What About 1932?

With the new year approaching, everyone is wondering what it will bring in improved business conditions. Most competent observers are pointing out that good business is not something which can return in uniformity. Normalcy is returning to some sections before others, and in some industries ahead of other lines of work.

Alertness Counts

This is a natural phenomenon. Some industries are more aggressive than others. They will be the first to reflect returning stability. Moreover, the same laws apply to individual firms. The alert business men will get the trade and will prosper as perhaps never before.

Disastrous

Sometimes business men in a related or identical retail trade get the idea that they could drastically reduce or abolish their advertising. They talk of doing away with competition between themselves. This has been tried in a number of lines of retailing and in a number of large and small cities. The results were disastrous. A survey recently completed, says Alfred T. Falk of New York, shows that business fell well below the average in 34 cities studied where advertising was restricted. Use of other media, such as billboards and radio, failed to halt the declines. Of 102 large companies, those which increased their advertising made a 58 per cent better profit than those which decreased it.

Controlling Desires

What many people fail to realize is that there is competition between commodities as well as firms. People buy in accordance with their desires. Their wants are controlled by advertising to a surprising extent. Today, every member of a family contributes his or her particular desire, cultivated and aroused by advertising. Shall mother buy that new coat, or shall she contribute its cost as her share in buying a new car? Shall she insist on a new automatic refrigerator, or should she and pa pool their resources and have the house re-finished? Son chimes in with the complaint that the family must buy a radio so he and his set may dance; daughter asserts that she must have much better clothing to stay in her crowd with her head up.

Competing Products

Many a business has hit the rocks because of no inherent trouble, but because of the competition of well advertised products which catch the people's fancy

—AND A SMILE

NEW YORK (AP)—Even the office boy can afford a vacation in Paris before long. It cost Clarence Chamberlin, burning furnace oil in his Diesel powered plane, just $4 here from Detroit. He said six passengers could have made it for 65 cents apiece and that Paris would be a $4 trip in the near future.

SACRIFICE OF MILLION LIVES NOT UNLIKELY

BUT HIS EFFORTS FOR PEACEFUL LIBERTY CONTINUE

ENEMIES IN NEAR RIOT

SERIOUS DISORDERS ARE REPORTED OVER INDIA

BOMBAY, India, Dec. 28. (AP) — Mahatma Gandhi, in his first speech after his return from London, told a crowd of 50,000 white-capped nationalists in an open field today he would not flinch from sacrificing the lives of a million people as the price of India's liberty.

In the last fight members of the nationalist congress had to face lathis (staves), he said, but the next time they may have to face bullets.

"If the fight is inevitable I will expect every son and daughter of Mother India to contribute his mite," he said. "However, I will not abandon attempts to save the nation from a fiery ordeal. If, on the other hand, there is no single ray of hope I shall not hesitate to call upon you to bear any amount of suffering."

Huge Crowd Waits

BOMBAY, Dec. 28. (AP)—Blood ran as Mahatma Gandhi arrived home in India today after his four months absence at the round table conference in London.

Twelve persons were injured in a clash at the pier where a huge crowd awaited his landing from the S. S. Pilsna. About 1,000 "untouchables," carrying black flags had gathered for an anti-Gandhi demonstration and they tried to rush the pier.

Delegates of the national congress caught the rush of the mob. Police, with the assistance of the congress adherents, finally dispersed the crowd. The injured included the captain of the Bombay volunteer organization and the secretary of the local organization of the national congress.

The Mahatma also heard news of serious riots in other parts of India, which have taken 12 lives in the last two days. At Lahore four Hindus and four Moslems were injured today and taken to hospitals. The city was alarmed and a curfew order was issued, compelling all citizens to remain indoors between 8 p. m. and 7 a. m.

B.C.D. to Choose Officers Tuesday

Election of officers for the 1932 Board of City Development will take place at a meeting of the board at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. Six new members will be received and six old members will automatically retire after a three-year service.

The new president will select his committee chairmen so that they can name their members and start work immediately after the new year.

The board has just completed a busy year under the leadership of Roy McMillen, retiring president.

Texas Birthday Being Planned

AUSTIN, Dec. 28. (AP)—An initial conference preparatory to planning a suitable 100th birthday party for Texas in celebration of the state's centennial in 1936 was held here today.

The legislature authorized Gov. R. S. Sterling, Lieut. Gov. Edgar Witt and Speaker of the House Fred data and study plans, submitting Minor to appoint a group to gather recommendations to the legislature in January, 1933.

MANY WORK LITTLE IN BIG PRIZE DRIVE

Plenty of Time Is Left for Energetic Person to Enter and Win.

Very little progress has been made by many contestants to date in the Pampa Daily NEWS' big $5,000 automobile and prize campaign. Only about a half dozen or so of those entered are putting forth any effort in securing subscriptions, most of them being content to accept half-hearted 'promises. In fact about all the average contestant has received up to now are conversation and promises, which are fine, but now how about new and renewal subscriptions?

The miserable weather in the beginning and the holiday rush has kept activity down to almost a minimum; however, the hustle and the bustle of Christmas is over, and since the weather man, in a conference with the campaign manager, promises perfect vote-gathering weather for a while at least, the manager is confident that each contestant will be energetic enough and wise enough to take advantage of the sunny days while we have them.

Really Big Prizes

It is time now that men and women of Gray county and surrounding towns and communities wake up and realize that opportunities like sharing in The NEWS' big gift-giving contest come but once in a life time. Don't allow its knocking to go unanswered. The Buick, the Chevrolet and the coveted air trip to California cost real money, and it is time some one was realizing the value of these wonderful prizes and turning in subscriptions. The small number of participants in district 2 would make the casual reader think that the major prizes were Both were shot with a revolver. Officers said a revolver was in Medford's hand when he was found wounded in the left lung.

Machine Problem Prompts Demand For Federal Board

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. (AP)— A federal labor board to devise plans for absorbing workers displaced by machines or by other industrial changes was recommended today to a gathering of students of political, economic and social affairs.

Sumner H. Slichter, Harvard professor of business economics, made the suggestion in a speech before the American Association for Labor Legislation, one of 11 societies allied with the American Economic association. They opened a four-day session today.

LEVEE BREAKS SUDDENLY AND FLOODS TOWN

MISSISSIPPI TOWN HAS AID OF CONVICT LABOR

PEOPLE FLEE IN HASTE

SMALL RIVER IS RISING AT RATE OF SEVEN INCHES DAILY

CLARKSDALE, Miss., Dec. 28. (AP)—Flood waters from the Tallahatchie river today burst suddenly through the northside protection levee at Glendora, small Tallahatchie county town, sending six feet of water into the business street and causing hurried flight to the high embankment of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad which protects the residential section of the town.

Men, women and children fled to the high railroad tracks to save their lives as the levee crumbled and blew out, sending its flow into the town that has fought desperately for 10 days against the rising waters.

Search for Victims

Flood workers believed no lives were lost but scores of motorboats and skiffs were commandeered from nearby Webb and Sumner to course the newly-flooded territory in search of victims.

The water was still rising about Glendora at the rate of about seven inches every 24 hours but the breaking of the levees will ease the pressure on the dikes protecting Webb, Sumner, and the Cassiday bayou stretches.

A hundred extra convicts were rushed to Glendora just after the break to fight the flood, joining hands with every able bodied man in town. The water through the crevasse was flowing south in a raging stream inundating new ground.

Stores Flooded.

The water was rising rapidly in the business street of Glendora, flooding every store and dwelling on that side of the town.

Glendora merchants had moved their goods out of the stores and its residents were ready to take refuge on the high rail embankment if necessary.

Mother of Local Man Succumbs

Mrs. Ellen Sanders of Wheeler, mother of P. O. Sanders of this city, was buried at Wheeler cemetery Saturday. Mrs. Sanders passed away Christmas morning following an illness which had lasted several years. She is survived by one other son, Dan of Canyon.

Mrs. Sanders had been a resident of the Panhandle practically all her life.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanders returned today from Wheeler.

Amarillo Stores Are Burglarized

AMARILLO, Dec. 28. (AP)—Burglars last night obtained between $300 and $400 from the safe of a downtown drug store here.

Entrance was gained by prying open the front door.

Burglars also entered an electric company's store in the heart of the business district, but the loot consisted of only $1 in cash and an electric clock.

PRAISE WILSON ON BIRTHDAY

Wartime President Should Be Better Remembered, Pampans Believe.

Pampans looked at their calendars this morning and remembered that today is the birthday of Woodrow Wilson, war-time president of the United States. However, not many Pampans remembered. Only the ardent admirers of the former president apparently had taken the time to learn the date of his birth, and they felt that something should be done about observing his birthday.

The Rev. C. A. Long, pastor of the First Methodist church, felt assured that in time Wilson's birthday will be observed as are Lincoln's and Washington's. He remembered that on every anniversary of Wilson's birth since his death in 1924, the crowds who came from all over the United States to pay respects to his memory in the cathedral in Washington, have grown larger.

Rev. Long believes that a proclamation by the governor asking the people to pay respect to Wilson's memory would be fitting.

Dr. R. A. Webb, district committeeman of the American Legion, said he favored some resolution or proclamation that would direct the people's attention to the greatness of the former president who was also commander-in-chief of the American army during the world war.

John B. Hessey, county superintendent, believes that Wilson's birthday should be observed in some appropriate way—not by declaring a holiday, but by proclamation, memorial services, and the displaying of flags.

Woodrow Wilson was born Dec. 28, 1856, in Georgia. He died Feb. 2, 1924.

CAMPER HELD AS SUSPECT IN MYSTERY CASE

McELREATH BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN BEATEN AND DROWNED

SECOND VICTIM HUNTED

SHERIFF IN PERSONAL INVESTIGATION OF AFFAIR

ANAHUAC, Dec. 28. (AP)—A camper was held in the Mont Belvieu jail today for questioning in connection with the investigation into the death of J. L. McElrath of Houston, whose body was found yesterday off Umbrella Point in Trinity bay.

An officer in the sheriff's department here said no charge had been filed and he could not say yet what circumstances, if any, tended to connect the camper with McElrath's death.

"We don't know much about this fellow (the suspect), except that he is a camper," the officer added.

Mont Belvieu is in this county.

Dr. William Marshall of Baytown, who conducted an autopsy, said McElrath had drowned, but some investigating officers believed there was a possibility he had been beaten beforehand.

McElrath and F. C. Bonham set out from Houston on a hunting trip Dec. 10 and had been missing since. The search for Bonham's body was continued today.

Sheriff W. R. Sherman of Chambers county left his headquarters here for Mont Belvieu where he said he personally would question the man being held there.

"From what I can find out, I think there may have been foul play," he said. "I am going to get to the bottom of this before I am through."

Oil Production in Another Decrease

Panhandle oil production showed another decrease last week with Hutchinson and Moore counties leading the drop. Gray county's production increased due to the completion of two wells the previous week and the cleaning out of two other producers.

Gray county showed two completions the latter part of the week. The Kewanee Oil and Gas company No. 5 Smith in section 149, block 3, I&GN survey, was drilled to a total depth of 3,273 feet. The pay from 3,195 to 3,220 feet was shot with 210 quarts and it responded with 363 barrels initial on the swab.

TheParton & Holt No. 1 Morse in section 6, block 28, H&GN survey, was drilled to a total depth of 2,397 feet and completed for 85 barrels initial from the pay at 2,387 to 2,397 feet.

The daily average for the district by county as compared to that of the week previous was as follows:

County—	No. Wells	Last Week	Prev. Week

Total 51,751; decrease 828; No. wells 1,953.

STRONG BODY OF TROOPS ON MARCH TODAY

CAVALRY OPENING WAY WITH FIGHTING CONTINUOUS

CHINCHOW MAY BE GOAL

SECRECY MAINTAINED AS CONQUEST IS EXTENDED

By GLENN BABB

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Dec. 28. (AP)—A strong Japanese force moved up from Yingkow along a branch of the Peiping-Mukden railway toward Kowpangtze today to capture the town of Tawa after blasting a Chinese armored train out of the way with bombs from the air.

They had to fight as they went, cavalry opening the way through scattered forces of Chinese irregulars so the infantry could follow through and mop up.

There was a skirmish at Sanchiatez and another at Tsaipaochan before the main body got through to Tawa where planes had preceded it. The Chinese were loosely organized but they provided stubborn resistance at all points.

Officially the movement westward from Yingkow was kept secret but there was a possibility it might develop into the long-expected drive against Chinchow itself.

"Japan wouldn't accept Manchuria, even as a gift," Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai said today in an interview that followed complaints of American business interests that Japan is putting foreigners at a disadvantage in the territory.

NANKING, China, Dec. 28. (AP)—Lin Sen, 67-year-old president of the legislative Yuan, was elected chairman of the Chinese National government today.

Another "Missing Link" Is Found

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 28. (AP)—Discovery of a true missing link, an animal with the "foundations of the human face," was described to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today by Professor William Patten of Dartmouth college.

The link is a tiny, five-inch long skeleton, found in rocks of the Baltic sea. It is between 500,000,000 and 1,000,000,000 years old and has the typical markings of a certain early prenatal development of a human being.

SLAYER WIDELY SOUGHT

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 28. (AP)—Search for the slayer of Edmund G. Hines, aged grocer, was extended throughout the country today after the reported verbal confession of Conrad Hansen, 20, of this city, to participation in the murder several weeks ago. The man was shot when he resisted a holdup.

Accounts May Be Obtained Early

In other years we have had requests for December statements two or three days early because of closing books for the year. Some firms have requested these statements early so that prompt payment may be made and no bills payable carried over into the new year.

A telephone call or request to any of our staff will enable any firm to obtain its statement promptly.

MANY STAMPLESS GREETINGS IN POSTOFFICE FOR PAMPA CITIZENS

Despite all warnings issued by the Pampa postoffice, about 100 persons will have to pay the postage on Christmas greeting cards other people mailed them. If they don't pay the postage they won't get the cards.

This year as in the past, many card senders neglected to stamp their cards and put no return addresses on them. All the postoffice could do was notify the persons addressed that the cards were being held for postage.

In the matter of mailing packages, this Christmas was better than last. Only one unaddressed package was received. There were more parcels mailed last Christmas than in 1931, but the greeting cards of this season out-numbered those of the last Yuletide.

They'll Thank You Later!

Maybe your children will grumble, growl and make a big fuss if they're made to practice their music lessons now—but in later years they'll thank you for your foresight.

A musical education is valuable in many ways. Give your children the opportunity and make them take it. Good used musical instruments for practice can be purchased through the Want Ads of The Daily NEWS and the Want Ads will help you find a competent teacher, too.

and take their dollars. Collapse of a market does not necessarily mean inability to buy, but may simply show that the public's fancy and buying interest have been lost. That is why smart national advertisers do not cease their campaigns when they have broken all sales records and seem well established in the nation's good will.

Way to Success

The magic of advertising can create a demand (market) for a new product in just a few months. Without advertising, years would be required to get intensive sales of new products and new inventions. The Pampan is using a new form of shaving preparation. It is a cream, and oldtime lathering is not necessary. Advertisements led this writer to try the innovation. Barbasol, Molle, Burmashave — these are relatively new names, and the advertisers hope they will replace such standbys as Colgates, Palmolive, Ingrum's, and the rest. It is not enough to make a good shaving cream — the manufacturer must advertise to make the consumers DESIRE it.

Quality vs. Price

There is competition between quality and price in similar articles. One merchant may sell cheap clothing and suggest that you buy these garments and save enough money to enjoy more movies, more jewelry, or other luxuries. It serves his purpose if customers buy this cheaper merchandise. But the quality merchant has a different problem. He must teach —through advertising —the economy of quality goods, the mental satisfaction, the social prestige involved.

Control of Ideas

Moreover, there is competition in ideas. Shall the family buy that refrigerator, that new home, or send daughter to college — or shall they obey the banker's advice to keep a safe margin of funds in the bank, or in bonds? Should the family buyer insist on paying cash, or should he take advantage of installment payments? Theories control dollars.

Advertising Is Educational

Advertising during this depression is doing more than any other force to lessen hoarding, to put dollars in circulation, to set factory wheels turning, to prevent unemployment. When advertising stops, buying slows down. Poor business usually is, in a depression, as much a matter of lack of DESIRE to buy as to lack of ABILITY.

Ads "Made" in Pampa

America's mints are busy. Huge sums are being placed in circulation. But they don't stay in the channels of commerce. Never before has this nation had so much hoarded wealth. Advertising—creating of a desire to turn these tokens into goods — can have a tremendous part in restoring normalcy. And to carry the analysis to its final conclusion, may we add that the main cost of advertising to the newspaper is labor. The money spent with The NEWS for advertising is immediately turned back to Pampa business. WE DO NOT SHIP IN THE STUFF OF WHICH ADVERTISING IS MADE!

We democrats hope the depression will be over before we go into office, or at least well on its way . . . And that the next one will wait a decade or two.

THREE KINDS of LOVE

BY KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

© 1931, by Doubleday, Doran and Co

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Anne Cecily and Mary-Frances Fenwick live with their grandparents, once wealthy, now so impoverished that Anne's and Cecily's earnings support the household. The sisters have been orphaned since childhood. The grandparents are known respectively as "Rosalie" and "Grand" and they insist on keeping up pretenses of their former wealth. Anne, 28, and Cecily, 22, do secretarial work and Mary-Frances, 15, is still in school. All the girls are attractive. When the story opens Anne has been engaged to Philip Ecroyd, young lawyer, for eight years. They can not marry because Anne knows her sisters and grandparents depend upon her to manage their home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II

For some pesky reason the plague-taken pulleys that were to manipulate the wings would not work, always, with the required degree of exactitude. It did not matter greatly, because their perversity gave Grand an opportunity to get to work in earnest on his collapsible fire escape, and this carried straight on and naturally to something new in elevators—a space-saving device which no one, perhaps not even Grand, entirely understood.

Sectional doors came next. The principle was involved, but the point was that two or three inches of a door could be opened, while the remainder of the door stood firmly closed. Failure of the doors was tragedy, for with them Grand wearied of things folding and collapsible, and in the spring of the year 1929 turned his attention to radio development. The electric bills mounted high, and the trifles that Grand needed for his experiments were ruinously priced.

It was in May, 1929—odd of Ann to remember the date—that Phil told her for the first time, flatly and with no softening diminutive that she was a fool.

"You," he elaborated, "pretend to despise your grandparents' sentimentality. You are as sentimental as they are, every bit, both you and Cecily are."

Ann said, "Why, Phil Ecroyd, we are not! And, anyway, Ann said, but more weakly. "Cissy and I do have to remember that they have given us a home all these years."

Philip, a handsome dignified young lawyer by now—struggling might be added, except that it seems redundant merely shrugged his shoulders and said, "Oh, yeah?" as it was being said in 1929.

Ann argued, "But what can we do when he asks for things?"

"Do? Simply tell the old gentleman that you cannot afford these things. Refuse to buy any more of them. Get him a stick to whittle. Put your foot down. Wouldn't that be more sensible?"

Ann said, "Yes, dear," as it has ben said by placatory women since the year one. Though, of course, she did not put her foot down.

It was in July 1929—odd of Cecily to remember the date, but it was she who went on the first errand—that the two elder Fenwick girls discovered pawnshops and began to eat, according to Cecily, mother's and father's wedding presents.

They ate the little hand-carved chest that the professor of Romance languages had bought in Genoa; they ate the clear ringing brass bowl that mother's girl friend had sent from Ceylon. They ate Grandma Tamasie's silver tea service (yes, one of the Tamasies, but she and Grandpa had both died long before Ann was born), and quantities of flat silver. Cut glass and hand-painted china proved inedible. For Thanksgiving they had father's hand-made trout rod, and his set of ivory chessmen went for Christmas.

Three days after Christmas Grand took to his bed with a bad attack of quinsy and arose from it early in February pessimistic as to the future for radios and deeply interested in the improvement of kettles used to generate steam in sick-rooms.

The wedding presents were pawned with no hope of redemption. But gadget things for steam kettles were inexpensive(and the Very-Fancy Educational Fund, severely threatened, had not been touched. The relief was so great that this time, when Cecily said to Ann—or perhaps it was Ann who said it to Cecily this time—"Grand and Rosalie don't know—they still think they are supporting the family," smiles could be exchanged about it.

The remark was made in the upstairs hall, directly after a conversation with Grand in which he had said that it had occurred to him that his illness, the holidays, one thing and another, might have been rather a drain on the girls' pocket money. Rosalie had intimated something of the sort. He intended, of course, to repay them. His granddaughters—Heaven bless and keep them—should not be out of pocket on his account. So, if they would make an itemized record of their expenditures, he would attend to it, and shortly. No—No! No quibbling now. Payment should be arranged, payment in full, and very soon.

As the girls' heels clicked down the uncarpeted front stairs (the carpet had been sold to a junk man for 65 cents three years ago) Ann said "They must know. But they don't realize it, or face it, or something. Phil thinks we should make them understand."

"What earthly use?" asked Cecily. "It wouldn't change anything. It might worry them, but it wouldn't help us."

"Phil says—"

Cecily interrupted. Philip as an oracle had a maddening habit of being right. "Ann, angel," she said, "don't fall into the habit of quoting Phil all the time. Haven't you noticed that the wives who everlastingly quote their husbands are never quoted themselves by same husbands?"

"I'm not a wife," Ann said in a chilly way she had developed recently.

Cecily giggled. Ann did not. "It sounds," explained Cecily, "so sort of—well, immoral, said like that. Phil's not a husband would sound much better."

"Wait until you are in love," said Ann, "and engaged, and you won't think it is so funny—not being able to be married."

It was impossible for Cecily to

PAMPA SOCIETY AT REST AFTER BUSY SEASON

FEMININE FANCIES

By Hollyce Sellers Hinkle

Too bad the United States cannot have a woman president during 1932, for that year—leap year—is to be one of real accomplishments for the feminine sex. Advance notices already have been given to that effect. Before last week no woman was ever appointed by a United States president to such an important task as to represent the nation at the Geneva peace conference. But that honor has gone to Miss Mary Emma Woolley of South Hadley, Mass. Hardly a day passes that we do not read of appointment or election of women to important offices or of their announcement as candidates. By the close of 1932, the holding by women of nationally important positions may have ceased to be a novelty.

Some men have said that the entrance of women into business has destroyed men's respect for women, but what man does not respect these few women who have tried and succeeded in being more than a clinging vine?

And for the women who expect other women to remain as clinging vines—maybe they are just a bit lazy. Not that it is necessary for all women to be in business. Some can be of greater service by not being gainfully employed. Nevertheless, those who find their calling in the realm of business or profession should not be condemned for their efforts.

Is it possible that a woman's entrance into business and other activities destroys a man's ego as we are told by some? If so, ego based on the superiority of either sex is false and the sooner it is destroyed the better. Ego is a fine thing, but let it be based on facts, not pretense.

And are women's activities causing men to lose their galantry? Here is what Dorothy Dix says about it:

"Possibly men may not show women as many gallant attentions as they used to, but they show them a lot more justice. No man now robs his wife of her dowry on her wedding day. No man expects his wife to be his humble bond woman and do just as he says and take just what he chooses to give her. Most men look upon their wives now as partners, entitled to an equal share in the profits and perquisites of matrimony.

"That is the new gallantry. And if you ask the women they will tell you that it draws down a lot better percentage than the old."

Panama Invokes Higher Tariffs

PANAMA CITY, Dec. 28. (AP)—A new protective tariff schedule, carrying heavy duties against importations of agricultural and other products, including a tax of $50 a head and 15 per cent ad valorem against beef cattle, is slated to become effective April 1.

The decree stated the measure is intended to "decrease as far as possible the harmful effects of the economic crisis," and added that "it is necessary to issue measures tending to develop national industries, while preventing the emigration of capital" and to provide work for large numbers of unemployed.

Rare Volumes in Vatican Protected

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 28. (AP)—Heavy rain has been beating down on the ruins of the Vatican library wing which collapsed last week, but it has done no damage to the rare books and manuscripts buried in the wreckage.

Saturday night workmen completed a two-story scaffolding and stretched a tarpaulin over the framework. When the scaffolding is raised another story reconstruction will begin.

Tariff Will Be Democratic Topic

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. (AP) — Taxes and tariff will be discussed by the democratic congressional policy committee early next week.

Speaker Garner said the session would not be limited to a discussion of revenue raising and tariff but that the democrats desired to inform the people as soon as possible what tax increases they would have to pay.

Hearing on the revenue legislation, he said, would get under way before the house ways and means committee in January and probably would be completed by Feb. 1. The democrats hope to get the tax bill to the senate not later than March 1.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 28. (AP)—An 18-year-old Fort Worth, Texas, school girl, Florine McKinney, has found her pot of gold at the end of the trail of her decrepit automobile. A Hollywood studio has given her a contract calling for $750 weekly salary, according to the records of superior court, where official approval of the contract was made because Miss McKinney is a minor.

ATTENDANCE AT CHURCH SCHOOL BELOW NORMAL

FEW PARTIES SLATED FOR CELEBRATION OF NEW YEAR

After scores of holiday trips, big turkey dinners, last minute shopping tours, and many parties and church entertainments, Pampa society is at rest this week. There has been but little enthusiasm shown even in arrangements for New Year celebrations.

The fact that many persons are still away from the city accounts in part for the decrease in Sunday school attendance yesterday morning, in spite of the warm, fair weather. Attendance yesterday, followed by the attendance on the previous Sunday, has been announced as follows: First Baptist, 433, 488; First Christian, 259, 242; Methodist, 370, 478; Presbyterian, 101, 102; Episcopalian, 15, 20; Central Baptist, 121, 83.

Among gatherings for the week will be a 7 o'clock uspper this evening for the Presbyterian men's club It will be served by women of the auxiliary. A program will be given and a business session held.

Circles of the First Baptist church are meeting this afternoon various homes.

For Wednesday, the following meetings have been slated:

The Mooseheart Legion will meet at 7:30 o'clock. Report of the auditing committee will be heard.

O. D. O. club will meet at 2 o'clock with Mrs. L. G. Rittenhouse.

American Association of University Women and the College club will entertain with a dance from 9 to 12 o'clock at the Schneider hotel. Joe Norman's orchestra will furnish the music.

Central Baptist W. M. S. will meet at 2 o'clock for mission study. Mrs. S. L. Anderson will teach the lesson

Central Baptist choir rehearsal will be held at 8:30 o'clock under the direction of L. W. Hardcastle.

The Queen of Clubs is making elaborate plans for a watch party to be held Thursday evening in the home of Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Goldston. Husbands will be special guests for the occasion. A turkey dinner will be served and games of bridge will be played.

Members and husbands of the Dutch Bridge club also will have a watch party. The event will be held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Haggard. The Linger Longer club will be entertained on the same day in the home of Mrs. O. K. Gaylor.

Miss 1932 Faces Severe Ordinance

CHICAGO, Dec. 28. (AP)—Miss 1932 is going to look like Miss 1910 on Chicago beaches this coming year, unless the city council does something about it.

That would mean bloomers, quarter sleeves, black wool stockings, and plenty of ruffles.

Finding that it had repealed all laws governing bathing costumes, due to a parliamentary mixup, the council restored the ordinance of 1910 until it again finds time to take up the question. This will probably be done next Friday.

RICH WRAP

The long evening wrap of white transparent velvet shown above is the latest style feature of a winter that is to be given over almost entirely to velvets. The modified bishop sleeve, the softly gracious lines of the cloak and the richness of the material itself give a delightful background for the great collar of kolinsky.

Big Relief Need Is Pointed Out

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. (AP)—An estimate that the nation will need to spend between $600,000,000 and $700,000,000 next year to care for its unemployed was made today before a senate committee.

All resources, public and private, are needed to meet the relief problem.

The chief burden must be borne out of public funds—city, county, state and probably federal.

Christmas Spirit Left With Him

CHICAGO, Dec. 28. (AP)—When Edward Thompson left the Joseph Beron home, police say, the Christmas spirit went with him.

As an old friend, he had been invited to the Beron home for Christmas dinner, but as his shirt was somewhat soiled, Mrs. Beron gave him another—an old one that belonged to her husband. The Berons and their guest enjoyed the dinner and Mr. Thompson departed. Mr. Beron was pleased.

"And just to think," he said to his wife. "We still have $155 saved up. It was pretty hard to lay aside $5 a week. By the way, I kept the money in the pocket of the shirt you gave Ed Thompson. Guess you took it out, didn't you?"

"No" replied Mrs. Beron, "I didn't."

When the police found Thompson he had a new shirt, a new hat, a new suit, and $40 of the money left.

"A merry, merry Christmas," he said as they locked a cell door behind him.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The lesson-sermon subject was "Christian Science" in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Dec. 27.

Isaiah 40:5 furnished the golden text: "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

The lesson-sermon included the following passages from the Bible (John 14:15,16): "If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever."

The service also embraced citations from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, among them being the following from page 271:

"Christ's Christianity is the chain of scientific being re-appearing in all ages, maintaining its obvious correspondence with the Scriptures and uniting all periods in the design of God. . . . Our Master said, 'But the Comforter . . . shall teach you all things.' When the Science of Christianity appears, it will lead you into all truth."

Shortly after the birth of the boy, the father and mother received congratulations from Attorney General James V. Allred, uncle of Raymond Jr. Little Mary Allred, sister of the babe, was also happy—she staunchly denied that his face was red.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

MRS. CULBERTSON WILL JOIN HUSBAND THIS EVENING

LEADERS ARE CONFIDENT OF BIG TRIUMPH

LENZ AND JACOBY TO HAVE CHANCE FOR VICTORY

BY TOM O'NEIL

NEW YORK, Dec. 28. (AP)—Ely Culbertson will resume playing with Mrs. Culbertson tonight confident that he virtually has won his 150-rubber match of contract bridge with Sidney S. Lenz and Oswald Jacoby in a test of rival bidding systems. Culbertson, with three different partners, has acquired a lead of 17,090 points.

Mathematics of the situation give Lenz and Jacoby a bare chance. It happens that the lead of Culbertson's side has been accumulated in 55 rubbers in which is the number yet to be played. The average gain for him in those rubbers has been 311. The same average gain for Lenz and Jacoby would leave time to square the match.

But the high-water mark for Lenz and Jacoby was 6,800 points plus after 25 rubbers had been played. That was an average gain of 272 points a rubber. The same average for the rest of the match would still leave Culbertson with a comfortable lead.

Lenz and Jacoby have complained of inferior cards since Culbertson began to gain. The records of aces and kings show no great disparity. In fact, Lenz and Jacoby have held 1,156 aces to 1,124 for Culbertson's side. The kings compared 1,068 and 1,024 with Culbertson's side having held the greater number.

Theodore Lightner, the partner responsible for most of Culbertson's lead, leaves the match tonight. Mrs. Culbertson, who by the contract for the match must take part in at least 75 rubbers, has 27 left in which to play.

Lenz can change partners, now that Jacoby has played at least half the match, but he has given no indications of doing so.

There will be sessions tonight, tomorrow night, Wednesday night and Saturday afternoon.

Chicago Muddle Is Being Studied

CHICAGO, Dec. 28. (AP)—Chicago's money muddle, which has brought payless paydays to policemen, firemen, teachers and others, became the subject of a conference today between legislative and civic leaders.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson and Mayor Anton J. Cermak were among those who sought to relieve the situation. Pre-conference reports said many of the officials held the view the first step should be reconstruction of the Cook county tax assessing machinery.

Democrats Will Slow Up Hoover

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. (AP)—House democrats are going to examine President Hoover's recommendation for 12 home loan discount banks closely before they give it their legislative blessing.

They approved the debt moratorium in a hurry and right after it the bill to increase capitalization of the Federal Land banks by $100,000,000. They have promised to pass the bill for the $500,000,000 reconstruction corporation.

Hoover Welcomes Expense Reduction

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. (AP)—President Hoover has informed congressional leaders he will "welcome" any reduction in government expenditures that congress may make.

Making only the exception that further cuts in the budget should not impair vital functions, the chief executive told the chairmen of the senate and house appropriations committees that the administration looked with favor on any move to reduce the budget even more than the $369,000,000 slashed from departmental estimates by the budget bureau.

WESTERNERS IN LONG PRACTIEC

Olympic Club to Furnish Powerful Opposition to All-Star Outfit.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28. (AP)—The Western football squad, in training for the annual Shrine east-west charity game here New Year's day, planned its first scrimmage today against the Olympic club team of San Francisco.

The Westerners, braving mud, worked out in Berkeley stadium yesterday morning but during the afternoon concentrated on plays and formations in the gymnasium. Merle Hufford, University of Washington, and Nick Bican, Olympic club center, were chosen captains of the west team.

At Stanford, the eastern squad under coaches Andy Kerr and Dick Hanley confined itself to the gymnasium. The coaches said they were particularly impressed with the showing of Clark Hinkle of Bucknell, who has been making long drives through the line in scrimmage.

Noted Sleuth Is Dead at Dallas

DALLAS, Dec. 28. (AP)—Capt. William H. Forsyth, 85, survivor of many dangerous experiences as a sailor and foe of criminals, died at his home yesterday. He was head of the United States secret service in the southwest many years. Appointed to the service in 1888, he was placed on the retired list five years ago.

While in charge of the New York district, in the nineties, Captain Forsyth made one of the greatest captures of counterfeiters and equipment in the history of the secret service. About $18,000 of printed bills, paper sufficient to print $2,000,000 of the bills and numerous counterfeiting devices were confiscated before any of the spurious money had been passed. The counterfeiters' paper was so nearly perfect the government adopted another fiber paper for currency.

Reparations Are Under Discussion

PARIS, Dec. 28. (AP)—Reports that Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald had invited Premier Laval to London for a conference regarding reparations brought a guarded denial from the premier today.

"Contrary to a story published today," the premier's statement said, "no invitation has been addressed to M. Laval to go to London for a conference with Mr. MacDonald. The English and French experts are now discussing the subject of reparations and a meeting between the two government heads would not be opportune until the experts have completed their work."

were given in contests of long ago only pianos or phonographs, such as when contestants went about gathering votes in horse-drawn vehicles.

Numerous towns and communities outside of Pampa are not yet represented. And right here in Pampa only a few of those listed as workers are making any sincere effort to produce results.

Everything Is Free

There are no obligations of any kind attached to entering the contest, and it costs nothing to try for a prize. Nor will it cost anything later, except concentrated effort. Every prize is given FREE—reward for honest effort in obtaining subscriptions.

So little has been done in real subscription-getting anywhere that one might well consider today as the opening day of the contest. Many promises have been exacted for collection later, but votes do not come with promises, and the man or woman who can enter this contest now and get subscriptions where others are getting promises, can get an automobile.

How To Start

If you earnestly want an automobile, a big impressive new last-minute-model closed motor car, or a grand and glorious winter vacation in Sunny California, all for only a few weeks' real effort, you will lose no time in coming right down to see the campaign manager and having him explain the very simple details necessary to starting. Or, if you live outside of Pampa, your request for information will be promptly forwarded you by mail on receipt of your request. Let's GET GOING NOW!

WET WEATHER IS DEPRESSING TO GREEN WAVE

HARD WORKOUTS WILL BE DELAYED BY RAINFALL

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 28. (AP)—California's weather, dripping wet since Tulane's football team arrived for its Rose tournament game with the University of Southern California here Friday, today served to lengthen the face of the Greenies' mentor, Bernie Bierman.

Rain last night further dampened tournament park and the forecast for more rain today, putting a crimp in Bierman's plans for a long, hard workout.

Should the rainy spell continue through Friday, it probably would work further inconvenience on the Greenies. The Green Wave appears to have rolled much better viat the air than the Trojans during the past season, with Don Zimmerman's accurate passes so effective, and a wet gridiron probably would spoil the timing of the aerial plays as well as the accuracy of the tosses.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 28. (AP)—Southern California's Trojan gridsters will remain in seclusion from now until their Rose tournament football game with Tulane at Pasadena New Year's day.

Coach Howard Jones will bring the men of Troy to Bovard field each day for practice and then drop out of the picture again. The squad is being kept at an unannounced hotel.

The idea is to keep the players away from well-wishers and aid in preventing a possibility of overconfidenec for the impending struggle with the Green Wave. Hard workouts were scheduled today and tomorrow but the Trojans probably will taper off Wednesday and Thursday.

Huge Sums Paid In Taxes Refunded

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. (AP)—Treasury reconsideration on taxes and the decision that it had been wrong in a good many instances put $69,476,930 in refunds back into taxpayers' pocketbooks in the 1931 fiscal year ending June 30.

Secretary Mellon reported today to congress that the sum included all taxes illegally collected and returned but he did not list credits and abatements. The latter are deducted from taxes assessed but not yet paid. Refunds are actual cash payments.

The year before refunds totaled $126,836,333, abatements $176,378,377, and credits $36,535,245.

Only two separate refunds were for more than $1,000,000, in which class there were 12 a year earlier. The Illinois Central railroad got $1,158,675; the Prairie Pipeline company of Independence, Kans., $1,784,494.

Miners' Chief Is Placed On Trial

MT. STERLING, Ky., Dec. 28 (AP)—Harlan county's mine labor troubles, in which eight men have been shot to death, again reached the bar of justice today.

The case of William Hightower, president of the Evarts local of the United Mine Workers of America was set for trial after hearing was conducted on a motion for a new trial for W. B. Jones, secretary of the union under sentence of life imprisonment.

Hightower was charged with aiding and abetting the murder of two deputy sheriffs and a mine commissary clerk in the battle of Evarts last May on a hillside in Southeastern Kentucky, in which a miner also was slain. It was on the same charge that Jones was convicted.

MICHIGAN STATE BACKS SCHOOL'S BEST BOXERS

EAST LANSING, Mich., Dec. 28 (AP)—Instead of trading touchdowns Bob Monnett and Abe Eliowitz are trading punches now—but still on most friendly terms.

Michigan State college's prize pair of football backs also happens to be the best pugilistic act on the campus.

Two years ago "Iron Legs" Monnett took the campus heavyweight title from Eliowitz after a hard battle. Last year Eliowitz was heavyweight champion while Monnett topped the light-heavyweight lists.

Now the students are clamoring for a matching of the pair, as Monnett weighs 175 and Eliowitz 178.

ARMY RENEWS SEARCH

MARLINTON, W. Va., Dec. 28. (AP) Army airplanes droned over the Blue Ridge today as the search for a missing pilot continued.

The hunt for Lieut. E. H. Bobbitt Jr., 24, was halted for a brief interval yesterday by a report his body and plane had been located north of Marlinton. Several hundred persons, however, were unable to find the body or trace of wreckage after tramping through woods for hours.

The record in winning football streaks is held by Fielding Yost's Michigan elevens from 1901 to 1905 which engaged in 57 games, won 55, tied one and lost the final game of the fifth year.

CARDS' ACE OR JOKER? —By Pap

FORMER STARS PLANNING DEFEAT FOR HARVESTERS

Collegians Strengthen Their Cage Squad for Battle Tomorrow Night.

Pampa fans will have a chance to compare the old and the new at the high school gymnasium at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night when the Harvester basketball squad will meet the ex-Harvester quintet. The squad of former stars has been strengthened and should give the present team one tough battle.

Among the ex-students who will see action will be Troy Stalls, Don Saulsbury, Albert Lard, Archie Walstad, Charles James, Bob Kahl, Bob Mullin, Jones Seitz, Dick Benton, and probably one or two others. There will be no admission charged. Pampa fans are expected to fill the gymnasium to see how the 1931-32 Harvesters stand up against the experienced boys.

Don Saulsbury is out for basketball at Kansas university this year. Bob Kahl is with Tulsa university. Archie Walstad is with Southern Methodist university, and Troy Stalls and Albert Lard are with the Amarillo college Badgers.

Coaches Odus Mitchell and Argus M. Fox are putting their teams through stiff workouts daily at 2:30 o'clock. They are not slowing up for the Christmas holidays as the team has not played together and needs plenty of practice. Practice games have showed plenty of promising material and with hard work the Harvesters should be heard from before the season ends.

Daugherty Will Write On Harding

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 28. (AP)—Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general in the cabinet of Warren G. Harding, will break a silence of eight years to tell his story of what went on behind the scenes in the Harding administration.

In a book, "The Inside Story of the Harding Tragedy," the life-long friend of the former president will give his version of the "Ohio Gang" and "draw the veil from the so-called mystery" of Harding's death. The book, in which he collaborated with Thomas Dixon, will be off the press in about three weeks.

Daugherty said the book will reture Nan Britton's claim that Harding was the father of her daughter, relate the incidents that resulted in President Coolidge's demand for his own resignation, tell what he terms the true story of Albert B. Fall, Charles Forbes, Thomas W. Miller, and Roxie Stimson, and give the facts of Jess Smith's death.

COTTON IS QUIET

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 28. (AP)—The cotton market here today had a quiet opening, while still under the influence of the holidays. Liverpool cables came in better than due, but the gain was offset by easier sterling. The market here opened 1 to 2 points above last Thursday's close, and as the New York market was also higher, prices here improved slightly after the start, March trading up to 6.41, and May to 6.59, or 2 points above the previous close.

Later in the first hour the market was quiet but steady, at the lows.

Texan May Have Been Murdered And Thrown In Water

HOUSTON, Dec. 28. (AP)—Officers today were investigating the possibility that J. L. McElreath and F. C. Bonham, who disappeared Dec. 10 while on a hunting trip, were murdered.

McElrath's body was found yesterday in Trinity bay, one mile off Umbrella Point. Contusions on his head, of such nature, authorities said, to be unlikely they could have been inflicted after death, gave rise to a theory McElrath had been slain.

Dr. William E. Marshall of Baytown established, however, death was due to drowning. Officers pointed out that moonshiners, surprised by the hunters, might have knocked McElrath unconscious and thrown him into the water.

Clingman Back From Long Trip

The sailor's only loss of a fall was to Charlie Grip, one of the toughest in the game. The match went one hour and 59 minutes before Clingman took the third fall.

On his tour Clingman met and defeated Charlie Grip, Coach Thom, Joe Parelli, Johnnie Carlin, Billy Simpson, and Gus Anderson.

There will be no wrestling match here Friday night, Promoter Frank Hunt announced this morning.

This Game of GOLF

By O.B. KEELER

Funny, how the thing we call luck runs in strings—and not so funny, either, when a break somes like that which retired Horton Smith from the great match play open golf tournament at San Francisco, a few hours after the tall Missourian had led a grand field under the wire in the 36-hole medal qualification test.

Horton swinging with the smoothness that once made him the sensation of the professional world in the big winter tournaments, had led the field with cards of 68-75—143, a stroke better than par on the sodden, rain-drenched course. He looked at least as formidable as any man in the show.

And three hours later he was out of it—with a fractured bone in his right wrist, suffered in one of the oddest motor accidents in the books. Horton, riding with Joe Kirkwood returning to the Lake Merced club for a dinner engagement, put out his right arm as a signal, assisting Joe, who was backing the car into a parking space. There was a post he did not see. The arm was jammed between the post and the car. an x-Ray revealed a fracture which doctors say will keep Horton out of golf for all the winter season.

Had Just Found Form

Not the least bitter phase of the accident is its occurrence just when Horton seemed to have ironed out his swing and worked his game into the form that was the admiration and despair of his fellow-professionals in the brilliant winter campaigns of 1927, 1928, and 1929.

Horton at his best displayed a tiny defect or rather an idiosyncrasy in his beautiful stroke which, properly controlled, did not affect his play sufficiently to keep him away from the very top rank in tourney after tourney in those years.

Rated a short swinger, a careful examination of the stroke showed that while the club in a full shot never approached the horizontal, the hands were lifted very high at the top of the swing; and the first motion in starting the downward stroke was a further "cocking" of the wrists; so that the arc and the hand-action were as extreme, even, as those of Bobby Jones, without the extraordinarily free pivot of the latter.

The Trouble

But there was just the suspicion of looseness in the left wrist and elbow at impact; a sort of flaccidity at variance with the almost rigid firmness prescribed for this junction by the orthodox.

When he was going well, this never seemed to bother Smith. Perhaps he got to thinking about it; perhaps the continuous grind of competition got on his superb nerves a trifle—whatever the reason, he began strewing his big shots a bit, in 1930; he was off-line this way and that; and even his exemplary chipping and putting—his best factors—failed to hold his game to a winning level.

Always thoughtful and studious, Horton set about correcting the trouble. And it seemed he had about accomplished the correction, and was set for a great winter spin, when this accident put him on the sidelines.

An unusually tough break— and one sincerely regretted by a host of fans and by all the golfers who looked for the sharpest competition with him this season.

HUSKY CAGE COACH FEARS WASHINGTON STATE TEAM

SEATTLE, Dec. 28. (AP)—Clarence "Hec" Edmundson, basketball coach at the University of Washington picks the Washington State college team as the chief obstacle between the Huskies and a fourth straight championship in the northern division of the Pacific Coast conference.

Edmundson said the Cougars with their veteran sharp-shooters appear to be the strongest in the circuit.

The next Washington foes in order of importance are Oregon State college, University of Oregon and University of Idaho in the judgment of the Husky coach.

Washington won the northern division title the last three years and captured the coast championship last season by defeating the University of California in a play-off series.

KICKOFF ISSUE IE DEBATED AS MENTORS MEET

USE OF "RABBIT" BLOW IN DEFENSE IS TALKED

NEW YORK, Dec. 28. (AP)—Football is feeling a bit low as it always does at this time of year and the physicians have gathered around to see what can be done about it.

The physicians—coaches, officials and college athletic heads, gathering for the annual meetings of the Eastern Football Officials' association, the National Football Coaches' association, and the National Collegiate Athletic association—already have proposed, informally, a few changes designed to remove some of the hazards of the game.

There has been a widespread demand for rule changes as a result of the nearly 50 deaths charged to football this season.

Most of the suggestions have been designed to remove the dangers of the kickoff and its attendant possibility of the wedge form of interference.

"Rabbit punches" by defensive linemen have been blamed for some injuries and it has been suggested that the defensive linemen be forbidden to use his hands on the head or neck of a charging rival.

Atlanta's Midget Grid Teams Play With No Injuries

ATLANTA, Dec. 28. (AP)—Atlanta boys are playing football from the age of eight or nine through college, unfearful of the injury jinx.

Leaders of 'sandlot' football teams here are up in arms over the placing of blame for the large number of injuries and fatalities to "sandlot and prep school football."

No other southern city, perhaps, has as large a number of organized football teams composed of very young boys, as is found in Atlanta. Practically every section of the city has its "Bumble Bees," "Our Gang," "Terrors," and other such aggregations made up of boys from nine years old up through the early 'teens.

Fritz Orr and Julian Baxter, two of the leaders of "sandlot" football teams here have had successful "seasons" with their midget performers and no report of injury has been made.

Then there are dozens of organized teams representing and sponsored by junior high schools, prep schools and colleges.

understand why Ann should wish to marry Phil with his conspicuous good looks, his inevitable rightness, his sterling qualities, his mustache, his overshoes, and his famishing self conceit. It was almost impossible for Cecily to like Phil as she felt he deserved to be liked; so she protested and declared she had never thought that, nor anything connected with it, funny at all.

Ann said, "Yes, but you have never been in love," and made it an accusation.

"I've tried, but it's like Grand's inventions—it won't work."

"Last spring I was afraid," Ann said, and did not notice that she had said "afraid," "that you were falling in love with Rodger French."

"I might have, if he hadn't said I was 'pleasant looking' and if he could have found anything admirable about me besides my ears."

"Your ears?"

"Don't you remember how he was always talking about my ears? How they were little and flat and showed pink through the edges in the sun like a child's? I loved it the first time, and kept running about with my hand mirror looking for a sunny spot in the house. But after a dozen times or so it got sour, and we 'parted forever,' as Rosalie says, when I blew up and told him I liked my flatteries fresh like my vegetables."

"You weren't in love with the one before him, either, were you? What was his name—"

"Mr. Tommire, he used to say over the telephone. 'Miss Fenwick? This is Mr. Toomire speaking.' Don't you remember, he worked in that leather place, and he talked Rosalie and Grand into giving me that silly overnight bag for Christmas, when we were so poor that year, and I needed a new umbrella. I never forgave him—"

"I didn't mean him, silly! I meant the older, long stringy one who was always bringing you photographs of his family."

"Emmit Herrick Moriarty, B. S. C. E. on his visiting cards, and he left a pack every time he came. He was kind of nice and Irishy, even if he was a freak. But, goodness, Ann you've got me reminiscing like Rosalie. Why the questionnaire?"

"I don't know," Ann said. "I was just sort of thinking that you—well, didn't understand about love."

"I don't," said Cecily, "and I don't want to ever." (February, 1930, was the date). "When I see people who are in love—" she caught herself up and tucked in politely—"Marta and Herbert, for example—You and Phil are different, of course."

"Yes," said Ann, and sighed. "Yes I suppose Phil and I are—different, of course."

The date was April, 1930. The strip of rubber on the windshield clickety-clicked and swung down and around and up again, through the crawling drops on the small half circle of dimming glass. Street cars clanged, and rain-damp people scurried, and shining umbrellas bobbed, and stop and go signals rang violently red and green.

On the bridge the dull gray sky parted for one long slit of jade above the river's blue-black end, and here Barry said, "Look at that color!" and Cecily forgot for a moment that she was an inconsiderate idiot and that it was Ann's week to do the evening work. Across the bridge, twisting and twining again through the mazes of traffic, she recalled her peccabilities blightingly and found hope in nothing but the tender cold roast beef and the caramel pudding she had hidden.

Out of the traffic at last, and into the quieter suburban streets, where Barry could talk while he drove, she lost sight of the idiot and the roast and the pudding altogether, and remembered, just a moment too late, to say with the careful casualness she had planned, "We turn here."

"Here?" Barry McKell stuck an arm through the opened window and brought his small car to an abrupt standstill. Cecily jolted forward in the seat, and he said, "Oh, sorry! Turn here, did you say? Up this road or whatever it is?"

"It is the driveway to the house," she said, and pressed her lips firmly together. There should be no apologies, no warnings as yet.

The wheel turned slowly under his thin hands, and the car nosed its way into the gloomy tunnel made by the great scraggly, untrimmed trees. A hawthorn branch reached out and slapped it smartly. The low limb of a cedar menaced just ahead. The right front wheel splattered and splashed down into a deep puddle. Barry said, "Dog-gone!" and turned on the lights of the car, an Cecily, a novice with heroism, said, "Well?" in a voice that looked down its own nose.

He explained' "I thought of the grandest speech as we turned into these woods—all about dryads and everything, and I had to pass it up because I decided that dryads weren't blond, and I tried to fix it up with a fairy princess, and that was too sappy, and the thing was in ruins in spite of its swell ending. I might give a hint of the ending—it was all about how I'd hoped against hope for a mere mortal but had known better. Fixed up, that would be pretty good, wouldn't it?"

Cecily laughed. Relief made it louder than usual, and sheer happiness made it last longer.

Mary-Frances, who since she had first spied the car from the oriel windows in the parlor had been standing, ears alert, in the front doorway, heard the laugh and closed the door softly and sped to the kitchen.

"Hey, Ann," she announced, "Cissy's coming home with a man in a car. I'll bet $10,000 it's a new boy friend. I'll bet he is the one she met at Marta's party and has been so cuckoo about. I'll bet she's bringing him home for dinner. I'll bet—"

Ann, slicing carrots, orange and yellow rounds that clinked on the bottom of the kettle, inserted absent-mindedly, "Don't say 'I'll bet' like that all the time, Mary-Frances. The idea! It sounds horrid. You should hear yourself, and you wouldn't do it."

"—bringing him home to dinner—the boy friend," Mary-Frances insisted.

"No," Ann said, and sliced the carrots. "She wouldn't think of bringing anyone home to dinner—especially without telephoning ahead of time. She's probably coming home to change her dress—"

Mary-Frances had rushed away through the butler's pantry, bent on reaching the mirror in the dining room — a monstrous, chilly place, where, painted on the high ceiling, great fat fish lay inert in dead-looking bottle-green waves. One long slide across the hardwood floor, for which Grand had once refused an offer of $500, $1000 $2000 (the sums varied according to Grand's memory and moods, and not according to his honesty), brought her to the massive built-in buffet and the mirror.

She tipped her head back and bit her lips and pursed them into a soft pink rosette; she dampened her two little fingers with her tongue and traced her fine brown eyebrows; she pinched a deeper color into her cheeks, and preened her brown bobbed hair.

What if she was only 15 years old? Wasn't she tall for her age? Dreadfully tall? Didn't everybody think she was 18 years old, anyway? Well, everybody. Just everybody. Well, then, everybody but the teachers and kids at school. Well, the boys and girls, then. They were not children. Everybody.

In the front hall Cecily was laughing again, above the pleasant undertones of a masculine laugh and voice. Mary-Frances had to walk right up to them before Cecily said, "Oh, Mary-Frances, dear!" as if she were amazed to find a third person existing anywhere in the world. "This is my little sister, Mary-Frances, Mr. McKeel."

Cecily, Mary-Frances knew, would like to have her courtesy, but she wouldn't do it—not at her age. She bowed, primly — though demurely was the word she had in mind—and stuck out a small hand that had not been washed since she had come home from school.

He was polite, of course; but, in so far as Mary-Frances was able to judge by the dim light shed from the one small globe high in the hall ceiling, Cecily's admiration of him was unwarranted. He was an inch or two above average height, but Cissy had said that he was tall. True, she had added that he was thin; Mary-Frances substituted "skinny" as more apt.

His hair, which Cissy had described as auburn, was merely darkish, and he wore it too short, and he should, at least, smooth it down with his hands, as Phil and the movie men smoothed theirs, if he thought it unmanly to look in the mirror. She could reach no decision about his eyes—Cecily had described them as jolly and brown—because he was staring too hard at Cissy, who, in spite of the fact that her nose needed powdering, looked prettier than usual, though she was acting awfully silly and laughing all the time. She shouldn't let this Mr. McKell see that she was so excited. Rosalie had told and told her, had told all three of them, exactly how to act with men. "Nonchalance savored with winsomeness; dignity softened with coyness."

The door on the right of the hall led into the library; the door on the left led into the music room. Cecily paused for an instant between the two. She had passed by the parlor; it was grimly impossible with its what-nots and horsehair and family portraits, painted by Grand's friend who had decorated the ceilings in the house.

The library, with its cherry furniture, was the best-looking room: but it smelled always of old apples—Grand dropped the cores behind the books on the shelves and forgot them, and they decayed — and the floor was often scattered with his nutshells and ginger-snap crumbs. The music room, a north room whose ivy-vined windows looked out on dark, close-standing trees, would be musty and damp; but, since it was rarely used, it might be orderly, and wood might be set for a fire in the grate. If she lighted only the rose-shaded piano lamp the ceiling, sprawled with its indecently overdressed angel playing a harp, would not show.

She turned to the music room and opened the door to heavy chilled air and stale cavernous darkness. It would seem silly to go stumbling in there hunting for the piano lamp. She pressed the wall switch, and she laughed again, a trifle shrilly, with the faintest touch of hysteria. She could not say, "Grand and Rosalie won't allow us to change anything" because that would be an apology and a half lie. Nor could she say, "We are poverty-stricken, you see—too poor to afford cleanliness, or fresh air, or warmth." Things of that sort weren't said.

No, there was nothing to do but laugh at the angel, who certainly wore plush underwear under those swaddling draperies, and laugh again at the worn-out rag of carpet spotted with roses, and the wreck of a grand piano powdered with dust, and at the knicknacks, grimy and chipped, crowded in the bracketed mantel over the pink-tiled fireplace wherein, small and scrappy as an old bird's nest, were some crumples of paper and some slivers of good. A pair of scissors lay invitingly open on the discolored brocade seat of the divan; scraps of sewing were littered about everywhere.

Mary-Frances said, "Hurrah for the one who finds Rosalie's scissors! She's been hunting them for perfect ages," and went to pick them up, swooping down, on her way across the room, to snatch here and there at the scraps on the floor.

Cecily glanced at Barry. She said "I'll light the fire," and stopped laughing and went to the mantel and took a match from the broken horn of a china Little Boy Blue.

Barry, behind her, offered, "Let me—"

"I have it," she answered, and jerked the damp match across the sole of her shoe. It was ridiculous for her fingers to tremble. The match snapped in them, and she threw it spitefully away and reached for another.

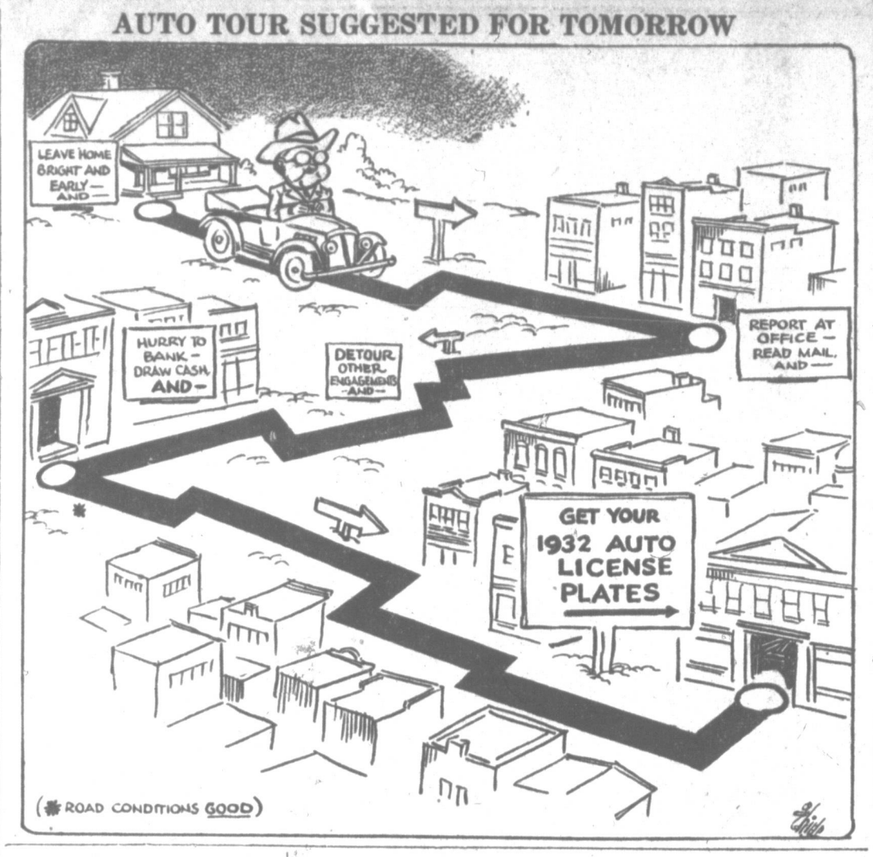

Barry's cigaret lighter clicked. The paper beneath the splinters of wood flared sulkily in its smoke. "It is rather chilly this evening," he said.

Outside, in spite of the rain, the air was balmy. They had spoken of it not 20 minutes ago, before he had become a conventional stranger who looked at her quizzically, who pitied her, who knew that even the matches in her house were damp and useless, who tried to make for her the apologies she would not make for herself.

"Sit here, if you will," she said, turning one of the tarnished pink brocaded chairs toward the sickly fire. "Mary-Frances will entertain you while I go and find Ann."

W. A. Gray, local contractor, will start work this afternoon on the concrete floor and foundation of a new building to house the city sweeper and truck, City Manager F. M. Gwin announced this morning. The contract for the balance of the building has not been let.

The new home of the street department will be 24 feet deep and 48 feet wide. It will be erected on the city lot at the rear of the fire department and will face Frost street. City Engineer C. L. Stine has completed drawing plans of the building, which will be of brick similar to that of the fire station.

Mr. Gray's bid for the concrete was $246.00 or $8.50 under that of F. E. Maynard.

MURDER THEORY DROPPED

DALLAS, Dec. 28. (AP)—The murder theory in connection with the death of J. K. Orr, 60, was abandoned today when Coroner E. John Baldwin returned a verdict of death from natural causes. Officers last night expressed the opinion he might have been slain but the coroner's investigation failed to disclose any evidence of violence or other unnatural cause of death.

Welfare Groups To Meet Tuesday

Plans for the coming year will be discussed at a meeting of the Central Welfare Advisory council and the Welfare Board at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in the chamber of commerce rooms in the city hall. The committee in charge of the welfare drive also has been asked to be present.

J. M. Dodson is president of the council and Alex Schneider is head of the board. The quota set for the drive has not been reached and it is probable that both organizations will join with the drive committee in completing the campaign for funds.

A report of the year's activity is to be heard.

FIRE RAGES WHILE MAN LIES SENSELESS

ALTOONA, Pa., Dec. 28. (AP)— A fire that gained headway while a watchman lay unconscious yesterday destroyed several units of the Pennsylvania railroad's Twelfth street shops. Loss was estimated at $1,500,000 by insurance officials.

The watchman discovered the fire and started to run for an alarm box but fell down a flight of stairs. When he recovered consciousness the fire had spread through oil-soaked waste and grease over the entire floor of the bolt shop.
