At Sewer Meeting

Resident Finds 'No Answers'

By Pat Blair

"There are no answers here tonight," John F. Rayburn declared near the end of Tuesday's public meeting on a proposed sanitary sewer system for Aransas County.

County residents had a lot of questions, mostly about how much the proposed system is going to cost and how it will be paid for.

But the purpose of the September 9 meeting, held in the District Courtroom of Aransas County Courthouse in Rockport, wasn't to answer questions. That will come later, in a public hearing to be held probably in November or December.

The purpose of Tuesday's meeting, Public Participation Coordinator Mick Ladner told those who attended, was to give Aransas County residents a chance to express their feelings about the kind of wastewater treatment system the county should have.

Several area residents — including County Commissioner Raymond Owens and realtor Juanita Wagley — expressed preference for a "multiple independent" collection system.

A multiple independent system — one of three alternatives presented to county residents Tuesday night — consists of two or more wastewater treatment plants scattered throughout an area, as opposed to a central system in which one

DECISIONS...

Bobby Harris tries to figure out which books to take -- and how he's going to get everything into that one suitcase. It's the age-old dilemma that faces every student going off to college -- as Bobby knows. Now bound for Princeton, he's become "a great authority on going to school."

Chinese Language 'Fun' For Rockport Man

By Pat Blair
Question: What's a quiet man from Rockport doing at Columbia and Princeton universities?

Answer: Getting his master's and Ph.D. degrees in Chinese language and art.

At least that's what Bobby Harrist is doing at those two schools. He has a master's degree in Chinese language from Columbia and he left Friday, September 12, for Princeton to start work on a Ph.D. in art.

In between, he's spent a summer at Middlebury University in Vermont studying the Japanese language.

And through it all, he adds, he's become "a great authority on going to school."

He should... he's spent a lot of time on campus. A 1970 graduate of Rockport-Fulton High School — the son of Earnest and Frances Harrist of Rockport — Bobby started out at Del Mar then went on to Indiana University.

While there, he studied music and art history as an undergraduate and he found himself developing an interest in East Asian and Indian art.

The next step was a position as assistant to an instructor in Chinese art — and from there an interest in the art itself.

"I decided if I wanted to study Chinese art, I needed to know the (Chinese) language and culture," he continues, and in the fall of 1978, he went to New York to enroll in a course in Chinese at Columbia.

"The Chinese language is lots of fun," he says.

"learning is its own reward." He added it isn't as complicated as most people seem to think: "I'm very bad at languages — I have no gift whatsoever. If I can learn it, anybody can."

Japanese, he added, is much more complicated, in part because of the "levels of politeness" implied in speech. When speaking to someone in Japanese, he said, both parties in the conversation know where they stand in the other's esteem.

In addition to the language, Bobby's work at Columbia included Chinese literature. "The great poets were very often the great painters," he said.

At Princeton, he plans to study the history of Chinese art, especially painting and calligraphy from around the 8th to the 17th centuries. He also plans to study Buddhist art — "especially in Japan."

As for how he got "hooked on" art and music in the first place, Bobby (See HARRIST, On Page 12)

Awards Highlight Cancer Society Meeting

Presentation of awards and good news about the 1980 Cancer Crusade highlighted Thursday's meeting of the Aransas County unit of the American Cancer Society.

Crusade chairman W.C. Underwood and Unit officers Mollie Freeborn and Patty McArdle received certificates of appreciation for their services to the Society. Patty also received a 10-year pin.

Underwood reported that the 1980 Cancer Crusade in Aransas County netted $8,739.27, about $600 more than has been raised in past Cancer Crusades here.

Underwood said $4,864.27 was raised in the residential campaign and another $1,040 came from area businesses. The figures also included $1,947 in memorial donations and $888 raised in last year's Bike-a-thon.

Underwood praised the efforts of the some 125 volunteers who contributed their time and effort to the Crusade.

The Rev. Wayne Pafk, president of the unit this year, asked for volunteers to participate in a "speaker program" — a pool of unit members who will be available to discuss the Cancer Society, its goals and its projects at meetings of area organizations.

The next meeting of the Cancer Society will be at noon Thursday, October 9, at Corky's Restaurant. Among items to be discussed is this year's Bike-a-thon.

Fulton Adopts Budget

Fulton's city council officially adopted a $13,595 budget for 1980-81 following public hearing at Fulton City Hall at 7 p.m. Tuesday, September 9.

Tax rate for the coming fiscal year will be 10 cents per $100 valuation based on 100 percent of property value. This figure will not increase present city taxes.

City officials anticipate $28,200 in revenue during the coming year, which would mean a surplus of $14,675 on September 30, 1981.

No Fulton residents appeared during the public hearing on the proposed budget for the fiscal year that begins on October 1.

In other action during the meeting, Fulton council members approved a letter of appreciation to Dave Smith for donating plastic house numbers to the city of Fulton for use when a numbering system has been devised.

Constitutional Amendments

In-Depth Study -- Part 3

AMENDMENT NO. 3
[House Joint Resolution 98, proposing a constitutional amendment to require a single appraisal and a single board of equalization within each county for ad valorem tax purposes.]

This proposed amendment of Article VIII, Section 18, the constitutional provision that requires equalization of property values for tax purposes, would eliminate the requirement that the county commissioners court sit as a board of equalization. It would also require the legislature to enact a law providing a single entity in each county to appraise property for the taxing purposes of the county and of all cities, school districts, and special districts within the county. That entity could appraise property outside the county when a city, school district, or special district has territory located outside the county or when two or more counties choose to consolidate appraisal services and use only one appraisal office. The amendment would also require a single board of equalization for each county and disqualifying elected officials from serving on the board of equalization.

BACKGROUND

Article VIII, Section 18, of the constitution now requires the county commissioners court to sit as a board of equalization, and under the statutes, they do so for the state and county and for other political subdivisions that tax on the basis of the county tax roll. Another section of the constitution, Article VIII, Section 14, requires the county tax assessor-collector to appraise property for county taxation.

Currently, cities, school districts, and many special districts are permitted to have their own tax offices to appraise property for taxation and many of them do so. Those political subdivisions that do their own appraising also have a separate board of equalization. Thus most properties in the state are appraised at least twice, and some are appraised by as many as five separate offices. When a property is appraised more than once, the owner, if he wants to challenge the values given his property, has to appear before a different board of equalization for each appraisal.

In 1979, the legislature enacted a new Property Tax Code to take effect in 1982 and eliminate most of the duplication of appraisals and board of equalization hearings. It establishes an appraisal district for each county, which will provide for appraisal of property for all political subdivisions and will appoint a single board to hear taxpayer challenges to the appraisals. Because of the constitutional provisions relating to the county tax assessor-collector and to the commissioners court's board-of-equalization duties, counties will not be required to participate. They are authorized to participate voluntarily, and approximately 215 of the 254 counties have already voluntarily joined the appraisal district.

The proposed amendment would require the legislature either to eliminate the exemption counties now have from participating in the appraisal districts in 1982 or to choose some other entity to make the appraisals for all political subdivisions, including the county, within each county.

ARGUMENTS

FOR:

1. Separate appraisal offices and separate boards of equalization for different political subdivisions covering the same territory wastes tax dollars, confuses taxpayers, and obstructs taxpayers' efforts to be treated fairly. Adoption of this constitutional amendment will allow the legislature to complete the job it has already begun of eliminating this wasteful duplication.

2. A board of equalization should be a neutral, fact-finding body, making decisions based solely on evidence presented to it. County commissioners are highly political, as are elected members of governing bodies of other political subdivisions, and are too subject to political pressures to be expected to make impartial decisions. A board of equalization should be composed of citizens who do not run for office and have no political friends to reward or political enemies to punish.

3. Since most counties have already joined the appraisal districts established by recent legislation, this amendment would make little significant change outside those few remaining counties that chose to continue the wasteful, inefficient duplication of appraisals.

AGAINST:

1. Counties now have the option of joining the appraisal district or of having the county tax assessor-collector make the appraisals and the commissioners court equalize them. Most have joined the district voluntarily and the goal of eliminating duplicate appraisals and duplicate equalization hearings has been largely achieved voluntarily. The state should not compel those counties that have not joined because of their particular local problems just on principle when it will have little statewide impact in streamlining tax administration.

2. Currently, county ad valorem taxes are relatively low. They are low because county property values are determined by the county tax assessor-collector, who is elected, and are equalized by the county commissioners court, members of which are also elected. Adoption of this constitutional amendment would eliminate direct control by the electorate of the officials who appraise and equalize, ensuring that county taxes would increase.

3. If this amendment is adopted and county appraisal and equalization functions are transferred to the recently created appraisal districts, rural taxes will increase. County commissioners courts and tax assessors-collectors have been sympathetic to the problems of agricultural Texas, but the appraisal district boards will be dominated by urban cities and school districts and will not understand those problems.

GOVERNOR'S REPORT

by William F. Clements Jr.

A bill to provide for tightly-restricted electronic surveillance—wiretapping—in felony narcotics cases will be a fundamental part of the complete law enforcement package that I will submit to the Legislature next January.

I respect and fully support the right of individual privacy, and the legislation I will offer will protect that basic right of law-abiding citizens.

An effective wiretap law is essential to the success of state and law enforcement officers, however, in detecting, apprehending and prosecuting the criminals who mastermind and finance the narcotics traffic.

Texas, with 644 miles of coastline and 1200 miles of border with Mexico, is a major trans-shipment state in the drug traffic. Drug use in the United States generates $50 billion to $60 billion a year, and drug operations in Texas alone constitute a $3 billion annual business.

Two thirds of the heroin which comes into the United States moves through Texas. Drugs generate a major amount of other crime, and take a terrible toll in human lives. We are long overdue in providing our law enforcement officers with tools to stop this traffic.

The U.S. Supreme Court has upheld constitutionality of the federal wiretap law which was passed by Congress 12 years ago. Twenty-four states and the District of Columbia have adopted wiretap legislation since 1968, and none have repealed them.

I propose a state law patterned after the federal act but with even more stringent limitations. Under my proposal, wiretaps would be permitted only in felony narcotics cases. These safeguards against invasion of privacy would be written into the act.

The Texas Department of Public Safety alone could install, operate and monitor wiretaps.

Only nine judges in Texas—one in each of the nine administrative judicial districts named by the presiding judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals—could authorize the taps on finding they are necessary to get information in cases where there is probable cause to suspect felony narcotics involvement.

Just 30 days of surveillance would be permitted by initial court orders, with additional 30-day extensions possible after judges review progress reports on the taps.

Those whose communications were interrupted would have to be notified within 90 days after surveillance is terminated. Notifications also would be required where a wiretap is denied.

Information obtained from an illegal wiretap would not be admissible in court.

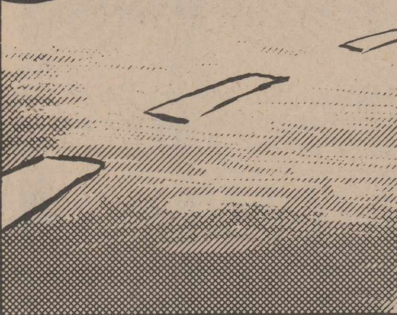

Illegal wiretapping would be punishable by two to 10 years imprisonment and fines up to $5,000. Civil damages could be recovered in event of illegal taps.

I am convinced that this legislation would give law officers an important new weapon which could be used after other investigative techniques have been tried unsuccessfully.

Coastal Bend Council of Governments

In the 10 years between Hurricanes Celia and Allen, there has been radical change in the way the federal government responds to the request of a state for disaster assistance.

After Hurricane Celia, each federal agency which had a disaster function came into the Coastal Bend, set up its own operation, did its own surveying, and had its own system of determining the validity of damage claims.

Two years ago, what is known as Reorganization Plan No. 3 went into effect, and Public Law 93-288 was passed. These federal actions placed the emergency programs of all agencies into the Federal Emergency Management Agency, or FEMA, and gave the President the responsibility of naming one coordinator of the work of all agencies whenever he declares a state of disaster.

That coordinator in the Coastal Bend after Allen was Dale Milford, who was a congressman at the time the law was passed and co-sponsored it.

FEMA operates almost entirely with reservists. Jack Simpson is a reservist who was named disaster assistance center coordinator for the Coastal Bend. Like many of the reservists, he is retired. Before retirement, he was in the marketing department of Mobile Oil Company in New York, even though he is a Texan.

Simpson explains that with the reservist system, FEMA needs only a small number of full-time employees on its payroll. The reservists are trained, and are kept abreast of an overall plan of action which goes into effect when a disaster threatens.

As soon as Allen entered the Gulf, about 150 reservists from New York, Michigan, Arizona, California, Florida—most states—flew into FEMA regional headquarters at Denton.

While the storm was being tracked, the reservists were coordinating with representatives of the State of Texas and with federal agencies which would come under the FEMA umbrella. Furniture and equipment was being loaded onto vans.

When the storm moved inland, the Governor of Texas received requests from cities and counties for assistance. Governor Bill Clements, in turn, requested the declaration of a disaster, and it came from the President. The FEMA team then moved in to set up their centers.

Low interest Small Business Administration loans are available now as they were after Celia to repair homes and businesses, but there is a new Family Grant Program.

SBA loans can only be made to those who have some means of repaying them. For the elderly or others who must make repairs but have no reimbursement, grants up to $5,000 may be made.

On income tax, a feature now is that a refund may be claimed against last year's taxes. This generates immediate cash to make repairs without requiring a loan.

Probably the most noticeable change is in temporary housing. Everybody who was in the Coastal Bend when Celia struck remembers "HUD trailers". The mobile homes came in by the droves. They were everywhere.

Today, the emphasis is on finding available apartments or housing units and placing those whose homes were destroyed in existing housing, rented for them.

The next choice is to place small mobile units on the property with the damaged homes, so that there can be use of any part of the homes which are habitable.

Only as a last resort are expensive trailer parks set up for housing. HUD is no longer involved. FEMA handles housing.

As their individual tasks are done, the reservists leave, some back to ranches, to other jobs, or to their retirement lives. They keep their bags packed. On short notice they can fly into another disaster situation.

Here, they arrived at Corpus Christi International Airport when the electricity was still off and no trace could be found of those ready-packed bags. That's a part of being a part of FEMA.

Dear Sir:

I wish to share with you an experience that happened last Saturday.

We had just arrived in Rockport to visit. After making a phone call, I returned to our motor home to find it would not start.

I asked a local man for a repairman and he recommended "Charlie" at A-1 Auto Parts.

Charlie came to the U-Tote-M store on Highway 35, located my trouble, made necessary repairs and I was on my way. All this was done for a very small fee.

What we need is more people like Charlie.

I just wanted to share this experience with you. Thank you very much, s/Jack Taylor

Editor's note: The Live Oak Philosopher on his grassy ranch has a test for Presidential candidates, he thinks.

Dear editor:

Some of the big cities, like Chicago, New York and numerous others, plus medium sized and even smaller ones, are up in arms because they claim the census figures are inaccurate, that they have a lot more people than the preliminary count shows. Chicago, which shows a drop of nearly 600,000 is especially hopping mad.

I don't understand this. I don't understand why big cities want to get bigger when they can't take care of all the people they've got now. Can't even afford enough police to go around, not to mention fill up the pot holes in the streets or replace the broken windows in the school buildings.

You don't understand, I was told. The more people a city can show, the more Federal money it gets and the more Congressmen it's entitled to. I can understand wanting to get more Federal money but not more Congressmen. That's like filling up pot holes in one street with pavement dug up from a street down the block.

However, if the country can hold on that long, most of our problems are going to be solved as soon as the election is over and the next President, whoever it is, is sworn in. All three candidates have promised to. Mostly they'll do it by re-industrialization.

I'm not sure how re-industrialization is done but I'm in favor of it. In fact, will offer this farm out here as a test plot. You see, I've got this 33-year-old tractor, bought it brand new in 1947. It'll start if you can get somebody to pull you off and runs fine if you can stand the noise, but I suspect Japan is working on something more efficient. If any one of the three candidates can re-industrialize that tractor, it'll be safe to turn the country over to him.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

Senator Orrin H. Hatch (Utah)...I would like to call to the attention of my colleagues an editorial which appeared in "Food Engineering" (Excerpts follow): Two of the most common complaints against sugar—(1) it makes you fat; and (2) it causes tooth decay—are not open and shut cases.

As far as obesity is concerned sugar is a source of calories. Sugar does not contain any more calories than other foods. One gram of sugar accounts for four calories. One gram of protein accounts for four calories, too. And one gram of fat accounts for nine calories. If weight reduction is the goal, the answer is clear. Calories have to be reduced.

So much for sugar and obesity. What about tooth decay?

The Vipeholm study in Sweden shows that two-thirds of a pound of sugar per day could be consumed at meal-times with almost no increase in tooth decay. On the other hand when sugar in much smaller amounts was served between meals, significant tooth decay resulted.

Actually, it is not sugar that decays teeth. The teeth are destroyed by acid which is produced by bacteria which live on the teeth and feed on sugar and starch. The bacteria don't care where the sugar comes from—nature or industry.

Michigan State University is investigating a germ-killing agent, Lauricidin, a fat which is a breakdown product of the triglyceride family. A natural agent, it is found primarily in coconuts, and it is a FDA-approved for-food use.

Also, recent studies indicate that certain foods like peanuts and cheese appear to have the ability to buffer the acids produced on the teeth surface.

CRUMP'S GRASS ROOTS COMMENT

Peanuts and cheese to prevent tooth decay? Isn't science wonderful!

Perhaps in time, science will discover that the onion syrup a mother laded out to her children to help fight a cold will cure the common cold after all.

Life... And Breath

By The American Lung Association Of Texas

INDOOR AIR POLLUTION

By sealing their homes tighter, conservation-minded people are cutting energy demands and costs. And trapping indoor air pollutants.

Insulation and other energy-efficient techniques cut energy use by 20 to 35 percent by preventing outside air from seeping in and inside air from leaking out.

As a result, indoor air pollutants can accumulate to hazardous levels.

In a study of homes in six cities, researchers at the Harvard School of Public Health found that in five cities, indoor levels of smoke and dust particles in the homes were twice as high as those outside.

The Clean Air Act focused solely on the outside air, and most people spend 70 percent of their lives indoors.

What people breathe indoors is critically important, says the American Lung Association of Texas.

Some communities and a few states have passed laws restricting the levels of tobacco smoking allowed indoors.

Although tobacco smoke can be a major source of indoor pollution, there are others. Nitrogen dioxide and carbon monoxide accumulate when gas stoves and heaters are burning.

Formaldehyde, used in foam insulation and in furniture made of plywood, can escape into the air. Radioactive radon from brick, concrete, stone, and soil can pervade a home.

In one experiment, 13 organic chemicals were detected in a room after a scented oven cleaner had been used.

What's to be done? Some experts suggest that gas ovens should be ventilated to the outside, that materials emitting radon and formaldehyde should be painted over with sealants.

Though it would increase energy use somewhat, a daily airing of the house could help—if the outside air is clean.

To find out more about cleaning up the indoor and outside air, contact the American Lung Association of Texas—the Christmas Seal people.

Write ALAT, 7701 N. Lamar, Suite 104, Austin, Texas 78752, or phone (512) 458-2206.

The Lung Association fights air pollution and other lung disease through programs made possible by contributions to this nonprofit, voluntary health agency. It's a matter of life and breath.

Disaster Office Locations Named

The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) has announced disaster office locations and a schedule of circuit rides which will reach business owners affected by Hurricane Allen.

According to disaster officials, SBA offices are open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. six days a week in Corpus Christi at 1316 Leopard Street and in Brownsville at 2100 Boca Chica to accept loan requests from business owners and process applications.

In addition, SBA loan personnel will visit six other towns two days a week for as long as the need exists to provide program information and loan forms to storm-affected businesses.

This includes Aransas Pass where loan officers will be at the VFW Hall each Monday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Business owners may borrow up to $500,000, at interest rates that begin at five percent, to repair or replace damaged real estate, machinery, equipment, inventory and leasehold improvements.

Charitable organizations and private or non-profit institutions are eligible to apply to SBA for loans at 8 1/4 percent interest to cover their damages. Loans for secondary dwellings or vacation homes are also made at 8 1/4 percent interest.

Repayment terms on all disaster loans are based on individual needs and repayment ability. The maximum maturity is 30 years.

Texas Heritage Launch Project

AUSTIN - The Texas Heritage Project, a statewide educational and patriotic program designed to strengthen a spirit of pride in and renewed patriotism for all Texans, was launched during official ceremonies this week at the State Capitol.

This dynamic program is a cooperative endeavor of the Texas Historical Foundation, a nonprofit group formed to preserve, promote and protect the heritage of Texas, and the Texas Historical Commission, the state preservation agency.

Funds were made possible by a grant from the Moody Foundation of Galveston.

Governor William P. Clements Jr. endorsed the Texas Heritage Project, calling it "one of the finest programs to be started in Texas in many years. An emphasis on the rededication and celebration of Texas patriotism is what the people of Texas need to rekindle the unique spirit of Texas. I particularly commend the increased emphasis that is being placed on future observances of Texas patriotic days."

The comprehensive and promotional Texas pride project has as one of its goals the revival of interest in such other Texas patriotic days as Confederate Heroes Day, Cinco de Mayo, Emancipation Day, Texas Pioneer's Day, Stephen F. Austin Day, Texas Independence and Flag Day and Battle of San Jacinto Day.

Another significant contribution of the Texas Heritage Project will be the compiling of business histories and biographical sketches of early Texans to be housed in the State Archives enabling all Texans access to research material.

This goal of the Texas Heritage Project will bring neglected periods of time back into focus and will serve to illustrate the vital role that our free enterprise system, "Texas style," has served in the growth and development of the Southwest.

To accomplish these facets of the Texas Heritage Project will be the achievement of the volunteers in all of the counties of Texas.

In Aransas County, the County Historical Commission Chairman is Mrs. E.J. Johnson.

Electric Rates Climbing Too Fast For Brown

Area rates could increase as much as 600% by 1990, according to State Senatorial District 17 candidate "Buster" Brown. Speaking to area leaders meeting in Lake Jackson at the Brazoria County Cities Association monthly banquet Wednesday, Brown noted that electric rates are climbing faster now than before the state agency which regulates them, the Public Utility Commission (PUC), was established. Now, said Brown, "the utilities would like to have all rate-making authority removed from the cities and centralized at the PUC in Austin."

"Our Texas Public Utility Commission was recently ranked 47th among similar regulatory agencies in other states in terms of effectiveness," according to a study of the Center for Business - Government Studies, Brown told the mayors, councilmen and other municipal officials.

"And yet," said the young conservative, "there was a strong move in the last session of the legislature to take all authority for rate-making away from local communities." Brown noted that his opponent, long-time liberal A.R. Schwartz of Galveston, voted with the utilities to "strengthen" the Public Utility Commission and strip the responsibility for setting electricity rates away from local cities and towns.

Brown, whose far-flung district stretches from the Bolivar Peninsula to Corpus Christi Bay told the officials that hurricane evacuation roadways are inadequate up and down the coast. "We must begin to plan and build highways with emergency evacuation as the top priority."

Brown has pointed out that Highway Construction monies spent throughout his district should be allocated according to priority so that the most crucial evacuation routes would be constructed first.

Buster Brown defeated Primary opponent, former Friendswood Mayor Ed Stuart in the June 7 runoff. Both Stuart and LaMarque physician James A. Parker, defeated on May 3, have endorsed Brown.

Hikers Alerted For Irritating Plants

If you're planning a walk through the woods to enjoy the autumn foliage, here's a reminder from National Wildlife magazine that the familiar three-leafed poison ivy vine isn't the only irritating plant to avoid.

The National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication warns hikers to keep their eyes open for these other plants that cause rashes and skin irritations.

Poison Oak: Similar in appearance and effect to poison ivy, this erect shrub of dry, sandy coastal woods has three leaflets which are distinctively lobed.

Poison Sumac: Still another relative, this large shrub or small tree bears drooping clusters of small ivory-colored fruits and shouldn't be confused with harmless red-fruited sumacs. The poison variety prefers a swampy environment.

Celandine: This plant's deep yellow flowers invite picking, but the bright orange juice that drips from the broken stems can cause an irritating skin inflammation.

Nettle: This plant makes bare-legged hiking an ordeal, for its entire stem and leaves bristle with spiny-tipped hollow hairs which contain a variety of hisamines and other proteins. Brushing against a nettle causes these hairs to penetrate the skin where they break off and release the fluid. Immediately, the affected area stings and itches fiercely.

The sensation lasts only a few minutes, and an application of juice from the jewelweed usually relieves the itching.

"Symptoms of external poisoning vary with a person's sensitivity and with the species of plant," explains National Wildlife. But by recognizing potentially hazardous plants, hikers can avoid unpleasant encounters.

Think Safety...
...Think Christianity

We can't miss them — these signs along the intersections of our streets. They protect our school children from physical harm. We see the sign . . . and slow down.

Most of us are deeply concerned about the safety of our youngsters . . . and these signs can be a reminder of a further obligation our society has to its youth. There are dangers in life for which only religious training and faith can prepare us.

Boys and girls approaching maturity deserve the spiritual protection which Christian education provides.

Whenever you approach a school crossing, slow down! But, just don't think safety — think CHRISTIANITY.

Armando Hinojosa Returns To Rockport

An informal reception on Sunday, September 21, will launch a two-week showing of the works of noted Laredo artist Armando Hinojosa at Rockport's Live Oak State Bank.

The reception, open to the public, will be from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. Sunday. Hinojosa and his family will be on hand to meet those who attend.

The artist's original watercolors and bronzes will be on display during regular banking hours through Friday, October 3.

This will be Hinojosa's second one-man show in Rockport. His first — also at Live Oak State Bank — was in February, 1976.

The Laredo artist has a unique technique in watercolors, producing paintings notable for their dull detail, soft colors and striking composition. His bronzes are produced by the lost wax process and show the same fine detail and composition that mark his paintings.

He has held major exhibits in Houston, Austin, Dallas and Midland and has shown his works in one-man exhibits in Missouri, New Mexico and Washington D.C.

In Mexico, his works have been on display in Mexico City and Monterrey and he has been featured in "Hispanic Who's Who in America."

Hinojosa's works are owned by many local collectors as well as such nationally-known collectors as Richard Nixon, the King Ranch, the Killam Ranch, singer Vicki Carr, former Governor Dolph Briscoe, Allan Shivers, the Crown Prince of Jordan and Lt. Governor Bill Hobby.

Q. My hair is getting thin on top. At age 31 I'm not ready to be bald. My uncle swears that taking inositol helps him prevent hair loss. Could that be correct? If so, where do I get it and how much should I take?

A. Could be true! Nutrition experts feel that inositol is vital for hair growth and can prevent thinning hair and baldness.

Inositol is one of the B-complex vitamins and should not be taken alone, but backed up by the other B's. Also, there are several other of the B vitamins which are helpful in preventing hair loss.

Natural sources of inositol include brewer's yeast (but, of course!), wheat germ, lecithin, unprocessed whole grains (especially oatmeal and corn), nuts, milk, crude unrefined molasses, liver and citrus fruits. Tablet and liquid forms are also available.

Authorities recommend the same amount of inositol as choline, and most feel that we need as much as 1,000 mg. of each daily.

Q. Lately I can hardly see to drive at night. Could this be caused by a vitamin deficiency?

A. Nutritionists feel that a vitamin A deficiency is

Nursing Home News

Things got off to a good start for residents of the Aransas Pass Nursing and Convalescent Center when Alma Starks was given a birthday party on Monday, August 25.

Alma's sister, Opal Smith of Ingleside, gave the party and provided cake, punch and coffee to all who attended.

More "birthday people" were honored Wednesday, August 27, when the Women's Missionary Union of First Baptist Church in Aransas Pass put on their big "Birthday and Bingo Party." All the birthday honorees received a gift.

In between, volunteers Sandra Lee, Delma Rodgers and Koto Cooper were out to visit the residents and on Friday morning, August 29, Lyla and Frankie conducted the painting classes.

On Friday afternoon, residents received 200 red roses presented in memory of the late Ross Durham by Mrs. Durham and her two daughters. Barbara Coulter brought the flowers to the Center for her niece.

Saturday, August 30, was highlighted by a country-western dance with music provided by Mary Frances Fahrenthold and Robert Mize. Ladies from the Altar Society of St. Mary's Star of the Sea Catholic Church of Aransas Pass served cake and punch.

Labor Day, September 1, was a quiet day for residents, but Delma, Sandra and two women from the Presbyterian Church of Rockport visited the Center later in the week and Lyla, Frankie and Lea conducted painting classes again Friday, September 5.

Father James Hamilton came both Saturdays (August 30 and September 6) to give Holy Communion to Catholic residents, and the Rev. Al Bankert led morning worship services on Sunday, August 31, and again September 7.

Elsie Barton visited with residents on Sunday afternoon, September 7, and residents enjoyed their daily reality orientation and exercise classes during the two weeks.

NEWS OF HEALTH

Progress In Mental Health

In 1975, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that mental patients could not be legally confined to an institution unless they were considered dangerous to themselves or other people.

This led to a national policy of deinstitutionalization — releasing patients, theoretically, to after-care and out-patient rehabilitation centers. In practice, studies show, this has been a failure.

One reason: little follow-up is done once the patient has been discharged. Another: many attempts to establish local facilities fail because of public resistance.

Fortunately, however, some nonprofit organizations, relying heavily on contributions and private grants, are doing the job right.

One such institution, experts say, is New York City's Fountain House, run entirely by ex-patients and a small staff. Centers modeled on its system of supportive care now operate in Miami, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia and 38 other cities.

The greater the amount of standing water, especially that deposited in temporary pools and containers, the greater the number of mosquitoes that can be expected.

There are about 2,500 described species of mosquitoes in the world and all have one thing in common; the immature stages require water to live. Mosquitoes can complete their life cycle wherever standing water is available for a week or longer. Old tires, tin cans, birdbaths, roadside ditches, rain gutters, temporary water containers, swampy places and flooded areas all are excellent sites for mosquitoes to breed.

Very little breeding takes place in running streams or lakes. Mosquitoes are the most numerous species of blood-sucking insects that annoy man and other warm blooded animals. Their number is legion and great swarms may be produced even in small quantities of water.

Recent rains have brought a widespread mosquito problem to San Patricio County. There is so much standing water, that it will be difficult for individuals acting alone to completely control the pesky biters. County and city mosquito control units, where present, will be actively working to reduce the problem, but without the help of each individual citizen, their efforts will be hindered.

It is amazing how many species of mosquitoes never move more than a quarter mile from their breeding sites. These are the mosquitoes that individual citizens can have a great impact on.

The first thing to do in this case is to eliminate their breeding sites. Everyone should take every precaution to prevent breeding around their homes by eliminating all standing water.

Empty old tires and place them where they cannot collect additional water. Flatten and discard tin cans, clean out rain gutters, remove temporary water containers and standing water from ditches and swampy areas.

If there is standing water on your property that cannot be drained or eliminated, treatment with a larvicide will be in order. One of the most effective larvicides is No. 2 diesel oil with a biodegradable spreader, applied at a rate of six ounces per 100 square feet of surface area.

Abate, malathion, or Dursban applied to standing water at rates indicated on their labels also are effective larvicides. Labels should be read carefully to determine the hazards these insecticides pose to persons applying them and to fish and animals that may use the water. The key is to follow label directions.

The measures listed so far will tend to reduce the mosquito population, but still their annoyance will usually be bad.

People can protect themselves from mosquitoes by using properly maintained window screening, protective clothing and repellents.

The ordinary window screen with 16x16 or 14x18 meshes to the inch will keep out most mosquito species. Frequently, mosquitoes will rest near doorways and follow people into buildings. For this reason, residual insecticide applications on and around doors give added protection.

Materials such as malathion, Dibrom, methoxychlor or Dursban can be used for this purpose.

Long-sleeved clothing of tightly woven materials offers considerable protection, but it will be hot. This type of protection may be necessary for people who must work in areas where mosquitoes are particularly abundant. Mosquito netting can also be used over beds in rooms where it is impossible to exclude them.

Relief from mosquito attack may be obtained by applying insect repellent to the skin and clothing. Since young children are especially vulnerable to attacks while they play outside, a repellent should be considered.

When applied to the neck, face, hands and arms, liquid repellents will prevent mosquito bites for 1-3 hours or more, depending on the person, species of mosquito, and abundance of mosquitoes. These repellents can also be sprayed on clothes to make them repellent.

Many repellents will damage paint, varnish, plastic, rayon fabrics and other items. Care should be taken not to apply repellents to the eyes, lips or mucous membranes.

Aerosol insecticide dispensers can be used inside buildings to kill adult mosquitoes. Most of these contain pyrethrum or allethrin because of their low human toxicity and quick knock-down ability. Release of the aerosol for a few seconds into the air usually kills most insects in an ordinary-sized room, tent or trailer.

The aerosols are short-lived so frequent applications will be necessary if other mosquitoes move inside. This is where the use of tight fitting screens, doors, etc., will be a big advantage.

The "pest strip" offers effective indoor control for long periods. One pest strip for each average size room is necessary to control mosquitoes. Be sure to read the labels closely on these pest strips for certain restrictions.

Adult mosquitoes outside buildings can best be controlled by space (directed against flying insects) or residual (applied to surfaces) treatments of insecticides. The space treatments, fogs or mists, have very little residual activity and require repeating at frequent intervals.

Space treatments are most effective during the cool hours of night or early morning when the wind velocity is less than five miles per hour. This treatment has been used with success just before evening gatherings outdoors.

Residual treatment with malathion, Dibrom, methoxychlor or Dursban applied as sprays to the resting sites of adult mosquitoes gives lasting control than space treatments. These should be applied to vegetation, eaves of roofs, under porches and similar shaded areas where adult mosquitoes rest by day.

It will help greatly to keep grass and weeds mowed in alleys, vacant lots and yards. You don't have to wait for the city to mow the alley...go ahead and mow the portion behind your own house.

Two items should be immediately apparent from this discussion. First, effective mosquito control is often a time-consuming, difficult task requiring the efforts of individual citizens as well as local governments.

Second, no one control method will result in success, but use of a combination or all methods will be necessary to stop the pesky biters.

Concklin To Set Legislative Goals

C. Lewis Concklin, Republican congressional candidate in the 14th district, has been invited by Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan and vice presidential candidate George Bush to help set legislative goals for 1981.

Concklin said that he will join Reagan, Bush, the entire Republican membership of the House and Senate and fellow GOP candidates from around the country in a meeting in Washington on September 15 to set specific legislative goals for the first year of the Reagan-Bush administration.

Concklin said that the entire Republican team would meet on the steps of the U.S. Capitol and pledge to enact the GOP program into law if elected.

Expected to be included in the pledges are a jobs-creating tax cut and steps to improve America's defenses.

Concklin said voters this year should elect an entire Republican team to run the country.

"Americans are tired of double-digit Democratic leadership," Concklin said. "They have controlled Congress for the past four years. They've struck out. Unemployment is up, inflation has doubled, gas prices have doubled and interest rates have doubled."

Concklin said, "It is time to elect a new team, a team committed to new ideas, and willing to tell the American worker in advance what we will do to solve those problems."

"I want to be a part of that team," he added.

Ehrlich Named Artist Of Month

Jack Ehrlich of Fulton is First National Bank's Artist of the Month for September.

Ehrlich, who has been painting professionally for about three years, says he's "actually" been painting for 21 years — since he was 12.

"I took private lessons for three years when I was 12, 13 and 14," he said. "I suppose my parents thought I had a talent for it . . . and I just kept doing it."

Ehrlich worked primarily in oils until a couple of years ago, he said, then he started in watercolors.

"I started with things I saw around here — I'm evolving now, becoming a lot looser, tending more toward impressionistic rather than realistic these days."

As for his subject matter, it's "whatever strikes my fancy."

The works Ehrlich is exhibiting at the bank are all watercolors, but he still works in oil as well as pen and ink and woodblock prints. "I've really gotten diversified the last few months," he says.

Among the works on exhibit at the bank is one that was selected for the Watercolor Society of Houston's fourth annual juried competition.

Another was entered in the Texas Watercolor Society's 31st annual juried competition and was good enough to gain Ehrlich's entry into that organization.

Ehrlich also has shown his work in the 1979 Art Festival and in Refugio and Corpus Christi shows. His works hang in the Potpourri in Rockport and in Oliver's Gallery in Corpus Christi.

Grants Effective For Local Parks

COLLEGE STATION — Questions that elected officials and private citizens frequently raise include, "Are government programs really effective? Are we really getting our money's worth?"

In regard to local facilities for recreation and parks, it appears that the answer is "yes," according to Pat D. Taylor, recreation and park specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Taylor recently completed a survey of 21 park and recreation directors in Texas whose local jurisdictions qualified for federal matching grants under the Urban

Park and Recreation Recovery Act (UPARR).

A major trend was discovered by the survey concerning the presence of recreation facilities in older, often ethnically-dominated sections of the qualifying communities, he reported.

"In 1978 UPARR was created especially for these areas. In preparing for these grants, local park and recreation professional came to realize that the critical problem of the 1960s and 70s — providing older areas with facilities where there were none — had been virtually eliminated," Taylor said.

Earlier federal programs — including community development block grants,

Land and Water Conservation funds and other open space monies — have helped local governments to provide park and recreation facilities in the older sections of the surveyed Texas cities, he noted.

"Only in small cities, where transportation to park sites is not much of a problem, is one likely to find older neighborhoods with no facilities at all," Taylor said.

"It appears these earlier programs have been successful in providing Texans with ample opportunity to urban recreation and park experiences," the specialist added.

"This does not mean that all cities surveyed have met all local needs of citizens as far as parks and recreation are concerned.

"It means that, from the viewpoint of directors, there are more pressing problems than providing new facilities in older portions of their cities. Older parks, for example, need renovation, and that's what UPARR is designed to do," Taylor said.

Texas cities and counties are presently running into other problems in their newer, fast-growing regions, often made up of middle and upper income families. There are few grant programs designed to help increase park and recreation opportunities in these communities, he continued.

"The general feeling is that these areas can better afford to contribute to their own park development," Taylor added.

Austin At Wharf

TEARS-TEARS FROM LAUGHTER-STILL STREAK my face, even though almost 24 hours have passed. In good company I dined with a group of Canadian journalists.

The wine flowed and the moment became ripe. I asked the question — "What do you think of our present American politics, specifically our Presidential candidates?"

I addressed the question to a young man in his 30s who had migrated from Australia a dozen years earlier. Well he might have taken me to task because of my use of "American". Are not Canadians, as well as we, also Americans? Pausing only briefly, long enough to cock his head to one side, he replied: "You have a choice, don't you, between cancer and tuberculosis?" Delicious. Which is the more dread disease, cancer or tuberculosis?

Should I have asked whether Carter or Reagan is cancer, or the other way around? But no matter, his reply was only a gentle and witty confirmation of what my spies in London, Rome, Hong Kong and elsewhere have been telling me for these many months.

MORE SIGNIFICANTLY, THE WORDS OF THE youthful transplant from "Down Under" brought to focus a theory of my own that is so brilliant, sane, logical and reasonable that I give pause to wonder that some pundit of national renown has not given it voice.

Let us forget Jimmy Carter, let us forget Ronnie Reagan, and instead concentrate upon the Vice Presidential Candidates. The two front runners can easily be dismissed. Except for a handful of ardent partisans, few among us are ardent admirers. Still we shall have to — more or less — put up with one or the other for the next four years!

After that Walter Mondale or George Bush is reasonably certain to inherit the mantle.

CONSIDER MONDALE FIRST. HE IS REASONABLY young and to some degree personable, very much so in fact to anyone with liberal leanings. In another four years he will of course — or rather most probably — be opposed within his own party by Ted Kennedy. Rather a strange juxtaposition.

Loyal and faithful though he is to Carter, Mondale espouses virtually the same social and political concepts as Kennedy. Both are and have been darlings of such leftist groups as the American Civil Liberties Union, the Americans for Democratic Action and others.

High sounding names, but reduced to reality, echoes of Karl Marx. Remember too that he is no neophyte in the ways of the nation's capital. Were the truth to be known, it is a certainty that were it not for Mondale, Jimmy Carter would be in even deeper trouble than he is. Did not Carter arrive on Pennsylvania Avenue thumbing his nose at the Establishment, the Congress and the Senate? On the campaign trail to the Oval Office did he not heap ridicule and contempt upon those august figures?

Remember, those were not post Watergate years, but days. In any event there can be four more years of Jimmy, no more. Then Mondale, and there at least the picture is clear. Mondale is a veteran. One knows where he stands, how he thinks, and to Carter's credit (and even salvation perhaps) he has made his Vice President a man of substance and circumstance.

TURN NOT TO GEORGE BUSH. LIKE MONDALE, although in different ways, he is familiar with the ways of Washington. As a Vice President his is not a position to be envied. I easily see him spending four years undoing Reagan gaffes. This I think, will stand to his advantage in 1980.

A moderate conservative, Bush is in the image of what the present day American wants, or rather I should perhaps say, the lingering image of the national ideal that is the long shadow of Thomas Jefferson.

It is a simple truth that perhaps no man in this century who may potentially assume guardianship of the White House is better equipped to assume the responsibility than Bush. Name one, if you can of higher native intellect, better education, broader political experience. The argument is one that rises above day polemics.

In addition (although I don't count the circumstances as pluses) Bush spent his youth in New England, was a decorated World War hero, and afterwards and since has spent his adult life in Texas where he made his mark in the "real world." Call him a Texas transplant, if you like. To how many of us does this not apply in this increasingly cosmopolitan state?

I write here of course with some measure of prejudice. George and Barbara Bush have been friends of long standing, since 1964 when he lost a race for the U.S. Senate to "Smilin' Raff" Yarborough who went about the country branding him as a "Yankee Carpetbagger." Texas, the gods be praised, has changed since then.

MEANWHILE THE LONG-PREDICTED CAT AND dog fight between Carter and Reagan is at hand. The outcome might be easy to predict if the latter would simply keep his mouth closed.

Carter has all but nothing going for him. Congressmen and Senators whose heads are on the block as they seek re-election do not seek his endorsement, some even shudder at the thought of his visiting their bailiwicks. Even the Demo Majority Leader, Robert Byrd, has no fondness for him.

AND SO, DEAR FRIENDS, EVEN THOUGH IT MAY bring extreme discomfort to all concerned, I seriously suggest that you think not of Carter and Reagan, but instead concentrate upon their "Number Two's."

If people should adopt that line of thinking I believe that the country will be better off and that you the voters will go to the polls in droves, come November. — cmhenkeljr

"However, it is imperative that local and state officials become more creative in working with private developers, homeowners and each other to stimulate park development from sources other than the federal government."

Texas has already taken precedent-setting steps in this area because the last session of the Texas Legislature passed a local grants-in-aid bill for parks and recreation, funded by the state cigarette tax.

The Texas fund will provide $16 million this year for acquisition and development of park areas," said the specialist. "Texans can be pleased that the legislature has recognized that local parks and recreation are primarily the responsibility of local and state governments. The Texas act is the only one of its kind in the nation, in that it has a dedicated source of revenue."

"It illustrates that the state's park and recreation professionals and elected officials are doing their jobs with efficiency and imagination," Taylor emphasized.

IMPORTANT SAFETY WARNING

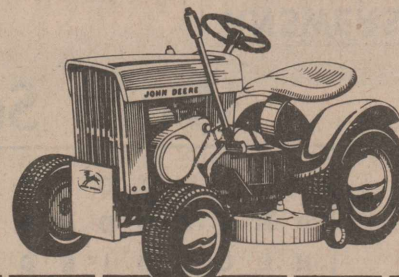

to owners of older John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractors

Maintaining the safety equipment on your older John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractor can be especially important. The original boot (or cover) for the battery's positive post on Model 60, 70, 100, 110, 112, 120 or 140 Tractors manufactured from 1963 through 1974 may have suffered from age or may have been lost or damaged. And if that positive battery post is not properly covered, there is danger of a spark causing a fire and bodily injury if you accidentally touch a metal gas can to the positive battery post when refueling the tractor. A more serious fire can result if you are not using a safety-approved gas can.

If you own one of the above models, John Deere wants to make absolutely certain that your tractor has the battery's positive post properly isolated. To make it easy—and safer—for you, we will send you a new cover, free. Just fill out the coupon provided below and mail it to the address shown. It comes complete with installation instructions and is not difficult to install. But if you prefer, after you have received your kit, make a date with your John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractor dealer and he'll install it for a small service charge.

Remember, safety and maintenance go hand in hand. The operator's manual can help you. Read it again. Keep your tractor as safe as it was when it was delivered.

It could be the most important thing you do today.

PETEY AND HIS PALS by J. MAXWELL

Buttons have been found in the tombs of Egypt and Greece, dating back 2,500 to 4,000 years. It wasn't until the 15th or 16th century, however, that the button-hole was invented.

Wildlife Group Sides With Army Corps To Protect Whoopers'

Two organizations that have often battled each other on environmental issues have joined forces to save the habitat of the endangered whooping crane along the Platte River in Nebraska. The National Wildlife Federation has intervened on the side of its old adversary, the Army Corps of Engineers, in an effort to prevent a proposed dam in Colorado from diverting so much water from a Platte tributary that it would jeopardize the existence of the rare migratory birds.

The Corps was sued last May in federal court in Colorado by the Riverside Irrigation District and Public Service Company of Colorado after Army engineers ruled that the power company was not entitled to a general, condition-free permit to build a dam and reservoir on Wildcat Creek in northeastern Colorado.

The request for the general permit was denied after the Corps was advised by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service that a dam and reservoir on Wildcat Creek — a tributary of the South Platte river — would result in an anticipated depletion of 11,000 acre-feet annually from the South Platte water-flow, and this might "jeopardize the continued existence of the whooping crane" or damage its critical habitat.

Biologists estimate there are only 112 whooping cranes in the world, and of these, about 25 are in captivity.

About 80 of the birds comprising the wild flock stop twice a year at the sandbars and marshes of the Platte River during their 2,500-mile migrations, once as they journey from Texas to Canada in the spring, and again in the fall when they return to Texas.

Because the whoopers are dependent on the availability of food and habitat along their "flyway," a 53-mile stretch of the Platte was designated in 1978 as "critical habitat" under the 1973 Endangered Species Act.

According to Robert Goltjen, attorney for the NWF, water withdrawals from the Platte system already have seriously damaged the whoopers' critical habitat.

"The survival of these magnificent birds is threatened by persistent depletions of water largely due to a series of upstream diversions from the Platte and its tributaries," he said.

This is the second time the NWF has come to the rescue of the endangered whoopers. The first time was back in 1978 when the Federation led four other conservation groups and the state of Nebraska in a lawsuit which charged that diversion of water from the Graylocks Dam on the Laramie River in southeastern Wyoming could adversely affect the whooping cranes' habitat on the Platte.

As a result of the suit, a $7.5 million trust fund was established by six utilities to help protect the birds' habitat, and water use of the Laramie was reduced.

In the case of the proposed Wildcat Creek Dam and Reservoir, the Corps has advised the Riverside power company that it must apply for a "site-specific" permit.

However, the Corps also noted that if the power company was willing to take certain mitigation measures, such as water conservation, to protect the whoopers' habitat 260 miles downstream, it could have a general permit. Riverside, however, rejected these mitigation measures.

Riverside's suit challenges the Corps' right to require a site-specific permit or impose mitigation conditions. The suit also charges that the Corps is "taking" its private property water rights without compensation.

According to Goltjen, Riverside's lawsuit is premature. "The Corps has not actually denied Riverside a permit," he explained. "In fact, no one's saying that the dam and reservoir can't be built. The Corps has advised, and we agree, that if certain protective measures are taken, the project and the whoopers can co-exist."

Fall Archery Hunt Set At Aransas Refuge

AUSTWELL—The annual archery hunt for deer and feral hogs will begin Thursday, September 18, and run through Monday, September 22.

The hunt will begin again Thursday, September 25, and end on Monday September 29.

These are the official dates of the hunts rather than the dates printed in the 1980 Texas Hunting and Sport Fishing Regulations.

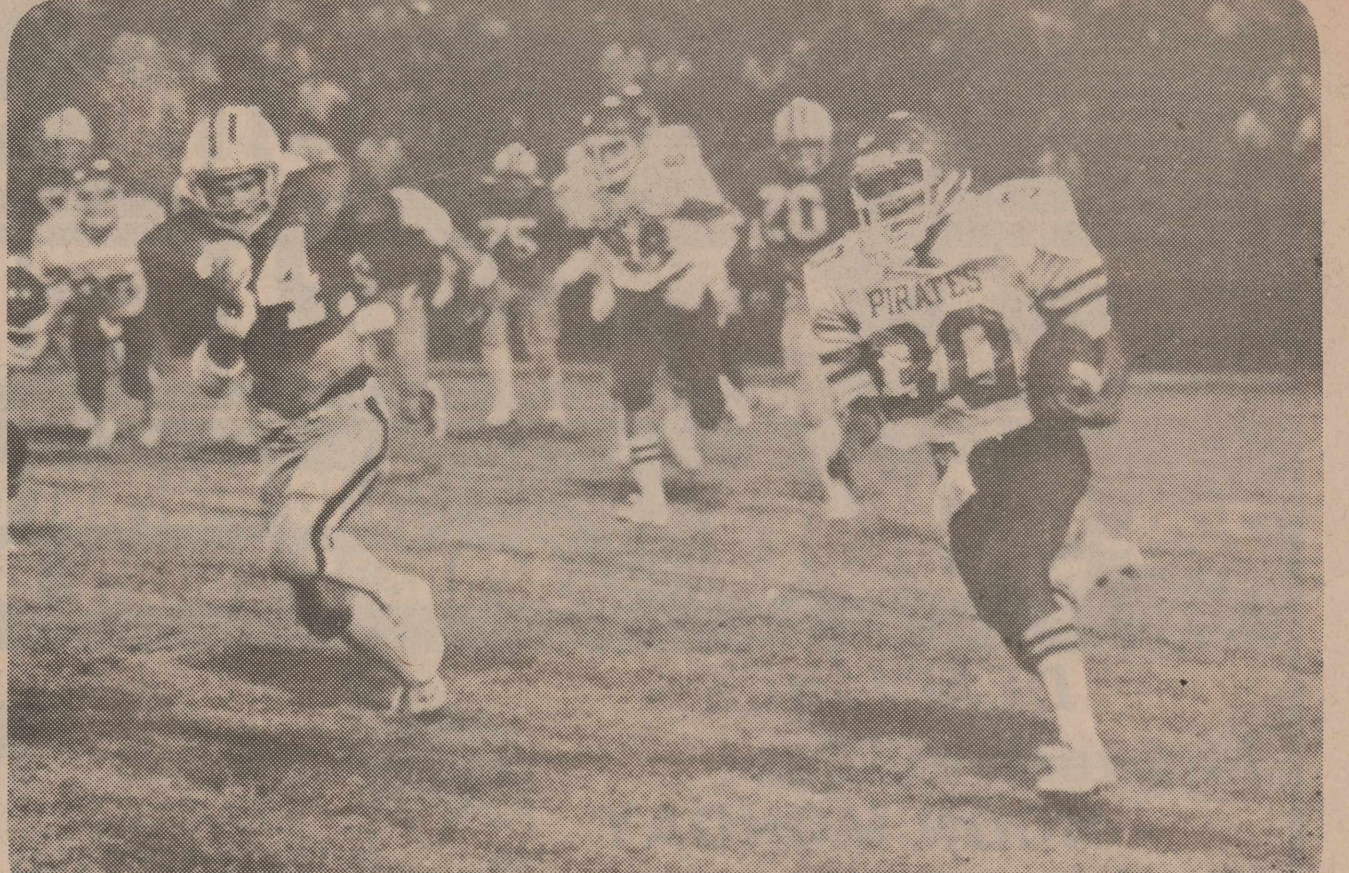

The bag limit will consist of 3 deer, of which no more than two may be bucks. There is no limit on the number of feral hogs that may be taken during the hunt.

Hunters will be admitted to the refuge at noon on the opening day and 5:30 a.m. each day thereafter.

Legal shooting hours are from 30 minutes before sunrise to 30 minutes after sunset.

All hunters are required to be off the refuge by 9 p.m. each day. A valid state of Texas hunting license and current state archery tag will be required.

Tom Brookshier (center) hams it up with McLean Stevenson and Barbara Rhoades.

Tom Brookshier begins his 16th year as an analyst for National Football League broadcasts on CBS-TV, and will cover other events for CBS Sports, including segments presented on 'CBS Sports Spectacular.'

From his retirement as an NFL player following the 1961 season, and until April 1977, Brookshier was a full-time broadcaster with WCAU-TV, the CBS owned television station in Philadelphia, Pa., where he began his broadcasting career while playing with the Philadelphia Eagles in 1958. PUBLIC NOTICE

THE STATE OF TEXAS
TO: Richard Mendiola
Defendant,
Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to appear before the Honorable 36th Judicial District Court of Aransas County at the Court House thereof, in Rockport, Texas, at or before 10 o'clock A.M. of the first Monday next after the expiration of forty-two days from the date of the issuance of this citation, same being the 27th day of October A.D. 1980, then and there to answer Plaintiff's Petition filed in said Court, on the 24th day of July A.D. 1979, in this cause, numbered 6326 on the docket of said court and styled David W. Wells Plaintiff, vs. Richard Mendiola Defendant.

A brief statement of the nature of this suit is as follows, to wit:

PLAINTIFF'S ORIGINAL PETITION TO THE HONORABLE JUDGE OF SAID COURT:
NOW COMES Plaintiff, David W. Wells, and complains of Richard Mendiola, Defendant, and says:

I. Plaintiff and Defendant are residents of Aransas County, Texas, and the automobile collision made the basis of this suit occurred in Aransas County. Personal service of citation may be had on the Defendant at his residence at 4115 S. Fuqua, Rockport, Aransas County, Texas.

II. It has become necessary to bring this suit because of an automobile collision on November 19, 1977 about 100 feet south of the intersection of Pearl and Laurel streets in the City of Rockport, Aransas County, Texas. Defendant was driving a 1976 Jeep Pickup, license plate 1977 Texas MAY 895, when it was in collision with a 1972 Cadillac Coupe de Ville being driven by Stewart M. Wells and owned by Plaintiff. The collision was caused by one or more negligent acts and omissions on the part of the Defendant, and it resulted in property damages to the Plaintiff in the amount of Eighteen Hundred Seventy Three Dollars and Eight Cents ($1,873.08).

III. Because of the property damages received by the Plaintiff, all being the direct and proximate result of the negligence of the Defendant, Plaintiff has suffered damages in an amount exceeding the minimum jurisdictional limits of this Court.

Plaintiff asks that Defendant be duly cited to appear and answer herein, that upon final hearing Plaintiff have judgment against the Defendant for his damages of Eighteen Hundred Seventy Three Dollars and Eight Cents ($1,873.08), plus legal interest, costs of court, and general relief.

Respectfully submitted,
s/David Aken,
Attorney for Plaintiff

says, "There was no beginning, I can't remember ever not being interested in those two things."

"I've had very understanding and supportive parents," he added. "It's been a great luxury to do the things I've done, and I'm aware of that."

In addition, he said, "I've had the advantage of very good teachers all along the line."

He anticipates "at least a three-year stint" at Princeton to get his doctorate, then he hopes to go into teaching. A second choice would be work in a museum.

As for other interests, Bobby says, "I'm sort of 'browsing through' the humanities. And I play the piano." While in New York, he added, he got interested in "going to" — emphasizing the words — ballet. When he's at home in Rockport — he enjoys birdwatching.

And he's a Charles Dickens fan. "He seems to have an inexhaustible range of sympathy, of humor, imagination. I try to read 'David Copperfield' at least once a year. It's my favorite book. At heart I'm an Anglophile."

So what got him into Chinese art?

"The Chinese say that painting reveals the character of the man who painted it. Especially in the period I'm interested in (8th-17th centuries) there seems to me to be a directness, a direct access to the mind and personality of the man on the end of the brush."

And besides, he added, "I just like looking at it."

SEWER

plant would serve the entire area.

Mrs. Wagley said, "I would think that two or three (plants) would be better than one system."

Commissioner Owens agreed, saying that "unless it is economically unfeasible, I would like to see it (the sewage collection system) diversified."

Another county resident commented that "it comes down to which (system) will give the best service for the least amount of money."

Money was a primary topic at the meeting, with the 25 to 30 county residents expressing concern over how the proposed sanitary sewer system will be funded and who will have to pay for it.

Residents in the northern area of the county, north of the Causeway, were concerned that they would have to help pay for a system that will not benefit them.

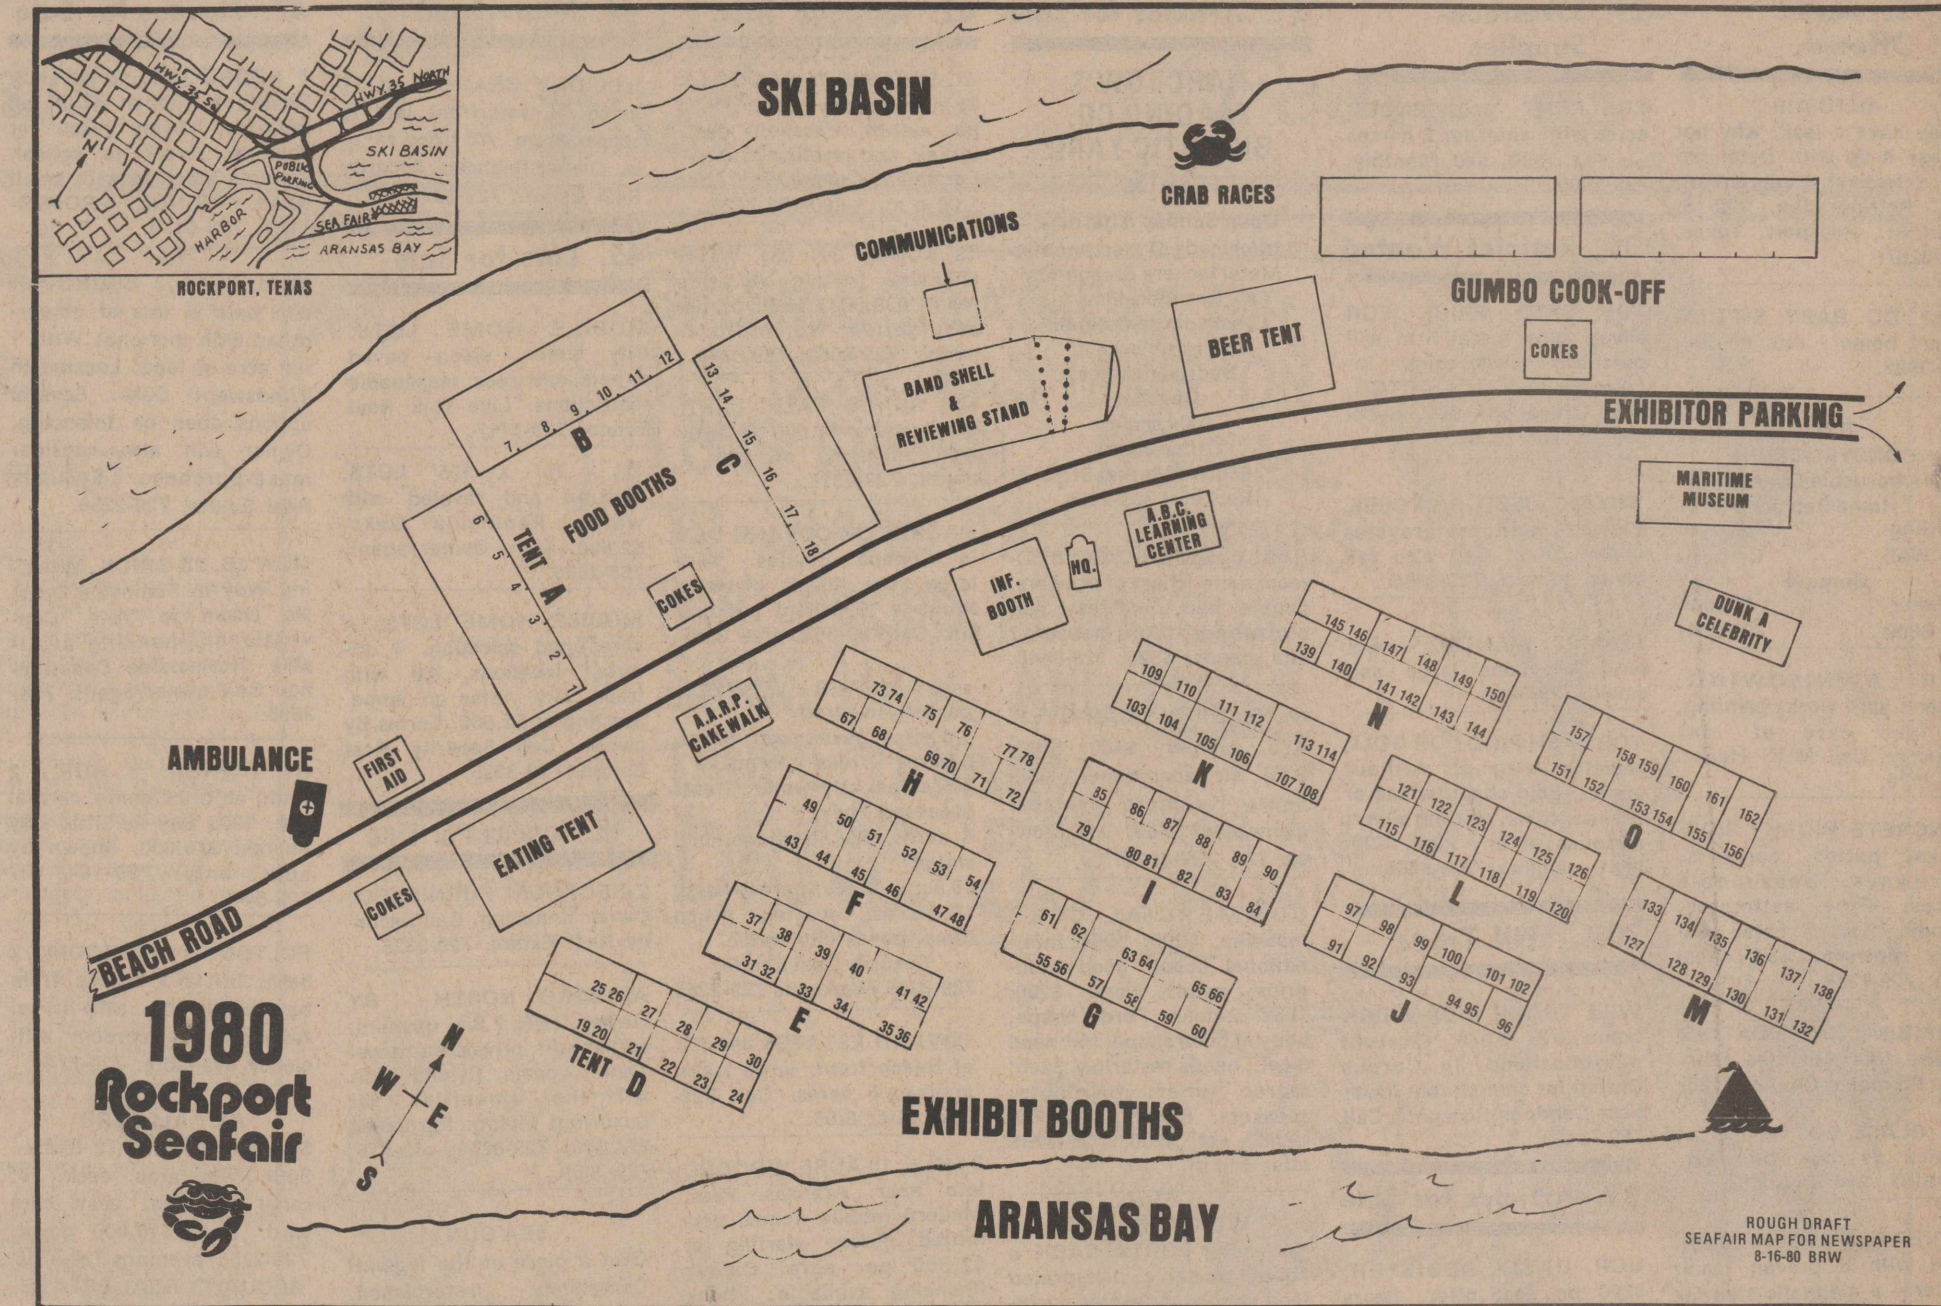

The sanitary sewer system is being planned by the Aransas County Conservation and Reclamation District which proposed to apply for a federal grant to help pay for construction of the system.

If a grant is obtained, the federal government would pay for 75 percent of construction costs with the county paying the remaining 25 percent.

It is anticipated that the county would pay its share of the cost through bond sales.

R.M. Winkelman asked if the county could sell bonds to a portion of the county and exclude other areas. Commissioner Owens said this could be done "but you would have to go through the proper legal procedures."
