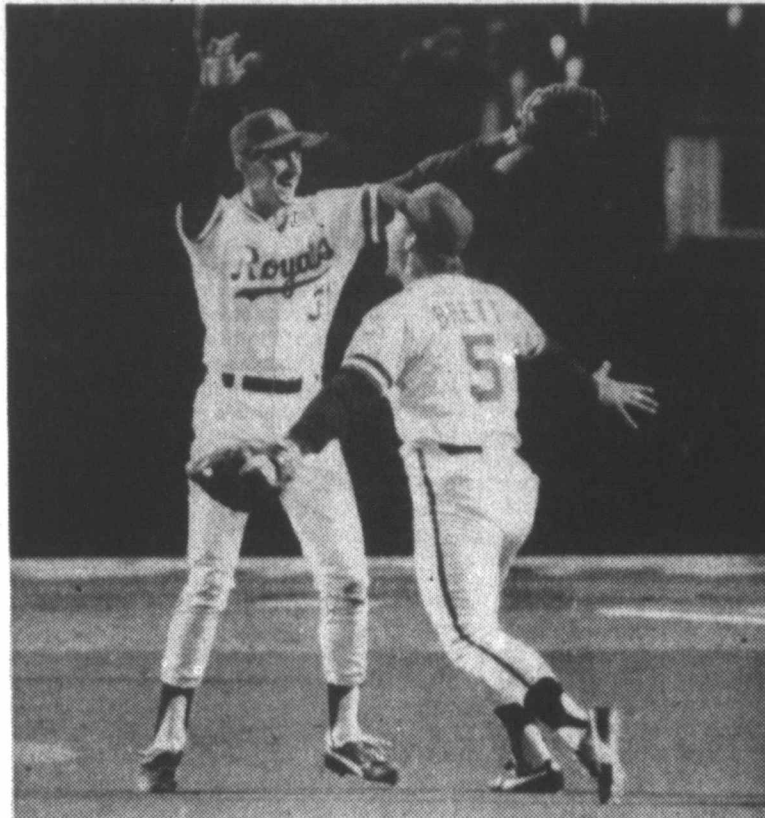

It took half a dozen Cardinals to keep the pitcher from getting close enough to the umpire to do him harm.

Bob Forsch's first pitch, a wild pitch that allowed the final run to score, was anticlimactic.

So were the final four innings. Howser's biggest fear was that Saberhagen had rested too long between the fifth and sixth, while the Royals spent two ticks short of 39 minutes to turn the game into a shambles.

"He was a little shaky," Howser said, "but then he settled down and finished up strong."

He could have been talking about 24 other Royals and 175 other games, too.

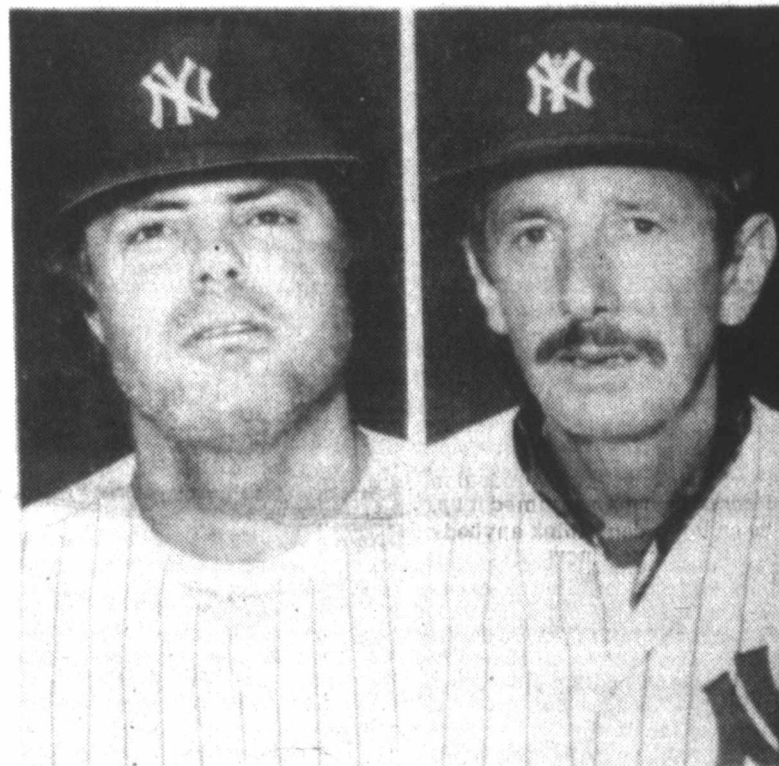

MOMENT OF TRIUMPH — Kansas City's George Brett (5) gets to pitcher Bret Saberhagen first, then the pitcher, facing camera, is mobbed after the Royals finished off St. Louis 11-0 Sunday night to win the seventh game of the World Series.

Lady Harvesters lose

LEVELLAND — Pampa's varsity and junior varsity volleyball teams lost district matches to the Lady Lobos here Saturday.

The Lady Harvesters will celebrate Parents Night when they host Borger Tuesday. The junior varsity match will begin at 6:30 p.m. and will be followed by the varsity match. Parents of the varsity players will be introduced between the matches.

The varsity Lady Harvesters were beaten 6-15, 8-15 by Levelland and fell to 2-5 in District 1-4A play.

"We played very lackadaisically, with no emotion," Pampa coach Phil Hall said. "We did not play to our best potential. Levelland has a good team but we should've at least stayed with them."

Pampa's JV lost its first district game, 10-15, 15-10, 4-15 and dropped to 7-1. The junior varsity is still in contention for the district crown.

SWC reps to support booster ban proposal

DALLAS (AP) — Faculty representatives to the Southwest Conference have voted to support a proposal to the 1986 NCAA convention in January that would eliminate all participation by boosters in the recruiting process.

The action came Sunday in a specially convened session, which was called in order to meet a Nov. 1 deadline for proposing legislation to the 1986 convention.

Several SWC schools have come under scrutiny in recent months because of alleged excessive involvement by ex-students and other boosters in the recruiting of athletes.

The conference also will support a proposal to reduce the number of sports required for Division I-A status from eight to six or seven.

The faculty representatives discussed several pending lawsuits that call for inclusion of SWC schools under the state's Open Records Act, specifically with regard to matters concerning NCAA investigations.

Also, the league's lawsuit against an apparently insolvent broadcast firm for revenues from the 1983-84 season was dismissed on attorneys' advice.

Rams suffer first loss; Chicago doesn't

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

For seven weeks, the Los Angeles Rams had been pulling away from Super Bowl champion San Francisco. The 49ers finally hit back.

"We have to grasp this as a 16-round fight and we just finished Round 8," Rams Coach John Robinson said Sunday after watching his team fall behind 28-0 in the first half en route to a 28-14 handed the Rams their first loss of the season. "We're just 4-4 and we still have to play a second half."

The loss by the Rams left the Chicago Bears, 8-0 after a 27-9 victory over Minnesota, as the only unbeaten team in the National Football League.

In other NFL games, it was Dallas 24, Atlanta 10; the New York Giants 21, New Orleans 13; Philadelphia 21, Buffalo 17; Denver 30, Kansas City 10; Houston 20, St. Louis 10; Indianapolis 27, Green Bay 10; Detroit 31, Miami 21; New England 32, Tampa Bay 17; New York Jets 17, Seattle 14; and Washington 14, Cleveland 7.

Tonight's game has San Diego at the Los Angeles Raiders.

San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana broke out of a slump by throwing for 306 yards and three first-half touchdowns. He completed 22 of 30 passes and was not intercepted before leaving the game late in third quarter with a minor chest injury.

Bears 27, Vikings 9

Jim McMahon threw two scoring passes, Otis Wilson returned an interception 23 yards for another touchdown and Walter Payton gained 118 yards on 19 carries for the 67th 100-yard game of his career to keep Chicago unbeaten.

"Our goal was to be undefeated, and we still have a chance to do it," said Payton, only half in jest.

The 8-0 start is the best for the Bears since they went 11-0 in 1942.

McMahon hit Dennis McKinnon with a 33-yard scoring pass on the game's opening drive and connected on a 20-yard touchdown pass to Payton in the fourth quarter.

Lions 31, Dolphins 21

James Jones gained over 100 yards for the second straight game and tied a team record for carries with 36 to lead Detroit's upset of Miami.

Jones, who gained 114 yards, also scored two touchdowns, including one of Eric Hipple's three scoring passes, as Detroit beat a Super Bowl XIX team for the second week in a row. Both the Dolphins and Lions have 5-3 records.

The 36 carries by Jones, who turned in his first NFL 100-yard game in last week's victory over San Francisco, equaled the Lions record for rushes in a game set by Billy Sims.

Hipple completed 14 of 19 passes, while Dan Marino was 23 of 44 for 247 yards and two touchdowns for the Dolphins.

Jets 17, Seahawks 14

Ken O'Brien, sacked seven times in the game, passed 15 yards for a touchdown to Wesley Walker with 5:11 to play as New York beat Seattle for the first time in eight tries.

The Jets, 6-2, moved into sole possession of first place in the AFC East.

Freeman McNeil rushed for 151 yards on 22 carries.

Eagles 21, Bills 17

Philadelphia also had to rally to win, coming back from a 17-0 deficit in the fourth quarter against Buffalo, which lost for the 13th straight time on the road.

Ron Jaworski threw 32 yards to wide receiver Mike Quick with 1:55 left in the game to cap a three-touchdown fourth period for the Eagles.

Patriots 32, Bucs 14

New England pulled off yet another comeback from a two-touchdown deficit, easily beating winless Tampa Bay.

Craig James, who threw an 11-yard TD pass to Tony Collins in the second quarter, rushed for 96 yards and scored on runs of 8 and 22 yards in the fourth period.

Place-kicker Tony Franklin booted field goals of 35, 50 and 49 yards for the Patriots, who improved to 5-3.

Broncos 30, Chiefs 10

Randy Robbins blocked two punts to set up 10 points and Denver scored after each of Kansas City's first four possessions.

The Broncos now are 6-2 and lead the Raiders by a half-game in the American Conference West.

Giants 21, Saints 13

Cornerback Elvis Patterson set up two touchdowns with an interception and a fumble recovery to lead New York over New Orleans.

Patterson intercepted a Dave Wilson pass before Phil Simms passed 6 yards to Bob Johnson midway through the second quarter. Then, with the Giants holding a 7-6 edge, Patterson recovered a bobble-punt at the New Orleans 12 to set up the first of two late touchdowns by Joe Morris, who finished with 104 yards rushing.

Redskins 14, Browns 7

Washington scored both of its touchdowns against Cleveland in the first half after turnovers by rookie quarterback Bernie Kosar. John Riggins scored his 114th career touchdown on a 1-yard burst to take over second place on the all-time list, 12 shy of Jim Brown.

The other TD came on a Joe Theismann pass to Gary Clark.

Kosar, who was benched at halftime, completed only seven of 17 passes for 84 yards.

Despite the loss, Cleveland is still in first place in the AFC Central with a 4-4 record. The three other teams in the division are 3-5.

Bengals 26, Steelers 21

Jim Breech kicked four field goals and the mangled Cincinnati defense forced six Pittsburgh turnovers.

The Bengals' defense, ranked last in the NFL, had three interceptions and recovered three of seven Steelers fumbles.

Oilers 20, Cardinals 10

Houston rallied against St. Louis in the fourth quarter on Warren Moon's 37-yard scoring pass to Drew Hill and Mike Akin's 12-yard TD return of a blocked punt.

The Cardinals have lost four straight games and are last in the NFC East.

Colts 37, Packers 10

Wayne Capers, making his first start, scored on a 20-yard run and on pass receptions of 39 and 33 yards, leading Indianapolis over Green Bay.

Two of Eugene Daniel's three interceptions set up first-half touchdowns by the Colts.

Dallas downs Falcons

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING, Texas (AP)- Give Tom Landry a 6-2 record in the second half of the National Football League season and he'd take a hike.

"I'd go fishing or play golf if you'd give me 6-2 again," said Landry after the Dallas Cowboys thumped the Atlanta Falcons 24-10 on Sunday and kept their National Conference Eastern Division lead.

"I'm very happy to be at 6-2 at this point," said Landry. "I never thought it would be."

Up jumps the hard part for the Cowboys, who play at St. Louis on Monday night Nov. 4 then travel to Washington the next week.

"Now comes our tough stretch," said Landry. "We have a tiring combination of games coming up."

A sore-ribbed Danny White was far from perfect in his return to the Dallas lineup. But he offset three interceptions by running for a touchdown, passing for another and hitting 27 of 47 passes for 362 yards against the 1-7 Falcons.

Tony Hill caught a 35 yard touchdown pass and had 10 receptions for 161 yards. Tony Dorsett gained 90 yards, 60 of them on a touchdown burst up the middle.

"Danny did have three turnovers but that's not surprising when you consider the harassment he was under," said Landry. "Still, he made the big plays for us. His experience enabled him to make those big plays."

White, who had beaten the Falcons in two previous outings against them, said "It wasn't pretty but it was a win. I did some good things and some bad things. It was good to get back. My ribs still hurt."

"We knew we were going to have a tough time," said Landry. "We had to make the big plays to beat them."

"Danny had to run for his life back there. We don't like to see him run because of those blitzes but sometimes you have to. He did what he had to do. He is hurting and this game probably didn't help him any."

The busy White called an audible and bootlegged a yard for a touchdown, and had to tackle Scott Case to save a touchdown after an interception in the fourth period.

"Danny threw a couple he wish he hadn't thrown," said Landry. "I feel good about this team. We'll go to the playoffs for sure if we keep playing like this."

White, who wears a flak jacket, said he never intended to run three times against Atlanta with his bad ribs.

"Believe me, it's a last-ditch effort," said White. "I'm just trying to do the job the best I can. We had a lot of pressure and I won a few and lost a few."

Atlanta quarterback Dave Archer hit only 9 of 23 passes against the Cowboys, suffered five sacks and three interceptions. He flipped a three-yard scoring pass to tight end Allama Matthews.

The Falcons' luck ran out in more ways than one. Radar-accurate placekicker Mick Luckhurst kicked a 39-yard field goal to run his consecutive streak to 17 in a row. However, he then missed kicks of 46 and 27 yards.

"This losing isn't easy for anybody," said Case. "I was really surprised White caught me on the interception. I thought I'd score. I guess he had the angle on me."

Archer had no excuses for his dismal day, saying, "I just didn't do a good job. Dallas didn't do anything new or different. I just didn't make the plays."

Dallas strong safety Dexter Clinkscale, who had two interceptions, said "I thought we'd be 8-0 but I'll settle for 6-2."

Considering Dallas was picked to finish fourth in the division, safety Dennis Thurman summed it up, saying "It's nice to be on top. I don't think anybody expected us to be where we are right now."

"It's gratifying. But it's only half over."

Are people eating less beef due to dietary or market changes?

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Cattlemen's Association has raised one of those which came first — the chicken — or the egg questions regarding consumer demand for meat.

"Some persons equate per capita consumption and demand for meats," the association said in a recent report. "Actually, that cannot be done. We always eat all the beef that is produced, and the production level in a given year is largely determined by the size of the cattle herd about three years earlier."

"With any perishable commodity, everything that is produced in a given period is eaten, at a price, depending on supply and demand at the time."

The issue is not new, but it has taken on some added twists in recent years because of some concerns about food and health.

All the beef produced will be sold eventually, says the NCA. If consumers resist buying at a certain price, the price will come down. But the meat will be sold. In one of his colorful quips as secretary of agriculture, Earl Butz used to say about meat, "You sell it or smell it."

If prices decline enough, cattle producers will be forced to reduce production. And with less beef moving through the pipeline, prices eventually will rise.

What the cattlemen are saying is that meat — and other perishable agricultural products, for that matter — is not like wheat or corn. You can't store it indefinitely, not even in refrigerated lockers. It's not like nuts and bolts, left to gather dust in a hardware store until someone buys them.

The NCA's analysis included a number of other observations:

—In the early 1970s, the average annual per capita supply and consumption of beef was in the range of 80 to 85 pounds, retail weight. In the mid-1970s, the rate increased sharply, with per capita consumption rising to a record of 94.4 pounds in 1976.

That was an aberration caused by over-production plus the liquidation of cattle herds by hard-pressed producers. The result was an exceptionally large per capita supply of beef. A subsequent decline in the per capita supply was mostly cyclical, not a function of demand.

—Average per capita supplies of beef have shown little change during the past seven years. If some people have indeed been eating less beef, other have had to be eating more.

—Because of concern about health and fat, as well as economics, some consumers "undoubtedly are now eating less red meat than they have in former years."

The NCA report said the consumer switch from red meat to chicken may be less than indicated by surveys in which consumers simply say what they are doing.

"In some cases, because it has become fashionable to eat less red meat and more white meat, people are significantly overstating their diet changes," the report said.

"There has been some change in attitudes and in tastes and preferences, but supply is the greatest problem. Animal agriculture has been producing more meat than can be sold at a profit to most producers."

TUMBLEWEED ACRES 50x130 Lots, with fences, sidewalks

ARRESTED — The Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, leader of a sect believe to have up to 500,000 followers, was arrested Sunday night in Charlotte, N.C., by customs officers while trying to flee the country. He is shown here in a 1984 photograph. (AP Laserphoto)

Rajneesh arrested in North Carolina

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Indian guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh and a band of followers were arrested today as authorities said they tried to flee the country for Bermuda.

Rajneesh was taken in handcuffs at about 2 a.m. EST from a Learjet that authorities had monitored as it and a second plane flew across country from the guru's Rajneeshpuram commune in central Oregon.

"They were going to change planes and charter another two planes to fly to Bermuda tonight," said U.S. Marshal Ray Abrams.

Waiting U.S. Customs officials surrounded the two planes carrying Rajneesh and followers when they landed at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport, authorities said.

Federal officers led Rajneesh in handcuffs to the U.S. Courthouse where he was placed in a holding cell early today. He and 12 others were arrested without incident, officials said.

"They didn't know it, but we had them surrounded ... when they came down to refuel. If they had seen anything, they never would've cut off their engines. It was just like in the movies," said a U.S. Marshal's official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"I doubt if he's sleeping," the official said of Rajneesh. "He's in full dress. You know what a king looks like, don't you?"

Ed Brigham, assistant agent in charge of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Charlotte, said the arrest was requested by the U.S. attorney of Oregon involving "an investigation concerning Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh and various other people relating to the violation of immigration laws."

Brigham said assistant U.S. attorney Robert Weaver and immigration supervisor Joseph Green were on their way to Charlotte today and Abrams said Rajneesh was scheduled to appear before a U.S. Magistrate later today.

Gasoline prices up as the lead goes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline retail prices edged up for the first time in 3½ months, and an oil industry analyst says that means the cost of getting the lead out of gas has finally reached the pump and more increases are in store.

Dan Lundberg, publisher of the Lundberg Letter, said Sunday that retail prices rose less than a fifth of a cent in the last two weeks, while wholesale prices rose 1.08 cents per gallon, cutting into retailers' profits.

"A further retail increase will occur as dealers catch up to pass that wholesale increase on to the public," he predicted.

For the survey period ending Friday, the average retail price of all grades of gasoline, self- and full-serve, was $1.204 per gallon, almost a fifth of a cent higher than in the previous two-week period, Lundberg said. He surveys prices at some 17,000 service stations nationwide every two weeks.

He said he had expected the unseasonable post-Labor Day price rise because of the reduction of lead content in gas that took effect July 1 under orders of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Cutting the lead content in gasoline increases the cost of making leaded gas because other octane enhancers are more expensive.

The latest Lundberg survey found that the retail price of self-serve regular leaded gas averaged $1.081 per gallon, up more than a quarter-cent in the past two weeks. Self-serve regular unleaded was $1.157.

Reagan meeting with U.S. hostages families

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in their lengthy ordeal, relatives of the six Americans believed held hostage in Lebanon have been invited to meet with President Reagan at the White House.

"The meeting will provide the opportunity for the president to bring the families up to date on our efforts to secure the release of their relatives," White House spokesman Mark Weinberg said Sunday of the session, scheduled for late this afternoon.

Reagan, returning to the White House from his weekend at his Camp David, Md., retreat, refused to answer reporters' questions about the session.

Since Feb. 10, 1984, nine Americans have been kidnapped in Lebanon, and the meeting marks the first time that Reagan has scheduled a White House meeting with a relative of one of the victims. Three of the kidnapped men have been freed.

Family members of at least four of the six hostages still believed held are expected to attend the White House meeting, said Peggy Say.

Ms. Say is the sister of Terry A.

Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was kidnapped on March 16.

Some family members have tried to meet with Reagan for more than a year, and do not know why the White House has suddenly granted their request, Ms. Say said.

During the summer TWA hostage crisis, Reagan met in Chicago with the families of nine TWA hostages and one of the long-time hostages, the Rev. Lawrence Jenco.

Ms. Say said the relatives intend to ask Reagan to take action to help end their loved ones' ordeal.

"It would certainly help the cause if he'd give his blessing," said Ms. Say.

The group would like to see Reagan appoint a congressional delegation to go to Syria to meet with President Hafez Assad, and follow up on demands made in recent months by those believed to be the kidnappers, Ms. Say said.

The other Americans still missing are: —William Buckley, 57, Medford, Mass., U.S. Embassy political officer in Beirut, kidnapped March 16, 1984. Earlier this month, a message and photograph that indicated Buckley had been killed were purportedly issued by the Islamic Jihad.

—Peter Kilburn, 60, San Francisco, Calif., librarian at the American University of Beirut, missing since Dec. 3, 1984.

—The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, 50,

Joliet, Ill., Roman Catholic priest, kidnapped Jan. 8, 1985.

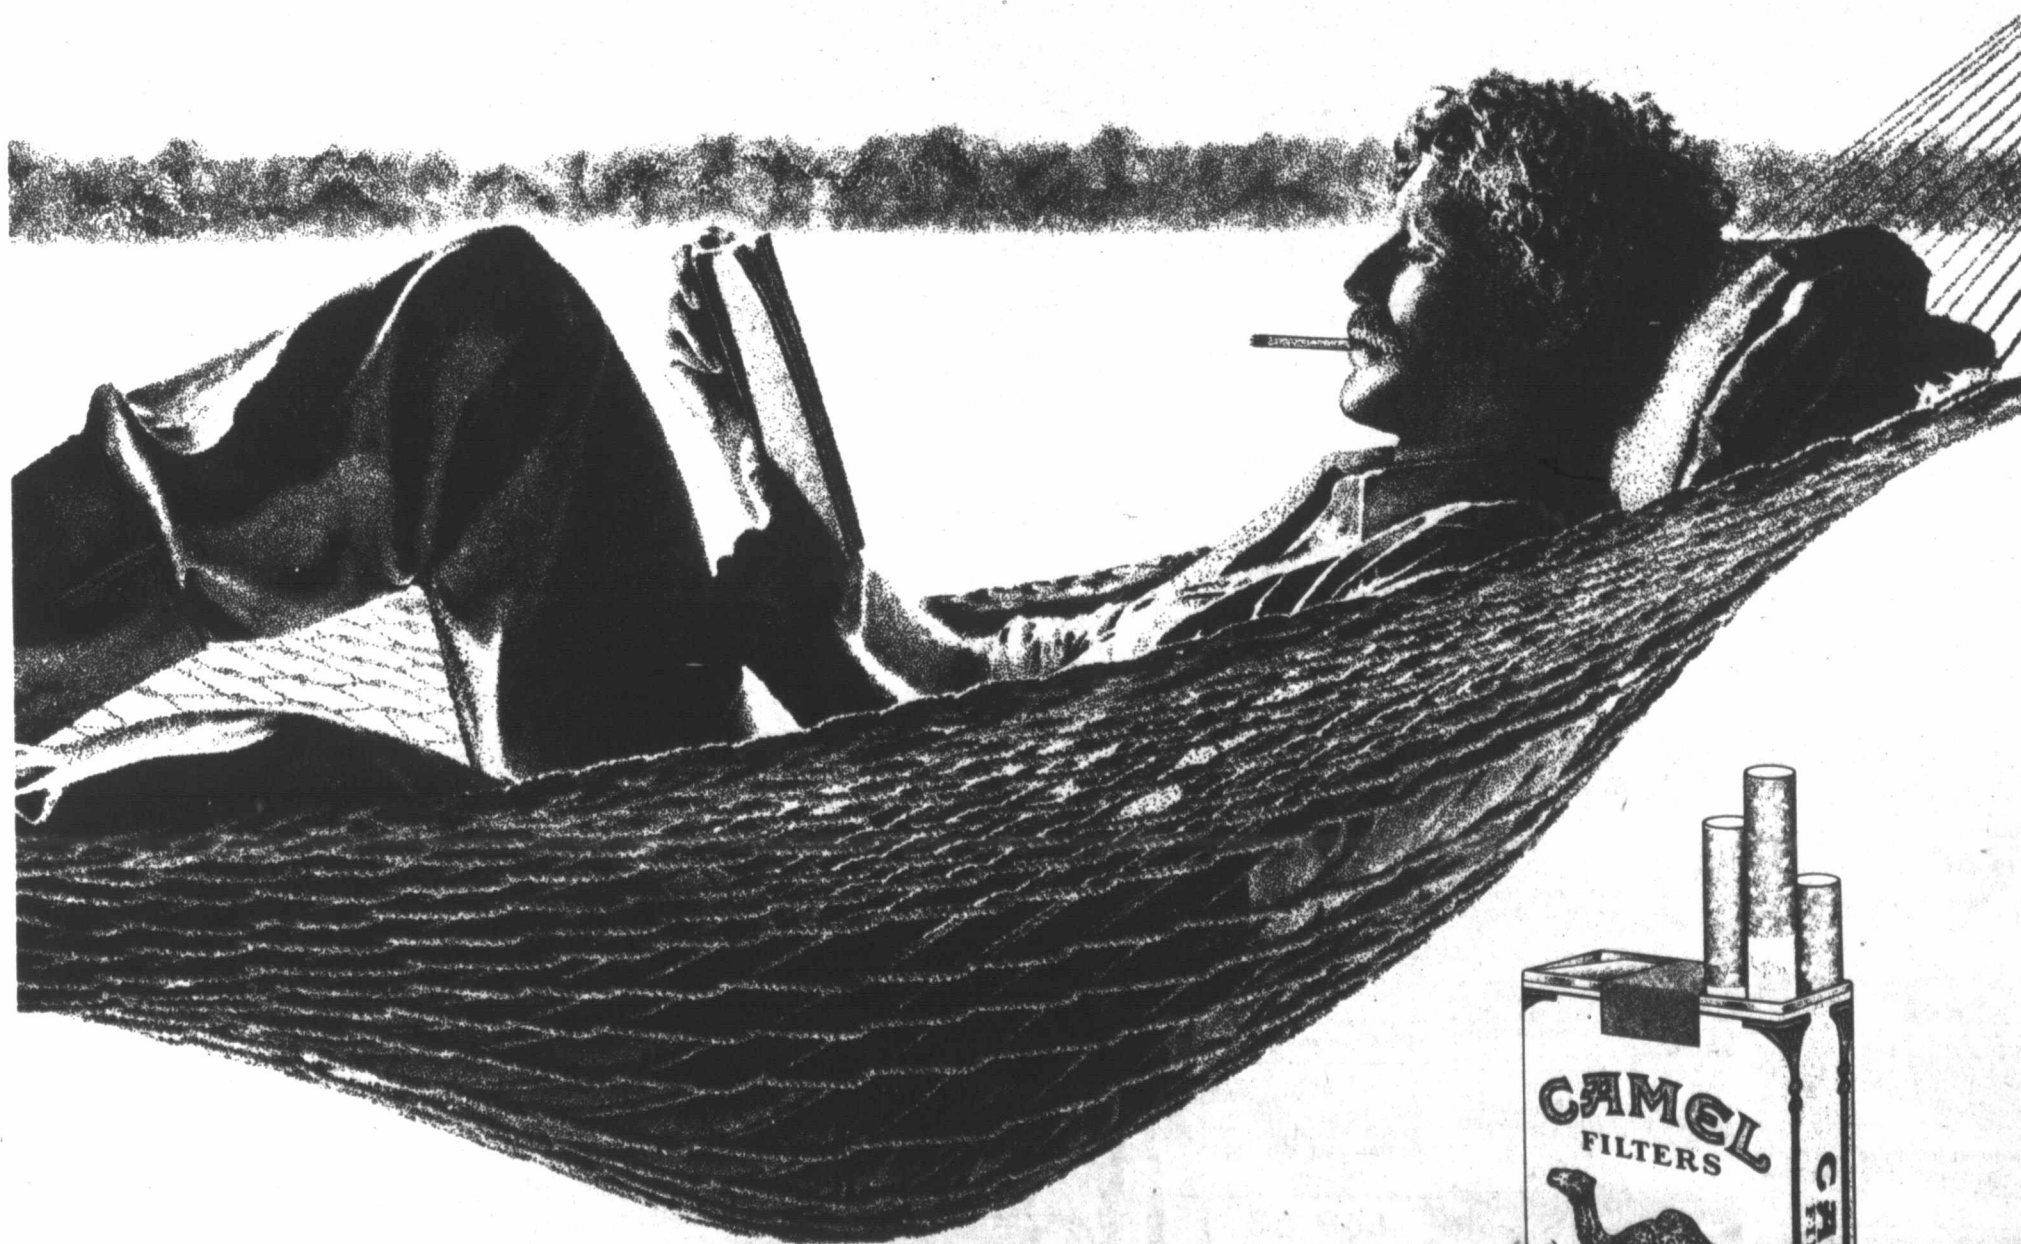

—David Jacobsen, 54, Huntington Beach, Calif., director of the American University Hospital, kidnapped May 28, 1985.

—Thomas Sutherland, 54, Scottish-born, dean of agriculture at American University of Beirut, kidnapped June 9, 1985.
