Marine corporal dies in guerrilla ambush

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. Marines tightened security today following an ambush which killed an American corporal, and police said six people were killed in new fighting between Druse and Christian militiamen south of Beirut.

In west Beirut, the Marines moved their helicopter landing zone several hundred yards northward on the main seafront boulevard following a guerrilla attack Sunday that killed a Marine. He was the 258th member of the U.S. contingent of the multinational force killed since the Marines arrived in Lebanon in September 1982.

Navy helicopters today landed troops on the broad sidewalk of the boulevard stretching between the British and U.S. Embassy buildings instead of the previous landing zone at a beach below the road where Sunday's attack occurred.

The half-mile stretch of the boulevard between the two embassies is sealed off by waist-high concrete barriers and manned by Marine guards on both sides, while the former landing zone about 500 yards southward is guarded by Lebanese troops.

The chief Marine spokesman, Maj. Dennis Brooks, identified the dead Marine as Cpl. Edward J. Gargano of Quincy, Mass., and said his body would be flown back to the United States as soon as possible.

Gargano was killed when gunmen fired two rocket-propelled grenades at a 12-man detail of U.S. Marines who had been unloaded on the beach by a CH-46 Sea Knight helicopter. No group claimed responsibility for the attack.

'Kids should not have been there'

Edward Gargano

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — The mother of a slain Marine says her son signed up for a second tour of duty because he was unable to find work, and he was looking forward to getting out of Lebanon in the spring.

"Those kids should not have been there in the first place," a grieving Mary Gargano said Sunday of her son, Cpl. Edward J. Gargano. "It's not right. The fight going on and the kids being killed. It's not right."

He was the 258th U.S. serviceman killed since American forces entered Lebanon in September 1982, and the first to die in 1984. He had also served briefly in Grenada.

"There's nothing much to tell about Eddy," his mother said. "He's just another Marine, I guess."

Mrs. Gargano, 52, lives with her husband, Joseph, 56, in low-income housing in Quincy, 10 miles south of Boston.

She said a Marine and a chaplain came to the door of the duplex house shortly before noon to tell them the third of their seven children was dead.

Ex-senator starts sentence, reiterates his innocence

BEDMINSTER, N.J. (AP) — Ex-Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., the first U.S. senator in 59 years to be convicted of crimes in office, insisted he was "framed" before reporting to federal prison today to start his three-year Abscam sentence.

H.A. Williams

The 64-year-old New Jersey Democrat, who resigned in March 1982 rather than face expulsion after 23 years in the Senate, insisted he will continue trying to prove his innocence.

"Have I been framed? I know I've been framed," he told the New York Daily News in an interview published today. "I know I am innocent of the charges against me."

The former lawmaker, who must serve at least one year of the sentence, began preparing to enter a minimum security section of the Federal Correctional Institute at Danbury, Conn., after federal judge George Pratt, who tried the case, rejected his bid for a new trial Friday.

Williams told the Daily News in the interview at his Bedminster home that he pledged "a good solid, fight" to vindicate himself, but did not specify the possible basis for a future appeal.

Officials of the federal Bureau of Prisons refused to say what time Williams would likely report to Danbury, but Williams told the Daily News it would be "sometime late."

He told the newspaper he hadn't been aware he was to go to prison today until reporters told him Friday he had lost his last appeal, and that by Sunday afternoon he still had "not officially been told to report."

Williams was convicted in May 1981 on nine counts of conspiracy and bribery, on charges of accepting a hidden interest in a Virginia titanium mine — from an FBI agent posing as an Arab sheik — in return for help in finding military contracts for the venture.

He was sentenced to prison on Feb. 16, 1982, and fined $50,000.

Two other men convicted in the 1980 undercover Abscam bribery investigation began prison terms at Danbury last summer.

Former Democratic U.S. Rep. John Murphy of Staten Island, N.Y. is serving a three-year term; and former Camden, N.J., Mayor Angelo J. Errichetti is serving six years. In all, eight congressmen were convicted in the sting.

Chinese premier to meet with U.S. officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will explore with Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang this week the use of Chinese influence to rein in what Washington views as a "murderous" and increasingly dangerous regime in North Korea.

"The whole issue is so important that we keep looking for new openings," said one senior U.S. official.

"We hope something positive could be nudged along" (with China)," he said. "But it is such a difficult problem that you can't get your hopes up."

China has long supported communist North Korea and its leader, Kim Il-Sung.

But independent analysts report that Peking was "aghast" and "appalled" at the attempted assassination of South Korea's President Chun Doo-Hwan in Rangoon, Burma, last Oct. 9 in an attack that killed senior members of the South Korean Cabinet.

The senior U.S. official, who discussed the issue on the condition he not be identified by name, said there have been numerous diplomatic exchanges on the question between Washington and Peking.

He would not discuss these approaches but said that the United States does feel that "the Chinese have been acting to reduce tensions and the possibility of war in the (Korean) peninsula."

Child born by surrogate mother having 'one problem after another'

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Christopher Ray Stiver — a deformed infant whose birth set off an emotional dispute over his parentage and the issue of surrogate motherhood — reaches his first birthday Tuesday with his future in doubt.

"I don't think he'll be with us that long," said Ray Stiver, the baby's father. "His head isn't growing like it should...he has a lot of trouble breathing...It's one problem after another."

Before Christopher's birth Jan. 10, 1983, at Lansing General Hospital, his mother Judy Stiver had contracted to act as a surrogate mother and bear an infant through artificial insemination for a New York man and his infertile wife.

But instead of the healthy baby the would-be parents longed for, Christopher was born with microcephaly, a smaller than normal size head which often indicates retardation.

Today, Christopher suffers from cytomegalovirus, a type of herpes infection. He cannot crawl, roll over, sit or hold up his head. His hearing is impaired and he has suffered brain damage. He weighs only 14 pounds and is abnormally susceptible to viruses and infections.

Mrs. Stiver was to have received $10,000 from Alexander Malahoff for bearing his baby.

But after a preliminary blood test indicated Malahoff was not his father, Malahoff sued Mrs. Stiver for failing to provide him with a baby as their contract specified.

The Stivers filed a counter-suit, claiming that they had not been given proper advice on how to carry out their part of the agreement.

The cases were widely publicized, with Christopher known simply as Baby Doe.

The Stivers did not receive any payment and finally agreed to keep the child.

"If we hadn't taken him, if we had put him in an institution, we would feel worse," Stiver, 42, recently told the Lansing State Journal. "We have no regrets about bringing him home, even with all his problems and all the doctors and hospitals.

Mrs. Stiver said she tries to avoid both optimism and despair. "I'm trying to be realistic," said the 28-year-old mother. "He's my son and I just live with him each day and try to help him along. We'll just have to wait and see. I try not to hope too much."

Teens' marijuana use down, survey shows

NEW YORK (AP) — After peaking in the late 1970s, marijuana use continues to decline among American teen-agers, who experience less peer pressure to "turn on" and are wary of how pot will affect their health, government and private studies say.

"We're finding surprisingly little drug use among teen-agers in the 14-18 age range. They haven't done drugs and don't want to do drugs," said Amy MacDonald, an editor at TeenAge magazine in Lowell, Mass.

Ms. MacDonald, whose magazine is doing a survey on teen-agers' attitudes toward drugs, said, "The most common comment is that they don't want to ruin their bodies."

Heather Hanson, 16, a junior at Wheeling Park High School in Wheeling, W.Va., said there is plenty of marijuana available in her school. "I could get it free," she said. "I have so many good friends who have surplus."

But Heather said she has never even tried marijuana.

A new Gallup Youth Survey of 542 respondents ages 13 to 18 said 19 percent reported smoking marijuana at least once, down from 40 percent in 1980.

The government's latest statistics, compiled from surveys of 17,500 high school seniors, indicated that 6.3 percent smoked marijuana daily in 1982, down from the peak of 10.7 percent in 1978.

"But that still means that one of every 16 high school seniors smoke marijuana daily," said Carol Sussman, a press officer at the National Institute on Drug Abuse. "That's a lot."

About the same number — one in 16 — report that they drink every day, she said.

The percentage of high school seniors who say they have tried marijuana — six of 10 — has remained the same in recent years, but those who say they had smoked pot in the last month declined from 37 percent in 1978 to 29 percent in 1982. Those who said they had used marijuana in the previous year dipped from 50 percent in 1978 to 44 percent in 1982.

The trend toward less marijuana use among teen-agers is expected to continue when the National Institute on Drug Abuse releases the results of its 1983 survey of high schjool seniors next month.

Salvadoran plans illegal U.S. entry

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Marta is planning to become one of the 300,000 Salvadorans who have fled the violence and deteriorating living stardards here in hopes of finding a better life in the United States.

She intends to to it illegally — by crossing the U.S. border from Mexico.

She wants to learn all she can to give her the best possible chance to carry out her plan so she and her two sons can join her husband, who she said is already living in the United States.

In a sense, Salvadorans like Marta are very much like the "feet people" President Reagan says would flock to the United States if leftist guerrillas win their drawnout civil war against the U.S.-supported conservative government in El Salvador.

Marta, a who is 36 years old and has tightly curled, red-tinted hair, now works as a servant for a salary of 425 colones a month — the equivalent of $114. She would be delighted to get a job as a maid, she said, once she reaches Dallas where her husband lives and works.

Asked if she isn't afraid to set out on her first long journey without the proper papers, Marta's tone of voice becomes defiant.

"Afraid? Why? Everyone feels fear, but you have to pray to God and have faith."

Marta could enter the United States legally, if she could afford it and planned to stay only a short time. She would have to buy a round-trip plane ticket and obtain a tourist visa permitting her to stay for an allotted period. But there also would be a record of her entering, and the possibility would exist that she could be tracked down if she overstayed her visa.

So, Marta said, she is trying to determine the best way to travel from Mexico City to the northern Mexican city of Monterrey, 145 miles south of the U.S. border.

She asks around for the name of a Monterrey hotel in case she has to tell a Mexican immigration agent where she will be staying in Mexico.

Marta already has set her vacation in May as the time to start out.

"My motive is to improve living conditions," she said, agreeing to be interviewed so long as her identity was not disclosed. "You know the situation we've got here is pretty bad."

Jose, Marta's 35-year-old husband, left for the United States in August. He made it on his second attempt.

Two years ago, Marta said, he tried to reach the United States on a journey that included two days of walking day and night. But she added that he was stopped by Mexican immigration agents close to the U.S. border and "he couldn't pass."

This time he managed to meet a "coyote" — an agent who specializes in taking undocumented people across the U.S. border for a fee — in northern Mexico.

Marta doesn't know how much her husband paid, but he reached Dallas and has written that he has found work in construction.

"He feels very happy, because he has work," she said. "He's always had this idea of going to better himself." Jose worked as a taxi driver and truckdriver in El Salvador.

She insists that it is mostly economics and not politics that is behind her decision to emigrate.

"Perhaps five or six years of savings, then maybe return here to buy a house," Marta said. "We all need to get along."

Although she is aware of the deaths here — more than 39,000 civilians killed during the war — Marta said her only firsthand experience with politics or violence have been the times she had to walk home after firefights interrupted transportation to her home in an outlying poor neighborhood.

"This doesn't end, and you don't even know who is who," she said. "I don't get involved in any of those problems."

Marta will be traveling with her two boys, aged 6 and 4, whom she has not told yet about her plan. She said she would prefer to take the bus to Mexico once she gets tourist visas but believes it may be safer to fly, despite the added expense.

There are an estimated 100,000 Salvadoran refugees in Mexico, many of them on expired tourist visas.

Marta said she knows a "coyote" in El Salvador who guarantees entry into the United States for $1,200 a person, but she hopes that she will be able to do it less expensively on her own.

The plan would be to get to Monterrey and there meet a friend of her husband's to travel clandestinely across the U.S. border.

The Mexican Embassy here requires Salvadorans to show that they have no criminal record and are employed and financially solvent before they can get a tourist visa to Mexico. They also must show a round-trip ticket — about $375 by air, but much cheaper by bus.

"I've told my mother a little about this, but she doesn't like the idea very much," Marta said. "You know how mothers are.

"There you don't know anyone and here you have all your family and everything you love most."

Police said rival militias were engaged in battles with mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns this morning in the Kharroub region, 20 miles south of Beirut and three miles from Israel's front line along the Awali River. Police said all six casualties were civilians.

Despite the fighting, negotiators met again today in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, in an effort to resolve final details of a proposed security plan that would disengage Lebanon's warring factions and stabilize an often-broken cease-fire.

But the meeting of Saudi Arabian, Syrian and Lebanese foreign ministers broke up without an agreement. Sources said the main stumbling block was Syria's insistence on revoking the May 17 Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal agreement.

Sources said Syria's foreign minister, Abdul-Halim Khaddam, left for Damascus after the meeting ended, and they described the two-day talks as "tense."

In Riyadh, Khaddam and foreign ministers Elie Salem of Lebanon and Prince Saud al-Faisal of Saudi Arabia met for the second straight day today. The official Saudi news agency said they were discussing "a number of topics related to the efforts to be exerted in the coming stage concerning national reconciliation in Lebanon."

There were hopes that an agreement on the disengagement plan would lead to resumption of the national reconciliation conference of Lebanese factional leaders. The first round adjourned in Geneva in early November.

Nabih Berri, leader of the largest Shiite militia, Amal, said Sunday he has approved a draft formula of the disengagement plan and was ready to begin its implementation, according to a statement published in Beirut newspapers.

The plan reportedly calls for withdrawal of Christian militias from the Aley, Chouf and Kharroub mountain regions to Christian areas north of Beirut, deployment of Lebanese police and army troops in areas south of the capital to the Awali River and a pullback of Shiite militiamen in Beirut's embattled southern suburbs.

Sources said Druse leader Walid Jumblatt was still insisting that the Lebanese army not enter any Druse areas before a comprehensive political settlement for the nation has been reached and that Druse soldiers and officers who left the army under questionable status be reinstated.

In Jerusalem, an Israeli government spokesman said Sunday that Israel still insists Syrian forces withdraw from Lebanon simultaneously with Israeli troops and will not pull out its soldiers unilaterally.

Cabinet Secretary Dan Meridor said the government had not changed its May 17 withdrawal agreement with Lebanon calling for evacuation of all foreign forces.

Proposals to reshape Israel's strategy in Lebanon are under study in the "defense establishment" but have not reached the Cabinet, Meridor told reporters after Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Cabinet reviewed the Lebanon situation.

Recent reports from Washington quoted U.S. officials as saying they believed Israel was considering a unilateral withdrawal to end the 19-month occupation of southern Lebanon and to salvage the best security arrangements it could.

Israel invaded Lebanon in June 1982 in a drive against Palestinian guerrillas, and it troops remain in southern Lebanon. Syrian troops went to Lebanon at the end of the 1975-76 civil war and remain in the north.

Meridor said Israel's main concern was to protect its northern border.

Family grieves over son's death

Mrs. Gargano said she had watched the television report Sunday morning. "I didn't think anything of it. Then they came to door. It was about 11:30 a.m."

"My husband, he's in poor health," said Mrs. Gargano. "To have this hit him. I'm worrying about him, mainly. God knows, I can't help my Eddy."

She said her husband recently was laid off by the Quincy Parks Department and was recovering from the flu. She said the family was living partly off his veteran's pension from World War II service with the Navy.

The family had received a letter from their son Saturday thanking them for his Christmas gift box.

"He completed his first three years, then got out," she said. "He just wanted to do something around here. He was anxious to get married. Really, there was nothing for him around here. First thing I knew, he was reenlisting. That's what he wanted. What could I say?"

"He was looking forward to getting out of there in April," she said.

Gargano, 21, was on his second three-year Marine enlistment, and had signed up again after he was unable to find work in Quincy, his mother said.

Mrs. Gargano said her son left Quincy High School at age 17 in the 11th grade to enlist, later getting his diploma in the Marines.

Michael Sullivan, 25, a former Marine and family friend, described Gargano as very quiet and one who liked to help people.

"He liked the Marines and probably would have made a career out of it," said Sullivan. "He was thinking about it."

Mrs. Gargano said another son, Robert, 20, is an Army private in Germany. "They told me Robby will escort his brother back home from Germany," she said.

Task force on hunger faces 'heavy debate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's task force on hunger — accused by critics of preparing to whitewash administration policies — faces what one member calls "very heavy discussion and debate" on the election-year issue.

The 13-member Task Force on Food Assistance was meeting today to fashion a final report to the president, who has been criticized by Democrats and social-action groups for saying he was puzzled by reports of hunger in the nation.

"I feel that it's going to need very heavy discussion and debate," John Driggs, a former mayor of Phoenix and head of a national food bank network called Second Harvest, said of a draft report prepared by the staff of the task force. "I don't see it as something that's ready for approval."

The report contained a proposal to put all federal nutrition programs — including food stamps — into optional block grants to the states, according to a knowledgeable source.

States would be given the option of continuing under the current system, or accepting a block grant containing food stamps, school lunch and breakfast programs and the special feeding program for poor women, infants and children.

That would represent a major change in the giant food stamp program, which generally acts as a leveler to minimize variations in welfare payments among the states. In states with low cash welfare programs, poor people currently can get larger allotments of food stamps.

Jerald Bachman, one of the University of Michigan researchers conducting the survey for the government, said the decline in marijuana use parallels an increase in health concerns associated with smoking pot. Thirty-five percent of the respondents said smoking marijuana was a great health risk in 1978, compared with 60 percent in 1982.

Bachman said the survey indicates that teen-agers today face less peer pressure to smoke marijuana. He said better information about marijuana has helped teenagers realize that the truth is somewhere between the dire warnings of films such as "Reefer Madness" and the "tune in, turn on" message of drug guru Timothy Leary in the 1960s. He said another factor is that young people recognize marijuana "burnout."

"If a kid took a puff and didn't turn into a raving rapist, he thought maybe Timothy Leary was right," Bachman said. "Today, there isn't a high school kid around who hasn't been able to see plenty of people around who are suffering the effects of drug use."

He said that today's teen-agers know that if they smoke marijuana "they're not going to kill anyone or become a crazy rapist. But if they smoke enough of it, they're going to lose interest in school and other activities, and their whole social growth cycle is going to be slowed down."

The surveys and studies offer no consensus on whether teenagers are turning to other drugs, including alcohol, instead of marijuana.

Lawyer is running for county attorney

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland lawyer Mark H. Dettman today announced his candidacy for Midland County attorney.

He will be seeking the Republican nomination for election to that post in the Nov. 6 general election.

"I'm a novice at this particular avenue of politics," he said this morning.

Dettman, 31, first assistant to Midland County Attorney J. Scott Henderson since 1981, cited his experience in the office and his desire to "carry through" with on-going programs. Some of those projects include prosecutions under the new driving-while-intoxicated (DWI) laws, and ensuring the county jail meetsfederal and state standards.

"We've had our problems with the Jail Commission (Texas Commission on Jail Standards), and problems there are getting straightened out," he said.

"I like prosecuting and what I'm doing right now," including handling the county's federal court litigation.

Henderson, who is not seeking re-election, this morning said he is endorsing Dettman.

"Mark is capable and competent. He knows the office. He knows Midland County law better than any attorney in Midland," Henderson, 36, said. "I wholeheartedly support him."

Dettman is the first person to formally announce candidacy for the office. However, another Midland lawyer, Michael L. Williams, who is a prosecutor in the district attorney's office, has indicated he would seek the Republican nomination for county attorney.

Dettman joined the county attorney's staff in October 1981 and was appointed first assistant to Henderson the following month.

Since then, he has been responsible for the prosecution of misdemeanor offenses, such as DWI, assault, theft and drug cases, in Midland County.

In addition, Dettman has handled juvenile and child welfare cases, and commitments for alcohol and other drug abuses. In his role, he represents Midland County in federal civil rights and prisoner suits and represents the county in various state civil actions.

The county attorney is the legal counsel for the Midland County Commissioners' Court.

Prior to coming to Midland, Dettman was a member of the federal organized crime task force in Seattle, Wash.

"I primarily worked organized crime and racketeering," he said, for the U.S. Postal Inspection Sevice. He served in the government from 1979 until September 1981.

Prior to that, he practiced law in Dallas.

Dettman, a native of Dallas, graduated from North Texas State University and the Southern Methodist University School of Law.

Ex-senator says he was framed in Abscam

The U.S. Supreme Court refused to consider Williams' appeal and in November he filed a motion with Pratt.

Williams' motion claimed that portions of the videotape that helped convict him were edited to hurt his case. He also has claimed that the government withheld evidence that would have helped him.

But Pratt said there was no indication that anything that was not videotaped could have made a difference in the jury's decision.

Williams, a liberal Democrat and former chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, was one of seven members of Congress caught up in the Abscam operation. Five of the six others have lost Supreme Court appeals.

Government attorneys have always rejected Williams' claims of entrapment, charging that his appeals raised arguments inconsistent with his trial defense. At his trial, prosecutors said, Williams argued that the videotaped meetings did not incriminate him; but on appeal, they said, he insisted he was coached by FBI informant Mel Weinberg into making incriminating statements recorded by the videotaping machines.

In the Senate, where he was chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Subcomittee, Williams pushed social causes on behalf of migrant laborers, coal miners, the handicapped, women and the elderly. He helped fashion the Occupational Health and Safety Act and sponsored the mass transit assistance program.

According to Senate historians, the last previous senator to be convicted while in office was Truman H. Newberry, R-Mich., on election fraud charges later reversed by the Supreme Court.

Chinese premier to meet with U.S. officials

"They have an interest in so doing," he said. "The Rangoon atrocity underscores just how murderous and serious the North Korean government is."

He added: "I think the Chinese have influence, and it's worth exploring. We certainly intend to do that during the visit."

Premier Zhao is scheduled to confer with President Reagan at the White House on Tuesday and to meet with a number of other top U.S. leaders, including Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

The Chinese leader arrived in Virginia late Sunday and was expected to spend part of today sightseeing at Colonial Williamsburg before flying to Washington this afternoon.

"I think the Chinese are very concerned about what is happening in (North) Korea," Kenneth Leiberthal, a China expert on the political science faculty at the University of Michigan, told reporters last week.

He said the Chinese have indicated their unease in "subtle ways" through "official formulations" on the Korean issue that he said have shown "the first significant changes in years."

"Any move toward common language on the Korean situation would be a major development from this trip," Lieberthal said.

The October bombing in Rangoon killed 21 people, including South Korean Deputy Premier Suh Suk-Joon and Foreign Minister Lee Bum-Suk.

Burma severed diplomatic relations with North Korea over the incident after a trial in which two North Korean army officers were convicted for the murders and sentenced to death.

One of those convicted confessed he had acted under orders from senior North Korean military officers. The North Korea government has denied any such attack was ordered.

Attorney linked to adoption fraud

FORT WORTH (AP) — A California attorney has been linked to an adoption agency accused of defrauding American couples trying to adopt Mexican children, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported in a copyright story.

The newspaper reported Sunday that it had obtained copies of canceled checks that showed Los Angeles attorney Duran Cook deposited money into an account controlled by Bryan Martin Hall of El Paso.

According to a consumer fraud lawsuit filed in June by the Iowa attorney general's office, the bank account was used by Hall, Debbie Tanner of Willcox, Ariz., and Becci Kelley of New Market, Iowa, for deposits of hundreds of thousands of dollars from couples trying to adopt Mexican children.

At least 80 families around the country say an adoption agency run by Hall and Ms. Tanner took their money and never delivered the children as promised.

The FBI, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service and authorities in six states say they are investigating the adoption service.

Cook denied any financial link to the agency. He told the newspaper in a telephone interview that he has been active in adoptions of Mexican children, but said his operation was "completely different" from the one run by Hall and Ms. Tanner.

At least one check mailed by Cook ended up at a Colorado bank and was cashed by Ms. Tanner, the Star-Telegram reported.

The newspaper said the attorney used the name of a fictitious Mexican lawyer as the benefactor of checks when dealing with clients wanting to adopt Mexican children.

The service is sometimes operated under the name, "Casas Para Los Ninos," which means "Homes for the Children" in Spanish, said John Grubb, the police chief of Chase, Kan., who is investigating a complaint from a local couple.

Sources told the newspaper that Cook is being investigated by the California State Bar for his legal work in adoptions involving Mexican children.

"At no time did we ever retain, pay to or in any way reimburse anything (to) Debbie Tanner and Bryan Hall," Cook said.

He said any money linking him with the pair was the result of Hall or Ms. Tanner "diverting" it from its destination — attorneys in Mexico.

"Those checks that you mentioned, if in fact they are real, they were no doubt diverted by either Hall or Tanner," Cook told the Star-Telegram.

He identified Hall as a go-between who picked up the mail at an El Paso post office box and took it across the border.

Neither Ms. Tanner nor Hall could be located for comment.

Cook said he began working with Mexican adoptions about 2½ years ago, through Mexican attorneys referred to him by Ms. Tanner.

"Tanner was retiring and didn't want the whole system of working with American couples to be lost," Cook said. "It turned out after about four months that she in fact decided not to retire."

Cook said he used Ms. Tanner's contacts in Mexico to start his own adoption network, but said his operation is "completely different" from the one run by Ms. Tanner and Hall.

But an Altadena, Calif. woman who said she paid $4,000 to Cook for a baby she never received, said "it was very clear" that Cook was "working through (Ms. Tanner)."

"When I met Cook, he was representing Tanner and Hall," said Jacquie Richman, the director of a California job corps center. "The money he took was for them."

Ms. Richman, who has filed a complaint against Cook with the California State Bar, said Cook wrote her that her $4,000 had been mailed to a "Senor Lopez" in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico. On the back of the canceled checks, "Lopez" had been written, along with the endorsing signature "Bryan Hall."

No end in sight to influx

EL PASO (AP) — Illegal Mexican aliens, looking for relief from devastating economic conditions south of the border, continued streaming into the United States during 1983, along with an increasing number of aliens from Central American nations, federal officials say.

More than one million illegal aliens were arrested along the Mexican border last year, setting a one-year record, according to the Border Patrol. The majority of the arrests were made in Southern California, but increasing numbers of aliens poured across the border into Arizona, New Mexico and Texas, officials said.

Arrests in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California through Dec. 24 had reached 1,053,446, said Duke Austin, spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"There has never been a worse year," Austin said last week.

About 800,000 aliens, almost all of them citizens of Mexico, were arrested in 1982. Those arrested were charged with entering the United States without having presented themselves for inspection at a port of entry. Almost all returned voluntarily to Mexico, sometimes within hours after being released from custody, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

All along the border, patrol agents cite Mexico's economic disarray as the major cause for alien traffic to the north. The buying power of the U.S. dollar has increased five times in Mexico in the past two years because of repeated devaluations of the Mexican peso.

Aliens from Central America and elsewhere also continue to turn up, officials said. About 15,000 illegal aliens from countries other than Mexico were apprehended in Texas during 1983.

"We're expecting an increase in other-than-Mexicans," said Jack Richardson, chief of the patrol's Del Rio sector. "Things haven't gotten any better down in Central America."

Border Patrol agents in Texas and southern New Mexico made almost half of the southern border arrests. A total of 450,499 aliens were arrested in the region, including 210,628 in the sector comprising far West Texas and New Mexico south of Alburquerque.

"As I see it, the situation isn't going to be any better in 1984," said Border Patrol Chief Alan Eliason in El Paso.

"We are still waiting for an immigration law reform bill to pass Congress. Short of that and an increase in our authorized force, the heavy flow should continue," Eliason said.

Austin said the record figure for southern border arrests is being studied because "we really don't know if it's good or bad."

"Staff levels have increased only marginally but we have improved our surveillance technology," Austin said. "So we are doing a better job with the same number of people, and there are more people coming, and more repeaters."

Border Patrol figures show Southern California remained the uncontested arrest leader among the nine patrol sectors on the Mexican border. At Chula Vista, Calif., near San Diego, about 500,000 arrests were made in 1983.

"We make more apprehensions here because the magnet is stronger here," said Bill Veal, acting deputy chief in Chula Vista. "California is a wealthy state with a lot of jobs. People just come here for the opportunity. Mexico doesn't have it."

Another 71,908 aliens were picked up in the El Centro sector of California, the Border Patrol said, while 89,778 were arrested at checkpoints in Arizona.

Records show 239,871 aliens were arrested in four other Texas regions, including 63,538 in McAllen, 69,131 in Laredo, 86,355 in Del Rio, and 20,847 in Marfa.

Suit accuses law enforcement officers in cowboy's death

AMARILLO (AP) — James Grandstaff was "simply trying to protect his wife and children" when he drove into a police stakeout on the ranch where he worked and was gunned down by law enforcement officers, say lawyers representing Grandstaff's family in a $5 million lawsuit.

The trial of the lawsuit was to begin today.

Grandstaff, 31, died Aug. 11, 1981, on the 110,000-acre Four Sixes Ranch, where he lived and worked, about 50 miles northeast of Amarillo.

The civil lawsuit filed by his family contends officers shot Grandstaff, handcuffed him before he died and then tried to "cover up and whitewash this vile murder."

No one has been charged in connection with the death and none of the officers ruled responsible for the shooting was reprimanded.

Borger police had chased Lonnie Cox, wanted on an Oklahoma theft warrant, to the ranch, just off Texas Highway 152 and about 6 miles east of Borger. Cox, wounded in the chase, crashed his pickup and fled on foot.

Lawyers for the family say Grandstaff left his house shortly after 4 a.m. to investigate the commotion, a few hundred yards away from the house.

Mrs. Grandstaff said her husband drove part of the way down the drive, until he realized police were hunting someone in the pasture. He returned to the house to warn his wife to keep the doors locked, Mrs. Grandstaff said.

He then took his rifle and drove his truck to the area where the police cars were parked. He stepped out, without his rifle, and several officers opened with a volley of fire.

Officers later said they thought Grandstaff, driving toward them, was the fugitive Cox.

Grandstaff was struck once in the back, and after he fell to the ground, police officers said in depositions, they handcuffed him behind his back.

Cox later surrendered to an officer passing by on the highway. He pleaded guilty to one count of aggravated assault on a police officer and was assessed 10 years' probation.

A Carson County grand jury convened two weeks after the shooting and ruled that police killed Grandstaff, but it returned no indictments and refused to name the officers involved.

Defendants in the suit, before U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson, are several law enforcement officers, the City of Borger, and Carson, Hutchinson and Gray counties.

Mrs. Grandstaff hired the Houston law firm of noted defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes to file the suit.

The officers named in the suit all deny killing Grandstaff. Four Borger patrolmen admit they fired their weapons at the ground, into the air, or at the victim's pickup but all have denied shooting the man.

Borger lawyer Jody Sheets, representing the city, denies police are responsible for the shooting death.

"We have never conceded that Borger police shot Mr. Grandstaff. ... I don't think I know who shot him. It's not clear to me. ... He was shot by someone — that's all we know," Sheets has said.

Cold weather wasn't as experts predicted

PORT ARANSAS (AP) — Commercial and recreational fishermen along the South Texas coast say the recent record cold snap that killed hundreds of thousands of fish wasn't the disaster that experts thought it would be.

Federal and state observers originally said the freeze could cost the state's fishing industry as much as $300 million. Although the banks of the Laguna Madre are lined with rotting fish, anglers are still hauling in speckled trout and black drum.

"I don't see how it's that much different than before the freeze," George Hull, a commercial fisherman, told the Dallas Times Herald. "We've got beaucoups of fish. Our bays are still loaded with them."

Hull said he hauled in about 800 pounds of black drum on Thursday, about what he was landing before the freeze.

Black drum was one of the most prominent species killed by the Christmas freeze, said C.E. Bryan, director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's shellfish program in Austin. The other two species hardest hit by the freeze were mullet and silver perch, which are used for bait, he said.

Although it's too early to gauge the impact of the freeze, "preliminary indications are it's not as bad as they first thought," said Kenneth Rice, a parks and wildlife employee who was part of a massive state effort to count the washed-up fish.

Bait fishermen have reported an abscence of white shrimp.

Vito Sandoval, 39, a South Padre bait shrimper, said he hadn't caught "a single shrimp" in three trips during a time when he usually brings in an average of 60 to 70 pounds.

"It's too soon to say if it's bad or not," said Sanoval, adding that the shrimp could be burrowed in the mud until the water temperatures rise.

Charter boat captains and tackle dealers are optimistic.

"Right after the freeze our business dropped 75 to 80 percent. It was frightening," said Betty Tubbs, owner of Ed's Fishing Tackle in San Benito.

Texas could recover millions

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials, buoyed by the settlement of a $1.7 billion lawsuit against the Mobil Corp., predict Texas could recover hundreds of millions of dollars from questionable oil and gas leases, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who has been conducting a systematic audit of all state mineral leases, said a preliminary review indicates the existence of "in excess of 25" leases on state land that may be invalid, the newspaper reported.

Attorney General Jim Mattox said Mauro's office has referred two cases, involving Texaco Inc. and Exxon Corp., to him for further action. Mattox said he also is "actively reviewing a number of claims" involving leases on University of Texas lands.

The two cases referred to Mattox involving an Exxon oil and gas lease on the famous King Ranch in South Texas, while the other involves a Texaco lease on a portion of ranch land owned by millionaire Clinton Manges, a key figure in the recent settlement with Mobil.

Mattox, a vocal critic of large oil companies, said that firms which hold lease rights on state land "had better aggressivley carry out the drilling requirements or they will find that their leases will be challenged.

"The state of Texas and private royalty owners have not gotten a fair share of the benefits of the petroleum reserves of this state," Mattox said. "The major companies have gotten a far larger share of the proceeds than what we think they should be entitled to."

Mattox said the crackdown on holder of state leases could mena "hundreds of millions of dollars" for the state treasury.

Trees used for dunes

GALVESTON (AP) — Christmas trees are being staked down on Southeast Texas beaches in an effort to keep the sand dunes from eroding.

"There is so much devastation to the dune system from the hurricane that it was really hard for us to know where to begin this year," said Jan Coggeshall, this city's mayor pro-tem and an organizer of the collection drive.

In nearby Surfside, Betty Clinton said more than 1,000 Christmas trees soon will deck the main beach. The trees were donated by a Houston nursery and hauled to the beach in trucks donated by Dow Chemical Co.

Mrs. Clinton said community volunteers will stake down the trees on Saturday, officially designated Dunes Day.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, January 10, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Rock star Rod Stewart, dancer Ray Bolger and former San Francisco Giants all-star Willie McCovey share this birthday with you. Also born on this date: American Revolutionary War hero Ethan Allen and early movie star Francis X. Bushman. A joyous romance carries you to new heights. A business enterprise could enjoy a dramatic turnaround. Employers realize how valuable you are when you drop hints about a competitor's offer. Be sure to go through channels when requesting a raise. You will reap financial gains from a recent deal. Prepare thoroughly for all meetings and interviews. Good luck accompanies you on trips.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get expert help if buying or selling real estate. You need to be more diplomatic at place of employment. A sudden change in social plans will prove pleasing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Look at the money involved before accepting or rejecting an offer. You must gain mate's cooperation. A recently-formed friendship proves more beneficial than some you have had for years.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Tie up loose ends and you will be much more productive during the remainder of this busy week. An idea you discarded could come back to haunt you in the marketplace.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The emphasis now is on preserving traditions while expanding your circle of friends. Keeping a secret will not be easy. Be strong. Revealing secret information could cost you a business advantage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A colleague's absence could open a slot at the top for you. You get a chance to display your strong leadership qualities. A romance catches fire. Marriage is discussed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A consumer advocate gives you a valuable tip. Be assertive. Contact with a former employer will prove mutually beneficial. Patch up a petty dispute with a loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Now is the time to tackle something you have been avoiding. A good track record puts you in line for a promotion. Resist an urge to gamble. Romance looks promising.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Almost everyone is cooperative -- except for the love of your life! You will soon learn the reason for this mystery. Play a waiting game. Cultivate new friends and clients.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Progress will halt if you get hung up on trivialities. Take a bold approach and others show new respect for your ideas. A relative or neighbor wants to play matchmaker. Be cooperative.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Use the early morning to garner support for a family project or property matter. Timing is the key to success. If your love life has been dull lately, look around.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Weigh all of the pros and cons before proceeding with office or domestic changes. There could be a simple explanation for loved one's behavior. Face up to a difficult decision.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends offer advice and/or financial assistance. Realize that there could be strings attached to the latter. You are very good at helping people overcome their fears. Romance perks up.

ABC tackles incest

NEW YORK (AP) — More than most parents, Steven is reluctant to have his 13-year-old daughter begin dating. His wife, Gail, points out that Amelia "can't climb trees and go bowling with you forever."

Steven, upset that Amelia didn't tell him about going to a dance, asks why she's going with "another boy." Freud would call that a significant slip.

Steven (Ted Danson of "Cheers") is a handsome husband and the father of two girls. Yet he always seems tense. Gail (Glenn Close from "The Big Chill") suggests why:

"I count four weeks," she says of their lack of intimacy.

"Time really flies," he responds.

"Not when you're counting," she says.

Clearly, there is something about Steven.

Tonight, ABC tackles one of television's last taboos — father-daughter incest. "Something About Amelia," done with the utmost care and delicacy, is a very important film.

ABC, which still does its share of male-model movies, also has become the most courageous network filmmaker. Tonight, two months after broadcasting "The Day After" about a nuclear attack on the American Midwest, ABC offers a film that Executive Producer Leonard Goldberg says "is supposed to take us out of the dark and into the light. ... We wanted to do this film because our research showed it was an all-too-common experience."

"We want to show (the children) that there is hope, hope that your problem could be solved," said Goldberg.

Slowly and subtly, viewers will realize that Steven has forced himself on Amelia. They'll perceive it in his self-consciousness, his gazes and his awkwardness. They'll recognize it in Amelia's depression and discomfort around him. Never does "Something About Amelia" get tawdry or sensational. There are no bedroom scenes, nothing intimate whatsoever.

With great pain and difficulty, the blank-faced Amelia (Roxana Zai from "Testament") finally confides in a social worker that "my father's been messing around with me." It began, when she was 11, on a camping trip. She says it became a weekly occurrence.

This information emerges in dialogue, which is typical of this movie's low-key, tasteful approach. To show how and why the incest happened are not its concerns.

The main focus is on the devastation of the family and then, through counseling, how the individuals might someday lead normal lives again.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K83 ♡9 ◇KJ9543 ♣AQ10
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — First, rule out some "clever" bid like one spade — if partner has four spades, he might never let you off the hook. Since you have a full opening bid, your hand merits some jump. We would prefer a better suit for a jump to three diamonds, so the choice is between three clubs and two no trump. We favor three clubs to highlight our club strength and downplay our spade holding.

Q.2 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♡AKQJ105 ◇93 ♣KQJ106
What is your opening bid?

A. — You don't have the high-card strength for an opening bid of two hearts — that could get you too high if partner has a good, but misfitting, hand. As for four hearts, your hand is much too strong for that action. Your only other choice is an opening bid of one heart — you can show your trick-taking strength with a jump shift at your next turn.

Q.3 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J9852 ♡AK83 ◇AK84 adequate.
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	?

What action do you take?

A. — Don't overcall one spade — that action is too unilateral, especially since your spade suit is weak. A double, which asks partner to choose between spades and diamonds, is more flexible. We also suggest that you do not try a cue-bid of two clubs. You don't have the strength for this action and partner might read it as a real suit, rather than a cue-bid.

Q.4 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠976 ♡K8 ◇KQ6 ♣J9872
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Pass

What do you bid now?

A. — You shouldn't respond one no trump without a spade stopper — if the hand is to be played in no trump, partner should declare. It is a close decision between a raise to two clubs and a temporizing bid of one diamond. Back in the old country we were taught to raise with adequate support for partner, and no one will argue that our club support isn't

Q.5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J6 ♡K103 ◇QJ76 ♣Q954
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — Partner's bidding shows a good six-card spade suit and only four hearts. If you leave him to struggle in hearts, he might be forced at the second trick and lose control of the hand. Correct to four spades, your known eight-card fit.

Q.6 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K98652 ♡6 ◇J10 ♣AQ93
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	2 NT
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — Partner has employed the "unusual no trump," asking you to choose between the minor suits. Not only do you have a clear choice, you have a very good hand for partner. As a matter of fact, you have almost enough to bid five clubs. However, we would settle for an invitational jump to four clubs, and allow partner some leeway.

A little better

The nation's unemployment problem is still a very personal one. As such, it hurts and will continue to hurt until just about every person who really wants a job can get one. There's not a lot to be said that will ease that pain.

But for those 9 million or so Americans who are still classified as "jobless," the employment outlook is, at least, a bit brighter than it was a month ago. December's civilian unemployment stood at 8.2 percent — too high for an administration pledged to ensuring that every American who wants a job can get one.

A year ago, though, unemployment stood at 10.7 percent and fears of mass suffering were beginning to surface. The distinction in the figures must be made to indicate that, perhaps, the predictions of forecasters are accurate. They say the economy is showing slow but steady improvement, the type economists agree is longest lasting and most durable.

Texas traditionally has lagged behind the rest of the nation in both economic downturns and upswings. Bryan Richey, regional commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics in Dallas, verified this fact when he said the other day, "A lot of people have been drawn back into the labor force because there has been a lot of good economic news. But we (Texas) trailed the nation going into the recession and we trail it coming out."

It may be small comfort to all those out of work, but perhaps the progress being seen on the economic scene — slow but steady — will mean an enduring recovery, one in which the nation can make some real strides on that road to realization of the dream: A job for everyone seeking it.

Unchanging Castro

Anyone who thinks Cuba's Fidel Castro has changed his communist stripes or become a champion of human rights in recent years is dead wrong. Castro himself made this abundantly clear as he celebrated the 25th anniversary of his takeover from Fulgencio Batista.

In typical Castro fashion he castigated government leaders in the United States as "Nazi-fascist barbarians" who have been "blinded by their own stupidity." Mouthing traditional communist double-talk he tried to hoodwink the world into thinking his regime had succeeded in the past quarter century in making Cuba "truly free." Some of the hundreds he has imprisoned, including critical poets and writers, would like to respond to that.

The tone of Mr. Castro's anniversary speech was not surprising, but it was disappointing to those who had hoped for hints of moderation.

The Cuban dictator obviously is sensitive to charges he is a peddlar of revolutions and a fomenter of trouble in Central America, Africa and elsewhere. He sought to defend his administration and attack President Reagan's by saying:

"Cuba cannot export revolution any more than the United States can impede it."

If the first part of this statement were true, why are there at least 30,000 Cubans in Africa and the Middle East and why are there Cuban soldiers in Nicaragua? As for the second part, Fidel Castro knows full well the United States did some impeding of revolution in Grenada, to the great embarrassment of Fidel Castro.

Clearly the Cuban strongman, a client of the Soviet Union, has not changed in 25 years, which is why the U.S.A. must keep its guard up.

"Car bombs, eh?... Why didn't I think of that?"

Hafez Assad no Syrian St. Nick!

WASHINGTON — One would have liked to be inside the head of Hafez Assad as Jesse Jackson saluted the "moral" and "humanitarian" nature of the Syrian president's release of the American pilot. Was it his sudden transformation in Western image from "virtuoso despot" to an Arab Santa Claus that put a smile on the face of this redoubtable man?

Let us grant there is a time for gushing. But let us quickly return to the real world of Hafez Assad. He was not on hand in the Rose Garden this week to help welcome home Lt. Robert Goodman Jr., but he was the true impresario of the improbable proceedings there.

Assad is in the first instance a leader with all the skill and ruthlessness needed to run a narrowly based police regime in Damascus. Those who are shocked at the suggestion that he would make possible the terrorist asssault on American Marines in Beirut should recall that he has caused to be killed thousands of Syrians in order to secure his rule. We need not be reticent about this performance: having others know of his steel is a requirement of his leadership style.

But Assad is also a powerful figure in his region — he is now "at the power switch of Middle East policy," as Robert G. Neumann puts it in a penetrating article in the latest Foreign Affairs. That forces the United States to deal with him somehow, notwithstanding the way he runs Syria and the prickly and assertive nationalism at the heart of his foreign policy.

The manner in which Assad handled Jesse Jackson is instructive. Damascus had been weighing various scenarios for the American flier's release. One question on its mind was whether to stick with its public condition of an American pledge to halt reconnaissance flights over Syrian positions in Lebanon. In the event, no explicit conditions were imposed. Assad's grasp of American politics is not informed by firsthand knowledge, but he recognized his moment and played the serendipitous instrument of his policy, Jesse Jackson, as if he were a Stradivarius.

For a while anyway, he has obscured Syria's image as the regional spoiler and his own image as the enforcer of the Hama massacre. He has put an undeniable burden on Ronald Reagan not to use further threats or force against Syria without very good cause. He has given a substantial push to the demands in the United States to cut the country's losses and pull American forces out of Lebanon. He did all this, moreover, in a way that left Ronald Reagan smiling bravely and stating a readiness to clear the cluttered American channel to Damascus and to meet personally with Assad.

Virtuoso despot? Virtuoso diplomat fits, too. The result is bound to reinforce the current in American thinking — until now a subordinate current — that sees in Assad not simply a perverse, Soviet-linked antagonist but a potential independent partner in negotiations on Lebanon.

I support this line, but there are high obstacles along the way. Assad's objectives in Lebanon, for instance, include reducing the threat that Israeli forces there pose to Syria and gaining recognition as, at the least, the arbiter of Lebanon's internal affairs. The latter aim cuts across the broad reading of Lebanese sovereignty so far maintained by the government of Amin Gemayel. It is only prudent to expect that Assad will keep demanding that Gemayel abandon his American-brokered May 17 normalization agreement with Israel — the most difficult issue. In short, a negotiation will be tough going.

Nor are Assad's objectives limited to Lebanon. His abiding fear is that Israel will succeed in its strategy — and this is its strategy — of splitting off its Arab neighbors one by one and leaving Syria alone and vulnerable at the end. Robert Neumann suggests that his likely path to a general settlement — if he decided to choose one — would run through a Geneva conference sponsored by Washington and Moscow. That's anathema to Israel and, these days, the United States, and out of the question in the foreseeable future.

Meanwhile, Neumann writes, Assad "will constantly shift tactically between policies of force and of diplomacy, keeping both friends and opponents off balance. He is a master of such tactics."

So we are warned. Our proper course, I think, is to make the most — first of all in Lebanon — of Assad's latest shift to "policies of diplomacy." The United States does not have so many openings in the Middle East that it can afford to skimp even the chanciest of them.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Hoover wanted King replaced

WASHINGTON — As the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. approaches, President Reagan's re-election team is trying to figure out a way to convince the country's blacks that the administration is really dedicated to civil rights.

Jack Anderson

In their desperation the Republicans will consider any suggestion — even the bizarre one offered by Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga. He has advised the president to "invent new black leaders" who will support administration policies.

Crazy as that may sound, the idea was actually tried 20 years ago, not by a political party, but by the autocratic director of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover. He tried to "invent" a black leader to replace King, whom he was determined to destroy. Here's the strong story:

Hoover considered King a dangerous radical, a subversive influence who would tear apart the fabric of American society if he weren't stopped. He detested the black leader more than he loathed any other national figure of that era, with the possible exception of the late Robert Kennedy.

Hoover set out to ruin King. He ordered his agents to tap King's phones, had him kept under constant surveillance and compiled a voluminous file of gossip and half-baked accusations against King.

In his delusion, Hoover was confident not only that he could destroy King, but that he could even choose his successor. He made his selection and ordered his No. 3 man, William Sullivan, to conduct a secret investigation of Hoover's candidate.

Sullivan told my associate Les Whitten about his weird assignment not long before he died in a 1977 hunting accident. Over steaming bowls of homemade soup at his home in Sugar Hill, N.H., Sullivan still expressed wonderment that Hoover thought he had enough power to pick King's successor once the black leader had been disgraced.

The man Hoover picked was a former prosecutor and judge who at the time was with a prestigious New York law firm. He had graduated with honors and earned his law degree at Cornell, done advance studies at Yale and gotten a master's degree in tax law at New York University.

Hoover's candidate had been a tough assistant district attorney and a capable assistant U.S. attorney for the southern district of New York. A law school professor, he had done stints with the Labor Department and a House Judiciary subcommittee. An important point: He had done enough civil rights work to earn the respect at least of moderate blacks.

Hoover, Sullivan recalled, was "bowled over" by the happy results of the investigation. But the old man was canny enough not to approach his choice, knowing it would taint him in the eyes of civil rights leaders.

Instead, using the same undercover techniques with which he hoped to destroy King, Hoover planned to use FBI contacts in and outside the civil rights movement to build support for his candidate without the FBI's hand showing, Sullivan said.

Hoover died without ever telling his nominee what he had been plotting in the man's behalf. It was only when President Reagan named him secretary of Housing and Urban Development that Samuel Riley Pierce learned of his peculiar "honor."

The supreme irony occurred a few days ago. King's widow, Coretta, notified Pierce that he had been chosen by the Martin Luther King Center for Non-Violent Social Change to receive a genuine honor. The man J. Edgar Hoover wanted to "invent" as a black leader will get the Martin Luther King Award this year as the person who best fulfills King's zeal for social justice.

KREMLIN COMPUTER RAID — The recent interception of sophisticated American computers headed for the Soviet Union demonstrates the Kremlin's continuing efforts to acquire sophisticated Western technology.

A secret Pentagon report states the problem bluntly: "The highly coordinated Soviet effort is essentially a raid on our technology base. The Soviets gain access to Western technology through a variety of channels, both legal and illegal. Under the guise of purchases for benign civilian uses, the Soviets have obtained a wide range of equipment and technological know-how critical to their military program."

CONFIDENTIAL FILE — Syria has a long history of making its neighbors nervous. The Syrians' operations in Lebanon have roused misgivings not only in Israel, but among Arab states as well: Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Egypt. All but overlooked is Syria's neighbor to the north, Turkey. But the Turks are reportedly upset at the speed and extent of the Syrians' rearmament by the Soviet Union. Syria now has more tanks than Turkey does, for example.

Jack Anderson writes for United Feature Syndicate.

Another View:

Give Jackson credit

If Jesse Jackson had not gone to Damascus, Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr. would undoubtedly still be counting the days in Syrian internment, a prisoner of war to be held until the United States abandons its military presence in Lebanon. Give full credit to the Jackson mission, then, for expediting the release of the Navy flier.

Why Syrian dictator Hafez Assad chose to give Goodman his freedom now is a matter for conjecture. Though Jackson possesses considerable oratorical powers, it is highly improbable that Assad's heart was softened or Syria's intentions altered through any flow of eloquence.

Jackson's praise of Assad for his "humanitarian" action is best seen as an example of courtesy, not a matter of accuracy. As anyone knows who regularly follows events in Syria or who has read Amnesty International's latest report on human-rights conditions there, humanitarianism in any manifestation is a concept wholly alien to the Damascus regime.

Obviously political calculations were uppermost in the Syrian decision to turn Goodman over to Jackson. The most generous interpretation is that Assad was sending a signal to Washington hinting at a new conciliatory stance. More likely, since Assad feels that he is within an inch of getting what he wants in Lebanon anyway, Goodman's release at this time was Assad's way of removing a possible impediment to the American military pullout that a growing consensus in the United States favors.

A less generous but probably more credible interpretation is that Assad simply saw another chance to stick his thumb in the administration's eye, and seized it. The U.S. government tried for nearly a month through diplomatic channels to get Goodman released. Then came Jackson, a private citizen, albeit a Democratic presidential candidate, with his offensive suggestion early on that if Goodman had not been black the administration would be working far harder for his freedom. Syria's release of Goodman to Jackson hardly validates that assertion. But it does perhaps give the Syrians the chance to make some further mischief with it.

Syria's political motives are, for the moment, of far less interest than the human result of the Jackson mission. Lt. Goodman is free, and apparently well, and headed home. And for that all Americans can give thanks.

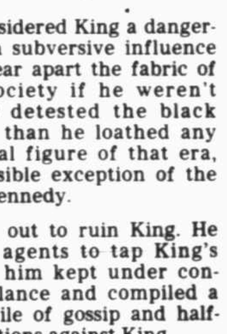
INSIDE REPORT:

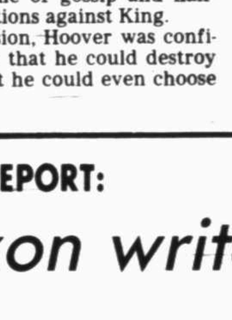
Nixon writer penning for Henry

WASHINGTON — As Chairman Henry A. Kissinger tries to get President Reagan's Central American commission to agree on a report before the Jan. 10 deadline, the final writing and editing are being done by one of Richard M. Nixon's most skillful speech- and ghostwriters.



Rowland Evans

Kissinger has quietly slipped Ray Price into the commission's closed-door deliberations to whip the report into shape. Price, regarded as one of the most liberal aides in the Nixon White House, remained a staunch defender of the former president well beyond Watergate and helped him write his memoirs. Since then he has been a high-priced speechwriter for retired CBS chief William Paley.



Robert Novak

Price's most difficult editing chore may be the economics section drafted by Columbia Professor Carlos Diaz-Alejandro, whose appointment to the commission was sharply criticized by conservatives. Inside the commission, Rep. Jack Kemp wants more free market and less of Diaz-Alejandro's planned economy.

HIGH-TAX STOCKMAN

In a closed-door session with Republican congressmen Jan. 4, budget director David Stockman showed he is less visible than economic adviser Martin Feldstein but no less militant in undercutting President Reagan's no-tax-increase stand.

What was billed as a private briefing on the new budget turned into a tax-hike appeal by Stockman. He painted the most pessimistic picture of future budget deficits. While giving lip service to spending cuts, Stockman made clear only tax increases could solve the problem.

Otherwise, a gloomy Stockman told the Republican House members, a post-election recession is guaranteed in 1985. That precisely matches forecasts routinely delivered on the campaign stump by Democratic presidential hopefuls.

IOWA DEEP FREEZE

Sen. John Glenn's hopes of overtaking front-runner Walter F. Mondale in Iowa or even finishing a respectable second there dipped when his pollsters reported that 39 percent of the Democrats likely to attend state caucuses Feb. 20 favor a U.S. nuclear weapons freeze even if the Soviets do not join.

Such a unilateral freeze is favored by only 16 percent of probable Democratic voters in New Hampshire, whose primary will be held eight days after the Iowa caucuses. The comparable figure for Alabama, Glenn's strongest hope in the early primary states, is 10 percent.

Iowa, therefore, looks dangerous for Glenn, considering his perceptibly harder line than Mondale on arms control. In fact, an ardent freezer, such as Sen. Alan Cranston, conceivably could sneak into second place ahead of Glenn.

WICK STAYS HOME

Charles Z. Wick, the normally workaholic but currently embattled director of the U.S. Information Agency, stayed home from work the entire first week of the new year — generating doubt among USIA employees about his prospects for survival.

Wick and his wife, Mary Jane, are such good friends of Ron and Nancy Reagan that there will be no White House pressure for him to quit. Nevertheless, USIA insiders wonder how he can survive the leakage of his taped telephone conversations with unsuspecting callers that include the new chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Rep. Dante Fascell of Florida.

A footnote: Wick's departure could open a Washington-based job for Jeane Kirkpatrick, who for some time has wanted to quit as ambassador to the United Nations. But more likely successors would be State Deparment counselor Ed Derwinski (the former longtime Republican congressman of Illinois) or Voice America Director Ken Tomlinson.

MOSCOW'S IRANIAN HAND

Public trials dealing with alleged communist penetration of the Iranian armed forces have produced credible evidence of Soviet control over eight army colonels (the highest military rank in the Ayatollah Khomeini's Iran) plus the commander in chief of the navy.

These nine senior officers are the tip of the iceberg: the Kremlin's effort to assume clandestine control over Iran's armed forces. All of the accused are members of the Tudeh Party, the Iranian communist faction that takes its orders directly from Moscow. Despite significant revelations, the show trials have been all but ignored by the Western news media.

Parole violaters apparently kill themselves after fierce shootout

ELMIRA, N.Y. (AP) — Two parole violaters apparently killed themselves after a fierce shootout that left one policeman dead and two others wounded, but authorities waited 12 hours before sending in a robot to confirm the deaths, officials said.

The shooting in a public housing project began at about 5 a.m. Sunday, after a taxi driver alerted police that two men had hijacked his cab in another town 60 miles away and forced him to drive to this south-central New York town.

Police evacuated the 60 to 70 units in the project before three officers entered a darkened apartment building, where a "very heavy gunbattle" broke out, said Elmira Police Chief Thomas J. Donnells.

Two officers were wounded as they entered the building and the third, Sgt. John Hawley, 40, was shot to death as he climbed through a window into the first-floor apartment. Police returned fire with shotgun blasts and tear gas grenades, Donnells said.

At 5 p.m., after waiting throughout the day for some communication from inside the three-story brick building, a remote controlled robot flown in from New York City entered the building and sent back television pictures showing the two men in the bathroom, both dead.

"It looked like one had committed suicide and it looked to me like the other one did, too," said New York City Deputy Chief John Lowe.

Donnells refused to speculate on how the two men died, but said that "one of the victims was found in a sitting position and an apparent sawed-off shotgun was across his lap as he sat there."

Chemung County Medical Examiner Edward Droleski identified one of the gunmen as Frank Folnsbee, 22, of nearby Horseheads.

Authorities believed the other was Jerry Mitchell, 22, of New York City, but dental and fingerprint charts will be needed for positive identification, Chemung County District Attorney James Hayden said.

Both men were wanted on parole violation warrants, according to Hayden. He said police believed they had holed up in the apartment of a female acquaintance of one of the men.

The wounded policemen, Investigator Frank Marrone, 40, and Officer Daniel Collins, 38, taken to local hospitals where Marrone was listed in fair condition and Collins in good condition today.

Police said the incident began at about 8 p.m. Saturday in Binghamton when cab driver Edward Gould was taken hostage at gunpoint and ordered to drive to Elmira.

Near Elmira, the gunmen tied Gould to a tree at about 9 p.m. Gould said he freed himself and called police an hour later.

Officers noticed the cab, with its identifying marks painted over, at the Jones Court housing project about midnight, police said.

Donnells said authorities waited before deciding to enter the building the first time because, although officers "had nothing in concrete," they had reason to believe the men "had acquired various items — sawed-off shotguns, a police scanner and bulletproof vests."

He said police finally risked the shootout because they "had good reason to believe (the gunmen) did not have hostages" and because there was a chance the men would "seize some residents and cause us infinitely more problems."

Donnells said both men were wearing bulletproof vests and had shotguns when they were found.

Jackson wants Arab-American voters as new color in 'Rainbow'

DETROIT (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson is hoping for as much success in wooing Arab-American voters for his "Rainbow Coalition" as the longshot Democratic contender had in winning the release of an American pilot held in an Arab country.

Jackson, whose relationship with Jewish voters important to Democratic politics is rocky, told more than 700 Arab-Americans on Sunday night that the United States can be an example for peace in the world.

"We can live together in Detroit — black and brown and white, Arab and Jew. We can do it in the Middle East as well," Jackson said.

Jackson talked of his trip last week to Syria that won freedom for Navy Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr., and his visit to Palestinian refugee camps there.

"The children in the camps must see America as the country that feeds the hungry and clothes the poor," the black presidential hopeful said, "not the country of ships and bombs."

Jackson has had problems with Jewish Democrats, for he has met with Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat and made statements that some have called anti-Israel. Jackson denies any bias.

Jackson picked up $10,000 in contributions at the Islamic Center of America meeting, according to Harold Sadham, a Detroit businessman who presented him with the money.

Jackson's campaign put together its biggest rally thus far on Sunday, gathering 6,500 people in this majority black city for singing, cheering and speeches.

Jackson told the crowd at the sports arena at the University of Detroit that President Reagan's policies have been a disaster.

"There is a darkness throughout the land. Reagan has cast a giant shadow across the land," Jackson said. "Schools are being closed while jails are being built."

The rally also featured singer Aretha Franklin and Rosa Parks, whose refusal to go to the back of the bus in Montgomery, Ala., in 1955 sparked civil rights action in the South.

"When I see Rev. Jackson, I felt that much of the suffering I endured in the South was not in vain," Ms. Parks told the crowd.

Official: Release won't alter relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top State Department official says Syria's release of Navy flier Robert Goodman to the Rev. Jesse Jackson is not likely to affect U.S. diplomatic relations with that country.

"With regard to the specific situation today in the Middle East, with regard to Syria, I don't see that it has any necessary implications. We viewed it and Rev. Jackson viewed it, as he said publicly, as a humanitarian gesture," Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth W. Dam said Sunday on the NBC-TV program "Meet the Press."

"That being so, it doesn't have any implications, but we welcome it."

GOP consultant: Female VP unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consultant to President Reagan's re-election campaign says it's unlikely that a woman will be selected as the Democratic vice presidential nominee this year.

"I don't think there is a woman out there on the Democratic side who's going to add that much to the Democratic ticket," Lyn Nofziger, a longtime Reagan associate and former White House political director, said in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

"While there are a lot of vociferous Democratic women out there, I think you will find that all the really outstanding women in politics in this country are in the Republican Party," Nofziger added.

He specifically mentioned Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, whom Reagan nominated. United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick wouldn't qualify for Nofziger's list — although she's a Reagan appointee, she's a conservative Democrat.

If Reagan wasn't committed to keeping Vice President George Bush as his running mate, Nofziger said a woman undoubtedly would be considered.

However, Nofziger said, "Because there's been a lot of agitation in some quarters for a woman vice president, it doesn't mean there's necessarily a woman out there who'll do more for you than some individual man would," Nofziger said.

1988 may be a different story, according to Nofziger, who devotes two days a week to the president's re-election campaign, without pay.

"If you look ahead four years to whoever the Republican nominee for president is, I think you'll find him probably giving very serious consideration to that," Nofziger said.

Reagan to replace woman with woman

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, eager to repair image problems among women, will have a chance in the next few weeks to appoint only the second woman in the 70-year history of the Federal Reserve Board.

And he's almost sure to do just that, according to administration officials, private economists and others.

Nancy Hays Teeters, appointed by then-President Carter as the Federal Reserve's first female governor in 1978, is scheduled to finish her term Jan. 31. Since she is considered the board's most liberal member, there is virtually no chance Reagan will reappoint her, as he did Fed Chairman Paul Volcker last summer.

There are plenty of names flying around concerning a possible replacement. But none that White House officials are willing to pick out as the favorite, even off the record. The appointee's sex, however, apparently is not in doubt.

"I don't see how, given the political difficulties the president has found himself in with women, he could replace the only female governor with anyone other than another female governor," said Thomas Thomson, a former Fed economist who is now chief economist for Crocker National Bank in San Francisco.

Reagan officials are less willing to talk about any role politics might play in choosing someone to work on critical monetary policies. But they are aware of polls indicating less support for the president among women than among men.

M.L. King honored at gala

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a building named for one American martyr, the memory of another, Martin Luther King Jr., was honored by black and white performers with a musical tribute to be shared with the nation during his birthday fete next weekend.

Even though the Kennedy Center seats sold for $100 to $2,500, a black-tie audience Sunday night patiently endured the false starts and restarts of a television taping and cheered after four hours, when blind singer Ray Charles, wearing a blazing red shirt, sat at the piano keyboard with a wave and a grin. He performed a tribute of his own composition to "my old friend Martin."

Sang Charles: "I looked around one day and he was gone — he was gone."

The show, dubbed a "docutainment," told the civil rights leader's life story in song and dance, interspersed with spoken biography.

It was the first endeavor of a new black enterprise, Televancers, Inc. of Chicago, which said the production — to be trimmed to two hours — has been sold to 107 television stations for showing next weekend.

Televancers said it would share some of the profits with the financially ailing Martin Luther King Center for Non-Violent Social Change in Atlanta but the firm's officials were vague on how much the center will realize.

Lee places four players on 5A all-state

Midland Lee High's state 5A football finalists landed an unprecedented four players on the Texas 5A All-State team picked by the Texas Sports Writers' Association and yet another player on the second unit of the dream team.

In all, District 4-5A placed 10 men on the first and second units, proof that West Texas has regained its role as one the Lone Star state's most productive areas for college talent.

Isaac Garnett, who wiped out all Midland Lee rushing records, gaining more than 1,000 yards, was named at running back on the offensive team and Coy Stewart made it at down lineman.

On defense, linebacker Michael Johnson and defensive back Andre Mayfield were picked from Midland Lee.

Odessa Permian's Rex Lamberti was named as the offensive quarterback and Britt Hager of Permian joined Lee's Johnson at one of the linebacker positions.

Defensive end Eddie Kittle of Lee was picked on the second team while joining the 200-pound senior from 4-5A were Odessa running back Charles Hunter, Big Spring lineman Danny Arista and Odessa punter Brad Cowan.

Odessa Permian won the 4-5A title, but suffered a regular season and playoff loss to runner up Midland Lee, which then went on to the state 5A finals before losing to preseason favorite Converse Judson, 25-21.

Judson's Chris Pryor, who rewrote state rushing records at the 5A level, joined Lee's Garrett in the offensive backfield. Both are seniors.

The five honorees from Lee were the most ever for the Rebels and the 10 selections on all-state is a 4-5A high for the last two decades.

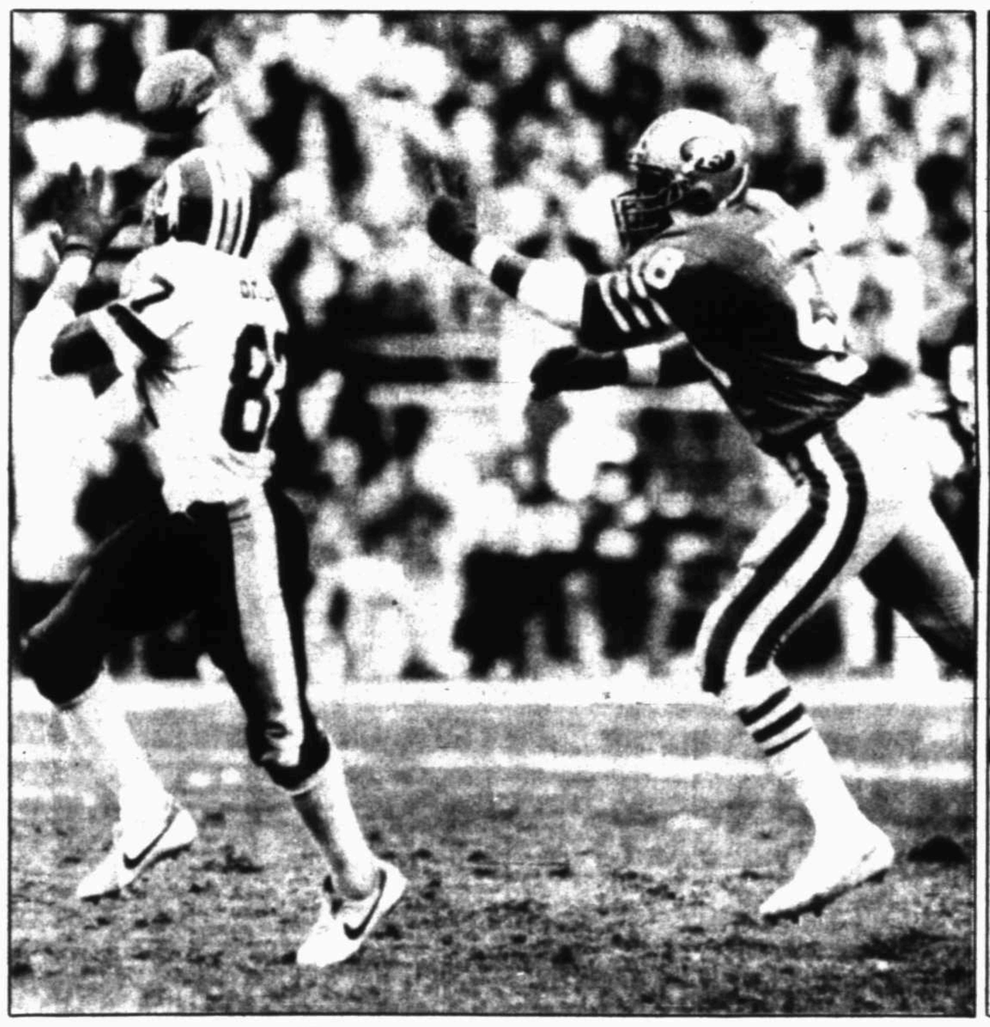
Off-the-Mark Moseley saves 'Skins, 24-21



AP Laserphoto

Washington Redskins' wide receiver Charlie Brown has two step jump on 49ers' Keena Turner as he reaches for a fourth quarter pass from Joe Theismann. The steps turned into a touchdown, photo right, as he outlegs safety Dwight Hicks (22) to the end zone. Skins won, 24-21, on Mark Moseley field in final seconds of the NFC championship game.

Controversy swirls around last drive

By GARY POMERANTZ
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Domination almost became expiration for the Washington Redskins Sunday at RFK Stadium here.

But kicker Mark Moseley, who had missed on his first four field-goal tries, sent a 25-yarder over the crossbar with 40 seconds left — and sent his team into the Super Bowl with a 24-21 victory over the San Francisco 49ers in the NFC title game.

So now the Redskins will play the Los Angeles Raiders in Super Bowl XVIII on Jan. 22 in Tampa, Fla., having successfully escaped disaster before 55,363 at RFK.

"The greatest spectacle created by man," quarterback Joe Theismann gushed of the Super Bowl. History befriends the Redskins in that, of the five previous defending champions who returned to the Super Bowl, four won it again. Only Dallas failed to repeat against Pittsburgh in Super Bowl XIII.

"This is V-J Day for the Pearl Harbor Crew. Get ready. We'll be landing in the bay at Tampa," said strong safety Curtis Jordan, whose unit faced 48 passes by San Francisco's resourceful Joe Montana. The 49ers' quarterback passed 26 times of his 31 second-half plays. He threw three touchdown passes in the final quarter to erase the Redskins' 21-0 lead.

However, these Redskins carry emotions mixed by the gracious fact that they are 16-2 with an 11-game winning streak and the grim fact that they allowed the 49ers to rally back to equilibrium.

"I don't think we had anything left at the end," Coach Joe Gibbs said. "But our guys responded. They came through."

"I REALLY DIDN'T hit it worth a lick," Moseley said of his game-winner, speaking to more than 100 reporters. Earlier, he had misfired from 45 yards, 34, 38 and 41. "That field was atrocious, but I'm not going to use that as an excuse. Our timing was off."

The 49ers, without a timeout remaining, were reduced to four desperation passes after Moseley's field goal. The last heave ended up in the arms of cornerback Vernon Dean at the Redskins' 35.

The 49ers (11-7) were smoldering in the end. Their anger was not generated by the fact that Redskins running back John Riggins got 123 yards and two short touchdowns on 36 carries, which tied his title game record number of rushes last season. Riggins also extended his record to six straight playoff games with 100 yards rushing.

Nor were the 49ers angered so much by the fact that Theismann hit wide receiver Charlie Brown for a 70-yard touchdown pass over the middle for that 21-0 edge with 16 minutes to play.

Rather, the 49ers, who outgained the Redskins 425 yards to 410, were angered by two critical penalties assessed to their defensive backs during the Redskins' final drive, which swept 78 yards on 13 plays (nine Riggins runs) in that same ol' laborious ball-control manner. The drive consumed 6:28 and, in the end, it consumed the 49ers, too.

"Right now, I'm bitter about the officials' calls at the end of the game," said San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh. Asked about the Redskins' final drive, Walsh said, "Final drive? Their final drive was two penalties."

THE FIRST penalty was assessed to right cornerback Eric Wright, for interfering with wide receiver Art Monk on a pass route deep down the left sideline. This second-down incompletion became a 27-yard gain to the San Francisco 18 due to the penalty.

The 49ers contested the pass wasn't catchable and therefore no penalty should have been called. "(It) could not have been caught by a 10-foot professional basketball player," Walsh said. Monk said he wasn't sure if he could have caught it.

Three plays later, the second penalty was assessed to left cornerback Ronnie Lott. On third and five from the 13, Theismann threw incomplete to wide receiver Alvin Garrett, who was in the corner of the end zone. Lott wasn't even near Garrett; he was in the middle of the field and was penalized for holding Brown at the eight, which is where the ball was placed, first and goal.

"It was disgusting to see the refs make a call like that, just disgusting," said Lott. Brown said he was held.

Third time charm

Raiders' defense stops Seahawks

By ALAN GREENBERG
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — AFC rushing champion Curt Warner spent his rookie NFL season running in the fast lane. But Sunday, the Raiders grabbed Warner and the upstart Seattle Seahawks and unceremoniously dumped them on the side of the road, battery dead, tires slashed, Super Bowl dreams dashed.

The Seahawks, who had never made the playoffs before in their eight-year history, were this season's Cinderella team. Having beaten the turnover-plagued Raiders both times in the regular season, they came to the Coliseum to play them in the AFC championship game to see if the glass slipper fit.

The Raiders grabbed it and broke it over their heads, coasting to a 30-14 win and a berth opposite the NFC champion Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XVIII in Tampa, Fla., Jan. 22. The Redskins and Raiders met once during the regular season, the Redskins staging a dramatic come-from-behind 37-35 win at RFK Stadium Oct. 2.

But the Raiders played the defending Super Bowl champions that day without Marcus Allen (sore hip), roughly the equivalent of fighting with one hand tied behind your back.

UNLESS ALLEN GETS mauled by well-wishers between now and then, he'll be ready this time. And Allen, who shredded the Seahawks for a season-high 154 yards rushing and 62 more yards on seven pass receptions, understands as well as anyone what his presence means.

"I don't want to sound conceited," Allen said. "But if I have a good game, it opens up things for everyone else."

Sunday, it opened up a clear path all the way to Tampa and the Raiders' fourth trip to the Super Bowl (they've won two) in the franchise's history. Their last appearance was three years ago at New Orleans in Super Bowl XV, when they beat the Philadelphia Eagles.

Then they were Oakland's Raiders. Now they're Los Angeles'. But the Raiders by any name were a lot more than the Seahawks could handle Sunday.

Three years ago, the thought of the Seahawks in the AFC championship game was laughable. But nobody was laughing this time, certainly not the Denver Broncos and Miami Dolphins, whom the Seahawks beat to get here.

BUT THE RAIDERS, who lost to the Seahawks, 38-36 and 34-21, two weeks apart in late October, committing 13 turnovers to the Seahawks' two in the process, said Sunday's championship game would be different. And Warner, who was held to 26 yards on 11 carries Sunday after gaining 74 and 101 yards in earlier wins over the Raiders, would be the last person on earth to disagree.

Both teams knew the outcome would hinge on whether the Raiders could stop Warner, the Penn State rookie sensation.

"They live and die by him," said Raiders inside linebacker Matt Millen.

Sunday, they died. The Raiders defense, healthy, hungry and hellacious, limited Warner to 18 net yards on nine carries as the Raiders scored 17 second-quarter points to build a 20-0 halftime lead, outgaining the Seahawks, 226 yards to 16.

Warner, who gets most of his yardage on cutbacks against overpursuing defenses, might as well have been running in a phone booth. The Raiders stayed in their lanes, and every time Warner took a detour, he hit another roadblock.

His long gain in the first half: four yards.

Moseley finally makes one

And it turned out to be the game-winning field goal. Mark Moseley, who had been misfiring all afternoon on field goal attempts, booted the deciding three-pointer seconds from the end to give Washington a 24-21 win over San Francisco in the NFC championship.

Madison Square Garden may give way to an office building.

Cage Mecca may be doomed

NEW YORK (AP) — Madison Square Garden, the longtime "Mecca of College Basketball" and home to two of the city's dwindling number of professional sports teams, may be converted into an office building, state and Garden officials have confirmed.

"Some months ago, the people from Gulf & Western (owners of the Garden) and I chatted," Gov. Mario Cuomo said Sunday. "We discussed the possibility of the professional teams staying in New York City but playing at another location so Gulf & Western could take advantage of the valuable property that is the Garden."

A spokesman for Gulf & Western Corp., which owns the National Hockey League's New York Rangers and the National Basketball Association's New York Knicks, confirmed the conglomerate was considering relocating the teams.

"We are continually evaluating alternate sites, but only in New York City," said Jerry Sherman, public relations head of the corporation, when contacted at Saturday night's Knicks-Indiana Pacers game at the Garden. "Our commitment is to New York City."

Sherman said reports that the Garden would be razed remained "rumors and speculation" at this time. Gulf & Western proposed in discussions with city officials that the teams would like to play in a sports complex built under the direction of the state Urban Development Corp., a Cuomo spokesman said.

Cuomo said if the decision was made to move the two franchises, the state would do everything possible to keep the teams playing in New York.

"We should not finish this century without this area having a great number of professional teams," Cuomo said on the WCBS-TV "Newsmakers" program. "Over the years, we've lost the Dodgers from Brooklyn, the Giants and Jets to the Meadowlands. That's wrong. We've done something wrong."

Cuomo stressed that the proposal was only in the discussion stages and nothing concrete has been set up.

Forests don't bother Dream

By Associated Press

Opponents keep putting up a small forest of people around Akeem "The Dream" Olajuwon, but the Houston Cougars manage to win without explosive point outbursts from their 7-foot center.

Houston won its 26th consecutive Southwest Conference basketball game Saturday night with a hard-earned 81-67 victory over hot-shooting Texas Christian and Olajuwon was held to 12 points. Against Southern Methodist 48 hours earlier, he only made 14.

Olajuwon made his presence felt with 21 rebounds and 2 blocked shots as Michael Young with 22 points and Alvin Franklin with 18 picked up the scoring load.

"We had trouble again getting the ball inside," said Houston coach Guy V. Lewis. "It seems nobody is going to let Akeem score this year. Godzilla couldn't score if you put every man around him.

"The other guys are going to have to pick up the slack."

SWC Basketball

In other SWC games Saturday, Arkansas and Texas Tech joined Houston atop the league-ladder with 2-0 records.

Arkansas stopped Texas A&M 77-54 in Fayetteville, and Texas Tech handed Texas its 13th straight SWC defeat 74-47 in the Super Drum in Austin.

Southern Methodist bounced back from Thursday night's one-point loss to Houston by defeating the scrappy Rice Owls 70-61 in Dallas.

Guard Dennis Nutt scored a career-high 36 points, including 24 in the second half, for TCU as it gave the Cougars a scare.

Nutt hit 16 of 24 field goal attempts and was 4-of-5 from the charity stripe.

In Dallas, SMU Coach Dave Bliss was so disappointed with the Mustangs' shaky two-point halftime lead that he dented a trashcan with a swift kick.

The Mustangs got the point and rolled past the Owls in the second half.

"We lost a close game to Houston and it was only natural that we had a letdown," said Bliss. "We didn't play that bad."

Sophomore Terrence Cashaw scored a career-high 17 points but SMU center Jon Koncak did even better, making a career-high 27 points.

Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers stresses tough defense and the Red Raiders held Texas to seven field goals in the second half.

"We played terrible and the good thing is that we have a real breather Tuesday against Houston," said Texas Coach Bob Weltlich.

On Wednesday, Baylor is at Texas A&M and Rice is at TCU.

SMU is at Arkansas Thursday for a regional television game while Houston travels to Texas Tech.

The Saturday schedule finds Texas at Rice, Houston at A&M, Arkansas at TCU and SMU at Baylor.

NCAA studies grid playoff

DALLAS (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association's Postseason Football Committee has appointed a four-member subcommittee to study the feasibility of a major-college national championship playoff.

Milo R. Lude, committee chairman and athletic director at the University of Washington, made the announcement Sunday after his committee met in conjunction with the NCAA's 78th annual convention, which begins Monday.

Lude said the subcommittee would "explore the ramifications of a Division I-A championship" and submit a preliminary report at the full committee's next meeting in Kansas City, Mo., April 10-12.

He said the subcommittee would look into the possibility of lost classroom time, the attitude of faculty senates at different schools, etc.

A recent CBS-TV poll of coaches at 101 of the 105 Division I-A schools indicated that 57 percent favored such a playoff with 37 percent opposed and 6 percent undecided.

Division I-A football is the only NCAA sport which does not decide its national championship on the playing field.

There have been reports that the NCAA might turn to a playoff as a major source of revenue if the U.S. Supreme Court upholds a lower court ruling that overturned the NCAA's $281.5 million television package with ABC, CBS and Turner Broadcasting.

MC claims consolation; Crane wins

Midland Christian captured the consolation title in the Grandfalls-Royalty Invitational with a 50-49 overtime victory over Marathon as Wallace scored 13 points to lead the Mustangs.

In the championship game, Wink (Jacobson 17) defeated Rankin (Shields and Wright 11), 53-41.

In the Big Lake tournament, Crane (K. Walker 24) defeated Greenwood (Troy Wallace 21), 61-48, in the title game. The Rangers (Wallace 21) downed Kermit 55-51, to reach the finals while the Cranes (G. Walker 21) won over Colorado City, 59-53, in the other semifinal.

Reagan County won the consolation title over McCamey, 41-34, as Wiliams scored 12 for the winners and Kennedy 10 for the losers.

Greenwood's Chad Longley, Crane's Kenny Walker, Gus Walker and Jim Vasquez and Reagan's Bubby Harris were all-tournament picks.

Wake Forest, Virginia upset victims in ACC play

By Associated Press

Wake Forest and Virginia are among the nation's Top Twenty basketball teams, but they can't always pull rank in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

In a pair of upsets Saturday reminiscent of the annual ACC playoffs, the eighth-ranked Demon Deacons were beaten 68-66 by Georgia Tech and the 20th-ranked Cavaliers lost 78-72 to Duke.

The Yellow Jackets pulled out their game on Scott Petway's jumper with three seconds left on a busted play.

"I heard the coaches yelling at me to get the ball to (Mark) Price, but he was too well covered, so I dribbled the ball around, watched the clock and took the shot," Petway said of the winning basket that snapped Wake Forest's nine-game winning streak.

Johnny Dawkins' 20 points led Duke. The loss snapped Virginia's 14-game home winning streak over two seasons and was only the second defeat in the last 50 games at home for the Cavaliers, playing for the first time in four seasons without Ralph Sampson.

In other games involving the Top Twenty, No. 1 North Carolina whipped No. 12 North Carolina State 81-60; No. 2 Kentucky trimmed No. 9 Louisiana State 96-80; No. 4 Georgetown stopped Seton Hall 74-63; No. 5 Maryland downed William & Mary 58-44; No. 6 UCLA defeated Arizona 61-58; No. 7 Houston beat TCU 81-67, and No. 10 Texas-El Paso walloped Air Force 72-50.

No. 13 St. John's beat Providence 57-52; 14th-ranked Illinois nipped Wisconsin 63-62 in overtime; No. 16 Fresno State whipped Pacific 65-47; 17th-ranked Boston College beat Villanova 74-63; 18th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas walloped New Mexico State 87-66, and No. 19 Memphis State edged Tulane 67-65.

College Basketball

Top Ten

Georgia Tech trailed most of the game before tying the score at 64 with 2:50 left on Yvon Joseph's jumper. Wake Forest regained the lead on Danny Young's two free throws, but Joseph got the Yellow Jackets even at 66 with a hook shot before Petway hit the game-winner.

Duke led 40-29 at halftime but Virginia battled back to tie at 44 on a jumper by Jim Miller with 13:38 left. But following six ties and four lead changes over the next eight minutes, the Blue Devils used an 11-2 run to take control of the game. Mark Alarie, who scored 16 points for the Blue Devils, sank two free throws, putting Duke ahead for good 64-63 with 4:35 remaining.

"A victory (in the ACC) is worth much more than being ranked," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski. "We're so pleased to win in the ACC. Our mental toughness is a little bit better" this season than last.

Sam Perkins scored 22 points, leading North Carolina's rout of North Carolina State. The Tar Heels pulled away in the second half after leading 34-31 at intermission.

Mel Turpin hit a season-high 35 points and game-high 13 rebounds, anchoring an awesome front line in powering Kentucky past LSU.

St. Ann's wins

St. Ann's defeated Trinity, 24-23, and Odessa Christian downed Midland Christian, 28-8, in girls basketball action while Trinity won over St. Ann's, 18-14, and Midland Christian took the measure of Odessa Christian, 26-20, in the boys division.

Skins back in Super

None of the game officials could be reached for comment, but a National Football League spokesman said Sunday night films of the game would be reviewed by league officials this week and a statement would be issued if necessary.

Theismann, who completed 14 of 26 for 229 yards, said he broke custom and didn't say anything to Moseley before the last kick. "I said something the first four times, so I figured it was time to shut my mouth," he said.

The Redskins led, 7-0, at the half, which ended with Ray Wersching falling several counties short on a 55-yard field goal try. All this seemed strange production for two teams known for offense. The 49ers often stationed eight defenders within three yards of the line of scrimmage, successfully slowing Riggins.

"IT WAS AS CLOSE to a war on the football field as you'll get," said Riggins, who said the 49ers have the toughest defense he's faced all season.

Early in the second quarter, Theismann completed a 46-yard pass to tight end Clint Didier, over safety Dwight Hicks, to the San Francisco 18.

Four plays later, Riggins ran four yards around the left side, slipping the grasp of linebacker Jack Reynolds, sending him to the ground at the five and scoring the half's only touchdown with 6:16 remaining.

The Redskins' special teams were full of gimmicks. Earlier in the second quarter, they apparently had scored a touchdown when Nick Giaquinto fielded a punt and threw the ball 15 yards across the field to rookie cornerback Darrell Green, who sped 52 yards to the end zone. Problem was, it was ruled a forward pass, nullifying the play.

Later, punter Jeff Hayes faked on fourth and five from the San Francisco 39, and ran 14 yards for a first down. But Moseley missed from 34 yards.

Meanwhile, Montana was constantly under pressure in the first half. His running game provided some help, but on third-down plays he often overthrew his receivers.

IN THE SECOND half, Montana never stopped throwing. Early in the third period, Wersching missed a 50-yarder that could have closed the score to 7-3. Later, the Redskins' Green stopped a San Francisco drive by stripping the ball from wide receiver Freddie Solomon after a short completion. It caused a fumble and linebacker Rich Milot recovered at the San Francisco 36.

Then came Riggins' one-yard touchdown run, then Brown's 70-yard touchdown catch. It was 21-0, Redskins, with 62 seconds left in the third quarter, and another rout seemingly on the way.

In the fourth quarter, though, Montana zeroed in. He passed to wide receiver Mike Wilson for a five-yard touchdown 23 seconds into the final period. It was 21-7.

After Moseley missed from 41 yards with 10 minutes left, Montana immediately hit Solomon, who beat Green deep over the middle while free safety Mark Murphy covered Renaldo Nehemiah on a deep rout, for a 76-yard touchdown. It was 21-14 with 9:48 left and growing quieter in RFK.

The Redskins' offense, with Theismann under pressure, failed again. Then Montana threw four more passes, the last a 12-yarder to Wilson and it was 21-21 with 7:08 left.

Lee girls host AHS; MHS faces tough road test

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Lee girls find themselves in a strange position in the District 4-5A basketball race and Midland High faces a tough test as the league race resumes tonight.

After a convincing 67-49 loss to San Angelo Thursday, the Lee girls find themselves in a second place tie with Odessa Permian while the Bobcats reign supreme with a perfect 4-0 league start.

That's strange since Lee has seldom been in this position in the brief history of girls basketball. The Rebels have won or shared the loop crown ever since the girls league was formed seven years ago. Now they have some ground to make up after falling to 3-1 with surprising Permian.

LEE WILL host winless Abilene High at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center in what appears to be a cure for what ails the Rebels' first district loss. The 0-4 Eagles don't appear to matchup with the Rebel girls.

AHS is 6-11 on the year, but winless in loop action. AHS, however, was beaten by Permian 65-56 Thursday, showing that the Eagles are improving on the scoring attack. Lee, on the other hand, still owns the best overall record among district teams with a 14-5 mark.

Midland High, making its first playoff trip just last year, is another step back at 2-2 where a logjam has occurred with the Bulldogs, Big Spring and Abilene Cooper. The Bulldogs face Cooper tonight in Abilene with some of the logs to fall from the pile up. The loser may have a tough time staying in the race.

Cooper is only 6-7 on the year, but its 2-2 district mark has been a surprise of sorts. MHS is 11-7 on the year and fresh off of a 60-59 win over Big Spring to produce the logjam at 2-2. Cooper defeated winless Odessa High, 61-45, last Thursday.

Felicia Farias continues to lead the Rebel scoring attack with a 17.1 per game scoring average. She had a big 19 point outing in the loss to San Angelo Thursday. Tunya Mayberry (11.7) and Stacy Harmon (10.1) continue to average in double figures for the Rebs, but Harmon was held scoreless against San Angelo and Lee needs her scoring punch. Mayberry and Brenda Haven both had 10 point nights against the Bobcats.

JUNIOR DENISE Lanz is the pacesetter for the Bulldogs with a 14.3 average, but she is averaging 18.5 points a game in district play and is coming off an 18-point effort against Big Spring. Orvetta Johnson owns a 12.4 average and has scored 30 points in her last two games. Terez Robinson scored 17 points against Big Spring after entering the game with a 5.4 average. She is now averaging 6.2 per outing.

The key game on the schedule tonight will be the San Angelo-Permian matchup in Odessa. A Permian victory could throw the race into a three-way tie for first while a San Angelo win would propel the Bobcats into sole possession of first place.

Permian is only 8-10 on the year while San Angelo is 10-6, but the Panthers have come on strong in league games. An overtime victory over Midland High, has put Permian in a contenders role, but they will have to make the big move tonight or face the possibility of falling back in the pack.

BIG SPRING seems certian to remain in the playoff hunt with a game against Odessa High at home.

Of course, there are still 10 games left on the district schedule and that's a long way to go before naming the two playoff teams that will come out of this district. At this point, six of the eight teams still entertain realistic hopes of being one of those two teams.

Chaps resume cage campaign

Midland College resumes its basketball schedule this week after a month's layoff for the holiday break when the Chaparrals travel to Big Spring Friday and Saturday night for the Big Spring Classic.

The Chaps play Lubbock Christian College JV at 6 p.m. Friday while Howard College faces the Angelo State JV at 8 p.m. Saturday, MC plays Angelo State JV at 6 p.m. and Howard takes on LCC JV at 8.

The two nights of doubleheaders will serve as a get-acquainted session for Coach Jerry Stone and his Chaps before the resumption of Western Junior College Conference hostilities next week.

The Chaps will return to Langford Chaparral Center to face Amarillo College a week from Thursday, their first appearance at home since last year. Monday MC resumes conference play against New Mexico Military Institute next Monday.

When we last left the WJCC race, Howard College was in first place with a 4-0 record and Odessa College was second by virtue of having played only three games without defeat.

Midland and South Plains are tied for second at 3-1 while Clarendon and Amarillo are both 2-2.

Howard's Dwight Harris is the scoring leader with a 25.5 average per game while New Mexico Junior College's Mike Richmond is the top rebounder with 11.5 per game.

MC's lone conference loss came at the hands of Clarendon. The Chaps have suffered three non-conference losses, but MC does have an overtime victory over Odessa College to its credit. That came in the finals of the Midland College tournament back in November.

Six-11 Teviin Binns, who is averaging nine rebounds a game, leads the league in blocked shots with 33.

Another Chap, Zeak Williams, is third in both assists and steals.

49ers are still No. 1 at home

SAN FRANCISCO INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers returned home a beaten team night but they're still No. 1 in the hearts of their fans.

Several thousand of the "Forty-Niner Faithful" enthusiastically greeted the team on its arrival Sunday night after a 5½-hour chartered flight.

Amid shouts of "We're No. 1" and the blaring of horns, the 49ers shook hands with some of the fans and left quickly.

Seattle Seahawks' quarterback Dave Krieg is knocked loose of ball by Los Angeles Raiders' Rod Martin during AFC championship game action.

Seahawks grounded

THROUGH THE AIR, the Seahawks were strictly penguins. Quarterback Dave Krieg completed five of eight first-half passes. Problem was, the Seahawks caught only caught three — for 12 yards. The Raiders (defensive backs Lester Hayes and Mike Davis) caught the other two — for 44. That's not exactly how Chuck Knox drew it up in the playbook.

Of course, it's hard to find an open receiver when a bunch of blackshirted behemoths are chasing you like you just stole the rent money and the pass defenders are covering your receivers so closely they can smell what they had for breakfast.

The Raiders sacked Krieg three times in the first half for minus 21 yards.

The Seahawks' net passing yardage in the first half? Minus nine.

Don't laugh at minus nine. When the teams first met in Seattle Oct. 16, the Seahawks and Jim Zorn had minus six yards passing at halftime and still won because the Raiders were on their way to committing eight turnovers (the Seahawks had one) leading or directly resulting in 24 Seahawks points. The Raiders' defense has been great lots of times this season — it allowed the Seahawks only one long scoring drive that day — only to keep getting stuck in the shadow of its goal line because Jim Plunkett and the offense kept handling the ball like kindergarten kids at recess.

NOT THIS time. The Seahawks, who had eight takeaways while committing only one turnover in their first two playoff games, had five turnovers Sunday — all interceptions — which helped set up drives leading to 17 Raiders points.

The Raiders had four turnovers, but none in the first half when they built what proved to be an insurmountable lead.

"We played our usual game defensively," Raiders linebacker Ted Hendricks said, "just like we've done the last four years. Only this time, the offense didn't turn the ball over to them on the six-yard line."

"When they had to throw," said Mike Davis, whose two interceptions Sunday doubled his regular-season total, "we had 'em."

But these Raiders had blown big halftime leads before, and the Seahawks were not about to go gently into that good night.

"At halftime, they were yelling, 'We're gonna win, we're gonna win,' coming off the field," Raiders defensive end Bill Pickel said.

Millen: "Coming out of the huddle, you could see it in their faces that they still thought they could win."

Millen quickly began disabusing the Seahawks of that notion.

Defensive end Jeff Bryant had just recovered fullback Frank Hawkins' fumble at the Raiders 43 on the second play of the third quarter and on came Krieg — at 25, one of the only people to outlive his college (Milton), which closed a few years back due to lack of funds.

Then Millen closed out Krieg, intercepting his first-down pass intended for tight end Charle Young and returning it 13 yards to the Raiders 47. After he was tackled, Millen, who had only one interception during the regular season, flung the ball skyward and bearhugged with cornerback Mike Haynes.

"The first thing (defensive coordinator) Charlie Sumner said to me before going on the field was their tendency was to go to the tight end in that situation," Millen recalled, "so he told me to overplay the tight end. I ran a perfect route. He threw it right to me. I must have been the only one open."

MILLEN WAS ecstatic for having played a key part in Sunday's win. He'd sprained the arch of his left foot in the first Seattle game and his mobility was so limited when the teams played here Oct. 30 that he had to removed himself from the game in the second half "because I was hurting the team."

What if No. 1 vote were today?

Now that a week has drifted by, one wonders if they held the final football poll today whether Miami would still beat out Nebraska for No. 1.

It was ironic that the Cornhuskers should benefit from a springboard victory in the August Kickoff Bowl over Penn State, the head start that kept Nebraska in the poll forefront for the entire regular season, and then that it should suffer a final game defeat by one point, a game that cost the Huskers the title.

Last year, Penn State was voted No. 1 after an early-season loss to Alabama. By the season's end, the pollsters had either forgotten or forgiven.

And, strangely enough, Nebraska as well as unbeaten but tied SMU were the victims. The Cornhuskers had suffered an early-season and controversial loss to Penn State, the lone blemish on an otherwise explemary record.

SO FOR TWO straight years, Nebraska, an eyelash loser in its only defeat of both seasons, loses No. 1 to a team that had been pistol-whipped in its lone loss. Miami, if you'll recall, lost to Florida, 28-3, in the season's opener.

You really can't blame Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, if he questions whether there's really any justice. Looks like your only hope, Tom, is a vigilante committee...

Watching Texas cough and sputter with a unproductive ground game last week in the Cotton Bowl, the feeling here, before the game ended, was that Nebraska had to be No. 1, although it wasn't a concession I'd have been unwilling to make during the regular season.

On the other hand, after witnessing first hand the limited offensive tools with which Texas had to work, one had to marvel that this team was 11-0 going into the Cotton Bowl. While most conceded the Texas defense was superlative, in view of the offense and unblemished record, that was a gross understatement.

Since football is no longer a one-platoon game, let's reorganize the voting to tell it like it really is.

Football is defense and offense and the twain may not necessarily meet or mesh.

On our own private poll, Nebraska's offense is No. 1 in the land and Texas' defense stands by itself. As far as Specialty units go, even that's something else again.

Melee marks Raider victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thirteen people were hurt and 23 arrested as hundreds of spectators stormed the field following the National Football League playoff game between the victorious Los Angeles Raiders and the Seattle Seahawks, police said.

Fans swept onto the closed end of the Los Angeles Coliseum field in the final seconds of the Raiders' 30-14 AFC championship victory Sunday over Seattle, and tore down the metal goalposts.

Then they charged toward the other end, where they were met by about two dozen stadium security personnel. It was a standoff, with fans repeatedly failing to get to that goalpost.

Sgt. Don Irvine of the police department's Coliseum Command Post put the number arrested at 23, but specifics on whether all were booked and on what charges weren't immediately available, officers at several divisions said early today.

Numerous scuffles broke out, and the security men finally were reinforced by police, including 10 mounted officers who were pelted with debris as they helped clear the field. Those arrested were led away in handcuffs.

Police Officer Charles Stropko said two police officers and 11 security guards were injured.

"Real enthusiastic fans there," he said wryly. "Real exuberant."

"One officer was struck in the head with a bottle, and another officer got a broken finger," he said.

The security guards' injuries were all "superficial," Stropko said.

He knew of no injuries to spectators.

Tom Watson can afford to laugh after winning the Seiko-Tucson match play golf tournament. Gene Little, background, joins in.

Tom Watson is back

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Tom Watson has launched his bid to regain the influence that made him the dominant figure in golf for five years.

He's changed his swing, plans a heavier schedule and, and — in only two days of competition — is a winner again.

"My enthusiasm is very high," Watson said Sunday after he'd scored a 2 and 1 decision over Gil Morgan and won the new Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship, the leadoff event on the 1984 PGA Tour.

"I've achieved my first goal," he said.

"I'd said I wanted to win, and win early. Now I've done that.

"Now I want to keep working on the swing change, make it work under pressure.

"My game is not yet where I want it to be. But it's getting closer. I have a lot of confidence in what I'm trying to do."

Watson, who had won two British Opens but no American tournaments over an 18-month period, said he had discovered a flaw in his swing and was working to correct it.

"I wasn't staying down through the ball — just kind of sliding through it," he said. "As a result, my pitching and chipping was not what I wanted it to be.

"I want to keep on working on it, make it work under pressure. It's hard to make the change under pressure. I want to revert to my old swing. But I'm going to stay with it. I know this is the right thing to do."

Watson's victory came, he said, "in a kind of dull match.

"Gil never made any putts to put any pressure on me."

Morgan, in fact, did not make a birdie in the final match, never led, and missed at least four putts inside of eight feet. The critical one was a 4-footer to win the hole on the 16th.

The victory, the 29th of Watson's American Tour career, was worth $100,000, while Morgan collected $60,000.

Scott Hoch won $35,000 for his 2 and 1 decision over Lanny Wadkins (a $25,000 winner) in the match for third place. Morgan made a great comeback, winning four of the last six holes, in a 1 up decision over Wadkins in a morning semifinal, while Watson stopped Hoch 2 and 1 in the other.

Hoch was the only man in the final four who started play in the first round last Monday. Watson, Wadkins and Morgan were among the eight leaders of the 1983 Seiko Grand Prix list who were seeded into the fifth round Saturday morning.

"It's not pure match play," Watson said. "So it gives you a different feeling. But I feel like I won a golf tournament.

"It's a great feeling inside to get off to a good start at the beginning of the year."

In the seniors' match for third, Australian Peter Thomson beat Billy Casper 1 up.

OCAW talks reopened; Strikes unlikely here

From staff and wire reports

Reopened negotiations between the oil industry and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union are a positive step, but a union spokesman in Denver says scattered walkouts still are likely after Wednesday's contract deadline.

"I'm encouraged that ... a great number of localities have arranged to continue negotiations and take full advantage of the 72-hour contract extension," said Jerry Archuleta, of the Denver-based OCAW, on Sunday night.

But he added: "With 331 contracts (to be negotiated), it would be quite unusual not to have some strike action somewhere."

Locally, James Childs, union spokesman in Odessa said the results of the contract negotiations will affect every major oil company field production worker.

Childs said the union represents employees from the Mobil, Texas-New Mexico and Amoco pipelines. In addition, it represents some employees of Cities Service, Getty, Arco and Conoco as well as some other smaller companies in the area. The union has about 900 members in the Permian Basin.

Childs was fairly confident about the negotiations.

"I think we'll get a reasonable settlement. If we don't, there will be some strikes, starting probably at the refineries."

Childs did not anticipate any walkouts in the area but did see a possibility for walkouts in El Paso. However, walkouts would not be necessary, he said, if the major oil companies showed a willingness to work out a settlement.

"If one or more companies makes an acceptable offer, quite often we will extend the deadline, usually only on a day-to-day basis."

Archuleta said talks with major oil companies and representatives for 50,000 workers would continue at most of the 331 bargaining points today, as a new contract deadline of 12:01 a.m. Wednesday approached.

The old contract deadline expired at midnight Saturday, but union President Joseph Misbrener called for an extension because "meaningful negotiations are in process."

An exception that process was Mapco Petroleum Co., which owns the Delta Refining Co. near Memphis, Tenn., and refused to extend negotiations, laying off about a dozen workers.

Mapco had about 175 OCAW workers nefore the contract expiration, and laid off between 11 and 13 union workers Saturday night when the graveyard shift came on duty, Archuleta said. However most union employees chose to stay on the job even though Mapco invoked its own contract, Archuleta said.

Delta Refining Manager Robert G. Alexander said Delta had asked the union local to voluntarily cancel its contract last June to try and cut costs, but when the union refused, Alexander vowed the company wouldn't extend the contract beyond this past Saturday.

"The local committee is trying to arrange another negotiating session with the company (Mapco), but have not been able to do so," Archuleta said, adding that Mapco was the only one of the oil companies taking "an extremely rigid and unreasonable position."

"Some people got 3 percent (pay raises) but some had their pay cut by as much as 10 percent and others were laid off altogether," Archuleta said of the Mapco situtation. "They (union members) are still on the job but they are planning their response."

However, Archuleta said, "Nobody's on a picket line anywhere. There are no lockouts or strikes even though the contracts have expired."

Local negotiations must be approved by OCAW leaders in Denver, Archuleta said.

The major issues in the contract talks are wages and health insurance, Archuleta said.

OCAW traditionally seeks a model contract from one of the major oil companies and uses that to establish a pattern in settling with the others.

So far, the best offer has come from Gulf Oil Corp., calling for a 20-cent-an-hour pay raise in the first year of the two-year pact, Archuleta said. It was rejected.

AT&T cuts home phone repair rates

By CHARLES W. ROSS
Copley News Service

American Telephone and Telegraph Co. Friday reduced its home telephone repair and installation charges and said it possibly could reduce long-distance rates more than the 10.5 percent originally planned for spring.

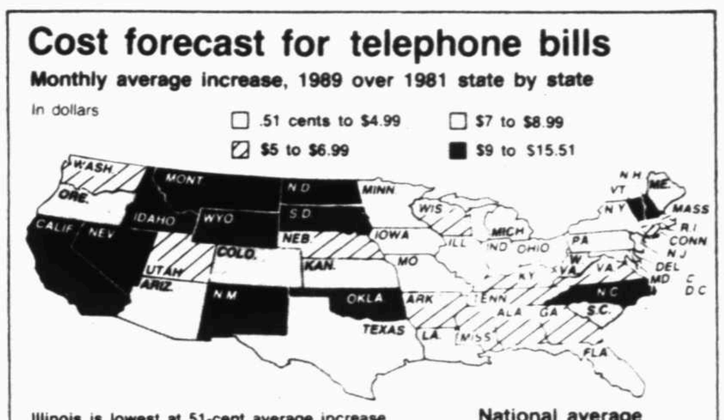
The company told the Federal Communications Commission that it was possible it also could cut almost by half a proposed increase in rates for private phone lines used by business.

AT&T, however, said it still wants permission to charge customers 75 cents for each long-distance information call after the first such call each month, a proposal that has enraged small businesses which make extensive use of long-distance lines.

The big utility said it was too early to specify how much more the long-distance rates could be trimmed, but the announcement last October of the 10.5 percent cut amounted to $1.75 billion in annual savings and was the largest long-distance rate reduction ever proposed.

When AT&T initially sought the rate reduction last October, it asked the commission to implement the new rates on Jan. 1, the same day the Bell System was broken up under antitrust laws. The FCC, however, said it needed more time and postponed the effective date until April 3.

The company told the commission the proposed increase in rates for private phone lines used by businesses could possibly be reduced by half.



Instead of an average 15.3 percent increase in these rates, AT&T said it was now requesting an average 7.9 percent increase. The company also indicated that it could reduce its business WATS rates more than the 10.7 percent it originally planned.

An AT&T official said the bigger cuts in long-distance rates and the smaller increase for private business lines is possible because AT&T's original proposal was based on estimates of what the 22 local Bell System companies intended to charge long-distance companies such as AT&T for access to their customers. Since the original filing, AT&T has received the actual figures proposed by the Bell companies.

AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner said the sizes of the rate reductions would depend on how the various regulatory issues still pending before Congress and the FCC are decided, as well as whether or not the so-called access charges go into effect April 3 as planned.

Monthly access charges of $2 and $6 a month for homeowners and businesses respectively have been approved by the FCC, but Congress is considering legislation that would block them.

Meanwhile, the White House indicated it will oppose a Senate bill that would delay imposition of the access charges. The Reagan administration had said previously that it was opposed to a House measure that would ban the charges altogether.

Texaco chief says planned Getty buy 'very fair thing'

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc.'s agreement to buy Getty Oil Co. for almost $10 billion — the biggest proposed takeover in history — is a "very fair thing" and could help America reduce its dependence on foreign oil, Texaco's chairman claims.

John K. McKinley, the 63-year-old Texaco chief, said Sunday he saw no substantial antitrust problems in his company's proposed takeover of the smaller Getty.

Pennzoil Co., which was outmaneuvered by Texaco in the bidding for Getty, has threatened to sue Getty and has questioned the propriety of a Texaco-Getty marriage.

Texaco is the third-largest U.S. oil company; Getty ranks No. 14. Together they still would be in the No. 3 slot behind Mobil Corp. and industry leader Exxon Corp.

"This is a friendly merger between two able companies," McKinley said in a telephone interview shortly after Texaco said it had won approval to merge from the Los Angeles-based Getty. "What we're doing here is a very fair thing."

McKinley also said a court injunction issued Friday blocking a Texaco-Getty merger agreement had been lifted, clearing the way for Texaco to proceed. He added that the merger did not require approval by Texaco shareholders.

Under terms of the proposed takeover, Texaco will pay $125 apiece for the 41.1 million Getty shares held by the Sarah C. Getty Trust and the J. Paul Getty Museum. The trust, named for the mother of the late billionaire J. Paul Getty, holds 31.8 million Getty shares; the museum has control of 9.3 million shares.

Texaco, based in White Plains, N.Y., said it would acquire the remaining 38 million shares, which are publicly held, by launching a tender offer today. Those shareholders would receive $125 a share in cash or in Texaco securities.

Thus Texaco would pay $5.14 billion for shares held by the trust and museum and $4.75 billion for publicly held stock, a total of $9.89 billion.

Texaco did not disclose all details of the proposal, but such transactions usually take weeks or months to complete.

The proposed deal is larger than the $7.6 billion buyout of Conoco Inc. by Du Pont Co. in 1981, which had ranked as the biggest corporate marriage in history.

For McKinley, the head of Texaco since 1980, the deal means doubling Texaco's oil reserves and vastly expanding its reach in one stroke.

Although McKinley expressed confidence that the merger with Getty would present no substantial anticompetitive issues, the deal probably will have to pass an antitrust review by either the Justice Department or the Federal Trade Commission.

McKinley said the merger would help the country as well as Texaco.

"It takes large and able companies to conduct the kind of research and development expenditures it will require to find ... the oil reserves to assure that our country does not become too dependent on foreign oil," McKinley said.

J. Hugh Liedtke, chairman of the Houston-based Pennzoil, takes another view.

"Whether Texaco Inc. is an eligible purchaser of Getty Oil Co. is a very serious question of national policy," Liedtke said over the weekend. Pennzoil, which is far smaller than either Getty or Texaco, had made an alliance with Getty last week in which Pennzoil would help convert Getty to private ownership. But that deal fell apart when Getty switched its allegiance to Texaco.

Any anticompetitive questions about the Texaco-Getty deal are likely to center on the companies' retail business.

Banking deal could push back boundries

By NEAL KOCH
Hearst Feature Service

In the tallest office building in downtown Los Angeles, at the highest executive levels, officials of First Interstate Bancorp are anxiously thinking about the town of Big Stone City, S.D., population 666.

First Interstate's proposed acquisition of the tiny town's Big Stone State Bank awaits approval from the Federal Reserve Board, which would allow the nation's eighth largest bank holding company to cross the boundaries of traditional banking to sell insurance nationwide — and, as insurance entities, invest the proceeds in a wide variety of ventures in which banks are now rarely allowed to participate, such as construction, bonds and stocks.

Last year, South Dakota became the first state to allow banks to sell insurance beyond coverage narrowly related to consumer banking services. The move was eagerly awaited by major American banks anxious to protect their client base from poaching by non-bank financial services giants, such as Sears Roebuck and American Express. The banks also have said that selling insurance through already established offices might help offset the high costs of maintaining branch systems.

In addition to First Interstate, Citicorp, BankAmerica Corp, and Security Pacific National Corp. have sought permission to acquire or create new banks in South Dakota to enter the insurance business. And thanks to earlier regulatory law changes, some of these companies already have or would like to bring their nationwide credit card operations to the state.

All this because South Dakota has laid out a welcome mat to banks that other states are only now considering matching.

"We'll go where the legislature invites us to go," says William Ford, an executive vice president of Security Pacific's holding company. "If our own states preclude us from the insurance business, we can take advantage of favorable legislation. And we'll bring economic benefit with us."

Security Pacific is awaiting word on its application to charter a new bank, Security Pacific Bank of South Dakota, which could allow the parent company to market insurance through its already-established network of 400 consumer finance branches nationwide.

"I'm a realist," Ford says. "The laws in California aren't going to be changed."

The insurance industry, which opposes the move, is simply too powerful, he and other industry sources say. Indeed, according to one well-placed source, California's banking industry won't bother to press the issue at this year's state legislative session.

The insurance industry, on the other hand, contends that it is just trying to protect itself from the overwhelming financial muscle of the banks. "To have the Bank of America competing with the local independent agent doesn't seem to be fair," argues John Norwood, general counsel to the Insurance Agents and Brokers Council, a California lobbying group.

The insurance industry raised similar objections in South Dakota, but Gov. William Janklow pushed the measure through. Earlier, Janklow had steered through legislation to eliminate the state's ceiling on interest rates, a change that is attracting the credit card operations of banks heaquartered in states that limit interest rates on consumer loans.

The immediate push towards South Dakota is out of fear of losing customers to the powerful likes of Sears and American Express, with their ever-increasing array of products. "Some of the banks are saying, 'Well, we don't know which way this is going, but we better offer the same thing they are,' " says Stephen Berman, a securities analyst with L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg and Towbin in New York.

But "there are dangers in it," cautions Berman, pointing out that bankers are unaccustomed to the needs of selling insurance and investing the proceeds. "Banks are good at handling deposits, handling paper. But when they have gotten into other businesses, they have not always done well," he says. "The property and casualty insurance business is terrible. Even the insurance companies have trouble making money. So why should the banks come in and be making money? What does a banker know about what is the proper pricing on credit insurance, life expectancies, mortality rates?"

Prospects for gold spark hot debate

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

Generally, precious metals dealers had a so-so 1983. There were fluctuations during the year, but neither gold nor silver made any impressive upward dash. The U.S. dollar stayed strong and inflation stayed soft — normally, precious metals run up when inflation runs up and the dollar goes down.

How gold will perform this coming year is a subject of hot debate among precious-metals analysts. Longtime gold analyst Richard Russell, author of Dow Theory Letters, feels that inflation may be soft for four years — and then the world will be engulfed in deflation. In such a scenario, precious-metals investing would not pay off.

"Right now," said Russell, "we're in an interim period between inflation and deflation. The cause is the huge amount of debt. It is now so large that it is no longer inflationary — the cost of servicing it helps hold down inflation." Also, the bad international loans will prove to be deflationary as they are written off — and the Federal Reserve's monetary policy has been anti-inflation.

"Eventually," he said, "this debt will destroy us, but we have a period of perhaps four years" of a strong stock market, strong dollar and probably weak precious metals.

"The specter of massive budget deficits implies a financial squeeze — unless the debt is monetized, and the Fed shows no inclination to monetize all the new debts. So inflation is dying.

"But even if the Fed decided to monetize the debt, the money markets would promptly react by swooning. This would bring on a collapse in business, and when business caves in while carrying its own high debts, we have a deflationary situation."

His conclusion: "Silver, gold and precious metals are still in the throes of a severe and prolonged primary bear market — a bear market that started in 1980 when the forces of inflation and deflation finally met head-on." Gold could go as low as the $295 to $300 level, said Russell, who tells his clients to get into common stocks, such as broad-based no-load mutual funds.

But precious metals analyst Andre Levie disagrees completely. "There are three reasons gold and silver will go up," Levie said. "One, the world is preparing for war, and historically, war is destructive of currencies. Second, the budget deficits are horrendous. Third, the $600 billion debts of the less-developed countries will be inflationary — not deflationary."

Those debts will be inflationary because central banks — particularly the Fed — will eventually have to print money to bail out the banking system, he said. In the long run, the Fed is "powerless" to stop the forces that will inexorably lead to massive inflation, said Levie.

He recommends that people hedge against this by putting money in U.S. gold pieces with numismatic value such as $20 U.S. gold pieces. He also likes mining stocks such as South Vaal (South African), Minorco and Newmont Mining, and diamond play De Beers.

OIL FACTS

1918

Standard Oil Co. of New York acquires a 45 percent non-voting stock interest in Magnolia Petroleum Co., a Texas joint stock association and adds 25 percent stock interest in next two years.

American Tank Co. produces a steel tank with staves or sheets approximately 60 inches wide and eight feet high. Thisdesign is the forerunner of present API bolted tanks; and another type of bolted steel lease tank with countersunk bolthead which was introduced by a Mr. Walsh, of the Superior Tank Co.

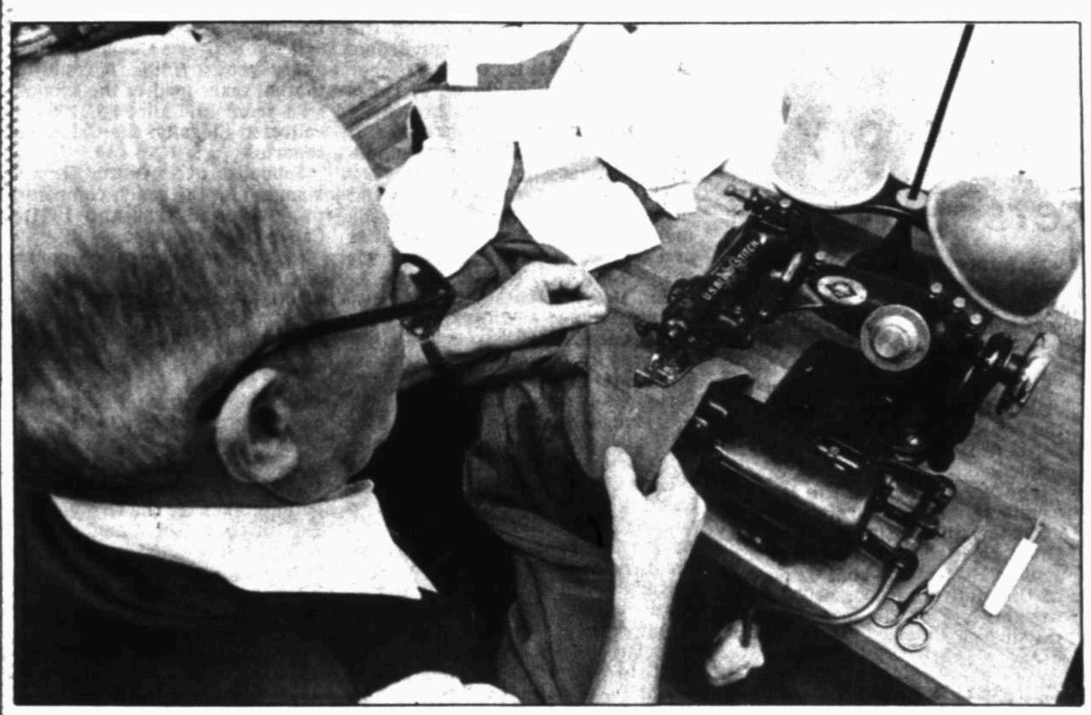
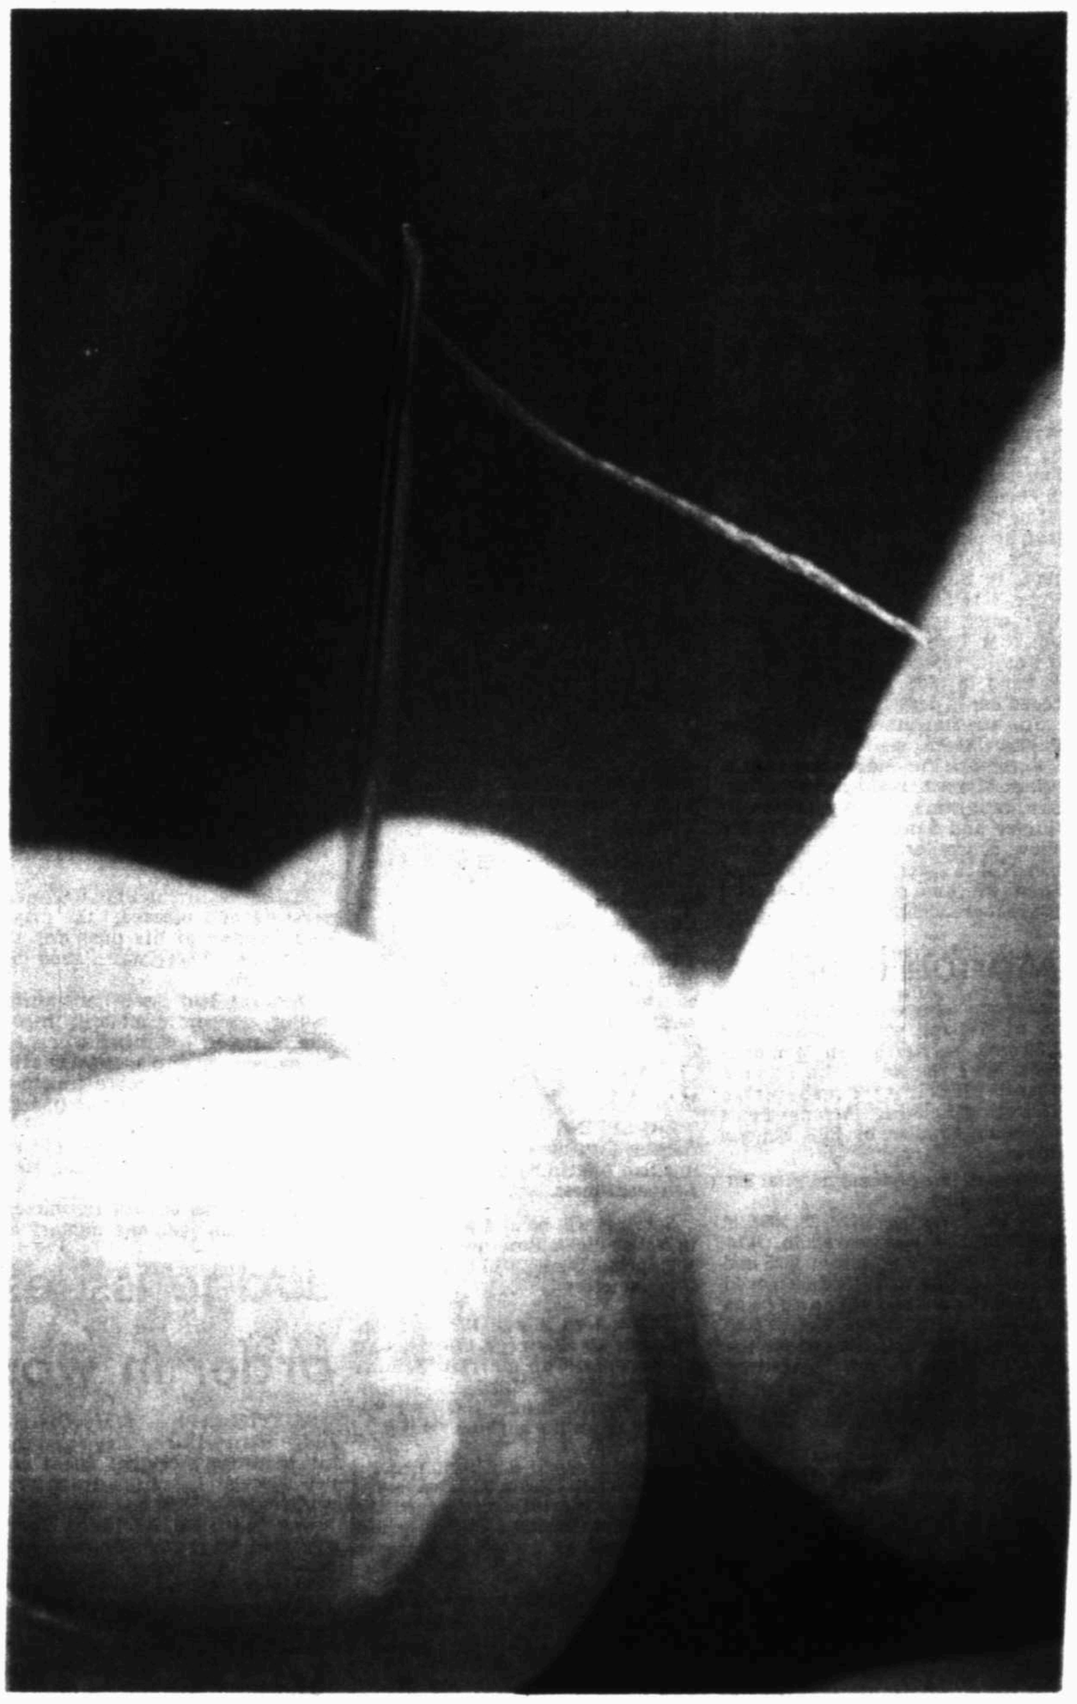
Ananiasz uses tailoring chalk to mark a hem in a customer's pants.

Through the eye of a needle





The eye of a needle — it stands as the trademark of Ananiasz Kochaniuk who has spent most of his life as a skilled tailor after surviving World War II in a German factory. At left, following his chalk marks, the tailor runs the pants through the blind stitch machine which quickly puts an "invisible" hem in the garment.

Ananiasz Kochaniuk has looked at life through the eye of a needle. He's seen the rips and tears wrought by a country's sick mind, a continent severed at the seams.

He's felt the pain, too, of being pried away from his family, of being stuck in an enemy country and suffering from lack of food.

But as a needle and thread can mend the torn seams of a garment, so does time close those wounds of the soul and heart...almost.

Ananiasz is a tailor in the purest form of the word. A tailor from the Old Country. A tailor who takes pride in his painstaking work.

With a seam ripper poised in one hand and a pair of men's pants clutched in the other, Ananiasz emits an aura of gentleness. He smiles and laughs and jokes. But 40 years ago he was barely surviving from day to day.

Deftly tearing out the stitches in the pants, Ananiasz talks in his Ukraianian-accented English. His world today is a small, white-walled, brightly-lighted room at S&Q Clothiers where he turns ill-fitting clothes into sleek-looking designs.

"I been born in Poland Jan. 16, 1922," he says, placing the pants seams together and putting them under the whirring industrial sewing machine.

HE CAME FROM a village in the Ukrainian part of Poland, "the breadbasket country," now part of the Soviet Union. "I always admire seeing people dress nice" and Ananiasz longed to become a tailor. He planned to become an apprentice to a Jewish tailor-master in his village, but World War II severed his plans.

His town first was taken over by the Russians. Then in 1941 the Germans came.

"Germany had been like that; they had been taking everything they could get their hands on." His family were members of the Evangelical Christians, "similar to Baptists." "We all hid the Jews," he says of the villagers.

In May 1942 he was taken as forced labor and sent to Hanover, Germany to work in a factory making airplane parts.

Life for those who stayed in the village wasn't pleasant. Ananiasz's father died in 1945 "from internal injuries. These bands come at night, they would throw him on the floor several times. Mom said he had been questioned several times about something."

Quickly pressing three pairs of men's pants, Ananiasz picks up another pair and starts looking through a box of discarded belt loops to match the fabric. Talk about Liberation? he says, looking out at the top of his glasses.

THE GERMAN factory reminded him of Babylon in the Bible. "You know how God mixes the languages? There was French, German, Belgian, Polish, Russian all spoken at the factory. There were so many injuries, fingers cut off, because people couldn't understand each other and didn't know how to operate the machinery."

He stops the narrative and chuckles. "It's something you can not figure out what it look like. I laugh, but it wasn't so funny then."

Working the 6 p.m. to 2 a.m., shift, Ananiasz, like all prisoners, was fed little. His foot began swelling and Ananiasz knew death was close. "When swelling starts in your foot, it gets to your heart and you die. I see many die. I was going to die soon."

One night he couldn't lift a load and his German co-worker slapped him, then threatened to report Ananiasz to the authorities for not wanting to work.

"But I want to work," Ananiasz said, then showed the German his foot. "This German gave me his sandwiches every day then. It restores my health and I laugh again. A lot of good Germans lied and stuck their necks out for us."

The Americans had surrounded Hanover in the war's final days. Ananiasz and several hundred prisoners were taken from their fenced camp to march 12 kilometers across town. Later, they discovered the Germans had planned to put them into a building, throw in gasoline and burn it down. But plans went awry that May 10 and the prisoners found their way back to the camp that night.

"The next morning we got up and we were liberated. All the German officials were gone. I was very glad. It didn't take me long to find some American soldiers who spoke Polish."

THE WAR ENDED, but Ananiasz' village was handed to the Soviets. He chose to try another dream.

"I've been always excited about seeing other countries, learning other languages." Already a master at Russian, Ukrainian, Polish, German and Czechoslovakian, he was sent to Canada, where he became a lumberjack. While in Hanover he had met a woman also from the Ukraine and she followed him to Canada. They married and had two children.

Tailor sees life through the eye of a needle

But Ananiasz still wanted to become a tailor, so he learned the trade in Canada, spending 9½ years with Sterling Cloak Co. Next came five years with the U.S. Army. He came to Midland in 1964 to ply his trade at S&Q Clothiers, then left for Cleveland, returning in 1977.

His education didn't stop with tailoring. Ananiasz attended night school in Cleveland, earning his high school diploma with honors. Three years ago, he became a U.S. citizen.

Tailoring "is a kind of forgotten trade," he says, wrinkling up his nose. "I offer to teach others and nobody want to learn."

Whipping up the hems on three pairs of pants on the blind-stitch machine in just minutes, he presses in new creases and hangs them on the finished rack. Taking out a plaid jacket from another rack, he explains a complicated job: cutting down wide lapels. "It takes about two hours. You have to be mentally prepared." He places the jacket back on the rack and picks up an easier job.

He's called to help a woman wanting changes made on two skirts, and then a man buying a suit. He handles each with grace. Then comes the thread and notions salesman and phone calls for more business.

Putting in 15 hours at work each day, Ananiasz says, "I don't suffer being unemployed. People wear and tear their clothes, you could hardly keep up with the work."

But Ananiasz never forgets the village where he grew up and his four sisters still live. "If it had not been for war, I would be tailor in my town. As for home, my heart always cries."

Outgoing mayor will be missed

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Texans who have heard of Jorge Cardenas Gonzalez know him as the man who closed Boys Town.

But to the people of Matamoros, Cardenas is much more. He is El Cambio, The Change.

Wiping out the crime-ridden prostitution zone as a tourist draw was just one of many far-reaching changes made by the outgoing mayor of Matamoros during his three year term.

His constituents appreciate his efforts and they love The Change.

"Every time you drive downtown without falling in a pothole, you should thank Jorge," says a businessman on Avenida Obregon, the city's main thoroughfare from the International Bridge into town.

A bootblack working near the freshly-painted bandstand on the tropical Plaza Hidalgo says, "There is no garbage anywhere. Our plaza is a good place. Jorge is the reason. We love him."

EVEN Cardenas' political opponents admit he was good for the city.

"He had good intentions and did the most with what resources he had," says David Vento Uribe, assistant to the incoming mayor, Jesus Roberto Guerra. "It will be an awesome task filling Jorge's shoes."

But the greatest change in Matamoros is not the improved paving and drainage in poor colonias or the modern pedestrian mall downtown or even the closing of Boys Town.

It's an intangible one, long time residents say. Cardenas inspired in an alienated citizenry a renewed confidence in government and civic pride.

The peaceful plaza where the bootblack works had quite a different face five years ago. Then, 4,500 angry citizens took to the street in a protest against a corrupt city government they said was in cahoots with a violent and powerful union run by a notorious boss.

The protest became a riot and the riot became a tragedy that left two people dead and millions of dollars in damaged property.

THE FRUSTRATION that spawned the riot swept Cardenas into office in 1980. Cardenas had made integrity the main issue of his campaign and the voters responded by electing for the first time in 50 years a mayor who was not a member of the national ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, PRI.

The son of a middle class Ciudad Victoria family, Cardenas moved to the border as a young salesman of appliances and hardware. He married, sired eight children, got rich, and bought into a radio chain. His station became immediately popular.

During his administration, Cardenas used his station to broadcast live the regular Monday night meetings he held with city department heads. His unusually open government was a hit with his constituents and increased the trust they felt in him.

"It was the confidence of the people that got the lights turned on in the plaza, paved the streets, picked up garbage and got rid of Boys Town," the 58-year-old mayor said.

Mayor plans minority addendum in report

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros says the final report from the president's handpicked commission on Central America will include a dissenting addendum by him, which breaks with the majority's view on two key issues.

Cisneros, who returned from Washington this weekend, said his three-page dissent addressed covert CIA aid to Nicaraguan guerrillas and the electoral structure in El Salvador.

"They (other commission members) weren't pleased," the mayor said Sunday of his push for the addendum. "There was a good deal of pressure."

Cisneros had been considering issuing a separate minority report, but changed his mind when the bipartisan group's conservative members conceded more ground on several key issues, sources told the San Antonio Light.

The mayor said he was pleased with the commission's strong stand on "conditionality."

The commission will recommend that U.S economic and military aid to Central America be linked conditionally to each country's human rights record, he said.

"It was clearly a strong recommendation, strong enough that I expect the chairman, Dr. (Henry) Kissinger, will submit a minority report," Cisneros said.

The final report from the 12-man panel is to be delivered to President Reagan on Wednesday.

Cisneros said he wants El Salvador's Democratic Revolutionary Front, the political arm of the leftist guerrilla movement, included in that country's electoral process by the March elections.

He said he also favors halting aid to the anti-Sandinista guerrillas, and opposes CIA' intervention in the region.

The publicity surrounding the commission will force the Reagan administration to address the issues raised in the report, Cisneros said.

"At this point, I can say we made a substantive contribution and did a reasonable job of articulating and redefining U.S. relations with Central America," he said.

Judge issues temporary order in workers' lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Harley Clark today ruled that the Industrial Accident Board cannot reject injury claims from farmworkers for at least one week.

The Industial Accident Board oversees workers' compensation payments. A group of farmworkers is challenging the state's workers' compensation law, which does not cover farmworkers.

Clark set a Jan. 16 hearing to determine if the temporary order issued today will remain in effect until a trial of the suit filed by 10 injured farmworkers and some of their friends.

Assistant Attorney General David Richards said the temporary order was improper because farm and ranch owners did not have a chance to be heard today.

Austin attorney Jim Harrington, representing the United Farmworkers, called Clark's order a "hold" on any on-the-job injury claims filed by farmworkers until the trial that will determine if the workers' compensation law is constitutional.

The lawsuit argues the law discriminates against farmworkers by excluding them. The plaintiffs said the law also is discriminatory against Hispanics. About 92 percent of the state's 300,000-400,000 farmworkers are of Mexican ancestry, the suit said.

Union officials report General Dynamics layoffs

FORT WORTH (AP) — Union officials say that General Dynamics has laid off 125 employees because of a slowdown in the production of the F-16 fighter jet, and that 200 more workers might lose their jobs by the end of the year.

Pat Lane, president of the District Lodge 766 of the International Association of Machinists told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, "This is the first time we've had significant layoffs in the F-16 program."

A spokesman for General Dynamics said there were no "major" layoffs, however.

Lane, whose union represents 6,000 production workers at General Dynamics, said the workers were laid off last week when General Dynamics cut back production of the jets from 15 to 10 a month.

Charles N. White, vice president for manufacturing for General Dynamics, said he didn't know how many people were laid off last week.

"There's always some people coming and going," White said Saturday. "There are no major layoffs."

General Dyanmics spokesman Z. Joe Thornton said he didn't know anything about the layoffs.

Employees told the Star-Telegram that company officials announced in a series of meetings last month that 200 workers would lose their jobs by the end of 1984.

"I think they'll lay off more than that," said Lane. He said he expected more layoffs to be announced this week.

Canines catch suspects

ODESSA — Police used their canine unit to apprehend two suspects inside the Golden Cue at 1400 W. Grant here early Sunday morning, with coin boxes from three video machines pried loose and sitting on the firm's floor.

Charges had not been filed this morning on the two men, 21 and 25 years old, respectively. Lt. Rusty Baker said the two men were in custody pending arraignment.

Officers responding to a burglary alarm from the Golden Cue found two men inside the business. One man reportedly was headed outside, but ran back inside and locked the back door when he saw the police.

One of the Odessa Police Department's canines was used to flush the two men from their hiding spots in the building, according to Baker. One man surrendered, while the other was found hiding in the bathroom. Both were arrested at 3:57 a.m. Sunday.

Robbery suspects sought

ODESSA — Robbery suspects are being sought by police in connection with an incident reported Sunday night by a local man in which two diamond rings and about $500 were taken from him.

Don Leek told police that at 7:12 p.m. Sunday he was approached by a man in a ski mask as he got out of his car parked in the garage of his residence at 3108 N. Muskingum in Odessa Sunday night.

Leek told investigators the man demanded his money and two diamond rings valued at $13,000, while another man acted as look-out. When he resisted, Leek said the robber struck him in the face, then threatened him with death if he struggled further.

The robber was described as five feet nine inches and weighing 160 lbs. He was reportedly carrying a knife.

The 2.5-carat diamond ring was valued at $6,000 and the 5-carat ring about $7,000.

Police had arrested no suspects Monday morning.

Officials tour gay bars

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire, three city councilmen and 35 other supporters boarded a double-decker bus over the weekend for a tour of 10 gay bars to thank the gay community for its support in her recent reelection.

Whitmire defeated Bill Wright Nov. 8 to earn her second term as mayor with the support of the Gay Political Caucus of Houston.

At one bar, Ms. Whitmire upstaged a rock band to make her speech.

"I want to say very sincerely that I'm very proud to have your support," the mayor said. "It was a very tough election, and a lot of people in this room helped me out. We won, and we won big, and I want to thank you."

The tour started Saturday night and ended early Sunday morning.

At the Brazos River Bottom Club, Whitmire interrupted a country and western band to explain why she waited until Jan. 8 to offer her appreciation. "We really did appreciate your support and your work in the campaign" she said, adding it was easier to wait until after her inauguration "when we're not campaigning and things are a little more relaxed."

Councilmen George Greanias, Anthony Hall and Rodney Ellis accompanied the mayor.

Whitmire solicited support from the Gay Political Caucus last Aug. 31.

Tax battle could cost school district millions

FREER, Texas (AP) — Stakes in the legal squabble between the Freer Municipal Independent School District and South Texas rancher Clinton Manges could be 20 times higher than the $462,000 the district says Manges owes in back taxes. It could cost the school district $10 million if Manges wins.

The district says that Manges and his Duval County Ranch Co. owe the money in delinquent taxes, penalties and interest, plus lawyers' fees for the years 1977, 1978, 1979 and 1982.

But Manges contends the school district cannot collect taxes because voters never gave the school district authority to levy and collect taxes. The courts have split on which party is right.

If Manges wins, the school district might have to refund about $10 million in taxes to all taxpayers, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported Sunday. Two other major Freer school district taxpayers already have asked about possible refunds, the newspaper said.

Manges' claim was upheld last April by a state appeals court in San Antonio in a decision written by Associate Justice Antonio G. Cantu. A state district court in Duval County had ruled in favor of the school district.

Now the case is before the Texas Supreme Court on a writ of error filed by the school district, Freer School Superintendent James H. Doughty said.

If the Supreme Court upholds the appeals court ruling, it could mean that all taxes paid to the school district from 1977 through 1982 were collected illegally, the Caller-Times reported.

School district records show that Manges and the ranch company last paid taxes in 1980 and 1981, the Caller-Times reported.

Manges and the ranch company owe $72,788.89 for 1983 taxes that will not become delinquent until the end of this month, school district Tax Assessor-Collector Romeo Bazan said.

The district was established in 1976, collecting its first taxes the next year.

Doughty estimated it could cost the district $10 million if it had to refund taxes for the five years from 1977 through 1981. Doughty said the refund issue would be "an interesting question and probably would have to be determined by the courts," but added that he thought it would not happen.

The superintendent said "a couple" of large companies had inquired about possible refunds.

Doughty and school district attorneys said they are confident the Supreme Court will rule in the district's favor.

Former POWs to meet

Former prisoners of war in the Midland-Odessa area and their spouses are invited to the 7 p.m. Jan. 21 meeting of the Permian Basin Chapter of American Ex-POWs, said Joe Dobbs of Midland.

The meeting will be in the restaurant of the Best Western-Midland Inn off Interstate 20 south of Midland.

"Any former POW is invited," Dobbs said. "It doesn't matter which war, World War I, World War II, Korean, Vietnam."

Those wishing more information on the meeting may call Dobbs at 694-5043.

Carl Ruse of Odessa is commander of the POW chapter.

Cities study water mains

DALLAS (AP) — Officials in Dallas, Fort Worth and University Park are reeling from the $1.6 million cost of fixing 1,935 water main breaks during the recent record-shattering cold, and are re-examining their water-line replacement programs.

"This has pointed out some of the specific weak areas in our systems, such as places where we were going to repair the streets but now we must first repair the (water) mains," said Ronny Hyde, assistant director of the Fort Worth Water Department.

Hyde said Fort Worth's deteriorating water distribution system and a relatively shallow water supply source caused most of the city's water problems.

"Fort Worth had the worst (water main breakage) problem in this area," Hyde told The Dallas Morning News.

"About 80 percent of our system is an old cast-iron maintenance system," Hyde said.

Dallas, which had 483 water main breaks between Dec. 22 and Jan. 3, spent $1.15 million in repairs, officials said.

Although Dallas spent almost four times as much as Fort Worth to repair waterlines, city officials said the water system performed admirably under the abnormal conditions.

"Our system held up very well," said Matalyn Harp, a Dallas water official. "And there was never a threat of any problem."

University Park City Manager Leland Nelson said his city suffered steep losses because its aging cast-iron pipes contain valves with mineral lead, which "eats out the system over the years."

Hospital's toys help children play their way to health

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — A nurse cradling a wide-eyed toddler in her arms pushed open the hospital room door, carried the child inside and gently set her on the floor.

Danielle Fontenot took one look around her, stood up and ran as fast as her tiny legs could propel her, not toward the door and possible freedom, as might have been expected, but right into the middle of the room. There, she plopped down on the floor and began smiling as she looked around the room.

Instead of being filled with hospital beds, IV stands and blinking monitors, the room was filled with toys.

As Danielle waddled from toy to toy with her green print hospital gown flapping open in the back, she might have been at home for all the concern she showed.

The playroom — with brightly colored toys, handmade plaques featuring characters from nursery rhymes and watercolors obviously painted by very young artists — could have been in a nursery school instead of a hospital. And that's the mood Charlene Smith, R.N., clinical manager of pediatrics at Torrance Memorial Hospital Medical Center near here, and Beverly Breckinridge, a volunteer, had hoped to create when they furnished the room this fall.

But, Smith and Breckinridge say, the room is much more than just a place where pediatric patients can play while recuperating from illness or surgery. It's also a place where they are encouraged to express their anxieties about being hospitalized through play therapy.

"Play is the work of children," says Smith. "It's the way they learn about themselves. They need that to normalize their environment."

In the playroom, she says, children can talk about IVs, shots and surgery while playing with dolls.

"They can work through all the things they've had done to them with the dolls," says Breckinridge, the play program's chairman.

CNS Photo

Beverly Breckenridge, Torrance Memorial Hospital Center volunteer, amuses Danielle Fontenot in the hospital's playroom.

"It's a great release for them to (pretend to) give shots to a doll," says Smith, adding that when a child has a chance to work out his fears, he is more cooperative about his treatment.

The playroom is staffed daily from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. by volunteers who direct the children in a variety of play and craft activities designed to help them vent their feelings. Just playing with familiar toys may be enough to make a toddler feel more secure.

For the older child, however, volunteers offer craft projects, including Play Dough and painting, or more active play like throwing sponge balls, marching or dancing as ways to help him express his anxiety about being in a hospital.

Breckinridge remembers a withdrawn young boy who came to the playroom to paint. She watched while he was painting a picture of a fence, expecting him to add some black cats to the fence since it was near Halloween. Instead, he drew a large sign on the fence proclaiming, "Beware Hospitals."

The sign provided the opening she needed to encourage the boy to talk about what was disturbing him.

"We create opportunities for children to express themselves in an atmosphere of acceptance," says Breckinridge.

If a child had a bad night, Smith says, the next morning the nurse might suggest the child visit the playroom so he can work out the fear and anger he is feeling.

Other times, she says, a nurse may suggest a child spend some time there the day he has surgery scheduled.

Breckinridge recalls one child who came to the playroom before surgery who was feeling a lot of anxiety.

"We got the child to march vigorously around the room and play with balls," she says. "Then we focused on quiet activities. When his pre-op medication arrived, he was much quieter, and he was more comfortable about what was ahead."

"He'd had a chance to work off some of the anxiety that comes from being in a strange environment," says Smith.

Although the playroom has been open for only two months, Smith and Breckinridge say that many parents have told them how much they appreciate the program.

Often the room is filled with children, some of whom are dragging IV stands along with them. Other times there may be only one or two children there.

"Even if there is only one child who benefits from something here that's good enough for us," says Breckenridge.

Because brothers and sisters of pediatric patients always are allowed to visit with their hospitalized siblings, they often use the playroom, too.

"It provides them with an environment and the personnel to help them express their fears about a brother or sister who is hospitalized," says Smith.

Trauma cases can be saved

By The Associated Press

At least 30 percent of the 165,000 persons who die each year in the United States from trauma could be saved by prompt surgical care such as that available at U.S. trauma centers, according to Dr. Donald Trunkey, who is the head of the surgery department at San Francisco General Hospital in San Francisco, Calif.

INTEREST IN STIR-FRYING INSPIRES NEW FROZEN ENTREES

The popularity of stir-frying, fueled by Americans' interest in healthy, nutritious foods, has inspired a new frozen entree being introduced by The Pillsbury Company in selected markets.

Green Giant Stir Fry Frozen Entrees are the first of their kind to appear in supermarket freezer cases. Comprised of beef, chicken or shrimp, crisp vegetables, a seasoned sauce and either rice or noodles, each entree is stir-fried by the home cook in a skillet or wok in about 10 minutes. All of the single serving entrees have calorie counts under 350 and provide generous amounts of many of the key nutrients needed in daily diets.

Unlike other frozen entrees, the meat portion of Stir Fry Entrees is not precooked, resulting in higher quality and better flavor. The meat, vegetables, sauce and rice or noodles of each entree are packaged separately to maintain color, flavor and texture of each and to make preparation easier.

To prepare the entree, a small amount of water is added to a skillet or wok to stir-fry the rice or noodles. After removing the rice or noodles, oil is added to stir-fry the meat and then the vegetables. The whole process, from freezer to table, takes about 10 minutes and requires only a skillet or wok and a wooden spoon.

The six varieties available include Shrimp Fried Rice, Beef Teriyaki, Szechuan Beef, Cashew Chicken, Sweet and Sour Chicken and Chicken and Garden Vegetables.

Pillsbury expects the entrees to be especially popular with singles and working couples based on reactions of these groups in consumer focus group discussions. After trying the products, these people were particularly enthusiastic because the entrees were quick to prepare with no "waiting" time, the ingredients were high quality and "balanced" and the entrees gave the cook a sense of accomplishment because he or she actually made the dish rather than just heating it in the oven.

DNA 'probes' find genetic disease

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Dr. Brenda Conner remembers the moment when scientists at the City of Hope first came up with the test that enabled them to "read" an individual's DNA for evidence of genetic disease.

After years of laboratory detective work, researchers had created a radioactive probe made from synthetic DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) that was capable of detecting a single alteration — called a "point mutation" — in the long genetic code.

The first probe developed at City of Hope by a research team headed by Dr. Bruce Wallace was able to detect the point mutation linked to sickle cell anemia, a blood disorder that largely affects blacks. That first probe represented a major breakthrough in diagnostic technology. It was the forerunner of other genetic screening tests that scientists predict one day will allow them to make prenatal diagnosis of all hereditary diseases, including cancer.

"I remember running up the steps breathless to tell people about it," Conner said this week, more than a year later. "I couldn't talk, I was so excited."

The researchers achieved their breakthrough by using a "gene machine" to construct synthetic DNA out of organic compounds. The synthetic DNA is sensitive enough to detect a single change, or "misspelling," in the four-letter base that forms the genetic code. Thousands of such messages are carried on each strand of DNA.

Since then, City of Hope scientists have created four more radioactive probes, capable of detecting such diseases as thalassemia, an inherited chronic anemia found chiefly in the Mediterranean region, and Alpha-1-antitrypsin deficiency, a defect in a blood enzyme that can result in emphysema and other lung disorders. Already used on an experimental basis, the tests should be available to the public by next year, pending approval by state and federal health agencies, according to Dr. Raymond Teplitz, chief of cytogenetics at the City of Hope.

The tests soon may be used on an international basis as well, noted Teplitz, who recently returned from a trip to Greece and Nigeria. A large percentage of the populations there are afflicted with hereditary diseases — thalassemia in Greece, sickle cell anemia in Nigeria — and the World Health Organization has expressed interest in using the test for genetic screening in both countries.

Teplitz reported that researchers are currently working on probes for three genetic mutations linked to diabetes. In the future, they hope to isolate the gene defect responsible for cystic fibrosis and muscular dystrophy. Within the next year, scientists hope to double the number of probes currently available for specific diseases.

The tests could be performed on cells obtained from a fetus in a standard amniocentesis during the first trimester of pregnancy. After birth, samples of blood or other tissue could be used for the DNA testing, geneticists explain. City of Hope plans to charge $300 for the tests, which take less than three weeks to complete.

Eventually, Teplitz and Conner say, hospitals will house "libraries" of genetic probes that will "tell physicians with certainty what hereditary disease is present."

Some right-to-life advocates worry about the implications of prenatal genetic testing, fearing it would lead to more abortions if parents definitely know that their children will suffer debilitating illnesses. Teplitz believes these fears are unfounded, contending, "We provide information to parents. We don't tell them what to do. Parents can prepare themselves in all ways for this."

City of Hope officials say their radioactive probes offer the only "unambiguous" method for determining if a specific hereditary disease is present. With this test, researchers can look directly at the source for genetically-carried disorders — the fragment of DNA that may be mutated.

Scientists know if there is a gene mutation by studying X-rays of the synthetic DNA that acts as a radioactive probe. If the synthetic DNA with the point mutation binds with the donor's DNA, then that signals the presence of a hereditary disease.

The most exciting applications of the DNA testing are in the future. Scientists are developing probes to detect oncogenes, the mysterious genes that "turn on" in certain individuals, causing cancer. These probes could provide an early warning system to those at high risk of cancer to avoid environmental hazards, such as smoking and diet, that may trigger the disease.

By gradually unraveling the genetic code, scientists are coming closer to understanding the nature of disease — and eventually of life itself.

The double helix

Deoxyribonucleic acid

Shaped like a twisted rope ladder, a DNA molecule's sides are made up of phosphate and deoxyribose sugar and its rungs of four chemical bases—adenine, cytosine, guanine and thymine.

Each sequence of chemicals carries instructions somewhat like the dot-and-dash Morse code that guide the formation in cells of a particular protein. The different proteins, in turn, carry out all the body's specific processes and functions, from conception of an individual on through life.

Baby babble not dribble, according to professor

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — The babble of babies, often dismissed as mere noise-making, can provide clues to possible hearing or learning disorders, a professor says.

The absence of babble — or a lack of resemblace of the babble to the parents' native language — by children as young as 3 months can indicate hearing disabilities or physical handicaps in the mouth and throat, said Michael Lewis, professor of pediatrics at the Rutgers Medical School of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey.

Left uncorrected, such problems can make it difficult for the child to learn, he said. He added that once parents and doctors discover the problem, they can speak louder or have children fitted for a hearing aid so that they do not miss out on further interaction.

Lewis is putting together a program to make parents and doctors more aware of the developmental problems that can plague children between the ages of 3 months and 3 years. It will focus on doctors' screening procedures rather than the children themselves, Lewis said.

The project, which began last fall and will last for four years, is being funded with a $600,000 grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. Similar funding has been provided for related research at Vanderbilt University in Tennessee, the state of Florida, the University of Colorado and the University of Iowa.

Lewis also began a three-year project last fall, funded by a $400,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education, to study children between the ages of 2 and 5 who have been slow to learn how to talk. He said children in about 60 families will be studied.

DEAR ABBY

Dating honesty best policy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed "Thanks, but No Thanks" asks, "When a woman does not want to date a man, how does she turn him down without hurting his feelings?"

It isn't easy to turn down a man without hurting his feelings. As a man who's been turned down a lot, I should know. Be honest. If he has BO or bad breath, tell him. You will be doing him a favor. If you think he's too short, too fat, too young or too old for you, tell him, so he'll quit asking you.

Giving a guy false hope will hurt him more in the long run than an honest truth. Tell him! He'll live. I did. — CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

DEAR ABBY: I've been turned down for a date with, "Sorry, I have to wash my hair." Now, if a man isn't turned off by that, he must be a masochist. I would have appreciated a lie such as, "I'm involved right now in a personal relationship where I simply don't date, but thanks anyway." — J.D. IN L.A.

DEAR ABBY: If a girl is asked out by someone she has just met and has no desire to date, she could tell him that she has an obligation to someone who is very important to her and she wants to remain faithful to that person, so she must decline. That "person" is herself, of course, but he doesn't need to know that. — SHARI, BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR ABBY: Saying "Thanks, but no thanks" has always worked for me. But it must be said with sincerity and kindness. Don't waste his time or yours. The truth is sure to come out eventually, which will hurt his feelings much more than an up-front, honest answer. And since a lot of women are now asking the guys out, remember, this works both ways. — NO LIES IN MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR ABBY: When I was a cocktail waitress in Chicago, I worked with a very good-looking girl from Columbus, Ga., who had to practically beat the men off with a baseball bat. When someone she didn't care for would ask her out, she'd smile sweetly and say, "Oh, honey, I can't go out with you; my fiance wouldn't like it!" — I REMEMBER BUNNY SUE

DEAR ABBY: What's the big deal about turning down a date? There's not a man (or woman) in the world who hasn't been turned down by someone. Be 100 percent honest. If you say, "Thanks, but no thanks," and he asks, "Why?" just say, "Because I don't want to."

The more lies you make up ("I have another date," "I'm coming down with the flu" or "I'm going out of town" etc.), the more guilty you'll feel. And you won't get away with it. A lie always comes home to roost. — KANSAS CITY KITTY

DEAR ABBY: What's so tough about turning down a date? I'm a guy who would prefer that the girl just say, "Sorry, you're not for me." Then I'd quit wasting my time and try someone else. — BEEN THERE IN ALASKA

DEAR ABBY: I have been teaching sex education in high school for 10 years, and that question comes up often. I tell my students: "If you don't want to go out with someone, say, 'I like you as a friend, OK? I like the relationship we have, so let's keep it light and friendly.'

"You have the right to say no. You don't owe anyone any more than a courteous reply. No apologies, no explanations, no excuses. And don't feel guilty!" — MARTHA R. ROPER, ST. LOUIS, MO.

DEAR ABBY: I once told a guy who asked me out that I couldn't accept a date because I was involved with another fellow. That didn't discourage him in the least; he kept asking. Finally I told him I was involved with another woman. I never heard from him again. — NO MORE HASSLES IN OMAHA

Moslem shopkeeper: 'Israelis killing life' of Lebanese city

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Ali Ghadar welcomed Israel's invasion of Lebanon in June 1982. He took advantage of the unofficial peace to visit the Jewish state and met socially with Israeli army officers.

Now, however, the 52-year-old Shiite Moslem merchant says Israel has lost the confidence of local residents and he predicts more Lebanese will take up arms against Israeli troops unless changes are made quickly.

"The Israelis are killing the life of the city. People here can't take any more," Ghadar said Sunday in his second-floor shop filled with lamps and rolls of wallpaper.

Outside, Israeli armored vehicles rumbled down Riyadh Solh Street, the main artery in the Mediterranean port city of 150,000. In contrast to pre-invasion days, few shoppers were seen and there were no cars along the curb where triple-parking was once normal.

The Israeli army, fearing car bomb attacks along its main supply route, has forbidden parking on the street. On Saturday at least two unattended cars were shot up by Israeli soldiers in armored vehicles, residents said.

"Why drive tanks and trucks down the main street? There are other roads and this is killing the life of our city. I ask you, would they like it if somebody drove tanks down Ben Yehuda Street (in Tel Aviv)?" said Ghadar.

There has been a recent upsurge of anti-Israeli guerrilla attacks, encouraged by local Moslem clergymen. Israel has responded by steadily tightening its control of roads and bridges that link southern Lebanon with Beirut, 25 miles to the north.

At the Awali River, people streamed across the bridge on foot past tanks and barbed wire in both directions. Cars, taxis and trucks loaded with merchandise crossed more slowly, one every 10 minutes or so.

There were women balancing unwieldy bundles on their heads, children pushing wheelbarrows of personal belongings and men struggling to open bulging suitcases for inspection by Israeli soldiers or militiamen of Maj. Saad Haddad's Christian forces. One elderly man with a cast on his foot crossed the 600-yard stretch on crutches.

"Sure people get angry. They wait a couple of hours and they lose patience. So do I if I have to wait to have my bags checked at an airport in Europe," said an Israeli officer who declined use of his name.

"Soon we hope to have a shuttle service of taxis to take people across and our new facility will be able to check eight cars or trucks at a time," the officer said, referring to a new crossing station under construction along the seacoast nearby.

A young militiaman estimated 5,000 people and 300 to 400 vehicles crossed the bridge daily between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. The independent Tel Aviv based Jafee Center for Strategic Studies estimates 6,000 vehicles and 15,000 to 20,000 people cross the Awali daily in normal times.

Contadora group approves plan

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Five Central American nations have approved a peace plan which, although stripped of some key proposals, urges free elections and removal of foreign military advisers from the war-torn region.

The document adopted Sunday contains many points suggested last month by the four nations of the year-old Contadora group. But a proposal for a moratorium on new arms acquisitions in the area after Feb. 29 was absent in the final statement, and it contained no timetable for withdrawal of foreign advisers.

The group — composed of the foreign ministers of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama — met 12 times during its yearlong effort to create a peace document acceptable to El Salvador, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Honduras.

At the end of the weekend meeting, after the final document was read by Panamanian presidential spokesman Jose Hernandez, the foreign ministers shook hands and embraced each other.

The agreement calls for an inventory of arms, military installations and soldiers by each Central American country with the goal of reducing each country's military presence and establishing "a reasonable balance of power in the area."

It calls for a census of foreign military advisers in each country, aimed at eliminating the advisers and other foreign soldiers taking part in military and security activities in the region.

There are U.S. military advisers in El Salvador, Cuban military advisers in Nicaragua and U.S. troops participating in joint military maneuvers in Honduras.

Asked why the arms moratorium was excluded, Foreign Minister Rodrigo Lloreda Caicedo of Colombia said, "You must first have an inventory."

He said it is a question of stages, and that the elimination of that part of the Contadora plan was more technical than a matter of policy.

The plan also calls for the elimination of groups trying to destabilize Central American governments, an apparent reference to internal guerrilla movements operating in most of the countries.

It called for similar treatment for irregular forces who use one Central American nation to attack another — a reference to U.S.-backed anti-Sandinista rebels based mostly in Honduras.

The Central American nations also agreed to write or revise electoral laws to guarantee popular participation in free elections. They also agreed to start programs of national conciliation and to strengthen refugee programs.

The plan also provides for establishing three commissions to verify compliance with the terms of the document. The commissions, to which each Central American nation will appoint two members, are to be set up by Jan. 31.

The agreement comes on the eve of the first anniversary of the Contadora group, formed Jan. 9, 1983, on a Panamanian island of the same name.

Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Barnica of Honduras said the final version took into account both the 21-point plan presented by the Contadora group and one proposed Friday night by El Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica, which put more emphasis on electoral and human rights reforms.

Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto of Nicaragua called the agreement "the most important step taken since the initiation of the Contadora process." Earlier, Nicaragua was angered by the Central American proposal, calling it "a rejection" of the Contadora process.

Elsewhere in Central America, the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry said Sunday it sent a note to Secretary of State George P. Shultz blaming the United States for two attacks this weekend on a sugar plantation near the Nicaragua's Montelimar military base, 37 miles south of Managua.

Cambodians fear Vietnamese attack

RITSISEN CAMP, Cambodia (AP) — Families are building bunkers and guerrillas are fortifying a barrier around this sprawling camp to guard against a feared Vietnamese attack on resistance strongholds along the Thai-Cambodian border.

"I have planned for a civilian evacuation if the Vietnamese forces attack," camp chief Thou Tson said Sunday. "My troops still need weapons to fight against Vietnamese aggressors."

What Thou Tson and others fear is a repeat of last year's dry-season drive by Hanoi's forces against several resistance encampments. Tens of thousands of civilians fled into Thailand in the wake of the attacks and a number were killed by artillery barrages and land mines.

Vietnamese troops toppled the brutal Khmer Rouge regime in Cambodia five-years ago, and have occupied Phnom Penh since. A coalition of the communist Khmer Rouge and two non-communist groups — one led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk and the other called the Khmer People's Natonal Liberation Front — is fighting to oust the pro-Hanoi government.

Thailand's National Security Council chief, Squadron Leader Prasong Soonsiri, touring the Thai-Cambodian area Sunday, told The Associated Press he was considering providing Cambodian civilians temporary asylum in Thai territory if another offensive is launched this year.

The asylum would be granted for humanitarian reasons and the Cambodians would have to return across the border after the fighting subsided, he said.

Prasong said he was worried the Vietnamese would use air power this year to back their ground troops along the frontier. He cited intelligence reports that indicated nine Soviet-supplied MI-24 helicopter gunships had been moved from Hanoi to southern Vietnam for probable use in Cambodia.

South Africa pulls back from Angola

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa said its troops were pulling back from positions in Angola today, but a military spokesman refused to say how soon the withdrawal would be completed.

Maj. John Rolt said he could only confirm that the pullback, announced Sunday, was proceeding. He said he did not know how far south the troops will go or whether they would continue roaming Angola's southern provinces in search of black-nationalist guerrillas.

South Africa launched an offensive in Angola on Dec. 6, saying it sought to disrupt the planned rainy-season guerrilla drive by the South-West Africa Peoples' Organization — SWAPO.

On Sunday, two days after the United Nations Security Council condemned South Africa's offensive, Defense Minister Magnus Malan said the guerrilla operations were smashed and troops were to be withdrawn.

SWAPO has fought a 17-year bush war against South Africa's administration of South-West Africa, a former German colony also called Namibia.

U.S.S.R. discussed troop withdrawal, paper reports

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Soviet Union, in a secret and apparently abortive attempt to settle the war in Afghanistan, outlined a timetable for troop withdrawal last April in talks with Pakistan, the Los Angeles Times said today.

The withdrawal would have taken place over 18 months but was phrased in vague and uncertain terms, the paper said, adding that the offer marked the only instance in which Moscow appeared to demonstrate flexibility in discussing the Afghan war, which has entered its fifth year.

Soviet sources in Moscow, which the paper didn't identify, insisted the offer was serious.

They said it reflected the Kremlin's recognition that the long conflict with Muslim insurgents had reached a stalemate that military force was not likely to break and that a political settlement guaranteeing Afghanistan's neutrality was now the best solution.

In return for the withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan, Pakistan would have been expected to seal its border against the flow of men and arms to Afghan insurgents fighting the Soviet-installed regime in Kabul, the sources said.

The Soviet sources, which the newspaper said appeared to be speaking without official authorization, said Pakistan responded by proposing a six-month timetable for the withdrawal of Soviet troops.

For reasons the paper said could not be learned, the discussions went no further, and by last June the talks appeared to be dead.

Factory manager in China executed for accepting bribes

PEKING (AP) — A cigarette factory manager who exacted thousands of dollars in cash bribes and gifts from suppliers has been executed in Canton, China's state-run press reports.

The execution of Zhang Ying and the imprisonment of five accomplices, including his son, received front-page treatment Sunday in the national Workers Daily and Guangming Daily newspapers.They said Zhang had cost the state nearly $3 million.

It was the latest disclosure of a major "economic crime" and the Communist government warned that officials who bribe, embezzle or extort face severe punishment, including death.

The Guangming Daily said Zhang used his managerial position factory to amass more than $40,000 in bribes, plus television sets, refrigerators and other gifts from 1980 to 1982.

JDL leader released on bail

JERUSALEM (AP) — Rabbi Meir Kahane, the former leader of the militant Jewish Defense League who escaped police custody last week, has been released on bail after turning himself in.

Kahane was detained Thursday on a charge of inciting violence against Arabs, but he walked unnoticed out of an interrogation room.

Kahane surrendered voluntarily Sunday, and Judge Uzi Sivan rejected a prosecutor's appeal to hold Kahane for three days for further questioning. Sivan set bail at 25,000 Israeli shekels, or about $225, and required Kahane to deposit his Israeli passport.

Indian race 'all in the family'

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Maneka Gandhi, the daughter-in-law and a critic of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, says she will run for the parliament seat now held by the prime minister's son, Rajiv Gandhi.

The elections are scheduled for January 1985.

Rajiv Gandhi, the prime minister's political heir apparent, won the lower house seat for the Amethi district in Uttar Pradesh state in 1981. He has said he will seek re-election.

Ms. Gandhi, 27, said she was entering the race in Amethi "because it was my husband's seat." Her husband, Sanjay Gandhi, had been considered Indira Gandhi's political heir, but he died in a plane crash in 1980.

Cubans dedicate Lenin statue

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Fidel Castro and other top Cuban and Soviet officials presided at a dedication ceremony for a marble monument to Vladimir I. Lenin, the Soviet Union's first communist ruler.

The official Cuban news agency Prensa Latina, in a dispatch Sunday, said the sculpture was placed in the Havana park that bears Lenin's name. It said the monument was designed by a Soviet artist and a Cuban architect.

Soviet Ambassador Konstantin Kutashev and Soviet Culture Minister Piotr Demichev were among those at the ceremony.

Freeze damage manifest in visible leaf browning

A quick survey around town indicates some visible results of our recent cold spell. Ligustrums have a bronzy-gray cast to their leaves. This condition may be over the entire plant or in localized spots in a hedge. Almost every euonymous in the county has light brown stems and leaves in irregular patterns. Winter creeper euonymous and Chinese photinia now have leaves with a coloration similar to the ligustrums. Palm fronds are brown or browning rapidly. Oleander leaves and stems are variously light brown to gray in odd patterns. The prickly pear cacti in town are dismembering, literally falling apart at the joints. All of these maladies were caused by sustained temperatures less than 10 degrees F. during the past few weeks.

It seems strange that the visible browning is so random in its appearance. Remember that every home site has certain microclimates. Usually the south and southeastern sides of a home have slightly warmer conditions than the other facings. A few degrees may make a big difference in the extent of winter cold damage. The other major contributing factor to the apparent random nature of the cold damage was the condition of the plant as it went into the cold weather. Trees and shrubs that were drought stressed last summer are in the worst condition now. If your trees and shrubs show considerably more damage than the neighbors, you may want to change your future water management practices. Try watering the dripline of trees and shrubs instead of just the trunk.

All the plants mentioned above are evergreens. Deciduous trees and shrubs will show their damage this spring and it is very likely that the evergreens will continue to show some freeze related damage throughout the growing season of 1984.

In the meantime what should be done? If we don't receive substantial rains every 3-4 weeks through the winter then water your landscape plants.

Wait to prune dead wood until the latter part of January and through the month of February. It will be easier and better to prune dead branches from deciduous trees and shrubs this spring. This type of spring and summer pruning will not damage the plant. Follow good pruning practices (topping is not one) or you may add to the damage instead of correcting it. Fertilize trees and shrubs during the first weeks of March; now is too early. Avoid miracle cures and door-to-door pruners. The best things to do now are wait, water and be consoled that the majority of the ugly problems will eliminate themselves through new growth from healthy tissue next spring.

Just a reminder about the Surge Flow Conference sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service which will be held Wednesday at the Holiday Inn.

Surge flow irrigation is an old method of furrow irrigation which is being eyed by producers faced with high energy, water and equipment costs.

I believe this will be a most interesting and beneficial conference and encourage all Midland County producers to attend if at all possible.

The program will begin at 9 a.m. The registration fee is $15 and includes a baked cod and chicken fried steak luncheon and a copy of the conference proceedings.

Earnest Kiker is the Midland County Extension Agent.

Surge-flow irrigation conference to open Wednesday in Midland

A surge-flow irrigation conference sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service will be held Wednesday in the Holidome at 4300 W. Highway 80 in Midland.

Surge flow is an old method of furrow irrigation which is being considered by farmers who are trying to cope with high energy, water and equipment costs.

The method is similar to regular furrow irrigation but the water is cut on and off with a special valve which allows the irrigation water in the furrow to move out faster, said Joe Henggeler, Fort Stockton-based Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) irrigation specialist.

"Farmers have always had to waste large amounts of water just to get water to the ends of their fields," he said. "The conference has been designed to acquaint producers with the system and the equipment which is available for those interested in incorporating the system in their operation."

Henggeler is conference chairman.

Conference speakers will include:

—Wynn Walker, professor of agricultural and irrigation engineering at Utah State University, "Surge Flow in the West," at 9 a.m.

—Joe Henggeler, "Furrow Irrigation Management," 9:30 a.m.

—Alley Blair, University of Texas doctoral student, "Infiltration Rates with Surge Flow," at 9:50 a.m.

—Jerry Walker, U.S. Soil Conservation Service (SCS) irrigation engineer at Amarillo, "Surge Irrigation on Low Intake Soils," at 10:25 a.m.

—Mike Risinger, SCS soil scientist at Lubbock, "Measuring Soil-Water Properties and Wetted Profiles Under Surge Flow," at 1:15 p.m.

—Don Reddell, Texas A&M University agricultural engineer, "Development of a Computer-Controlled Surge System," at 1:35 p.m.

—Phil Johnson, Hub farmer and former TAEX economist, "Economic Evaluation of Surge Flow," at 1:55 p.m.

—Greg Sokora, Lubbock-based SCS irrigation engineer, "South High Plains Results with Surge Flow," at 2:25 p.m.

—Farmers in a panel discussion moderated by Wayne Wyatt, manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District in Lubbock, at 3:05 p.m. Panelists will be Steve Jones of Lubbock, Philip Bales of Stiles, Phil Johnson of Hub and James Mitchell of Wolfforth.

—Charles Stichler, Fort Stockton-based TAEX agronomist, "Cotton Growth and Water Use," at 3:50 p.m.

—Austin Stockton, Fort Stockton-based TAEX horticulturist, "Potential Vegetable Production with Surge Flow Irrigation Techniques," at 4:10 p.m.

Livestock show opens Sunday

The 35th annual Midland County Livestock Show will be held next Sunday and Jan. 16 and 17 in the Midland County Exhibit Building on U.S. Highway 80 East, according to Alan McWilliams, Midland County agricultural agent.

On exhibit will be calves, lambs, hogs and small animals raised by 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America youths in Midland County.

Calves, swine and lambs in the show will be weighed in from 8 to 11 a.m. on Sunday, and rabbits, chickens and goats will be registered at 2 p.m. that day. Judging of small animals will be at 3 p.m.

Midland County 4-H Clubs will sponsor a breakfast omelet rodeo from 6:30 to 9 a.m on Jan. 16. Judging of lambs, barrows and steers will be held that day.

Buyers of livestock in the 1983 show will be honored in a barbecue supper at 5 p.m. Jan. 17.

Stock show awards will be presented at 6:30 p.m. Jan. 17. The auction of livestock will be at 7 p.m.

The show is sponsored by the Midland County Livestock Association. Rusty Jones is president of the 37-member association, and R.D. Jones is show superintendent.

Cotton Inc. to hold meeting

LUBBOCK — Cotton Inc.'s annual Southwest regional meeting will be held at 10 a.m. Jan. 20 in Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

"It looks like for now we've finally gotten our cotton supplies in line with demand, and prices have responded accordingly," said Donald Johnson, executive vice president of the Plains Cotton Growers Association.

"But it's going to take a maximum effort from CI and all concerned to create the market demand needed to accommodate a production increase in 1984 without pushing prices back down," he said. "And that's what CI is all about."

Cotton Inc. is a producer-funded organization which promotes cotton marketing and research.

Fort Worth stock show to open

FORT WORTH — The 88th annual Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show and Rodeo will be held Jan. 25 through Feb. 5 in the Will Rogers Memorial Coliseum-Auditorium and buildings.

The program will include the formal dedication of the $16 million Amon G. Carter Jr. Exhibits Hall at 11 a.m. Feb. 2.

"We are excited about this year's program," said Delbert Bailey, the show's publicity manager.

Actor 'thought about food, played cards'

Sharif

LONDON (AP) — Actor Omar Sharif says he felt his career was practically over in the mid-1970s, but he's since fought to make a comeback — not in films, but on stage.

The 51-year-old Egyptian-born actor, whose movie hits have included "Lawrence of Arabia" and "Dr. Zhivago," had his first stage part in 25 years, playing the prince regent of Carpathia in Terence Rattigan's "The Sleeping Prince" at London's Haymarket Theater.

Also an expert at bridge, Sharif told a lecture at the National Film Theater on Sunday that in the mid-1970s, "I had nothing to do but think about food and play cards...I did not feel bitter about it. I felt broke...All I did was lead a dissolute life."

"In future," he continued, "unless something good comes up in films, I would rather stay in the theater."

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana arrived in royal style for an alpine skiing holiday — with Buckingham Palace giving no clue as to how long the 35-year-old heir to the British throne and the princess will be enjoying the slopes.

Charles and Diana arrived Sunday in Zurich aboard a private jet flown by the prince. They were met by a black limousine and whisked away to Liechtenstein.

The British royal couple spent a skiing holiday in the principality a year ago as guests at the Vaduz palace of prince Franz Josef II and were dogged by news photographers on what was intended to be a second honeymoon.

This time, following an appeal from Buckingham Palace, three of Britain's five tabloid newspapers agreed to leave the couple alone after a special photo session today.

Irons

NEW YORK (AP) — Jeremy Irons, star of the critical and box-office hit "The Real Thing" on Broadway, says his first choice of career was to be a veterinarian, but he went into acting because his dismal school record thwarted his original ambition.

The 35-year-old British actor said he wanted to be a veterinarian out of a desire for "the way of life of my childhood — of living in the country with dogs and horses — to continue forever."

Irons said that eventually he realized that the three things he enjoyed most were "riding horses, playing rugby and doing plays."

"Since there wasn't much of a career in the first two, I thought I'd try the third," he said.

Known to public TV viewers as Charles Ryder in "Brideshead Revisited," Irons also has starred in the films "The French Lieuteant's Woman" and "Betray."

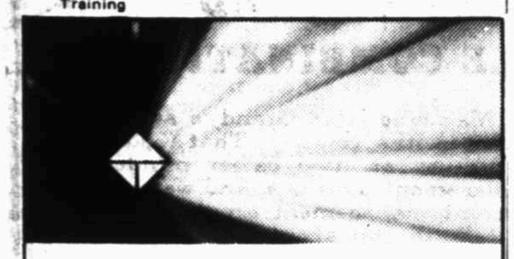
Training



Customer Education Representative — Learn Triad's System For Success.

At Triad Systems, we make complete business computer systems. We solve problems for our customers by providing systems that are easy to install and use. Our commitment to leadership in the inventory control industry has created the following opening for a career-minded individual to learn Triad's systems.

No Previous Experience

As a Customer Education Representative, you have the opportunity to learn Triad's systems and conduct education classes for customers, sales personnel, and field service personnel. You'll start with a formal four week training/orientation period and then work with an experienced representative. You'll be paid a salary plus expenses, even while you train.

We prefer that you have experience teaching or training in a technical, computer, or corporate environment. A BA, BS, or MBA in business with a major in marketing or financial accounting is a plus. You must be free to travel during your training period.

Take the first step toward a rewarding career with a leader in business computer systems. We have current openings in the Midland and Austin areas. Send your resume only to: Karl Stefansson, Triad Systems Corporation, 427 Sterzing, Suite C, Austin, TX 78704. We are an equal opportunity employer.

IS A HIGH-PERFORMANCE SEDAN LESS PURE BECAUSE IT'S SINFULLY LUXURIOUS?

The BMW 733i is lavishly appointed with electrically-operated leather bucket seats, richly-grained wood dash and door panels, a sunroof and every other amenity you're entitled to expect of an expensive luxury sedan. Yet none of this opulence detracts in any way from the kind of performance that "can take a limited amount of time and turn it into an experience to be savored for always" (Car and Driver).

DODGE MARKSMAN

The Limited Edition Ram Tough Truck That comes with a Limited Edition Winchester

5/100 YEARS 100,000 MILES

BUY THIS LIMITED EDITION MARKSMAN PICKUP AND DODGE WILL DISCOUNT THE AIR CONDITIONING AND GIVE IT TO YOU AT NO ADDITIONAL COST PLUS GET THIS LIMITED EDITION MARKSMAN RIFLE.

When you buy a Dodge Marksman, you'll also get a limited edition Winchester model XRT 30-30 rifle. Tailor-made for the collector, it will be a beautiful addition to any collection. And it's yours along with a removable gun rack. For legally qualified purchasers only, of course.

The Marksman, created by Dodge, is a Ram-Tough D150 or W150 (4 x 2 or 4 x 4) that comes in your choice of five different colors, with air conditioning, tinted glass, radio, Royal SE decor, deluxe wipers, 30-gallon fuel tank, upper and lower moldings, marksman Decal and much more.

Like all our American-built 1984 full-size pickups, it's backed by 5/100 rust protection. It's the perfect vehicle for you. And only your participating Dodge dealer has it.*

SEE YOUR LOCAL DODGE DEALER (area Dodge dealer) TODAY!

Because Dodge has made just a limited number of these special trucks, participating Dodge dealers can offer the Marksman package for a limited time only, and only as long as supplies last. So now is the time to get yours, before they're gone.

5 years, 100,000 miles, whichever comes first. Limited warranty on outer body rust-through. Upper body moulding included. Ask for details.*
