Permian Basin OIL & GAS LOG

Ward Strike Offset Site Is Planned

Texas Oil & Gas Corp. has staked site for No. 1-A Winter as a ¾-mile southwest outpost to the current lone 6,320-foot Devonian gas well in the Crawar, West multipay oil and gas field of Crane County.

It has a depth objective of 6,400 feet, and spots 330 feet from north and 990 feet from west lines of section 14, block B-20, PSL survey, 20 miles west of Crane.

Lubbock Oil Pool Gains Extension

The Smyer, Southeast (Clearfork) field of Lubbock County gained its second well and a location southwest extension with completion of V-F Petroleum, Inc., Midland, No. 1 Chumley Lindsey.

It finaled to pump 25 barrels of 34-gravity oil and 48 barrels of oil per day, through perforations at 5,830-5,844 feet. Gas-oil ratio measured 130-1. Perforations had been acidized with 4,600 gallons.

Wellsite is 1,320 feet from north and 467 feet from east lines of section 47, block P, ACH&B survey, four miles west of Lubbock.

The pool opener, Apache Corp. No. 1 York-Gentry, finaled in 1965, for 27 barrels of oil and 10 barrels of salt water daily, through perforations at 5,832-5,856 feet.

Midland Concern Potentials Gasser

Gas Development Corp., Midland, completed No. 2-31 Jo Nell Johnson as a 5/8-mile south and ½-mile southeast extension to the Jo Nell (Canyon "D") gas field of Sutton County.

Calculated, absolute, open flow was for 2.6 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 8,367-8,829 feet, which had been fractured with 115,000 gallons and 115,000 pounds.

Location is 1,320 feet from north and 1,600 fset from west lines of section 31, GC&SF survey, abstract 169, 21 miles southwest of Sonora.

Menard Prospector Depth Is Amended

Terra Resources, Inc. of Houston filed application to amend contract depth from 2,800 feet to 3,100 feet, at No. 1 H. E. Parish, Menard County prospector.

Location is 660 feet from south and west lines of Jacob Brod survey 225, abstract 113, six miles southwest of Menard, 7½ miles northeast of the depleted Bevans (Strawn) field, and six miles southwest of Menard.

Operations have not commenced on the project.

President To Meet Public At Terminal On Arrival Saturday

By JOE SALMAN

President Ford's scheduled public dedication of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame Saturday has been forced inside by the downpour that hit the area today.

"We have reluctantly decided to hold the dedication ceremonies inside," a White House spokesman said at 2 p.m.

The public will be able to greet the President at Midland Regional Air Terminal, the spokesman said. "Air Force One, the President's plane, is scheduled to arrive at the air terminal at 4 p.m. Saturday. The President will spend about 30 minutes at the airport, make a few remarks and then meet the people.

"We are forced to do this because the parking area at the museum is too wet to allow cars in," the spokesman said. "The parking area at the airport is paved and more people can get to see the President."

The dedication ceremony will be televised live, the spokesman said.

President Ford will leave the Air Terminal at approximately 4:45. He will arrive at the museum at 5:15 p.m. Following the dedication ceremony, he will tour the museum and attend a reception.

The mayors of Midland and Odessa will welcome President Ford to the area at the Air Terminal.

"We are asking the people of the area who want to meet the President to go to the Air Terminal," the spokesman said. "The grounds at the museum are too wet for the public to park there. The Air Terminal will provide much better access," the spokesman said.

The museum officials have lined up an outstanding program for the museum's formal opening.

The escorts for the President to the speakers' platform will be Eagle Scouts Bob Young of Midland and Mike Willson of Odessa, and Girl Scouts Janet Orem of Midland and Margaret Jones of Odessa.

[illegible] expected to accompany the President from his car to the speakers' platform are Sen. John Tower and U.S. Rep. George Mahon.

The Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, will provide pre-dedication music and also play as the President makes his walk to the platform.

The invocation will be said by Lt. Col. Clarke W. Marshall [illegible]

'Unbelievable' Crowds Turn Out For President

By WALTER R. MEARS

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — Playing to crowds he called "just unbelievable," President Ford showed New Hampshire voters his handshaking, street-corner campaign style with an 11-hour quest for Republican votes in a special Senate election.

Candidate Ford says he'll be back next winter to seek White [illegible] for himself.

Ford's marathon campaign mission Thursday in behalf of Senate candidate Louis C. [illegible] seemed also to be a s[illegible] for his own candidacy in [illegible] that will hold the [illegible] presidential primary electio[illegible] 1976.

The President said he intends [illegible] to enter the New Hampshire primary, which is scheduled [illegible] Wednesday's rerun of a [illegible] November election.

Ford spent more time, [illegible] ered more territory, saw more people [illegible] said the decided a [illegible] tour instead of a [illegible] rally, would be the [illegible] to get the Ford mes[illegible] to people who may still be [illegible] decided about the. Tuesday [illegible] choice.

The most [illegible] man got out [illegible]

The President hailed his cross-state journey as part of a Republican show of unity behind Wyman. "We have presented a united front because we are convinced this is a crucial election," the President said.

The crowds were big, thousands of people in cities like Keene, Nashua and Portsmouth, hundreds in villages like Dublin—where the population is counted in the hundreds, 837 to be exact. In Exeter, the crowd in the town square rivaled the municipal population figure of just under 9,000.

Deputy White House Press Secretary John W. Hushen said the estimates of local officials and police in the 14 communities the President visited added up to 106,000 people.

Ford Wearing Protective Vest?

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — President Ford's security agents appear to have outfitted him with a protective vest to wear on ventures into crowds after a woman aimed a gun at him at close range last week.

Aside from that, security procedures were changed little Thursday as the President campaigned through southern New Hampshire, making 22 stops on a day-long tour to boost Republican Louis C. Wyman's chances in next Tuesday's special U.S. Senate election.

Ford displayed the same zest for shaking hands and mixing with crowds as he has on previous trips, and the cordon of a half-dozen agents around him was the same as in the past.

However, the outlines of what appeared to be a protective vest were visible clearly through the back of Ford's jacket [illegible] shirt was stretched [illegible] chest.

White House officials and Secret Service agents in the presidential party refused to confirm or deny that Ford was wearing a vest. It was his first extended trip since the arrest last Friday in Sacramento, Calif., of Lynette A. Fromme, a follower of convicted mass murderer Charles Manson, after she pointed a pistol at Ford at close range.

But several aides stressed that, if such a security procedure had been instituted, they would not be free to talk about it. Asked who would know, deputy presidential Press Secretary William I. Greener said, "Nobody who could tell you."

One agent, asked about the matter, said, "He may be wearing something that's not normal." He declined to elaborate.

Normal security procedures during the day included a helicopter that circled over the motorcade route and the blocking off of sections of the towns in advance of the President's arrival.

Large numbers of state and local police instituted strict security in several places. At one point along the route, a policeman crouched across the road, facing a wooded area and pointing a rifle at it.

One object of special security was Linda Kasabian, a former follower of Manson who has returned to her native New Hampshire. It was learned that a state police officer and a Secret Service agent were assigned to watch her movements during the day.

White House Decision Halts Intelligence Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford told the House intelligence committee today he wants it to return secret information supplied by the administration because four classified words that could cripple U.S. foreign policy were made public.

The President also warned the committee that it would receive no more material from U.S. intelligence agencies unless it agreed to clear through the administration all information to be made public.

The committee's investigation into U.S. intelligence activities came to an immediate halt.

Asked if the President's action would close down the committee's operations, Chairman Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., said, "It certainly does temporarily. There is no way on earth you can investigate the intelligence activities of the United States of America without access to classified information."

Pike said the committee will not return the classified information to Ford until committee members meet next week to plan their course of action.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Rex Lee delivered the President's message to the House committee. He said the President's action was prompted by disclosure of four words which were contained in reports on intelligence about the 1973 Middle East war.

The reports indicated U.S. intelligence agencies were caught by surprise by the outbreak of the war.

Lee did not say what the four words were.

The committee earlier had worked out agreements with intelligence officials to decide what material could be made public.

But Lee said the four words in dispute were released by the committee without intelligence officials' agreement. The words, he said, could irreparably harm Ford's conduct of foreign policy.

"The President's responsibility for the national security of the United States leaves him no alternative but to request the immediate return of all classified information previously provided this committee," Lee said.

He said intelligence agencies would withhold any additional information from the committee until the congressmen agree not to release future information without specific administration approval.

Four Classified Words To Blame

Pike asked Lee how he thought the committee could continue to function without access to classified material, prompting Lee to reply that the congressmen could honor traditional rules of secrecy.

"That's exactly what's wrong, Mr. Lee," Pike exploded. "For decades committees of Congress have not done their jobs and you've been loving it. You come up here and whisper in one friendly congressman's ear and in my opinion that's why we're in the mess we're in."

Lee said Congress has full authority over information it needs for its duties but not over secret information for which the President is responsible.

Pike said his committee could consider going to court to resolve the issue, but he noted the committee is under time pressure. It is due to report its findings to the full House by Jan. 31.

Argentine Guerrillas Killed

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — An army platoon blasted a terrorist hideout with 90mm cannon early Friday, killing three leftist Montonero guerrillas inside, police said. News reports said the body of a kidnaped oil executive shot in the head was found outside the house.

Police said the army was called at dawn Friday after a six-hour battle during which police officers were unable to silence a terrorist firing a machine gun from the roof of the house.

Four policemen were wounded in the battle. The guerrillas also tossed hand grenades and Molotov cocktails.

The official news agency Telam said police later found the body of the executive a few yards from the house. The independent news agency Noticias Argentinas said the dead man was apparently Luis Domenech, an Argentine officer of a private oil refinery kidnaped Aug. 12.

Police said the terrorist house was severely damaged by three shell blasts fired by an army platoon called out of La Plata. The bodies of two men and a woman were found inside and police said other terrorists may have escaped.

Police reports said the clash with the Montonero guerrillas took place in a suburb of La Plata, 30 miles south of Buenos Aires. Earlier reports had placed it in the village of Florencia Varela.

Lockheed Paid Bribe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. paid or promised $106 million in aircraft sales commissions to Saudi Arabian businessman Adnan Khashoggi, according to Senate testimony today by Lockheed officials.

Directly contradicting recent public statements by Khashoggi, Lockheed Chairman Daniel J. Haughton swore that Khashoggi said that he had to use some of the commission money to bribe Saudi officials to buy Lockheed airplanes.

Lockheed salesman Bill Cowden gave similar testimony.

"I guess that he told me on more than one occasion ... that it was necessary for him to make payoffs to officials," Cowden told the Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations.

Haughton said that on some occasions Lockheed made payoffs directly to Saudi officials without going through Khashoggi.

He said one such payoff involved money which Lockheed deposited in a Swiss bank account of the Saveria Establishment.

Lockheed documents released in connection with today's hearing say that Lockheed paid $14.8 million into the Saveria account in 1974.

Saveria was set up by Khashoggi, the documents indicate. One memorandum quoted a person identified only as "P.K." as saying that he was to receive 40 per cent of everything paid to Saveria as commissions for selling Lockheed's C130 Hercules transport planes to the Saudis.

In today's testimony, Haughton said that one $400,000 payment to Khashoggi was intended as reimbursement for what Khashoggi said was a payoff to an unnamed Saudi official.

Lockheed memos refer to the $400,000 as a "special adjustment."

Nation's Drivers Ignore Speed Limit

By G. G. LaBELLE
Associated Press Writer

The nation's drivers are still whizzing along highways above the 55 mile per hour limit designed to conserve energy despite recent increases in gasoline prices, an Associated Press survey shows.

In the survey, AP reporters drove at 55 m.p.h. for an hour during a weekday noontime this week on highways across the country. The test showed that in only one state was the reporter, while driving at the legal limit, able to pass more cars than passed him.

And in that state, West Virginia, the reporter said he believed the test was thrown off by drivers from the opposite direction blinking their lights to warn of a radar speed trap.

The survey also showed:

—The number of speeding tickets is up considerably over the period before the 55 m.p.h. limit was put into effect in March of last year. In some cases the number is more than double or triple what in was in the pre-55 m.p.h. period.

—Police have increased attempts to trap speeders, in some cases adding radar units and unmarked patrol cars. Some of these efforts are apparently aimed at preventing loss of federal highway funds, which can be taken away from states not enforcing the 55 m.p.h. limit.

Earlier this week, the U.S. Transportation Department ordered all states to furnish data showing they were enforcing the lower speed limit.

—Police officials in most states believe that drivers, if not following the 55 m.p.h. limit, are at least driving at speeds below what they did before it went into effect. Many police also said they thought lowered speed limits had lowered traffic fatalities, though safety officials say figures do not necessarily substantiate this.

—Opinions of police varied on whether drivers were complying with the lower speed limit more now than when it first went into effect.

The highest incidence of speeding was reported in New Jersey, where the test driver reported he was passed by more than 200 vehicles on the New Jersey Turnpike and passed only two vehicles.

On the opposite end of the spectrum was New Mexico, where the reporter said he was passed by five vehicles and passed four. But he noted one of the cars passing him was a state patrol car with its lights flashing.

The reporter in New Jersey noted that the biggest offenders seemed to be trucks, most of which seemed to be driving at speeds of around 70 m.p.h., about what they did before the lowered limits. Some police and service station operators in other states had the same feeling and said that salesman were also more frequent offenders.

Charles Clinton, a Texas trucker, expressed the attitude of many of his colleagues: "I waste more fuel gearing down to get over the hills than I save going 55. In a truck you need to be able to go 65 to 70 to get a run at the hills."

Some Chappaquiddick Records Missing

By RICHARD PYLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Original police records on the Chappaquiddick incident involving Sen. Edward M. Kennedy are still missing, despite assertions by two former police chiefs that they were returned to the files last April.

Officials of the Edgartown police department at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., say they cannot find the documents. "We've looked everywhere. We honestly don't know where they are," Patricia McLeod, a special police officer, said in a telephone interview.

The mystery of the vanished records was raised recently in a book by Carl Gottlieb, a script writer for the movie "Jaws" which was filmed at Martha's Vineyard last summer.

Gottlieb said he had been told by Jesse Oliver II, then the chief of the 12-member Edgartown department, that the records of the 1969 auto accident that cost the life of Mary Jo Kopechne had disappeared from the files.

However, between the time that Gottlieb talked with Oliver and the book was published, the missing documents—including the original accident report and a copy of Kennedy's first statement to police—were said to have been returned to the department.

Dominick J. Arena, who was Edgartown's police chief at the time of the Chappaquiddick incident, said in another interview that when he quit the department in 1973, he took some of the records with him.

Now police chief in Essex Junction, Vt., Arena said he wanted the papers for his own use in answering questions from newsmen and others.

"The problem was that when you get so deeply involved in something, you are constantly being questioned," Arena said. He was among the first officials to reach the bridge from which Kennedy's car plunged, and he later charged the senator with failing to report the accident.

"I have to admit—I'm somewhat red-faced—that I had some of the originals," he said. "I didn't realize there were no copies in the files. But since then I've sent them all back. You could come in here with a search warrant and you wouldn't find anything."

Oliver was suspended as police chief for accepting money from Universal Studios, makers of "Jaws," and other alleged improprieties. He has since resigned but supports Arena's claim to having returned the Chappaquiddick material.

"He sent the records back last April and they were there in the files when I left the department in June," Oliver said.

As to what happened to the documents since then or why the present department officials can't find them, he said, "I have no idea. That's their problem."

Isabel Peron Planning Month-Long Vacation

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina's foreign minister says President Isabel Peron will start a month's leave of absence Saturday because of extreme fatigue but will not leave the country.

Foreign Minister Angel F. Robledo told a group of foreign newsmen that the 44-year-old president is expected to rest at the Andes mountain resort of Bariloche or at Mar del Plata, on the coast, where she spent a six-day vacation last month.

Robledo said Mrs. Peron is expected back at work before Oct. 17, a date observed by the Peronist movement as the start of the late Juan D. Peron's rise to power in 1945.

Senate President Italo Luder, Mrs. Peron's constitutional successor since there is no vice president, will become acting president, Robledo said. He denied reports that Luder would make cabinet changes during Mrs. Peron's absence

"The president is very tired and her doctors have recommended a rest," said the foreign minister, who is also first vice president of the Peronist party.

Mrs. Peron has been under fire for more than two months because of her inability to cope with the nation's desperate economic situation, the split between conservatives and leftists in the Peronist movement and the terrorists who have killed more than 600 persons since she succeeded her husband 14 months ago.

Two Men Charged In Pistol Slaying

NACOGDOCHES, Tex. (AP) — Two men have been charged here in connection with the murder of Paul Box, 73, whose body was found Sunday shot several times with a .22 caliber pistol.

The two men, Kenneth Palafox, 28, and Michael Molandes, 19, were charged Thursday before Justice of the Peace Ocie Moreland, who denied bond.

Tenneco President To Ignore Alleged Assassination Plot

HOUSTON (AP) — Wilton E. Scott, president and chief executive of Tenneco, Inc., says he will ignore a threat on his life contained in an alleged assassination list revealed by a former roommate of Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme.

Fromme, a member of the Charles Manson family, is charged in California with trying to shoot President Ford. Sandra Good, a former roommate, said the list contains more than 100 pages of names of employes of companies which her group believes are spoiling the Earth.

Scott was one of eight Houston residents whose names allegedly are included on the death list. Six of the eight are connected in some way with Tenneco or its subsidiaries.

"I will completely ignore the threats," Scott said. "I won't take any additional protection measures, because although I have a lot of worries, it (fear of assassination) is not one of them."

Scott scoffed at the threats, saying he has received several threats on his life in the past and considers them "a part of business life."

Other Houston residents on the list are: Simon Askin, executive vice president of Tenneco; Harold Daniels, another Tenneco vice president; Conrad Collier, former director of public relations and advertising for Tenneco Realty, Inc., a subsidiary of Tenneco; Omar Simonds Jr., president of Tenneco Realty, Inc.; Charles Webb, senior vice president of Tenneco Realty; Phyllis Blanchard, with the General Foods office here; and Richard Davis, identified only as a Houston oilman.

Webb said he couldn't understand why he was included on the list.

"I can understand why Mr. Scott's on the list, he's the president, but I'm only a real estate man," Webb said.

Collier said, "Those people (Manson family) are getting nuttier every day. I can't think of any statement I ever made concerning them."

A General Foods spokesman said Blanchard has not been to California and has no relatives there. The company has warehouses in California and Blanchard's job involves routing shipments there, the spokesman said.

Final Preparations For President Ford's Visit Under Way

By JOE SALMAN

Officials of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame are hurrying with last-minute preparations for the first visit in history by an incumbent President to Midland.

The occasion is the formal opening of the $1.7-million-dollar museum just off Interstate 20 near its intersection with the Rankin Highway (Texas 349).

The dedication ceremonies will begin at 5 p. m.

Museum officials this morning said they did not know what effect the wet weather would have on the planned program.

"If the rain stops today and the sun comes out, we will conduct everything as planned," one museum official said.

Homer Fort, director of the museum, said a check on the weather forecast will be made in the early afternoon.

"We definitely will have the dedication ceremony, and the President definitely will speak. We do not plan to move the ceremonies from the museum grounds," Fort said.

Fort said much of the program may have to be canceled, but as of this morning the word is "Go" for a full-scale program.

The President is due to arrive Saturday afternoon at Midland Regional Air Terminal. However, law enforcement officials urge Midlanders not to try and see the President there, but to go to the dedication site.

The museum officials have lined up an outstanding program, weather permitting, for the museum's formal opening.

The escort for the President to the speakers' platform will be Eagle Scouts Bob Young of Midland and Mike Willson of Odessa, and Girl Scouts Janet Orem of Midland and Margaret Jones of Odessa.

Also expected to accompany the President from his car to the speakers' platform are Sen. John Tower and U.S. Rep. George Mahon.

The Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, will provide pre-dedication music and also play as the President makes his walk to the platform.

The invocation will be said by Lt. Col. Gerald W. Marshall, chaplain, Goodfellow Air Force Base, San Angelo.

The flag raising ceremony will be conducted by the Honor Guard of Webb Air Force Base at Big Spring at which time the symphony orchestra will play the national anthem.

'Unbelievable' Crowds Turn Out For President

By WALTER R. MEARS

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — Playing to crowds he called "just unbelievable," President Ford showed New Hampshire voters his handshaking, street corner campaign style with an 11-hour quest for Republican votes in a special Senate election.

Candidate Ford says he'll be back next winter to seek White House votes for himself.

Ford's marathon campaign mission Thursday in behalf of Senate candidate Louis C. Wyman seemed also to be a search for his own candidacy in a state that will hold the first presidential primary election in 1976.

The President said he intends to enter the New Hampshire primary, which is scheduled [illegible] Tuesday's rerun of a stalemated November election.

Ford spent more time, covered more territory, saw more people than aides said they decided a conventional tour, instead of a campaign rally, would be the best way to get the Ford message to people who may still be undecided about the Tuesday election.

The President hilled his cross-state journey as part of a Republican show of unity behind Wyman. "We have presented a united front because we are convinced this is a crucial election," the President said.

The crowds were big, thousands of people in cities like Keene, Nashua and Portsmouth, hundreds in villages like Dublin—where the population is counted in the hundreds, 837 to be exact. In Exeter, the crowd in the town square rivaled the municipal population figure of just under 9,000.

Deputy White House Press Secretary John W. Hushen said the estimates of local officials and police in the 14 communities the President visited added up to 108,000 people.

Ford Wearing Protective Vest?

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — President Ford's security agents appear to have outfitted him with a protective vest to wear on ventures into crowds after a woman aimed a gun at him at close range last week.

Aside from that, security procedures were changed little Thursday as the President campaigned through southern New Hampshire, making 22 stops on a day-long tour to boost Republican Louis C. Wyman's chances in next Tuesday's special U.S. Senate election.

Ford displayed the same zest for shaking hands and mixing with crowds as he has on previous trips, and the cordon of a half-dozen agents around him was the same as in the past.

However, the outlines of what appeared to be a protective vest were visible clearly through the back of Ford's jacket and his shirt was stretched tautly across his chest.

White House officials and Secret Service agents in the presidential party refused to confirm or deny that Ford was wearing a vest. It was his first extended trip since the arrest last Friday in Sacramento, Calif., of Lynette A. Fromme, a follower of convicted mass murderer Charles Manson, after she pointed a pistol at Ford at close range.

But several aides stressed that, if such a security procedure had been instituted, they would not be free to talk about it. Asked who would know, deputy presidential Press Secretary William I. Greener said, "Nobody who could tell you."

One agent, asked about the matter, said, "He may be wearing something that's not normal." He declined to elaborate.

Normal security procedures during the day included a helicopter that circled over the motorcade route and the blocking off of sections of the towns in advance of the President's arrival.

Large numbers of state and local police instituted strict security in several places. At one point along the route, a policeman crouched across the road, facing a wooded area and pointing a rifle at it.

One object of special security was Linda Kasabian, a former follower of Manson who has returned to her native New Hampshire. It was learned that a state police officer and a Secret Service agent were assigned to watch her movements during the day.

Special Section Devoted To Event

A special 16-page section devoted to the Permian Basin Museum, Library and Hall of Fame and President Ford's visit to Midland is included in today's Reporter-Telegram.

Included in Section C are articles about the museum, the President and the oil industry.

Ward Strike Offset Site Is Planned

Texas Oil & Gas Corp. has staked site for No. 1-A Winter as a ¾-mile southwest outpost to the current lone 6,320-foot Devonian gas well in the Crawar, West multipay oil and gas field of Crane County.

It has a depth objective of 6,400 feet, and spots 330 feet from north and 990 feet from west lines of section 14, block B-20, PSL survey, 20 miles west of Crane.

Lubbock Oil Pool Gains Extension

The Smyer, Southeast (Clearfork) field of Lubbock County gained its second well and a location southwest extension with completion of V-F Petroleum, Inc., Midland, No. 1 Chumley Lindsey.

It finaled to pump 25 barrels of 34-gravity oil and 48 barrels of oil per day, through perforations at 5,830-5,844 feet. Gas-oil ratio measured 130-1. Perforations had been acidized with 4,600 gallons.

Wellsite is 1,320 feet from north and 467 feet from east lines of section 47, block P, ACH&B survey, four miles west of Lubbock.

The pool opener, Apache Corp. No. 1 York-Gentry, finaled in 1965, for 27 barrels of oil and 10 barrels of salt water daily, through perforations at 5,832-5,856 feet.

Midland Concern Potentials Gasser

Gas Development Corp., Midland, completed No. 2-31 Jo Nell Johnson as a 5/8-mile soiuth and ½-mile southeast extension to the Jo Nell (Canyon "D") gas field of Sutton County.

Calculated, absolute, open flow was for 2.6 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 8,367-8,829 feet, which had been fractured with 115,000 gallons and 115,000 pounds.

Location is 1,320 feet from north and 1,600 fset from west lines of section 31, GC&SF survey, abstract 169, 21 miles southwest of Sonora.

Menard Prospector Depth Is Amended

Terra Resources, Inc. of Houston filed application to amend contract depth from 2,800 feet to 3,100 feet, at No. 1 H. E. Parish, Menard County prospector.

Location is 660 feet from south and west lines of Jacob Brod survey 225, abstract 113, six miles southwest of Menard, 7½ miles northeast of the depleted Bevans (Strawn) field, and six miles southwest of Menard.

Operations have not commenced on the project.

Nation's Drivers Ignore Speed Limit

By G. G. LaBELLE
Associated Press Writer

The nation's drivers are still whizzing along highways above the 55 mile per hour limit designed to conserve energy despite recent increases in gasoline prices, an Associated Press survey shows.

In the survey, AP reporters drove at 55 m.p.h. for an hour during a weekday noontime this week on highways across the country. The test showed that in only one state was the reporter, while driving at the legal limit, able to pass more cars than passed him.

And in that state, West Virginia, the reporter said he believed the test was thrown off by drivers from the opposite direction blinking their lights to warn of a radar speed trap.

The survey also showed:

—The number of speeding tickets is up considerably over the period before the 55 m.p.h. limit was put into effect in March of last year. In some cases the number is more than double or triple what in was in the pre-55 m.p.h. period.

—Police have increased attempts to trap speeders, in some cases adding radar units and unmarked patrol cars. Some of these efforts are apparently aimed at preventing loss of federal highway funds, which can be taken away from states not enforcing the 55 m.p.h. limit.

Earlier this week, the U.S. Transportation Department ordered all states to furnish data showing they were enforcing the lower speed limit.

—Police officials in most states believe that drivers, if not following the 55 m.p.h. limit, are at least driving at speeds below what they did before it went into effect. Many police also said they thought lowered speed limits had lowered traffic fatalities, though safety officials say figures do not necessarily substantiate this.

—Opinions of police varied on whether drivers were complying with the lower speed limit more now than when it first went into effect.

The highest incidence of speeding was reported in New Jersey, where the test driver reported he was passed by more than 200 vehicles on the New Jersey Turnpike and passed only two vehicles.

On the opposite end of the spectrum was New Mexico, where the reporter said he was passed by five vehicles and passed four. But he noted one of the cars passing him was a state patrol car with its lights flashing.

The reporter in New Jersey noted that the biggest offenders seemed to be trucks, most of which seemed to be driving at speeds of around 70 m.p.h., about what they did before the lowered limits. Some police and service station operators in other states had the same feeling and said that salesman were also more frequent offenders.

Charles Clinton, a Texas trucker, expressed the attitude of many of his colleagues: "I waste more fuel gearing down to get over the hills than I save going 55. In a truck you need to be able to go 65 to 70 to get a run at the hills."

Some Chappaquiddick Records Missing

By RICHARD PYLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Original police records on the Chappaquiddick incident involving Sen. Edward M. Kennedy are still missing, despite assertions by two former police chiefs that they were returned to the files last April.

Officials of the Edgartown police department at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., say they cannot find the documents. "We've looked everywhere. We honestly don't know where they are," Patricia McLeod, a special police officer, said in a telephone interview.

The mystery of the vanished records was raised recently in a book by Carl Gottlieb, a script writer for the movie "Jaws" which was filmed at Martha's Vineyard last summer.

Gottlieb said he had been told by Jesse Oliver II, then the chief of the 12-member Edgartown department, that the records of the 1969 auto accident that cost the life of Mary Jo Kopechne had disappeared from the files.

However, between the time that Gottlieb talked with Oliver and the book was published, the missing documents—including the original accident report and a copy of Kennedy's first statement to police—were said to have been returned to the department.

Dominick J. Arena, who was Edgartown's police chief at the time of the Chappaquiddick incident, said in another interview that when he quit the department in 1973, he took some of the records with him.

Now police chief in Essex Junction, Vt., Arena said he wanted the papers for his own use in answering questions from newsmen and others.

"The problem was that when you get so deeply involved in something, you are constantly being questioned," Arena said. He was among the first officials to reach the bridge from which Kennedy's car plunged, and he later charged the senator with failing to report the accident.

"I have to admit—I'm somewhat red-faced—that I had some of the originals," he said. "I didn't realize there were no copies in the files. But since then I've sent them all back. You could come in here with a search warrant and you wouldn't find anything."

Oliver was suspended as police chief for accepting money from Universal Studios, makers of "Jaws," and other alleged improprieties. He has since resigned but supports Arena's claim to having returned the Chappaquiddick material.

"He sent the records back last April and they were there in the files when I left the department in June," Oliver said.

As to what happened to the documents since then or why the present department officials can't find them, he said, "I have no idea. That's their problem."

Isabel Peron Planning Month-Long Vacation

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina's foreign minister says President Isabel Peron will start a month's leave of absence Saturday because of extreme fatigue but will not leave the country.

Foreign Minister Angel F. Robledo told a group of foreign newsmen that the 44-year-old president is expected to rest at the Andes mountain resort of Bariloche or at Mar del Plata, on the coast, where she spent a six-day vacation last month.

Robledo said Mrs. Peron is expected back at work before Oct. 17, a date observed by the Peronist movement as the start of the late Juan D. Peron's rise to power in 1945.

Senate President Italo Luder, Mrs. Peron's constitutional successor since there is no vice president, will become acting president, Robledo said. He denied reports that Luder would make cabinet changes during Mrs. Peron's absence

"The president is very tired and her doctors have recommended a rest," said the foreign minister, who is also first vice president of the Peronist party.

Mrs. Peron has been under fire for more than two months because of her inability to cope with the nation's desperate economic situation, the split between conservatives and leftists in the Peronist movement and the terrorists who have killed more than 600 persons since she succeeded her husband 14 months ago.

Two Men Charged In Pistol Slaying

NACOGDOCHES, Tex. (AP) — Two men have been charged here in connection with the murder of Paul Box, 73, whose body was found Sunday shot several times with a .22 caliber pistol.

The two men, Kenneth Palafox, 28, and Michael Molandes, 19, were charged Thursday before Justice of the Peace Ocie Moreland, who denied bond.

Tenneco President To Ignore Alleged Assassination Plot

HOUSTON (AP) — Wilton E. Scott, president and chief executive of Tenneco, Inc., says he will ignore a threat on his life contained in an alleged assassination list revealed by a former roommate of Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme.

Fromme, a member of the Charles Manson family, is charged in California with trying to shoot President Ford. Sandra Good, a former roommate, said the list contains more than 100 pages of names of employes of companies which her group believes are spoiling the Earth.

Scott was one of eight Houston residents whose names allegedly are included on the death list. Six of the eight are connected in some way with Tenneco or its subsidiaries.

"I will completely ignore the threats," Scott said. "I won't take any additional protection measures, because although I have a lot of worries, it (fear of assassination) is not one of them."

Scott scoffed at the threats, saying he has received several threats on his life in the past and considers them "a part of business life."

Other Houston residents on the list are: Simon Askin, executive vice president of Tenneco; Harold Daniels, another Tenneco vice president; Conrad Collier, former director of public relations and advertising for Tenneco Realty, Inc., a subsidiary of Tenneco; Omar Simonds Jr., president of Tenneco Realty, Inc.; Charles Webb, senior vice president of Tenneco Realty; Phyllis Blanchard, with the General Foods office here; and Richard Davis, identified only as a Houston oilman.

Webb said he couldn't understand why he was included on the list.

"I can understand why Mr. Scott's on the list, he's the president, but I'm only a real estate man," Webb said.

Collier said, "Those people (Manson family) are getting nuttier every day. I can't think of any statement I ever made concerning them."

A General Foods spokesman said Blanchard has not been to California and has no relatives there. The company has warehouses in California and Blanchard's job involves routing shipments there, the spokesman said.

Banquet Tonight Kicks Off Mexican Independence Day

By LUANNA CROW

Thousands of Midlanders will celebrate an independence day this weekend — not a belated Fourth of July, but a right-on-schedule Sixteenth of September.

The occasion, Mexican independence, brings with it the fourth annual celebration in Midland, sponsored by the Eastside Lions Club.

A Lions banquet tonight in the Elks Club Lodge will kick off the four-day event.

The entire community can get involved Saturday afternoon when the Sixteenth of September parade begins to wind through a portion of downtown and east Midland. The focal point of this year's parade, which has recorded more than 50 entries, will be the fiesta's royalty.

Corina Reyes will reign as the fiesta queen, with Cindy Brito as her princess and Susie Olgin as her dutchess. Sylvia Quellar, last year's fiesta queen also will ride in the Saturday parade.

The parade will begin west of Midland City Hall at Lorraine and Illinois streets. Its route will take entries south to Wall Street, east to Main Street, north to Illinois Street, east to Lamesa Road and north to Nobles Street.

Opening ceremonies at the Midland County Exhibit Building will follow the parade. Following speeches and dedications, more than 50 individual booths will open to the public to offer foods of all kinds, games, entertainment and information.

Special activities for the Sixteenth of September will begin at 7 p.m. that evening in the Exhibit Building.

According to Grace Rayos, who will be mistress of ceremonies for the Saturday night events, the activities will be representative of the Mexican culture and events of that country's independence.

Included in the activities will be dances, recitations and proclamations. Following the coronation of the fiesta queen will be one of the most well-known independence day observations, the "Dialogo de las Banderas."

This event is a symbolic dialogue of Mexico, Spain and the United States and is enacted by three girls.

Sunday's program begins with the annual tournament of the Chicano Golf Association, teeing off at 8 a.m. Also on Sunday's agenda is the fiesta's official mass which will be read by Father Ronald Marlow of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Simon Field in Hogan Park will be the site of the 1 p.m. double header featuring the Midland Colts and the Ojinaga Nationales. A parachute show is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. at the exhibit building grounds, followed by the evening's activities at 6:30 p.m.

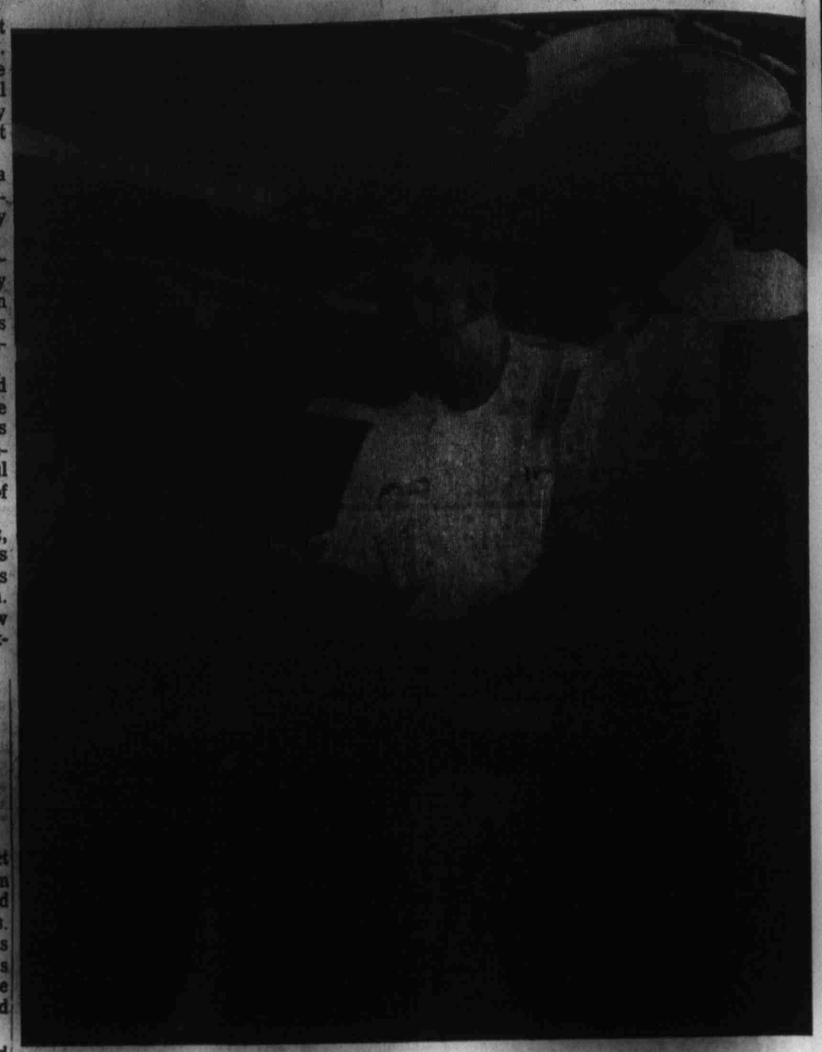
The grounds at the exhibit building will reopen at 7:30 p.m. Monday, the final day of the celebration. Entertainment will begin at 8 p.m., followed by official ceremonial activities at 9 p.m.

The highlight of the fiesta comes at 11 p.m. when representatives of the Mexican embassy reenact "El Grito de Dolores."

The ceremony depicts the appeal of Don Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla, the parrish priest in Dolores, Guanajuato, who is known as the father of his country.

Hidalgo, who was captured and executed in 1811, urged the Indians, Mestizoas and Creoles to revolt against Mexico's viceroyalty who remained faithful to Ferdinand the Seventh of Spain.

According to George Veloz, publicity chairman of this year's celebration, "El Grito" is enacted each year at 11 p.m. on the eve of Sept. 16, now recognized as the date of Mexican independence.



Building a booth for use in the Sixteenth of September celebration, which begins with a banquet tonight, are, from left, Juan Fino, John Rendon and Eusebio Baesa.

Grain Harvest Prospects Down; Optimism Remains

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grain harvest prospects are down slightly, but the Agriculture Department is optimistic that the bumper crops still predicted will protect consumers against sharp food price increases and enable further sales to the Soviet Union.

Officials said Thursday that farmers will have a record corn crop of 5.69 billion bushels, up 22 per cent from last year. And the wheat harvest, at just under 2.14 billion bushels, also is a record and 19 per cent bigger than in 1974.

Those estimates, based on Sept. 1 indications, reflected a 3 per cent drop in corn prospects from a month ago and a much smaller decline in the wheat estimate.

J. Dawson Ahalt, Agriculture Department staff economist, told a news conference that the reduction does not change the department's estimate of 1975 food prices, currently predicted to rise 9 per cent over 1974. Retail food prices rose 14.5 per cent in each of the past two years.

"I don't think it really changes our estimates on food prices, certainly not for 1975," Ahalt said.

Meanwhile, an Iowa State University economist said the record grain crop would not be reflected in lower meat prices for the next year. "There's a time lag before the livestock industry responds to the new crop," Dr. Robert Wisner explained.

For example, bacon was selling in Des Moines for between $2.09 and $2.39 this week, double the price a year ago.

The Soviet Union, which bought 177 million bushels of corn, 154 million of wheat and 51 million of barley from U.S. firms in July, wants more to help make up its drought losses.

Department economists say those sales will add 1.5 per cent to American food prices by the end of 1976.

President Ford earlier this week said no further sales would be made to Russia before mid-October and that a U.S. mission now in Moscow would seek a long-term accord for regular grain shipments so that the impact of one-shot deals can be lessened.

The U.S. mission, headed by Charles W. Robinson, undersecretary of state for economic affairs, and Ambassador Walter Stoessel, held its first, five-hour session Thursday with the Soviet delegation, led by Foreign Trade Minister Nikolai Patolichev.

The Ford plan was accepted by AFL-CIO President George Meany and maritime labor leaders who had vowed to boycott loadings of Soviet grain ships unless American consumers and union members were protected. They said no boycott would be resumed for 30 days.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Bell said that despite the slight decline in U.S. grain harvests, "we still expect to make further sales to the soviet Union. The question is when and, later, how much."

Luna To Launch September Fiesta

Pancho Luna of Dallas, governor of District 2-X1, Lions International, will be the speaker tonight at a banquet launching the fourth annual Sixteenth of September Fiesta.

The banquet is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Elks Club.

The fiesta, which will continue through Monday, with numerous events of various kinds scheduled, is sponsored by the Midland Eastside Lions Club.

Paul Bozeman of Midland, governor of Lions District 2-A1, is expected to introduce Gov. Luna.

Luna is a charter member of the Dallas Central Lions Club and has held every office in the chapter. He has a perfect attendance record of more than 15 years and has been named "Lion of the Year" five times. He is a director of the Texas Lions Eye Bank and is the unit's ambassador to Mexico. He received a Presidential Award from Mexico in 1973.

The governor owns and operates Luna's Tortillo Factory in Dallas. He has been active as an officer of the American Legion's Fifth Texas District and is a member of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce and Mexican Chamber of Commerce.

"Lionism in the Americas" will be the subject of his address.

Midland College Will Host Test Conference

Midland College will host two related conferences on testing within the next month.

According to Dr. Robert A. Hawkins, the college's director of guidance and counseling, the first conference will involve an estimated 25 to 30 persons from a 150-mile radius who administer General Education Development (GED) tests.

The conference is slated for 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. Monday in the Learning Resource Center with Dr. Jerry Walker, national GED administrator from Washington, D.C., as workshop director.

The program will train new personnel on proper administration of the GED test and will review and update procedures already in use. The test is used to establish high school equivalency in order for persons to enroll in college or to qualify for a job which requires a high school diploma.

The second conference, on the American College Testing (ACT) program, will be held at the college from 8:20 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Oct. 15.

The ACT conference will involve more than 50 persons in the area who are high school or college counselors.

Aubrey Lewis, regional director of ACT in Austin, will serve as workshop director.

The workshop will provide general information on ACT testing and auxiliary programs. ACT is a standard education-level test used to determine entrance to colleges and to assist students seeking to qualify for scholarships and grants.

A testing center for both examinations is operated at Midland College under the direction of Dr. Elizabeth Robinett.

Rockefeller Fails To Gain GOP Support

NEW YORK (AP) — One out of four Republicans say they could not vote for the 1976 GOP national ticket if Nelson A. Rockefeller is nominated for vice president, a Harris poll reports.

"The vice president appears to be in deep trouble with the broad mass of voters," the pollster said Thursday. "Moreover, he has failed to build up a groundswell of support that might ensure his nomination to the No. 2 spot at next year's Republican convention."

The survey of 693 Republicans and independents and 813 Democrats showed that a 47 per cent to 34 per cent plurality of Americans opposed Rockefeller's nomination to the 1976 Republican ticket.

By a slim 1 per cent margin, rank-and-file Republicans favored his inclusion on the ticket. But independents were 44 per cent to 33 per cent against it.

By 55-27 per cent, Americans feel that Rockefeller has done a poor job since he was appointed to the vice presidency by President Ford. Republicans gave him a 45-37 per cent negative job rating.

"The vice president's troubles are compounded by the fact that Republicans and independents prefer either former Gov. Ronald Reagan or Sen. Barry Goldwater to Rockefeller as President Ford's running mate in 1976," Harris said.

chaplain, Goodfellow Air Force Base, San Angelo.

The flag-raising ceremony will be conducted by the Honor Guard of Webb Air Force Base at Big Spring at which time the symphony orchestra will play the national anthem.

Russell J. Ramsland, president of the museum's board of trustees, will introduce George T. Abell and John P. Butler, two founders of the museun, and all senior government officials present.

Then, Ramsland will make a short talk about the museum. Following Ford's address, he will be presented a sculpture of early-day oil field hands by Lincoln Fox of Alto, N.M. The sulpture is of bronze and shows two men, a driller and a tooldresser, sharpening a cable-tool bit.

After the dedication is adjourned, the President will tour the museum with invited guests, and a reception will follow, also for invited guests.

Visitors will not tour the museum Saturday, but it will be open from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday and every day next week except Monday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

LONDON—Agreement is still possible with Iceland on the fishing dispute and another "cod war" is unlikely, competent British sources said here recently after fruitless talks in Reykjavik.

Chester Altom Dies At Odessa

ODESSA — Chester Payton Altom, 66, of Weatherford, died Thursday in Medical Center Hospital following a lengthy illness. He was the father of Melvin Lee Altom and Mrs. D. R. Bates, both of Big Spring.

Services are pending at the Galbreath-Pickard Funeral Home in Weatherford. Local arrangements were handled by Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Altom was born April 14, 1909 in Cleburne. He married Thelma L. Welch Sept. 12, 1961, in Parker County.

Survivors include one son, two step-sons, two daughters, one sister, 15 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Services Set For Brantley

Services for R. Guy Brantley, 73, who died Wednesday, will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at Fairview Cemetery with Rev. Ted Brian, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating. Services are under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Chapel.

Pallbearers are Robert T. Cox, Joseph Mims, John B. Mills, Henry Fleming, Allen Watts, Stayner Dugan, all of Midland, J. W. Henry of Odessa and Turner Keith of Austin.

Ft. Hood Testing Sinai Equipment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army electronics experts at Ft. Hood, Tex., may have an indirect hand in monitoring the new Middle East peace agreement in the Sinai.

Some of the sophisticated electronic gadgetry which will probably be used to detect troop movements is being tested at the Central Texas Army base.

Tommy Van, 46, Dies At Odessa

T. M. "Tommy" Van, 46, of Midland, died Thursday in an Odessa hospital.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Sunday in Newnie W. Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Pete Adcock of Four Square Gospel Church, officiating. Interment will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Born Oct. 23, 1929 in Forsan, he was reared in Stanford. Van entered the Air Force during the Korean War. He returned to Stanford where he worked in the oil field. In 1965 he moved to Midland where he worked for Champlin Petroleum Co. At the time of his death, he was field supervisor with Helco Fishing Tool Co.

Van is survived by his widow, Willie Van of Midland; a son, Tommy Van of Midland; a daughter, Mrs. O. R. Strain of Midland; two brothers, Wesley Van of Midland and Everett A. Woodson of Stanford; four sisters, Mrs. J. E. Ferguson, Mrs. J. B. Walton, Mrs. Buford Goyne and Mrs. Cecil Davis, all of Stanford; and one grandchild.

Blackwell Alumni To Be Honored

BLACKWELL — Alumni of Blackwell High School will return to their alma mater Sept. 27 for homecoming activities which spotlight the varsity football game at 8 p.m.

To be honored at this year's homecoming will be the classes of 1965, 1955, 1945, 1935 and 1925.

The junior high school game at 2 p.m. is the first of the day's events, followed by registration at 3:15 p.m. in the lobby of the new gymnasium. Supper will be served by members of the senior class from 5 to 7 p.m. A reception in the school cafeteria will follow the homecoming football game.

Services Set For Wallace

Services for R. L. Wallace, 49, of 314 E. Elm St. will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at the New Jerusleum Baptist Church with the Rev. J. F. Campbell officiating.

Interment will be at Fairview Cemetery directed by Thomas Funeral Home.

Wallace died Wednesday at a Midland hospital following an illness.

Tape Recorders Reported Stolen

Two tape recorders valued at $260 were reportedly stolen from Jane Long Elementary School, 4300 Cedar Spring St., between 5 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday, police said. A window was broken and pried open, police said.

Rain Expected To Continue

Rain continued to fall across the Midland area at noon today, and weathermen are predicting good chances of the moisture maintaining its pace through Saturday.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal had recorded 2 inches of rain at the weather station by noon today.

So far the yearly total for rainfall here as recorded by the weather service is 18.57 inches.

Stations to the north of the city measured more than 2 inches early today while east city gauges measured 3 inches. Gauges on the city's west and south sectors recorded between 2 and 3 inches of precipitation before noon.

Skies remained overcast at noon today, and the weather service is calling for continued cloudy conditions through Saturday. Chances of more rain in the Midland area are pegged at 90 per cent this afternoon, 80 per cent tonight and 70 per cent Saturday.

Temperatures dropped from their normal late summer highs to the lower 50s early today, and the weather service is calling for a high mark today and Saturday near 60. Low tonight should be in the upper 50s.

Cities across the area reported rain measurements from less than an inch to more than 3.5 inches early today.

Lamesa reported 2 inches at various places in the city while others had close to 4 inches. Andrews Airport reported 2.95 inches under overcast skies at 10 a.m.

Stations at Big Spring reported flooding streets and a measurement of 1.7 inches late this morning. Rankin and McCamey both reported rain totals early today of 2.5 to 3 inches.

Stanton stations reported that streets were running full with the downpour, and listed a rain total of 3.5 inches by 10 a.m.

Crane reported a 1.5 inch total while Garden City reported 1 inch and Sterling City got .6 inch by late morning.

The Department of Public Safety reported that all highways in the area were open, but noted that traffic at the Air Terminal underpass was being routed around the service road because the water clearing pump on the underpass had failed.

Midland police said reports were coming in from every sector of the city on stalled cars, but noted that no streets had been closed because of the rain.

High temperature Thursday was 94 with an overnight low of 52.

At noon today the mercury had climbed only one degree to 53.

Early Septmber heat gave way to cool, wet weather across a big chunk of Texas today.

As a cold front brought the first touch of fall—not due officially until Sept. 23—temperatures dipped to the upper 40s in the Texas Panhandle.

Near dawn the forward edge of the frontal system lay along a line linking Texarkana, Junction and El Paso, and it was moving steadily toward the southeast. On the coast, meanwhile, thermometers stayed as high as 78 degrees at Galveston and 79 at Palacios.

Big areas of showers or light rain popped out across the state, The Associated Press reported.

J. C. Niblett Dies; Rites Set

ACKERLY — J. C. Niblett, 74, died Wednesday at 10:30 p.m. following a short illness. He was the father of Mrs. Mary Ruth Peterson of Lamesa.

Services for the Ackerly pioneer were to have been at 2:30 p.m. today in the Ackerly Church of Christ with Roy Phemister, pastor, and Rev. Don Long, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Ackerly, officiating. Interment was to have been in Mount Olive Memorial Park in Big Spring under direction of Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home of Big Spring.

He was the first mayor of Ackerly and the first school superintendent. In 1927 he married Maybelle Reed at Weatherford. He was a member of the Staked Plains Masonic Lodge. Niblett was a Scottish Rite Mason. He was a Methodist.

Survivors include his widow, two daughters and six grandchildren.

Midlander Aboard Trapped Icebreaker

By GEORGE MASSEY

Seaman Apprentice Bryson Culver, son of Midland attorney John Culver and County Judge Barbara Culver, is aboard the Coast Guard icebreaker Glacier which has been reported trapped by extreme and out of season ice conditions close to the northernmost tip of the United States.

However, Judge Culver said today that she had received a letter from her son Thursday that indicated the icebreaker had broken free and was again underway.

The Glacier was enroute to an area off Point Barrow where a fleet of five tugs and 37 barges were cut off by ice floes while attempting to reach Alaska's North Slope oilfields.

The Glacier's job was to free the trapped fleet that was carrying about $1 billion in cargo to Prudhoe Bay, the northern terminus of the Trans-Alaska pipeline.

Culver said it is her son's first cruise since he recently completed Coast Guard boot camp. She said her son's letter indicated that another icebreaker, the Burton Island, had been dispatched to the scene, but the letter did not say how the Glacier was freed.

She said the crew aboard the Glacier was not in danger, and mentioned that her son had indicated it was more "boring" than anything else.

The seaman's letter home stated that the ship had lost a propeller because of the heavy ice, but still had some maneuverability with the second propeller.

Culver's son wrote that the ship had broken a blade during a similar operation last year, but that the Captain's luck seemed to have gotten worse this year with the loss of a whole propeller.

Judge Culver said her son's letter told of Polar bears, seals and many of the "exciting" things that can be seen by a young man while at sea. She said Bryson is 21-years-old, and doing something "he might never get another chance at" if he waited until he was older.

She said the letter did not indicate the fate of the trapped tugs or barges, and said she also had no indication as to the Glacier's new route.

The point has passed this season when the oil companies could hope to get the cargoes to Prudhoe Bay.

To reach the bay, the tugs and barges must move up another 100 miles around the western tip of Point Barrow and then 180 miles along the hazardous coast of the Beaufort Sea.

The Glacier was reported trapped in 16-feet thick ice.

The barges were carrying heavy drilling equipment to the oilfield. Other barges carrying large buildings, weighing as much as 1,600 tons, have been held up in warmer water.

Some barges were re-routed and their cargo will be transported by train to Fairbanks and by truck to the oilfields. One source said it would take about 5,000 truckloads.

Rockefeller Voices Support For Ford's Economic Program

By DON McLEOD

DALLAS (AP) — Vice President Nelson Rockefeller said today the Ford administration wants to solve the unemployment crisis and provide financial security but said more government spending could crush free society.

In remarks prepared for the National Federation of Republican Women, Rockefeller resounded the administration's growing theme of free enterprise and a tight belt in the veto battle with Congess.

"The American people rightfully want job opportunities during their working years and financial security in time of illness, unemployment or old age," Rockefeller said.

But to accomplish this, the vice president said, the government has to solve the energy problem, "which holds the key to economic growth," revive the economy, end the recession and rework social programs to "a sound fiscal basis."

"At present, energy goals still have not been m , unemployment is intolerably high, and government expenditures are growing rapidly at all levels," Rockefeller said.

Rockefeller said if the present rate of spending for domestic programs continues, government expenditures will take 55 per cent of the gross national product in the next 25 years.

"We have to bear in mind that, directly or indirectly, the private sector provides 85 per cent of the government tax revenue," he said.

Lions Banquet Tonight Kicks Off Mexican Independence Day Fiesta

By LUANNA CROW

Thousands of Midlanders will celebrate an independence day this weekend — not a belated Fourth of July, but a right-on-schedule Sixteenth of September.

The occasion, Mexican independence, brings with it the fourth annual celebration in Midland, sponsored by the Eastside Lions Club.

A Lions banquet tonight in the Elks Club Lodge tonight will kick off the four-day event.

The entire community can get involved Saturday afternoon when the Sixteenth of September parade begins to wind through a portion of downtown and east Midland. The focal point of this year's parade, which has recorded more than 50 entries, will be the fiesta's royalty.

Corina Reyes will reign as the fiesta queen, with Cindy Brito as her princess and Susie Olgin as her duchess. Sylvia Quellar, last year's fiesta queen also will ride in the Saturday parade.

The parade will begin west of Midland City Hall at Lorraine and Illinois street. Its route will take entries south to Wall Street, east to Main Street, north to Illinois Street, east to Lamesa Road and north to Nobles Street.

Opening ceremonies at the Midland County Exhibit Building will follow the parade. Following speeches and dedications, more than 50 individual booths will open to the public to offer foods of all kinds, games, entertainment and information.

Special activities for the Sixteenth of September will begin at 7 p.m. that evening in the Exhibit Building.

According to Grace Rayos, who will be mistress of ceremonies for the Saturday night events, the activities will be representative of the Mexican culture and events of that country's independence.

Included in the activities will be dances, recitations and proclamations. Following the coronation of the fiesta queen will be one of the most well-known independence day observations, the "Dialogo de las Banderas."

This event is a symbolic dialogue of Mexico, Spain and the United States and is enacted by three girls.

Sunday's program begins with the annual tournament of the Chicano Golf Association, teeing off at 8 a.m. Also on Sunday's agenda is the fiesta's official mass which will be read by Father Ronald Marlow of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Simon Field in Hogan Park will be the site of the 1 p.m. double header featuring the Midland Colts and the Ojinaga Nationales. A parachute show is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. at the exhibit building grounds, followed by the evening's activities at 6:30 p.m.

The grounds at the exhibit building will reopen at 7:30 p.m. Monday, the final day of the celebration. Entertainment will begin at 8 p.m., followed by official ceremonial activities at 9 p.m.

The highlight of the fiesta comes at 11 p.m. when representatives of the Mexican embassy reenact "El Grito de Dolores."

The ceremony depicts the appeal of Don Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla, the parrish priest in Dolores, Guanajuato, who is known as the father of his country.

Hidalgo, who was captured and executed in 1811, urged the Indians, Mestizoas and Creoles to revolt against Mexico's viceroyalty who remained faithful to Ferdinand the Seventh of Spain.

According to George Veloz, publicity chairman of this year's celebration, "El Grito" is enacted each year at 11 p.m. on the eve of Sept. 16, now recognized as the date of Mexican independence.

Building a booth for use in the Sixteenth of September celebration, which begins with a banquet tonight, are, from left, Juan Fino, John Rendon and Eusebio Baesa.

Grain Harvest Prospects Down; Optimism Remains

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grain harvest prospects are down slightly, but the Agriculture Department is optimistic that the bumper crops still predicted will protect consumers against sharp food price increases and enable further sales to the Soviet Union.

Officials said Thursday that farmers will have a record corn crop of 5.69 billion bushels, up 22 per cent from last year. And the wheat harvest, at just under 2.14 billion bushels, also is a record and 19 per cent bigger than in 1974.

Those estimates, based on Sept. 1 indications, reflected a 3 per cent drop in corn prospects from a month ago and a much smaller decline in the wheat estimate.

J. Dawson Ahalt, Agriculture Department staff economist, told a news conference that the reduction does not change the department's estimate of 1975 food prices, currently predicted to rise 9 per cent over 1974. Retail food prices rose 14.5 per cent in each of the past two years.

"I don't think it really changes our estimates on food prices, certainly not for 1975," Ahalt said.

Meanwhile, an Iowa State University economist said the record grain crop would not be reflected in lower meat prices for the next year. "There's a time lag before the livestock industry responds to the new crop," Dr. Robert Wisner explained.

For example, bacon was selling for $2.09 and $2.39 this week, double the price a year ago.

The Soviet Union, which bought 177 million bushels of corn, 154 million of wheat and 51 million of barley from U.S. firms in July, wants more to help make up its drought losses.

Department economists say those sales will add 1.5 per cent to American food prices by the end of 1976.

President Ford earlier this week said no further sales would be made to Russia before mid-October and that a U.S. mission now in Moscow would seek a long-term accord for regular grain shipments so that the impact of one-shot deals can be lessened.

The U.S. mission, headed by Charles W. Robinson, undersecretary of state for economic affairs, and Ambassador Walter Stoessel, held its first, five-hour session Thursday with the Soviet delegation, led by Foreign Trade Minister Nikolai Patolichev.

The Ford plan was accepted by AFL-CIO President George Meany and maritime labor leaders who had vowed to boycott loadings of Soviet grain ships unless American consumers and union members were protected. They said no boycott would be resumed for 30 days.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Bell said that despite the slight decline in U.S. grain harvests, "we still expect to make further sales to the soviet Union. The question is when and, later, how much."

Democrats Still Oppose Energy Plan

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats apparently are as unwilling to accept President Ford's program of higher energy prices as they were when the plan was offered eight months ago.

The latest evidence came Thursday night when Democrats rejected the President's newest compromise effort, offered by telephone from New Hampshire.

"The President is trying to create pressure on Congress. . .to knuckle under to the President's plan," charged Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, after the offer was relayed by Acting Republican Leader Robert P. Griffin of Michigan.

"If you don't do this, you're asking for confrontation with the White House and with the House. . .," said Griffin.

Ford and his Republican backers were urging the Senate to accept a bill, passed quickly earlier in the day by the House, that would extend controls on U.S. oil prices through Oct. 31.

During that time, the Republicans hope, Congress would approve Ford's energy plan or come up with a program that the President could accept.

The government's authority to hold down the price of oil and gasoline expired on Sept. 1. Ford vetoed a Democratic bill extending controls for six months, and the Senate fell six votes short in an attempt to override the veto.

Although controls have ended, the oil industry has been hesitant to impose any major price increase until Ford and Congress can agree on how long controls should be reimposed to allow time for working out a broad national energy policy.

Ford wants to end controls so that fuel prices will rise to force conservation and give the oil industry more money to find more energy. The aim is to reduce U.S. reliance on imported oil.

But Democrats say they fear sharp increases in fuel prices would trigger more inflation and hamper efforts to pull the national economy out of recession.

Midland College Will Host Test Conference

Midland College will host two related conferences on testing within the next month.

According to Dr. Robert A. Hawkins, the college' director of guidance and counseling, the first conference will involve an estimated 25 to 30 persons from a 150-mile radius who administer General Education Development (GED) tests.

The conference is slated for 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. Monday in the Learning Resource Center with Dr. Jerry Walker, national GED administrator from Washington, D.C., as workshop director.

The program will train new personnel on proper administration of the GED test and will review and update procedures already in use. The test is used to establish high school equivalency in order for persons to enroll in college or to qualify for a job which requires a high school diploma.

The second conference, on the American College Testing (ACT) program, will be held at the college from 8:20 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Oct. 15.

The ACT conference will involve more than 50 persons in the area who are high school or college counselors.

Aubrey Lewis, regional director of ACT in Austin, will serve as workshop director.

The workshop will provide general information on ACT testing and auxiliary programs. ACT is a standard education-level test used to determine entrance to colleges and to assist students seeking to qualify for scholarships and grants.

A testing center for both examinations is operated at Midland College under the direction of Dr. Elizabeth Robinett.

Lions Governor To Launch Fiesta

Pancho Luna of Dallas, governor of District 2-X1, Lions International, will be the speaker tonight at a banquet launching the fourth annual Sixteenth of September Fiesta.

The banquet is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Elks Club.

The fiesta, which will continue through Monday, with numerous events of various kinds scheduled, is sponsored by the Midland Eastside Lions Club.

Paul Bozeman of Midland, governor of Lions District 2-A1, is expected to introduce Gov. Luna.

Luna is a charter member of the Dallas Central Lions Club and has held every office in the chapter. He has a perfect attendance record of more than 15 years and has been named "Lion of the Year" five times. He is a director of the Texas Lions Eye Bank and is the unit's ambassador to Mexico. He received a Presidential Award from Mexico in 1973.

The governor owns and operates Luna's Tortilla Factory in Dallas. He has been active as an officer of the American Legion's Fifth Texas District and is a member of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce and Mexican Chamber of Commerce.

"Lionism in the Americas" will be the subject of his address.

Blackwell Alumni To Be Honored

BLACKWELL — Alumni of Blackwell High School will return to their alma mater Sept. 27 for homecoming activities which spotlight the varsity football game at 8 p.m.

To be honored at this year's homecoming will be the classes of 1965, 1955, 1945, 1935 and 1925.

The junior high school game at 2 p.m. is the first of the day's events, followed by registration at 3:15 p.m. in the lobby of the new gymnasium. Supper will be served by members of the senior class from 5 to 7 p.m. A reception in the school cafeteria will follow the homecoming football game.

Two Midlanders Arrested, Jailed On Drug Charge

Two Midlanders arrested early this morning for possession of marijuana and cocaine were jailed today in lieu of a $7,500 bond each on the cocaine charge.

Charged before Peace Justice Robert Pine were Jerry Lawrence Brown, 24, of 106 W. Stokes, and Cynthia Jean Lent, 19, of 210 Gulf St. They were charged with possession of cocaine.

Both were arrested by Midland police Sgt. Ed Ward and patrolman D. J. Wilks in the 3400 block of West Wall Street.

Officer Wilks said Brown and Miss Lent were alone in a sedan at a restaurant parking lot at time of the arrest, shortly after 1 a.m. today.

Both were initially arrested on a drunk charge.

Wilks said he spied a plastic bag containing a substance, alleged to be cocaine, in open view in the car. He also said he spotted a vial on the car's floorboard and a pipe containing ashes of marijuana, he alleged. He said a "cut leafy substance" was in the vial.

Chester Altom Dies At Odessa

ODESSA — Chester Payton Altom, 66, of Weatherford, died Thursday in Medical Center Hospital following a lengthy illness. He was the father of Melvin Lee Altom and Mrs. D. R. Bates, both of Big Spring.

Services are pending at the Galbreath-Pickard Funeral Home in Weatherford. Local arrangements were handled by Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Altom was born April 14, 1909 in Cleburne. He married Thelma L. Welch Sept. 12, 1961, in Parker County.

Survivors include one son, two step-sons, two daughters, one sister, 15 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Preparations Underway

T. Abell and John P. Butler, two founders of the museun, and all senior government officials present.

Then, Ramsland will make a short talk about the museum and introduce Dallas Kimble of the museum staff who will conduct the "Rose Petal Ceremony."

The ceremony will be a reenactment of the ceremony performed by Frank Pickrell of El Paso when he climbed to the top of Santa Rita No. 1, discovery well of the Big Lake oil field in Reagan County, and sprinkled rose petals on the project at the request of Eastern backers of the wildcat drilling operation.

The petals Saturday will be sprinkled over the recreated Marathon No. 2, one of the major exhibits on the museum grounds. No. 2 was the second well drilled in the Big Lake field.

Following the climb to the top of the derrick, Ramsland will introduce Mahon, who will introduce President Ford.

Following Ford's address, he will be presented a sculpture of early-day oil field hands by Lincoln Fox of Alto, N.M. The sulpture is of bronze and shows two men, a driller and a tooldresser, sharpening a cable-tool bit.

After the dedication is adjourned, the President will tour the museum with invited guests, and a reception will follow, also for invited guests.

Visitors will not tour the museum Saturday, but it will be open from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday and every day next week except Monday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Rain Drenches Area

The Midland area was drenched with rain today after a cold front pulled into West Texas late Thursday.

Weather forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal are predicting very good chances of the precipitation continuing through Saturday.

The Air Terminal station recorded 1.22 inches at 10 a.m. today with a steady rain continuing to fall.

Area cities all reported steady rains at 9 a.m. with measurements from less than an inch to more than 3.5 inches.

Stations at Lamesa reported 2 inches at various places in the city while others had close to 4 inch measurements.

Andrews Airport reported 2.95 inches with continuing rain under overcast skies at 10 a.m.

Stations at Big Spring reported flooding streets and a measurement of 1.7 inches late this morning.

Rankin and McCamey both reported rain totals early today of 2.5 to 3 inches.

Stanton stations reported that streets were running full with the downpour, and listed a rain total of 3.5 inches by 10 a.m.

Crane reported a 1.5 inch total while Garden City reported 1 inch and Sterling City got .6 inch by late morning.

Skies across the area remained overcast at noon with afternoon temperatures today and Saturday predicted to level off in the middle 60s.

Low tonight should be in the upper 50s. Thursday's high was 94 with an overnight low of 52.

Yearly rainfall total in Midland had increased from 16.57 inches to 17.79 inches by noon today.

Early Septmber heat gave way to cool, wet weather across a big chunk of Texas today.

As a cold front brought the first touch of fall—not due officially until Sept. 23—temperatures dipped to the upper 40s in the Texas Panhandle.

Near dawn the forward edge of the frontal system lay along a line linking Texarkana, Junction and El Paso, and it was moving steadily toward the southeast. On the coast, meanwhile, thermometers stayed as high as 78 degrees at Galveston and 79 at Palacios.

Big areas of showers or light rain popped out across the state, The Associated Press reported.

One patch of wet weather stretched through the Panhandle-Plains sector southward past El Paso in far West Texas and Wichita Falls in the Upper Red River Valley, and eastward past Gainesville. Rains heavy enough to overtax street drainage fell around El Paso.

Thunderstorms were mixed with showers over South and Central Texas from south of San Antonio to east of Austin, near Corsicana, west of Lampasas, into the San Angelo and Abilene areas and back south to Del Rio on the Mexican border.

It was showery also near the coast from around Victoria, Galveston, Houston and College Station into Louisiana and still another area of Northeast Texas spreading Texarkana toward the southwest.

Early morning temperatures dropped to 48 degrees at Amarillo and 49 at Dalhart in the Panhandle. Readings elsewhere ranged from the 50s into the 70s.

Forecasts called for the cool and wet weather to linger across most of the state through the weekend.

J. C. Niblett Dies; Rites Set

ACKERLY — J. C. Niblett, 74, died Wednesday at 10:30 p.m. following a short illness. He was the father of Mrs. Mary Ruth Peterson of Lamesa.

Services for the Ackerly pioneer were to have been at 2:30 p.m. today in the Ackerly Church of Christ with Roy Phemister, pastor, and Rev. Don Long, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Ackerly, officiating. Interment was to have been in Mount Olive Memorial Park in Big Spring under direction of Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home of Big Spring.

He was the first mayor of Ackerly and the first school superintendent. In 1927 he married Maybelle Reed at Weatherford. He was a member of the Staked Plains Masonic Lodge. Niblett was a Scottish Rite Mason. He was a Methodist.

Survivors include his widow, two daughters and six grandchildren.

Stolen Rig Found Smouldering

A $350,000 Geophysical Service rig stolen near midnight Tuesday was found abandoned and smouldering in southeast Midland Thursday morning, Midland police reported.

Det. Sgt. Fred Penix said the four-wheel drive unit equipped with computer and recording systems had been set afire and was damaged inside and out.

Jim Pratt of Midland and Tom Erickson of Big Lake told police they were working on the truck at 3001 W. Industrial Blvd. when someone drove off in it.

The truck was found at Goode and Francis street.

Services Set For Brantley

Services for R. Guy Brantley, 73, who died Wednesday, will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at Fairview Cemetery with Rev. Ted Brian, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating. Services are under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Chapel.

Pallbearers are Robert T. Cox, Joseph Mims, John B. Mills, Henry Fleming, Allen Watts, Stayner Dugan, all of Midland, J. W. Henry of Odessa and Turner Keith of Austin.

Midlander Aboard Trapped Icebreaker

By GEORGE MASSEY

Seaman Apprentice Bryson Culver, son of Midland attorney John Culver and County Judge Barbara Culver, is aboard the Coast Guard icebreaker Glacier which has been reported trapped by extreme and out of season ice conditions close to the northernmost tip of the United States.

However, Judge Culver said today that she had received a letter from her son Thursday that indicated the icebreaker had broken free and was again underway.

The Glacier was enroute to an area off Point Barrow where a fleet of five tugs and 37 barges were cut off by ice floes while attempting to reach Alaska's North Slope oilfields.

The Glacier's job was to free the trapped fleet that was carrying about $1 billion in cargo to Prudhoe Bay, the northern terminus of the Trans-Alaska pipeline.

Culver said it is her son's first cruise since he recently completed Coast Guard boot camp. She said her son's letter indicated that another icebreaker, the Burton Island, had been dispatched to the scene, but the letter did not say how the Glacier was freed.

She said the crew aboard the Glacier was not in danger, and mentioned that her son had indicated it was more "boring" than anything else.

The seaman's letter home stated that the ship had lost a propeller because of the heavy ice, but still had some maneuverability with the second propeller.

Culver's son wrote that the ship had broken a blade during a similar operation last year, but that the Captain's luck seemed to have gotten worse this year with the loss of a whole propeller.

Judge Culver said her son's letter told of Polar bears, seals and many of the "exciting" things that can be seen by a young man while at sea. She said Bryson is 21-years-old, and doing something "he might never get another chance at" if he waited until he was older.

She said the letter did not indicate the fate of the trapped tugs or barges, and said she also had no indication as to the Glacier's new route.

The point has passed this season when the oil companies could hope to get the cargoes to Prudhoe Bay.

To reach the bay, the tugs and barges must move up another 100 miles around the western tip of Point Barrow and then 180 miles along the hazardous coast of the Beaufort Sea.

The Glacier was reported trapped in 16-feet thick ice.

The barges were carrying heavy drilling equipment to the oilfield. Other barges carrying large buildings, weighing as much as 1,600 tons, have been held up in warmer water.

Some barges were re-routed and their cargo will be transported by train to Fairbanks and by truck to the oilfields. One source said it would take about 5,000 truckloads.

Bob Bullock Calls Off Tax Raids In Midland

AUSTIN—Plans for Comptroller Bob Bullock's "Raiders" to close down several businesses in Midland, San Angelo and Odessa for delinquent sales taxes were called off today when several of the delinquents came in and settled up.

Bullock said that between 15 and 20 of the worst delinquents in the Midland and Odessa area either paid off their liability or made satisfatcory payout arrangements in the wake of warnings that they would be shut down.

Other property seizures were still in progress in El Paso, San Antonio and other places, Bullock said.

Bullock said delinquents who took themselves off the list certainly weren't all the delinquents in the Midland, Odessa and San Angelo area, but they represented the oldest, most aggravated cases. "There are others and we will be back," Bullock said.

Bullock said at least $40,000 in cash payments had been made by delinquents in the area.

Fromme Arraignment Suggests Reenactment Of Manson Trial

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme's bizarre arraignment suggests her eventual trial on a charge of trying to kill President Ford could feature scenes reminiscent of the 1970 Charles Manson trial.

Miss Fromme's court appearance Thursday featured the defendant in a red hooded costume demanding justice for redwood trees and issuing an ominous warning that "the gun is pointed."

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas J. MacBride tried to prevent Miss Fromme from making statements in court, saying it might prejudice her right to a fair trial. But she insisted.

"This is more important to me at this time," she said. "I'm the one that has to sit in the cell and worry about it."

Miss Fromme, 26, is the first person ever indicted under the 1965 federal law covering attempted assassinations of U.S. presidents. She has not yet entered a plea. If convicted, she could draw a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Secret Service agents say a loaded gun was wrested from her hand when she was seized within two feet from President Ford in Sacramento's Capitol Park.

Since then, her friends have said that Miss Fromme may have been seeking attention for the Manson clan's campaign against pollution, which advocates killing the polluters.

"There is an army of young people and children who want to clean up this earth, the redwood trees," she said in court Thursday. The judge said her statements weren't relevant to the case. But she rambled on in a calm voice.

"I want you to order the corps of governmment engineers to buy up the parks," she said. "...You have jurisdiction over the redwood trees...The important part is the redwood trees."

As the judge tried to silence her, she declared, "The gun is pointed, your honor. The gun is pointed. Whether it goes off is up to you."

As she was escorted from court by a deputy U.S. marshal, she remarked, "I hope I wasn't rude." MacBride assured her she wasn't.

Miss Fromme's next court appearance is set for Tuesday when Federal Public Defender E. Richard Walker will argue for reduction of her $1-million bail. He also will seek cancellation of a gag order which prevents Miss Fromme from talking to news media.

Her plea hearing is set for Sept. 19. The judge has said he will make every effort to bring Miss Fromme to trial within 60 to 90 days.

Chilly Weather Engulfs Nation

By The Associated Press

Chilly temperatures hit the Northern Plains and Upper Mississippi Valley today while thunderstorms covered the southeast and parts of the Midwest.

Temperatures early today were in the mid-30s and low 40s along the northern border.

Thunderstorms continued along the leading edge of the cold air.

Troops Man Buffer Zone Between Warring Lebanese

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Army troops manned three buffer zones between warring Christians and Moslems in northern Lebanon today. There was no resistance to their deployment.

About 2,000 troops took up positions between the Moslem city of Tripoli and the Christian town of Zagharta five miles to the east, and on the northern and southern outskirts of Tripoli.

Army patrols also joined police security units in the streets of Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city 50 miles north of Beirut.

Troops were dispatched to the Christian village of Beit Mallat, 18 miles northeast of Tripoli, where three persons were reported killed and six wounded in a Moslem attack Thursday.

The fighting was reported intensifying as the troops raced to the scene.

CIA Considered Using Poison To Kill Lumumba

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency considered using poison to remove Congolese leader Patrice Lumumba from power in 1960, a former head of the agency's clandestine operations says.

"There was an occasion when the feasibility of an action of that kind was investigated," Richard M. Bissell said in an interview Thursday. But "there was a decision within the agency not to carry the operation beyond the feasibility stage."

Bissell's remarks constituted the second confirmed instance in which the CIA contemplated the use of poison to dispose of a foreign leader. Robert A. Maheu, a former aide to billionaire Howard Hughes, has described in detail, and other sources have confirmed, a 1969 CIA-Mafia plot to poison Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Bissell, who left the agency after the 1961 Bay of Pigs fiasco, said he could not recall the operational details of the proposal to poison Lumumba. He said he did not know what kind of poison would have been used or "whether it was lethal or incapacitating."

In response to a question, he said he had no idea whether there was any connection between plans to poison Lumumba and the cache of deadly poisons recently discovered at a CIA laboratory.

Bissell said he personally vetoed the poison plot in favor of using "political pressures and political intrigues" against Lumumba.

"To the best of my knowledge and belief," the CIA had nothing to do with Lumumba's death in early 1961, Bissell said.

He said the agency had made "a very deep penetration" of Lumumba's retinue and had one agent who was in direct personal contact with the Congolese leader. However, Bissell added that this agent would not have been used in any scheme involving violence because he was "much too valuable for intelligence."

Bissell remained purposely vague about the covert operations that the agency directed against Lumumba, who at the time was regarded as a Soviet puppet who might deny the U.S. access to the Congo's considerable mineral deposits.

"There's a whole lot more of that story than has come out," he said.

Border Hearings To Start Sept. 19

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Senate committee hearings will be held in Laredo, Del Rio, El Paso and the Lower Rio Grande Valley on federal agents who allegedly have hindered "trade and tourism" at Texas-Mexico border crossings.

Sen. Raul Longoria, D-Edinburg, chairman of the special committee, announced Thursday the first hearing will be Sept. 19 in Laredo. Dates of the other hearings were not announced.

Longoria specified that the agents to be investigated are in the U.S. Border Patrol, Immigration and Naturalization Service and Bureau of Customs.

The other members of the committee are Sens. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, the vice-chairman; Mike McKinnon, D-Corpus Christi; W. E. Snelson, D-Midland, and John Traeger, D-Seguin.

Trade Fair May Be Made Permanent

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Mexican businessmen say this year's export exposition — Mexfair '75 — was so successful that they'd like to set up a permanent Mexican-U.S. trade center.

A yearlong study will determine the site for the permanent center.

School Attendance Rising

By The Associated Press

Attendance increased in the Boston and Lousiville, Ky., school systems as busing for desegregation in both cities continued with only a few nighttime disturbances in the New England city.

Boston attendance was up almost 10 per cent on Thursday as integration proceeded without major difficulties, but police were in the streets again as nighttime protests continued.

Citywide attendance was 69.1 per cent Thursday, up from 59.2 per cent when schools opened Monday. Attendance by whites was 63 per cent and by blacks 75 per cent. Attendance is usually about 80 per cent in the opening days of school.

There was no reported trouble in Louisville, the fourth straight day of peace and the sixth day of school under the court-ordered desegregation plan.

Attendance was reported below normal but continuing to rise on Thursday, with 75.2 per cent of the anticipated enrollment attending classes.

Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll plans to appoint a special commission to investigate antibusing riots that erupted in southwestern Jefferson County one week ago tonight, a state legislator said Thursday.

State Rep. Dotty Priddy said the governor also decided Thursday to invite legislators from 17 other states which have supported the anti-busing amendment to the U.S. Constitution to a conference in Kentucky.

In Boston, police patrols with dogs swept through a public housing project Thursday night after bands of young whites sawed down two trees and tried, unsuccessfully, to set them on fire on a street near Charlestown High School. U.S. marshals guarded the high school.

About 300 women marched peacefully to a church in Charlestown, but there were no other antibusing demonstrations.

Five men were arraigned Thursday in Louisville on federal charges connected with last week's violence. They pleaded innocent to charges ranging from interfering with police officers to throwing missiles. Bonds varied from $20,000 to $50,000.

HOW TO BABYSIT — Mrs. Barbara Holmes, right, co-chairman, is demonstrating to Mrs. Candy Kaatz, chairman, the correct way to burp a baby, one of several procedures to be taught in a babysitting workshop, sponsored by the Midland Jaycee-ettes. A poison antidote chart also will be part of the course open to all area boys and girls.

Jaycee Auxiliary Sponsors Course For Babysitters

The Midland Jaycee-ettes are sponsoring a babysitting workshop for girls and boys of babysitting age.

This will be a four-week course beginning Tuesday and meeting for the following three weeks from 7-9 p.m. on Tuesdays in the Fellowship Hall of Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 W. Golf Course Road.

A registered nurse, Mary Ann Peacock, will demonstrate child care, and representatives of the Midland Police Dept. and Midland Fire Dept. will explain safety procedures.

The workshop is designed to qualify girls for the Girl Scout child care badge. It is not affiliated with a religious denomination, and is open to all area boys and girls on a limited enrollment. Fee for the course is due at registration the first night.

Reservations may be made by dialing 697-2979 or 694-5845 after 5:30 p.m.

Dear Abby

—By Abigail van Buren

Husband A Comedian At Wife's Expense

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a husband who thinks he's funny. I had a very nice dinner party at home the other night and was especially proud of the way everything turned out.

Well, when the guests were leaving, my husband said, "Come back soon because the only time I get a decent meal around here is when we have company." Everybody laughed, but I wanted to crawl into a hole.

He said that once before, and it got a big laugh, so he pulled it again.

In the first place, Abby, it's not true. I pride myself on always feeding my family very well. I told him later I didn't think that crack was very funny, but he said, "I was only kidding."

Is there a clever retort I could use in case my husband, the comic, says that again?

TICKED OFF

DEAR TICKED: You could say, (only kidding of course) "The only time my ever lovin' Scrooge gives me money for fancy groceries is when we have company."

DEAR ABBY: Twelve years ago when my brother died, his death wish was that I watch over his wife and children, which I have.

Millie (his wife) never remarried due to some bad experiences with men.

She is ill now, and the doctors have given her about six months to live.

Yesterday, I stopped by to see Millie and the kids, and I mentioned a business trip I was going on.

Millie said, "Take me with you. I'm starved for a little love."

I told her I would think about it.

Abby, I love my wife and have never cheated on her, but I hate to turn Millie down.

What do I say to this beautiful, sensitive, love-starved woman who has now turned to me for help in the last days of her life?

TENDER CONSCIENCE

DEAR TENDER: Tell her the truth—that you'd like to take her, but you've never cheated on your wife, and your conscience won't permit it now.

Everyone has a problem what's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Couple Wed In Colorado Now Residing In Midland

CONIFER, Colo. — Mr. and Mrs. Loch Lee Ethridge are at home at 501-B W. Estes St., Midland, Tex., following their recent marriage in Conifer Community Church here. The Rev. Alvin O. Havecost performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Williams of Littleton, and Ralph L. Ethridge of Denver and Mrs. Floyd Stanley of Colorado Springs.

The bride, the former Karen Ruth Williams of Littleton, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a candlelight jersey gown fashioned with a crown collar and fitted sleeves. The dress ended in a Watteau train and was accented with a detachable hood enhanced with lace and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of baby's breath, stephanotis and pink Sweetheart roses.

A reception was held in the Hilander Inn here before the couple left on a wedding trip to Aspen.

Both are graduates of Colorado State University, she with a BS degree in environmental education and he with a BS in geology. While at CSU, the bride was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma. She is employed as a teacher at Midland's Austin Freshman School. The bridegroom was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha and is employed with Geophysical Services, Inc., Midland.

The Zeta Xi Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, international organization for women educators, had a backyard covered dish salad supper at the home of Mrs. James Ramsoure, 1301 E. Parker St.

The co-hostesses were Mrs. C. A. Mills, Mrs. Preston Ross, Mrs. Martin Mogford, Mrs. Keith Morgan and Mrs. Noel Cason.

Mrs. Harry Tipton and Mrs. Morgan led the group in singing, and Mrs. Ross Dawkins gave the invocation.

The president, Mrs. John Moreland, presided. Plans were discussed for the fall regional meeting to be held Oct. 4 in the Student Union Building at Midland College. Members of Zeta Xi and Epsilon Eta Chapters will be hostesses. Registration and luncheon reservations are due by Sept. 24. Mrs. Ross announced members are to have hobby items to display at the meeting, and asked that the items be submitted by Oct. 1.

Nina Gomez was a guest.

HINTS FROM Heloise

In An Emergency, The Eyes Have It!

Dear Heloise:

I suppose like those of us who have become "twice 21" in age, that when you don't have those reading glasses handy, small type, as in the newspaper or telephone directory, is simply impossible to read. But there's a way:

Make a small hole in a credit or calling card, paper or foil with a coarse pin, regular paper clip, fine lead pencil point, or similar object (but not over one-sixteenth inch across.) Then hold the card as close to your best eye as possible—almost against the eyelash—and put your newspaper, etc., in a good bright light, about two feet from a 60-watt or stronger bulb, you will be able to read almost as well as with your own glasses.

Believe it or not, this emergency trick has helped some of my patients, who can't see at a distance without their glasses, to get home when they had lost their prescription lenses, because the idea works as well for distance as it does for near, but only in bright light, like full sunlight or strong indoor lighting.

A.D. Kleyhauer M.A.,O.D.

True. It's amazing, really!

LETTER OF LAUGHTER?

Dear Heloise:

One day while I was ready to prepare a meal, I noticed I was out of the spray-on type vegetable coating.

Remembering what my mother used to use to coat pans, I took some wax paper and a small amount of margarine and coated the surface.

It worked perfectly, giving the same effect as the spray-on-type did.

Patti Hanson

Now I know what they mean by a "generation gap"! You'll have me thinking my "premature gray" hair is not so premature after all!

I had to laugh, but your hint is great, honey. Thanks.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

(Sept. 13)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to get much of value accomplished early in the day by your own resourcefulness, but later defensive circumstances may arise and nothing is apt to be as it appears, so avoid making decisions then. Carefully study how to get out from under difficult conditions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr.19) Handle official duties early in the day, then get right at proven business matters. Await a better time to increase popularity.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get data in a.m. needed for a new interest. Later, take it easy. Keep promised made and don't make any changes.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle responsibility wisely in a.m. and do nothing risky about credit, debts. Don't argue with mate, but be kind.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Strengthen associations with others in a.m. Breaking any regulations that apply to you could be disastrous right now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle accumulated tasks and don't go off on tangents you would regret later. Build up your energy with health treatments.

VIRGO (Aug.22 to Sept. 22) Plan recreations early and then relax, otherwise nothing could go right for you in afternoon or evening. Please loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can straighten out any situations effectively in the a.m. at home. More charm is required later in day. Clear up discussion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Shop, do errands early, then relax. Not a good evening for trying to put over big deals. Prove you are conscientious.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can handle any weekend financial affairs very nicely in a.m. but later try to cut down on expenses. Do repairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Making plans and doing whatever most appeals to you in a.m. is fine, but don't argue with anyone at all later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Talk over with others any monetary matters of importance and then try to build up your savings account. Make a better budget.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listen to friend's suggestion. Get busy on whatever will improve your position in life. The social could be disappointing now.

Tough British Anti-Discrimination Law Proposed

The Washington Post

LONDON — A stiffened law to combat the race bias endured by 1.5 million black and brown Britons was proposed by the government Thursday.

For 10 years, it has been illegal here to discriminate in jobs, training, housing and the sale of goods and services. But most specialists, black and white, have agreed that these prohibitions have often been ineffective because enforcemnt agencies lack teeth.

The new measure, scheduled for passage next year, tried to make up for this failure. A new Race Relations Commission will be empowered to make its own investigations instead of waiting until a timid victim comes forward as in the past.

For the first time, the commission will have subpoena power to compel the appearance of witnesses and the production of documents.

Indian, African and Caribbean victims of bias will be able to sue in courts on their own and no longer need to wait for the approval of a race relations agency. They will be able to recover damages not only for lost earnings and tangible expenses but also for the humiliation they have undergone, up to $11,000 in all.

Roy Jenkins, the home secretary whose department looks after race matters, warned of "the immense damage, material as well as moral, when a racial minority loses faith in the capacity of social institutions to be impartial and fair."

"To abandon a section of the community without legal redress," he said, "leaves them with no option but to seek their own redress."

But the most remarkable feature of the new legislation is the absence of obvious pressure to produce it. There is restiveness, particularly among young Caribbean immigrants, in Britain's colored inner city ghettoes. This expresses itself, however, in the form of isolated criminal attacks and there have been no race riots here for years.

There is, moreover, no important pressure group like the NAACP pleading the cause of immigrant Indians, Pakistanis or West Indians.

Most important, colored minorities here are not organized politically and swing little weight in either the labor or conservative parties, a fact often bemoaned by the best-known black leader, Dr. David Pitt. At most, individual members of Parliament with large colored constituencies speak up on occasion, but the British parliamentary system makes an individual member almost powerless.

Indeed, the biggest pressure group in the ruling Labor party is the trade union movement and its leaders and members are not only indifferent but usually hostile to efforts at remaking race relations.

The impetus for Jenkins' measure, then, cannot be found in the usual political forces and can be explained only by the long tradition here of middleclass, do-good reform. It goes back at least as far as the early 19th Century laws to limit factory hours and child employment and its great exemplar was John Stuart Mill.

Jenkins, who this year put through a similar measure protecting women from discrimination, epitomizes this tradition. A distinguished historian and essayist with a prim and fussy manner, he sits on the right wing of his party and will earn few cheers for his latest effort.

The measure, of course, will not end race discrimination. Much depends on who administers it and how. It gives the home secretary strong powers and that office is frequently occupied by politicians far less concerned with racial equality.

The most important kind of discrimination, authorities here agree, is in jobs. Under the bill, individual complaints over employment must be brought to industrial tribunals of a lawyer, union official and employer. These bodies are not famous for sympathy and racially aggrieved.

The Jenkins measure provides one important change in the way Britons will live. It prohibits workingmen's social clubs from barring anyone because of race or color, thereby reversing a House of Lords decision under the old law.

For the first time, too, the government will be able to determine if its contractors are complying with the ban on discriminatory hiring practices. From now on, the authorities will be able to ask a contractor to supply papers showing whether he has obeyed

Search Continues For Heart Part

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The search for rubber that will flex half-a-billion times — the equivalent of an auto tire guaranteed for 500,000 miles — continues in a rubber company's research laboratories.

But the object is not a lifetime tire. It is a lifetime, artificial human heart.

After 10 years of striving, Goodyear scientists report they are now working with a new type of polyolefin rubber which has already surpassed 150 million flexes in standard tests — or nearly four years' worth of heartbeats.

Experimental implantations in animals at the Cleveland Clinic have been successful for as long as 94 days. However, an external power source is still needed to drive the heart.

Researchers are looking to the day when a small power source, perhaps atomic, can be implanted in the body to pump the artificial hearts mechanically.

Chicken Sexer Has Big Job

PETALUMA, Calif. (AP) — Heimer Carlson of Petaluma is a chicken sexer, one of the half-dozen men and women in Sonoma County who, within seconds, separate the valuable brooders from the less desirable roosters.

After 41 years and more than 40 million chicks, Carlson can discern sex at a rate of 900 per hour with an accuracy nearing 100 per cent.

Chicken sexing evolved in this country during the Depression when it was an economic necessity to know the cockerels from the pullets. Just out of high school in 1934, Carlson was one of the first students of this Japanese imported art, training at the H and N Hatchery in Petaluma, where he now works on a contract basis.

Those were the days when Petaluma was the chicken capital of the world.

Those days are gone, yet the chicken sexer is still an important part of the poultry world because to date no one has come up with a machine as accurate and gentle.

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE

IT'S DANGEROUS TO BE RICH

by Alfred Sheinwold

If you were warned that it's dangerous to be too rich you might be willing to take your chances. But your friends might not be able to stand prosperity. Show today's hand to a friend, and ask him how he goes about making five diamonds.

Opening lead — ♣ Q

"It's very easy," your friend will tell you. "Draw two rounds of trumps, cash the ace of spades, ruff a spade in dummy..." His voice trails off as he wonders how to get back to his own hand.

"New start," he announces. "Draw only one round of trumps. Cash the ace of spades, ruff a spade, get back with a trump and ruff the other spade..." And again his voice trails off as he sees that he still has to lose two hearts and a club.

"It's a very unlucky hand," he will finally declare.

CHANGE ONE CARD

Change South's ace of spades to the king. You make the hand weaker instead of stronger.

But now it's a very easy hand to make. Win the first trick with the ace of clubs and give up a spade trick to the ace. Regardless of the defense you can cash the king and jack of spades, discarding both losing hearts from dummy. Now you can ruff two hearts in dummy and you lose only one spade and one club.

The same play is possible even if South has the ace of spades rather than the king. South takes the ace of clubs and leads his low spade. This proves that it's dangerous for your friends to be too rich: they don't know how to handle their wealth.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: ♠AJ6 ♥863 ♦AKQJ10 ♣A5. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one diamond. The hand is not quite good enough for an opening bid of 2-NT; and not nearly good enough for a forcing opening bid.

We can't miss them — these signs along the intersections of our streets. They protect our school children from physical harm. We see the sign . . . and slow down.

Most of us are deeply concerned about the safety of our youngsters . . . and these signs can be a reminder of a further obligation our society has to its youth. There are dangers in life for which only religious training and faith can prepare us.

Boys and girls approaching maturity deserve the spiritual protection which Christian education provides.

Whenever you approach a school crossing, slow down! But, just don't think safety — think SUNDAY!

Frank Repman and Larry Hencke, members of the construction committee for St. Ann's Family Fair, put finishing touches on one of the booths erected for the 27th annual fair coming up Saturday. The event will take place on the grounds of St. Ann's School here.

Hundreds Expected For St. Ann's Fair

It's fair time in the Tall City again!

For the 27th year, Midland and area residents will flock by the hundreds Saturday to St. Ann's Family Fair, the annual fun-for-all-ages event presented by parishioners of St. Ann's Catholic Church.

The fair this year will have a patriotic theme, in anticipation of the nation's Bicentennial, with workers dressed in red, white and blue costumes and old-fashion bunting decorating booths and concession stands.

And the offerings at the fair certainly are in keeping with the "Americana" spirit of the event, with such uniquely-American entertainments and attractions as bingo, cake wheel, baseball pitch, football throw and gun-shoot, not to mention such standard fair items as popcorn, snow cones, balloons and corn-on-the-cob.

Another standard and very popular feature is the carnival presented in conjunction with the fair each year. The carnival rides were being erected today just west of the St. Ann's School grounds and will open to the public tonight.

The fair itself will open at 10 a.m. Saturday on the school grounds, continuing until 10 p.m. Admission to the grounds will be free.

General chairmen JoAnn and John Paul Raney are promising "something for everyone" at the upcoming fair, and prove their claim by listing the following attractions and events, along with chairmen for each:

Arts and crafts, Judy Duke; sewing booth, Bea Jimenez and Janet Gillet; "Hope Chest," Ann Klein and Altar Society members; "Country Store," Mr. and Mrs. Clem Roberts; inside food booths, Tom and Helen McCurdy; outside food booths, Bob and Don Hellinghausen; souvenirs, Paul and Karen Raymond; "White Elephant," Ernie Schultz and Dee Dabbs; bingo, Francis and Sue John, Martin and Nancy McCarroll; "Cake Wheel," Fran Thetford, Rita Rusnak and Louise Wiles; "Shrimp Boat," Betty Deande; "Dime-A-Dish," Bob and Mary Hintersmaier.

Unification Church Grows In America

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "When he gives his word, it goes. We trust him as God's representative. We don't have a feeling of a great dictator, but we have the feeling of a loving father."

That is how the American overseer of the fast-growing, hotly controversial Unification Church of the Rev. Sung Myung Moon describes his power over the movement, known within it as "the family."

"Rev. Moon comes as a spiritual father," says Neil A. Salonen, U.S. president of the group founded by the Korean industrialist-visionary. "He is the individual through whom God speaks."

Many members consider him a new messiah. "He could be ordained to that position," Salonen says. "History will answer."

Affirming that the group, now claiming 30,000 American members, is specifically authoritarian, Salonen says there is no room in it for challenging Moon's controlling decisions.

"In the end, the responsibility rests on him," Salonen said in an interview about widespread criticisms voiced by parents and others that the group dominates members and deflects them from educations and careers.

They "very commonly" drop such pursuits to serve the movement, he said. "They realize the significance of this work and are willing to sacrifice. It's the urgency of our teaching." He compared it to pioneering days of the American west.

However, he said charges of "brain-washing" and mind-manipulation by the group are "unfounded, a gross mistake."

"We have strong beliefs and live intensely," he said of the highly structured group activities and long hours of communal members. "The structured life is to uphold commitment and deepen commitment.

"That intensity can be interpreted as a special character not different from the early Christian disciples," he added.

Salonen, 30, a warm-mannered, smoothly articulate New Yorker who studied engineering at Cornell University and political science at George Washington University without completing a degree, became chief U.S. Officer of Moon's movement in 1972 at the start of its American expansion.

Before joining it, he said he was "probably agnostic," although reared a Lutheran.

He estimates its income this year at $10 million, mostly through members selling nuts and flowers on the streets. It has acquired about $10 million worth of property at training centers at Tarrytown and Barrytown, N.Y., recently bought the Columbia Club in mid-Manhattan for $1.2 million, owns a California ranch and owns or rents 120 communal houses across the country.

It also has centers at about 150 college campuses, Salonen said, through which many of its recruits are gained.

Fewer Catholics Believe Pope Can Do No Wrong

Copley News Service

NEW YORK — The American Roman Catholic of 1975 is less likely to believe in papal infallibility in matters of faith and morals than he did 10 years ago.

He does not attend Mass, take Communion or pray as often as he used to. He is more likely to remarry after divorce and he takes a more lenient view toward contraception, premarital sex and abortion.

Young Catholics are more apt to stray from the fold, particularly if they are college graduates, raising the possibility of a sharp decline in church membership in future years.

These are some of the findings of a study conducted by the National Opinion Research Center to learn what has happened to American Catholicism since a broad study was made in 1963. A report on the survey is being distributed by The Critic, a magazine issued six times a year by the Thomas More Society.

The article, prepared by the Rev. Andrew Greeley, a Roman Catholic priest and sociologist, and a team of study co-directors, theorizes that declining parochial schools probably could be revitalized if the church tapped the financial resources available among communicants who say they are willing to contribute.

The survey found that Catholics generally approve of the modernization of the church since the second Vatican Council.

This includes the English liturgy, the guitar Mass, lay apparel for nuns and progressive religious education and sex education in Catholic schools.

Conducted under a grant from the National Institutes on Education, the survey of a representative sample of a little over 1,000 American Catholics showed a "decline, sometimes steep, in most measures of religious devotion." Here are other findings:

—The proportion of Catholics who attend Mass dropped from 71 per cent to 50 per cent in 10 years.

—Monthly confessions declined from 38 to 17 per cent of all Catholics.

—The number of Catholics who visited churches to pray at least once a week was down from 23 per cent to 15 per cent.

"Many of the traditional forms of religious behavior have also declined," the report said, referring to retreats, the reading of spiritual books and engaging in religious conversations with priests.

"However," it added, "some of the newer forms of religious life that were so infrequent a decade ago that we did not ask about them have now attained a surprising popularity."

These include charismatic or Pentecostal prayer meetings, informal liturgy at home, marriage encounters and religious discussion groups.

"The most notable positive change is an increase in the proportion receiving weekly Communion—from 13 to 26 per cent," the report said.

A key finding cited in the survey results was "a substantial decline in acceptance of the legitimacy of ecclesiastical authority." Only 32 per cent of those surveyed believed the Pope to be infallible in matters of faith and morals.

"Loyalty to the church remains, but it is being transformed," the report said. "A lot of things appear to be not nearly as certain or important as they used to be."

Satisfaction with the professional quality of sermons has diminished by half in 10 years. Less than half of those surveyed found priests "very understanding" in dealings with teen-agers and much less understanding in general than they used to be.

"Even had there not been the well-publicized exodus of priests from the ministry," the report said, "it is likely that the image of the priesthood would have faded...Catholics still like their priests but they don't seem to respect them nearly as much as they did."

Becomes U.S. Possession

Samoa, the archipelago in the South Pacific, 2,300 miles southwest of Hawaii, became a possession of the United States on Dec. 2, 1899. Western Samoa, lost by Germany in World War I, became a New Zealand mandate and achieved independence on Jan. 1, 1962.

Church Practices Pragmatic Witchcraft

By ED SCHAFER

SALEM, Mo. (AP) — The witches of Salem firmly believe they can cure one of their ailing hogs with spiritual and telephathic healing — along with a liberal dose of penicillin.

"Our form of witchcraft is highly pragmatic," says Gavin Frost, flame (or bishop) of the Missouri Church of Wicca and the Coven of Boskednan, the church's governing body.

"We value the old ways of doing things," he said, "but we don't believe we can ignore the advances in technology."

Frost, former international marketing director for a St. Louis firm, and his wife, Yvonne, who is a bishopess in the church, moved to the outskirts of this central Missouri town two years ago in search of a quiet place to continue their work in the church and School of Wicca they founded.

The move followed a confrontation with church groups in their old hometown of St. Charles. The Frosts had been invited to tell the witches' side of the issue during a series of seminars on witchcraft at St. Charles High School, but church groups obtained an injunction barring the lecture on grounds that it would constitute teaching religion in a public school.

"But the reason we moved was really the fact that our house there was just too small," says Mrs. Frost. "We found this place and knew we had found a home. The vibes were super."

They live in a former two-room schoolhouse on 14 acres of land. The land has a small pond teeming with frogs, several farrowing sheds and pig pens and the scattered remains of a community called Hawkins Bank, which was destroyed more than 20 years ago by a tornado.

The Frosts say their neighbors seem to accept their presence.

"There was some fear in Salem at first," Mrs. Frost said of the neighbors, "but they soon found out that we weren't going to bite them on the neck. Now some of them drop in on us occasionally. I think it's mainly curiosity."

About a year ago, the Frosts went into swine farming and now have 30 productive sows.

"We had to learn as we went along," says Frost, "and up to this point we've had to plow all of our earnings back into the business. But we look forward to getting into the black soon."

One source of income is the School of Wicca the Frosts operate. Students taking the correspondence course pay a flat $10 initial fee and $5 per month, which gives them membership in the church. Frost said the school has had about 12,000 students over six years, with 500 currently enrolled.

"A lot of people sign up with the idea they will learn about toad spells and participate in orgies," Mrs. Frost said. "When they find out that it's actually equivalent to a college-level course with 22 books on the outside reading list, they seem to crumble."

The Frosts say witchcraft as they practice it was actually known as Wicca craft, or the craft of the wise, in pre-Christian England and Wales. It was nearly destroyed by early Christian leaders who saw it as a threat to their control over the people, Frost said.

He said true witches are greatly misunderstood and are still being hurt by publicity received by weird cults that have nothing to do with witchcraft.

"We aren't satanists. We believe Jesus Christ lived and was a great healer. But we object to church dogma and the idea that humans have the ability to really know what God is," Frost said.

The Frosts say they will soon have to give up their leadership in the coven and retire to a private life of book writing and operation of their school.

"We must change our leadership every nine years," Frost noted.

"We will feel a little sorrow in retiring," says his wife, "but it's not as bad as it used to be in the old days. In those days you didn't just retire. You were sacrificed in a ritual."

Rev. Grimm To Be Nurture Minister

The Rev. Larry Grimm will be ordained and installed as minister of nurture of Midland's First Presbyterian Church in a special service scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the church sanctuary.

The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Stuart Paterson, pastor of Westport Presbyterian Church, Kansas City, Mo., Mr. Grimm's home church.

Mrs. Rose Grimm, a ruling elder of Westport Church and mother of Mr. Grimm, also will participate in the service.

Other members of the commission appointed by the Presbytery of Tres Rios to ordain and install the new minister are Dr. Joe Brown and Dr. Phil Speegle, both of First Presbyterian Church, Odessa; Clifford Sherrod, Covenant Presbyterian Church, Midland, and Dr. Robert Boynton Smith, Dr. F. Ray Riddle, Mrs. Mabel Franz and Dr. Glenn A. Rogers, all of First Church, Midland.

Immediately following the service, a reception honoring Mr. Grimm and members of the commission will be held in the church parlor.

Mr. Grimm assumed his new assignment here last week.

He was reared at Leawood, Kan., and attended high school at Shawnee Missouri East. He was graduated from Grinnell College and Union Seminary at Richmond, Va. He also spent a year at New College at Edinburg, Scotland.

Mr. Grimm, after completing his college seminary work this spring, spent the summer in hospital ministry in Parkland Hospital at Dallas.

Church Elects Elders, Deacons

New ruling elders, deacons and a trustee of the First Presbyterian Church were elected at a congregational meeting which followed the morning worship service last Sunday.

The elders named are Pat M. Baskin, Richard L. Denham, Jerome Fullinwider, Mrs. Jack Huff, Mrs. Theodore M. Kerr, William M. Osborn, Lee B. Park, William H. Pomeroy Jr., and J. Milton Tucker Jr.

The new deacons are Mrs. Paul D. Anderson, John S. Braun, Mrs. J.R. Damron, Dan W. Foreman, Thomas N. Hughston, Richard Rowan, John B. Waid, Johnny R. Warren and Jack W. Young.

The terms for both elders and deacons are for three years.

W. H. Collyns was elected a trustee of the church, succeeding the late R. L. Miller.

Baptists Will Present Play

A Biblical drama, "Am I My Brother's Keeper?", will be presented at 8 p.m. Sunday in Antioch Baptist Church, 1400 E. Golf Course Road. The public is invited to attend.

According to the Rev. G. T. Curry, Antioch's pastor, a special guest participating in the presentation will be Boniface Kipkemoi Koross, student from Kenya, East Africa currently attending high school classes in Midland.

Poet Tells Story

At about 846 B.C. the blind Greek poet Homer was telling stories that were later written down as the Iliad and the Odyssey.

Church Marks Anniversary

The congregation of Hollowell United Methodist Church, 404 S. Marshall St., will mark the church's 13th anniversary at a special service scheduled Sunday afternoon.

Guest speaker for the 3 p.m. service will be the Rev. Caleb Hildebrand, pastor of St. Mark's United Methodist Church and current president of the Midland Association of Churches.

The Rev. Wilbart Bledsoe, pastor of Hollowell Church, has invited the public to attend the birthday observance.

Boys Club Offers Much For Participants

(EDITOR'S NOTE: As a prelude to the United Way campaign, Reporter-Telegram reporter Bo Baskin visited several agencies receiving funds from the campaign with a member of the Visitation Committee. The following article is what he found out about the agency.)

By BO BASKIN

When you cross the threshold of this blue, cement block building, you see what you expect to see.

You see boys.

For this building houses a Boys Club—the Midland Boys Club, a United Way agency.

The Midland Boys Club is an 18-year-old organization, which attempts to serve boys 6 to 18 years old. The organization offers its young men athletic opportunities in football, softball, baseball and boxing. However, sports are not its main concern.

"Our primary emphasis is counseling," says Donny Thompson, red-headed Stanton native who has served as the club's executive director for the past four years.

"If a boy has a problem, we try to find out what it is, and then we try to help him.

"We talk about everything from sex education to how to fill out an income tax form."

Thompson says that he and Pedro Quillimaco, the club's other full-time employe, spend most of their time with the younger boys.

"Most of the kids causing trouble are 15 to 18 years old," he says. "But the younger ones—who may be causing the trouble in a few years—are the ones we feel we can affect the most.

"Education for these kids is important," he adds. "The name of the game is teaching right from wrong."

Membership to the Boys Club costs a boy 50 cents per year, and Thompson says there are currently 364 members. However, he also says that "most of our boys are from low-income families," and if a boy does not have the money, his membership is free.

According to the enthusiastic Thompson, the Boys Club does not compete with the several YMCA branches and youth centers in Midland.

Unlike the YMCA, he says, the Boys Club is "strictly for boys." Also, the club primarily serves southside Midland — a part of the city which similar organizations often do not reach.

"We have an open door policy," says Thompson. "The kids can come and go as they please.

"All of the activities are supervised," he adds. "There is always an employe here."

The Boys Club is not a large building. In fact, it currently has a space problem.

Thompson hopes to alleviate the space problem, however, with a 16,000 square foot addition. Approximately one-half of the $80,000 needed to finance the addition has already been raised, and Thompson says he hopes construction will begin by Jan. 1, 1976.

Even with a space problem, however, the boys who patronize the Boys Club seem to enjoy it.

"It's a good place to take out your frustrations or just to enjoy yourself," says Tommy Ruiz, a 14-year-old who works at the club. "You can also make a lot of friends here."

Leaning forward on a bench pushed against the club's south wall, the young Ruiz talks about the club and the boys it serves. As he talks, he points to a sign above the door on the opposite side of the club.

The sign reads, "Through these doors walk our country future leaders."

Ruiz says that may be true.

Cardinal Cooke To Attend Rites For Mother Seton

NEW YORK (AP) — Terence Cardinal Cooke, Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, has flown to Rome to attend the canonization of Mother Seton as the Catholic Church's first American-born saint.

The cardinal left Thursday night on a flight with a number of nuns of the order of the Sisters of Charity.

Mother Seton was born Elizabeth Ann Bayley in New York in 1774. Married and widowed, she converted to Catholicism and founded the Sisters of Charity in 1809.

Some 20,000 Americans, 700 of them from New York, are expected to attend the canonization ceremony to be conducted by Pope Paul VI Sunday in St. Peter's Square in Rome.

Methodists Will Screen Film

An inspirational film, "Time to Run," will have a screening at 7 p.m. Sunday in St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive.

The motion picture has been well received in previous showings in the city. Those who have seen the film elsewhere are invited to view it again Sunday evening, and persons who have not yet seen it are given a special invitation to avail themselves of the opportunity coming up.

Nation's Forgetfulness Could Bring On Epidemic

By FRANCIS B. KENT
The Los Angeles Times

ATLANTA — Much of the nation appears to be ignoring — or to have forgotten — the public health lessons learned down through the years. And as a consquence, according to government authorities here, there is a real danger of epidemic on a broad front.

Even polio, which is widely thought to have been virtually eliminated with the development of vaccines in the 1950s and '60s, is now being described as a serious threat by officials at the U.S. Public Health Service's Center for Disease Control.

The problem, officials of the Center for Disease Control say, is that young parents in increasing numbers are neglecting to have their children vaccinated, particularly in the vulnerable preschool years.

For example, in 1963 more than 84 per cent of the nation's children one to 4 years old were immunized against polio but by last year that level had fallen to little more than 63 per cent.

The situation with respect to other diseases is not much better. Accordingly to Don H. Stenhouse, a Center for Disease Control adviser on immunization problems, there are roughly 13.2 million children in the one-to-4 age group and more than 5 million of them are inadequately protected or unprotected against polio, measles, mumps, rubella (German measles), diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis (whooping cough).

"While immunization levels remain low, the danger of epidemic is absolutely real," Stenhouse said in a recent interview. "No vaccine is worth a darn if it stays in the bottle."

He said that much of the problem lay in the fact that — thanks to the emphasis on immunization a generation ago — many young parents today have no personal experience with the diseases that used to be common in childhood. They think of polio as something deep in the past and of measles as nothing more serious than a rash.

Yet the crippling polio virus is present at all times in every community, Stenhouse said, and measles can be as dangerous as ever, often leaving its young victims with permanent brain damage.

Another factor contributing to the threat of epidemic is the mobility of today's society. Immunization levels are lowest among rural children and the urban poor; this, together with constant shifting of families from one place to another, increases the likelihood of a concentration of unprotected or underprotected youngsters.

Once children start attending school, the odds against any widespread outbreak are sharply reduced, Stenhouse said. In 46 of the 50 states the full range of vaccinations is required for all children entering kindergarten or the first grade.

What continues to worry Stenhouse and other public health officials is the danger to the millions of younger children, who in too many instances get little or on protection until they start school.

"The younger the victim the less likelihood there is of effective recovery," Stenhouse said. "People tend to forget that polio used to be called infantile paralysis, and that's an exact description of what we're working back into."

In Britain, too, there is a growing fear of epidemics due to reduced levels of immunization. Official concern has been expressed regarding both polio and diphtheria.

A decade ago immunization levels in Britain were between 70 per cent and 75 per cent but have since fallen to 50 per cent in some areas, according to health officials quoted recently in the London Observer.

"There is great anxiety over failure to immunize young children," one health officer was quoted as saying. "The minute people think a disease has vanished they don't bother to protect their children."

In this country, the idea that sound public health practices may be on the wane is not held exclusively by officials in Atlanta. It was also set forth not long ago in Jackson, Miss., by Dr. Durward Blakey of the Mississippi State Board of Health.

Blakey told a reporter that ignorance or apathy or a combination of the two might well be responsible for the epidemic of encephalitis that broke out in Mississippi and has since spread to the Chicago area and to more than a dozen states from the Dakotas to New Jersey.

Encephalitis, a type of brain fever transmitted from bird to human by the mosquito, could be brought under control by effectively controlling the mosquito, Blakey said, but he believes that many persons simply have lost sight of how dangerous the mosquito can be.

"Mosquitos can breed in as little as half a cup of water," he said, "even in the small quantity of rain water that can collect in the folds of a discarded potato chip package. It is vitally important that we clean up the environment."

Other public health officials have recently called attention to the potential dangers involved in home canning, a practice all but abandoned until rising food prices touched off a revival a year or two back.

Bacteria can flourish in improperly canned food, causing severe pain, paralysis, and, sometimes, death.

Netherlands Open Desert Caravan

By NEL SLIS

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Trucking companies of The Netherlands have opened a new trade route to the rich Middle East, a sort of desert caravan carrying everything from eggs to modern sports cars.

Some 35 Dutch companies are involved in the commerce, sending about 250 trucks every month on two to three-week round trips of some 7,000 miles.

The route passes through West Germany, Austria, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Turkey, and then to the client countries of Iran, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iraq. Along the way, the drivers encounter extremes of country, rugged mountains and barren deserts.

Much of the freight begins its journey at Rotterdam's giant Europort where it is unloaded to start the journey south. The lucrative trade is worth millions of dollars annually and one of Holland's largest haulage firms employs British, Belgian, West German and Dutch drivers on the 80 trucks it keeps rolling in the Mid-East shuttle.

"The drivers need a sense of adventure," Director Marinus Rijnart said. "One of our trucks broke down at Erzincan, in eastern Turkey, and it took 10 days for the nearest garage to get spare parts."

Drivers face temperatures which can range from 25 degrees below zero to 42 above. The mountain roads of eastern Turkey are said by many of the men to be the most difficult to traverse.

"You're sunk if anything happens to you," said Johannes Heeren, 26, a regular on the run to Tehran for the past three years.

"It can take days before you get going again. There are very few telephones in that part of the world and often the only way to get help is to wait for another driver."

Now, Dutch companies are forming caravans of three or four trucks so that if one breaks down another can go ahead for help.

Heeren said there have also been problems with children herding sheep along the roads of eastern Turkey. "They always want cigarettes, and if you don't hand them over they pelt your windshield with rocks."

Hans Van Meenen, secretary of the Dutch Trucking Association, said there was also a lack of hotels and restaurants along the route and drivers often slept in their cabs on dusty roads miles from anywhere.

Some drivers run into trouble with authorities and are arrested. One Dutchman has been held for weeks in a Turkish jail accused of reckless driving. His truck was involved in an accident with a bus.

But business is booming, Van Meenen said, and there is no shortage of drivers prepared to take the risks of the haul.

You May Hate The Movie, But You'll Love The Actress

By JERRY PARKER
Newsday

NEW YORK — People, critics included, either love Mike Nichols' new film, "The Fortune," or they hate it.

"Classic American movie comedy," Newsday's Joseph Gelmis said; "rather a sham," Time magazine's Jay Cocks said. But no matter how they feel about the movie almost everyone who sees it falls a little in love with Stockard Channing, the oddly named, unknown nonbeauty who has the leading female part.

Channing, in the role of a bubble-headed, runaway heiress sandwiched between a pair of heels who mean to do her out of her inheritance by doing her in, has collected at least as many accolades as her two superstar leading men, Warren Beatty and Jack Nicholson.

"A Nichols discovery of major importance . . . a fine-grained, robust comic talent," Vincent Canby said the The New York Times. Paul Zimmerman of Newsweek called her "a plump, youthful Imogene Coca, full of dramatic turns and impulsive craziness."

Although she seems to have appeared out of nowhere to grab one of the plum parts of the year, and as convincing as she is in the role of a sheltered Long Island debutante of the 1920s, Channing is in reality a very up-to-date, not so terribly young woman who has been scratching for television and theater jobs for 10 years.

Sitting in her green-and-white Sherry-Netherland hotel suite the other afternoon, Channing sipped a Chivas Regal and easily volunteered the facts that she is 31, happily married to, though living apart from, her second husband, and the product of a background that she succinctly describes as "privileged."

As Fredercka Quintessa Bigard, the sanitary-napkin heiress whom Beatty and Nicholson wish to separate from her fortune, Channing displays the most severe case of Locust Valley lockjaw of any upperclass girl in movie memory. "Look," she says in the film, serving up a yucky akra breakfast to her con-men roommates, "if you don't want it, don't eat it, because I'm really not that way."

Years of growing up in a Manhattan apartment at 85th Street and Park Avenue, winters in Palm Beach and summers in Europe; schooling at Miss Chapin's, the Madeira School, and Radcliffe College; an early marriage to a socially prominent Harvard business grad—it all went into the delivery of that line.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram
AMUSEMENTS
12A—FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1975

"Technically, I was well-equipped," said Channing, whose off screen speech contains only subtle suggestions of her uppercrust background. "I was a debutante. I knew exactly how Freddie would talk, because I listened to it all my life."

Her real name is Susan Stockard and she is the younger daughter of Lester Stockard, who made a fortune in the shipping business and died in 1960. Her mother, who was remarried, divides her time among homes in Palm Beach, New York and Montana. Her older sister is Mrs. Earl E. T. Smith, wife of the former ambassador to Cuba who is at present mayor of Palm Beach, a town that Channing abhors.

"Hate the place," she said. "Cannot stand it. Hate beach clubs. Despise country clubs." She does, nevertheless, describe her family relationship as cordial, if somewhat distant. "Nothing bad, you understand," she said, "we just don't have much in common."

Her name, which would rest more easily on a polo player than an actress, represents a conscious decision on Channing's part, and at least a part of the decision was a desire to honor both her late father and her former husband, whose name is Walter Channing.

"One of the reasons I'm no longer married to Walter is that I decided to really go after my career. He was in Harvard Business School and he really needed a wife that could, you know, talk to people at cocktail parties. That's understandable.

"But he was going after what he was doing, and I was going after what I was doing, and it just didn't add up to a viable life thing. So," she shrugged and reached for her scotch, "we split up and I went and joined the circus."

Channing, who chalked up many of her impressive stage credits with the Theater Company of Boston, moved to a Greenich Village apartment on Perry Street and started making the New York rounds. She was sustained by the trust fund left her by her father. It was "not a fortune," she says, "but thank heavens, I never had to wait tables to keep myself going."

Her most important break, prior to "Fortune," was landing a job as understudy to the second female lead in Joseph Papp's musical version of "Two Gentlemen of Verona," even though she had begun singing lessons only weeks before and the part was written for a Puerto Rican actress. In December 1972 she took over the role on Broadway, then went with the production to Los Angeles the following year.

She stayed in Los Angeles to pick up a number of television jobs, including the lead in "The Girl Most Likely To," an ABC "Movie-of-the-Week" written by Joan Rivers which aired in 1973. She was staying at Hollywood's seedy but fabled Chateau Marmont in early 1974, while working on a "Medical Center" episode, when she heard about Nichols' movie project involving Warren Beatty, Jack Nicholson, and a girl.

Kitty Hawks, the beautiful daughter of Howard Hawks of the movies and Lady Keith of the society page, happens to be Channing's agent as well as one of her closest friends. Kitty Hawks arranged for her to meet with Nichols, who happened to be working on the script with screen writer Carole Eastman in Eastman's apartment two floors below Channing's room at the Chateau Marmont.

Nichols invited her to come back the next afternoon, when Beatty and Nicholson were coming to read through the script for the first time, to read the girl's part.

Intimidated somewhat by Nicholson in his dark glasses and mink-lined Levi jacket and Beatty in his custom-tappered jeans, Channing resolved to give it her all. "There were two entirely different rhythms going in the room," she said. "Jack and Warren were just sitting there on a Saturday afternoon, reading through a script, and I'm auditioning for my life."

During a break — "for carrot cake and herb tea; this is Los Angeles, you know"—Beatty gallantly remarked, "Stocko's pretty good," and Nicholson chimed in with, "Yeah, it's going to be hard to hear anyone else in the part."

"That," Channing told them, "is the general idea."

Still, Nichols auditioned dozens of actresses in Los Angeles, New York and London, and it was not until five months later that she was allowed to test officially for the part.

Homing Pigeons Wander

By JOHN EZARD
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — Pigeons have suddenly stopped coming home all over Britain. Fanciers — not a breed given to fluttery alarmism — report signs on a scale that is unprecedented something is interfering with one of the most delicate and mysterious instincts known to scientists.

In a word, it seems to be the heat, though the experts can't agree to which side effect. Ron Bissett, deputy editor of the 50,000-circulation magazine "The Racing Pigeon," says it's simple: "They haven't got sweat glands like you and I and they just get exhausted."

Wally Pope, who has a pet shop in Plaistow,, and who has raced pigeons for 55 years and has done so successfully in the tropics, thinks this is nonsense. He thinks the casue is linked with the "electrical disturbances" which have for the past few weekends foisted BB-TV on indignant views turned to the commercial channel and vice versa.

Be that as it may, homing rates in clubs in many parts of Britian have fallen from their usual 85-95 per cent to below 50 per cent. More worrying for the owners of these birds, many of the absentees are not, as delinquent pigeons usually do, flopping back into the loft a few days late.

Some — including Pope's — are still not back three weeks after their race started.

The situation confronts clubs stretching from Durham, Northumberland, and Yorkshire to Devon and Cornwall. Custom House, one of 11 clubs in the 500-member East London Federation of Pigeon Societies, released 400 pigeons — "all birds of proven ability" — from Peterborough on one of their outings three weekends ago.

Few returned to base and, for last weekend's race all they could raise was 80 birds. Pope was just as numerically exact about his personal misfortunes. Three weeks ago he released 22 and lost 11; two weeks ago he got three back out of six. Last week six took wing and only two came home.

One of the birds Pope launched from Peterborough has turned up at Whitley Bay "which means it must have gone completely the wrong way." This reminds him of the deviations when he launched birds within range of a radar station in last war. So he blames electrical disturbances for these "disasters."

But the BBC's engineering information department said that recent television interference was caused not by intense radio energy of that kind. It was due to signal misreflection occasioned — with VFH 8 by ionisation in the upper atmosphere and — with UHF — by a very still layer of warm air in the upper atmosphere.

"It means our transmitters' signals interfere with one another. Maybe the birds just get thirsty."

Lady Conductor Meets Challenge

By ALISON MITCHELL
Newsday

In 1930, when the 28-year-old Antonia Brico made her debut as the first female conductor of the acclaimed Berlin Philharmonic, she unwittingly plunged into a maelstrom of contention. A flood of newspaper articles hailed her as an oddity —a woman conductor.

Wherever Brico went as guest conductor—the Hollywood Bowl, the Metropolitan Opera — she was good copy, sensational copy when she founded the New York Woman's Symphony in 1934 to prove that women were capable musicians.

In 1937, Brico transformed her orchestra into the Brico Symphony, a group of both sexes, thinking her point had been made. It hadn't been, and Brico dropped from the public eye. A woman conductor was still an undesirable, and Brico was not offered any permanent conducting positions. She settled in Denver, where she conducted a semiprofessional community orchestra and gave music lessons, backpedaling furiously against oblivion for almost 30 years.

Last September, the tide turned. One of Brico's former students, folk singer Judy Collins, bankrolled a documentary about her teacher's life. "Antonia" was a hit, elevating Brico into a cult.

"Antonia," after which Brico conducted Mozart's Haffner Symphony and Beethoven's Second Symphony.

Ironically, the woman who has spent her life fighting to be recognized solely on her merits as a conductor, not as a female conductor, has been brought to the stage once more precisely because she is a woman who had been a victim of sexism.

Now 73, Antonia Brico refuses to discuss her reaction on conducting for audiences who have just seen the documentary about her life. "I was like a racehorse chafing at the bit, but I had to wait around till 9:15," is all that she will say about the concert.

Nevertheless, she bristles at any implication that her standing ovation was a reaction to the movie rather than the concert. She emphasizes what she has said time and time before: "I think that either I'm a good conductor, or I'm a good conductor. I think I know how to conduct, and people should equate me as a conductor. I want to be accepted as a conductor."

About "Antonia" itself, Brico's reactions are positive. "I was just appreciative of Judy doing something to help me. I was grateful to her when she catapulted me from the oblivion in which my 30 years in Denver cast me," she says.

"I didn't think it was really a movie in the sense of being reviewed, If you remember, in it I said, 'I am just speaking to you as a friend. I'm not airing my heartbreak at large.' If I had known it was going to be a real movie, I would have been all tied up. It wouldn't have worked."

Although the film has been praised as a feminist document, Brico stresses that she does not consider herself a feminist. "No, no, I'm not rah rah, women, women. I think everybody should have the opportunity to do his or her thing irrespective of sex, race, creed, whatever. In music, I was horrified that so many woman could get no chance whatsoever. But feminist? Rah, rah women? No."

She says she does not think that it was a mistake for her to have disbanded the all-woman symphony of the 1930s, although she never again had a professional orchestra permanently under her direction.

Can Burlesque Be Saved?

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Show business entrepreneur David Hanson says he's trying to save pure burlesque from the traffickers in lewdness and dirty shows.

Helping Hanson in his battle are his attractive wife (who dances as Sandy O'Hara), a 57-year-old fast-talking pitch man named Bill Thompson and a 75-year-old comedian, Claude Mathis.

"I've cried many a night when I see what they've done to our business," lamented Hanson in his air-conditioned trailer at the Iowa State Fair.

"What happened to burlesque is that pseudo-producers over the years have tried to — not refine burlesque — but they've tried to jazz it up. They've tried to outdo each other with the nudity and the lewdness of shows," said Hanson. "And consequently, they've changed it into nothing that resembles burlesque."

What the "pseudo-producers" have wrought, said Hanson, is "strip-o-ramas and smut-factories.

"Ten girls coming out and taking off their clothes doesn't make a burlesque show."

The kind of burlesque Hanson produces is family fare, he said. His shows, which play to fair, carnival and dinner theater audiences, concentrate on dancing, music and comedy.

A lot of American young people, said Hanson, "have never seen burlesque.

"Young people will go in, and they'll see 10 generally bad strippers. They come out and rip their clothes off and commit some lewd, lascivious act or just get naked. And the young people say: 'This is burlesque?'"

Thompson, of Eau Claire, Wis., veteran of 38 years with "thrill shows, minstrel shows, girl shows, freak shows," said it's hard to get customers to pay to see just sexy women.

"Before, you used to go the catalogue ads to see sex," said Thompson. "Now even the regular movies have it."

What sells today, agreed Hanson and Thompson, is entertainment.

Apparently they are right, because Hanson said his dinner theater act has completed arrangements to perform for 52 weeks into 1977 at various clubs around the nation.

Hanson's show for dinner theaters — about the same as the midway presentation — carries a company of 33 people: "10 showgirls, the 1950s recording group 'The Hilltoppers,' four comedians, three stripteasers, a magic act."

Secularization Of Government Seen As Lebanon's Only Salvation

By ANITA EVANS
Special to The Washington Post

BEIRUT — At least one man looked forward to the year's fourth round of fighting now under way between Lebanon's Moslems and Christians.

"I like the troubles," Michel Gorayeb said last month. "Does that sound bad?"

Gorayeb is no necrophiliac, but as professor of political science at the Lebanese University, he is an implacable opponent of Lebanan's religion-dominated style of government, which he sees as the prime source of this divided country's ill.

"It's only by seeing the fighting break out again and again that the government, will be forced to change the system," he said. Like many other Lebanese, Gorayeb sees secularization as the only permanent solution to Lebanon's sectarian problems.

The first step toward secularization, these people feel, should be the introduction of civil — or nonreligious — marriage into Lebanon. This would permit intersectarian alliances that could gradually break down the mutual hatred of Christians and Moslems.

Civil marriage is not permitted in Lebanon precisely because the government depends for its existence on the delicate counter balance of Moslems and Christians, Lebanon's two major religious factions.

A Lebanon resident who wants to get married has the choice of a church or mosque ceremony or a trip to Cyprus, Turkey or some other country for a civil marriage.

Last year a prominent Beirut journalist and his fiancee, also Lebanese, married in Virginia to avoid the problem in their own country.

Lebanon is a country where every social and political aspiration is influenced by religion. The most recent national census (taken in 1932) showed slightly more Christians than Moslems, and ever since then, despite the Moslems' claim that they now outnumber the Christians, political power has been divided according to the 1932 rations.

Only a Maronite Catholic may be elected to the all-powerful office of president. Only a Shiite Moslem may be speaker of Parliament. Only a Sunni Moslem may be prime minister.

By allowing people of all religions an equal opportunity to succeed, secularization could do away with what many now see as the Christians' unfair political advantages.

Civil marriage, bypassing the laws of both church and mosque, could start the process by narrowing the cultural gulf between the communities.

Reformers face an uphill struggle. They are up against not only the political establishment, but also those who oppose civil marriage for straightforward religious reasons. And they have all the old prejudices and traditions of the ordinary citizen to break down as well.

Lebanon may be the most "Western" of the Arab states, but it is also a latter day feudal society where political power is wielded and jealously guarded by a select number of influential families.

The Karami family, from the northern, predominantly Moselm city of Tripoli, is a case in point. Headed by Rashid Karami, the current premier and a bitter enemy of Lebanon's President Suleiman Franjieh, the Karami family commands unquestioning support from Tripoli's many thousands of Moslems — as witnessed by last week's pitched battles between Moslems and Christians on the road from Tripoli to Zghorta, Franjieh's Christian stronghold.

The marriage of a Karami to a Franjieh would be regarded by the families themselves as political suicide. The sectarian integrity of the political family is sacrosanct.

"These feudalist politicians are strangling the state," Gorayeb insists. "Civil marriage would be a real revolution here, but it would hurt the big politicians. They're kings in their confessions, and they don't want real national unity."

Urban warfare flares easily in Lebanon because here, as in the cities of Northern Ireland, the religious communities live apart. Beirut is divided into distinct Moslem and Christian areas, and so is the countryside around the capital.

Civil marriage would help put an end to this "warring ghetto" situation. Gorayeb says, "I would have relatives in the Moslem quarters. That would make them think twice before they fired rockets in my direction."

Gorayeb, the founder of the now-defunct Democratic Laic party, was agitating for secularization and the introduction of civil marriage as long ago as 1963. But his party was forced into "a state of paralysis" by a group of outraged Moslem sheikhs in 1966, and today not even the most progressive of Lebanon's political leaders expect any radical changes to the status quo soon.

"Look around you; we've got enough problems already without adding to them," said Raymond Edde, a right-wing "liberal" leader famed for his attacks on the many openly corrupt practices in Lebanese political life.

Edde has frequently spoken out in the past in favor of civil marriage, but as a front-runner for next year's presidential elections, even he now draws back from so iconoclastic a concept.

"Leave it for later," he said recently. "Wait until we've sorted ourselves out a bit."

Gorayeb and his fellow reformists scoff at Edde's logic. "Intermarriage is the only solution to our problems," Gorayeb said. "Either we introduce it or we remain at each others' throats forever."

Lebanon's Democratic Laic party lasted only three years, but during that time it sent nearly a hundred couples to Cyprus or Turkey for civil ceremonies. It cost the party about $120 to sponsor each wedding trip, and Gorayeb looks back on the experiment with mixed feelings.

"We would try to impress on the couples why civil marriage was so important," Gorayeb said. "But we found that most of them were going for the wrong reasons. They weren't convinced that Lebanon needed secularizing. Many of them just wanted to know they had an out if ever they decided to divorce.

"But I would start the party up again if I had the money to do so. I'm sure Lebanon is readier now for secularization than it was 10 years ago. It has to be done. This fighting is going to kill our country.

'Civil marriage would be a real revolution here, but it would hurt the big politicians'

Cost Increases Cancel Planned Highway Letting

AUSTIN — Rapidly escalating costs of construction have forced the state to cancel planned October statewide highway lettings, and has put the scheduled December lettings in the "probably will be held" category.

The lettings are held monthly, as the State Department of Highways & Public Transportation tries to divide into 12 equal shares the money that will be spent for maintenance and construction of roads.

The August letting this year was canceled as the agency blamed the rapid increase in the cost of construction for eating up so much of the highway dollars that there just wasn't enough to have that month's letting.

Aide To Oklahoma Lawmaker Faces Assault Charges

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP)— An aide to U. S. Rep. Ted Risenhoover, D-Okla., has been freed on his own recognizance after he was charged with two counts of assault and battery.

John Tennison was released after he was accused Thursday of striking Marilyn Tennison, his former daughter-in-law, and Paula Casey, one of her friends, said Ken Cunningham, Cherokee County assistant district attorney.

The Risenhoover aide also was accused of single counts of malicious injury to property and breach of peace. He pleaded innocent to the charges.

Cunningham said Mrs. Tennison was reportedly loading furniture onto a truck to take to Norman when the dispute occurred at her home.

Sihanouk Presides At Cabinet Session

BANGKOK — Cambodian Head of State Prince Norodom Sihanouk presided over a cabinet meeting in the Royal Palace in Phnom Penh Thursday, Cambodian radio, monitored here, reported today.

Under the leadership of Prime Minister Penn Nouth, who returned to Cambodia with Prince Sihanouk on Tuesday from a five-year exile in China, the cabinet ministers reported on the activities of their departments, the radio said.

Agnich Elected GOP Panel Veep

DALLAS (AP) — Republican National Committeeman Fred Agnich of Dallas has been elected vice president of the national committee, representing the Southern region.

The committee is divided into four regions, each having two vice chairmen who serve on the executive committee.

Agnich replaces a former state committee chairman in Georgia who was not re-elected to his state post.

GOP Women Gather To Hear Party Bigwigs

By ROB WOOD

DALLAS (AP) — The National Federation of Republican Women opened their 18th biennial convention today with some 2,500 delegates on hand to hear all the GOP bigwigs, including President Ford, Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, and Rep. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

The delegates also were to consider resolutions on the energy problem, welfare reform, the food stamp program, and the Panama Canal.

Rockefeller, who is attempting to mend some political fences in the Southern states, gets the show rolling with a Friday morning speech. That night Reagan, whose supporters say will announce his candidacy for the GOP presidential nomination in November, will be in the spotlight.

Ford, off and running for the nomination, will address convention at 11 a.m. Saturday, attend a $1,000-a-couple luncheon at the home of Dallas developer Trammell Crow, speak that afternoon at Southern Methodist University and then fly to Midland for the dedication of an oil museum.

His appearance in Midland comes only a few days after his veto of a bill to extend oil-price controls for six months.

Ford and possibly Reagan will be forced to enter a May primary if they expect to get any of the big Texas delegation to the national convention in Kansas City.

The legislature has passed a bill requiring the first presidential primaries in Texas history, with 75 per cent of the delegates to be selected by voters and 25 per cent by the traditional convention method.

Ford apparently will be laying the groundwork for his primary campaign and Reagan, who does have strong support in some sections of the state, especially the populous Houston area, will be testing the political winds to determine his chances of grabbing off a large hunk of the big Texas delegation.

Last week Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., and Howard "Bo" Callaway, Ford's national campaign chairman, announced a Texas steering committee to back the president. This leaves Reagan with some catching up to do.

Dottie de la Garza, an official of the federation, said the convention will be a "dress rehearsal for the 1976 national convention. Every potential presidential candidate and spokesman for the party have chose to come here and speak before the backbone of the campaigns—the women."

Teams of Secret Service agents have been flown in from Washington to assist the Dallas officers in providing strict security Friday and Saturday.

J. Walter Coughlin, special agent in charge of the Dallas Secret Service office, said, "It is my theory that we always provide maximum security. You either have maximum security or you don't."

Coughlin said there would be no "round-ups" of persons who might be considered a threat to Ford or Rockefeller. "We are not allowed to do that and our society is a better place for it," he added.

Islamic Group Funding Insurgents

By JACK FOISE
The Los Angeles Times

TRIPOLI, Libya — In the former Roman Catholic cathedral — the center of worship when Libya was an Italian colony — there now is housed the Islamic Call Society.

It is the headquarters of an Islamic missionary effort seeking to convert "nonbelievers" to the Islamic faith. A curious vistor who enters the church - altered only to having the Christian cross atop the spire replaced by a Moslem crescent and star — will have pressed upon him a free copy of the Koran in his native language. There are few languages into which the wisdom of the Prophet Mohammed has not been translated.

As with any efficient proselytizing group, the following on converts is effusive. Mrs. Anne Speake of Fresno, Calif., who became a Moslem early this year and is now traveling in the Middle East, displayed a letter she received recently from the Call Society. It was addressed to "Dear Sister in Islam," and was signed "Yours in Islam" by Mahmoud Sobhy, secretary general. It invited her to be the society's guest during a visit to Libya and to bring a friend whom she considered a potential convert.

Libyan officials here insist that the Islamic Call Society is performing no differently from Christian missionay groups trying to penetrate the Arab world.

But the society has been identified by intelligence sources as the agency through which Libya's strongman, Col. Moammar Khadafy, is channeling contributions to a variety of insurgent movements around the world, some of which are Moslem, and some that are not.

According to informants, Khadafy spends some of his nation's sizeable oil revenues backing guerrilla movements in Ethiopia, Somalia, South Yemen, Chad, Morocco, Tunisia, Thailand, the Southern Philippines, and for Panama's anti-American group and the Irish Republican Army operating in Northern Ireland.

GREYHOUND OFFERS NEW AMERIPASS

"Greyhound Lines, Inc., is now offering a new seven-day Ameripass for $76, "says Claude Handley, agent for Greyhound in Midland, Texas.

"Greyhound's new seven-day unlimited travel ticket really makes it possible for all Americans to travel all of America at even lower cost than ever before, "says Handley.

The new plans have all the basic features of Greyhound's other Ameripasses which include a new 15-day Ameripass which goes into effect Sept. 15, a one-month Ameripass costing $175 and a two-month Ameripass for $250..

According to Handley, anyone can travel any day of the week and go anywhere over Greyhound's more than 100,000 miles of routes throughout the United States and Canada. Passengers can travel any route any day, inside and outside their state and they can stop over where or when they want.

Handley says that Greyhound recognizes the need for a travel plan that benefits all Americans. He feels that the Ameripass will be well accepted by young persons, senior citizens, pensioners, job seekers and others who may have postponed travel because of inflationary and recession pressures. He added that the new fare should also appeal to students and others who may want to travel over the holiday period. Greyhound's seven-day Ameripass will be in effect until Dec. 15, 1975.

Handley added that as with Greyhound's other Ameripasses, seven-day Ameripass passengers receive Greyhound's discount guide which describes discounts offered by many hotels, sightseeing companies, attractions and other travel related services.

Lee Battles Snyder Tonight

By BOB DILLON

Coach Maurice Hodges and his Snyder Tigers went back to Class AAA last year and responded by winning the 3-AAA crown and that's who will be in Memorial Stadium tonight to battle the Midland Lee Rebels.

Snyder, still smarting from a 29-0 loss to Monahans last week, is determined to give the Rebels some trouble like they always have in the past three games with the Tall City eleven which is opening its home season.

While the Snyders were losing to the Loboes last week, Lee found themselves behind 10-0 at the end of the first period, but came back to nab a 27-16 victory over the Lubbock High Westerners.

Coach Jim Acree will go with the same backfield that started against Lubbock with Russell Kellner at quarterback, Robert White at the tailback slot while the fullback will be Bobby Humble and Rusty at the Laughlin wingback position. Robert Johnson has won back his split end slot after Sherman Chew started last week in Lubbock.

White responded by rushing for 94 yards last week against the stubborn Westerners and has replaced Clyde Gary who is still ailing with a back injury.

Lee once again, has a strong defensive unit that likes to hit and they will be out to show the home folks what kind of team Rebel fans can expect for 1975.

Snyder fields a larger and quicker team than the Rebels, according to scouting reports. "We have a young ball club that will make some mistakes, but I feel we could be strong in our district, " said Hodges.

Lee has good size in Junior Miler (225), Billy Skinner (217), Humble (205) and Brian Pope, who also weighs 205.

Kellner moves the Rebels well and Lee has two backup quarterbacks that can do the job in Brad Wright and David Hobbs, a pair of juniors. Humble is starting to run with more authority and White has turned in some great efforts. When Gary returns to the lineup, the Rebels will have even a stronger running game with two fine tailbacks to throw at opponents.

Miller, Humble, Pope, Bryan Webb, Chew, Johnson, Kellner and Laughlin have all done well on defense.

Guiding the Tiger attack is Steve Green who can run and throw, but there aren't any Welton Cobbs around, thank goodness. Last year, Lee had to come from behind to beat Snyder, 19-12.

"We feel real good about this year's team and can see improvement each week in the youngsters and are looking forward to another good season, " said Acree. Acree and his staff are highly pleased with the play of their defensive units and Acree feels he has two offensive lines of equal talent.

Next week's opponent — Plainview, bombed Amarillo Tascosa, 37-0 Thursday and most likely will be here in full force to watch the Rebels do their thing in Memorial Stadium with an 8 p.m. kickoff.

Hodges alternates two tailbacks in Tim Flynn (170) or Bobby Thompson, a 165-pounder while Mitchell Smith, a 205-pound junior, mans the fullback slot. Wingback Larry Gee, a 175-pound senior, is a fine blocker for the Tigers, according to Acree.

Pope and Skinner play defensive tackle while Brent Hicks, a 190 pound senior, goes both ways for the Rebels, playing quick tackle on offense and nose guard on the defensive unit.

Pack Tries Eastwood

EL PASO — The fun and games part of the Midland Bulldogs football season wasn't supposed to be over until after the El Paso Eastwood game. However, there are indications that it may have ended last week with the Amarillo Tascosa victory.

Scouting reports and the Troopers' strong opening-game showing against Las Cruces Mayfield, one of New Mexico's powers, hints that the Purple Pack from the Permian Basin may have its hands full here tonight.

The Bulldogs hold a 5-1 series edge over the Troopers and have lost the last two by lopsided 55-13 and 46-0 scores.

Coach J. D. Partridge's Troopers are eager for revenge and just might be big and experienced enough to extract satisfaction.

Eastwood returns 24 lettermen, including seven defensive and six offensive starters. Midland has just one defensive and one offensive starter back.

Eastwood also will enjoy a substantial edge in the weights and Midland Coach John Reddell is hopeful that "Our quickness and mobility will overcome their size."

Midland opened the season with a 27-7 victory over Amarillo Tascosa last week, but muffed three first-half scoring opportunities.

"However, we did maintain field position throughout the game," Reddell pointed out, "And that is so important in early season games where mistakes usually determine the outcome. Our mistakes came at their end of the field."

Eastwood, hoping to rebound from a 1-9 season last year, lost to Las Cruces, a team that returned eight starters from a team that went to the New Mexico state finals a year ago, 10-7. A blocked punt in the fourth quarter set up the winning field goal, however, the Troopers were threatening inside the 10 when a pass interception in the final seconds thwarted a late bid for victory.

Wingback Rick Johnson is Eastwood's prime running threat while Tom Adams, 255-pound middle guard, and linebacker Wade Ardoin are the defensive standouts.

Righthalfback Kim Madden scored two toughdowns for Midland last week while left half Phillip Ward's 87 yards top the Purple Pack rushers. Midland linebacker James Zachery and tackle James Ponder were the top performers defensively for the Pack last week.

Kickoff for tonight's game is 7:30 MST.

Nastase Captures Tennis Exhibition Over Riessen

ODESSA — Ilie Nastase, the bad boy of tennis until Jimmy Connors came along, didn't quite live up to his reputation Thursday night in Ector County Coliseum.

Suppressing his usual on-court antics and sometimes bad behavior, Nastase played like the champion he is and whipped Marty Riessen, ranked third in U.S. tennis, 7-6, 6-4.

The exhibition match, which also included doubles play and a tennis clinic, attracted approximately 1,500 persons, most of whom seemed to favor Riessen.

And it was by no means an easy match for Nastase.

In the first set of the best two of three set match, Riessen took Nastase to a 6-all tiebreaker situation. Nastase won the tiebreaker at 5-3, and the set at 7-6.

In the second set, Nastase broke Riessen's serve to lead at 3-1. Reissen seemed to lose his momentum at that point and lost the second set to Nastase, 6-4.

Although the players were pretty evenly matched, Nastase just outplayed the cool and composed Riessen.

Nastase, who has a habit of yelling and clowning around on the court, confined himself to a few four-letter-words and hitting the net judge with a ball (accidentally). But a pat on the head for the young lady by the handsome Rumanian made everything OK.

All in all, it was an exciting match for West Texas tennis fans.

John Newcombe was on hand during intermission to conduct a tennis clinic, along with Clarence Mabry, Newcombe's partner at the T Bar M Tennis Ranch in New Braunfels. Newcombe was to have played Nastase in the singles match, but bowed out due to a recent knee operation.

Several youngsters from Midland and Odessa took part in the clinic. They received instructions from Newcombe and Mabry on the basics of tennis.

Doubles play pitted Nastase and Keith Diepraam of the Midland Country Club against Riessen and John Phillips of the Odessa Country Club.

The 10-game pro set went to Nastase and Diepraam, 10-5.

Elder Cops Golf Lead

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — "My game has kind of come around," Lee Elder said, paused, considered and then offered a wry smile.

"It'd better come around or I'll be seeing all those smiling faces on those Monday mornings."

Elder, in a deep slump since his heralded appearance at the Masters this spring and facing the possibility—even probability—of dropping back into the ranks of the qualifiers next year, uncorked a spectacular six-under-par 65 Thursday for the first round lead in the $200,000 World Open Golf Tournament.

"I'm putting better," Elder said. "That's been the trouble all year."

Elder, now 83rd on the season's money-winning list—he needs to advance to 60th or better to escape the Monday morning qualifying rounds next year—had missed the cut in three of his last four starts before making a change in his putting stance.

"I'd been too closed," the 41-year-old Elder said. "I opened up my stance a little and now I can accelerate through the ball better."

And that, he said, was the key to his best round of the season, a 28-putt, six-birdie effort that lifted him two strokes clear of one of the strongest fields of the year.

Tom Weiskopf, Rod Funseth, Pat Fitzsimons and rookie Danny Edwards shared second with 67s on the historic 7,007-yard, par-71 No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

Ed Sneed, Elder's playing partner, Jim Dent, Rod Curl and John Schlee were at 68. Lee Trevino birdied his last hole for a 69 that left him very much in contention.

Jack Nicklaus birdied all the par five holes on the course he ranks among the world's half-dozen best, dropped another 25-foot putt but bogeyed three of four holes at one stretch and settled for a 70.

"I'm closing in on it," he said.

Dempsey Sparks Ram Victory

Oakland No Longer Undefeated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Dempsey booted field goals of 26 and 32 yards Thursday night to bring the Los Angeles Rams a 6-0 preseason National Football League victory over the Oakland Raiders, who were shut out for the first time in their last 173 games.

The last time the Raiders were blanked was in a preseason game on Aug. 19, 1967, when Kansas City whipped them 48-0 at Portland, Ore.

The Rams finished the exhibition slate with a 5-1 record and handed Oakland its first defeat in six preseason games and ruined the Raiders' hopes for their first undefeated preseason record.

A crowd of 68,630 watched the battle in Memorial Coliseum between the two clubs which are so highly rated in the NFL and many expected it to be a preview of the postseason Super Bowl.

The Rams were at the Oakland eight when the game ended, somewhat to the surprise of the crowd since the scoreboard had been inoperative after the first three minutes of the game. Vandals had wrecked the computer system operating the board early in the week and emergency repairs proved inadequate.

Both Dempsey field goals came in the second quarter and both followed Ram interceptions of Ken Stabler passes. The first came 10 plays after Eddie McMillan grabbed off a throw at the Los Angeles five and returned to the 12.

The second came seven plays after Dave Elmendorf intercepted Stabler on the sideline at the Oakland 44.

The big gainer in the opening drive was a 40-yard run by Tony Baker to the Oakland 18. The Rams came close to a touchdown on the second advance but Ron Jessie had a foot out of bounds in the end zone when he caught a James Harris pass and Los Angeles had to be content with the second field goal.

The shutout was the second in a row for the Rams, who had blanked Philadelphia 35-0 five days ago on this same field.

Koosman Blanks Pirates, 7-0

Loss Cuts Pittsburgh Lead Over Philadelphia Phils

By The Associated Press

"Jerry Koosman pitched to me better tonight than any pitcher ever in the major leagues," said Pittsburgh's Al Oliver, who had one of those nights: three strikeouts and a double play in four trips to the plate.

Koosman, who had lost four of his last five decisions, stifled the Pirates on six hits Thursday night, pitching the New York Mets to a 7-0 whitewash that cut Pittsburgh's lead over Philadelphia in the National League's East Division to five games.

"He kept me off-stride all night," added Oliver. "Give credit where credit is due."

Ironically, Koosman started a game against the Pirates 10 days ago and was totally ineffective. He was belted around for seven runs and eight hits and was kayoed in the fourth inning.

Dave Kingman, purchased by the Mets from the San Francisco Giants in February, tied a club record when he belted his 34th home run of the season in the fifth inning. It equalled the most ever hit by a Mets player in one season, a mark set by Frank Thomas in 1962, the team's first year.

It also kept Kingman tied with for the major league lead with Mike Schmidt, who belted his 34th homer for the Phils Thursday night.

The Mets, however, pretty well played themselves out of pennant contention by losing six in a row before Koosman snapped the string with his six-hit, seven-strikeout performance that raised his record to 12-13. He did not allow an extra-base hit, walked only one and only let two men reach second base.

The Mets tagged Pirates starter Jerry Reuss, 16-11, for three unearned runs in the second inning after an error by Rennie Stennett. They added two more in the fifth, including Kingman's homer, and two more in the sixth on RBI singles by rookie Mike Vail and Jerry Grote.

Vail's hit extended his batting streak to 19 games, tying him with Felix Millan of the Mets for the longest in the National League this year.

Phils 5, Expos 0

Larry Christenson, 10-5, limited Montreal to three hits in the game which was halted by rain in the seventh.

The Expos got two runs in the first inning, helped by a pair of wild pitches by Montreal starter Steve Rogers, 10-11. Garry Maddox had a run-scoring single in the third, Schmidt hit a solo homer leading off the fourth and Larry Bowa scored his third run of the game in the seventh.

Dodgers 5, Reds 2

Steve Garvey's 15th homer backed the seven-hit pitching of rookie Rick Rhoden and allowed the Dodgers to win their season series from Cincinnati 10-8.

But that was small consolation for Los Angeles, which was expected to battle for the pennant in the NL West but instead finds itself 17½ games behind the Reds, who clinched first place last week.

Cubs 12, Cards 6

Two-run singles by Manny Trillo and pitcher Rick Reuschel highlighted a six-run first inning for the Cubs, and St. Louis never caught up. It was the 11th loss in the last 15 games for the slumping Cards, who got home runs from Lou Brock and Keith Hernandez.

Astros 4, Giants 3

Rob Andrews' tie-breaking single in the 12th inning drove in pinch-hitter Roger Metzger with the winning run for Houston. Metzger had walked and moved to second on Skip Boswell walked, Andrews singled up the middle.

SWC Grid Briefs

Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Texas A&M University officials announced Thursday that there are no more tickets available for the Aggies' game with Texas this season.

The last of 4,600 folding chairs on the track were sold Thursday, officials said.

The Baylor game at College Station, Texas Tech in Lubbock and LSU in Baton Rouge already have been announced as sellouts and there are only 700 tickets left for the season opener against Mississippi Saturday.

More than 47,000 fans, an opening day record, are expected for the Mississippi game.

TCU Frogs

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Sophomore Jimmy Dan Elzner may be the starting quarterback Friday when the Texas Christian University Horned Frogs open the season against The University of Texas at Arlington.

Regular starter Lee Cook is still recovering from a knee injury although he returned to work this week and has improved his mobility.

The halfback position is still undecided between senior Ronnie Littleton and freshman Ricky Wright who has been outstanding during the workouts.

UT-A Mavs

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — University of Texas-Arlington fullback Derrick Jensen says he was embarrassed by his performance against North Texas State last Saturday and he will make up for it when he goes against Texas Christian Friday.

Jensen had 37 yards in 12 carries as UTA lost to North Texas 27-14.

"I knew what I had to do," he said. "But things just didn't work out. I was embarrassed."

Bullpups Whip Lee

By BOB DILLON

Coach Roy Blair's Midland High Bullpups stormed to an easy 30-14 victory over the Midland Lee junior varsity Thursday afternoon in the season opener for both teams in Memorial Stadium.

Sophomore Brently Jackson paved the way for the Bullpups by rushing for 136 yards in 14 carries while scoring two touchdowns. The gifted 165-pounder gained 123 of those yards on 11 carries in the first half.

While the victory was a great one for MHS, the Pups lost the services of stellar quarterback Doug Atnipp, who injured his left leg in the second period. It was feared that the leg might be broken, but it was only a severe sprain. Joe Mowels came in to relieve the injured Atnipp and did a great job in directing the Pups to 17 points on the scoreboard in the final period.

While Midland dominated the scoring, the statistics were very close with the Bullpups gettingg 17 first downs to Lee's 16 and they only had two more yards rushing than the Rebs.

(See Picture, 3B)

Big gun for Lee was tailback Jerry Moore who scored one touchdown and gained 85 yards on 18 carries. He had a TD run of 27 yards while teammate Todd Clements scored on a 13-yard scamper.

Jackson's TD runs were 52 and three yards and teammate David Reddell booted three extra points and a 35-yard field goal for the winners.

Lee kicked off to Midland and the Pups stormed to a quick touchdown in their first posession, going 65 yards in four plays with Jackson breaking clear on a beautiful 52-yard run with 10:27 left in the opening period. Reddell spilt the uprights to make it 7-0.

Coach Ernie Johnson's Rebs were unable to move the football thanks to some great defensive play by Scotty Jenkins who threw Moore for a big seven-yard loss on a sweep.

A short 21-yard punt off the toe of Lee's Byron Hixon gave the ball to the Pups at the Midland 49 and in 11 plays, the Purple were camped on the Lee four, but the Rebels held when Atnipp was stopped at the Lee three. Eleven-yard runs by Jackson and Gerald Dedrick keyed the drive.

Midland got the ball right back when Jenkins pounced on a fumble by Tracey Rogers at the Lee six. In two plays, Midland was on the scoreboard again with Jackson knifing over from the three. Reddell's kick failed, making it 13-0 with 2:25 left in the first period.

After Rogers was thrown for a seven-yard loss by Jenkins and Sulton Bradley, Midland drove from its own 35 to the Lee 12 where Reddell booted a 30-yard field goal, but the Pups were penalized five yards so he calmly booted a 35-yarder to make it 16-0 with 9:11 left in the first half.

Midland's Bryan Booker blocked a punt by Hixon at the Lee 34 and returned it 11 yards to the 23 to set up the next MHS score. A nine-yard run by Jackson moved the ball to the 16 and then Mowles hit tight David Isby from 12 yards out for the score and a 22-0 lead with 3:49 left in the half. Reddell's PAT made it 23-0 and that's how it stood at intermission.

Lee came back in the third period to finally score. The Rebs drove 70 yards in 11 plays with Moore breaking on a great 27-yard run. He outfaked the cornerback and safety to race into the end zone untouched.. A pass for the two-point failed, however, making it 23-6 in favor of Midland with 7:52 left in the third period.

Lee got another break in the third peiord period when Mark Dinsmore fumbled at the Lee 48. The Rebs marched down to the Pup five where Rogers hit Tim McAdams for an apparent TD, but it was called back to due to an ineligible receiver downfield. Frank Agar and Jim Seeker then made one of the biggest defensive plays of the game, sacking Rogers for a six-yard loss and the Pups took over on their own 28.

Seventy-two yards later, the Pups scored again with Dinsmore scoring from the four. Reddell's kick was true and it was 30-6 with 10:02 left in the game. A 23-yard pass from Mowles to Jackson was the big gainer along with runs of nine and eight yards by Dedrick.

Lee went 69 yards in 13 plays to score with Clements racing in from three yards out for the score. Charles Roseberry ran over for the two-point conversion to make it 30-14 with 4:39 left in the game. An eight-yard screen pass from Rogers to Moore along with a 14-yard aerial from Rogers to Stan Carter, kept the drive alive. A 13-yard run by McAdams also helped.

Next action for the Pups and Lee will be Sept. 20 when Midland plays the Monahans JV in a 2 p.m. game and Lee travels to Snyder for a 2 p.m. kickoff the same day.

AMERICAN LEAGUE ACTION

Tiant, Palmer Nab Mound Victories

By The Associated Press

Luis Tiant and Jim Palmer. Neither would be bad in a pinch—but in the pressure of a pennant race, they're simply great.

Tiant, of the Boston Red Sox, and Palmer, of the Baltimore Orioles, each gave their teams strong shots in the arm Thursday to keep the American League East race interesting.

The Red Sox, behind Tiant's gorgeous three-hitter, defeated the Detroit Tigers 3-1 to stay five games in front of the Orioles. Baltimore kept up with the Red Sox by beating the Cleveland Indians 10-2 as Palmer scattered nine hits for his 21st victory.

Tiant, especially, was impressive. He had a no-hitter for 7 2-3 innings before Auerelio Rodriguez lined a 3-2 pitch through the middle for a single.

"After going that far, you want a no-hitter, but there's nothing you can do about it," said Tiant after winning his 16th game. "The main thing was to win."

In the only other American League game, the New York Yankees whipped the Milwaukee Brewers 10-2.

After Tiant lost his no-hitter, the Fenway Park crowd of 9,508 gave him a standing ovation. Then Tom Veryzer followed with a double, but Tiant struck out pinch-hitter Gates Brown to end the inning. It was Tiant's ninth strikeout of the game. He finished with 10.

In the ninth rookie Bob Baldwin tagged his third home run of the season, accounting for Detroit's run.

"He always throws good," said Detroit slugger Willie Horton of Tiant. "But the way he pitched today, he would have beaten anybody."

Orioles 10, Indians 2

Baltimore first baseman Lee May whacked his 20th home run to make it easy for Palmer to beat Cleveland. The lean right-hander was a success despite the fact that he didn't have his best stuff.

"His fastball wasn't right and he threw some changeups and curveballs in some bad spots," Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver said of Palmer, 21-10. "It was a well-pitched game, but not among his best this year."

The game was spiced by a bench-clearing incident in the eighth inning. Baltimore's Ken Singleton took a few menacing steps toward rookie Larry Andersen on the mound after the youngster let go with a wild pitch inside with the score 10-1.

"I just thought he (plate umpire Bill Deegan) should have gone out there and warned the pitcher," explained Singleton. "I don't like that, because it's like inviting us to throw at them. He wouldn't go out and warn him."

Graig Nettles drove in four runs with two homers to power Catfish Hunter and New York past Milwaukee. Nettles smashed a two-run shot to cap a three-run rally in the first inning, then walloped a two-run blast, his 21st, in the third to give Hunter, 21-13, a 5-0 cushion.

The star Yankee right-hander, also supported by Ed Hermann's three-run homer in the seventh, coasted to his fifth straight victory and 28th complete game of the season with a six-hitter.

Trojans Battle Devils Tonight In Grid Opener

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Duke meets fourth-ranked Southern California tonight in the college football opener for both schools, the stars are likely to be quarterback Vince Evans of Greensboro, N.C., and tackle Marvin Powell of Fayetteville, N.C.

Funny thing is, though, that both play for favored Southern Cal, not for the Blue Devils, whose home base is North Carolina. Southern Cal rarely recruits outside California, but when the Trojans do go farther afield for their talent, they usually come up with aces.

Evans, despite a proclivity to fumble, inherits the spot owned last year by Pat Haden, the sure-armed passer who helped the Trojans achieve a 10-1-1 mark and a No. 2 national ranking.

Powell anchors a solid offensive front wall that averages 238 pounds.

The Duke-Southern Cal clash is one of two major college games on tonight's card. The other sends Texas-Arlington against Texas Christian.

Top-ranked Oklahoma opens defense of its mythical national championship on Saturday by hosting Oregon at Norman, Okla.

Elsewhere Saturday among the Top Ten, No. 2 Michigan is at Wisconsin, No. 3 Ohio State goes to No. 11 Michigan State, No. 6 Nebraska entertains Louisiana State, Memphis State is at No. 7 Auburn, Mississippi at No. 8 Texas A&M and Stanford at No. 10 Penn State.

Southern Cal Coach John McKay has two worries: his defensive line is very young and inexperienced and he still hasn't found a tight end worthy of the name.

The Trojans send 17 Californians and five imports against a Blue Devil team that's quarterbacked by a Woody Hayes escapee, Hal Spears, a 6-foot-1, 183-pound passer, hails from Ironton, Ohio, where former Duke halfback George McAfee saw him and signed him.

The Duke squad is lighter, over-all, than the Trojan team and an interesting matchup is Duke's offensive line against the USC defensive front five. Gary Jeter, perhaps one of the nation's top tackles, heads the Trojan group, but he's been hurt and may see only limited action.

The Devils field four seniors and a junior on their offensive line, and the junior is center Billy Bryan, considered one of the finest in the game.

Troy Slade, Duke's fleet kick returner, may keep the Devils in good field position with his twisting runs.

American Wrestler Suffers Broken Neck In World Greco-Roman Wrestling Meet

MOSCOW (AP) — An American wrestling champion suffered a broken neck Thursday evening as the World Greco-Roman wrestling championships began in Minsk, Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported.

Abdul Rahim, identified as a serviceman from Virginia who was named the outstanding classical wrestler of 1975, was injured when he was thrown to the mat by Finnish wrestler Mikko Hutala, Tass said. The two were competing in the under-163-pound class.

Rahim, who suffered a fractured neck vertebra, was taken to a local hospital where his condition was not immediately known. Attempts to reach a spokesman for the United States team by telephone were unsuccessful.

U.S. Coach Alan Rich was quoted by Tass as saying the injury resulted from an accident.

The 10-man American team, dominated by Minnesotans, scored five victories Thursday in the first of four days of competition.

Bruce Thompson, 24, of Minneapolis, scored an upset in the under-153-pound class by outpointing world champion Peter Kirov of Bulgaria.

Borg Captures Exhibition Tennis Win

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Sweden's Bjorn Borg defeated Great Britain's Mark Cox 6-4, 7-6 Thursday night in an exhibition tennis match at Sparks Center.

Borg broke service three times in the first set and won a 6-3, 7-5 tie breaker in the second set.

A near sellout crowd of 2,580 watched Borg and Cox trade powerful serves.

Brian Parrott of Gresham, Ore., teamed with Cox to whip Borg and Ray Myers of Salem

Rams Are Loaded In 1975

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If Coach Chuck Knox of the Los Angeles Rams ever went out on a limb, it would be one of the stout, two-foot variety.

His veteran team has been considered a prime Super Bowl contender, but Knox is cautious, saying: "It is much too early to tell anything. I won't even know if we're improved until the fourth or fifth game of the regular season."

Knox rejuvenated the Rams two years ago and put Los Angeles into the playoffs both seasons, losing in the first round of 1973 and the second in 1974. He could go further in this third attempt.

"We hope the kicking game is improved with Tom Dempsey place kicking and Jim McCann punting," Knox said.

In Knox' first two seasons, kicking has proved one of the biggest problems.

Over-all, he observed, "Optimism and predictions have never won football games. Good tackling and blocking win football games. And that's what we're going to have to do to win this fall."

The ever-cautious Knox has an offensive line including Charlie Cowan, 37, Joe Scibelli, 36, and Tom Mack, 31.

"We don't judge age, we judge performance," the coach declares to the suggestion some of his players might be elderly. "And they are still performing."

Los Angeles Rams

1974 finish: First in the NFC West
1974 record: 10-4.
Team's strong points: Second best overall defense in conference last year with front four of Merlin Olsen, Larry Brooks, Jack Youngblood and Fred Dryer that led NFC in quarterback sacks with 44. Running back Lawrence McCutcheon set club record with 1,109 yards rushing in 1974 after 1,097 in 1973.

Team's weaknesses: Defensive secondary which hit also by injury loss of cornerback Charlie Stukes. Improvement sought in kicking game.

New faces: Place kicker Tom Dempsey, punter Jim McCann and rookie linemen Doug France of Ohio State and Dennis Harrah of Miami.

A Sense Of Humor Helps Tech's Kicker

Battle Scene

By Ted Battle

Maybe you recall the horror with which you first heard the news.

It was before one of Texas Tech's important early season games last year. Word came out of Lubbock that Brian Hall, the Red Raiders' ace place-kicker, had broken his leg in practice . . . simply shattered it.

And then, the story went on, it really didn't make that much difference. Hall sent off to the equipment room and got a new leg.

Some thought the story was hilarious. Others described it as sick, sick, sick.

One of those who thought it was hilarious was Hall, who kicks with an artificial right leg because of a farming accident when he was in junior high school.

A sense of humor has helped Hall live with what others consider to be a cruel handicap and enabled him to become one of the most valuable members of the Tech football squad.

When a teammate asked the junior from Dalhart what his major, agriculture communications, involved, he replied, "I talk to the animals."

Hall demonstrated Bob Hope ad-lib agility before the tv cameras on press day recently as he stared at his two legs laying on the floor and moaned, "Decisions, decisions, which one shall I wear today?"

When there was a rash of broken windows in the athletic office, for which Hall blames teammate David Mellot and Mellot blames Hall, Athletic Director J. T. King told the pair he was going to start taking the money out of their scholarships to pay for them.

Hall replied, "You can't do that coach, I've already ordered my 1976 model leg and I won't be able to make the payments."

However, when Hall trots on to the Jones Stadium turf Saturday night, there won't be any kidding around. Chances are good that one of his artificial legs could be the difference between victory and defeat against much-improved Florida State.

Texas Tech 17, Florida State 14 — When new coach Steve Sloan came to Lubbock, it was noted he had to be something special. After all, he played quarterback for Bear Bryant at Alabama. After Alabama's last two national TV appearances, Tech fans hope that background is something he can live down.

Texas 21, Colorado State 7 — Longhorns unveil their version of a Wishbone aerial circus.

Texas A&M 24, Ole Miss 15 — With a game under their belts, the Rebels might prove troublesome.

Florida 21, SMU 16 — Temptation is to pick SMU in an upset, but not after a 14-7 win over Wake Forest.

Houston 24, Rice 17— Al Conover can take only 48 players on this trip while Houston will have 60.

USC 21, Duke 0 — Guaranteed Win Night.

Oklahoma 42, Oregon 7 — Sooners start sluggishly.

Notre Dame 28, Boston College 10— Dan Devine better win this one.

Among the high schools ....

Midland 28, Eastwood 13 — Troopers could be stronger, but won't be that strong.

Midland Lee 35, Snyder 6 — Rebs won't fall behind 10-0 in first period this week.

Rankin, McCamey Top Area Action

The McCamey Badgers, the defending 7-AA champion, will host the Rankin Red Devils, the defending 6-A champion, in a battle for the Upton County football championship tonight.

This contest is a heated rivalry, and by far, top the area action tonight.

In other key games, Odessa High of District 5-4A will travel to Andrews, a AAA school, while AAA Lamesa tangles with AA Denver City.

In other games involving 7-AA teams, district favorite Crane will travel to AAA Kermit in an important clash while Reagan County hosts state ranked AA Ballinger. Crane already owns one victory over a AAA school this year while Reagan County will be trying to break an eight game losing streak extending back to last year.

Stanton will host Wink in their home opener, with both respected Class A squads. All games have an 8 p.m. starting time.

Aggies Open Season

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

Longhorns Try Colorado State

By The Associated Press

A lot of preseason question marks will be answered for good on bad Saturday in a flurry of Southwest Conference jousts against intersectional foes including whether preseason favorite Texas A&M will continue to be its own worse enemy.

The Aggies, owning the second best defense in the nation last year, fumbled their way to an 8-3 season good for second place in the SWC.

Mississippi comes calling for the first time in 61 years Saturday afternoon and Aggie alumni will have all eyes on quarterback David Shipman, who has bordered on the sensational in the spring and fall after coming back from a knee injury.

The Aggie first team scored 109 points in three quarters last week in a scrimmage against the No. 3 team defense.

"Shipman looked great," said new A&M assistant coach Tom Wilson, who will be calling the plays from the press box—a job he held at Texas Tech under the departed Jim Carlen. "I'm anxious to see what he can do against some different colored uniforms."

Ole Miss took a 20-10 thumping from Baylor last week and the Rebel-Aggie matchup should offer an early indication of strength between the preseason picks and the defending champion Bears.

The 8th-ranked Aggies are 19-point picks over Ole Miss in the 4 p.m. game at Kyle Field which is expected to draw a near-sellout 48,000 fans. A&M has beaten Mississippi in two previous games—17-0 in 1911 and 14-7 in 1914.

The SWC jumped to a 3-0 ledger last week with Baylor's victory, Southern Methodist's 14-7 survival of Wake Forest and Houston's 20-6 nod over Lamar.

In other games this week, 12th-ranked Texas is a three-touchdown choice over Colorado State in Austin, Arkansas is a 16-point pick over Air Force at Little Rock, Texas Tech is a 12-point favorite over Florida State in Lubbock in Coach Steve Sloan's debut, SMU is a 12-point underdog on the road against Florida, Houston is an 11-point nod over Rice, and Texas Christian is a 10-point pick tonight over Texas-Arlington in Amon Carter Stadium in Fort Worth.

All games are at night except the A&M-Ole Miss clash.

Praise is still filtering down from Mississippi about Baylor and Rebel defensive back Gary Turner says: "Baylor was as good as I've seen. And A&M is ranked high nationally. That makes it double tough."

A&M has installed the I formation to open up the air lanes should an opponent stack against the Wishbone-T with a nine-man line like Kansas did against the Aggies last year and Missouri did against Alabama in Monday night's stunning upset.

"It gives our opponents a little something more to think about," said Aggie Coach Emory Bellard.

The optimist award before kickoff goes to Colorado State Coach Sark Arslanian.

"What better way is there to start a season than playing one of the nation's top teams . . . Texas has not lost a home game in 34 contests," Arslanian said.

SWC Highlight Series Slated

The first of 12 weekly shows featuring highlights of the Southwest Conference football games will be shown at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday on KMOM-TV.

U.S. Fields Strong Wightman Cup Team

CLEVELAND (AP) — This year's Wightman Cup tennis teams are nearly the strongest the United States or England could possibly field, the U.S. captain maintained after Thursday's draw.

"We're missing less than any of the last three teams," said Julie Heldman, referring to return of reigning U.S. Open Champion Chris Evert to the Americans's squad.

British captain Virginia Wade concurred. "The U.S. team is very solid," she said. "Last year, the U.S.A. was missing one of its top players."

Miss Evert did not play last year, when England won 6-1 at Deeside, Wales.

Miss Heldman, heroine of the U.S. victory over Australia last year in the Bonne Bell Cup matches, said she would not take the court due to bothersome knee and neck injuries. "The best players are playing," she said.

The draw pitted superstars Evert and Wade against each other in a dramatic final-day confrontation Sunday.

Miss Wade meets Mona Schallau in the opening singles contest Friday. Miss Schallau teamed with Miss Heldman last year for the Americans' only victory.

Miss Evert also plays the first night, facing 21-year-old Briton, Glynnis Coles. In the Wightman competition last year, Miss Coles keyed the British victory with defeats of Miss Heldman and Janet Newberry.

Miss Newberry, who has vowed to avenge last year's performance, plays in both Saturday matches. The British hard-court champion meets 19-year-old Sue Barker in singles and then joins Julie Anthony in doubles against Miss Wade and Ann Haydon Jones.

The British gained Miss Jones after Linda Hottram, the British and Australian women's junior titleholder, was injured.

Miss Schallau and Miss Coles meet in singles Sunday. Then Miss Schallau teams with Miss Evert against Miss Barker and Miss Coles in the final doubles.

The United States has won 38 of the 46 times the two nations have met in the Wightman competition.

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Pfc. Charles Harris of Ft. McClellan, Ala., won a sudden death playoff Thursday over S. Sgt. Walter Morgan to win the open division of the All-Army Golf Trials.

Both Harris and Morgan, with the 25th infantry division in Hawaii, finished with fourround totals of 299.

Maj. Jimmy Stinebaugh of Ft. Sill, Okla., won the seniors division at 291. A distant second was M. Sgt. Patrick Kaya of Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., at 302.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Forward Charlie Edge of the Indiana Pacers has been acquired by the Utah Stars of the American Basketball Association in exchange for a future high draft choice.

The deal was announced Thursday by a Stars spokesman.

In 76 regular season games last season, Edge shot 51 per cent, averaging six points and 4.5 rebounds per game. He blocked 33 shots and made 54 steals.

Mister President!

Welcome, Mr. President, to Midland . . . in the heart of the vast Permian Basin petroleum-producing empire of West Texas and Southeastern New Mexico!

Your appearance in Midland is a distinct honor . . . a thrilling experience for all residents of this great region. It is an occasion which long will be remembered, marking as it does the first time that a President of the United States has visited Midland while in office.

You, Mr. President, always will be remembered and appreciated for being the first to come our way, and on invitation to attend and participate in a ceremony dedicating a new and impressive facility which is close to the hearts of Permian Basin Empire residents and oil men and women everywhere.

The occasion, of course, is the dedication of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. The facility portrays the story of crude oil and natural gas and how they were formed millions of years ago; the history of the petroleum industry, and the exploration, discovery, development, transporting and marketing of oil and gas in the Permian Basin.

It is an exciting, breath-taking story, told in authentic, forceful, interesting, easily-understandable style in a completely modern museum. It was erected on a voluntary basis by companies, individuals, groups and foundations interested only in preserving for posterity the history, records, tools and achievements of petroleum in this region. Its historic value from an educational standpoint is boundless.

Its sponsors feel that the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame is one of the finest, most modern and most complete anywhere . . . made all the greater and more noteworthy by President Gerald Ford having taken the time from his unparalleled duties and responsibilities to come to Midland, Texas, to deliver the address formally dedicating the facility.

Your presence in Midland, Mr. President, not only focuses national and world attention on the museum, but even more significant is the fact that it centers interest on energy and its tremendous importance at all levels, from local to international.

Your interest, Mr. President, in energy and in developing a realistic policy which will make this great nation self-sufficient insofar as energy is concerned, is well-known and appreciated by residents of this region.

The actions you have taken in recent days in an effort to solve the critical energy problem have not gone unnoticed by citizens, who, like you, are determined to achieve the goals set by your administration. You may count on their continued support in this regard.

The Petroleum Museum typifies the pioneering spirit of America as it relates to the petroleum industry and its role in energy overall, as well as of the nation's cherished free enterprise system.

You have done us proud, Mr. President, by accepting the invitation of museum officials to do the honors in dedicating the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame for the use, benefit and enjoyment of everyone . . . extending to generations upon generations of yet unborn.

Thank you, Mr. President!

A CHANGING WORLD—

How About A Good Word For Kissinger?

By JOHN PINKERMAN

Editor, Copley News Service

Maybe his odd assortment of enemies will stay off Henry Kissinger's back for a short time.

The fragile nature of the Egyptian-Israeli agreement notwithstanding, the secretary of state has done it again, and it would seem that he deserves the heartfelt thanks of all peace-loving people in the world, including his across-the-board (extreme rightists to vocal leftwingers) critics in the United States.

Perhaps Kissinger's pre-marital night life exhibitions had something to do with building up his foes—who quite properly may have looked for more dignity from the secretary of state.

Perhaps the lone fact that he was a Harvard man had something to do with the ultra-conservatives turning their backs on him. Perhaps his long and useful association with Vice President Nelson Rockefeller frightened a segment of the sizable anti-Rockefeller clique.

Compared to his accomplishments and his devotion to his country those bases of criticism should have very little standing among clear thinking people—people who believe in peace and people who are realistic enough to understand that America has a stake in almost any development almost anyplace im the world.

And, considering what Kissinger has accomplished, consider the alternatives if he had failed—or, worse, if he had never tried.

This German-born Jew (May 27, 1923) came as an immigrant to the United States in 1938.

His record since arrival should be a model for any American, native or foreign born. He served in the Army from 1943 to '46. He studied at Harvard, won a doctor's degree and taught at the university.

In government and private service, he has labored in the vineyards and in the higher echelons. He worked in the Operations Research Office, with the Psychological Strategic Board, has been director of the Study Group on Nuclear Weapons and Foreign Relations, has been a consultant to the Weapons System Evaluation Group of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He has been director of the National Security Council, and now for several years secretary of state.

Richard Nixon got the credit but it really was Kissinger who arranged the detente with Mao Tse-tung and Red China.

If you choose to believe this is a bad deal and Kissinger (or Nixon) should get blame not credit, consider the alternative. The alternative would have been a tightening instead of a loosening of tensions. And, up to now anyway, Kissinger's skill made this detente possible without America turning its back on the Republic of China on Taiwan.

Kissinger also led the way in the detente with Moscow, if you consider that a plus. If you think it is a minus, again consider the alternative. The alternative well might have been an impossible confrontation between the world's two atomic war giants—in the Mideast, where Kissinger's skill is most apparent, and in many other areas of the world. It is an uneasy peace the United States enjoys with Russia, but it is an improvement over the worst days of the Cold War.

Most Americans consider Vietnam a dark chapter in U.S. history, but without Kissinger's tireless and often discouraging negotiations with North Vietnam, U.S. soldiers might still be dying in that faraway land. His accomplishment was not the ultimate, but it eliminated the daily U.S. casualty lists, a rather depressing alternative.

Now, he has delivered in the shuttle diplomacy that failed last March but succeeded after more exhausting negotiations in Cairo, Alexandria, Jerusalem and Tel Aviv. It is not an ideal solution but it is preferable to an alternative of war—a war that certainly would bring more energy crises to America and perhaps even that unthinkable nuclear confrontation between Washington and Moscow.

Henry Kissinger is a loyal and most skillful American diplomat. He deserves the Nobel Prize for Peace he received for Vietnam. He also deserves the thanks of all Americans.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — The computer system, which the FBI is supposed to use in its war against crime, has been misused to keep tabs on noncriminals.

For years, the FBI has operated a National Crime Information Center, which is equipped with a multi-million-dollar computer. This now is crammed with information about criminals. The purpose is to help police throughout the country identify public enemies, particularly fugitives on the lam.

An Arizona highway patrolman, for example, may stop a speeder who appears suspicious. The officer could query the FBI computer center and might discover the driver is wanted for kidnapping in Maine.

It was never intended, however, that this all knowing, never-forgetting electronic contrivance should be used to store information about noncriminals.

Such misuse, if it should get out of hand, could extinguish forever the right of privacy. It could lead to a computerized master file on all Americans. At the press of a button, the computer could produce any person's life history.

In 1971, the FBI began using its master computer to monitor the activities of noncriminals. The names of more than 4,700 noncriminals were "flagged."

The FBI abruptly ended its misuse of the computer center in February, 1974, precisely two days before Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., opened hearings.

But Ervin's successor as head of the Senate Constitutional Rights subcommittee, Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., now has wrung a reluctant confession from the Justice Department that the FBI had perverted the criminal tracking system to keep an electronic eye on noncriminals.

"Flags were used to help locate individuals in matters wherein the FBI had the obligation to determine their whereabouts," Deputy Attorney General Harold Tyler conceded on a private letter to Tunney.

The letter stressed this was done, as a "pilot program," in "national security" cases. The term "national security" has been used in the past, however, to include controversial movie stars, football players, political leaders, newspapermen and even presidential candidates.

An FBI spokesman emphasized that the 4,700 noncriminals, whose names were fed into the computer, were "under FBI jurisdiction.". As he explained it for example, a potential draftee who failed to report to the Selective Service might have been "flagged."

Senator Tunney is suspicious that the FBI computer has been used to keep track of congressmen. He asked the Justice Department point blank whether the FBI had any congressmen in the "flag file." Taylor artfully dodged the question, but the FBI vigorously denied that any members of Congress had been monitored.

The spokesman also pointed out that the computer center was not under the FBI's sole jurisdiction but was governed by a 26-man board, including various chiefs of police.

The skeptical Tunney, meanwhile, is pressing the Justice Department for more specific answers. He is concerned that the misuse of the computer may be a federal violation.

INTELLIGENCE DIGEST: Once the Israeli-Egyptian agreement is implemented, an intelligence report warns, Arab extremists plan to infiltrate into the neutral zone and kill some of the American technicians manning the observation equipment. The intent, of course, is to disrupt the truce.

—A CIA report alleges that Soviet money has been passed under the table to bribe one of Portugal's top rulers. We are checking out the details.

—Japan's Defense Minister Michita Sakata has given secret assurances that the U.S. can use military bases in Japan to resist a North Korean attack upon South Korea. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, meanwhile, has made some anti-Japanese cracks inside the secret policy councils.

—The Shah of Iran has confided to visitors that he hopes to bring diplomatic pressure to exclude both the U.S. and Soviet fleets, from the Persian Gulf and then from the Indian Ocean.

— The Soviet KGB, according to intelligence reports, is encouraging Arab extremists to step up their revolutionary activities against the oil sheikdoms. Both Algeria and Libya are cooperating, at least indirectly, with the KGB, the reports allege.

—Of all the oil countries, Saudi Arabia stands alone to hold off an oil price increase. Seven of the 13 oil cartel members, led by Algeria and Kuwait, want a stunning $2-per-barrel increase on October 1. The five remaining oil countries are willing to settle for $1 per barrel more.

— Egypt's President Anwar Sadat quietly is seeking from the U.S. $250 million in economic aid and favorable terms for the purchase of up to $1 billion in military equipment.

— The Chinese Communists have gained the ear of the rulers of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand. Significantly, the Chinese are whispering anti-Soviet,not anti-American remarks.

— The underdeveloped, third-world nations are trying to get their hands in Uncle Sam's pockets. It's all part of their campaign to redistribute the world's wealth from the rich nations to the poor nations. One suggestion, brought up in the backrooms of Washington, is that the U.S. put the third-world nations on the spot by offering a program to concentrate the aid upon the 30 or 40 most impoverished nations. This would by-pass the nations raising the loudest holler.

Forced School Busing Termed Destructive

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — So here we are, a powerful earnest nation, stumbling around in the last days of summer, trying to make compulsory school busing work. There might be short-term successes, but in the long run this juggling around of cities and peoples won't work. Boston is in its second year of turmoil. The cruel grafitti of last year haven't even faded from lavatory room walls yet. Louisville has only begun. National Guardsmen and police ride along as though busing is a field trip on law enforcement. There is plenty of evidence that, once again, our preachments are far away from what is humanly reasonable. Still, the federal courts, in response to lawsuits by activists, will order many other cities to devise busing plans to integrate their school systems. Elected officials, worried about the black vote, will utter pious statements about making democracy a dream come true. Some pundits and editorialists will denounce the violence in Boston and Louisville, forgetting for the moment that their own children attend schools untroubled by forced busing edicts.

And yet increasing numbers of black parents express opposition to forced busing. They don't want trouble. They don't want their children subjected to white abuse. They don't like the idea of hauling schoolchildren away from their neighborhood to a white neighborhood, supposedly superior. What's wrong with putting the educational resources into the black neighborhoods? What's wrong with black pride?

This whole destructive controversy is as much a class matter as it is race. I remember back in the late '50s that upper- and middle-income blacks in Detroit vehemently objected to having their children bused into "hillbilly" neighborhood schools. The issue then wasn't integration. It so happened that in the better-off black neighborhoods the schools were overcrowded, and there were inner-city schools, attended by children of Appalachian folk, which were underused.

Similarly, the whites of South Boston and Charlestown — so-called "Irish-American" sections—take pride in their neighborhoods, aspire to a better life and, rightly or wrongly, regard the forced busing of their children as an assault on their integrity. Same story with Louisville's suburbanites.

And yet there is another class, seemingly above it all, which preaches the forced busing doctrine. Hypocrisy is what happens when a person can't live up to preachments and must retreat. Hypocrisy is what an influential band of judges, mayors, governors, congressmen, senators, editors, editorialists, pundits and cartoonists are guilty of if they put the school demonstrators down and still send their children to private or largely white suburban schools.

And what to say about those cities, which made "deals" to avoid school-busing orders. Atlanta is one. It swapped the avoidance of forced busing for black control of the school system. This is called the Atlanta "arrangement," but it sounds like godfather stuff to me. And what keeps Chicago from going through this agony? Somehow, the NAACP and other black organizations have failed to muster a solid school suit in Chicago.

Forced school busing is like Prohibition and plea bargaining and pulling strings to get a job. There can be deals. Let it not be forgotten that when Wilbur Cohen was secretary of HEW, he was desperate to get a Medicare bill through, and somehow the Southern votes came his way after there was assurance that HEW school money would not be cut off for certain Southern school districts. Los Angeles, Detroit, Jackson, Miss. —all wound up with compromises on school desegregation orders. The judges have issued fuzzy rulings. Indianapolis, Philadelphia, Dayton—what are they going to get?

Who carries the moral burden of forced school busing in the North? Mostly poor whites and blacks. In the South, there are many middle- and upper-income white families whose children are bused into black neighborhoods. The South is much more honest on school integration than the North.

Perhaps the most honest politician on this score is Linwood Holton, Southerner, white, Protestant, Republican. When he was governor of Virginia, he voluntarily sent his children from their suburban home to an integrated inner-city school in Richmond, because he believed an elected official should put his money (or his children) where his mouth was. Since Holton backed school integration, he felt he had to lead the way.

Show me some Northern liberals who have done this? Ask your favorite liberal politician—or judge—where his children are going to school. Ask your favorite liberal columnist—white or black—where his children go to school.

Those people out there breaking the law in Boston and Louisville are acting out of frustration as much as they are out of hatred. Why do we have to do it, they ask, when the ones telling us to do it don't do it themselves?

Aggies Open Season

Longhorns Try Colorado State

By The Associated Press

A lot of preseason question marks will be answered for good or bad Saturday in a flurry—of Southwest Conference jousts against intersectional foes including whether preseason favorite Texas A&M will continue to be its own worse enemy.

The Aggies, owning the second best defense in the nation last year, fumbled their way to an 8-3 season good for second place in the SWC.

Mississippi comes calling for the first time in 61 years Saturday afternoon and Aggie alumni will have all eyes on quarterback David Shipman, who has bordered on the sensational in the spring and fall after coming back from a knee injury.

The Aggie first team scored 109 points in three quarters last week in a scrimmage against the No. 3 team defense.

"Shipman looked great," said new A&M assistant coach Tom Wilson, who will be calling the plays from the press box—a job he held at Texas Tech under the departed Jim Carlen. "I'm anxious to see what he can do against some different colored uniforms."

Ole Miss took a 20-10 thumping from Baylor last week and the Rebel-Aggie matchup should offer an early indication of strength between the preseason picks and the defending champion Bears.

The 8th-ranked Aggies are 19-point picks over Ole Miss in the 4 p.m. game at Kyle Field which is expected to draw a near-sellout 48,000 fans. A&M has beaten Mississippi in two previous games—17-0 in 1911 and 14-7 in 1914.

The SWC jumped to a 3-0 ledger last week with Baylor's victory, Southern Methodist's 14-7 survival of Wake Forest and Houston's 20-6 nod over Lamar.

In other games this week, 12th-ranked Texas is a three-touchdown choice over Colorado State in Austin, Arkansas is a 16-point pick over Air Force at Little Rock, Texas Tech is a 12-point favorite over Florida State in Lubbock in Coach Steve Sloan's debut, SMU is a 12-point underdog on the road against Florida, Houston is an 11-point nod over Rice, and Texas Christian is a 10-point pick tonight over Texas-Arlington in Amon Carter Stadium in Fort Worth.

All games are at night except the A&M-Ole Miss clash.

Praise is still filtering down from Mississippi about Baylor and Rebel defensive back Gary Turner says: "Baylor was as good as I've seen. And A&M is ranked high nationally. That makes it double tough."

A&M has installed the I formation to open up the air lanes should an opponent stack against the Wishbone-T with a nine-man line like Kansas did against the Aggies last year and Missouri did against Alabama in Monday night's stunning upset.

"It gives our opponents a little something more to think about," said Aggie Coach Emory Bellard.

The optimist award before kickoff goes to Colorado State Coach Sark Arslanian.

"What better way is there to start a season than playing one of the nation's top teams . . . Texas has not lost a home game in 34 contests," Arslanian said.

SWC Highlight Series Slated

The first of 12 weekly shows featuring highlights of the Southwest Conference football games will be shown at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday on KMOM-TV.

U.S. Fields Strong Wightman Cup Team

CLEVELAND (AP) — This year's Wightman Cup tennis teams are nearly the strongest the United States or England could possibly field, the U.S. captain maintained after Thursday's draw.

"We're missing less than any of the last three teams," said Julie Heldman, referring to return of reigning U.S. Open Champion Chris Evert to the Americans's squad.

British captain Virginia Wade concurred. "The U.S. team is very solid," she said. "Last year, the U.S.A. was missing one of its top players."

Miss Evert did not play last year, when England won 6-1 at Deeside, Wales.

Miss Heldman, heroine of the U.S. victory over Australia last year in the Bonne Bell Cup matches, said she would not take the court due to bothersome knee and neck injuries. "The best players are playing," she said.

The draw pitted superstars Evert and Wade against each other in a dramatic final-day confrontation Sunday.

Miss Wade meets Mona Schallau in the opening singles contest Friday. Miss Schallau teamed with Miss Heldman last year for the Americans' only victory.

Miss Evert also plays the first night, facing 21-year-old Briton, Glynnis Coles. In the Wightman competition last year, Miss Coles keyed the British victory with defeats of Miss Heldman and Janet Newberry.

Miss Newberry, who has vowed to avenge last year's performance, plays in both Saturday matches. The British hard-court champion meets 19-year-old Sue Barker in singles and then joins Julie Anthony in doubles against Miss Wade and Ann Haydon Jones.

The British gained Miss Jones after Linda Hottram, the British and Australian women's junior titleholder, was injured.

Miss Schallau and Miss Coles meet in singles Sunday. Then Miss Schallau teams with Miss Evert against Miss Barker and Miss Coles in the final doubles.

The United States has won 38 of the 46 times the two nations have met in the Wightman competition.

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Pfc. Charles Harris of Ft. McClellan, Ala., won a sudden death playoff Thursday over S. Sgt. Walter Morgan to win the open division of the All-Army Golf Trials.

Both Harris and Morgan, with the 25th infantry division in Hawaii, finished with fourround totals of 299.

Maj. Jimmy Stinebaugh of Ft. Sill, Okla., won the seniors division at 291. A distant second was M. Sgt. Patrick Kaya of Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., at 302.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Forward Charlie Edge of the Indiana Pacers has been acquired by the Utah Stars of the American Basketball Association in exchange for a future high draft choice.

The deal was announced Thursday by a Stars spokesman.

In 76 regular season games last season, Edge shot 51 per cent, averaging six points and 4.5 rebounds per game. He blocked 33 shots and made 54 steals.

Mister President!

Welcome, Mr. President, to Midland . . . in the heart of the vast Permian Basin petroleum-producing empire of West Texas and Southeastern New Mexico!

Your appearance in Midland is a distinct honor . . . a thrilling experience for all residents of this great region. It is an occasion which long will be remembered, marking as it does the first time that a President of the United States has visited Midland while in office.

You, Mr. President, always will be remembered and appreciated for being the first to come our way, and on invitation to attend and participate in a ceremony dedicating a new and impressive facility which is close to the hearts of Permian Basin Empire residents and oil men and women everywhere.

The occasion, of course, is the dedication of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. The facility portrays the story of crude oil and natural gas and how they were formed millions of years ago; the history of the petroleum industry, and the exploration, discovery, development, transporting and marketing of oil and gas in the Permian Basin.

It is an exciting, breath-taking story, told in authentic, forceful, interesting, easily-understandable style in a completely modern museum. It was erected on a voluntary basis by companies, individuals, groups and foundations interested only in preserving for posterity the history, records, tools and achievements of petroleum in this region. Its historic value from an educational standpoint is boundless.

Its sponsors feel that the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame is one of the finest, most modern and most complete anywhere . . . made all the greater and more noteworthy by President Gerald Ford having taken the time from his unparalleled duties and responsibilities to come to Midland, Texas, to deliver the address formally dedicating the facility.

Your presence in Midland, Mr. President, not only focuses national and world attention on the museum, but even more significant is the fact that it centers interest on energy and its tremendous importance at all levels, from local to international.

Your interest, Mr. President, in energy and in developing a realistic policy which will make this great nation self-sufficient insofar as energy is concerned, is well-known and appreciated by residents of this region.

The actions you have taken in recent days in an effort to solve the critical energy problem have not gone unnoticed by citizens, who, like you, are determined to achieve the goals set by your administration. You may count on their continued support in this regard.

The Petroleum Museum typifies the pioneering spirit of America as it relates to the petroleum industry and its role in energy overall, as well as of the nation's cherished free enterprise system.

You have done us proud, Mr. President, by accepting the invitation of museum officials to do the honors in dedicating the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame for the use, benefit and enjoyment of everyone . . . extending to generations upon generations of yet unborn.

Thank you, Mr. President!

A CHANGING WORLD—

How About A Good Word For Kissinger?

By JOHN PINKERMAN

Editor, Copley News Service

Maybe his odd assortment of enemies will stay off Henry Kissinger's back for a short time.

The fragile nature of the Egyptian-Israeli agreement notwithstanding, the secretary of state has done it again, and it would seem that he deserves the heartfelt thanks of all peace-loving people in the world, including his across-the-board (extreme rightists to vocal leftwingers) critics in the United States.

Perhaps Kissinger's pre-marital night life exhibitions had something to do with building up his foes—who quite properly may have looked for more dignity from the secretary of state.

Perhaps the lone fact that he was a Harvard man had something to do with the ultra-conservatives turning their backs on him. Perhaps his long and useful association with Vice President Nelson Rockefeller frightened a segment of the sizable anti-Rockefeller clique.

Compared to his accomplishments and his devotion to his country those bases of criticism should have very little standing among clear thinking people—people who believe in peace and people who are realistic enough to understand that America has a stake in almost any development almost anyplace im the world.

And, considering what Kissinger has accomplished, consider the alternatives if he had failed—or, worse, if he had never tried.

This German-born Jew (May 27, 1923) came as an immigrant to the United States in 1938.

His record since arrival should be a model for any American, native or foreign born. He served in the Army from 1943 to '46. He studied at Harvard, won a doctor's degree and taught at the university.

In government and private service, he has labored in the vineyards and in the higher echelons. He worked in the Operations Research Office, with the Psychological Strategic Board, has been director of the Study Group on Nuclear Weapons and Foreign Relations, has been a consultant to the Weapons System Evaluation Group of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He has been director of the National Security Council, and now for several years secretary of state.

Richard Nixon got the credit but it really was Kissinger who arranged the detente with Mao Tse-tung and Red China.

If you choose to believe this is a bad deal and Kissinger (or Nixon) should get blame not credit, consider the alternative. The alternative would have been a tightening instead of a loosening of tensions. And, up to now anyway, Kissinger's skill made this detente possible without America turning its back on the Republic of China on Taiwan.

Kissinger also led the way in the detente with Moscow, if you consider that a plus. If you think it is a minus, again consider the alternative. The alternative well might have been an impossible confrontation between the world's two atomic war giants—in the Mideast, where Kissinger's skill is most apparent, and in many other areas of the world. It is an uneasy peace the United States enjoys with Russia, but it is an improvement over the worst days of the Cold War.

Most Americans consider Vietnam a dark chapter in U.S. history, but without Kissinger's tireless and often discouraging negotiations with North Vietnam, U.S. soldiers might still be dying in that faraway land. His accomplishment was not the ultimate, but it eliminated the daily U.S. casualty lists, a rather depressing alternative.

Now, he has delivered in the shuttle diplomacy that failed last March but succeeded after more exhausting negotiations in Cairo, Alexandria, Jerusalem and Tel Aviv. It is not an ideal solution but it is preferable to an alternative of war—a war that certainly would bring more energy crises to America and perhaps even that unthinkable nuclear confrontation between Washington and Moscow.

Henry Kissinger is a loyal and most skillful American diplomat. He deserves the Nobel Prize for Peace he received for Vietnam. He also deserves the thanks of all Americans.

WASHINGTON — The computer system, which the FBI is supposed to use in its war against crime, has been misused to keep tabs on noncriminals.

For years, the FBI has operated a National Crime Information Center, which is equipped with a multi-million-dollar computer. This now is crammed with information about criminals. The purpose is to help police throughout the country identify public enemies, particularly fugitives on the lam.

An Arizona highway patrolman, for example, may stop a speeder who appears suspicious. The officer could query the FBI computer center and might discover the driver is wanted for kidnapping in Maine.

It was never intended, however, that this all knowing, never-forgetting electronic contrivance should be used to store information about noncriminals.

Such misuse, if it should get out of hand, could extinguish forever the right of privacy. It could lead to a computerized master file on all Americans. At the press of a button, the computer could produce any person's life history.

In 1971, the FBI began using its master computer to monitor the activities of noncriminals. The names of more than 4,700 noncriminals were "flagged."

The FBI abruptly ended its misuse of the computer center in February, 1974, precisely two days before Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., opened hearings.

But Ervin's successor as head of the Senate Constitutional Rights subcommittee, Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., now has wrung a reluctant confession from the Justice Department that the FBI had perverted the criminal tracking system to keep an electronic eye on noncriminals.

"Flags were used to help locate individuals in matters wherein the FBI had the obligation to determine their whereabouts," Deputy Attorney General Harold Tyler conceded on a private letter to Tunney.

The letter stressed this was done, as a "pilot program," in "national security" cases. The term "national security" has been used in the past, however, to include controversial movie stars, football players, political leaders, newspapermen and even presidential candidates.

An FBI spokesman emphasized that the 4,700 noncriminals, whose names were fed into the computer, were "under FBI jurisdiction.". As he explained it for example, a potential draftee who failed to report to the Selective Service might have been "flagged."

Senator Tunney is suspicious that the FBI computer has been used to keep track of congressmen. He asked the Justice Department point blank whether the FBI had any congressmen in the "flag file." Taylor artfully dodged the question, but the FBI vigorously denied that any members of Congress had been monitored.

The spokesman also pointed out that the computer center was not under the FBI's sole jurisdiction but was governed by a 26-man board, including various chiefs of police.

The skeptical Tunney, meanwhile, is pressing the Justice Department for more specific answers. He is concerned that the misuse of the computer may be a federal violation.

INTELLIGENCE DIGEST: Once the Israeli-Egyptian agreement is implemented, an intelligence report warns, Arab extremists plan to infiltrate into the neutral zone and kill some of the American technicians manning the observation equipment. The intent, of course, is to disrupt the truce.

—A CIA report alleges that Soviet money has been passed under the table to bribe one of Portugal's top rulers. We are checking out the details.

—Japan's Defense Minister Michita Sakata has given secret assurances that the U.S. can use military bases in Japan to resist a North Korean attack upon South Korea. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, meanwhile, has made some anti-Japanese cracks inside the secret policy councils.

—The Shah of Iran has confided to visitors that he hopes to bring diplomatic pressure to exclude both the U.S. and Soviet fleets, from the Persian Gulf and then from the Indian Ocean.

— The Soviet KGB, according to intelligence reports, is encouraging Arab extremists to step up their revolutionary activities against the oil sheikdoms. Both Algeria and Libya are cooperating, at least indirectly, with the KGB, the reports allege.

—Of all the oil countries, Saudi Arabia stands alone to hold off an oil price increase. Seven of the 13 oil cartel members, led by Algeria and Kuwait, want a stunning $2-per-barrel increase on October 1. The five remaining oil countries are willing to settle for $1 per barrel more.

— Egypt's President Anwar Sadat quietly is seeking from the U.S. $250 million in economic aid and favorable terms for the purchase of up to $1 billion in military equipment.

— The Chinese Communists have gained the ear of the rulers of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand. Significantly, the Chinese are whispering anti-Soviet,not anti-American remarks.

— The underdeveloped, third-world nations are trying to get their hands in Uncle Sam's pockets. It's all part of their campaign to redistribute the world's wealth from the rich nations to the poor nations. One suggestion, brought up in the backrooms of Washington, is that the U.S. put the third-world nations on the spot by offering a program to concentrate the aid upon the 30 or 40 most impoverished nations. This would by-pass the nations raising the loudest holler.

Forced School Busing Termed Destructive

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — So here we are, a powerful earnest nation, stumbling around in the last days of summer, trying to make compulsory school busing work. There might be short-term successes, but in the long run this juggling around of cities and peoples won't work. Boston is in its second year of turmoil. The cruel grafitti of last year haven't even faded from lavatory room walls yet. Louisville has only begun. National Guardsmen and police ride along as though busing is a field trip on law enforcement. There is plenty of evidence that, once again, our preachments are far away from what is humanly reasonable. Still, the federal courts, in response to lawsuits by activists, will order many other cities to devise busing plans to integrate their school systems. Elected officials, worried about the black vote, will utter pious statements about making democracy a dream come true. Some pundits and editorialists will denounce the violence in Boston and Louisville, forgetting for the moment that their own children attend schools untroubled by forced busing edicts.

And yet increasing numbers of black parents express opposition to forced busing. They don't want trouble. They don't want their children subjected to white abuse. They don't like the idea of hauling schoolchildren away from their neighborhood to a white neighborhood, supposedly superior. What's wrong with putting the educational resources into the black neighborhoods? What's wrong with black pride?

This whole destructive controversy is as much a class matter as it is race. I remember back in the late '50s that upper- and middle-income blacks in Detroit vehemently objected to having their children bused into "hillbilly" neighborhood schools. The issue then wasn't integration. It so happened that in the better-off black neighborhoods the schools were overcrowded, and there were inner-city schools, attended by children of Appalachian folk, which were underused.

Similarly, the whites of South Boston and Charlestown — so-called "Irish-American" sections—take pride in their neighborhoods, aspire to a better life and, rightly or wrongly, regard the forced busing of their children as an assault on their integrity. Same story with Louisville's suburbanites.

And yet there is another class, seemingly above it all, which preaches the forced busing doctrine. Hypocrisy is what happens when a person can't live up to preachments and must retreat. Hypocrisy is what an influential band of judges, mayors, governors, congressmen, senators, editors, editorialists, pundits and cartoonists are guilty of if they put the school demonstrators down and still send their children to private or largely white suburban schools.

And what to say about those cities, which made "deals" to avoid school-busing orders. Atlanta is one. It swapped the avoidance of forced busing for black control of the school system. This is called the Atlanta "arrangement," but it sounds like godfather stuff to me. And what keeps Chicago from going through this agony? Somehow, the NAACP and other black organizations have failed to muster a solid school suit in Chicago.

Forced school busing is like Prohibition and plea bargaining and pulling strings to get a job. There can be deals. Let it not be forgotten that when Wilbur Cohen was secretary of HEW, he was desperate to get a Medicare bill through, and somehow the Southern votes came his way after there was assurance that HEW school money would not be cut off for certain Southern school districts. Los Angeles, Detroit, Jackson, Miss. —all wound up with compromises on school desegregation orders. The judges have issued fuzzy rulings. Indianapolis, Philadelphia, Dayton—what are they going to get?

Who carries the moral burden of forced school busing in the North? Mostly poor whites and blacks. In the South, there are many middle- and upper-income white families whose children are bused into black neighborhoods. The South is much more honest on school integration than the North.

Perhaps the most honest politician on this score is Linwood Holton, Southerner, white, Protestant, Republican. When he was governor of Virginia, he voluntarily sent his children from their suburban home to an integrated inner-city school in Richmond, because he believed an elected official should put his money (or his children) where his mouth was. Since Holton backed school integration, he felt he had to lead the way.

Show me some Northern liberals who have done this? Ask your favorite liberal politician—or judge—where his children are going to school. Ask your favorite liberal columnist—white or black—where his children go to school.

Those people out there breaking the law in Boston and Louisville are acting out of frustration as much as they are out of hatred. Why do we have to do it, they ask, when the ones telling us to do it don't do it themselves?

Permian Basin OIL & GAS LOG

lific Morrow producer in the Avalon field of Eddy County, N.M., its No. 2 Ocotillo Hills, one location southeast of the dual Wolfcamp discovery and Morrow extender.

Calculated, absolute open flow gauge was 32.814 million cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 10,850-10,965 feet.

It was drilled to 11,148 feet, and has 5½-inch casing set on bottom.

Location is 2,310 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 21-21s-26e, three miles northwest of Carlsbad.

Kent Test Swabs Oil From Strawn

Lario Oil & Gas Co., Midland, was making production tests in the Strawn at its No. 1 J. N. Self, Kent County wildcat reentry, ⅝ mile east of the one-well Gar-Kent (Strawn "C") oil field.

It swabbed natural through Strawn perforations at 7,276-7,278 feet, making oil at the daily rate of 116 barrels, and water at the rate of 48 barrels per day.

Operator was preparing to put on a pump and continue testing.

Prior to the above gauge, it flowed a small amount of oil through various size choke, and the flow died.

Originally drilled by Novi Equipment Co., it was plugged and abandoned in 1953, at 6,149 feet.

Shallow Eddy Test Swabs Oil, Water

Belco Petroleum Corp., Midland, No. 2 Martin, Eddy County, N.M., scheduled 3,400-foot Delaware test, 1¾ mile east of Delaware oil production in the Carlsbad, South field, swabbed and flowed 130 barrels of oil and 29 barrels of water in an unreported time from the Delaware.

Recovery was through a 24-64-inch choke and perforations at 3,256-3,280 feet. No treatment has been reported. Testing continued.

Drilled to 3,375 feet, it is plugged back to 3,321 feet, and has 5½-inch casing set at 3,367 feet.

Location is 2,198 feet from north and 1,750 feet from west lines of section 20-22s-27e, within Carlsbad townsite.

Reentry application was made by Aycock, Adams & Blair of Midland, for tests of the Ellenburger, and operations were taken over by Lario.

Total depth is 7,855 feet, where 5½-inch pipe is set.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and 3,300 feet from east lines of section 9, block B, PSL survey, abstract 1531, 21 miles northwest of Clairemont.

The Gar-Kent discovery, completed in May 1974, was American Quasar Petroleum Co. No. 1-41 Gabriel. It pumped 51 barrels of oil and 165 barrels of water per day, through perforations at 7,242-7,246 feet.

Extender Finals In Sterling Area

Upper Cisco gas production was extended 2½ miles southeast and 1¾ miles northwest in the Credo, East field of Sterling County, 13 miles northwest of Sterling City.

It is Sterling Company's No. 1-98 Reed.

The calculated, absolute open flow was for 720,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day.

Production is through perforations at 7,363-7,526 feet, which had been treated with 2,500 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 7,750 feet, it has 4½-inch pipe set on bottom, and is plugged back to 7,731 feet.

Location is 1,320 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 98, block 2, H&TC survey.

$60,000 In Fines Levied Against Virginia Power

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The strongest penalties ever imposed on the nuclear power industry were levied Thursday against the Virginia Electric and Power Co. (VEPCO) for violations in connection with construction of its four- reactor plant over a geologic fault in Louisa County, Va.

The Atomic Safety and Licensing Board fined Vepco $60,000, the manimum allowed by law, and set up stringent conditions that the company must meet to maintain a nuclear license for its North Anna, Va., plant.

Vepco characterized the decision Thrusday as "novel" and said the company "expects to appeal."

In the history of the use of nuclear energy, only nine civil penalties have been levied against power companies. Vepco has received three of them No other company has received more than one.

"In view of the licensee's high rate of civil penalties," the ASLB said, ". . . the staff (of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission) is requested to evaluate the licensee's performance in depth to determine whether additional monitoring . . . is needed beyond that employed in the routine follow-ups to violations and infractions."

Vepco was convicted of making 12 "material false statements" to the NRC in reference to the geologist fault. In essence, they were that Vepco said there were no faults at the North Anna site and none were suspected. All parties, including Vepco, now agree the fault exists.

CABLE TOOL RIG — This cable tool unit is one of the major outdoor exhibits at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame which opens here Saturday when President Gerald R. Ford makes the dedication address. The President is expected to speak at 5 p. m. He will be introduced by U.S. Congressman George Mahon of Lubbock.

Frank T. Pickrell, 85, Discoverer Of Big Lake Field Dies In El Paso

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Frank G. Pickrell of El Paso, a West Texas oil pioneer who discovered in 1923 the famed Big Lake oil feld that triggered the development of the Permian Basin oil reserves of West Texas an Southeast New Mexico, is dead at the age of 85.

Pickrell, whose oil discovery at one time was the nation's largest proven oil reserve, died here Thursday two days after an accidental fall that broke his hip.

Pickrell was the first man to be inducted into the Permian Basin Hall of Fame. He went in person to Midland to accept the honor in May, 1968.

A program at the dedication of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum in Midland Saturday, attended by President Ford, will include a reference to the El Paso oilman.

The occasion will be a reenactment of the "rose petal ceremony" which in 1921 christened the original Santa Rita well Texon, Tex. which Pickrell had named. He sprinkled rose petals over the derrick because red roses are associated with the saint.

A company he formed with partner Hayman Krupp, known as the Texon Land and Oil Co., drilled Santa Rita No. 1, the now-famous first well in their rich Big Lake field.

Krupp and Pickrell bought the option on the University Lands lease from a man named Rupert Ricker in 1919 for $600. The lease covered 431,300 acres.

Pickrell is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lelia Arlene; sons Fred and Richard of El Paso, and three nieces.

Graveside services are scheduled for Tuesday afternoon at Ft. Bliss National Cemetery.

Texas Supreme Court Suspends Actions In Coastal States Case

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has suspended four court orders issued in the "judges' war" that was touched off by Coastal States Gas Producing Co.'s efforts to win six lawsuits in a single stroke.

The court Thursday set a hearing for Sept. 17 on five separate petitions for writs of mandamus against judges involved in suits against Coastal States by disgruntled gas customers.

Its decision to stay all the lower court orders apparently did not cancel a hearing scheduled for today in Houston by Judge Robert W. Hamilton on Coastal States' effort to dispose of all the issues in a single suit.

Hamilton had issued a temporary restraining order blocking further proceedings in six suits against Coastal States for failing to meet its obligations under gas supply contracts. Coastal wants the order solidified into an injunction.

Coastal States had sought the order after contending that a case pending before Hamilton raised all the issues involved in the other suits.

District Judges Joseph Wade and Norman L. Utter of Corpus Christi and Peter Michael Curry of San Antonio, presiding over three suits against Coastal States, responded with injunctions of their own.

They asserted that Hamilton had invaded their jurisdictions with his restraining order.

Plaintiffs in the San Antonio and Corpus Christi cases—Central Power & Light Co., Corpus Christi and San Antonio—asked the supreme court to nullify Hamilton's action.

The Lower Colorado River Authority, which won a $26 million judgment against Coastal in a Bryan district court, also sought such an order since there are still matters before the courts in its case.

In turn, Coastal's lawyers asked for a supreme court writ of mandamus overturning the orders of the Corpus Christi and San Antonio judges against further proceedings in Coastal's attempt to bring all the issues together in a single suit.

Coastal maintains that a suit brought on behalf of all the gas company's customers by United Texas Transmission Co. (UTTCO) raises every issue involved in the other suits. It seeks a court declaration that Coastal had a legal right both to curtail deliveries and to raise prices above those set in its contracts.

Suits against the company seek damages far in excess of $1 billion for failure to deliver gas and for raising prices over contract levels.

Behind-The-Scenes Activity Described For Rotary Club

Behind - the - scene activities which go on in connection with a visit to a city by the President of the United States were described for members of the Midland Downtown Rotary Club Thursday noon at their meeting in the American Legion Hall.

Bruce Decker, a member of the White House advance party which has set-up headquarters here to complete arrangements for the President's Saturday visit, was the speaker.

"The President's European trip and extensive domestic travels have kept us very busy this year," Decker said.

He explained that every trip is a learning experience and that when the advance parties arrive in a given city, they try to be of as little trouble as possible to local arrangement groups.

He said, however, that certain standards have to be met in each case.

Decker said that three groups — communications, Secret Service and White House staff — basically are involved with each visit. It is the responsibility of the White House staff members to coordinate all aspects of the visit.

This is in addition to the Air Force group and the press representatives who travel with the President.

"Working with local groups, we bring everything together with as little difficulty as possible," Decker explained.

He outlined arrangements made to date for the President's visit to Midland and said that the President will not be effected by the unfortunate occurrence in Sacremento, Calif., last week.

"The President will greet as many persons as he possibly can, just as he always has," the speaker said.

He told of the detailed planning which is conducted by the advance parties and lauded Midlanders for their excellent cooperation and assistance.

Decker explained that the press people who accompany the President on his trips at home and abroad, traveling in a separate plane, pay their own expenses on the trips.

The speaker explained also that he is a full-time volunteer on the White House staff, receiving expense money but no salary. He does it, he said, because he likes it and for the experience gained. He answered questions from the floor following his talk.

Utility Pole Signs Violate City Ordinance

If you are planning to hold a garage sale in the future, be prepared not to attach any signs on utility poles.

"We are starting a very concentrated effort to stop people from hanging signs on various structures," Chief Harold S. Wallace said. "We've instructed all officers that when these signs are observed, they are to remove them and warn the person responsible for the sign that they are in violation of ordinances and that formal charges will be filed against the individual if this occurs again," Wallace said.

"We are also concentrating on trucks hauling in residential areas," Wallace said. "No vehicle larger than three-quarters of a ton can park on any public street or in any residential district for a period of more than 30 minutes, and then only to load or unload. The only exceptions are utility vehicles or vacation trailers not exceeding 20 feet in length," Wallace explained.

Stolen Rig Found Smouldering

A $350,000 Geophysical Service rig stolen near midnight Tuesday was found abandoned and smouldering in southeast Midland Thursday morning, Midland police reported.

Det. Sgt. Fred Penix said the four-wheel drive unit equipped with computer and recording systems had been set afire and was damaged inside and out.

Jim Pratt of Midland and Tom Erickson of Big Lake told police they were working on the truck at 3001 W. Industrial Blvd. when someone drove off in it.

The truck was found at Goode and Francis street.

Rogers, Cardozier To Head UT, UTPB

AUSTIN (AP) — Dr. Lorene Rogers, who has been acting president of The University of Texas-Austin for almost a year, was made the Austin school's permanent chief executive by the board of regents today.

Regents Lady Bird Johnson, Tom Law, and James Bauerle voted against the selection of Dr. Rogers. Eight members were present for the vote.

The regents also elevated another acting president, appointing V.R. Cardozier as permanent president of the university's Permian Basin campus at Odessa.

Texas Leaders Break Away From Chavez Farm Union

PHARR, Tex. (AP) — Criticism by leaders of the California-based United Farm Workers Union (UFW) has led Texas farm workers organizers to pull away from the national group and form their own state union.

The decision to break away from the UFW, founded and led by Cesar Chavez, apparently was the result of criticism by national union leaders of the methods used recently by the Texas organizers in the Rio Grande Valley.

"We were accused of being responsible for provoking the violence," says Tony Orendain, a former Chavez lieutenant who has led the organizing campaign in the Valley since 1968.

Ordendain in an interview, said the Texas organization now will be known as the Texas Farm Workers Union.

Orendain stressed that although the union still feels closely related to the California group, "We will be responsible for our organization."

He said the separation will give the Texas organizers more independence in the "methods" used in their efforts to introduce union bargaining to Texas agriculture.

"People in California told us we had provoked violence," Orendain said. "They criticized us because there was violence."

Last May, Orendain led hundreds of union sympathizers who blocked the Rio Grande crossings at McAllen and Roma and picketed farms in the area. During a confrontation with protesters, a melon grower shot at them and wounded at least 10.

Nine of the wounded were from Reynosa, a city on the Mexican side of the border, across from Hidalgo, Tex.

Orendain said that it was the workers themselves who almost forced the Texas organizers into demonstrations.

"They came to us and asked for help," he said.

Most of the union sympathizers are workers from across the border who commute to Texas fields daily during the harvest. The union has had trouble getting the support of Rio Grande Valley farm workers.

Orendain said that during the demonstrations melon growers raised the melon pickers' wages from $1.80 to $2.50 an hour in an attempt to keep the workers from going to the union side.

Last month Orendain led groups of demonstrators in West Texas where, he said, melon pickers—many of them also from Mexico—were paid $1.25 an hour.

Orendain said the separation from the California union will give the Texas organizers more flexibility in their efforts to get a law passed in Texas, similar to one in California, that would make it easier for farm workers to unionize.

"In Texas," he said, "you can have 100 per cent of the workers signing union pledges, but if the farm owners do not want to, you cannot get them to negotiate."

He said his group has asked Mexican-American state legislators to push for a California-like law. The California law sets procedures for secret union elections by farm workers. The Teamsters and the UFW held elections in California farms this week.

Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, said he plans to introduce a bill at the next session of the state legislature giving farm workers the right to collective bargaining.

"The bill was ready during the last session," he said, "but I knew I did not have a chance after (Bill) Clayton was elected Speaker of the House. I've been trying to get some support for the bill and will introduce it at the next session."

President: Conventional Man, Unconventional Life

A conventional man in an unconventional life.

He is a 33rd degree Mason, an avid football fan, Navy veteran of World War II, devoted husband and father. But this man also happens to be the President of the United States.

An estimated 15,000 to 20,000 West Texans are expected to crowd near the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame on Saturday to catch a glimpse of the President — both the man and the public official — when he speaks at the facility's dedication ceremony.

Midland for the first time in its history will play host to a President of the United States, reason enough for the furor surrounding the visit. But this particular President is is unique in his own right by virtue of his non-election.

And area residents are expected to turn out by the droves to catch a glimpse of this man with his unorthodox niche in American history.

A native of Omaha, Neb., Gerald Ford has been tagged with the image of the all-American apple pie. An alumnus of the public school system in Grand Rapids, Mich., he gained prominence playing football at the University of Michigan. After hanging up his helmet, he served as assistant varsity coach at Yale while a law student there.

He entered the U.S. Navy in 1942, serving 47 months during World War II. After his discharge in 1946, Ford resumed the practice of law.

Two years later, he was elected to his first term in the House of representatives. He was re-elected every two years through 1972 for a total of 25 years in the House.

In November of 1963, the late Lyndon B. Johnson named Ford to the Warren Commission to investigate the assassination of John F. Kennedy. He later wrote the book, "Portrait of the Assissin" with John R. Stiles.

An now, 10 years later, there has been an assassination attempt on his own life due to his ascention to the Presidency.

A former House minority leader, the President has been the recipient of numerous high honors including the American Political Science Association's distinguished congressional service award, 1961; American Good Government Society's George Washington Award, 1966; American Academy of Achievement's Gold Plate Award as a "giant of accomplishment, 1971, and Amvets Silver Helmet Award, 1971.

He also holds a series of honorary doctor of laws degrees from various American universities.

In the year Ford was elected to his first term in the house, he married Elizabeth Bloomer, now a First Lady making headlines of her own.

Family life has changed drastically for the Fords since Gerald Ford was appointed to succeed Spiro T. Agnew late in 1973. Less than a year later, he was to become the 38th President of the United States in the wake of an American scandal.

There's a new job, a new home address on Pennsylvania Street, more public exposure, more power, more problems.

And the Secret Service men who constantly surround him will be present with Ford when he speaks here Saturday.

But, of more importance to the crowd expected to arrive Saturday, he will bring with him the aura of fame and international prominence to a West Texas city whose major link with the nation's Capitol is usually petroleum.

Midland Memorial Standby Hospital

Midland Memorial Hospital, designated the official medical center to serve the President in case of emergency during his visit here, "is standing by to meet any requirements that may be made of us" during that time.

Wayne Ulrich, the hospital's administrator, this morning said the medical services unit for the White House has surveyed Midland Memorial's emergency facilities in preparation for President Gerald Ford's visit here on Saturday.

The President will deliver the dedication address for the official opening of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame, scheduled to begin at 5 p.m.

Ulrich said the White House team made inquiries regarding the hospital's capabilities, facilities and the availability of such physicians as thoracic surgeons and neuro-surgeons. Because neither is available in Midland, they made inquiries about Medical Center Hospital in Odessa where such services are available.

The administrator said the medical unit "knows the identity of the physicians who comprise our emergency service" but added that a physician will be traveling with the presidential party.

"They are not seeking any stand-by support during the time the President will be in our community," Ulrich said.

In accordance with routine precautions, communications equipment is being installed in Midland Memorial's emergency area today by either members of the Secret Service or the Army Signal Corps. The unit will be manned by government employes durimg the presidential visit and removed following his departure, Ulrich said.

He added, also, the hospital has been informed of President Ford's blood type — O positive.

Additional information was provided the medical unit regarding the availability of the Thomas Ambulance Service and the medical technicians backup transportation in the City of Midland fire department.

Petroleum Museum Director Former Oil Company Public Relations Man

Homer T. Fort

Six years of planning, researching, frustration and "a lot of fun" will be climaxed here Saturday for Homer T. Fort when the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame is officially opened.

Fort is the director of the complex facility that tells the story of the oil industry in the vast Permian Basin Empire and honors the men and women that pioneered the industry.

When George T. Abell, independent oil man and Midland civic leader, first invisioned such a facility, he needed someone to take the ball and help get it off the ground.

That was six years ago and he sought out Fort who at the time was manager of public relations in New York for Mobil Oil Corp. a job he had held from 1961 to 1969.

Fort's career since serving in the Air Transport Command in World War II was directly associated with the oil industry, but he had never had a lot to do with museums.

Although museums, especially organizing them, was not Fort's strong suit, he had a deep interest in history and was eager to accept the Midland challenge.

While getting degrees in journalism and government at Paris Junior College and The University of Texas, Fort took minors in history for both degrees.

"I have been involved in a lot of things over the years, but never have I had more fun and seen more things of interest than I have in this museum work," Fort said.

While going to school at Paris, Fort worked for the Paris News. After his Air Transport Command service, mostly at overseas bases, Fort went to work for Magnolia Petroleum Co. at its Beaumont refinery in 1945 where he was in charge of employe publications.

After nine years at Beaumont, he was moved to Dallas where he was assistant manager of public relations. For two years he was manager.

In 1959, Mobil and Magnolia merged and Fort was moved to New York where he was made top man in the public relations group for the United States and Canada.

Then, he was named manager of public relations for Mobil Oil Corp.—a post he held until resigning to take the museum job here.

When Fort tells about the planning, work and exhibit gathering for a museum, it is apparent that it takes many hours of research, detective work, cooperation of almost everyone and a lot of patience and luck.

"I remember getting one of our more unusual exhibits," Fort said.

"It started out with a phone call from a man in Carlsbad, N. M. He said he had just been in the tiny community of Cotton City near Lordsburg, N. M., and had seen an unusual drilling machine," Fort remembered

The machine, a pod auger used for drilling water wells in the Western states, was owned by a Cotton City oldtimer.

"Another museum had heard about the machine and had written to the owner. He didn't answer, so I decided to look into it," Fort said.

He went to Cotton City and went to the oldtimers place and immediately was "attacked by several dogs."

Before any damage was done, he called off the dogs, and he and Fort got down to some serious bargaining.

"I first asked, after explaining who I represented, if he would like to make the auger a gift. This didn't go over real big, so we started talking about a price. .

"I had a bill of sale with me, all filled out except the amount. We came to agreement and everything was signed. He then decided he really didn't want to sell and I told him all that was necessary at that point was to decide when we could pick the machine up.

The machine is one of the museum's most interesting exhibits. Fort learned that versions of the machine were made as early as 1875, and manufacturing continued as late as 1915.

Leads don't always turn up something for us to display, Fort said.

"One day, I received a call from a lady at Odessa. 'would you like to have a skeleton for your museum that I found near this pipeline.'"

"I told here that we didn't have that kind of museum and said I would put her in touch with someone in the Midland Archaeological Society and gave her a name.

"Well, a couple of days later, she came into the museum and dumped this skeleton on a table and declared that no matter what kind of museum I was running I just had to be interested in 'Henry.'"

Fort said he finally got 'Henry' to the proper people who identified him as the remains of an Indian of long ago.

Triple 'Completion'

Visitors to the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame will see a working exhibit of a triple oil well completion pumping setup.

The exhibit, three actual pumping units, is located at the center of the expanse in front of the museum building.

It was made possible by Lufkin Industries, American Manufacturing Co. of Texas, Jensen Brothers Manufacturing Co. of Coffeyville, Kan., Ruthco Inc., and Sargent Industries.

The $40,000 project was donated to the museum, including the pumps and installation fee.

Richard Donnelly, museum trustee and member of the executive committee, was manager for the pumping unit installation. He is vice president of Eastland Oil Co.

Donnelly said work on the exhibit started with planning about two years ago.

American Manufacturing, Lufkin Industries and Jensen Brothers each donated a pumping unit.

Sargent provided the engineering and motors for the operation, and Ruthco furnished the portable concrete bases.

Egg Coddlers Enjoy Popularity

NEW YORK (AP) — Egg coddlers, used in a traditionally English style of preparing eggs, are enjoying growing sales in the United States.

According to Hugh Robinson, president of Royal Worcester Porcelain Co., the market is increasing at a 10 per cent annual rate. Last year, he said, more than a million egg coddlers were purchased in America.

His guess is that many were bought as gifts and that not every recipient knew what he was supposed to do with the coddlers.

Deep Sea Living Isn't The Answer

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you've been thinking about that alternative to a polluted earth's surface — an aqua house in the deep, decorated perhaps with the latest in sea shells and where shrimp can be raked up for breakfast — you'd better forget it.

A more practical idea would be to take care of what you have outside your window, says Andy Pruna, 34, who has lived underwater and doesn't think you would like it or adapt to it.

"Even though it is talked about, we are a long way from living under water. There are too many difficulties and it would be too expensive. Then, too, it would be psychologically and physiologically impossible for the majority to adapt. We know little about human behavior for extended periods in different environments.

"It would take many generations to develop the mental adaptability to live underwater, which is much like living in a cave, although I don't think man is beyond the capability. People living in New York or other crowded cities might be more adaptable than those who have been used to open space. But, who knows what would happen if they could build cities underwater . . ."

Underwater we are dependent on the surface for air, electricity and other things, he says, noting that we could set up generators, maybe, but we'd really never get around to exploring those possibilities unless we had to.

A naturalist, oceanographer and photographer, Pruna suggests that people should worry about keeping the earth from more pollution. In fact, the ocean is "becoming polluted faster than anything else," he insists. In the Florida keys and other areas many fish have been fished out or have vanished, he notes.

In the interest of educating people to the glories that exist in nature and what they may lose without it, he has been filming a movie, "Killers of the Wild," in Argentina for eight months. The film is about animals that kill for survival and how their tastes are changing.

Most Solons Signatures Worthless

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Autograph collectors descending on the nation's capital during the Bicentennial year of 1976 should know one thing:

The value of your senator or congressman's signature is virtually worthless unless he's a 1976 presidential candidate.

There are some exceptions: Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.; Edward Brooks, R-Mass.; Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.; members of the Watergate panel; and Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., because of his association with Fanne Foxe, the Argentine bombshell.

Authority for these assessments is Charles Hamilton, one of the world's top authorities on autograph collecting and a handwriting analyst of international reputation. He said the vast majority of one million autograph collectors in the United States operate under the false impression that signatures of politicians, screen, television, sports and other celebrities are valuable.

Hamilton is a nice guy even though he turned thumbs down on my suggestion (wishful thinking?) that an autographed note I once received from movie star Hedy Lamar might be worth a lot of money.

"Autographs are not just signatures of famous personalities," Hamilton said, "but more properly letters, manuscripts or anything handwritten. An autograph gains most of its value by its historic significance—not just by the signature at the end of the paper."

For example, a letter written by Abraham Lincoln to a little girl who asked him to grow a beard, brought a record $20,000 in the autograph market. In contrast, one of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's letters will sell for $40 or $50 because his personal correspondence lacks public appeal.

The highest-priced George Washington letter was sold by Hamilton to a collector for $25,000. The record price for a living person is $3,000. That was penned by Jacqueline Kennedy before she remarried.

An interesting, personally written letter by former President Richard Nixon is valued at $2,000.

The autograph of top personalities such as Muhammad Ali, Elizabeth Taylor or Paul Newman is virtually worthless unless a collector has developed a sentimental attachment to the personality.

As for the current crop of Washington politicians, the most popular with autograph collectors is Ted Kennedy, whose signature commands $10 to $30. Sen. Brooke also commands a high price because he is one of the leading, and most recognizable, black political figures. Sen. Goldwater also is in demand because he is constantly in the limelight. Hamilton said another factor that diminishes the signature value of Washington politicians is the use of the Autopen, which many senators and congressmen use. This robot-like machine can write as many as 3,000 signatures a day. It is virtually impossible to tell the difference between an Autopen signature and a real one.

Another major development in the autograph market is the demand for astronauts and black leaders. A few years ago, a Frederick Douglass autograph sold for $3 or $4. Today they go for $100 to $200.

Museum Makes Great Impression On Visitors

"Unbelievable," "Fantastic," "Great," "I just don't believe it," "It is hard to believe we have something like this in Midland."

Those are some of the comments from Midlanders who have had pre-opening tours of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame.

The "amazing" facility will be officially opened at 5 p. m. Saturday, with President Gerald R. Ford making the dedication address.

The museum will not be open for public viewing until Sunday.

But, when the doors do open to the public the story of the oil industry, its men and women will unfold in exciting fashion for the visitors.

Although the more than 5,000 books, monographs and photographs have been collected for the museum, the library part of the museum complex will not be available to the public until a later date, however, they will be available to researchers and scholars.

But, the rest of the facility, including the Hall of Fame room is ready.

The first major exhibit to greet visitors will be a "Living Map" in the central exhibits area. The map, through modern exhibit electronics will give a quick introduction to the Permian Basin.

The map, 40 inches in diameter, depicts what is popularly known to West Texans as the vast Permian Basin Empire.

It includes 54 West Texas and four New Mexico counties bounded by Lubbock, Alpine, San Angelo and Carsbad, N.M.

The Permian Basin has about 18 per cent of the nation's oil reserves, excluding Alaska, and continues to be the site of an exploration and development program.

Also in the central area, a horsepowered auger, found by the museum staff in Southwest New Mexico, is on display. It was made in the early 1900s by Lisle Manufacturing Co. of Iowa.

The auger, used by early-day water well drillers, could drill to about 150 feet. It is one of the few complete examples of such a machine known to exist.

Plaques honoring persons who made major donations to the museum also are displayed in the central area.

One of the features in the West Wing are 26 pictures loaned by the Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland showing scenes from pre-oil history of the region as well as some relating to oil history.

Complimenting the paintings are objects and documents relating to each painting's subject matter.

Tom Lovell, the Connecticut artist who did many of the historical paintings, personally photographed and sketched vegetation, cloud formations and landscapes as research for his paintings.

Frank Gervasi, another well-represented painter, is a member of the National Academy.

Items of interest in the West Wing, not related to the oil industry, include an exhibit of the Spanish conquistador period, pre-1750, and an outstanding collection of cattle brands, including those from the Scharbauer, Brunson, McElroy and Dora Roberts ranches.

The East Wing is devoted to oil.

In this area are bas-reliefs showing different kinds of subsurface oil traps and a mural, with sequenced illumination, describing development of oil exploration techniques.

A main exhibit is a reconstructed cable-tool rig floor. The timbers are new, but other objects are antiques, collected from rigs used in the 1920s and early 1930s. This exhibit is partially animated.

Adjacent to the life-size cable tool exhibit is a rotary drilling display, featuring an exact scale model of a rotary drilling rig, partially operative. The traveling block and swivel in this room are not replicas. Included in this display is a bit which holds the Texas' depth record, 28,500 feet. The well cost more than $5 million to drill and was a dry hole.

One of the most "delightful" areas is the Boomtown Room. It is lifesize and shows a street corner from a typical boomtown of the mid-1920s.

An adjacent memorabillia room has household and other objects from the same period.

One of the major exhibits "Time Trip" or Permian Marine Exhibit is in the East Wing. It shows the floor of the ancient Permian Sea which covered this area about 230 million years ago.

This exhibit is the world's largest marine diarama and includes approximately 150,000 sea creatures. Work on the exhibit started even before the construction of the building in 1973.

The museum includes a Pana-Theatre with five screens used simultaneously.

Another feature of the museum is a meeting room equipped with slide projectors and motion picture equipment.

Not all the exhibits are inside the museum complex.

Exterior exhibits include a pumping unit exhibit, showing the principles of triple completion (producing from three zones at different depths through the same hole); the Santa Rita No. 2—a complete cable tool rig, moved 75 miles to this site from Texon.

The derrick is of new wood, but duplicates the original. The rest of the rig is original.

The National No. 3, a later version of cable tool equipment is across the grounds from Santa Rita No. 2 which was the second well in the fabulous Big Lake field.

White House Staff Being Cut

By GAYLORD SHAW
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — In his recent travels from Maine to California, President Ford nearly always draws applause every time he calls for cuts in "the massive, muscle-bound bureaucracy of government."

Presidential aides are learning, however, that it's easier to talk about chopping the President's own payroll than it is to do it.

At mid-summer, Civil Service Commission statistics show, the White House office staff was larger than ever before — despite a pledge by Ford soon after taking office to cut it by 10 per cent as an example for the rest of government.

Now a fresh cutback campaign is under way. Some lower-level White House employes have been fired in recent weeks and some have been told to look for other jobs as part of a drive to cut White House office staff to below 500 by autumn.

"It's harder than it looks," White House staff secretary Jerry Jones said of the cutback attempts. "We simply are having to stop some functions and force anything possible outside the White House and let someone else do it if we can get them to do it."

The cutback efforts are complicated by differences in accounting procedures — differences which make it virtually impossible to tally the precise number of White House employes or the precise cost of the presidency.

For example, presidential spokesman say there now are about 520 members of the White House staff. But the Civil Service Commission's monthly count showed 625 employes for the "White House office" at the end of June, as well as another 1,300 employes of a dozen offices, councils and commissions grouped under the "executive office of the President."

The latter total includes aides who generally are considered part of the presidential staff, such as employes of the Domestic Council and the National Security Council.

And neither total apparently includes a host of "detailees" — employes of various federal agencies who are assigned temporarily to White House duty.

Presidential aides say they are puzzled by the differences in the White House count and the Civil Service Commission count. "I'd like to see their report," Richard Cheney, deputy special assistant to the President, said of the CSC statistics. "If there is a difference now, it must be an accounting difference."

Whatever the number of White House employes, Mr. Ford has found the subject of big government stirs audiences from coast to coast.

On Thursday in Seattle, Wash., for instance, he drew applause at a Republican fund-raising luncheon when he said personal initiative and private enterprise "will come closer to solving our problems. . . than will total reliance on the massive, muscle-bound bureaucracy of government."

Five days earlier, on a trip to New England, he prompted cheers from another GOP audience when he declared that "a government big enough to give you everything is a government big enough to take away everything."

And five days before that, addressing a Chicago convention of hardware manufacturers, Mr. Ford said, "one of the goals I have set for myself as President is to cut big government down to size. . ."

Number Of Seriously Disturbed People In Big Cities Shocking

By ROBERT J. DONOVAN
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — "People like Lynette Fromme are all over the place," Gerald M. Caplan, director of the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, said in an interview the other day. "The number of seriously disturbed people in the big cities is shocking.

"You don't know which ones may be dangerous or not. They see reality through a distorted filter. They are crazy, and there is a large number of them.

"The notion of the village idiot is a bygone concept. In the old days of the extended family, people would care for them. Their behavior would be viewed more as that of an eccentric than of one in need of being put away. That kind of family and neighborhood care is gone. The alternatives now are putting them in institutions or doing nothing.

"These people, therefore, are more isolated. You have more of the alone-in-the-crowd phenomenon. A lot of them come to the district attorney's office just to relate to somebody. They don't come expecting to have their problems solved.

"The urban, post-industrial society is much harder to take. Experiments with animals shows that crowding induces some degree of neurosis, behavior disorganization, aggression, or whatever you want to call it. The same probably applies to human beings. Crowding, noise, anonymity are crimogenic.

"Symptoms have changed. I am not involved in the Fromme case and don't know anything about her at first hand. But among people who exhibit severe stress now there is a certain faddish quality and an absorption with comtemporary affairs and issues.

"If you go back to Freud's time, he was concerned about hysterics. There were many cases where woman would come to his office suffering from unexplained paralysis, for example. Freud related it to sexual repression. That syndrome has virtually disappeared."

There is less sexual repression now, Caplan said. Mentally disturbed people are increasingly attracted by highly controversial public issues.

"Their extremism," he said, "serves as a cloak for very serious personal alienation. There is a focus of personal neurosis on public events. That is the characteristic of our time. The cause such people concentrate on is often a worthwhile one, like civil rights or women's lib or protection of the ecology."

While he did not mention it, his comment recalled that Lynette Alice Fromme, the 26-year-old follower of Charles Manson, who apparently tried to assassinate President Ford in Sacramento, Calif., seems to have had a fanatical concern with the supposed damage being done to the ecology by big industry.

In contrast to the garden variety of murders, of course, the assassination of Presidents and political leaders is bound up with obsession, usually insane obsession, with public issues. Typically, John Wilkes Booth shot Lincolin in the hope of saving the Confederacy. Leon Czolgosz killed President McKinley, thinking his act would help the working man. Oscar Collazo and Griselio Torresola tried to assassinate President Truman to achieve independence for Puerto Rico.

The affair in Sacramento is the first major case of its kind in the United States involving a woman, however.

"More woman are becoming involved in serious violations of the law, generally," Caplan said. "I call this the dark side of woman's liberation, although that gets me into trouble. Nevertheless, crime remains predominantly a young male phenomenon. Although we have more serious crime than ever by women, the percentage of such crimes is small in the over-all statistics. Whether that will continue is another question."

Caplan is young but widely experienced in the criminal field, being one of the "new breed" in law enforcement. He was a professor of law at Arizona State University. He was a prosecutor in the office of the United States Attorney here.

3 New Oil Fields In China?

By NICHOLAS C. CHRISS
The Los Angeles Times

HOUSTON—The People's Republic of China, gradually emerging as a major international oil producer, has discovered three new fields which have remained unknown to the West, according to experts.

The fields have been named Chiling, Chiuyisan and Wuchi, according to Choon-Ho Park and Jerome Alan Cohen, of Harvard's East Asian Legal Studies Program, writing in the fall issue of Foreign Policy.

China's emergence as an oil power has interested not only various foreign governments, but also the huge international oil and gas industry. Several oil companies based in Houston have been active in dealing with the Chinese.

Sources here said they were not familiar with the three fields named in the article, which is one of the closest looks yet at Chinese oil capability.

"In considering China's oil production figures," the article said, "It is essential not to overlook the fact that, despite a modest improvement in recent years, since 1960 China has effectively baffled foreign observers by virtually ceasing to publish economic statistics."

Park said the Chiling field is probably located in Kwantung province and the other two are probably not far distant.

"China seems to have made it a rule not to provide details about a new oil field until it has reached a 'reportable' stage of development," said the article, entitled "The Politics of China's Oil Weapon." So presumably, some production is under way in the three new fields and adding to China's daily oil output, but no estimates of the size of the fields is available. China's largest oil field known to foreigners is Ta-Ching in the northeast.

The article placed China's oil reserves at from 2.7 billion tons confirmed to 70 billion tons possible, including offshore deposits for which exploration still is in a preliminary stage.

"China's oil production, which was barely 10 million tons in 1965, may have exceeded 70 million tons in 1974," the article stated. This compares with about 400 million tons annually each for such countries as the United States, the Soviet Union or Saudi Arabia and some Latin American nations.

"...Barring another political upheaval of the magnitude of the Cultural Revolution — an eventuality that cannot be dismissed — oil production (in Cnina) will continue to increase at an average annual rate of roughly 20 per cent," the authors concluded.

"This would probably make 1980 output somewhat in excess of 200 million tons," they wrote.

Park said some observers have predicted China's production by the late 1980s may go as high as 400 million tons, but he believes that the Chinese will produce only as much as they need, that internal need will not be that much and that the lack of oil technology will also hinder the country from producing that much.

China currently meets about 85 per cent of its energy needs with coal, according to some experts.

Chinese leaders have resisted most efforts by Western oil companies to move into the country to make geological surveys and begin drilling.

Aside for the Americans, the French and Japanese have been most active in dealing with the Chinese leaders.

David Packard Has Job Of Keeping Funds Honest

By BILL BOYARSKY
The Los Angeles Times

PALO ALTO, Calif. — No job in American politics will be subject to more suspicious scrutiny this year than finance chairman for President Ford's election campaign.

That is because of the conduct of the last finance chairman for a Republican presidential candidate, Maurice H. Stans who in 1972 set a national political fund raising record of $60 million.

In doing so, Stans, President Nixon's former finance chairman, used tough methods that became part of the Watergate scandal. In the end, Stans pleaded guilty to violating the Federal Election Law and of receiving illegal contributions. He was fined $5,000.

Stans protested the charges were technical. Whether they were or not, the case left President Ford with a major problem — find someone with enough wealth and integrity to serve as his finance chairman.

Wealth because the affluent are reluctant to contribute unless the request comes from someone rich enough to donate himself. Integrity because of the GOP's need to live down Watergate.

The search ended in the foothills south of Stanford University, in a relatively plain office that is the headquarters of Hewlett-Packard, one of the world's most successful makers of electronics equipment.

It is the office of David Packard, a 62-year-old, 6-foot 5 former Standard University end who is now worth hundreds of millions of dollars because of the success of the company he founded in 1939 with his friend and fellow engineer, William R. Hewlett.

"The President had to have a guy who was clearly above reproach and Dave Packard is clearly above reproach," said Howard "Bo" Callaway, the President's campaign director. "I think that is one of the assets the President was looking for."

One reason the President may have felt safe with Packard was that he had been thoroughly investigated during hearings before his confirmation as deputy secretary of defense in the Nixon Administration.

A main point in those hearings was Pachard's ownership of $300 million in Hewlett-Packard stock. (Hewlett-Pachard gets 15 per cent of its business from the federal government, down from almost 40 per cent in 1967.)

Packard put the stock in trust, later giving to charity the $22 million in dividends accumulated from 1969 to 1971, his years in the Defense Department. But critics wondered if there was still conflict of interest.

But no hint of questionable practices emerged in the hearings. And in his three years as deputy to Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, Packard was an unusually frank critic of the defense industry and of the practices of the military industrial complex.

He unsuccessfully opposed the move to bail Lockheed out of its financial troubles. And speaking on the way the Pentagon buys weapons from the defense industry, he told defense contractors "we have a real mess on our hands."

And after he left Washington, he lectured Southern California aerospace manufacturers. "Learn how to build reliable equipment at reasonable cost. . . stop looking to the government to bail you out when you fail to do your job," he said.

Laird, close to both Packard and the President, was also a factor in the choice. "Laird spends a lot of time at Packard's ranch, they are the closest of friends," said Los Angeles attorney Douglas Kranwinkle, who got to know Packard when both were running Houston I. Flournoy's Republican campaign for governor of California last year. Kranwinkle was campaign manager, Packard finance chairman.

Kranwinkle said that about a year ago, supporters of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan began "wooing" Packard. But Packard decided to help the President.

"He is very loyal to the presidency, to the concept of the presidency," said Kranwinkle.

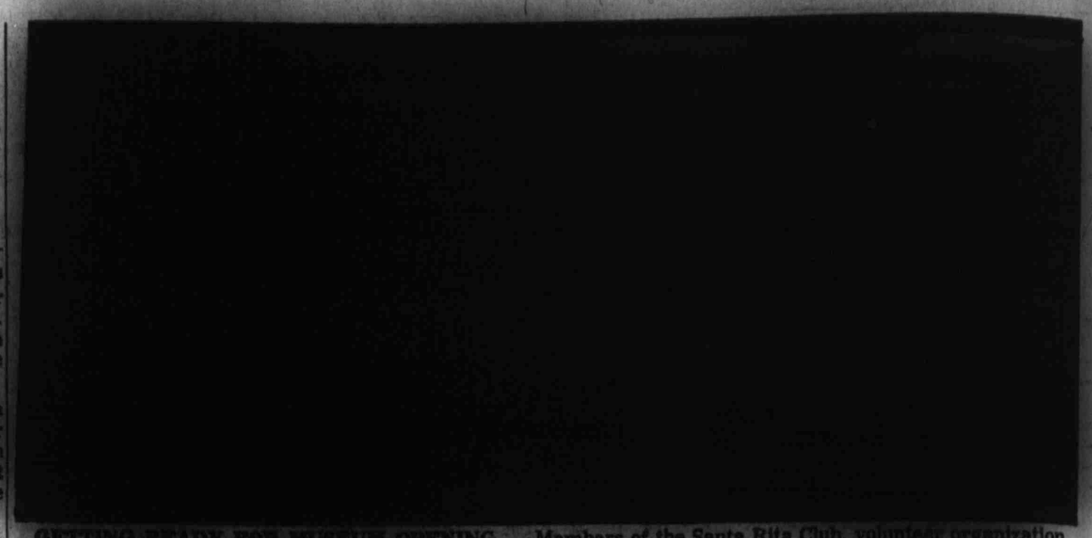
Packard talked about being finance chairman in an interview recently in the offices of Hewlett-Packard.

It was late in the morning, his last appointment before going hunting on his ranch with some old Hewlett-Packard employes who had been particularly loyal and helpful during a corporate crisis.

Packard said he wanted a chance to prove an election campaign could be conducted honestly and openly under the new election laws.

"It was a chance to operate under these new federal election laws," he said, "to see if we can finance a campaign under the new regulations. The laws are a step in the right direction fundamentally, they are all right.

Packard pledged an "open campaign" with periodic disclosures of campaign contributors available at state campaign headquarters. Much of that information is normally available only in Washington and sending the data to the states means that local reporters around the country will have more information about the campaign.



GETTING READY FOR MUSEUM OPENING — Members of the Santa Rita Club, volunteer organization formed to assist with the operation of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame, stock the concession stand where visitors to the museum can purchase many items pertaining to the oil development of the Permian Basin.

Skyscrapers Will Be Studied

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The behavior of skyscrapers in the Century City section of Los Angeles under geologic stress and strain will be monitored and studied during the next three years.

C. G. Hart, professor of engineering at the University of California at Los Angeles, will keep a running record of the buildings' responses to external motion, from the barely perceptible vibrations set up by street traffic and light wind to reactions under strong winds and whatever earthquakes may affect them.

Hart said the purpose of the study is to learn how buildings of varying heights act under vibrations of different wave lengths.

"By the end of the project we expect to know more about designing buildings safely and economically in areas that are likely to experience earthquakes," he said.

'Time Trip' Shows Basin 200 Million Years Ago

The complex Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame which opens here Saturday is one of the outstanding facilities of its kind in the nation.

And one of the things that make it so is the unique "Time Trip" or seafloor diarama of marine life that disappeared more than 200 million years ago.

"The items in an absolutely magnificent and beautiful array of ancient sea animals and vegetation number approximately 150,000," Homer Fort, museum director said.

The exhibit is arranged in such a manner that visitors will get the feeling they are strolling on the bottom of the Permian Sea as it existed 200 million years ago, Dr. Terry Chase, creator of the exhibit, said.

Dr. Chase is an artis-paleontologist from Ann Arbor, Mich., who started work on the exhibit even before work started in 1973 on the nuseum building.

Dr. Chase has had several parttime workers helping him create the life-like sea creatures, including wives of members of the West Texas Geological Society.

Chase, a youthful scientist with a doctorate in Paleontology, used plastics, beeswax, rubber, or plaster in making the reproductions.

The materials were poured into molds and allowed to harden, and in some cases the castings had to be baked in a special oven.

They all are hand painted.

Molds used by Dr. Chase were bought by the museum from their creator, George Marchland, a retired University of Michigan professor, who worked with paleontologists in some of the nation's leading museums over a period of more than 30 years to make the collection. Fossil remains formed the basis for the original models from which the molds were made.

The Marchland collection is considered to be the largest and best in the world.

Chase said there is room for argument on coloring of many of the ancient organisms. Fossils give no hint of original color, he said.

"We know, though, that the Permian Sea which covered West Texas at one time was comparatively shallow and had a lot of nutrients in it," he said. "I've skin-dived in and around reefs in similar seas today, and I know colors are a great deal richer and brighter than most people realize."

Dr. Chase's studio for construction of the creatures was made available at no cost to the museum by Windecker Industries.

Technical supervision of the seafloor exhibit was under the museum's Earth-Science Committee.

Negotiations for the purchase of the Marchland molds and other initial work were handled by W. T. Schneider of Midland.

Marchland made a special trip to Midland in 1974 to examine Dr. Chases's creations.

"This is going to be a beautiful exhibt," he said. "One of the world's largest diorams of prehistoric marine life."

To view the display, museum visitors will walk through a 30-by-40-foot area designed and lighted to seem like a walk on the ocean floor. Light shown through a rocking sheet of gelatin gives the impression of moving water.

PIONEERS REUNION CHAIRMAN—John P. Butler, veteran Midland banker and civic leader, has been named chairman of the Permian Basin Petroleum Pioneers Reunion, which will be held here Oct. 31, under sponsorship of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Butler, honorary chairman of the board of The First National Bank, said the program for the biennial reunion now is nearing completion and will be announced soon.

Black Americans Take Spotlight At Assembly

PHILADELPHIA (SP) — Black Americans will play a leading role in the world assembly of Roman Catholics to gather here at the height of the nation's Bicentennial.

A committee of black spiritual leaders with national representation will fashion a unique liturgy during the 41st International Eucharistic Congress to be held Aug. 1-8, 1976. Initial plans call for two to three days of black participation focusing on urban ministry, evangelization and ecumenism.

"The participation of black Catholics will be of significant and historic character, a sign of the universality of the Church as it embraces all races, all people," said Rev. Walter J. Conway, executive secretary for the Congress.

There are some one million black Catholics in the United States out ot a total black population of 223 million. Black cardinals and bishops from Africa and the Caribbean Islands also will be invited Their participation, said Father Conway, will be in preparation for the Eucharistic Congress to be held in Africa during the 1980s.

Recycling Centers Save On Energy

NEW YORK (AP) — The 2.3 billion all-aluminum cans Americans returned to recycling centers in 1974, a 44 per cent increase over 1973, represent a sizable savings in energy, according to Samuel L. Goldsmith, president of the Aguminum Assn.

The energy saving results from the fact that aluminum can be recycled at 5 per cent of the energy it took to make it in the first place and it can be recycled over and over again.

The aluminum cans returned in 1974 represent about 103 million pounds of aluminum, equivalent in weight to aluminum used in energy-saving storm windows for 760,000 homes or solar collector systems on 140,000 homes.

It also represents $13 million paid to recyclers for their efforts.

Meeting Room Museum Feature

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame contains one of the most modern, best equipped meeting rooms in West Texas.

The 210-seat auditorium has three permanent projection screens set at slight angles to each other for panorama type pictures or they can be used individually or in any combination.

A projection booth houses three 35-mm slide projectors and a movie projector. A programmer permits slides to be shown automatically in any desired sequence and they can be faded in and out with another device.

Sound-resistant sliding curtains can be pulled to divide the room into two, three or four segments.

Stackable chairs can be removed to clear the auditorium for special exhibitions, receptions and other uses.

The multi-purpose auditorium was designed to provide a suitable meeting place for business, technical, educational and other groups that make heavy use of visual aids.

A flow of special lectures, exhibits, films and other attractions will scheduled into the room by the museum in order to cover many topics not otherwise dealt with in the main exhibit areas.

Sunday First Day For Public Visits

Although the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame will officially open Saturday when President Gerald R. Ford makes the dedication address at 5 p. m., the public will have to wait until 2 p.m. Sunday to go through the museum building.

Admission fees have been set at $1 for adults and 50 cents for children under 12. Very small children will be admitted free.

Homer Fort, director of the museum, said 96 per cent of museums in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma have admission charges.

Russell J. Ramsland, museum president, pointed out that in order to handle future operating expenses, the museum needs to generate income on its own.

"We don't see any chance that the museum will be self-supporting," Ramsland said, "but we hope to offset a share of our annual costs. Charging admission at relatively low rates will help us keep the doors open."

The museum will be open Tuesday through Saturday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. and from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m. Sundays, Fort said.

"The museum will be closed on three holidays, Thanksgiving, Christmas Eve and Christmas Day," Fort said.

The museum's auditorium will be available for rental under guidelines established by the executive committee.

The guidelines call for calculation of operating costs on a per hour basis and adding $10 per hour to this figure.

The museum's auditorium can be divided into as many as four sections for small sessions, and and its audio-visual facilities are among the best in West Texas.

Rassman Key Figure In Petroleum Museum

Emil C. Rassman is a prominent Midland attorney. He also is one of the key figures responsible for the development and construction of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame.

Rassman, chairman of the Board of Executors for the museum, is the person who sought out and obtained donations totaling more than $1.7 million that made the museum a reality and not just a dream.

On March 17, 1974, Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. proclaimed "Emil Rassman Day" in Midland to honor Rassman's long and effective leadership at the local, regional, state and professional levels.

Rassman served as president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and the Texas State Chamber of Commerce in past years, and is a familiar man to most West Texans because of his long list of chamber activities.

He was elected chairman of the board of directors of the State Bar of Texas, which was announced at the conclusion of the 92nd annual convention of the organization at San Antonio.

He was named to the board of directors of the State Bar Association in 1972.

In other activities, Rassman has been active in the Midland County Red Cross, Midland chapter of the American Cancer Society, Midland Community Chest, Midland Youth Center, Masonic Lodge, Midland Scottish Rite, Midland Shrine and Suez Temple. He has been a member of the National Council of Boy Scouts of America.

The Midland Jaycees named him Midland's Outstanding Young Man in 1951 and he later was picked as one of five outstanding young men in Texas.

Rassman is a native of Indianapolis, Ind., and was graduated from Washington and Lee University in 1941.

During World War II, he served in the South Pacific with a tank destroyer battalion and twice was wounded.

Early Rig Restored

May 28, 1923, the Texon Oil & Land Co. completed No. 1 University in Southwest Reagan County to open the Big Lake oil field.

That strike caused a rush of oil explorers from throughout the nation to the Permian Basin and the development of the nation's richest oil and gas area was on.

The discovery well, known throughout the oil industry as Santa Rita No. 1 because Eastern investors requested one of the operators to climb to the top of No. 1 University, sprinkle rose petals over the derrick and christen the operation Santa Rita— saint of the impossible.

A few days after the discovery was completed, Marathon Oil Co. rigged up its No. 2 University near Santa Rita No. 1 and it was drilled as the second producer in the famous field.

Now, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame has Marathon No. 2 University as one of its permanent exterior exhibits.

Marathon gave the equipment from No. 2 to the museum and it was put on "location" here by the Shorty Hall Rig Co. of Odessa.

Common Name

Hessians was the common name for German mercenaries who fought for the British during the American Revolution.

The original wooden derrick used to drill No. 2 University was replaced in 1938 with a steel derrick.

Museum officials decided to recreate the wooden derrick as it was in 1923.

The equipment seen at the museum site is the original which drilled the well. The corrugated metal siding for the engine and belt houses were added to the well in 1938 along with the steel derrick.

Virtually all the remaining parts of the rig are original, though a few are missing, Homer Fort, museum director said.

Museum Assistant History Specialist

William W. Ray joined the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame as its assistant director in July.

Ray, in the year prior to joining the staff as director Homer Fort's chief assistant, was executive director of the San Mateo County Historical Association and County Historical Museum at San Mateo, Calif.

Before that, he was historian for Riverside County, California.

In 1963, he was director-curator of the Amador-Livermore Valley Museum at Pleasanton, Calif.

There, he was in a multi-duty position of overseeing the establishment and opening of a regional History museum.

Ray holds a master's degree in History of the American West from California State University, and a bachelor's degree in American history from the University of California at Berkeley.

RIGS THAT MADE PERMIAN BASIN HISTORY — The scene at left is Santa Rita No. 1, discovery well of the fabulous Big Lake field at Texon which opened the way to speedy Permian Basin oil development. At right is Marathon No. 2 University, now standing on the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame grounds. No. 2 University was the second well drilled in the field. The mast is new, but the rest of the rig stood over the actual well.

Petroleum Museum Opens Saturday

The fabulous Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame which opens here Saturday is the result of 10 years of planning and work.

The idea for such a facility was conceived in the middle 1960s by George T. Abell, Midland independent oil operator.

When President Gerald R. Ford makes the dedication address at 5 p. m., Abell's dream of honoring the men and women who pioneered the development of the Permian Basin oil industry and the preservation of much of the industry's history will become a reality.

A non-profit corporation was charted in 1967 to get the venture under way, and a fund-raising campaign began in 1969.

A unique ground-breaking, the exploding of four seismic charges, got construction of the $1 million dollar building started in October 1973.

The building was completed in May 1975.

More than $700 thousand dollars have been spent on exhibits, landscaping and office expenses, with the building and exhibit funds coming from 406 donors, including major gifts from Gulf, Exxon, Marathon, Skelly and Burmah Oil Co.

Other funds have been given by independent producers, utility companies, banks, professional people and civic organizations.

The museum is governed by two volunteer boards: the board of trustees and the board of executors.

The board of executors elects the trustees and selects the members of the Hall of Fame.

The chairman of the board of executors is Emil C. Rassman of Midland, partner in the law firm of Rassman, Gunter & Boldrick.

The president of the board of trustees and also of the museum corporation is Russell J. Ramsland, vice president of the J. C. Barnes Oil Co. of Midland.

The 33,000-square-foot building is located on a 41.2 acre site in south Midland near the intersection of Interstate 20 and the Rankin Highway.

Goals of the museum are education (earth sciences and engineering), conservation of antique machines, documents and books and honoring of persons who pioneered this area, and recognition of their accomplishments.

The museum, termed by Frank Hildebrand of Austin, director of the Texas Tourist Development Agency, as one of the state's premier tourist attractions, has a staff of five persons, including director Homer T. Fort who joined the venture in 1969; William W. Ray, assistant director who joined the staff this year, and three persons in the clerical and maintainance departments.

There is only one other major museum in the United States themed around the petroleum industry—the Drake Museum at Titusville, Pa.

The museum building was designed by Stiles, Messersmith and Johnson of Lubbock, with Jimmie Leath of Midland the associate architect.

The exhibits were designed by Charles Paramore, who heads an advertising, graphics and display design firm in Dallas.

The major contractor was Area Builders of Odessa.

Landscaping of the museum grounds was adopted by the Bicentennial Commission of Midland as an official project under the name "Project Green Horizons."

Two chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, together with the Midland Society of University Women solicited funds for the landscaping from many civic organizations.

Primitive Forms

Australia is the home of the most primitive forms of ants and termites as well as mammals.

Russell Ramsland: President Of Museum Board Of Trustees

Russell Ramsland, president of the Board of Trustees of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame, was the key person responsible for the coordination in putting together the physical plant of the new historical center.

Ramsland came to Midland from Upland, Calif. in 1947. He joined up with the J. C. Barnes Oil Co. and started looking for the black gold on a small lease in Pecos County.

He learned the ropes of the petroleum industry the hard way, working on a rig. Ramsland said, "I knew a little about drilling before I came to Texas." He had been a dentist while in California.

Ramsland graduated from the University of Southern California in 1944 where he received a Doctor of Dental Surgery degree.

He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II and again during the Korean Conflict.

But the oil industry wasn't all that Ramsland learned while living in Midland, he became a leading figure in civic, educational and professional activities here.

He developed a solid background that would eventually bring him to hold the responsibility for overseeing the construction of the most ambitious project ever designed to tell the story of the pioneer and contemporary petroleum industry.

He knows the oil business from the inside-out, he has been president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and a past member of the Executive Board for the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

He is presently a member of the Advisory Board for the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Ramsland has served on the Executive Board of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

He knows more about his home than just how it relates to petroleum. Ramsland served as chairman of the city's Planning and Zoning Commission where he was responsible for helping make key decisions about the growth and development of Midland.

He has been on the Board of Trustees of the Diagnostic Cancer Clinic of Midland, and has been a past president of the board for the Presbyterean Day Care Center.

He is a past Deacon of the First Presbyterian Church. He was on the Advisory Committee for the Home Economics Cooperative Education Program, and has been a past director with the Western United Life Insurance Co.

Ramsland married the former Jane Ellen Barnes in 1944. They have three children, Claudia Jane Ramsland, Russell James Ramsland Jr. and Elizabeth Ann Ramsland.

Violinist Awakens 'Sleeping Beauty'

By DAVID LANCASHIRE

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — A few months ago, one of the world's top violinists unpacked his fiddle in Haifa's city hall and played a warning to a sleeping beauty.

The "Sleeping Beauty" is an Israeli nickname for the whole city of Haifa — a pretty place where some think nothing much happens — and violinist Henryk Szeryng was telling the town to wake up and save its bankrupt symphony orchestra.

Like Prince Charming in the Sleeping Beauty fairy tale, Haifa's Mayor Josef Almogi came to the rescue, giving orders to improve the symphony's ramshackle organization and raising the money to keep the orchestra going.

The mayor — a high-voltage former minister of the Israeli government — is also leading a campaign against pollution, streamlining traffic in the city of 250,000, shaking up cultural institutions like the orchestra and the Haifa Stage Theater, and trying, as he says "to put Haifa on the map."

"Haifa used to be one of the liveliest towns in the Middle East," Almogi says, "but since heavy industry came in 25 years ago, Israelis only think of it as a dull industrial town. We are trying to change that."

As a tourist center, Haifa's attractions are hard to match in Israel, and the mayor wants to lure visitors away from Tel Aviv and Jerusalem.

Scenically, Haifa's hillside view of the Mediterranean makes it more attractive than Tel Aviv. The biblical district of Galilee begins just the other side of Mt. Carmel in the middle of town, and the sleeping beauty label isn't entirely accurate.

Haifa is Israel's biggest seaport, its Technion science center is Israel's version of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, its theater is regarded as the most original in the country, and some of its 11 museums are unique.

Lincoln Fox Work Statue Of Reality

Lincoln Fox has been described as an artist whose "fingers can shape fantasy into fact."

But Fox, an Arkansas-born, Texas-trained sculptor who now resides at Alto, N.M., wasn't dealing with fantasy when he created "Dressing the Bit" for the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. No, indeed! Absolute reality, and a canny eye for the smallest details of accuracy, characterize this vignette of the oil business of yesteryear.

"Dressing the Bit" depicts the vigor and power of a tool dresser and a driller of 40 to 50 years ago as they restore the cutting edge to a cable-tool bit. Such operations were part of the oil well-drilling technique that began with the ancient Chinese and was responsible for the many thousands of productive oils throughout the Permian Basin, the state and the nation.

Fox's bronze sculpture was created expressly for the Petroleum Museum and will occupy a place of honor in the museum collections. However, the work will not be seen there and there alone, inasmuch as the museum has arranged to sell a limited issue of 150 pieces as a means of raising additional funds toward retiring final indebtedness of the museum complex.

The price of each bronze casting of "Dressing the Bit" is $1,500, of which $1,000 is a tax-deductible contribution to the museum. The remaining $500 is considered to be the fair market price of the sculpture currently.

(However, as art works tend to do, the sculptures in value as the years go on, inasmuch as there "ain't gonna be any more" when the original edition is gone.)

The limited issue of 150 will carry the number of the casting on each bronze and Fox's signature, and each will be accompanied by a certificate of authenticity signed by Fox and the caster, Robert Zimmerman of Loveland, Colo.

Fox displayed his nostalgic sculpture at an invitational preview earlier this summer when he visited the Petroleum Museum, and museum spokesmen indicated that subscriptions for the limited issue were heavy at that time. Persons interested in acquiring one of the originals are urged to contact the museum without delay. It's too late now to get one of the low-numbered pieces, but, in the world of bronze sculpture and limited editions, the 149th or even the 150th casting will be just about as valuable.

Meanwhile, what about casting No. 1?

That will be the piece which may soon grace the White House. It will be given to President Gerald Ford Saturday afternoon when he delivers the address of dedication for the glamorous new museum.

GIFT FOR PRESIDENT — Sculptor Lincoln Fox of Alto, N.M., is shown with the original casting of his nostalgic "Dressing the Bit," which he created expressly for the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. The piece will go to President Gerald Ford when he visits the museum Saturday.

Monaco Denies Princeton Story

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — The Monaco royal house has denied that 18-year-old Princess Caroline of Monaco will enter Princeton College ths fall, but it did not say whether she might enter at a later date.

The palace announcement on Thursday said Caroline will continue to attend classes at the prestigious French School of Political Science in Paris this fall.

A report in the New York Daily News on Wednesday said Caroline's parents, Prince Rainier and the former Grace Kelly, had decided to enroll her in the Ivy League college "next year" because she was spending too much time in Paris on the social circuit.

The report said Caroline's 17-year-old brother, Prince Albert, would also be enrolled in Princeton. The palace said Albert would continue high school this fall in Monte Carlo.

Gamble Conviction Upheld On Appeal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld the conviction of millionaire soap heir George Gamble for transporting an illegally killed Big Horn sheep and elk.

The court on Thursday rejected Gamble's contention that he had been convicted on the basis of insufficient evidence.

Gamble, 36, was fined $10,500 last Oct. 21.

Shirley MacLaine Declares Chinese Deemphasize Sex

LONDON (AP) — American actress Shirlty MacLaine, who recently visited mainland China, says the Chinese don't indulge in the sexual teasing, flirting or seduction she said is common in the West.

"In China, if a girl is looking for a husband, the first thing she finds out is his political ideology," she said.

"We are too occupied in asking 'How many times a week do you make love?' They laugh in China at our preoccupation with sex."

Miss MacLaine was here to introduce a television film about her trip to China with a group of women.

Security: Secretive But Effective

Protective security for President Ford in his visit here Saturday afternoon is probably as secretive as it will be forceful and effective.

U.S. Secret Service agents, understandably, will not comment at all on security measures.

That, in itself, indicates tight — and closed — security.

But agents have been noticeably preparing for President Ford's security and his visit since at least early in the week. The President's Secret Service vanguard is headquartered at the Rodeway Inn, which is in easy view of the President's Midland destination: The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame.

He, in his first call on Midland, will be dedication speaker at the 5 p.m. opening of the museum.

And watching the hordes of Presidential-watchers and lurking within their numbers — into the thousands — will be, literally, untold numbers of federal agents.

Midland area lawmen will be more countable, and obvious.

Uniformed Midland policemen will be directing traffic around and onto the far reaches of the museum just off Interstate Hwy. 20 in south central Midland and on the fringes of the city limits.

Midland Police Chief Harold Wallace said 50 per cent of his force — including the plainclothed detectives — will be on duty in and around the museum.

Remainder of 112-member force will be patroling the streets and alleys of the city, he said.

In force, too, will be troopers from the ranks of the Department of Public Safety. Maj. E. K. Browning Jr. is commander of the DPS's Midland region. Texas Rangers, in Midland this week, will also be working with the U.S. Secret Service force.

Chief Deputy Bill Cornell said he, Midland County Sheriff Ed Darnell, and 15 deputies will be on duty on the museum grounds and surrounding area.

Traffic to the parking expanse near the museum will be one-way westward on the service road leading from South Big Spring Street (State Hwy. 349) beginning at 3 p.m. Saturday. Other traffic will be routed to parking space via a temporarily graded roadway.

Additional parking may be allowed along the interstate highway.

Lions Information Program Given

Carl O. Hyde, a past district governor of Lions International, presented a special "Lions Information" program at the meeting of the Midland Westside Lions Club Thursday noon in its Scout Den.

Hyde, a long-time member of the Midland Downtown Lions Club, was introduced by Tom Nipp, a member of the host club and also a past district governor.

Paul Bozeman, governor of District 2-A1 and a member of the Midland Evening Lions Club, as was Roy Minear of the Downtown club, who also is a past district governor.

ion R. E. Womack presented the club with a portrait of the late Melvin Jones, founder of Lions International.

The program was arranged by Lion Mack Griffin.

Bill Would Give Texas Five More Federal Judges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas is due to receive five additional federal judges if the Senate passes a bill approved Thursday by its Judiciary Committee.

The bill, the first omnibus judgeship measure in five years, authorizes 45 more U.S. district court judges to ease increasing caseloads.

Of the additional judges for Texas, one each will be assigned to the eastern, western and northern districts and two will be for the southern district.

403 PETROLEUM BLDG. • (915) 683-1849 • MIDLAND, TEXAS 79701

Welcome to Midland, Mr. President.

West Texas is full of all kinds of energy.

The Permian Basin, whose history is chronicled in the museum you have come to dedicate, produces about 20 percent of America's crude oil, gas liquids and natural gas.

That's a lot of natural energy—energy that will play a big role in helping solve some of our country's problems.

But there's another kind of energy here—in West Texas, in the Permian Basin, and in Midland. It's human energy. It's found in the hundreds of oil companies and related firms headquartered here. It's basic to the people of Midland, and it provides us with strong, progressive community leadership.

How wells came in in the old days.

It's creative human energy that brings to reality things like the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, its Library and Hall of Fame.

At Texas Electric, where we're in still another kind of energy business, we're proud to be a part of Midland. And to welcome you here, Mr. President.

Hall Of Fame Honors Pioneers Of Oil Industry

One of the main reasons for the existence of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame which opens here Saturday is to serve as a vehicle to honor the pioneers of the petroluem industry.

To date, 46 men have earned a place of honor in the Hall of Fame Room.

And, all are not oilmen. Included among those honored are a physician, a publisher, bankers, an inventor, a machinist, an attorney, a builder, an aviation enthusiast and an investor.

The oilmen honored include famous wildcaters, independent producers, geologists, a landman, an oil scout, independent producers, drillers and a politician.

Members of the Hall of Fame are selected by the museum's board of executors.

There are two main qualifications for election to the hall—making an outstanding contribution or contributions to the development of the oil industry, particularly in the Permian Basin, and-or providing an example for the industry and the Permian Basin's residents.

Ten Midlanders are included on the Hall of Fame roll.

They are George T. Abell, Raiford H. Burton, Ralph F. Lowe, O. C. Harper, Berte R. Haigh, Thomas Stephen Hogan, John P. Butler, Robert W. Patteson, Fred Turner Jr. and Wilbur Arthur Yeager.

Abell, a wildcatter and producer, is one of the founders of the Permian Basin Museum, Library and Hall of fame. He has an outstanding record as a Midland civic leader. geophysicist and oil explorer. He was responsible for several notable oil discoveries in the Basin, including the Headlee Field in Ector County.

Lowe earned his Hall of Fame plaque in various phases of the West Texas oil business, including marketing, wildcating, and producing.

Harper was an innovative geologist with Gulf Oil and later was a successful independent oil operator and civic leader and is noted for his many oil field discoveries in the Basin.

Haigh, an early day miner, was selected for his work in field geology. For many years he was geologist in charge of The University of Texas Lands System.

Hogan is one of those selected not because he was an oilman, but because he was a visionary who built the Petroleum Building which helped attract oil companies to Midland during its early stage of development.

Butler, one of the founders of the museum, is one of the bankers in the Hall of Fame. He was a leader in developing the Basin's mineral resources.

Patteson, a pioneer oil scout, covered oil development in the Basin from 1924 to 1959 for Gulf Oil.

Turner was an independent producer and wildcatter who discovered several major Texas and New Mexico fields.

Yeager, a pioneer Permian Basin oil producer, helped establish Midland as the center for the oil industry in this area.

Michael L. Benedum and Joseph C. Trees, two of the world's most famous wildcatters, were two of the first selections to the Hall of Fame. Benedum and Trees, who called Pittsburgh, Pa., their home, made a series of petroleum finds over the world, including the prolific Yates field in Pecos County.

Samuel A. Sloan of Colorado City, an oilman in his own right, was selected for his exploration in the basin and for being instrumental in establishing commercial aviation in this area.

Houston Harte of San Angelo, newspaper publisher and civic leader, directed early day oil news coverage in West Texas.

Other West Texans voted into the Hall of Fame include Carl G. Cromwell of San Angelo, pioneer driller who worked on Santo Rita No. 1, discovery well of the Big Lake field; Frank H. Kelley of Colorado City, landman for Magnolia Petroleum Co.; Frank T. Pickrell of El Paso, who put together the deal that resulted in the Big Lake strike; Robert Warwick Russell of Monahans, famous oil field machinist and craftsman; Hayman Krupp of El Paso, principal investor in Santa Rita No. 1 and president of Texon Oil & Land Co.

And Floyd C. Dodson of San Angelo, geologist and mapper of Permian Basin's surface in 1920s; Arthur M. Hagan and Ray V. Hennen, both of San Angelo, noted geologists responsible for locating the Yates field.

And, Dr. Jim Camp of Pecos, pioneer physician who came to Pecos in 1900 and provided medical care to isolated ranches and oil drilling rigs; and H. P. Slagel of Colorado City, pioneer driller in Mitchell County.

Fort Worth is well represented, with seven of its citizens in the fame hall.

H. B. Fuqua was an early-day geologist who held executive positions with Gulf Oil and Texas Pacific Coal and Oil Co.

Edward A. Landreth, an independent, discovered numerous oil fields and pioneered oil and gas conservation measures.

C. J. Davidson, a successful wildcatter, producer and investor discovered the Cummins and Bennett Ranch fields.

George B. McCamey discovered many fields in the Southwest, including the McCamey field. The city of McCamey was named for him.

Sid W. Richardson, noted wildcatter who discovered numerous West Texas oil and gas fields.

Joseph C. Maxwell participated in the discovery of the Church fields and the West Dollarhide field.

Neville G. Penrose opened several fields in Texas and New Mexico and was a founder of the Texas Good Neighbor Commission.

Other famous names in the Hall of Fame include Ben C. Belt of Houston, pioneer geologist; Charles E. Beyer of Arlington, vice president of the Big Lake Oil Co.; Morgan J. Davis of Houston, pioneer geologist and past president of Exxon, USA; Howard Hughes Sr. of Houston, inventor of rotary rock bit; Paul Kayser of Houston, founder of El Paso Natural Gas Co.; Herbert C. Irvin of Oklahoma City; discoverer of the Dora Roberts and Chalk fields in Howard County; Eugene Holman of New York City, a native of Monahans, former chairman of the board of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Lovic Pierce Garrett of Houston, geologist, past president of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and past vice president of Gulf Oil; Arthur M. Lockhart of Long Beach, Calif., pioneer in oil marketing who opened first oil pipelines in Mitchell County; D. E. Lounsbery of Bartlesville, Okla., geologist for Midwest Oil and Phillips Petroleum Co. 38 years in West Texas; Wallace E. Pratt of Tucson, Ariz.; Humble Oil & Refining Co.'s first chieft geologist and later vice president of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

And, J. T. Robison of Austin, commissioner of the General Land office, 1909-29; Hiram M. Dow of Roswell, N. M.; attorney who contributed to oil conservation in New Mexico.

And, Ronald K. DeFord of Austin, geologist and educator, and Van S. Welch of Artesia, N. M., discoverer of Southeast New Mexico oil and gas fields.

Former Governor Fails In Efforts

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Former Gov. Orval E. Faubus, who tried to block desegregation of the Little Rock school system in September 1957, has failed in both of his efforts to return to the governnor's office.

In 1970, he was defeated in the Democratic party primary by Dale Bumpers, who became governor and then the Democratic senatorial nominee.

In 1974, Faubus lost the party primary to David H. Pryor of Little Rock.

MR. PRESIDENT:

We are honored by your presence during the dedication ceremonies of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. As an independent Oil Operator we wish to express our appreciation for the realistic and effective support you have given the oil & gas industry. Through our combined efforts maybe we can eventually overcome the short-sighted and do-nothing attitude of Congress and make this nation self-sufficient in our energy requirements.

HOW TO DRAW A CROWD

FOR AN EASIER WAY, USE THE WANT ADS

In the buying and selling game, the winners are those who can draw the crowds, and the Want Ads pack 'em in by the thousands.

Folks wishing to buy, check the Want Ads for whatever item they need, such as a better car, a home or apartment, a bicycle, musical instruments, large or small appliances, or home furnishings. Only the Want Ads cover such a wide and versatile market place.

As for the sellers, they flock to the Want Ads in droves to advertise their no-longer-needed items, like the things the buyers above are looking for. It makes quite a crowd when they get together in the Want Ads.

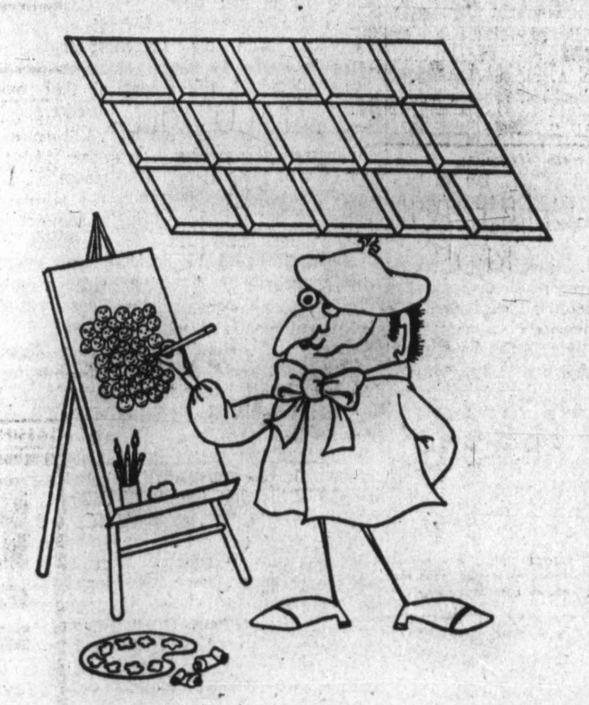
HOW TO DRAW A CROWD



FOR AN EASIER WAY, USE THE WANT ADS

In the buying and selling game, the winners are those who can draw the crowds, and the Want Ads pack 'em in by the thousands.

Folks wishing to buy, check the Want Ads for whatever item they need, such as a better car, a home or apartment, a bicycle, musical instruments, large or small appliances, or home furnishings. Only the Want Ads cover such a wide and versatile market place.

As for the sellers, they flock to the Want Ads in droves to advertise their no-longer-needed items, like the things the buyers above are looking for. It makes quite a crowd when they get together in the Want Ads.

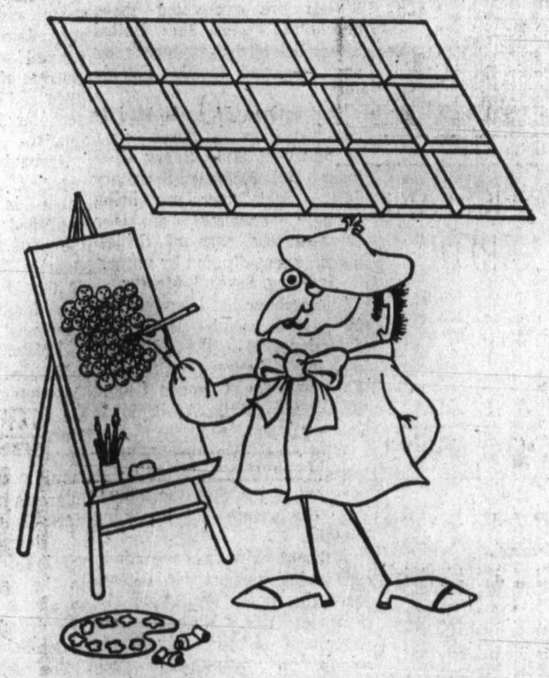
HOW TO DRAW A CROWD



FOR AN EASIER WAY, USE THE WANT ADS

In the buying and selling game, the winners are those who can draw the crowds, and the Want Ads pack 'em in by the thousands.

Folks wishing to buy, check the Want Ads for whatever item they need, such as a better car, a home or apartment, a bicycle, musical instruments, large or small appliances, or home furnishings. Only the Want Ads cover such a wide and versatile market place.

As for the sellers, they flock to the Want Ads in droves to advertise their no-longer-needed items, like the things the buyers above are looking for. It makes quite a crowd when they get together in the Want Ads.

1975 Could Be Vintage Year For French Wines

Agence France-Presse

PARIS — The 1975 French wine harvest should be good in quantity and; varying from vineyard to vineyard, fair to excellent in quality.

Barring sudden excessive rains before the grapes are picked this month and next, the crop should yield an above-average 1.85 billion U.S. gallons.

This should ease the winegrowers' worries about sales outlets following a record 1973 crop and a very abundant one last year.

As for wine drinkers, they can expect, with a little luck or skill, to find honest wines and perhaps some great ones. There is a possibility of 1975 being declared a vintage year in champagne.

Reports from AFP bureaus give the following regional predictions on the year's vintage:

Bordeaux: A very good year, one of the best if the weather holds through September and October. The growers expect about 100 million U.S. gallons, above average but not enough to cause serious stocking problems. Prices could rise.

Burgundy: In the noblest vineyards of the Cote D'Or, both on the Cote de Nuits and the Cote de Beaune, the best growers have sacrificed quantity to quality by already trimming questionable bunches of grapes from the vines.

Beaujolais: Some areas were badly hit by spring hailstorms.Quantity should be average. Well-situated vineyards could produce wines which will last longer than these early-drinkable wines usually do.

Loire: Excellent, with some growers already talking of matching the exceptional 1947s. A few more days of sun would be welcome for the muscadet and gros plant vines near the mouth of the Loire, while further upriver in the Anjou country a little rain would balance an excess of strong summer sunshine.

Alsace: Abundant quantity for this region's white wines, with high quality if the sun shines between now and October picking. Lots of Sylvaner and Riesling, but little Muscat.

Turkey A Substitute

CHICAGO (AP) — At the time of the first Thanksgiving, English goose was the traditional main dish at celebrations and religious feasts such as Christmas. Thanksgiving, according to researchers for World Book Encyclopedia, was the Puritan substitute for Christmas. And wild turkey, being abundant through New England, became the substitute for the goose.

West German Government Considering Halting Payments For American Troops

By MICHAEL GETLER
The Washington Post

BONN — The chances are only 50-50 that the West German government will continue making payments to the United States to help offset the costs of stationing American troops and their families in this country, according to American officials here.

Since 1961, the United States and West Germany have negotiated six of these so-called offset agreements. They are designed to make up the deficit the United States suffers by keeping 186,000 troops here. The most recent agreement, covering the past two years, expired June 30.

Since then, German officials have been suggesting publicly and privately that the United States' improved international trade position this past year has eliminated the over-all U.S. balance-of-payments deficit and removed the need for a new offset agreement.

Though a number of senior Pentagon and State Department officials are known to disagree with this assessment, their dissent is muted. Furthermore, both the American and German governments appear anxious to keep this issue out of public view lest it be perceived as a serious rift between NATO's two most militarily important allies.

(Asked at a Washington press conference Tuesday about the status of the offset negotiations, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told a West German correspondent: "I think it is no secret that your chancellor is not an unqualified admirer of offset agreements." Kissinger said that German-American offset discussions so far had produced no conclusions.)

West Germany Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's comment in late June that he did not consider negotiations for a new agreement "a pressing problem at the moment" brought a threat by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., to introduce legislation that could force either a new agreement of U.S. troop cuts.

Nunn and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., sponsored a 1973 amendment requiring that the United States reduce its troop strength in Germany in proportion to the part of the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit that was not met by the Germans.

The Jackson-Nunn amendment was applied to the last agreement in which the West Germans agreed to offset the $2.2 billion deficit in the cost of maintaining the troops in Germany. That amendment has expired, however.

Nunn's point is that while the over-all U.S. trade balance now is in surplus, the specific troop cost account still is running a deficit and should be compensated.

The traditional U.S. position on such matters is that no nation should gain a balance-of-payments advantage because of the stationing of one nation's troops on another's soil for the common defense. For the past 14 years, the West Germans have acknowledged this and paid roughly $10 billion in various offset agreements.

Sources here say that the NATO guidelines for offset agreements dating back to the late 1950s are vague and suggest only that when member nations run into balance of payments problems, offset agreements on military costs should be worked out. Since the United States in the last several years has been running deficits in both its over-all trade and its military spending overseas, there never was much question about payments.

Now, however, with the over-all deficit gone, the Germans argue that the military account should not be isolated from the full economic ledger and that a formal military offset should not be required.

The Germans also have become increasingly annoyed with these formal agreements in recent years and particularly with the threats to withdraw American troops, whose presence here the Germans view as being for the good of both the United States and West Germany.

The Germans also argue that formal agreements are not really needed because the West German Defense Ministry will continue to buy weapons in the United States with or without them. The West German federal bank — the Bundesbank — will continue to keep large deposits in American banks which also can contribute to offsetting military deficits they say.

U.S. specialists reply, however, that without a formal agreement, the incentive to buy American arms may be reduced and that the favorable interest rate that the Bundesbank agrees to in its U.S. deposits — which makes them useful as an offset device—also might disappear.

Chancellor Schmidt and other West German officials have not said they will not agree to any more offset pacts. U.S. officials here say, however, that the Germans clearly have not been very interested in beginning high-level negotiations. A German foreign ministry official acknowledged that negotiations have not begun.

A senior State Department official, in a recent interview, suggested that the United States may propose a new offset pact to last only one year. The idea is to keep the program alive, defuse the arguments and buy time to try and work out a broader agreement in NATO.
