LEGAL ENTANGLEMENTS MAY BAR ACCEPTANCE OF HENRY FORD'S OFFER

ACCEPTANCE IS VERY DOUBTFUL DECLARES KAHN

Contracts With Alabama Concerns Declared to Give Them Right to Purchase Units Offer Covers.

Ford's Offer Could Not Be Accepted Without Prolonged Litigation, if Then, Is Kahn's View.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Chairman Kahn of the house military committee today told W. B. Mayo, chief of engineers for Henry Ford, that it would require years to thresh out existing legislation entanglements and it was doubtful even then that the government would be able to accept the Detroit manufacturers' proposed contract for purchase and lease of the nitrate and power projects at Muscle Shoals, Alabama.

After the committee adjourned other committee members said the legal barriers to acceptance of the Ford proposal appeared inescapable because of the contracts held by the Alabama Power company and the Air Nitrates corporation, which, those concerns claim, give them exclusive rights to purchase the Warrior steam plant and nitrate plant number two, respectively. Both units would be delivered to Mr. Ford with free titles, in the event his proposal was accepted and could be freed from the contract conditions without prolonged litigation in the courts.

The discussion of the legal difficulties the committee faced in considering the Muscle Shoals situation developed after Mr. Mayo and Gray Silver, Washington representative of the American farm bureau federation, had presented alternations which they said Mr. Ford had agreed to make in his original offer for the Shoals project.

The first alteration provided for a fixed capitalization of not less than $10,000,000 for the company. Mr. Ford would create to operate the Alabama enterprise. The amendment was suggested by Secretary Weeks when he submitted the bid to congress in order to safeguard the government's interests against failure of the operating company to carry out the contract in good faith for the 100 years it would be effective.

Another amendment offered by Mr. Mayo was a guarantee to manufacture "commercial fertilizers," rather than nitrates and "other compounds." The third proposed to give authority to the company's directing board to regulate the deliverey of fertilizers direct from factory to consumer, making it impossible for intermediary agents to handle the products and increase the price to the farmers above the 8 per cent profit carged by the manufacturing company.

These amendments were welcomed by the committee, although some members expressed regret that Mr. Ford had refused to accept a 50 year lease and had insisted upon the 100 year clause. Representative Green, republican of Vermont, declared he was strongly opposed to changing the public policy limiting the issuance of leases on public properties to 50 years and said it would be unwise to make an exception to it for Mr. Ford.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

BY H. N. F.

This is general election year in Texas. A United States Senator, eighteen congressmen, all state officers, all district and county officers and a new legislature will be elected by the people. Many old war horses may be retired; may old faces turned to the wall. There are 1,176,600 qualified voters in the 242 of the 251 organized counties. There are nine counties to report and this will swell the number of qualified voters to 1,200,000. It is said that there are 300,000 qualified women voters in the state. If all the people who believe in good government and law enforcement would vote for candidates for office who believe in good government and law enforcement there would be no excuse for the anti-lynching bill known as the Dyer act; no excuse for clericals or laymen openly advocating tar and feather parties; no excuse for masked night riders trampling the law in the dust while masquerading as friends of law and order; no excuse for white-sheet parties ... the midnight hour. The supreme concern of all at all times should be the safety of the state, and invisible government of Mammon or labor or higher law advocates should never be permitted by the safe and the sane of a community or commonwealth. Fearless and impartial enforcement of law is the salvation of society. It stands for the sacredness of life and the protection of property.

26 AMERICAN MARINES DRAW PRISON TERMS

Men Found Guilty of Participating in Fight in Which Three Nicaraguan Police Were Killed.

By Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nic., March 7.—Twenty-six American marines who were found guilty of engaging in a fight with the city police, Dec. 8, in which three policemen were killed, were sentenced today.

Twenty of the men were given terms of eight years' imprisonment each, three of 10 years each and three of 12 years each.

All the sentences call for hard labor.

In another case three corporals of marines, Amthor, Burnett annd Russell, were sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment each, in addition to another 20 years for having deserted with their arms Jan. 25 and killing four policemen at Diriamba.

Sergt. Lee Henry of Louisville, Ky., was killed while fleeing with the three corporals after the shooting.

On Dec. 8, last, three policemen in Managua were killed and one was wounded while breaking up a street fight between several American marines and a party of civilians. Three of the marines were wounded. The Americans were off duty at the time.

The disturbance caused much ill-feeling throughout Nicaragua. The newspapers which were under strict censorship, made no reference to the affair, but circulars flooded the country condemning the "cowardice" of Minister of Police Dias for having taken the Americans, who were alleged to have done the shooting, under his personal protection.

The commander of the American gunboat Galveston, which was at Balboa, in the Canal zone, was ordered to proceed immediately to Nicaragua to investigate the situation and hold a court martial. The court martial began late in December.

The killing of the policemen for which Corporals Amthor, Burnett and Russell were sentenced happened in a fight Jan. 24 at Diriamba. The corporals had been reported as deserters from the marine detachment the previous day.

RIVAL FORCES PREPARE FOR TREATY FIGHT

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—After a preliminary lull, the senate fight over the four power Pacific treaty is about to break in full fury.

Under an announced program of aggressive action to bring the treaty actively under discussion and to expedite a vote upon its ratification, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the republican leader, will address the senate tomorrow and will challenge opponents of the pact to bring their case openly to the senate floor.

That an organized group of "irreconcilables" will range themselves of the other side was assured today when it became known that a definite plan of action had been agreed upon after long consultation by Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, and some of the friends of former President Wilson.

How far-reaching may be the understanding thus effected by the "irreconcilables" leader, or to what extent it may involve the personal sentiments of Mr. Wilson himself is not revealed. Senator Borah and the former president are said not to have conferred directly, although their friends say they have been in consultation by letter regarding the four power pact.

Mr. Borah is said to have received information which convinced him that Mr. Wilson and he, despite their differences over the league of nations, are in complete sympathy on many points involved in the four power treaty discussions. It is declared, however, that there has been no effort to extend the exchanges to others of the arms conference treaties.

AMBULANCE HIT BY TRAIN AT HOUSTON ONE MAN IS KILLED

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Texas, March 7.—J. C. Johnson, 60, flagman employed by the Houston Belt & Terminal Railway company, was instantly killed and Anthony Wenzel and Walter Cobb seriously injured tonight when an incoming passenger train of the Gulf Coast lines crashed into an ambulance at the Hutchins and Preston street grade crossing.

DUEL IS FOUGHT IN ORANGE WITH FATAL RESULTS

By Associated Press.

ORANGE, Texas, March 7.—Luke Hailey, aged 42, a deputy sheriff, was slain and Henry Griffith, age 32, a boatman is at the point of death at a hospital with a pistol bullet in his brain as a result of a duel in the main business section at 9 o'clock tonight.

Hailey was on a horse and Griffith on foot when the shooting began but the former coolly dismounted and they fought it out at close range. Sheriff Helton placed Deputy Sheriff Columbus Canter under arrest shortly after the tragedy but on what charge is not known. It is not known what led to the shooting.

Hailey gained countrywide notoriety during the war as a cowboy who came to Orange as a shipbuilder wearing boots, chaps and sombrero while at work. He was of the cowboy type and never discarded this garb. His home recently has been at San Angelo where his widow and children reside. He had been a deputy sheriff but ten days. He joined Helton last week in cleaning up the oil field, following the death of Ben Clemens in a club there. Hailey's horse was killed in tonight's duel.

SIX MEN LOSE LIVES WHEN AIR TANK EXPLODES

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 7.—Six men were killed and 12 injured, one perhaps fatally, as the result of the explosion of a compressed air tank in a machine shop of the Kansas City Railway company, the local traction company, today. Five of those dead were killed outright or died during the day. The sixth man, A. E. Campbell, 60 years old, who was in charge of the compressor, died at a hospital this evening.

The others dead were:
OMAR BLY, 22.
EARL HAYNES, 30.
CLARENCE LEGATEE, 20.
FRANK BAUMGARDNER, 35.
J. P. COLEMAN.

The explosion, it was stated tonight, was due to an overcharge in the compresses. How that came about, company officials said, probably will never be known as Campbell, possibly the only man to know the cause, did not regain consciousness before he died.

BALFOUR PAYS LLOYD GEORGE HIGH TRIBUTES

No New Light Is Thrown on the Political Crisis However and the Situation Remains Unchanged.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, March 7.—"He is one of the greatest figures of the world's history—what is the use of abusing him," said Sir Arthur J. Balfour, alluding to the prime minister, David Lloyd George, in a speech at the Carlton club today. This speech, which was expected to give some clarity to the situation, threw no new light in the crisis, however, and Sir Arthur, like his unionist colleagues, Austen Chamberlain and Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, far from reproaching Sir George Younger, who was the real provoker of the crisis, did not even mention his name.

Balfour made a powerful plea for continuance of the coalition system as opposed to a return to the two party system, which he declared was only a fair weather system, unsuited to the present abnormal times when the nation was still laboring under the aftermath of war. Never, he said, was there a time when the co-operation of the unionists and liberals was more desirable than now and declaring that he had spent many years politically fighting Mr. Lloyd George, and therefore ought to know something about him. Balfour paid the most about him. Balfour said a more had ever been heard from the prime minister's most enthusiastic admirers.

No announcement was made in the speech of the premier's future plans and in this way the speech was disappointing. It leaves the situation unchanged.

BONUS MEASURE INTRODUCED IN HOUSE AFTER APPROVAL OF G. O. P. COMMITTEE MEMBERS

FLOGGING NEAR DALLAS ANGERS MAYOR OF CITY

Citizen Whipped by Masked Men and Ordered to Leave Says He Will Depart Immediately.

Mayor Aldredge Asserts He Will Recommend a Reward For Apprehension of Any of Group.

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, March 7.—A reward of $250 "for the apprehension of any member of the group of men who whipped Philip Rothblum Monday night," to be offered by the city of Dallas will be recommended to the board of commissioners at their regular meeting tomorrow morning, Mayor Sawnie Aldredge announced late today.

Rothblum was seized in his home here last night by several masked men, and taken to the outskirts of the city where he was flogged severely, his friends reported to the police today, although, the whipping party had warned him not to report the matter. Rothblum was ordered to leave the city by 6 o'clock tonight. He said he would leave.

"The proceeding is an outrage to the community," the mayor said, "and if the men who took the law into their own hands are discovered, the full force of the law will be brought to bear.

"The Dallas police force is capable of handling any condition that may arise and the city will not countenance horse-whipping, and other forms of mob violence.

"There are courts to enforce our laws in Texas. They are just courts and speedy courts. If a person has a grievance against another, or if his decency or that of his family, or that of the general public is outraged, satisfaction can be readily gained and the offender made to suffer a just penalty by calling the attention of the police to the case. That is the way we take care of such things in Dallas. The city will NOT tolerate the action of any individual, or group of individuals NOT vested with the proper authority, who seek to take the administration of the law into their own hands.

"The police will investigate the whipping that took place in Dallas Monday night, and if the principals in the party are discovered, they shall be prosecuted."

When asked as to their destination, Mr. and Mrs. Rothblum declared they had no idea as to where they would locate. Rothblum asserted they would move as far from Dallas as his funds would permit. He declared he had been forced to dispose of his holdings at a sacrifice.

The woman declared charges made by the masked men of alleged immoral conduct against her husband are false.

Rothblum said he was forced into an automobile and immediately blindfolded after two men had entered his home, stating they were policemen and that he was wanted at the courthouse. He declared the men struck him knocking out two teeth, when he protested. He thought he was whipped with a heavy blacksnake whip.

TORNADO KILLS FIVE; PROPERTY LOSS IS HEAVY

By Associated Press.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 7.—Five deaths appeared tonight to be the total of fatalities in a tornado which early today ravaged villages near here, in other parts of Georgia and in South Carolina. The storm centered, according to reports, at Warrenville, S. C., where, in addition to the five persons killed, a numbee were injured. The nearby Carolina towns of Langley and Graniteville, reported no casualties, but accounts of extensive damage from all three places brought out numerous instances of close escapes.

In Warrenville, where 25 houses in the southeastern section of the village were demolished, the homeless uninjured immediately set about the work of rescue, guided through the blinding rain in the darkness by cries for help. Many said they had been awakened by the rumbling of the storm and the trembling of their houses just in time to escape.

Tremendous crowds were in evidence once more at the Automobile Show in the Motor Supply building at Ohio and Sixth, particularly during the evening hours. Even larger crowds are being prepared for today, the concluding day of the show.

Dealers are enthusiastic over the success of the show, and the extremely favorable impression the beautiful new models on display have made with the public. Numerous sales as a result of the show are reported, with a number of prospective sales in hand as a direct outcome of the show. The musical program adds much to the effect created by the decorations of the show and the shining newness of the many cars on display. During the evening the music is furnished by a jazz orchestra and special entertainers who have been warmly received.

FRIEND OF MRS. OBENCHAIN IS PUT ON STAND

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, March 7.—The principal issue in the trial of Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain on the charge of murdering her sweetheart, J. Belton Kennedy, is whether Mrs. Obenchain was scorned by Kennedy or whether she refused to marry him. This was stated to the jury in the case today by the defense counsel.

On this issue the attorneys spent most of the day examining and cross-examining Miss Louise Wilson, proprietor of a Los Angeles "beauty parlor," who said she was the confidant of both Kennedy and Mrs. Obenchain in the love affair she said existed between the couple.

Miss Wilson, a defense witness, declared that Kennedy wanted to marry Mrs. Obenchain secretly, because, she said, his parents objected to the union.

Miss Wilson said she went to Mrs. Obenchain's hotel room on the night of Aug. 5, by appointment to pass the night. Mrs. Obenchain was not there and Miss Wilson went to bed in the room. At 1:30 a deputy sheriff and a house detective aroused her and the detective requested her to vacate the room, saying the management had taken it over. The next day, she testified, she saw Mrs. Obenchain in the county jail, Kennedy having been slain the night before while with the defendant who was taken into custody soon afterwards. On cross examination, she said she had given certain letters and postcards sent to her by Mrs. Obenchain to a friend after the slaying of Kennedy, because she did not want any "spies" to find them in her room. "I considered them favorable to Madalynne," she said. Miss Wilson declared Mrs. Obenchain never mentioned the name of Arthur C. Burch to her.

The defense called two employes of a Los Angeles bank, who testified Burch and Mrs. Obenchain were in the bank between noon and 1 p. m. of Aug. 5. A prosecution witness testified he saw the couple standing in front of Kennedy's residence between these hours on that day. Four other witnesses corroborated other impeachment testimony previously given for the defense.

WILL NOT CALL BILL UP BEFORE NEXT MONDAY

Democrats Will Be Given Opportunity to Pass Judgment at Meeting of Committee Saturday.

Measure As Approved by Committeemen Provides Bank Certificates Where Bonus Exceeds $50.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The compromise soldiers' bonus bill carrying a bank loan provision in place of the cash installment payment plan originally proposed and once approved by the house, finally was agreed to today by republican members of the ways and means committee. It was introduced later in the house by Chairman Fordney, who announced that it would not be called up until next Monday, if then.

Passage of the bill was predicted by Mr. Fordney. His opinion appeared to be shared by house members generally. There was some speculation in house lobbies and corridors as to President Harding's views of the compromise plan and also as to whether he would find occasion to express those views before the house voted.

Chairman Fordney still declined to say whether he had discussed the compromise with the executive. At the White House it was said that Mr. Harding had not studied and consequently had not formed an opinion as to the bank loan provision. He was represented, however, as maintaining his former position that the bonus either should be paid by a sales tax or the legislation postponed.

Just when the bill will be called up in the house will not be decided until after Mr. Fordney returns from a western trip, which he began today. Should the bill be taken up next Monday the house would proceed to its consideration under a suspension of the rules which would prevent amendment. If taken up, later, Mr. Fordney said, there would have to be a special rule. It was expected that this would be so drawn as to give precedence to committee amendments, a plan designed to prevent the opening up of the bill to general amendment.

Mr. Fordney said the entire ways and means committee would meet Saturday when the democrats would have an opportunity to pass judgment on the bill. Meantime the measure will be printed so that they and the house members generally can study its provisions.

Aside from the substitution of the bank plan provision for cash payment the bill as introduced is similar to that previously passed by the house. The only immediate cash payments proposed are to veterans whose adjusted service pay would not exceed $0.5 Other veterans could select one of these four options:

Adjusted service certificate, combining a loan and insurance plan.
Vocational training.
Farm and home aid.
Land settlement.

The ultimate cost of the bonus to the government, it was said would depend upon the number of men selecting each option. It was estimated that the immediate cash payment to those entitled to not more than $50 each would be around $16,000,000. The final cost might range all the way from $1,000,000,000 to $4,750,000, the maximum figure being predicate upon all the veterans selecting the certificates and holding them until maturity or their death.

The adjusted certificate would be dated Oct. 1, 1922. It would mature in 20 years or at the death of the veteran and in either case, would have a face value equal to the sum of (1) the adjusted service credit of the veteran increased by 25 per cent plus (2) interest thereon for 20 years at the rate of 4 1-2 per cent compounded annually. The total amount would be approximately equal to 3.015 times the adjusted service credit of the veteran.

This credit would be figured on the basis of $1.25 for each day of overseas service and $1 for each day of home service, but in no event could the credit exceed $500 in the case of a veteran who performed no overseas service and $625 in the case of a veteran who served overseas. Prior to Sept. 30, 1925, any national bank or any bank or trust company incorporated under the laws of any state, territory, possession or the District of Columbia would be authorized to loan to a veteran on the certificate any amount not in excess of 50 per cent of the adjusted service credit plus interest at 4 1-2 per cent from Oct. 1, 1922. The loan would have to mature not later than Sept. 30, 1925, and the rate of interest charged by the bank could not exceed by more than 2 per cent a year the rate charged at the date of the loan for the discount of 90-day commercial paper by the federal reserve bank in the federal reserve district in which is located the bank making the advance to the veteran.

MEXICO'S WEST COAST IS VERY 'KIPLINGESQUE'

However, Rudyard's Wild Pigs Are Tame Compared With the Vicious Brand About Topolobampo.

The Country Has All the Raw Material and All It Needs Is a Kipling to Make It Famous.

ARTICLE No. 12
BY HERBERT COREY

TOPOLOBAMPO, Sinaloa, Mexico, March 7.—This is a Kiplingesque country hereabout. It has the kick of India when Kipling was young and much the same sort of a kick. Let's itemize it. Barring the British army, Mr. Atkins, visiting members of parliament, and lady missionaries, there is many a thing common to Kipling's India and the Mexican Pacific coast.

One is wild pig. Very wild pig. The wild pig they have hereabouts are not the sort of wild pig that would submit tamely to being stuck with a spear in the hands of a fresh colored British subaltern mounted on an army horse. The wild pig down here belong to what is scientifically known as the grouchy or discontented species. When they catch sight of a foreigner on their preserves the entire herd of wild pig seems animated by a desire to catch up to that foreigner and bite him.

"I'd been told about these wild pig," said my breakfast companion at the club, "but I had to find out for myself."

Mexican Wild Pig Reactions

The club is "B" in the list of Indian resemblances. The young man who sat opposite me said that he had not been down here very long when he experimented with wild pig reactions. He went out, feloniously, deliberately, and not knowing any better, to get him a mess of Porcine Horribilus which he thinks is the text book name for the breed. By and by he came to an open place in the brush and heard a grunting. There was a herd of the wildest pigs he ever saw. They looked like Bolshevist pigs, he said. All tusks and bristles.

"They are not so very high at the shoulder, and they are a sort of dappled gray," he said. "The hides are real nice when you can get one tanned properly. Some of the old boars have tusks six inches long. They stick out of the lower corners of the mouth and the boars sharpen them against trees."

My breakfast companion said that he watched the wild pigs grunting in the sunlight, rooting among the roots, now and then clashing their glittering tusks against small trees. Some sound was heard in the rear of the herd, he said, and each pig leaped into the air and came down on his toes like a cat, facing the direction from which the sound came. He said the unanimity was unpleasant.

Considered the Pigs Themselves

So he looked about for a tree. He had not planned to shoot wild pig from a tree when he went out, he said. It had not seemed sporting. But the more he thought about it the more he felt that the pigs themselves would prefer it that way. It made the odds more even, he said. There were no trees near there. He did see a large cactus of the organ-pipe sort, but, while he believed that he could climb that cactus if the principal pig got after him—he said the principal pig had tusks that, on the level, looked like scythes—he did not want to start the pig campaign by climbing a cactus. Besides, the cactus was only about thirty feet high, and for all he knew the pig could climb, too.

"So I went out of that wood," he said, "and I found me a tree some distance away. It was a good hardwood tree and too large for a pig to reach around."

Then he waited for the pig to come out into the open. By and by they did and he shot at them and wounded the principal pig. And right there he thanked heaven that he had been born in Scotland and had plenty of foresight, for that tree was a safe refuge. The pig leaped and snarled and grunted about the foot of it, and scared him so that he shot no more. When night came he made himself uncomfortable in the tree and next morning he went home. He said that he had never gone pig-hunting since. There is too much tribal feeling about pigs, he said.

Beans, Tortillas and Pigs.

The club, being the "B" of this Kipling analogy, is the one at Los Mochis, maintained for the American employees on a huge American ranch there. Elsewhere in this delightful but somewhat backward land one may be forced to subsist on beans and tortillas. A tortilla is a thin cake made of the paste of corn which has been passed through a lye mixture. Properly made, it is thin and brittle, so that it can be stood up on edge in front of the fire, and it is heavily powdered with ashes. One can likewise, if one wishes, eat pork. But, after viewing the catholicity of the Mexican pig in the matter of diet, and observing the absolute chumminess of the Mexican pig and the Mexican buzzard I, personally, have eliminated pork from my list of table possibilities. I do not wish even to argue the matter.

Americans do not live well and keep happy on frijoles and tortillas. Therefore, the ranch instituted the club. The younger and unmarried Americans eat at the club and sleep in a huge dormitory, all brick walls and mosquito curtains. The married Americans live in rose-covered paradises. One looks down long vistas of palms, bordered by scores of flowering plants, to see at the end homes which combine suggestions of Seville and Chevy Chase. They dress for dinner, do these married Americans, and meet twice a week for bridge and dancing, and now and then go down to the shore to put in a weekend on a huge houseboat. Very Kiplingesque, indeed. Especially when you think of the swarming natives all about, in their thin, white clothes and under their enormous sombreros, paddling about in their bare feet.

More Kipling Comparisons.

All along the Pacific coast one hears of the American ranches here. There are rice ranches at Culeme, on the edge of the Yaqui country, operated by Americans, and banana ranches at San Blas in Nayarit, 500 miles below, at which Port Cortes once built ships with which to cruise the Pacific, and other ranches owned by Americans at almost every step in between. But the ranches here are the show places. There are thousands of acres of sugar cane and tomatoes and alfalfa and beans and what not, gleaming like emeralds under the bright mid-winter sun.

Other Kipling resemblances? Well, there are alligators here. And deer swarm in the mountains. There is a large, vicious, and bad-tempered cat which the natives call a tiger. Biologically they are wrong, but practically they have reason on their side. Donkeys and oxen are the beasts of burden. Women wash clothes on the sands at the river's edge. In the hot season the residents go to the mountains to get cool.

The country has the raw material. What it needs is a Kipling.

It is appropriate that Judge Bass should officiate.

Clarence Ousley is a native of Georgia; Judge Bass is a native of Alabama. Alabama has an important A. & M. college at Auburn not far from the Georgia state line. There Ousley and Bass when youngsters attended school and the judge was an interested observer when Ousley was graduated with flying colors as well as high class honors. They have been friends since school days.

Ousley came from Georgia to Texas and taught school in Ellis county; Bass came from Alabama to Texas, selected San Antonio as his home, began the practice of his profession and became a leading member of the Bexar county bar. For many years he was active in democratic politics and prominent in the higher counsels of the democracy of the state.

Ousley deserted teaching for journalism and for more than a quarter of a century he was one of the most active and best known newspaper men of the southwest; then he became identified with the Agricultural and Mechanical college at Bryan as director of extension work and later he was called to Washington by David F. Houston to become assistant secretary of agriculture in the administration of Woodrow Wilson.

The Reward of the Applauded

CONTRIBUTED

The approaching night hung a long, dusky curtain from the tops of the tall buildings in the city.
Its ample folds cast a dismal gloom over the streets, and over the battered hearts of the tattered khaki-clad.
Winds are cruel in winter, and heartless; forgetful of the perfumed breezes of past months.
Tramp, tramp, tramp—hear the crunching snow and ice beneath the feet of heroes. Whither going?
Let the cold winds moan the answer.
It screams, the wind! As whistling steel and shrapnel across the field of mud and bloody slush; but not in Europe.
'No Man's Land' has skulked over the ocean and lies again under the feet of the Nation's Pride!
Tramp, tramp, tramp—up and down the thorofares; in and out the tall buildings.
Thundering cannon have lost their hideousness in the echoing "No! No! No!"
We had bread, and friends. We are tired, and hungry. Weariness has taken up her abode with us.
The night increases in blackness; hope is fast dwindling.
Thoughts drown in delirious brains. Who cares!
A white mound of snow—and khaki—In the gray dawn. Anxious hoary hairs in a bovel. A ragged dress; a crust of bread. Separation. Mother! Son!
Is there no end to misery? Where is the strong arm of helpfulness?
The 'Golden Age' dawns! Wait for it.
The 'Golden Age' of joy! It will surely come; it will not tarry.
Fickle mirages on the Desert of Life; their deceptions will cease. Parched lips shall meet living waters, fevered brows bathe therein, Sweet rest;
The 'Golden Age'—not age of gold. Satisfied souls, No want; misery and squalor flown. Tears gone. No wars.
No unsatisfied cries for bread, lest we die; Peace and Plenty; figs, vines, homes. 'Beauty for ashes.'
The 'Everlasting Father' clothes his weary children with life.

"There Ain't No Such Animal," Say Scientists

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—If there happens to be any plesiosaur monsters trotting about the globe in out-of-way spots they no longer may be regarded as infants, but their age will range anywhere from eight to ten million years, and they will in all likelihood be a little too decrepit to trot with much alacrity, government scientists said today in commenting on the reported discovery of such an animal in the Andes Mountains.

Professor Clemanti Onelli, director of the Buenos Aires zoological gardens, in a dispatch from Buenos Aires was quoted as announcing receipt of information from a friend that an amphibian of the Mesozoic order was seen alive in a lake in the mountains. Professor Onelli also was said to have expressed credence in the report.

"The last positive evidence of such creatures running at large," said Professor Gilmore, of the national museum, "dates back some ten million years. So far as scientists are aware no such animal has been seen since that period. I would not hesitate in advising that the subject be dismissed for it seems highly improbable that the scientific world has overlooked any data that would tend to indicate the existence today of those animals that inhabited the earth so far back."

Decatur Girl Wins Poultry Car Contest

Miss Jamie Ruth McCarter of Decatur, won first prize of three settings of eggs offered by the Denver railroad for the closest guess to the number of persons going through the Poultry Special Exhibit car on the 22-day poultry campaign recently conducted, according to M. B. Oates, Denver agricultural agent. Her guess was 12,126, the exact number going through the car was 12,147.

Russell Morris of Seymour and J. M. Everhart of Haskell, tied for the second prize of two settings of eggs on their guess of 12,100. Since this tie has been discovered it has been decided to divide the second prize of two settings between them, giving each, one setting of eggs. Miss Inez Reeves of Munday guessed 12,200, winning the third premium of one setting of eggs.

No definite time was set for the close of this contest, however, since cards containing guesses have quit coming in, it has been decided to announce the winners March the 6th and prepare immediately to award the premiums. No guesses will be considered which are received after March 6.

Exact count was made with an automatic counter each day as the crowd passed through the car; also the crowd at the morning meeting was counted. The complete count is as follows, 6,165 attended the morning meeting, 12,147 passed through the car, making a grand total of 18,312. This is an average of 280 per day at the morning meetings and 552 through the car each day or a total of 832 people reached through the Poultry School each day for 22 days.

It seems strange that when there were so many numbers that might have been guessed that the nearest one to the correct number missed it by 21. There was great interest taken in the guessing contest, eleven hundred and fifty guesses being received. Those guessing seemed to be divided into about six groups. One large group guessed around six thousand. Another group guessed around ten thousand. A great many guessed a little over thirteen thousand and a large number guessed eighteen to twenty thousand. Another group around twenty-five thousand and then there was another group that became over enthusiastic and guessed from forty thousand up into the millions, the largest guess being twenty million. The smallest guess was thirty. Of course these were no doubt mistakes made in putting down the figures but it is rather interesting that twenty or more people guessed between two hundred thousand and six million.

PURE FOOD SHOW ENDS TUESDAY

The pure food show, staged by the city health department as an observance of "health week," closed last evening "with regrets"—regrets on the part of many housewives who had thoroughly enjoyed the exhibits and the interesting lectures, and regret on the part of the many merchants who found the show a splendid medium for making friends and boosting business.

According to Dr. A. H. Douglas, director of the city health department, the show will become an annual feature. Bakers, grocers, dairymen and others engaged in the retail and wholesale distribution of food stuffs were enthusiastic in commenting on the success of the show, and a committee will be appointed later to prepare plans for a similar event here annually.

The biggest crowd of the three days attended the exhibit yesterday.

SAULTER'S STORY

To The Record News:

County Jail, Wichita Falls, Texas, March 6.—I wrote you once before but guess it got lost. I am one of the four prisoners that was accused of attacking the night jailer last Monday night. My name appeared in the Record News as one of his assailants. I have a written statement signed by the five other prisoners held in here with me that I did not take any part in it. I was accused and punished like the others for the offense. I feel like the publicity was unjust to me, as I have in an application for a rehearing in my case. My case was tried after the citizens' meeting was held and it was hard to get a jury that was or would not feel a little hard toward a law violator. I would appreciate if you would advise me or show any favors. I want to inform the public that I did not attack the night jailer or take part in it.

Underwriters Plan District Association

The organization of an old line life insurance association for this section with this city as headquarters was favorably discussed at a luncheon of the Wichita County Life Underwriters association held Tuesday at the Kemp hotel. Seventeen members of the county association who attended the meeting expressed themselves as in favor of a district organization. G. N. Monroe, the president, was in the chair.

The organization plan was presented by Henry Camp Harris, president of the North Texas association of Life Underwriters, who was the principal speaker at the luncheon. The purpose of the organization as outlined by Mr. Harris is to secure a greater and better spirit and more cooperation among life insurance sellers and render greater service to clients. Such organization it was said had been highly successful in other sections.

Details in connection with the organizing of the local unit will be worked out at a later meeting of the local association. In addition to discussing of the above plan, Mr. Harris talked on general subjects of special interest to insurance men.

FARM LOANS IN TEXAS OF YEAR ARE $3,500,000

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, March 7.—Loans exceeding $3,500,000 have been made to Texas farmers since the first of the year, through the federal farm loan banking system, according to reports just completed in the office of Secretary John V. Vandermark of the federal land bank of Houston. Total loans during January amounted to $2,000,000, while loans made during the month of February were more than $1,500,000.

The average amount of loans through the 350 farm loan associations of the Tenth land bank district since January first was $3,000, although some run as high as $10,000. According to Mr. Vandemark, no one community has been favored. The loans have been well distributed, and are gradually increasing, he said. It is estimated that loans during the present month will run as high as $2,000,000.

"The federal land bank system is loaning more money now than ever before," said Mr. Vandermark.

"The last regular bond sale was the largest ever conducted by the system. Every section of the country is being reached, and judging general conditions from reports reaching the Houston office, farm industries are due to prosper during the coming year.

"Farmers throughout the state are more optimistic, they have a good reason to feel better toward the business world at large, as they are getting better prices for their products now, while implements and other farm utilities are much lower in cost than they were a year ago. Farmers are making no particular attempt this year to diversify their crops, but conditions are favorable for an especially good farm year," he continued.

Commission Suit on Trial

The trial of the suit of L. M. McCracken and H. C. Wright to collect a $5,500 commission alleged to be due them for the sale of an oil lease from W. E. Conner and M. P. Kelly opened Tuesday in the 89th district court before Judge P. A. Martin with jury. The trial of the case will be continued today.

The plaintiff alleges that the commission is due them for the sale of an oil lease in block 14, of the Burkburnett townsite pool in 1918.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB HEARS ENJOYABLE MUSICAL AND ENTERTAINMENT PROGRAM

A much enjoyed musical program and club announcements featured the weekly meeting of the Business Women's club held at the Y. W. C. A. Tuesday evening.

Miss Irma Durham, chairman of the social committee, reported the "Mothers' evening" at Wichita club Thursday when the dramatic department of the club will present a playlet entitled "Manners and Modes," and a musical program under the direction of Mrs. Lucille Brooks Huff, with a solo dance by Miss Anna Mae Cato.

Miss Bruce Dickson, president of the Studio Players' club, announced the two plays to be presented by that club on Friday evening, March 31.

The social service committee reported the placing of a local girl in a business college, to be supported and given a business course with the club found maintained for that purpose.

The real feature of the meeting was the entertainment program in charge of Miss Irma Durnell and given under the direction of Mrs. A. H. Britain in which Mrs. N. M. Clifford rendered two vocal numbers, "Irish Love Song," by Margaret Lang, and "If I Were a Rose," by Hesselberg. Little Miss Emma Frances McFall gave two readings, "The Little Boy and a Snake," and "The Tired Child's Prayer." Little Miss Ona Bell Britain, gave a dainty interpretive dance which was very much enjoyed and Misses Cecelia Adickes and Marion Maer gave a violin duet, "Old Refrain" and an encore number, accompanied on the piano by Miss Annette Walsh. Mrs. Britain played a Chopin waltz by request. The entire program was well received, and each member received hearty applause. At the close of the program, Mrs. Britain, chairman of the extension department of the federated clubs, announced that if any of the business women who were interested in the fine arts, local clubs would be glad to assist them in any way in organization for music or other purposes.

Glad handers for the month were announced as follows: Misses Norma Brown, Beth Scoffield, Muriel Scoffield, Annie Tindall, Carrie Waldrip, Octavia Zetzsche, Hilde Holland, Helen Johnson, Lois Linderman, Mary Lou Maret, Hettie Thompson, Margaret Watson, Mary Hunter and Mrs. Sadie Carter. Hostesses include Misses Rhea Gardner, Jack Vaughn and Mary Coffield.

In the contest for the evening, naming the city offices which will be filled in the April election, and the men who are running, Miss Irene Davidson won the prize, a gift from the Upstairs Garment store.

Several new members were introduced and about 12 were served at the regular club dinner.

A total of 66,793 canaries were imported into the United States during the past fiscal year.

KLAN PARADE AT BELTON POSTPONED

BELTON, Texas, March 7.—Sheriff Bonds late today received a letter from the Belton Ku Klux Klan stating that the parade scheduled for tonight had been postponed temporarily "for the best interests of the organization and the public in general."

Officials expressed the belief that this action was taken because of the transfer of the Crow-Buchanan damage suit to the Ball county court here from Waco. The suit grew out of the tragedy of the Lorena Klan parade last fall when Crow as a spectator lost his life.

HOW TWO WOMEN ESCAPED OPERATIONS

Doctor Advised Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Happy Results in Both Cases

St. Joseph, Missouri.—"Both of my sides swelled and hurt me so that I could not move or do any of my work. There was heavy pressure and pains through my lower organs and the doctor told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for these troubles. He said I had this one chance, and if the Vegetable Compound did not help me nothing but an operation would. After taking several bottles I felt it was helping me and now I am able to do my own work. If my testimonial will help others I shall be glad for them to read it and hope your Vegetable Compound will do them as much good as it did me."—Mrs. Wm. Lockman, 513 N. 4th St., St. Joseph, Mo.

White Plains, N. Y.—"I had such a pain that I could hardly walk and the doctor said that I needed an operation. I was sick for a year before I started taking your medicine and I could not work. I saw your advertisement in a little book and that is how I came to take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines. I have been taking the Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and the capsules and prescription recommended. I am doing all my work and have gained twenty pounds. I am taking the medicines still, but I feel fine. You have my permission to use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. Mary Mark, 37 Hamilton Ave., White Plains, N. Y.

Some female troubles may through neglect reach a stage when an operation is necessary. But most of the commoner ailments are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors, or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same

When disturbing ailments first appear, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

him over the road for a long term. Georgia Democrats sent the author of the article to the senate of the United States. Eugene V. Debs is a very intelligent man. Three times the presidential candidate of the socialist party he had an army of followers or admirers the country over. He was given his freedom. Why were the 168 denied liberty? Great Britain has pardoned all political prisoners; France has pardoned all political prisoners, Belgium and Italy and Germany have pardoned all political prisoners. If justice had been appeased in the Debs case then why should justice clamor for vengeance in the cases of the 168 who are doing time for the same offense?

"Movies in every school and church" is the aim of Former Postmaster General Will H. Hays. Some traveler is Will H. Hays. He was a country lawyer at Sullivan, Indiana, when Opportunity made him a politician and he traveled with skyrocket speed to the cabinet of an American president. Now he is taking down a salary of $150,000 per annum as the spiritual director-general of Movieland and the motion picture industry pays the freight.

Colonel A. E. Humphreys is telling the people that he has faith in Texas. Why shouldn't he have faith in Texas? His income is rolling in at the rate of 35 million dollars a year; he is drilling between 80 and 90 wells. He has an acreage of 61,000. He has 1,800,000 barrels of oil in storage and the sun is shining on him all the time. He may not be "a bigger man than old Rockefeller," but the Colonel sure covers some territory.

Governor Pat M. Neff is for prompt recognition of Mexico and the Obregon government. Governor Thomas Campell of Arizona is for prompt recognition of Mexico and the Obregon government. Neff is a Democrat; Campbell is a Republican and these two executives know more about Mexico and its conditions and needs than all the publicity writers of New York and the congressional politicians who are delaying the recognition cause.

This from the editorial page of the Dallas News makes comforting reading: "The worst to be said of that treaty is that it is perhaps of little practicable value. But even if it were positively pernicious, it would have to be so to very large measure to justify the Senate in bringing down on the country the consequences which would certainly come of its rejection. The repudiation of the signature Mr. Wilson gave at Paris has brought the United States into evil repute, and the reputation it has thus incurred could be fastened upon it irremovably by the repudiation of the work of our representatives in the arms conference. The world would then conclude, and with ample reason, that because of a peculiarity of our processes and the pettiness of our politics our constituted authorities are unable to enter into any negotiations with credentials that offer any promise that their undertakings will be ratified. Such a conviction would isolate us in a way which no one would relish." Of course, the world is coming back. Of course, it requires patience on the part of the human atoms who constitute the population of the world.

According to the Dallas News there are only 29 Japanese farmers in Texas and but 5 Chinese farmers—in both cases a decrease since 1910. "Lest we forget," a Texas lawmaker last year introduced an alien land measure to "prevent the Japs from obtaining a monopoly of Texas land." The News tells something else: Thirty-two per cent of the Texas farms in 1920 had no farm vegetable garden, 30 per cent had not a single pig and 12 per cent had no kind of poultry. No wonder the tenant farmer was hard hit when the slump came.

Forty New York brokerage houses have crashed since January 1 in the greatest panic of its kind in history, while the New York stock exchange shows a steady advance in stock quotations which is said to have contributed to the down fall of alleged buckshots. Thousand of small investors who were lured to the quicksands by the golden promises of get-rich-quick gamblers and curbstone crooks are the victims. They were promised $5 or $10 for $1. They were promised handsome dividends. They were promised steady incomes on small investments. They expected something for nothing and now they are sqwaking. It is the old, old story.

THE UNIVERSAL DRINK

Water is the noblest fluid for the thirsty human craw; it was drunk by ancient Druid, and in mornern Arkansas; why lament for beakers beery when we've lakes as large as Erie, why make all the people weary with your kicks against the law? There are cool, refreshing rivers, drifting slowly to the sea; they are good for torpid livers, they are good for housemaid's knee; come with me, oh, thirsty critters, where the loveslck bullfrog twitters; water's better far than bitters, it is nature's choicest tea. There's a hydrant in the alley, there's a keg that catches rain, there's a streamlet in the valley, there's a cistern in the lane, everywhere there's water handy, nature's liquor fine and dandy, and the man who yips for brandy surely isn't safe and sane. Oh, some booze migh make him mellow when he goes to hit the hay, but the taste is green and yellow when arrives the break of day; there is sickness in his tummy, and his breath is rank and rummy, and the antlered snakes are chummy as he toils along his way. He is shamed and sick and sorry when he meets with other men, and they seem to say, "B'gorry, you've been pickled once again;" ah, he might his soul dellevr from the shame that makes it quiver, if he'd drink the wholesome river that is flowing through the glen!

The average hotel rate in America is about seven tips a day.

It occurs to us that a modern girl would need to stir up considerable dust to earn the title of "Tomboy."

The reason there is more scandal now than in the old days is because more things are considered scandalous.

It isn't surprising that truth lies at the bottom of a well. Anything that low down might be expected to lie.

Europe shouldn't scoff at Uncle Sam. One can love his fellow man and yet remain an ardent believer in padlocks.

Self-reliance: An old-fashioned virtue much revered in the days before people learned to let the government do it.

Heart Symptoms

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

There still, I find, are many people who cling to the old time delusion that slight pains about the heart, palpitation, and irregularities in the pulse rate are necessarily symptoms of serious heart disease. If these symptoms chance to develop in themselves they forthwith, not unnaturally, become the prey of an overwhelming fear.

To make matters worse, they often, perhaps usually, fail to consult a doctor to learn just what is the cause of the symptoms and alarm them. They are sure the doctor will only confirm their worst fears. Whereas actually he probably would find reason to say to them something like this.

"It is not your heart that is at fault, but your digestion. For some reason, which we must ascertain, there is a production of gas in your stomach, and this, through pressure, interfere with the action of your heart.

"Some people experience symptoms similar to yours merely as a result of overeating. If, soon after a heavy meal they happen to lie down, they are particularly liable to have alarming symptoms in the region of the heart. But in their case, as in yours, the heart itself is sound enough.

"Because you have allowed yourself to fall into a panic there has been a further disturbance of both digestion and heart action. Really there is no reason for you to be nervous and alarmed. When your digestion is improved, as it can be, the heart symptoms will cease troubling you."

And possibly the doctor would add: "True heart disease seldom manifests itself by the slight pains and other symptoms that have so frightened you. Even when there is a severe pain in the left side of the chest it usually does not mean heart disease. Though there is one type of heart disease in which attacks of severe pain do occur.

"But that type is not the commonest, by any means. Comparatively few people are afflicted with it. In other types pain seldom is experienced, though great discomfort may be as a result of dropsical or other conditions secondary to the diseased heart.

"So put your mind at ease. Stop watching your pulse, and cease anxiously expecting palpatation. Pay attention instead to the matter of diet.

"Beware of overeating. For a time put yourself on a really simple diet, avoiding in particular rich sauces and gravies, highly sweetened foods, and fried foods. Avoid also any special foods which, as observation may show you, tend in your case to be gas producers.

"And at all times try to control your emotions. Unless you do gain emotional control even the simplest foods may disagree with you, and you will then continue to be tormented as at present. So, train yourself to conquer all tendencies to fear and worry."

This last recommendation, in fact, every experienced physician urges, with special emphasis on all patients whether suffering from mere functional heart disorders or from true heart disease of a grave kind. Both groups of patients greatly need emotional control, particularly the patients afflicted with some organic disease of the heart. This, for reasons, we will take up another day.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

CHANGING THE PILLOWS

"Are your pillows all right, dear?" asked the patient mother for at least the tenth time in an hour.

"No," they are not. They are all wrong. But don't touch them. You hurt my head when you try to do anything to my pillows."

The ungracious response of the sick boy in the bed brought stinging tears to the eyes of the mother who was doing her best to make him comfortable; in spite of the fact that she had a great many other things to attend to as well as his comfort.

Every time she stole in and out of the room like a loving little ghost she had climbed a flight of stairs and more than likely there was some one waiting at the front of the stairs repeating over and over again, "Mother, do you know where my rubbers are?"

Only Tommie's Feelings Hurt.

This time the ungracious response was too much, and instead of just stinging in her eyes a moment and disappearing again with the lump in her throat, the tears overflowed and Mrs. Bennett, slipping silently from the sick room, went gulpingly downstairs and for the first time in her life gave Tommie a soft little slap because he had trailed mud across the sitting room floor with his hockey stick.

Tommie was so astonished that he tip-toed from the room without a word. His mother had never slapped any one before in her life, he was quite sure. It was such a soft little slap that it had only hurt Tommie's feelings.

Mrs. Bennett, having a good cry in the sitting room, did not hear her best friend enter until she was almost upon her with a jar of chicken broth in one hand and a custard in the other.

"William isn't worse, is he?" gasped Mary Lane.

"No. I expect he is getting better. He is so cross and everything I try to do for him is wrong," wept his mother, softly.

"That's a sure sign he is getting better," said Mary, taking off her wraps. "Men, young and old, are bears when they start to recover and perfect angels when they are truly ill. Let's go upstairs and I'll have to go at those pillows."

How Mary Changed the Pillows.

Standing at the right side of the bed, Mary Lane slipped her left arm under William's head and shoulders and raised him slightly, supporting his head in the hollow of her arm. With her right hand she removed the pillows one at a time, drawing them out on the left side of the bed. Then William's mother took them and plumped them up until they were soft and smooth. Had Mary been doing it alone, she would have placed William's head on a small pillow while she was beating up the other pillows. As it was, she stood perfectly still and supported his head and shoulders with her left arm.

The freshened pillows were then placed, at her direction, on the left side of the bed beside William's face, and piled straight, one on top of the other. There were three pillows.

Then, Mary, still standing on the right side of the bed, raised William's head a little higher and quickly drew the pillows toward her, from the opposite side of the bed. They were quickly in place and William was back on the cool, soft pillows with a sigh of comfort.

Mary, instead of doing a great deal of fumbling with pillows and patient, had simply stood still, drawn the pillows out away from her, and drawn them back toward her. William admitted that his head had not been jarred in the least.

The Once Over

OUR OWN ETIQUETTE DEPARTMENT

Is it proper for a man to allow his wife to carry bundles when he is with her? If so, how many?
HOMER K.

It is not only proper but very convenient. The question is How many can she carry at one time? This is a matter of carrying capacity, as they say in motor truck circles. The thing for a husband to do is to walk a few feet ahead of the wife, so spectators will not think he is with her. The term "bundle" does not apply, however, to ladders. Under no circumstances should a man allow his wife to carry home a ladder. He should allow her to dragit.

o o o

When a man is out for a ride in his flivver and has a tire blowout, should he allow his wife and eight-year-old daughter to change the tire?
SOCRATES.

He should insist upon it. The proper course is for the man to stop his car, step out, hold the door open, doff his hat, and say to his wife: "Pardon me, Jane, but the pleasure is all yours." He should unlock the tool box, hand her the wrench, and order the daughter to jack up the car. Then he should retire to the side of the road, lie down under a shade tree, and see what Kirby Petroleum closed at.

o o o

Is it considered good form for a men to play the 'cello in the reading room of a public library?
HERMAN C.

It's an excellent way to lose a 'cello.

o o o

When a young man is escorting a young lady to a dance, and the fire engines roar by, should he follow them without leaving word where to meet him later, or telling her where she may reach him by 'phone.
TERRANCE.

If the young lady has any sense she will realize that no red-blooded man can resist the temptation to run after fire engines. It should not be necessary for him to do anything except to lift his hat and say, "See you later, Ella." If the young lady has any manners, she will buy a copy of the Saturday Evening Post, sit down on the curb, and read until he returns. If it is a two-alarm fire she should buy two Saturday Evening Posts.

o o o

The other day I was entering, with a lady, an office building which has one of those revolving doors. As etiquette requires, I let her enter the door first. I entered the next compartment. The speed of the door carried her around to the street again, leaving me in the awkward position of being inside the building ahead of her. What should I do in a case like this?
CLARENCE.

You should either teach the young lady how to get in and out of revolving doors or have her enter all buildings by the coal hole.

o o o

I am deeply in love with a young lady who is fond of outdoor life, such as motoring, riding, etc. All I have to offer her is a high-wheeled bicycle left me by my great-grandfather. I intend to build an extra seat on it, but don't know whether etiquette requires that I build it so she will sit in front of me or behind me.
OBIDIAH.

Leave the bicycle in front of her house with a note asking her to put a cross marking the spot she would like to sit. But don't come back.

o o o

Is it proper for a man to strike a woman before she strikes him, and, if so, how many blows is he entitled to before a return.
PATSY.

In the best circles it is customary to tie her hands to her sides and let the rules of etiquette fall where they may.

PETER RABBIT FIGHTS WITH HIMSELF

That's a funny thing to do — to fight with yourself—isn't it? But that is what Peter Rabbit did—fought with himself. Yes, sir, Peter fought with himself, and it was a hard fight. You know, that kind of fighting is the very hardest kind of fighting in the world. You see, it was this way: Peter had been lucky, very lucky. He had started out to follow Busy Bee from the Green Meadows to her store house in the Green Forest, and almost right away he had lost sight of her. But he kept on deep into the Green Forest, wandering this way and that way, until he had grown so tired that he just had to sit down at the foot of a big tree to rest. And as he rested he had heard a humming sound way up high over his head, and it sounded as if it came from inside the great tree. When Peter looked up he saw Busy Bee and all her relations coming and going from a little hole way up near the top of the tree. Then he knew that just by chance he had found the storehouse of Busy Bee.

How Peter's heart did leap! He did a little joy dance all by himself, with no one to see, just because he was so tickled. "Now, said Peter to himself, "I will tell Buster Bear, and he will be so pleased that he will always be friendly to me, and I need never be afraid of him any more. They say he loves honey better than anything else in the world. I'll hurry and tell him as soon as I can before any one else finds this storehouse and gets ahead of me."

Peter started off, lipperty-lipperty-lip, as fast as he could go to look for Buster Bear, but he had gone only a little way when he stopped suddenly. He had remembered what Bumble, the cousin of Busy Bee, had said when he had asked him to tell him where Busy Bee's storehouse was. Bumble had been indignant, very indignant. He had hummed and buzzed angrily. He had said some very sharp things to Peter about people who went about making trouble for others. Peter had gone home to the dear Old Briar Patch and thought it all over and had made up his mind that Bumble was right. It was a dreadful thing to make trouble for others, and he didn't want to do anything of the kind. But that was before he had found the storehouse of Busy Bee. Then it had been easy to make up his mind that he would do nothing like that. But now—well now it was different. First he scratched his long right ear with his long left hind foot. Then he scratched his long left ear with his long right hind foot.

"I don't know that Buster Bear will make any trouble for Busy Bee," thought Peter, and hopped on a few steps.

"Yes, you do, too.", said a small voice inside, and Peter sat down.

"If I don't tell him, someone else will," thought Peter, and started on again.

"Perhaps no one else will find the storehouse," said the small voice inside, and Peter stopped hopping.

"Some one is sure to," thought Peter, once more starting on. "If they do it is no business of yours," said the small voice, and Peter sat down.

"I'm going to tell! said Peter fiercely, and began to hurry faster than ever.

"You're not, either! You couldn't be so mean," protested the small voice, and just as before Peter sat still.

Now, all this time that Peter had been fighting with himself he had been too busy to watch out, and so he did not see the crafty face of Reddy Fox peeping out from behind an old stump just ahead of him. Reddy was grinning wickedly, for he knew that Peter for once was not looking for danger. Two more jumps and Peter would be right where Reddy could spring on him.

ROOM TO EXPAND

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

"The Commerce and Finance Magazine" very properly calls attention to an ancient and honorable piece of bunk that it is about time we scrapped the argument based on "room to expand."

Germany used it before the war. We have heard many a solemn arguer say, with an air of finality: "Of course Germany had to have room to expand." Many people assumed that that was sufficient reason for the Teuton's starting out to mess up the world.

Very often such a phrase, which sounds very imposing, has no more contents than a blown bladder.

"Room to expand," when you take it down and look at it carefully, is nothing more or less than a handsome mask for the face of conquest. What it really meant is that the nation in question wants to dominate its neighbors and impose its ideas upon people who do not want them.

The "room to expand" catch phrase has of late been much used in reference to Japan. That island country is supposed to have too large a population and that is given as an excuse for going over to Corea and China, subjugating or exterminating the native population and substituting Japanese.

But if Germany and Japan need room to expand, what about the smaller nations?

Belgium, for instance, is one of the most thickly populated countries in the world, and her Congo possessions are hardly alluring to Belgium settlers. But, for that reason, does Belgium go forth to make war on France and Holland to get more territory for Belgians?

And why should not Switzerland want room to expand? The Swiss are prolific. They also doubtless think themselves a superior race even as do the Teutons. Why should not the Swiss hie themselves forth to annex Italy and Austria? They would not be to blame. Oh, no! They would simply be following the natural law of expansion.

Few races are more prolific than the Irish. Is that a reason for them endeavoring to annex to Ireland the Atlantic coast states of America.

If Germany wants to expand, let her expand just the way she has always been doing, that is, let her send her sons to the United States, to Brazil and elsewhere that they may become peaceable citizens of those countries.

The fallacy lies in endeavoring to make the natural expansion of a race an excuse for political expansion. If, by out breeding, the Germans or the Japanese or any other race can push the other nations off the earth, they are at liberty to do so, but used as a political argument "room to expand" is sheer bunk.

SAY IT WITH FLOWER BEDS

"Lovely morning," Ma Turner observed as she patted a few gray hairs into place and looked hopefully across the breakfast table at her life partner.

Pa looked out of the window toward the blooming apple tree a moment before he answered. His old eyes lighted with pleasure, and then in a reminiscent mood he said slowly: "Ain't it, though Just the kind of a day——"

His wife jumped up from the table and hurried to answer the ringing doorbell and pa continued to himself: "Just the kind of a day for fishing. Goodness! I'll bet they'll be biting like Old Harry."

He was still speculating on the subject when ma returned with a long package and with the eagerness of a debutante proceeded to open it. "Oh, pa, you old dear! You extravagant old dear!" she said as she opened a box of white carnations and lilacs and delightfully breathed their fragrance. She was so pleased that she didn't even notice her husband's look of open mouthed astonishment, but hurried to his side of the table to kiss him. "And, do you know, I was feeling so disappointed. I thought surely you had forgotten all about it." She patted his shoulder and smiled.

"Eh—ah, so was I—so did I. I mean——"

"Yes, I know. Just as you were saying when I left the room. It was just this kind of a day forty years ago that we were married—mercy me! Is your coffee too hot, or did you just swallow the wrong way? Haven't got a cold, I hope?" she asked anxiously as pa choked and sputtered. "I'm so glad you didn't forget," she went on, smiling happily. "Now let me show you what I got for you." She produced a small package, all done up in tissue.

"Another blue tie, I bet," said pa to himself as he unwrapped it. Then, as he viewed the contents: "Just what I wanted. How'd you know I was wishing for just such a fishing line and reel."

"Heard you telling some one about it, and so I saved to get it, so that you could have it for spring fishing."

It was plain that she had really pleased him, and she smiled contentedly as he turned it every way and admired it again and again. Then he returned to his breakfast while she arranged her flowers. "Who on topside of earth had sent them?" he wondered. He knew only too well that he hadn't. He hadn't even known that today was May the 19th, and he vowed as he watched her that she should never know.

She took her seat opposite him and resumed her breakfast. "The Turners down the next block have a new car," said ma as she watched it drive by.

Pa almost jumped. Not with pleasure over his neighbor's car, but because it had suddenly occurred to him where those flowers had come from. "Of course they were meant for the other Turners." He set his jaws in a determined way. "Well, those other Turners would never get them, not if he had to kill a messenger boy or two. He would go out and watch for that boy's return. "I promised Bob I'd go fishing. Hope that dratted boy will hurry up. I can't dare leave until he does," he thought as he lighted his pipe and strolled about the garden. "I'll just dig some bait while I wait. Can keep my eye on the road at the same time."

He had been digging for some time and found a few worms when his wife joined him. "Now, isn't that lovely of you pa?" she said. "Going to dig my garden for me at last. I'd begun to think I should have to get old Ned to do it and he is so careless. You must be feeling extra good this morning."

Pa didn't say a word. A messenger boy was riding leisurely down the street toward their cottage and he did not intend that ma should hear the conversation that he felt was sure to ensue. Picking up his can of worms, he hurried to the side gate. Dropping the can, he opened the gate at the same time and about fifty white chickens made a rush for the worms and the garden.

Ma came with all possible haste to help shoo them back, but some of them were already in the garden and would soon be in among her flowers.

During the excitment that followed the messenger passed, and if pa breathed a sigh of relief ma didn't hear it for the 'phone rang and with a startled look he hastened toward it. It was not the florist that called, though, and pa hurried back to the scene of action.

"What on earth did you go and let all those chickens in here for?" ma panted after the last one was safely behind the barred gate.

"Don't know, just accident, I guess."

"Going to dig them some more worms?" asked ma.

"Who? The chickens? Oh, yes." He picked up his fork as he spoke and resumed his work as she left him. "I've never seen anything to equal the way she can explain all I do so well," he said, with a shake of his head and a smile.

When the morning drew to a close more than half the garden was dug, he had found enough worms to catch all the fish in the lake, but there had been no message from the florist's and "that dratted messenger boy," as pa insisted on thinking him, had not come. "If I only knew just where that boy came from I could 'phone. But no, that wouldn't do. She'd hear me. Looks as though I shall have to keep watch here the rest of my life," he grumbled to himself as the day wore on. It was growing hot and as he wiped the sweat from his forehead on his shirt sleeve and quenched his thirst at the garden faucet he longed to give up, but he knew from past experience that if he should stop his work here ma would find him something to do indoors. She was a regular wonder at it.

Every time a boy approached from any direction pa's face lighted with pleasure and when the drug store messenger came to the back entrance he was surprised to see the old man fairly running toward him. Each time the 'phone rang pa raced to answer it.

"Sure, that fishing tackle was just what you wanted, pa" his wife asked as she stood by the door watching him work.

"Indeed it is. Why?"

"Just wondering why you didn't go fishing today. I thought sure you would."

She looked wonderingly at him as she spoke.

"Just wanted to be with you today, Martha," he smiled.

At dinner time the doorbell rang and he dashed hopefully toward it. "Don't you bother, son, let me 'tend it." It was only a peddler. As pa returned to his dinner with a chastened look his wife said: "My, pa! I believe you are just as attentive and thoughtful as you were forty years ago. Think we'll have to have our anniversaries more often."

"If we do it will have to be over my dead body," pa thought. But he said nothing as he tried to eat his dinner and keep watch over the street at the same time. Still "that dratted boy" did not come and the day dragged on. Such a day for fishing! Plenty of bait! That grand new line and reel! Nowhere to go! The breeze from the lake was intoxicating. It tempted him. It beckoned. At times he almost dropped everything and went to its call.

About 4.30 in the afternoon, the garden all dug, Pa Turner sat on the porch, weary with longing and work, still watching. But spring air, aided by the ample dinner and the hard work, had the upper hand and presently he fell into a doze.

Footsteps approached and he awoke suddenly to greet his sister.

"Hello," she said in a surprised tone. "You here?" Then as she looked about. "How nice the garden looks. My, but you are a good husband to have about! Bob went fishing." She sat down by him and in a lowered voice asked, "Where's Martha?"

"Taking a nap."

"Did the flowers come all right?"

"What the— What flowers?" He clutched at her arm and almost shook her in his excitement. "Sal, Alice, I'll give you $10 not to tell Martha. You won't, will you? I—"

"Sure, I sent them, and, of course, I won't tell. What kind of a sister do you think I am? Don't you remember I promised to remind you the day before your anniversary? Well, I clean forgot it until last night, so I phoned the florist early this morning and ordered flowers. I knew that would be all right, and I knew you'd understand."

There was no time fore explanation as Martha joined them, and pa, still gasping like a hooked fish, looked first toward the freshly dug garden, then far beyond toward the lake. "Knew I'd understand? Did she?" he thought. He was not listening to his sister's conversation.

"Just dropped in a moment," she said to Martha. "Didn't expect to find brother here. Bob was expecting him to join him at the lake, I believe, but I suppose he wanted to dig the flower beds for you."

"Wasn't it lovely of him?" ma smiled.

"Fishin'?" said pa. "Yes, I had thought some about fishin' today."

Fashions for Americans

Unusual Trimming Decks This Dainty Dance Frock of Taffeta.

Taffeta is an ideal material for the spring dance frock, and while the material is worn by women of any age, it seems particularly suitable for the young, slender woman. The material has a crispiness and lends itself to a flare that is particularly becoming to a slim figure, and that seems to express youth. The model shown in the sketch, made of a changeable taffeta, has a particularly interesting trimming and skirt arrangement generally. The skirt folds under at the edge, making a soft line about the ankles and accentuating the flare, and the thrimming consists of rather large garlands of silk flowers appliqued on, with metal and silk ribbon joining the garlands.

Another taffeta dance dress seen featured a paneled skirt made over a two-layer skirt of chiffon in contrasting color, the lower one of these skirts being flower trimmed, while the upper skirt, or layer of chiffon, served to veil the flower trimming in a most effective and dainty way.

High and pastel shades share honors in spring and summer evening and dance dresses of taffeta, the very high shades such as a vivid green, rose, or blue being smart when becoming.

The all-over lace dress is popular for evening year for the more mature woman, and a lace dress is very easily made at home. Frequently a lace wide enough to fashion the entire gown, without a break at the waist line other than that made by the sash or girdle, is obtained, and in this case a lace gown is especially easy tto make. A very graceful gown of tan colored lace, combining in its weave a Spanish and shadow web pattern, was made over a silk foundation in matching shade and trimmed only with a heavy black jet girdle caught at the normal waist line.

Lace for the mature woman, taffeta for the younger one, are undoubtedly excellent selections for the spring evening and dance frock, each fabric being to a large extent its own decoration.

AN OPEN LETTER

FOR THE INFORMATION OF TAXPAYERS OF WICHITA COUNTY: ISN'T IT A FACT THAT APPROXIMATELY $1,000 PER MONTH OF THE TAXPAYERS' MONEY IS BEING WASTED ON BUYING SAND FOR THE CONCRETE ROADS.

J. P. Jones, County Judge, County Commissioners, J. M. Isbell, County Engineer

You have not seen fit to reply to our open letter No. 1 published in the daily papers of this city March 4th, 5th and 6th. It seems to us that if our position is not right you would be glad to explain to the Tax Payers wherein we have misinformed them.

We are, in this letter, going to give some additional information regarding the way you are buying sand for the concrete roads you are building in this county. First we want the Tax Payers to know that since the Company has been under its present management at least, it has had no desire to have you buy any of our products without it is first-class in every respect and meets the specifications of the State and Federal Highway Departments, whose specifications you work under in securing State and Federal Aid. To show you our good faith in this respect we wrote you a letter some months ago suggesting that we would be pleased to have you place an inspector at our plant, appointed by you to pass on the quality of our product and the expense of having such inspector to be met by us. You refused to do this and after such refusal we made arrangements with the best consulting engineer in this city to inspect and test every car of our sand before it was hauled to your unloading plant. It was not our intention for any car to be delivered to you from our plant until it had received this very rigid examination. However, we cannot be responsible for samples exhibited when taken by a prejudiced party, as it is entirely too easy for a sample to be taken and "salted" with Wichita County dirt and then tested or exhibited.

We want the Tax Payers to know that several weeks ago we called on you while the Court was in session and brought with us samples of sand taken from cars shipped you from other plants and placed them before you. You were of the impression when these samples were shown you that this sand was from our plant and immediately condemned it, saying that you could not afford to use any such sand in your roads. We think you were absolutely right in this instance, as some of the sand was of very inferior quality, containing clay balls, roots, sticks and other foreign matter, making it a very poor quality of sand. It developed however, at this meeting that this sand had already been unloaded at your plant and was unquestionably used in the road work. In other words it seemed that after you found that it did not come from our plant some miraculous change in quality of same was effected and the sand was entirely satisfactory, according to your judgment, for use. Please understand that the sand we are now discussing is sand that you are now paying 10c per ton more for than we are asking for ours, which will pass the most rigid examination by an unprejudiced and competent engineer.

Another question we would like to ask and have you answer to the Tax Payers of this County is, why are you so anxious to have all the money released by the banks so it can all be spent this year, instead of running over several months into the next year? What benefits, if any, are to be derived by the Tax Payers in having this money spent more rapidly than you first anticipated? Why not give your successors in office a chance to spend a portion of this money and see if they cannot build more miles of road for the same money than you are building?

Since writing our Open Letter No. 1 numerous Tax Payers of this County have written and talked to us about this proposition, all of whom, without exception, have suggested that we, in the vernacular of the baseball fan "Pour It On." And for your information will say that their suggestion is going to be followed until justice and right prevail.

We shall be glad to hear from as many of the Tax Payers of this County as see fit to write or talk to us regarding it and invite either criticism or commendation of our attitude, as all we are asking for is a square deal, which if given to us will mean a saving of many thousands of dollars to the Tax Payers of Wichita County.

A Wife or a Profession?

Chapter XVIII.

Luella Glower had scoffed at Annette for being so ready to make of herself a household drudge.

"Men never really appreciate that sort of woman," she said, thinking herself worldly-wise.

"I'm not doing it for him. I'm doing it because I want to. We haven't much money, Luella, and I think with only two of us I should do all but the heavy work."

After Luella left, however, Annette flung after her: "If you only knew how I hated it all!"

Often Luella had asked Annette if she weren't jealous because of the visits Howard had to make upon the women of the community and at the hospital.

In spite of some inward qualms Annette denied any feeling of jealousy.

"If I can't hold him against the sort of women he sees I deserve to lose him," had been her reply. But one day this was suddenly altered.

"Have you heard about the beautiful girl at the hospital, the one injured in that automobile accident?" Louella asked.

"No—what about her?"

"Why, there was a terrible automobile accident yesterday. Fortunately it happened near the hospital. Father told us about it at dinner. It seems it was a gay sort of joy ride—two girls and two men. One of the men was killed, one girl badly injured. The other man slightly, and the other girl not at all. Father said they looked like city people. That means they were well dressed."

"And they are at the hospital?"

"Of course! Didn't Mr. Blake tell you?"

"No—he never talks what he calls his business at home."

"Doesn't he tell you about his patients—who they are?"

"No—never. But tell me, how was the girl hurt?"

"A cut on her head, a broken leg, broken in two places, father said, and cuts and bruises. He said she had a lot of yellow hair, cut short—he meant bobbed, of course—and big blue eyes. Father isn't very observing, and she must have been unusually pretty for him to notice her. I should hate to marry a doctor," she added after a moment, "especially a young good-looking one like Dr. Blake. He IS the best looking thing! I should be so jealous I should be perfectly miserable every moment he was away from me if he belonged to me."

That night when Howard came in he felt that the atmosphere was surcharged with something inimical. Dinner was ready, a bit more palatable than some of them had been, but Annette was singularly quiet. Finally she asked:

"Why haven't you told me anything of the girl at the hospital?"

"What girl?"

"Don't pretend to be innocent. That girl who was injured in the motor accident."

"There is nothing to tell. She is a patient at the hospital, that's all."

"No, that isn't all. She's your patient."

"Yes. I set her leg and dressed her head."

"I suppose you admired her bobbed yellow hair while you were doing it."

"She has very beautiful hair," he returned abstractedly, not sensing the sarcasm.

"There's a lot of things being said and she's been there only a day."

"Things being said?"

"Yes. You are young—so is she."

"Is that what you've been driving at? My God, Annette! Are you as small souled as that?" His voice was very hard. "That poor broken girl suffering terribly, and you—" Indignation choked him, he could say no more.

That which he had never feared had come to pass. Annette was going to be jealous of his women patients—if they happened to be young and good looking. He must nip it in the bud at once or she would make much unhappiness for herself and for him. He said:

"I am astonished at you, Annette. I love you. My patients are my patients. Never let me hear you say again anything that throws a slur upon my relations with them."

"But why didn't you tell me about her?"

"I have told you many times that I never shall discuss my patients, their illness, nor what they choose to tell me, with you. A doctor often is made a sort of father confessor. You must put from your mind all idea that I shall ever change in this respect. I never shall."

"Mr. Gower told his family about her."

"About the accident, perhaps. That is all in the paper tonight. I brought it home for you to read."

There was a long silence. Annette rose from the table and turned away. He could not see her face, yet he knew she was dissatisfied, that she was displeased with what he had said.

CIVIC LEAGUE MAKES PLANS FOR MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

Plans for launching an extensive membership campaign Tuesday with headquarters at the Y. W. C. A. and a buffet luncheon to be served at the noon hour to the workers were made at the March meeting of the Civic League held at the library Tuesday afternoon. The work also to include the rounding up of all past dues and the payment of new dues. Mrs. J. M. Isbell, chairman of the membership committee, and Mesdames W. S. Curlee, Hubert Harrison, J. W. Stone and R. E. Hillburn, district chairman, will begin immediately to shape up their plans for the big drive, and get their workers together.

Mrs. Curlee, in charge of the tree sale reported all but 25 of the 300 trees ordered in January sold, and Mrs. C. C. Randle, in charge of the distribution of plants for beautifying the city, reported nine tubs of canna bulbs already distributed and is asking any one else having any surplus plants of any variety to report to her.

Mrs. M. H. Glover, chairman of the sanitary committee, reported the assistance of the committee is giving Dr. A. H. Douglas in the health show this week and also that plans are being made by the members to maintain a booth at the fair in April. The committee to meet her home Friday afternoon to further discuss these plans. A note being taken by the league to go on record to assist the fair committee in any way possible.

A splendid representation from the Sibley-Taylor and North Side leagues were present at the meeting, and reported progress and enthusiastic work being done by them. The negro civic league reported through Mrs. M. M. Adickes, the donation of $125 to be applied on the money to buy trees for local school grounds.

A motion was made and carried that attention be brought to the city council, that an ordinance be adopted if there was none, and if there is one that it be enforced, to muzzle all dogs running on the streets.

A vote of thanks was tendered the Stone Printing company for the tags furnished by them for the trees, and also to Moore & Richolt for the use of their lot for bedding and selling the trees, and to the street and fire departments of the city for assistance given in handling them.

Announcement was made of the coming of Miss Anne Morgan and the league requested to hear her speak Sunday afternoon.

Cleveland Indians to Show Here Saturday

SKIPPER SALM DRIVES SQUAD HARD, PREPARING FOR MAJOR LEAGUERS

Ray O'Brien Looks Like a Million Bucks in Initial Workout. Schmidt Shows Class Behind Plate. Bischoff and Tex McDonald Report, and White Wires He's on Way.

I like the way that Evans kid
Digs baseballs from the dirt;
I like to see ol' Buddy slow
So lively, spry and pert;
I like to see that Ray Schmidt catch,
I'm glad that Bisch is back;
Today I look to see ol' Tex
A-steppin' 'round the track.
Youngsters, yets, both green and ripe,
Are leanin' on the ball;
The training's started. Oh, hot dawg!
Gosh-durn! I love 'em all! !
—Song of the Goofy Fan.

And the Goofy Fan is right; I string along with him. There was a whirling zest in the air of Athletic park yesterday; an atmosphere charged with cheering smiles and foolish grins, excited questions and aw-me-I-know answers, sailing baseballs and flying spikes, yells of encouragement and hoots of good-natured sarcasm, middle-aged business men offering to hit fungoes to the outfield and little boys crammed full of hero worship—a general pot pourri of baseball veterans and rookies, all fighting for places on the roster of the 1922 Spudders.

With every passing hour the situation looks a little rosier, fellers, Ray O'Brien and George Bischoff bobbed up in uniform; Tex McDonald hopped off a train at 2:00 o'clock, while White, the infielder, purchased from the Oakland club of the Coast league, wired from Framinghsm, Mass., that his contract was on its way and he would be aboard the next train West. And on the top of these cheering bits of baseball news, several rookies yesterday uncorked some talent that delighted the spectators and put a pleased smile on Skipper Salm's face.

Cleveland Indians Coming

Yes, and I might as well slap in right here at the start the joyous tidings that the Cleveland Indians will be here to battle the Spudders this coming Saturday and Sunday. You know them there Indians, the fighting crew of the American league, bossed by the "Silver Fox," Tris Speaker, a native Texan? I'll say you do! They'll be here, Covelesdie, Bagby, Joe Sewell, Stephenson, "Wamiy," and a host of rookies—twenty players in all. Saturday's opening battle will start at 3:30 o'clock, and the tussle on Sunday afternoon will get under way at 3:00. Don't miss 'er, kid, don't miss 'er.

Ray O'Brien? Listen, folks. At the risk of giving that laddybuck a slight attack of "conceitis," I'm going to state he sure looks like the find of the Texas league '22 season. He's got the legs of a sprinter, or I never saw a track meet; he has the southpaw flipper that can drive 'em in from deep outfield, and he lays that bat against the apples in crisp, smacking fashion. Old fans who saw him yesterday viewed his workout with increasing enthusiasm. Unless I am badly fooled, Ray O'Brien will win many ball games for the Spudders this year.

George Bischoff bobbed up unexpectedly, appeared at the park, climbed into a "unie" and took his first plunge into the training grind. Bisch hasn't signed the papers as yet, but at least he is here and that in itself looked good to the fans. George spent the winter in a tin mill, and is drawn down pretty fine—no extra weight, and in fair all-around condition except for a little stiffness in his underpinning.

While on the subject of backstops, look over that lad Ray Schmidt the next time you visit the park, will you? If he isn't a likely looking catches. I'm a deacon in the colored Methodist church. He's a chunky devil, powerfully built, apparently cool-headed and has as pretty a snap throw to the bags as I've seen in a long time—whips 'em right down at the fielders' ankles, where they can put the pill on a base runner pronto. He handled his big glove cleverly, and he takes a mean slap at the old apple. Just on the stuff thus far shown, it looks to me as though Schmidt is the man Bischoff has got to beat in the race for a side-partner to Frank Kitchens.

Evans, from Somerset, Colo., there's another natural young player. Skipper Salm picked a try-out infield yesterday composed of Holloway, first base; Storey Williams, second; Buddy Tanner, short and Evans, third, and the boy from the Rocky Mountains showed a pretty eye, a nice pair of hands, an ability to get the ball away and a powerful peg.

Buddy Tanner looks to me better than at any time in the past two years. I swear it looks as though, now that he has had a whole winter of rest, that operation for appendicitis has made a new man out of the fighting little Spudder shortstop. Naturally in company with his rookie partners, Buddy looked good—but discounting the effects of comparison I want to say that I believe Buddy Tanner is ready for a big come-back. More power to him.

Ray O'Brien, Speck Comstock and Benny Allen stand out as the class of the present crop of outfielders. O'Brien took it easily yesterday, but he handled himself with a grace and a certainty that was pleasing to watch. Comstock has more pep and ginger than any man in the squad. He has grown in stature since last spring; has rounded out and is a huskier lad. He looks pretty good, save for a bad habit at the plate of taking a double strike in going in to meet the ball.

There was a lot of solid slugging being done yesterday during the batting barrage. No one succeeded in whamming the apple out of the orchard, but there were solid, substantial base hits a-plenty. One of the leading sluggers, incidentally, was this rookie first baseman, one Walter Salm from the sand lots of Corsicana. He's kinder over-weight, but he chews a wicked cud and wields a brutal bludgeon—and I suspect he's lamer than Billy-be-durned this morning!

I talked with Tex McDonald along in the afternoon, and Tex made a little speech:

"There may be a dozen youngster's out there after my job," said Tex, "but I don't intend to lose it. I had a good winter and I kept in condition. I'm in better shape today than I've been in at any time during the past five years (and he looks it). The leg that troubled me last year is O. K., and I'm ready to work. Don't expect me to jump up and down, and holler. I never was that kind of a ball player. I take baseball as I take life—just as it comes, and I don't hoorah and shout over either. There are sunny days and rainy days in baseball also. Just as there are in life; da's when a feller goes big, and days when he can't seem to be at top form. But you just tell the fans that old Tex will give the best that's in him all the time."

Every twirler on the squad took a turn at feeding 'em up to the batters yesterday, and of the bunch I'd say off-hand, that George Knadler and Steve Mokan easily stood out. "Knidler appears to have better control right now that he showed late last season (or else it looks that way because he isn't cutting 'em lose). Salm is working on the big boy hard, and is determined to make him show everything he's got—sent him around the park twice at the close of the afternoon practice, whereas the others escaped with one lap. If hard work will bring out George's ability as a twirler, he's sure going to have a fair chance.

Everybody's hearing the call, gang. Billy Newell ("Here y'are, get a nice soft cushion, only a few left") slipped into the park along in the afternoon, and was decorated with the Ancient Order of the Welcoming Hand. Billy is a little fatter, and he had the nerve to swear it came from eating all his meals in his own "restauraw" in Wortham. Buddy Tanner, however, says Billy put on weight by eating in Buddy's hash house in Mexia. All I know is neither of 'em ever spent a hungry day.

The Spudders versus the Cleveland Indians Saturday and Sunday. Gosh! Let's get in some more practice today, huh?

KRAZY KATZ HAVE PRACTICALLY ALL JOINED IGN-ATZ

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, March 7.—With the arrival today of Henry (Possum) Moore, catcher of the Champion Fort Worth Cats, the local training camp list is almost complete, although Bill Stellbauer, whom Judge Landis recently awarded to Fort Worth has not shown up yet. Stellbauer is expected to report tomorrow. He is now at his home in Houston. Morris Tavener, former star in the South Atlantic league, who is the property of Detroit, is showing up better than any of the new men, according to Manager Atz. Hardgrove, last year with Rockford in the Three-I league has practically already cinched the third base position.

Braves Have "Imported" Diamond

Special to the Record News.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 7.—When Owner George Washington Grant and Manager Fred Mitchell, with their Boston Braves, arrived in the "Sunshine City" they found the south's best training camps, patterned after the New York Polo grounds, in perfect condition and ready for the National leaguers to begin their spring training grind.

St. Petersburg spent a barrel of money in improving Water Front Baseball park for the Braves' visitation, $15,000 trickling away in labor and to the railroads for hauling tons of Georgia clay, phosphate outcroppings from mines nearby and for heavy black loam.

Six layers of soil are laid on the diamonds and on top of the sand base. The infield is turtle back and is just as fast as any major league grounds. Before the soil was brought in a batted ball fell dead in the sand, and a base runner was slowed up in running the paths. But now, on real clay and earth, the Boston bean eaters can travel as fast as they can at home.

St. Petersburg's ball park is located on the Tampa bay water front, is a half block off the city's main thoroughfare, and is just three minutes from the center of everything, including the big hotel and shopping district.

In back of the ball park is the St. Petersburg Yacht club, where the Braves have been invited as guests during their stay in the "Sunshine City."

George Grant says that his search for the ideal training camp for the warriors is at an end and that St. Petersburg will be the future spring headquarters of the Boston Nationals if the "Sunshine City" will have them.

BOY SCOUTS TO SETTLE CAGE CHAMPIONSHIP

The "crooshul serious" in the basket ball play for the Boy Scouts championship will open at the American Legion hall next Friday night with a doubleheader elimination test to determine the resting place for the title. Four teams, Troops No. 2, 4, 6, and 15, are tied in the league race, and on Friday night two of 'em will be out of it for keeps.

Troop 6 will face Troop 2 in the opening game, and Troop 4 and Troop 15 will furnish the closing fireworks. The two winning teams will then settle the championship next week.

An admission price of 10 cents to all Boy Scouts and 25 cents to other fans will be charged. The games should be well worth the money, as the Scout teams are made up of wiry youngsters, many of them of high school age, who have been playing together all winter. As an indication of the class of the league it might be stated that one of the troop teams early in the season defeated the fast Legion quintet of the City Basketball league in an exhibition battle.

An effort is being made to arrange a game between the championship scout team and the Boy Scouts five of Lawton, Okla., as a windup to the cage season here.

It is expected that either McClain, the City league referee, or "Smiler" Ferguson, will act as arbiter in the elimination battles of Friday night. The first game will be called at 7.45 o'clock sharp.

MORAN PUTS REDS THROUGH WORKOUT

By Associated Press.

MINERAL WELLS, March 7.—Manager Pat Moran sent his sixteen Cincinnati Reds through a light workout here this afternoon, the first of the spring training season. Pitchers limbered their wings while the rest of the party took a walk up the mountain back of the town and several later shot a round of golf. Infielders worked out during the afternoon, while Moran fungoed to the pasture players for about a half hour. Basketball will be used as a conditioner starting Wednesday, Moran announced.

"GENTLEMAN JIM" HAD NOTHING ON GENTLEMAN JACK

Jack Dempsey as he appears in his act at the New York hippodrome.

His dressy appearance and his quiet and gentlemanly manner earned James J. Corbett, old-time heavyweight champion, the sobriquet of "Gentleman Jim," which he still carries. We hereby present: "Gentleman Jack." Jack Dempsey is appearing on the New York hippodrome stage these days in a tuxedo, white front 'n everything. Doesn't look much like the fighting machine of the ring, does he?

PITCHER JESS BARNES SIGNS UP WITH GIANTS

By Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 7.—After conferring with Secretary James J. Tierney and Manager John J. McGraw of the New York Giants, Jess Barnes, star pitcher of the 1921 world's series, tonight signed his new contract. Secretary Tierney said all differences between the club officials and Barnes had been ironed out.

The Giants played a practice game this afternoon after getting their regular workout this morning. Barnes, Nehf, Jonnard, Shea, Causey, Virgil Barnes, McGloughlin and Ryan were used as pitchers. The team were mixtures of regulars and recruits and the game went for nine innings.

The first real exhibition game of the season will be payed tomorrow between the regulars and Yannigans.

WELL KNOWN HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETE IS SERIOUSLY INJURED

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, March 7.—Andrew J. Saxon, Mineral Wells, well known high school athlete, may die as result of injuries received today at Mann's crossing, four miles south of Pilot Point, when an automobile in which he and Sam South, cattleman of Pilot Point, were riding, was struck by a passenger train on the M. K. & T. railroad.

They were rushed to Dallas from Pilot Point, where they received first aid. Surgeons stated Saxon has little chance of recovery.

BURNS ARE FATAL TO AGED MINEOLA WOMAN

By Associated Press.

MINEOLA, Texas, March 7.—"Grandma" Hardy, 82 years old, died from burns received 12 hours before, when her clothing caught fire from the fire place at the home of her daughter several miles east of Mineola, it was reported today. She was a lifelong member of the Methodist church and is survived by one child and a number of other relatives in the vicinity.

CHICAGO FANS WORRIED OVER HURLING STARS

Whether Alexander the Great and Urban the Red Will "Come Through" Causes Much Speculation.

BY LUTHER A. HOUSTON
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Chicago fans are indulging in a lot of prognosticating just now regarding the baseball future of two of the greatest pitchers that ever curved the horsehide. Reference is had to Grover Cleveland Alexander and to Urban "Red" Faber.

Beyond any question the baseball days of these two exponents of the twirling are are numbered. Each of them has seen something in excess of thirty-two or three summers slip by and, as baseball ages go, are about ready to pass "over the hill." Chicago fans realize that and in a sense are prepared for it, but what the real bugs are "pestercatin'" their minds about now is what these two mound performers will do in the season that is just about to burst into rich and luxurious bloom.

An ominibus silence has prevailed up to the time that this was written in the camp of the Cubs on far-away Catalina Island concerning the condition of Alexander the Great. This silence may mean that something pleasant is being held in store for the fans and it may mean that out of the silence finally will come the news of the virtual passing of one of the game's greatest mounsmen.

Rejoicing Recalled

When the Cubs were in training a year ago the wires from the West were kept thrumming with dispatches telling of the return to form of Alexander, after is army experiences, and there was rejoicing in the ranks of Bruin believers. Then the great Alex ascended the hill for the opening game of the season, pitched a few innings, was taken out and did not twirl again for many weeks. It was said that a photographer, shooting snapshots of the opening day ceremonies, had jostled the elbow of the great pitcher and injured his salary souper.

Whatever the circumstances Alexander twirled through the season with rather indifferent success. True, he was not backed up by the best team in the National league, but he did not have the best team in the world back of him in those days when he was standing 'em on their heads as a member of the Phillies. The fact seemed to be that Alex himself was not the pitcher he had been.

Long before the other players of the Cubs had begun to give thought to the approaching season Alex hied himself to Catalina and began to get in shape physically by playing golf and stealing the stuff of the mountain goats by climing nimbly about the crags and ledges that form so large a part of Catalina's conteur. When the advance guard of the Cublets arrived Alex already was listed as one of the natives of Mr. Wrigley's illustrious isle.

Hope of Fandom

Perhaps all this preliminary preparation will produce results and Alexander may crash forth in the present season as the remarkable thrower he was in years gone by. A legion of fans in Chicago and other legions elsewhere hope this will prove the case. But there is a sneaking suspicion in the minds of many that the arm of the sandy slinger from the Cornhusker state has given almost the last full measure of service to the national pastime and is ready to pass the job of cheating lungry batsmen out of base hits on to more juvenile bone and sinew.

When "Red" Faber turned in twenty-five victories in the 1921 season with so mediocre a club as the White Sox behind him he stamped himself as one of the greatest curvers of the age. The henna-thatched heaver from Cascade, Iowa, who gave that hamlet its only claim to fame, wanted to make it thirty victories for the year and doubtless would have succeeded had it not been for an injured knee that kept him off the firing line during the closing three weeks of the season.

Faber Has Operation

During the winter Faber underwent an operation to have the damaged condition of his knee corrected. A loose cartilage or cord or tendon or something was removed. When he departed for the spring training camp Faber claimed that the knee was as strong as ever.

All reports from the camp thus far indicate that he was right. If he was, then Kid Gleason has a score or more of games already packed in his old kit bag, for there is nothing in the world the matter with Faber's pitching tools.

The question that arises in the minds of the fans, however, is whether Faber's knee will stand up under the strenuous endeavors of the regular season. If he is disabled the hopes of the Sox for staying out of the cellar seem slim. If he goes through the season uninjured and gets any help from Dick Kerr and the young pitchers, the Sox might edge their way into the first division.

IRISH MUESEL SUGGESTS NEW SCORING IDEA

Lanky Fly Chaser Would Credit Batter With Number of Bases He Advances Runner on Path.

(By International News Service.)

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 7.—As an outfielder who contributed materially to the success of the New York Giants last season, "Irish" Meusel, in Spring training with his teammates here, says he is ready to break into the statistician class. He says batting averages should be revised. And he says he is not in favor of the new system simply because he proved a leader of it in the recent world's series games. He says his plan will give credit where credit is due.

Meusel's scheme is to credit the batter with the amount of bases he advances a man.

It is well known among baseball men that some batters are better at the plate than others when there are men on the bases. The nervous tension proves too much for some of the hitters.

Dope on Sluggers.

Sluggers who can whale the ball a mile when the sacks are empty often take that long walk back to the water bucket when there are two or three men on the sacks.

Meusel's scheme is if a man is on second base and the batter hits a long single and scores the runner the hitter should be given credit in a special column for three bases—the one he made himself and the two he advanced the runner.

If the sacks were loaded and he cleaned them with a double he would get credit for the two bases he made himself, the three the man covered who was on first, the two the man from second passed, and the single base for the player who was on third. That would give the slugger a credit of eight bases.

How About Scorers?

While Meusel's system might make a hit with ball players, it would not go over strong with the scorers.

"In games in Southern California this winter I have noticed how the present system of basing averages fails to tell a player's true value," said Meusel.

"A hit that advances a man is more valuable than one without anyone on base. They are not worth ten cents a dozen, but imagine how the fans would clamor for a hit with the bases loaded, or with only one man on."

An electromagnet with a long bat face has been designed by a Chicago man for handling sheet metal.

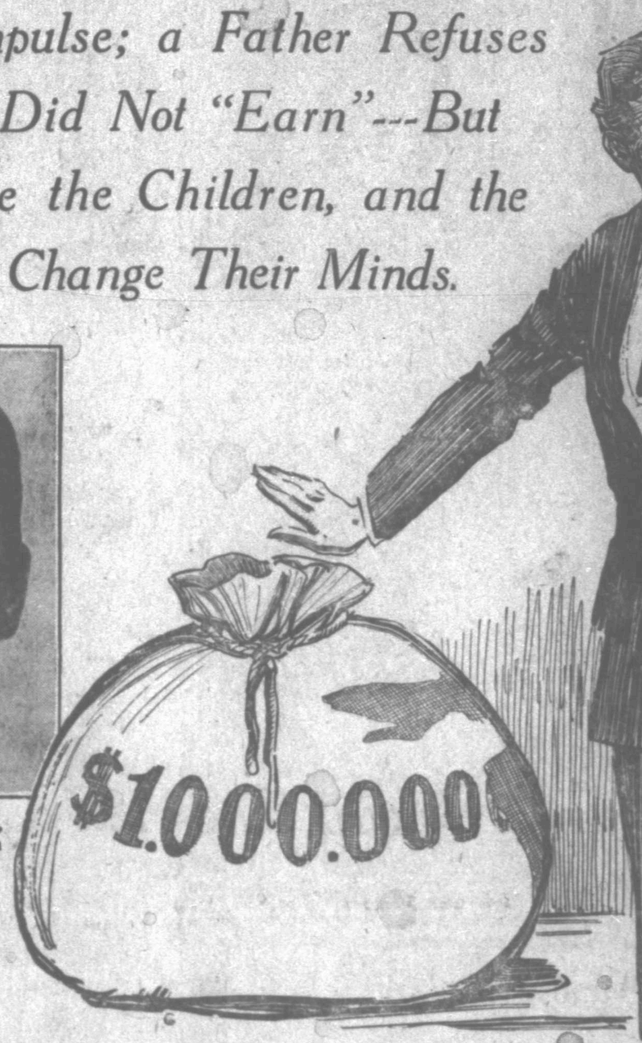
The Babies Who Salvaged Spurned Millions

A Mother Turns from Wealth on a Patriotic Impulse; a Father Refuses Riches He Did Not "Earn"---But Along Come the Children, and the Grown-Ups Change Their Minds.

Countess Mary de Mumm, Child Who Reclaimed Millions That Her Late Mother, an American, Refused Because the Father Was a German.

Baron Walter de Mumm, German, Who Has Won in the American Courts the Legal Custody of His Little Daughter.



Mrs. Charles Garland, Who Has Left Her Eccentric Husband.

By Betty Van Benthuysen

FATE seems to have a faculty of saving little children from suffering from the renunciation of their rights by their elders, and two striking instances have appeared in which fortunes have been preserved for little ones in the face of the wishes of their natural protectors that the golden stores might not come to them.

Baron Walter de Mumm, head of the great champagne house, has just been given the custody of his little daughter, Mary, restoring her to the estates and titles of his house, after her mother, who was Miss Frances Scoville, of Albany, Kansas, had left the Baron, renounced his fortune and titles, and had her own American citizenship restored by a special act of the Congress.

Mrs. Charles Garland, pretty young wife of the eccentric heir of a Boston millionaire, has left the merit farm upon which he established them at North Carver, Mass., when he refused to accept a legacy of $1,600,000, and has made the recluse agree to give her the one-third dower right she would have in the rejected estate.

In separating from the recluse with the queer notions respecting wealth, Mrs. Garland acted purely for the baby, a mere infant of a few months. And the leave-taking of the wife has had the added effect of influencing the hermit to take the estate, but with the view of having ten associates in a newly-formed religious cult give away the two-thirds that are not involved in the payment to the wife.

The two cases form a strange combination of circumstances affecting the rights of little children. In the one case a mother put aside a huge fortune; in the other the father. The motives were as wide apart as the poles. Back in the year 1913, pretty Frances Scoville, belle of a little Kansas town, was traveling in Switzerland when she met the Baron de Mumm. The controlling figure in the big champagne industry was an instant victim to her charm. He wooed rapidly and won. They were married in London.

The little girl was born at Frankfort, Germany, in 1914, and the World War came. The father was an ardent German; the mother a pro-Ally. Estrangement followed over this difference of allegiance, and they separated.

Mme. de Mumm went to France to live, and there were located the vine properties that formed the basis of the Baron's fortune. Ardently loving the French cause, Mme. de Mumm was nevertheless an alien enemy from the technical point of view. The French government seized her husband's properties.

She came back to the United States and had her citizenship restored by an act of the Congress, and then returned to France to make a fight for her part of the husband's seized estate. She effected a legal separation from the Baron and came back in 1919 for a visit.

The little girl, thus barred from the title and fortune that belonged to her, was left with her grandparents at Seneca, Kansas. The mother, seeking restoration to health, went to Europe and her death took place in Paris, May 5, 1919. Then the United States, after a long delay, made peace with Germany, and when the peace was signed, Baron de Mumm started suit in New Jersey to regain custody of his child. He has just won his case, and the little girl gets the title and the inheritance that a mother's renunciation would have taken from her.

The Garland case presents another picture, stranger by far. Charles Garland is one of four children—he has two brothers and a sister—who inherited $1,600,000 each upon the death of their father, James A. Garland, of Boston. Garland went to Harvard where he devoted himself largely to the study of Tolstoi, Karl Marx, Walt Whitman and Edward Carpentier. He also tackled economics of a type too heavy for an untrained and immature mind.

But there is no conviction on earth so fixed as that of a very young man who thinks he has evolved a Great Truth from history. He became obsessed with the idea that wealth was a curse. Just before he reached legal age in November, 1920, he married a daughter of Philip W. Wrenn, head of a stock exchange house of Boston and New York, of which Robert Wrenn, brother to Philip, is the New York representative. He will be recalled as a former holder of the world's championship at tennis.

She was beautiful and earnest. She shared, at first, the unusual ideas of her husband. They went to live on the ancient farm he had selected as his home. A mere shack served as a house; the fittings were of the most primitive and uncomfortable sort. A lawyer came along with the $1,600,000 in high class securities that represented Garland's inheritance, and he pushed it aside.

"I did not earn it," he said.

There Garland, wearing the crudest and cheapest clothing, worked on his farm. He made his own bread; he toiled in the field.

But he had other fixed ideas, thoughts that when applied presented a perplexing problem to his devoted wife. He organized a cult called the "Christiananists."

There seemed to be little doubt that the pretty young wife, who had left a home that contained every luxury, tolerated even this queer cult until the stork came. Then the mother instinct prevailed, and the young mother concluded that the child had some rights that its parents had no authority to deny. She urged the husband to take his estate, and he reluctantly agreed, with the provision that such part of it as did not go to the wife should be distributed by his ten fellow-religionists for the benefit of mankind. Then, her child protected, Mrs. Garland took the baby and left the farm. She established a home at New Dedham, where she is awaiting the coming of another child.

The Late Baroness de Mumm, Former Frances Scoville, Kansas Girl, Who Renounced Her German Husband.

Above—Charles Garland, Who Rejected His Rich Inheritance and Who Has Free Love Notions. At Left—Baby Margaret Garland, Who Caused Her Wealth-Denying Father to Change His Mind.

With the leave-taking of the young wife it was found that Garland's ten ideals were chiefly women, and that at least two of them had lived with him unblushingly, and at the time when his own wife formed a part of the household.

Most striking among these was Lillian Conrad, 26, pretty and well educated.

"I defy the whole world to move me from my course," she said, when she first left Garland. "I will not allow the world to persecute me for the love I bear him. I am responsible to myself alone for what I have done, and even if Charles Garland meets another woman and loves her, it will be all right with me, for I have loved and lived.

"We knew when we were together on the farm that the law might seize us. We often wondered during some of our most divinely happy moments on the farm—the days when bliss was at its height—what would happen if the police should break in on us."

"I am only doing openly," continues the unmasked Miss Conrad, "and doing sincerely what many of my critics are doing secretly and hypocritically. I have lived with Charles Garland as his wife because I saw no wrong in it. I set no store by a legal bond that forces people to live together whether they profit by it or not.

"My love for Garland was Destiny. I followed my heart. When two people need each other, spiritually and physically, they have no alternative but to belong to each other."

Fitts Is After Meter Readers

Police Commissioner Fitts is the father of a city ordinance being drawn by City Attorney Mann, which is aimed to act as a check on all meter readings made by the gas and electric light companies and by the city water department. Although the ordinance covers general regulation of public utilities corporations, the main feature of the bill is the provision for more systematic meter readings.

The ordinance provides that duplicates must be made of all meter readings and that the companies must furnish the consumers with these duplicates, which must show not only the present monthly reading but also the reading of the last month previous. Commissioner Fitts believes that such a system will require more accurate readings than he considers have been made in the past, and will also furnish a ready reference for use whenever complaints are made by consumers.

The new ordinance will probably be ready to submit to the city council next Monday evening.

BOOTLEGGER AGED FIVE YEARS GETS PLAYMATE 'STEWED'

By Associated Press.

DAVENPORT, Iowa, March 7.—The world's youngest bootlegger has been found. He is Marion Abney, five years old.

Gladys Berry, six, a playmate of the Abney boy, came home yesterday under the influence of liquor and just like the grown-ups, she endeavored to protect the source of supply when confronted by her parents. She said she had secured the drinks at a jewelry shop in the neighborhood.

D. T. Jones, the proprietor of the shop was arrested on information filed by the girl's father. In court Marion Abney was the star witness and his testimony cleared the jeweler. "I gave Gladys two glasses of wine when Mama was away, and she drank it all," testified the five-year-old lad.

MARKET REPORTS

Grain

CHICAGO, March 7.—Wheat pursued an irregular downward course here today chiefly owing to an unexpected decline in quotations at Liverpool. The close in Chicago was unsettled 1 5-8 to 2c net lower, with May 1.41 5-8 to 1.41 7-8 and July 1.19 7-8 to 1.20. Corn lost 3-8@ 1-2 to 1c, oats finished unchanged to 1-4c off, and provisions varying from a setback of 7c to 10c advance.

Selling of wheat at Liverpool was reported to have assumed large proportions, and this fact together with favorable field advices from the domestic winter crop territory had a noticeable disconcerting influence on would-be purchasers here. Another element of uncertainty was the government report tomorrow regarding farm reserves stocks of wheat. One estimate current which was constructed as tending to bring about lower price put the total at 125,000,000 bushels with as much more in the visible supply and in interior elevators. Occasional rallies which took place failed to prove of a lasting character, and were based for the most part on gossip that extorters were after wheat at Omaha and Duluth and that good sized sales of flour had been made at Minneapolis. On the whole, however, trade lacked volume, and commission house dealings were the smallest in sometime.

Corn followed the leadership of wheat. Oats on the contrary displayed independence. The relative strength of oats was ascribed to liberal export dealings in oats at the seaboard.

Provisions although firmer early in line with the hog market were weakened later by selling of lard on the part of smaller packers with foreign connections.

Stocks

NEW YORK, March 7.—Trading on the stock exchange today lapsed into its recent uncertain trend. Much of the previous session's spirited rebound on the supreme court's gas rate decision was cancelled.

Dealings were comparatively light and the listless movements of various specialties and other speculative issues indicate temporary abandonment of aggressive operations by bullish professional interests.

Similar conditions were applicable to the more important commodity markets, money rates and international exchanges, where dullness and price reactions were the prevailing characteristics.

Sugars, coppers, local tractions and several of the cheaper rails, together with Studebaker, American Ice, American Can and Corn Products, featured the markets stronger side, while oils and the junior motors, steels and equipments were irregular or heavy.

Sales amounted to 685,000 shares.

The one definite and significant development of the day was contained in Pittsburgh dispatches which announced price advances in bars, shapes and plates by the largest independent producers of that district.

Mills in the Chicago district reported a pronounced increase of production but Chairman Gary of the U. S. Steel corporation, was quoted as saying that he "had not seen any substantial evidence of general and rapid recovery to normalcy."

Brokers representing leading banks were free lenders of call money in the open at 4½ per cent, but in private offerings plenty of money was available at 4½ per cent. Commercial paper was sold at 4½ per cent, but all maturities beyond the three months period held at 5 per cent.

Excepting Scandinavian bills, which were strong, the entire foreign exchange market showed further unsettlement. Sterling reacted almost 2 cents and Italian bills fell 15 points on political disturbances in that country. The Dutch rate yielded 16 points, French and Belgian quotations losing 5 and 12 points respectively.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The raw sugar market was firmer and while there was no change on the spot, Cubas for April shipment were higher on sales of 70,000 bags at 2.1-2c cost and freight, equal to 3.86 for centrifugal. Spot prices were quoted at 2.3-16c cost and freight, equal to 3.79 for centrifugal with no sales.

The raw sugar futures market was more active and prices higher on buying by trade interests and commission houses, prompted by the advance in the spot market. Final prices were 3 to 5 points net higher. May closed 2.46; July 2.66; September 2.82; December 2.83.

The demand for refined sugar was again of fair proportions and prices were firm and unchanged at 5.10 to 5.20 for granulated.

Refined futures were without transactions. Closing prices were unchanged at 5.60 for May; 5.85 for July and 5.90 for September.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Following an early advance of 5 to 14 points cottonseed oil reacted some 14 to 17 points under scattered liquidation on the heavy appearance of lard and grain. Prices again steadied however, through support from leading holders and room covering. Closing bids were 2 points lower to 4 net higher. Sales 24,400 barrels. Prime crude 1.025; sales prime summer yellow spot 11.50; May 11.73; July 11.91; September 12.08, all bid.

LIVERPOOL SPOT COTTON

LIVERPOOL, March 7.—Cotton spot in good demand but business moderate; prices firm; good middling 11.39; middling 10.69; middling 10.44; good ordinary 8.06. Sales 7,000 including 5,800 American.

DRY GOODS

NEW YORK, March 7.—Cotton goods were quieter with some easing reported in wide sheetings and in wide print cloths. Bleached cottons were quiet. Most of the trading was in fancy wash fabrics for spot delivery. Yarns were easier in the combed yarn division and quiet in other directions. Wool goods and staple worsteds were quiet while burlaps were firmer and higher with trading broader. Silks continued to sell best in the highly colored sport lines. Jobbers reported a hand to mouth business from a wide area.

LONDON WOOL.

LONDON, March 7.—The second series of wool auction sales was opened today with offerings of 10,700 bales. It was a moderate selection and there was a fair demand from home and continental buyers while Americans were quiet. Fine merinos were unchanged, but other grades declined from 5 to 10 1-2 per cent. Scoured cross breeds showed no change but fine fell 5 and medium from 5 to 10 per cent.

Cotton

NEW YORK, March 7.—Reports of improving British trade and of delayed crop preparations in eastern belt sections caused an advance in the cotton market during the early trading. The buying was not active nor general, however, while the advance to 18.16 for May brought in considerable realizing and that delivery sold off to 17.00 in the late trading. The close was barely steady, net 7 points lower to 3 points higher, new crop positions being relatively well sustained and the early buying movement carried the active months about 20 to 26 points net higher.

There was scattered buying on numerous reports that heavy rains in the eastern belt were causing delays in farm work and had resulted in a little property damage at some points with floods in Georgia.

Owing to the boll weevil situation any serious delay in the start of the crop would be considered a very bullish proposition this year, but the opinion evidently prevailed among some of the local traders that it was still too early for such reports to justify much change in to immediate market. This view may have accounted for some of the scattered selling on the advance and after selling at 18.43 for March, 17.49 for July and 16.87 for October, prices gradually eased off. The easier ruling of foreign exchange was also a factor but late advices from Liverpool reiterated the reports of improving trade and there were scattered reports of a steady spot situation in the south. These latter features restricted selling and the declines were the result of comparatively small offerings in a narrow market. March sold off to 18.16 and July to 17.21. Exports today were 30,397 bales, making 3,853,048 so far this season. Port receipts 21,157. U. S. port stocks 1,056,188.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, March 7.—A great deal of attention was paid to reports from the interior concerning crop preparations in the cotton market today and for a while they were the main sustaining influence. In the afternoon a great deal of realizing was done on the long side and it pared down the gains so that the close was 4 points down to 1 point up compared with the final prices of yesterday, May closing at 18.73.

The opening was higher, partly because of a better Liverpool market than due, but before the trading went very far, attention was centered on the weather map, which showed dry weather over the western part of the cotton region in portions of which rain is still badly needed, according to private reports, while the central and eastern portions were wet, with very heavy rains in some sections of the eastern division. According to official returns the heavy rains ranged from about an inch and a half up to more than six inches and they fell on soil already too wet to be worked. The advance persisted until prices were 21 to 22 points higher than the close of yesterday with May up to 16.98. That was the high of the day.

While additional steadiness was derived for a while from private cablegrams from Liverpool telling of better reports from Manchester, the market made little show of strength late in the morning and after the noon hour had rather an easy undertone, finally closing at just about the lowest of the day.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, March 7.—A further advance on bullish Brazilian cable advices met increased realizing as prices approached the 9c level in the market for coffee futures here today.

The opening was 6 to 7 points higher with the advance extending to 8.93 for May and 8.95 for December during the middle of the day or about 12 to 14 points net higher. Prices then eased off under profit-taking or scattered selling for a reaction, with May closing at 8.85 bid. The general market closed at a net advance of 5 to 7 points. Sales were reported of about 55,000 bags. March 8.76; May 8.85; July 8.85; September 8.85; October 8.86; December 8.88. Spot coffee firm; Rio 7s 9 1-8; Santos 4s 13@13 1-4.

YOU CAN'T TRUST CALOMEL AT ALL

It's Quicksilver, Salivates, Causes Rheumatism and Bone Decay.

The next dose of calomel you take may salivate you. It may shock your liver or start bone necrosis. Calomel is dangerous. It is mercury, quicksilver. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate. (Adv.)

ACUFF GETS FIVE YEAR SENTENCE

B. W. Acuff was sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary Tuesday by a jury in the 89th district court after they had found him guilty of theft as charged in the indictment against him last month. Acuff who is well known in the oil fields was charged with having stolen pipe from the Oriental Petroleum & Refining company of this city.

The conviction Tuesday will be appealed. Notce of appeal in case of conviction was given several days ago by attorneys after Judge Ed Napier of the 78th district court had overruled a motion to quash the indictment on the ground that the jury was not legally empaneled with the additional allegation that the jury was controlled by the Ku Klux Klan.

Officers Get Large Still

A still [illegible] several barrels of mash were re[illegible] by Federal Prohibition Officer [illegible] and George Hawkins, special investigator of the district attorney's office, at a farm 15 miles west of this city Tuesday afternoon. The raid at the farm follows the arrest here Sunday of Ed Myers and Aubrey Cockrell.

Following the arrest of the two men who were being held for the sale of liquor the officers conducted an investigation regarding the source of supply.

Additional charges of manufacturing liquor were also filed against Myers and Cockrell and they are being held under $1,000 bond each, both having waived preliminary hearings.

We are admonished to let our light shine before men, but not to make a Fourth of July fireworks display of it.

ONLY 9 MORE DAYS TO PAY YOUR INCOME TAX

The New Income Tax Law

Enacted by Congress in November, 1921, superseded the Revenue Act of 1918 and it was the purpose of the new Act to "reduce and equalize taxation, and to provide revenue."

The Government desires that every person avail himself of every legitimate credit, deduction and exemption which the law provides.

Many new features have been written into the new law and provisions are now made for credits, deductions and exemptions which did not formerly obtain.

Some of these new provisions are retroactive and may be applied as part payment on taxes for this year.

Of especial interest to Texas people is the amendment which provides that DIVISION OF COMMUNITY INCOME under Texas State law can be made between husband and wife for income tax purposes, (under T. D. 3071), the same as last year.

You will find it to your advantage to have your income tax return compiled and audited by a competent Income Tax Accountant. The firms listed below are specialists in this important phase of accountancy.

SAYS HOWAT IS DEAD BUT DOES NOT KNOW OF IT

MUSKOGEE, Okla., March 7.—"Alexander Howat is dead and doesn't know it," John Wilkinson, president of District No. 21, United Mine Workers of America, declared in a letter addressed tonight to Oklahoma coal miners.

The letter was Wilkinson's response to the invasion of the local district by the deposed Kansas miners' leader on a speaking tour, with the avowed intention of breaking Wilkinson's hold, and gaining support for expelled Kansas union miners.

Wilkinson in his letter charged Howat with having taken a sum of money from the Kansas mine operators as a "conscience balm," and with having charged "ignorant Italians" for obtaining workmen's compensation for injuries.

3,517,311 MOVE TO CANADA

OTTAWA, Ont., March 7.—From 1900 to 1921 settlers coming to Canada numbered 3,517,311. This is more than a third of the present population of the entire country, as estimated from returns of the recent census. Of the immigration total 1,323,531 were from the British Isles, 1,396,508 from the United States and 887,272 from other countries. In the eight months ended Nov. 30, 1921, a total of 76,575 settlers came to Canada according to government figures. Of these 25,279 came from the United States.

HOUSE IS SCENE OF PROTRACTED PARTISAN FIGHT

Several Representatives Join in Heated Discussion Started by Attack on Leader Mondell.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Charging that Representative Mondell of Wyoming, the republican leader had "assaulted" the agricultural appropriation bill, Representative Aswell democrat Louisiana, started a partisan discussion in the house today which for some time raged about the leader who is a candidate for the senatorial nomination.

As a member of the committee which framed the bill, Mr. Aswell said he resented the appearance before it of Mr. Mondell and the latter's comment on certain of the measure's provisions.

Mr. Aswell, discussing the recent speech of Representative Fess of Ohio, chairman of the republican congressional committee, reviewing the first year's record of the Harding administration, said:

"Like Mr. Fess, I am a schoolmaster myself, but he has been here so long playing cheap politics, that he has strayed from the tenets of the schoolmaster, which puts truth above all else."

Representative Begg, republican of Ohio, challenged the Louisiana member to show wherein Mr. Fess had stated what was not true.

"You hold up much to this house," Mr. Begg asserted, "and if you do not disprove it we will know you do not mean what you say."

Mr. Aswell charged that Mr. Mondell had opposed a plan to stabilize farm products prices, was unwilling to help farmers, but was ready to help the railroads, "and the shipping interests by granting them a subsidy."

Answering the speech of Representative Fess, Representative Connally, democrat of Texas, said the former had neglected to point out that the republican congress and administration "have done nothing whatever to reduce or adjust freight rates that are admittedly too high and oppressive."

Mr. Fess, he said, had "carefully and studiously declined to point out that his party and the administration had approved and confirmed an election in which $200,000 had been admittedly spent in a campaign for high office."

Referring further to the Newberry contest from Michigan, Mr. Conally said:

"He failed to point out that his party and his administration had adopted as its own the most scandalous election performance in the history of any state in the union. He failed to point out that his party and his administration stands before the people of the United States as the sponsors for the disgraceful and scandalous debauchery of an electorate. No catalogue of republican achievements, no list of republican performances, no roll calls of republican pretense is complete unless it sets forth in scarlet letters this bold, this shameless, this outrageous act of political performance."

SPAIN IS ALSO HAVING CRISIS WITH CABINET

By Associated Press.

MADRID, March 7.—The trouble in the Spanish cabinet which had been in evidence for some days reached the crisis today when, just before the ministers were due to appear before the Cortes with financial propositions of a far-reaching nature, Premier Maura announced that his liberal associates had decided to withdraw their support and that consequently the cabinet would be unable to retain office. During the afternoon King Alfonso prevailed Senor Sanchez Guerrera, speaker in the chamber, to form a new ministry. Former Premier Romanones asserted that the crisis would be of short duration.

"STRANGLER" WINS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 7.—Ed (Strangler) Lewis, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, defeated John Grandovitch of Maine in straight falls here tonight, winning the first in 52 minutes with a headlock and the second in 14 minutes with a half Nelson and body scissors.

BUDGET PLAN SAVINGS TO BE REPORTED ON

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The budget bureau, acting at the direction of President Harding, is preparing for transmission to Chairman Madden of the house appropriations committee, "a detailed exposition of the economy achievements that have been effected since the budget system was inaugurated," it was announced today at the White House. This is being done, it was explained, in response to a resolution of Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, ranking democratic member of the house appropriations committee, which asked the president, if not incompatible with the public interest, to inform the house in what way the savings had been made, from what particular appropriations and in what specific amounts.

The president, in his letter to General Dawes, authorizing him to make the report, said he trusted that the statement would cover "the entire situation, thus obviating possible misconception which might arise from any partial or incomplete statement."

Mr. Byrns in his resolution said that the budget had claimed in the last six months a direct saving of $32,000,000 and an indirect saving of $104,000,000 while requests for deficiency appropriations of $180,704,281 were then pending before congress.

THREE KNOCKOUTS IN THREE DAYS FOR BOB

By Associated Press.

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., March 7.—Bob Martin, A. E. F. heavyweight champion, scored his third knockout in as many days here tonight when he disposed of Rickie Stollard, of this city, in the second round of what was to have been a 12-round bout.

IT SOUNDED LIKE IT.

Teacher—Tommy, explain how the poet died.

Tommy—Well, the book says he had a green sword and he fell on it and killed himself.

Teacher—Heavens, child, where did you get that idea?

Tommy—Look and see; it's on page 1. I'll read it—"And the poet died a beautiful way as he had lived—he drew himself upon the greensward and expired."

FRANCIS SAYS PEOPLE MUST ENFORCE LAWS

Attorney Tells University Club Power Is in Their Hands; Condemns Private Enforcement.

Choice of Proper Men For Office and Adequate Pay Urged; Advocates City Manager Here.

Remedy for lack of law enforcement lies with the people, and their choice of men to make and administer and enforce the laws, Charles I. Francis, local attorney, declared in a forceful address on law enforcement to the members of the University club Tuesday noon. Mr. Francis' address was followed by the adoption of a resolution commending the Wichita County Citizens' association and its program to obtain enforcement of laws, with the elimination of a clause, after considerable debate, which declared disapproval of the Ku Klux Klan.

Adoption of the city manager form of government for Wichita Falls, left optional with the city council by the charter, was advocated strongly by the speaker as one of the best means for the correction of conditions as far as the city is concerned, advocacy being based on the advantages of expert administration of the city's business by a central head, and a head whose acts and whose continued employment was subject to the approval of the council, over the plan of putting the responsibility, piecemeal, on several men serving without pay and who have their business to look after. Continued administration of the office by a satisfactory man was mentioned as another advantage.

Condemns Private Action

Attempts to secure law enforcement by private action outside the law was roundly condemned by the speaker, who said that such action might be justified under a government where the authority was not in the people, but was farcical under a government where the authority absolutely lay in the people. Correction of unsatisfactory conditions can be secured by the people, he brought out, in their choice of men to make and administer the laws, and of their insistence on means of removal of officers who are not faithful to their trusts.

Speaking of the charge that the members of the law profession often used their knowledge and talents toward the obstruction of justice, he declared that the member of the profession who acted this way was equally guilty, no more and no less, than the man who advocated private administration of his conception of justice outside of the law.

On Technicalities

Technicalities have freed criminals, he admitted in the course of his talk. Such cases, he indicated, are rare, however, and can be corrected by the right kind of officials on the bench and representating the state, and by the sending of capable men to the legislature to so frame the laws that they cannot be frustrated that way. He continued, however, that this objection was of minor importance, and could be easily corrected, and was little excuse for a desire to scrap machinery which had served all for so long. A stronger statute than the existing one preventing the reversal of cases on technical grounds, was advocated in this connection.

Adequate pay for public officers, pay which would attract and hold capable men, not now able to hold office, to these places, was strongly urged by the speaker in his charge that the trouble and the remedy of the trouble in the enforcement of the law rested with the people. A five dollar legislator, a three dollar a day district attorney, and a two dollar and a half a day sheriff could not be expected to produce the best results, he declared.

A vocal solo by Miss Gertrude May, accompanied by Miss Karma Jaeger, formed the musical program. Hon. Clarence Ousley will be the speaker for the next week, it was announced by Norris Ewing, club president.

BOARD ADDS TO SALVATION ARMY CAMPAIGN CHEST

At a meeting of the municipal welfare board yesterday morning an additional appropriation of $500 was authorized paid to the Salvation Army as an offset to the heavy expense incurred by the Army in caring for many people during the recent cold weather.

The board also decided to move its offices from the city hall to the city council chamber in the basement of the Morgan building. The change will be made at once, and Mrs. Gorsline, secretary of the board, will be "on the job" in her new office today.

Stone Issues Platform For Mayor's Race

"An economical administration," with a reduction of taxes "if possible," is pledged by J. W. Stone, candidate for mayor, in a statement of his platform.

The statement follows:

"To the Voters of Wichita Falls:

"In offering myself as a candidate for mayor of Wichita Falls, I recognize that the voters are entitled to know my views on matters of public policy, and I therefore announce my views on some of the more important matters that will come before the next mayor of Wichita Falls.

"The matter of taxation and the expenditure of the public money is one of great interest and importance at this time and I wish to pledge myself to an economical administration, if chosen your mayor, and if taxes can be reduced by the exercise of economy and by my close personal attention to expenditures, they will be reduced. In making this pledge I fully realize its difficulties and I do not wish to be understood as standing for any backward policy. I will stand, as I have always stood, for the development of Wichita Falls along broad and progressive lines. But as I see the situation, there will be an immediate need for close economy, to which I pledge myself.

"If elected, I expect to know where every dollar of the public money goes and will personally attempt to see to it that the city receives a dollar's value for every dollar spent. I will fully accept the responsibility that the people place upon me and will not attempt to shift my responsibility to any other person or official.

"I elected, I will seek the advice and co-operation of all citizens and pledge myself to the interests of all the people. I am arranging my affairs so that I can give all, or as much of my time to the duties of my office as is necessary, and it is my purpose, if elected, to maintain my office in the city hall where I can be accessible to the people and can exercise close supervision over the city's affairs at all times.

"I have lived a long time in Wichita Falls. I like the place and the people. I wouldn't live anywhere else as long as I could live here. I want to see Wichita Falls kept clean and I will appreciate, as I have always appreciated, the interest of the women of Wichita Falls in this matter. And I want to see the laws enforced and pledge my best efforts to this end.

"I will appreciate the vote and support of all citizens who can stand with me for these policies which I consider of first importance at this time. Respectfully,

"J. W. STONE."
