Parks design firm is recommended

Scurry County Parks & Recreation Director Scott Crenwelge recommended a firm to the county commissioners this morning for the renovations to Towle Park through the Texas Parks & Wildlife grant.

Crenwelge told a called meeting of the commissioners' court that he is recommending KDC-Turner Partners for the project.

The firm comes with an impressive list of clients, said Crenwelge.

"Another good thing about this company is that they are very familiar with the area west of Abilene."

The firm has offices in Midland, Lubbock and Amarillo.

Founding partner of the company is Kelly Cook and he would be overseeing the local project, said Crenwelge.

"Mr. Cook said he would be in Snyder every Wednesday to check on the progress," said Crenwelge.

Among the projects the company has recently worked on is the Memorial Gardens constructed in Odessa at a cost of $1.3 million.

Presently, the company is in the process of designing and constructing seven new neighborhood parks and 15 new playgrounds in Lubbock. Cost of this project is $3.25 million.

Some other park projects the company has been involved in is the Mitchell County Sports Complex in Colorado City, UT-Permian Basin Park in Odessa, plus the nine-hole addition to the Hogan Municipal Golf Course in Midland.

Some other park projects were in Jal, N.M., Big Lake and Ft. Davis.

The firm also has worked extensively with Texas Tech University on several projects including Jones SBC Stadium football training facility, Marsha Sharpe Center for Student Athletes and the Museum of Natural History and Jones Auditorium.

It has also completed numerous projects in various other cities to include Austin, Amarillo, Ft. Worth and Canyon.

Crenwelge said he would like to begin negotiations with the company next week with representatives of the department, parks advisory committee and two commissioners.

Crenwelge added that all work in the parks now must be under the supervision of licensed personnel as called for in the TP&W grant.

Crenwelge also said the land donated by the Hatter family to the county will be surveyed Monday.

"We had originally talked about 40 acres being donated, it is now around 70," said Crenwelge.

Crenwelge also said he had been in contact with the Texas Department of Transportation about additional grants to make improvements on property that fronts state highways.

"They are 50-50 grants for areas such as to the entrance of Towle Park and to the coliseum from Coliseum Dr.," said Crenwelge.

The commissioners also received a report on the condition of the air conditioning system at Scurry County Coliseum.

Coliseum worker Larry Thompson said he felt the present unit is only operating at 25 percent of its capacity.

"We've been told by some companies that a new system would cut our utility bills by some 30 percent," added Thompson.

"This present system is just not working," said Thompson, noting the units ran 24 hours per day during the last Western Swing Festival and still was not able to make the facility comfortable to participants.

Precinct 1 Commissioner Ralph Trevey told Thompson that he wanted the department to get recommendations from companies that provide air cooled units, as well as water cooled.

Thompson said he felt the long-range costs of water-cooled units would be prohibitive, but would check into both systems.

County Judge Rod Waller presided at the 40-minute meeting this morning and commissioners in attendance were Trevey, Howard Limmer, Jerry House and Chloanne Lindsey.

Bush ends Asia-Australia trip

HONOLULU (AP) — President Bush ended a whirlwind tour of Asia and Australia just as he began it: raising money for his own 2004 re-election campaign.

Bush stopped for 12 hours in Hawaii on his way back to Washington, taking a tour of Pearl Harbor, visiting an elementary school, catching up on the World Series in his hotel room, meeting with Pacific island leaders and attending a fund-raising dinner that added $600,000 to his campaign coffers.

"After eight days and 18,000 miles in the air, it's great to be back in America," Bush told contributors Thursday. "I visited with some of our strongest allies in the war on terror, some of the nation's most important trading partners. We made progress on a broad agenda."

His tour of six Eastern Hemisphere nations wrapped up, the president and first lady Laura Bush stepped off Marine One onto the sunny White House lawn this morning for a layover of a few hours before heading to Camp David for a weekend rest.

Bush has a light schedule for Monday and Tuesday, then plans to hit the road for a burst of heavy fund-raising travel through Ohio, Mississippi, Kentucky and Alabama, White House officials said.

THE SDN COLUMN

MY TURN

by Wade Warren

Every kid should have spent some time growing up in an oil company camp.

We all got along prety good, and we were like one big family.

We lived about seven years beginning around five years old in the Humble Oil and Refining Co. camp of Kemper Station and the memories of those days are as fresh as ever.

Kemper Station is located southwest of Big Lake some six or seven miles and was a pumping station for Humble Pipeline before it closed down.

Almost every kid attended Big Lake schools, but I remember one whose parents drove him to Rankin schools every day.

We never knew why, and we never asked, and really didn't care. When we all got home from school, we just went about our business of having the run of the camp.

There were about 24 houses in the camp and they all looked about alike, inside and out.

The only exceptions were the houses on the north side of the camp where two families shared a common garage. This is where the supervisors lived. These houses were also closest to the Kemper Golf Course — three or four holes with "greens" made out of oil-soaked sand.

This "golf course" was off limits to us kids because the only time I remember we were all in real trouble was when we used our bikes to make neat — we thought — designs in the sand.

Otherwise, Kemper Station was ours.

A draw ran behind our house but the only time it filled up was when it rained hard around Texon.

That wasn't often, but it was not a problem. We all learned quickly how to dam up an offshoot of the draw for a real swimming hole.

No one drowned in it, and as far as we know, no one got sick from swimming in it although most of the time we had to use a stick to spread out the moss before going for a swim.

That is, unless we could get Henrietta to jump in first.

Henrietta was, uh...big for her age. And despite warnings from our parents, we all did make fun of her sometimes. Nothing real malicious, at least we didn't think so. After all, we were just kids.

We let Henrietta join our activities but she had to pay the price — such as clearing out the moss in the swimming hole with just one cannonball, or providing refreshments for a hike through the tank farm.

We suppose she was the unofficial refreshment chairman of our group because her mom was more than happy to provide Cokes and candy for our jaunts just so we all would let Henrietta go with us.

A lot of times we would even let Henrietta lead our hikes out in the country.

Be sure and watch out for rattlesnakes Henrietta, was the warning we gave her as we all headed toward Benedum Field and the site of some Indian burns.

A few years ago, we learned that Henrietta had committed suicide only a few years out of high school.

If you know a Henrietta, we have a little advice — be nicer to her than we were to ours.

E. Texans could lose their land

SAND FLAT (AP) — Dozens of East Texas residents could lose their property if a government agency declares the land is state-owned because of discrepancies in 1835 surveys.

"We've all been paying taxes for years to own the property," Eddie McFarland told the Tyler Morning Telegraph.

"If they deem this land as belonging to the state, we'll all lose our property."

Depending on future rulings from the Texas General Land Office and state district courts, this may or may not be true.

Smith County residents believe the entire L-shaped strip of land that was surveyed, just over 992 acres, is being disputed. The strip lies east of Tyler State Park and Farm-to-Market Road 14 in the Sand Flat community.

It is part of four surveys made in 1835 that include the Maria de los Angeles Carmona, the Felix Flores, the Maria Gertrudis Estrada and the Pedro del Rio surveys.

"They mapped out 992 acres," Tyler attorney John Minton, who represents an oil company with mineral interests in the area, said Thursday.

The land office is required by law to review the survey application and decide whether the land and its minerals do indeed belong to the people who have been living there for years or to the state of Texas.

"The land vacancy issue in the state of Texas is a real confusing issue," said La Nell Asten, GLO assistant chief clerk. "It's been happening in Texas for more than a century."

She said land surveys of the state are like a patchwork quilt because through the years, property has been claimed by Spain, Mexico, the Republic of Texas and now the state of Texas.

Because there were so many different surveyors, gaps were left in between the original surveys and professional vacancy hunters in the 1900s began trying to stake claims on the land.

Concorde's final flight scheduled

The Concorde, the skinny, needle-nosed 20th-century icon of international jet-setters for nearly three decades, was scheduled to take off this morning from John F. Kennedy International Airport on its final flight home to London.

"Everyone has enormous pride in all that she has achieved, but there is inevitable sadness that we have to move on and say farewell," British Airways chairman Lord Marshall said before Concorde's swan song. "The decision to retire Concorde was a tough one, but it is the right thing to do at the right time."

The Concorde, a joint project of the British and French governments, began commercial service in January 1976. The technological marvel and the ultimate symbol of jet-set glamour flew 11 miles above the Earth at up to 1,350 mph, crossing the Atlantic in about 3 1/2 hours. With the five-hour time difference, passengers arrived in New York earlier than they had left London.

The British and French hoped to sell hundreds, but in the end only 16 were built. They were used by British Airways and Air France.

Last April, both airlines announced they would be retiring the Concorde. Air France had its last flight in May.

Despite the glamor and social cachet attributed to the plane, which resembles a giant eagle poised to pounce on prey, it was a financial dud. With fares of more than $9,000 for a trans-Atlantic round trip — well above the first-class fare on a Boeing 747 — it remained a luxury for a wealthy few.

Today's passengers will be invited guests of the airline and were expected to include actress Joan Collins and supersonic frequent flier Sir David Frost.

The man at the controls of today's flight was expected to be Capt. Michael Bannister, British Airways' chief Concorde pilot, who estimated he has logged 8,000 hours and about 8 million miles — the equivalent of 16 round trips to the moon — since he began flying the supersonic jets in 1997.

"There's a little sadness," Bannister said in a telephone interview on the eve of his flight. "What we've tried to do is make the retirement of the Concorde a celebration. It's something we'd like to do with the style and grace and elegance befitting this majestic aircraft."

He said one of his most memorable flights aboard the Concorde came last year during the celebration of Queen Elizabeth II's golden jubilee, marking 50 years on the throne. Bannister flew alongside Royal Air Force aces as they soared over Buckingham Palace.

"There were a million people down below," he gushed. "To see a million people, all waving and cheering, was a very memorable moment."

Bannister said the superlatives accorded the jetliner are deserved.

"The ability to buy back time, to travel at the edge of space and fly faster than the Earth rotates, the opportunity to be in two places at once — the designers were brilliant," he said.

More than 300 illegals seized in raids on Wal-Marts stores

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Wal-Mart had direct knowledge of immigration violations involving its cleaning contractors at stores across the country, federal law enforcement sources said.

Federal agents raided Wal-Mart's headquarters and 60 of its stores across the nation Thursday, arresting more than 300 illegal workers in an immigration crackdown at the world's biggest retailer.

The workers were members of cleaning crews hired by outside contractors, but federal law enforcement officials who spoke on the condition of anonymity said Wal-Mart knew of the violations. They cited recordings of meetings and conversations among Wal-Mart executives, managers and contractors.

"We have seen no evidence of this from the INS, and, if that turns out to be true, we will cooperate fully with law enforcement officials," Wal-Mart spokeswoman Mona Williams said.

The workers were arrested as they finished their night shifts at Wal-Mart stores in 21 states. Agents also hauled away several boxes of documents from an executive's office at Wal-Mart headquarters in Bentonville.

An employer can face civil and criminal penalties for knowingly hiring illegal immigrants or failing to comply with certain employee recordkeeping regulations.

Wal-Mart Stores had sales last year of $244.5 billion. The company has about 1.1 million employees in the United States, and it uses more than 100 third-party contractors to clean more than 700 stores nationwide, Williams said.

"We require each of these contractors to use only legal workers," she said.

The law enforcement sources said the investigation grew out of earlier probes of Wal-Mart cleaning crew contractors in 1998 and 2001.

All the arrested workers were in the country illegally, said Garrison Courtney, a spokesman with Immigration and Customs Enforcement. They were detained at local immigration offices. Those who had no criminal record were released with instructions to appear before immigration judges.

Wal-Mart is not the first big company to be targeted in an immigration investigation. Six managers at Tyson Foods, based one town away from Wal-Mart in Springdale, were charged in an immigrant-smuggling case in 2001.

One defendant shot himself to death a few months after being charged, and two managers entered guilty pleas early in the case. A jury acquitted the poultry company and three other managers.

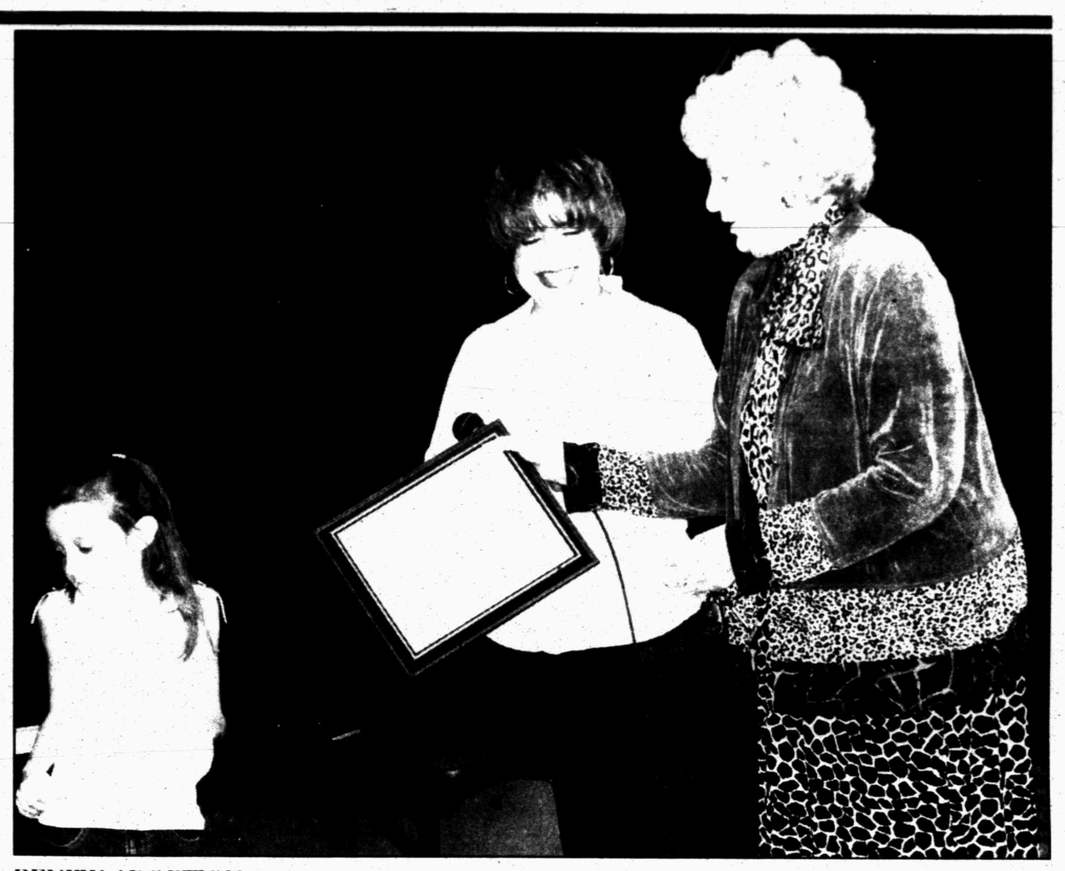

Ulysses A. Yannas, an analyst with the investment firm Buckman, Buckman and Reid, said it is too much to expect Wal-Mart to keep track of all of its vendors' workers. But he said the investigation could present a problem for the company.

"It is a question of what else it might bring out. These are long, drawn-out processes," Yannas said.

Top Wal-Mart officials learned of Thursday's sweep when store managers began calling headquarters for guidance in dealing with the raids.

Courtney said agents searched the office of one of Wal-Mart's executives. Williams, the spokeswoman, said they spent several hours in the office of a "mid-level manager" at Wal-Mart's headquarters and carried away several boxes of paperwork.

She said she did not know if any other Wal-Mart administrative offices were searched.

Tower of the Americas renovation planned

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The tower which has dominated this Central Texas city's skyline since 1968 is getting a facelift, including a high-end restaurant atop the 750-foot structure and other attractions for tourists.

A four-month contracting process that aims to transform the Tower of the Americas is scheduled to begin next week.

The needlelike structure offering panoramic views of the city is "underperforming," according to Fessel International, a consultant hired to evaluate the tower's needs. The report concluded that restaurant sales are below the national average and the tower lacks the offerings of comparable city attractions such as Reunion Tower in Dallas and the Seattle Space Needle.

The City Council completed its second review Thursday of new contracting requirements for the San Antonio tower.

The aging structure also needs structural improvements. The city has $200,000 set aside for the most pressing concerns and is seeking $1.6 million through a November bond issue for additional upgrades, but the new contractor also will be asked to pitch in.

Your Birthday

Saturday, Oct. 25, 2003

Two of your greatest assets in the year ahead will be your ability to make new friends and your willingness to seek out new horizons. Both will open up broader vistas that will benefit you in many areas of your life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Even though you may have preferences as to what you would like to do today, go along with a new activity that others want to try. Chances are it'll turn out to be more fun than you imagined.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Doing something nice for those you love will give you the greatest degree of pleasure today. Individuals to whom you cater now will put themselves out for you down the line.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Don't worry about how much others can do for you today. Instead, think about what you can do for them. More important, actually do something about it. What you give will come back tenfold.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Extra material gains are possible today, especially if you are strongly motivated to try something new. Once you get your teeth into it, there will be no holding you back.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Your words carry far more weight then usual today, so be sure to use them wisely and for something you can develop. Polices you set into motion today will pick up great momentum.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — So many kind gestures may be extended to you today that you may be wondering, what's up? Actually, it's all those seeds you've planted along the way that are starting to bear fruit.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You're an exceptionally sharp negotiator today, but much to your credit, you won't take advantage of those weaker than you. Your fairness and honesty will be recognized and repaid.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Give vent to your intellectual impulses today and you should have an exceptionally rewarding day. For extra dividends, band associates together who are also sharp on their feet.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — While at a social gathering today, it'll be to your advantage to draw out those who are not usually the center of attention. They have much to offer and will appreciate what you do for them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Share today's festivities with someone new who has just come into your life. You won't only be cultivating a good friend, but will be adding fresh thinking into the fold.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Good intentions always count for little, so make your actions really matter today. Don't let any opportunity slip past you where you can fulfill a promise you've made to another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Conditions become exceptionally favorable today in situations where you are willing to share with others that which you've gained. Ironically, unselfishness assures returns.

'Naughty Girl Bandit' surrenders to FBI

A woman dubbed the "Naughty Girl Bandit" is suspected in a string of bank robberies in Southern California in August, the FBI said. Nineteen-year-old Candice Dionne Gist turned herself in on Monday.

Authorities said the woman was responsible for bank robberies in Cerritos, Chino Hills and Fullerton during a one-hour period on Aug. 20. She also is believed to have robbed a Washington Mutual branch in Westminster on Aug. 23, and a Bank of America branch in Anaheim on Aug. 29, Bosley said.

Authorities said the woman usually gave a note to the teller and showed the butt end of a handgun in her purse.

Marlins push Yankees to the brink

MIAMI (AP) — Brad Penny bounded off the mound, pumping his fist like crazy. His celebration may have been a bit premature, but he had the right idea.

The Florida Marlins — yes, the same Marlins who seemed headed toward a last-place finish back in late May — are one win away from the World Series crown.

Cool, confident and a little bit cocky, the wild-card Marlins made the banged-up and bumbling New York Yankees look like anything but champions in Game 5.

Penny won for the second time in the Series and contributed a two-run single, Alex Gonzalez struck again with his Hall of Fame-bound bat and the Marlins won 6-4 Thursday night to seize a 3-2 lead.

"I think the whole country now really sees what kind of players these guys are," Marlins manager Jack McKeon said.

Down early 6-1, the Yankees didn't quit. But when Bernie Williams' bid for a tying two-run homer in the ninth was caught a few feet from the wall, their best chance was gone.

"We haven't been down this road many times," Yankees manager Joe Torre said.

Now, it's come to this: The Marlins, with ample pitching options, head back to Yankee Stadium with two chances to win the second title in their short, little lives.

McKeon did not announce his starter for Game 6 Saturday night. He hinted that he might use ace Josh Beckett on three days' rest though Mark Redman, the Game 2 loser, remains in the mix.

"We've got to stay tough. They ain't going to hand it to us," Beckett said. "We came back on the Cubs, we've seen it, we've been on that side of it. We need to bear down and try to win that first game."

Game 2 winner Andy Pettitte will be asked to save New York's season. He's done well in big spots before, and is tied with John Smoltz for the most postseason wins ever with 13.

This will mark the first time since 1981 that the Yankees faced elimination at home in the World Series. That year, the Los Angeles Dodgers finished them off in Game 6.

The sellout crowd of 65,975 at Pro Player Stadium pulsated all evening as Florida moved to the brink of an amazing upset. One man paid tribute in his own way — in the late innings, he ran across the entire outfield wearing only a Marlins cap.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner could merely shake his head after seeing this sudden reversal of fortune. The Boss' club looked like a shell of itself, hardly the caliber of team that has won four of the last seven championships.

Slumping Alfonso Soriano was benched, Jason Giambi was hurt and starter David Wells left after one inning with an injury, leaving a lineup more suited to play Tampa Bay in June than Florida in October. Giambi hit a home run in the ninth as a pinch hitter to make it 6-3.

"You've got to be able to capitalize on that. And we were able to do it," Florida first baseman Derrek Lee said.

Earlier this week, after Mike Mussina sent the Yankees to their second straight 6-1 win in Game 3, it looked as if they might simply overwhelm the Marlins and take the title in Miami. At least, it might have appeared that way to anyone who had never seen Florida.

Not anymore, not after Florida won in extra innings in Game 4 after blowing a lead in the ninth and then held on in its final home game of the season.

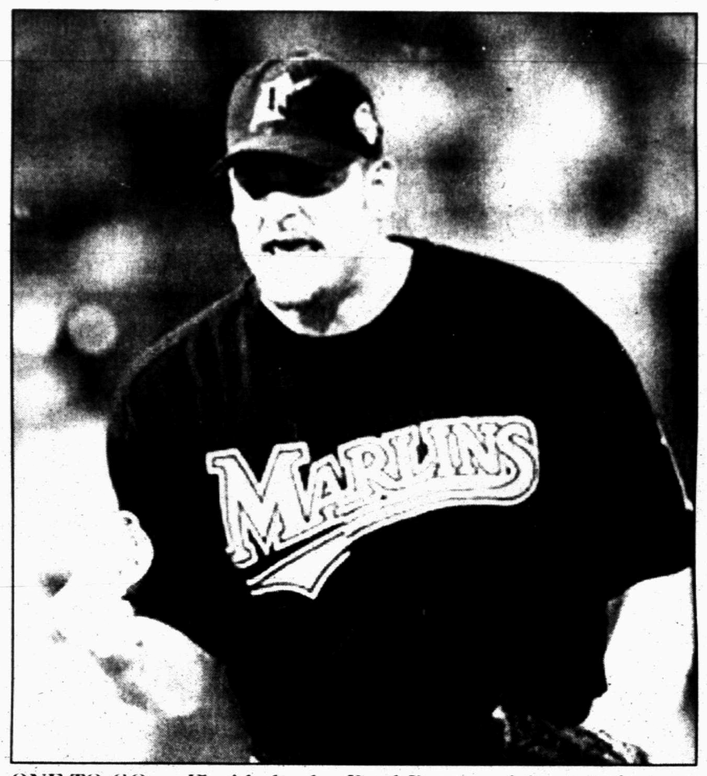

Penny mowed down the Yankees for seven innings, featuring a fastball that reached 99 mph and giving up one earned run. He also took the opener, an impressive week for a guy who went 14-10 this year and lost his rotation spot in the NLCS after a bad outing.

Penny returned in relief in that series, though, and won Game 7 as the Marlins capped their comeback from a 3-1 deficit against Chicago.

"The NLCS, I had a bad day," Penny said. "I'm just glad they gave me another chance to go out there."

A .143 career hitter, Penny's single off losing pitcher Jose Contreras made it 3-1 in the third, an inning keyed by Gonzalez's RBI double. Gonzalez was the star in Game 4 with a 12th-inning homer for a 4-3 victory.

Bothered by an apparent blister, Penny gave up an RBI single to Derek Jeter in the seventh. Trailing 6-2, New York went on to load the bases with two outs before Williams hit a routine fly that got Penny excited.

ONE TO GO — Florida hurler Brad Penny celebrates after getting the final out in the seventh inning Thursday. The Marlins topped the Yankees, 6-4, to take a 3-2 lead. The series shifts back to New York Saturday. (AP Photo)

Woods sets PGA record for cuts at Funai Classic

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Tiger Woods took the suspense out of his bid to tie the PGA Tour record for consecutive cuts.

Woods made it look simple Thursday with a 6-under 66 on the Palm course. The bogey-free round left him three strokes behind Brenden Pappas in the Funai Classic at Disney, and poised to match Byron Nelson's 55-year-old record of consistency.

Woods also is aiming for a record fifth straight PGA Tour money title, but that might not be so easy.

Singh, who is second on the money list by $171,239, is playing the best golf of his career and has become a regular atop the leaderboard with top 10 finishes in seven of his last eight tournaments.

The big Fijian had an 8-under 64 on the traditionally tougher Magnolia course, leaving him in a tie for second with Pat Perez and two-time Disney winner John Huston.

Rocco Mediate, Dan Forsman and David Peoples were another stroke back.

WTC starts strong at Tech

Clay Long held the top spot in calf roping after the first go with a time of 8.3.

Clay Bunney currently is in second place in the bareback riding competition, scoring a 73 on his first ride. Jake Marshall notched a 62 for fourth place.

Head coach Greg Rhodes said Jared Bailey had a great bull ride in his initial performance Thursday, earning a 75 for second place in that event.

Tara Woodall used a time of 15.27 for second place in barrel racing, while teammates Cydni Terry and Ashley Hadley sit in third and sixth, respectively, in the same competition.

Terry recorded a time of 15.38, while Hadley posted a 15.69. Hadley also holds the seventh spot in breakaway roping after one round, with a 3.8.

"Our barrel racers did well," Rhodes said. "It's early, but those times should hold."

Saddle bronc rider Guy Simonton was in fifth with a 67, while Erin Anglin and Patrick Hawthorne finished with a time of 8.7 in team roping, good enough for ninth place.

The Tech rodeo is scheduled to run through Saturday.

Bulldogs look to clinch playoff berth tonight

The Ira Bulldogs (6-1, 2-0) will get a boost from the return of starting running back Jess Wall when they take on Loraine (5-2, 1-1) tonight in a District 8 six-man match-up.

Wall suffered a dislocated elbow in the Trent game two weeks ago, and head coach Toby Goodwin thought Wall would be inactive for at least three weeks.

"It was a pleasant shock to us that he came back so soon," he said. "It's still sore, and he practiced Tuesday in a brace. We'll see what we can do."

Joel Lollar and Caleb Gutierrez, who have filled in for Wall during his two-week absence, will still see significant time, Goodwin said.

"Getting Jess back really picked up their spirits. It's helped the kids. They have had it in the back of their minds. Caleb and Joel represented well when we were without him, but we are glad he is back."

Ira got bad news, as well, this week, when it was learned that Justin Taylor injured his hip flexor. Goodwin said Taylor would suit up for the Loraine game, but his status is "highly doubtful" for the contest.

The Bulldogs routed Westbrook, 61-13, in one half of football last Friday, and a win tonight coupled with a Hermleigh loss to Westbrook would clinch a playoff berth for the Bulldogs.

"We are approaching this as a playoff game," Goodwin said. "You can't underestimate them, but we feel like we can out-position them skill-wise. We are ready to get on the field."

JV stomps Seminole

Urbano Hernandez scored four touchdowns and ran in two conversions to lift the junior varsity Tigers over Seminole, 46-6, Thursday.

Hernandez added a conversion run after Matt Reigh hit Jeremy Torrez with a 3-yard touchdown pass on Snyder's first possession.

After a Seminole score, the junior Tigers responded with a 7-yard run by Hernandez, who also ran in the 2-point conversion to give Snyder a 16-6 edge.

Chris Smith's 5-yard scoring dive, followed by a Jonathan Gonzales conversion run, gave the Tigers a 24-6.

Hernandez scored his second touchdown with 15 seconds left in the first half, as Snyder ran a flea-flicker that resulted in a 49-yard touchdown pass from Reigh to give the Tigers a 30-6 halftime lead.

Dustin Williams hit Hernandez for his third touchdown on a 40-yard bomb on the Tigers' first second-half possession. Johnny Vasquez added the conversion.

Hernandez closed out the scoring on a 10-yard touchdown sprint, and Williams hit Barrett Bowlin on the conversion for the 46-6 win.

"They are having fun and believing they can win every game," junior varsity coach Charles Bollinger said. "It's becoming a habit. The offense is putting up points and the defense is playing hard and aggressive."

The Snyder freshmen suffered a 52-8 loss to Seminole Thursday.

Mizzou hopes to keep up with Red Raiders

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — For Missouri coach Gary Pinkel, the Texas Tech game plan is simple.

"They get the ball and they just score, score, score," said Pinkel, whose Tigers (5-2, 1-2 Big 12) host the Red Raiders (5-2, 2-1) Saturday in their homecoming game at Faurot Field.

"I don't think there's a trick there. You just want to make sure you have more points at the end of the game than they do."

The arrival of Texas Tech means Missouri will be facing the nation's No. 1 scoring offense for the second straight week. No. 1 Oklahoma held the top spot entering last week's game against Missouri, a game the Sooners won 34-13.

But Texas Tech took over as the offensive leader after a 51-49 loss to Oklahoma State. The Red Raiders are averaging 47.1 points per game.

Texas Tech also leads the nation in total offense with 627 yards per game as well as in passing offense, with 524 yards per game.

Most of Texas Tech's yardage comes from 5- to 7-yard routes between the linebackers and defensive backs. But once the defense starts playing up, they'll throw it deep for big plays.

B.J. Symons leads the nation in five passing categories, including yards with 3,506 and touchdowns with 32. He's averaging a nation-best 513.6 yards per game of total offense.

ROUND ROCK (AP) — The Round Rock Express, owned by Hall of Fame pitcher Nolan Ryan and his family, announced it will buy the Edmonton Trappers of the Triple-A Pacific Coast League and move the team to Texas for the 2005 season.

The Triple-A club will take the Round Rock Express name and will stay in the 16-team Pacific Coast League. The Trappers are under contract with the Montreal Expos until the end of the 2004 minor league season.

Reid Ryan, Nolan Ryan's son and president of the Express, said the current Texas League Double-A club, affiliated with the Houston Astros, will be moved to Corpus Christi under a new name.

Romanowski placed on IR

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Oakland Raiders linebacker Bill Romanowski was placed on injured reserve. Romanowski, 37, missed the last four games after a series of concussions. He will remain with the Raiders for the rest of the season as a defensive adviser, coach Bill Callahan said.

Dr. Gott

By Peter Gott, M.D.

Hallucinations and sleep disorders

DEAR DR. GOTT: Your comments about a young man who sees ghostly figures may have fallen short. You indicated that he probably has a psychiatric disorder with secondary hallucinations. I would like to suggest that he may have a physical basis: "hypnagogic hallucinations," which may be a symptom of narcolepsy or other sleep disorders. It consists of vivid or scary visions and sounds, usually experienced while falling asleep or awakening. You might want to mention this as part of the differential diagnosis.

DEAR READER: Hypnagogic perceptions may, as you point out, occur in the presence of sleep disorders and are experienced as "jumping" extremities or surrealistic dream sequences. People who do not have sleep disorders may occasionally experience such phenomena, too.

However, in the column you read, the man's mother was clearly concerned about "ghostly figure" hallucinations that were not associated with falling asleep or awakening. Therefore, I chose to address an alternative explanation for his problem.

Nonetheless, I appreciate your comments about sleep disorders, which are a valid health concern for those people who have them.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Sleep/Wake Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and $2 to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a male, 71, with enlarged breasts. The situation has reached the point where I am reluctant to wear T-shirts and other tight fabrics. I don't want to have surgery. Is there a medical remedy? Could alcohol consumption have any bearing?

DEAR READER: As men grow older, their breasts tend to enlarge. This is because the pectoral muscles become flabby and there is less testosterone in the system to neutralize the effects of the normal amounts of estrogen that men produce. The situation is more pronounced in overweight people. Also, alcohol can aggravate the problem because it affects the liver and interferes with the metabolism of the sex hormones. Certain tumors can cause breast enlargement.

So, if you want a non-surgical approach to breast enlargement, lose weight and stop drinking. If this strategy is unsuccessful, see your family physician to consider breast reduction surgery. In all fairness, breast enlargement in older gentlemen is so common that I doubt anyone is singling you out as a curiosity, but check with your doctor if necessary.

DEAR DR. GOTT: You have often recommended Benadryl as a sleep aid. In my case, it causes just the opposite symptoms: insomnia, nervousness and agitation. Any comments?

DEAR READER: Many medicines can cause unwanted and unusual side effects. The reason for these reactions is unknown, but they may happen in rare instances. Known as "drug idiosyncrasy," they can be troublesome. I'm sorry about your experience. However, in most people, Benadryl exerts a sedative effect and is safe to use.

The good kernels are trustworthy

There are lots of pointers that players learn, some more reliable than others. This deal features one of the key kernels of the game. How should the play go in two hearts? If the defense is perfect, which lower-level card is South going to wish he had held?

North guessed well to pass out two hearts, not pushing for a non-vulnerable game.

West cashes the ace and king of clubs, East playing high-low to show his doubleton. West continues with the club four, the lower card being a suit-preference signal asking for a diamond return. East, after ruffing, shifts to the diamond queen, covered by the king and ace. What now?

West knows that South began with six hearts (from the bidding) and three clubs (from the play). If declarer has three spades and one diamond, the contract is making. Even if West leads his fourth club and East ruffs with a heart honor, South must win three spades and five hearts.

Instead, West assumes that declarer started with at least two diamonds and cashes the diamond 10. Then, when West next leads his last club, East's ruffing with the heart jack effects an uppercut. The defenders get one heart, two diamonds, two clubs and one club ruff. But if West fails to take the diamond 10, when East trumps with the heart jack, South can discard his remaining diamond, making a loser-on-loser play. He will lose only one diamond, two clubs and two club ruffs.

When trying for an uppercut, take all possible side-suit tricks first. Then declarer will grumble about not having the diamond 10.

Madame Chiang Kai-shek dies in N.Y. at 105

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Madame Chiang Kai-shek, who became one of the world's most famous women as she helped her husband fight the Japanese during World War II and later the Chinese Communists, has died in New York. She was 105.

Madame Chiang, also known as Soong Mei-ling, had lived in semi-seclusion after President Chiang Kai-shek's death in 1975, spending much of the time in her Manhattan apartment. Her last visit to Taiwan was in 1995.

She caught a cold Wednesday and developed minor symptoms of pneumonia "before going very peacefully" at home Thursday night, said Chiang Fang Chih-yi, widow of Chiang Kai-shek's grandson Chiang Hsiao-yung.

Madame Chiang and her husband were once major political forces in the Nationalist government that ruled China before losing a civil war to the Communists in 1949 and retreating to Taiwan. But the Chiangs' influence faded fast as Taiwan shed its authoritarian past and evolved into a democracy during the past two decades.

Her supporters said she was a powerful force for international friendship, understanding and good. But her detractors called her an arrogant dragonlady and propagandist for her husband's corrupt, incompetent government.

At Nationalist headquarters in Taipei today, party spokesman Alex Tsai told reporters that Madame Chiang "beloved by the people of Taiwan, who bridged the turbulence of three centuries" died at 11:17 p.m. EDT Thursday.

Madame Chiang was born Feb. 12, 1898, on the southern Chinese island of Hainan, but she was thoroughly Western in thought and philosophy. Brought up in a Methodist family, she studied in America between the ages of 10 and 19 and graduated with honors from Wellesley College in Massachusetts in 1917.

"The only thing Oriental about me is my face," she once said.

Her family's background could stand as a brief history of modern China as seen through revolution, efforts to unify and modernize and the split between the communist People's Republic of China and the Nationalists' Republic of China.

Her father, Charles Soong, was educated as a Christian missionary at Vanderbilt University in Tennessee. Soong worked closely with Dr. Sun Yat-sen, leader of the Nationalist revolution that overthrew China's last emperor in 1911.

Madame Chiang met her husband, a disciple of Sun, around 1920, and married him on Dec. 1, 1927. She later converted him to Methodism, but their marriage was often stormy, in part because of Chiang's infidelities.

She was a working wife, taking on tasks ranging from interpreter and social worker to the head of China's air force during World War II.

Madame Chiang also was one of her husband's most prominent lobbyists in Washington. The Generalismo could not speak English and disliked dealing with foreigners, so his wife became his spokesman, creating an image of an attractive, young couple trying to steer China out of war.

In one of her most famous U.S. public appearances, she addressed the U.S. Congress in 1943 in perfect English, her slender figure dressed in a stunning black traditional Chinese dress. She tried to convince the American lawmakers that defeating Japan was more important than stopping Germany, and that U.S. forces should concentrate more on battling the Japanese in China.

After the Japanese defeat, she returned to Washington in 1948 to ask for aid to fight the Communists. But many lawmakers had given up on the corrupt and repressive Nationalist government, which eventually lost the war.

As the Generalismo's health deteriorated, control of the Nationalist government eventually passed in 1972 to one of his two sons by a previous marriage, Chiang Ching-kuo. Madame Chiang and her husband had no children of their own, and she had long been on bad terms with Chiang Ching-kuo.

After her husband's death in 1975, Madame Chiang moved to the United States.

When then-President Jimmy Carter announced that the United States was breaking off diplomatic relations with Taiwan and recognizing the Communist People's Republic of China in 1979, Madame Chiang remained in seclusion and did not comment.

The Nationalists eventually gave up the goal of retaking the mainland, and the party's ranks began to fill with native Taiwanese as the influence of the mainlanders who retreated with Chiang Kai-shek faded away.

Parents are eager for freshman to make a fresh start in life

DEAR ABBY: Our son, "Michael," is a freshman in college in New York. He is also on the football team. My wife and I traveled from Boston to see Michael's first game of the season. When we arrived, we were joined by his girlfriend, "Liz," a high school junior from our hometown, and her parents.

They stayed the entire weekend and acted like they were part of the family. Liz's dad was giving Michael "fatherly advice" and telling him they were coming back to see more games this fall. They even discussed plans for Christmas vacation. My wife and I had only about one hour alone with our son the whole time we were there.

Liz's parents were high school sweethearts and they seem to think the kids will be, too. We hinted to them that we think they are sexually active, but they insist that Liz is a virgin.

We would like Michael to enjoy his college experience with students his age on campus. We don't appreciate Liz's visits. We would like to say something about this to her parents, but we don't want to alienate Michael. What can we do? — PARENTS WITH UNWANTED VISITORS

DEAR PARENTS: Forget about talking to the parents. Have a serious talk with your son. Make absolutely certain that he recognizes the importance of birth control, as well as the necessity of finishing his education before he assumes the responsibilities of marriage. Encourage him to get involved with campus activities and meet new people. Then tell him you think Liz is a "sweetheart," but the romance is progressing at a faster pace than you're comfortable with, and that you'd like to spend more time alone with him. Be careful not to say anything negative to your son about Liz or her parents, or you could cause a backlash.

**

DEAR ABBY: I am 11. My parents are divorced. When I visit my dad's house, he always takes his telephone calls outside. I'm not allowed to answer the phone or be in the same room when he checks his e-mail. I love my father, but I'm scared to talk to him about this because he has a temper.

What do you think is going on? — CONFUSED IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR CONFUSED: It's sad that you are so intimidated by your father that you are afraid to talk to him. Since I don't know him, I cannot say for sure what's going on. However, let me say this: Sometimes when a person keeps something a "secret," it can make it appear more mysterious than it actually is. The subject applies to a lot of parents, so clip this column and hand it to your father. He needs to see it. Perhaps it will help to bridge the communication gap.

DEAR ABBY: I am grieving. My beloved shih tzu, Pretzel, died unexpectedly last Thursday. She was with me for nine wonderful years. I am so grief-stricken I can barely function. I have no children, and Pretzel meant the world to me.

My problem is well-meaning family members and friends who are pressuring me to get another dog. My Pretzel has not been gone for a week, and these people keep asking me for details about her death and saying, "When will you get another one?"

How can I get them to let me grieve in peace? — HURTING IN L.A.

DEAR HURTING: Tell your friends and family you know they mean well, but it's too soon to discuss the details or consider getting another dog. They need to be reminded that dogs, like people, have special qualities and personalities that make them unique. They are not interchangeable, any more than people are.

Pledges at donor conference will fall short

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Nudged by the United States, donors came through today with pledges big and small for Iraq but were falling short of the estimated $56 billion needed to rebuild the country.

While big spenders such as Japan and Saudi Arabia pledged more than some expected, much of it was in the form of loans or credits for a nation already burdened with an estimated $120 billion in debt run up during Saddam Hussein's rule.

"All of us are here today to make a strategic investment in hope," Secretary of State Colin Powell told delegates from 77 countries. "Now is the time for all of us to be generous with money, with training, with opportunity."

Before the conference ended, countries and international lenders had pledged aid and loans ranging between about $14 billion and $18 billion. That difference reflected the uncertainty over what the final amount of loans from the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank would be.

The United States alone has promised $20 billion. The World Bank and U.S. officials estimated ahead of the conference that Iraq needs $56 billion in reconstruction aid over the next four years. The World Bank has said much of that amount will likely be covered by Iraq's oil revenues, private investment and other resources, rather than donations.

A senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the United States had counted "in excess of $13 billion," which he called in line with expectations.

In an interview with European newspapers published today, Powell expressed regret that France and Germany weren't pledging new funds.

He said it would "not mean it's a disaster" if the two-day conference doesn't raise the entire $36 billion that the World Bank says Iraq needs over four years.

Kuwait offered $500 million in new money, on top of $1 billion already spent.

Lack of deals with Microsoft may harm landmark settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in the Microsoft Corp. antitrust case urged government lawyers today to investigate why only nine companies so far have paid Microsoft to license its technology for their own software products, agreements central to the success of a landmark settlement negotiated with the Bush administration.

"I think all of us had hoped for more agreements," U.S. District Judge Colleen Kollar-Kotelly acknowledged during a hearing today. "I am interested in finding out why we don't have more licensed products."

The judge said the nine companies that already signed agreements "look like it's pretty much the heavy-hitters." But government lawyers explained it will take months to determine whether the deals will substantially ensure Microsoft can't abuse its control over computers running Windows software.

The judge scheduled another oversight hearing in January.

Microsoft lawyer Rick Rule said the company expects additional deals within months. He argued that Microsoft was complying with the antitrust settlement by offering to license its software technology even if few companies sign such deals.

"Ultimately the question should be, are these potentially available," Rule said. "It shouldn't be, how many licenses are there."

The licensing requirement was considered central to the settlement since it would prevent Microsoft from locking out rival companies developing products that communicate with Windows computers.

Kollar-Kotelly urged the government today to interview companies that decided against licensing Microsoft's technology to determine whether the court should require changes to Microsoft's terms.

The judge said it was unclear whether Microsoft's competitors were unhappy with terms of the offers or simply not interested, "and there's not much we can do about that."

The day before the hearing, Microsoft reported a 28 percent surge in quarterly profits, as sales rose 6 percent to $8.22 billion. The increase drove up the company's already remarkable cash reserves to more than $51.6 billion.

The oversight hearing preceded next month's arguments before the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals by lawyers for Massachusetts, the only state to formally dispute the antitrust settlement as inadequate.

Massachusetts has asked the appeals court for tougher antitrust sanctions, accusing Kollar-Kotelly of a "profound misunderstanding" for approving the deal.
