PHILADELPHIA SPEECH NOT DECLARATION OF POLICY

DID NOT REFER TO LUSITANIA

PRESIDENT RE-ITERATES HE KNOWS COUNTRY WANTS HIM TO ACT FIRMLY

WASHINGTON SURPRISED

Believed President Will Endeavor to Induce Germany to End Submarine Warfare

By Associated Press. Washington, May 11.—President Wilson said today that his speech in Philadelphia last night was not a declaration of policy in reference to the Lusitania disaster; that he was speaking only to the newly naturalized Americans in his audience. The president used the expression that he had reference to the "cain" some people were trying to raise.

President Wilson said today that for the present he had nothing to add to his statement of Saturday night that he knows the country expects him to act calmly but with firmness.

Officials here were surprised at President Wilson's action today in saying that last night's speech did not refer to the Lusitania.

Senator Stone, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee said: "I am for peace with honor. I do not know what President Wilson plans to do about the Lusitania. It is his problem and it must be decided by him without advice."

Senator La Follette who called at the White House said: "I am for peace. I want the United States to take a firm stand."

Officials here interpreted the Philadelphia speech as meaning that what ever course is pursued the United States would probably endeavor to serve the cause of humanity by appealing to Germany to end her submarine warfare against unarmed merchant vessels carrying non contraband.

In his speech last night the president said:

"America must have the consciousness that on all sides it touches elbows and touches hearts—with all nations of mankind. The example of America must be a special example, and must be an example not merely of peace, because it will not fight, but because peace is a healing and elevating influence of the world, and strife is not."

"There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right."

These remarks precipitated a tumult of applause and patriotic enthusiasm, attended by a waving of thousands of small American flags. The president was constantly interrupted by spontaneous outbursts of applause. He spoke clearly and so quiet was his audience of 15,000 that he could be heard distinctly in all parts of the great hall. Some of the passages in his speech, which the crowd applauded most loudly, were these:

"I am sorry for the man who seeks to make personal capital out of the passions of his fellow man. He has lost the touch and ideal of America. For America was created to unite mankind by the passions that lift and unite and not by the passions that separate and debase mankind."

"The man who seeks to divide man from man, group from group, interest from interest, in the United States, is striking at the very heart."

REDISTRICTING BILLS BELIEVED PROBABLE

By Associated Press. Austin, Texas, May 11.—Senator and congressional redistricting of Texas is expected to be taken up by the present special session of the legislature, bills providing for that being now in process of preparation. Governor Ferguson has indicated he will recommend the passage of reapportionment bills if the present special session can handle them as well as the appropriation bills.

ESTIMATE LOSSES OF

TURKS AT 45,000 MEN

Allied Troops Reported To Have Advanced In Face of Desperate Resistance

By Associated Press. London, May 11.—The allied troops on the Gallipoli Peninsula continued their advance Friday and Saturday according to an Athens dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. They are reported to have occupied important positions in spite of the desperate resistance of the Turkish forces, whose total losses are estimated at 45,000 men. The hospitals in Constantinople are said to be so crowded that wounded are being sent Konelex in Akis Minor.

RESTITUTION URGED FOR WRONGS DONE OTHERS

Dr. Andrews Took Story of Zachaeus As Sermon Lesson Last Night

The meeting at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, continues with unabated interest. Forty-one were received into the church last Sunday and there were sixteen baptisms. A large congregation heard Dr. Andrews last night. The sermon was taken from the conversion of Zachaeus. The difficulties of the man who seeks Christ today were dwelt on and all were urged to climb over all obstacles and to come to Him for salvation. The doctrine of restitution was emphasized by the speaker, who urged his hearers to make right the wrongs of their lives as far as they could do so and then like Zachaeus they would hear the Saviour say: "This day is salvation, come to thy house." There were several requests for prayer and a number remained for the altar meeting, asking prayer for their friends.

This morning a home service was held and it was one of the best of the entire series. Services tonight at 8 o'clock and in the morning at 9:30. Mr. Kennedy has charge of the music and is giving universal satisfaction.

CONSCRIPTION STILL URGED BY EXTREME CONSERVATIVES

By Associated Press. Austin, Texas, May 11.—Senator La Follette's statement that the government is perfectly satisfied with the recruiting for the new army has aroused the anger of the extreme conservatives, who have long pleaded for the conscription system. In an editorial headed "The Worst Form of Conscription," the Express attacks La Follette's position.

"The point which is always ignored," says the Express, "is that a universal obligation to serve would prevent the best elements of the nation from bearing the burden that ought to fall equally on all and would prevent the indifferent and the shirkers from escaping service altogether. Moreover, even if such a system gave the government many more men than it needs, it would enable the authorities to make a selection that would be beneficial to the whole country, taking the unmarried before the married, and leaving the man whose services are indispensable for industries of national importance. It is preposterous that the price of coal should go up because of the miners' patriotism and that the munition factories should be impeded because of the number of expert engineers who have joined the colors, while there are tens of thousands of idle and useless young men in all classes too stupid and too indifferent to their duty."

This paper asserts that married men outnumber the unmarried in the troops, often constituting as high as 70 per cent of the battalions.

CHIVALRY OF AMERICANS SHOWN IN DISASTER

No American Man Got Into Life Boats and Many Gave Life Belts to Women

By Associated Press. Queenstown, Eng., May 11.—There was a preponderance of testimony today to show that no American man among the passengers of the Lusitania got into a life boat until he had been towed into the water. In testimony were that the heavy toll of death among those in the first cabin was due to the deficit of life belts many having given the life preservers they had obtained to helpless women.

PRISONERS GRATEFUL FOR MOTHERS' DAY FLOWERS

Flowers Sent To Inmates of County Jail Recall Tender Memories By Prisoners

The inmates of the county jail were not forgotten Sunday in the observance of Mother's Day and some beautiful flowers, gift of the mothers clubs, found their way to the prisoners Sunday afternoon and were gratefully appreciated. The following order of gratitude was handed The Times today:

"The boys in the county jail wish to thank the ladies who sent the flowers. They were the fragrant reminders of our mothers gardens and spoke more eloquently of better days than anything you could have said or done. Your reward will certainly be an extra star in your crown."

FAVORABLE REPORT ON GIBSON BILL

COMMITTEE RECOMMENDS MEASURE BY A VOTE OF TEN TO SIX

WILL COME UP WEDNESDAY

House Adopts Resolution Declaring Confidence in Wilson's Ability and Wisdom

By Associated Press. Austin, Texas, May 11.—On motion of Representative Grindstaff the Gibson insurance bill was made a special order for Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, at which time it is to be considered. This bill received a favorable committee report by a vote of 10 to 6.

With the adoption today by the House of a resolution reposing confidence in the ability of President Wilson to solve the international problem presented by the sinking of the Lusitania, both branches of the Texas legislature went on record as standing by the nation's chief executive in whatever action he might take. Today's resolution expressed confidence in Wilson's wisdom and ability.

A bill was introduced in the House by Representative Rowell amending the act of the last legislature providing for the establishment of three state normals. This amendment would leave the location of the schools to a board composed of the governor, the lieutenant governor and the attorney general.

Senator McNeel sent up a communication protesting against the promiscuous admission of portraits to the walls of the Senate.

BRITISH ADMIRALTY WARNED CAPTAIN OF LUSITANIA

By Associated Press. London, May 11.—First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill stated in the house of commons this afternoon that Captain Turner of the Lusitania had acknowledged that the admiralty had given him warning and directions for the course he was to take.

By Associated Press. Galveston, Texas, May 11.—Voters of Galveston today were to choose a mayor and four commissioners. The election has aroused much interest here.

COMMISSION CONSIDERS FREIGHT RATE CHANGES

By Associated Press. Austin, Texas, May 11.—Ten proposed changes in railroad freight rates on various commodities were up for hearing before the Texas railroad commission here today.

LOCUST INVASION WORSE THAN WAR IN EGYPT

Cairo, Egypt.—The locust invasion in Egypt and Palestine is proving a far more serious matter than war. The locusts, notwithstanding energetic measures taken by the government and farmers, have spread the southward breadth of Egypt and are more numerous than at any time within twenty years. They constitute a very serious menace to the cotton crop, which is already well above ground.

SPECIAL MEETING OF WOODMEN CAMPS TONIGHT

W. O. W. Camps 456 and 3001 will meet Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in joint session for the purpose of discussing again the final plans for consolidation. The Woodcraft manager for the state of Texas, Mr. McMill, will be present and also H. L. Combe, a representative from the home office of the order in Omaha, Nebraska. These gentlemen will address the camps and will give them the benefit of their experience in the plans for merging which will be presented tonight. It has been especially requested that all members be present tonight as this meeting is a message sent from the head office, W. A. Frazier, will be given the camps.

COVINGTON'S BODY MAY BE TAKEN TO GEORGIA

If the submarine F-4 is brought to the surface in Honolulu harbor, it is likely that the body of Frank Covington, one of the crew who enlisted from Byers, Texas will be taken to Moultrie, Georgia for burial. Copies of Georgia papers have been received here telling of the steps taken by his brother, Judge W. A. Covington of Moultrie to have the body brought there if it is recovered.

Judge Covington it appears did not learn of his brother's death until nearly a month after the F-4 sank. His brother was on another ship the last time Judge Covington heard from him and he did not see the list giving the name of his brother as one of the crew. Frank Covington lived for a time near Byers and later resided at Graham where he still has relatives. Several persons here are well acquainted with the family.

RUSSIANS TURN TABLE ON ENEMY

BEGIN STRONG OFFENSIVE AT TARNOW AND ENEMY REPORTED IN FLIGHT

AUSTRO-GERMANS REPULSED

Everywhere Russian Forces Renew Activities After Retreating Before the Enemy

By Associated Press. Petrograd, May 11.—An official statement issued last night says: "In the region of Ustok pass the enemy made a fruitless attack on Saturday. Serried ranks of the enemy attacked impetuously a position held by two of our companies in a section of the Javorina mountain chain on the heights above Lommitza. The enemy's losses were so heavy that heaps of bodies interfered with the fire of our trenches. Our troops in spite of machine gun fire left their trenches and swept away the enemy from the whole region. The same day a determined attack by superior forces compelled our troops near the village of Caleveki to retire on the left bank of the Dniester. Sunday night our vanguard having crossed the Dniester attacked the enemy on the Chavouki front to the mouth of the Stry. We took 1300 prisoners, one gun and many machine guns."

THE MAURETANIA CANCELS SAILING

SISTER SHIP OF LUSITANIA WILL NOT ATTEMPT TO CROSS ATLANTIC

NO GENERAL CANCELLATION

In New York Popularity of Vessels Flying Neutral Flags Plainly Shown

By Associated Press. London, May 11.—Sailing of the Cunard line steamer Mauretania, sister ship of the Lusitania advertised for May 29 has been cancelled.

SHIPS FLYING NEUTRAL FLAGS ARE POPULAR

By Associated Press. New York, May 11.—No general cancellation of the sailings of steamers or of passengers engaged from New York to European ports has followed the sinking of the Lusitania. Agents for the steamship companies, however, say there has been an increase in the popularity of vessels flying neutral flags.

ELECTION IS ORDERED ON TICK ERADICATION

Commissioners Name July 24 As Date For Vote On This Question

The county commissioners this morning fixed the date of the tick eradication election for July 24, when some constitutional amendments will be voted upon. The petition was acted upon Tuesday morning. The commissioners counted the county's money this morning and this afternoon visited the county farm to designate sites for the tuberculosis and small pox buildings.

Tuesday the court will begin sitting as a board of equalization and will work on county valuations for some time.

DALLAS DETECTIVE ARRESTS WOMAN HERE

A young woman of the reservation, who officers assert has more names than a cat has lives, was arrested this morning at the instance of Detective Joe Austin of the Dallas police force. She is suspected of having something to do with a jewel robbery in Dallas about a year ago and while the nature of the charge was not disclosed, she is thought to have been the "fence" in the disposal of the missing goods. The officer returned with her on the 11:20 Katy.

PREPARING PENITENTIARY BILL AMENDMENT

By Associated Press. Austin, Texas, May 11.—Representative W. H. Hill of Walker county, is preparing an amendment to the law governing the state penitentiary system which he declares will save the system at least $500,000 annually. He declares the system now owes $700,000 and needs a thorough reorganization. A similar bill was presented at the last regular session, but failed of a quorum at the last moment.

SUPT. CARPENTER HAS RESIGNED

TENDERS RESIGNATION AS HEAD OF CITY SCHOOLS EFFECTIVE AUGUST 1

SUCCESSOR NOT CHOSEN

Marked Advance Made in Schools During 3 Years Mr. Carpenter's Administration

The resignation of Prof. George H. Carpenter, for two years superintendent of the public schools here, was presented to the school board at a meeting Monday night. It was accepted to become effective August 1. Prof. Carpenter has had this course under consideration for some time but only presented it formally to the school board last night. He has not announced his plans for the future, in giving out the resignation; W. J. Bullock, president of the school board said:

"The public schools are undoubtedly the greatest institution for the uplifting of the community and under Prof. Carpenter's administration there has been marked advancement along all educational lines. It will take a strong and capable man to fill Mr. Carpenter's place and the board will use every effort to get one of the very best men in Texas for the position. The board expects to strengthen the teaching force for next year in every way possible by getting the very best available material and in this effort Prof. Carpenter will be in thorough accord and harmony with what has been done and give every assistance he can. The board has had several meetings lately discussing the school problems from every angle and in large and growing school system these problems are many and not always easy of solution."

Next Friday night all the grade teachers who are to be retained will probably be elected and it is the board's hope that within a short time a successor to Prof. Carpenter can be announced.

"Board of Education, Wichita Falls, Texas. Gentlemen:—I hereby tender my resignation as superintendent of the Wichita Falls public schools, effective August 1, 1915, being the close of the third year of my administration."

"In severing my connection with the schools, I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the kindness and co-operation which have been shown during my incumbency, thereby enabling me to carry out the policies which have placed your schools among the first in the State."

"During my administration the following improvements have been made:

"1. The erection of two ward buildings, one of which is considered one of the most modern, best lighted and equipped buildings in the State.

"2. Playground apparatus has been placed at a number of the buildings.

"3. The departments of manual training and domestic economy have been strengthened by additional equipment.

"4. More extensive equipment has been added to the science department.

"5. About 1000 volumes, including encyclopedias, reference books and general reading matter have been added to the high school library and other buildings.

"6. The work in the grammar grades in the ward schools has been strengthened by the installation of the departmental system.

"7. Half year promotions have been installed in the grades, thereby frequently saving the pupil a half year's work."

"8. Promotion by subjects in the high school instead of by grades.

"9. Literary societies, including debating and declamation work, have been organized in the high schools.

"10. The High School Review, a monthly publication, has been launched.

"11. The High School Athletic Council has been organized, placing athletics under the direct control of the high school management."

"12. Glee clubs for both the high school boys and girls and a high school orchestra have been organized."

"13. Affiliation with the State University has been extended in Spanish, German, Physiology, manual training and domestic economy."

"14. First class recognition for the high school has been granted by the Southern Commission on Accredited High Schools for the South. British front, which ranks it with the first class schools of the South. Respectfully, "GEO. H. CARPENTER."

ITALY'S ENTRY INTO WAR ONLY QUESTION OF HOURS

WAR STATEMENTS

FRENCH.

By Associated Press. Paris, May 11.—The French war office this afternoon issued the following statement on the progress of hostilities:

"In Belgium near St. Georges the enemy endeavored night attacks to recapture the position taken by us the day before yesterday. They were however repulsed. To the north of Arras our project has continued. Monday evening we took possession of the cemetery and a part of the village of Cerancy and also of the road from Cerancy to Sauchez-Cerancy where we took 230 more prisoners including three officers and captured several machine guns. The German position is now surrounded on three sides and is precarious. Communication with the German line is threatened. The forces brought up by the enemy from Lens and from Boulogne were not successful at any place in getting the advantage. Four strong counter attacks brought no advantage to the enemy during the afternoon of Monday, at the same time suffering very heavy losses. The attacks of the enemy were repulsed in front of Loos and Notre Dame de Lorette, at Sauchez and at Neuville Saint Vast. At this last mentioned place we gained territory at the same time making 100 prisoners. The number of officers taken by us up to yesterday evening is more than fifty. Monday night the enemy suffered a further check. The counter attacks to the north of Lunneville to St. Dast, preceded by violent bombardments, was completely repulsed and we regained all the ground taken from us at the same time reflecting heavy losses on the enemy. On the remainder of the front from Loos to Arras there was no counter attack yesterday."

"Following the bombardment of Dunkirk reported yesterday in which the Germans threw three shells, but without hurting anybody or inflicting damage, the Germans threw eleven shells on the town of Burques, five miles southwest of Dunkirk. Twelve persons were killed and eleven were wounded. Our batteries at once opened fire and put a stop to the shelling by the enemy. On the rest of the front there has been nothing to report.

"One of our aviators yesterday bombed a hangar at Maubeuge and started a fire. An aviator for the enemy threw bombs on the railroad station at Bouillens, twenty miles north of Amiens but without doing any damage. Another aviator of the enemy pursued between the Argonne and the Meuse by our airmen was compelled to come down within the German lines. On the other hand the Germans brought down a British aviator while the British were successful in bringing down two German airmen."

GERMAN.

By Associated Press. Berlin, May 11.—The German general headquarters staff today gave out the following statement:

"Yesterday morning an English ship was driven away from West. By our fire the ship made further progress east of Ypres and captured five machine guns. The French continued their attack southwest of the Lorette hills and at the villages of Avelera and Cerancy. All their attacks were repulsed. The number of prisoners made by us here was increased to 800. Between Cerancy and Lunneville the battle continues. Southwest of Berry Au Bac and in the wood south of Longville Au Bois our troops yesterday took by storm a position of two lines trenches situated behind each other and stretching over a width of 400 meters."

"In the eastern theatre yesterday the situation was unchanged. In Galicia the pursuit continues."

TURKISH

By Associated Press. Constantinople, May 10, via Amsterdam and London, May 11.—The following statement was issued today by the Turkish war office:

"On the Dardanelles front the enemy made four desperate assaults near Arich Durnu Sunday night but was repulsed by bayonet attacks, and suffered heavy losses. Three enemy battalions were annihilated. Monday afternoon the enemy carried away wounded to their boats in the gulf. At Seddul Bahr the enemy attacked under the protection of naval guns but owing to our fire were compelled to retire."

"WHAT A FITTY ROOSEVELT NOT PRESIDENT TODAY"

New York, May 11.—The New York Herald Monday issued an edition in memoriam to the American men, women and children drowned aboard the Lusitania.

"The column rules were all heavy black lines. At the top of every page the memoriam line was carried in a heavy rule box."

The Herald, which formerly barred use of Colonel Roosevelt's name, referring to him always as the "Bull Moose leader," or "the former president," also had repeated several times on its editorial page, the paragraph: "What a pity Theodore Roosevelt is not president of the United States today!"

WAR NOW REGARDED AS UNAVOIDABLE

BOTH TUEOTONIC ALLIES AND ITALY CONCENTRATING TROOPS

UNITED SUPPORT FOR WAR

Peace Party in Italy Said To Have Withdrawn Its Opposition to Intervention

By Associated Press. Rome, May 11.—The opinion prevails in Rome that Italy's participation in the war is only a question of days. Along the Austrian front where the correspondent of the Associated Press has been from one end of the line to the other it is felt that the war is only a matter of hours.

ITALIAN OFFICERS ORDERED TO REJOIN REGIMENTS

By Associated Press. Geneva, May 11, via Paris.—All Italian officers in Switzerland up to the age of 34 were ordered yesterday to rejoin their regiments. Austrian and Bavarian forces are concentrating in the Tyrol.

Automobiles belonging to the Italian royal family which had been gathered at Nohia near Milan were sent to Verona yesterday for the use of the army. Shipments of freight from Italy to Germany through Switzerland virtually has ceased. Italian passenger train service to points on the Swiss frontier is diminishing daily.

BELIEVED AT ROME WAR IS CERTAIN

By Associated Press. Rome, May 11, 9:25, via Paris, May 11, 7:10 a. m.—Although the negotiations with the central powers continue and there is possibility that the influence of former Premier Gioletti may avert war military preparations are so thorough and vigorous that it is believed a declaration soon must be made.

PARIS HEARS MANY RUMORS ABOUT ITALIAN INTERVENTION

By Associated Press. Paris, May 11, 10:45 a. m.—It is being rumored persistently in Paris that Germany and Austria-Hungary are about to declare war on Italy in anticipation of such action on her part directed against themselves. This report, however, has received no confirmation. Another rumor current on the Bourse today was that the Italian government had signed an agreement with all the allies, Great Britain, France and Russia, to take part in the war not later than May 25. This rumor also is unconfirmed.

French observers of the political situation in Italy infer from the audience yesterday between King Victor Emmanuel and former Prime Minister Gioletti that the non-intervention party in Italy has determined to withdraw all opposition to the war. Consequently the Italian parties will be united in the war policy based on two fundamental considerations: namely, that wrong has been done to Serbia and Belgium and the racial aspirations of the Italians on the eastern shore of the Adriatic and in the Mediterranean now can be satisfied.

Military observers are presenting the argument that for Germany the argument of a third frontier undoubtedly will make resistance on the central empire on their fronts more feeble, so much so, that with the advent of Italy victory over Germany is set for the middle of the summer.

The Milan correspondent of the Express telegraphs his paper that a dispatch to Secolo from Lugano, Switzerland says the police of Lugano have been instructed to make preparations to protect Count von Buelow, German ambassador to Rome, when he passes through that city on his way home.

VIENNA PAPERS JUSTIFY SINKING OF LUSITANIA

Declare Steamer in Reality Navy Vessel and Hope That Americans Impressed

By Associated Press. Vienna, May 11, 1:27 a. m., May 11.—The newspapers of Vienna justify the sinking of the Lusitania on the ground that she was "virtual" an auxiliary cruiser.

The Neues Wiener Tagblatt says: "The Lusitania was really the same as an English battleship."

The Neue Freie Presse says: "The sinking of the liner is equivalent to a navy vessel and perhaps on account of the incident will be the collapse in America of faith in England and greater respect for the German allies."

FUME HUNGARY'S ONLY SEAPORT

REPORTED TO BE ONE OF ITALY'S DEMANDS AS A PRICE OF PEACE

DOES BIG EXPORT TRADE

Hungarians Have Spent Millions of Dollars in Endeavor to Make It Model Port

Washington, May 10.—As the price of peace, Italy is reported to be exacting from Austria-Hungary the surrender of the Dual Monarchy's sole seaport. These expectations are said to amount to demands as regards Trieste, Fiume, Istria and Fiume. In connection with showing the true significance of such demands, new great is the payment demanded by Italy for her continued neutrality, the National Geographic Society, following its description of Trieste, issued today a statement dealing with Fiume, the sole seaport of the Kingdom of Hungary. The statement reads:

"Austria-Hungary carries on its business with the outside world through its great ports, Trieste and Fiume. The future of its over-seas commerce is largely bound up with the development of these cities; for Trieste and Fiume are the New York and Boston of Austria-Hungary, or, better, they are the Dual Monarchy's Hamburg and Bremen. Fiume is the only outlet of the Hungarian kingdom to free water, and the Hungarians have spent millions of dollars in their endeavor to make it a model port. The great Austrian port and the Hungarian port are keen rivals, and during the last few years, Fiume has grown somewhat at the cost of its northern neighbor.

"Owing to the deep interest which the Hungarians take in their coast city the business of Fiume has grown rapidly. There are several harbors; one for coasting vessels, one for timber, and a general harbor, begun in 1872, and capable of accommodating about 700 large vessels. It is protected by a breakwater more than a half mile in length, and is flanked by a great, modern quay more than two miles long. The wharves and elevators are equipped in the most up-to-date fashion for the handling of a huge inflow and outflow of trade. The water front, as the rest of the city, is lighted by electricity.

At The Theaters

The Gem. Charlie Chaplin in "The First Commandment" make a strong offering today at the Gem. Marguerite Courtot, Tom Moore, Austin Webb and Robert Ellis are featured in "The First Commandment" a story of which follows:

A giant in the financial world, John Marshall imagines himself all powerful. Although he contributes towards the church, he refuses to set foot within its doors. Money is his god.

Marshall has two children, Walter, dissolute and worthless; Marguerite, sweet and wholesome. The girl realizes that Walter is wrecking his life. She pleads with her father, but the latter is too deeply engrossed in his business to pay attention to his son's habits.

Marshall remembers his daughter's plea when Walter later asks him for money. He informs the boy that it is up to him to earn his own living for a while. Walter pours his troubles into the ears of Mabel, a show girl. This gives Mabel an idea. Cleverly working a proposal out of him, she becomes his wife.

The news of his son's marriage comes as a staggering blow to Marshall. For the first time in his life his plans have met with failure. In anger, he disinherits Walter.

As time passes, Marshall determines to have his son divorced. Poorly, however, has brought out the fine qualities in the woman and she grows to love her husband. In the meantime, Marguerite falls in love with Tom Pierson, son of an independent manufacturer. The financial giant has attempted to crush Pierson upon several occasions.

In his effort to separate Walter and his wife, Marshall conceals a scheme to cast a bad light upon Mabel. Not only does the unscrupulous man's plot fail, but Marguerite is innocently caught in the trap. This crushes Marshall. Taking advantage of his condition, the man's rival, Eddy, plans to ruin him. Only by a supreme effort, does Marshall out-general his foe.

The man finds it advisable to conciliate Eddy. The latter consents to join forces with Marshall upon condition that Marguerite be compelled to marry his son, Franklin. In the meantime, Walter has reformed and now occupies an important position in the Pierson factory. Walter has become a father.

Marguerite, refusing to marry Franklin, elopes and becomes Tom's wife. Embittered and feeling that though the world is against him, Marshall forbids her ever to enter his home. Eddy learns of what has occurred. In rage, he demands that Marshall crush Tom's father. Immediately, his fortune hanging in the balance, Marshall agrees.

The surest way to accomplish this would be to destroy the Pierson plant. But, the man's attempt to bring this about is frustrated by his son. Sure of himself, Walter strips his father's soul and shows him what his worship of power and money have brought him to. Marshall sees a light. He returns home with Walter.

Although the following Sunday finds the father a ruined man, it also finds him really happy for the first time in years. As he sits beside his children in church, he realizes the significance of the sermon delivered by the preacher, who has taken for his text the First Commandment—"Thou shalt have no other gods before me."

The Majestic. Today's feature is "A Jitney Elope ment." A Charlie Chaplin film that starts with a chuckle and ends with a roar. The funny business leading up to the elopement is excellent preparation for the flight of the couple in their jitney auto.

He aspires to the hand of an heiress and $1,000,000. The father of the beautiful lady pays over the million and tries to deliver the daughter. She, however, has a mind of her own. She drops a note from her balcony, begging to be saved from the cruel fate. Chaplin picks up the note and at once enters the house and announces he is the Count de Hia Ha. He gets a royal welcome. While dining at the house, however, the real count appears. His former negotiations had been carried on by correspondence, but he proves to the satisfaction of the millionaire that he is it.

In the ensuing battle Chaplin kicks both the count and the traitor parent out of the house and flees with the girl. They find a jitney automobile and after dropping a nickel in the slot are off, the count, the cruel parent and several policemen in pursuit in another machine. There is a wild race across all kinds of woods and across small creeks, in which the auto runs both backwards and forwards, colliding many times. Chaplin loads his auto with bricks and when the pursuers are too close bombards them. He knocks the policemen out into the mud puddle.

Finally there is a terrific collision and the pursuers' machine is knocked across a dock and plunges several feet into a river, submerging the count and the traitor father. Then the happy pair kiss and race for a parson.

The Empress. Teddy Sampson, W. E. Lawrence and Mary Alden are featured in a two-part Reliance drama "The Slave Girl" and Charles Cleary, Cora Drew and Signe Auer are featured in "The Forged Testament," a two-reel Majestic. A synopsis of "The Forged Testament" is given:

Mawby, an unscrupulous adventurer, beguiles a rich widow into marrying him. Very soon she discovers his real character. He constantly badgers her for money, which he loses at cards, and one night he wrecks her purse from her, falling in a semi-drunken stupor on the couch. Mrs. Holloway, feeling a heart attack coming on, she has an incurable heart trouble and fearing that Mawby will get possession of her estate, sits down at once and writes a will, leaving everything she owns to her daughter Madeline, who is away at school. Sus picious, however, lest Mawby be feigning drunk to put her off her guard, she hides the will in the front of her dress. Then she writes a letter asking him to come the next day for the will. Feeling faint, and gasping for breath, she staggers to the porch and falls on a divan. From there she sees Mawby pocket the letter to the lawyer, and taking the will out of her dress she puts it in a secret compartment of a lockbox she is wearing. Her death occurs that night. After the funeral, Mawby helps himself to Mrs. Holloway's jewels. The lockbox, however, appearing to be of small value, he tosses it over to Madeline. Pressed for money and fearing that if the missing will is found he will be penniless, Mawby tries to inveigle Madeline into marrying him. Falling in this, he contrives to have her lured to a lonely roadhouse, coming along just in time to save her reputation. If she will promise to marry him, Realizing that he is at the bottom of her predicament, the girl indignantly refuses, and is marched to jail by the police, who have raided the inn. Mawby seeks to clinch matters by wiring the Evening Statesman the details of her arrest. The city editor assigns Muriel Manning to the story. Muriel and Madeline discover in one another old friends, and Madeline confides everything to the young reporter. While they are talking in the prison cell, the lockbox drops from Madeline's neck and the will is disclosed. A few days later, when Mawby tries to put over a forged will, Muriel produces the authentic document. A watermark on the false paper provides conclusive evidence. Mawby is jailed, and Madeline becomes her mother's sole heir.

German Foreign Office Says That Country Forced To Take Retaliatory Steps

Berlin, via London, May 11.—The following dispatch has been sent by the German foreign office to the German embassy at Washington:

"Please communicate the following to the state department: The German government desires to express its deepest sympathy at the loss of lives on board the Lusitania. This responsibility rests, however, with the British government, which through its plan of starving the civilian population of Germany, has forced this country to resort to retaliatory measures.

"In spite of the German offer to stop the submarine war in case the starvation plan was given up, British merchant vessels are being generally armed with guns and have repeatedly tried to ram submarines so that a previous search was impossible.

"They cannot, therefore, be treated as ordinary merchant vessels. A recent declaration made to the British parliament by the parliamentary secretary in answer to a question by Lord Charles Balfour said that at the present time practically all British merchant vessels were armed and provided with hand grenades.

"Besides, it has been openly admitted by the English press that the Lusitania on previous voyages repeatedly carried large quantities of war material. On the present voyage the Lusitania carried 3,400 cases of ammunition while the rest of the cargo also consisted chiefly of contraband.

"If England, after repeated official and unofficial warnings, considered itself able to declare that that boat ran no risk and thus light carelessly assumed responsibility for the human life on board a steamer wrecked, owing to its armament, and cargo, was liable to destruction, the German government in spite of its heartfelt sympathy for the loss of the American lives, cannot but regret that Americans felt inclined to resort to English promises rather than to pay attention to the warnings from the German side.

"FOREIGN OFFICE."

London.—According to trade union officials, more than 130,000 miners have been recruited into the British army since the beginning of the war. Most of these have been enrolled as engineers or sappers, thus providing trained men for this work, which is proving of the highest importance in the trench warfare on the western front.

The capture of Hill 60 near Ypres is a case in point, where the speed played a vital part in the operations. Tunneling and mine-laying of a swift and certain nature was essential to this operation and the sappers employed were skilled miners from Wales and the north of England.

Accustomed to working underground with a complete mastery of the pick and prop, and an instinctive understanding of all the difficulties to be encountered in the way of cave-ins and falls of earth, these skilled miners are able to drive saps and tunnels with a speed and accuracy not to be attained in the case of ordinary infantrymen; although every infantryman is given a thorough course of instruction in spade-work during his training.

Part of the miner's usefulness, especially in night work between the lines, lies in his almost uncanny ability to see clearly in what to ordinary persons is almost absolute darkness. This special ability comes, of course, from long working in the half lights of the underground world. It is of the greatest value, not only in sap-ping and tunneling, but also in the work of the "listening patrol" in night attacks, and in reconnaissance.

60,000 CONSUMPTIVES IS ESTIMATE FOR TEXAS

By Associated Press. Austin, Texas, May 11.—Statistics on tuberculosis in Texas brought out at a hearing before the legislative house committee on appropriations when it recently considered appropriations for the next two fiscal years for the State Tuberculosis colony at Carlsbad, Texas, show there are approximately 60,000 consumptives in Texas, and the annual Texas death rate from that disease is 10,000. It costs $14 per week to care for patients at the institution and they usually stay there from three to six months.

The Golden Year.
And slow and sure comes up the golden year.
When wealth no more shall rest in mountained heaps.
But smit with freer light shall slowly melt
In many streams to fatten lower lands.
And light shall spread, and man be liker man
Thro' all the seasons of the golden year.

Ah! when shall all men's good
Be each man's rule and universal peace
Lie like a shaft of light across the land
And like a lane of beams athwart the sea,
Thro' all the circles of the golden year?

Old writers pushed the happy seasons back.
The more fools they—well, forward, dreamers both!
But well I know
That unto him who works and feels his work,
This same grand year is ever at the doors.

MISSIONARY LECTURE AT FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The missionary society of the First Presbyterian Church was hostess Monday evening, primarily to the men of the church, honoring Mr. Anderson, layman-missionary, who came from St. Louis. Mr. Patterson is here to interest the men especially in the mission movement taking at both morning and evening services Sunday. The lecture of Monday evening was preceded by a short sketch, a tableau and monologue, showing America's expenditures for various commodities and contrasting the yearly expenditures for luxuries and intoxicants with the offering to missions, both home and foreign. Miss Helen Beavers, at Ann Arbor, was ably assisted by a number of the girls and young ladies of the church. Mr. Patterson's talk was one of much interest and roused much zeal and enthusiasm for the cause of missions both home and abroad among his hearers. The ladies served a tempting two-course supper.

MRS. ADAMS HOSTESS TO GUILD MONDAY

The Guild of the Good Shepherd met Monday afternoon in business session. Mrs. O. P. Adams being hostess. Various matters of business were discussed and the plans for the interior furnishing of the new church were examined. The hostess served a refreshing orange ice with cake late in the afternoon, the following being present: Mesdames Stewart, Warner, Sammons, Adams, Munday, Adams, Shaw, Perkins, Dalton, Mrs. P. Warner will be next hostess.

CENTRAL PRESBYTERIAN AID SOCIETY MEETING

The Ladies Aid of the Central Presbyterian Church met Monday afternoon with Mrs. Grey the opening devotionals being led by Mrs. J. Reed. The pastor, Rev. E. L. McReiden had prepared an excellent bible lesson and a business discussion was also entered into. Plans were made for the picnic Monday to which the men of the church will be invited. The members present were Mesdames Reed, Jackson, Presley, McLaughlin, Reed, White, Carter, Phil Kerr, Grey, Pittman and Arnold.

BIBLE STUDY OF FIRST PRESBYTERIAN AID MONDAY

The Ladies Aid of the First Presbyterian church met Monday for their usual Bible study. The lesson was led by Mrs. J. L. Meers and a portion of the book of Genesis formed the basis of the discussion. Mesdames Deane, Deane, Kell, Stone, Gaffney, Kemp, O. E. Marr, Urban and the leader. A business session followed the lesson.

WESTMINSTER GUILD ELECTS OFFICERS MONDAY

Officers for the coming year were elected by the Westminster Guild meeting Monday afternoon in regular session at the First Presbyterian church. Mrs. Orville Bullington was elected president; Mrs. Robb, vice president; Mrs. Mills Tittle, second vice president; Mrs. McCutcheon, secretary; Mrs. Fishell, chairman of the religious committee; Mrs. Malone, chairman of the literary committee; Mrs. Everett Jones, chairman of the social committee. The regular lesson was taken up, this being Chapter 23 in the study book, "A Knight of the 17th Century." Mrs. Orville Bullington was leader and all engaged in a general discussion of the lesson topics. A good number were in attendance, and, as there remain only three more meetings until the summer adjournment, all members are urged to attend these meetings.

The approval of bonds was left to Mayor Britton and County Judge Harris. The firm of Field & Clarkson was employed to draw plans for two frame buildings at the county farm, one for tuberculosis patients, the other for small pox cases.

ALL DEPARTMENTS OPEN TO WOMEN

BRITISH GOVERNMENT PLACES WOMEN ON SAME FOOTING WITH MEN OF SERVICE

WOMEN SUBSTITUTES URGED

One Object of Order is Release of Men So That They May Go To Front

London.—All departments of the British government service are officially thrown open to women for the first time in a circular issued by the cabinet through the board of trade. The circular urges all government departments to replace, if possible, men employees of military age with women, and offers to obtain suitable substitutes for various clerical and other positions, through the government labor exchanges.

The circular follows up a recent war office statement appealing for the release of more government employees for the front. In this statement Lord Kitchener was quoted: "I can hardly look to the heads of departments to arrange by finding suitable substitutes, for the necessary permission to be given freely to their superordinates who are prepared to join the colors."

The board of trade's circular points out that "a large number of women clerks have registered at the labor exchanges and considerable numbers of these have already been engaged by certain government departments. In addition, a special register is being compiled of women who have signified their willingness to undertake service during the continuance of the war, to release men for combatant duties. This register already contains 30,000 names, and will supply a large number of women qualified to take the place of officials who may be released."

The board of trade has itself released over 1,000 officials for the army, and in a large number of cases their places have been taken by women.

It remains to be seen what reply will be made by the heads of the various government departments to the board of trade's circular. Many of these departments have hitherto drawn a line very rigidly against any women employees. All of them will now make a careful survey of their work and ascertain to what extent men of recruiting age can be replaced with women.

It has been for years the aim of various women's organizations to obtain from the government an equal opportunity for both sexes in the government employ. The board of trade circular is regarded as an official declaration that for the period of the war at least, the barrier of sex will have no sanction from the cabinet.

Sylvia Pankhurst, the militant suffragette, has had a clash with Lloyd George and the liberal government over the employment of women. The Chancellor, in reply to a letter from her, promised that women doing piece work would be paid the same rate as the men were then getting, but said nothing about time work. Miss Pankhurst then wrote him on that point but received no answer. An indirect reply was made however by Mr. Rumbold, M. P., president of the board of trade, who said that no conditions had been laid down by the government as to time work. Miss Pankhurst has now made a statement to the press in which she accuses the government of refusing to guarantee women the same pay as men for time work, adding: "From the women's point of view it is unjust that women should be employed to do men's work at a lower rate; from the men's point of view, it is disastrous. Guarantees to take men back into employment after the war can never be enforced; and if any proof of this is needed, see the fact that promises by employers to make allowances to the wives of workmen who are fighting at the front are already being broken on every hand."

A little army of women, a thousand strong, is quietly drilling at Liverpool. It is composed of soldiers' and sailors' wives who are tired of sitting idly at home thinking of their absent husbands. The government plans to enroll some of the women as orderlies in local hospitals.

GERMANY'S SUPPLY OF METAL IS MORE THAN AMPLE

By Associated Press.—Berlin.—So great has been the flood of old metals for melting purposes, that the war ministry has had to issue a statement, thanking the donors but declaring the lack of metal is not sufficient to necessitate such sacrifices. "Of late," says the ministry, "there have been accumulating in the raw materials of war division of the ministry objects of all kinds from the household and the factory, every church bells, for the use of the army. It is impossible to thank each donor for his laudable interest, so the war ministry bespeaks in this way its gratitude." "The army authorities do not wish to take advantage of this movement, because at the present there is no shortage in old metal. Aside from this fact, the less well to do circles of our population would be apt to compete in a spirit of sacrifice in giving to the Fatherland their metal, while in the case of a real shortage, larger supplies and objects, such as roofs, could be used."

President Wilson, in today's dispatches, announces that nothing he had to say in his address at Philadelphia on yesterday must be taken as outlining the manner in which this government will treat with Germany in the sinking of the Lusitania and the consequent murder of 120 American citizens. The president is for peace. No one can doubt that, but this last act of Germany can hardly be expected to be passed off with a few words of apology or expressions of regret that American lives were lost.

The bicycles have their rights as well as other people. It would be well for drivers on the public highways to remember that the bicyclist or a person riding a wheel is entitled to half the road and should a person with a team meet wheelmen or drive past one on the road they must turn out the same as if they met another team. Should a team run down a bicycle on the highway and injure the person or damage his wheel the person so doing would be held for damages. The courts have so ruled, and it is important that drivers should understand the law and know that wheelmen have rights which all are bound to respect.

Strange that while we are considering and endeavoring to arrive at a satisfactory understanding of the respective rights of the automobile, the bicycle, the motorcycle and the horse-drawn vehicle to the roads, no thought is given to the poor devil who happens to have neither and must perforce pursue, if he can, the even tenor of his way by foot. Evidently, under the process of evolution and of progress, foot travelers have no rights that should be respected by the modern death wagons whose trail along the highways is marked by the bodies of victims who had no more sense than to dispute the right of way, and plant themselves in the way of engines of destruction. Perhaps some future legislature will provide for the appointment of a commission to investigate and determine the respective rights of the automobile drivers and pedestrians and report whether in its opinion the latter should have a portion of the road or street in which to pursue his journey or quit the earth entirely. —Denison Herald.

WEST POINTERS ONCE TAUGHT
RIGHT OF SECESSION

Hon. C. K. Lee of Fort Worth, in transmitting to W. J. Battle, President of the University, for the University Library, a very rare book, published in 1859, and used as a text book in the University of Texas, which was written by Robert E. Lee and other noted Southern generals were students in that institution says:

"I am sending you by express 'A View of the Constitution of the United States,' by William Rawle of Philadelphia, edition of 1829. It procured this volume after several months' inquiry of law book houses all over the United States. I have had reprinted and fastened inside the cover of this volume a report of the Historical Committee of the United Confederate Veterans made at the annual reunion May, 1914, concerning this treatise on the Constitution, and reviewing evidence and data absolutely establishing that this book was used as a text book by the United States government at West Point during the period when the major part of the prominent Confederate leaders attended that institution as wards of the government.

Rawle's work showing, as the quotations suggest, that he, Rawle, himself a Philadelphia lawyer, raised in the city where the Constitution was framed, taught unqualifiedly that the states had a right to withdraw from the Union.

"Every one of the South who honors the memory of his forebears should know these important facts. 'Yet I think that very few of them do, for out of the large number that I have talked to about this matter, young and old, I have found only two who did know them, and these two were men who attended the Confederate reunions quite regularly.

"The people of the South are not interested longer in the right of secession; they have long since accepted the logic of the result; that the United States is a nation and not a Confederation.

"They are interested, however, that their forefathers who fought and died in defense of the right of the states to secede, shall not go down in history as traitors or rebels.

"I hope this volume can be so placed in the University Library that every young man or young woman fortunate enough to attend that institution may have his or her attention called to this report and this volume."

THE WEEK IN BUSINESS.

Business conditions show comparatively little change, and though the recent cheerful outlook is maintained, observation goes to show in hand with increased confidence. The growing intensity of the war operations, including the sinking of an American ship, has caused considerable uneasiness, and resulted in rather sharp irregularities in the stock market. The cost of the war, which in one country alone amounts in the first year to more than double the total government debt created in this country during the Civil War, naturally causes concern. This, however, has little or no effect on the immediate volume of trade, which continues to expand slowly. The heavy export demand, particularly of foodstuffs and war materials, is still the most striking feature; but it is noticeable also that domestic consumption is on a rising scale, although this is much more apparent in some directions than in others. Bank clearings are now for the first time revealing a gain over last year, not only at New York, where speculative activities contribute to swell the total, but in many other parts of the country. The iron and steel industry is now operating on about a 75 per cent basis, with increasing pig iron output and prospects for this month appear excellent. The dry goods markets are generally steady, cotton goods being in liberal request and firm. Woolens and worsteds are quiet, but carpets are more active and higher. Shoes are moving slowly, but the outlook is more cheerful. Building operations are larger in the Eastern cities and building materials are in good demand, with considerable export sales. Winter wheat conditions are excellent. The heavy export demand for wheat keeps up. Ship building is prosperous, the automobile industry is generally active, there is rather more railroad buying of supplies and the volume of unemployment is diminishing. Money continues easy and collections maintain their recent improvement. In the latest week exports from New York were $24,763,189, a gain of $8,000,000 over last year, and the excess over imports was $2,106,154. With a continuance of the immense balance of international trade in favor of this country, a balance which is now forcing imports of gold from France, financial conditions are auspicious for the continued strength of this country, as compared with the other nations which formerly assumed financial leadership.

Betterment in the steel trade is reflected in the increased mill operations and the steady expansion in pig iron production, the total in April being the largest in July a year. According to the Iron Age, the output last month reached 2,116,494 tons, or 70,506 tons a day, against 2,063,405 tons, or 66,575 tons a day in March, while there were four more furnaces in blast on May 1 than on April 1. Broadening of the demand for pig iron has been a feature of late and speculative buying is in evidence, with the market showing a firmer tendency. Advances have been named on southern iron and quite heavy sales are noted in the Chicago district, while considerable activity prevails throughout the Central West. In finished material, the heavy foreign business is being supplemented by related inquiries from the railroads, especially for cars. It is stated that the Pennsylvania rail order will be for 138,000 tons, while the Rock Island system is expected to purchase 10,000 tons at once. The large demand for structural steel has imparted firmness to the bar market, while prices of merchant pipe and boiler tubes have been raised $2 and line pipe $1 by the leading producer.

Recent large contract sales and a steady demand for immediate delivery have placed staple cotton goods in a strong position. The mills are better situated than in usual at this period of the year and there is more activity in fine and fancy cottons, both for prompt and forward shipment. Print cloths, however, have been very quiet. The dress fabric scarcity continues, to grow more serious and the leading line of colored flannellettes has been advanced 1/4 a yard. A disappointing volume of duplicate orders for immediate delivery has been received, business from the clothing trade on staples being much below normal. Notwithstanding this, values rule very firm, with advances of from 5c to 7 1/2c a yard noted in some directions. The demand for staple serges has been lighter than for some years and an early opening of the new spring season, with close prices, is predicted. Shepherd checks and poplins are selling steadily in staple dress goods, while some of the coverts are also moving.

A sudden drop in cotton carried prices down to a point nearly $5 a bale below the recent high level, the October delivery falling under the 10c mark. Fears of complications with Germany and the possibility of a war between China and Japan were the overshadowing influences, while the sharp break in securities also exerted an important effect. Adverse crop reports again predominated, but liquidation was general and the Liverpool market was noticeably depressed. Declining quotations for wheat were largely attributable to the fine prospects for the winter crop, while spring wheat seedling are a parent is almost completed, with a substantial increase in the acreage indicated. Friday showed an unusual small amount of winter killing. Western receipts of wheat this week were 5,149,000 bushels compared with 2,703,000 last year, while exports from leading ports of the United States, against 2,775,275 in 1914. Like the costlier cereal, the trend in both corn and oats was mainly downward, although net changes were not marked. Primary arrivals of 973,000 bushels of corn this week exceeded those of the previous week, while 1,829,000 reported a decrease of 373,000 bushels, against only 32,000 in the earlier period.

AND FIGHTING

TURKISH DEAD IN HEAPS

From Distance Passengers See British
Attacking Turkish Positions
Not Far From Canal

Cairo.—There were two steamers bound from England to India when the attack by the Turkish troops was actually in progress. One of these carried a considerable number of passengers who were privileged to get a more complete panoramic view of a big battle field than has probably been the good fortune of non-military observers in any other field of action. They not only saw fragments of the repulsed Turks at Kintara, but also the advance of British troops into the desert in their wide flanking movement further down the canal.

A letter from one of these passengers says in part:

"A few minutes after we left Port Said a notice was sent around that passengers were to keep to the port decks, as Turkish snipers were at work on the north side of the canal.

"For the first ten miles all the low lying land had been flooded, but from there onward we commenced to see troops entrenched. Every tenth mile was a camp, and about every hundred yards between were small trenches containing about a dozen Indians. Further up the troops were mostly New Zealanders and Australians.

"About the thirtieth mile we passed the Indian marine cruiser Hardinge, and here was our first evidence of there having been a fight, for her funnel was gone all the way down one side, and the other side was riddled with bullets and her bridge gone. Of course ships in the canal pass within a few feet of each other, so we could see everything. Her captain and pilot, who were on the bridge at the time, were killed, and about sixteen others were wounded.

"From this time on we passed several warships, and troops were on both sides of the canal. We amused ourselves by throwing tin can cigarettes out to them. We cleared all the cigarettes from the bar.

"At this time we were going at eight miles an hour, which is three miles more than the speed limit, so it was evident that they wanted to get us through the canal as quickly as possible."

"At the fortieth mile the men in the trenches told us that they had been engaged with the enemy on the previous day, and that the Turks were now about eight miles off. I went up on the deck and saw troops in the distance, but could not say whether they were Turks or not. From the forty-second mile the banks of the canal are high and I could not see any great distance, except between occasional gaps.

"But at the forty-sixth mile I saw a dead horse, half on the bank and half in the water, and a little farther a dead camel. Then the excitement began. First one dead Turk was seen, then two, then a batch of seven or eight, and then forty or fifty, a crowd of them, with a number of broken small boats, full of dead, simply smashed to pieces, some hanging over the side with a leg gone, others without an arm, and some you could not recognize as men at all. Just here the banks are quite high, but they slope down to the water, and on these slopes were dead Turks in all sorts of positions. Some had fallen with their heads and shoulders just in the water. I climbed up in the rigging to see what was over the top of the bank, and there I saw almost hundreds.

"It appeared that the Turks were seen coming, and the warships in the canal allowed them to throw a pontoon across. When they were all gathered at this spot the warships let fly. They had to retire after losing several of their guns. This place was Kintara, a few miles from the Bitter Lakes. The battle occurred on the previous day.

"On arrival at the Lakes we anchored for the night with all lights out, and among about thirty other ships. 'Fighting was going on all night a little further up the canal, and we thought we should be held up in the Lakes, but we started off the next morning with our bridge and deck protected by sand bags. From here on Suez was passed camp after camp of soldiers. Most of them had been in action. The Turks were about eight miles away.

"A little further on we heard the guns and saw the British troops moving off to the attack. The battle was quite a distance inland. I could see the smoke from the guns through my glasses. There were some low sand hills about five miles away, and I could see men on this ridge. The British had several thousand men and six guns marching over the flat ground for this ridge.

"I don't suppose many people have had or will have the chance that we had to go straight through the middle of a battlefield, before they have even had a chance to bury the dead. The effect of these naval guns must be awful, and from the curious position of the killed they must have been dead almost before they reached the ground. Occasionally you would notice a man who appeared to have struggled, most lay evidently where they fell."

It is unusual that such intense interest is manifested in a corset demonstration as has been shown by the attendance at our corset department yesterday and today. Be sure and call at our corset department tomorrow as this will be your last opportunity to meet our expert corsetiere, Miss Maguire, who has been sent here direct from the factory. It is particularly desirable with the change of new dress styles that you will be fitted by an expert to a corset. Call as early tomorrow as possible in order to avoid the rush. Be fitted to a corset without extra charge that will meet your requirements.

MOTOR VEHICLES SUPPLANT
HORSES IN WARFARE

London.—Cavalry has been so little used in this war and transportation been so dependent on motor vehicles that it is doubtful whether the demand for American horses is as heavy now as will be after the war, when the shortage will be felt on the farms of Europe. The United States has shipped less than 100,000 horses to the warring powers since hostilities began. If the number is raised to 240,000 only one per cent of the American horse supply have been touched.

WALT MASON

When Wigglesworth is on the street a charming smile adorns his face; to every dame he bows to meet, he bows with courtesy, old world grace. His seat, when riding in a car, is any girl he'll sweetly yield; and women praise him near and far, and say he is a Chesterfield. Throughout the town, from west to east, the man for chivalry is famed. "The Bayards are not all deceased," the women say, when he is named. At home this Bayard isn't thus; his eye is fierce, his face is sour; he looks around for things to fuss, and jaws the women by the hour. His daughters tremble at his frown, and wonder why he's such a bear; his wife would like to jump the town, and hide herself most anywhere. But if a visitor drops in, his manner changes with a jerk, he wears his false and shadowy grin, and bows like some twisted Turk. Then for his daughters add his wife, he wears his smile serene and fat and callers say, "No sordid strife can enter such a home as that!" A million frauds like Wigglesworth are smirking on the streets today, and when at eve they seek their shacks, they'll beef and grouch, the old stale way.

COMMISSIONERS LOCATE BUILDINGS AT FARM

Members of the city council and commissioners' court this afternoon visited the county farm and decided upon locations for the two new buildings which will be erected there as part of the joint hospital. The building for tuberculosis patients will be not far from the present group of buildings while the structure for contagious diseases will be several hundred yards away. The buildings are being kept in a group as much as possible so that if it is ever deemed wise to dispose of any part of the land, as has been contemplated, this may be done without interfering with the buildings. The county has a fairly good crop showing at present. Last year it raised fifteen bales of cotton which are still being held for ten cents

TAUGHT BY MOVING PICTURES

Students in Medical Schools Have a New and Valuable Course of Instruction.

The motion picture has invaded the realm of medical school instruction. The specialists in diagnosis have discovered that there is no other way in which they can so vividly present to medical students the difference in diagnosis between similar physical appearances as by means of the moving picture. Dr. J. Ivan Dufur, professor of nervous diseases at the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, is the originator of this method of teaching which, it is believed, will revolutionize medical instruction. Doctor Dufur has, as the result of a year's labor, succeeded in preparing a set of reels, including demonstrations of actual cases of every one of the principal nervous diseases. Harrowing experiences were necessary in the preparation of some of these reels. Doctor Dufur and the photographer were locked for four hours at one time in a room with a dozen insane epileptics waiting for a characteristic fit.

The osteopathic practitioners are greatly interested in this method of diagnosis and these reels are being exhibited at state conventions of that school of practice and are being used in their colleges. Scientific American.

INVENTED BY AN AUSTRIAN

Torpedo, So Fearfully Destructive, is a Comparatively Modern Weapon of Warfare.

The modern torpedo is virtually a locomotive, mine, the charge being carried in the head of a long, cigar-shaped steel body propelled by its own machinery and kept on its course by means of a gyroscope. The history of this weapon dates only from 1866, in which year an Austrian officer, Captain Luppis, submitted the germ of the idea to Mr. Whitehead, then manager of an engineering works in Fiume. By him the weapon was perfected, and the British torpedo is still known by his name. The most up-to-date torpedoes are credited with a range of about 10,000 yards, over which they are propelled by engines driven by compressed air which is heated, and therefore made capable of doing more work, on its way to the engines. The rate of speed varies from forty to twenty knots, according to the distance which is to be traveled, and although the weapons can be set to travel at varying depths below the surface, nine feet is the usual distance, this taking them well below the lower edge of a battleship's armor.

Buddhist and Christian Sects.
Statistics show that in Japan there are 13 denominations and 57 sects of Buddhism. Of these the most powerful one is that of Shin Shu. There are 71,769 temples and 53,081 priests. This number includes only residing priests. Counting all those engaged in preaching and teaching there are 73,047. There are also other kinds of priests and nuns who have domestic duties of either preaching or teaching. These number 54,601. These classes of priests and nuns make up in all 180,129. Besides these there are about 10,000 students preparing for the priesthood. The home department of the Japanese government has been gathering statistics of Christians for many years, and the last report of the number of believers of the different churches is as follows: Roman Catholic, 63,081; Greek Catholic, 14,749; Nippon-Kristo, 15,451; Kumiai, 16,115; Sei Ko Kwai, 15,090; Methodists, 11,763; Baptists, 4,191; other smaller denominations, 12,246; total, 165,676.

Elevated Playground.
In order to provide a public recreation place in New York's densely populated East side, an elevated playground has been constructed at the west end of the Williamsburg bridge, says Popular Mechanics. It is 480 feet in length, and affords a breathing space for several thousand persons during the sultry days and nights of summer. In its center is an open air pavilion where dancing and band concerts are held, while at convenient intervals seating accommodations are provided beneath awnings for the benefit of those who frequent the place during the heat of the day. Basket weaving and sewing are taught the neighborhood children by instructors.

C. E. SWENSON ARRIVED IN LIVERPOOL SUNDAY

C. E. Swenson of this city arrived safely in Liverpool Sunday on the steamer New York, according to cable advices received by the Wichita Falls Motor company Monday. Mr. Swenson was at first thought to be a passenger on the ill-fated Lusitania, but changed his passage to another boat shortly before sailing, and this led to the erroneous reports regarding him. His family believed him on the Lusitania and had given him up for lost before it was ascertained that he was on another boat.

Have a piece of pie. Top crust short as a busy cook's temper—crackly short and feather flaky. Bottom crust "biscuity"—no sog.

Yet for all you can taste of shortening "greasiness" you'd never know there was a speck of shortener in it.

That's because it's made with Crusto. Crusto has no taste of its own—result, it brings out all the flavor of the other ingredients. It is odorless. Not only does it make delicious pastry but whole some pastry, too. Better than lard, and as cheap—cheaper than cooking butter and better. Try it.

AMERICAN FLAG NO PROTECTION

DERNBURG SAYS ANY SHIP CARRYING CONTRABAND LIABLE TO BE SUNK

BLAME ON THE PASSENGERS

Says Anybody That Wants To Can Commit Suicide By Sailing On Ship With Contraband

New York, May 11.—Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former minister of colonies of the German empire and recognized in this country as the Kaiser's spokesman, said tonight that Germany had only begun her deadly crusade against Great Britain's commerce, and that the sinking of the Lusitania would be followed by the destruction of other British ships, whether or not there were Americans aboard.

The American flag would afford not the slightest protection for vessels which carried cargo that the Germans regarded as contraband. He said that even parts of flying machines, automobile accessories and cotton were now considered contraband by the German admiralty.

Finally Dr. Dernburg said:

"Any ship carrying goods to Great Britain is to be sunk. England has cut off Germany from the outside world and we intend to isolate her in like manner, so that all communication with other parts of the earth will be impossible.

When shipping men heard of Dr. Dernburg's threat against all vessels bound to England, they called attention to the fact that a number of ships will enter the British war zone tomorrow with several hundred Americans aboard.

With closed eyes, Dr. Dernburg began the interview. He spoke with much deliberation.

"The Americans have always been friendly to Germany," he said slowly, "and we want to maintain their friendship. These facts, however, must be borne in mind to appreciate the present situation in the proper light."

Calls It Most Unfortunate

"There were 5000 cases of war material for the allies on board the Lusitania. In understanding that something like 100 Americans were killed, I regret that very much. It was most unfortunate. Nevertheless, if this material had gotten into the hands of the allies it would have been used against us and they might have been able to pound their way into Germany through our lines and more than 150 of our people might have been killed.

"The British orders in council were to exclude all kinds of material from reaching our civil population. They even placed an embargo on Holland, Denmark and Sweden, on penalty that they would be blockaded; and they partially are blockaded. It is, therefore, reasonable to believe that the German Admiralty will not permit anything to get into the hands of the allies."

"Suffering is recognized in war. Unfortunately, that must be. England is building submarines in her home yards just as well as having them built in the Fore River plant in the United States and having them put together in Montreal.

"England claims that with modern weapons of warfare she is not able to maintain all the old rules of war. Therefore she proclaimed a long distance blockade. It has been the usage of war that vessels could be stopped, seized and searched.

"Vessels that carried contraband could be destroyed if they could not be taken into port. This has been done by England. It has been customary to give innocent persons warning and a chance to get away. A submarine is only 150 feet long. It has no accommodations for others than its crew of probably twenty-four men. Consequently they are unable to take off passengers.

"A submarine can be jammed at any moment, and if the Lusitania had been warned she could have put on steam and run away. So instead of giving warning to the Lusitania, Germany gave specific general notice before she sailed. That notice was ample.

How to Travel in Safety

"How can Americans, being neutral, have the right to travel the high seas in safety?" asked the former colonial secretary and answering himself, he said:

"Any American traveling on an American boat under the American flag will be safe. There is only one danger—the use of the American flag by a belligerent vessel. There are any number of neutral ships.

"There is also this condition: An American ship or any other neutral vessel must carry no munitions of war. It is easy for an American who wants to travel to find out what a ship carries. All ships make their manifests to the customs house and they are public.

"Announcement could be made of these and lines held to their announcement. Everybody takes a risk if they want to. Anybody can commit suicide if they want to.

"Germany issued her order fixing a war zone. England replied by her orders in council requiring nations to ship nothing to Germany. Now shall Germany stop her submarine warfare? We will stop it as we announced, providing England stops her policy of interdiction. Germany is willing to maintain the Harms convention rules. She does not want anything that is contraband.

"What do you want?" was asked.

"Cotton and all foodstuffs," he replied. "Give us an open sea and so much thing as happened to the Lusitania will happen again. We regret that it has happened in spite of our warning."

"We have done and will do the best we can to avoid such trouble, but we can not allow Americans to be used as shields to get articles of war into the hands of the allies. The death of the Americans might have been avoided if our warning had been heeded. I am quite sure the Cunard line is to blame for not telling travelers they were carrying large quantities of contraband.

Would Not Have Sailed

"I am satisfied that if Americans knew that they would not have sailed on the ship.

"Submarines must be used as they are capable of being used. We put them in next to the advertisements of the Cunard line's sailing dates. We knew the Caronia has been doing patrol duty around outside Sandy Hook. Suddenly the guns disappear and persons are invited to go out on her. Where did the guns go?"

Here Dr. Dernburg was asked, who was to be held responsible for the sinking of the Lusitania, that would be brought because of the death of American passengers. He said:

"These suits must be brought against the Cunard line. The Cunard Company is responsible.

"One of the reporters at this juncture remarked:

"You gave the Lusitania no warning. She was an American ship carrying the American flag and under the American registry."

"Yes," responded the Kaiser's representative, "but she carried oil and oil is used for fuel, lubricating and many other purposes on board ship."

"Then you mean to say," continued the reporter, "that the American flag and American registry are no protection?"

"No, if the ship carries contraband of war," answered Dr. Dernburg with emphasis on every word.

"Does that mean what Germany considers contraband of war?" was asked.

"No, it means what was contained in the list of contraband published by Great Britain."

FIRING MISS WANDLE

By GEORGE MUNSON.

(Copyright, 1915, by W. O. Chapman.)

Miss Wandle might have been thirty-six, and she had been with Rothstein for twelve years. She started in as an ordinary stenographer, and it was solely her ability and industry that got her the post of Rothstein's private secretary, although everyone could see that Rothstein thought a good deal of her. After I came the firm was turned into a corporation. Rothstein was president, owning a majority of the stock, and Joe Barnes, treasurer. Clifford was secretary. Bob Syce was general manager.

Things went on all right until old Rothstein began to suffer from heart trouble. Then Miss Wandle was always at his home—he was a widower, too—taking notes for him. She would come back and tell Clifford, Syce and Barnes what they were to do. It was that set their backs up. They hadn't had anything against Miss Wandle previously, but they didn't like the old man's orders coming through her.

Miss Wandle was a business woman in the strictest sense. At first the fellows had tried to get gay with her. She never encouraged anything of that sort. She was cold, keen, calculating business from start to finish, without a much room for sentiment as you could insert a fountain pen into. At last, that was the way I sized her up.

About the cabal against her, you know what wretched, trucking kind of creatures some of us underpaid clerks are. We knew that Syce, Clifford, Barnes & Co. were "laying for" Miss Wandle. But because we were in mortal terror of losing our jobs, none of us dared do anything to bring down their displeasure on our heads. When old Rothstein was taken with one of his bad spells and ordered south for three months, the cabal thought it would be time to cut loose and show Miss Wandle that she didn't amount to anything in particular about the office.

I would look up from the books and see the three through the open door of Syce's office, smoking and putting their heads together and glancing in Miss Wandle's direction. And I knew something was brewing.

She came in at nine-thirty and Clifford, who had the big desk in the main office, called her over to him as soon as she had removed her hat.

"Miss Wandle," he said, in an ugly sneering voice loud enough to be heard all over the office, "will you be so good as to look at the clock and tell me what time it is?"

"It is half-past nine," answered Miss Wandle quietly, though not another woman in the office would have stood for that line of talk.

"Will you remember in future, Miss Wandle," said Clifford, "that our office hours begin at nine? That is the time I come down and that is the time Mr. Syce and Mr. Barnes come down. We're not important enough to take an extra half hour, and I guess you aren't."

Miss Wandle nodded and went away as coolly as though it had been she who was calling down Jim Clifford.

After that the trio set to work to force Miss Wandle's resignation by petty persecutions. I guess they thought the old man was done for.

Miss Wandle always came down scrupulously at nine after that, so they tried other ways. They found fault with her work. They didn't like her having knowledge of details of the business of which they themselves were ignorant. It was Bob Syce, however, who hit on the star trick. He made her take stenographic notes for old Perkins, the head of the stock department.

Everybody expected that she would resign then, but it didn't faze her a particle. They kept her at that just long enough to muddle up the business, and then they recalled her. The next idea that came was to the credit of Joe Barnes. It was masterly.

We were making out the vacation schedule, and Miss Wandle had put down her own name for the two weeks beginning with the first of June. It was a little early for vacations, but still, people did go away in June. Barnes happened to see the list and he called Miss Wandle over to his desk.

"Miss Wandle," he said in his silk-lined manner, "I see you have scheduled your vacation to begin on the first of June."

"Mr. Rothstein understood that, I was going to take my vacation on the first of June, Mr. Barnes, and I feel that I have his sanction."

Barnes got red in the face.

"Miss Wandle," he said, "you seem to think you run this office. It is necessary for me to convince you of your mistake. You will take your vacation when I"—with a thump of his fist—"give you permission, or you may draw your salary to date and walk out of this office."

Miss Wandle smiled. "I shall do neither, Mr. Barnes," she answered.

For a moment Barnes was staggered. Then he thrust his ugly face close against the woman's—he showed his breeding pretty well then. "Perhaps you own this office?" he remarked.

"I certainly hope to after the fifth of June," replied Miss Wandle calmly. "You see, I am going down to Florida to be married to Mr. Rothstein and he is going to give me his share of the stock as a wedding gift."

MANY GERMANS SETTLED IN BALTIC PROVINCES

County Being Invaded By German Forces Has More Teutonic Than Slav Characteristics

Washington, May 11.—Where the northern peoples have thrashed out among themselves in many battles the causes of faith and commerce and empire, where German, Swede, Pole, Russian, Lett, Esth and Tartar have struggled; on the area of the Baltic provinces, as much the cockpit of the North as Belgium has been of Central Europe, news dispatches make it apparent that the Teuton and the Slav are preparing to stage another one of those mighty struggles for the maintenance of race. It is with this country, a borderland where German and Russian meet among a native population of Letts and Esths, the theatre of the latest German invasion, that today's war-geography study of the National Geographic Society deals. The statement reads:

"Courland, Livonia and Esthonia, the three Russian governments folding themselves around the eastern elbow of the Baltic Sea, deeply broken in coastline, swept by an all-winter wind with cool summer and biting winter, form the Baltic Provinces. They comprise 36,560 square miles, supporting 2,500,000 inhabitants, of whom the great majority are Letts and Esths, the first-mentioned akin to the Lithuanians, the latter a Finnish people. The natives are laborers and the peasants, the Russians are the military and administrative officials, while, until the outbreak of the war, the Germans were the traders and manufacturers of these provinces.

"A lesser stream of German migration has at various times flowed north by way of the Baltic, many of its elements settling on these coastal lands that stretch from the Prussian border to Petrograd. A slight strip of the Russian government of Kovno touches the sea near Memel; thus dividing East Prussia from the Baltic Provinces. Germans have founded many families in this territory, and many of the noblest and townsmen of the Baltic lands are of German ancestry. The Germans descended population of the three governments constitutes about 8 per cent of the whole, considerably outnumbering the Russian.

"German characteristics far more than Russian are found throughout the provinces which, until within the last few years, had numerous German schools, German newspapers and societies. The Russians, however, a few years before the present war began, turned their attention to the Russification of the Baltic Provinces after the same thorough fashion with which they have carried on their campaigns for the assimilation of the Poles. The German schools, language, press and the territory included in the Baltic Provinces the object of Christian crusades. They carried their religion to the Letts and Esths by the sword, and after them came German settlers, who expropriated the land crushing the native population to a position of serfdom. These northern crusaders carried on their operations during the 12th century. Besides their religion, the knights brought the seeds of German civilization with them, and the cultural development of this region was, therefore, early far superior to that of the surrounding country.

"With the exception of Courland, the Baltic Provinces once belonged to Sweden. Courland was a dependency of Poland. Peter the Great took possession of the Swedish provinces in the beginning of the 18th century, and Courland was obtained in 1795. For a long time, the provinces were allowed a large measure of self-government, but in 1859 the movement began for their assimilation with the rest of the empire. The movement developed more special emphasis some 5 or 7 years ago.

"The coastlands and their interior areas are flat and are dotted with German towns and villages, where are found the German gables, town-halls, cathedrals, and guttural German is heard in every commercial house. The provinces are rich in trade and manufacture, and the business and port cities of vast importance. Here are some of the organizations were prescribed.

"The Order of the Swordbearers and, later, the Teutonic Knights made ports of Russia."

WOMEN CONDUCTORS IN STREET CARS IN CARDIFF
Cardiff, Wales—The first women conductors appeared on the Cardiff street cars on April 23 and were received enthusiastically by the townspeople. Almost the entire population of the place made an effort to obtain a ride on one or another of the cars officered by the new conductors, with the result that the novices experienced a rush which would have tried the ability of a veteran.

That the new conductors were somewhat nervous was quite evident during the first few hours, but before the day was over they had become more confident. All the passengers, they said, were very polite, except over occasional mistakes in making change. Some of the men who boarded the cars seemed to be in doubt as to whether or not to remove their hats inside the cars.

Have a piece of pie. Top crust short as a busy cook's temper—crackly short and feather flaky. Bottom crust "biscuity"—no sog.

Yet for all you can taste of shortening "greasiness" you'd never know there was a speck of shortener in it.

That's because it's made with Crusto. Crusto has no taste of its own—result, it brings out all the flavor of the other ingredients. It is odorless. Not only does it make delicious pastry but whole some pastry, too. Better than lard, and as cheap—cheaper than cooking butter and better. Try it.

AMERICAN FLAG NO PROTECTION

DERNBURG SAYS ANY SHIP CARRYING CONTRABAND LIABLE TO BE SUNK

BLAME ON THE PASSENGERS

Says Anybody That Wants To Can Commit Suicide By Sailing On Ship With Contraband

New York, May 11.—Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former minister of colonies of the German empire and recognized in this country as the Kaiser's spokesman, said tonight that Germany had only begun her deadly crusade against Great Britain's commerce, and that the sinking of the Lusitania would be followed by the destruction of other British ships, whether or not there were Americans aboard.

The American flag would afford not the slightest protection for vessels which carried cargo that the Germans regarded as contraband. He said that even parts of flying machines, automobile accessories and cotton were now considered contraband by the German admiralty.

Finally Dr. Dernburg said: "Any ship carrying goods to Great Britain is to be sunk. England has cut off Germany from the outside world and we intend to isolate her in like manner, so that all communication with other parts of the earth will be impossible."

When shipping men heard of Dr. Dernburg's threat against all vessels bound to England, they called attention to the fact that a number of ships will enter the British war zone tomorrow with several hundred Americans aboard.

With closed eyes, Dr. Dernburg began the interview. He spoke with much deliberation. "The Americans have always been friendly to Germany," he said slowly, "and we want to maintain their friendship. These facts, however, must be borne in mind to appreciate the present situation in the proper light."

Calls It Most Unfortunate. "There were 5000 cases of war material for the allies on board the Lusitania. In understanding that something like 150 Americans were killed. I regret that very much. It was most unfortunate. Nevertheless, if this material had gotten into the hands of the allies it would have been used against us and they might have been able to pound their way into Germany through our lines and more than 150 of our people might have been killed."

"The British orders in council were to exclude all kinds of material from reaching our civil population. They even placed an embargo on Holland, Denmark and Sweden, on penalty that they would be blockaded; and they partially are blockaded. It is, therefore, reasonable to believe that the German Admiralty will not permit anything to get into the hands of the allies."

"Buffeting is recognized in war. Unfortunately, that must be. England is building submarines in her home yards just as well as having them built in the For River plant in the United States and having them put together in Montreal."

"England claims that with modern weapons of warfare she is not able to maintain all the old rules of war. Therefore she proclaimed a long distance blockade. It has been the usage of war that vessels could be stopped, seized and searched."

"Vessels that carried contraband could be destroyed if they could not be taken to port. This has been done in England. It has been customary to give innocent persons warning and a chance to get away. A submarine is only 150 feet long. It has no accommodations for others than its crew of probably twenty-four men. Consequently they are unable to take off passengers."

"A submarine can be jammed at any moment, and if the Lusitania had been warned she could have put on steam and run away. So instead of giving warning to the Lusitania, Germany gave specific general notice before she sailed. That notice was ample."

How to Travel in Safety "How can Americans, being neutral, have the right to travel the high seas in safety?" asked the former colonial secretary and answering himself, he said:

"Any American traveling on an American boat under the American flag will be safe. There is only one danger—the use of the American flag by a belligerent vessel. There are any number of neutral ships."

"There is also this condition: An American ship or any other neutral vessel must carry no munitions of war. It is easy for an American who wants to travel to find out what a ship carries. All ships make their manifests to the customs house and they are public."

"Announcement could be made of these and lines held to their announcement. Everybody takes a risk if they want to. Anybody can commit suicide if they want to."

"Germany issued her order fixing a war zone. England replied by her orders in council requiring nations to ship nothing to Germany. Now shall Germany stop her submarine warfare? We will stop it as we announced, providing England stops her policy of starvation. Germany is willing to maintain the Hague convention rules. She does not want anything that is contraband."

"What do you want?" was asked. "Cotton and all foodstuffs," he replied. "Give us an open sea and no such thing as happened to the Lusitania will happen again. We regret that it has happened in spite of our warning."

"We have done and will do the best we can to avoid such trouble, but we can not allow Americans to be used as shields to get articles of war into the hands of the allies. The death of the Americans might have been avoided if our warning had been heeded. I am quite sure the Cunard line is to blame for not telling travelers they were carrying large quantities of contraband."

Would Not Have Sailed "I am satisfied that if Americans knew that they would not have sailed on the ship."

"Submarines must be used as they are capable of being used. We put in advertisements and were careful to put them in next to the advertisements of the Cunard line's sailing dates. We knew the Caronia had been doing patrol duty around outside Sandy Hook. Suddenly the guns disappeared and persons are invited to go out on her. Where did the guns go?"

Here Dr. Dernburg was asked who was to be held responsible for the suits of damages that would be brought because of the death of American passengers. He said:

"These suits must be brought against the Cunard line. The Cunard Company is responsible. One of the reporters at this juncture remarked:

"You gave the Lusitania no warning. She was an American ship carrying the American flag and under the American registry."

"Yes," responded the Kaiser's representative, "but she carried oil and oil is used for fuel, lubricating and many other purposes on board ship."

"Then you mean to say," continued the reporter, "that the American flag and American registry are no protection?"

"Not if the ship carries contraband of war," answered Dr. Dernburg with emphasis on every word.

"Does that mean what Germany considers contraband of war?" was asked.

"No," it means what was contained in the list of contraband published by Great Britain."

FIRING MISS WANDLE

By GEORGE MUNSON.

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

Miss Wandle might have been thirty-six, and she had been with Rothstein for twelve years. She started in as an ordinary stenographer, and it was solely her ability and industry that got her the post of Rothstein's private secretary, although everyone could see that Rothstein thought a good deal of her. After I came the firm was turned into a corporation. Rothstein was president, owning a majority of the stock, and Joe Barnes treasurer. Clifford was secretary. Bob Syce was general manager.

Things went on all right until old Rothstein began to suffer from heart trouble. Then Miss Wandle was always at his home—he was a widower, too—taking notes for him. She would come back at ten o'clock, Syce and Barnes what they were to do. It was that set their backs up. They hadn't had anything against Miss Wandle previously, but they didn't like the old man's orders coming through her.

Miss Wandle was a business woman in the strictest sense. At first the fellows had tried to get gay with her. She never encouraged anything of that sort. She was cold, keen, calculating business from start to finish, without as much room for sentiment as you could insert a fountain pen into. At least, that was the way I sized her up.

About the cabal against her; you know what wretched, trucking kind of creatures some of us underpaid clerks are. We knew that Syce, Clifford, Barnes & Co. were "laying for" Miss Wandle. But because we were in mortal terror of losing our jobs, none of us dared do anything to bring down their displeasure on our heads.

When old Rothstein was taken with one of his bad spells and ordered south for three months, the cabal thought it would be time to cut loose and show Miss Wandle that she didn't amount to anything in particular about the office.

I would look up from the books and see the three through the open door of Syce's office, smoking and putting their heads together and glancing in Miss Wandle's direction. And I knew something was brewing.

She came in at nine-thirty and Clifford, who had the big desk in the main office, called her over to him as soon as she had removed her hat.

"Miss Wandle," he said, in an unassuming voice, loud enough to be heard all over the office, "will you be so good as to look at the clock and tell me what time it is?"

"It is half-past nine," answered Miss Wandle quietly, though not another woman in the office would have stood for that line of talk.

"Will you remember in future, Miss Wandle," said Clifford, "that our office hours begin at nine? That is the time I come down and that is the time Mr. Syce and Mr. Barnes come down. We're not important enough to take an extra half hour, and I guess you aren't."

Miss Wandle nodded and went away as coolly as though she had been she who was calling down Jim Clifford. After that the trio set to work to force Miss Wandle's resignation by petty persecutions. I guess they thought the old man was done for.

Miss Wandle always came down scrupulously at nine after that, so they tried other ways. They found fault with her work. They didn't like her having knowledge of details of the business of which they themselves were ignorant. It was Bob Syce, however, who hit on the star trick. He made her take stenographic notes for old Perkins, the head of the stock department.

Everybody expected that she would resign then, but it didn't faze her a bit. They kept her at that just long enough to muddle up the business, and then they recalled her. The next idea that came was to the credit of Joe Barnes. It was masterly.

We were making out the vacation schedule, and Miss Wandle had put down her own name for the two weeks beginning with the first of June. It was a little early for vacations, but still, people did go away in June. Barnes happened to see the list and he called Miss Wandle over to his desk.

"Miss Wandle," he said in his silk-stemmed manner, "I see you have scheduled your vacation to begin on the first of June."

"Mr. Rothstein understood that I was going to take my vacation on the first of June, Mr. Barnes, and I feel that I have his sanction."

Barnes got red in the face. "Miss Wandle," he said, "you seem to think you run this office. It is necessary for me to convince you of your mistake. You will take your vacation when I"—with a thump of his fist—"give you permission, or you may draw your salary to date and walk out of this office."

Miss Wandle smiled. "I shall do neither, Mr. Barnes," she answered.

For a moment Barnes was staggered. Then he thrust his ugly face close against the woman's—he showed his breeding pretty well then. "Perhaps you own this office?" he remarked.

"I certainly hope to after the first of June," replied Miss Wandle calmly. "You see, I am going down to Florida to be married to Mr. Rothstein and he is going to give me his share of the stock as a wedding gift."

MANY GERMANS SETTLED IN BALTIC PROVINCES

County Being Invaded By German Forces Has More Teutonic Than Slav Characteristics

Washington, May 11.—Where the northern peoples have thrashed out among themselves in many battles the causes of faith and commerce and empire; where German, Swede, Pole, Russian, Lett, Esth and Tartar have struggled; on the area of the Baltic provinces, as much the cockpit of the North as Belgium has been of Central Europe, news dispatches make it apparent that the Teuton and the Slav are preparing to stage another one of those mighty struggles for the maintenance of race. It is with this country, a borderland where German and Russian meet among a native population of Letts and Esths, the theatre of the latest German invasion, that today's war-geography study of the National Geographic Society deals. The statement reads:

"Courland, Livonia and Esthonia, the three Russian governments, folding themselves around the eastern elbow of the Baltic Sea, deeply broken in coastline, swept by an air crisp with cool in summer and biting in winter, form the Baltic Provinces. They comprise 36,500 square miles, supporting 2,500,000 inhabitants, of whom the great majority are Letts and Esths, the first-mentioned akin to the Lithuanians, the latter a Finnish people. The natives are laborers and the peasants, the Russians are the military and administrative officials, while, until the outbreak of the war, the Germans were the traders and manufacturers of these provinces."

"A lesser stream of German migration has, at various times, flowed north by way of the Baltic, many of its elements settling on the coastal lands that stretch from the Prussian border to Petrograd. A slight strip of the Russian government of Kovno touches the sea near Memel; thus dividing East Prussia from the Baltic Provinces. Germans have founded many families in this territory, and many of the noblest and townsmen of the Baltic lands are of German ancestry. The German-descended population of the three governments constitutes about 8 per cent of the whole, considerably outnumbering the Russian."

"German characteristics far more than Russian are found throughout the provinces, which, until within the last few years, had numerous German schools, German newspapers and societies. The Russians, however, a few years before the present war began, turned their attention to the Russification of the Baltic Provinces after the same thorough fashion with which they have carried on their campaigns for the assimilation of the Poles in German schools, language, press and the territory included in the Baltic Provinces the object of Christian crusades. They carried their religion to the Letts and Esths by the sword, and after them came German settlers, who expropriated the land, crushing the native population to a position of serfdom. These northern crusaders carried on their operations during the 13th century. Besides their religion, the knights brought the seeds of German civilization with them, and the cultural development of this region was, therefore, early far superior to that of the surrounding country."

"With the exception of Courland, the Baltic Provinces once belonged to Sweden. Courland was dependent on Poland. Peter the Great took possession of the Swedish provinces in the beginning of the 18th century, and Courland was obtained in 1795. For a long time, the provinces were allowed a large measure of self-government, but in 1881 the movement for their assimilation with the rest of the Empire. The movement developed more special emphasis some 6 or 7 years ago."

"The coastlands and their interior areas are flat and are dotted with German towns and villages, wherein are found the German gables, town-halls, cathedrals, and gulfural German is heard in every commercial house. The provinces are rich in trade and manufacture, and the business of their port cities is of vast importance. Here are some of the organizations were prescribed.

"The Order of the Swordbearers and, later, the Teutonic Knights made ports of Russia."

WOMEN CONDUCTORS IN STREET CARS IN CARDIFF

Cardiff, Wales.—The first women conductors appeared on the Cardiff street cars on April 23 and were received enthusiastically by the townspeople. Almost the entire population of the place made an effort to obtain a ride on one or another of the cars offered by the new conductors. With the result that the novices experienced a rush which would have tried the ability of a veteran. That the new conductors were somewhat nervous was quite evident during the first few hours, but before the day was over they had become more confident. All the passengers, they said, were very polite, except for occasional mistakes in making change. Some of the men who boarded the cars seemed to be in doubt as to whether or not to remove their hats inside the cars.

The Difference

There is a difference between pretending and doing, between sentiment and remembrance as much as there is between real heart aches and pretentious sorrow. One is the contraction of the tender cords around the heart by the act of memory, the other is crying aloud to be heard and seen of men. A real sorrowing heart seeks relief in deeds of kindness and beneficence to the world and humanity.

You make every one glad and proud of your cemetery when your acts of love and remembrance are expressed by a lasting tribute.
