Clements, Connally Rally for Reagan

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

Texas Governor Bill Clements outlined plans for the statewide Reagan-Bush presidential campaign before calling President Carter's policies "wrong for Texas" during a rally before approximately 500 persons this morning in the Bull Barn.

Former governor John Connally directed his speech toward campaign issues after Clements addressed the crowd during the two Republican dignitaries' first stop on a 23-city tour of the state.

Their visit to Hereford is part of the "Texas Roundup for Reagan-Bush," which Republican leaders hope will organize all non-metropolitan counties in the state in support of former California governor Ronald Reagan and vice-presidential candidate George Bush.

Clements, statewide campaign chairman for the GOP candidates, said the state has been divided into eight major regions, plus four metropolitan regions–Tarrant, Dallas, Harris and Bexar counties.

Each region is broken down into county organizations, Clements said.

The governor explained to the crowd that the campaign includes five areas–"Reagan for President" organization," "Roundup for Reagan," phone-bank and home-phone operations, "Democratic and Independent Effort" and financing.

"The 'Reagan for President' organization is the regional concept," Clements said.

He added that the visit to Hereford and subsequent trips today to Amarillo and Pampa, are the beginning of the "Roundup for Reagan."

Clements said that 3 million households will be contacted through the two telephone operations, which will utilize 40,000 volunteers and cost approximately $600,000. "It's a massive effort," Clements said.

The "Democrat and Independent Effort," Clements said, will try to persuade non-Republicans to vote for Reagan.

"Governor Reagan already has a great following of Democrats and independents in Texas who do not identify with the Republican party," he said.

"There was no way I could have won the governor's race without support from Democrats and independents."

Clements said his own polls show that approximately 20 percent of the state's voters identify themselves with the Republican party, 35 percent as Democrats "and 45 percent say they are independents–they're a growing mass."

Clements said that $2 million will be raised to finance the state Reagan-Bush campaign to a $1,000-a-plate "victory dinner" Sept. 16 in Houston.

Clements said that Carter's oil-gas, security, economic and

Carter To Disclose Jobs-Boost Program

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's new economic recovery program, to be announced Thursday, would create about 900,000 additional jobs in the next two years, administration sources say.

Carter's election-year program also is expected to seek tax relief for individuals and businesses, including a tax credit to offset virtually all the $13 billion increase in Social Security payroll taxes in 1981.

The plan, which will total about $30 billion in fiscal 1981, is "basically long-term, but that doesn't mean there won't be a short-term benefits," one top administration official said Tuesday.

One long-range initiative, administration sources said, will be a proposed 3 percent annual increase in federal spending, instead of tax incentives, for research and development. Most of the money would go to private firms, not government agencies.

But to battle the current recession and stimulate new jobs, Carter reportedly will propose;

-$500 million to $1 billion in "countercyclical revenue sharing" funds that would go to localities where unemployment has reached a certain high level, administration sources say.

Costs, Drought Ruining Farms

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A scorching summer heat wave, soaring interest rates, rising production costs and sinking profits have many West Texas farmers ready to throw in the towel.

"Many of our farmers and ranchers are borrowed up to their necks, and there is very little margin for a producer to have a bad year," said Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown in an interview with the San Angelo Standard-Times.

"The level of farm debt is up substantially this year, with much of the increased borrowing due to higher operating costs," he said. "What they need now more than anything are commodity prices that reflect the true value of the products."

A senior vice president at Bank of the Southwest in Amarillo said farm loans for first quarter of 1980 are up 22 percent over last year.

Poor harvests resulting from the Texas heat wave mean much of that debt won't be repaid soon, said Lee Russell, president of the Texas Production Credit Association.

"Normally, by this time of year, milo crops are in and we begin collecting hundreds of thousands of dollars in debts," Russell said. "This year we're collecting very little."

Most farmers have given up on their cotton and milo fields, saying rain from Hurricane Allen was the last hope for their wilting crops and it failed to materialize.

"It's really tough and some farmers have just about had it," Russell said.

"We'll try to stick by them even during their hardest times, but we have certain limits, too," he said. "We can't drop the strong to take care of the weak."

Russell said the current situation is the worst he's seen since the drought of the middle and late 1950s, "but in the drought of the late '50 we didn't have the inflation or high cost of products we have now."

Loans from federal land banks, commercial banks and prodution credit associations, which account for 90 percent of the credit to farmers, increased by $11.4 billion in the first quarter of this year, Brown said.

He is urging farmers to seek federal assistance from the Small Business Administration, the Agriculture Stablization and Conservation Service, and the Farmers Home Administration.

"In 1980, fuel prices and farm equipment prices — the highest ever — along with dry weather, caused unusual problems," Brown said.

Farm equipment prices are two to three times higher than five years ago and everything has soared in price — except

Congress Boosts Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest military spending bill in American history has been overwhelmingly approved by Congress and sent to President Carter.

The Senate passed the bill Tuesday night 78-2. Earlier, the House had passed it 360-49.

The measure authorizes $52.9 billion for military procurement, research and development, civil defense and educational benefits for military personnel. The figures is $5.9 billion above what Carter asked.

The bill also authorizes about $1 billion in increases in military compensation and benefits in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

About $2.2 billion, an increase of 35 percent, was added to the president's shipbuilding program.

Major authorizations in the bill include $405 million for new Army helicopters; $2.5 billion for new Navy aircraft plus another $719 million to modify existing Navy aircraft and $1.1 billion for aircraft spares and repair parts; and $1.4 billion for new Air Force aircraft plus another $1.9 billion to modify existing Air Force aircraft and $2 billion for aircraft spares and repair parts.

Polish Strikers Given Threat

GDANSK, Poland (AP) - Poland's Communist regime, under growing pressure from striking workers, today issued a veiled warning of possible Soviet intervention and "incalculable consequences" if order is not restored.

The threat came as the 14-day-old strike wave on the Baltic coast was reported to have spread to the giant Ursus tractor factor outside Warsaw and to industries in southern Poland. Estimates of the total strikers rose to more than 300,000.

In a front-page editorial in the Communist daily Trybuna Ludu, the regime reminded Poles that their country lies "in the direct sphere of security of the world Socialist power - the Soviet Union.

'We are a member of the defensive Warsaw Pact and we belong to the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance," the East Bloc Common Market.

The commentary was entitled "Line of Partition," apparently reminding Poles that their country was carved up by Austria, Russia and Prussia in 1796 and did not reappear until November 1918 at the end of World War I.

"We, Poland, in our current system of Communist government, are one of the basic elements of peaceful order and stabilization in Europe," the commentary said.

"Any disturbance of any of these factors making up the Polish 'raison d'estre' must lead to incalculable consequences.

"These factors include the place of our party in the political life of the Polish state as well as the basic structure of people's, Badkowski, spokesman for the Inter-Factor Strike Committee, said talks in Gdansk Tuesday between a working group of five strike leaders and five government officials produced agreement on many "serious points" and were "very promising." He declined to give details, but said the government planned to contact the committee for more talks today.

The government's chief negotiator, First Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, went back to Warsaw to report to the Communist Party Politburo. He was expected to return to Gdansk today.

Jagielski held an often-noisy exchange Tuesday with a delegation of the strike committee at the V.I. Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk, where the mass walkout began Aug. 14.

Jagielski said in addition to the secret, democratic election of trade union officials promised Sunday by Community Party leader Edward Gierek Sunday, the revision of the labor laws would permit strikes in the industrial coastal region if all other means of solving disputes failed. But he refused to budge on the workers' demand for independent labor unions free from government controls and said he was negotiating only for the Baltic industrial area, not other parts of the country.

This attempt to isolate the coastal workers was a new element that angered the strikers. They rejected any geographically restricted settlement, reiterated their demand for free trade unions and threatened a nationwide general strike.

New walkouts were reported at the Ursus tractor factory six miles southwest of the center of Warsaw; in Lodz, 80 miles south of the capital; Wroclaw, 195 miles southwest of Warsaw, and at factories in Rzeszow, in southeastern Poland, and in Olsztyn, in the northeast.

Broadcasts from Lod, Poland's second-largest city with a population of 820,000, said many transport workers struck there.

In Wroclaw, the fourth-largest city with a population of 593,000, industrial and municipal transport workers stopped work and demanded better living conditions,

Soviets Say U.S. Stalling over Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and West Germany, the bedrock of the NATO alliance, have joined in a call for early negotiations with the Soviet Union on cutting back nuclear missiles in Europe.

A communique was issued here late Tuesday after Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev sent a message to President Carter and other western leaders suggesting that they were stalling on opening talks.

The question is now whether the two sides are moving closer to the bargaining table or are simply trying to match each other in registering concern over the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

The communique said a "preliminary exchange" between the United States and the Soviet Union is expected to occur "at an early date."

That appeared to refer to the talks Secretary of State Edmund S. Muckie and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko are likely to have next month in New York when they attend the United Nations General Assembly session.

They have not met since May when they were at ceremonies in Vienna commemorating the neutrality and independence of Austria.

The communique was issued after Muskie talked for two hours with Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the West German foreign minister. The meeting was scheduled before Brezhnev sent his message to Carter, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and other western leaders.

Brezhnev's letter was his second major move in the arms field this summer. In early July, he told Schmidt in Moscow he no longer insisted that NATO rescind its decision to deploy American medium-range nuclear missiles before negotiations could begin.

The West did not respond to the shift, so Brezhnev suggested to Carter, Schmidt and the others that they were stalling.

Carter Accepts Debate Offer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter has what he's been looking for - an invitation to meet Ronald Reagan one-on-one in a nationally televised debate.

Carter accepted the bid from the National Press Club within hours of arrival on Tuesday: Reagan is thinking about it, and independent candidate John Anderson is outraged.

White House officials said they hoped the press club debate would occur "as soon as possible," meaning the first half of September and prior to the Sept. 18 date set by the League of Women Voters for a showdown it says might also include Anderson.

But Reagan and Carter remain sharply divided over the timing, sponsorship, number, scope and format of any possible debates.

Meanwhile, Carter has accepted the unanimous "very enthusiastic" endorsement of the international executive board of the 1.4 million member United Auto Workers Union. Rank and file members make their wishes known next week.

Carter is preparing to make public on Thursday a $29 billion tax relief program that he hopes will create jobs and solidify his support by organized labor.

Reagan was in Columbus, Ohio, today to court leaders of the Teamsters Union and confer with GOP governors of several central industrial states. He will fly to Washington, D.C., on Thursday to take up temporary residence in suburban Middleburg, Va., for the duration of his campaign.

The debate invitation arrived Tuesday morning. Carter accepted it Tuesday afternoon.

"There was no reason to delay accepting," said White House press secretary Jody Powell. "It meets the needs."

Powell said any speculation that the Carter-Mondale campaign angled for the invitation or in any way orchestrated it is incorrect.

There was hesitation in the Reagan-Bush campaign. A spokesman for the Republican presidential nominee said Reagan might make a decision today, however.

Anderson denounced what he called "plans by the White House to cut me and my running mate out of these debates."

The Carter camp has said the president wants six or more debates in all sections of the country.

At the White House, Carter attacked Reagan's position on women's issues at a Rose Garden ceremony marking the 60th anniversary of the ratification of the constitutional amendment giving women the right to vote.

In Congress, meanwhile, Republicans announced plans to raise $8 million - nearly double the previous goal - to mount a television blitz to persuade voters to elect GOP candidates to Congress this fall.

Talmadge Wins Democratic Primary

ATLANTA (AP) - Sen. Herman Talmadge, fighting his way back from alcoholism and a rebuke from Senate colleagues, won the Democratic nomination for a fifth term after a bruising runoff campaign but still faces perhaps the toughest Republican challenge of his career.

"Get ready, go home, organize," Talmadge, 67, urged supporters as he celebrated Tuesday's victory over Georgia Lt. Gov. Zell Miller.

With ballots in 2,183 of 2,251 precincts counted, Talmadge had 530,489, or 58 percent of the vote, to Miller's 385,057, or 42 percent.

Talmadge now faces Republican Mack Mattingly, a 49-year-old businessman who has spent the past eight months building a following with a campaign geared to tax cuts and other economic issues.

The former state GOP chairman stands to be the most formidable statewide candidate Georgia Republicans have fielded in years. The state has not sent a Republican to the U.S. Senate since Reconstruction.

Several Incumbents Lose in Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Veteran state Sen. Robert Murphy of Stillwater was among a host of incumbent state lawmakers to meet defeat in Tuesday's primary election.

Murphy, Distric 21 senator since 1963, was defeated by former Stillwater school teacher Bernice Shedrick. Unofficial returns showed Mrs. Shedrick with 4,480 votes to 4,328 for Murphy.

The Stillwater Democrat was hurt in his bid for re-election when Democratic House Speaker Dan Draper, in a rare move because leaders of one house seldom become involved in races involvong the other legislative house, endorsed Mrs. Shedrick. Draper also is from Stillwater.

Democratic state Reps. Don Mentzer of Sallisaw and Billy Kennedy of Pawhuska also were defeated as were Oklahoma City Democratic Reps. L.H. Bengsten and A.V. Johnson.

Men Carrying Gas Hijack Plane to Cuba

MIAMI (AP) - Ten days after federal officials announced that armed marshals would take to the air to ward off potential hijackers, three Spanish-speaking men, possibly carrying gasoline, commandered an Eastern Airlines flight to Cuba with 241 people aboard.

The hijacking - the first since new security measures were imposed to stem a new wave of sky piracy – was the seventh in the last two weeks.

There was no immediate word on whether the hijackers were Cubans. Frustrated Cuban refugees were blamed in the earlier hijackings this month.

An airline spokesman said he presumed the hijackers were taken from the plane before it left Havana for Miami, but that could not be confirmed.

The hijackers were carrying containers of an unidentified liquid, but officials said it was not clear that the fluid was gasoline.

There were no sky marshals aboard the New York - to - Miami flight Tuesday night when the men - shouting "Cuba, Cuba,' - commandered the plane as it flew over an area near Cape Charles, Va., said FAA spokesman Jack Barker in Atlanta.

Survey Shows 25% Avoided Registration

BOSTON (AP) - A spot check of several cities indicate that as many as 25 percent of the eligible young men there may have failed to register for the draft, the Boston Globe says. A spokeswoman for the Selective Service System called the survey invalid.

Under legislation approved by Congress in June, men born in 1960 and 1961 were required to register for the draft in late July and early August at any post office. Congress did not authorize a resumption of the draft itself.

There have been reports that many men failed to comply with the law, but the Selective Service System, which administers registration, has not released any figures.

Selective Service spokeswoman Joan Lamb said the Globe's figures did not take into account that the men required to register are a "mobile group and didn't have to register in their area."

"We don't want to talk from incomplete data," she said, calling the data invalid.

farm policies are "wrong for Texas."

He said that Carter has "discriminated" against the state's oil and gas industry and farmers.

"I'm not against embargoing the Russians, but I want to embargo everything, not just grain," said Clements, who drew applause for the remark.

In a lighter moment of his brief address, Clements asked: "Do you know why Mr. Carter carries a turkey under his arm?"

He waited a moment, then answered: "Spare parts."

Clements and Connally, accompanied by their wives, Rita and Nellie, respectively, were scheduled to conduct a press conference following this mornings rally, then visit two Hereford agri-businesses.

Clements and Connally were scheduled to appear at a rally and news conference later in the day in Amarillo, then close the day with speeches at a dinner in Pampa.

On Saturday, the two will visit Lufkin, Mt. Pleasant and Corsicana.

farmers' profits, Russell said.

Prices for cotton and grain are up, but low harvest yields are keeping profits down, he added.

J.E. Powell, a grain and cotton farmer from Van Court, said low product prices and equipment costs are not major obstacles, "but when it doesn't rain, you can pray — and that's all."

"We can live with the high cost of production, if we would have produced a crop," Powell said.

However, a drought's real effect on a farmer's future is measured in the long-run, he said.

"Farm income can't be measured over a one year period. You have to look at it over four or five years," Powell said. "If we go for two or three years without rain, we'll all be in real trouble."

currently run up to 39 weeks.

-An extra $1 billion in loans and loan guarantees for the Economic Development Administration in fiscal 1981 and another $2 billion in fiscal 1982. This money would go to revitalize distressed companies and localities.

-Additional spending for job retraining programs through the Department of labor and for energy conservation and weatherization programs run by the departments of Energy and Housing and Urban Development.

Carter aides have refrained from the president's own promise three weeks ago that his program "will put millions and millions of people back to work in new jobs, exciting jobs and stimulating jobs."

But a top administration official said Tuesday the program probably would create "450,000 jobs next year over and above what we would otherwise get, and probably another 450,000 jobs the following year.

Total spending authorization for these programs could reach $5 billion to $7 billion, but actual outlays in fiscal 1981 would be about $2 billion to $4 billion, these sources say.

This will increase the projected fiscal 1981 deficit beyond $30 billion, far from the balanced budget proposed by Carter only last winter.

Strike — from Page 1

Radio Wroclaw said.

There were brief strikes in both Lodz and Wroclaw before the Gdansk walkout, triggered by the government's cancellation of meat price subsidies on July 1 which sent prices skyrocketing. But the strikes in the Gdansk area produced demands for free trade unions and other political reforms that have now become the chief goal of the strikers.

The unrest is the worst in Poland since the 1979 price riots in Gdansk left 50 dead and toppled the regime of Wladyslaw Gomulka.

Gierek, who succeeded Gomulka, firey Premier Edward Babiuch, Politburo member Jan Szydlak and seven other economic hardliners Sunday, and on Tuesday Szydlak resigned as chairman of the Central Council of Trade Unions.

The government turned to the Roman Catholic Church Tuesday for help in ending the strike and broadcast a 45-minute radio and TV address by the primate, Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski. Urging "prudence" and "responsibility," he told the workers:

"Sometimes one has to demand little so that order returns to Poland, the more so because demands, even correct ones, cannot be fulfilled at once..."The better we work, the more justified are our rights and then we can formulate our demands."

It was the first time the government TV stations had broadcast comments by the cardinal on political issues.

Texas Briefs

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who organized a "Miss Black Texas" beauty pageant that folded for lack of money was indicted Tuesday for theft after allegedly writing checks for the contest on a closed bank account.

Ricky Karl Thurmond, 24, who said he was a law student at Texas Southern University, was charged by a state grand jury after $10,000 in credit cashier's checks from a Houston bank failed to clear a bank in Nacogdoches, Texas.

Thurmond said he organized the pageant because he "thought it would be real uplifting for the black culture."

Several contestants said they spent $350 to enter the contest, but were told after they arrived in Houston that there was not enough money to continue the pageant.

HOUSTON (AP) — A "Wild West" style shooting incident that left one man dead has been referred to a grand jury, police said Tuesday.

Darrell Eugene Porter, 25, died Monday night after he and a 21-year-old man apparently held a "shoot-out," according to officers.

Detective Vann Knox said the victim and the suspect got into an argument and that Porter left after telling Edwards to "be here when I get back."

Officers said Porter returned with a .22 caliber pistol and the other man apparently drew a pistol and fired when Porter reached into his pocket.

Police said the man gave a statement regarding the shooting.

---

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas highway department inspection has shown almost 40 Dallas County bridges are structurally unsafe and should be closed to traffic immediately.

Under federal guidelines, the bridges should not carry loads heavier than 6,000 pounds, said Mike Heise, maintenance engineer for the department's district office in Dallas.

"We were in charge of performing the inspection," he added. "...From then on, it's up to the cities and counties about what they're going to do."

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — The Missouri-Pacific Railroad has filed suit against the city government and school district here, claiming the company's property has been placed on the tax rolls at an inflated value.

The railroad asks that the city and school district be prohibited from enforcing their tax bills because "the method used to determine the market value is based on an arbitrary, discriminatory and fundamentally erroneous plan of valuation."

The lawsuit says the railroad would pay $3,271.70 to the city and $4,451 to the school district this year if it were taxed according to last year's appraisal.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mustang Island State Park suffered the worst damage of any state park from Hurricane Allen, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Officials said Tuesday damage from Hurricane Allen was estimated at $659,000, with an additional $133,00 damage done to the water exchange pass near the park.

The park headquarters building and other structures suffered minor damage. However, there was severe damage to roads, parking areas and utility systems when the hurricane pushed 12-foot tides across the park.

The undeveloped beach area on the northeast end of the park remains open to the public but the rest of the park will be closed for some time.

The department also said the Queen Isabella state fishing pier near Port Isabel is closed pending repairs to the utility system and parking areas.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Federal authorities have declared three more South Texas counties eligible for disaster assistance following Hurricane Allen, Gov. Bill Clements announced Tuesday.

The counties are Duval, Kenedy and Jim Hogg.

The federal declaration makes available such assistance as temporary housing, limited home repairs and Small Business Administration low-interest loans.

---

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Talk about possible new taxes on gas and oil is based on faulty reasoning and could put exploration efforts in a cost-price squeeze, the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association said Tuesday.

L. Frank Pitts, TIPRO president, said representatives of the governor were told last week that TIPRO would fight increased taxes "by concentrating more effort to educate the public about the impact of such taxes on explorers, royalty owners and consumers."

Ed Vetter, the governor's special energy advisor told TIPRO directors in a meeting at the Woodlands that studies of state revenues into the year 2000 indicated that oil and gas severance taxes probably would have to be increased because oil and gas production is expected to decline.

Scott Anderson, a staff analyst for TIPRO, said future projections of increased prices should bring more revenue into the state automatically and more than offset projected production decline without new taxes.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs will hold a hearing Sept. 4 on the effect of last year's legislation weakening the state's Consumer Protection Act.

"There was considerable discusssion over these amendments prior to their passage in 1979, and the subcommittee hopes to provide all interested parties an opportunity to assess the impact of the Legislature's action," said Sen. Ron Clower, D-Garland, subcommittee chairman.

Clower said the panel also would review the way Attorney General Mark White's office is handling consumer complaints.

White instructed his Consumer Protection Division to turn most routine complaints over to Better Business Bureaus for preliminary investigation and, if possible, resolution.

The subcommittee will meet in the Senate Chamber of the Capitol at 9:30 a.m.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Undertakers may not charge time price differentials when customers prearrange funerals and pay for them over several months or years, Attorney General Mark White held Tuesday.

White said a prearranged funeral contract is not a retail installment transaction, for which time price differentials are allowed.

"Clearly, the initial transaction is not a sale of tangible property; it is but the sale of a privilege to acquire it later," White said.

9-to-5 on Way Out?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 9-to-5 Monday-to-Friday grind may become a workaday relic — replaced by something called "flextime" — judging by the enthusiasm of California workers testing a new time schedule.

"I just love it. My morale is higher, and I am actually producing more than I did under the old schedule," says Jeanette Smith, a clerk in Los Angeles' personnel department.

Los Angeles and San Francisco are experimenting with flexible work schedules, or "flextime," as a means to increase productivity and reduce air pollution and traffic congestion at peak hours.

Flextime differs from the more often proposed four-day week. Every two weeks, Miss Smith works 80 hours spread over nine days — eight nine-hour shifts and one of eight hours — giving her an extra day off every other week.

"It's like a bonus having that extra day off," adds Fern Johnson, 29, a personnel manager, who is also on the so-called nine-80 plan. "I am able to use the time to do things with my family, like take the children to the beach and the amusement park."

In June, the Los Angeles City Council ordered plans drawn up by the end of the year to put some 37,000 municipal workers on flextime, although only two departments with about 800 employees have complied so far. It is the first major city in the nation to impose flextime across-the-board.

Most employees work the nine-80 plan, but some are being allowed to experiment with four 10-hour days each week.

Under both plans, Los Angeles employees may start their days anytime between 6:30 a.m. and 8:30 a.m., as long as they put in the required number of hours.

A few employees have been granted hardship exemptions because they cannot coordinate their longer flextime days with the shorter school or day-care schedules of their children.

San Francisco is easing into the plan more slowly, with only 200 employees in its public works department experimenting with flextime.

"This is a test," explains Jerry Costanzo, deputy director of the agency. "If it works here, the city may expand the program."

San Francisco lets workers set their hours, as long as they put in eight hours sometime between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. The sole restriction: everyone must be in the office during the "core periods" of 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. and 3:30 p.m.

"Nearly everyone on the program loves it, and productivity is increasing," Costanzo says.

The San Francisco plan was drawn up in bargaining with Local 21 of the International Federation of Professional and Technical Employees, which over the past five years has won similar contracts for about 600 other government workers in the San Francisco Redevelopment Agency, Alameda County and the City of Hayward.

"What we're trying to teach the employers is to make the worker task-oriented instead of time-oriented," says Dennis Bouey, whose union is in the forefront of pushing for flextime.

Most unions oppose flextime, seeing it as a way employers can get overtime work without paying for it. Bouey says most employers resist flextime "until they see how well it is working elsewhere. Then it becomes as much a matter of being competitive as it does of being progressive."

The White House, with grounds covering 18 acres, is part of the National Park System.

CHARLES GORDON DAVIS

Graveside services will be held Friday for Charles Gordon Davis, 91, of 216 Star, in Cave Hill Cemetery in Louisville, Ken. at 10 a.m. Funeral arrangements are under the direction of Pierson & Sons Funeral Home in Louisville.

Mr. Davis died this morning at 3:32 a.m. at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Born Sept. 9, 1898 in Covington, Ken. Mr. Davis was a retired employee of C.O. Railroad. His wife, Edna, preceded him in death in 1974. He came to Hereford in 1964 from Florida. Mr. Davis was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

He is survived by a sister, Mae Callahn of Cincinnati, Ohio; and several nieces and nephews, one being Mrs. Virginia Woodford of Hereford.

Man Attempts To Grab Girl

Hereford police are investigating a report from a woman concerning a man who tried to pull her daughter off a bicycle.

According to police, the 10-year-old girl was riding her bike down 15th St. when a man, who was working on his car, tried to grab her. He pulled her shirt, but the girl was able to get away.

Hereford High School cafeteria was broken into Tuesday, but employees said that nothing appeared to be missing. Entry was gained by breaking a wndow.

Earnest Condarco, 119 Ave. K, reported that someone broke the rear window in his car sometime in the last two days.

Hereford Volunteer Fire Department told police that someone removed $10 worth of tools from inside the fire station.

Albert Aguerro, 340 Ave. G, called police early this morning to report an attempted burglary at his next-door neighbor's house. Police said Aguerro was awakened by the sound of breaking glass, went to his neighbor's back yard to investigate and saw a man standing there.

The man fled when he noticed Aguerro, police said.

The occupants of the house were not at home, according to Aguerro.

Police Tuesday arrested a man for public intoxication and another for disorderly conduct, received a report of a harrassing telephone call and issued 12 traffic citations.

Couple Feted At 'Pounding' Party

Debbie Hoover and Greg Black were honored Tuesday evening with a "pounding" party in the backyard of Mr. and Mrs. O.G. Nieman's home. Guests, hosts and hostesses brought staple goods for the couple's kitchen and they were piled with a large wheel barrow.

Several flavors of homemade ice cream and cake were served. The serving table was an antique railway baggage cart where all the cakes were displayed on a pink cloth centered with an arrangement of silk flowers in shades of pink. Pink napkins were used.

Several games were played throughout the evening.

Special guests included members of the couple's families. They were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoover, parents of the bride-elect; Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Black, parents of the prospective bridegroom; Mrs. Blanche Williamson, grandmother of Miss Hoover; and the couple's brothers, sisters and their spouses. They included Mr. and Mrs. Steve Horrell of Canyon, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Sublett, and Mr. and Mrs. Carey Black.

Hosts and hostesses for the party were Messrs. and Mmes. Bub Sparks, Jim Perrin, Dean Herring, Jim Mercer, Elmo Hall, Bill Lyles, Robert Lloyd, Bud Eades, Arthur Clark, Rocky Lee, Tommy Braddy, Bob Gooch, Kenneth McLain, Jeff Smart, Jim Lowder, Elmore Rains, Bill Walden and O.G. Nieman. They presented the couple with a set of fireplace accessories.

Approximately 57 people attended.

The honorees plan to marry Friday evening in the parlour of the First Baptist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover will host a wedding party at Hereford Country Club following the wedding.

Out West

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Regarding the "half-sheep, half-human" letter that appeared in your column recently, I really don't believe it either–but listen to this:

Some time ago I met a young man, and during our brief conversation he told me his father was a sheepherder out West. I asked him, "Where out West?" He replied, "Montaaaa-aaaa-aaaa-aaana."

It kinda shook me.–Chuck From New Orleans, Not New Haven

DEAR CHUCK, You Rascal: Not ba-aaaaa-d.

Here's another letter with a little different twist for ewe.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Human males have been having sex with just about any animal that would hold still long enough, or could be beaten into submission.

As you said, animal genes and human genes will not "mix" – and it's a good thing. If they did, half the world population would consist of half goat, half fish, half horse, half cow, half pig, half dog, and probably half fencepost.–J.A.R., Paris, Ill.

DEAR PARIS: Several readers were unconvinced when I said it wasn't possible. So here's a statement from an authority, Dr. Milton Wexler, president of the Hereditary Disease Foundation, Beverly Hills, Calif.:

"The number and types of chromosomes in the sperm and eggs of humans do not match up with the number and types of chromosomes of any other form of life. So if they should get together, no fertilization could possibly occur."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Reading about the 15-year-old girl who was beaten up by her father moved me to write this letter. I wish all parents could envision the day when their children get big enough to hit them back. My husband abused our four children and me. In my ignorance I took the frustrations of my unhappy marriage out on the kids.

When the boys got big enough to flatten out their father, they did. The girls escaped as soon as possible by getting jobs after school and on weekends.

Today they are all married and have children. We are not welcome in their homes. The only knowledge I have about my grandchildren is what I hear from relatives. I am grateful when they bring snapshots so I can see how much the kids have grown.

I beg all parents to keep in mind that your actions today may have a big impact on what happens tomorrow. – Mellowed Too Late

DEAR MELLOWED: What a tragic story! In such situations I strongly advise counseling for the entire family. Although children who are mistreated often find it difficult to forgive, it can be achieved with skillful counseling. Parents who beat their children are often alcoholics or mentally ill and almost always, they were beaten by THEIR parents.

Some abused children live for the day to "get even." But this desire for revenge is destructive and needs to be rooted out with professional help.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I very much enjoyed the column on seat-belt safety, but please wake up and look around.

Why are there no seat belts on a school bus? Also, why don't the seats in the school buses face the rear? They'd be safer.

And why don't public transportation vehicles have seat belts? The metal on those seats is an orthodontist's dream. How about some answers, Miss Know-It-All?–Mt. Prospect

DEAR MOUNTY: Miss Know-it-all doesn't know the answers but she'd like to hear from someone who does.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious–lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The key to Popularity." Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois, 60611.

The Newspaper Bible

GOT PROBLEMS?
THEY MAY BE GOOD FOR YOU

From: James, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ.

To: Jewish Christians scattered everywhere. Greetings!

Dear brothers, is your life full of difficulties and temptations? Then be happy.

For when the way is rough, your patience has a chance to grow.

So let it grow, and don't try to squirm out of your problems. For when your patience is finally in full bloom, then you will be ready for anything, strong in character, full and complete.

If you want to know what God wants you to do, ask Him, and He will gladly tell you, for He is always ready to give a bountiful supply of wisdom to all who ask Him; He will not resent it.

But when you ask Him, be sure that you really expect Him to tell you, for a doubtful mind will be as unsettled as a wave of the sea that is driven and tossed by the wind;

And every decision you then make will be uncertain, as you turn first this way, and then that. If you don't ask with faith, don't expect the Lord to give you any solid answer.

A Christian who doesn't amount to much in this world should be glad, for he is great in the Lord's sight.

But a rich man should be glad that his riches mean nothing to the Lord, for he will soon be gone, like a flower that has lost its beauty and fades away, withered - killed by the scorching summer sun. So it is with rich men. They will soon die and leave behind all their busy activities.

James 1:1-11

Consumer Mood Good

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As measured by various researchers, the consumer mood has improved amidst one of the sharpest economic tumbles ever, but hedge your bets on a continuation — of the optimistic mood, that is.

It may continue, say some economic seers, their fingers crossed as they warn that "on the other hand" things may not be as they seem. And another group warns we could be entering phase two of the downturn.

There are clear reasons why consumer optimism grew, chief of them being that some discipline was restored to personal finances: credit buying became restrained; bills were reduced; savings were built.

The personal savings rate, which fell under 3.5 percent late in 1979, is now back to 4.7 percent, far below the 6 percent to 8 percent range that had prevailed since the 1950s but headed in the right direction.

At the same time, interest rates fell and mortgages became available. Some prices stabilized. And forecasts of sharp increases in the jobless rate didn't materialize. So why shouldn't depressed spirits have risen?

The trick now is to maintain the mood, and some economists think only magic could turn the trick. They point to rising interest rates, less mortgage money, higher food prices and forecasts of more unemployment.

Even the Carter administration, which knows as well as anyone that jobs and votes may be synonymous, holds to a jobless forecast of 8.5 percent early next year. And independent economists go as high as 9 percent.

But nobody — optimist or pessimist — seems to have the assurance he displayed a few months ago. The signals, never very clear even to those with advanced degrees, are more confusing than ever.

What, for example, do you make out of the administration's bad news forecast of 8.5 percent when some independent forecasters see nothing of the sort. And when, for example, the "Help Wanted Index" rises?

Well, what's it going to be? During the past few days there have been reports of companies unable to find sufficient skilled workers and reports of automotive and other companies laying off employees.

There have been announcements of higher interest rates and assurances from some housing people, deeply concerned about mortgage availability, that rates will fall again before the end of the year.

In recent days the U.S. Government has announced that the consumer price index rose not at all in July and reports from the same institution that food prices appear once more to be skyrocketing.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, August 27, the 240th day of 1980. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 27, 1945, American troops began landing in Japan at the end of World War II. It was the first foreign occupation of that country in modern history.

On this date:

In 55 B.C., Roman forces under Julius Caesar invaded Britain.

In 1776, British forces were victorious in the Revolutionary war battle of Long Island in New York.

In 1859, the first oil well in the United States was drilled near Titusville, Pa.

Ten years ago, a federal judge in Miami ordered an all-white cemetery to bury a black American soldier with full military honors.

Five years ago, Emperor Haile Selassie, Ethiopia's ruler for decades, died in his palace.

Last year, war hero Earl Mountbatten — uncle of Prince Philip — was killed in a boat explosion off the coast of Ireland. Irish terrorists claimed responsibility for that attack.

Today's birthday: economist Walter Heller is 65 years old.

Thought for today: Our task is to help replace their despair with opportunity. — President Lyndon Johnson (1908-1973).

Senior Citizens Invited To Attend Canyon Forum

Area Senior Citizens will have an opportunity to voice their opinions concerning the White House Conference on Aging at a meeting in Canyon Friday.

The forum is designed to compile opinions Senior Citizens have about subjects including social security benefits, medical bills, housing utilities, and employment opportunities. The information will be sent to delegates participating in the Conference in Washington, D.C. in December 1981.

Local meetings are being held throughout the nation in preparation for the national conference.

The Canyon Forum will begin at 9:30 a.m. with registration at the Canyon Senior Citizens Center, West Fifth Street.

The general session will start at 10:30 a.m. with Bob Davis, aide to Congressman Jack Hightower as guest speaker. Discussion groups will then be formed

According to Claudie Roundtree, a member of the senior citizen group in Hereford, approximately 20 to 25 people from Hereford are planning to attend the meeting.

"I think this will be a real good meeting. People from here will ride over together. Anyone interested can still sign up to go with us," she said.

Citizens from Randall, Swisher, Castro and Deaf Smith counties are invited to attend. Interested persons should contact the senior citizens center in either Tulia, Dimmitt, Hereford or Canyon. Transportation will be arranged.

The meeting is hosted by Farmers Union Green Thumb, Inc., Texas Department of Human Resources, Canyon Chamber of Commerce, Canyon Senior Citizen Center, Canyon Lions Club and Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

Rebekah Lodge Discusses Anniversary Celebration

A celebration of the Rebekah Lodge's 78th anniversary was discussed at the Tuesday evening meeting at I.O.O.F. Temple. The lodge No. 228 received its charter Oct. 11, 1902.

Noble Grand Verna Sowell presided at the meeting in which a short business session was held including reports of sick visits and greeting cards sent during the past week.

A Salad Supper was served to the 21 members attending the meeting.

Those present included Nellie Beauford, Leona Sowell, Edna Mathes, Beth Hall, Helen Sowell, Peggy Lemons, Martha Bridges, Ruth Rogers, Susie Curtsinger, Lydia Hopson, Verna Sowell, Roberta Combs, Ursalie Jacobsen, Anna Conklin, Ada Hollabaugh, Laveta Fitzgerald, Bessie Lawrence, Karrol Rittman, Glessie Shelton, Guy Lawrence and Merl Bridges.

Small Talk

By SUE COLEMAN

Visitors from Maricabo, Venezuela with relatives here are Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hershey and their children, Stephanie and Neil. Hershey is the son of Howard Hershey and the brother of Mrs. Dempsey Alexander.

He was born and grew up at Dimmitt while the family lived in that neighboring city. Now he works in offshore oil drilling in Venezuela.

Ruth and Juston McBride are hosts this week to their four-month-old grandson, John Robert Gilbert of Loveland, Colo. Incidentally the child's parents, Martha Anne and Bob Gilbert, are here too, if anyone is paying attention to them.

Marki and the baby plan to spend several days in Hereford, so she will have a chance to visit schoolday friends.

A visit by Kathryn and Jack Chapman's daughter and her son ended Sunday and they've returned to their home at Ben Lomond, Calif. Kit Saling and son, Brian, spent a late summer vacation here, their first visit to this part of Texas.

Of course the Chapmans showed them the sights of the area, and took them over to Palo Duro Canyon for a performance of Texas.

Jan Turrentine Whelan and her son, Bryan, came up from Lubbock Monday for a short visit with her parents, Johnnie and George Turrentine, who are just about to get moved into their new house on the Turrentine place west of the city.

Dr. Jordan Grooms was bringing his grandson over from Amarillo this week, too, at the young man's insistence that he wanted to go out to the farm. Dr. Grooms is the former pastor of First United Methodist Church here, now retired.

And the Turrentine family is amused at George's reaction to a camping trip he took with Dale McEachern last weekend. It seems that Turrentine is the type who had rather rough it in the best motel available than in a tent.

He was persuaded by McEachern to go up to the New Mexico mountains to cut some wood on a plot where they had a permit, but Johnnie says he complaiend that he still doesn't like to sleep on the ground "and it rained on us twice," in spite of the fact that his companion did the cooking and provided down-filled sleeping bags.

Mary Elizabeth and Leo Forrest, formerly of Hereford, were hosts at their home at Lake Tanglewood recently for a reunion of her family, the children of the late Mrs. M.F. Cherry who also lived here.

The two daughters are Mrs. Forrest and Ruby Kendrick Sears of Hereford, and their brothers are S.T. Cherry of Odessa, Bill of Fort Worth, whose wives accompanied them to the reunion and Schumann of Sun City, Calif., who spent several days here as Mrs. Sears' guest.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) — A North Carolina woman has charged in court that her sister transformed what should have been a dignified and quiet retirement for their aunt, entertainer Kate Smith, into "a horrible disaster."

Suzanne Andron of Raleigh, N.C., asked Tuesday in Manhattan's state Supreme Court that her sister, Katheryn Rodriguez, be removed as a conservator of Miss Smith's estate, contending she was getting "a free ride" from the ailing singer's financial assets.

Mrs. Andron charged that Katheryn Rodriguez and her husband, Guillermo, illegally moved into Miss Smith's three-bedroom house in Raleigh earlier this year.

Miss Smith, a diabetic, went into temporary insulin shock in August 1979 and the court appointed the two sisters and attorney Richard S. Becker as conservators to handle her financial affairs. They sold her apartment here and used the money to build her house in Raleigh.

---

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Country and western singer Barbara Mandrell showed Steve Stilling, an inmate at Oregon State Prison, that persistence can pay off.

Miss Mandrell, appearing at the Oregon State Fair here, agreed to do a free performance at the prison after she received several requests from Stilling, chairman of the prison's Jaycee chapter, and a petition signed by nearly all of the institution's 1,500 inmates.

During Tuesday's performance, Stilling presented Miss Mandrell with a hand-carved woodcut of her, carved by inmate Homer Dennison. The statute was inscribed with the words "Oregon State Penitentiary."

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Although Gov. Ella Grasso still suffers from the after-effects of radiation treatment, her doctor says X-rays indicate she's had no recurrence of the cancer that prompted surgery four months ago.

Dr. Joseph N. Russo described the X-ray examination Tuesday as a routine followup to the governor's April 3 hysterectomy, performed to halt uterine cancer. News of the X-rays, taken Sunday at St. Vincent's Medical Center in Bridgeport, surfaced only after a local radio station heard that Mrs. Grasso was at the hospital.

NEW YORK (AP) — Debbie Harry, lead singer of the rock group "Blondie," has sung "One way or another, I'm gonna get you" — and allegedly made the same point recently to a mazagine publisher.

Forum magazine editor Albert Z. Freedman said his publication had planned to use a photo of Miss Harry's face, by photographer Mick Rock, for the cover of its October issue. But the star demanded Forum run a full-length picture by photographer William Coupon, he said.

"She used all kinds of expletives and said she would sue if the switch wasn't made," said John Lombardi, Forum's executive editor. Miss Henry said she'd allow the magazine to use the Rock photo if it paid her $30,000, Lombardi added.

Students, Parents Rally for Prayer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Even a sign-carrying, prayerful crowd of 400 students and parents did not prevent the Lubbock school board from voting to curb prayers in school.

About 400 people rallied Tuesday at 6 a.m. on the parking lot of the Lubbock Independent School District building, carrying signs promoting prayer at the public schools.

"Practice what you teach — freedom of speech," "You vote out prayer, we'll vote you out," the placards read.

Speakers at the rally told of what their faith meant to them.

But during the regular board meeting, school trustees voted 6-0, with one abstention, to cut back the prayer policy in schools.

LISD board attorney Tom Johnson suggested the policy change, but did not specify whether the suggestion was in response to a federal court suit filed against the school district by the Lubbock Civil Liberties Union.

Johnson did, however, call the policy modification a "defensible policy."

LCLU attorney Thomas Griffith acknowledged the change was a signficant one but would not say how the lawsuit would be affected.

Under the new rules, students may pray silently or audibly except during class hours if it is not "disruptive."

The directive eliminated prayer or the reading of religious materials aloud or over the public address system during class hours. Students may conduct religious activities on LISD property but only before or after school hours.

Board President Monte Hasie said of the crowd, "Their rights are represented on this board."

Regulations Given for Food Stamp Recipients

Able-bodied food stamp recipients must actively search for jobs or be dropped from the program, according to regulations proposed by the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Labor.

"Under the proposed rules, people who fail to look for a job on their own or who don't report for the interviews at their state employment office will find their households dropped from the food stamp program for two months," said Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman.

Those are exempt from the work registration requirement are primarily the elderly and disabled, those already working, those responsible for the care of dependents, or those already registered for work under the unemployment insurance and work incentive programs.

The rules also require recipients who register for work to be called in to their state employment service, now identified as Job Service, in most states, for an interview and job classification.

Foreman said that under the existing program, funding limitations have prevented employment offices from actually calling in and interviewing any more than the most employable of the food stamp work registrants. Recipients who have reigstered for work but who have had few skills have often not had the benefit of employment offices services according to the assistant secretary. Under the proposed rules, the USDA would more than double the amount of funding to the DOL, raising the annual amount to 570 million so that DOL can reach these hard to place recipients.

State job service agencies would continue to refer registrants to potential employers, under the proposed rule. But food stamp job seekers would have to supplement this service with their own eight-week job search. The proposed rules would establish as a standard that work registrants contact between eight to twenty-four potential employers within the eight week period, and also report for two follow-up interviews with their employment counselors.

Requirements for each person's job search would depend on their individual circumstances and the availability of jobs in the community, as assessed by the job service counselor.

The state job services would report to state welfare agencies the names of food stamp job seekers who refuse to comply with the interviews or job search requirements, as well as those who find jobs.

While the work registration and job search regulations are expected to be in effect by early 1981, USDA and DOL plan to run an eighteen month demonstration project to test other ways, such as job-finding clubs, to match food stamp applicants with jobs.

Foreign Landowners Give Acreage Report

WASHINGTON, – Foreign groups and individuals have reported they owned 5.6 million acres (2.3 million hectares), or 0.4 percent, of U.S. agricultural land as of Feb. 1, 1980, according to a report released by Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland.

The report updates material published by last year by USDA's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service which reported 3 million acres (1.2 million hectares) of agriucltural land held, acquired or disposed of by foreigners between Feb. 1 and Aug. 24, 1979.

Current law requires USDA to make periodic reports on foreign ownership of agricultural land to both the president and to the U.S. Congress. The law defines agricultural land as all land used for agricultural, forestry or timber production. This includes land in agricultural use when purchased as well as land later converted to agricultural use. Tracts smaller than one acre and which produce less than $1,000 worth of gross agricultural sales a year are exempt from the reporting requirement.

Among other things, the study shows:

–Foreign ownership of U.S. agricultural land is concentrated in the South, although it is reported in all states but Rhode Island. Alabama, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas account for 32 percent of all foreign owned acreage.

–A few countries account for the bulk of foreign-held U.S. agricultural land. Investors from Canada, the Netherlands Antilles, West Germany, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and the United Kingdom hold 81 percent of all foreign-held agricultural land.

– U.S. entities with at least 5 percent foreign ownership held 54 percent of foreign-held agricultural land.

-- 46 percent of the agricultural land held by foreigners is forest land.

– Of foreign owners, 87 percent reported they intended no change in use of land they had acquired.

-- Nationally, foreign ownership is so small that, except in a few areas of concentrated ownership, the impacts appear to be minimal.

Under the law, foreign persons who owned land as of Feb. 1, 1979 were required to file a report with USDA by Aug. 1, 1979. Those who acquired or disposed of U.S. agricultural land after Feb. 1, 1979 must file within 90 days at the county office of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service serving the county where the land is located.

Helming to Give Marketing Advice

LUBBOCK – Ranchers attending this year's National Golden Spur award Livestock and Money Symposium will get free marketing advice from a livestock industry consultant who had made his living by sharing or selling his analyses since the late 1960s.

William C. Helming, who heads Livestock Business Advisory Services Inc. (LBAS) in Kansas, will speak to the Sept. 19 symposium at the Ranching Heritage Center of The Museum of Texas Tech University.

"Guidelines for Economics Survival in the Meat Business" is Helming's topic for the 10:30 a.m. keynote address. Registration begins at 9:15 a.m. The cost, including lunch is $15.

The symposium is scheduled to end at about 2:30 p.m., prior to the start of the National Golden Spur Award and Prairie Party beginning at 6:30 p.m. in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.Persons from Texas' major ranches and from eight states already have reservations for the Sept. 19-20 weekend events, which end with Ranch Day Sept. 20.

At the National Golden Spur Award and Prairie Party, seven of the nation's leading livestock organizations will honor Fred H. Dressler, Nevada rancher, for his contributions to the industry. The award has been created by Steuben Glass and incorporates a golden OK spur. On Ranch Day, the principal speaker will be Dr. Lauro F. Cavazos, president of Texas Tech University and the descendant of one of the nation's oldest ranching families.

At the Livestock and Money symposium a panel, representing the National Golden Spur Award Sponsors and the Texas Cattle Feeders Association and the Texas Tech College of Agricutural Sciences, will discuss the meeting's theme, "The Impact of National Policy on the Livestock Industry."

Helming, as president and majority stockholder in LBAS, offers advice, information and forecasts to help ranchers, farmers, feedlot operators, meat packers and other livestock industry segments survive.

"The Helming Report" – heard on more than 50 radio station farm news broadcasts – analysis and forecasts cash prices plus grain and livestock market trends. Long-range regional weather forecasts are compiled and distributed to LBAS Beef-Grain Call subscribers.

Helming has stressed personal, daily consultation with clients from all livestock, poultry and grain industries, via a toll-free In-Wats telephone service. He has been credited with initiating and helping to develop computerized market information services for what is now the National Cattlemen's Associaton and the American Hereford Association. In fact, LBAS was given birth by Helming and the Hereford group.

Helming has owned LBAS, headquartered in Shawnee Mission, Kan., since 1974. He holds bachelor's and master's degrees in agricultural economics from the University of Nevada, Reno.

He will be one of eight livestock industry specialists or spokesmen participating in the Livestock and Money Symposium.

David A. Witts, the Dallas lawyer whose firm has often represented agricultural interests, will bring his well-known wit to the symposium's luncheon.

He is a former U.S. Air Force officer who flew 50 combat missions during World War II.

Witts has not only developed his law career as an attorney for business and agricultural interests but also has become a cattle raiser himself. He has in the past expressed an extreme dislike for governmental interference in private enterprise. He is a member of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

His luncheon speech is titled "The Fox Is in the Hen House."

Witts' and Helming's talks also will center on the symposium's theme, "the impact of national policy on the livestock industry."

Also addressing the ranchers, educators and politicians attending will be Dr. Cavazos, new president of Texas Tech, and Dr. Samuel E. Curl, dean of the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences. Curl will moderate a panel discussion.

On the panel will be B.F. Phillips, president of American Quarter Horse Association; Merlyn Carlson, president of National Cattlemen's Association; Connie Townsend, president of American National CowBelles; John S. Cargile, president of Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association; Bob Bliss, president of Texas Cattle Feeders Association; and Joe Mertz, president of Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association who also will represent the National Wool Growers Association.

Phillips has raised and shown quarter horses since 1954, operating from his ranch and independent oil business near Frisco, Texas.

Carlson is a member of a family operation that operates a Nebraska commercial Angus ranch.

Mrs. Townsend and her husband, Herb, are Montana ranchers.

Cargile oversees the Production Livestock Auction Co. in San Angelo, is active in the operation of the San Angelo Feed Yard Inc. and runs both commercial cattle and sheep ranches.

Bliss is vice president of Friona Industries Inc., a publicly held corporation that custom feeds cattle, makes and sells commercial cattle feeds and markets animal health supplies.

Mertz is a veteran New Mexico rancher recently returned to Texas.

The National Golden Spur Award sponsors are the American National CowBelles and the American Quarter Horse, National Cattlemen's, National Wool Growers, Ranching Heritage, Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers and the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers associations.

Choice Corn

Area farmers observed some 75 corn varieties and 16 sunflower varieties during a field day conducted by Jimmy Christie Seed Co. and Frito-Lay Tuesday afternoon at the Christie farm west of Hereford. Commercial and food-grade corns received particular attention during the tour, which featured commentary from officials of a number of seed companies. Bobby Crownover, of Northrup King Feed, located in New Deal, is shown here holding an ear of PX 75 corn.

Importance of Seed Breeders Outlined

COLLEGE STATION -- "Contrary to a growing popular opinion, seed breeders are not leading us down a road to ruin," says Dr. Samuel D. Cotner, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Cotner reports that seed breeding has taken more than its share of abuse in the last few years. The truth is that seed breeders are very important to the food chain.

Many people apparently think that because some of the older standard varieties of vegetable seeds are dropped each year in favor of newer hybrids, which are combinations of species, there is a "shrinking of the gene pool." These people believe that the decrease in the number of different genes will result in weaker plants, setting the stage for insect and disease plagues.

"Not so," says Cotner. He insists that these reports come from misunderstandings about the use of different varieties. "These people are confusing varieties developed for the commercial grower with those intended for the home gardener."

Cotner explains that sometimes sacrifices must be made in a plant's taste, appearance, color or form in order to gain an advantage in another area. For instance, there are tomato varieties which have a very firm flesh, tough skin and maybe an indifferent flavor. "But these were developed for the commercial grower because they will ripen at the same time and grow to a uniform height, enabling harvest by mechanical means, he says.

Another example is the long, mild-flavored beans used by the canning industry. These varieties have less taste, but they were developed for canning with the emphasis placed on production, appearance and disease resistance, not just taste.

Cotner says that this crossover of varieties has been blown out of proportion. "Not all new varieties of vegetabes are being developed solely for the commercial grower," he confirms.

An example of a successful hybrid developed for the home gardener is the new snap pea, "Sugar Snap." Its vines grow to a height of six to eight feet which makes it impractical to harvest with machinery, Cotner explains. Its success as a garden vegetable is evident across the nation – more than 700,000 pounds of seeds of this variety were sold to home gardeners for the 1980 growing season.

Another example is the "Gold Rush" hybrid zucchini squash. Its fruit occasionally has a green cap which makes it unattractive to the commercial packer. However, this minor flaw in color is immaterial to the gardener who enjoys the compact plants and full flavor, Cotner contends.

"Home gardeners have benefitted greatly from the work of researchers and breeders, especially in the area of disease and insect tolerance," says Cotner. "Once breeders have identified and reinforced a specific inherited character, they can usually splice it into new home garden varieties."

Seed breeders are keenly aware of their role in developing increasingly productive food sources and of the importance of keeping a wide genetic base to work from. They also know what home gardeners want and need in vegetable varieties and are investing heavily in that area. "Worldwide," says Cotner, "nearly 100 improved vegetable varieties were introduced last year.

"The world food supply would be in bad shape without the productive, disease resistant varieties developed by scientific breeding," he concludes.

Heifer Development Vital With Cattle

COLLEGE STATION - "In the cattle business," remarked Dr. James N. Wiltbank, "the most important part of herd management is to develop heifers correctly."

Dr.Wiltbank is an internationally recognized animal reproduction physiologist at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Beeville.

"The place to start is when calves are weaned," he added. "At this stage a cattleman can start with what he already has, and also it's the time to select and to sort heifer calves by weaning weight."

He emphasized that a cattle producer should select the heaviest heifers for replacements or for expansion of the herd.

"The heavier the better," Dr. Wiltbank assured. "The heavier the heifers are at beginning of breeding season the higher percent, or the faster, they will mate with a bull."

Dr. Wiltbank has conducted research for many years to determine the effect of first calf heifers in reaching puberty, pregnancy and calving.

"A rancher should always keep back or select more than he figures he may need. Say, if he plans for 20 then select 25," he explained. "And he should set a target weight for these heifers to reach by beginning of breeding season. Weights should be at least 650 pounds for Angus, 700 pounds for Herefords, and for the heavier crosses such as Brahman crosses, 750 pounds.

He said that heifers need to be 14 to 15 months old at beginning of breeding season, calving as two-year-olds. Dr. Wiltbank also said that it's good cattle economics for heifers to begin calving at two.

"They are capable at that age," he added. "So, why not?"

Three things happen when a heifer bred for the first time is too light. Not many of them get pregnant, calf losses are high and occur generally at calving time, and not many rebreed for a second calf.

"Development of heifers correctly is the key to productive performance," Dr. Wiltbank concluded. "But so few cattlemen do it."

Dr. Wiltbank and his associates prepared a detailed report on "Improving Pounds of Calf Weaned by Heifer Selection" which is available by contacting him at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Star Rt. 2, Box 43-C, Beeville, TX 78102.

In the photo at right, Richburg almost accomplishes his goal before another defensive cohort beats him to it. Either way, Wartes still became a victim of the sack in the end. The Whiteface's defensive unit will be looking to do the same thing in the upcoming scrimmage with Sweetwater in Snyder, Thursday at 6 p.m. (Brand photos by Mauri Montgomery)

In First Grid Action of Season

Whitefaces Scrimmage Sweetwater

THE 1980 HEREFORD WHITEFACES WOULD WALK OR TRAVEL 200 MILES BY BUS TO GET THAT FIRST SCRIMMAGE!

The slogan had a pleasant ring to it, and only lacked national recognition because it hadn't been pasted up on highway billboards yet.

But the actual fact was there. The Whitefaces didn't care how far they had to go to hit someone as long as it was someone other than themselves, and so they picked Sweetwater as opponent, Snyder as the location, with the time of battle set for 6 p.m. Thursday.

And for the eager addition of the 1980 grid crew, the clash wouldn't come 200 miles or a moment to soon.

"Right now this scrimmage is coming at a good time for us because our players are getting a little tired of the day-to-day workout schedule against each other. I think they want to get out and beat on someone else other than themselves for a change," said Cumpton.

And according to the head mentor, the Herd will have ample opportunity to do just that as the two squads go into a controlled scrimmage consisting of 60 plays for both the offensive and defensive teams.

"The scrimmage will be controlled only due to the fact there won't be any kicking game and the coaches will be on the field with the players," Cumpton said. "But otherwise it will be a full speed and a live look at what both teams need to work on."

"The good thing about this scrimmage is that it will give all of our players an opportunity to play some, and from there we can see where we're at and where we need the most work. That's the most important thing – finding out where we need to work in preparation to season play," he added.

"We're also a little over a week away from our first game of the season and after we've reviewed the film of the scrimmage we'll be able to determine who needs to start and who needs to play at what particular positions."

Asked why the scrimmage site was set so far way in regard to past scrimmages the Whitefaces had encountered against area teams, Cumpton said it was one of the few contests the coaching staff could come up with at the time.

"At that point in time, Sweetwater was about the only team we could find to have a scrimmage with," he said. "The reason for that small selection of teams we had to pick from, was that we prefered not to scrimmage someone we'd see later in the season. And most of the other available teams already had scrimmages lined up. We hope that this one with Sweetwater will be just a one-year deal, and in the future we'd like to pair off against a team like Clovis – that's who we wanted this year, but they were already involved. We did the best we could this year."

Live coverage of the contest will be featured on Hereford Cable Television, Channel 6, at the 6 p.m. starting time.

Cliff Harris Return Seems Doubtful

DALLAS (AP) — Don't look for retired Cliff Harris to abandon the oil business to play free safety for the Dallas Cowboys.

At least's that's the opinion of Coach Tom Landry, who has talked to Harris about the possibility of replacing the injured Randy Hughes, who will miss at least two months following shoulder surgery.

"In a general way, Cliff confirmed what I feel (on the matter)," Landry said Tuesday. "Cliff has given his heart and body to the Cowboys for 10 years and he was regarded as the best in the business.

"Now he has a new career and he likes his job. Of course, he has been bombarded by people wanting to know if he plans to comeback."

Landry said he got the feeling Harris "wants to continue on the road he is on. I would never do anything to make him do something he doesn't want to do...I would not want to jeopardize his new career."

Landry said flatly "There's nothing to be done at this moment."

Pressed about the future, Landry said "I'm not expecting it (Harris' return)."

Landry praised the current free safety, Dennis Thurman, saying "he has played extremely well–as good as any of our defensive backs. The only limitatiion is his size (170 pounds)."

The Cowboys axed veteran backup fullback Scott Laidlaw Tuesday to make room for rookie fullback Tim Newsome and halfback James Jones, who have made the squad.

"It was difficult to cut a veteran who had contributed to the success of the Cowboys, but we had to do what was best for the team," said Landry.

Jones, a third round draft pick from Mississippi State, and Newsome, a sixth round pick from tiny Winston-Salem College, both have been impressive during training camp.

Landry Favors Eagles in 1980

DALLAS (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles can no longer draw on the intangibles that drive an underdog.

The Eagles are the ones on the spot this year in the National Football Conference Eastern Division, not the defending champion Dallas Cowboys.

"Based on their performance last year, you would have to pick Philadelphia," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "We have too many question marks and a new quarterback."

National magazines, preseason newspaper articles and other media are putting the favorite role squarely in the lap of Coach Dick Vermeil and his talented Eagles, who compiled the same 11-5 record the Cowboys did last year.

The Cowboys benefited from a favorable tie-breaker situation to earn the NFC East title. Both teams lost in the playoffs.

Dallas players, normally burdened with the role as the critics' choice, are relishing the forecasts of doom for the Cowboys, who lost quarterback Roger Staubach and free safety Cliff Harris to retirement.

"This team worked harder in the offseason than any I've been around," said veteran linebacker D.D. Lewis. "We have a lot to prove. We intend to prove a lot of people wrong."

What the Cowboys have to prove is that Danny White can effectively replace Staubach; that Dennis Thurman or Benny Barnes can play free safety now that Randy Hughes is lost to surgery; that strong safety Charlie Waters can make a successful comeback from surgery; and that defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones can make a comeback from pro boxing.

The Cowboys have question mark after question mark. Can smallish running back Tony Dorsett carry the load of a Landry-projected 25 to 30 runs per game? Can Aaron Kyle overcome surgery to be a factor at cornerback? Can Mike Hegman or anybody play strongside linebacker with the big play ability of the departed Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson?

The Eagles have exclamation points where the Cowboys have question marks.

Wilbert Montgomery can handle the heavy-duty running for the Eagles. He proved it with 1,515 yards last year.

Philadelphia's secondary was the fourth best in the National Football League.

The Eagles have a veteran, confident quarterback in Ron Jaworski.

They are deep and talented at linebacker and that's without counting middle linebacker Bill Bergey, who is back and seems to have conquered knee surgery which kept him out in 1979.

Washington, the New York Giants and the St. Louis Cardinals all possess trouble-making ability in the division with perhaps the Redskins owning the best legitimate chance of passing the Eagles and the Cowboys.

Quarterback Joe Theismann is coming into his own for the Redskins with such excellent receivers as John McDaniel and Ricky Thompson as sure-handed targets.

John Riggins walked out of camp but the Redskins could still be salty overland behind Clarence Harmon and Buddy Hardeman.

Coach Jack Pardee's crew will be pesky if not dominant on defense with such big play makers as strong safety Ken Houston, defensive end Coy Bacon, cornerbacks Lemar Parrish and Joe Lavender and linebacker Brad Dusek.

The Redskins (10-6 in 1979) also get to open the season on a Monday night at home against the Cowboys. Washington is 8-0 in RFK Memorial Stadium on Monday nights.

St. Louis has a new coach, Jim Hanifan, but the same old touchdown-throwing quarterback, Jim Hart.

The Cardinals thrashed Cleveland 42-0 in their exhibition opener and came from behind to beat Tampa Bay 21-14 to show they aren't all that far away from putting it together.

Hanifan helped build the "Cardiac Cardinals" of the mid-1970s under Coach Don Coryell and was the offensive coordinator of the record-smashing San Diego attack in 1979.

Aggies Boast Cautious Optimism

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M quarterback Mike Mosley, who grew up running the wishbone offense, had a few things to learn last season when coach Tom Wilson installed the "I" formation — like reading defenses.

"In the wishbone we never had to worry about reading the secondary or the linebackers. We just looked at the tackle and the end," Mosley said Tuesday. "But I got a lot of help from coach (Greg) Davis in the spring, and it's all starting to come together."

"Now I go up to the line and I know where the opening is going to be and where to throw the football."

The development of Mosley as a passer, coupled with his 4.3 speed in the 40-yard dash, gives Wilson cautious optimism.

"Nobody is jumping up and down making cocky predictions. But we've all got a feeling that we can be very competitive," Wilson said. "We have a football team that has character enough to do whatever it wants to do."

Mosley, possibly the fastest quarterback in college football, had always been feared as a runner but never developed as a passer. Wilson says opponents will be unpleasantly surprised this season.

"He's made more progress this year than at any time since he's been at A&M," Wilson said.

"Most of the pro scouts have looked at Mike as a wide receiver or defensive back in the pros because of his speed. But now a few of them are starting to consider him as a quarterback."

During his first three years at A&M, Mosley gained a reputation as a big play quarterback and that also presented a problem.

"My only criticism of Mike has been his lack of consistency," Wilson said. "He may have tried for the big plays too often. Sometimes he made them, sometimes he didn't."

Mosley confirms the criticism. "I'd try to make something happen on every play," he said. "I'd drop back, look at one receiver, and if he wasn't open I'd start trying to get out of there."

Anderson—Liberal And Conservative

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — To women, advocates of federally-funded abortions, energy conservationists, and supporters of gun controls, John B. Anderson is a political liberal.

To those opposed to new federal programs to aid the poor, to supporters of big cuts in federal taxes and to labor unions, the independent presidential candidate is a confirmed fiscal conservative.

On most issues of the 1980 campaign, Anderson has been mapping a middle ground between the deeply conservative views of Republican Ronald Reagan and the record established by Jimmy Carter during his four years in the White House.

"Governents can create an atmosphere that is conducive to the advancement of public good," Anderson said on June 18, "but government is no substitute for the energies and talents of the private sector."

Anderson's most striking proposal so far, calls for a 50 cent-per-gallon increase in gasoline taxes. Revenues from the tax would go to reduce Social Security taxes for most Americans.

The tax idea is typical of the pragmatic, sometimes unconventional, approach Anderson takes to national problems, an approach that makes it difficult to tag him with political labels.

On the gas tax proposal, Anderson combined liberal Democratic suggestions — that some way must be found to force energy conservation — with Republican insistence on tax reductions.

The tax also represents another consistent theme of Anderson's campaign, a belief that the federal tax system should become the major instrument to put new life into a listless economy, help reduce inflation and unemployment and improve productivity.

The 58-year-old Anderson argues that with the right tax incentives American businessmen could spend more on research and new equipment to provide new jobs.

But unlike Reagan, who supports an across-the-board tax cut of up to 30 percent over the next few years, Anderson says his proposals would be selective, targeted to solve specific problems.

On energy, Anderson supports an end to government control of natural gas and oil prices. He was the senior Republican on the House Energy Committee, which partially enacted Carter's energy program, first proposed in 1977.

But unlike most Republicans, he believes that to reduce American dimported oil, some way must be found to reduce U.S. consumption of gasoline.

That is a fundamental break with Reagan, who says that only if oil companies are permitted to operate without interference will they find and develop conventional and unconventional sources of energy, including crude oil reserves.

Urging a new spirit of American self-sacrifice, Anderson says that by shifting revenues from his gasoline tax to reduce Social Security taxes, he will return proceeds of energy conservation to the economy.

By adding 50 cents to the current 4-cent-per-gallon federal gasoline tax, Anderson hopes to eventually cut back foreign oil imports, from 8 million barrels daily to about 7 million barrels, and make a significant reduction in the nation's $100 billion imported oil tab.

The congressman estimates that Americans would cut their consumption of gasoline by about 10 per cent, with the $55 billion in anticipated additional revenues put in the Social Security system.

About $4 billion would go for increased benefits for all Social Security retirees, and $46 billion would be applied to reducing Social Security taxes for American workers, a cut averaging about $120 a year for most workers.

An additional $5 billion would go for tax breaks for businesses hit by the declining consumption of gasoline.

In more than a year of running for president, Anderson has established a reputation for touching off political controversy by taking strong positions on issues in appearances before groups with militant beliefs directly opposite from his own.

Last winter, Anderson left members of a New Hampshire anti-gun control organization reeling when he said the federal government should register handguns if the states do not.

In Detroit, hit hard by layoffs from the auto companies, Anderson said he flatly opposes federal loan guarantees for the staggering Chrysler Corp.

Before a meeting of the National Junior Chamber of Commerce, a group that excludes women from membership, he made a strong pitch for the Equal Rights Amendment and was booed.

Much of Anderson's early campaign has been focused on getting on ballots. He faces state laws that discourage efforts made outside the two established political parties.

As a result, many of his specific programs have yet to be heard. A series of issues speeches is planned for the fall.

He also urged that revenues from federal excise taxes on alcohol and tobacco be diverted to municipal governments for rebuilding streets, water systems and bridges, and for workers many metropolitan governments are now unable to afford.

He also has proposed a tax break for small businesses that move to or remain in deteriorating inner-city neighborhoods.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
Help for 'rummy' nose

DEAR DR. LAMB — A long time ago I read in your column about blood vessels on the nose. Mine are broken and I'm afraid my nose will become bulbous. Your article mentioned a medication that you can take to prevent this. I asked my doctor about it and he said it was just from blowing one's nose the wrong way. His, by the way, is really bad. I realize no physician can know everything so I dropped the subject. It's getting worse, though, and before it's beyond the help of medication I'd appreciate some information from you on what could be done about it.

DEAR READER — It's not uncommon to have increased prominence of small veins in the nose as a person gets older. It's part of life. However, if you're talking about the problem of acne rosacea, which is the enlarged bulbous red nose that some people develop, there are things that can be done to help prevent progression of the condition.

It used to be said that people with the large red nose had a "rummy nose" and it was associated with drinking alcohol. It is true that anything that increases the blood flow through the skin and, consequently, to the skin over the nose may contribute to the problem. However, people who have never had a drop of alcohol to drink may develop such a nose. In the extreme case, plastic surgery is sometimes required to produce a more acceptable looking nose.

Individuals who have any evidence of this, such as lots of prominent veins, can be put on tetracycline antibiotics. For best results, tetracycline is given as 500 milligrams twice a day. As the condition begins to improve, the dose may be reduced to 250 milligrams daily; as even more improvement is noted, it may eventually be reduced to 250 milligrams every other day.

If the condition begins to flare up after the antibiotic is stopped, it can be reinstituted. Some doctors recommend continuing a low dosage of tetracycline for a year or more to induce a good remission. The exact reason that the antibiotic helps is not known but it is a well-documented observation.

In addition, an individual with such a problem should avoid all alcohol, hot foods and drinks and spicy foods. It's probably also a good idea to eliminate coffee, tea and all drinks containing caffeine, which, by the way, include chocolate.

DEAR DR. LAMB — If you eat a lot of sugar and then drink alcohol, will you lose weight? Does the alcohol work on the sugar somehow?

DEAR READER — That's a pretty wild question. Sugar has a lot of calories and contributes to obesity. Alcohol has even more calories — seven calories per gram — and is a major cause of the national problem of obesity, because there are so many people who drink too much alcohol. The only thing that alcohol and sugar do together is to make you fat. Neither contains any important vitamins or minerals that are useful for your health.

Readers who want information about alcohol can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for The Health Letter number 14-6, Alcohol Can Be Hazardous to Your Health. Send your request to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have severe insomnia. I'm a 43-year-old female and I've had this problem for years. It's getting worse. Sometimes I go for two weeks without hardly even one hour of sleep a night. My only relief comes from sleeping pills or alcohol, both of which cause very ill aftereffects.

I have read that alcoholics in some cases have been treated with massive doses of B vitamins successfully. Do you know of any cases like mine that have been treated this way with certain kinds of vitamins? Is there any doctor anywhere who can help me? I need help desperately. I've been to the mental-health clinic in my county with no helpful results. How can people go without sleep and keep their sanity?

DEAR READER — Many people complain of insomnia. The first point to establish is how much time a person really does sleep. Our sense of time is disturbed during sleep and sleep-like states. A good example here is the simple dream. We may feel that it's lasted for hours and in truth it may have lasted seconds. In a similar way, a person may think he's been awake for hours and slept very little when in reality he has only been awake a few minutes.

You may need to seek out one of the sleep clinics; there are a number of them in different universities. Ask your doctor if there is a nearby sleep clinic that you may go to. They will study your sleep during the night. They can record brain waves and tell exactly when you're sleeping.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 10-6, Sleep and Insomnia. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It will give you a lot more information on the nature of sleep, dreams and how much sleep a person needs.

The Health Letter I'm sending you includes a list of things that most people can use to help improve their sleeping habits. This includes changing one's lifestyle. Specifically, eliminating coffee, tea, colas that contain caffeine and cocoa.

It's important to wind down at the end of the day so you'll be ready for sleep. That means do not exercise in the hour or so before bedtime. It means not doing mental work that requires a lot of concentration or involves you mentally. It means not rehashing old disappointments or having difficult family discussions immediately before the bed hour. And it also means going to bed at the same time each night so you'll develop a habit in an environment that doesn't provide any stimulation — a room that is totally dark and relatively quiet.

I'm not at all pleased about your use of sleeping pills and alcohol. I do hope you don't use the two in combination. That can sometimes be fatal. Most sleeping pills don't help people very long and should not be used on a regular basis. No, there's no way that vitamins will help your insomnia.

It was a good idea to go to the mental-health clinic. Sometimes people have insomnia because of an unrecognized depression or from other psychiatric problems.

Bugs, bugs everywhere

DEAR POLLY — I do hope you can help me as I am desperate. Silverfish used to be just in my basement but now I see them upstairs and have used borax but it does not seem to help. — MARJORIE

DEAR MARJORIE (and JOANNA who has the same problem) — Some authorities recommend that fresh pyrethrum powder be dusted around the infested places. This has to be repeated often and works best as a follow-up for a good insect spray. Perhaps the next two Pointers from readers will also help. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — To get rid of silverfish I mix equal parts of boric acid and sugar and sprinkle in the cracks and crevices or wherever the silverfish are. I also find this is good for roaches.

Try using rubbing alcohol on clothes that have ballpoint ink stains. Use full strength and then rub with a clean cloth before washing as usual. — FRANCES

DEAR POLLY — To rid your home of silverfish line shelves, dresser drawers, etc. with newspaper. The little varmints seem to hate printer's ink. I started doing this 20 years ago and have not seen one since. — RUBY

DEAR POLLY — Before discarding an old pin cushion open it up and you might discover a treasure of good needles that have worked their way inside and out of sight. After years of accusing my family of losing all my good needles I opened an old one before throwing it away and was amazed to discover about 80 perfectly good needles. — MARY

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the style of so many pop cans on today's market. No matter how careful one is the pop still splatters all over when a can is opened. What a sticky mess it is.

I save all bits and pieces of soap until I have a cupful. Then I grate them on my hand-held cheese grater and mix these soap bits with just enough warm water so I can form a ball. Let it dry and have a nice round ball of soap that floats. A child can do it and it is so economical. — SANDY

DEAR POLLY — If you are looking for something different for a senior ladies' luncheon, consider a shower for a grandma-to-be. The guests bring little gifts that grandma will need when the new baby visits her. This makes for a fun time. I know, since such a party was given for me. — MRS. J.A.H. Sr.

Polly will send you one of her signed thank-you newspaper coupon clippers if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — I had trouble with the filters in my drip coffee maker slipping down into the basket while the coffee was brewing. I solved this problem by using two paper clips on each side of the basket to hold the filter in place. There are no more grounds in my morning coffee. Be sure to remove the clips from the basket just as soon as the coffee has brewed or they will rust. — KATHY
