Johnson takes teen AIDS message to Bush

President heads to New Hampshire

By Matthew C. Quinn

ELECTION '92

WASHINGTON — When President Bush won the presidency on Nov. 8, 1988, he declared in his acceptance speech in Houston: "Thank you, New Hampshire," a tribute to Republicans there who had voted for him in the New Hampshire primary nine months earlier.

Bush returns to the state today for a 12-hour campaign blitz as an incumbent president facing a spirited challenge from conservative columnist Pat Buchanan. In the first of three planned visits, Bush will again ask the people of New Hampshire for help.

WASHINGTON — Earvin "Magic" Johnson, taking his seat Tuesday as the newest member of the National Commission on AIDS, said he wanted to learn how to help prevent the disease in a hard-to-reach group: teen-agers.

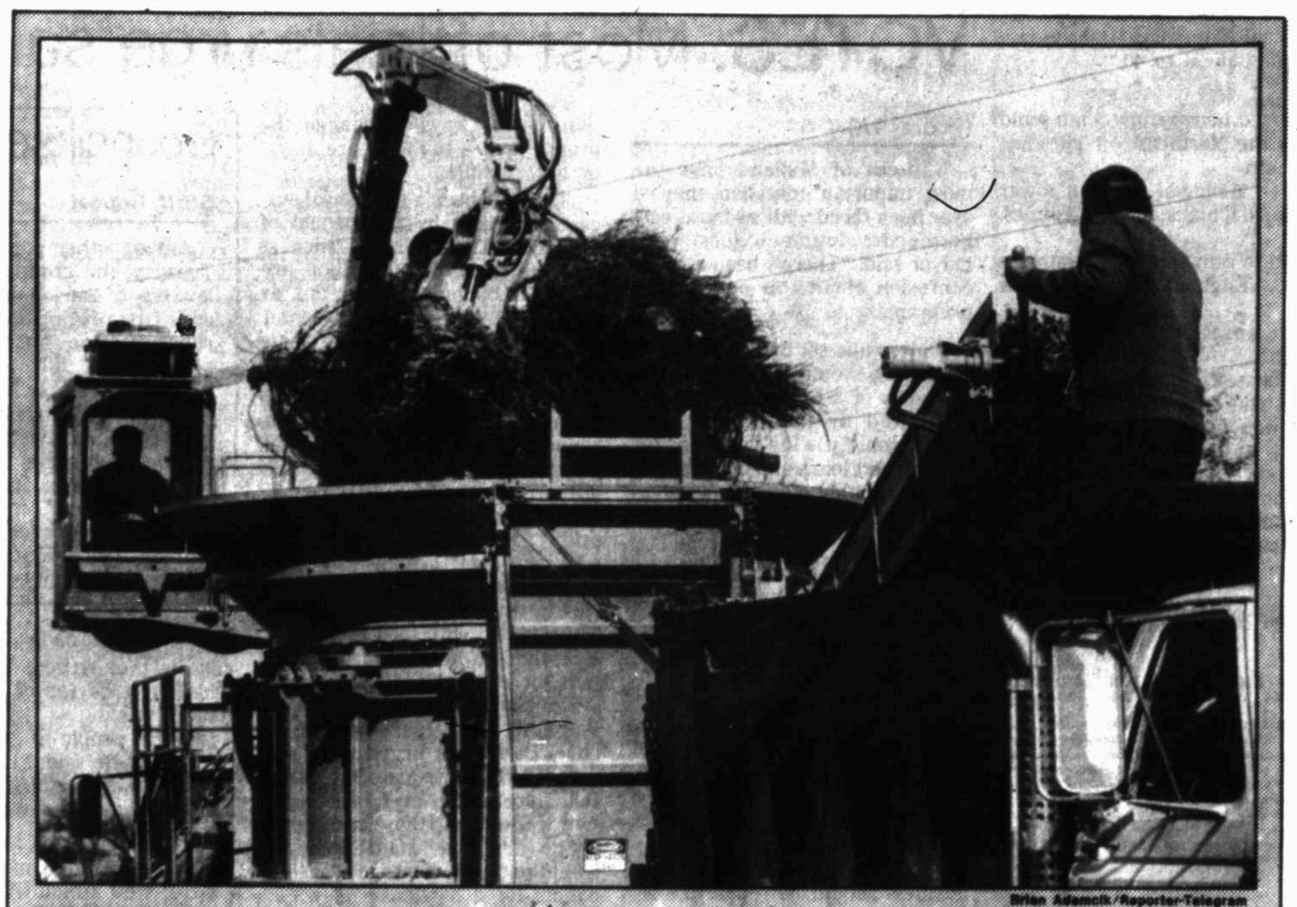

But by the end of the public hearing on the future of AIDS, the former L.A. Lakers star who is infected with the AIDS virus was the one to offer prevention advice.

"You gotta learn how to talk hip and reach them at their level, not your level," he told health officials, commission members and a standing-room-only audience.

"We can't come at them with stats (or) with Ph.D.s, instead of at their level and what they can understand," he said.

President Bush, who appointed Johnson to the panel, met with him in the Oval Office Tuesday afternoon. Before the session, Bush credited the basketball

At-large City Council member John Castro announced his resignation Tuesday.

Castro said he will resign effective Jan. 24 because of a transfer with his job. He anticipates a permanent transfer to El Paso with Southwestern Bell by March 20.

He now is "on loan" to that city's office during a restructuring, but had said earlier he wanted to stay in Midland if at all possible.

A majority of Midland City Council members Tuesday publicly urged voters to accept a ¼-percent economic development sales-tax increase at the polls Saturday.

Before its regular meeting Tuesday, the council conducted a press conference to let members air their views on the issue. Although most members urged a "yes" vote, all said they hoped voters would turn out in record numbers to voice their opinions.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday in all city precincts, and only city residents may vote.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said he called the news conference after "misinformation" about the issue continued to be spread throughout the community.

Officials sift area sheriff's drug seizures

Associated Press

MARFA — Federal, state and local officials were behind closed doors Tuesday taking inventory of drugs, weapons and other evidence seized by a West Texas sheriff now facing drug charges.

Officials refused to comment or allow reporters into a room where the inventory was taking place, but several bulging plastic garbage bags were seen stacked on the floor.

Presidio County Judge Monroe Elms said the bags contained marijuana. Interim Sheriff Abe Gonzalez said there also was some cocaine among the evidence.

There also were weapons among the evidence, authorities said.

The inventory is one of a series of events that have occurred since officers seized more than 2,400 pounds from a horse trailer parked at the Presidio County fairgrounds Dec. 4.

Suspended Presidio County Sheriff Rick Thompson and Alpine resident Glyn Robert Chambers were indicted last week on drug charges in connection with the cocaine.

In a hearing Monday, a federal magistrate refused bond for Thompson. The sheriff and Chambers are scheduled to go to trial Feb. 18.

"When we asked (Chief Deputy Sheriff Steve) Bailey to show us an evidence log, he didn't have one," Elms said.

Police charge parolee with 2 of 19 slayings

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A county worker paroled after nearly 10 years in prison for the beating death of his infant daughter was charged Tuesday with two of 19 slayings police believe were committed by a serial killer or killers.

William Lester Suff, 41, was under investigation in the other 17 killings, said Lt. Al Hearn, supervisor of a task force on the case.

"We're confident on the two and we don't know what it's going to lead to on the other ones. Whether he's a serial killer that's responsible for all 19 or not, I don't know," Hearn said.

Suff was ordered held without bail during a court appearance Tuesday via a

War's 'high' gives way to recession woes

Stocks hit high

NEW YORK — The stock market resumed its record-setting pace Tuesday as the Dow Jones industrial average jumped more than 60 points to a new all-time high. Expectations of further declines in interest rates reignited a rally that began just before Christmas when the Federal Reserve slashed a key lending rate. The 60.60-point advance in the Dow average to 3,246.20 snapped a two-day losing streak for Wall Street's best-known barometer. The new mark shattered the previous closing record of 3,209.53 set Thursday. Many brokers attributed the enthusiasm for stocks to growing expectations that interest rates will have to drop even more to stimulate the anemic economy, which by some reckonings is now in its 18th month of recession.

Iraq confesses

UNITED NATIONS — In a new revelation about President Saddam Hussein's nuclear weapons program, Iraq has admitted buying large quantities of German components for a previously unknown uranium enrichment complex that could have produced enough nuclear explosive for four or five nuclear weapons a year. The admission was made in Baghdad Monday to a team of United Nations nuclear inspectors assembled by the International Atomic Energy Agency, based in Vienna. The inspectors had flown to Baghdad Saturday after learning that German companies had sold Saddam some of the parts needed to build up to 10,000 uranium gas centrifuge enrichment plants and after receiving a tip-off about where these parts might be concealed. /4A

Wilson was charged with conspiring to steer housing grants to projects being developed by co-defendant Leonard E. Briscoe. WEATHER SUMMARY

Expect cloudy skies, mid-30s

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-30s and north to northwest wind at 20 to 30 mph and gusty. Tonight should be fair with a low in the lower teens, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be sunny with a high in the upper 40s.

After an overnight low of 24, Tuesday's high reached 52 compared with the record high for that date of 79 set in 1953. The record low for that date is 6 set in 1972.

STATE

It was sunny and seasonably cool across Texas on Tuesday as a howling blue norther prepared to invade the state from the northern plains.

Winds were 5 to 15 miles an hour from the northwest, not as blustery as Monday when snow flurries dusted North Texas. West Texas had southerly breezes.

Skies were mostly clear over the rest of the state. A few high thin clouds streamed over South Texas.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from 36 in Childress to the upper 50s over the south.

The forecast for North Texas was for much colder conditions today with a chance for light snow. Little or no accumulation expected. Decreasing cloudiness and very cold tonight and Thursday. Highs today 36 to 44. Lows tonight 15 to 22. Highs Thursday 35 to 40.

NATION

A storm rolling up the Ohio Valley produced heavy snow, high wind and thunderstorms from the Midwest into the Northeast on Tuesday, and cold air was headed for the deep South.

At midday, snow was falling over upper Michigan, eastern lower Michigan, the Ohio Valley, the southern Appalachians and the Tennessee Valley.

Snow over the upper Ohio Valley changed to rain and thunderstorms across the northern Appalachians and New England. Snow fell over northern Maine.

Detroit got 9 inches of snow, its heaviest since 1982, closing Detroit City Airport and snarling rush hour traffic.

About 9 inches of snow fell in Ohio, and parts of Indiana got 6 inches.

Thunderstorms developed over parts of the central Atlantic Coast states during the morning, and a tornado touched down near Harrisburg, Pa., damaging trees and a barn, the National Weather Service said.

Hail nearly 3 inches in diameter fell near Altoona, Pa., the weather service said. Newark, N.J., got its first January hail on record.

Wind from thunderstorms gusted to 87 mph at Gettysburg, Pa., and 74 at Unionville, Pa.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BUSH: President heads for 12-hour campaign blitz

(From 1A)

Robert Dole of Kansas four years ago salvaged the then-vice president's faltering presidential campaign following a humiliating third-place showing in Iowa's presidential caucuses, where he placed behind Dole and television evangelist Pat Robertson. Had Dole prevailed in New Hampshire, Bush's presidential prospects would have appeared bleak indeed.

Instead, Bush's victory there all but locked up the Republican nomination for him.

Eight years earlier, Bush's 1980 campaign against Ronald Reagan for the GOP nomination was all over when Reagan defeated Bush, 50 percent to 23 percent, in what Bush would later call "the debacle of New Hampshire."

It's highly unlikely that Buchanan would defeat Bush next month or derail his march to renomination at the GOP convention in Houston this August. But a strong showing by Buchanan could at least embarrass the president.

Much has changed in New Hampshire since Bush's victory there in February 1988.

During his first term, the recession has hit the New England state of 1.1 million people like a battering ram. Unemployment has almost tripled, to 7 percent, and 50,000 jobs have been lost. Foreclosures of homes and businesses have skyrocketed and bank failures have mounted.

The closure of the Strategic Air Command's Pease Air Force Base, in coastal Portsmouth, N.H., by the Bush administration last year was responsible for the loss of more than 4,000 jobs alone.

Gov. Judd Gregg, Bush's state chairman, said last week, "I doubt that you could write a scenario more damaging to the president."

jailhouse videocamera. As an arraignment began on a Texas parole violation, the paperwork on two murder charges was handed to Municipal Judge Dennis McConoghy.

Suff was charged with the deaths of Catherine McDonald, 31, of Riverside, whose body was found Sept. 13, and Elenor Ojeda Casares, 39, of Riverside, whose body was found Dec. 23.

Miss Casares was the 19th victim of a serial killer or killers stalking female prostitutes and drug users in Riverside County since 1986, authorities said.

Evidence collected at Suff's home and in his van link him to the McDonald and Casares slayings, Heard said. He didn't elaborate.

Suff didn't enter a plea and agreed to have his arraignment postponed to Feb. 4.

His attorney, public defender Floyd Zagorsky, wouldn't discuss the case other than to say, "It's been a very trying matter."

Suff was arrested Thursday in Riverside after his van stopped next to a suspected prostitute and made an illegal U-turn, Hearn said. The officer found a problem with Suff's vehicle registration and noticed his driver's license had expired, Hearn said. Suff was arrested and the van was impounded.

The serial slayings task force was notified, but Hearn wouldn't say why.

CASTRO: Mayor pro tem resigns from council

some offers made, but they just weren't there."

Castro said he then made a "very difficult decision" to leave.

"For the benefit of the city and the taxpayers, I decided to do this," he said. "I just don't think it would be fair otherwise.

"This is very dear to my heart," he said.

Other council members, meanwhile, are sifting a list of candidates to replace Castro for the next year and a half, when the position is up for re-election.

Castro, who abstained from joining the council's support of the ¼-cent economic development sales tax, said he couldn't express a fair opinion with his resignation pending.

"But I will say I think this is something the city needs to take a close look at," he said. "I went out to El Paso, and its situation is unbelievable. We can't keep up with the growth."

But the council member said he's not likely to seek a council seat in his new home city. In El Paso, the job is a full-time, paid position.

"But I've checked into some other things, some other ways I can be involved," Castro said. "I'm sure I'll do that."

An active supporter of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Castro said that and his other civic involvements would be difficult to leave behind.

"I've been here nine years," he said. "That's time enough to set some roots, have some friendships. That's the toughest part of leaving. I feel like I've let them down in a way, but that's the way business is at this point."

His wife, a teacher at Travis Elementary, will remain in Midland with their two sons through the end of the school year before joining him in El Paso, Bastro said.

The company-wide restructuring plan at Southwestern Bell eliminated 16 managerial positions in Midland. Castro's office was closed as part of the plan.

VOTES: Most officials urge sales-tax passage

(From 1A)

"Citizens of Midland have the most important decision they've ever been faced with, as far as economic development goes," the mayor said. "There's been a lot of confusion about this outstanding program."

Under rules set by state law, the tax money would be used to fund the work of a five-member board appointed by the council. The group would use the tax funds for low-interest loans and other incentives to existing industry as well as the recruitment of new industry to the community.

Thomas said he encourages citizens to decide "on the merits of the issue." Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse, an anti-tax organization, has urged citizens to vote against the proposition.

Edna Walger, founding member of that group, said Tuesday that members stand by their opposition. Economic development should not be funded by a tax, she said.

"That's been our position, that business should be reponsible for the development of business," Walger said.

Thomas said the conflict between positions on the issue has generated a number of suggestions about ways to change the proposition — but most are illegal or not possible.

"There've been a number of suggestions made by the people of Midland," Thomas said, "such as that we take the $2 million (expected to be generated by the tax increase) from the general fund. But we can't legally spend more than 1 percent of the general fund on economic development."

The city of Midland each year spends about 1 percent of its general fund budget on economic development through contracting with local organizations, Thomas said.

"I just want to stress how absolutely vital this is to the community," he said of the tax proposal. Thomas said with today's competition, there is no other feasible option for economic development.

Similarly, council members J.D. Faircloth, Tom Johnston and Michael DeVaughn urged voter support of the measure. But James Devenport, District 1 representative whose campaign centered on a "no new tax" stance, said he would not urge voters to cast their ballots for a particular view.

"Personally, I'm for it. I will encourage my friends and neighbors to vote for it," Devenport said. "But I'm not taking a position as a member of the City Council."

Devenport said his main concern is that citizens cast a vote, whether it be for or against the issue.

"I want people to get out there and vote," he said. "If they don't like what we're doing, they need to tell us. Not voting implies consent."

At-large Council member John Castro, who announced his resignation Tuesday, abstained from expressing an opinion about the issue because of his plans to leave. He will be transferred to El Paso permanently in March with his job at Southwestern Bell, and will resign from the council effective Jan. 24.

DeVaughn, who represents District 2, said he had urged those voters and the minority community in general to accept the plan because it offered the chance for job training programs and job opportunities.

In addition, District 2 will have transportation and child-care programs available Saturday for voters. For information on those programs, city residents should call 682-0010.

Council settles employee lawsuit

Staff Report

Among other council action Tuesday, the group settled the lawsuit of an employee and gave first-reading approval to a rehabilitation hospital's site plan.

Orlando Temple, an employee of the city's traffic department, will receive $20,000 and payment of some unspecified medical costs, said Kevin Laughlin, interim city attorney. Temple sued the city over a worker's compensation claim in which he and city staffers disputed the amount he was to receive.

The Rehabilitation Hospital of Midland/Odessa's site plan was approved on first reading Tuesday, paving the way for that facility's construction at Loop 250 and State Highway 191 in west Midland.

After another approval, set for consideration Jan. 28, officials of the company will have a "green light" to proceed with construction of the $13 million, 60-bed facility early next month.

The inventory began Saturday night after Judge Gonzalez signed an order suspending Thompson from office and appointing Abe Gonzalez sheriff. Bailey also was fired Saturday. "All we're doing is finding out what's part of active cases and what isn't," said Cole Fukes, assistant district attorney for the 83rd district.

Elms said some of the bags and other evidence had tags with dates as far back as 1982 and containing information about its seizure. But he said other evidence was not tagged.

DEA Agent Robert Muller said the federal agency expects more indictments in the case within about 60 days.

PAINTER: Sheriff responds to Thompson indictment

(From 1A)

Painter's previous lawyer, Hal Upchurch, the 46-year-old former district attorney and prosecutor for Ward, Reeves and Loving counties, resigned from the case because of a "conflict" raised by the Midland County Commissioners' Court. The Commissioners' Court alleges that Painter improperly paid Upchurch more than $84,000, apparently in sting-related operations.

And Upchurch, who practices law in Monahans, is under investigation by a Ward County grand jury for allegedly misapplying seized drug money while he was district attorney.

Meanwhile, Painter, 44, who has won both notoriety and recognition for his out-of-county reverse drug-sting operations, and Clayton McKinney, the sheriff's 51-year-old deputy captain who engineered the operations to catch drug traffickers and to seize drug funds and narcotics, are to give depositions in the lawsuit in Midland later this month.

Painter in an interview Tuesday also said the Commissioners' Court is making a concerted effort to get him voted out of office by encouraging opposition in the March 10 Republican Party primary election.

"I know there was some effort made to find opponents, and they've been found," Painter said. "All I can do now is to stand up for what I think is right. That's the reason we are going to court."

Painter has three opponents in the GOP primary. They are:

- Wayne Gideon, 57, retired Midland police chief.
- Reuben Richardson, 58, a Midland County Attorney investigator who, Painter said, is the choice candidate of ex-Sheriff Dallas Smith, and some members of the Commissioners' Court.
- Melvin McEwen, 58, an oilfield equipment broker.

Painter, a former deputy sheriff under Smith, defeated Smith in the hotly contested Republican Party primary election in 1984 and went on to win the sheriff's race by defeating Democrat Joe Carr, now a deputy sheriff. Smith was a write-in candidate in that general election.

Painter is contesting the validity of the Aug. 12 Commissioners' Court order that seeks to curtail his investigations outside of Midland County and to put budgetary restraints on his operations.

To compound the case, County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer and commissioners Durward Wright, Guy McCrary, Louisa Valencia and Win Brown on Dec. 17 filed a 29-page counterclaim prepared by their attorney, Vann Culp, the 62-year-old retired judge of the 238th Texas State District Court for Midland County.

The counterclaim alleges that Painter and certain of his deputies joined in "clandestine joint ventures" with out-of-county and out-of-state persons "in the business of seizures and forfeitures of money and property under the color of law."

The process, termed "entrepreneurial law enforcement," has enriched the "sheriff's narcotic account" by more than a $1 million since 1985 and has netted the county more than $350,000 in fines.

The Commissioners' Court alleges that the sheriff violated Texas law and the Constitution in the conduct of phases of the out-of-county dealings, including the handling of funds and contraband.

The Commissioners' Court maintains the seized money properly belongs to the county's General Fund, which the Commissioners' Court controls, and should not be controlled by the sheriff, who cited Texas law to indicate that the seized funds and contraband are under his control for law-enforcement use.

The Aug. 20 lawsuit petition, prepared by Upchurch, says that "under Painter's leadership," the Sheriff's Office "gained a state and national reputation as a leader in the fight against illegal narcotics."

In preparing the case for trial, Culp is scheduled to take Painter's deposition on Jan. 28.

McKinney's deposition is to be taken on Jan. 23.

Other deputy sheriffs subpoenaed for depositions include Jerry Cowan, Paul Hallmark, Lt. Joe Carr, Scott McKnight, Rory McKinney and Butch Brazell.

Painter, during Tuesday's interview, also mentioned rumors surrounding the indictment of his friend and former boss, Rick Thompson, the 45-year-old suspended Presidio County sheriff who is jailed in Pecos under federal indictment for smuggling and possessing 2,421 pounds of cocaine valued at $1 billion.

In the 1970s, Painter was Thompson's chief deputy at Marfa.

"Rumors and back-room talk are going to create a lot of havoc during this election," said Painter, who alluded to rumors that some of his deputies might be indicted on federal charges related to the Thompson indictment.

Painter, however, scoffed at that notice. "They are lies," he said.

Painter said that Thomas Beery, assistant U.S. attorney, who is conducting the Pecos grand jury investigations, told him that "nobody in the (Midland County) Sheriff's Department is under investigation. Nobody in the Sheriff's Department is going to be indicted."

"I think this election is going to get dirty," Painter said. "The rumors right now are flying. There are people that are intentionally stirring things up and going to the media. We know this. And we anticipated this."

WOES: Exhilaration of war victory gives way to domestic worries lies set about rooting Saddam Hussein's military machine from oil-rich Kuwait.

Missiles launched from radar-evading fighter planes smashed through the front doors of Iraqi military installations. Yellow ribbons, symbols of hope and concern, multiplied on the home-front. Scud missiles were lobbed toward Tel Aviv, Israel, and Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. The Patriot missile became the subject of dinner-table talk.

Less than a month and a half after the war began, ragged Iraqi soldiers, remnants of the fourth-largest army in the world, would surrender to U.S. television crews and kiss their hands. Euphoric Kuwaitis would wave American flags. The armies of a humiliated but not vanquished dictator would retreat under cover of a cease-fire. A new hero, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, would brief the world on the tactics of success — 39 days of pounding from the air, 100 hours of destruction on the ground, the details of Gen. Colin Powell's plan that "first we're going to cut it off, and then we're going to kill it."

By August, the victory parades would pass. Nearly all of the 541,000 U.S. troops in the region at the war's outset would come home — all but the 16,000 still aboard ships in the Persian Gulf and the 8,000 ground troops who, according to a Pentagon spokesman, still have 111,000 tons of ammunition left to load and freight home.

In retrospect, some of the returning soldiers said, it was almost too easy.

"We expected it would take a couple of months; it took 100 hours," said 1st Lt. Patrick Nugent, 26, an artillery officer for the 1st Cavalry who was on the front lines in Iraq and who returned to Fort Hood in Killeen. "These people threw down their arms and ran."

It may have been a rout, but the victory brought a spontaneous outburst of relief, joy and pride — in the nation, its resolve and its leadership.

Days after the Feb. 27 truce, Randolph Campbell, a history professor at the University of North Texas, observed: "We're feeling pretty good about ourselves. You hear people suggesting this is the beginning of another American century. People are saying good things will happen at home with a return of confidence in our economy. . . . You can't say these things aren't going to happen. Right now, it's hard to argue with success."

The good feeling didn't last long.

"We're unhappy now because the war, the end of the Vietnam syndrome, the pride, those things don't give us jobs or put food on the table," Campbell said earlier this month. "Foreign events, especially the disintegration of the Soviet Union, have required a reorientation of the economy away from the military, and obviously we're struggling in this area because of it."

Campbell said he isn't surprised at the plunge in President Bush's public approval ratings from their stratospheric 85-90 percent wartime levels to, as the Harris poll now reports, 47 percent. After all, Winston Churchill, who led Britain through World War II, lost his first postwar election, largely on account of domestic economic problems, Campbell observed.

While he doubts that Bush's political problems are quite that deep, Campbell said Americans clearly want their president to focus on the recession.

"I don't give a damn about Saddam Hussein," said Earl Jenkins, 43, an unemployed carpenter found in the queues last week at the Texas Employment Commission's office in downtown Fort Worth. "I'd put him up in my house if he'd give me some work."

For the returned troops, the sense of economic uncertainty is just as pronounced as it is for the rest of America. The gulf war was a temporary distraction from the post-Cold War military reductions that are amounting to the largest personnel cut since the Vietnam War.

Under defense cuts ordered in 1990, about a fourth of the 2 million U.S. troops will be cut by 1995. This year, the cuts begin in earnest — by October the Army plans a reduction of 70,000.

For thousands of those men and women, it will mean jumping into the same economy the rest of the nation is grousing about.

"As we come up on the anniversary, there is something that has suspended our focus on the war," said Col. Don Breland, a chaplain at Fort Hood, the largest Army base in Texas. "That is the downsizing of the Army, which kicks off this month.

"A lot of people will be transitioned out of the military and back into the work force, where there is already high unemployment. "They can see the clouds of doom focusing on the horizon above them."

For Randy Crites, 39, a General Dynamics industrial photographer and a Marine Corps reservist, the war and its aftermath have been filled with frustration.

Crites, a reserve gunnery sergeant and a Vietnam veteran, spent the five months after he was called up last January at a Marine Corps air station in Yuma, Ariz., where he yearned to get into the action.

When he returned home, he was buoyed by a veterans parade in downtown Fort Worth in July. Still, the Fort Worth to which Crites returned seemed as though it had suffered its own attack. General Dynamics laid off thousands of workers, the closure of Carswell Air Force Base was cinched, and now Crites worries that a major cut in the F-16 program would deposit him in the unemployment line.

"People forget," Crites said. "The good things come and go."

The gains made in the war may be overshadowed by economic reality but they are real nonetheless, foreign policy experts say.

MAGIC: Former star asks Bush to show leadership

hero for "already having an effect on lifestyle and on this whole question of compassion and understanding for people who are afflicted" by the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS.

Since Johnson announced on Nov. 7 that he was HIV positive, AIDS testing centers and information hotlines have been flooded with queries about the deadly disease. Johnson has stressed abstinence as the safest method of prevention, but urged those who do have sex to use a latex condom.

After the meeting with Bush, Johnson echoed the commission's call for the president to show more leadership on the issue.

"Everybody wants him to speak out more, and he needs to," Johnson told reporters. "He's the most powerful man in the world. If he speaks out . . . then people will listen."

Johnson's down-home remarks before the commission on Tuesday followed a morning of dire predictions from federal and local health officials about the potential for the virus to spread among adolescents if effective prevention measures are not put in place.

"Kids don't take AIDS seriously," said Dr. James Curran, who heads CDC's AIDS division. "One thing they do is have sex. They have sex, they have sex, they have sex, they have sex."

Curran's emphasis was directed at federal officials who endorse abstinence as the means to prevent the spread of HIV among teens and oppose condom distribution programs and frank talk about sex.

Although the case numbers of acquired immune deficiency syndrome among teens are relatively low, health officials fear widespread and often unprotected sex among teens will further spread the deadly virus.

"The threat to adolescents far exceeds the number of cases among adolescents," said Ralph DiClemente of the Center for AIDS Prevention Studies at the University of California at San Francisco.

The CDC reported 768 AIDS cases among teen-agers out of a total of 199,417 AIDS cases reported through Dec. 31. Nearly one-third of those were hemophiliacs who contracted the virus through transfusions of blood products.

Results from a 1990 CDC survey show that 55 percent of high school teen-agers had sex within three months of being interviewed. Among ninth graders, 25 percent reported sexual activity within the previous three months. Nearly half reported they used a condom during their last episode of sexual intercourse.

But more extensive studies of teen sexual activity are needed to better target prevention efforts, Curran and DiClemente said. They urged that the government drop its embargo on such studies.

Last year, Secretary of Health and Human Services Louis Sullivan canceled such a survey after conservatives objected to the study.

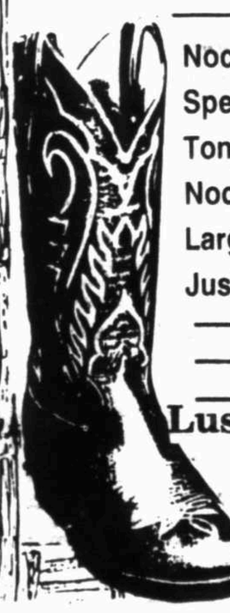

Surgeon General Antonia Novello, interviewed outside Tuesday's hearing, said that while the moratorium on the surveys continues, there is no such hold on gathering related data. She referred specifically to CDC's adolescent behavior survey.

Iraq admits buying nuclear bomb-manufacturing equipment

N.Y. Times News Service

UNITED NATIONS — In a new revelation about President Saddam Hussein's nuclear weapons program, Iraq has admitted buying large quantities of German components for a previously unknown uranium enrichment complex that could have produced enough nuclear explosive for four or five nuclear weapons a year.

The admission was made in Baghdad Monday to a team of United Nations nuclear inspectors assembled by the International Atomic Energy Agency, based in Vienna. The inspectors had flown to Baghdad Saturday after learning that German companies had sold Saddam some of the parts needed to build up to 10,000 uranium gas centrifuge enrichment plants and after receiving a tip-off about where these parts might be concealed.

The United Nations team drew a blank when they raided the suspected site just north of Baghdad area Sunday, officials say. But Iraqi nuclear officials later admitted under questioning that they had bought enough special magnets and housings from German companies before the Persian Gulf war to build up to 10,000 centrifuges, although they asserted that these were all destroyed immediately after the cease-fire.

Tuesday, Iraqi officials showed the United Nations inspectors piles of metal debris, saying this was all that remained of their ambitious plan to produce nuclear explosives using the centrifuge enrichment process. Previously, Iraq had said it was only experimenting with centrifuge enrichment techniques and asserted it planned to build no more than 500 centrifuges by 1996.

The International Atomic Energy Agency inspectors took samples of the debris but refused to say whether they believed all the components the German companies supplied had really been accounted for.

"We can't take any view on the Iraqi claim until the samples the team collected have been thoroughly analyzed," said John Scott, acting head of the Special Commission appointed by the United Nations Security Council to oversee the destruction of Iraq's nuclear capability as well as its other weapons of mass destruction.

Last month the International Atomic Energy Agency named 13 companies, most of them German, that it said had supplied equipment for Iraq's nuclear weapons program, including sophisticated machinery needed for the manufacture and assembly of centrifuge enrichment machines.

Agency inspectors have also recently found a centrifuge production plant in Iraq capable of turning out more than 1,000 machines a year. This plant escaped damage by allied bombing during the Gulf war.

In Bonn a Foreign Ministry official said five German companies appeared to have sold Iraq centrifuge magnets and housings but added that it was unclear whether they had knowingly violated German export controls. He said the authorities are considering whether to prosecute the companies. Germany has asked the United Nations not to release the names of the companies involved.

Iraq's admission that it was acquiring parts for a huge centrifuge enrichment program is significant for several reasons, United Nations and other officials say.

It confirms once again Iraq's determination to conceal as much as possible of its nuclear program since Baghdad should have reported the purchase and destruction of these centrifuge components to the United Nations under the Security Council resolutions ending the Gulf war.

Germany's recognition marks Yugoslavia's end

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (NYT) — As Germany prepares to recognize the end of Yugoslavia Wednesday, paving the way for similar action by the rest of the European Community, some people from all corners of this fragmented land Tuesday lamented the passage.

"I'm sorry for the Yugoslavia I knew intimately," said Ksenija Pergar, an unemployed woman from Slovenia who just a year ago escorted foreigners on package tours through her republic's snow-capped alps, Sarajevo's mosques and Dubrovnik's limestone piazzas and palaces. "But I understand in my mind, that it had to come to an end."

"It is difficult to imagine now that we were once able to travel everywhere in this country," she said. "I'm going to buy all the table-top guide books I can as a remembrance of the time when Yugoslavia was mine."

"Yugoslavia has failed the test of democracy," said one man who has been active in the political life of the federation for four decades.

In testimony to the tense atmosphere, he spoke on condition that his name not be used and that he be described by his former rank of government minister. "The Yugoslav state has killed itself," he continued. "Many countries, including some that will recognize the secessionist republics, have wanted this country to survive."

A mixture of 23.5 million mostly Slavic peoples whose conflicting ambitions and differing languages, religions and characters splintered the development of a single, overarching national consciousness, Yugoslavia disintegrated within two years of the collapse of the Communist Party, which had kept the quarrelsome nationalities in check for 45 years after World War II.

Now, minefields and blown-up bridges line the battlefield between the Croatian military and the pro-Serb Yugoslav army and irregular Serb forces.

Tuesday, 33 United Nations military liaison officers arrived to prepare for the deployment of a large peacekeeping force that is to help maintain the peace between warring Serbs and Croats.

Moscow industries near closing as stockpiles run low

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — City officials warned Tuesday that industry was coming to a standstill throughout the Russian capital as the national economy unraveled and raw materials were no longer being supplied from the other republics.

Most industrial enterprises have supplies for only two or three more weeks of work while the makers of the city's prefabricated concrete housing may stop work in the next five or six days, according to Boris Nikolsky, first deputy premier of the Moscow city government.

Nikolsky, quoted by the Interfax news agency, said the traditional system of republic and enterprise contracts had so eroded over the last few years that the Moscow government has been able to sign up fewer than one in five of its needed suppliers for the coming year.

As he spoke, the depressing state of the economy had the capital suffering a new wave of panicky rumors that the Russian government was about to spring a new currency confiscation plan on the public to fight the collapse of the ruble.

In reaction, people lined up at banks all day to deposit their excess rubles, lest they not be taken into account in the feared currency reform.

The panic reached the point that the Russian secretary of state, Gennady Barbulis, took the lead spot in the national television news Tuesday night to deny the rumors.

"I'd like the population to not panic and trust the government," Barbulis declared to viewers who well recalled a sudden money confiscation scheme in the closing months of communism in which hundreds of millions of rubles in notes became worthless.

The city's grim industrial outlook and ruble panic were the latest dark symptoms of economic trouble as President Boris N. Yeltsin defended his 12 day-old program of free-market liberalization of consumer prices from increasing criticism and even a rival's demand that the government be replaced.

"The government is not a pair of socks one can just throw away," Yeltsin declared in a provincial tour stop at Bryansk designed to bolster morale. "By the way, even socks are not thrown away these days."

Mingling with consumers, Yeltsin expressed outrage at the high price of local sausage under his price plan. He demanded that the sausage factory manager be "kicked out" of his job as a "provocateur" serving the old Communist apparatchiks better than free-market consumers.

"These swindlers are doing this on purpose to frame us, setting these prices!" he told a crowd at a meat store where prices appeared near the upper limits but not necessarily beyond his new pricing policy.

The report on the warning of Moscow's industries offered no idea of what measures city officials might be contemplating to keep basic factories open for this city of 9 million people. It is the capital of Russia and the keystone city in Yeltsin's attempt to revive the economy and move it toward the free market.

Amid the current economic chaos, many industrial enterprises are either failing outright in their contract obligations or waiting to see what market incentives might arise to guide their future policies.

Apocalyptic warnings have become commonplace as the national economy flirts with total breakdown, but Moscow officials generally have been insisting the city could weather the winter, at least, with its basic needs met.

The supply system among the republics and cities and their enterprises was centrally enforced under communism. But this system began collapsing in the Gorbachev era and it is now virtually inert, by Nikolsky's account.

Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who saw the Soviet Union collapse along with his President's job less than a month ago, was back on the scene as a private citizen Tuesday, criticizing the Yeltsin price reforms but saying they deserved at least 10 more days of testing before final judgment was possible.

Prosecutors charge 12 in Soviet coup

MOSCOW (AP) — Prosecutors charged 12 former high Soviet officials Tuesday with conspiring to seize power in the failed coup that quickened the demise of the Soviet Union, which they thought they were saving.

The hard-line officials — including the one-time prime minister, defense minister and KGB chief — could face 10 to 15 years in prison or a firing squad for their part in the August coup, officials said.

No date has been set for the trial that promises to be one of the most spectacular court cases in modern Russian history.

The suspects, six of whom formed an emergency committee that claimed to have taken power from an ailing Mikhail S. Gorbachev, have already challenged the fairness of the proceedings. Through their lawyers, they have said senior politicians and the media have distorted the facts against them.

Prosecutors earlier decided not to charge the suspects with "high treason." The prosecutors reasoned that the state they allegedly tried to betray — the Soviet Union — has ceased to exist anyway.

The charges culminate a four-month inquiry in which thousands of people were interviewed and 125 volumes of evidence compiled, the Tass news agency said. In the process, prosecutors scrutinized the KGB, the armed forces, and Communist Party and other institutions.

Among the former Soviet officials charged were KGB chief Vladimir Kryuchkov; Prime Minister Valentin Pavlov; Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov; Vice President Gennady Yanayev; Security Council official Oleg Baklanov; Alexander Tizyakov, head of the state enterprise association; and Vasily Starodubtsev, Peasants Union leader. All helped found the eight-member emergency committee.

'Yes' for tax is 'yes' for Midland

There have been plenty of pros and cons discussed in Midland over the past few weeks about the proposed ¼-cent increase in the sales tax with the money it would raise going to fund economic development. The proposal Midlanders will vote on Saturday has been thoroughly dissected and studied from every angle. Many Midlanders probably have already formed an opinion about whether they favor the tax increase or not.

But for all the arguments and counter-arguments, there are some facts that no one in Midland can change:

■ Attracting new industries isn't as simple as it was in the 1980s, the 1970s or even before that time.

■ Economic development has become a major enterprise and when companies move they look at much more than merely the "basics" such as labor force statistics, pay scales in the community, living costs, etc. They now look for what a community is willing to offer them over the long haul that can mean a secure future and good working relationship. All in all, that means that competition for the relocation of industries — or the expansion of existing ones — in the 1990s is going to be intense.

■ Other cities throughout Texas have already seen the light of what is needed for the future and are now prepared to compete for those businesses and industry with millions of dollars. The ½-cent proposed for Midland will raise only about $2 million a year, but city officials apparently believe that with that amount they will be able to compete aggressively.

■ The goal of diversifying the Midland economy — one that has been talked half-heartedly for a lot of years — is only going to become more important as the times get tougher. Yes, production of oil and gas has been Midland's "bread and butter" for most of this community's existence, and oil and gas will remain a vital part of the community's future success. But if Midland is to ever break the deadlock of its dependence on the fossil fuels economy it must diversify.

■ Opponents have noted that there is no "sunset" provision to allow the tax to die in the event that it is deemed unproductive. That's true, but the City Council can call for a vote on its continuation at any time and with the mayor and City Council members elected by the people of Midland, that seems sufficient safeguard to the tax's potential abuse.

Lastly, Midlanders have long been noted throughout Texas and the nation for their conservatism and frugality but even in the current tight local economic climate numerous fiscal conservatives here have announced their strong support for the proposed tax increase.

That is not an endorsement of small consequence; these people are known for fiscal prudence.

We urge all Midlanders to join them — and us — on Saturday in voting for Midland's economic future by approving the increase in the sales tax.

This investment in the future well-being of Midland is actually an investment for the future of all who live here, who own homes or who have jobs or operate businesses here. That's because the future welfare of everyone is tied directly to Midland's economic growth and stability.

It is no more complicated than that.

Cheap power endangers Grand Canyon

WASHINGTON — To save their constituents 4 cents a month, two Western senators are willing to inflict environmental wounds on a national treasure — the Grand Canyon.

Anderson

Constant human tinkering with the water level in the Colorado River is destroying wildlife and beaches in the Grand Canyon. Congress is willing to do something to stop the environmental ruin. But, Sens. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., and Malcolm Wallop, R.-Wyo., keep throwing a wrench in the works, guaranteed to draw a presidential veto of the environmental legislation.

The culprit is the Glen Canyon Dam in northern Arizona. Wirth and Wallop think you should pay for the environmental damage it causes so the people who get their hydroelectric power from the river can continue to enjoy some of the cheapest energy in the nation.

The dam is run by the federal Western Area Power Administration and it generates electricity for customers in New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Wyoming and Colorado. Daily manipulation of the amount of water that flows through the dam is destroying the natural beauty of the Grand Canyon downstream.

Arizona Sens. John McCain, a Republican, and Dennis DeConcini, a Democrat, have fought hard to correct the damage with a proposed Grand Canyon Protection Act. It would force WAPA to do less of the daily manipulation.

But putting limits on the dam means an increase in the price of hydroelectric power coming from it. The act says that WAPA will have to pass that cost along to its customers. But Wirth and Wallop want to tack on an amendment that would force all taxpayers to pick up the tab.

The amendment would require the taxpayers to foot the bill for an ongoing government study of how the dam is affecting the region, and would make the taxpayers eternally responsible for increases in the cost of electricity that are caused by actions taken to protect the Grand Canyon.

This taxpayer subsidy would allow WAPA to continue selling power to its customers at one of the lowest rates in the country. WAPA sells power at wholesale prices to utility companies that distribute it to residents and businesses at retail.

According to private energy consultant David Marcus, Glen Canyon power costs less than 2 cents per kilowatt hour wholesale. The national average retail price is just under 7 cents per kilowatt hour, according to the latest survey by the Energy Department.

Wirth and Wallop seem to have bought the argument from the power lobby that rates would soar astronomically if the environmental restrictions were imposed. But opponents of the taxpayer subsidy say that isn't the case, that limiting the fluctuations in flow could be financed by raising the typical customer's bill by only about 4 cents a month.

A congressional insider also speculated Wirth and Wallop are campaigning to produce legislation that would be rejected by President Bush. They hope to kill the project so irrigation districts in their states don't have to seek power from a more expensive source. Some farms north of the dam are purchasing power directly from the WAPA. But farmers would have to find another supplier if dam operations were altered to prevent damage to the canyon.

McCain and DeConcini also have such districts in their state. But they seem to be more concerned about the environment than farmers' cheap power.

The controversy over who should pay the bills kept the Grand Canyon Protection Act from passing last year because President Bush threatened to veto it if the taxpayer subsidy was part of the package.

McCain called the notion of the taxpayers footing the bill to keep the electrical rates low a "precedent shattering amendment." He thinks that people who take advantage of the dam should be the ones to pay for the damage it causes. But Wirth and Wallop have refused to back down. The act will be introduced again in this session of Congress. The two senators are expected to throw in their amendment again, and Bush will threaten to veto it again. In the meantime, the Glen Canyon Dam continues to ruin wildlife and recreational spots downstream.

If the Bush administration had its way, there would be no legislation at all to regulate the flow of water through the dam. Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan has made some token attempts to decrease the daily tampering with the river without going to Congress for a law. But environmentalists say Lujan's efforts fall short of what is necessary.

Proposed tax increase will hurt businesses

When will our esteemed city council members and community business leaders wake up and realize that "guys, we're getting taxed to death out here!"

For some reason, there's this mentality at work that says, if we need money to fund a new project, let's just get the taxpayer to pay for it. What happened to the philosophy of tightening our belts, curbing spending and using what we've got.

Now, I'm all for economic development and diversification, but not at the expense of our local taxpayer and business community. In the last two years we've had two tax increases, costs of goods and services have increased and all this compounded by a weak economy. How is the local small businessman to keep up with these increases when he can't raise prices because (1) people don't have the money to pay more and (2) taxes increase the retail price with no benefit to the retailer.

This proposed tax defeats the very purpose for which it is intended.

It makes it more difficult for established local retailers to remain in business and less attractive to the creation of new business.

There is no financial institution that would lend money to a project that has no established direction, no criteria for success or failure and no time frame in which to determine its success or failure, so why should the taxpayer be expected to give money to a program like this?

It's my understanding that the Midland Chamber of Commerce has had for years, an economic development department with two full-time employees and a large portion of the chamber budget, working and researching the very issue of economic development and diversification. Do we need yet another group to spend more tax dollars on the same old thing?

The time has come to quit taking the easy way out! Let's come up with new, innovative ideas to fund these projects. Let's find out just how smartly we are spending our money. Let's find current programs where we can cut spending.

The answer is not to run to the taxpayer every time you want money, the answer is to cut spending and use what we've got!

I truly believe that if this tax is implemented, it will be permanent no matter how good or bad the program turns out to be.

Chamber urges yes vote for economic tax

The Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse have stated that they are not opposed to economic development. They have suggested that economic development success has been and can continue to be achieved with the resources available in recent years. Their position, which is a lack of understanding, seriously jeopardizes the future of our community.

Two critical factors have changed since recent economic development successes were achieved. First, fifty-two Texas cities have passed an economic development sales tax — most of them 1/2-cent. Two years ago Amarillo did not have $6 million per year — or Abilene $4 million. Can Midland continue to compete with $200,000 per year? Second, the industrial real estate market has changed — only four industrial buildings large enough to accommodate a manufacturer with 35-plus employees remain. Inexpensive industrial real estate available in the community was a critical factor contributing to the decision of the three California manufacturers who moved here recently.

With the real estate "incentive" disappearing and tough new competition in Texas it should not surprise community members that people who understand development are willing to pay an extra quarter when they spend $100 or 2 1/2 pennies when the spend $10. Voting against the 1/4-cent sales tax is a vote against economic development and jobs for Midlanders. Please go to the polls and cast your ballot FOR the health of Midland's economy.

Midland Chamber of Commerce

Other Texas cities approve higher tax

The lifeblood of any community is the ability of its citizens to work, to earn an income, to support their families. Without jobs, a community will wither and die, no matter how good its "quality of life." But that spirit will surely diminish if the economic vitality of Midland is not sustained.

On Jan. 18th, Midlanders have an opportunity to contribute to their own economic well being. Passage of the proposed 1/4-cent sales tax will give Midland a chance to help create new jobs locally, as well as attract new businesses and jobs from outside Midland. To date, 52 Texas cities have passed an economic development sales tax. Another three dozen cities will decide this issue on Jan. 18th.

Are the citizens of 52 other Texas cities more progressive than Midlanders? Do they like new taxes better than Midlanders? I think not! The citizens of these 52 Texas cities have analyzed their future and chosen to make a positive investment in the growth and prosperity of their respective communities. It is time for Midland to do the same. Vote "YES" on Jan. 18th. Say "YES" to the future of Midland!

Only way to be heard is to go to polls to vote

We, the property owners of our fair city — Midland, turned the tax burners loose in our pocketbooks during 1991; tax increases everywhere. Yes, we certainly got what we deserved.

Now a well-groomed few apparently wish for us to close our eyes again to a $2 million-plus yearly sales tax increase to support their yearly carnival of travels to the unknown.

If this is what the taxpayers want, so be it. But, in any case, please everyone get out and express your opinion. Don't let either side be approved by default because you sat home and did not vote.

■ AT&T to help run Ukraine's phone system

NEW YORK — AT&T said Tuesday it had formed a joint-venture company to upgrade and run the long-distance phone network in Ukraine in what may be the largest agreement yet to modernize a phone system in the former East bloc.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. will own 39 percent of the venture. The Dutch postal and telephone system PTT Telecom of the Netherlands will own 10 percent, and 51 percent will be owned by Ukraine's State Committee of Communications.

The value of the deal in the former Soviet republic was not disclosed, though AT&T's investment will consist of 13 phone switches worth "tens of millions of dollars," spokesman Walter Murphy said. The first switch will be delivered in May.

In effect, the venture will take over Ukraine's existing long-distance network, which uses antiquated and unreliable equipment.

"This is the first time AT&T will play a major role in building, designing and operating a long-distance voice services network outside the United States," said Randall L. Tobias, an AT&T vice chairman.

The new company will install, own and operate a communications network that connects Ukraine to the rest of the world. It also will build, own and operate a long-distance network connecting 13 of the country's 25 telephone districts.

The deal is one of a number by Western phone companies in the former East bloc. Analysts say the nations must upgrade their unreliable phone systems before other needed investments can take place.

■ Researchers make herpes virus connection

In the first detailed scientific study of an epidemic derisively called "Yuppie flu" when it hit the Lake Tahoe area seven years ago, researchers have concluded that the mystery disease is most probably a central nervous system disorder triggered by a damaged immune system.

Although the cause of the damage remains unproven, the researchers say that a member of the common herpes virus family called HHV-6 was actively reproducing in most of the patients they studied.

The national Centers for Disease Control now recognizes the disease as chronic fatigue syndrome.

Seventeen physicians and scientists combined their studies on nearly 259 patients for a report that is being published Wednesday in the journal Annals of Internal Medicine published by the American College of Physicians.

The team, led by Dr. Dedra Buchwald of the University of Washington and Dr. Anthony Komaroff of Harvard, includes Dr. Paul R. Cheney and Dr. Daniel L. Peterson, the two physicians who first detected the epidemic of debilitating flu-like symptoms at Incline Village in 1984.

For years, the "Yuppie Flu" was dismissed by many physicians as a trivial psychological effect of upscale living by affluent people in their 30s. Even today the Centers for Disease Control, which has a task force on chronic fatigue syndrome, has no idea how many Americans suffer from the disorder but believes that tens of thousands may be victims.

Although the disease is believed to be contagious, no one knows how it spreads, nor is there any single treatment for its varied symptoms.

■ Judge makes ruling against tuna laundering

SAN FRANCISCO — A U.S. District Court judge has closed a loophole in a federal law that had allowed tuna illegally caught in dolphin-killing nets to make its way to U.S. markets.

Monday, Chief U.S. District Judge Thelton Henderson in San Francisco ruled that the government must halt the imports from third-party nations that bought banned tuna, then sold it to the United States.

Calling it a victory against "tuna laundering," Earth Island Institute Executive Director David Phillips said: "This ruling will stop the import of all tuna into the U.S. until a nation proves that it no longer buys dolphin-unsafe tuna. The government has been perpetuating the dolphin kill by refusing to close these markets. Now, the court has ruled that it must."

The San Francisco-based environmental group sought and obtained the injunction. It was the first to go to court in 1988 against the U.S. National Marine Fisheries Service for not strictly adhering to the Marine Mammal Protection Act.

The law prohibits the United States from buying tuna from vessels that use purse-seine nets or from any nation that buys the fish caught in this kind of net.

When the nets encircle the tuna, they also catch dolphins that swim as their companions in the eastern tropical Pacific. Why the two species swim together is unknown.

Officials indict former housing aide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former top housing aide Lance H. Wilson was indicted Tuesday on felony charges of fraud, conspiracy and false statements in the influence-peddling scandal at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Wilson, former executive assistant to then-Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce, is the first HUD official indicted in the case. Wilson was charged with conspiring to steer housing grants to projects being developed by co-defendant Leonard E. Briscoe.

Briscoe, a Fort Worth, Texas, real estate developer, previously was charged with 10 counts. Tuesday's indictment added 12 more against him.

Wilson's attorney, Ray Banoun, said:

"He has acted legally in all of his dealings with HUD. He totally rejects the charges and is certain that he will be fully vindicated."

Independent counsel Arlin M. Adams' staff is investigating allegations of fraud, mismanagement and cronyism at HUD, including allegations that Pierce showed political favoritism in administering four HUD programs and lied under oath to Congress when he denied ordering subordinates to approve financing for specific programs. Pierce headed HUD for all eight years of the Reagan administration.

Tuesday's indictment said that Pierce marked one of Briscoe's projects for approval in March 1987 after discussing it with aide DuBois Gilliam, who was named as an unindicted co-conspirator.

Pierce's lawyer, Paul Perito, said:

"That's assuming the validity of the assertions of Mr. Gilliam, a twice-convicted felon. ... It's hard to believe that that man would be believed by a jury of his peers."

Gilliam pleaded guilty in 1989 to conspiracy to manipulate the award of a grant and to accepting $8,000 in illegal gratuities. He has been cooperating with the investigation.

Wilson was accused of 24 counts — 19 of them felonies — including conspiracy to defraud the government, making false statements, fraudulent transactions, wire and mail fraud, aiding and abetting, and offering an illegal gratuity to a housing official. If convicted on all counts, he would face a maximum of 82 years in prison and $5.25 million in fines.

Briscoe faces 22 counts — including 17 felonies — of making false statements, fraudulent transactions, wire and mail fraud, and aiding and abetting. He would face a maximum of 75 years in prison and $4.75 million in fines.

Wilson was Pierce's executive assistant from 1981 until 1984. Afterward, he headed the New York City Housing Development Corp. and in 1986 joined the Wall Street investment firm of PaineWebber Inc.

According to the indictment, Wilson conspired with Briscoe, Gilliam and two other unindicted co-conspirators to influence Urban Development Action Grants to three development projects, even though two did not meet HUD requirements.

The other two unindicted co-conspirators were identified as Maurice David Steier, a Nebraska attorney; and Darrell Wood, a Texas lawyer who has since died and who was described as participating in only one meeting.

The indictment said that, under the scheme, Briscoe would apply through a city for a UDAG grant for a housing project, using a financial commitment signed by Wilson that falsely said Wilson's company had promised to finance the project.

Wilson provided the letters "without regard to the financial viability of the project," the indictment said. He and Briscoe agreed to use the letters to circumvent HUD requirements while they sought other financing, the indictment said.

Wilson also was a limited partner in several of Briscoe's development businesses, the indictment said.

Israel holds historic talks with Arabs on two fronts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel and Jordan began on Tuesday their first-ever formal peace talks, and Jordan said Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank would not be a precondition to peace.

As the Mideast negotiations gained moment, Secretary of State James A. Baker III intervened by calling in top negotiators.

Without announcement, Baker met separately with senior Syrian and Lebanese officials and asked the heads of the Israeli and joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegations to come to his office Wednesday morning "to touch base," said a U.S. official who requested anonymity.

It was the first direct intervention by Baker in the current round of peace talks, which were marked by the first formal negotiations by Israel with Jordan and with Palestinian Arabs.

At the same time, Israel pursued face-to-face negotiations with representatives of the 1.7 million Palestinian Arabs who live on Israel-held land and are seeking self-government.

But Palestinian spokeswoman Hanan Ashrawi said "it seems the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations have come to a head-on collision" over Israel's refusal to stop settling Jews in the predominantly Arab West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"The Shamir government is catering to the extreme right wing; they are engaged in foot-dragging," she said. "Israel insisted it had the right to the whole land and refused to indicate that settlement activity might be reconsidered."

At home, too, events cast a shadow on the negotiations. Pressure grew on Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's government not to offer self-rule to the Palestinian delegation and the wounding of seven Jewish settlers when gunmen opened fire on a bus in the occupied West Bank Tuesday sparked demands Israel pull out of the talks.

The talks with Jordan are the first publicly acknowledged discussions between the Jewish state and the Arab kingdom. Technically at war, they have coexisted peacefully since Jordan and its Arab allies were defeated in the 1967 Six-Day war.

Tuesday's two-hour session at the State Department was designed to set an agenda. Two Palestinians attended, under a compromise agreement that ended a procedural squabble.

Jordanian spokesman Marwan Mouasher said that while Jordan wants Israel to withdraw from the West Bank, this was not a precondition for a peace treaty. "We would have to see" the kind of peace treaty Israel proposes, he said. More than 100,000 Israeli Jews live among 1 million Palestinians in the occupied territory.

Mouasher added: "Our vision of peace — when the issues between us are resolved — would certainly include full cooperation including diplomatic relations." Only Egypt among the Arab nations formally recognizes Israel.

For the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations, a threat by Israeli right-wing parties to bolt the government might limit the Israeli negotiators to agenda and procedural items.

"We have a mandate to negotiate," Israeli negotiator Yosef Ben-Aharon told a news conference, and will submit a self-rule proposal at an "appropriate time." But in an interview with Israel TV, Ben-Aharon noted that talks on agenda can sometimes last for weeks before substance is discussed.

The Moledet and Tehiya parties see Shamir's proposal to give the Palestinians control of their day-to-day activities as a step toward Palestinian statehood.

Cat calls 911

BOYNTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It was one howler of a whodunit, and even Ms. Marple was stumped.

Police rushed to Barbara Marple's apartment to find out why 911 was being repeatedly dialed without anyone speaking on the other end. Turned out it was a series of catcalls.

The first emergency call came in at 9 p.m. Sunday. The caller hung up without saying a word. Police traced the address and went to the apartment, but no one answered.

The next mysterious call was recorded at 10:07 p.m., followed in rapid succession by several more.

Police went back. They banged on the door and woke Ms. Marple from a nap. The 23-year-old supermarket employee denied making the calls, but the police insisted on checking inside.

In a bedroom, Ms. Marple and the police found her calico cat, named Kitten, with one paw on the cordless phone.

"Cat dialed 911 using auto redial," reads the police log entry. Case closed.

Kitten didn't simply press a speed-dial button. She punched 9-1-1 in sequence the first time. Then she hit the redial button.

"Everyone I've told doesn't believe me," Ms. Marple said.

She has since given Kitten an old phone to play with. And she thinks she's figured out the cat's motive.

"She was probably trying to call my mother in New Jersey," she said.

The 1/4¢ for Economic Development
WHAT CONTROLS AND SAFEGUARDS WILL PROTECT TAXPAYERS MONEY AND GUIDE THE ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION DIRECTORS?

8. Unexpended funds shall be either invested in direct obligations of the U.S. government with a maturity not longer than one year or deposited in a local commercial bank (a) in amounts up to FDIC insurance limits or (b) under the terms of a depository agreement substantially like that of the City of Midland.

Plan would deny benefits for women with more children

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A welfare reform plan awaiting the governor's signature would deny additional benefits to women who have more children, angering women's groups who say it infringes on the right to procreation.

Critics say it would unfairly penalize children, but the plan's sponsor says it would allow welfare recipients to take control of their lives, and could cut welfare costs.

The restriction would be the only one of its kind in the nation, experts said Tuesday.

Single mothers at a welfare office in Newark said the law would not address their real problems: high rents, poor job prospects and lack of day care.

"The newborns, it's not their fault," said Carmen Lozada, 24. "They should have a chance like everybody else." She and her two children have been on welfare five years.

Others agreed with the reform plan. "I think the law should be passed to keep people from having more babies," said June Gaskins, 23, applying for assistance for herself and her baby.

The package given final legislative approval Monday also would require all welfare recipients to take part in education or job training, and allows mothers to marry without losing all assistance.

Gov. Jim Florio, a Democrat, has until Jan. 21 to sign the bills. He has not said for certain that he will, but aides say he supports efforts to break the cycle of welfare dependency.

Women with two children currently receive $424 a month in welfare. The bill would deny the $64-a-month increase per child to mothers who have additional children while on welfare. The bill would allow recipients to work and earn up to 25 percent of their total grant without losing benefits.

The plan is the brainchild of Democratic Assemblyman Wayne Bryant, whose district includes Camden. Nearly half the city's 90,000 residents receives public assistance.

"There is no constitutional right to welfare," Bryant said. "They either can have the additional children and work to pay the added costs, or they can decide not to have any more children."

The National Organization for Women and other groups attacked the plan as discriminating against women and children. Martha Davis, an attorney with the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund, said the group might challenge the plan in court.

"It covers only families who have a mother. Male-headed families would not be covered by the provision," Davis said. "You don't really have to go any farther than that in proving it's unconstitutional."

"The intent of the bill is to discourage women from having children. It is illegal and irrational," Davis said earlier.

The American Civil Liberties Union of New Jersey is considering a legal challenge.

No other state refuses benefits for additional children born to a welfare recipient, according to Davis and Ellis. California is among states considering such measures, but "New Jersey's is the furthest along," said Henry Freedman, executive director of the Center on Social Welfare Policy and Law in New York.

Wisconsin's legislature rejected a similar provision last summer. Other states limit increases in benefits beyond a certain number of family members, said Freedman: In Kentucky, a family of seven and a family of eight with no other income receive the same benefit.

Maryland welfare officials proposed recently that grants for families with dependent children be cut 30 percent. Parents could get full benefits restored by certifying that their children are in school and that they're getting preventive health checkups.

"Due to a national lack of leadership, the states are trying every recourse to contain costs and taking it out on the most vulnerable group, which are children," said Dr. Charles Gershenson, senior policy analyst at the Center for the Study of Social Policy in Washington.

Amnesty program brings fur out of closet

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Animal-rights activist Susan Netboy didn't feel right about the heirloom sable lurking in her closet. Then she stumbled on the ideal solution — a veterinarian's "fur amnesty."

She wasn't alone, says Dr. Elliot Katz, who's been pelted with cast-off furs since he set up a drop-off station on the sidewalk outside posh I. Magnin in the Union Square shopping center.

He's gotten scores of minks since Christmas, including $50,000 worth of coats and jackets from one woman alone.

"Some people unloaded a lot of guilt feelings," Katz said. "It was sort of like these skeletons in their closets. With fur amnesty we gave them an opportunity to forgive themselves."

Now Katz is in a quandary.

Because of what he considers the coats' gory history, he doesn't feel right turning his cache into cash. At one point, some homeless women asked if they could have them, but Katz didn't want to put the furs back on the streets. Instead, he gave away shirts that said "Don't Wear Fur."

Netboy's fur, appraised at more than $6,000, had been in her family for 30 years, but she was glad to see it go.

"I had felt uncomfortable about wearing it for a good long time, but I didn't really want to dispose of it in an insignificant way," she said.

"When this opportunity came up to donate it to a cause that would help the animals that suffered in the making of that coat, I decided that was the way."

Katz, who founded the non-profit group In Defense of Animals in 1983, modeled his program after a similar effort in Britain, declaring a "Fur Amnesty Week" just before Christmas.

The week ended. The coats kept coming.

By mid-January, Katz estimated he had about $135,000 worth of furs stored in his offices in San Rafael, 10 miles north of San Francisco.

"Some are very obnoxious," he said, describing a longhaired monkey coat, a fox stole complete with fox heads and a raccoon coat that "had all sorts of little baby raccoon tails hanging from it."

Others were gifts, acquired when a mink was a badge of male affection.

"They had these very mixed feelings," Katz said. "On one end it was a symbol of love and romance and on the other hand it was a symbol of insensitivity and cruelty."

The coats will be used in street theater productions ridiculing the wearing of furs. Previously, some group members who style themselves "The Vicious Vixens," have put on outrageous make-up and traveled around town on cable cars flaunting the furs in parody.

Winter blasts through Midwest, whips up whiteouts

Associated Press

A snowstorm Tuesday left Detroit commuters scrambling, whipped up whiteouts in Indiana and gave schoolchildren in at least eight states an unexpected break.

"Our problem today was with county roads — we couldn't find them," said Darwin B. Johnson, Jackson schools superintendent in central Michigan.

At least four deaths were blamed on wintry weather this week.

The worst winter storm in Detroit since 1982 dumped 9 inches of snow, crippling rush hour and sending pedestrians into streets because sidewalks were blocked by drifts. Officials closed Detroit City Airport, where commuter airlines operate.

In East Lansing, the Bagel Fragel deli became a coffee-pastry refuge for people in search of "anything warm," said employee Phil Robison, who walked a mile to work because his car was buried.

Up to 10 inches of snow also fell in Ohio and parts of Indiana got 6 inches.

"It looks terrible out. There's a 3-foot snow drift in front of my car and I can't get out to shovel it," said Joe Ebert, of rural Atlanta about 20 miles north of Indianapolis.

In Toledo, Ohio, street parking was banned for the day while 37 snow plows cleared roads.

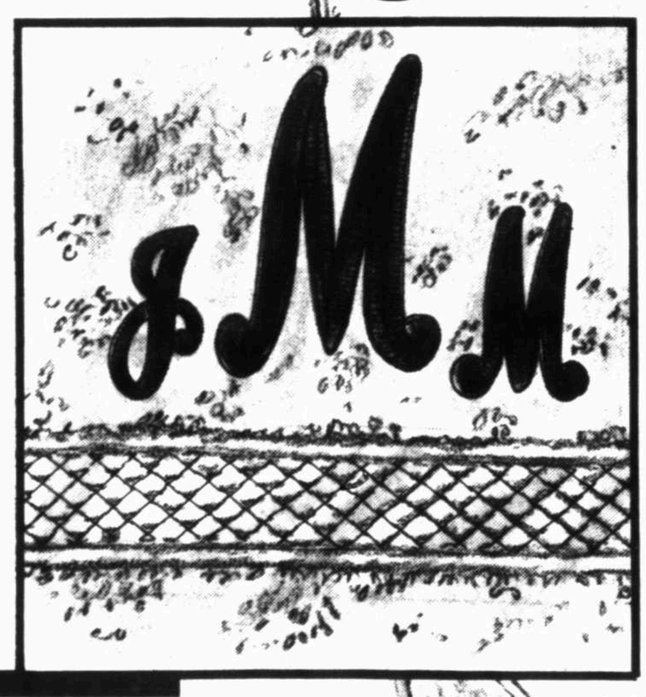

The severe, snowy blast was caused by a large, intense low pressure system that moved up the Ohio Valley, said Dick Wagenmaker, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Detroit.

"As the low pressure comes up, moisture ahead wraps around the back side into the cold air. Presto: snow," he said.

LHS janitor suspended without pay pending his trial on cocaine charges

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

The 56-year-old Midland Lee High School janitor arrested during a cocaine bust Monday night has been suspended from his job without pay pending the outcome of his trial, Midland Independent School District officials said Tuesday.

A Crime Stoppers tip led to the arrest of Rogelio G. "Roy" Rodriguez after narcotics officers from the Midland County Sheriff's Department discovered about $2,000 worth of cocaine after executing a of his apartment at 1210 W. College Ave.

Rodriguez was charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver and is in the Midland County Jail on a $30,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, jail officials said.

Officers discovered most of the cocaine wrapped in 68 $20 packets, which is indicative that the drug was being sold, officers said. Police said they have not yet determined if the drugs were being sold to students.

After his arrest, a handcuffed Rodriguez remained in the two-room apartment for about 40 minutes while officers continued their search.

When questioned about his occupation, he said, "Well, I used to be a janitor," witnesses said.

■ Members of FOCUS tell the school board the new alternative school should be named for black Midland physician.

Representatives of FOCUS (Federation of Citizens United to Serve) Tuesday night said they strongly believe the new alternative school should be named after Dr. Viola Coleman, a longtime Midland physician and black community leader.

The comments were made at Tuesday's Midland Independent School District's regularly scheduled board meeting.

"I submit that this is a very important issue to the minority community," said Alma Marshall, chairman of FOCUS.

"She (Dr. Coleman) is the most respected person in the minority community — not just the African-American community but the Hispanic community, as well."

Dr. Coleman did not attend the meeting.

"She is not campaigning for this facility to be named in her honor, nor will she do so and we do not expect her to," Ms. Marshall said.

"This is not intended to sound like a threat, but I must tell you that members of the minority community are watching with great interest to see what this board decides on this issue."

Last Thursday, the focus of a community-meeting with the school board was the name of the alternative school.

At a November school board meeting, one member said the procedure called for new schools to be named after notable people who are dead or a place or event significant to Texas history.

"We are quite concerned regarding the fact that there is such an inequity in the naming process. Bush, Greathouse and Abell schools were named following no rules but now there is supposedly a rule they must be followed," Ms. Marshall said.

"We believe that once a process is in place it should not be violated, but once it has been violated then it can be again. This is the case with the board. The whole problem started when they start-

Judge summons pair who ignore call to jury duty

■ Midland woman and Andrews man answer to Bunton for failure to inform court they would be unable to serve on jury.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

When two potential jurors showed up at U.S. District Court on Tuesday, it wasn't for jury duty. It was for shunning their responsibility.

To insure his appearance, one man was even provided an escort to the courtroom and a nearby bed to spend the night — a jail bed.

The two, a Midland woman and a man from Andrews, both in their 30s, came at the request of U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton — for contempt of court.

Both had been summoned several times for jury duty in recent months.

The woman contacted the court once, but ignored two later notices.

"I've been scatterbrained and do apologize, your honor," said the woman, who has experienced four deaths in her family recently, including her mother and grandmother.

"We can't know you've had these tragedies in your life if you don't tell us," Bunton said.

The man, summoned four times, also faced the judge.

"I had no transportation or valid driver's license," he told the judge.

But lack of transportation didn't stop the man from showing up Tuesday. Deputy U.S. Marshal Carlos Treviso said a warrant was issued to pick up the man Monday night. Treviso carried out the order.

"Jury service is an important part of your life," Bunton told the defendants.

"Both of you have registered to vote . . . (which) shows you have an interest in what goes on in our government," Bunton said.

Bunton did not impose a fine or punishment. Both could have been fined or held in civil contempt.

Later, Bunton said he calls in and holds reluctant jurors accountable about once every year or two.

"It's not right to the people who do remember, do come and do take responsibility," Bunton said later.

According to John Neil, deputy in charge of the U.S. District Clerk's Office, about 10 peroent of people summoned for federal jury duty fail to show up or contact the court.

'Jury service is an important part of your life ... It's not right to the people who do remember, do come and do take responsibility.'

— Judge Lucius Bunton

Out of 100 people summoned in a six-month period, an actual panel of about 70 are chosen. Of those who don't make it, about six never respond to the summons and the remainder are excused by the judge, have moved or are deceased.

"Judge Bunton likes to try to call in no more jurors than he absolutely needs to," Neil said.

Because of no-shows, jury selection has come close to being short.

"We've never had to postpone one. The closest we've had was for a civil trial where 18 showed up out of 25," Neil said. A pool of at least 15 people is necessary to chose a civil jury.

Of the seven who failed to come, most were unexcused, Neil said. The man who spent Monday night in jail was one of them.

"Sometimes we have those who just totally forget about us," Neil said.

Potential jurors are instructed to contact the court if they have problems. Some don't.

"I don't think they take it seriously," Neil said.

The names of the two people who appeared before Bunton Tuesday are on the next summons list.

For those asked to appear for jury duty in federal court, some are chosen for the grand jury (which meets about once a month for 18 months) or petit jury (for a term of six months, subject to serve on a criminal jury or civil jury and can be called at any time during a given month). Others, by a draw of a lot, will not serve.

Possible jurors are instructed on the etiquette of the court.

In the federal system, jurors are paid $40 per day and 25 cents per mile for travel to and from home.

30 MISD students to visit Washington

It's a presidential election year and 30 Midland students will head off to Washington, D.C., to meet with presidential administrators next month.

The students will spend a week visiting landmarks and attending seminars which focus on how former presidents have shaped the nation's destiny.

They hope to get a first-hand look at the presidency and operations of the nation's capital with the Close Up Program.

"I'm excited about all of it," said Gwen Walraven, MHS senior, who said one of the sites students will be visiting is the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Wall.

She said Midland students will share a room with a fellow student and two students from other cities.

The Arlington, Va.-based Close Up Foundation offers "citizenship learning adventures" for high school students in the capitol city, Philadelphia and Williamsburg, Va.

Midland students will attend the Feb. 9-15 week of activities focusing on the presidency.

This year's entourage will include 17 students from Lee High School, 13 from Midland High School, and students from Odessa and Permian high schools.

The program is offered to any junior or senior student with certain guidelines. "Students must be passing all their classes and have good grades in citizenship," according to Deanna Krehbiel, MHS social studies teacher and Close Up sponsor along with MHS honors government teacher James

Woman arrested just before husband's sentencing

■ When woman tried to enter courtroom for sentencing she was arrested on drug charges.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A Fort Worth woman was arrested on drug charges Tuesday as she entered a courtroom where her common-law husband and two other men were to be sentenced on crack cocaine dealing charges, court officials said.

Latasha Greene was apprehended outside the federal courtroom and later afforded an initial appearance before U.S. Magistrate Robert Sykes.

She was charged with conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute more than 50 grams of crack cocaine and use of a telephone to facilitate a felony.

Ms. Greene, who remains jailed, is scheduled to appear for a detention hearing on Friday.

According to an affidavit submitted by a Drug Enforcement Administration agent, Ms. Greene was allegedly involved in a drug-dealing organization under the direction of her common-law husband, Frederick Branch.

Branch, who was arrested in August and convicted in November, was sentenced in U.S. District Court to 30 years imprisonment for conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute cocaine, five years for possession with intent to distribute the drug, and five years for a related weapon possession.

Two other men, arrested and convicted with Branch, were also sentenced Tuesday.

Andre Thompson received 15½ years for the conspiracy charge, 15½ years for the possession with intent to distribute charge, and four years for using a communication device to further a felony, all to run concurrently.

Kevin Joe Hill was sentenced to 17½ years for the conspiracy charge and 17½ years for the possession with intent to distribute charge, to run concurrently.

During their sentencing, Branch and Thompson maintained their innocence and complained to U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton that some of the jurors at their hearing were sleeping.

Also found guilty at the November trial was Gloria Sherman, who has not yet been sentenced.

Jimmy Sherman and Michael Brown, who testified for the government against the four, have pleaded guilty on lesser charges and have previously each been sentenced to four years imprisonment.

A fifth man tried with Branch and the others was acquitted.

Ms. Greene allegedly "was involved in Branch's cocaine base, "Crack," organization and actively ran the organization when Branch was in prison recently," the DEA affidavit stated.

Farmers quiz agriculture secretary

■ Satellite TV talk gives Hale County farmers the opportunity to ask questions of Ed Madigan.

Associated Press

PLAINVIEW — About 400 Hale County farmers complained about loans, asked about global trade talks and joked about hunting Tuesday in a first-ever satellite TV talk with Agriculture Secretary Ed Madigan.

The nation's top ag official and several deputies responded from Washington to questions and worries of farmers gathered at a college auditorium.

"We are trying to make USDA more farmer-friendly than it is," Madigan said. "That's why we are looking into what's going on in Hale County, Texas."

He was questioned about deficiency payments, foreign grain subsidies, bureaucratic jargon and negotiations on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

"We are not going to agree to a GATT agreement that is not better than the status quo," Madigan said. "The stumbling block right now is the European Community, which is a big subsidizer of ag exports."

"We hope we can get them to reduce some of those subsidies so we can get an agreement that Hale County will be proud of," he said.

When a farmer said loans from the Farmers Home Administration were slow to come, the agency's chief, Roland Vautour, urged him and others to complete loan applications as fully as possible.

"If the paperwork is complete, often the money can be awarded on the spot," Vautour said.

Brian Klein, a Plainview resident who is a student at Iowa State University, said it is "almost impossible" to understand the acronyms used by the Agriculture Conservation and Stabilization Service.

"Once you become a bureaucrat, you fall in love with the alphabet and there is no let-up," Keith Bjerke, chief of the ASCS, explained. "So as soon as you graduate and move up to Washington and want to change that, we would appreciate it."

Madigan even received an invitation to go pheasant hunting from Joe Don Scott, owner of a Plainview sporting goods store.

"I'll even let you bring one individual, possibly Mr. Bush," Scott said. "But let me remind you, I am a Democrat."

"If I am going hunting with a Democrat, we are only bringing one shotgun and I am going to be carrying it," joked Madigan, who was a Republican congressman from Illinois before President Bush appointed him Secretary of Agriculture last year.

The satellite teleconference was the first of eight such discussions the Ag Department plans with farmers across the country.

USDA spokesman Sidney Haggard said Hale County was chosen because its 1,850 farmers grow diverse set of crops — cotton, corn, wheat, milo, beets and soybeans.

"You name it, they grow it," Haggard said. "We felt their concerns would reflect those of farmers across the country."

Jackie Harris, who grows cotton, corn and wheat near Plainview, said the meeting was beneficial.

"Maybe we're not getting the answers to questions we would desire. But this is the way to bring our problems to these officials and make some improvements to the farm program," Harris said.

ed making exceptions."

The alternative school is designed to accommodate students who are unable to attend school during regular hours, including students with jobs or children or young women who are pregnant.

FOCUS member Margie Titus said that Dr. Coleman is an excellent example of everything students attending the school should strive for in life.

"Indeed we are very distressed that the recommendation made by James Fuller (board member) was dismissed," Ms. Titus said. "It is way past due for a school in Midland to be named after an African-American."

Ms. Titus said that FOCUS believes it is important to name the school after someone the students can get to know personally rather than for someone who is dead and the students have no interest in knowing.

"Dr. Coleman has been fighting for civil rights since I've known her. There are many African-Americans in history that have been ignored. And I think it's time to give one of them some exposure," Ms. Titus said.

"It would promote attitudinal changes in our young people and give them a sense of self-worth. It is not good for our minority students to feel so unwanted. There should be no room for any of the 'ism's in our society — whether it be racism or sexism."

Board members, who did not discuss the issue at Tuesday's meeting, thanked the members of FOCUS for a "well-received" presentation.

In other action Tuesday, board members unanimously accepted the low bid of $9,590,400 from the Faulkner Construction Company for the construction of Abell Junior High School.

Construction is expected to begin in mid-to-late February and the school should be open for students in September 1993, MISD officials said.

Dave Leonard, formerly of the Leonard Construction Company, is the manager of Faulkner's Midland office.

Bids were received from seven other companies.

Judge postpones execution date for teen's killer

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A state judge on Tuesday postponed the execution of convicted killer Delma Banks Jr., who was scheduled for lethal injection before dawn.

State District Judge Leon Pesek of Texarkana modified the date until March 15.

Banks, 33, was sentenced to die for the April 15, 1980, robbery-slaying of Richard Wayne Whitehead, 16.

Prosecutors said Banks asked Whitehead to give him a ride home after a dance. The two drank some beer together and drove Whitehead's girlfriend home, then returned to a park.

Banks shot Whitehead three times in the head and stole his car, prosecutors said. The teen-ager's body was found in a park near Nash.

Bradford.

Bradford noted that grade point average was not a consideration.

"We also try to have a cross section of kids attending," Ms. Krehbiel said, "and we have scholarships available."

Most students have attempted to earn their own money to cover expenses.

"They had to be willing to work to help earn money. Some of them have even taken part-time jobs," Ms. Krehbiel said.

Students solicited donations from businesses and individuals. They also sold calendars and daily planners and held fund-raisers.

The cost for each student to attend, which includes travel and accommodations, is $1,022. "So we were looking at raising over $13,000," Ms. Krehbiel said.

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs raised $1,700 for Midland students at a raffle for a half a side of beef, donated by Clark's Wholesale Meat. Various local businesses have also made donations to the group.

"MISD gives each school $1,000 in seed money to get started," Bradford said.

Students have raised money through a car wash, selling refreshments at school drama performances, and selling smoked turkeys.

"We are very close to our goal. We are within $800 of making it," said Ms. Krehbiel, "and we have until Feb. 9."

MHS senior Todd Manning said he solicited donations from some individuals to cover his expenses. "Quite a few students went in together on group projects, selling tickets for car washes, selling chances on the raffle and selling nachos and sodas at the Midland High School Homecoming parade," he said.

Beth White, the LHS social studies teacher and Close Up sponsor, said traveling to Washington will be a first-time experience for all of the 17 LHS students.

"I've been to Washington, D.C., before," she said. "But not with a program like this. It is unique because it offers students an opportunity to see government really working. We are hoping to see Congressman Lamar Smith and at least one of our two senators."

Ms. White said the students have a heavy agenda "beginning from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m."

Despite the fact that Todd has never been to Washington, D.C., he said his interest in the trip goes beyond sight-seeing.

"I want to see our government do what we've read about in class," he said.

Highway 191, FM 1788 overpass closed

Staff Report

The overpass at State Highway 191 and Farm to Market Road 1788 will be closed to traffic beginning today, according to officials with the Texas Department of Transportation.

Traffic will remain on the frontage roads. All drivers, on both Highway 191 and FM 1788 must come to a complete stop at the intersection. Traffic will not be allowed to travel on the overpass until June of this year, officials said.

As part of the final phase of construction on the highway, the overpass will undergo changes to connect it with the main lanes. Traffic will not be allowed to travel over the intersection on the bridge.

The construction is part of a $4.1 million project to build the main lanes of Highway 191 from FM 1788 to just west of State Highway 158.

The estimated date of completion for the entire project is June 1993.

A Night Owl Meeting, chaired by Evelyn K. of Lamesa, follows the Friday night speaker.

In addition, the conference includes a Northwest Texas Area Assembly Business Meeting at 2 p.m. Saturday in the hotel's Civic Room.

Pilgrim's Pride employee denies he was hero

LONGVIEW (AP) — A worker credited with helping to save a woman from a blaze at an East Texas chicken processing plant shrugged off the designation of hero, saying he only did what came naturally.

Curtis Brown was crawling through flames at the Pilgrim's Pride Corp. plant Jan. 8 when he saw a co-worker, Carolyn Turner, engulfed in fire and running blindly.

"I ripped off my work smock, shoved her to the ground and began trying to put out the fire. It was almost mechanical," Brown recalled.

Ms. Turner, 33, sustained burns over 30 percent of her body and was in fair condition Tuesday at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas.

Brown, a production supervisor on a fryer line, said he and Ms. Turner were injured along with 19 others when a hydraulic pipe in the equipment apparently ruptured, with the leaking fluid igniting.

But Brown said he didn't think of himself as a hero.

"I didn't have time to think about saving myself or her. I just did what came naturally," he told the Longview News-Journal on Monday.

Bob Pearson, Pilgrim's vice president for human resources, and others listed Brown's action among other acts of employees' heroism in the blaze.

Brown sustained second- and third-degree burns on his right hand and arm and other burns on his left arm and head. But he said a co-worker had to tell him he was injured after he had moved Ms. Turner to safety and accounted for the rest of his crew.

"I didn't even realize I was hurt. Yet, my hands and arms were burned, and my hair net had melted to my head."

He said the fire began during repairs to the fryer line, containing machines and conveyor belts where chicken portions were processed for shipment.

"The flames were flying past me in sheets, almost like a very hard rain," Brown said. "I was wondering if I was going to get out alive, or was this going to be another North Carolina with bodies stacked up everywhere, mine among them."

In September, 25 people died and 56 others were hurt in a fire at a North Carolina chicken processing plant. In that blaze, owner Imperial Food Products Inc. was fined $808,150 for locking doors and violating other safety codes.

Brown said he saw Ms. Turner when she emerged from flames in the Pilgrim's Pride plant, about 110 miles east of Dallas.

"It was eerie. She came out of a wall of solid fire with flames all over her body. It was like those fiery stunts you see in Hollywood, but this was real," he said.

"She had flames on her face, and was beating at them to put them out," Brown said.

He was released Saturday from Titus County Memorial Hospital. But he said he doesn't know when he will return to work.

Brown said he was amazed at how well Pilgrim employees evacuated the plant, and he praised the company's fire drills and safety apparatus.

The facility reopened Monday at partial capacity, said Bill Voss, Pilgrim president and chief executive officer.

Bond hearing set for father who fled overseas with sons

The State

HOUSTON (AP) — A father who fled overseas with his two sons in violation of a child custody ruling was ordered held without bond Tuesday.

Charles William "Chuck" Smith Jr. made initial appearances in both state and federal courts Tuesday after he was extradited from Mexico City.

He faces state charges of interfering with a child custody ruling and federal charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. A bond hearing has been set for Thursday in State District Judge Norman Lanford's court.

"We have a father that really cares about his children. And his cares and his desires for their well-being is what's important," said his attorney, Stanley Schneider.

Defense attorneys contend Smith abducted his sons in 1984 out of fear for their safety while living with their mother, Carolyn Shaffer Smith. Prosecutors discount that claim.

The boys — Charles William III, now 13, and Christopher Jason, now 11 — were reunited with their mother at Houston Intercontinental Airport Monday night.

Federal agents arrested Smith in Cuernavaca, about 50 miles south of Mexico City, on Friday. He accompanied his sons on the flight to Houston.

"Our position is he is a risk for flight. Obviously, as you all know, he has been gone from the state of Texas since 1984," prosecutor Ed Porter said.

Mrs. Smith's attorney, Randy Donato, said she last saw her children in September 1984 when Chuck Smith and his father picked them up for a visit. Smith then fled to Florida with the children, later traveling to England and Scotland. The children reportedly have been living in Mexico the last three years and spending summers in Canada, Donato said.

If convicted, Smith could be sentenced to up to 10 years in prison on the state charge.

The boys are expected to testify at Thursday's hearing, court officials said.

Smith is the son of former Spring car dealer Charles "Chick" Smith Sr.

Mrs. Smith was awarded $53 million in damages in a 1985 lawsuit against the elder Smith and other relatives of her ex-husband. The jury said she had been wronged in a conspiracy among her former husband's relatives to abduct the children. The award was the first in Texas under a then-new state kidnapping law.

National group talks turkey about creating demand for bird

SAN ANTONIO — The holidays may be over, but the turkey industry isn't resting.

Members of the National Turkey Federation — including growers, breeders and processors — met Tuesday in San Antonio to decide how to ensure the growth of their industry.

One way may be to create a demand for products such as ground turkey meat in schools and other places receiving U.S. Department of Agriculture commodities, said Mike Holbrook, poultry division director with the USDA Agriculture Marketing Service.

The turkey industry should educate schools about the nutritional value and price advantages of turkey as compared with other meats, Holbrook said, and provide recipes and stress the convenience of turkey products.

The USDA is under increasing pressure to provide foods that are convenient and require less labor, hence the decline in demand for whole turkeys and more demand for processed foods, he said.

The agency purchases an average of $110 million annually in poultry commodities, or about 135 million pounds, including 47 million pounds of turkey, Holbrook said.

The turkey industry should educate schools about the nutritional value and price advantages of turkey . . .

The department traditionally has focused on removing surplus foods from the market but is shifting more toward satisfying the needs of recipients, Holbrook said.

"I want you to know there are some problems with these programs and perhaps some opportunities," Holbrook said. "We are willing to work with the (food) industries and try to keep them healthy."

As the federal budget remains static, competition continues for the same amount of USDA money, he said, adding there is little vendor participation by some segments of the turkey industry in the commodities program.

Approximately 700 members of the National Turkey Federation are attending the group's annual convention, which lasts until Thursday.

Stuart E. Proctor Jr., executive vice president of the organization, said in a prepared statement that turkey consumption has doubled in the past decade and that the NTF must look for ways to generate further growth.

"The beef, pork and broiler industries are working every day to respond to the challenge we present," he said. "If we don't spend time at this convention analyzing changing consumer trends, our tremendous growth could slow down."

Navy trainer collides with F-14 fighter

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A Navy trainer with two pilots aboard crashed Tuesday into Corpus Christi Bay after colliding with an F-14 fighter, the Navy said.

The pilot of the jet fighter thought he had a landing gear problem and requested a midair inspection by the T-34 propeller-driven trainer from the 27th Training Squadron, said Lt. Leslie Hammes.

"The (T-34) pilot confirmed the gear looked good," she said. "Upon departing the pilot clipped the wing of the T-34 against the F-14," she said.

The smaller plane went down in the bay about 4:15 p.m. (CST), she said.

The F-14, from Miramar, Calif., landed safely.

Lt. Hammes said the instructor pilot from the T-34 had been found.

"Name and condition are being withheld until notification of next of kin," she said, while refusing to confirm reports the man was dead.

The hunt for the student pilot continued after darkness, she said.

"The search has not been called off," she said.

Frozen cobblers found to be 'just peachy'

By Linda Anderson

OK, I admit it — I'm a sucker for pies. They can be filled with beef stew or quiche, topped with biscuits or cornbread, I don't care — if it has a crust, I love it.

Anderson

However, the best and most perfect pies are for dessert. The ones with cream fillings are wonderful, but to really appreciate a pie, nothing beats a two-crust pie filled with fruit. Even patriotism has been linked with Mom and apple pie...

With that kind of culinary history, is it any wonder that I decided I just had to taste-test two kinds of frozen cobbler I found at the supermarket recently? While not exactly officially pies, both cobblers had top and bottom crusts and both were filled with peaches. How could I resist?

A 17-ounce Marie Callender's peach cobbler cost $2.59. Stilwell old fashioned/frozen peach cobbler in a 32-ounce container cost $2.99. That means for only 40 cents more you get almost twice as much if you buy Stilwell cobbler.

Marie Callender's peach cobbler comes with label advertising that claims: "This cobbler was made using only the finest ingredients including juicy, summer peaches, pure cane sugar, and pastry quality flour to create one of your all-time favorites."

Sure enough, ingredients listed (in order, starting with most and going to least) start off with peaches, followed by flour, sugar, partially hydrogenated soybean oil, water and peach nectar. That's about what you'd have in a homemade peach cobbler.

Stilwell peach cobbler had a label guarantee — "Stilwell Foods, Inc. is committed to providing you with high quality frozen foods. If you have comments regarding your satisfaction with this product, please send them, along with the UPC proof of purchase to: Consumer Relations, Stilwell Foods, Inc., P.O. Box 432, Stilwell, Oklahoma 74960." — as well as a nutrition label that claimed one serving (there's eight in the package) contains 251 calories, 9 grams of fat (that means 81 calories from fat) and 0 mg cholesterol.

I had taste-tested Marie Callender's meat pot pies before and decided they had too much crust, so I was expecting the same problem with the company's peach cobbler. I was pleasantly surprised to discover that the crust was tender, flaky and in just the right amount. It was also dusted with cinnamon and sugar, which gave it a real homemade touch.

Stilwell peach cobbler had a firmer crust but a more homemade-tasting filling, with just a hint of nutmeg (which is one of my favorite spices).

Both cobblers had to be heated in a conventional oven, but then would you really want to bake a nice, warm, comfort food like cobbler in a microwave oven?

I have to admit I really enjoyed this taste-test. I just haven't been able to decide which one I like best. Maybe I'll have to try them both again...

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Expert on 'comfort foods' writes cookbook

By Michelle Hancock
N.Y. Times News Service

Mary Emmerling is often asked how she knew two years ago, when she began work on her latest book, that there'd be a recession and people would prefer staying in to going out, a comforting chicken pot pie to a pricey pate.

Well, she didn't, says the author of "Mary Emmerling's At Home in the Country" (Clarkson Potter, $30), a book packed with holiday and weekend menus and recipes, as well as Mary's tips on collecting, organizing and entertaining. She simply wrote about the way she likes to do things. And generally, that's simply, but with great style.

I look at how she is dressed and see that, too, is simply, but with great style: a starched white western shirt with pearl snaps, brown suede skirt, brown cowboy boots. Her fondness for heart-shaped items shows up in diamond stud earrings and silver bracelets with huge heart-shaped turquoise stones, acquired along Santa Fe's plaza. Her hair is long and naturally blond, her eyes friendly and blue, her face freckled. You get the feeling she'd make a great neighbor.

"My book really appeals to mid-America," says the expert on American country style. "It's not intended to appeal to Miss Hoity Toity in LA."

And while the book — which contains recipes from Mary, her family and her friends — is pretty enough to sit atop a coffee table, Mary says she hopes people will really use it "because the more a book is used, the more it's loved."

Mary grew up in Washington, D.C., where her mother ran the cotillion for the congressional delegation's children. ("I remember she had to hire extra-tall pages to dance with Lynda Bird (Johnson)," she says.) She and her two children — Samantha, 17, and Jonathan, 14 — divide their time among New York City, Sagaponack, Long Island, and Key West.

So, what kind of party would she give if money were no object?

"At the beach at sunset," she answers immediately. "If I had all the money in the world, I'd fly in each and every one of the people I've made friends with through my books. ... There'd be a red sky and a full moon. We'd have the shrimp on the cover (of the book) and a big potato salad. And, of course, my brother Terry is famous for his margaritas. ... "

Which reminds her of a party last summer where a friend came upon an extension cord extending down toward the beach. The friend said, "I just know if I keep following this, Terry's at the end of it." But back to the fantasy party.

"The kids would bring their friends," she continues. "Oh, and you have to have s'mores. Someone forgot at our last beach party, and everyone complained."

Mary says she considers soup the perfect comfort food, especially for chilly days and nights. The following recipe is from "Mary Emmerling's At Home in the Country."

MANY MUSHROOM SOUP

½ cup chopped leeks, white part only
4 tablespoons (one-half stick) unsalted butter
½ white mushrooms, thinly sliced
½ fresh shiitake, chanterelle or porcini mushrooms, soaked for 5 minutes in ½-cup warm white wine
4 large boiling potatoes, peeled and thinly sliced
4 cups chicken stock
1 to 1½ cups half-and-half
2 cups heavy cream
Salt, pepper and nutmeg

In a large saucepan, cook the leeks in the butter until tender. Add all the mushrooms with the wine and cook until softened. Add the potatoes and stock, and simmer, covered, until the potatoes are very soft, about 30 minutes.

Cool slightly. Puree in a food processor, then return the soup to a saucepan.

Add the half-and-half, 1 cup of the cream and seasonings to taste. Heat through; do not boil.

Ladle the soup into bowls and garnish each serving with heavy cream.

U.S. junk foods invade France

By Steven P. Rosenfeld

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Nacho chips, packaged desserts and microwave entrees, to be washed down with California wines, are headed for a promotion in France, the land of cordon bleu cooking.

The French company Monoprix has agreed to introduce and promote such products at its 400 stores during an American food festival in February.

Dale Cochran, Iowa's secretary of agriculture and president of the Mid-America International Agri-Trade Council, says Monoprix will introduce $3.6 million in U.S. food products, including $900,000 from the Midwest.

In addition, Monoprix has agreed to spend $350,000 to promote the American food, a marketing budget to be matched by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agriculture Service.

"We believe the introduction of quality products to the French consumers and the extensive promotional efforts that will take place during the food store promotion will lead to long-term sales of Midwestern food products throughout France and lead to more opportunities in other areas of Europe," Cochran said in a statement distributed by his Iowa office.

What kind of quality products?

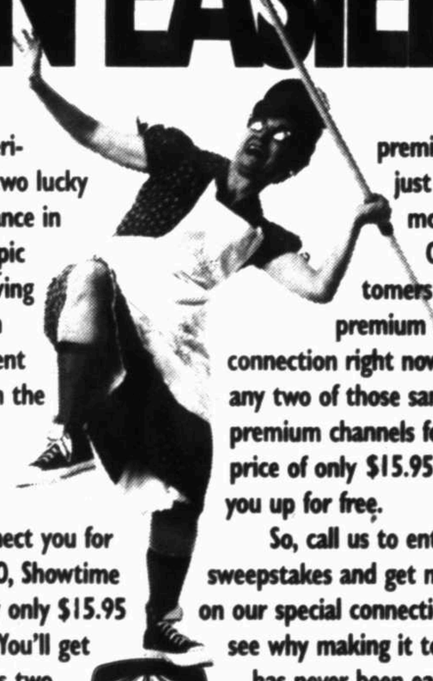

The specific products have yet to be decided, says Bill Brewer, a spokesman for Cochran. But the agreement covers such American delicacies as junk foods and convenience products. Brewer says breakfast cereals, snack chips, microwave meals, desserts and wines will all be included.

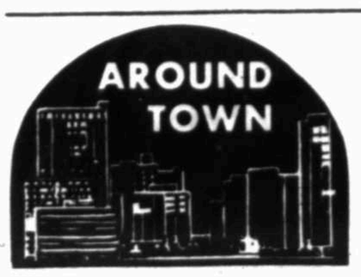

Participants will include food processors with Midwest ties such as Geo. A. Hormel and Co. and Sara Lee Corp., and products made with such Iowa commodities as corn and soybeans.

"Developing new markets and expanding existing markets for value-added food products offer our greatest opportunities to create more demand for Iowa's raw agricultural commodities, better prices for farmers and jobs, income and opportunities for rural communities throughout Iowa and the Midwest," Cochran said.

California olive oil takes on European imports

By Florence Fabricant
N.Y. Times News Service

ST. HELENA, Calif. — When Californians talk about varietals, harvests and pressing these days, they may have olives, not grapes, in mind.

The same undaunted pioneer spirit that over the years has successfully conquered the gastronomic frontiers of wines, goat cheeses and sun-dried tomatoes is now tackling olive oil.

"With olive oil, we are exactly where we were with wine in the 1960s," said Darrell Corti, an owner of Corti Brothers, a wine and food company in Sacramento that has been selling California olive oils for several years.

There's certainly a niche, considering that 100,000 tons of olive oil was imported into this country in 1990. Most of this oil was inexpensive, was refined with heat and chemicals and carried the "pure" designation.

But there also was plenty of the top-of-the-line, unrefined "extra-virgin" variety, costing from $10 to $40 a liter, flowing into this country for consumers to drizzle on their grilled vegetables.

There are no exact figures for total domestic production of olive oil, but it is doubtful that it exceeded 200 tons last year. Yet there are now more than a dozen brands being made in California.

THE CALIFORNIA oils are all cold-pressed extra-virgin oils, designed to compete with the European imports. Several brands, like Sciabica, produced by the oldest olive oil company in the state, and Olio Santo, the brand made for Tra Vigne, a restaurant in the Napa Valley, are sold in stores across the country.

The Oakville Grocery in the Napa Valley and Palo Alto has six California olive oils on its shelves.

Winery owners like Carolyn Wente of Wente Vineyards, Joy Sterling of Iron Horse and Robert Mondavi have been harvesting olives from trees on their properties to make small quantities of oil for their own use or to sell in winery gift shops and tasting rooms.

Others, like Lila Jaeger of Rutherford Hill and Freemark Abbey, have just begun producing enough olive oil to sell to local food shops. Mrs. Jaeger, one of those who was in the wine business back in the 1960s and is into olive oil now, said, "I looked around and saw those beautiful olives on the ground with cars driving over them and wondered why we couldn't make fine quality olive oil in California."

Why all those olives were being wasted in the first place, instead of being packed into cans, jars or even oil presses, takes some explaining. Olive trees were first planted in California in the 18th century by Spanish missionaries.

It's no coincidence that one of the main varieties grown in the state is called mission. By the late 19th century, olive trees were being planted by the thousands near Sacramento, in the Central Valley and in the San Francisco area, with most of the fruit being pressed for oil.

UNTIL THE 1940s, there was a thriving olive oil industry in the state, with about 40 companies pressing oil. This was mostly inexpensive olive oil produced for the nation's Italian and Spanish markets. After World War II, the industry was virtually extinguished by cheaper imports from Italy, Spain and Greece.

The prevailing taste in those days relegated olive oil strictly to robust ethnic cooking; it was not something to sully elegant, refined food. Here is what Julia Child, Simone Beck and Louisette Bertholle had to say about it in the first edition of "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" (Alfred A. Knopf, 1964):

"Classical French cooking uses almost exclusively odorless, tasteless vegetable oils for cooking and salads. Olive oil, which dominates Mediterranean cooking, has too much character for the subtle flavors of a delicate dish."

At the same time that the domestic production of olive oil was being reduced to a mere trickle (Sciabica and Orland Olive Oil, near Sacramento, were among the few that kept at it), the olive canning industry was booming.

The method for producing the California-style black olive — achieved by curing ripe olives in lye — was developed around the turn of the century. By the 1930s, methods for pitting and canning the olives had been perfected. Today, virtually all the olives harvested in the state, some 126,000 tons in 1990, go into cans.

The canning boom still left plenty of small olive groves scattered about the state, like those at Freemark Abbey, which had grown wild and untended. And, until recently, there was not a great deal of interest in those olives for oil.

JOE SCIABICA, who began making cold-pressed olive oil with his father, Nicola, in Modesto in 1936, is somewhat amazed at the prices olive oils fetch today. His son, Daniel, who is in charge of marketing for the company, sees it as the future for California oils.

"We want to show the world what we can do," he said. "We are looking at olive oil like wine now. Most olive oil available to the general public is pretty generic refined oil. But there are now people who appreciate better quality."

And it's with that in mind that Mrs. Jaeger, Ms. Wente, Michael Chiarello of Tra Vigne and others have gone into the olive oil business. Some harvest their own olives and some buy olives from friends, neighbors, other vineyard owners and farmers with anywhere from a few dozen to a few hundred trees, both well tended and wild. But the network of suppliers is growing.

In late December, there was an olive oil festival with seminars attended by about 150 people at Wente Vineyards near San Francisco. In March, there will be a conference at Hudson Vineyards in the Napa Valley.

For the first time in nearly 100 years, olive trees suitable for making high-quality oil are being planted by visionaries like Nan McEvoy, who is an owner of Chronicle Publishing in San Francisco. She has a 550-acre ranch in Marin County and has hired Maurizio Castelli, a prominent consultant to estates in Tuscany, to help her with her thousand or so trees.

ANOTHER IS Ridgely Evers, a self-professed Italiaphile in the computer software business. Evers has planted more than 1,000 trees on 81 acres near Healdsburg in Sonoma County and has another 1,600 waiting to go in the ground. He has estimated his investment at around $15 a tree.

"We could plant prime chardonnay on this land and get $1,600 a ton for it," he said. "But I like doing something different."

That his company is called Toscano Sonoma will give you some idea of where his tastes lie. "The Spanish varieties like manzanillo and mission are not primarily for making oil," he said. He is planting varieties like leccino and pendolino and expects to harvest his first commercial crop in about three years.

Along with the variety of olives, some of the variables that affect the color, flavor and texture of olive oil, as many of the newcomers in the business are discovering, are the soil, climate, pruning and especially the ripeness of the olives at harvest.

The producers are also learning about labeling.

The federal Food and Drug Administration is concerned mostly with seeing to it that products labeled 100 percent olive oil are not diluted with any other kind of oil; the agency is not an arbiter of the "extra-virgin" designation.

And American producers are not members of the International Olive Oil Council, which has established the rules of what's virgin and what's not. Extra-virgin oil is not supposed to have been treated with heat or chemicals; it is the oil produced from the first pressing of the olives and it has the most intense flavor.

It's not just the extra-virgin designation that deserves scrutiny. "There are people whose labels say Napa Valley on them when the olives don't come from the Napa Valley and the oil isn't even being made there," Mrs. Jaeger said. "It's only where the bottling is done."

DEAR ABBY

Love fails to conquer man's fear of marriage commitment

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been going steady with "John" for two years. I love him and he says he loves me. I am 30 and he is 32.

Van Buren

John wants me to date only him and nobody else. I had hoped it was about time we got married, but he says he is too young and is not ready for marriage. I feel if he is not ready after two years, he will never marry me. He says maybe "someday," but he doesn't know when.

I broke up with him because I felt he was just using me, or he would make a commitment. Now he's telling his friends that we broke up because we fought too much.

Do you think I did the right thing in breaking up with him? Or should I just hang in there until he's ready? — WAITING FOR A RING

DEAR WAITING: Nobody knows John better than John, and if he feels that at 32 he is not yet ready for marriage, then he isn't.

Even if he is a late bloomer, after two years of dating, he should be able to come up with something more definite than a "maybe someday." I think you did the right thing, but don't be surprised if immediately after you start dating others, John comes back with a serious commitmemt.

DEAR ABBY: Do you ever feel as though the inhabitants of this planet have become stone deaf?

Please assure me that I am not the only one who has noticed this phenomenon. I live in a medium-sized apartment building, and it is not unusual to experience the irritating vibrations of someone's stereo who lives adjacent (not necessarily next door) to my apartment.

Stop at any red light, and you are likely to be joined by a vehicle that is literally "jumping" with raucous music.

Yes, I am an older person (60), but I expected that my hearing would diminish with age. Not so, apparently. I am among the group who still has acute hearing. Although I know you have no advice for my particular problem, thanks for letting me air my complaint — and who knows, just one compassionate soul out there may turn down the volume. — VICTIM OF NOISE POLLUTION

DEAR VICTIM: Maybe they don't build buildings like they used to — but if neighbor noises are truly annoying, report the offending tenant to the manager of your building.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl and a junior in high school. I read your column all the time and I think you give great advice. The other day, some girls were talking about a party they were going to, and then the conversation turned to alcohol and drugs. They started talking about the alcohol they drank and the drugs they took and what they wanted to try.

Abby, I never drank any alcohol or did any drugs. I have never smoked. I just never wanted to, so I have avoided going to parties where the kids do. Now I'm afraid of someone asking, "What drugs have you taken?" And, "Have you ever been drunk?"

These are the subjects the kids talk about. It seems like everyone drinks or does some drugs.

What should I say when someone asks me if I ever drank or tried drugs? I'm afraid to tell them the truth. — JUST WONDERING IN ROCK, MICH.

DEAR JUST WONDERING: Don't be afraid — be proud. Tell them you've never been drunk or tried drugs, and you have no intention of starting.

DEAR READERS: Your chuckle for today — unless you happen to be an economist: "An economist is a guy with a Phi Beta Kappa key on one end of his watch chain and no watch on the other end." — Alben W. Barkley

Cajun chef dreams about Louisiana food, not caviar

By Linda Beaulieu

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — When John Folse was first learning about cooking, his idea of the best meal possible consisted of a nice bottle of Dom Perignon, some blinis, sour cream and caviar sitting on a frosty bowl of ice.

But over the years, this Cajun chef's tastes have changed.

"A nice big bowl of Louisiana seafood gumbo with a scoop of potato salad sitting right on the rim is the last meal I want before I die," Folse says. "It's a very simple dish, perfectly cooked."

Folse is one of many these days extolling the wonders of Cajun and Creole cuisine, a craze that began with the efforts of chef Paul Prudhomme. His restaurant, Lafitte's Landing, is located in Donaldsonville, La. And he is the host of "A Taste of Louisiana," a Public Broadcasting Service cooking show.

"I come from a typical Cajun family, one of eight children, living in the bayous of Louisiana, which kept us pretty isolated from the rest of the world," Folse says.

"All men were pretty good cooks in southern Louisiana in the early days. And that tradition continued. We learned about cooking from our fathers as much as we did from our mothers."

Folse describes his style of cooking as "Louisiana indigenous cuisine," featuring the techniques of Cajun and Creole cooking with the natural ingredients and flavors of the bayou country — including onion, celery, bell pepper, garlic, green onion and parsley.

"The why's and the how's of what our great-great-grandfathers and grandmothers put into a pot is the important thing, how we have to start all our dishes today," he says. "You got to have the crawfish, the crabs, the shrimp, the oysters."

But then, Folse cautions, you have to remember what year it is.

"We're in the '90s," he says, "and we have to let this cuisine evolve into a style of cooking that is presentable on the tables of the '90s."

"Louisiana indigenous cuisine, then, is the marriage of the flavor and ingredients of Louisiana's wonderful bayou products with the very classical presentation of a trained chef. So when you look at it on the plate, it's going to look like a nice classical plate of food, but when you bite into it, you know it's from Louisiana."

One of Folse's favorite foods is the following recipe for Bread Pudding Cake, which he first tasted in French Settlement, La. "It takes a little patience, but it is a true masterpiece," he says.

BREAD PUDDING CAKE

5 10-inch loaves French bread
1 quart milk
6 eggs
1 cup sugar
¼ cup vanilla extract
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon nutmeg
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 cup raisins
1 cup chopped pecans
Praline Sabayon (recipe follows)

Slice French bread into ½-inch round croutons. In a large mixing bowl, combine milk, eggs and sugar; use a wire whisk to blend. Add vanilla, cinnamon and nutmeg. Continue to blend until all ingredients are well mixed and the consistency of a custard.

Oil a 10-inch cheesecake pan. Cover the bottom with a sheet of parchment. Place one layer of French bread croutons into the bottom of the pan, making sure there are no empty spaces. Sprinkle a small amount of raisins and pecans over this layer. Ladle in one-third of the custard mixture. Carefully press the custard into the croutons, using the tips of your fingers.

Continue this process until all the croutons and custard are used. You may find that 1 to 2 cups of the custard mixture will remain once the pan has been filled. This is normal and you must continue to add the custard, a little at a time, firmly pressing into the croutons until all has been used. This may take an hour or so. The bread pudding is always best if allowed to set in the refrigerator overnight before cooking. Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Place the bread pudding pan into a larger pan filled with water; cook in a 375-degree F oven for 1 to 1½ hours. Allow to cool. Serve with praline sayabon. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

PRALINE SABAYON

3 egg yolks
¼ cup sugar
¾ cup dry white wine
½ cup praline liqueur

Place 3 inches of water in a 5-quart saucepan over medium-high heat. Bring to a low boil. In a heavy mixing bowl, whisk egg yolks and sugar until creamy, about 3 to 5 minutes. Set aside.

In a saute pan over medium-high heat, combine white wine and praline liqueur. Bring to a slow boil, and whisking constantly, add to the egg mixture. Set the bowl on the top of the saucepan of water, creating a double boiler, and continue to whip until the mixture doubles in volume. Remove from heat and continue to whisk 1 to 2 minutes.

Walsh talks

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Bill Walsh, whose return to the San Francisco 49ers has been reported as imminent, has met with Stanford athletic director Ted Leland to discuss the Cardinal's vacant head football coach's job.

The Peninsula Times Tribune reported in its Tuesday editions that Walsh confirmed that he discussed the position with Leland during a meeting Monday.

"All I can say is that I've talked with Ted Leland about the job, but that doesn't necessarily mean I'm a candidate," Walsh said. "I've helped them in the past, looking at other candidates."

Before Leland's meeting with Walsh, Stanford assistant coaches Willie Shaw and Ron Turner reportedly were the leading candidates to replace Denny Green, who resigned last week to become the head coach of the Minnesota Vikings.

Williams' surgery

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Ted Williams, the last major-leaguer to bat .400 over a season, underwent surgery Tuesday morning at Shands Hospital, where he was first treated after suffering a minor stroke last month.

Williams, 73, was listed in good condition Tuesday afternoon.

"He is out of the procedure and he is doing well," Shands Hospital spokesman Chris Smith said.

Williams should be released in a week to 10 days, Smith said.

"He is expected to be OK."

Dr. Arthur Day, a professor of neurosurgery at the University of Florida, performed the operation on Williams. It lasted just over two hours.

Rebel squads split

Lady Rebs retain 2nd with win over Permian

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Left for dead by a pre-season poll that picked them to finish fifth in District 4-5A, the Midland Lee Lady Rebels continue to ride high on a season-long wave of emotion that has landed them in sole possession of second place.

Following Tuesday's decisive 48-40 win over Odessa Permian, Lee moved its record to 4-1 in district, 1½ games ahead of the Lady Panthers and crosstown rival Midland High, both of whom are at 2-2.

"This is a totally new feeling," Lee senior Tiffany Grafa said. "It's awesome."

Grafa was a catalyst for the Lady Rebs in the second half against Permian, coming off the bench to score all nine of her points in the game's final 16 minutes. But it was Grafa's play off the glass that made the biggest difference for Lee, as she took up the rebounding slack left when Tekeira Strambler fouled out early in the third quarter.

"I thought we really had a chance (when Strambler fouled out)," Permian head coach Cheryl Wallace said. "But we just got too far behind and (Grafa) did a great job off the boards."

Lachette Crisp again handled the bulk of the scoring for Lee, scoring 17 points, eight of which came in Lee's 18-point third quarter.

The Lady Panthers, 9-11 overall after the loss, appeared to have taken themselves out of contention early when they missed their first seven field goals, but by the end of the first quarter had returned to trail by only 5, 16-11. At the half, it was a two point Lee game, 22-20.

Throughout the game, the Lee girls displayed a great deal of patience by passing around until the open girl was found against Permian's 2-3 zone. Lee would often enough get the ball inside once a seam was found, but would often miss the shot.

In the telling first and third quarters, the Lee girls connected on 15-of-29 field goals, or 51.7 percent. During the same two periods, Permian hit just 9-of-22 from the field for 40.9 percent.

"I knew it was going to be a tough game," Wallace said. "It is every time we play. We were a little tight, a little nervous coming here. We're not used to pressure situations like this.

Permian takes 4-5A lead with 63-61 win over Lee

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

ODESSA — After his Odessa Permian boys basketball team defeated Midland Lee 63-61 in a battle of District 4-5A unbeatens here Tuesday, Panther head coach Willie Spears was ready to proclaim that Permian is no longer just a football school.

The Panthers are now in sole possession of first place with a 2-0 league record (11-9 overall), ½-game ahead of Lee and Abilene High, who are both 2-1.

"It feels great. Once the kids see the standings and realize that, their eyes will probably buck too," Spears said. "It shows the program is on its way. It's on the upswing."

What wasn't on the upswing Tuesday was ball control, free-throw shooting or field goal percentage. In a game that rapidly deteriorated into a physical affair, Permian committed 24 turnovers and shot 37.3 percent from the field (25-of-67). Lee turned the ball over 23 times and was 6-of-19 from the free-throw line for a 31.6 percentage.

Though the diminutive Rebels (14-10 overall) quickly gave way to Permian's 6-6 combo of Tony Daniels and Nicky Spain, Lee's weakness at the line was what eventually cost them the game and the 4-5A lead, according to Lee head coach Jon House.

"It's tough to keep those guys off the boards. They kept getting in there and making those put-backs," House said. "We played hard, but we didn't execute down the stretch and when you make 6-of-19 on free throws you're not going to beat anybody."

For a game that ended so close, it appeared early the the Rebs were going to make it a blowout. Lee jumped out to an 11-2 lead before Spears called a timeout to regroup with 5:34 to play in the first quarter. After that, the Panthers outscored Lee 15-5 in the remainder of the period and led 17-16 entering the second quarter.

Permian scored four more points than Lee in the second quarter to lead 35-30 at halftime, and took that same five-point margin into the fourth at 50-45.

The Rebels opened the fourth with two straight baskets to make the score 50-49, and the teams traded five buckets before

Seles nets AP honor

MELBOURNE, Australia — Monica Seles' eyes sparkled at the thought of being linked with the greatest women athletes of the century, some she had only read about and others she had admired from a distance.

After a year of glittering triumphs and embarrassing gaffes, a Grand Slam season with a giant hole in the middle and wild rumors swirling all around, Seles was the overwhelming choice of sports writers and broadcasters as the 1991 AP Female Athlete of the Year.

Top seeds survive in Australia

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Stefan Edberg's new dictum — "No strain, no pain" — worked just as well for Monica Seles as the Australian Open top seeds survived 110-degree courtside heat and glided closer to their second straight Grand Slam titles.

Taking some speed off his serve to save his sore arm, Edberg, the U.S. Open champion, beat Claudio Mezzadri, 6-1, 6-2, 6-1.

Seles, recovering from neck pain that also limited her serving power, eschewed her recent experiments with a serve-and-volley game and relied on her dominating groundstrokes to dispatch Kimiko Date, 6-2, 7-5.

Seles had a little more trouble against the stubborn, net-charging Date, who fought back from 4-1 in the second set before suffering a break in the 12th game for the match.

What Edberg held back in power he made up for with his fluid, quick movement at the net as he showed little rustiness from a two-month layoff caused by knee and wrist injuries. He strained his right forearm in a tune-up exhibition last week and is deliberately pacing himself until the inflammation and pain subside.

"Obviously, I can improve on my serve," he said. "It's coming each match. It's getting better. I still have some way to go to play really good tennis, but I'm playing well enough to win matches. I still believe I have a chance to win it like anybody else."

Mezzadri, a 26-year-old Swiss ranked No. 128, gave Edberg no reason to push himself, obligingly dumping balls into the net, spraying shots wildly, staying deep and yielding the net to Edberg.

Swedish fans, their faces painted as always here in the blue and yellow colors of their nation's flag, also got to cheer an upset by another compatriot, Lars Wahlgren.

A qualifier ranked No. 256, Wahlgren beat his second top-20 opponent, 12th-seeded American Derrick Rostagno, 6-1, 7-5, 7-6 (7-3), to reach the third round.

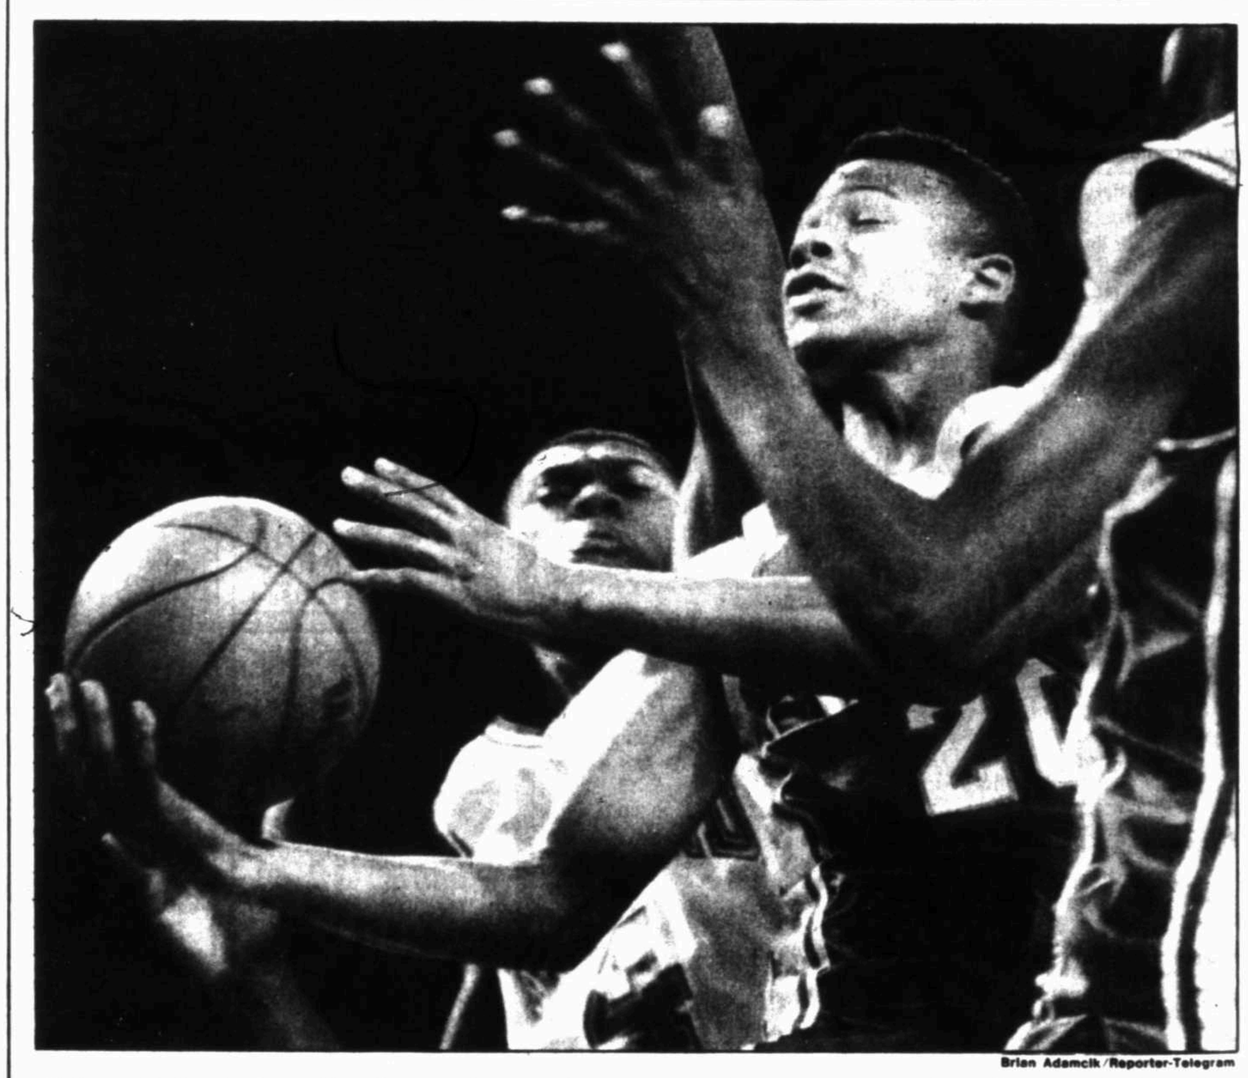

"He looked a little bit slow, so today was the right day for me to beat him," said Wahlgren, who beat No. 20 Brad Gilbert in the first round. "It's not often you get a chance to beat the very good guys."

Patrick McEnroe, unseeded but playing well on the courts where he reached the semifinals a year ago, also made the third round with a 6-1, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 victory over former Stanford teammate Jeff Tarango.

While McEnroe played as placidly as ever, Tarango raged angrily, frequently complaining about line calls.

"Why don't you give me four points and call it even and start a new match,"

Midland High stumbles again

■ Odessa High gets 30 points from guard Avery Thomas as Midland High falls into the District 4-5A basement, 92-78.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The sun is sinking fast on Midland High's bid to earn a second consecutive District 4-5A state basketball playoff berth.

Odessa High's Bronchos got 30 points from swift guard Avery Thomas Tuesday night to hang another 92-78 defeat on the Bulldogs, Midland High's third district loss in as many outings, making MHS the only league team that doesn't own a loop victory.

Both teams came into this game without a district win, but Thomas saw to it that the Bronchos reached the district quarter pole with a win.

"I felt like playing tonight," Thomas said after hitting 11 of 17 shots from the field and six of nine free throws. "I had 22 points in one other game this year, but this is the best.

"I know one thing. The whole team was ready to play. We didn't want to be in the bottom of the bucket when this game was over."

OHS coach Greg Baucom said it was about time something went good for his Bronchos.

"Every team has a game that is coming to them and this was it for us. These kids have worked so hard, but very little good has happened," Baucom said. "I don't know where we are going for here, but hopefully, this will be a turnaround for us."

Not much went right for the Bulldogs. First, OHS hit 49 percent from the field while MHS hit 40 percent, including a terrible four of 22 from three-point range. But the real killer came in the second quarter with MHS leading 25-24 when OHS went on a three-minute, 14-point run for a 38-25 lead. The Bulldogs never recovered.

"We had a lapse and Odessa High shot great," said a disappointed MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "We seem to have a real knack of bringing out the best in people. I've been afraid of Odessa High ever since I saw them play earlier this year.

"I take a lot of the blame for our start in district play and I hurt for our kids. But we are going to win some games in this district. We'll be back."

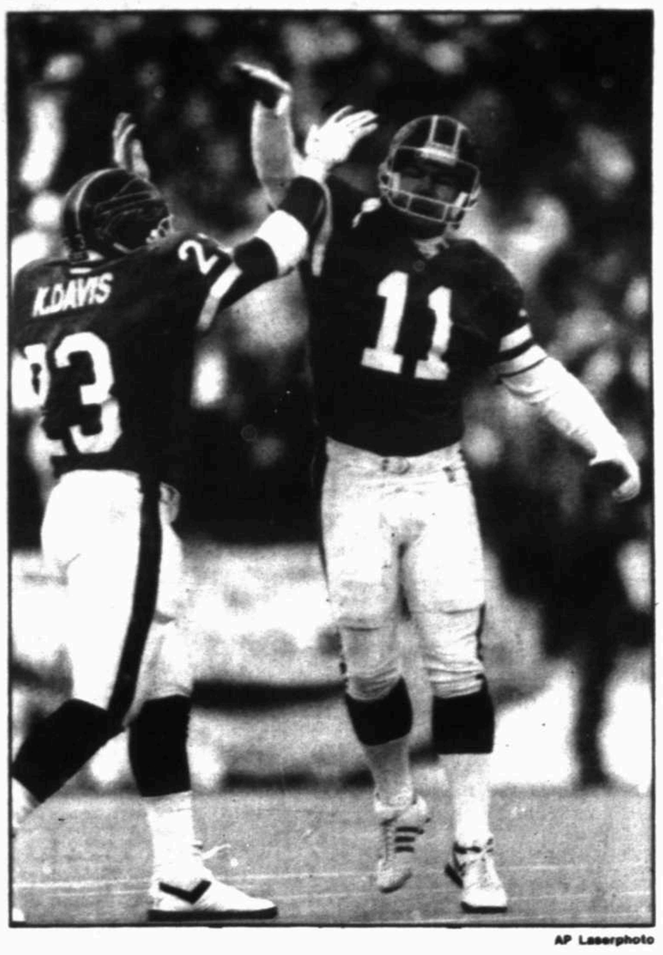

OHS led by as many as 17 points in the fourth quarter, but the 'Dogs did make a charge, cutting the margin to eight points late in the game. Mike Melzer scored all of his 21 points in the second half, including 13 in the fourth period, but there was too much ground to make up.

MHS post Antwan Goodley scored 20 points (12 in the first quarter) before being taken out of the game after being called for a technical foul.

"It hurt losing Antwan," Stephenson said, "but we have rules we live with, and when you get a technical at MHS, you're out of the game. That

Bills more relaxed for return to Super Bowl

By John F. Bonfatti
AP Sports Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — The Buffalo Bills rode the express to their first Super Bowl last year. They're taking the local this year and most of them say the slower pace will make for a better game against the Washington Redskins.

The Bills left Rich Stadium the day after their AFC championship victory over the Los Angeles Raiders last year because the NFL decided to have only one week between the Super Bowl and the championship games, instead of the customary two.

This year, the league is going back to the two-week layoff and the Bills say that's the way they like it.

"We had to go right home and pack last year," wide receiver James Lofton said. "This will give us a little more time to get ready, to prepare the game plan and to view the Redskins before we have to go down and get into it."

Almost all of the players said the extra week was beneficial because it allows time for a season's worth of bumps and bruises to get better. With no practice scheduled Tuesday or Wednesday, the healing time has already begun.

"I've got a bunch of things — knee, ribs, ankle," said strong safety Leonard Smith.

Nose tackle Jeff Wright said he was "kind of glad we're going to have two weeks this year to settle everything down. The guys need a little bit of rest. It's another week to heal up."

While the players talked about nursing injuries, coach Marv Levy's focus was on how the extra week would allow for much better planning.

The Bills' coaching staff had "a tremendous amount of computer information done already" on the New York Giants going into last year's Super Bowl, but the compressed schedule still meant "some very late nights all week long," he said.

"It's very difficult to prepare your team during that week ... when you don't have your normal game-planning facilities available, your computers and your video equipment," Levy said.

"You need the extra week," he said. "During the normal season during the week, you're in this environment where you know just where to go, just where all your files are, just where the copying machine is. The secretaries know where it all is. The meeting rooms are there. The players know what seat they sit in."

Unlike the normal work week, when the Bills' set aside specific days for installing the offensive, defensive and special teams game plans, Levy said he'll use this week differently.

"We'll approach it by exposing our players to elements of the opponents' defense, offense and kicking that we want specific concentration on," he said. "We might want to work on a certain segment of their offense we'd really like to get a lot of exposure to."

Levy said "next week's practice is still the one that's most intense. The paperwork and the planning and the presentation is done this week, but next week is still the most intensive work on the field."

Possibly the toughest part of a Super Bowl is keeping the players and coaches focused on the game amid the hundreds of distractions.

"It's tougher on your players to get the feel for what you're doing during that week when there's so much media attention, and they're worrying about their families accomodations and how they're getting down there," Levy said. "This year, the extra week certainly allows for you to deal with that in a more level-headed manner."

Several players, including wide receiver Andre Reed and long snapper Adam Lingner, said last year's team may have been a bit frazzled by all the hoopla.

"I think that might have taken it's toll on us, mentally maybe," Reed said. "Going there this year, we're going to be prepared even more."

"I think we got too caught up in travel plans and got distracted from the ultimate goal we have," Lingner said. "Instead of treating it like a vacation, you've still got to treat it like work. Which it may help, going to Minnesota."

MHS: Thomas bank shots hurt Bulldogs

(From 1C)

may be harsh, and not many may coaches do it, but Antwan understood. The team knows the rule. Maybe something beside basketball comes out of all this."

Joseph Golding and Brian Rounding each had 10 points for MHS. However, this was not a good shooting night for the steady Rounding, who hit only two of 12 shots from three-point range.

Thomas scored with his speed on the transition game over and over, and also drove the lane for some spectacular bank shots off the glass. But he had plenty of help with 16 points from Levi Christian, 12 from Spud Morris, 11 from Ryan Ledlow and 10 from Leon McDaniel.

The MHS junior varsity climbed to 12-6 on the year with a 73-64 win over OHS as Kirk French and Jason Kopp each had 12 while Jerry Gamble added 11 points. Odessa High had 22 from Aaron Rogers, 16 from Eric Hartman and 11 from Kris Bennett.

The Bulldog woes continue Friday with a road trip to 1-1 San Angelo. But then again home hasn't been to kind, either.

REBELS: Turnovers hurt both Lee, Permian

(From 1C)

6-2 post Wayne Wilson, who scored a game-high 18 points, tied the score at 59-59 with 2:49 left.

Martin Lattibeaudiere scored the last of his 14 points and Lee's last of the game with 1:55 remaining, putting the Rebs on top for the first time since the first quarter, 61-59.

Daniels answered for Permian with two points at the 1:40 mark to again tie the game, this time at 61-61. With 1:35 left, Lee called a time out and owned possession of the ball after Daniels' basket.

The Rebs clearly were trying to run the clock before making a stab at the go-ahead bucket, but Keenan Henry was called for traveling with 1:12 to play. Scooter Spears immediately turned the ball back over to Lee when he was whistled for a 10 second violation before getting the ball across midcourt, but the Rebs again faltered when Wayne Wilson was called for a walk with :53 to go.

That set things up for Daniels again, whose basket with 29 seconds to go completed the game's scoring, though Lee did have shots from David Wilson and Henry, only to see them blocked by Daniels and Spain.

Also in double figures for Lee was Jamy Skaggs with 11 points, while Rebuen Loud led the way for the Panthers with 15. Daniels scored 13 and Spain 12.

In junior varsity play, Permian downed Lee 55-54, as John Sullivan and Sean Low each scored 11 for the Rebs.

LADY REBS: Odessa High next for Lee

(From 1C)

"We knew coming in they were one of the contenders this year."

Kail, whose team lifted its overall mark to an even 9-9, has used newspaper clippings to inspire her team before. It was another one of those Tuesday that helped in the locker room.

"Newspapers are great. We blew up the Abilene newspaper this week," Kail said, not meaning to sound like a terrorist. "We've used clippings all season. Our girls feed off emotion. They were not happy at being picked fifth in the district.

In the end, Kail said, it was the Lady Rebels' work on the boards that told the story.

"In the first half we just weren't hitting the outside shot. It felt like it was a one, two point game. We knew what they (the Panthers) were going to do, and they did it.

"If anything, what made the game for us was rebounding."

The Lady Rebels will take an open date Friday to savor the win before returning to action next Tuesday at Odessa High. Then, a week from Friday, district leading Abilene High comes to Rebel gym, a game that senior Debbie Kuntz and her teammates are looking ahead to.

"They'll be at our house now," Kuntz said, "so it'll be different. They'll have our fans, our refs, our gym."

In junior varsity action, Lee defeated Permian, 40-31, to improve to 5-9 overall, 2-3 in district play.

Odessa Permian (40) — Tanya Castillejos 3-10 0-2 6, Brandi Craig 1-9 5-6 7, Kesa Wilson 1-3 1-2 3, Kris McSwain 5-14 0-0 10, Trivia Taylor 0-0 0-0 0, L'Tonya Williams 3-11 2-5 3-11 2-5 8, Libby Landis 1-1 0-0 2, Jacqui Nesbitt 2-2 0-0 4. Totals: 16-50 8-17 40.

'Horns edge Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION — Benford Williams scored 19 points and Terrence Rencher added 17 Tuesday night, powering Texas to a 76-73 Southwest Conference victory over Texas A&M.

SWC

B.J. Tyler fired in 13 points and Tony Watson and Michael Richardson scored 10 points apiece for Texas, 10-6 overall and 3-0 in the SWC.

David Edwards' game-high 22 points led Texas A&M, 3-10 and 0-3. Tony McGinnis had 14 points and Damon Johnson, who was sidelined with a leg injury, added 12.

Texas A&M led 37-34 at halftime and held a 46-45 lead with 15 minutes remaining. But the Longhorns went on a 13-0 run sparked by Williams' six points to take a 60-48 lead.

The Aggies pulled to within three points twice in the final three minutes but could not overtake the Longhorns.

The Aggies committed 18 turnovers and lost the ball 12 times on steals, while the Longhorns had 14 turnovers and had it stolen nine times.

Texas coach Tom Penders credited the Longhorns' defense for the victory.

"In the ond half, we had a stretch there where we created turnovers and rebounded well and built the lead," he said. "We struggle here every year. Although Texas A&M is undermanned, they can put 4 or 5 pretty good players on the court at one time and they are very scrappy."

Williams agreed that the Aggies came to play.

"We know that every time we come here they play well. Even though the shots wouldn't fall in the first half, we knew we could come back to win," said Williams.

Indiana spills OSU, 91-83

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Greg Graham scored 10 of his 25 points in the final 8:07 as No. 5 Indiana withstood a furious comeback by Ohio State and former Hoosier Lawrence Funderburke and beat the fourth-ranked Buckeyes 91-83 Tuesday night.

Top 25

Damon Bailey scored 25 points for Indiana (12-2, 3-0 Big Ten), while Calbert Cheaney added 16 and Eric Anderson 11.

Jim Jackson led Ohio State (10-2, 2-1) with a career-high 31 points. Chris Jent added 18 and Funderburke had 12 in his return to Assembly Hall after quitting the Indiana team two years ago.

The Hoosiers were in command with a 56-37 lead on a 3-pointer by Cheaney with 14:37 remaining.

But Ohio State erased the deficit and finally found its shooting touch in a 26-2 burst over the next 6:06. Funderburke taunted the partisan crowd by scoring the Buckeyes' first

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take the initiative more often and your stock will rise at place of employment. Mutual respect leads to lasting love in April. A complex financial situation turns to your advantage next July. Children will influence an important decision early in the fall. Set aside more time for self-improvement activities. Travel brings in valuable business in November. Romance inspires you to try something new and profitable.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., drummer Gene Krupa, actor Lloyd Bridges, actress Charo.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Something that looked like a sure thing may not pan out. A phone call or letter gives you new hope. Limit spending to necessities. A misplaced item is found behind furniture or in old clothing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Confusion over certain instructions could lead to a comedy of errors. Hold on to your temper while things get straightened out. A child helps you keep things in perspective.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Bring about a reconciliation now and you will reap handsome profits later on. Be kind but firm with someone who tries to monopolize your time. Live up to your high ideals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A stranger with a secret could enter your life. Do not fear the consequences of doing what you know to be right. Luck is totally on your side. A financial question will be resolved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone who really cares is the only adviser you need. Trust your instincts when it comes to your personal appearance. You have earned your stripes. Now make certain that others earn theirs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Reach out for new opportunities. The possibilities for making money are endless. You can create a whole new world for yourself if you have confidence and patience.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can make a new deal if you tie up some loose ends now. A postponement may work to other people's advantage. A reward for excellence will suit you to a tee.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good feelings abound when someone keeps his word. Let no one come between you and your ultimate goal. Pay more attention to that inner voice and you will make fewer mistakes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A competitor could win a round today. Flexibility and a joyful demeanor help you cope. A phone call confirms your judgment about romance. Be on your best behavior when around conservative people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will be the one to gain the most from putting all your energy into helping others. Music soothes and revitalizes your soul. It can also set the mood for romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Judge for yourself the quality of a new product. If you want everything life has to offer, you must work at it. Settle for less than the best and you will disappoint yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New snags could arise where a special project is concerned. First things first; set clear priorities. Avoid the undercurrents at work. You need to keep both feet planted firmly on the ground.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are interested in activities that require mental as well as physical agility. Born strategists, they are always planning their next move. These Capricorns often make better writers than public speakers; they need time to get their words in order. Friends are very precious to these tolerant children. They know when to turn a blind eye to their loved ones' faults.

Opening lead: Seven of ♠

The diamond merchant from Amsterdam was a good player. At the club, however, he was at somewhat of a disadvantage—he did not know his opponents. Regulars would have told him that you never double Trump Coup Tommy with a trump stack, an action he took with the West hand. A bad trump break would transform an otherwise ordinary player, which describes Tommy kindly, into the Hulk Hogan of the bridge table.

In theory, North's response of two no trump requested South to bid three clubs, a new gadget Tommy and partner were using to get out on weak hands. When Tommy showed a powerful hand with a spade cue-bid, then corrected to diamonds, North decided that three trumps, an ace and a ruffing value were sufficient to go on to game.

The diamond merchant's double brought a gleam to Tommy's eye. After winning the opening lead in hand, Tommy led the king of hearts to West's ace. The Dutchman was too shrewd a player to shorten Tommy's trumps by leading another spade. Instead, West shifted to the queen of clubs.

Tommy won with the ace and, not bothering with a trump finesse that was sure to lose, ruffed a spade, cashed the queen of hearts and ruffed a heart in dummy. Another spade ruff served as the entry for a heart ruffed with the eight. When East could not overruff, Tommy was ready for the grand finale.

After cashing the king of clubs, Tommy exited with a club. Down to nothing but trumps, West was forced to ruff and lead away from the queen into declarer's A K J holding. Just another ho-hum hand for Tommy!

Roberts, Judd, Burke, top Mr. Blackwell's list

LOS ANGELES — Actress Julia Roberts on Tuesday was named the No. 1 fashion offender on Mr. Blackwell's 32nd annual list of the 10 worst-dressed women.

Miss Roberts, currently starring as Tinkerbell in the movie "Hook," was skewered as a "rag doll" by Blackwell.

"This tacky Tinkerbell from fashion Neverland . . . is a number one hymn to homespun horror," the couture critic said.

Next was country singer Wynonna Judd and actresses Delta Burke, Tyne Daly and Jodie Foster.

Blackwell called Miss Judd the "shaggy songbird of country kitsch" and labeled Miss Burke an "antebellum atrocity."

Singer Carly Simon was sixth, followed by actresses Faye Dunaway, Kathy Bates and Jane Seymour. Landing the 10th spot was Dame Edna Everage, the creation of comedian Barry Humphries.

Blackwell, whose real name is Richard Sylvan Selzer, has been releasing his worst-dressed list since 1960.

It's "fairly definite" that Sununu will soon replace the conservative commentator on Cable News Network's "Crossfire" program, CNN President Tom Johnson said in Tuesday's Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

Buchanan left the show to seek the Republican presidential nomination. Sununu resigned last month as President Bush's chief of staff, but is remaining as a consultant to the president through February.

Sununu would fill the chair on the nightly debate-style program until Buchanan returns, Johnson said.

NEW ORLEANS — Gerald McRaney, star of television's "Major Dad," will replace Richard Dreyfuss as king of one of the splashiest parades of New Orleans' Carnival season.

McRaney was named Monday to play the role of Bacchus, god of wine and merriment, at the head of the 850 riders on 27 floats in the March 1 parade organized by the Bacchus krewe, or club.

Dreyfuss bowed out last week because of a commitment to perform in a Broadway play.

The club traditionally selects celebrities as monarchs, among them Bob Hope, Jackie Gleason, Charlton Heston and Kirk Douglas.

McRaney and his wife, Delta Burke, a former star of "Designing Women," bought a home in the city's French Quarter last year after finishing a movie shot in New Orleans.

LAPORTE, Ind. — Oprah Winfrey, who says she was sexually abused as a child, delivered on a promise to donate $50,000 to a child-abuse prevention group.

Winfrey

The talk show host pledged that once the LaPorte County Child Abuse Prevention Council raised half its $300,000 fund for establishing a children's advocacy center in northern Indiana, she'd make her donation.

Winfrey sent the money in December. The council's vice president, Glenn Lubeznik, said $30,000 of it went to pay for a house that has been purchased for the planned center.

Winfrey has disclosed she was raped by a distant cousin at age 9 and then abused by three other men during the next five years.

Winfrey lives in Chicago, where her nationally syndicated daily talk show is taped, and has a home in LaPorte County.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Eddie Rabbitt blames MTV's "heavy metal mentality" for much of the nation's education woes.

"MTV promotes the most violent of acts in front of our children," Rabbitt said Monday night after performing at a concert touting the importance of education.

Rabbitt

"If parents saw someone around the corner from their house peddling hardcore pornography to their children, they'd have them arrested," Rabbitt said. "That's what MTV does and it's wrong."

He said television, and especially MTV: Music Television, are partly to blame for youngsters' apathy in schoolwork.

"I can tell, he definitely hasn't watched MTV recently," MTV spokeswoman Carol Robinson said Tuesday. "We are responsible programmers and our programming standards are identical to those of the broadcast networks."

Rabbitt sang his latest hit "On Second Thought" and his famous "I Love A Rainy Night" for 2,500 Tennessee schoolchildren on the eve of a special legislative session on education and tax reform.

Also performing at the "Let Education Ring" concert were country singers Ricky Skaggs and Marc Collie, folk singer Beth Nielsen Chapman and gospel star Michael W. Smith.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell Tuesday as traders disregarded attempts by two OPEC members to stop the recent decline.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in February settled at $18.47 per barrel, down 32 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The market rose Friday and Monday after Venezuela announced a modest cut in production to combat the recent plunge in prices and said other OPEC members might go along.

But even though Venezuela got some support from fellow cartel members Tuesday, as Libya announced it was cutting production and Ecuador asked the entire cartel to slash output, oil traders staged a sell-off.

"I think everybody wants to see what the Saudis will do," said Victor Yu, vice president of futures for the Nikkhah Energy Group of Refco Inc.

Saudi Arabia, the largest OPEC member, vastly increased its production during the Persian Gulf crisis of 1990 and has since been reluctant to cut back the amount of oil it pumps.

The cartel is scheduled to discuss the falling prices next month, and a report from the Middle East this week indicated the Saudis may be willing to rethink their position. Still, there were few buyers during Tuesday's session.

After the market was closed for the day, the American Petroleum Institute reported that the nation's refineries have increased their output, while the supplies of crude oil and gasoline rose and the supply of home heating oil fell last week.

The supply of crude rose 4.8 million barrels, to 333.5 million, while the supply of gasoline rose 2.9 million barrels, to 224.5 million, for the week ending Friday.

Natural gas prices were mixed Tuesday, with contracts for delivery in February settling at $1.247 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 1.3 cents.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar gained Tuesday against most major foreign currencies, especially the German mark, which has been depressed amid renewed concerns of labor strife and a weak economy.

Late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's rates: 1.5930 German marks, up from 1.5765; 126.85 yen, down from 127.00; 1.4125 Swiss francs, up from 1.4040; 5.4330 French francs, up from 5.3790; 1,201 Italian lire, up from 1,190.25; and 1.15025 Canadian dollars, up from 1.14925.

The British pound rose in London, to $1.8150 from $1.8030 late Monday.

Official: Pact's energy issue sensitive

■ Mexico is wary of talks that could affect its state-run oil company, DOE spokesman says.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Energy is the most sensitive topic in free-trade talks between the United States and Mexico because of vast differences in the two country's oil industries, a federal official said Tuesday.

Don Nelson, chief of staff to a lead Department of Energy free trade negotiator, told a Texas oil group that Mexico is extremely wary of any talks that could affect its state-run oil company, Petroleos Mexicanos (PEMEX).

"Of all the subjects that are on the table for the NAFTA negotiations, energy is by far one of the most sensitive," he said. NAFTA stands for the North American Free Trade agreement. Negotiations to open up trade between the U.S. and Mexico, and Canada are under way.

PEMEX often is viewed by Mexicans as a symbol of the country's independence and historically is responsible for much of its earnings.

"The result is very, very sensitive and slow-moving talks," Nelson told members of the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners, which is the largest statewide organization representing producers and royalty owners in the U.S.

He said that many U.S. energy companies are looking toward Mexico's energy industry, but that they want assurances that their investments will be protected.

Meanwhile, Mexico's Constitution, laws and regulations assure public ownership of certain resources, he said.

"It does not mean that we accept verbatim everything that is in their constitution," Nelson said. "It is indeed a broad document, which covers a wide range of issues."

He said the general counsels of the U.S. Energy and State departments are analyzing the Mexican Constitution "to look at the restrictions and the barriers that would impact upon U.S. firms."

Recently, PEMEX received a loan guarantee from the U.S. Export-Import Bank for a multi-billion dollar exploration and production program, Nelson said. Under this program, PEMEX awarded a drilling contract to Triton, USA, of Houston.

But it is that kind of project that has raised the concerns of TIPRO members, according to Thomas Cooke, who is head of a task force that is monitoring the free trade negotiations.

He said Mexico has had trouble in the past paying off these loans, and the hiring of U.S. drilling service companies could inflate their charges.

Retail sales drop; year's record worst since 1961

■ Analysts see little chance for improvement before summer.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Disappointing Christmas sales pushed the nation's retail sales lower for a third straight month in December, holding the advance for all of 1991 to the smallest in 30 years.

Analysts saw little chance for improvement before summer due to Americans' worries over jobs and incomes. Some said the report, which also showed sales had been worse than first thought in October and November, could mean the economy had slipped back into recession.

In December, the Commerce Department said, sales totaled a seasonally adjusted $151.2 billion, down from $151.7 billion in November. It was the third straight disappointing holiday shopping season, which many retailers count on for half of their annual sales and profits.

The department also calculated that sales had fallen 0.5 percent in November and 0.1 percent in October. Originally, November's sales had been reported as rising 0.3 percent; October's were first reported as unchanged from the previous month.

For the year, sales totaled $1.8 trillion, a gain of 0.7 percent after a 3.8 percent advance in 1990. Last year's gain was the smallest increase since a 0.1 percent decline in 1961.

Kermit Baker, an economist with Cahners Economics in Newton, Mass., suggested that the economy was flat in the October-December period.

"It could tip either way," he said, "but it's not inconceivable that we'll have a minus fourth quarter."

Because retail sales account for one-third of the nation's economic activity, a lack of consumer participation threatens any recovery from the recession.

"Until the economy gets a boost from Washington, consumer confidence will continue to drag, and as long as consumer confidence is weak, the retail sector will remain in the doldrums," said John M. Albertine, head of a Washington economic forecasting service.

Baker contended, however, that falling interest rates, which already have captured the attention of the investment community, will show up in other economic sectors by mid-year.

Executives worry about long-term outlook

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A group of top business executives told Congress on Tuesday that the country faces deep-seated economic problems which if not corrected could depress growth rates and living standards for years to come.

One executive warned that the United States was on the road to becoming a second-rate economic power because of a failure to make adequate investments in such areas as education and commercial research and development.

"The long term economic future of this country is in crisis. Time is running out," said Robert E. Rubin, a senior partner of Goldman Sachs and Co. "Our political leaders must take the lead in creating the political and public will to sacrifice consumption for quite some time to do what is necessary to deal with these problems."

Charles A. Corry, the chairman of USX Corp., the giant steel manufacturer, said that misguided trade and tax policies by the U.S. government had "devasted the U.S. manufacturing sector."

"We have lost a large portion of the best jobs in our economy," Corry said. "The domestic steel industry alone has lost more than 335,000 jobs since 1974. These were the jobs that made the American factory worker the envy of his peers around the world."

The executives testified at a hearing chaired by Sen. Don Riegle, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee. Riegle, D-Mich., is sponsoring a bill to force the Japanese to eliminate their $42 billion trade surplus with America over the next five years or face import quotas on Japanese car shipments to this country.

While Corry said he supported Riegle's legislation, the other executives cautioned against making Japan a scapegoat for America's troubles.

Dexter Baker, chairman of Air Products and Chemicals Inc. of Allentown, Pa., and one of the executives on President Bush's trip to Japan, said that the presidential mission represented a good start to opening markets.

"We did get market openings and some market gains," Baker said.

Robert G. Gilbertson, president of Data Switch Corp., headquartered in Connecticut, said that Congress should focus on efforts to boost long-term investment in the country and not approve quick-fix tax cuts or enact protectionist trade legislation.

Rubin said it was wrong to blame Japan for the failure of Americans to make the kinds of investments needed to spur future productivity gains.

Pencil Mart to open doors in Mission Square

By Mella McEwen

Headed for Mission Square center, Loop 250 and Big Spring is PENCIL MART.

McEwen

Jim Dixon, a partner in the enterprise, explains that Pencil Mart will "specialize in handling office furniture such as desks, chairs, bookcases and computer stands, that is new but scratched, nicked or dented, and selling it at very heavy discounts." He estimates those discounts at around 50 percent off list price.

The 3,200-square-foot store also will offer top office supplies such as paper, pens and pencils — also at a heavy discount.

In addition, Pencil Mart is the authorized West Texas dealer for a line of discount computers offered by Austin-based Recompute.

Tentative opening for the store is January 22.

Dixon is also a partner in the Pencil Box office supply store located at 1102 N. Big Spring. He said it will remain where it is, "doing what it's been doing."

Just opened at 2215 N. Midland Drive, in Mesa Verde shopping center, is QUANTUM CHIROPRACTIC, operated by Dr. Jay Fulton.

Fulton, who has been in practice in Midland two years, specializes in family practice, work-related injuries, low back pain, headache pain, neck pain, and sports injuries. He is also a certified neuromuscular technician for massages and offers both a heated massage roller table and hydroculator for heat therapy and ultrasound. He also offers nutritional advice and diet guidelines.

All paperwork is computerized and the office has a special corner with children's furniture and toys to entertain them while they wait for their parent or to see the doctor themselves.

Walk-in patients as well as appointments are welcome.

Setting its sights on Midland is APPLEBEE'S NEIGHBORHOOD GRILL AND BAR, a Kansas City-based national restaurant chain that is looking to expand.

To date the chain, part of parent company Applebee's International, has 191 restaurants in 29 states. It is looking for a Midland site or local citizen (or company) interested in becoming a franchisee.

The company uses the following criteria for a location: Main entrance of a mall; an "end cap" in a strip center; a freestanding building on a power center pad or on a major arterial street; or it will convert former restaurants or business buildings situated in desirable locations. Applebee's offers a 60-item menu and a centrally located full-service bar. The restaurants are traditionally 4,000 to 5,200 square feet and seat 157 to 185 people with parking for 85 to 100 vehicles in close proximity.

The Midland franchise of ELECTROTAX, the electronic tax filing service, has been purchased by Sharon Hale from Odessan Dieles "Dutch" VanVeen.

Located at 707 W. Indiana, Hale offers a three-day refund anticipation loan and says electronic filers can expect their tax refund within 10 to 17 days. She adds that this year, for the first time, balance-due returns can be electronically field. Electrotax will be open until April 15.

Hale also operates a bookkeeping and income tax service year-round.

Officer lives with nightmare after staring face to face with mass killer

By Michael Gunstanson
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Most days, Bill Cooper says, he can close his eyes for just a fraction of an instant and the terror he saw that autumn day in Killeen — and the decisions he made — come crashing back.

Cooper was lying behind a serving cart, and as he looked around the edge he was face to face with Georges Hennard, who had just gunned down 23 people in Luby's Cafeteria.

"I could see his face plain as day," said Cooper, a Texas Department of Public Safety officer based in Hurst, in the first interview he has given since the mass shootings Oct. 16. "His facial expression never changed. He didn't look like he was crazy or hurting or even mad. I never saw a wrinkle on his forehead.

"I kept wondering what he was thinking."

Cooper cocked his gun, took hold of the cart and prepared to push it out of the way to get a shot at Hennard.

"He could see it coming," Cooper said. "By the time I could see well enough around the planter, I drew down on him. I hollered, 'Police — drop the gun.' "

In the next moment, Cooper saw a spent shell sticking out the side of Hennard's gun and knew that it was jammed.

In a heartbeat, Cooper decided he wouldn't — that he legally couldn't — shoot. "It's not that I didn't want to — it would have been right by moral standards. But there was no way I could do it; state law says you can't."

Cooper shoved the cart at Hennard and scrambled on all fours behind it.

"I could see him, and he could see me," Cooper said. "He turned his gun sideways looking at it. Then he'd look at me. He must have done that four or five times."

Then, before Cooper could react, Hennard dropped the clip from the gun, knocked the spent shell out, slammed a bullet into the chamber and shot himself in the head.

Hennard's nightmare had ended.

Cooper lives with his. He still can see Hennard working his way through the cafeteria, killing people as he went. Recall the voices of pleading victims. Feel the tug on his leg by one man crying, "Help me, please help me."

And he thinks about his decision not to shoot.

"That's hard to have to live with," Cooper said, his voice almost breaking. "All I know is I couldn't kill him."

For his decision, Cooper said, he has "taken a lot of Monday morning quarterbacking."

DPS officers can use deadly force only if their lives are in imminent danger or to stop a felony in progress.

"I think it would have been more than justified if he had fired because there's no way to tell how many guns he (Hennard) had," said Capt. David Griffith, Cooper's regional supervisor. But he added: "I feel like he probably used his best judgment, like he always does. His action was within department policy and within the law and saved the lives of a lot of people."

Cooper reflected: "In my heart I know I did the right thing. Other people can say what they would have done, but they weren't there."

Then he added: "There are times I wish I hadn't been there. And then again, maybe I helped save some lives."

Cooper — a 31-year-old father of two — and four other DPS officers were in Killeen conducting a class with local police officers at the Sheraton Hotel, across the street from Luby's. He had just finished lunch and was standing outside the hotel with Waco DPS Officer Jody Fore when they noticed a loud commotion and saw a number of people running. "Not just kids, but adults," he recalled.

Cooper ran to a woman who was coming at him and asked what was happening.

"He's got a gun; he's killing everybody," Cooper said the woman cried.

Cooper ran to his car and retrieved his weapon from the trunk. Then he encountered a man who said, "He's got an M-16, and he's killing everybody."

"My first thought was, 'This little ol' pistol isn't going to do a lot of good against that, but I'm going anyway,' " Cooper said.

Cooper moved along a row of cars until he got to a vantage point with a line of sight into the cafeteria. He encountered two undercover Killeen officers. They could hear muffled pops coming from inside the building. Cooper asked them if they could see anything.

'In my heart I know I did the right thing. Other people can say what they would have done, but they weren't there.'

— Bill Cooper

"Then — we still didn't know who the bad guys were and who the good guys were — this guy comes walking up to the front window," Cooper said. "The shooting had stopped. He had a gun in his hand, and we didn't know who he was. I was kind of hoping he was a cop. He looked to his left and then to his right, like he was waiting for someone to come."

Had Cooper known the man was Hennard, he could have shot him at that point. By then, five to seven people were dead. Hennard was just 40 feet away. Cooper said he qualifies at 50 yards as "perfect" on the DPS firing range.

"It wouldn't have been a clean shot because of all the people behind him," Cooper said. "But if I'd have known it was him, I could have gotten some kind of shot off."

As Cooper watched, the man walked up to an elderly woman who was shielding her husband, who had been shot.

"She just kind of bowed her head, and he shot her right in the top of the head," Cooper said. "I thought, 'My God, what's he doing?' "

By now Hennard was out of Cooper's line of fire. Hennard kept moving down the wall, Cooper said, shooting people as he went.

"There was this one woman, sitting there on the floor with her knees pulled up against her chest," he said. "She was sitting there, in shock or something, not making a sound. Behind her was this woman crying, making a lot of noise. He just walked past the first woman and shot the woman making all the noise.

"From those that I saw him shoot, he shot the ones that were moving around making a lot of noise," Cooper said.

Hennard worked his way all the way to the right, turned left and worked his way down a wall, killing people as he went. Fifteen would die in that sector alone.

By now, Cooper and several other officers had moved into the cafeteria. One had taken a shot at Hennard, who ran to an alcove where the restrooms were.

In an official statement obtained through Texas Open Records requests, Killeen police Officer Alex H. Morris reported: "I heard (Killeen) Officer Charles Longwell holler at the suspect, 'Police officers — drop your weapon and come out.' The male said, '—— you; I'm going to kill more people.' "

Cooper decided the only way to stop Hennard was to get in front of him. He began to work his way through the cafeteria, following the same route Hennard had taken. All the while, Hennard kept shooting.

All the while, Cooper tried to get people in the cafeteria to get out through exits on both sides.

"I kept yelling at them to leave, and they wouldn't," Cooper said. "I don't know if they were in shock or not."

As Cooper started up the aisle toward his confrontation with Hennard, a shot hit the glass top of a table he was hiding behind. As the glass settled, Cooper started back toward Hennard, and someone grabbed his leg.

"I was on all fours, trying to hide behind some of the tables, chairs and bodies so he Hennard wouldn't see me," Cooper said. "This guy grabbed my leg and said, 'Help me, please help me,' "

In front of Cooper was a heavy-set male in his late 60s. Cooper jerked his leg away and began to crawl toward the man to get at Hennard.

"When the man in front of me heard me jerk my leg, he looked toward me and cried out, 'Help me,' " Cooper said. "Hennard's shots were following me up the aisle. The man turned back to his left . . . Hennard shot him right in the forehead."

Now Cooper was crawling across the floor on his stomach. He reached what he thought was the safety of a push cart, bringing him face to face with Hennard and with the decision that haunts him.

That day has changed Cooper forever, he says. His outlook on life has changed, his demeanor has changed — and he will never again be caught without his gun.

"If you eat with me you're going to be safe, at least for a little while," Cooper said. "It probably won't ever happen again in my career. But if it does, I won't have to think about where my gun is or how to go get it."

Egypt punishes writer for book found 'blasphemous to Islam'

By Chris Hedges
N.Y. Times News Service

CAIRO, Egypt — Three years after publishing his newest novel, Alla Hamed has been hounded from his job, forced to move out of his apartment because of death threats, and may soon go to prison, along with his publisher and a book distributor.

A special court, hearing charges that Hamed's novel, titled "The Distance in a Man's Mind," is blasphemous to Islam, found it to be "a threat to national unity and social peace" and sentenced the author, publisher and distributor to eight years in prison.

The sentences stunned Egypt's artists and intellectuals, who have traditionally enjoyed the most artistic license and independence in the Arab world.

Hamed has been referred to here as "Egypt's Salman Rushdie," a reference to the British author under death sentence by the Iranian religious authorities for his novel "The Satanic Verses."

Writers, artists, and journalists, including PEN International and the American PEN Center, have appealed to the prime minister to reverse the ruling against Hamed. A German rights organization added its voice to the appeals.

These artists, intellectuals, and rights advocates condemned the threats by Islamic fundamentalists to kill Hamed, a government clerk who writes fiction in his spare time.

"The novel is mediocre," said Gamal Ghitani, the culture editor of the newspaper Al Akbar and a novelist himself. "But that is not the issue. This is the first time an Egyptian court has delivered a verdict like this, and it sets a terrible precedent. We cannot allow religious authorities to censor our creative and intellectual work. I am not defending Mr. Hamed now; I am defending myself."

The sentences were handed down by a state security emergency court, established under laws imposed in 1981 after the assassination of President Anwar Sadat by militant Muslims. These emergency laws designate the prime minister, Atef Sedki, as the deputy martial law governor and his signature on the court decision is necessary to make the verdict final.

"We have appealed to the prime minister not to ratify the verdict," Ghitani said, "and we want an end to this emergency law."

The court proceedings were highly irregular, said Negad Borai, Hamed's lawyer.

The first of two trials took place after an employee in the office where Hamed works took a copy of the book to the country's highest body of religious authorities. The Muslim clerics condemned the book as blasphemous and ordered that it be banned and Hamed punished. They did not endorse a call by Islamic fundamentalists for Hamed's death.

A government court heard the case last spring and dismissed the charges. But the first court referred the case to the special security court in May.

The new judge, Mohammed Abdel Razek, reopened the case on Dec. 25. He allowed the defense 30 minutes to contest the jurisdiction of the court to retry the case, recessed the session for an hour, and came back with a guilty verdict.

New scandal threatens Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Rumors that a new influence-buying scandal may engulf high-ranking politicians threatened Tuesday to paralyze the government, already reeling from the arrest of the prime minister's former key aide.

Sources close to the governing Liberal Democrat Party claim the new allegations could prove more damaging than the Recruit company scandal of 1989, which brought down former Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita's government.

Suggestions new scandal is brewing has renewed worries that Parliament's policy-making ability may be hamstrung at a critical time for Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa's 2½-month-old administration.

Political sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, say lawmakers are worried the charges against Fumio Abe could lead to a larger scandal in the governing party. The allegations link some of the nation's most powerful politicians to a mob-tainted trucking company, Tokyo Sagawa Kyubin, that reportedly gave them millions of dollars, said the sources and media reports.

Abe, 69, a former Cabinet minister who until last fall was second-in-command in Miyazawa's party faction, was arrested Monday. Abe allegedly took bribes worth about $634,000 and used his influence as director-general of the Hokkaido Development Agency to help steel-frame maker Kyowa Corp. win construction contracts.

Abe denied the allegations, the public Japan Broadcasting Corp. reported.

Because of the Abe scandal alone, "the very foundation of the Miyazawa administration may be threatened and may possibly even crumble," Kenzo Uchida, professor of political science at Tokai University, wrote in The Japan Times.

"It is going to be the Recruit scandal replayed again," said Takashi Inoguchi, a Tokyo University political scientist.

Recruit, an information services company, offered top politicians cut-rate stock shares. Miyazawa, then finance minister, was among those forced to step down.

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases ... even more!

➥ OK ... but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday - Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 deposit is required.
