Contested races generate interest

Not unexpectedly, contested races drew the most activity during early balloting, which ended Tuesday for this weekend's school board and municipal elections.

The actual election will be held from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. Saturday. Election-day balloting will be held at City Hall for the municipal and Snyder ISD elections, at Hermleigh school cafeteria for the HISD board election and at Ira Community Center in the Ira school board election.

Some 228 early votes were cast in the races for mayor and city council member. Running for mayor are Lynn Gardenhire, local businessman, and David Holt a former councilman and president of Fluid Transports and Snyder Area Contractors.

There are two terms up for election on Snyder City Council. Candidates are Ron Shaw, an incumbent and postal employee; Stanley Noah, former council member and retired businessman; Ron Baker, manager of L&L gasoline station; and Dayton Robertson, an incumbent and engineer with Y-Z Industries, Inc.

In the only other contested races in the county, seven individuals are seeking two places on the Hermleigh ISD board of trustees. HISD administrators reported that 65 ballots were cast in the early voting period. Candidates are Tony Lambaren, an employee of E.D. Walton Construction; Joe Roemisch, a sales representative for Production Pump; Larry Bridges, a Price Daniel Unit employee; and Jimmy Barnes, a Santa Fe Railway employee.

Snyder and Ira school districts feature uncontested elections. Seeking another term on the SISD board are incumbents Luann Burleson and Charles Anderson. Seeking terms on the Ira board are Sid Wall, Place 1; and incumbents Keith Clements, Place 6, and R. Douglass White, Place 7.

According to respective voting clerks, 64 people cast early ballots in the Snyder ISD election. Only six votes were cast in the Ira ISD early voting period.

Auction, barbecue to highlight annual May Day activities here

An auction featuring more than 50 items, a barbecue meal and booths featuring arts, crafts, antiques and home-baked foods are some of the offerings for the May Day, sponsored Saturday by the Senior Citizens Center.

The annual event will be held in Scurry County Coliseum and admission is free.

Activities will begin at 2 p.m. when booths offering arts and crafts, antiques and home-baked foods will open. Bidding will also begin on donated items to be sold in a silent auction.

Musical entertainment will be provided by various groups and a barbecue dinner prepared under the supervision of former Senior Center director Jerry Baird will be served from 4:30 until 6 p.m.

The auction will begin at 6:30 with Grady Morris of Colorado City as auctioneer.

The list of items to be auctioned includes a comforter made from denim jeans, 25 handcrafted quilts, a football autographed by Slingin' Sammy Baugh, a porcelain doll, ceramics, paintings, antiques, a chocolate set given to Jerry and Mickey Baird by the late Virginia Whitson, an autographed 1994 Dallas Cowboys Bluebook, an autographed Texas Rangers pennant, an autographed picture of Powers Boothe, silk table cloths and crocheted doilies.

Other items include an autographed Wheaties box created for the National Football League's anniversary, a prize-winning photograph made at the 1994 White Buffalo Festival by Pauline Withers, and a Tree of Life wall hanging or lap robe made by Gloria Browning.

May Day is the major fundraiser for the Senior Center and all monies raised go to the operating fund. The center serves more than 1,800 senior citizens in Scurry County, said Norma Laywell, center director. Senior citizens donated items to be sold during the day and give volunteer time to provide entertainment and to set up and man the booths.

Senior citizens are currently selling tickets for the barbecue at $5 each.

Arrest of two drifters proves to be dead end

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Two drifters who had been the focus of a nationwide manhunt in connection with the bombing of the federal building turned out to be an investigative dead end.

Gary Alan Land and Robert Jacks, whose recent movements roughly paralleled those of bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh, were held for 18 hours Tuesday at FBI offices in Springfield, Mo. They were apprehended by dozens of heavily armed agents in a dawn raid on a cheap motel in Carthage, Mo.

Shortly after midnight, the two men reclaimed Land's white 1981 Thunderbird and drove away from the M&M Wrecker Service in Carthage, saying they were headed for Sacramento, Calif.

"We didn't do it. We're clean. We just got questioned. That's it," Jacks told reporters through his car window. "The FBI ain't stupid. We haven't done anything."

Land said he and his friend took a polygraph test and "passed it with flying colors."

He told a TV interviewer that after agents arrived at 6 a.m., "We

Property taxes see jump of $685 million in 1993-94

Texas local governments increased property taxes $685 million in 1993-94, bringing the total levy to $14.7 billion.

However, tax rates were lowered in 100 of the 405 largest city locations. Most homeowners paid higher taxes because the 20 percent exemption granted by the now defunct county education districts was dropped.

Property taxes in Texas averaged 2.295 percent of market value in 1993-994 but varied widely, ranging from a high of 3.56 percent in Meadows on Fort Bend County to a low of 1.53 percent in La Grange.

Locally, property taxes were 2.5249 percent of value. That rate consisted of .3978 percent levied by the city, 1.3708 by Snyder ISD, .2534 percent by Western Texas College and .5029 percent for Scurry County.

For a single-family house that would sell for $80,000, the highest tax bill was $2,860 in Pecos and the lowest was $1,249 in La Grange. If the house were eligible for various homestead exemptions, the lowest tax would have been $1,154 in La Grange compared to a high of $2,659 in Robstown.

In Snyder, the tax bill on an $80,000 house in 1993-94 averaged $1,962, or $1,816 if the homeowner claimed homestead exemptions.

The information is provided by the Texas Research League, an Austin-based public policy research group. The figures do not include tax changes in 1994-95, which are not yet available.

The report notes that homeowners over age 65 are eligible for both state-mandated and local-option exemptions. Furthermore, school tax bills for the elderly are frozen at the level in place when the homeowner turned 65.

Equitable appraisals among different types of property are a significant factor in attracting new industry and jobs to a community, according to the Texas Research League. The 1993-94 property tax on industrial equipment and inventories valued at $80,000 ranged from $1,260 in La Grange to $2,900 in Meadows.

For property worth $80,000 in Snyder, the report shows a combined average tax of $2,020 for all types of property, $2,003 for industrial equipment and inventories and $2,003 for commercial inventories and fixtures.

The report cites two reasons for the wide range of taxes. First, local officials adopt budgets and set tax rates and the amount of homestead exemptions. Second, unless all property is appraised uniformly, tax burdens will vary. The lowest average tax ratio of tax appraisals to market value was 81.8 percent in Childress ISD; the highest ration was 151.9 percent in Kenedy Countywide ISD.

Locally, the report shows a ratio of 100.8 percent for all types of property in the Snyder school district.

Taxes levied by counties ranged from $0.150 per $100 of market value in Leon County to $1.203 in Brooks County. Including countywide special districts, county rates ranked from $0.150 in Leon County to $1.252 in Fisher County. In Scurry, the true rate was $0.756 per $100.

Annexation hearing draws no response from community

The second public hearing on the possible annexation of some 313 acres for an industrial park was held at city council chambers Tuesday night and the meeting was brief - about three minutes.

No citizen appeared to comment on the the annexation and Mayor Pro-Tem Vernest Tippens adjourned the meeting shortly after it was opened. She was presiding in the absence of mayor Paul Zeck.

The council had also conducted a public hearing on the proposed annexation Monday evening.

The purpose of the meetings are to annex approximatley 313 acres recently purchased by the DCOS for use as an industrial park. The land is located northeast of the intersection of U.S.Highway 180 and U.S. Highway 84.

In annexing the area, the city will also be taking in one quarter of a quarter section of property owned by Wade Davis. His property includes land on both sides of U.S. Highway 84.

Besides Tippens, council members present for the hearing were Kenny Grambell, I.E. Martin and Dayton Robertson. Absent besides Zeck were Jerry Webb and Ron Shaw.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Some don't have much to say, but you have to listen a long time to find out."

A boom in West Texas?

It's happening, but it's associated with numbers, not with the price of oil. There's a retail building upswing underway in Midland, and it's all based on how numbers add up.

In 1993, Odessa and Midland were combined into a single Standard Metropolitan Area with a population of 240,908. That indicates a gain of almost 70 percent.

Even the local news media admits there are likely no more people living in Midland, but the stats show otherwise. The building growth has been phenomenal.

Large retail stores are opening such as Circuit City, HEB, Target, Builders Square, Venture's Stores and a giant Wal-mart. Chain eating establishments have arrived to include Outback, Blackeye Pea and Olive Garden.

Midland is now viewed as the largest metropolitan center in West Texas, a claim long held by Lubbock.

Obviously retail decision makers sit in the really big cities and make corporate location and advertising decisions based on numbers. Maybe Snyder can merge its stats with some neighbors...

To prove that some things may not be what they seem, we refer to an article passed along to us by Dena Ellis about the guy who went to the doctor's office.

He told the receptionist he had shingles, so she took his name, address, medical insurance and told him to take a seat.

Later, a nurse's aide came out and asked him what he had.

"Shingles."

She took his height, weight, a complete medical history and told him to wait in an exam room.

A half-hour later, a nurse came in and asked what he had.

"Shingles."

She gave him a blood test, an electrocardiogram and took his blood pressure and he was told to take off all his clothes and the doctor would be in shortly.

Finally, the doc came in and asked what he had.

"Shingles."

The doc asked where.

"Outside in the truck. Where do you want 'em."

Cops face charges

NEW YORK (AP) — The 48th Precinct has become the city's latest rogues' gallery.

About two dozen police officers have been implicated in a yearlong investigation that uncovered evidence of officers shaking down drug dealers, busting into apartments without warrants and ignoring corruption, law enforcement sources said.

Six officers from the Bronx precinct were arrested at their homes Tuesday night, and 10 more were to be arrested today, said a source who spoke on condition of anonymity. Indictments were to be unsealed today.

About seven officers were expected to be suspended for ignoring the corruption, the source said.

Neither a police department spokesman nor a spokeswoman for the Bronx District Attorney's office would comment.

There has been a string of police corruption scandals in New York City's other boroughs, and citizen complaints against officers citywide are at record levels. More than 30 arrests have been made in Harlem's notorious 30th Precinct.

The 48th Precinct "is not an organized band like is was in the ... 30th," one source said. Violations in the 48th were "more opportunistic than it was organized corruption."

Play it safe with slow heart rate

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have bradycardia without fainting or dizziness. What can you tell me about this heart condition?

DEAR READER: Bradycardia simply means "slow heart rate": traditionally a pulse below 60 beats per minute.

Many healthy people have slow pulses — young people, in particular, and athletes. Such bradycardia is normal and no cause for concern.

In addition, certain medications (notably, beta-blockers, such as Inderal) that are used to treat hypertension and heart disorders will cause bradycardia.

Having said this, I must add that persisting bradycardia in a middle-aged or elderly adult may reflect a cardiac condition. For instance, certain forms of heart block cause an unusually slow pulse, and are diagnosed on the electrocardiogram.

Therefore, any adult whose pulse runs consistently in the 40s or 50s should be examined by a physician and have an electrocardiogram — and, maybe, depending on age and symptoms, a stress test.

The fact that your bradycardia causes neither faintness nor, I assume, other symptoms suggests that your slow pulse is normal for you and does not reflect cardiac disease. Nonetheless, since you are concerned, I suggest that you bring this to your doctor's attention. While you're probably OK, it would be prudent to check it out.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Understanding Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from lipomas. They are on my stomach, lower rib cage and the larger ones present on my legs above the knees. I've recently turned 84 and am in fairly good condition. Should I have the larger ones removed if I believe they are interfering with my leg circulation? I'm concerned the surgery could give me blood clots or if the blood vessels are cut during surgery, my circulation might be further impaired.

DEAR READER: Lipomas are painless, benign fatty growths under the skin that vary in size and can occur anywhere on the body; they are diagnosed by their appearance. Lipomas do not need to be removed unless they are unsightly or become irritated on belt lines or under bra straps.

Lipomas do not affect health or circulation. If you do choose to undergo surgery, the operation can be performed under local anesthesia and will not hamper your circulation or lead to blood clots. My advice is to leave the lipomas alone because, at 84, there are more enjoyable pursuits than having cosmetic surgery.

Handshakes Hard to Handle For Some Arthritis Sufferers

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing about your response to "Unshakable in Milwaukee," the woman who asked how to avoid handshakes, which caused her great pain in her arthritic hands. You suggested, "... very quickly say, 'No handshake, please. I have arthritis.'"

Abby, she may not want to announce to someone she's just meeting that she has arthritis. Also, many people won't hear her quickly enough, as handshakes are automatic.

My suggestion would be to take a cue from Sen. Robert Dole, who carries a felt-tipped pen in the hand of his paralyzed right arm: Always carry something in your right hand. And when someone tries to shake your hand, offer your left hand — but horizontally, with your palm facing the floor.

This works well for a man I know at church. People automatically clasp his left fingertips from below with their already extended right hands, rather than squeezing his knuckles together from top to bottom.

I hope this helps "Unshakable" and others. And please don't use my name, because I don't want it publicized that I'm getting arthritis either!

GETTING ARTHRITIS
AT 38 IN TEXAS

DEAR GETTING: Thanks for the suggestions. I'm printing your letter for everyone who needs to palm off an unwanted handshake.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am 23 and a bride-to-be. "Charles Smith" and I are being married soon. Charles wants his parents' names on the wedding invitations as well as the names of my parents. He says it's to show respect.

Abby, my parents are paying for the entire wedding. It will be traditional and quite formal. The Smiths not only did not give us an engagement gift, they're not giving us a wedding gift. My parents feel that since the Smiths failed to honor my fiance and me, they don't deserve to have their names on the invitation.

Charles' parents are mad because we decided against having an engagement party. They feel "tradition" dictates that we have one. None of Charles' family has given us gifts. They said, "If we give you a gift, we should get a meal!" Shouldn't people send gifts because they are happy for the couple, not because they are going to get a meal? All of my family sent gifts.

This has been very upsetting. Tradition states that the bride's parents announce the "giving" of their daughter in marriage; therefore, traditionally only the parents of the bride are listed on the wedding invitation. This is causing a huge problem. Please help.

STUCK BETWEEN
RESPECT AND TRADITION

DEAR STUCK: According to Emily Post's "Complete Book of Wedding Etiquette," the bride's family usually pays for the wedding and reception. They are the hosts, and the invitations are issued in their names. If, however, the groom's family shares in the wedding expenses, their names should also appear on the invitations. Since your fiance's parents are not co-hosting the wedding, their names don't belong on the invitations.

Names on wedding invitations have nothing to do with respect — they simply indicate who is hosting the celebration. Your future in-laws are not the first to find this tradition confusing.

For your sake, I hope this settles the issue, and eases prewedding tensions.

Film director quits

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — The director of "Waterworld" has quit over creative differences with star Kevin Costner in yet another setback for the most expensive movie ever made.

Kevin Reynolds stopped working on the futuristic thriller, starring Costner as a half man-half amphibian, last week when it became clear his cut of the film did not please Costner or Universal Pictures, sources said Tuesday.

The defection comes just three months before the scheduled premiere of "Waterworld," which is costing a record $175 million.

The film has been plagued by expensive production delays in the waters off Hawaii, including one mishap in which the movie's set sank to the bottom of the ocean.

The people familiar with the movie said Reynolds wanted to test-screen his version of "Waterworld" but that Costner and Universal felt it was not good enough.

"The reality was that there was a consensus that (his cut) wasn't working. People made recommendations and they weren't going anywhere," one source said.

Emissions testing firm files $150 million suit

AUSTIN (AP) — The company previously commissioned to inspect millions of Texas vehicles under a centralized emissions testing program has sued the state for more than $150 million for scrapping the project.

In a lawsuit filed Tuesday in Travis County state court, Tejas Testing Technology says it may not be able to stay in business. The suit alleges the state breached a 7-year contract under which the company was to test vehicles in Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth and Beaumont-Port Arthur.

The suit names as defendants the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission; its chairman, John Hall; board members Pam Reed and Peggy Garner; executive director Dan Pearson and state Attorney General Dan Morales.

TNRCC spokesman Patrick Crimmins said members of the board scheduled an emergency meeting for today to be briefed on the suit.

"We have reviewed the lawsuit," Crimmins said. "Other than that, we don't have any comment."

The bidding often helps

By Phillip Alder

When leading, you use a set of "rules." For example, you lead fourth-highest from your longest and strongest, especially when you have at least one honor in the suit. And in the middle of the play, if you switch to a new suit, a low card should promise an honor in that suit (unless you are hoping to fool declarer and don't care what partner expects). However, there are certain holdings from which you shouldn't lead the "normal" card. Today's heart suit fits this bill.

South opened with the gambling three no-trump, showing a solid minor suit with no side ace or king. No one saw fit to argue.

Against this opening bid, it is usually best to lead an ace to look at the dummy. So, West led the diamond ace. But to which card did he switch at trick two?

It was clear to West that he had to attack hearts. And the normal card to lead from K-10-2 is the two. Yet what happens then? Probably declarer will play low from the dummy, allowing East to win with the jack. After winning trick three with his heart king, West returns the heart 10. But declarer plays low from the dummy and the contract makes, the heart suit being blocked. East's heart ace wins a trick in the next deal.

Instead, West switched to the heart 10: queen, ace, five. Since South's opening bid had denied a side-suit king, it was easy for East to continue with the heart four to West's king. Now came the heart two through dummy's 8-6 to East's J-7. Four heart tricks to the defense meant one down.

Cantu leads Lamesa past Tigers, 4-2

By Todd Stanley
SDN Sports Editor

LAMESA — Like an indestructable battleship blowing teams out of the water, the Snyder Tigers cruised through their first six district games.

However, the Tigers ran out of fuel, leaving them dead in the water for any team to come along and riddle them full of holes.

Lamesa (17-8, 6-4) gave Snyder (15-9-1, 6-4) one final blow Tuesday, as the Golden Tors slapped a 4-2 loss on the Tigers at Lobo Park.

The Tors' victory, coupled with Estacado's 12-5 pasting of Frenship, moves three teams into a tie for second place behind District 5-4A champion Frenship.

Lamesa, Estacado and Snyder all finished the season with identical 6-4 district marks.

According to Snyder athletic director David Baugh, representatives from Snyder, Lamesa and Estacado, were scheduled to meet today in Post to decide which of the three teams will receive a bye.

A two-game playoff, to be played later this week at sites and times to be determined, will take place to determine the district's second place team.

The only reason the Tigers are in this current position, is the fact that they have been unable to successfully put together the same offensive attack that signified the team at the beginning of the season.

Cantu (10-2) struck out 13 Tigers and had two of Lamesa's three hits, including a first inning solo home run.

"This was a regular Cantu day," Snyder head coach Roland Herrera said. "I felt we should have hit more off him, but I can't take anything away from his performance. He's proved all season that he has the ability to contol a game by himself."

"I felt like I was in the zone today," Cantu said. "I think I could go another seven innings. The fact that we came in and did what we needed to do against Snyder makes this all the better. They are the best team we've played this year."

Four Tiger errors proved to be the difference, as starting pitcher Lee Idom (4-3) and reliever Reagan Key allowed only one earned run in the contest.

In the bottom of the fourth inning, Cantu delivered a single and made way for pinch runner Andrew Vasquez. Vasquez advanced to second on a pass ball, then went to third on a sacrifice bunt and proceeded to score on a suicide squeeze, making the score 2-0.

Center fielder Michael Cruz followed with a single. Cruz would then steal second and move to third on a poor throw by catcher Curt Rinehart. Second baseman Nathan Zalman was able to knock the throw down, but in an attempt to get Cruz at third, threw wildly, allowing the runner to score.

"We had too many throwing errors, again," Herrera said. "When you are facing a guy like Cantu, you can't give up unearned runs like we did."

Lamesa would score another run in the fifth to make the score 4-2, but Snyder fought back.

In the top of the sixth with one out, John Clinkinbeard singled. Cantu struck out Chris Mitchell for the second out of the inning, but Reagan Key came through with a single, moving Clinkinbeard to third.

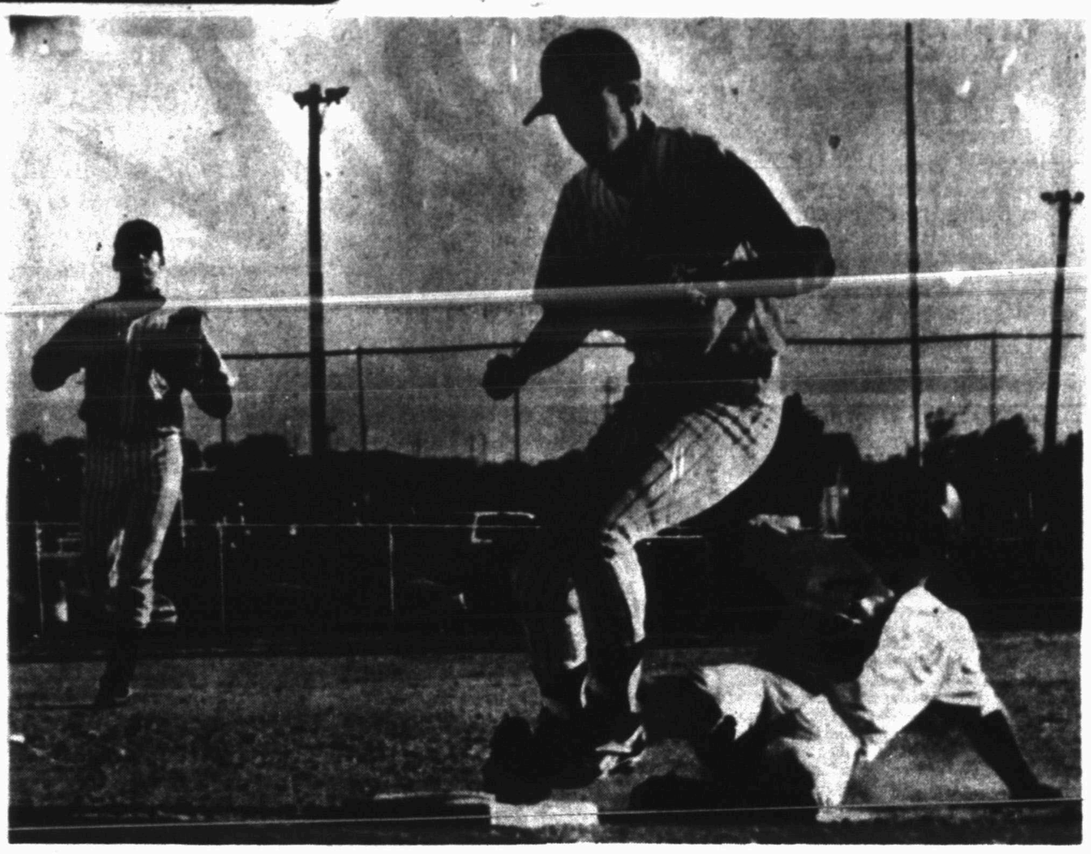
With runners at the corners, Jeremy House singled, scoring Clinkinbeard to make the score 4-1. Key moved to second on the play.

Wayne Braziel, then knocked in Key with a line drive into right field cutting the Lamesa lead to 4-2. Cantu retired Bryant Roberson to end the inning.

In the top of the seventh and two out, Rinehart walked on a 3-2 count to put the tying run at the plate in the form of Chris Mitchell.

Mitchell, however, chopped a slow roller to third and was unable to beat out the throw to end the game.

"I was real proud of our bench play," Herrera said. "Braziel came in and delivered in the clutch. I thought we gave a great effort coming back like we did."



USE THE FORCE — Snyder's Ty Estes steps on third to get the force out on Lamesa's Fidel Ogeda, while Jeremy House looks on. The Tigers lost to the Golden Tors 4-2, forcing a three-way tie for second place. (Photo By Todd Stanley)

New bill will include whistleblower funds

AUSTIN (AP) — A former state employee awarded $13.5 million by a jury in 1991 under the Texas Whistleblower Act finally may be paid, state lawmakers say.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, and Rep. Rob Junell, D-San Angelo, who chair the Legislature's appropriations committees, said Tuesday a bill is being drafted that will include money for George Green, a former Department of Human Services worker.

"If the state were to pay me, and I firmly believe they will, they will have met the minimum standards of their obligation," Green said. "It would mean that civil justice is available and honored by the courts and the state for all of us."

The DHS fired Green, 47, in December 1989 from his $36,000-a-year safety officer job overseeing renovation projects. His dismissal came after he threatened to report alleged kickbacks and other violations surrounding agency contracts.

The Whistleblower Act prohibits a state agency from terminating an employee for reporting violations to law enforcement agencies.

Green has been battling in court to collect $13.5 million since a Travis County judge approved the jury award in October 1991. The Texas Supreme Court upheld the award in February 1994.

Green said he is now owed $19 million, including interest.

Junell and Montford said the amount the state will pay Green hasn't been determined. Junell said it would be "substantial."

"The state is not an insurance company," Junell said. "We have to live within our means. We will come to the floor with the bill and if people don't like the amount I have in there, they may take it all away, or some of it away, or add some or leave it the same."

Montford said, "We will work with the House on a dollar amount."

Junell said the money for Green would not be allocated in the state budget, but in another bill as a line item of debts owed by the state.

Green said the state's reluctance in paying him has cost Texas taxpayers.

"Since the Supreme Court made the judgment final, I have accrued another $2 million in interest," Green said. "I think that is an unconscionable act on the part of the leadership of this state and a disservice to the taxpayers."

Green said the lawmakers' decision to appropriate money for him didn't involve settlement talks.

"There have been no deals. I won't deal," Green said.

Junell said this legislative session is the first chance lawmakers have had a chance to consider the payout since the judgment became final last year.

Before his firing, Green had told his supervisors about alleged kickbacks and other violations surrounding DHS contracts. When nothing was done about his complaints, he threatened to tell law enforcement authorities.

Shortly thereafter, the department investigated Green's long-distance telephone bills at work and audited his use of sick leave.

Study links fat food to cancer of prostate

WASHINGTON (AP) — American men who eat diets rich in fat are at increased risk of developing prostate cancer, according to a study published today.

The research, reported in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, compared the diet and physical activity of 1,655 prostate cancer patients with that of 1,645 men who did not have the disease.

To account for different rates of prostate cancer among ethnic groups, the study included black, white, Chinese-American and Japanese-American men. Black American men are known to have a very high risk of prostate cancer and white American men have a high risk, while Asian-American men have a low risk of the disease.

The study found that overall food intake was highest among blacks and lowest among Asian-Americans. Across all ethnic groups, food consumption was highest among those with prostate cancer.

Fat consumption was highest among blacks, followed by white men, the Japanese-Americans and the Chinese-Americans.

"Within each of the four ethnic groups, case patients (those with cancer) reported greater consumption of energy, fats and red meats than did control subjects (those without cancer)," the report said.

As a result, the study found a direct causal link between dietary fat consumption and prostate cancer risk.

One point of the study was to determine if diet or other environmental factors explained the differences in prostate cancer rates among the ethnic groups.

The researchers concluded that fat consumption would account for only about 10 percent of the difference in prostate cancer rates between black and white American men, and only about 15 percent of the difference between white and Asian-American men.

About 178,000 new cases of prostate cancer are diagnosed annually in the United States and Canada and about 39,000 men die of the disease.

Prostate cancer rates in China and Japan are only a fraction of the rates for American blacks. Chinese-Americans and Japanese-Americans have prostate cancer rates higher than their counterparts in Asia, but lower than the rates of white and black American men.

Anti-terrorism proposals reconsidered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's No. 2 official acknowledged today the White House's proposals for combating domestic terrorism might go too far and said no effort would be made to give the president absolute power to designate groups as terrorist organizations.

Legislation proposed by the Clinton administration and in Congress envision giving the FBI and other law enforcement agencies greater authority to conduct wiretaps, check credit records and infiltrate groups planning criminal or terrorist acts.

Civil liberty groups have warned that some of the measures may go too far in infringing on personal rights, including a proposal that the president be able to designate, without review, groups as terrorists.

"We will recommend deletion of the assertions in that bill that the president's designations are unreviewable or conclusive," Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick told the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime.

"It is not our intent to foreclose appropriate judicial review of the designation of a group as a terrorist organization," she said.

She said the administration also was submitting to Congress today a second piece of legislation that enhances means to fight terrorism in the wake of the April 19 bombing attack on the federal building in Oklahoma City.

President Clinton is also asking Congress for nearly $142 million to pay for the manhunt after the Oklahoma City bombing, as well as heightened security at federal buildings and new defenses against home-grown terrorism.

Clinton's request also covers the costs of demolishing the bomb-wrecked Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City and providing replacement office space, furniture and equipment to keep federal agencies at work there.

"The current scope of federal criminal laws does not reach some very possible and truly frightening terrorist activity," he said.

He gave as examples a terrorist group that assassinated non-federal officials or private citizens in a single state, or a group that constructed bombs within a single state and bombed non-government buildings.

Foster tries to set record straight on abortion & career

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's nominee for surgeon general faced tough questions today about his leadership of a Nashville teen-pregnancy prevention program and his alleged knowledge of a government study in which poor black men in Alabama were left untreated for syphilis.

In another development, the Senate's Democratic leader suggested if Republican presidential candidates play politics with the nomination of Dr. Henry Foster, Democrats may take revenge.

"We may start objecting to moving to other legislation. We may need to make it very clear that cooperation is a two-way street," said Sen. Tom Daschle of South Dakota, the minority leader.

At Foster's hearing, Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee Chairwoman Nancy Landon Kassebaum, who is considered a possible Republican supporter of Foster, continued to express concern today about the surgeon general nominee's leadership and improvement of his "I Have a Future" program.

had to jump out of bed and get dressed real quick and met a SWAT team in front of our door. It was real scary."

The men said they did not know McVeigh, the only person charged in the bombing, or Terry and James Nichols, friends of McVeigh's who face unrelated charges of conspiring with McVeigh to make small bombs on a Michigan farm.

An FBI spokesman in Oklahoma City, Dan Vogel, confirmed that the men had been released but refused to comment further.

Earlier in the day, a law enforcement source in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said authorities were having trouble finding grounds for holding the men.

White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said today that the FBI has dealt with more than 11,000 leads.

"Sometimes they turn out to be hot, sometimes they turn out to be cold, and that was the problem yesterday," Panetta said on "CBS This Morning." "But, frankly, the investigation continues at an aggressive pace and we're confident that ultimately well catch the culprits."

Meanwhile, the death toll rose to 142 today, including 15 children. Workers searching for about 40 missing people took their first night off since the April 19 explosion, halting the search from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. because of the instability of the wrecked building.

"It's too dangerous to do night operations," Assistant Fire Chief Jon Hansen said.

Workers resumed clearing rubble at the site this morning, but there was no immediate word if a large backhoe that's been standing by since Monday would begin removing debris previously carried out by hand.

The dramatic capture and abrupt release of Jacks and Land came as a federal grand jury begin its inquiry into the worst terrorist attack on American soil.

Taylor receives probated term

Garza County Judge Giles Darby has sentenced Snyder resident Albert Mack Taylor to six months in jail, probated for one year, 50 hours of community service, a $500 fine and court costs of $230 and $750 in restitution to Garza County for making false reports to a police officer.

Taylor, a former Snyder High School Spanish teacher, had told Garza County Deputy Randy Johnston that he had been abducted by a man with a gun and a knife on March 8 from a roadside park near Post. He said the man forced him to drive to various banks in Lubbock and to obtain cash advances on his credit cards.

Taylor said the man took more than $61,000 in cash that he had obtained and took some $12,000 to $15,000 in jewelry before releasing him at another roadside park near Post later on the same day.

Johnston said Taylor, upon returning home, called his credit card companies and advised them of the theft, then notified the Garza County Sheriff's Department.

Taylor later recanted his story and told authorities in Post that he had fabricated the story and he was still in possession of most of the money.

The Emu Report

By Shirley Pate, Pate Emu Farm

Emu Marketing Unlimited (EMU) has recently purchased the processing plant in Rosebud. EMU will soon begin processing emu beginning with the birds in their feed lots. As more emu are needed they will purchase birds from their members first. EMU will buy from non-member breeders only when members cannot supply the demand. For information on membership call 1-800-791-2669.

New board members have been named to Emu Ranchers, Inc. (ERI). They also hope, in the near future, to begin slaughtering emu for market. ERI has announced a great price reduction in their products. Anyone can purchase products, it is not necessary to be a member. It is very likely that ERI will follow the same order as EMU in the purchasing of birds. For information on membership or ordering products call 1-800-826-3374.

Bettye Oddle, president of the American Emu Association (AEA), stated that AEA paid the expenses for Texas Tech to gather the information needed to complete the matrix for presentation to the USDA for voluntary approval. The only difference between voluntary and mandatory approval is, voluntary, the processor pays for it, mandatory, the USDA pays for it.

AEA is now having brainstorming meetings, for everyone who is involved in any way in the productions of emu products. This includes processing plants, producers of emu oil products, tanners, meat packers, co-ops and the list goes on. This will enable the industry as a whole to grow by not all trying to re-invent the wheel. No one is being asked to divulge anything that would be detrimental to the success of their business. To have your name or the name of your business or organization added to the mailing list for notification of these sessions, contact Texas Emu Association, 214-528-4614.

Ms. Oddle related, as she has traveled this year as president of AEA, the great enthusiasm throughout the nation for the emu industry. She has visited most of the states and said one of the first things on their agenda was to have the emu qualified as livestock in their state. Texas has now recognized emu as livestock.

AEA has also produced a sports video starring members if the Dallas Mavericks and team manager, Doug Attkinson, that is for sale. For any information concerning any of the above AEA related items call 214-559-AEA1.

The new officers for TEA Zone 7 were announced April 29 at the quarterly meeting in Big Spring. Those taking office June 1, 1995 were Glen Lane, president, Midland; Marion Snell, vice president, Ackerly; Carolyn Templin, Ballinger; and Juanita Seal, Midland, directors.

U.S. reduces allotments to accommodate China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is reducing wheat allotments to four regions under the Export Enhancement Program so that China can buy an additional metric tons of subsidized U.S. wheat this year.

The reallotment reduces allocations to the former Soviet Union by 600,000 metric tons, to Pakistan by 100,000, to Jordan by 100,000 and sub-Saharan Africa by 200,000 tons.

"The Clinton administration continues to use all the export tools available to it on behalf of farmers and American agriculture," Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said in a statement. "This additional EEP allocation to China is a prime example of our commitment to improve farm income and bolster U.S. wheat exports."

China was originally allocated 3 million metric tons of wheat, and later given a supplemental allocation of 1 million tons. The latest move runs China's total allocation to 5 million tons.

The wheat sales through the program are through normal commercial channels at competitive world prices, the Agriculture Department said.

BEWARE OF THE MANCHURIAN MUSHROOM

The "Manchurian mushroom," also known in some circles as "Kombucha tea" may not be the panacea it is proclaimed to be. The conditions of producing and handling the substance may promote the growth of unsafe foodborne pathogens.

The "mushroom" received much public attention after claims of its curative properties appearing in an AIDS newsletter in Los Angeles. But the recommendation of "growing" the "mushroom" at room temperature creates a situation that is supportive of mold growth, particularly the extremely toxic aspergilus mold, making it less than safe for any individual, especially those with chronic illness.

Promotional materials suggest that Kombucha can eliminate wrinkles and help remove brown spots on hands, prevent cancer, reduce hot flashes, help allergies and aching nerves, cure diseases, burn fat, level-off glucose, thicken hair, help digestion and reverse symptoms of AIDS.

The Manchurian Mushroom is not really a mushroom, but a symbiotic colony of yeast and bacteria that resembles a jelly fish in form and acts as a living culture. The consumer is instructed to grow the substance in a special medium of three quarts of water boiled with one cup of sugar. This liquid is then transferred to a glass bowl to which five tea bags are added and allowed to steep for 10 minutes. The Kombucha culture is then floated on top of the cooled tea. Some instructions recommend covering the mixture with a cotton cloth and leaving the bowl in a warm, dimly lit place for about a week. Other instructions advise keeping the culture in a "cool" place. In a week's time, fermentation produces a ciderlike, sometimes carbonated drink. Each fermented batch also produces a second culture, commonly referred to as a "baby," these babies often are given to friends or sold.

At least one safety problem does exist with Kombucha, according to mycologists. The Kombucha can become contaiminated with toxic mold. In particular, it may be unwise to consume the substance when held at room temperature for a week. All individuals are now advised to avoid consuming anything appearing to contain mold growth.
