The back-to-school bell

For Midland students the first day of school today meant facing new teachers and renewing old friendships. Three Bowie Elementary School students quickly check out their new classroom assignments before the bell rings to signal the start of another school year.

Iranians mourn loss of leaders in bombing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Chanting "Death to America," an estimated 1 million mourners jammed the streets of Tehran today for the funeral of Iran's president and prime minister, killed by foes of Iran's Moslem fundamentalist regime, reports from Iran said.

Striking at the heart of the clergy-led government for the second time in two months, dissidents exploded a powerful bomb Sunday afternoon that killed President Mohammad Ali Rajai and Prime Minister Mohammad Javad Bahonar.

Rajai had been president for 27 days. Bahonar was prime minister for 25.

Mourners also demanded death for ousted President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr as the funeral procession wound through the streets of the capital, carrying the bodies of Rajai and Bahonar from the Majlis, or Parliament, where they had lain in state, to the Behesht Zahra Cemetery on the outskirts of the city, the official Pars news agency said.

Addressing the crowd outside the Parliament, estimated by a Majlis spokesman to number about 1 million, a member of Parliament from the Tehran district, Hojatoleslam Sadegh Khalkhali, blamed the explosion on Bani-Sadr and his leftist supporters in the Mujahedeen Khalq, Iran's largest underground group.

The Tehran newspaper Kayhan said Rajai, 48, and Bahonar, 47, were burned beyond recognition by the incendiary that set fire to the prime minister's office. It said the bodies were identified Sunday night through dental records.

Earlier, a spokesman for Iran's revolutionary patriarch, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, reported by telephone from the Iranian capital that Rajai and Bahonar died in a Tehran hospital of burns and smoke inhalation suffered in the blast and fire.

"It was to be expected," said Bani-Sadr, Rajai's ousted predecessor and now an exile in France. "It was themselves who prepared their deaths. They suppressed all freedom. Those who created the state of violence are the victims of their action."

The New York Times said Bani-Sadr had recently been telling journalists in Paris that the Iranian government would fall if five men died. Rajai and Bahonar were at the top of his list, the Times said.

Khomeini's spokesman, who asked not to be named, said five other people were killed and 15 were injured in the blast and fire. However, Tehran Radio reported a total of four fatalities: Rajai, Bahonar, Massoud Kashmuri, an employee of the prime minister's office, and an elderly woman who was walking past the building at the time.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the bombing. But there was speculation that it was the work of the Islamic-Marxist Mujahedeen Khalq, which was blamed for the bombing June 28 that killed Ayatollah Mohammed Beheshti, the No. 2 man in the revolutionary regime, and more than 70 other political leaders.

In Paris, Massoud Rajavi, the self-exiled leader of the Mujahedeen Khalq, said the bombing was carried out "by the legitimate resistance movement."

"I am not informed at this time exactly who planted the bomb, but it was the resistance movement and I do not deny that the Mujahedeen make up the majority of that movement," he said in a telephone interview.

U.S. Embassy, residence, other Lima sites bombed

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Bombs exploded today at the American Embassy here and at the home of U.S. Ambassador Edwin Corr, an embassy spokesman said. No injuries were reported.

Police said explosions were reported about the same time at the Coca-Cola plant and at the G. Berckmeyer and Co. milk products plant.

The embassy spokesman said the explosions went off simultaneously at 2:10 a.m. EDT at the embassy and the residence, which are on the same downtown avenue but nine blocks apart.

He said the ambassador and his family were asleep at the residence at the time of the explosion.

Embassy security men were investigating the explosions, but the spokesman said they had not determined what kind of explosives were used. No person or group claimed responsibility, he said.

The blast at the embassy damaged the front door, knocked out windows and twisted iron gratings which screen the windows. The embassy has an iron gate and fence, but the explosives apparently were thrown over the fence at the main entrance.

The explosive at the residence apparently was thrown from a street facing the back yard, damaging lawn chairs, sun umbrellas and the rim of a swimming pool, the spokesman said.

Police did not report immediately the extent of damage at the two industrial plants.

The newspaper "La Prensa" reported that two explosions went off Sunday in the central plaza of Chiclayo, a city about 460 miles north of Lima, during an anniversary parade celebrating the founding of the Civil Guard, the country's principal police force. There were no reports of injuries.

Hundreds of explosions, most of them from sticks of dynamite, have been reported around the country during the last year. No group has claimed responsibility for the terrorism.

An explosive caused light damage on Wednesday at the Foreign Ministry and another explosive was tossed last week at the Labor Ministry building.

The police blame many of the explosions, especially those in the mountains east of Lima, on a revolutionary group called the "Sendero Luminoso," Lighted Path, which advocates armed insurrection and the installation of a socialist government in Peru.

Three held in synagogue bombing

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Austrian police today said they released six Arab newspaper vendors arrested in connection with the bloody weekend grenade attack on a downtown Vienna synagogue.

Three other men remained in custody, including two terrorists arrested in the course of the attack and ensuing gunbattle Saturday that killed two people and injured about 20 others.

Werner Liebhart, Vienna state police chief, said the six Arabs arrested at an apartment Sunday were released because they had nothing to do with the attack.

Police tightened security in downtown Vienna for memorial services and a mourning march scheduled for the center of the city today.

The two people killed, a 68-year-old man and a 25-year-old woman slain as she tried to shield a friend's child, were to be buried today at Vienna's central cemetery.

One of the attackers claimed to have acted for the Palestine Liberation Organization and police said they found evidence linking the attack to the PLO. But the PLO denied involvement and condemned the attack.

A third suspect arrested Saturday was taken into custody when he came to an apartment rented by the other purported attacker.

Under Austrian law, suspects may be arrested for investigation and held for long periods without formal charge.

Diplomatic feuding over the attack continued today with the release of a message sent to Vienna's mayor by Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek.

Kollek's message attacked the pro-PLO policy of Austrian Chancellor

Bruno Kreisky, saying years of Austrian support for "Arab terror organizations as political discussion partners has encouraged these groups."

"We have to hope," Kollek said, "that this new and abominable murder will contribute to a more realistic policy and the protection of Vienna from further acts of shame by Arab terrorists."

The six Arabs were arrested in a raid on an apartment rented by one of two other Arabs taken into custody after the bombing, a police spokesman said.

The Austrian Radio reported "some Palestinians" were among the six.

Police officials told a news conference a PLO flag, pictures of PLO leader Yasser Arafat and newspaper articles about the organization were found in an apartment rented by the other Arab arrested outside the synagogue.

The PLO denied responsibility for the attack on the Israelite Temple as about 200 people were leaving a bar mitzvah, the ceremony celebrating a Jewish boy's 13th birthday.

A PLO statement issued in Beirut said it "condemns, denounces and fully rejects" the attack and "reasserts its respect for all places of worship of all religions."

The Israeli government rejected this and said the Austrian government shared the responsibility for the attack because of its given full official recognition to the PLO.

"The PLO obviously is responsible for this murderous action," Israeli government spokesman Arieh Naor told reporters in Jerusalem.

Air Force headquarters bombed

RAMSTEIN AIR FORCE BASE, West Germany (AP) — Fifteen people were injured today when a bomb exploded beneath a car parked in front of the European headquarters of the U.S. Air Force, German police said.

There was no immediate official word on the nationalities of the injured, but a West German radio station said the casualties included American servicemen and German civilians.

The blast shattered windows in the Air Force headquarters and the adjacent headquarters of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization air force command, witnesses said.

Although damage was extensive, a U.S. Air Force spokesman said the number of injuries was "real small" compared with the likely figure had the blast occurred a short time later when most employees would have been reporting for duty.

A spokesman for the federal prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe said the case was being handled as an attack rather than an accidental explosion. But he refused to elaborate.

"The cause of the explosion has not been determined," a brief Air Force statement said. It added that military operations were continuing as usual. The bomb went off at 7:45 a.m. as the first stream of civilians and military personnel were reporting for work.

The Air Force statement said the number of injured had not been confirmed but two of them were flown to nearby Landstuhl Military Hospital.

Today's blast was the second this month aimed at U.S. military facilities in Germany. Earlier this month, small pipebombs exploded at a U.S. garrison in West Berlin causing minor damage, but no injuries.

The attacks come amid growing anti-military and anti-American sentiment in West Germany, fueled in part by opposition to NATO plans for modernizing its missile force and to President Reagan's decision to build neutron weapons.

Numerous anti-military demonstrations have been held throughout the country, and signs reading, "No more war, Americans out" have appeared in German cities.

The United States maintains about 260,000 troops in West Germany.

In 1972, four U.S. servicemen were killed in bombings by the Baader-Meinhof terrorist gang at the headquarters of the U.S. 5th Corps in Frankfurt and the U.S. Army's European headquarters in Heidelberg.

Andreas Baader, Ulrike Meinhof and other gang leaders were arrested and most were later sentenced to life imprisonment for the bombings.

Meinhof was found hanged in her jail cell in 1976 while on trial for her part in the bombings. Another defendant, Holger Meinhof, died following a prison hunger strike.

Baader, his girlfriend Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe were among those convicted in the bombings. They were found shot to death in their cells in Stuttgart's Stammheim Prison in October 1977 after German commandos stormed a Lufthansa jetliner hijacked to Somalia in a bid to win the terrorists' release. West German officials ruled the deaths to be suicides but terrorist sympathizers claimed the three were murdered by jailers.

On Sunday, a small pipe bomb exploded in a trash bin near the supreme court building in Karlsruhe but caused no damage.

Arab attack renews criticism of Kreisky

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The Arab attack on the Vienna synagogue has renewed Austrian criticism of Chancellor Bruno Kreisky's support for the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The popular, 70-year-old leader of the small Alpine country said in a radio interview Sunday it was "completely immaterial" to him if the Israelis blamed his policies for the grenade and pistol attack Saturday as about 200 Jews were leaving the Israelite Temple.

"The implacable policy of the Israelis regarding the Palestinians is to blame for the excesses," said Kreisky, who was born a Jew but practices no religion.

Kreisky has long attempted to involve himself in Middle East peace efforts. This has given Austria, a country of less than 8 million people, a prominence in world affairs it otherwise would not have held. But this limelight bothers Austrian critics who charge the self-assured chancellor is dragging their peaceful, neutral country into terrorism and political violence.

"Now one sees what sort of serpents' nest Chancellor Kreisky stepped on with his support of the PLO," one Vienna newspaper said in a front-page editorial the day after the synagogue attack.

Injuries claim life of Midlander after collision

BIG LAKE — A 37-year-old Midland man died Sunday evening while being transported to Midland Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries suffered about 5:20 p.m. that day in a truck-car collision 38.7 miles north of here.

Charles Edward Lester was pronounced dead by a physician about 6:40 p.m. Sunday.

Department of Public Safety investigators said Lester sustained injuries when his truck left the roadway after a collision with a car driven by Jackie Helen Quain, also of Midland. Both vehicles were traveling north on Ranch Road 1357 at the time, officers said, and Ms. Quain's vehicle was pulling a trailer.

As the Quain vehicle was passing Lester's truck-tractor, the truck apparently "drifted" into the passing lane, officers said, and both vehicles left the roadway on the east side.

Investigating officers were DPS troopers Bill Franklin and Johnny Beitelund, both of Big Lake.

Showers possible tonight

Midland and the surrounding area could see some rain tonight along with another hot afternoon Tuesday. According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it will be partly cloudy with a chance of showers and thunderstorms tonight through Tuesday.

The mercury tonight should fall into the lower 70s with the high Tuesday reaching into the lower 90s.

Police investigating theft

Early today Midland police were investigating the theft of $6,000 worth of stereo equipment and sports gear from a closed nightclub.

Donald Allen of 406 S. Mineola St. told police the nightclub, Phase I at 500 E. Nobles Ave., apparently was broken into between Aug. 24 and Sunday. He said the club has been closed for some time.

Taken were seven speakers, two turntables, two stereo receivers, a set of golf clubs and a golf bag, Allen told officers.

Quick action on the part of patrol officers resulted in the arrest of a 18-year-old Midland man in connection with a burglary at Village Gulf, 2110 W. Wall Ave., at 4 a.m. today.

The officers reportedly saw the man running down an alley and watched him throw a tire tool. They apprehended him and the tool and upon investigation found the station had been burglarized. Damaged were an aluminum window and the cash register, police reports indicated.

No charges had been filed in connection with that case by early today.

Woman injured in car wreck

A 45-year-old Midland woman was undergoing treatment early today in Midland Memorial Hospital for injuries she sustained when the car she was driving west on Cuthbert Avenue Sunday night was involved in a collision with a car driven by Malcolm Joe Brockington, 18, of 2200 S. Lamesa Rd., Apt. 149.

Ms. Clary, 4309 Princeton Ave., sustained a fractured leg and was listed in "satisfactory" condition this morning, according to a hospital spokesman.

Odessa man fatally shot

ODESSA — Odessa Police Department detectives are investigating the fatal shooting early Sunday of an Odessa man as a homicide, according to a police department spokesman.

Cecil Gilbert Workman, 23, apparently died as a result of a single gunshot wound to the heart from an as yet undetermined caliber firearm. He was pronounced dead at 3:35 a.m.

as $2,035. The burglary reportedly occurred between 2 and 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

Midland firemen quickly extinguished a fire Sunday evening that damaged the wiring on a vehicle belonging to Floyd Clay of 3329 W. Wadley Ave., Apt. 31.

The fire occurred at the intersection of Big Spring Street and Scharbauer Drive about 11 p.m. and was extinguished with 50 gallons of water, fire reports indicated.

An air-conditioner fire at the Mark Leaverton residence, No. 11 Marchelle Court, about 8:30 p.m. Sunday resulted in undetermined damage to the air-conditioner unit, fire reports indicated.

Solidarity celebrates first birthday today

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — With several bold strokes from Lech Walesa's papal souvenir pen and the subdued signature of Vice Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, the independent labor federation Solidarity got its birth certificate one year ago today.

Spawmed by the desperate actions of a disgruntled work force, the Soviet bloc's first independent trade union in its first year has become an established center of authority in Polish society, locked in a duel for power with the Communist government.

Solidarity's red and white banners flutter from public buildings where a year ago signs called on the workers to strive for the cause of socialism.

A billboard advertising a movie about the workers' revolt in Gdansk last August hangs in Warsaw's main thoroughfare, in front of the Soviet-built Palace of Culture.

Solidarity T-shirts are the most fashionable unisex clothing available. The raven-haired barmaid at the Black Cat, Warsaw's liveliest disco, pins a Solidarity button to her bosom.

Television, radio and the press are filled with reports of the union. It has offices in every major city, and its weekly newspaper has an estimated circulation of 500,000.

The largest industrial plants are abuzz with union meetings, votes and now and again strikes.

One of the initial demands of the Gdansk strikers last summer was greater access for the Roman Catholic Church to the media. Now, Mass once heard only in church is broadcast each Sunday by the national government radio service.

The sweeping changes transforming Polish society have not left the Communist Party untouched, as the democratizing measures adopted during the July party congress show.

But the union wants more. And as it prepares for its first national congress, beginning Sept. 5 in Gdansk, it is beset with its own problems as well as Poland's.

Walesa and other national leaders of Solidarity have remained basically moderate, but they are under pressure from many of the 10 million rank-and-file members for a more combative attitude to achieve even more radical changes.

The union is still confronting the government on several basic issues on which there has been little agreement. They include the part Solidarity and the workers should play in the reconstruction of the near-bankrupt economy and union access to the mass media.

While Solidarity contends that workers should have greater autonomy in production and management decisions, including choosing factory directors, the government insists that it will remain in control of the process.

The government has also agreed to part of Solidarity's demand for regular TV and radio time and newspaper columns of its own, but negotiations are continuing.

Each issue between the government and the union in the past year has led to demonstrations, strikes and bitter discussions. Each side has hurled threats and warnings, building confrontations that disappeared as some sort of compromise was reached.

"What is going on in Poland is a kind of revolution, a social revolution, and I am deeply convinced that it will end in agreement between the authorities, Solidarity and the people," said Romanul Kukulowicz, an eminent Roman Catholic who has helped mediate numerous disputes between the union and the government.

"I can see things are changing radically," he said in an interview with the government news agency. "I'm confident that agreement is only a matter of time, a matter of specifying the scope or the rights of each of the parties concerned. And this is bound to end in agreement."

Redistricting Board to set ground rules

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby carefully refrained Sunday from saying whether the Legislative Redistricting Board should thumb its nose at Gov. Bill Clements by re-enacting a Senate redistricting map vetoed by the governor.

Hobby, who presides over the Senate, would say only that the board should draw Senate districts that are "fair and constitutional."

When asked if the districts approved by the 31 senators themselves were "fair and constitutional," the lieutenant governor replied only, "Yes."

Hobby said he was aware that Comptroller Bob Bullock, a member of the board, "has a number of alternate plans to propose. These plans certainly will be considered."

The five-member board elected Hobby its chairman Sunday in a pro forma meeting called to satisfy the Texas Constitution's requirement that it form within 90 days after the close of a regular legislative session.

The board will meet Thursday to set ground rules for public hearings.

Clements handed the Senate redistricting task to the all-Democratic board by vetoing the Senate's map.

He said it did not provide a good opportunity for the election of a black state senator and denied adequate representation to the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The Senate redistricting plan would have paired two Republican senators from Dallas County, the governor's home. Sens. Dee Travis of Garland and John Leedom of Dallas were placed in the same senatorial district.

The board has 60 days to finish its work, which may include drawing House districts if a Texas Supreme Court decision, expected this week, strikes down the House redistricting plan.

Clements has no veto authority over redistricting plans issued by the board.

Attorney General Mark White, who has feuded repeatedly with Clements, said the Senate plan was constitutional. But he added he approaches his duties on the board without "any preconceived notion on any plan."

"If there is not anything wrong with the (Senate) bill, it would be proper to go forward and pass the plan he vetoed. ... But we should look at what problems he found in the bill."

Other board members, besides Hobby, Bullock and White, are Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and House Speaker Bill Clayton.

The Texas Constitution created the board to draw legislative districts when the Legislature fails to do so in the regular session or when its work is nullified by a veto or a court decision.

In 1971, the board drew Senate boundaries after senators failed to reach agreement. Much of the drafting was done by Robert Spellings, then the top aide to Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and now Bullock's $10,000 consultant on redistricting.

Liberal groups mobilizing against conservative tide

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Liberals are mobilizing the pocketbooks of politics against the conservative tide that swept Ronald Reagan into the White House and ended 25 years of Democratic dominance in the Senate.

At least seven new liberal political action groups, several of them linked to present or defeated Democratic lawmakers and staffed by their aides, have sprung up in Washington since November.

And many, along with established groups, are using direct-mail firms to solicit contributions with a harder pitch aimed at fighting the conservatives, instead of saving the liberals.

Russell D. Hemenway, national director of the 33-year-old National Committee for an Effective Congress, said that group quit handling its own mailings and changed its approach after contributions fell off when House Democrats failed to stand fast against Reagan's budget and tax cuts.

Now the committee uses fund-raising appeals attacking Republican proposals on such issues as abortion and voting rights, and contributions are running about 30 percent over the same time two years ago, Hemenway said.

Americans for Democratic Action, another long-established group, reports it has picked up 2,000 new members and its latest mail solicitation, a hard-hitting attack on Reagan budget cuts, brought a 10 percent increase in contributions.

"Any organization that was appealing for funds to save the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives had to be hurt," said Roger Craver, head of a direct-mail firm which raises funds for Hemenway's committee and other liberal political action groups.

"There was a dip in mail returns and I would ascribe a fair proportion of it to the fact the liberal giving community did not see much point in saving a House of Representatives that wasn't very interested in saving what these people believed in," he said.

Both conservative and liberal spokesmen agreed that the liberals are playing catch-up since conservatives and Republicans began using computerized direct-mail techniques in the early 1970s.

"The Democrats failed to develop fund-raising specialists," said Brad O'Leary, staff aide for the conservative Americans for Change. "They were still relying on the campaign manager to raise the money. Now, because they have lost some elections, they are buying all kinds of mailing lists."

"They were fat too long," said Victor S. Kamber, founder of the seven-month-old Progressive Political Action Committee. "They didn't have to go to the funds. They hadn't been used to losing."

Other new liberal organizations include:

—Democrats for the 80's, founded by Pamela Harriman, wife of former New York Gov. Averill Harriman. Executive director Peter Penn was formerly administrative assistant to defeated Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

—Independent Action, an affiliate of Craver, Matthews, Smith and Co. Executive director Edward F. Coyle was a top aide in the 1976 presidential primary campaign of Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz.

—The Committee for the Future of America, backed by former Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

—The Fund for a Democratic Majority, run by veterans of the 1980 presidential campaign of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

—Americans for Common Sense, headed by former Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D.

—The Committee for American Principles, run by Robert A. Blaemire, former executive assistant to defeated Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

The McGovern and Blaemire

Victor Kamber, founder of the Progressive Political Action Committee, speaks during an interview in his Washington office. Since November at least seven new liberal political groups have sprung up in Washington.

groups say they plan to monitor conservative groups such as the Moral Majority and attempt to counter them by holding seminars or establishing "fair-play committees." The others plan to put their money into congressional campaigns, with the emphasis on 1984.

Fast-growing populations behind new court look

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — There's a new look coming in the handling of federal and state court appeals in Texas.

Beginning Sept. 1, the appeals of state criminal cases, with the exception of crimes punishable by death, will go to 14 new Courts of Appeals, which formerly handled only civil cases.

Beginning Oct. 1, most appeals from the state's U.S. district courts will go to a revised 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that covers only about half of its former territory throughout the South.

Fast-growing populations in the Sunbelt and an accompanying increase in court action are behind the new systems.

The new setup in state courts was first approved by voters in 1980 and then put into effect by the 1981 Legislature.

The revision allows the former 14 Courts of Civil Appeals to handle both criminal and civil appeals. To help with the expected increase in litigation, as well as a backlog of cases sent back to the new courts by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, the state's highest court for appeal of criminal cases, a total of 24 new appellate judges were appointed.

The Court of Criminal Appeals, which formerly took appeals directly from district courts, will continue to handle all capital cases and appeals made from the intermediate Courts of Appeals.

Appeals in civil cases from the Courts of Appeals will continue to go to the Texas Supreme Court.

The 14 Courts of Appeals include two in Houston and one each in Amarillo, Austin, Beaumont, Corpus Christi, Dallas, Eastland, El Paso, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Texarkana, Tyler and Waco.

The new 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was born when the old 5th Circuit was split by Congress.

"Something had to be done because it was the biggest circuit court in the nation with a total of 26 judges," said Judge Jerre Williams of Austin. "That was far too many."

The old 5th Circuit, with headquarters in New Orleans, covered Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas and the Canal Zone.

The new 5th Circuit, also with headquarters in New Orleans, consists only of Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas, plus the Canal Zone for about a year until the Panama Canal treaty becomes effective.

Other states in the old court — Georgia, Alabama and Florida — will become parts of the new 11th Circuit Court of Appeals with headquarters in Atlanta.

The new 5th Circuit is allocated 14 judges — eight for Texas, four for Louisiana and two for Mississippi. There is one vacancy in Texas and one in Mississippi.

Chief judge of the district is Judge Charles Clark of Jackson, Miss.

Four of the Texas judges live in Austin, including Williams and Judges Thomas G. Gee, Thomas M. Reavley, and Sam Johnson. The Texas vacancy is expected to be filled by former State Supreme Court Justice Will Garwood, Austin, who has been recommended by Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, but who has not yet received a presidential nomination.

The other Texas judges are Judge Renaldo Garza, Brownsville; and Judges John Brown and Carolyn Randall of Houston.

The Louisiana judges include two in New Orleans, one in Shreveport and one in Baton Rouge.

Most of the new 5th Circuit sessions will continue to be held in New Orleans.

However, the three-judge panels may hold court anywhere in the district.

The change in the circuit court of appeals will not change the Texas system of lower U.S. courts, with the northern, eastern, southern and western districts containing 26 divisions with at least one court in each.

Photographer hit by plane

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 23-year-old newspaper photographer remained in serious condition Sunday with multiple injuries suffered when she was hit by an airplane taking off from a freeway.

J.B. Hazlett of The San Antonio Express-News was photographing the plane shortly after midnight Saturday on Interstate 37, where it had made an emergency landing earlier Friday night, police said.

She was struck by the tip of one of the plane's wings. The plane wavered from one side of the freeway to the other after hitting Ms. Hazlett, but managed to take off safely, witnesses said.

Ms. Hazlett remained in the intensive care unit of Southeast Baptist Hospital Sunday after surgery to remove her spleen and part of her liver, hospital officials said.

Witnesses said most media representatives were gathered north of the plane. But Ms. Hazlett was south of the aircraft when she was hit, officials said.

Authorities said the woman told witnesses she was going to walk down a few yards from the low-winged Mooney single-engine plane to get a picture from a different angle as the craft took off.

The pilot of the plane, Henry F. Bryant, 47, of San Antonio, declined comment.

Pilot Henry Bryant, top, tows his plane onto a roadway after a forced landing. San Antonio Express-News photographer J.B. Hazlett was struck seconds after she took the bottom photo.

Prison officials say wedding off

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Prison officials say the planned Wednesday wedding of former Charles Manson follower Susan Atkins has been canceled, but the groom, self-described "unemployed millionaire" Donald Lee Laisure, denies it.

The watch commander at the California Institution for Women in Frontera, where Miss Atkins is serving a life sentence for her role in the bloody 1969 Sharon Tate murders, said Sunday the marriage was off. She would not elaborate or identify himself.

Superintendent Sylvia Johnson also told Los Angeles radio station KNX that the ceremony in the prison's Catholic chapel had been scrapped with no new date set.

But a man who identified himself as the 52-year-old Laisure of Greenville, Texas, insisted that was untrue, as did a self-described psychologist who said she visited Miss Atkins Sunday.

"Apparently you're being highly misinformed. It's totally untrue. We are getting married Wednesday at the prison," Laisure said. He was reached by phone Sunday night at the downtown Holiday Inn in Ontario, a San Bernardino County community bordering Frontera. Clerks earlier said Laisure had checked out.

However, they later referred calls to him and a woman who identified herself only as Miss Richards.

"I visited with Susan this evening and this is not true," the woman said before hanging up.

In its Sunday editions, The Ontario Daily Report quoted Laisure as saying the wedding originally scheduled for Sunday had been postponed until Wednesday because California law requires a three-day wait after a blood test.

Miss Atkins was convicted of murder and conspiracy along with Manson, Patricia Krenwinkel and Leslie Van Houten in the murders of Miss Tate, heiress Abigail Folger and three others, as well as the subsequent killings of grocery store owners Leno and Rosemary LaBianca.

While on trial, Miss Atkins, now 33, gave grisly details about stabbing the pregnant actress. Laisure told the newspaper he was convinced she didn't kill anyone but that he was willing to take her punishment.

"If they would give me an ironclad contract, if they would trade me for her, I would stand in front of a firing squad, forget the blindfold," he said. Laisure said he first met Miss Atkins in 1965 when she stopped for conversation along a Southern California freeway where he was taking photographs. Letters exchanged since then prompted reports the pair met through the mail, but Laisure said the roadside meeting "is the real story."

"I almost married her 16 years ago," he said. "Susan is the best-looking woman I've ever seen, and I've never, never loved anyone else."

"I'm going to get her a pardon at the White House level. She's coming out, I guarantee you," he added, saying he has already spent $6.4 million to free her. "Assuming she's guilty, and she's not — Susan didn't kill anybody — she's been in long enough."

The conflicting marriage reports heightened the mystery surrounding Laisure, who refuses to say where he gets his money or how much he has. "I don't work, I never have worked and I don't intend to work because I don't have to," he told the newspaper.

Prison guard killed in New Mexico aborted escape attempt

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP)

Charges will be filed in an aborted escape attempt at the New Mexico State Penitentiary in which one guard was stabbed to death and two others were taken hostage, the warden said.

"We do intend to prosecute these people for their actions," State Prison Warden Harvey Winans told a news conference Sunday.

Winans said five inmates were involved in the escape attempt Sunday. He said two guards were released unharmed when the inmates surrendered after 3½ hours of negotiations.

The incident was the latest outbreak of violence at the troubled prison in which 33 inmates were killed during two days of rioting in February 1980.

The warden identified the slain guard in Sunday's escape attempt as Gerald Peter Magee, 33, of Santa Fe. He had been an officer at the penitentiary since June 3, 1980.

An initial examination by the Santa Fe medical investigator indicated Magee suffered multiple stab wounds in the chest.

The names of the five inmates and two surviving guards were withheld by corrections officials as an investigation continued.

Winans said, however, that the two guards suffered blows at the hands of the inmates but were not seriously injured.

Winans said the inmates told him during questioning after their surrender that they had not killed Magee.

"They said they did not kill the officer," said state Corrections Secretary Roger Crist. "We don't know that that is true."

Prison officials said two other inmates in Cellblock 6 were under investigation in connection with the slaying.

Those two inmates were in a "lockdown" within the cellblock, officials said.

Winans said two revolvers and ammunition used by the inmates in the escape attempt were surrendered. It was not known how the prisoners obtained the weapons, he said.

He said the five inmates were transferred from the penitentiary to an undisclosed county jail Sunday morning.

The disturbance began at about 1:30 a.m. Sunday, as guards were locking Cellblock 6, a medium security unit of the huge prison south of Santa Fe. Inmates armed with guns "popped out" of a cell and took the guards hostage, Winans said.

Between 75 and 100 local law enforcement officers, off-duty guards and support units secured the penitentiary boundaries to storm the cellblock just before the inmates surrendered, the warden said.

Winans held four negotiating sessions in three hours with the spokesman for the five inmates, who demanded that the men be released from the penitentiary and provided escape vehicles.

"I told them that was entirely out of the question," he said.

The warden said he told the spokesman the only course open to them was to surrender their guns and give up the hostages.

At the second session shortly after 3 a.m., the inmate spokesman advised Winans the prisoners were ready to surrender, he said.

But when he met with the spokesman for a third time at about 4 a.m., Winans said the inmate told him "he had received word an officer was injured along with an inmate. I told him they would have to surrender immediately; the negotiations were over."

Meanwhile, in an incident authorities said was unrelated to the escape attempt, officials were investigating the apparent suicide of an inmate found hanging in his cell at the prison.

Rare pygmy whale dies of gunshot wound

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — An autopsy will be performed on a young pygmy sperm whale that died in an aquarium trainer's arms a day after the mammal beached itself near Corpus Christi.

The whale, nicknamed "Lafitte" by aquarium employees, is believed to have died of a gunshot wound that left a hole the size of a tennis ball in the shank of its tail.

"It was just so senseless that someone would shoot it," said Mike Baxter, marketing director for Sea-O-Rama Marineworld, where the wounded whale was airlifted for emergency care.

The whale was discovered Saturday by National Marine Fisheries officials, who arranged for the whale's trip to Galveston via Coast Guard cargo airplane.

John Newells and another trainer were walking the six-foot-long mammal around a tank Sunday to keep its blowhole above water because it couldn't swim and "it was just so weak that it died in his arms," Baxter said.

Newells said "it just made him sick," Baxter added.

"It may be a baby, but it's as big as a full-grown dolphin," he said. "They're really rare. You seldom see them — unless they're beached."

Only 50 to 60 pygmy sperm whales, which grow to a length of about 12 feet, are spotted each year, he said.

Baxter said Lafitte "really began to bleed from the wound" and died shortly after midnight.

"It died from a lack of blood and just a combination of things like having been beached and the flight from Corpus and the whole bit," he said.

Baxter said Sea-O-Rama employees didn't know the whale had been shot "until we were walking it around in the holding tank and somebody just noticed it ... The entry wound is about the size of a quarter; the exit wound is about as big as a tennis ball."

Caretakers at Sea-O-Rama had constructed a

"sling-type arrangement" for the whale, equipped with flotation devices, to "keep it alive, calm it down" so it wouldn't go into shock, Baxter said.

The road to peace

Negotiating peace is a process not unlike a marriage relationship. Trust is an essential ingredient as is the ability and willingness to forgive. The process can stretch human will "to the limits" and yet prove vastly fulfilling.

Both require the ability to give and to take, because in both the participants will give a little of themselves and receive sacrifices from the other party.

Successful marriages are not made by one person; peace settlements are not negotiated by one nation.

That realization was re-emphasized last week as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin met in Alexandria, Egypt for their 12th summit conference. What came out of that summit was an agreement by the two leaders to resume on Sept. 23 talks aimed at resolving the issue of autonomy for Palestinians in the occupied lands. Those talks have been deadlocked.

Mr. Begin called the Alexandria meeting a "very fruitful discussion" while Mr. Sadat noted, "We have committed ourselves to reaching a comprehensive peace in the area. There may be difficulties, there may be problems here and there but we continue and persevere because this is our commitment."

As in a marriage relationship, peace negotiations do not travel a smooth road. There are pitfalls along the way. But it is largely the promise of the future that keeps the process going. That was the scenario at Alexandria as President Sadat and Prime Minister Begin agreed to resume the deadlocked autonomy talks in September.

The road to peace is through negotiations such as those held by the two leaders. The hopes and prayers of the peace-loving people of the world go with them.

New man in Moscow

Why should Arthur A. Hartman be appointed as our next ambassador to the Soviet Union? He is not a student of Russian history, is not fluent in the Russian language, and has not been conspicuously involved in diplomatic relations with the Kremlin.

The answer is that Mr. Hartman is a career diplomat of brilliance and flexibility, and those who knew this suggested to President Reagan that here is a man who as ambassador to the USSR could rise to almost any crisis occasion. The Hartman assets, it appears, are many.

— He is an outspoken anti-Communist. While serving until recently as ambassador to France, he criticized the French government for not speaking out more forcefully against the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan.

— He made no bones about his unhappiness over the decision by French President Francois Mitterrand to include Communists in his government.

— Despite such criticisms, the French got to like him, and respect him. Although his departure for the Moscow post was scheduled earlier, he was asked by President Reagan to stay in Paris until M'sier Mitterrand got his feet on the ground. He helped to make the transition from one French government to another smoother.

— Prior to his tour of duty in Paris, he was sought out for special and difficult duties by secretaries of state and their deputies. They included Nicholas Katzenbach, Elliot Richardson, William Rogers and Henry Kissinger.

In sum, here is a man who is recognized by those who know him best as a dedicated public servant of intelligence, forthrightness and diplomatic talents.

Although he may not be able to speak to Russia's rulers in their native tongue, he surely can speak for the United States in a language whose tones are clear and whose meanings are unmistakable. President Reagan's pick for his new man in Moscow may turn out to be one of his best ambassadorial selections.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Reaction in Washington to the Libyan air skirmish was mixed. Some say we should eliminate Kadhafi and others say we should assassinate Kadhafi.

President Reagan did a superb job of handling the situation. Under his supervision, our planes were returned safely to the carrier and the fleet was taken swiftly out of the danger zone. And he did it all while sleeping.

The reason we were all able to sleep that night is that we didn't know the only ones awake were Al Haig and Caspar Weinberger.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Watt's oil theft probe step in right direction

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary James Watt has appointed a special commission to investigate the theft of oil from wells and storage facilities on Indian lands, as well as the general problem of royalty collection on government-owned oil wells.

It was a step in the right direction. Interior Department survey reports indicate that the theft problem may be a lot more serious than has been acknowledged officially. Until recently, Interior officials have been reluctant to admit there even was much of a theft problem, despite numerous General Accounting Office reports dating back nearly 30 years, which indicated that the collection process was slipshod.

And the amount of money involved is substantial. Last year, total royalties from oil and gas produced on federal and Indian lands came to $2.7 billion. Oil prices have now been decontrolled completely, and if Secretary Watt's plans to open up more federal land to drilling are approved, the royalties are expected to rise to nearly $23 billion a year by 1990.

This makes it all the more important to strengthen the royalty collection system and to prevent theft; obviously, Uncle Sam gets no royalties on stolen petroleum. Records of the U.S. Geological Survey contain evidence of 13 actual or suspected thefts in the period between October 1980 and last April. For example, 1,743 barrels of oil or natural gas condensate were either stolen or lost in the Rock Springs, Wyo., drilling district alone.

Other thefts — or unexplained losses — were indicated at Bakersfield, Calif. (422 barrels) and Farmington, N.M. (66 barrels). Leading the number of violations during the October-April period were the Casper and Newcastle districts in Wyoming, with a combined total of 675 noncompliance instances out of 3,809 wells inspected.

Another USGS document shows that between October 1980 and last June 15, a total of 38,000 well inspections had been made. The federal inspectors reported 4,453 instances of noncompliance with government regulations.

The bulk of these compliance failures involved trouble with seals and valves. "We're looking for broken seals," a veteran USGS official told my associate Tony Capaccio. He explained that broken or missing seals, and valves that have been tampered with, are persuasive evidence that thefts may have occurred.

The Interior Department claims that the theft problem wasn't brought to its attention until the late 1970s. But internal memos from inspectors in the field warned of the problem at least as far back as 1972 — and offered documented evidence of theft.

One glaring weakness in the royalty system has been pointed out by investigators for Rep. Ben Rosenthal, D-N.Y.: The Geological Survey relies almost entirely on production and sales data provided by the oil and gas companies to compute royalties that are owed to the government. To check on these foxy guardians of the taxpayers' oil-producing chicken coops, the USGS audited only 5 percent of its leases last year.

More and better audits would undoubtedly make it tougher on oil thieves, the congressional investigators concluded.

WHISTLEBLOWERS PUNISHED: Last year, acting on complaints by Capt. Eugene Essex, then-Sgt. Paul Sample and others, the Air Force investigated the handling of nuclear weapons at Whiteman Air Force Base near Kansas City. The Air Force investigators found that there were indeed problems.

The problems included a mistargeted missile, cheating on proficiency tests, misuse of classified codes and instances of launch crewmen leaving alarm circuit breakers open so they could nap on duty. In short, the charges constituted a serious indictment of our missile crews' professionalism — and the Air Force investigators concluded that the charges were true.

Air Force brass hats claim the deficiencies were taken care of; but Essex and Sample told my reporter Eileen O'Connor a different story. They say the problems at Whiteman AFB haven't been cleared up, and furthermore that they were harassed for blowing the whistle.

— After they alerted their superiors to the dangerous inadequacies at Whiteman, the whistleblowers were threatened with mental evaluations; those they accused were not.

— The whistleblowers had excellent performance ratings before they testified; afterward, they were given bad ratings and unfavorable letters in their personnel files.

— The whistleblowers were assigned to work under the very officers they had accused — and who had been found to be responsible for the problems originally.

Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., has promised to investigate these allegations. He said he will also address himself to the overall problem of the military's shortage of qualified manpower — a problem the Air Force brass stoutly denies the existence of in the missile branch.

WATCH ON WASTE: The Pentagon has been told not to go hog-wild on spending its multibillion-dollar budget increase. But old habits die hard. At Patrick Air Force Base, Fla., for example, a costly renovation is being planned — for the bowling alley and snack bar. Though most of the money will come from the bowling alley's own earnings, the taxpayers could get stuck with as much as $250,000 of the bill.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Aug. 31, the 243rd day of 1981. There are 122 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Aug. 31, 1962, Trinidad and Tobago became an independent nation within the British Commonwealth.

On this date: In 1961, the last Spanish troops left Morocco.

In 1970, Indonesian rebels occupied their country's embassy in the Netherlands, beginning an eight-day hold-out.

In 1977, whites in Rhodesia gave Prime Minister Ian Smith an overwhelming mandate to negotiate a constitutional settlement outside the framework sought by United States and Britain.

In 1979, the U.S. State Department confirms that a Soviet combat unit of up to 3,000 troops was in Cuba.

Ten years ago: President Richard Nixon invoked executive privilege and refused to tell the Senate about long-range plans for foreign military assistance.

Five years ago: After meeting with Jimmy Carter, a Roman Catholic spokesman voiced disappointment that the Democratic presidential nominee would not support a constitutional ban on abortion.

One year ago: Polish labor leaders signed agreements with the communist government establishing — for the first time in a Soviet bloc nation — the rights to strike and establish free trade unions.

Today's birthdays: Showman Arthur Godfrey is 78. Comedian Buddy Hackett is 57. Violinist Itzhak Perlman is 36.

Thought For Today: There is only one success — to be able to spend your life in your own way. — Christopher Morley, U.S. writer (1890-1957).

CHARLEY REESE

CJ system failing to do its job

A young man working in a convenience store to finance his college education was robbed recently. The robber told him, "Now I'm going to take your eyes out so you'll never identify me." He slashed and stabbed the boy in the face with a large knife.

The man who did this was caught. He had been arrested many times in his criminal career. Twice, he had been sentenced to long terms in prison. Twice he had been paroled. He was on parole when he attacked the young college student.

Charley Reese

This is not an exceptional case. In my area of the country about a year ago, two parolees originally sentenced for rape kidnapped a young woman who was seven months pregnant, raped her, and then killed her and the unborn child. Before they were re-captured, they had killed a law enforcement officer.

In both of the above examples, these men had been pronounced rehabilitated by the bureaucrats in the parole commission. The bureaucrats were wrong. A 1972 study by the FBI of 78,000 offenders showed that nearly 70 percent of those on parole or probation were arrested for new crimes within four years. So brazen are the bureaucrats that they cite this evidence of their bad judgment as proof that the public doesn't provide them with enough funds to "properly rehabilitate" the criminal.

It is one thing when bureaucrats and mush-minded liberals simply screw up the economy and waste money with their pet theories; it is another, when they start killing innocent people. Oh, yes, the bureaucrats and social theorists are the real killers. When you turn a mad dog loose in a crowd, you are responsible for the results.

The proper purpose of the criminal justice system is to protect the innocent by punishing the guilty. Because social theorists have corrupted it by making the major purpose the rehabilitation of the guilty, the system is failing to protect the innocent. It is time the public put a halt to this nonsense.

The police end of the criminal justice system is working. The criminals get arrested. It's after they enter the judicial and corrections system that the process suffers the most break-downs. The main flaw is the failure to identify and to isolate permanently that relatively small percentage of the population which is dangerous and violent.

I realize that most prisons are full, but I suspect they are full of the wrong kinds of prisoners. The system seems to be tougher on property crimes than on people crimes.

But it's not the con artist, the bad check writer, the embezzler, the car thief or even the burglar who operates without a weapon who needs to be isolated. These are the kinds of people for whom alternative kinds of punishment can be devised — restitution, weekend public labor details or whatever.

It's the murderer, the rapist, the armed robber and the armed burglar, the child molester and the mugger who should be sentenced to death the first time they are convicted. If you are too squeamish to execute them, then sentence them to die of old age in prison, but remove them permanently from society.

It would be easy to do. The legislatures of the 50 states could abolish parole and probation for violent crimes at the next session. That one simple step, coupled with long sentences, would reduce the crime rate measurably. The do-gooders can play their rehabilitation games with the non-violent so their mistakes won't be so costly.

Already, 80 percent of the American people believe the criminal justice system is ineffective. I believe that if we do not repair the system quickly, then we are going to see the return of the vigilante. The people are running out of patience.

BIBLE VERSE

Thou shalt not oppress thy neighbor, nor rob him; the wages of a hired servant shall not abide with thee all night until the morning. Lev. 19: 13

INSIDE REPORT:

'Political war' deepening between White House, Kirkland

WASHINGTON — Warnings to President Reagan by political aide Lyn Nofziger that AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland intends to lead a labor-dominated Democratic Party to victory over Reaganism were given substance the past week in deteriorating relations between organized labor and the White House.

Kirkland and two lieutenants refused to fill spots on the president's Productivity Commission that had been offered them against Nofziger's advice. Simultaneously, both Reagan and Labor Secretary Ray Donovan were disinclined to speak before next month's bricklayers convention. Meanwhile, the AFL-CIO's principal pursuit is a massive anti-Reagan rally in Washington.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Sept. 19 ("Solidarity Day"), with the Democratic National Committee an eager helper.

Never since labor's emancipation by the 1935 Wagner Act has its high command been so estranged from the White House. Unlike 16 previous years of post-war Republican rule when a strained congeniality usually prevailed, political war has been waged since Jan. 20.

Superficially, the roots of war lie in labor's unusually harsh attack (especially Kirkland's personal assaults) on the Reagan candidacy. The president's men have not been eager for intimate embrace with erstwhile tormentors. Their coolness, in turn, is cited by labor chiefs as cause for deepening hostility.

But such explanations avoid transcendent political change that made a labor-Reagan confrontation inevitable. Reagan's goal is to dismantle the liberal settlement effected by the New Deal a half-century ago. As the settlement's defender, Kirkland is ahead of Democratic politicians in envisioning a broad-based coalition built on anti-communist foreign policy and liberal social welfare policy.

Nevertheless, presidential counselor Edwin Meese III did not want to break relations. He recommended Kirkland to serve on the Productivity Commission headed by former Treasury secretary William Simon. Two other seats were offered Glenn Watts of the communications workers, a close Kirkland ally, and Bob Georgine of the construction workers, a rising labor light.

Nofziger was appalled. He argued Kirkland had two goals: take over the Democratic Party and destroy Ronald Reagan. Why invite your enemy into the bosom of your family? As usual, Meese won the argument, and the AFL-CIO three were invited.

But Kirkland was not happy. He informed Republican friends that previous presidents, from both parties, consulted the AFL-CIO president before naming such commissions. There was grumbling about having to serve on a commission headed by the reactionary likes of Bill Simon and controlled by right-wing businessmen and leaders of pro-Reagan unions (including the despised Teamsters).

Besides, it might be a trifle embarrassing for Kirkland to sit on a government commission while mobilizing opposition to Reagan on "Solidarity Day" at the Washington Monument. While the AFL-CIO contends there is no political partisan flavor to the demonstration, staffers at Democratic National headquarters wear "Solidarity Day" badges. They also provide more substantial backing.

"I have pledged our support for Solidarity Day to President Kirkland," Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt wrote on Aug. 12 to national committee members. He urged them "to show your backing" for the anti-Reagan demonstration — if possible by joining in themselves.

The air controllers strike provided a welcome escape hatch. It enabled Kirkland and Watts to send identical two-sentence letters to Reagan declining to serve on the Productivity Commission (giving Georgine no choice other than to follow suit). Jack Joyce of the bricklayers also seized on Reagan's treatment of the air controllers union (PATCO) to disinvite both the president and secretary of labor from his union's convention.

But the source of deepening conflict is surely not PATCO. Nor is it AFL-CIO complaints of insufficient contact with the administration; labor's high command has a standing invitation to call the White House with any problem, and union leaders from Kirkland on down attended a recent get-acquainted party with the president, vice president and Cabinet members. Nor is it really even the more serious (and accurate) complaint that the AFL-CIO is not consulted about personnel or policy affecting labor.

Even if union officials had been present, health and safety (OSHA) regulations for workers would have been softened as part of Reagan's transformation of how the government works. The policy gap cannot be bridged. Lane Kirkland appreciated that reality when he savaged Ronald Reagan last fall, when he opened fire on the administration Jan. 20 and when he declined to serve on the president's commission — giving Lyn Nofziger some new believers in the White House.

Coalition protests nomination

DALLAS (AP).— More than 30 anti-abortion organizations are expected to participate in a rally sponsored by a conservative Christian coalition Thursday to protest the U.S. Supreme Court nomination of Sandra Day O'Connor.

"If we do not stop the nomination, at least we will have demonstrated a very deep concern about future nominations and let the president know we think court appointments are one of the most crucial federal actions," said Dr. Carolyn Gerster, a Scottsdale, Ariz., physician and a scheduled speaker at the "Rally for Life."

The protest is being sponsored by the Religious Roundtable, a group that attracted 17,000 fundamentalist Christians to Dallas last August for a pre-election rally in support of Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign.

Other speakers at the Dallas Convention Center rally will include television evangelist Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority, Phyllis Schlafly, and Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis' wife, Karen.

Roundtable President Ed McAteer said whether the coalition has a good chance of stopping the nomination is irrelevant.

"It would be a miracle if we could stop it," he said. "But we wouldn't even be worthy of positioning ourselves as leaders of a movement if we didn't try to bring all the facts to the surface."

Senate hearings on Mrs. O'Connor's nomination — the first ever to go to a woman — begin Sept. 9. President Reagan announced her selection July 7, recommending her for the seat being vacated by retiring Justice Potter Stewart.

Dr. Gerster, former president of Right to Life, said she has known Mrs. O'Connor, an Arizona judge, for years.

"She is a very gifted and gracious woman, but her voting record is absolutely pro-abortion," she said.

Rains cause flooding in Seguin

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — Heavy thunderstorms dumped almost ten inches of rain in about four hours early today, forcing the evacuation of 12 families in this South Texas town, flooding roads and stalling cars, police said.

An 18-wheel truck was almost completely submerged under a shallow underpass near Karnes City, according to Andrea Swartout, a Department of Public Safety dispatcher in Austin.

"Just the very top — the cab — of the 18-wheeler is visible," she said. "At least one car is underwater, and they're still checking for others. Several people are stranded at this time, and phones are out."

No injuries or damages have been reported, and Ms. Swartout said it was assumed the truck driver had crawled out of the cab.

"The electricity is out all over Karnes City," said a Bee County Sheriff Department dispatcher, who asked not to be identified. "There's no communication. We're just picking people up and they're just leaving their cars."

The families who were evacuated reside in the Elmwood Division on the east side of Seguin, which is about 30 miles east of San Antonio.

"The 12 families live right along Geronimo Creek and the water is getting right up to their houses now," said Patrolman Shawn Moore, of the Seguin Police Department. "We're expecting the creek to crest sometime early this morning."

All have gone to stay with nearby relatives, he said.

"Those families are forced out about every time it rains like this," Moore said. "Some of them are just getting settled back in from the heavy rains in June."

Heavy rains deluged South Texas on Memorial Day, causing heavy damage to Austin and claiming more than ten lives.

"The (Guadalupe) river is up to 18 and a half feet now," Moore said early today, "and its normal flood stage is only seven feet."

Phone service in nearby Gonzalez was knocked out by the downpour.

The thunderstorms are the remnants of a tropical depression that moved in from the gulf late last week.

Beverly Horst, seated, and Teddy Stickney make beaded Christmas decorations to be sold at the Oct. 23 Annual Day hosted by the Midland County Extension Clubs and Council. Preparations have begun in earnest for the event, which annually attracts several thousand Midlanders to the luncheon and sale. Tickets are $3 and available at the door, from any Extension Homemakers Club member in advance, or from the County Extension Agents office in the Courthouse Annex. Available will be special prizes, handmade items and baked goods from the different club booths, and salad cook booklets at a small charge.

Annual Day under preparation by county extension homemakers

Preparations have begun for Annual Day, a fundraising project for the Midland County Extension Clubs and Council.

Midland's nine clubs are meeting regularly in day-long workshops in which they are preparing handmade items to be available at the event, set for Oct. 23 at the Midland County Exhibition Building, E. Highway 80.

Another highlight of the day, in addition to the sale, is the salad luncheon.

The entire event will be from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., with the luncheon to begin at 11:30 a.m.

The event regularly attracts several thousand Midlanders.

Tickets will be available for $3 at the door, or in advance from any Extension Homemakers Club member or from the Midland County Extension Agents office in the Courthouse Annex.

Other highlights of the day will be the awarding of special prizes, salad cook booklets available for $1 or less, and display of club and council scrapbooks.

4-H Club members will also participate in the project, the major fundraising event of the Midland County Extension Homemakers.

Proceeds will go toward county-wide extension homemaker activities, special projects and to send delegates to state and district meetings. The clubs and council are supportive of several community projects including Midland Crime Prevention Commission in the Midland Police Department, Christmas in April housing project sponsored by the Human Relations Council, and Dress A Live Doll project sponsored by the Salvation Army.

Contributions are also made toward 4-H scholarships, 4-H Camp at Brownwood and many others.

The Council is currently composed of six clubs which meet in the day and three clubs which meet at night. Six or more people may form a new club by contacting the Midland County Extension Office at 682-9481, ext. 433.

DEAR ABBY

What if God decided to strike?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you ran a poem titled "If God Should Go on Strike." It deserves a rerun, and I can't think of a better time to do it. Sign me ... DISGUSTED IN L.A.

DEAR DISGUSTED: You are only one of many to request a rerun. Here's the poem: IF GOD SHOULD GO ON STRIKE

How good it is that God above has never gone on strike, Because He was not treated fair in things He didn't like. If only once He'd given up and said, "That's it, I'm through! I've had enough of those on earth, so this is what I'll do: I'll give my orders to the sun — cut off the heat supply! And to the moon — give no more light, and run the oceans dry."

Then just to make things really tough and put the pressure on, "Turn off the vital oxygen till every breath is gone!"

You know, He would be justified, if fairness was the game, For no one has been more abused or met with more disdain, Than God, and yet He carries on, supplying you and me, With all the favor of His grace, and everything for free. Men say they want a better deal, and so on strike they go, But what a deal we've given God to whom all things we owe. We don't care whom we hurt to gain the things we like; But what a mess we'd all be in, if God should go on strike.

Anon.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday my boss showed me a picture of an elegant sofa in a current magazine, and said if I could guess the price of it within $200 he would give me the $200. (He had seen this sofa in a Beverly Hills store.)

When I guessed $2800, he looked as though he'd been shot. He said the price of the sofa was $3,000, but he refused to give me the $200, saying that my guess was just $1 low!

According to my calculation, $2800 is within $200 of $3,000. Please answer in your column. If I am wrong, I will throw in the towel and be a good sport.

I have been my boss's faithful Girl Friday for four years. Please don't mention his name or mine. Sign this ... LAKEWOOD, CALIF.

DEAR LAKEWOOD: I don't know how your boss figures, but I figure he owes you $200.

(P.S. And he should throw in a $50 bonus for protecting his identity.)

DEAR ABBY: You asked why electric bulbs don't last as long as they used to. An electric light bulb can be made to last forever. It depends on the size, shape and filament.

The bulb in the back room of my 72-year-old hardware store has been burning continually since 1912! By coincidence, only yesterday I received a letter from the Guinness Book of World Records people informing me that in their next edition my bulb will be entered as the most durable bulb in the world, replacing one that had been burning in Livermore, Calif., since 1901, but is now non-existent. — JACK GASNICK, NEW YORK CITY

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Knee pads: To help active children stay clean

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm the mother of a very active, crawling baby, and since it's hard to keep floors and rugs completely clean, I've come up with a solution to at least keep her pants legs clean.

My husband had some stretch-top socks with worn-out heels. I cut them off above the heel part and slipped the tops over my child's pants legs, as far as I could get them.

This not only gives the worn-out socks another use, but helps pad her knees, keeps her a little warmer on cool days and saves wear and tear on her clothes. And, as I've already mentioned, it keeps them cleaner.

You can also put the socks under loose jeans for warmth and added knee protection. — M.T.

Fantastic! Mothers of those precious little "crawlers" are going to thank you for this terrific tip. (And, I'll bet the little ones would too, if they could talk!) A big hug from all of us.

— Heloise

EASIER QUILTING

Dear Heloise: A quilting tip I've found helpful is to place adhesive tape on the fingertips you're using, but which are not protected by a thimble. Remove tape residue with hand cream and warm water.

Also, if you pull the thread through a candle it prevents its tangling. — Pauline Frost

17% INTEREST Through September 30

Citizens Savings' Tax-Free All Savers' Certificate starts Oct. 1. Until then, we'll pay you 17% on as little as $500 to reserve your account now.

Our All Savers' Certificate is a one-year CD authorized in the new tax law. You get a high rate (70% of the yield on 52-week Treasury bills) plus a once-in-a-lifetime federal tax exemption of up to $2,000 for persons filing joint returns, $1,000 for individual returns.

Citizens Savings' All Savers' Certificate is available Oct. 1, but you don't have to wait to reserve yours. Just deposit $500 or more and agree to let us automatically transfer your account to an All Savers' Certificate. Start earning 17% now, and tax free interest beginning in October.

Compare Citizens' All Savers' CD with what you would have to yield at a taxable rate.

If your family income is:	Your tax bracket probably is:	The interest rate you would have to receive to net 11.62% after federal income tax:
$20,000 or less	25%	15.49%
$25,000	30%	16.60%
$35,000	40%	19.37%
$50,000 or more	50%	23.24%

The above figures are approximate and are based on 1981 tax tables. The 11.62% interest rate is equal to 70% of average investment yield on one year U.S. Treasury bills as of a recent auction date.

The Security-Plus Account is not a savings account and is not insured by the FSLIC. It is a re-purchase agreement backed by U.S. Government securities. The All Savers' Certificate is fully insured up to $100,000. Federal Regulation requires both an interest and tax penalty for early withdrawal.

Sisters make up for lost time

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer

Lynne Skinner, left, meets her sister, Nancy Irwin, for the first time Sunday. They and four other sisters were put up for adoption at birth. They plan to continue searching for the other girls.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The meeting was long overdue. But when two sisters who had been put up for adoption as babies were united for the first time at the Jackson airport, they didn't need any introductions.

Lynne Skinner, 41, and Nancy Irwin, 36, have been searching for each other for most of their lives. Two weeks ago, Mrs. Skinner got a tip from a friend of the family that led her to her sister.

"The thing that is wrong is the way the laws keep you apart, the files you can't see. If we had been able to open the (adoption) files, we would have been together years ago," said Mrs. Skinner as she held her sister around the waist Sunday.

To make up for lost time, "we've been on the phone at least three times a day," Mrs. Skinner said. "I'm going to have to sell a cow to pay the phone bill."

Each woman had believed she had only two sisters. There were six children in all; two others have been found, two remain anonymous. All had been put up for adoption.

Mrs. Irwin, the youngest of the six, flew from her home in Salina, Kan., to visit Mrs. Skinner at her chicken farm in Magee, Miss.

"This is the best thing that ever happened to me," said Mrs. Irwin.

"I feel terrific," said Mrs. Skinner.

Although they have found each other, both said they will continue the search for their other two sisters.

But they are not expecting any help from their natural parents.

"The natural parents tell us nothing but lies," said Mrs. Skinner. Before they separated, the natural parents lived next door to Mrs. Irwin, hiding their true identity.

The people she had called mom and dad were really her aunt and uncle. Her "aunt and uncle" next door were her real parents.

"It's hard to explain how you feel about someone who has kept you apart for so long," said Mrs. Irwin as she and her sister walked arm in arm.

At one time, Mrs. Irwin said, all six sisters were living within 50 miles of one another.

"Mother lived next door, she could have told us," Mrs. Irwin said. "Six girls would have been a lot of fun."

Skyrocketing food prices don't ruffle Polish people

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The price of bread, flour and cereals skyrocketed by 300 to 400 percent today but Poles appeared to be taking it in stride despite warning strikes and demonstrations that preceded the increases.

"Everyone seems to be taking it calmly," said one shopkeeper selling loaves of crusty brown bread. A similar mood was evident in visits to several such bread shops in this capital of 1.5 million people. Some said the price was fair and others who thought it too high argued that the quality would not improve.

Government attempts to bring food prices more in line with production costs had set off bloody riots and strikes in 1970 and 1976. Proposed meat price hikes last summer sparked a national wave of strikes that led to the creation of Solidarity, the Soviet bloc's first independent labor federation.

However there were no reported incidents on this first anniversary of Solidarity.

Solidarity officials said the union scheduled no major festivities to mark the anniversary — a normal work day — but planned a blast of factory sirens in Gdansk, about 160 miles northwest of Warsaw.

Customers did not grumble about the price increases here and waited patiently to buy bread, which appeared to be in plentiful supply, people said. Some even suggested the price be bumped higher.

"If a kilo of flour costs 12 zlotys (about 36 cents) how can a loaf of bread that weighs nearly that much cost six?" demanded one Pole.

South Africa insists invading forces are leaving Angola

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — The South African government insisted its forces are still withdrawing from Angola and denied Angola's report that the invaders occupied a provincial capital and eight other towns during the weekend.

As the U.N. Security Council prepared to resume debate on the invasion today, the official Angolan news agency Angop said South African troops occupied Ngiva, capital of Cunene province, on Saturday. Ngiva is 20 miles from the border of South-West Africa, also called Namibia.

The agency said the Defense Ministry reported Angolan forces shot down five South African warplanes during the fighting. There was no report of casualties.

A South African Defense Force spokesman in Pretoria called the reports "just another example of the mass propaganda that is being fed the world."

The spokesman, who declined to be identified, said Gen. Constand Viljoen, the commander of South African forces, made clear Friday that his forces were withdrawing. Viljoen had said his troops crossed into Angola last Monday to wipe out bases of SWAPO, the South-West Africa People's Organization, which for 15 years has been fighting a guerrilla war to end South African control of South-West Africa.

South Africa's troops and planes killed between 400 and 450 Angolans and SWAPO guerrillas last week and destroyed Angolan radar and anti-aircraft installations that were aiding SWAPO, a South African base commander in northern South-West Africa told reporters who visited the invasion force last Friday.

"Our information is that, far from withdrawing, the South African operations are extending," said Colm Foy, an Angola Information Department spokesman in London.

Foy told The Associated Press he had received reports of fierce fighting continuing Sunday on the highway between Ngiva and Lubango, about 150 miles north of the border.

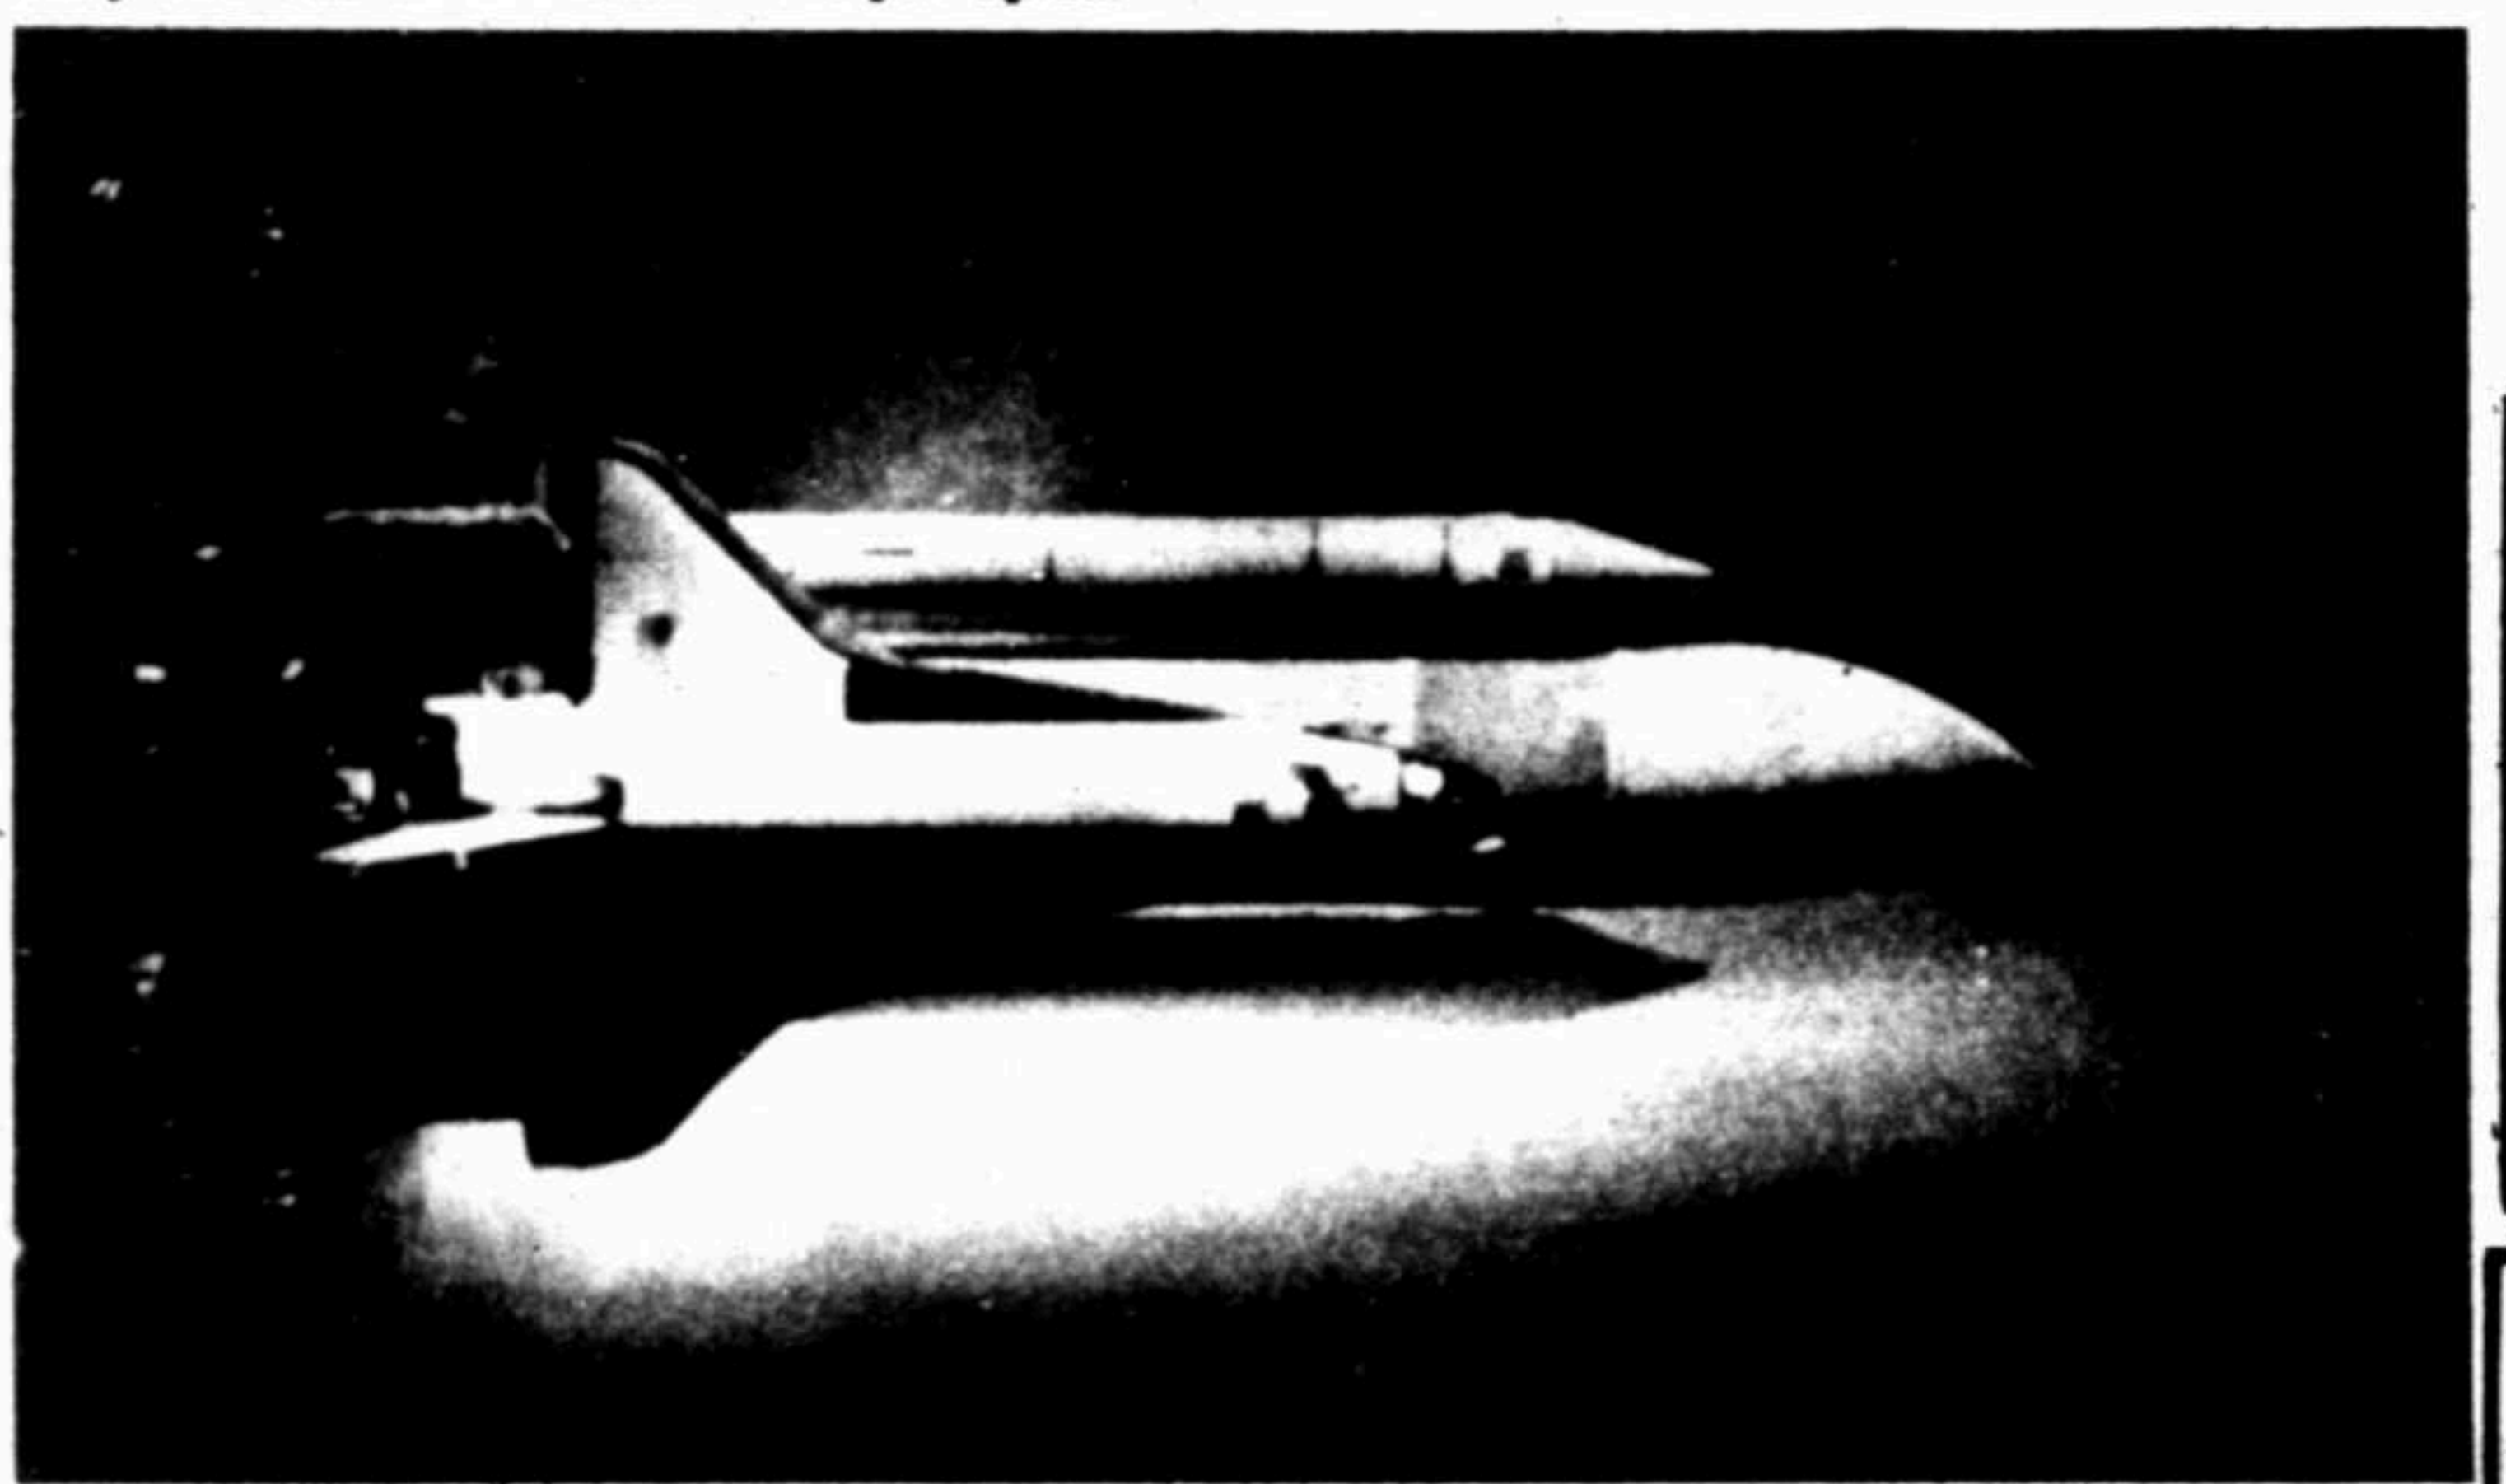

The Angolan Defense Ministry claimed its anti-aircraft guns downed two South African fighter planes Saturday after they bombed Tchibembas, 185 miles inside Angola. Angop said the other three planes claimed were shot down over Ngiva.

The Security Council debate on the invasion began Friday at Angola's request. African nations were demanding that the council order economic and political sanctions against South Africa, but the United States was expected to veto any resolution calling for sanctions.

South African Ambassador Jakobus Eksteen told the council his country "harbors no aggressive intentions against Angola." He said South African troops were fighting guerrillas from the South-West African People's Organization who have been waging a "campaign of terrorism and intimidation" against the residents of South-West Africa.

The raid was "aimed solely at SWAPO and not at Angola or its people," Eksteen said.

South Africa has administered the sparsely populated, mineral-rich territory of South-West Africa since World War I under an old League of Nations mandate. The U.N. General Assembly terminated the mandate in 1966, but South Africa refused to give up the territory or to cooperate in plans for internationally supervised elections leading to independence.

The Space Shuttle Transport System at Kennedy Space Center is heading for its launch pad today. The shuttle is scheduled for an Oct. 9 liftoff.

Space shuttle Columbia readied for second trip

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Aerospace workers rolled the space shuttle Columbia today from the Vehicle Assembly Building toward its launch pad for an October lift off to become America's first craft to make a second manned voyage into space.

The vessel began its snail-like crawl to the pad at 4:45 a.m. EDT, 15 minutes ahead of schedule.

The Columbia and its mobile launcher had been mounted onto a huge, tractor-like "crawler transporter" for the 3 1/2-mile trip to the same launch pad where its first historic mission began last April. The shuttle will be fitted with new twin solid-rocket boosters and a new external tank.

"Officials wanted to start the rollout at an early hour in order to get the space shuttle to the launch pad and beat the late-afternoon thunderstorms which we have been having lately," said Mark Hess, spokesman at the Kennedy Space Center.

Moving at speeds of less than 1 mph with frequent stops, the space shuttle was expected to be locked down to the launch pad after noon.

The launch date has been moved back from Sept. 30 to Oct. 9 because of technical problems, officials revealed Friday.

Among the minor problems that caused delays were faulty ground support equipment and complications in completing tests and attaching the Columbia's rocket boosters and fuel tank.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said launch-team work weeks are being cut from seven to six days and crews will be given the Labor Day weekend off to reduce the possibility of fatigue.

Astronauts John Young and Robert Crippen successfully piloted the world's first reusable spaceship on its maiden flight, a 54-hour orbital trip.

The ship's second flight, scheduled to last five days, will have rookie astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly at the controls. The shuttle is to carry a payload that will survey Earth's resources.

The astronauts also will limber up a remote-controlled, 50-foot arm that will deploy and retrieve satellites on future missions.

Columbia won't do that kind of work until after four test flights. NASA's current schedule has the first satellite mission slated for September 1982. By then, the second of a planned fleet of five shuttles, the Challenger, is expected to be at Cape Canaveral.

Rogers' birdie on 18 wins Series golf

By GEORGE STRODE

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Bill Rogers knew exactly what he faced standing on the 18th tee in the World Series of Golf.

The gallery tipped him that Tom Kite had missed an opportunity to take the sole lead.

"I heard their reaction. I knew Tom didn't make birdie," Rogers said. "Now I had my chance. I hit a very good tee shot. I couldn't have put my 5-iron approach in better position."

"I had a 15-foot, slightly downhill putt with a little left to right break. If you had to pick a putt to win a tournament, that would be it."

ROGERS, DRAWING on the experience he gained from a second-place tie in the U.S. Open and a victory in the British Open this year, calmly sank the putt for a 3-under-par 67 Sunday, a total of 5-under 275 and a fat payday of $100,000.

He beat Kite by a single shot, and the runnerup was not surprised.

"I figured he would make the birdie," said Kite, who watched Rogers putt. "He's awful good. He played very well this week. You've got to hand it to him."

It was not an altogether disappointing week for Kite. He earned $55,000 with a finish of 67-276 and took over the Vardon Trophy lead with a low-stroke average of 70.01 this year.

FOR HALE IRWIN, the leader or co-leader after all of the first three rounds, it was a demoralizing finish. He slipped to a 72 and a total of 278, tied for third place with Japan's Isao Aoki. They earned $27,850 apiece. Aoki shot 67.

Irwin three-putted 17 to fall two strokes behind and leave the race to Rogers and Kite.

"I'm very disappointed," Irwin said. "After last week (Buick Open victory) and this week, I'm emotionally drained. I feel like I've been run over."

For Rogers, it must seem like a dream.

The 29-year-old Texan has vaulted into the PGA Player of the Year race. He ranks sixth on the money list with $270,411 behind Ray Floyd's leading $346,385. He has won three times, capturing the Heritage Tournament before the British Open and the World Series.

"By winning a major, you are putting pressure on yourself," he said. "People expect you to do well. What a way to relieve that pressure by coming here and winning. Everything about this year is unbelievable."

"I've developed a lot of confidence. Every time you get up there in contention, you learn to handle the pressure better. What a great frame of mind I'm in."

ROGERS STARTED the day at Firestone Country Club two shots behind Irwin, but charged into a share of the lead with Kite on the 13th hole. Rogers dropped a 35-foot birdie putt, while Irwin was bogeying the hole with three putts from 35 feet.

"I got my chance at 13," the champion said. "That's where I broke through. Hale certainly was the one we were trying to catch all day. He kind of let it get away down the stretch."

Kite, finishing in the top eight for the 13th time in his past 14 tournaments, missed birdie bids from 12 feet at 16 and from 15 feet at 18 that would have forced a playoff.

"But putting was what got me back in the tournament. I putted marvelously in the last two rounds," said Kite, who stood 3 over par after 45 holes, six shots from the lead, before his rally.

Jack Nicklaus continued as a non-winner for the second time in three years. He scrambled to a 74 for 283, tied for 10th place with Curtis Strange, eight shots behind Rogers.

Tom Watson, the defending champion, fared even worse. He had 74-293. So did Lee Trevino, finishing with a 71.

JoAnne Carner...millionaire

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Carner, Caponi join million club

GOLF—LPGA golf, which gained its first $1 million player a month ago, now has three. JoAnne Carner and Donna Caponi joined Kathy Whitworth Sunday at Denver when Carner won the Columbia Savings Classic with a 1-under 71—278 and Caponi, far back in the field, still won the $479 she needed to reach the figure. Kathy Whitworth, two strokes back, tied with Patty Sheehan and Janet Alex. Midland's Judy Rankin, Jan Stephenson and Beth Daniel were another shot back at 281.

"I never did tear it apart like Lopez (Nancy Lopez-Melton) did, but I always felt like I was going to," said Carner. "The final round I just kept telling myself, 'Don't make mistakes, the birdies will come.' And I kept birdieing just often enough."

Lopez-Melton, returning to form after a shoulder injury, fired the best round of the tournament, a course-record 8-under-par 64. But she was too far off the lead beginning Sunday's round, and finished four shots behind Carner at 282.

TENNIS— Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia was awarded the $15,000 winner's share in the Head Cup tournament when Ilie Nastase defaulted because of a prior commitment. Nastase, the fiery Romanian, played instead in the consolation match of the Hamlet Challenge Cup in Jericho, N.Y.

Brian Teacher of Los Angeles defeated Yannick Noah of France, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, to win the Hamlet Challenge Cup. Vince Van Patten of Hollywood, Calif., defeated Ilie Nastase 6-4, 6-3 in consolation.

CYCLING— Freddy Maertens of Belgium sprinted to the finish ahead of Italy's Giuseppe Saronni and defending champion Bernard Hinault of France to win the World Championship of professional cycling. Andrei Vvedernikov of the Soviet Union outduelled Belgium's Rudy Rogers over the final 8½ miles to win the gold medal in the men's amateur road race.

AUTO RACING— Craig Carter drove a Chevrolet Camaro to an easy victory in the Kelly American Challenge race for domestic racing sedans... France's Alain Prost, in a turbocharged Renault, fought off a late charge by world champion Alan Jones of Australia to win the Dutch Grand Prix...

ROAD RACING— Herb Lindsay outran Greg Meyer and Boston Marathon champion Bill Rodgers Saturday to win the Bobby Crim 10-mile roadrace, but some of his stiffest competition withdrew over an amateur-status "contamination" threat. In the women's division, Patty Catalano, who set the 53:40 U.S. women's 10-mile record at last year's Crim race, was first at 55:35. Second was New Zealander Lorraine Moeller, 23, at 56:17. Karlene Erickson, 16, was third.

HORSE RACING— John Henry, $4.20, edged The Bart in a photo finish to win the Arlington Million at Arlington Park... Discorama, $18.80, beat Secretame by a neck to capture the 86th running of the $55,500 Gazelle Handicap... Foolish Move, $12.20, beat Soldier Boy by nearly four lengths to win the $20,000 Polyland Handicap at Suffolk Downs... Ten Bore, $30.40, beat Century Banker by one length in the $28,225 Rosemont Stakes at Delaware Park.

STEEPLECHASE— Double Reefed, $8.80, ridden by John Cushman, scored a neck victory over Uncle Edwin in the $32,500 Arlington Steeplechase Handicap Saturday. It marked the first running of a steeplechase at Arlington since 1954 and was one of the equine events leading up to the Arlington Million.

Kansas City's American League game at Toronto was rained out Sunday, so Royals' outfielder Willie Wilson took advantage of it to get in a little body-surfing.

Dan Murphy smashed a three-run homer in the seventh inning Sunday night to lift the Tulsa Drillers out of reach with an 8-4 win over the Jackson Mets in Texas League action.

Tulsa had led only 5-4 before Murphy smacked his round-tripper.

El Paso racked up a 7-4 win over Amarillo Sunday with the help of Bill Schroeder, who scored his 15th home run of the season, a two-run blast in the third inning.

The Midland-San Antonio bout was rained out, and Shreveport and Arkansas had the night off.

Greg Hughes recorded the win for Tulsa, making his record 8-6. Scott Holman, 4-9, was stuck with the loss. Holman went six innings, giving up seven hits and five runs.

El Paso's Tony Torres, 5-7, chalked up a win, and Byron Ballard, 7-6, took the loss for Amarillo.

In today's Texas League action, Amarillo plays at El Paso, Shreveport travels to Arkansas, Tulsa is scheduled at Jackson and Midland matches up at San Antonio for a doubleheader.

Take me out to game

Becoming once in a season experience

By WILL GRIMSLEY

AP Special Correspondent

"Take me out to the ball game. Take me out to the crowd. Buy me some peanuts and Cracker Jack..."

The strains of the old melody poured out of the transistor radio as Joe Philpot, after a hard day at the plant, was finishing off a plate of spaghetti and a few slices of garlic bread at the dinner table.

"Hey, that's a good idea," said Joe to his missus, Euphelia. "Why don't we take the kids to a ballgame this weekend. We haven't done it in a long time."

"Good," replied Euphelia. "I don't care much for baseball, but anything to get away from the house."

They decided on a Sunday game at the Stadium. The Royals were in town and it stacked up as a good one even though the Yankees were playing like beardless House of David.

Joe picked up the reserved seat tickets in advance ($5.50 each for a total of $22, no half-price for the kids). On Sunday the Philpots squeezed the kids — Bucky Boy, 10, and sister Thursalulu, 8, — into clean jeans and headed for the Bronx.

"No need to take the jalopy," said Joe. "Don't know where we'd park it."

SO THEY took the Long Island Rail Road (two excursion same-day fares at $5.55 each and two half-fares for two children, total $16.65) to Penn Station from where they caught a subway to 161st Street in the Bronx (another $3.10).

The seats weren't half bad — section 18, row B, seats 25-through-28) in the lower grandstand between third base and left field. With good binoculars you could easily see Dave Winfield's No. 31.

Joe, although more of a McDonald's patron than the 21 Club, was no slouch when it came to amenities. So he passed a buck to the usher who brushed off their seats ($1).

The little family group had hardly got comfortable, well before Robert Merrill started belting "The Star Spangled Banner," when Bucky Boy suddenly discovered that the long trip had whetted his appetite.

"Pop, can I have a hot dog?"

"Sure," said Joe, signaling one the vendors.

"Me, too, daddy," chorused little Thursalulu.

TWO HOT DOGS ($1.25 each.) They had to be washed down with soda pop (95 cents apiece). Joe and Euphelia opted for a couple of beers ($1.50 each.) First pit stop, damage $7.40.

Joe found himself digging deeper and deeper into his pockets, and the afternoon was just beginning.

"Get your picture albums here, get your picture albums here," bellowed a vendor.

Bucky Boy didn't ask. He just looked up at his father plaintively.

"Okay, Bucky," said Joe, wincing. To the vendor: "How much?"

"Only $2.25."

Sold. Thursalulu wasn't interested. "I want a Snoopy," she said. "I saw one when I came in." Joe trudged downstairs to get one a cuddly Snoopy with a Yankee logo on his cap, price $4.50.

THE GAME got under way. Euphelia fidgeted. She was bored. Joe heckled the umpires and booed Reggie. Bucky Boy and his sis refused to sit still.

In the third inning, Bucky Boy wanted another hot dog ($1.25.) Sis did, too. Another $1.25. Two more soft drinks (combined $1.90.) Joe cooled off with another beer ($1.50.) Euphelia passed. In the next four innings, Bucky Boy and his sister consumed a bag of peanuts each (65 cents a bag) and a "tub" popcorn ($2.50.) Not irregular for growing tykes. Joe had a couple more beers. Euphelia settled for a pop, together $3.95.

IN THE eighth, Pop and Mom decided they ought to leave to avoid the subway crush. The kids didn't mind, as long as they could stop at the souvenir stand on the way out.

"Daddy, I want a tee shirt and a helmet," pleaded Bucky Boy. Tee shirt ($9) and helmet ($4.50.) Thursalulu chose a blue visor instead of a helmet.

Joe fumbled for his credit card. Cash only, said the vendor — $27. Euphelia bailed him out by digging into the week's grocery money.

Back home, Joe and Euphelia took an audit. The day's baseball outing, sport's biggest family bargain: $97.45.

"Dad, can we go again next Sunday?" asked Bucky Boy.

"Don't know, son," said Joe, swallowing. "How about a nice movie?"

Dallas' White lightning strikes down Oilers

IRVING, Texas (AP) — In the Dallas Cowboys' training camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif., they called him "White Lightning."

The Houston Oilers found out why Saturday night.

Rookie Doug Donley, a second round pick out of Ohio State with 4.4 speed in the 40, struck the Oilers not once but twice.

After his National Football League debut, he could look back on a memorable outing in which he caught two passes, both for touchdowns.

Donley, who had been sidelined with a groin pull since the preseason began, caught a 33-yard touchdown pass from Danny White and an 18-yard scoring strike from Gary Hogeboom in the Cowboys' 28-20 victory.

"My leg was still giving me some problems during the week but it felt pretty good tonight," said Donley. "It is still not 100 per cent and I really wasn't going full speed tonight. Since most of my routes were rather straight ones it didn't bother."

Donley said he was more nervous than anything.

"I was bothered by the butterflies in my stomach," he said, playing before his first professional crowd.

On the first pass, Donley said "Danny threw it up pretty high and I looked up and there it was."

Donley sped behind veteran cornerback J.C. Wilson to make the reception.

"On the second one Hogeboom waited until I got behind the safety and then fired it to me," said Donley. "This was a real confidence builder for me."

Gambling associations go back to 1978

NFL investigates Stabler

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League is investigating Houston Oiler quarterback Ken Stabler's association with a known gambler and will make a statement as soon as possible, NFL Executive Director Don Weiss said Sunday night.

According to a report in Sunday's editions of the New York Times, Stabler, one of the NFL top signal callers, repeatedly associated with convicted bookmaker, Nicholas Dudich of Perth Amboy, N.Y., in the late 1970s despite warnings from Oakland Raider officials.

"The investigation into the overall thing goes back a few weeks," said Weiss, who added the NFL had investigated Stabler previously. "The league had indications (of Stabler's association with the gambler) as far back as 1978."

WEISS SAID the indications had come from the Raiders, the team for whom Stabler played before being traded to the Houston Oilers in 1980.

Weiss said the NFL's security department is handling the investigation adding, "We are going to do this as expeditiously as possible."

Stabler, who retired just before the Oilers' preseason camp opened only to re-sign last week, refused to comment about the allegations.

"If the media would leave me alone and let me play football everything would be all right," Stabler said Saturday night.

DUDICH, when reached by The Times, said: "I went to some football games, that's all."

The Times story said inquiries with federal and local law enforcement officials, as well as with Raiders officials, disclosed that Stabler's association with Dudich began and grew during his last four seasons with the Raiders.

According to the Times, Stabler was subjected to physical surveillance and other investigations in Oakland and later in Houston by federal agencies after the Raiders won the Super Bowl in 1977.

However, the newspaper said the federal investigations, which now have been terminated, proved inconclusive.

The investigations reportedly focused on Stabler's associations with Dudich. Enforcement officials said such associations are not illegal and that Stabler has not been accused of any crime. If there is a connection between Stabler and Dudich, Stabler would be in violation of NFL rules prohibiting players from associating with known gamblers or gambling activities.

AL LOCASALE, the Raiders' executive assistant, reportedly said the club made numerous reports of Stabler's association with Dudich to the NFL offices. The Times, however, quoted former NFL security director Jack Danahy as saying the reports weren't so numerous.

"The Raiders definitely did not talk to us even half a dozen times and not as many as they are claiming," Danahy told The Times.

According to The Times, Locasale said he spoke with Stabler and his attorney, Henry Pitts, about Dudich once telling them, "this guy, according to the information we have, is not someone you ought to be hanging around with."

The Times reported in its Monday editions that Warren Welsh, the NFL's present director of security, is scheduled to talk with the Oilers today about gambling and others matters. The story said the trip was planned last spring.

Rams' assistant Pardee not bitter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last year at this time, Jack Pardee was preparing for his third year as head coach of the Washington Redskins.

He owned a home and some land near Middleburg, Va., and planned to "be a farmer for a year, and then get back in."

the defense-minded Pardee aboard. "The defense has really taken to Jack," he said. "They know he's going to make them better."

Today, Pardee is with a different National Football League team in a different capacity. The switch from head coach to assistant head coach in charge of defense for the San Diego Chargers was not by entirely by choice, however.

But Charger Coach Don Coryell changed that. He called Pardee the day after the Chargers had lost to the Oakland Raiders in the AFC championship game and offered him a job. After some consideration, Pardee accepted.

"I can coach in this league. I think my record shows that."

Last winter, Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke fired Pardee.

"No, it wasn't the general manager who fired me. We had differences all along, but the owner made that decision, not the general manager," Pardee said.

"I can coach in this league. I think my record shows that."

In a retrospective look back, Pardee says he's not bitter about the abrupt change.

"It's history. I don't even think about it any more," said Pardee in a Washington Post interview.

"I can coach in this league. I think my record shows that."

In the interview, Pardee gives his version of the firing.

"From a far distance, I know I wasn't fired because of my coaching or the record (24-24 over three years). I was fired because the owner (Cooke) wanted to take over control of the club," he said during a break from the Charger training camp at the University of California-San Diego.

"I can coach in this league. I think my record shows that."

"An owner can do what he wants to do," Pardee continued. "He doesn't need another reason does he?"

"I can coach in this league. I think my record shows that."

Pardee also denies having hard feelings toward General Manager Bobby Beathard. Pardee and Beathard had a semi-public dispute last season over how the team should be run.

"No, it wasn't the general manager who fired me. We had differences all along, but the owner made that decision, not the general manager," Pardee said.

"I can coach in this league. I think my record shows that."

Pardee admits, however, that he was initially angered by the firing.

"I didn't want to be judged on my performance over two or three years. I thought it would take longer than that to show what we could do."

"I can coach in this league. I think my record shows that."

"I accepted those conditions, but then to have the rug pulled out before the time was up...well, I wasn't crazy about that."

After the firing, Pardee did not plan to be coaching in the NFL this season.

ERA backers debate next step as ratification deadline nears

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the women's movement are quietly considering what to do next if the Equal Rights Amendment fails to win ratification by the deadline set by Congress, as now appears certain.

They are reluctant to talk about that prospect because publicly they still hold out hope that legislatures of three more states will approve the ERA before time expires next June 30.

And they do not want to undercut a last-ditch drive for ratification. Last week, ERA proponents raised $1 million and said they will spend $15 million to overcome their opposition.

But a new tone has crept into women's equality rhetoric. Leaders now stress that it required half a century to win the vote for women.

"People have to understand that the women's rights movement is not going to go away," says Eleanor Smeal, president of the 140,000-member National Organization for Women.

"What happens if it hasn't passed by June 30 is another 20 years of work and, unfortunately, another generation of women consigned to inequality."

A survey by Associated Press reporters finds that the amendment is unlikely to win by the deadline in any of the 15 state legislatures that either have voted it down or haven't bothered to bring it to a vote.

"We're still holding out hope," says Ruth Hinerfeld, president of the League of Women Voters. She says failure to meet the deadline is the one thing she is "unwilling" to discuss.

And Suone Cotner, executive director of ERA America, a coalition of 250 pro-ratification organizations, says women's leaders are still crusading for those last three states because they have no choice.

"So we're behind, and in the bottom of the ninth inning," she says. "You don't take your team off the field."

Younger Carter thinks Reagan doing well

NEW IBERIA, La. (AP) — The brother of the former president thinks the current one is doing a pretty good job.

In fact, Billy Carter says he hopes Ronald Reagan gets to keep running the country a bit longer than his brother, Jimmy, did.

"He's the first president that has had some control over Congress since (Franklin D.) Roosevelt," Carter said. "I hope they let him run it for a while."

Carter, who stopped here on a promotional tour for a home trailer company, also said a federal investigation of his finances and connections with the Libyans has left him bitter.

"I have no respect for the Senate or Congress," he said. "I have no respect for the Justice Department."

He said the Justice Department investigation was a political move aimed at ousting his brother from office. But he said he doesn't believe the probe was the reason for Jimmy Carter's election loss.

"I'm sure I didn't get him beat in 43 states," said Carter. "I ain't that strong."

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II, whose visit to his homeland in 1979 touched off a torrent of national pride, will return to Warsaw next year, Polish television has reported.

The Rev. Jozef Platek, head of the Pauline monks, said in an interview Sunday that he had traveled to Rome to invite the Polish pontiff to visit on the 600th anniversary of the establishment of the Black Madonna shrine in Czestochowa.

"The holy father received us cordially and with joy," Platek said. "It will be the highlight of our celebrations."

The priest gave no specific date, but the main celebrations at Poland's most revered Roman Catholic shrine are expected to be held next August.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — In a debate that has sharply divided the Duke University campus, trustees are expected to decide this week whether to locate the Richard Nixon presidential library here.

The controversy already has led to the resignation of trustee emeritus Charles Murphy, a Washington lawyer and former counsel to President Harry Truman.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Fertility may continue awhile after vasectomy

Dear Dr. Solomon: Once a man has a vasectomy, and assuming it is done properly, can he then be certain he will not become a father? — Earl, Newport, R.I.

Dear Earl: Even after a successful vasectomy, fertile sperm may be stored in the male reproductive tract for more than a month. One reporter from Taiwan tells of a man whose wife became pregnant approximately 38 days after he underwent a vasectomy. And just in case you're wondering, the man was his wife's only sexual partner.

Dear Dr. Solomon: At various times you have written that infants may be allergic to either cow's milk or formula or both, but it never seemed to me to be much of a problem. However, several months ago my niece adopted a baby. She was soon dismayed to learn that the infant rejected both formula and cow's milk and, of course, she was unable to nurse. Fortunately, she was able to arrange for a wet nurse at considerable expense. But suppose a wet nurse had not been available. What do mothers do under such circumstances? — Mrs. G.S. Norfolk, Va.

Dear Mrs. S.: The dilemma you pose is very real although, fortunately, the combination of a mother being unable to nurse (an adoptive mother, in the case you cite) and a child allergic to both formula and cow's milk does not occur very often. For those that may be faced with this problem, the services of a wet nurse, as your niece learned, is one possibility.

More recently, a number of breast milk banks have been established in various parts of the country. As its name suggests, the bank stores breast milk for use in the type of circumstances you describe.

Dr. Michael Sheehan, a neonatologist at the Children's Mercy Hospital in Kansas City, Mo., does express some reservations about milk banks. He notes that the milk must be sterilized, frozen and stored with care, and that those donating milk should be screened for diseases such as tuberculosis, venereal disease and hepatitis. Nevertheless, for some infants a milk bank can literally be a lifesaver.

In a recent article, I wrote about the mystery of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, or crib death. Dr. Jess F. Kraus, professor at the University of California in Los Angeles, sent me a letter enumerating the following points about crib death:

1 — Utilizing the best estimates and adjusting for race, the estimate of SIDS, or crib death, is approximately 5,500 cases in the United States each year.

2 — Peak incidence of SIDS occurs towards the end of the second month and the beginning of the third month.

3 — There is no evidence to suggest that SIDS is an inheritable characteristic. That repeat cases have occurred in families cannot be denied, but the literature does not suggest in any way that heredity is a factor responsible for SIDS.

4 — While electric monitoring has been touted as an answer to the problem of SIDS, it involves technical and emotional problems.

Thank you, Dr. Kraus, UCLA.

Firefighters rescue Liz, Sen. Warner

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor and her husband, Sen. John Warner, were plucked from an unruly crowd by firefighters who took the celebrity couple aboard their fire-truck and drove them to safety in crowded Manhattan traffic.

"It was a riot scene," Lt. Frederick Daniels of Engine Co. 54 said of the Sunday night incident.

Daniels said he and his men were on a routine inspection of a restaurant across the street from the Martin Beck Theater, where Miss Taylor is appearing in the play "The Little Foxes," when he saw 200 to 250 people surge toward the stage door.

He said the crowd broke down a barricade, crushing Miss Taylor, the Virginia Republican senator, a bodyguard and Miss Taylor's dog.

The firefighters formed a "human barricade" around Miss Taylor and her party. Daniels had the engine pulled up, and the Warner's, the bodyguard and the dog were put into two bucket seats.

The firetruck roared away with lights flashing and horns and siren blaring.

"She loved it," Daniels said of Miss Taylor's reaction to the ride. "She said this was the most fascinating thing she had ever done."

Daniels' men loved it too. When the engine pulled up at the Carlyle Hotel, "much to the surprise of the doorman," Daniels said, Miss Taylor thanked the firefighters and gave each a kiss.

"And I was the last to get kissed — I don't know if that means anything."

Carter compliments Chinese navy ships

By PHIL BROWN
Associated Press Writer

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — Former President Carter visited the Chinese Navy's East China Fleet today and told the captain of a subchaser, "As a former submariner, this is not the kind of ship I like."

In a more serious vein, Carter told his hosts: "A common response to aggression anywhere in the world is an important policy of the People's Republic of China and the United States."

He told Xie Zhenghao, the fleet's vice commander, that "one of the most vivid demonstrations of trust and friendship between two countries is permission for foreigners to see the means by which we defend ourselves."

Carter said his first voyage as a young submarine officer was to China, in 1949. In addition to the subchaser, he boarded a submarine, a missile destroyer and a missile frigate, all of them built in China and equipped with Chinese weapons.

He saluted their captains, complimented them on their ships, and told the submarine's skipper that his 1978 ship compared very favorably with many U.S. submarines although the United States now has nuclear-powered submarines.

"I hope some day you will command a nuclear submarine," Carter said. Xie said that if possible, China should introduce sophisticated technology and equipment from friendly countries, but "it is neither possible nor practical for a socialist country like China to buy a modern navy."

U.S. expressed regret in collision with submarine

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — "Inadequate command supervision" and "extraordinary" coincidences caused a U.S. nuclear submarine to collide with a Japanese freighter last April 9, sinking the Japanese vessel, the United States told Japan today.

U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield personally delivered a final U.S. report on the mishap to Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda and expressed official regret for the collision in which the captain and the first mate of the cargo vessel were killed.

According to U.S. Embassy spokesman William Maurer, Mansfield told Sonoda the Polaris missile submarine USS George Washington was clearly at fault in the mishap, and that the coincidences — bad weather, the closeness of the two vessels and the sub crew's preoccupation with its training mission — "do not excuse what happened."

The incident prompted strong official Japanese protests because the submarine left the scene of the collision without attempting to rescue the crew of the foundering cargo ship, the 3,500-ton Nissho Maru, and did not report the incident until the following day, after the surviving 13 crew members were rescued by a Japanese destroyer.

The United States earlier accepted liability and agreed to negotiate compensation claims by the shipowner, survivors, and families of the two men who died.

The claimants are seeking about $4.5 million in compensation, more than half of it for the vessel. The first claim — that of the family of one of the dead men — for the equivalent of $374,000 was paid Aug. 2.

Mansfield's report, the result of an official U.S. Navy inquiry, dealt not only with the causes of the accident but also explained the failure of the sub to attempt a rescue and the delay in reporting the collision.

It noted that the sub's captain, Cmdr. Robert D. Woehl, was relieved of command and that a second officer, Lt. R. D. Hampton, was given a "punitive letter of reprimand" and reassigned.

Other members of the sub's crew also were disciplined for their part in the affair, the report said.

The report said that at the time of the collision, there was "inadequate command supervision" and "less than professional watch-standing procedures" aboard the 6,800-ton submarine.

It accused Woehl of "significant misjudgment" following the collision in the East China Sea, 110 miles off the Japanese coast.

Cuban scheme thwarted

MIAMI (AP) — Cubans United has fractured in disunity, its quixotic anti-Castro scheme to take over the U.S. Navy base in Cuba beset by shipwreck, allegations of mutiny and immigration woes.

Sixteen deserters from the chaotic "peaceful" mission to invade Guantanamo Bay were arrested in a hijacked shrimp boat found drifting in the Caribbean on Saturday, the Coast Guard said. The 16 apparently couldn't operate the boat, the Capt. Jack, and rammed the Coast Guard cutter during the capture-rescue.

The Capt. Jack had been hired to rescue the Cubans from Providenciales, an island in the Turks and Caicos Islands in the British West Indies. Those on the boat and 59 others had been stranded on Providenciales for more than a week after another vessel, the Franklin and Ian, ran aground and broke up in the surf.

They were all in the Caribbean on what the group described as a "peaceful invasion" of Guantanamo being led by Frank Sturgis, the convicted Watergate burglar.

The exiles hoped to set up a "Free Cuba" beachhead at Guantanamo, then call for international support for overthrowing the island's communist government.

On Friday, the 16 allegedly bolted and set out from Providenciales in the commandeered shrimp boat.

Gary Kingett, the Capt. Jack's master, reported his boat was seized at gunpoint and he was forced ashore, Coast Guard officials said.

Kingett had told the Coast Guard he was worried because he didn't think the men who took the ship knew how to operate it. He was most concerned about getting the boat back in one piece, officials said.

The drifting Cubans were taken aboard a cutter and arrested on charges of operating the shrimp boat without a licensed master aboard, but not before the 75-foot Capt. Jack accidentally rammed the cutter.

"Our cutter came alongside the Capt. Jack this morning," a Coast Guard spokesman said Saturday. "The engines were down, and it was left with no steering."

Nolan gets discovery

Oilmen schedule ten wildcats in Permian Basin counties

Ten wildcats have been scheduled by oilmen in the Permian Basin of West Texas. Also, a discovery was finalized in Nolan County by a Dallas firm.

COTTE WILDCAT

Polk & Patton Inc., Abilene, will drill the No. 1 J.D. Slope, a 6,500-foot wildcat in Cottle County, two miles southwest of Chalk.

Location is 4,339 feet from the north and 3,300 feet from the east line of the San Augustine University League 356 survey.

It is 2 1/2 miles northwest of R. Maguire Estate No. 1 Johnson, a 6,793-foot project.

PECOS VENTURES

Estoril Producing Corp., Midland, has scheduled a 15,000-foot wildcat in Pecos County, 17 miles southwest of Fort Stockton.

The site is 1,980 feet from the north, and 990 feet from the east line of section 14, block C, GC&SF survey.

It is 3 1/2 miles southeast of a 10,817-foot Worth Exploration project, abandoned March 9, 1952.

Amigo Petroleum Inc., Midland will drill three 3,500-foot wildcats in Pecos County.

The No. 1-28 University is located 1,980 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the west line of section 28, block 23, University Lands survey and 12 miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

It is two miles southeast of the R. Lowe No. 1 University, abandoned April 23, 1972 at 8,405 feet.

The No. 1-10 University is located 660 feet from the north, and 660 feet from the west line of section 10, block 22, University Lands survey.

Drill site is 14 miles southwest of Fort Stockton and is 2 3/4 miles south-southwest of a Pan-American project abandoned Dec. 2, 1957 at 21,687 feet.

The No. 1 Mary McComb is located nine miles southeast of Fort Stockton and is 3,100 feet from the south, and 500 feet from the east line of section 1, block 172, CCSD & RGNG survey.

It is two miles northeast of El Paso No. 1 Winfield abandoned Sept. 29, 1965.

PECOS RE-ENTRY

Ernest E. Evinger, Midland, will re-enter and plug back to 1,550 feet at Chevron Oil Co. of Texas No. 1 Laro "B", five miles southwest of Bakersfield in Pecos County.

The No. 1 McKenzie "A" is located 790 feet from the north, and 1,300 feet from the west line of section 10, block 603, GC&SF RR survey, certificate 4,236, abstract 9,023.

The well, originally drilled to 9,645 feet, was plugged and abandoned Sept. 16, 1963.

STERLING PROJECTS

MEG Petroleum Corp., San Angelo will drill the No. 1 McGill, a 5,100-foot wildcat in Sterling County, 18 miles south of Sterling City.

It is 1 1/4 miles southwest of the Monsanto No. 1 J.G. Brown, an 8,690-foot project, abandoned August 4, 1968.

Drill site is 660 feet from the north and west line of section 28, block 7, H&TC survey.

Hexagon Oil & Gas Inc., Fort Worth, has scheduled an 8,500-foot wildcat in Sterling County, five miles northwest of Sterling City.

The No. 1-A McReed, a replacement for its No. 1 McReed, is located 660 feet from the north, and 2,040 feet from the west line of section 14, block 14, SPRR survey.

The No. 1 McReed lost hole at 949 feet. The rig will be moved 60 feet to the east of the original site.

Drill site is one mile northeast of the WEST-TEX Drilling No. 1 Reed Estate, abandoned Nov. 25, 1976 at 8,420 feet.

RUNNELS WILDCATS

Cambrian Oil Inc., Odessa, will drill

two 5,400-foot wildcats, approximately 5 1/2 miles southwest of Crews.

The No. 1 "Loretta" is located 2,227 feet from the south, and west line of the Thomas R. Webb No. 357, abstract 504, survey.

The No. 1 "Hattie" is located 5,445 feet from the south line of the John J. McKean No. 534 and 16 feet from the west line of the W.J. Smith No. 60 1/2, abstract 1138 survey.

NOLAN DISCOVERY

R.L. Foree, Dallas, has finalized the No. 1 J.P. Aycock as a Nolan County Caddo oil discovery, 1 1/4 miles southwest of the current four-well Faver (6100) field.

The well flowed 80 barrels of 42 gravity oil, no water, through a 16/64 inch choke and perforations at 6,066 to 6,076 feet.

It was drilled to 6,177 feet with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,151 feet.

Location is 1,800 feet from the north, and 1,850 feet from the east line of section 58, block 1, T&P survey.

FISHER SEARCHER

R.L. Foree, Dallas, will drill the No. 1 E.M. O'Donald, a 4,000-foot wildcat in Fisher County, two miles north of Capita.

Location is 1,980 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the east line of section 205, block 3, H&TC survey.

Consumer group says natural gas price increases could exceed the tax cuts

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans will see their new tax cuts eaten up by increased costs of natural gas if President Reagan decides to speed up decontrol, a consumer group charged Sunday.

A four-member family with an annual income of $20,000 will pay $1,063 less on taxes in the next three years but would spend $1,080 in increased natural gas bills under the decontrol plan recommended to Reagan, Energy Action said in its report.

"If the president who promised a new prosperity and economic recovery accomplishes natural gas decontrol, most Americans will face a new poverty and economic regression," charged Edwin Rothschild, director of Energy Action.

Reagan is currently studying a recommendation from his Cabinet advisers on energy that would accelerate decontrol over the next three years, ending all controls on Jan. 1, 1985.

Under the 1978 National Gas Policy Act, controls on gas discovered after 1976 are gradually being lifted and will be totally removed by 1985. However, this so-called "new gas" represents only about 50 percent of supplies. Price controls on the other 50 percent will remain.

The Reagan administration, concerned that natural gas now sells below the price of an equivalent amount of oil, is pushing to speed up decontrol to spur increased production and conservation.

The Energy Action study computed the higher costs various income levels will pay under the proposed decontrol plan and compared them to the tax cuts under Reagan's tax measure.

The study said low income families would be particularly hard hit. A family of four with an income of $10,000 annually will pay $920 more for natural gas in the next three years while receiving only $213 in tax cuts.

By comparison, Energy Action said Americans making $100,000 annually will pay $1,350 in increased natural gas bills while receiving $12,607 in tax cuts.

Natural gas is the country's most popular heating fuel — heating 55 percent of U.S. homes and apartments. But the study said even homeowners who don't heat with natural gas will feel the impact in higher costs for products made with gas.

It estimated that a family of four earning $20,000 will pay $440 in indirect costs from decontrol in 1982 in addition to the $310 extra it will pay if it heats with gas.

Studies done by the administration examining the impact accelerated decontrol would have predict much smaller natural gas price increases than those used as the basis of the Energy Action study.

One administrator review estimates that in 1984 gas will be selling at the well head for $4.79 for 1,000 cubic feet. Energy Action, however, forecasts a well head price of $7.25.

Offshore drilling — the on-again, off-again job

By MARGERY EAGAN
Hearst Feature Service

GEORGES BANK — Andrew Miley, 37, has been married twice already. In February, he's trying again. But this time Miley hopes his former high school sweetheart will understand the on-again, off-again lifestyle his business demands.

Miley spends two weeks at home in Bogalusa, La. The next two weeks he spends in the Atlantic Ocean, 130 miles southeast of Cape Cod, Mass., operating a crane on the Exxon Oil Co.'s exploratory oil rig, the Alaskan Star. It has been drilling since July 24.

"In the oil business, you can get a big diamond ring, a big fancy watch and an expensive divorce," said Loren Meek, 58, a senior drilling superintendent whose marriage has managed to survive.

Indeed, everything about this mammoth rig, one of two now drilling for oil above the Georges Bank fishing grounds, is big and expensive.

The $56 million Alaskan Star looks like some elaborate sea station out of a James Bond movie as it operates at a daily cost of $100,000 including the salaries of its 65 crew members, all men.

As tall as a 30-story building, longer than a football field and nearly as wide, the semisubmersible rig floats on 610-foot-long legs. It can accommodate 103 crew members, has its own sewage treatment plant and produces enough electricity to supply a town of 10,000.

Still, in rough seas the rig will pitch enough to make the queasy seasick. In eight-foot seas, the Star barely sways. But the rumbling vibrations of its pumps and engines shook floors and rocked free-standing furniture.

"We don't even notice it," said Bob McGlamery, in charge of rig operations for Exxon. "Back on land is when it seems like something's wrong."

Exxon and Shell Oil Co., which operates the other exploratory rig on Georges Bank, hope to find enough oil — 50 to 100 million barrels or more — to return with production rigs and begin pumping.

So far, the Star has drilled 8400 feet below the sea bottom which lies 227 feet below the rig. Drilling at 13-to-15 feet an hour, Exxon plans to reach 15,000 feet by mid-October. But until at least 12,000 feet, they won't know whether any oil is beneath them.

Meanwhile, life on board is routine. Crew members work 12-hour shifts, noon-to-midnight, midnight-to-noon. When their two-week stints are up, a helicopter transports them to Hyannis, Mass. Then they are flown for free back home.

"There's really no time to get bored," said Meek, who tells of intense ping-pong, chess and darts matches in on board recreation rooms. Liquor is not allowed. But crewmembers watch color TV and 10 new movies a week, from "Superman II" to "Alien" and a Clint Eastwood film festival.

"We saw the (Sugar Ray) Leonard and (Roberto) Duran fight two days after it happened," said Miley. Mail and newspapers arrive via helicopter. There's a phone hookup. Crew members can work out with weights and punching bags and they're hoping for a sauna.

Why work on a rig? Money and benefits, crew members said. A roustabout, who does maintenance work and is the low man on the rig, starts at $6.40 an hour. Miley makes $29,000 a year.

Houston firm fined for radiation slip up in Oklahoma City

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A Houston company may appeal a Nuclear Regulatory Commission recommendation that its Houston subsidiary be fined $6,000 for the loss of a cylinder containing a radioactive substance from a trailer being towed from Oklahoma City to Texas.

Mustang Services Company was cited by the NRC on three separate regulation violations, commission officials said. The company maintains plant operations in Oklahoma City.

James Coulter, president of the firm, said lawyers representing Mustang Fuel Corp. in Oklahoma City, the parent company of Mustang Services, are reviewing the NRC notice. "They're looking it over," he said. "We got it late Thursday afternoon and they haven't made any decision yet. We have 30 days to respond."

The NRC has allowed the company 30 days to protest the fine.

Commission officials say the company sold a trailer containing "1.5 Curie cesium-137 sealed source on or about June 18, 1981," to a firm not licensed to handle radioactive materials.

Clyde E. Wisner, a spokesman for the commission's office in Arlington, Texas, said the lost radioactive material "was a very small quantity — about the size of a large coin."

According to the commission's report, the radioactive source was inadvertently removed from its shielding while it was being moved from the trailer to another Mustang vehicle in Oklahoma City.

Unknown to company workers, the material was lost in the trailer during the transfer, the report says. It says a Mustang employee not authorized to handle the radioactive source was responsible for the mistake.

Mustang officials realized their loss several days later and reported it to the regulatory commission, the report says.

But in the meantime, the report says, the trailer was moved from Oklahoma City to Houston. On the way, the radioactive material allegedly fell out of the trailer and onto a bridge in Lewisville, Texas, the report says.

State radiation personnel found it on the bridge. Wisner said he wasn't sure how long it was there before it was removed, but said he thought it was about "24 hours, a day." He said the federal agency's investigation of the incident will continue.

The company was fined for allegedly allowing the unlicensed employee in Oklahoma City to make the transfer and for failing to perform a radiation survey during the operation.

When the powers that be become the powers that were

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Behind the big changes a new president brings are thousands of tiny twists in government policy and practice.

This is a story of one such twist involving a $250,000 drop in the bucket of federal expenditure, some frustration for the Daughters of the American Revolution, and what thousands of students across the country are or are not told about nuclear and solar energy.

It involves a federally funded multimedia show completed in spring as the Reagan administration was taking the reins of government. The program was intended to foster energy conservation by students and provided little in the way of controversy in its presentation of energy problems.

Months later, however, it has just reached the end of the bureaucracy on the way to intended showings at high school and junior high assemblies.

In the process, the show has twice been altered to reflect President Reagan's energy views instead of former President Carter's. It was edited and approved by a former Carter administration official, put on hold after the official lost her position, then re-edited and re-approved.

All the editing resulted in playing up nuclear energy, making solar technology seem more a future solution than a present one, and reducing the proportions of the "energy crisis" that Carter had made a major part of his administration.

We "will run out" of oil, a pre-Reagan script says. "We can run out," a later version reads.

Photovoltaics — the use of solar collectors — "will change sunlight into electricity," the first version says. "Collectors like these can heat our hot water and living spaces under the right conditions," says the later version.

The draft script says, "Nuclear energy is a controversial issue and, real or imagined, there's public concern about its dangers." The rewrite drops the reference to "dangers," and says instead, "The challenge of atomic energy can and will be met."

For the DAR, the delays that came with the changes were "somewhat frustrating," according to Jane Gray Sowell, who heads the group's Energy Ethics Committee.

The conservative organization had already shown a "final" version of the show to its members in April and gotten an enthusiastic response. It was ready to have its more than 3,000 local chapters convince local businesses to put up $440 for each showing at a school.

At that point changes to reflect Reagan's views had already been ordered by Tina Hobson, the old administration's head of the consumer affairs office in the Energy Department.

Then Ms. Hobson lost that position — an expected development in a new administration, but she had also angered Reagan officials by publicly questioning department practices — and a hold was put on the DAR project and at least one other.
