Habib: Region supports aid to Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ambassador Philip Habib, President Reagan's new special envoy to Central America, said today Reagan's proposal for aid to Nicaraguan rebels has strong popular support in the region and the understanding of political leaders there.

Habib, meeting with Reagan to report on his trip to Central America last week, told reporters it "just isn't true" that the president's proposal for $100 million in military and economic aid to the Contras has little support from Nicaragua's neighbors.

Reagan, when told by reporters that Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega had said the president has lost his senses on the issues, shot back: "Takes one to know one."

In a nationally televised address from the Oval Office on Sunday, Reagan sought to link Nicaragua's leftist government with drug smuggling and the murder of four U.S. Marines.

Habib, breaking in to reply when a reporter sought to question Reagan as the men posed for pictures, said: "A recent poll that was run — a perfectly authentic one — shows a majority of Central Americans, first of all, condemn the situation inside Nicaragua and, secondly, the majority supports the aid to the Contras."

Reagan said the poll was cited in a column by former U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, who wrote that it was conducted this winter "by the highly reliable Consultoria Interdisciplinaria in Desarrollo." She said the poll showed a majority of Costa Ricans, Hondurans and Salvadorans regard Nicaragua as a threat to their countries and support aid to the Contras.

Asked why leaders of those countries don't openly endorse Reagan's policy, Habib said, "These fellas have code words the way we do. I'm saying they are concerend about the situation in Nicaragua, that they are stating their positions quite clearly, that they understand the significance of putting pressure on the Sandinistas in order to bring them to a different approach, a political approach."

Reagan, in his speech Sunday evening, appealed for support of his aid plan, which faces a House vote on Thursday. White House and administration sources say the administration is about 10 to 12 votes short of winning the House vote.

Sen. James Sasser of Tennessee, in the Democratic response to Reagan's speech, said the president was "seizing military options" without giving diplomacy enough of a chance.

Vice President George Bush, interviewed today on NBC's "Today" show, predicted victory in the congressional votes, saying, "I think we're going to win. It's going to be close," but "I really honestly feel we can" win.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, agreed but Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., a leading opponent of Contra aid, said on the show that "it's still going to be very close" and it remains to be seen if Reagan's appeal swayed enough votes.

Reagan last week sent his special envoy, Philip Habib, on a three-day visit to Central America that did not include a visit to Nicaragua, and the White House said Habib would meet with Reagan today.

Following Reagan's speech, the Nicaraguan Embassy said his policy of support for the rebels, known as Contras, could "trigger a bloody regional war in Central America."

NASA releases data on vital shuttle parts

■ Former NASA budget analyst says he was pressured into lying — 7A

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — NASA is releasing details on approximately 900 parts that are considered vital to the safe operation of the space shuttle, while two engineers explain how the space agency developed this "critical items list."

Among the items on the list are the solid rocket booster seals that are suspected of failing and contributing to the Jan. 28 destruction of Challenger and the death of its seven-member crew.

Marion Merrell of the Johnson Space Center office of Safety, Reliability and Quality Assurance and John Hooper, an expert on the shuttle's orbital manuevering system, were to discuss the seals in a briefing today on closed-circuit television to other NASA centers.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said reporters will be permitted to review copies of the critical items list, a document that is said to be 24 inches thick.

"Critical items" is a NASA term for all of the hardware and software components on the space shuttle that must function for safe operation of the craft.

NASA officials said Merrell was prepared to describe how engineers rank the criticality of the shuttle parts and how waivers are established for certain essential elements.

Included on the list are the "criticality 1" items whose failure would cause the loss of the spacecraft and its crew.

A second level of items on the list are called "criticality 1-R," which are essential systems protected from failure by redundant parts.

The difference between "criticality 1" and "criticality 1-R" has been a major controversy in the investigation of the Challenger accident.

NASA engineers from the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., have testified before a presidential commission investigating the accident that seals on the solid rocket booster were "criticality 1-R" because either one of two O-rings could seal the seams in the rocket engines.

However, engineers for Morton Thiokol, the manufacturer of the rockets, testified they were not certain that either of the O-rings would seal properly under certain conditions, such as cold weather.

Man jailed for transporting hazardous material on jet

From Staff Reports

A 25-year-old Odessa man was being held without bond in city jail after being charged this morning with transporting a hazardous material on a commercial airliner.

Wayne Ross Brunson was arrested Saturday afternoon after the material was discovered aboard an American Airlines jet at gate four at Midland Regional Airport. Brunson was a passenger on the flight, which originated in Dallas. He gave police an Odessa address, and listed his occupation as oilfield roughneck.

The caustic substance, acetic anhydride, was in Brunson's luggage, according to Ron Butler, supervisor of the Midland office of the FBI. The seal on its container had apparently broken. An American Airlines employee who came in contact with the material in the baggage compartment was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital, according to Midland police.

According to Midland Fire Department reports, the cleanup was supervised by William Lockey of the Texas Water Commission.

Brunson was ordered held without bond by U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith. If indicted and found guilty he would face a penalty of up to 20 years in federal prison, Butler said.

Acetic anhydride is a corrosive material with a variety of legitimate uses, Butler said. It is also used in the production of speed, he added.

Millions of Americans wearing the green

Associated Press

Millions of Americans of Irish ancestry and millions of others who wear the green just once a year mark St. Patrick's Day today with parades and parties, while thousands from Boston to Beverly Hills got into the swing of things early with weekend bashes.

In New York City, the nation's oldest and biggest parade was expected to draw its usual crowd of about 750,000 people, but with a mood less politicized than in past years.

Before that parade, Cardinal John J. O'Connor called in his St. Patrick's Day sermon for "peace with justice and honor" to end Northern Ireland's bitter religious war.

Town of Shamrock celebrates 'Irish Salute to Texas'

SHAMROCK, Texas (AP) — Most folks celebrated St. Patrick's Day today, but this Panhandle town got a jump on the others when 4,000 people jammed the streets at its 40th Annual St. Patrick's Day celebration.

As always, green was evident everywhere. Streamers, sport coats, beards, floats and balloons sported the color associated with the Irish slave turned Christian missionary, St. Patrick.

But this year's festival was celebrated Saturday with more of a Texas drawl than an Irish brogue. Shamrocks and leprechauns shared the spotlight with cowboys and the Texas flag as this year's theme was, "An Irish Salute to Texas," dedicated to the state's Sesquicentennial.

Texans were joined by visitors from Kansas and Oklahoma.

One of the Texas-bred attractions was the city's first chili cook-off, featuring 36 varieties of the incindiary delicacy. Chili chefs from Amarillo, San Angelo and Wichita Falls sold chili for $1.75 a bowl and raised more than $650 for the Shamrock High School band.

Officials in Savannah, Ga., a city of 148,000, expected 300,000 people for today's festivities, including a parade that began under a sunny sky with 30 bands and more than 40 floats. The Sinn Fein Society, Fenians and Clan Na Erin gathered for breakfasts of green grits, and some bars opened as early as 7 a.m. to serve green beer and green eggs.

A gasoline war has returned to Midland in the form of relatively low prices. Some regular prices have dropped to 59 cents a gallon and some even went lower over the weekend.

Midland's independent stations start gasoline war with low prices

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A gasoline war has broken out on the home front.

"It's a pretty good gas war going on," said major service-station operator Ray Lindsey, who operates Texaco and Gulf stations. "It (the price) varies across town because of undercutting."

Overall, prices for regular gas in cases have dropped to about a third of what they were a year ago — from $1.49.9 cents to 59 cents a gallon.

Lindsey said independents such as West Texas Gas Inc. and Kent Oil Inc. can buy fuel on the spot market and are not restricted from whom they can buy gasoline. They are undercutting prices, he said.

"They can buy gasoline 20 cents a gallon cheaper than I can," Lindsey said today. "They can sell any brand they want to. They're not tied to any one company."

An independent acknowledged the gas war.

"I think that's pretty obvious," said J.R. Wheeler of West Texas Gas Inc.'s marketing operations. "We observe a competitive posture. We keep our prices competitive."

But Lindsey is obligated to buy from those two major oil companies. "We can't buy from anybody else. We're not making any money. We're breaking even." But he said the major oil companies "have been pretty good about dropping" gasoline prices to competitive levels. "They still are way out of line."

His regular gasoline is selling for 79.9 cents a gallon. But last week, Lindsey said he was selling fuel at 15 cents a gallon below his costs.

"I've had to lay two people off and am cutting hours on the rest," he said.

Some independent stations, which make up the majority of stations in Midland, dropped prices to 59 cents a gallon but are buying the fuel for about 40 cents a gallon, Lindsey said.

Over the weekend, one Exxon retailer dropped his gasoline to a below-cost 49 cents a gallon to combat the independents who are selling the cheaper fuel, but he put a limit on sales, Lindsey noted. Lindsey said he would not put a limit on sales at the pump.

"He was trying to get back at the independents," Lindsey said. "We can't fight Kent or West Texas Gas. They sell the gasoline cheaper. They can buy it anywhere they want to."

Surakarta Subroto, left, Indonesian minister of mines and energy, greets Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, Venezuelan minister of mines and energy and president of the OPEC conference, prior to the beginning of the emergency meeting in Geneva.

OPEC awaits market experts' report

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC oil ministers suspended their emergency meeting today to await a report from a committee of oil market experts, the cartel's president said.

Arturo Hernandez Grisanti of Venezuela told reporters after a three-hour morning session that the 13 ministers expected to resume their meeting on Tuesday.

"I guess we could say the conference will be on standby for the day," Grisanti said through an interpreter.

The Venezuelan oil minister said he and his colleagues would meet informally in small groups this afternoon instead of continuing the full conference.

The decision to temporarily suspend the full meeting is a departure from normal OPEC procedure. It was seen as a sign of the sharp divisions within the cartel on what strategy might best prop up oil prices, which have tumbled 50 percent since December.

After four hours of discussions on Sunday, the ministers reported no progress toward agreement, and Grisanti said after this morning's closed-door session that "no concrete proposals" were presented.

A key question before the conference is whether the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries should revert to limiting production to push up the price of oil. OPEC used that tactic with little success for four years, and abandoned it in December in a deal engineered by Saudi Arabia that triggered an unprecedented plunge in world oil prices.

As on Sunday, nearly all the ministers slipped quietly into their hotel meeting room today through side or rear entrances, avoiding contact with reporters.

Abdul Aziz bin Khalifa al Thani, the oil minister of Qatar, said he was not yet ready to accept a new system of OPEC production limits. "That would be difficult," he said as he entered a morning session.

At an average of about $15 a barrel, oil prices have hit the lowest point since the late 1970s and are one-half their levels of early December.

Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani was quoted by Britain's Sunday Telegraph newspaper as saying oil prices could fall to $8 a barrel if OPEC and non-OPEC producers did not agree on production limits.

Grisanti, the organization president and Venzuela's oil minister, said the 13 members of OPEC Sunday only conferred on general issues and did not get into details.

Grisanti said OPEC officials would meet Wednesday with representatives of Oman, Brunei, Mexico, Malaysia and Egypt — all who are not members of the cartel.

Analysts say that meeting was unlikely to produce meaningful agreement because the biggest non-OPEC producers — the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and Norway — are not attending.

"We think non-OPEC producing countries are very much concerned about the current state of the market, and I know that there are many of them who are willing to share the responsibility of trying to stabilize the market at a reasonable level of prices," the Venezuelan minister said.

The Saudis, the largest producer in OPEC, contend that the organization's production cuts were not enough to prevent prices from falling.

Under the December deal, OPEC declared it no longer would cut production, even though it risked a global oil price war, in order to force non-OPEC producers to decrease their share of the market.

That decision led quickly to the sharp slide in prices, but it did not convince key non-OPEC producers to cooperate with the cartel.

Some OPEC members have declared that the Saudi strategy was too costly and should be abandoned. Led by Algeria, Iran and Libya, the members want the organization to revert to the previous tactic of cutting production in order to push up prices.

Iranian President Ali Khamenei said in a message to the participants at Sunday's conference that they should unite to restrict oil supplies and to drive prices higher.

"If we are unable to make the necessary and immediate decisions at this juncture, the costs will be enormous and the consequences suffered irreversible," he said. A text of his message was made available to reporters in Geneva.

Several other OPEC members, including Venezuela and Indonesia, so far have not decided whether the December strategy should be abandoned. But Kuwait was reported to be moving to back the Iranian proposal.

The official Kuwait News Agency quoted Kuwait Oil Minister Sheik Ali Khalifa al-Sabah as saying at Sunday's meeting that his country would accept an unspecified production cut if it was part of a "new system of production quotas."

Kuwait previously had sided with the Saudi proposal. Kuwait pumps about 900,000 barrels a day, making it a medium-size producer.

The United Arab Emirates also urged OPEC to withhold oil from the market to stop the price decline.

Arrival of spring welcomed the world over

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — "Spring is both father and mother to us," according to an old Spanish proverb that may embody the emotions of millions anxious to see winter finished and the new season under way.

Some people suffer from seasonal disorder, a form of depression believed associated with the lack of sunlight in winter.

Others merely have old fashioned "cabin fever" from being trapped indoors by the cold.

And many are just plain ready for a change in the weather.

Whatever the reason, the arrival of March coincides with spring, a season of birth or rebirth in the world of nature, and one of wonder and appreciation by most of humankind.

"There is something in a mild March day that can touch a man to the very quick of his being," wrote the late Hal Borland in his book, 'Twelve Moons of the Year.'"

"Just what it is cannot readily be stated, but it must be compounded of sunlight and air and warmth and an immeasurable mystery that is partly summed up by the word 'promise,'" he wrote.

But that promise can be fickle, at a time when weather changes greatly from day to day and the warmth of false spring can be followed by a severe storm.

"The first day of spring is one thing, and the first spring day is another," observed the late Henry Van Dyke, an American clergyman who died in 1933, aware both of the fickleness of March weather, and that the change of seasons can occur at markedly different dates in different parts of the nation.

And that's true around the world. The arrival of spring has always been noted and welcomed, but determining just when it will occur presents a grand scope for disagreement.

Today's popular reckoning places the "official" start of spring Thursday at 5:03 p.m. — the moment of the vernal equinox when the sun crosses the equator on its apparent trip northward.

On that date the hours of light and darkness are nearly equal — hence the term equinox — and the run rises and sets nearly due east and west.

But calling that moment the start of spring has been disagreed with by many, including the late British meteorologist and folklorist Richard Inwards, who termed it an "illogical definition."

More reasonable, he thought, was the approach taken in medieval times, when the church was a major focus of life and saints' days were used to mark off the seasons.

In that era, St. Peter's Day was marked as the start of spring, with the season thought to last from that day, Feb. 22, to May 24.

But the Gulf Stream carrying warm tropical waters northeasterly moderates the climate of England and Europe, bringing springlike weather there earlier than in North America, so perhaps St. Peter's Day may be too early for this country to begin spring, at least in its northerly environs.

Modern meteorologists don't wait for March 20, though, preferring to designate the each seasons as consisting of three whole months, which is at least an orderly system.

Chicago's 31st annual St. Patrick's Day parade was expected to draw 120,000 spectators to watch 202 groups, including a bevy of Illinois politicians in this election year. As always, the Chicago River was to be dyed green with 100 pounds of vegetable dye.

President Reagan, America's No. 1 Irish-American, planned to mark the holiday by meeting with Irish Prime Minister Garrett FitzGerald in Washington.

Another leader of Irish descent, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney was to arrive in the nation's capital tonight, exactly one year after his "Shamrock Summit" with Reagan in Canada. Mulroney and Reagan are to meet Tuesday.

Over the weekend, Irish-Americans and would-be Irish-Americans turned out in Boston, Baltimore, Atlanta, New Orleans, Denver, Los Angeles and Beverly Hills to watch floats and marching bands or celebrate in other ways.

"We've been partying for three days," Ron Reed, manager of the Long Branch Saloon in Savannah, Ga., said Sunday night during that coastal city's celebration, which officially starts Saturday and ends Tuesday. "There's thousands of people down here, getting drunk, having a good time."

Memphis, Tenn., officials made that Mississippi River city's celebration drier by banning the annual pub crawl.

In New York, about 750,000 people were expected to turn out to watch 100,000 marchers, including 38 bands of bagpipers and 82 other bands, strut down nearly 3 miles of Fifth Avenue.

St. Patrick's Day parades in recent years have been spiced by controversy over Northern Ireland, but the 225th edition promised to be calmer.

Grand Marshal Alfred O'Hagan Jr. has expressed determination that the parade not be politicized, and the Irish government has dropped its boycott of the event.

While O'Hagan supports a "free and undivided Ireland," he has not taken as radical a stance as some past grand marshals, who back the Irish Republican Army. The IRA is fighting against British rule in Northern Ireland.

Police also expect the parade to be a quiet one. The Police Department said about 3,200 officers were being assigned to the event, down 10 percent from last year.

In Boston, a crowd police estimated at 500,000 waved green balloons and carnations at marching bands and politicians Sunday. Nineteen people were arrested, most of them for disorderly conduct, said Police Department spokesman Tom Santry.

Entertainer Gene Kelly led a celebrity-studded parade in Beverly Hills, Calif., down a green-carpeted "Emerald Mile" on Sunday, but rain kept the crowd down to about 2,500 to 3,000 people, said police dispatcher Janice Biswell.

NICARAGUA

And on the sidewalk in front of the White House, hundreds of demonstrators marched with candles and anti-administration placards, shouting, "No more killing, no more lies; we know what Contra money buys."

In his speech from the Oval Office, however, Reagan warned that the aid program is needed "for the defense of our own southern frontier."

As television screens showed a red stain spreading across a map of Latin America and threatening Mexico, the president declared:

"For our own security the United States must deny the Soviet Union a beachhead in North America....It is not Nicaragua alone that threatens us, but those using Nicaragua as a privileged sanctuary for their struggle against the United States."

Reagan said the Sandinista leaders of Nicaragua "are transforming their nation into a safe house, a command post for international terror."

He charged that the Sandinistas "sponsor terror in El Salvador, Costa Rica, Guatemala and Honduras — terror that led last summer to the murder of four U.S. Marines in a cafe in San Salvador," the Salvadoran capital.

A senior administration official, when asked for the basis of the president's assertion, said, "I don't think we have anything beyond the fact that the headquarters for the El Salvador guerrillas is in Nicaragua and guidance and supplies come out of Nicaragua. I don't believe we have got any information that the Nicaraguans directly advised the headquarters to conduct this attack."

Reagan also showed television viewers a black and white photograph that he said showed Federico Vaughan, identified by the White House as a top aide to Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge, loading an aircraft with illegal narcotics bound for the United States.

"I know every American parent concerned about the drug problem will be outraged to learn that top Nicaraguan officials are deeply involved in drug trafficking," he said.

The senior administration official, asked if this meant that Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega was involved, said, "I don't think we have any direct ties to Ortega. Only to Tomas Borge."

Cornelius J. Dougherty, a spokesman for the Drug Enforcement Administration, said a recent DEA investigation led to an indictment of Vaughan but "no evidence was developed to implicate the minister of interior or other Nicaraguan officials."

Woman finds $41,355 in cash while cleaning rental house

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who found more then $40,000 while cleaning the house she had just rented can keep it if no one claims the cash within 97 days, police said.

"She just moved into this place, and she was cleaning it up and putting some cockroach poison down. She saw a corner of a bag and started pulling on it," Sgt. Richard Greenwood said Saturday.

"I'm still in shock. I hope it goes to the rightful owner," the woman said. "If it comes back to me, I don't know what I'll do."

The 38-year-old woman, who asked not to be identified, said she found the money, $41,355, earlier this month in the drawers and cabinets of her kitchen.

"I saw these little bundles, some were wrapped in foil and some were just held together with rubber bands," she said. "I just stared at it. I didn't know what to do."

GASOLINE

He noted that 7-Eleven and Stop 'n' Go convenience stores are jobbers who own their own refineries and can sell fuel at cut-rate prices.

A clerk at a Kwik Mart station, where gasoline today was selling for 63 cents a gallon, said that likely the price would be "going down today."

"There could be a slight gas war," the clerk said.

Tommy Burton, manager of Bill Thorne's Exxon Service Station, said that fuel there was selling for 99.9 cents a gallon for regular gasoline and $1.07.9 for super unleaded gasoline.

"It's more or less a gas war," he said. "It's slow," he said of sales. "We're way off of our gasoline volume."

Ricky Scott at Lindsey Brothers Imperial Gulf Service Station said regular gasoline there was selling for 79 cents a gallon.

"It's just fluctuating right now," he said. "Nobody can seem to get it stabilized."

Said Ray Lindsey: "It's just tough old competition."

NASA engineers also testified that studies of the seals after several flights caused them to be re-classified from "criticality 1-R" to "criticality 1," but that this classification later was waived and the spacecraft was cleared for continued flights even though it was known that one of the O-rings would fail under certain conditions.

Presidential commission members have closely questioned this waiver, and at least one commission member, Richard Feynman, has publically denounced the design of the rocket engine seals.

Meanwhile, a salvage ship today began hoisting from the ocean floor a 500-pound chunk of debris that could be vital to the investigation into the explosion of space shuttle Challenger.

The Stena Workhorse began the retrieval after a robot submersible, the Gemini, attached lift lines to the piece.

It is a 4-by-6-foot section that might be from the right solid rocket booster, which is the chief suspect in the accident.

Photographs show the chunk contains part of the external tank attachment ring. And if it is the right-hand rocket, that ring was just 19 inches from the joint between segments where the explosion sequence is believed to have started.

The Stena Workhorse, which has a lifting capability of 100 tons, already has one large piece of a rocket booster on board. It is a 6-by-18-foot chunk weighing 3,250 pounds that was plucked from a depth of 400 feet Sunday 28 miles northeast of here.

After that recovery, the ship moved four miles farther north where the smaller piece rested in 650 feet of water.

Investigators have concentrated on a joint between the bottom two segments of the right booster. Launch photographs show a puff of black smoke in the area of the joint on liftoff and a plume of flame spewing from the same area 58 seconds later, 16 seconds before the explosion.

Philippine panel probes Texas land purchases

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A Philippine government commission is investigating whether property bought in Texas, including properties worth $19.2 million in Nueces County and $20 million in Tarrant County, was purchased with the help of deposed President Ferdinand Marcos.

Attorney Michael E. Tigar said during a news conference Friday in Austin that the Philippine government under new President Corazon Aquino plans to file a federal lawsuit in Texas this week in an effort to claim properties it believes were purchased with funds from Marcos.

Mrs. Aquino charged the commission with determining whether Marcos and several of his business associates used money from the Philippine treasury to make land investments in the United States.

Pedro Yap, a member of the Presidential Commission on Good Government in Manila, said the commission plans to investigate Corpus Christi land purchases made by Jose Y. Campos through Dallas real estate agent Richard A. Gray Jr. between 1981 and summer of 1985.

The properties are owned by several Netherland Antilles-based corporations controlled by Campos, according to Nueces County deed and tax records.

Records examined by the Dallas Times Herald also show that Campos-directed corporations own $1.6 million in property in eastern Bexar County near San Antonio and 486 acres, assessed at $693,000, in Denton County.

Yap said the commission has documents that indicate Campos has conducted business dealings for Marcos in the past.

Gray denied that Campos acted as a front for Marcos when he purchased the land in Corpus Christi.

"He is a well-respected businessman from Manila. That is all," Gray told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

"This is covered by our authority to investigate assets abroad. I do not know at which priority we will approach this, but we will look into these land purchases," Yap said.

The Philippine government last week froze assets of business leaders in the island nation identified as Marcos' cronies, including Campos.

Campos, who heads one of Asia's largest pharmaceutical firms, United Laboratories Inc. in Manila, is known in the Philippines as a close friend of the Marcos family.

"He is quite close to Marcos," Yap said. "We have received information that he is the godfather of Marcos' only son."

Most of the seven tracts of land acquired by Gray for Campos are considered prime for real estate development and are located on or near the bayfront in Corpus Christi, the Caller-Times reported.

The latest purchases of land in the Corpus Christi area by Gray was in July and August 1985.

Dole asks Senate to end debate on Gramm choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole has asked the Senate to cut off debate and vote Tuesday on confirmation of Sen. Phil Gramm's 32-year-old nominee to the federal bench.

Sidney A. Fitzwater, a state district judge from Dallas, would become the nation's youngest sitting federal judge if confirmed by the Senate. He was nominated by the White House after being recommended by Gramm, a freshman Texas Republican.

Dole, R-Kans., filed a motion Friday asking the Senate to vote Tuesday on whether to end debate, which takes 60 votes. If debate is halted, a vote on confirmation would follow.

Democrats have opposed Fitzwater because of his involvement in a 1982 pre-election incident in which he was accused of posting anti-voter fraud signs at minority polling places as part of an effort to intimidate black voters.

Sens. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio and Bill Bradley of New Jersey took to the Senate floor last Tuesday to oppose Fitzwater's nomination, but the Senate cut off debate so it could get on with other business.

Gramm said Thursday that he had enough signatures to demand a vote on ending debate, but was not so sure about the 60 votes to actually end it.

"We have had several judges approved this year who didn't get 60 votes," Gramm said. He said then he was weighing whether to seek the cloture vote or "ask Sen. Dole to allow me to bring this up to close of business one day next week and stay on it all night with quorum calls and votes if that's what's necessary. I hope I don't have to do that."

Fitzwater maintained at his confirmation hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee that he thought the signs were approved by the Dallas County sheriff, that they did not misrepresent Texas voting law and that they were being posted in all areas of the county.

It turned out that the signs were sponsored by a GOP campaign and were almost exclusively posted in minority voting precincts.

Kennedy said the signs did not accurately represent Texas law and were meant solely to discourage blacks from voting.

One Democrat who did speak for Fitzwater, Paul Simon of Illinois, the Democrats' "point man" on judicial nominations, said he believed Fitzwater had made a mistake and would be an unbiased judge.

Dispossessed arrive daily at Catholic shelter

By DAVID SEDENO

SAN BENITO (AP) — They continue to arrive daily.

They come alone, in pairs, or in groups with stories of their trek and sometimes of the smugglers who cheat them.

Some bear scratches from thorny bushes suffered during their journey. Some of the women arrive pregnant, ready to deliver. Most arrive hungry and scared.

Mostly from El Salvador and Nicaragua, they are the dispossessed of the strife in Central America, orphans from the storm seeking peace and a haven in the United States, their supporters say.

Those supporters, who help them settle here, often illegally, make up an army of dedicated people paying allegiance to an unofficial movement they call sanctuary.

In Tucson, Ariz., the federal trial of 11 sanctuary workers accused of conspiring to smuggle aliens into the country is nearing its conclusion. A hearing to discuss jury instructions is set for Tuesday.

Defense attorneys chose to rest their case without calling a witness because they said they do not believe prosecutors have proved their case.

"Why attend the football game when the score is 27-0 in the last quarter?" attorney Michael Piccarreta said Friday. "In our opinion...we won. There is no case. These people are not criminals."

The trial has been continuing for 19 weeks.

The defense scored a key point in the case when it contended that testimony by an undercover witness was hearsay without testimony from the aliens allegedly smuggled into this country. They were never found by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

In this south Texas city, in a quiet neighborhood not far from the Rio Grande sits Casa Oscar Romero, a Catholic Church-sponsored shelter that has offered temporary shelter to thousands fleeing Central America and trying to settle in the United States.

Sister Ninfa Garza, center, with a girl on her lap, poses with Central Americans at Casa Oscar Romero, a Catholic church-sponsored shelter in San Benito.

"You suffer with them and sometimes you feel you can't do anything about it and it hurts. It breaks your heart," said Sister Ninfa Garza, a nun who serves as the shelter's director.

The Diocese of Brownsville opened the shelter three years ago, and named it for the slain archbishop of El Salvador. In the last few weeks, the casa has offered shelter to an average 135 Central Americans a day, the sister said. Casa is Spanish for house.

"Local support has increased tremendously," said Hernan Gonzales, a diocese worker who supervises the home's operation. "We have seen more contributions in-kind, through food stuffs, clothing."

The shelter has not operated without problems. In the past year, two former directors have wound up in federal court. And some neighbors don't want the casa, which hits on parts of six city lots, in their neighborhood.

"I feel bad for those poor people," Mayor Cesar Gonzalez said of the refugees. "I wish we could do something for them, but I have been getting a lot of complaints and I have to protect the citizenry of San Benito."

Church officials say they don't plan to move.

When the shelter opened, Gonzales said, it was thought that the instability in Central America that was driving refugees north would last three to four months. That was three years ago.

Those in the sanctuary movement say the Central Americans are fleeing war and persecution in the region, but the federal government maintains the aliens are being enticed to the United States by better economic conditions.

Casa Oscar Romero drew national attention a year ago when then-director Jack Elder went on trial in Corpus Christi on charges he transported three Salvadorans to a Harlingen bus station.

Elder was acquitted. He returned to cheers from church workers and shelter residents, and said his acquittal would inspire others.

But on Feb. 21, he and shelter volunteer Stacey Lynn Merkt were convicted in Houston of charges they took two Salvadorans to a McAllen bus station.

Elder refused to accept a sentence of two years' probation on six convictions because the terms would have limited his involvement in the sanctuary movement.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela, who shocked the courtroom by saying he agreed with the sanctuary movement, sentenced Elder to spend five months in a San Antonio halfway house.

Ms. Merkt's conviction was overturned by an appeals court. She is to be retried next month.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization officials keep an eye on Casa Romero, but Border Patrol Chief Silvestre Reyes said arresting those at the shelter is not a high priority.

Man waits 106 years for first birthday party

LONGVIEW (AP) — It was a long time coming, but after 106 years John Allen finally had his first birthday party.

The Longview man, hospitalized while he recovers from an illness, took great delight in being the center of attention as he celebrated courtesy of nurses at Good Shepherd Medical Center.

"I've really enjoyed myself today," Allen said. "I didn't know it was my birthday. It just slipped upon me. And look at all this," he said, looking around the room at the balloons. "Isn't this something?"

Friday's party seemed to impress Allen a lot more than the fact that he is 106 years old. Bobby Allison, one of Allen's nurses at Good Shepherd, verified his age through the Social Security office. She explained this is the first birthday party Allen has ever had.

"When the nurses on the floor realized he was going to turn 106 while here in the hospital, we all got together and decided to throw him a real good one, with a big cake and balloons and everything," she said.

"He's been so happy and excited all day. In fact, he was telling us exactly where to hang the balloons and complaining that everybody was going to eat his cake and there wouldn't be any left for him," she said.

"I don't have a secret for living so long," said Allen, who now lives with a niece in Longview. "I don't know any reasons why.

"I used to smoke, but after I lost all my teeth, I gave it up because I couldn't hold it in my mouth. I ain't got nary a tooth in my head," he said with a smile.

"You know how I got those teeth out? I got them out by pushing them out when they got loose. I drink beer on special occasions. I still like beer. I eat most anything at all, but chicken fried steak is my favorite food. I like pork sausage and cornbread, too."

Allen said he was born in Carthage.

"My daddy and mother died when I was real small, so I never got to know them and they never got to teach me things. I really don't know what type of work my daddy did, since he died when I was so young," he said.

"I went to school, but don't have a favorite book. I've never read the Bible, but I joined the Church of Christ two years ago. I tried to farm every year, but it's been a pretty good while since I've done that. I've worked with different people all my life.

"I never found a woman I wanted to marry. I've just been a loose man all my life," he said, laughing.

Allen said he's never driven a car and has no desire to ride in a plane.

"I never drove anything but a wagon and a pair of mules," he said. "I'd be scared to fly in an airplane."

Tuesday, March 18, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Business partnerships will be strengthened by the events of the coming year. Your attraction to someone of great stability will be very beneficial to you both financially and personally. Your cheerful and optimistic approach allows you to be extremely competitive without hurting anyone's feelings. Top priority should be given to sorting out relationships, finding greater family unity and justice for you and your loved ones. Travel proves to be a source of unusual pleasure.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Sportsman/writer George Plimpton, actor Peter Graves, author John Updike, former president Grover Cleveland, Alpine skier Ingemar Stenmark, composer Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Finish up a long-overdue assignment before starting anything new. Your ability to succeed will depend significantly on your intuition. Trust your mate's judgment when it comes to household matters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your career may be taking a few erratic moves. The newspaper is a source of good employment leads. Learning additional skills will improve your earning potential.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Postpone signing legal documents until you have the opportunity to consult with your lawyer. A creative or artistic project demands more of your time than you expected.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Diplomacy and patience are the key words in settling differences with employers or loved ones. You will find new meaning to the word friendship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A bit of good luck brings favorable financial prospects. Trust your intuition when it comes to new people and unusual situations. Pampered loved ones are more affectionate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Act quickly to avoid an awkward situation. Do not allow your laziness to give your competition the leading edge. Romance is exciting, but it may not be in your better interest today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make long-distance calls early in the day before the rates go up. Business trips bring new opportunities and exciting contacts. Trust children to make their own decisions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Commit good ideas to paper before they are forgotten. The postponement of a business meeting proves to be to your advantage. Job interviews run smoothly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You manage beautifully the new deadlines and demands from superiors. Experts recommend a new investment plan: it makes you feel more financially secure. Romance begins to bloom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): When in a difficult position rely only on yourself. A decision to continue schooling works to your advantage. A spontaneous flirtation intrigues you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get an early start today, especially if traveling for business. A nice sale and a substantial bonus improve your financial picture. Pay bills on time to preserve your good credit rating.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your versatility at small talk attracts the attention of a member of the opposite sex. Someone from your past re-enters the employment picture. Enjoy the reunion without being too nostalgic.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠72 ♡10953 ♢J9842 ♣94
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 NT	Dble	Rdble	?

What action do you take?
A.—You have not yet been invited into the auction. Partner has said he can beat one no trump, and he knows from the auction that he can't expect any help from you. If he runs to two clubs and that gets doubled, you might try two diamonds. But leave the decision to him. Pass.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q10932 ♡KJ653 ♢9 ♣Q10
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♢	1 ♡	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♣	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—What an unpleasant development. Since you have already virtually promised a five-card spade suit, partner could have raised with three-card support. This hand has all the hallmarks of a misfit. We would pass before we get too high—it sounds as if partner has at least five clubs.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠754 ♡83 ♢KQ107 ♣QJ62
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	2 ♢

What action do you take?
A.—Your hand is perfect for a sacrifice. Length in partner's suit, little or no defense, sufficient length in opener's suit to suspect that partner does not have too many, and the vulnerability is in your favor. Bid five diamonds. Not only should that not be too expensive, but it could even push the opponents to five spades where you might have a chance to defeat them.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ10965 ♡AJ54 ♢AK ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
3 ♡	4 ♠	Pass	6 ♠
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—For his jump to six spades, partner cannot possibly have less than the ace of clubs, king of spades and a singleton or void in hearts. Bid seven spades. Not to go on to the grand slam would be the height of cowardice.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K76 ♡K954 ♢Q83 ♣AQ6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♢	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Although you have a perfectly balanced hand with good stoppers in the unbid suits, this is not the hand for three no trump. Partner's hand is unbalanced and should play better in a suit; indeed, there could be a suit slam in the cards. Your first step must be to bid three spades, and leave the driving to him.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♡AQ10 ♢AJ5 ♣KQJ763
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with four spades. What action do you take?
A.—Even though you might be punished very badly, you should bid five clubs. East has made life difficult with his preempt, and we cannot give you a guarantee with every bid you make. If you don't bid with hands like this, aggressive opponents will steal you blind.

Woody Allen flattered by bouquets thrown to 'Purple Rose of Cairo'

LONDON (AP) — Woody Allen said he was flattered that "The Purple Rose of Cairo" was named Best Film of 1985 at the British Academy Awards ceremony.

Speaking via satellite from New York, Allen said Sunday night, "I'm very flattered over your response to 'The Purple Rose of Cairo,' and I hope films I do in the future will be meaningful to you as well."

Allen's film also won Best Original Screenplay at the nationally televised event, sponsored by the British Academy of Film and Television Arts.

In other awards, director Steven Spielberg was given the prestigious Fellowship of the Academy. William Hurt was named Best Actor for his role in "Kiss of the Spider Woman" and Dame Peggy Ashcroft won Best Actress honors for "A Passage to India."

SNYDER, Texas (AP) — "General Hospital" star Brad Maule says he faced his toughest audience during a homecoming for five Snyder High graduates who went on to become stars.

"I'm connected to everyone in that audience. Basically, I know everyone out there," he said.

The town of 13,000 turned out Saturday night to honor actors Powers Boothe, Maule, Barry Tubb, Dane Witherspoon and musician Ann Patterson.

Boothe, who won an Emmy Award for his portrayal of the Rev. Jim Jones in "The Guyana Tragedy," said, "It's a most frightening experience. I'm trying to remember who I was when I left here, and finding out who I am now."

The rhythm section of Patterson's Los Angeles jazz band Maiden Voyage provided dinner music.

High school drama coach Jerry Worsham, who taught Maule, Tubb and Witherspoon, said the school allows artistic freedom while others stifle students.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The weather fit the song, but entertainer Gene Kelly refused to do "Singing in the Rain" as he led a glittery but rain-soaked St. Patrick's parade down a green-carpeted "Emerald Mile" of Beverly Hills.

Kelly, wearing an overcoat, rode in the back seat of a covered antique car.

The parade Sunday included 15 floats, 50 horses, antique cars and bands.

Parade spokeswoman Gail Block had said Kelly was "prepared to do 'Singing in the Rain.'"

But asked about that, Kelly snapped: "No, no, no!" and declined further comment.

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Funeral services are scheduled Wednesday for Harold W. Arlin, the world's first full-time radio announcer.

He died Friday at age 90 at his winter home in Bakersfield, Calif. He was released two days earlier from a hospital after suffering a heart attack March 2, said his daughter, Dorothy Hershey of Norwalk.

Arlin was known as a broadcasting pioneer. In 1921, he became the first full-time voice at KDKA, a Pittsburgh station that was America's first radio station.

He was the first to announce a major league baseball game and a college football game, the Pirates versus the Phillies baseball game on Aug. 21, 1921, and Pittsburgh versus West Virginia on Oct. 8, 1921.

He interviewed many celebrities on the air — Babe Ruth, Will Rogers, Lillian Gish and William Jennings Bryan.

NEW YORK (AP) — Shirley MacLaine, visiting Peru to film a television mini-series, found herself in hot water over a suggestion that the country's giant desert drawings were made by visitors from outer space.

The 51-year-old actress was on location in the Andes for "Out on a Limb," a five-hour ABC mini-series based on her 1983 autobiography. The National Institute of Culture cited passages suggesting the drawings were done by extraterrestrials rather than ancient Peruvians, and accused her of trying to discredit Peru's culture.

Later, Time magazine reports, Miss MacLaine tried to make amends, saying, "I profoundly believe that Peru is the repository of a splendiferous culture. If there were extraterrestrial beings that had visited the Earth, Peru would be the place they would choose."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite a downpour, celebrities Morgan Fairchild, Ed Asner, Cybill Shepherd and Jane Fonda led up to 20,000 umbrella-toting feminists on a mile-long solidarity march to support abortion rights.

A vigorous winter storm, which included heavy rain, thunder, lightning and a tornado warning from the National Weather Service, didn't dampen the spirit of Sunday's march through the Century City business district.

"Today it (abortion) is legal, and we are here to see that it stays that way," Ms. Fonda said at a post-march rally at Cheviot Hills Park, where marchers stood in ankle-deep mud and water to hear dozens of speakers.

"We were going to go rain or shine. These people are not fair-weather supporters," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women. "There is a full-fledged attack on women's rights and we are not going to take it anymore."

BUDAPEST, Hungary (LAT) — All Yoko Ono is still saying is "Give peace a chance."

It's a theme she stressed repeatedly during her concert here Friday night — the 10th stop in the singer-songwriter's first tour since her husband, John Lennon, was slain in 1980.

"As John said, we can make it (peace) together. Together is the secret," she told 15,000 people in the International Fairgrounds hall, a bare, stark room the size of a football field normally used for cultural or consumer exhibits.

Because so few people in this Eastern Bloc city know more than a smattering of English, those words — and other song introductions — were translated into Hungarian by an interpreter.

But one point near the end of the 80-minute concert needed no translation.

As the keyboardist in Ono's band began Lennon's most famous song, "Imagine," the audience reacted with an intensity that seemed almost cathartic.

FORT WORTH (AP) — Bill Smith, 88, former managing editor of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, died Sunday in a Fort Worth hospital. He had a history of heart problems.

Funeral arrangements were pending at Greenwood Funeral Home.

"Bill Smith was a master technician. He could do more work faster than any other man I ever worked with," said Jack Butler, former executive editor of the Star-Telegram.

Smith had a 48-year newspaper career.

Rusk memories

American heroes are not forgotten.

That fact was in evidence last Thursday at Rusk Elementary School in Midland when students planted seven fruitless mulberry trees in honor of Dick Scobee, Mike Smith, Judy Resnik, Ellison Onizuka, Ron McNair, Gregory Jarvis and teacher Christa McAuliffe — the astronauts who perished when the Challenger space shuttle exploded shortly after launch on Jan. 28th.

The ceremony was short, solemn and touching. But what it said about the people of this nation and their hopes and dreams was much more than the simple ceremony suggested. There were tears in the eyes of the teachers and the students.

The shuttle explosion is, in terms of how news events are observed today, "old hat," having been pushed aside by declining oil prices and the attempt by the Reagan administration to gain support for aid for contra forces in Nicaragua. Life must go on — even in the aftermath of death.

But the fact that the shuttle explosion wasn't merely another news event is reinforced by the emotion that still chokes away the voices of people who watched in horror Jan. 28th as another "ordinary" shuttle mission was turned into a nightmare in a matter of seconds. The pain that engulfed the American populace still ensures and will continue to ensure that the tragedy will not be wiped away from our memories for years.

So does the emotion-draining recovery operation now under way. It reminds each of us day after grueling day of our worst fears realized.

The hopes — the imaginations — of the American people and all school children were riding in that flight of Challenger. It will take some time, some more successful shuttle flights to let the healing process come full circle.

And it will take a lot of quiet, solemn ceremonies like the one held at Rusk Elementary last week. Those ceremonies say the dream is alive and as long as it is, the shuttle astronauts are still living — in our hearts.

Business joins faculty

One of the most encouraging developments on the educational scene is the growing participation of private business, on a voluntary basis, in secondary school programs.

In major cities across the country, more and more companies are assuming major roles in the preparation of curricula and sponsoring the training of instructors who will pass along their experience and an understanding of their needs to youth about to enter the job market.

Banks, investment houses, and advertising agencies are increasingly moving into the situation caused by a job picture which is being turned upside down by new technology and the shifting economy.

In New York City alone, some 200,000 new jobs have been created in the service and finance industries over the past eight years while manufacturing jobs have dropped by 131,000. A Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics official estimates that in New York or any other large center only about one of every six job openings is suitable for a person lacking a high school diploma.

Private business is making a major effort to check the high school dropout rate and provide programs that focus on job-related skills. This is an undertaking from which both business and the young people can eventually profit. In this project there are no losers.

Another View: Spain's NATO 'yes'

Spain's vote to remain in NATO — in defiance of all opinion polls and predictions — has implications far beyond military matters. Spanish withdrawal would have hurt the alliance, but not crucially. It would have been more important as a step back toward isolationism by a country whose history over the past generation has been very different from that of its western European neighbors. And that, at the end of a heated referendum campaign, was the issue: whether to retreat or to keep advancing toward a common destiny with the other Atlantic democracies.

Change has overtaken Spain with awesome speed. Under Francisco Franco, the last survivor among the fascist dictators of the 1930s, it remained very much out of the stream of European developments. Franco wanted it that way, and the other governments shunned Franco. But since his death in 1975, the country has embraced the democratic tradition with great conviction. In January it took another long step toward its neighbors by joining the Common Market — a decision that promises great things for Spanish prosperity, but at a substantial cost to the comfortable and accustomed old ways of doing things. If Spanish voters had decided to take a step backward in the recent NATO referendum, it would have been understandable. Instead, they chose to persevere.

One reason was the character of the opposition to NATO membership, led by pacifists and the Communist Party. A larger reason was the vigorous and skillful leadership of the Socialist prime minister, Felipe Gonzalez, a man who had changed his own mind on the subject. As a candidate in the last election, he had been against the alliance, but in power he became convinced of the importance of staying in. He has succeeded in taking his party and now his country with him on this change of course. The vote is, for him, a triumph that leaves him in an extremely strong position for the national elections later this year.

In supporting Spain's continued membership, Mr. Gonzalez set three conditions. First, Spain would continue — like France — to stay out of NATO's integrated command structure. Second, it would continue to bar nuclear weapons from Spain. Third, Spain will seek the "progressive reduction" of the U.S. military presence there. All three of these conditions can be met without great difficulty. The first two continue present policy. As for the third, the United States and Spain agreed last December to discuss a reduction in the American forces stationed there.

NATO is a good deal more than a conventional military alliance. By their vote to remain within it, the Spaniards have strengthened their commitment not only to their friends but to the common defense of the democratic principles for which NATO has stood for nearly four decades.

Stealth bomber: A costly mistake

WASHINGTON — The Air Force's fast-talking salesmen for the super-secret Stealth bomber are winning adherents in Congress by minimizing the plane's astronomical costs and clamping a lid of secrecy on its potentially serious design drawbacks.

Jack Anderson

In one closed hearing after another, insiders have told us, the Air Force hucksters have assured members of Congress that the Stealth bomber will cost about the same as its chief rival, the B-1, which is already in production.

The point of this maneuvering and manipulation is that Congress must soon decide whether to fund the new Stealth program or buy an additional 100 B-1 bombers. Even though the B-1 program is a rarity in defense procurement — ahead of schedule and under anticipated cost — conservatives and liberals alike on Capitol Hill generally like the idea of the futuristic Stealth bomber, which supposedly can penetrate Soviet air defenses by being invisible to radar.

Defense Undersecretary Donald Hicks has told Congress the Pentagon wants a plane that will set the Soviets "back on their rears." What he hasn't told Congress is that likely cost overruns on the Stealth bomber could set the U.S. Treasury back on its rear.

The true cost of the Stealth program is a closely held secret. Our associate Donald Goldberg has learned that the Pentagon, in a classified report ordered by Congress, predicts that the 132 Stealth bombers the brass wants will cost $36.6 billion. This is misleading at best, because it is based on 1981 dollars and doesn't include everything.

When it comes time to pay for the Stealth bombers, our sources say the real price — including inflation and research and development costs — will be more like $80 billion. And that's not counting possible overruns. Even at $80 billion, Stealth would be the most expensive aircraft project in U.S. history.

But the chances of cost overruns are high. Unlike the B-1, which flew thousands of hours of tests before full production began, the Stealth will go directly from drawing board to assembly line, bypassing critical tests that might uncover design flaws, according to our sources.

Despite these obvious fiscal dangers, Air Force briefers persist in assuring Congress that the Stealth bomber will cost about the same as the B-1. Here again, the Pentagon is not telling Congress the whole truth.

Research, development, plant construction and worker training for the B-1 have already been bought and paid for. So an additional 100 B-1s would clearly be a lot cheaper to produce than the all-new Stealth with its need for R&D, new plants and worker training.

Our sources estimate the cost of additional B-1 bombers at about $190 million apiece; each Stealth bomber would cost about $540 million, not including research costs. And the taxpayers would be getting an untested plane rushed into production to meet a political timetable.

Cost aside, insiders insist that the Stealth bomber simply won't be the plane it's cracked up to be. It will be dangerously slow and unstable, and will have a range too limited for anything but one-way suicide missions to Soviet targets.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Iran has never been known for the humane attitude of its jailers. During the shah's regime, human rights groups regularly protested the brutal treatment of political prisoners, and under the Ayatollah Khomeini the complaints have multiplied. But intelligence analysts have detected some light at the end of the dungeon corridor: Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, Khomeini's designated successor, reportedly has taken steps toward prison reform. A onetime victim of the shah's less-than-tender turnkeys, Montazeri apparently feels that the Islamic revolution is getting a bad name from its torture chambers.

MINI-EDITORIAL: The effort of White House aide Pat Buchanan to impugn the patriotism of those members of Congress who oppose aid to the Nicaraguan contras resulted in a richly deserved backfire. Now some of the administration's supporters — and some distinguished media figures who ought to know better — are trying to say that Buchanan's vitriolic attack on those who would choose "Ortega and democracy" over "Reagan and democracy" didn't really question the patriotism of administration opponents. The truth is, it was a very low blow and ought to be ruled a foul. Even Joe McCarthy was open about his red-baiting.

EVANS & NOVAK

Interview offered Kemp 'surprise'

WASHINGTON — Rep. Jack Kemp's political handlers, in a state of shock since he was asked last week on NBC's "Today" whether he had ever had a homosexual experience, will screen future interviews and bar any that go into the old slanders against him.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Kemp denied the rumor "categorically" and "absolutely" when asked about it in an interview by freelancer Nancy Collins taped in his home with his family present. But he looked stunned. Considering Collins' background as a show-business gossip reporter, his aides had prepared him for a soft interview.

Press Secretary John Buckley in the future will screen interviewers and refuse their requests if they intend to go into the homosexual rumor that popped up 20 years ago when Kemp was a professional football player and part-time aide to Gov. Ronald Reagan. Buckley's rationale is that Kemp has consistently and repeatedly denied the undocumented report, most recently in a Newsweek article, and there is no story there at all, period.

LOBBYIST DEAVER?

Ex-Reagan aide Michael K. Deaver may be flirting with the no-lobbying rules — limiting his conduct following his government service — by discussing with senior Reagan administration officials the question of continuing B-1 bomber production.

Deaver's consulting firm has been retained for $300,000 by the Rockwell International Corp., which produces the B-1. His ostensible role has been to offer "strategic advice," (but not to lobby) on what to do with the B-1 after production hits the 100 mark planned by the administration.

Although he has stayed out of the Pentagon, Deaver recently visited budget director James Miller for a meeting in which, administration sources told us, the B-1 was discussed. Talking points on the bomber question were prepared for Miller by his staff before the meeting. Miller refused to comment on the meeting.

SOVIET 'HERO' MEDVED

The case of Soviet sailor Miroslav Medved, who was forceably returned to his grain ship, the Marshal Konev, in New Orleans by U.S. Customs agents last October, took an ominous turn March 11 when Pravda published what was billed as a huge picture of him and labelled him a hero.

Senate investigators, still trying to find out why the U.S. government forced Medved back on his ship despite his initial appeal for asylum, believe the Pravda picture is Soviet propaganda. They think it was intended to sell the the idea that the seaman eluded U.S. clutches and heroically returned to his ship and his homeland.

The investigators doubt that the picture in Pravda shows the real Medved. It could be the same stand-in from the ship's crew who, believed to have been posing as Medved, told U.S. authorities in the last New Orleans interview that he was not seeking asylum.

BACKING BUSH

California-based consultant Stu Spencer, one of President Reagan's oldest and closest political advisers, is set to make a 1987 endorsement of Vice President George Bush for the 1988 presidential nomination.

Spencer will say only that he has a promise from Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, the vice president's master strategist, not to bother him about making an endorsement until after the 1986 elections. But Baker confides to insiders that Spencer will be on board.

That marks a shift from the early stages of the 1980 campaign when Spencer would not even put Bush on a short list of Republican possibilities. The veteran California operative has worked closely with Baker in many campaigns and was instrumental in getting him named White House chief of staff in 1981.

DUMP SALT II

A private letter to President Reagan demanding that the U.S. stop adhering to the unratified SALT II treaty shows a movement that has grown from a handful of conservative Republicans to a bipartisan force nearing one-third of the Senate.

Three key Democrats — Russell Long of Louisiana, Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and Ed Zorinsky of Nebraska — have joined more than 20 Republicans asking Reagan not to dismantle two more Poseidon submarines next month as required by the treaty. One reason for the swelling numbers: continued Soviet violations of SALT II and other nuclear treaties.

A footnote: Former Sen. John Tower quit as a key arms negotiator partly because the job he wants seems certain to be filled indefinitely by Caspar Weinberger. Tower also was miffed by his exclusion from the Geneva summit, where his Soviet counterpart played a large role, and by White House downgrading of all members of the arms team except chief negotiator Max Kampelman.

CHARLEY REESE

'Showboat' Solarz wasteful

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., is exactly the kind of immature individual who gives Congress such a well-deserved bad name.

Charley Reese

Solarz, chairman of a House subcommittee on Asian affairs, has shown that he would rather grandstand than seriously attend to the business of the nation.

His so-called hearings on allegations that former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos owns property in New York City were held simply to influence the Philippine election. That is obvious because Solarz surely knows — and if he doesn't, he shouldn't be in Congress — that a great deal of foreign aid always ends up in U.S. investments and other places like Swiss banks.

Furthermore, even if you assume the allegation is true and I do, it's no business of the U.S. Congress. Ferdinand Marcos did not steal anything from the United States. The Congress, including Solarz, took the money from U.S. taxpayers and gave it to the Philippine government at the time it was headed by Marcos. If Marcos stole anything, he stole it from the government of the Philippines. It is up to the Philippine government to recover it, and they are already taking legal steps to do just that.

Of course Solarz might consider filing articles of impeachment against himself for having the gross bad judgment to vote for all the foreign aid give-aways he's supported. Any injury done to the American taxpayer was done by Solarz and his colleagues, not by Marcos and the other petty tyrants Congress chooses to fund.

After all, once Congress ships our money overseas to a foreign government, it's really immaterial how they spend it. We aren't going to get it back. As any person with common sense and a little experience in the world knows, you can bet your life in virtually all cases at least a portion of it will end up in somebody's private bank account or in properties and condos in the U.S.

I don't know which would have the worst effect on the U.S. real estate industry — ending the drug trade or ending foreign aid. Ending either one would probably cause a minor depression at least in the condominium market.

Come to think of it, if Solarz is really interested in ferreting out corruption, he might look into the investments of his colleagues in the House and Senate. It's rare for a Washington politician to come home as poor as when he arrived. The last one I can think of is Harry Truman.

My point is that with the genuine problems facing the United States we can ill afford arrogant little showboats like Solarz. When he ought to be attending to business at home, he traipsed off to Manila. The only reason I can think of for a Brooklyn congressman to go to Manila is to sightsee and probably in Solarz's case, try to claim credit for helping to oust Marcos.

Naturally, Solarz's little charade played no role at all. It was Mrs. Corazon Aquino, the Catholic Church, the defection of key military men and backroom pressure from the White House that put Marcos on a plane to Hawaii. Solarz just saw an opportunity to grab a headline for himself by jumping on a passing bandwagon.

I watched this showboat on C-Span, the cable channel, one night. During the testimony of Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, Solarz could be seen chitty-chatting, laughing, moving around and in general paying no attention.

Congressional hearings, you understand, are just a farce anyway. The members only show up to make speeches. When Solarz's turn came, he started his speech and then, pausing for dramatic effect, had the gall to say, "Could I have your attention, Mr. Secretary?" As soon as he finished, he got up and walked out.

The nation never did anything to Brooklyn. Why should Brooklyn voters inflict this character on us?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, March 17, the 76th day of 1986. There are 289 days left in the year. This is St. Patrick's Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 17th, A.D. 461, according to tradition, St. Patrick — the patron saint of Ireland — died in Saul.

On this date:

In 1776, British forces evacuated Boston during the Revolutionary War.

In 1870, the Massachusetts legislature authorized the incorporation of Wellesley Female Seminary, which later became Wellesley College.

In 1905, Eleanor Roosevelt married Franklin D. Roosevelt in New York.

In 1906, President Theodore Roosevelt used the term "muckrake" in a speech to the Gridiron Club in Washington.

Death threats, shooting, arson plague Chicago election

Manuel Torres

CHICAGO (AP) — Death threats, gunshots, an undetonated bomb, and arson have plagued aldermanic candidates in several Chicago wards where Tuesday's court-ordered special elections could give Mayor Harold Washington control of the City Council for the first time.

In the latest incident, police said three shots were fired Sunday night at candidate Manuel A. Torres as he made a campaign stop. He was not injured.

Police today arrested an 18-year-old and charged him with attempted murder in the incident, said police spokeswoman Kathleen Butzen.

Torres, who is aligned with Washington's opposition, is a candidate in a ward torn by political infighting. An unexploded bomb was found Friday outside his campaign headquarters.

"It's almost like whoever stays alive is going to be the next alderman up here," Patrolman Raymond Heyn said. "I thought we had elections to settle these things."

No arrest was made in the bombing attempt, police said. Authorities identified the man arrested in the shooting incident as Luis Muniz of Chicago, and said it was not known whether he had been politically active during the campaign.

In addition to increased police patrols around campaign headquarters, federal marshals have been asked to monitor the special elections in seven wards.

The elections were mandated by a federal court under an order aimed at correcting past racial gerrymandering. Three of the redistributed wards are predominantly black and four are mostly Hispanic.

Washington and Alderman Edward Vrdolyak, leader of a sometimes hostile 29-member majority bloc on the City Council, are backing different candidates in the wards.

The mayor, who leads a 21-member minority bloc, needs only four more votes to take control of the 50-member council, since he would cast the deciding vote in case of a tie. Vrdolyak's group has played adversary to many of Washington's programs and appointments since he took office as the city's first black mayor in 1983.

Don Rose, an independent political consultant and longtime observer of Chicago politics, says the current turmoil is "the worst outbreak of widespread violence I've seen in more than 35 years."

Torres campaign worker Keith Losnick has accused the opposing camp of Luis Gutierrez, who is supported by Washington, of being responsible for the attempted bombing.

Losnick stopped short of saying that the Gutierrez camp was responsible for the shots fired at Torres, but he did say he had been told the youths wore Gutierrez campaign buttons.

"You name it, our opposition has done it," said Losnick.

Ben Reyes, Gutierrez' campaign manager, said the incidents were just attempts by the Torres camp "to sling mud."

"We were told by people in the neighborhood that the shooting has been going on for eight weeks," said Reyes. "The shooting had nothing to do with us. It is an ongoing thing between two gangs in the area."

Police said they could not confirm any gang connection.

In addition to the attempted bombing, bomb-and-arson detectives are also investigating a fire which damaged the garage of Patrick Keen, an aldermanic candidate in the 37th ward.

LaRue Bar, Keen's campaign manager, would not speculate about who may have started the fire. Keen has not received the backing of either the mayor or the council majority.

NATION

Ex-NASA analyst says he was pressured to lie

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA officials pressured a former budget analyst to lie about the space agency's follow-up to safety issues he raised regarding the space shuttle's O-ring seals six months before the Challenger explosion, the analyst said in a published account.

Writing in an opinion-page article in Sunday's Washington Post, Richard C. Cook said, "I felt I was under official orders to deny publicly the validity of my earlier July 23 memorandum, a denial which of course I could not and did not make."

Cook said that six months before the Jan. 28 explosion that killed the Challenger's crew of seven he wrote a memo "summarizing my concerns about the safety of the solid rocket booster used in the space shuttle."

As the post-accident probe was getting under way and news media inquiries mounted, "I was told to say that after I filed my report, the problem was discussed in the comptroller's office, inquiries were made to the program office, and work was under way that satisfied us that the safety issue was being dealt with," he wrote in the newspaper.

Cook, who now works for the Treasury Department, also said the promotion system at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration tends to "turn people into yes men" with a "decided tendency to report only good news, to paint only a rosy picture."

Jim McCulla, deputy director of public affairs at NASA headquarters in Washington, said he found Cook's comments about being told what to say to reporters incredible.

"I've never heard any of that. I can't imagine that," McCulla said. "NASA has always had since its inception a rule that says that any member of the press can go to anybody (in NASA) and talk to them."

Since Cook didn't name the NASA superior who allegedly told him what to say, McCulla said there was no way to know what he meant.

Cook wrote his memo after investigating the possible budgetary impact of the O-ring seal problem. The investigation of the Challenger explosion has highlighted possible failure of the O-rings.

In his article, Cook wrote that NASA "people understood completely the implications of a possible O-ring failure. It's just that it was viewed as no problem."

At NASA, in the hours and days following the accident, "there were many hushed conversations as more information came in to support the solid rocket booster failure hypothesis. There was concern about who might be blamed," Cook wrote.

Four people killed, 31 injured in Nevada motel fire

NORTH LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Three people were being questioned following a suspicious fire at a transient motel that killed four people and injured 31, said city Fire Marshal Robert Mills.

Residents jumped from second-story windows to escape the blaze that swept through the Motel 5 Saturday morning, Mills said. The blaze began in the lobby near a stairwell, according to Assistant Fire Chief Myron Kimball.

The motel, a mile north of downtown Las Vegas, was closed last year for safety violations. It did not have sprinklers but each room was equipped with smoke detectors, Mill said.

Some residents may have ignored smoke detectors when they sounded because the motel has a history of false alarms and the tenants did not believe the fire was real, he said.

The dead were not immediately identified. The injured, including three firefighters, were taken to three area hospitals. Some suffered broken arms, ankles or legs, and one man received burns over most of his body, said Mercy Ambulance spokeswoman Robin Nuhn.

When the fire broke out, some residents ran through the motel, banging on doors to wake neighbors, said Mills. The only fire escape was at one end of the building.

An elderly man said fellow tenants helped lower him to the ground from his second-floor room.

The fire "just started like gangbusters," said the man, who refused to give his name.

NATION IN BRIEF

Official: Panel out to protect health

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The head of an Agriculture Department task force studying the contamination of milk by a banned pesticide says the panel's goal is to protect health and assess economic damage to the dairy industry in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Missouri.

Michael J. Masterson, special assistant to Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, said contamination of dairy herds in the three states by the banned pesticide heptachlor has produced one of the most serious financial problems the nation's dairy industry has faced in years.

More recalls of dairy products in Arkansas were issued Sunday, covering 38,000 cartons of cottage cheese from a Little Rock manufacturer and more than 6,500 gallons of milk distributed in the state. Dairy products have been recalled in eight states since the contamination was discovered.

Nearly 100 dairy farms in Arkansas and Missouri cannot sell milk because cattle were found to have eaten contaminated feed and Oklahoma herds are being tested for heptachlor, which was banned in 1983 after it was linked to cancer in laboratory rats.

Poll: Governors pick Bush, Cuomo

NEW YORK (AP) — GOP governors expect to see Vice President George Bush at the head of their party's ticket in 1988 with Democrats expecting New York Gov. Mario Cuomo as their standard bearer, says a Newsweek poll of 43 governors.

The magazine said in its March 24 issue that 20 percent of the Democratic governors interviewed believe Cuomo will head the Democratic ticket. Fourteen percent named Colorado Sen. Gary Hart and 10 percent picked former Virginia Gov. Charles Robb.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. charges that the Soviet Union's United Nations staff is riddled with spies are "utter nonsense" and the U.S. directive ordering members of Soviet missions out of the country is illegal, according to a senior Soviet diplomat.

"All this talk about spying and Soviet personnel being engaged in activities unrelated to the United Nations is utter nonsense," said Vasily Safronchuk,

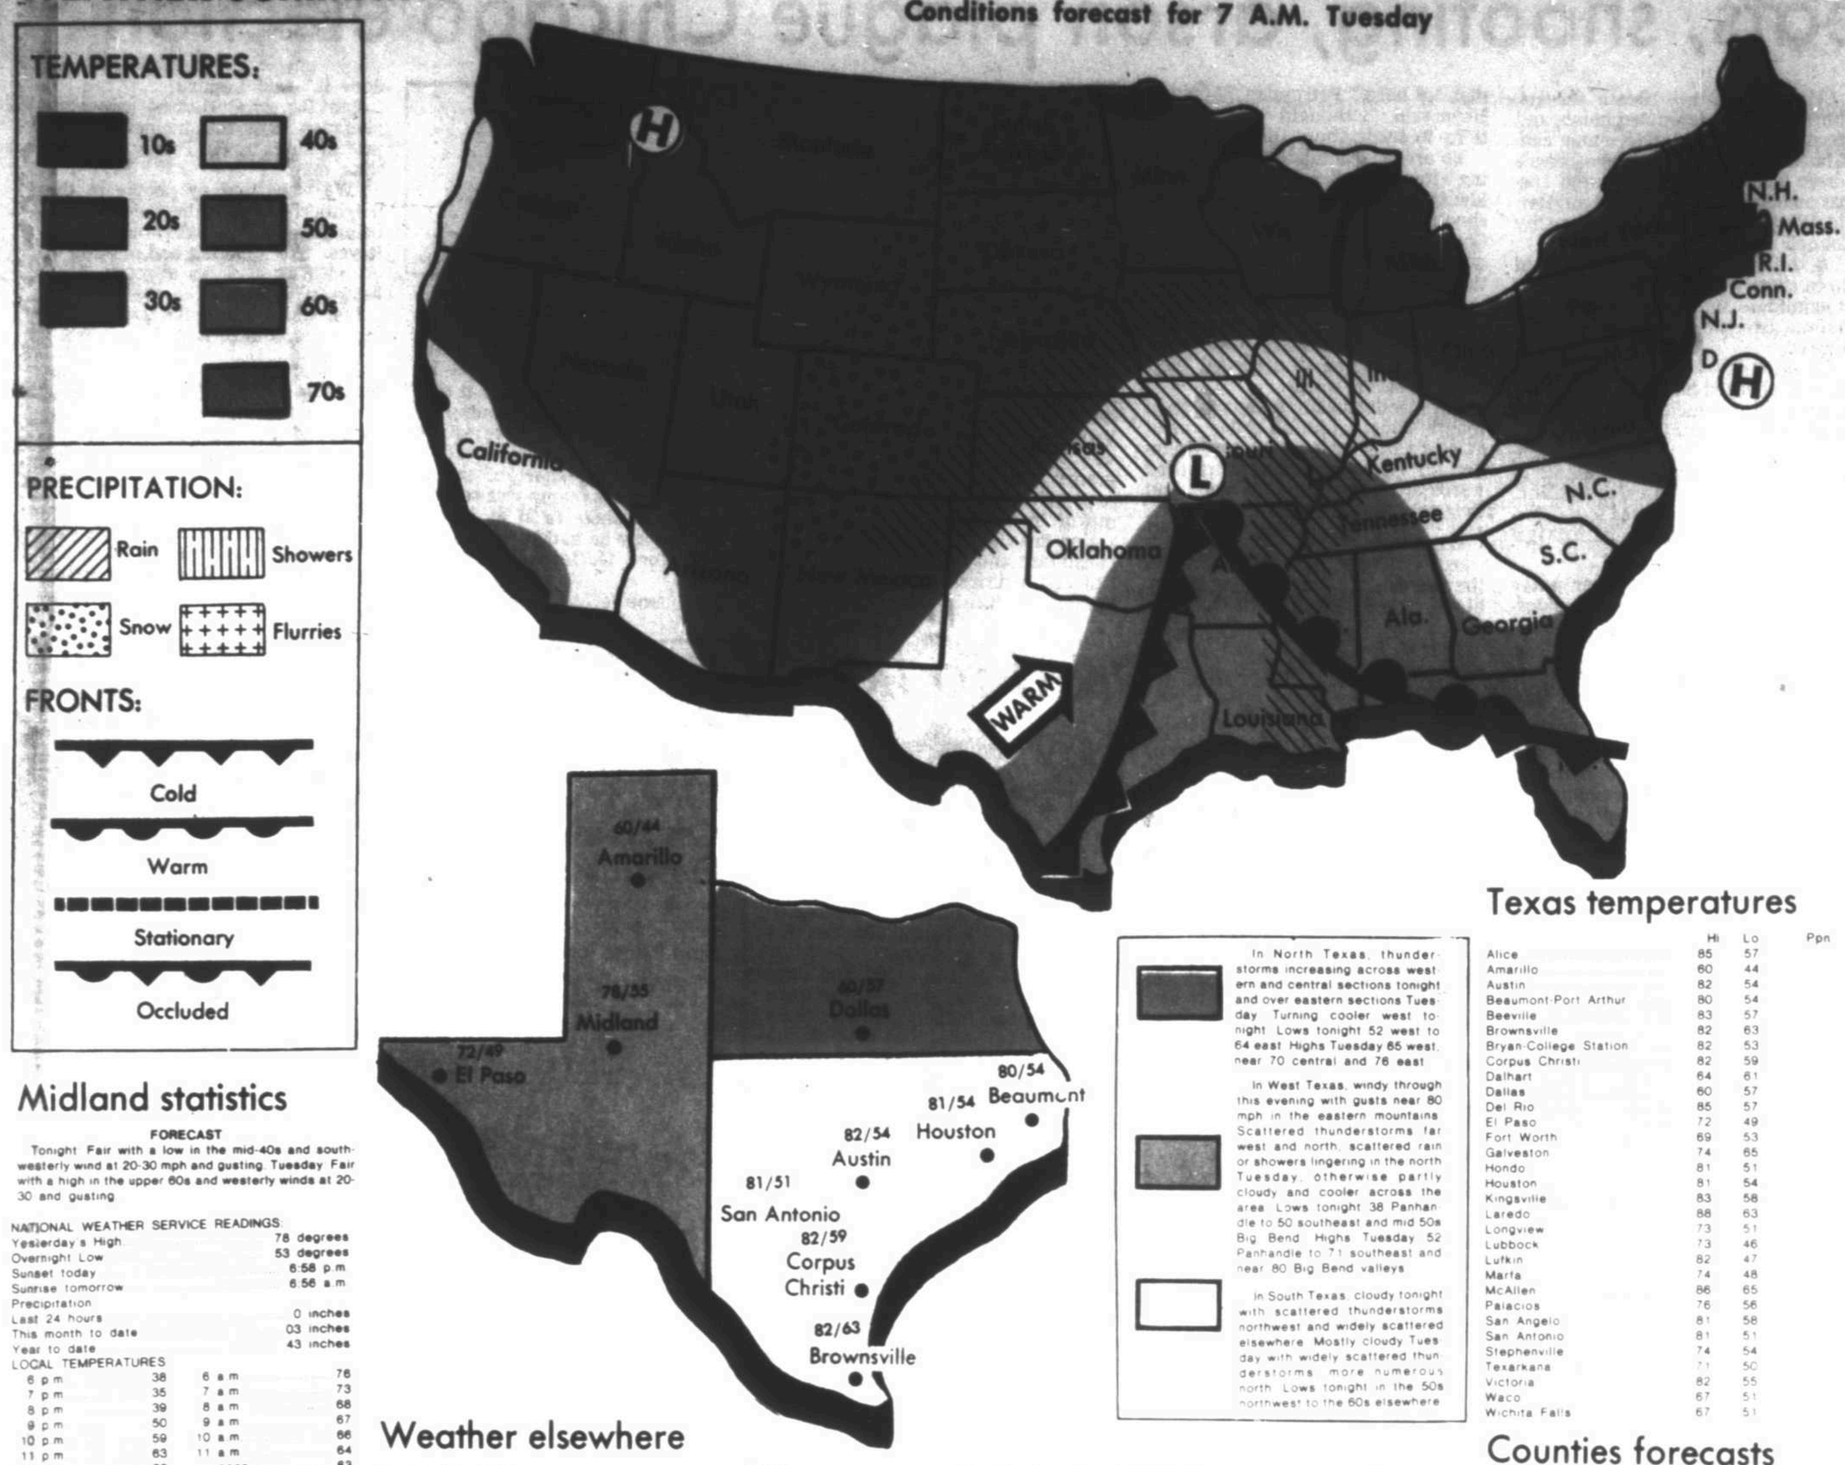
WEATHER SUMMARY



Windy weather may continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

March winds will continue blowing over the Permian Basin tonight and Tuesday. According to the National Weather Service, area residents should expect winds of 20-30 mph, with stronger gusts, and blowing dust for at least the next 24 hours.

Tonight's low is predicted to be in the middle 40s. Tuesday's high is expected to be in the upper 60s. With the exception of blowing dust, skies for tonight and Tuesday should be fair.

Sunday's high was 8 degrees below the record high of 86 set for March 16 in 1966. This morning's low of 53 was 27 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1970.

STATE

Fog and low clouds were developing this morning over the caprock in the South Plains and Panhandle of Texas, but fair skies were reported over most of the rest of the state.

Winds over the western half of the state started to increase in response to a low pressure system over New Mexico. South winds at 10 to 20 mph were common over West and North Central Texas. Light south winds were reported elsewhere.

The National Weather Service said thunderstorms could be expected over the western half of the state today, moving across the rest of the state tonight. A windy day could develop, with strong gusts expected this afternoon and evening over the eastern mountains of far West Texas.

NATION

Travelers' advisories warning of snow were in effect across broad areas of the West today after a storm dumped up to 3 feet of snow on the high mountain slopes of Southern California.

Scattered rain and snowshowers ranged across the upper Mississippi Valley and light rain lingered over northern New England, while skies from Texas to the southern Atlantic Coast were mostly fair.

The central Plains could look forward to rain, wind and snow today, the National Weather Service said.

A winter storm watch was posted for tonight and Tuesday over northeast Colorado. Winter storm warnings were in effect for the mountains of southern Utah and southwest Colorado, with up to a foot of snow possible in Colorado's San Juan mountains.

Rain dotted Southern California, while the Rockies had scattered rain or snow.

Southern California's high slopes received up to 3 feet of snow over the weekend and Flagstaff, Ariz., had received 13 inches by today.

Golf...

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dan Forsman was matching strokes with a man he'd watched on television as a boy, when he was a junior golfer, "when I was dreaming of going on the pro tour."

"Going down the 11th fairway, I asked him, 'How long you been doing this?' He said, '26 years,'" Forsman said. "I said, 'I guess you've seen it all.'"

Ray Floyd's response, if any, was not recorded.

And while the 43-year-old veteran may not have been seeing anything new, he saw more than he could handle Sunday in the 36-hole finish of the Hertz Bay Hill Classic.

Playing head-to-head with the 27-year-old Forsman, Floyd saw his opponent go 36 holes without a bogey, saw some gutsy, gritty play down the stretch, saw a man who refused to be intimidated. And, perhaps most importantly, saw his own putts, time after time, rejected by the cup as if it had a barrier around it.

In the end, Forsman, with a pair of 67s in the double-round wind-up, scored the second victory of his four-year PGA Tour career, earning $90,000 of the $500,000 total purse with an 11-under par 202.

GLENDALE, Calif. — Rain canceled Sunday's round of the $250,000 GNA-Glendale Federal LPGA Tournament, and officials decided to shorten the competition from 72 to 54 holes in order to finish today.

Jane Geddes and Chris Johnson shared the lead of the rain-plagued event at 1-under-par through 43 holes. The co-leaders and the other golfers who have not completed their third round, which will now be the final round, will begin play where they left off on Saturday.

SUN CITY WEST, Ariz. — Charles Owens tapped in a three-foot putt for a par on the second playoff hole to beat Dale Douglass by a stroke and win the $200,000 Senior PGA Tour Roundup here.

Tennis...

DALLAS — Martina Navratilova overpowered Chris Evert Lloyd in 57 minutes 6-2, 6-1 on Sunday to capture the Virginia Slims of Dallas Tournament for the seventh time.

Navratilova is now 36-32 against Lloyd and has won 14 of her last 15 indoor matches with Lloyd. Navratilova, who recently passed the $10 million mark in earnings, won $40,000 for first place and Lloyd got $20,000.

MILAN, Italy — Top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia defeated Sweden's Joakim Nystrom 6-2, 6-2, 6-4 Sunday to win the Fila Trophy indoor tennis tournament. First place was worth $60,000.

The 26-year-old Czechoslovakian, ranked No. 1 in the world, disposed of the 23-year-old Swede in two hours, 15 minutes at Milan's indoor Sports Palace.

Basketball...

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Lon Kruger, who was twice named Big Eight player of the year as Jack Hartman's hustling, play-making guard, will be named today to succeed Hartman as Kansas State head basketball coach, sources told the Associated Press.

Kruger, a protege of Hartman, for the past four years has been head coach at Pan American University in Edinburg, Texas. Prior to that, he served five years as Hartman's No. 1 assistant.

CLEVELAND — George Karl was dismissed Sunday as coach of the NBA's Cleveland Cavaliers. The firing came the day after Cleveland lost its third straight game, 102-100 at home to the New Jersey Nets.

Karl, 34, guided the Cavaliers to a 25-42 record so far this season. The Cavaliers in fourth place in the Central Division, have the eighth best record in the Eastern Conference, 1½ games ahead of Chicago in the race for the final playoff spot.

Gene Littles, an assistant coach under Karl, was named as an interim coach for the remainder of this season.

NCAA Roundup

The Big East has gone south — Southeast, actually — and there will be a fresh four in the NCAA's Final Four, with the Southeastern Conference joining the tradition-rich Atlantic Coast Conference by placing a quartet of teams in basketball's Sweet Sixteen.

Sunday was not a day to be in the Top Ten as fourth-ranked St. John's was stunned by Auburn (SEC); No. 5 Michigan lost to its old coach Johnny Orr and his new Iowa State team; and ninth-ranked Syracuse discovered that home isn't always sweet, disappointing a Carrier Dome crowd of 21,713 by falling to No. 17 Navy. Illinois, ranked No. 19, also fell victim to a determined Alabama squad.

The SEC will send Kentucky and Louisiana State, both winners Saturday, to the round of 16 next week joining Auburn and Alabama. The ACC, expected to dominate this year's tournament, will send Saturday's winners No. 1 Duke, No. 6 Georgia Tech, No. 8 North Carolina and North Carolina State, which escaped with a double overtime win over Arkansas-Little Rock Sunday.

WEST

Auburn 81, St. Johns 65

St. John's became the final member of last year's Final Four — Villanova, Georgetown and Memphis State were the others — to bite the dust. The Redmen joined Big East colleagues Syracuse, Villanova and Georgetown on the sidelines when Auburn thrashed them behind senior Chuck Person's 27 points and 15 rebounds.

"As I stated coming in, I was very disappointed at not making any All-American teams," the 6-foot-8 forward said after outscoring All-American Walter Berry 27-20. "It was very emotional for me. I don't think there's any doubt now I can play with best. I'm not bragging, but that's the way I feel."

Auburn built a 44-32 halftime lead. The heavier Tigers constantly got second and third shots on offense and used their defensive rebounding to trigger numerous fast breaks.

"They looked much more physical than us," St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca said. "We looked anemic. Nobody belted us like that, and we played them all. They were completely in charge, completely in charge."

UNLV 70, Maryland 64

Anthony Jones, held to one point in the opening 15:27, scored 17 of his 25 points in the second half. Jones, the Pacific Coast Athletic Association's Player of the Year, seemed frustrated before finally scoring his first field goal with 4:33 left in the first half.

But the basket seemed to give him new life and UNLV overcame a brilliant performance by Maryland All-American Len Bias, who scored the Terrapins' final 13 points and finished with 31.

"Maryland's a tough team to shoot on," Jones said. "They've got a lot of good leapers. But you can't let it get you down when you miss. You just have to keep shooting it and hopes it draws iron."

EAST

Navy 97, Syracuse 85

David Robinson scored 26 of his 35 points in the second half as Navy embarrassed Syracuse on its home court, where the Midshipmen lost 89-67 in December. Robinson, a 6-foot-11 junior, only a 61 percent free-throw shooter, made 21 of 27 from the line — 16 of 19 in the second half — as Syracuse center Rony Seikaly and his backup both fouled out. Navy made only 28 field goals but converted 41 of 52 from the foul line.

Navy snapped a 39-39 tie and broke the game open with an 18-7 run, Robinson scoring 14 points during the spree. Vernon Butler, who finished with 23 points, converted a three-point play to put the Midshipmen up 70-53 with 6:25 remaining. Syracuse's Dwayne Washington scored 24 of his 28 points in the second half, most of them after Navy took a comfortable lead.

"What made the win good was that Robinson made his free throws," said Navy Coach Paul Evans. "He's been inconsistent with them, but he's made them when we had to have them."

Cleveland St. 75, St. Joseph's 69

Guard Ken "Mouse" McFadden scored 23 points and had a 70-foot assist late in the game as the Vikings, first-round winners over Indiana, recorded their 14th straight triumph. Cleveland State also got 17 points from Clinton Ransey and 16 from Clinton Smith, whose slam-dunk off McFadden's long pass with one minute left put the game out of reach at 71-59. St. Joseph's was led by Wayne Williams' 25 points.

Rebels in unfamiliar position — looking up

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Midland Lee finds itself in an unfamiliar position as District 4-5A play begins its second week Tuesday, with the Rebels hosting Odessa Permian and Midland High traveling to Odessa High.

Lee, the runner up in district play and a state playoff team the past two seasons, is sharing quarters with Big Spring and Odessa High, in the basement of the district, a place where Rebel coach Ernie Johnson does not feel comfortable.

"We don't like to get used to being there," Johnson said of the Rebels current address in the cellar. "Of course, we're hoping we can improve on that Tuesday. It's been three or four years since we went 0-2 to start the district, but we've done that and come back and had good seasons."

Permian, on the other hand, is riding high after a pair of very different victories in the first week of play. The Panthers, 2-0, 9-2, outslugged Abilene High 23-13 in their opener, but then settled down to win a 5-1 pitcher's game with Big Spring Saturday.

LEE, 0-2, 7-6 and struggling since the onset of the Tournament of Champions more than a week ago, has been bothered by injury problems in the early portion of the district schedule. The most telling was the loss of ace starter George Matta in the Rebel rotation.

Matta stretched ligaments in his pitching elbow in the Tournament of Champions and hasn't been back since. Johnson feels that he may have Matta back and throwing in the next week or so.

"We're just not playing well right now. I don't really know why we're in such a slump, it seems like everybody's pressing to me. We didn't make very many routine plays down at Cooper," Johnson said.

But with nagging injuries to several players seemingly on the mend, maybe Lee, which upended Permian 13-2 in Pre District, is ready to make its annual run at a playoff berth.

THE PANTHERS are tied atop the district with San Angelo and Abilene Cooper and a win over the Rebels would assure them of at least hanging on to a share of the lead. All three co-leaders are on the road as San Angelo travels to play Abilene High and Cooper travels to Big Spring to round out the rest of the 4-5A schedule.

Permian, a little shaky under the direction of new head coach Jim Davis, is picking up steam as the season progresses.

Lame-duck coach leads OSU against Texas

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The biggest news surrounding the Ohio State men's basketball program lately has come from off the court.

But the Buckeyes, 15-14, hope to grab a few headlines on the court Monday night when they host Texas, 19-11, in the second round of the National Invitation Tournament at St. John Arena.

TCU will travel to Florida, 17-12, in another second round NIT game tonight. In other NIT second-round games tonight, Marquette, 19-10, at Southwest Missouri, 23-7; Clemson, 18-14, at Georgia, 17-12; George Mason, 20-11, at Providence, 16-13; McNeese State, 21-10, at Louisiana Tech, 17-13; Ohio State, 15-14; and Loyola Marymount, 19-10, at Wyoming, 21-11.

The second round concludes Tuesday night when Cal-Irvine, 17-12, visits Brigham Young, 17-13.

NIT

OHIO STATE'S players have been subjected to a number of distractions over the past six weeks. Coach Eldon Miller was fired Feb. 3, effective at the end of the season, and Boston College Coach Gary Williams was hired Saturday as the new OSU coach and will take over April 1.

But Miller, who'll coach the team through the NIT, said he doesn't think the distractions and disruptions will have any effect on his team.

"These young people have responded well since the coaching change," said Miller, who won his 400th career game Friday night as Ohio State beat Ohio University 75-72 in the opening round of the NIT at Athens, Ohio.

"THEY'VE DONE a remarkable job," Miller added. "They haven't played the way I'd have liked some times, particularly at the defensive end, but as the season's gone on they have gotten even stronger.

"I felt they did a very good job of coming back from seven points down in an emotional environment at Ohio U.

"I don't think they'll have any problem with everything that has taken place off the court. Not these young people. We discussed (the coaching situation) in one team meeting and we have put it all right out there for them. We haven't shielded them from anything and they have responded.

"They want to be a good team and I think they'll be a good team (Monday night)."

TEXAS WILL field a lineup that includes 6-foot-10 senior center John Brownlee, who averaged 17 points and 8.3 rebounds a game, and 6-5 junior Patrick Fairs, who contributes 14.7 points and 5.0 rebounds a game.

Ohio State is led by 7-foot Brad Sellers, who had 21 points and 13 rebounds in the victory over Ohio U. and 6-5 guard Dennis Hopson, with 22 points and 10 rebounds.

Point guard Curtis Wilson has provided the Buckeyes with a spark off the bench over the last month, coming in to score 12 points with five assists at Ohio U. Friday.

Houston begins in-house inquiry into football program

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston will conduct an independent, outside investigation into allegations that former Cougars football players received thousands of dollars in cash and were allowed to remain in school despite being on athletic suspension, the school's sports information director Jay Goldberg said.

"We are (going to investigate) and that's all we're going to comment on right now," Goldberg told The Associated Press on Sunday.

The Houston Post reported the allegations, all in violation of NCAA regulations, in weekend copyright stories.

UH Athletic Director Tom Ford also said the school's Intercollegiate Athletic Council would be convened to consider the matter.

Two former wide receivers — David Roberson and Lonell Phea — who played in the late 1970s and early 1980s have signed affidavits stating they received more than $26,000 between them, including some from head Coach Bill Yeoman and his assistants, over a four-year period, The Post reported on Saturday.

THE NEWSPAPERS also said six other players who played in the early 1980s confirmed reports of cash disbursements to players.

Yeoman declined to comment on the claims and referred all questions to Ford.

"It's your story. Write what you want to," Yeoman told the Post.

There is a four-year statute of limitations for the NCAA to punish a school for violations.

The cash payment violations alleged by Roberson and Phea fall outside of that statute, but NCAA enforcement official Bob Minnix told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that if a current coaching staff is involved, the NCAA would conduct an investigation "to some degree."

If current violations are found at Houston, old violations could be used against the school to form what the NCAA calls a "pattern for violations."

ON SUNDAY, the Post reported that Roberson was allowed to remain in school and play football even though he was placed on athletic suspension for five of his nine semesters at the university.

The Post quoted Phea as saying top athletes regularly enrolled in only nine hours per semester, less than the minimum required for status as a full-time student, and that he and other athletes were encouraged to take less-demanding classes.

"But they kept us in school," Phea said. "Coach Yeoman wanted me for nothing but football. He didn't have no use for me other than that. I ain't took no math or English since the first year I was there. But they couldn't afford to let me go down because I was one of the key players."

Roberson was a business education major in the College of Technology, although he took only two business courses in his four years at UH, according to his transcript.

"OH, BOY," said Lawrence Wolf, dean of the College of Technology, when told of Roberson's transcript. "It seems strange" the athlete could be suspended so many times and continue to be readmitted, he said.

After the fall semester of 1981, Roberson was suspended for one semester, according to his transcript. However, he was allowed to attend school the next semester, the Post said.

After the summer semester of 1982, Roberson was suspended for two semesters, but was allowed to attend school the next semester, the newspaper said.

After that semester — the fall of 1982 — Roberson was suspended again, with the notation on his transcript that "no further enrollment should be contemplated." Yet Roberson attended school the next semester.

The following semester — the fall of 1983 — Roberson again was suspended with another no-enrollment notation.

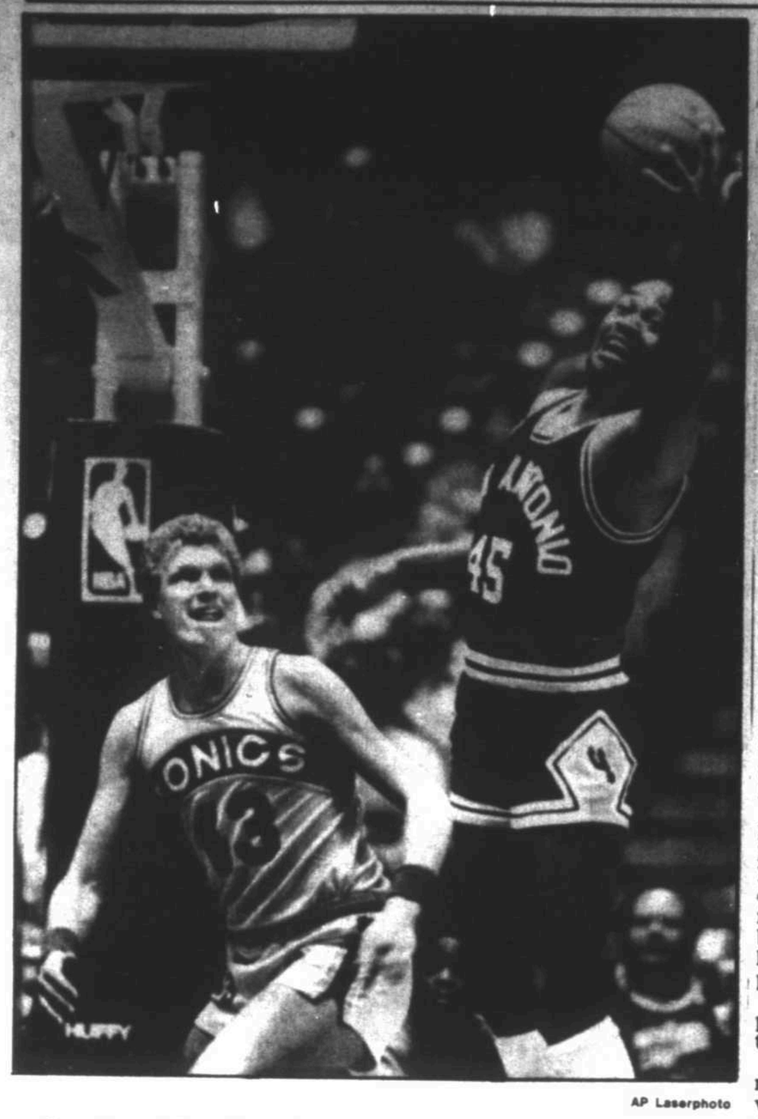
By this time Roberson had completed his eligibility for football and was suspended the next semester, 37 hours short of graduation.

In addition to receiving "at least $18,000" during the four years he was at UH, Phea said, he was allowed unrestricted use of the athletic department's WATS line for long-distance telephone calls and was given a jewelry store credit card that he used to buy expensive gifts for girl friends.

"I didn't get as much as Lonell. The most I got was about $375 and sometimes $250. I think in my four years, I probably totaled between $8,000 and $10,000," Roberson said.

Roberson said Yeoman kept money for players "in an envelope in the left side bottom drawer of his desk.

Jabbar manhandles Twin Towers



AP Laserphoto

San Antonio's Jeff Wilkins snares a rebound as Seattle's Jack Sikma watches. The Supersonics defeated the Spurs in Seattle, 129-115, on Sunday.

Associated Press

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar continues to cut the Houston's Twin Towers down to size.

Abdul-Jabbar hit 16 of 24 shots and scored 43 points Sunday night, nearly matching the combined total of Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon as the Los Angeles Lakers won their eighth consecutive game, a 116-111 decision over the Rockets. Sampson had 27 points and Olajuwon 21 for Houston.

Abdul-Jabbar, who turns 39 next month, scored 46 points to lead the Lakers to a 117-95 victory at Houston on Feb. 6. That was his second-highest single-game total since November 1975 and two points less than the most he's ever had in a Lakers' uniform.

"I don't have any explanation of why he does so well against the Rockets," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "He works hard and we go in to him. He works real hard every night and I don't think people give him the credit he deserves. He always seems to come through when we need him, even with guys leaning all over him."

"I think we did a better job on Kareem than we did last time when he scored 46," Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said. "We forced some turnovers in there and turned them into fast-break baskets. Kareem did not beat us tonight. They beat us with layups. I'm not unhappy the way we played Kareem."

Abdul-Jabbar said the Rockets are playing him differently this season than in the past.

"They tried to double-team me all night," he said. "I guess it's the way we match up, but it just seems that we get the ball inside a lot. I don't know what else it could be, except Sampson tries to steal the pass and when he misses I score."

Earvin "Magic" Johnson added 19 points, 12 assists and 12 rebounds for the Lakers, while James Worthy added 17 and Byron Scott 16.

The game was close throughout.

The Rockets trailed by four points at halftime, but tied the score at 64-64 with 10 minutes remaining in the third quarter, only to see the Lakers outscore them 25-15 and take an 89-79 lead into the final quarter.

Houston cut the deficit to a point on two occasions, at 92-91 and 94-93, before the Lakers pulled ahead 104-96. The Rockets scored the next two baskets to trail 104-102, but Abdul-Jabbar put in a skyhook to stifle the comeback.

NBA Roundup

SuperSonics 129, Spurs 115

Xavier McDaniel scored 25 points, Jack Sikma 22 and Tom Chambers 20 as Seattle handed San Antonio its 12th loss in the last 13 games.

Chambers and Sikma combined for 10 points during a three-minute stretch of the third quarter as the SuperSonics took a 15-point lead. The Spurs, playing without injured starters Artis Gilmore and Steve Johnson, trailed by at least 11 thereafter.

Celtics 118, 76ers 101

Larry Bird had 36 points and 14 rebounds and guards Dennis Johnson and Danny Ainge scored six points each during a 20-7 third-quarter surge that lifted Boston over Philadelphia.

The victory was the 20th straight at home for the Celtics, one short of the team record set during the 1980-81 season.

Johnson had just four points and Ainge none in the first half, but they led the way during a decisive six-minute stretch that turned a 59-57 edge into a 79-64 Boston lead late in the third quarter. The Celtics led by at least 10 points the rest of the way.

The victory snapped a four-game winning streak for the 76ers, who were led by Moses Malone with 18 points.

Trail Blazers 119, Pistons 109

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 35 points and Portland broke away from Detroit in the second period.

The Pistons, who got 26 points from Isiah Thomas, led just once in the game, at 42-41, with 3:10 left in the first half. By halftime, however, the Trail Blazers led 54-46, and they outscored Detroit 34-25 in the third period to lead 88-71.

Clyde Drexler added 23 points and Jim Paxson 22 for Portland.

Nuggets 119, Kings 113

NBA scoring leader Alex English scored 36 points, including the first seven during a decisive 23-11 streak in the fourth quarter that lifted Denver over Sacramento.

The Kings, who got 29 points from Eddie Johnson, trailed only 90-89 early in the fourth period, but English sparked the run that made it 113-100 with 3:40 to play. The Kings staged a rally of their own, but they got no closer than five points.

Calvin Natt had 21 points and 13 rebounds, pacing the Nuggets to a 61-45 rebounding edge.

Warriors 130, Suns 112

Purvis Short scored 36 points, giving him 75 in the last two games, as Golden State routed Phoenix.

The Warriors led 68-63 at halftime before Short scored nine points in the third quarter as they opened a 20-point bulge. The went on to post their 23rd victory of the season, one more than all of last season.

The Suns were led by Walter Davis with 23 points and rookie Ed Pinckney with 22. Joe Barry Carroll and Terry Teagle had 24 each for Golden State.

Darren Allman is the likely starter for Permian, while Terry Baxter, 4-1, 1.35 ERA, will get the call for the Rebels.

THE BULLDOGS, 1-1, 5-6, could find themselves in a hitter's battle when they face the Bronchos. OHS, 0-2, 2-7 overall, has the district's worst team earned run average after two district games.

But they also have the third highest batting average, behind only Abilene Cooper and San Angelo. Coach Ronnie White has said for years that if he could get some pitching, his club could be a contender in the district.

But so far this season, the Broncho pitching staff has White shaking his head again and again.

Bulldog coach Tim Whalen has been shaking his head quite a bit lately, as well. But Whalen's puzzlement is because of a lack of offensive production from a team that seems loaded with big sticks.

MHS is hitting a mediocre .288 in district play, and was shut down by Abilene High in a 5-3 loss on Saturday. The Bulldogs will again try to pull themselves out of their offensive doldrums against a suspect Broncho pitching staff.

In their only previous meeting this year, OHS beat the 'Dogs 14-6 in the Pre District tournament opener.

Longley paces Greenwood with two records

From Staff Reports

WALL—Greenwood's Chad Longley set a pair of meet records and anchored the winning 1,600 meter relay team to pace the Rangers to the team title in the Cotton Patch Relays Saturday.

Longley leaped 20-6 in the long jump to take his first title, then zipped to a 41.55 to set a new mark in the 300 intermediate hurdles. Also setting a new mark for the Rangers in their first meet of the season was Brian Underwood in the high hurdles with a 15.59.

The winning Greenwood relay team consisted of Todd Martin, Bobby Clark, Underwood and Longley and ran a 3:32.74.

Both Greenwood teams will travel to Wink on Saturday.

Chaps corral NMSU, 8-1

From Staff Reports

The Midland College men's tennis team got some revenge Sunday, defeating New Mexico State 8-1, a team that had beaten them in the first match of the season.

The Chaparrals, 10-2, 3-0 in conference, rolled to an easy victory over NMSU, on the tail end of its six-match road swing. New Mexico State had beaten MC 5-4 in its tournament back in February.

"I was real proud to come back and beat these guys so decisively," coach Joe Williams said. "Of course, they're on their spring break and have been on the road for a while, but getting up for the match is part of the game."

Louisville-UNC match up tops Regional in Houston

Here's how the pairings ended up in Thursday and Friday's Regional semifinal games in the NCAA basketball tournament.

Auburn's 81-65 victory over St. John's sent the Tigers to the West Regional in Houston for a Thursday night game against No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas, which held off Maryland 70-64. The other game in Houston will match seventh-ranked Louisville against No. 8 North Carolina. On Saturday, Louisville clobbered Bradley 82-68, while the Tar Heels drubbed Alabama-Birmingham, 77-59.

Thursday's Southeast Regional at Atlanta pairs third-ranked Kentucky, a 71-64 winner over Western Kentucky, and Alabama, which nipped No. 19 Illinois 58-56 on Terry Coner's last-second shot. The other game matches No. 6 Georgia Tech and LSU. Tech edged Villanova, 66-61 and LSU nipped Memphis State, 83-81, on a buzzer shot in Saturday's games.

Friday night, the East Regional at East Rutherford, N.J., sends No. 1 Duke against DePaul and Cinderella Cleveland State, fresh from its 75-69 defeat of St. Joseph's against Navy, an upset winner over Syracuse, 97-85. Saturday, Duke rolled over Old Dominion 89-61, while DePaul pulled an upset of its own, a 74-69 win over Oklahoma.

In Friday's Midwest Regional at Kansas City, No. 2 Kansas goes against No. 18 Michigan State and North Carolina State, an 80-66 double overtime victor over Arkansas-Little Rock, meets Iowa State, a 72-69 winner over Michigan. On Saturday, Kansas drubbed Temple 71-46 and Michigan State ousted No. 13 Georgetown 80-68.

McFadden never played high school ball and was painting houses and working for his high-school diploma when Cleveland State Coach Kevin Mackey found him playing Amateur Athletic Union games in New York City.

"He's got all of New York City in him — the shake and bake," Mackey said.

SOUTHEAST
Kentucky 71, Western Kentucky 64

All-American Kenny Walker scored 32 points on 11-for-11 shooting and Kentucky survived a late charge for its 13th consecutive victory. The Wildcats' 54-38 lead dwindled to 63-59 on Fred Tisdale's layup with 3:55 to play. Western Kentucky, getting only its second shot ever at its intrastate neighbor, could never get closer. Kannard Johnson led Western with 20 points.

"Don't give me all the credit," said Walker. "Roger Harden and the other guys were able to deliver the ball to me for those points."

Alabama 58, Illinois 56

Coner drilled a 12-footer from just inside the free-throw line with one second remaining after Alabama had blown a 13-point first-half lead. Coner got his chance when Buck Johnson blocked a shot by Illinois' Efrem Winters with 26 seconds to play.

Alabama called a timeout with 19 seconds to play and Coner held the ball near midcourt until starting his move with nine seconds left, taking Illinios defensive ace Bruce Douglas into the lane before hitting the game-winner.

Illinois Coach Lou Henson claimed Coner walked before hitting his game-winner.

"I think the officials know they missed the traveling violation," Henson said. "No question (that he walked). There's no doubt about it."

MIDWEST
Iowa State 72, Michigan 69

Jeff Grayer scored 16 points and Ron Virgil added 14 as Iowa State built an 11-point lead and held off a second-half Michigan rally. The triumph was a sweet one for Orr, who coached Michigan to a Final Four appearance in 1976 when current Wolverine Coach Bill Frieder was his assistant.

"It has to be my biggest victory — ever," said Orr. "I took a program (Iowa State) that didn't do anything six years ago. Everyone thought I was crazy. I feel sorry for Bill. I would have rather not played him."

"If I had to lose, I couldn't lose to a better guy," said Frieder. "I love Johnny Orr."

Iowa State led 46-35 with 16:17 to play but Roy Tarpley scored 14 of his 25 points in the last 16 minutes to pull Michigan within one point on two occasions. Elmer Robinson's dunk and six free throws down the stretch clinched the victory.

N.C. State 80, Ark.-Little Rock 66

Arkansas-Little Rock made a strong try for another upset. But N.C. State's Ernie Myers scored all six of his points — including the go-ahead 15-foot jump shot with 3:03 left — in the second overtime and Bennie Bolton got all but one of his 24 points after halftime.

Myron Jackson, who scored 15 of his 23 points in the first half and the rest after overtime began, gave UALR a 61-56 lead just 29 seconds into the first overtime. But Bolton made four free throws, a layup and a 15-footer with 27 seconds to go to send the game into a second overtime. The Wolfpack scored the last 14 points after a 66-66 tie.

"The thing I love about Bennie Bolton is that he wants the basketball," N.C. State Coach Jim Valvano said. "He carried us in the overtime periods. One thing I felt this team was lacking was a player to say, 'Give me the rock when the game's on the line.' Maybe we've found one in this tournament."

Carlton's comeback on course; Sutcliffe's snagged

Associated Press

While Steve Carlton's comeback continues to flourish, Rick Sutcliffe's may have hit a snag.

Steve Lake's double broke a tie in the eighth inning as the Cubs beat San Diego 5-4 in Mesa, Ariz., but it could be a costly triumph for Chicago because Sutcliffe, the 1984 Cy Young Award winner, was hit on the right thumb by a hit off the bat of the Padres' Tim Flannery.

It happened on the first pitch of the game and Sutcliffe had to leave the game immediately.

"I was just trying to knock it down," said Sutcliffe, who spent three tours on the disabled list last season with shoulder and hamstring injuries. "I just saw the ball ... reached to catch it, and it came up. The next thing I know, my thumb puffs all up."

Sutcliffe was sent to a hospital for X-rays, which showed no break.

Assistant Cub trainer Dave Ciliadi said it will depend on how long the thumb stays sore, but Sutcliffe might only be out a couple of days.

Meanwhile, Carlton had another good outing in Philadelphia's 8-6 triumph over St. Louis. The left-hander, who was 1-8 during an injury-plagued 1985 season, has worked six innings in two games, allowed one run, six hits, struck out five and walked two.

Against the Cardinals, Carlton tried all his pitches and displayed the easy motion that has enabled him to win 314 games and strike out 3,920 batters, second to Nolan Ryan on the all-time list.

"I don't think his stuff was better at any time last year," pitching coach Claude Osteen said. "It was good to see him throw so free."

John Russell's two-run homer broke a tie in the seventh inning for Philadelphia.

Padres 3, Cubs 0

Four San Diego pitchers, led by the five-inning, no-hit performance of starter Eric Show, combined to hurl a four-hit shutout against Chicago at Vanncouver's domed B.C. Place Stadium.

Braves 4, Dodgers 2

Ted Simmons hit a run-scoring double, sparking a two-run 12th inning for Atlanta, and also doubled during a two-run rally in the eighth against Los Angeles.

Mets 8, Twins 2

Rookie Kevin Mitchell hit two home runs, including a three-run shot that highlighted a five-run first inning, as New York crushed Minnesota.

Angels 11, Mariners 6

Doug DeCinces, Dick Schofield, Darrell Miller and Ruppert Jones collected two hits each, leading a 12-hit attack for California against Seattle.

Bob Kearney's three-run homer helped the Mariners cut a 6-0 deficit to 6-5, but ex-Midland Angel Devon White hit a solo homer for California in the seventh and Reggie Jackson grounded a three-run double in the eighth to pad the Angels' lead.

A's 5, Indians 3

Joaquin Andujar allowed only two hits in three innings and Oakland teammate Rick Langford gave up just one hit and an unearned run over four innings against Cleveland.

Red Sox 8, Astros 5

Glenn Hoffman and Dave Sax hit two-run homers off Aurelio Lopez in the eighth inning, powering Boston over Houston.

Blue Jays 2, Yankees (ss) 1

Kelly Gruber's ninth-inning double scored Garth Iorg from first and gave Toronto its victory over a New York split squad.

Yankees (ss) 10, White Sox (ss) 6

Rookie Orestes Destrade collected four hits, including a tie-breaking home run that triggered a four-run 10th inning, leading another team of Yankees to victory over Chicago.

Tigers 1, White Sox (ss) 0

An RBI double by Darrell Evans produced Detroit's only run but it was enough as Dan Petry, Chuck Cary and Willie Hernandez combined on a five-hitter against another team of White Sox.

Royals 6, Rangers 5

Reserve shortstop Jimmy Scranton's 11th-inning RBI single snapped a 5-5 tie and Kansas City added two more runs to defeat Texas.

Larry Parrish and rookie Pete Incaviglia homered for the Rangers, and Frank White and Steve Balboni hit homers for the Royals.

Reds 7, Pirates 6

Kurt Stillwell, expected to back up Dave Concepcion at shortstop this season, led off the bottom of the ninth inning with a home run, giving Cincinnati its victory over Pittsburgh.

Orioles 5, Expos 4

Jim Dwyer's RBI double and John Shelby's sacrifice fly highlighted Baltimore's two-run rally in the ninth off Montreal relief ace Jeff Reardon.

Giants 3, Brewers 3

San Francisco's Jeff Leonard drove in his 14th run of the exhibition season in the sixth inning and came home in the eighth for the final run of an 11-inning tie game against Milwaukee that was called because of darkness.

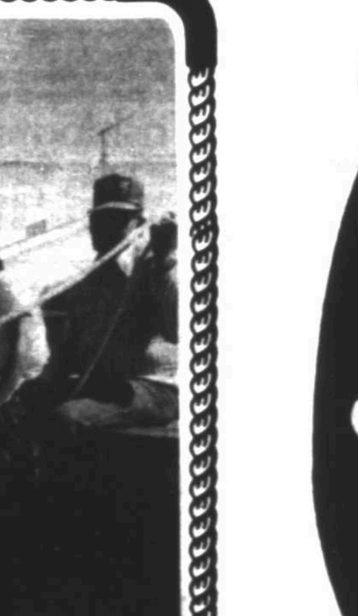
Shoeing horses is an age-old trade, and the tools it requires, above photo, are decidedly low-tech. A horse's hoof is actually a big toenail; it never stops growing. Rusty O'Donnell, left, uses a file to pedicure a horse while its owner, Bud Ott, holds the bridle. Also pictured at rear is Terry Glover, O'Donnell's partner. O'Donnell cleans the hoof, top right photo, and strips off excess growth before putting on the shoe. In the bottom right photo he hammers a shoe into place.

If the shoe doesn't fit...



Rusty O'Donnell

For some 7,000 years, horses were mankind's primary mode of individual transportation, and the farrier occupied a proud place in the economic hierarchy.

Then came the 20th century. Horses were replaced by cars, and farriers, who make their living shoeing horses, were largely replaced by tire salesmen.

Farriers these days are few and far between.

"There's not nearly as many people that can do it anymore," says Rusty O'Donnell, who can.

O'Donnell makes his living shoeing horses. Farriers generally get about $30 per horse, he says.

"You can go do seven horses in about four hours," he says.

"There's fairly good money in horseshoeing," adds his new partner, Terry Glover.

O'Donnell, 26, has a formal farrier education from a school in Mineral Wells, but he acquired most of his knowledge in a more time-honored way.

"I was raised on a ranch, and it just comes natural to me," he says. "My granddad used to do it, and he taught me what he knew."

The best way to learn, he says, "is just getting under a horse and doing it."

Once under the horse, one quickly locates the feet. But what appears to be the horse's foot is actually a toe; the hoof is the toenail.

"A horse's foot grows an eighth of an inch a month," says O'Donnell. Every six to eight weeks, the hoof must be trimmed, filed, cleaned and reshod.

Wild horses take care of this by treading on rocks, but the domestic breed needs the farrier's care.

Unlike the blacksmiths of frontier days, O'Donnell can buy ready-made horseshoes in bulk. But he still forges his own if a client wants a customized fit.

"It's the owner's preference," he says.

O'Donnell and Glover, 23, live in rural Midland, but they shoe horses as far away as San Angelo and Abilene. There's apparently plenty of work for those willing to do it.

"The main thing is just liking doing it," O'Donnell said. "It's really hard on you. A lot give up after three or four months."

O'Donnell and Glover enjoy the work, and the feeling that they're helping keep an age-old craft alive. But they also enjoy the freedom it gives them from following a 40-hour schedule every week.

Shoeing horses allows them to take time off to compete in rodeos, where O'Donnell rides bulls and his partner ropes.

"You can make a good living and make your own schedule," O'Donnell says.

"You can always find something different — meet new people," chimes in Glover.

What O'Donnell likes best of all is being his own boss, he says.

"You go do this, and somebody else doesn't get the credit or the blame or nothing else."

Banner day

A banner announcing the opening of the Robert Cottingham exhibit at the Art Institute of the Permian Basin today was put in place late last week. Mervyn's Odessa manager Mike Ponting (foreground) and Midland manager Larry Dushane earlier presented a check for $4,500 on behalf of Mervyn's Odessa-Midland stores to the Art Institute to cover the cost of bringing the Cottingham "Super Realism" exhibit to the area.

Cable firms scramble to adapt to dishes

DALLAS (AP) — When Larry F. Lewis saw backyard satellite television receiving dishes "popping up all over the place, just like mushrooms," first he saw competition, then he saw new business.

Lewis is vice president of Cox Cable Communications in Pensacola, Fla., and every time a dish was installed in his territory, it meant one more home that didn't need to hook up to his cable system.

But, now comes scrambling — the technology that makes the satellite-delivered programs from the cable companies like Home Box Office just an electronic jumble when it comes down to a backyard dish.

Lewis got into business selling descramblers and licensing the people whose business he could have lost to receive HBO. As other cable programmers scramble, he'll offer their programs too.

William D. Laughinghouse, general manager of Piedmont Cablevision in Danville, Va., went even further. He started installing dishes that he sold or leased to new customers.

He also rents videotapes to his customers.

The two spoke on one of several Sunday panels dealing with the backyard dishes and the cable industry's response, a prime topic at the annual National Cable Television Association convention.

"We want people to think of us as providers of video services, not just cable," concluded moderator Gary S. Bryson, executive vice president of American TV and Communications Corp. of Englewood, Colo., the nation's second-largest cable operator.

Rod Thole, executive vice president of Heritage Communications of Des Moines, Iowa, which serves 719,000 customers with cable, also endorsed the idea of cable companies making it easier for people to use dishes to receive pay TV.

Selling programs to dish owners "holds the potential for a significant incremental increase in cash flow," he said.

Paul Smith, minority counsel for the House telecommunications subcommittee, which has been considering a bill to delay scrambling until a program marketing system is more firmly in place, said he thinks "the prospects for legislation are very slim."

He said members of the committee are very concerned with what he called unanswered questions about price and availability of TV signals in rural areas, especially for people who live so far out of town that they can't receive regular over-the-air TV.

Members of Congress are also concerned about plans by the commercial TV networks to scramble their signals without offering rural viewers a way to decode the signal.

Another round of hearings is set for April or May.

IRS probes cable kickbacks

DALLAS (AP) — Heritage Cablevision officials have forced two employees to resign following an Internal Revenue Service announcement that it is investigating an alleged bid-rigging and kickback scheme.

Joe King, general manger of Heritage Cablevision, said two lower-level Heritage employees resigned last week after admitting involvement in the alleged scheme. The workers, former Warner Amex employees, were not identified.

The allegations stem from previous ownership of the cable system by Warner Amex, which constructed television systems in Dallas, Mesquite and Farmers Branch between 1981 and 1985.

Warner Amex sold its Dallas-area holdings last summer to Heritage Communications Inc. of Des Moines, Iowa, for $110 million.

Documents released by the Internal Revenue Service allege at least two former Warner Amex officials gave construction contracts to three Mesquite companies during 1984 and 1985 in return for at least $82,000 in kickbacks.

The documents also allege that two other Warner Amex construction supervisors received at least two payments ranging from $200 to $600.

IRS documents allege the officials solicited bank bid forms from contractors and filled in winning bids in return for between 7 percent and 10 percent of the total value of the contracts.

"I couldn't keep them on knowing that this had been going on," King said. "I frankly think that they were led down the wrong path. I suggested that they go to the proper authorities."

IRS investigators have requested the two employees' personnel files as well as those of three former Warner Amex employees, King said.

King said he believes none of the former Warner Amex employees now working for Heritage were involved in the wrongdoing.

"We have double-checked side doors, back doors, all the doors to be certain that something like this is not going on," King said. "We will not tolerate it."

Infant's condition upgraded; Babysitter charged

From Staff Reports

An infant boy whose babysitter allegedly threw him against a wall to stop him from crying had been upgraded to satisfactory condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

The babysitter, 22-year-old Jo Anna Alvarez, was charged this morning with injury to a child. She was expected to be transferred to county jail today, where she was to be held in lieu of a $20,000 bond set by Municipal Judge Robin Smith.

Wesley Harris, the 21-month-old son of Clay and Tammy Harris, 1110 Austin, apartment 42, had been admitted to the hospital in critical condition Friday with a fractured skull, according to police reports.

Following an investigation by Detective Sgt. Larry Bledsoe, the babysitter was arrested Saturday night after giving police a statement regarding the incident.

According to police reports, the woman was taking care of the child at her home at 1603 W. Kentucky Thursday when she became frustrated because he wouldn't stop crying. Sitting on her bed, she threw him away from her and his head struck the wall behind the bed, according to police.

Later, when the baby continued to cry, she pushed his head into the floor, reports said. He was bleeding, but she cleaned the blood off and put him to bed.

When he woke up and resumed crying, she hit him with both hands and pushed him into the floor again, according to police reports. Though he was now spitting up blood, she put him to bed for the night, reports said. The next morning, she returned the child to his mother on her way to work.

He was later taken to the hospital, where a nurse noticed the suspicious nature of his injuries and notified police.

In other reports, a shed near a home at 2205 S. Baird was destroyed Sunday by a grass fire which was deliberately set, according to fire reports.

The fire in the shed, owned by Robert Reyna, also destroyed part of a fence. After being reported at 3:06 p.m., it was extinguished with about 150 gallons of water, reports said.

A Midland man reported the loss of a $1,500 set of golf clubs in a Sunday burglary of his vehicle, according to police reports.

James David Wilson, no street address available, told police the clubs and a $275 radar detector were taken sometime between 9 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. while the vehicle was parked near the intersection of Midkiff and Cuthbert, reports said.

DEATHS

Gary Cox

Gary Cox of Midland died Sunday at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Elmira Dubey

Elmira Dubey, 88, of Midland, died Sunday at her home.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Tuesday at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity with the Rev. Allen Whitman officiating. Graveside services will be at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Evergreen Cemetery in Hillside, N.J.

Mrs. Dubey was born Oct. 4, 1897, in Newark, N.J., where she was reared. She was married to the late Alfred E. Dubey and they resided in Ridgewood, N.J., for many years. She was a member of the Episcopal church.

Survivors include one son, Pomeroy Smith of Midland; one daughter, Mrs. Elwood Easton of New Bern, N.C.; six grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

Burglars break in to judge's home

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Burglars broke into the Odessa home of U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton over the weekend and made off with two guns and stereo tape player.

According to police spokesman John McAhon, the suspects entered the Bunton home through a rear sliding glass door in the 1500 block of Ridecrest sometime between noon Friday and 5:52 p.m. Saturday.

Bunton told investigating officers two shotguns, a 20 gauge and 12 gauge, and an AM-FM stereo cassette tape player apparently were the only items taken. He placed a value of $450 on the stolen items.

Budget ills may cause serious side effects for state's poor

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The Texas Department of Health can administer the medicine needed to ease state budget ills, but the treatment could cause serious side effects for the state's poor, the state health commissioner said.

Dr. Ronald Bernstein told reporters prior to the board's monthly meeting on Saturday that programs such as early Childhood Intervention and adult health care might loose funding and maternal and child clinics will be consolidated as the department tries to meet Gov. Mark White's request for a 13 percent budget cut.

"We are not dealing with sacred cows here, but important health issues," said Dr. Ron J. Anderson, Board of Health chairman. "When you don't fund these programs, people die."

"We have met the state target of $19 million this budget year and $19.5 million for the next budget year," he said Saturday. "But those dollars were used to target programs for the poorest of the poor in the state."

Dallas black leader, wife slain

DALLAS (AP) — Police had few leads in the stabbing deaths of Fred Finch Jr., a lawyer, publisher and one of the leaders of the city's black community, and his wife, who were found slain in their South Dallas home.

Finch, 61, and Mildred Finch, 65, a teacher in the Dallas County Community College District, were discovered shortly before noon Sunday by police after a relative received no answer when he knocked at their door and notified authorities.

Sunday night, homicide detectives said they had very little to go on.

"The house had been ransacked, and there were appearances of forced entry," said Sgt. J.E. Gallagher. "We have to talk to family members and neighbors and determine what their last movements were and who they were associating with."

Finch, a Harvard University Law School graduate, was the publisher of the Dallas Examiner, a South Dallas weekly newspaper, and a former publisher of the Dallas Post-Tribune. He was one of the leading figures in the 1950s in a move to desegregate Arlington State College, now a branch of the University of Texas.

Odessa police probe stabbing

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police in Odessa continue today to investigate a stabbing incident early Sunday that led to the detention of three teen-age boys.

According to police spokesman John McAhon, Gilbert Madrid, 904 Fall Ave., was stabbed once in the abdominal area in the 800 block of Jeter Ave. about 12:23 a.m. Sunday. The youth was transported by ambulance to Medical Center Hospital, where he was treated and released.

McAhon said the three juveniles were taken into custody in connection with the case. One of the youths was later released to the custody of his parents and the other two were transferred to the Ector County Youth Center.

Saying that Madrid told investigating officers he was assaulted by someone known to him, McAhon said detectives are still trying to determine a motive for the incident.

Camera club to choose slides

From Staff Reports

The Midland Camera Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. today at the Blakemore Planetarium. Sixteen color slides will be judged for submission in the year-end Gulf Coast States Camera Club competition. Slides judged will be those that were among the winners during the MCC's bi-monthly competition during the past year.

Anyone interested in photography is welcome to attend the meeting.

Beaumont names new city manager

BEAUMONT (AP) — Albert Haines was named to take over the reins of city manager in this financially troubled East Texas city, Mayor Bill Neild announced.

Haines, 42, former chief executive officer of Salt Lake City, Utah, was chosen Sunday from a group of four finalists interviewed by the Beaumont City Council over the weekend. He replaces Karl Nollenberger, who resigned effective Oct. 1, 1985.

Nollenberger and other city officials came under fire when Beaumont residents found out a year ago that the city lost $20 million in the collapse of a Florida securities trading firm.

The city had invested money that was to have bought federal securities, but when ESM Government Securities Inc. closed its doors, the city found out no securities had been purchased in its name.

Haines said he left his Salt Lake City position because of a conflict with the new mayor.

Absentee voting open for April 5 election date

From Staff Reports

Absentee voting opened today for elections to be held Saturday, April 5, by the City of Midland, Midland College, Midland County Hospital District and Greenwood Independent School District.

Absentee voting is being held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays at the Midland County Elections Administration Office at 709 W. Washington Ave. It ends at 5 p.m. April 1, said Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert.

Currently, 55,141 Midland Countians are registered to vote.

The election of two trustees of the Midland Independent School District will be held on Saturday, May 3, when the Democratic Party and Republican Party primary elections will be staged.

St. Patrick's Day celebrated quietly in Ireland

Copley News Service

Parades, green beer, green plastic derbies, plastic shamrocks, green ties and shirts and socks — these are the ways Americans usually celebrate St. Patrick's Day. It's New Year's Eve, the Rose Parade and Mardi Gras all rolled into one big Kelly green package, with a green Fourth of July sparkler stuck on top.

On St. Patrick's Day 1985, for instance, revelers poured 110 pounds of green dye in the Chicago River to mark the occasion, while in New York City, 1.25 million people jammed Fifth Avenue for the 224th annual St. Patrick's Day parade there. In Savannah, Ga., 200,000 turned out for a similar event that featured 26 floats and 30 bands — which followed a traditional, to them, breakfast of green grits and booze. There are also the yearly St. Pat's parades in Chicago and Boston.

We turn now to St. Patrick's Day as celebrated in Ireland.

"St. Patrick's Day is a little, uh, different in Ireland," offered Eugene McSweeney, one of that country's top chefs and the proprietor of The Lacken House country inn and restaurant in Kilkenny.

"You see, with us, it's more like your Thanksgiving — a more family-oriented time.

"We begin the day with morning Mass. That's followed by a parade — a low-key one, nothing like the kind, say, they have in New York; I was there for that one year, and I couldn't believe it.

"Next, perhaps, we'll attend a football (soccer) match. Then it's home to spend time with the family. Dinner is at 6 or 7 p.m. — if friends come over, the meal will extend to several hours."

AND DINNER — what's a typical St. Patrick's Day dinner in Ireland?

"Well," McSweeney said, "we'll start with a bowl of vegetable soup. The main course will be spring lamb — very tender, it is — with vegetables. After that comes some chocolate cake, maybe, and coffee."

He also said Irish coffee might be served. McSweeney, in the United States as part of a tour to promote Irish Mist liqueur, swore on the Blarney stone that the Irish really did invent Irish coffee.

McSweeney said the year was 1949 — the year of his birth — when Joe Sheridan, then commissary chef at the Foynes Seaplane Base (now called Shannon Airport), first brewed such an elixir. He did it, the story goes, to warm the weary passengers who had spent 10 to 15 hours crossing the Atlantic in large, unheated "airboats," and were waiting for the planes to refuel.

"It's true about Sheridan," McSweeney said. "There's a plaque in Shannon Airport to prove it."

When Sheridan emigrated to San Francisco, he brought the drink with him. And when he moved to Los Angeles, Las Vegas and Honolulu, he served it there, too.

"But Irish coffee as we know it and as Americans know it today are two different things," said McSweeney.

"In Ireland, we serve it in a glass. You can see the level of lightly whipped heavy cream, unsweetened, sitting there on top. A great deal of the whole experience of drinking Irish coffee is visual. Then you sip it and that hot, strong coffee comes through the cool whipped cream and that's it!

"HERE IN THE United States, on the other hand, the drink is served in cups. Why, I've even had it with chocolate chips served on top."

McSweeney, who has visited the United States on four previous occasions, was chef de cuisine at Dublin's revered Berkeley Court Hotel from 1978 through 1981, was a finalist in the International Chef of the Year competitions for three years, and was named Ireland's chef of the year in 1979.

He was part of the team that won a gold medal at the Culinary Olympics in Frankfurt, West Germany, in 1980. In all, he has won 13 gold medals in these events.

Two-and-a-half years ago, he opened The Lacken House so that he could work closer to his wife, Breda, and their three children. They're close, all right. The McSweeneys live in the inn, which, in fact, is more like a big country house occupied by old friends than a typical business establishment, unusually warm even for a bed-and-breakfast stop.

At The Lacken House, one knocks on the door before entering. Greeting you, probably, will be McSweeney himself, who makes it a point to visit with each customer in the restaurant and often sits down for a glass of wine or chitchat about the meal.

The staff is small: Breda runs the restaurant, McSweeney has one apprentice in the kitchen, and there is one waiter. McSweeney often checks in overnight guests himself.

Menu favorites are thick Irish bacon and cabbage, Irish stew (which contains only lamb, potatoes, onions and some seasoning), soda bread and cornbread made on the premises.

McSweeney, who by the time of the interview had spent two weeks on the U.S. tour, seemed eager to round out the trip.

"I enjoy your country very much," he said, "but I want to be back in Ireland for St. Pat's Day."

'Irish potatoes' sweet confection for St. Pat's Day

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Here is a recipe for some "Irish potato" confections for St. Patrick's Day.

PADDY'S POTATOES

5 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
1 cup peanut butter
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
Powdered sugar
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 teaspoons cocoa powder
2 teaspoons chopped nuts

Mix butter and peanut butter until blended.

Add salt and vanilla.

Gradually add 1½ cups powdered sugar until mixture can be molded into potatolike shapes.

In separate bowl, combine 1 tablespoon powdered sugar, cinnamon, cocoa and nuts.

Roll balls in mixture.

Store in cold place until candy hardens.

Makes about 3 dozen.

Millionaire's lending scheme 'passes bucks'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: To "Forgotten Parents," who loaned their son $10,000 10 years ago that never has been (and likely never will be) repaid, and to all those who wrote in to say, "The same thing happened to us," you gave sound advice: "Never lend money without a promissory note acknowledging the loan and stating the terms of repayment. Relatives are no exception."

Having made my first million by the time I was 30 and multiplying it several times since then, and coming from a large working-class family, I am often confronted with the problem of a relative in "desperate" need of a loan. Here is an even better way to handle it:

Develop a relationship with a bank — most people with even $5,000 or $10,000 to lend will know their banker. When a relative asks for a loan, tell him (or her) that you're not in the business of lending money, but your bank is. His credit lousy? Or he wouldn't qualify for that much? You'll assist him. Then go to your banker and pledge your money, on deposit with the bank, as security for the loan. The bank will happily make the loan, since their risk is zero. Your relative gets his money, so he's happy. True, you still stand to lose your money if he defaults, but there are several advantages to doing it this way:

1. The bank will make him fill out a loan application, sign a promissory note, maybe even get him to pledge some collateral of his own, however insufficient. It makes the borrower feel "on the hook" and, in fact, his credit rating is at issue if he defaults.

2. It takes you out of the position of creditor and collection agent, which puts a strain on the best of personal relationships. The interest that the borrower owes is paid to the bank, not to you, so no hard feelings.

3. Meanwhile, you continue to get interest on your money deposited in the bank.

4. If the borrower pays the loan as promised, that's an enhancement to his credit rating, and thus an incentive for him to go this route as well.

I've handled several loans to relatives, friends and employees this way and haven't gotten stung yet. Sometimes the borrower, when confronted with the bank's forbidding paperwork, will back off altogether and miraculously find some other way to solve his financial problem. Anyway, it's not foolproof, but it's the best solution to the situation I've found. Sign me — BEVERLY HILLS BENEFACTOR

DEAR BENEFACTOR: Thanks for the solid financial advice. That's what I call passing the buck(s) without paying a premium.

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a gentleman who was born and raised in Iran. I am an American-born woman. He speaks very little English, but there is a very strong physical attraction between us that I have never known before. He is decent, honest, hard-working and gentle.

When we are together he makes my heart sing as it has never sung before. His inability to converse socially in English is a little frustrating at times, but he certainly knows how to make a woman feel important and thoroughly loved. Should I marry him? — MOONSTRUCK

DEAR MOONSTRUCK: It's easier to teach a man to speak English than to teach him how to make a woman feel important and thoroughly loved. Grab him.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Have a joyous St. Patrick's Day, but if you're drinking, don't drive. And if you're driving, don't drink.

AT WIT'S END

Pets intelligent

By ERMA BOMBECK

We've owned enough animals in our time to know they are not putty in the hands of their owners. They have minds of their own.

There are no such things as "domesticate," "train" and "educate," unless they want to be. These are myths perpetuated by people who sell you animals in the first place.

I used to be one of those people who watched animal documentaries on PBS and couldn't believe what I was hearing when William Conrad said the blue-footed booby was "flirting" or a wildebeest was severely depressed. C'mon, how could an animal feel human emotions and how did we know he was feeling them? Believe me, they know.

Why else would a quail board Republic Flight 44 in Phoenix, Ariz., and fly (cargo class) to Des Moines, Iowa? For the beach? For the home cooking? To join the beautiful bird social scene? Because the quail season opened in Arizona that very day, that's why!

Animals have always been a lot smarter than any human will admit. Owners of dogs, for example, are so smug. They think they have their pets under control. To me, "My dog doesn't bite" is an incomplete sentence. I cannot begin to tell you the times I have been invited into a house where a dog galloped toward me, put his paws on my chest and pinned me to the door with saliva dripping on my Liz Claiborn blouse while the owner is saying, "Do you want Erma to think you have no manners? Down boy!"

I'm supposed to trust a dog who licks his underside all during dinner to have manners.

A horse to whom you have just fed $50 worth of honey-flavored grain will step on your foot if he wants to. A vindictive hamster will refuse to spin around all night on his exercise wheel if you take the squeak out. If you alter your cat, expect him to sit on your TV set for the rest of your life and look sullen. If you alter your dog, never turn your back on him again.

I'm telling you, animals have the same intelligent life that we have. Do you know what we'd do to a child who scratched ridges in the door to be let out when the wind chill factor is 22 below and, when we stood there with the door open, sniffed and walked back into the living room by the fire?

No one understood recently when Pope John Paul opened the window of his study in St. Peter's Square and released in the rain two doves to symbolize man's quest for peace, and two seconds later, the doves flew back in and perched on a chair in his warm papal apartment.

Embarrassed, the Pope wagged his finger at the doves and said, "They'll fly later."

I say to this... only if they feel like it.

Fingerprinting campaign promoted

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Shopping centers across the country have agreed to promote child safety through a weeklong campaign, beginning April 7, to fingerprint millions of youngsters 3 to 14 years old.

"The search for thousands of abducted youngsters would be significantly assisted if families had fingerprint identification records they could furnish to law-enforcement agencies," said Al Sussman, organizer of the Kids Week campaign. He said that 2,500 shopping centers so far have agreed to cooperate in the drive organized by the International Council of Shopping Centers, the trade association for the industry.

The centers will furnish facilities — usually situated at a central place in the shopping mall — to carry out the fingerprinting. Parents will be given the printed records and urged to keep them with photographs of their children, for use in case of need.

Cooperating centers will also provide families with copies of Safetytips, a guide for parents and teachers. The brochure includes a series of cutouts of children's games that are designed to be instructive about safety procedures.

Women landowners' seminar set

Seminar on Farm and Ranch Business Management for Women Landowners will be presented April 14-16 at the Holiday Inn Centre, 6201 E. Highway 80 in Odessa.

Designed to help women explore income-generating and tax-saving opportunities for their farms and reanches, the seminar will feature discussions on income taxes, farm leases, business organization, estate planning and oil and gas leasing.

Farm leases and operating agreements will be discussed, including benefits and retrictions to landowners and tenants. Tax-saving opportunities will be explored for business growth, land sales, retirement income and providing for children and grandchildren.

Estate planning tools to be discussed will include use of corporations and partnerships, selling part of the business, installment sales, oil and gas interests, special farm land valuation, deferred estate tax payments, life insurance and discounted estate taxes.

Registration fee of $80 will include the cost of meals and materials. For registration information call Marian Farr, Midland County Extension Agent, 687-1351.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was mixed against major currencies in early European trading today after plunging in Tokyo to a record post-World War II low against the Japanese yen. Gold prices rose.

The dollar closed in Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, at 175.45 yen, down 2.25 from Friday's close of 177.70. Later, in London, the U.S. currency slid still further to a quote of 175.35 yen.

Dealers in Frankfurt said the Bank of Japan did not intervene and buy dollars to bolster the U.S. currency.

In Tokyo, Japanese Finance Minister Noburu Takeshita said only that he would carefully watch the "rapid pace" of exchange rates, after the dollar opened in Tokyo today at 175.40 yen, down 2.30 from Friday's close.

"The exchange rates are moving at such a rapid pace that I will carefully watch (them)," Takeshita was quoted as telling a news conference, two hours after trading began.

The dollar's close in Tokyo was also its lowest since the current floating rate was put into effect in 1978. The previous low was on Oct. 31 that year when the dollar dipped briefly to 175.50 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Friday:

—2.2455 West German marks, down from 2.2555

—1.886 Swiss francs, down from 1.8942

—6.9025 French francs, down from 6.935

—2.5452 Dutch guilders, up from 2.5435

—1,534.50 Italian lire, down from 1,535.50

—1.386 Canadian dollars, down from 1.392

In London, the dollar rose against the British pound which was quoted at $1.4585, nearly a cent cheaper than $1.4677 late Friday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $347.30 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $347. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $348.20.

In Zurich, the bid price was $347.80, up from $347.50 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at $347.55, up 97 cents from Saturday.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.65 a troy ounce, down from Friday's $5.71.

T-BILLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on 52-week Treasury bills fell to 6.61 percent in Thursday's auction, the lowest level in eight years.

The Treasury Department sold $9 billion in bills with the average discount rate down from 7.19 percent at the last auction on Feb. 13. The rate was the lowest since 6.55 percent on Jan. 4, 1978.

The sale attracted bids totaling $22.5 billion. The investment rate, which is higher than the discount rate, averaged 7.06 percent with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,331.70.

Dollar plunges to new low in Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — The dollar plunged to a postwar low against the Japanese yen today on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market, and the government said it was considering intervention to support the dollar.

The dollar closed at 175.45 yen, down 2.25 yen from Friday's close of 177.70 yen, after a day of heavy trading.

On Oct. 31, 1978, the dollar hit its previous postwar low of 175.50 yen at one point before rebounding to close at 176.05 yen.

The dollar has fallen more than 27 percent against the yen since Sept. 22, when the central banks of Japan, the United States, Britain, France and West Germany agreed to drive down its foreign exchange value to help reduce the massive U.S. trade deficit.

A weaker dollar makes imports relatively more expensive in the United States, theoretically increasing demand for cheaper domestic products.

Money traders traced today's slide of the dollar to remarks by Finance Minister Noboru Takeshita that the basic stance of Japan and the other four nations remained unchanged.

However, Takeshita told Japanese reporters that "the exchange rates are moving at such a rapid pace that I will carefully watch (them)," a ministry statement said.

The ministry also quoted Takeshita as saying there could be intervention in money markets to support the dollar.

Governments intervene in currency markets by buying or selling a certain currency to increase or depress its foreign exchange value.

Takeshita also said the dollar's decline was aided by a perception that the U.S. economy had not been growing as anticipated, as indicated by weak industrial production statistics released last Friday.

Japanese officials have said the yen's rapid rise has created problems for Japanese industry, because it makes Japanese goods more expensive overseas.

Takeshita said the finance and other ministries have been working on fresh measures to help Japanese business to cope with the yen's strength.

Tokyo money traders have active business as the Japanese yen opened with a record high 175.40 against the U.S. dollar on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market Monday morning. The previous record was Y175.50, which was set on Oct. 31, 1978.

Steelworkers will vote by mail on 40-month offer from LTV Steel

PITTSBURGH (AP) — About 30,500 steelworkers in seven states will vote by mail on a 40-month offer from LTV Steel Co. that cuts wages and benefits in exchange for stock and profit sharing.

"I honestly believe that once we get to them with the package, they'll accept it," said Anthony Rainaldi, chief negotiator for the United Steelworkers. "This isn't a concessionary package. It's an investment in the company."

The package should be mailed by mid-week, and ratification will take another two weeks, said USW spokesman Gary Hubbard. Union officials will be explaining the package when the contract is printed.

The contract calls for an hourly wage cut of $1.14, the loss of three paid holidays from 10 to seven, the loss of an average of one-week vacation and reduced differential pay. The average hourly wage is now $12.87.

"Our members will receive a dollar for dollar payback in equity for any wage and benefits reductions," USW President Lynn Williams said after the settlement was reached late Saturday.

"This agreement will establish the basic policy of the union that worker sacrifices are investments in the future of the company, but it doesn't necessarily establish a pattern with other companies," Williams said Sunday.

The union's negotiating committee voted 32-6 late Saturday to approve the tentative agreement. The union's 31-member executive board gave its unanimous approval Sunday.

Williams said the agreement with the nation's second-largest steelmaker trades givebacks for "more worker involvement in decision-making at all levels of company policy."

LTV, meanwhile, will realize savings of $3.60 in hourly employment costs because of reduced payroll and Social Security taxes.

"It's a large step in our program to return the company to full financial health. We're very pleased with the agreement," said A.C. Tremaine, vice president of industrial relations for LTV.

LTV Steel, a Cleveland-based subsidiary of LTV Corp. of Dallas, had said it is in a "a state of crisis" following several years of severe losses. LTV lost $227 million in 1985.

Going into the talks, LTV said its hourly labor costs were $25.64 in wages and benefits, or 12 percent above the industry average of $22.65.

The current contract expires July 31, but LTV set Saturday as a target deadline. Without a new agreement by April 1, the union would control when its members would be paid a deferred cost-of-living bonus estimated at $28 million.

The bonus is part of the repayment of concessions made by the union in March 1983, when the current contract was settled. LTV has said it saved $352 million under the pact.

Under the new agreement, the company agreed to reduce overtime and the use of outside contractors, which will preserve union jobs and reduce layoffs, the union said.

The union also got a guarantee of representation and a labor agreement with any potential buyer of an LTV plant before the plant is sold.

Rainaldi, after two days of marathon bargaining, said the contract was "completed in the most difficult of times experienced by both the employer and our members in a 40-year history of negotiations."

The USW is bargaining with individual employers for the first time in 30 years. The union formally bargained with the six largest steelmakers as a unit, but the declining fortunes of the industry brought changes.

Among the Big Six steelmakers, only U.S. Steel Corp. and Armco Inc. ended 1985 in the black.

Four other producers have asked for agreements by March 31. U.S. Steel has not yet set a date to start talks.

In 1983, the union agreed to a $1.25 an hour wage cut that was recouped over the life of the contract. The wage and other cuts saved steelmakers $1.4 billion, the union said.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

FAA seeks to fine Eastern record $9.5 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government sources say the Federal Aviation Administration is seeking a record $9.5 million fine against Eastern Airlines, following a lengthy inspection that uncovered numerous safety violations.

Although the amount of the proposed civil penalty is still negotiable, one source said Friday the FAA was "hanging tough" on the $9.5 million figure, which would be the largest fine ever levied against a U.S. airline.

American Airlines last year agreed to pay a record $1.5 million in penalties after FAA inspectors found a variety of maintenance and record-keeping violations, including one that led to an engine falling off in flight.

Production plunges 0.6 percent in February

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says that U.S. industrial production plunged 0.6 percent in February, the steepest decline since the end of the last recession.

The Federal Reserve Board said the decline, which was attributed largely to a sharp drop in oil and gas drilling activity, followed a small 0.1 percent increase in January.

February's weak showing matched the drop for October and was the biggest drop since a 0.8 percent plunge in October 1982, in the depths of the last recession.

Business inventories increase 0.7 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business inventories climbed 0.7 percent in January, the biggest increase in 16 months, while total business sales dropped 0.3 percent, according to the government.

The combination of falling sales and a rising backlog of unsold goods normally is a signal that future production and employment will weaken as businesses cut back on orders to work down unwanted inventories.

But analysts noted that 85 percent of the big rise in inventories was concentrated in the retail sector, and stemmed from a lack of after-Christmas sales.

Judge refuses to withdraw from Robins case

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The federal judge overseeing a reorganization of the company that made the Dalkon Shield birth control device has refused to withdraw from the case.

U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. on Friday denied a motion that he disqualify himself because of alleged personal bias or prejudice in favor of the A.H. Robins Co. and its chairman, E.C. Robins Sr.

Texaco may cut North Sea oil production

HOUSTON (AP) — Texaco Inc. is considering cutting its North Sea oil production by 15 percent, possibly as early as this week, the Houston Chronicle reported today.

The newspaper, quoting sources at the Geneva meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said Texaco was among several major oil companies operating in the North Sea to be considering their own production cuts.

An OPEC staffer, who asked to remain anonymous, said other companies probably would follow Texaco's lead. Other U.S. oil companies active in the North Sea include Exxon Corp., Conoco Inc., Phillips Petroleum Co. and Mobil Oil Corp.

Houston energy analyst Dale Steffes, who is attending the OPEC meeting, told the Chronicle such action by the oil companies in the North Sea would take a lot of pressure off British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Great Britain, the world's second-largest non-OPEC producer, has refused to cooperate with OPEC on production cutbacks.

OPEC is trying to come up with a strategy to prop up oil prices, which have tumbled 50 percent since December.

A key question before the conference is whether OPEC should revert to limiting production to push up the price of oil.

Oscar S. Wyatt Jr., chairman of the Houston-based Coastal Corp. and also attending the OPEC meeting, said unless all the producing nations reach an agreement, a number of banks in the United States could fail. In addition, he said energy companies would be forced out of business because of falling oil prices.

"Anything that degradates our banking system would be catastrophic," Wyatt said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

High-income adults shift tax burden through gifts to low-income children

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Last October, I bought 100 shares of stock at a total cost of about $2,500 for my 3-year-old grandson. The certificate is registered in my son's name as custodian for my grandson, under the gift to minors act.

At the time of the purchase, I gave no thought to the possible tax implication. Since then, I have read several tax manuals. They indicate I can get a tax break, but they don't provide details. How can I take advantage of this transaction on my 1985 income tax return?

A. You can't. There's no way you can take a deduction for that gift. Only gifts to charities and such are deductible. Gifts to relatives, friends and other individuals are not. You do not report such personal gifts on your income tax return.

The "tax break" comes from shifting income tax liability from you to your grandson.

Before you made that gift, you paid income tax on the interest or dividends the $2,500 earned. Your grandson now owns the stock and receives the dividends those 100 shares pay. The youngster has the tax liability for those dividends.

However, assuming the boy is taken as a dependent on his parents' return and he has only those dividends and other so-called "unearned income" of less than his personal exemption — $1,040 for 1985 — no federal income tax return has to be filed for him.

Lots of family members make income-producing gifts to young relatives in order to shift income tax liability. Moving income from adults in high tax brackets to youngsters who are in low tax brackets or who have such little income that they pay no tax reduces a family's total tax bite.

Just remember that once a gift of stocks, cash or other property is made it belongs to the child. So do the dividends and/or interest. The adult who made the gift can't take it back or put the income from it to his or her own use.

Q. My daughter has expressed a desire to receive stocks as her high school graduation present. I am not familiar with stocks. What is the number of shares required for one purchase? What is the commission? Is it possible to buy without a broker?

A. You can buy any number of shares — from one on up — as your generosity allows. Most brokerage firms have minimum commissions in the $25 to $35 range for each relatively small transaction. For larger transactions, the commission usually declines as a percentage of the money involved. Each brokerage sets its own rates and commissions vary from one brokerage firm to another.

Technically, you don't have to buy through a broker. If you can find someone who wants to sell the particular stock you want to buy, the two of you can arrange your own deal. In practice, it's easier to go to a broker.

• • •

Q. What is the maximum value of stocks and bonds I am allowed to give to family members and friends each year, without reporting to the federal government?

A. You can give up to $10,000 in securities, money or any other property annually to each of as many people as you please, without filing federal gift tax returns. For a married couple making gifts jointly — so-called "split gifts" — that number is $20,000.

Don't confuse the federal gift tax with federal income tax. Those are two different tax levies.

• • •

Q. I know one spouse can make unlimited gifts to the other, free of federal gift tax and without filing federal gift tax returns. I am also aware there is no federal estate tax on what one spouse leaves to the other and that I now can leave up to $500,000 to other heirs free of federal estate tax.

However, I have been making gifts of less than $10,000 to young relatives. Will the total amount of those gifts reduce the $500,000 federal estate tax exclusion upon my death?

A. No. By keeping each of your generous gifts below $10,000, you have not reduced your estate tax exclusion, which goes up to $600,000 for 1987 and future years.

In up-down economic cycles, players seem to forget fatal errors of past

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — In the economic game, you can watch the players making the same old errors again and again.

Not everyone seems to recognize the miscues, because not everyone is programmed with a sense of history. Besides, you can get away with financial mistakes for a while. Why, you might even make money from them.

In fact, you can deny they are errors, and you might have a point, because history doesn't repeat itself in exactly the same way. But the same behavior in the old days, history shows, did lead to monumental problems.

There is, for example, the lender practice of giving 30-year, fixed-rate loans again.

You may recall the disaster that came with that practice, because it occurred within the past decade.

Lenders — some of the biggest and best-known — committed their funds to fixed-rate loans. Meanwhile, their own borrowing costs rose, leaving them in the absurd position of paying more to borrow than they earned on lending.

It was great for borrowers; it was ruinous for lenders.

Hundreds of them disappeared from the economic scene because of that error, and those that survived almost parted the clouds with a uniform wail. "Never again," they shouted. It was the beginning of variable rate mortgages.

Until last year you might have been considered a wag to ask for a fixed-rate loan. But times have changed, and with incredible suddenness. Today, as much as 70 percent of all new mortgage loans are at fixed rates.

It doesn't take a long memory to recall another lesson soon forgotten.

This one occurs in real estate, and it is known as overbuilding. It occurs in just about every complete up-down cycle of the economy.

There is a better explanation for the overbuilding practice. That is, it takes rather precise timing to plan an office structure and bring it on stream, and very often the builder has little control over that timing.

It takes guts too, because you might have to begin construction during a recession or at a time when money is expensive. It is a gamble taken in bad times to be ready for the good times to follow.

Until last year you might have been considered a wag to ask for a fixed-rate loan. But times have changed, and with incredible suddenness.

In cycle after cycle, however, the beginning of good times spurs activity. Latecomers get excited and attempt to get their structures completed in time to get in on the fun. But the fun is gone in a glut of brand new, empty buildings.

It's happened again. Vacancy rates in many cities are at an all-time high. In some areas there is a glut of hotels, office buildings and apartment houses, presenting their owners with an ultimatum: lower prices or lose your building.

It happens in stocks too. You expect errors to be made in playing the stock market game, which periodically becomes the rage. Often, rage and price attain their greatest intensity at the same time, and then both cool simultaneously.

This error would be costly enough, but as Albert Sindlinger suggests, it is compounded by still another. It is the error of believing you are really as wealthy as the stock market says you are.

Stocks sometimes fall. And, says Sindlinger, whose firm pioneered consumer behavioral research, the fall can be especially nasty because of another recurring error — that of borrowing to speculate.

Based on daily telephone interviews, Sindlinger finds that about 6 million individuals under age 45 have become stockholders in the past few years, and that many of them have been speculating on borrowed funds.

When the market is up, such stockholders feel good, and that feeling can be translated into big spending and even more debt. But when stocks fall, the era of good feeling disappears and the investor is dragged back to Earth.

Nothing new about this. It happens all the time.

This Chrysler worker knows a good pothole when he creates one

CHELSEA, Mich. (AP) — Be happy that Jerry Pruder doesn't work on roads you drive because his job is to keep potholes big enough to provide for maximum car vibration, noise and general punishment.

As overseer of 45 miles of road at the Chrysler Proving Grounds, Pruder maintains potholes and dips big enough to see what the test vehicles can take.

Engineers say they prefer to use the track for testing, even though some Michigan roads could serve the same purpose.

"A good chuckhole or a bad surface on a public road is not much good to us because within a day or two it is repaired and we have lost a benchmark for testing," said B.J. Ludwig, Chrysler chief engineer of vehicle development.

The company that recently remodeled the course with gaping potholes, dips and bumps was honored for its bang-up work, Chrysler said.

WESTERVILLE, Ohio (AP) — A 12-foot python that was on the loose in a high school for four days is back in its cage after it was found above a ceiling.

"It's now safe and secure and locked in its aquarium home," North High School Principal Lee Whitaker said of Bambi, who was late last week.

Bambi, one of several snakes used in science classes, was in its cage March 9, Sunday night, but science teacher Douglas Wynn said "things were not in order when I arrived Monday."

Students tried to catch the python, which crushes it prey but is not poisonous, by using caged rats as bait, but the lure didn't work, Wynn said.

Two science teachers and students found the snake by following a trail of shedding skin, Wynn said. He said that because the area above the false ceiling is cooler than the rest of the school, the snake "was in somewhat of a state of hibernation" and offered no resistance.

French conservatives win bare majority

PARIS (AP) — French voters ousted leftists from power in the National Assembly, but gave the main conservative parties only a bare majority with which to pursue their plans to loosen government control of the economy and reduce unemployment.

Results early today from French overseas possessions pushed the number of seats won by conservatives and allied small parties to 291, two more than the number needed for a majority in the 577-member assembly. Two overseas seats remained undecided.

Mainstream conservatives' hopes for a major victory over President Francois Mitterrand's Socialists in Sunday's elections were derailed by an unexpectedly strong showing for the far-right National Front. Meanwhile, Communist electoral strength fell to an historic low.

The National Front won 33 seats with a campaign that hit hard at anti-immigration and law-and-order themes. Previously it had not been represented in the assembly.

Mitterrand has two years left in his seven-year term, but this is the first time in the 28-year history of the French Fifth Republic that a president has been faced with a hostile parliament.

Mitterrand cannot be forced from office, but he has hinted he has not rejected the idea of resigning rather than working with a government with which he has serious philosophical differences. The major conservative alliance immediately signaled it was not prepared to bend on major issues.

The president has promised that if the right won, he would choose the next premier from among its ranks. Jacques Chirac, head of the neo-Gaullist Rally for the Republic was considered the top candidate.

Premier Laurent Fabius met with Mitterrand for 1½ hours today and then presented his letter of resignation, indicating he and his government were "prepared to resign at the moment you judge most opportune." The presidential Elysee palace published the letter in keeping with tradition.

Mitterrand can accept the resignation immediately and appoint a new premier, or ask Fabius to stay on until a replacement is appointed.

According to official figures, Chirac's party won 150 seats and its ally, the centrist Union for French Democracy, won 127. Allied minor parties won 14 seats, and an independent extreme right group won one seat.

Socialists won 198 seats and their close allies the Left Radical Party won seven. Communists won 35 seats and candidates of minor leftist parties won 10.

"The French have chosen a new majority. They have, therefore, chosen a new politic," said a joint statement by Chirac's party and the Union for French Democracy.

"This new politic can only be applied by a premier and government (prepared) to put into action, without compromise or concessions, the objectives of the RPR-UDF platform," the statement said. It asked that the president choose a prime minister approved by the conservative alliance.

French commentators said the statement appeared to be an attempt to block Mitterrand from naming as premier anyone other than Chirac or Valery Giscard d'Estaing, the former president and leader of the Union for French Democracy.

The conservative alliance has prepared about 20 draft laws to loosen control over the economy, prices and foreign exchange.

Exit surveys carried out by two polling organizations indicated that unemployment, now at 10.4 percent, was the single biggest concern of voters.

The rightist platform also calls for many of the banks, insurance companies and industries nationalized by the Socialists in 1981 to be returned to the private sector, but that was not an immediate priority.

Jean Lecanuet, president of the Union for French Democracy, said he would meet with Chirac today.

"We want to assume our responsibilities together," Lecanuet said, adding that he would have no difficulty "supporting Mr. Jacques Chirac in the post of premier if the leader of the RPR is a candidate."

Lecanuet and Fabius say they have no intention of forming an alliance with Jean-Marie Le Pen's National Front.

Le Pen said his party had achieved its main goal by "defeating the Communist Party." His statement was made when early projections gave his party a higher vote percentage than the Communists.

Communist Party leader Georges Marchais said the results were "bad for the world of the worker, poor families, for France."

Socialist leaders warned during the campaign that if the right took control of the Assembly, it would lead to chaos. Mitterrand said "disorder" could result.

More survivors pulled from collapsed hotel

SINGAPORE (AP) — Rescuers today pulled out two more survivors trapped in the wreckage of a collapsed six-story hotel, and said they had heard the voices of "many" others buried under the rubble for two days.

"Since survivors are being brought out we are now more hopeful," said Lim Siam Kim, operations director of the Home Affairs Ministry.

"Many voices have been heard and we are trying to establish contact with them," Lim said, adding that rescue teams mainly were trying to reach the basement where there were signs of life.

The 67-room Hotel New World fell Saturday, and authorities said today they still had not determined why.

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew announced that a high court judge will head a commission of inquiry into the incident. "The collapse of such a building is unprecedented. There were no apparent reasons," Lee said in a statement.

Officials earlier today had estimated that 39 people still were missing. Eleven people were known to have died; and 13 had been rescued, five of whom had been treated and released from hospitals.

No Americans were known to have been in the hotel, in Singapore's "Little India" quarter, when it collapsed.

Lim told reporters the two survivors were flown by helicopter to a hospital where they were listed in stable condition.

They were identified as two men from Singapore — Cheong Cheng Guan and Boey Mun Wai, both bank employees and about 30 years old. Details of their rescue were not immediately available.

The search teams had lost touch with survivors for several hours after several tunnels collapsed and blocked approach routes, or proved to be dead ends. Officials said the trapped survivors were in the basement level.

Cranes and other heavy equipment were idle today and no rescue workers climbed atop the debris, as efforts concentrated on burrowing carefully toward those trapped.

"Because of the activity on top there was vibration and a wall collapsed," Lim said.

He said sensitive electronic equipment was being lowered into crevices and appeals in several languages transmitted through it for survivors to make their positions known. The rescuers had not determined the identities of the survivors.

An army doctor, Lt. Col. Lim Meng Kin, said he crawled into the wreckage to treat one survivor who was trapped under the steel door of a bank vault.

Two blacks killed in South African violence

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said today that two blacks were killed and six were injured in violence in black townships across South Africa, and prison officials reported one black died and 40 were hurt in a prison riot.

However, there were no reports of violence at gold mines today following weekend violence in which 14 black miners died and more than 240 were injured.

Two blacks also had been killed over the weekend in Jouberton, southwest of Johannesburg. Authorities said the police there opened fire when their vehicle was firebombed by rioters.

Police said today they responded with shotgun fire, killing a man and wounding five others, when their vehicle was stoned by a crowd of blacks Sunday night in a black district of the south coast resort town of Knysna.

At Letsitele, a township near Tzaneen in the Northern Transvaal, a black man was shot dead Sunday night when a stone-throwing crowd surrounded a white farmer's car, police said. They said they were investigating who fired the shot.

According to unofficial figures more than 1,200 people, almost all of them black, have been killed in 18 months of unrest against apartheid, South Africa's system of racial segregation. About two-thirds of them have been killed by riot patrols, and the remainder have been killed in fighting among blacks.

A limpet mine blew up in a trash can Sunday night outside the Indian Affairs building in Springs, near Johannesburg, seriously injuring a black man, police said. There was no claim of responsibility, but limpet mines are favorite weapons of guerrillas fighting for black rule in South Africa.

A black inmate was killed and 40 injured Sunday night in a brawl at Baberton Prison east of Johannesburg, the Prisons Service said. Spokesman Abri Van Vuuren said the fight broke out during mealtime, but the cause was still being investigated.

In Durban, a bus being chased by a police car crashed through a barrier and plunged down a ravine, injuring more than 40 blacks, three of them seriously, police said.

Police chased the bus after a traveler who got off reported the driver was threatening passengers with a gun. Police said the gun later turned out to be a ticket-puncher. They said the driver fled the scene of the accident.

Officials at Blyvooruitzicht mine 45 miles west of Johannesburg said all 7,000 dayshift workers returned to their jobs today.

Seven miners were killed and 176 were injured Friday night in fighting between rival factions, and by gunfire from riot squads, mine officials said. Management fired 160 miners last week after they refused to return to work following a strike.

Another seven miners were killed and 67 injured in fighting between rival tribes Saturday night and early Sunday at Vaal Reefs Mine 95 miles southwest of Johannesburg, the company said. The cause of the fight was not clear.

Bomb rips through French train

BRUNOY, France (AP) — A bomb ripped through one car of an eight-car passenger train bound from Paris to Lyon today, injuring nine people, officials said.

Seven of the injured were reported in serious condition, authorities said.

Rescue squads removed the injured at the station in Brunoy, where the train was at a standstill.

The state-run railroad authority, the SNCF, said the bomb went off 12 minutes after the train left Paris at 3 p.m. The bomb had been placed in the baggage area at the end of a passenger car, SNCF reported.

Officials said the explosion occurred just before the train arrived in Brunoy, in the Essone region south of Paris. The highspeed train had been bound for Lyon, a two-hour trip.

The explosion occurred in the sixth car of the train, officials said.

WHEN SOME EMPLOYEES TAKE TIME OFF THEY MAKE NEWS.

They're rescuing American citizens on the tiny island of Grenada.

They're relieving the regular crew on the USS New Jersey stationed off Lebanon so they can come home for Christmas.

They're patroling the East Coast's air corridor to keep it clear of intruders.

That's how they make news as volunteers in the National Guard and Reserve.

One weekend a month and at least two weeks a year, they take time off from their family lives and jobs to train. But they need more than time off.

They need your assurance they won't lose out on promotions and raises. They need all the support you can give them.

But then, they deserve nothing less. The Guard and Reserve makes up a full one third of our nation's defense, which means without them, we'd be substantially weaker.

If you want to find out what some of your employees do with their time off, now you know at least one place to look. The newspaper.

Protect their future while they protect yours.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

"Shom-pee-YOHN's" Superior Spark Plug

One day in 1909 while Mr. Durant (Founder of General Motors) was in Boston on Buick Business he was called on by a bald, mourtached salesman. The Salesman explained first to Mr. Durant that he liked to have his name pronounced "shom-pee-YOHN" in the fashion of his native Paris. The product that this salesman would offer was one that would start a long tradition of A. C. auto parts for General Motors.

Albert Champion was in the habit of appearing in the unofficial headquarters of the auto industry to demonstrate his spark plugs. The barroom of the Pontchartrain was the place where Champion would assemble his elaborate electrical set to demonstrate the superiority of his porcelain plugs. Champion had become interested in good engine performance and developed his spark plug because of a brief career in auto racing.

Eventually Albert found backers for his plug who set him up as director of the Albert Champion Company in Boston.

Mr. Durant was so impressed with the plugs that Champion had designed and produced that he offered to set him up in Flint with a guarantee for a market for every plug Champion could produce. The offer was accepted and until 1912 these superior plugs were produced in a corner of the Buick automobile plant.

When Champion joined Durant the owners of the Albert Champion Company refused to let them use this name for the new venture. Therefore a new name was chosen, the Champion Ignition Company of Flint. Eventually the company became wholely owned by GM, and the name was changed to reflect Albert's initials, the A.C. Spark Plug Company.

BUYERS GUIDE

IMPORTANT: Spoken promises are difficult to enforce. Ask the dealer to put all promises in writing. Keep this form.

WARRANTIES FOR THIS VEHICLE:

AS IS - NO WARRANTY

YOU WILL PAY ALL COSTS FOR ANY REPAIRS. The dealer assumes no responsibility for any repairs regardless of any oral statements about the vehicle.

DOWN PAYMENTS STARTING AS LOW AS $399.00*

WARRANTY

FULL LIMITED WARRANTY. The dealer will pay ___% of the labor and 100 ___% of the parts for the covered system during the warranty period. Ask the dealer for a copy of the warranty document for a complete statement of warranty coverage, exclusions, and the dealer's repair obligation. Implied warranties may give you even more rights.

SYSTEMS COVERED	DURATION
Engine System: All internal parts including harmonic balancer, oil pan, manifolds, oil pump, water pump, fan and fan clutch, engine mounts, flywheel, eccentric shaft and bearings (all parts of a rotary engine except seals and gaskets)	3 Months or 3,000 Miles Limited Warranty (whichever comes first)
Automatic or Manual Transaxle/Transfer Case System: All internal parts contained within the transmission/transaxle/transfer case housing (except seals and gaskets). Torque converter case (Coverage limited to the above listed parts.)	3 Months or 3,000 Miles Limited Warranty (whichever comes first)
Drive Axle: Front and Rear: All internally lubricated parts in the drive axle housing (front and rear) and constant velocity or universal joints (Coverage limited to the above listed parts.)	3 Months or 3,000 Miles Limited Warranty (whichever comes first)

A REPRESENTATIVE TO PROVIDE YOU ALL OF THE DETAILS OF THIS CONTINUOUS SATISFACTION™ LIMITED WARRANTY PROGRAM.

SERVICE CONTRACTS: A service contract is available at an extra charge on this vehicle. Ask for details as to coverage, deductible, price, and exclusions. If you buy a service contract within 90 days of the time of sale, state law "implies" that certain promises may give you additional rights.

PRE PURCHASE INSPECTION: ASK THE DEALER IF YOU MAY HAVE THIS VEHICLE INSPECTED BY YOUR MECHANIC EITHER ON OR OFF THE LOT.

SEE THE BACK OF THIS FORM for important additional information, including a list of some major defects that may occur in used motor vehicles.
