Bush lead triples to 930, hearing looms

By David Espo
Associated Press

George W. Bush's campaign fiercely attacked the hand-recounting of votes in Florida's overtime presidential election Saturday, depicting a process riddled with human error and Democratic bias. Al Gore's lawyers defended the effort in papers filed with the state Supreme Court.

"I think when the American people learn about these things, they're going to ask themselves, 'What in the name of God is going on here?'" said Montana Gov. Gov. Marc Racicot, enlisted by the Bush campaign to lead the GOP assault. He alleged ballots had been dropped, misfiled and mishandled by exhausted — or pro-Gore — officials.

Eleven days after America voted, the final tally of overseas absentee ballots showed Bush lengthening his lead from an almost invisible 300 votes to a still-minuscule 930 out of 6 million votes cast. There was conflict there, too, as the GOP charged Democrats with systematically challenging votes cast by members of the armed forces.

In rebuttal, Gore spokesman Chris Lehane accused Bush of injecting "raw, crass partisan politics into a situation that ought to be guided by the laws of our land."

All sides readied arguments for Monday's hearing before the state Supreme Court. Ruling unanimously on Friday, the justices stopped Secretary of State Katherine Harris from disallowing the hand recounts and certifying Bush the winner, at least until it can consider the issue.

Controversy trumped certainty from one end of the state to the other.

Some teens being turned off by process

Most current high schoolers were just "small fries" during the last presidential election in 1996. And four years before that, during the 1992 election, that same group was just a collective gaggle of wide-eyed first- and second-graders, possessing only slightly more knowledge and cognizance of the world outside their own than the average toddler. So it stands to reason that this year's presidential race has been, for all intents and purposes, the average teen's first mindful dose of how the American political system works.

And that is not necessarily a good thing.

Last week, students at Midland and Lee High Schools gave unique accounts of how they perceived the bizarre 2000 election, with opinions that ranged from the frustrated to the amazed to the indifferent.

"It seems to me that all politicians are crooked," said Lee junior A.J. Phillips. "You have to be willing to accept and tolerate a certain level of corruption, no matter who you decide to vote for."

Phillips, who is 16, went on to say that even though he is an Al Gore supporter, he has no

A&M remembers its fallen Aggies

By Matt Josefy

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M University, home of the Twelfth Man, the Corps of Cadets, and the Aggie Spirit, was in the national spotlight one year ago Saturday when 12 students were killed in the tragic collapse of their annual bonfire.

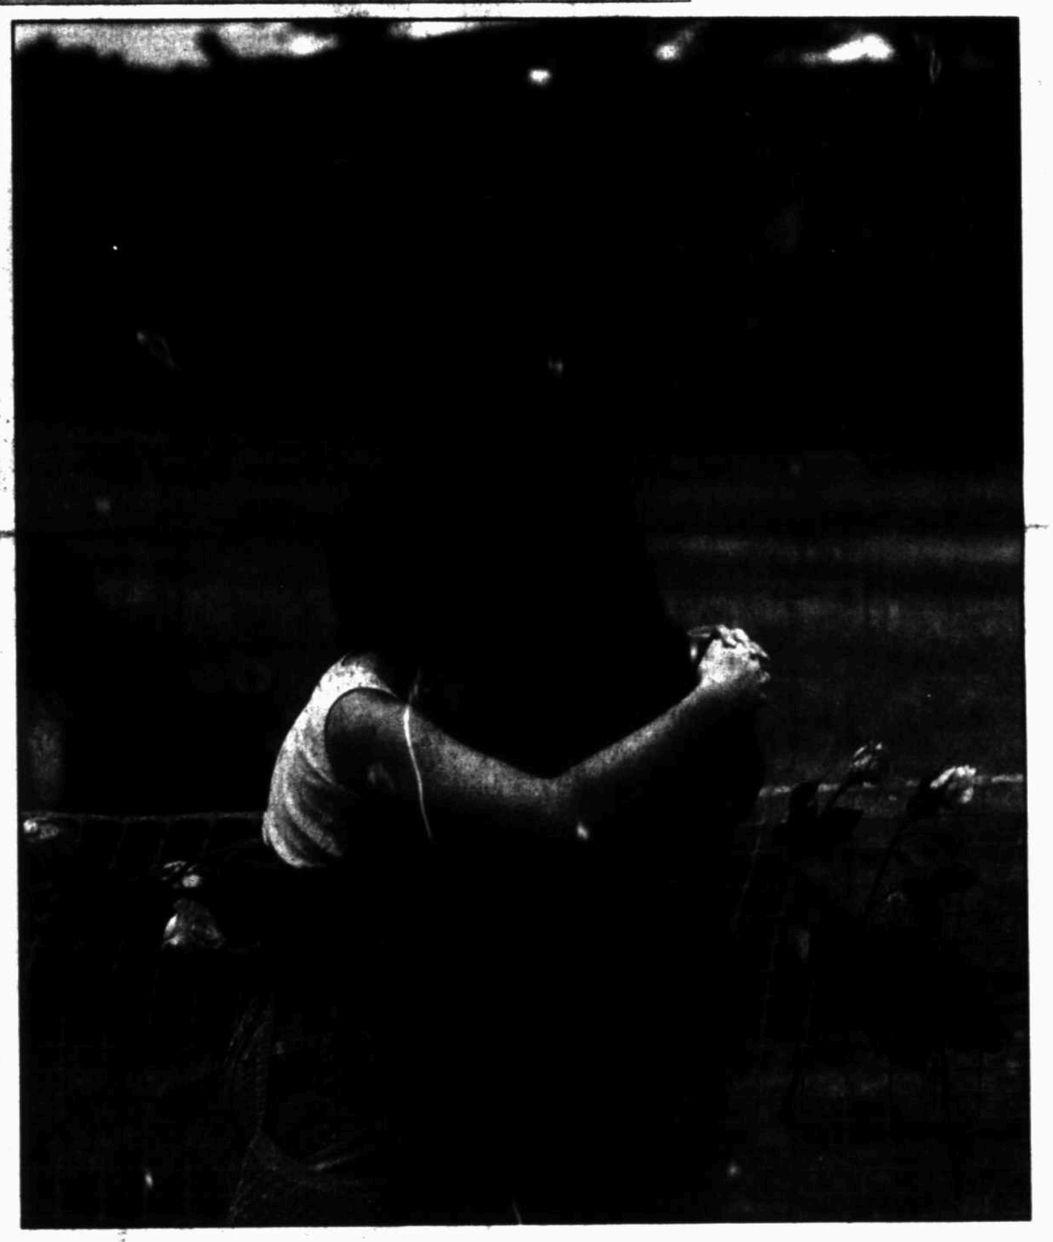

The campus was once again illuminated Saturday at 2:42 a.m., the time of the collapse, this time by tens of thousands of candles held by family members, students, and former students.

"On this solemn morning, I experienced something that many campuses, groups, and even small families are only able to read about and imagine," stated Kevin Edwards, 1999 Midland High graduate and now a member of the corps. "The love and remembrance for those 12 fallen Aggies ev ly one year ago was expressed by a very large tion of the Aggie family."

CAF votes for name change

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

A decisive vote by the Confederate Air Force (CAF) membership has been interpreted as a "mandate" to change the name of the 1957-founded aviation organization to "more accurately" reflect its mission.

"It gives us the opportunity to continue our real mission and not defending something (the Old South's Confederacy) that we never had any part of," CAF Col Bob Thompson of Crawford, Colo., said on Saturday at CAF headquarters in Midland.

The CAF constitution requires at least a 75 percent majority vote to effect a name change, noted CAF spokeswoman Tina Corbett. And 81.2 percent of the 2,201 voting colonels opted for the name change. All told, about 30 percent of the CAF worldwide membership of 7,380 regular colonels cast ballots.

The vote on a name change was taken at the Oct. 6, 2000, CAF annual meeting at AirSho 2000 in Midland and by absentee balloting.

However, the general membership vote on the new name will not be taken until October 2001 at AirSho 2001 in Midland. The approved name would become

Ciro Sanchez takes top honors from Realtors

Permian Basin Realtors loudly applauded and rose to their feet Saturday night as outgoing president of the Permian Basin Board of Realtors Bill Scott announced that instead of naming a Realtor of the Year, the board had awarded 77-year-old Ciro Sanchez the Golden Eagle Award in recognition for achievement and service far surpassing the normal criteria for Realtor of the Year. Sanchez was also made a life member.

Scott said that in its 53-year history, the Permian Basin Board of Realtors has awarded fewer than 10 members with such an honor.

Brief snow gives Midland winter wonderland look

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

Midland became a winter wonderland snapshot Saturday afternoon when a brief snowfall set a new record. According to the National Weather Service, Midland received two tenths of an inch of snow.

It marked the first time Midland has seen snow on a Nov. 18 in 71 years, according to Brian Curran, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service.

Curran said the snowfall for the year measures up to 1.20 inches.

"There seemed to be heavier snow across the north side of Midland, but temperatures are above freezing. It melted as it fell, so there wasn't much accumulation," Curran said.

Although the snowfall fell short of the three to five inches predicted for Midland, it seems the meteorologists just missed the location. The National Weather Service in Carlsbad, N.M. reported two to three inches of snow.

Curran said forecasting snow is one of the most difficult things in the weather business.

After storm, both sides want calmer political skies

By Tom Raum

■ News analysis

AUSTIN — After the tempest over ballots clears, job No. 1 of the next president, whether George W. Bush or Al Gore, will be to unite a divided nation. "The outcome for the moment is a tie, but the mandate is for bipartisanship," said Republican Jack Kemp. In an atmosphere of animosity, that may prove difficult.

The words of the former Buffalo Bills quarterback, New York congressman and 1996 vice presidential nominee echoes those of leading members of both parties.

Bitterness between Democrats and Republicans has only deepened in the hand-to-hand, ballot-by-ballot recount combat in Florida.

After the 1998-99 impeachment battle, it seemed that partisanship could hardly get worse. But, in many ways, it has.

Yet the next president may have little choice but to reach out to those in the other party. The alternative could be two or even four years of governmental paralysis.

The victor will know that roughly half the nation's voters wanted someone else.

Likewise, about half the membership of the House and the Senate will be from the opposing party. Republicans came out of the elections with the narrowest margin of control in recent history, clinging at best to a 51-49 Senate majority and a 222-211 edge in the House.

"We're going to have even more responsibility to work together to try to get things done constructively," said Sen. James Jeffords, R-Vt.

It may not always be evident from the sharp rhetoric from their lawyers and other advocates, but both candidates have already issued pleas for healing the wounds of one of the nation's most closely fought elections.

Bush: "America has a long tradition of uniting once elections are over."

Gore: "However it comes out, we're going to come behind the winner."

Those in both camps suggest that the winner will have little choice but to include a number of prominent members of the other party in his Cabinet. In the victory speech bound to be delivered one of these days, the winner will have to tread carefully to avoid antagonizing the other side.

And, whether it's Bush or Gore, he'll have to reach out aggressively to mend fences with the loyal opposition in Congress.

Marshall Wittmann, senior fellow for the Hudson Institute, a conservative research organization in Washington, D.C., said: "I think the energy will come from the executive branch. The question will be who the president seeks out to strike deals with."

But Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political scientist, said the chances of partisan sniping were more, not less.

While there will of necessity be "various degrees of coming together" to win approval of essential legislation, Sabato suggests it will take more time to heal the wounds opened up by the contested election. "It has brought back all the hard feelings from the impeachment and added another layer," he said.

In particular, he cited Saturday's dispute over the rejection of dozens of absentee ballots in Florida from those in the military. In short order, the discarding of those ballots has fanned animosity among the military towards Gore — a distrust that may undermine his ability to serve as commander in chief if elected, Sabato suggested.

Christopher J. Deering, a political science professor at George Washington University, said that if Bush becomes the president, "You'll have a bolstered group of Democrats who will try to block things. That's just more gridlock, not cooperation."

But Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said that he, for one, would not look for ways to frustrate a Bush presidency. "I'm not going into this new Congress with that motivation at all," he said, adding that he would "find ways to reach across the aisle."

Texas Gov. Bush liked to say during the campaign that he saw himself as "a uniter, not a divider," saying he had repeatedly reached out to Democrats in the Texas legislature.

"I think the chances for unity are quite high. Bush has demonstrated a capacity for bipartisan leadership in Texas," said Virginia Gov. Jim Gilmore, a Republican.

Still, one leading political figure is upbeat that the nation's wounds will heal — no matter who wins.

"There is a lesson in this and I would simply say that I think this country is totally resilient, totally strong," said former President Bush, the GOP nominee's father.

"The presidency itself is resilient and strong, and whatever the outcome, our country will continue to be seen as the beacon of democracy. Leaving out who wins or loses, this country will be just fine," said the elder Bush.

Interest groups taking sides in ballot dispute

By Jonathan Salant
Associated Press

'It makes perfect, if troubling, sense that these interest groups would be involved in the post-campaign.'

— Rogan Kersh, political science professor

WASHINGTON — Call it Phase Two. With neither Al Gore nor George W. Bush able to declare victory, special interest groups have simply continued the presidential campaign.

The AFL-CIO holds rallies calling for all ballots to be counted. Christian Coalition volunteers watch the votes being tallied. The Sierra Club urges members who had problems with the Florida ballot to submit affidavits. Former New York Reps. Daniel Frisa and John LeBoutillier help a conservative Internet site raise money for an ad campaign alleging Democratic vote fraud in the Sunshine State.

"The election's not over," said Rogan Kersh, a Syracuse University political science professor. "Therefore, they're going to try to influence it. We've seen independent groups become increasingly important to the campaign itself. It makes perfect, if troubling, sense that these interest groups would be involved in the post-campaign."

In four Florida cities on Thursday, the AFL-CIO, People for the American Way, Sierra Club, and several other organizations held simultaneous news conferences to demand manual recounts to ensure that partially punched ballots rejected by machines are counted.

"Unless the public is satisfied that the election process has been done fairly and the winner has won fair and square, there's a real question about how the next president will govern, whoever he is," said Nancy Coleman, a spokeswoman for People for the American Way.

The Sierra Club has encouraged its members who may have misvoted on Election Day because they were confused by the ballot layout to submit affidavits for lawsuits.

"We are involved in elections. We support candidates. Our people go out and vote," said Frank Jackalone, Florida staff director for the environmental group, explaining why the organization has included itself in the post-election tumult.

On the other side of the political spectrum, a legal firm affiliated with the Rev. Jerry Falwell's ministry was involved in a lawsuit to try to stop the manual recounts in Palm Beach, Broward and Miami-Dade counties.

Judicial Watch, a law firm that has brought several suits against the Clinton administration, has enlisted more than 300 volunteers to inspect uncounted ballots in several Florida counties.

Judicial Watch President Tom Fitton said the group wants to see why the ballots were thrown out, and will provide tallies of the different reasons.

"We're going in to come up with numbers that are independent from the political partisans on the ground," Fitton said.

The group has sued Broward, Palm Beach and Volusia counties to allow its volunteers to inspect the ballots.

Not all the action by special interest groups is taking place before judges.

"The fight goes on on many levels," Republican political consultant Craig Shirley said. "It's not just in the courtroom, it's in the court of public opinion."

Shirley's firm is trying to get conservative commentators, such as former Reagan aide Frank Donatelli and election lawyer Cleta Mitchell, on radio and television.

The AFL-CIO, meanwhile, was sending some of its members to a rally Saturday in Riviera Beach demanding all ballots be counted.

"This is about every citizen having the right to vote and legitimately having the expectation that their votes will be counted," said Marilyn Lenard, president of the Florida AFL-CIO. "The labor movement has always been encouraging all citizens to participate in the electoral process. We're going to remain in the forefront of saying that citizens' rights should be ensured."

Meanwhile, the Internet site NewsMax.com is trying to raise money for an advertising campaign accusing Democrats of election fraud in Florida. A letter seeking contributions has been signed by former Reps. Frisa and LeBoutillier, among others. It says the "country teeters on the edge of a constitutional crisis the likes of which we have never witnessed."

problem pointing out the vice president's faults and shortcomings, saying they can't be viewed as a big deal these days.

"I support Gore because I'm afraid of gun violence, and Gore's policies agree with me in that regard," Phillips remarked. "But it should be obvious to everyone that the guy is a big-time liar. That whole thing about how he invented the Internet, and about how his mom would sing him those union lullabies — all lies. What's important, I guess, is his policies."

When asked if he thought his generation could help clean up politics in the future, Phillips sighed, shook his head, and responded, "I sure hope so."

Joel Grube, a 16-year-old Lee High sophomore, wants George W. Bush to win. But Grube expressed frustration with the entire process, rather than just the lack of resolution in Bush's favor. "I don't like Gore at all," he said. "But his lack of willingness to concede the election is bound to hurt him in his future endeavors."

Grube also declared an utter disgust overall, viewing the entire election method as being tainted. "Sometimes I just think the whole thing is a giant conspiracy," he said. "I never would've thought an election could go like this."

This cynicism was a seemingly common theme, no matter which side of the political fence the students were on. "It would be wrong for Gore to keep dragging this thing out," said Lee junior Joey Hollcroft. "Neither one of them is a perfect choice for president, but Bush has definitely acted more honorably throughout this election."

Hollcroft added that in the eyes of the rest of the world, America must look pretty silly right now.

Some students were far less passionate, however. The indifferent, listless views of the undecided were alive and well within the teen population.

Midland High sophomore Antonio Aguirre said both candidates look like buffoons, and seemed to express amusement with the situation. "Bush couldn't win his own brother's state, and Gore couldn't even win in Tennessee, which is where he's supposedly from," Aquirre said. "Neither one of them must be that great."

Other teens, like MHS students Albert Perez and Rebecca Hignojos, said Bush is the real hero of this year's election.

"The fact that Gore was unable to cleanly win the election in light of the awesome economy is proof that there are a lot of people questioning his motives and agenda for the future," Hignojos said.

Perez agreed, saying Gore was simply riding President Clinton's coat tails, and would have never gotten so many votes otherwise.

As of Saturday, Bush was leading Gore in the Florida tallies by more than 900 votes. But due to a series of court decisions on Friday, the declaration of a president-elect could still be days away. The electoral college will cast its votes on December 18.

DAY: Crowd in arena rises and sings 'Amazing Grace' ready for bed. Sirens soon drowned out the Dixie Chicks song that I remember hearing just before I fell asleep, and I know that I wondered what could have possibly happened at such an hour on a Wednesday night. I eventually slept calmly, however, completely unaware of the events taking place so close to my own dorm room.

Mindy woke me up around 6 a.m., whispering to me that the stack had fallen.

In my struggle to wake up, I simply answered that we could rebuild it. I had no doubt about that.

Then she whispered that four Aggies had already died.

I opened my eyes and awoke to the longest day of my life. I followed her down the hall and stared at the television showing images so close that I could be there, in that nightmare, in five minutes flat.

After the news and its tragic ramifications finally sunk in, I hurried back to my room in anticipation of my family's worried phone calls. Granny had already left a message to find out where I was, and Dad had e-mailed me from work. I contacted both to reassure them that I was OK.

Terrified at the thought of Mom hearing the news from another person and then not being able to get in touch with me, I tried her busy line again and again. When she answered, she had not yet heard of the tragedy, so I explained what little information I knew to her. Almost immediately, she asked about Brett Owens, whom she knew had been frequently working on stack through grocery store conversations with his mother.

The maternal fear in her wavering voice and the quiet tears I knew were falling only made it clearer to me what other Aggie parents around the state and country could only be imagining about their own children.

The campus was silent and gray. The helicopters hovering above only added to the strangeness of the day, and students walked from place to place in a disbelieving trance. We couldn't eat, we couldn't study, we didn't go to class.

We piled into buses at dusk and walked into Reed Arena, still not accepting that we were actually going there for the purpose of mourning 10 Aggies (at that time) who had died not even 24 hours ago. This could not be happening, but it was. Again, we cried as the speakers tried to console us. We sobbed when they broke down themselves because they hurt as much as the rest of us.

After the ceremony had formally ended, I saw a group of Corps boys stand up on the floor, arms around each other. I heard a faint sound that I immediately recognized as "Amazing Grace." I felt the whole arena rise to its feet and join in, and I felt myself hanging on to two of my best friends, trying to sing as tears flooded down my face. Never have I felt such love, support, and unity with my Aggie family. Never do I wish to feel such loss, pain, or sorrow with them again.

Back home after the ceremony, I again tried unsuccessfully to study for my looming biology test. Two friends knocked on the door and told me a new name that had been added to the list of the deceased. Michael Ebanks. This time, a familiar name, one that had been haunting me all day.

I met Michael at Fish Camp. He was in my discussion group and we had become close over the semester. I saw him daily walking around North Side, at Sbisa (dining center), or at our Fish Camp reunions. I had seen him just two days ago after dinner, when he had taken extra ice cream bars and offered me one. Now, he was dead. Now, it was even more personal.

I visited Site for the first time that night, and cannot describe the feelings invoked by seeing those huge, harmless-looking logs, or by the machines still removing them from the collapsed structure, or by the pots hanging on the orange fence, or by the single log bearing flowers and stuffed animals in memorial to those who had been with us so shortly before.

I have never seen a Bonfire burn, and know that if I do, it will never encompass the spirit of the true Aggie tradition. Another bonfire may be built in the future, but only in the hearts of the Aggie family will the real fire still burn.

Stephanie Mullins, salutatorian of Lee High School Class of 1999, is in the Business Honors Program at Texas A&M. She serves as an Executive Officer in Alpha Chi Omega sorority and as an Aggie Fish Camp Counselor.

FALLEN: Despite rain, crowd gathers for memorial service

mourning with them, the crowd gathered at the Bonfire site for a cannon volley, roll call, and candle lighting, concluded by a bagpipe rendition of "Amazing Grace."

"I'm not going to say the memorial service was meant to bring closure, but we've been so desensitized with all this talk about what's going to happen to Bonfire that we turned our attention off the fact that 12 people died last year," Heather Howbert, a 1999 Midland Lee graduate, said.

This year's memorial service was modeled after a similar event that took place the night of the tragedy, which included the burning of candles "to represent the burning of the Aggie spirit within," rather than a stack of logs that has towered year after year as the largest such display of engineering and school spirit.

That spirit, Brett Owens, another 1999 LHS graduate, admits, is somewhat difficult to understand.

"It would take up a whole paper to explain. It's just that by having that one thing in common as Aggies, they are your friend and you would be willing to do something for them," Owens said. "You can call it a cop out if you want, but it's the only answer I have."

"It's more than just a school or an education, once you go to A&M, you are automatically tied to every single person in the world who's ever gone to A&M," Ms. Howbert said. "The Aggie Spirit made sense to me when I saw everybody completely come together after such a tragedy."

"People were praying all the time, going from being friends with people to being their support system. Nobody else will ever really understand, but every Aggie is your brother and sister," Ms. Howbert said. "These people and Bonfire '99 need to be remembered, especially for the freshmen who can see what this is all about."

Upper classmen were quick to ensure that freshmen understood the significance and the solemn feelings, preparing a special presentation entitled "Rebuild" to educate freshmen on one of the university's most time-honored traditions.

"As a freshman I felt more a part of the campus because everyone comes together like a family unit. But I'll never experience the grief of those who were present when Bonfire fell," said Elizabeth Webb, MHS 2000 graduate and first-year Aggie.

"I didn't get a really good feeling for what this was all about, until I heard people crying at the memorial," David Poole, one of those freshmen and also a 2000 graduate of LHS. "I began to understand what these 12 people really meant to this campus and this university. That's when it really hit me what I was out there for and what I was remembering."

"I looked up when we were leaving and you could see people in front of me for miles and there were just as many people behind us," Poole said.

"It's an incredible feeling to know that I attend a university with such loyalty among the students for such a great mass to come out and support those who died," Ms. Webb said.

Like many of the others present, Koby West, a 2000 LHS graduate, was unable to explain what he felt at the brief ceremony.

"You just want to be here and be a part of what's going on," he said.

The collapse: 'It was completely surreal'

By Matt Josefy
MRT Correspondent

COLLEGE STATION — They say from the outside looking in you can't understand it, and from the inside looking out, you could never hope to be able to explain it.

"You don't have to have Bonfire to have Aggie spirit, but Bonfire was one of the greatest expressions of Aggie spirit," said Brett Owens, a 1999 Lee High School graduate.

Bonfire, a tradition of more than 90 years to motivate the Aggie football team before playing its archrivals "t.u.," or the University of Texas, has been cancelled for this fall and next in the wake of a tragedy in which the stack of logs collapsed.

"That was my only night off from stack that week. I was actually walking back from the garage with a buddy about five minutes after it had fallen," said Owens, who was soon one of the thousands who volunteered to help in whatever way they could.

One of Owen's former Lee classmates, Heather Howbert, recalls hearing of the tragedy and the way that it affected her first hand.

"At first I just thought 'Oh, no. We're going to have to rebuild," she said. "When we found out people were on it when it collapsed, it was completely surreal. That they'd been having Bonfire for over 90 years and it happened on our year was very unreal for awhile."

"One of the guys was in my engineering class. We'd just taken a test the night that it fell," she said. "It was weird having to go to class after that. Our class was pretty much in mourning."

"We're vulnerable being freshman. We'd joined organizations and done everything right and all of the sudden, we were just hit with something like this. Going through that was very hard," she said.

Ms. Howbert had been impressed by the 1998 Bonfire.

"Before I thought it was just a big pep rally," she said. "It was incredible when I learned what all went into it and how much hard work was put forth to actually build it," she said.

Naturally, she participated at the cut site and also at the stack upon her arrival in College Station, doing everything from driving trucks to serving as the "scarecrow" to guide logs going up onto the stack.

Aggies begin preparing the annual Bonfire months in advance, clearing donated trees and performing the actual construction of the multi-tiered stack. Why did Owens and others dedicate so much of their time to the construction of an enormous stack of logs that was to be burned prior to the day after Thanksgiving showdown with the Longhorns?

Kevin Edwards, a corps member and 1999 Midland High graduate, explained, "Bonfire to me is a time where all differences, individualistic and social separations become obsolete. Everyone is bound together by a common goal which, by the required effort alone, brings a remarkable number of people both currently attending or former students of A&M together."

"Bonfire was an awesome, incredible experience I learned a lot from both before and after," Owens concurred. "It was amazing that we could build something like this. Hundreds of people go out and cut down trees with just axes. It's fun to do some raw labor and some dirty work."

What are the best memories?

"Sitting around covered in mud, eating lunch with people and telling stories," Owens recalled. "It's getting up at four in the morning and going to Albertson's to buy the oddest breakfast possible. I could never get enough of sitting in a swing on the stack at 3:30 in the morning."

"Anyone who has ever experienced the building of Bonfire, any part of it from cut, to load, to stack, knows the bond that is created by the joint effort of working side by side with someone that you don't even know for hours at a time. Working until you are physically drained and can't possibly do anymore," Edwards said. "Then it is your turn to step down, knowing that someone with the same desire and love for Bonfire will take your place and continue the tradition."

"I believe that this bond that is created is part of the reason that Bonfire is so incredible. This feeling of union with literally thousands of Aggies is shared all across the world," Edwards said.

This year, Owens has invested much of the time he would have spent working on Bonfire with the freshman to whom he serves as an advisor in his dorm.

"We did tear down a house for Habitat for Humanity, but it's hard to find labor-intensive activities like Bonfire," Owens said.

Bonfire, which will be reinstated with many changes in 2002, is a continuous topic of debate as students establish their views and compile their memories.

SNOW: Chance of precipitation expected around Thanksgiving

(From 1A)

"A small amount of moisture can make a lot of snow, and in West Texas we just don't see much of the stuff," Curran said.

The forecast through Thanksgiving looks like travelers won't have a problem in the Permian Basin right before the holiday.

"After Saturday's storm system passes over, we're looking at warmer temperatures for Sunday through Tuesday. Wednesday may even get into the 60s," Curran said.

"A new storm system will arrive around Thanksgiving, dropping temperatures and bringing a chance of precipitation. We expect the clouds to thicken up then," Curran said.

Curran said he didn't expect the precipitation to turn to snow during Thanksgiving, but others area — including Big Spring and Carlsbad — could see snow.

Although arriving in the Permian Basin shouldn't be a problem, Curran did caution that the storm system may cause problems for flights and drivers.

He advised always watching the weather at destination cities and points in between, and said, "Thanksgiving is always a hectic time to travel."

Saturday's snow didn't cause any problems for Midland International Airport, according to Don Shepley, airport supervisor.

"There wasn't any accumulation, so it didn't affect us at all," Shepley said.

Although he said the airport isn't anticipating any problems for Thanksgiving, he did say travelers should remember to arrive at least an hour early for departures.

"Thanksgiving is the busiest travel holiday of the year, both flying and driving," Shepley said.

Blast guts South Dakota town's only school, two dead

PLANKINTON, S.D. (AP) — Searchers digging through the burned rubble of a school on Saturday recovered the body of the school administrator, the second death from a gas explosion that destroyed the town's only public school.

School board President J.P. Studeny Jr., who survived the Friday night explosion, said the Plankinton School was a total loss. The board met Saturday to discuss how to educate their 190 students, drawn from a more than 250-square-mile area, most of it rural.

"At this point in time, everything is indicating accidental in nature and we're investigating it under those circumstances," said state Fire Marshal Dan Carlson.

School officials smelled the gas at about 5:30 p.m. Friday and evacuated wrestlers from the gym, Carlson said. The explosion happened about two hours later, when only Studeny and three others were inside. The school's custodian also died in the blast and a firefighter remained hospitalized Saturday.

Investigators determined the explosion was caused by a propane gas leak that was somehow ignited, Carlson said. He said the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms would help investigate.

Rescuers on Saturday pulled sheet metal, concrete and lumber from the rubble and passed them down a line of about two dozen firefighters to get to a basement storage room where one man had been trapped overnight.

They last had voice contact with the man late Friday, about three hours after the blast, when he said he was pinned but breathing, Carlson said.

Carlson wouldn't identify the man but community members said he was the school's top administrator, Dave Grode.

Schools from other towns have offered to take the Plankinton School students and have offered books, computers and other supplies, but the school board said Saturday that it wants to keep students in town while it rebuilds rather than busing them to other towns.

"I think the sooner we get these kids together the better it's going to be," said board member Gary Kristensen.

The board canceled classes for the n. t week. It didn't take any official action on the students' future beyond then but discussed using churches and vacant meeting rooms for classrooms.

"The consensus of all the kids is we want to have school here," Don Johnson, a Plankinton graduate and father of a high school student, told the board. "With no question, the community is going to rebuild this school."

At the school on Saturday, band uniforms, musical instruments, graduation robes, class photographs and other salvaged property were piled outside the building. There were sheets of ice everywhere from water used to fight the fire.

Firefighters had emptied the town's water tower to fight the blaze, leaving residents without water, then hauled water from surrounding towns.

Counselors were on hand to help people in the small town where everyone knows everyone else, said Fire Chief Dwight Schamber.

Plankinton has about 600 residents and is about 90 miles west of Sioux Falls.

"When you lose the school it's like ripping the heart out of the town," said Rep. John Thune, R-S.D., who visited the town Saturday. He said the Federal Emergency Management Agency had been contacted to see if it could provide any help.

National Zoo earns approval for two giant pandas' import

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Zoo has received a federal permit that clears the way for two giant pandas to come over from China for the next 10 years.

Zoo officials called a news conference for next to Tuesday to provide more information about the trip Mei Xiang, a 2 1/2-year-old female, and Tian Tian, a 3 1/2-year-old male, will make from the Wolong Reserve in China's Sichuan Province, where they were born in captivity.

The pandas' arrival is part of a 10-year, $10 million loan arrangement between the zoo and the Chinese government. The money will go to China for conservation projects. Any cub born at the zoo also would become Chinese property. The bears will be sheltered in a panda house renovated at a cost of $2 million.

HONOR: Sanchez moves to Midland in 1942

(From 1A)

Sanchez, who arrived in Midland as a migrant worker in 1942, has spent his entire life here, with the exception of two years of U.S. Army duty during World War II. He began his career in real estate in 1962, when he began selling insurance and real estate. A year later, he established his own real estate office.

He was the first president of the East Side Lions Club in 1956, and was a committee member of Objectives for Midland in 1964. A founder and charter member of the Midland Hispanic Chamber, he was a guiding force in adoption of the Lamesa Road project that galvanized Midland's east and south side merchants and directed the city's attention to the economic potential of its development.

In 1997, he led the effort to build the memorial to Midland's Hispanic war veterans located adjacent to Unity Park at Lamesa Road and South Street.

In 1999, Sanchez became the fifth recipient of the City of Champions award, given by the city of Midland to citizens who have made substantial contributions to the community over an extended number of years.

The board also honored Realtor Sheila McKown as the 2000 Rookie of the Year. Ms. McKown became a Realtor in 1998, and has worked on the PBBR Governmental Affairs Committee, the TREPAC Golf Tournament, and the Realtors' United Way fund raiser.

Ms. McKown will serve on next year's board of directors, and as Education Committee Chair for 2001.

Realtor Jana Tucker, who succeeded Scott as president of the Permian Basin Board of Realtors, summarized the theme of the banquet, "2001: A Real Estate Odyssey," by stating that "Technology is moving so fast, some feel it is extremely difficult to keep up, yet in our Permian Basin, in every office, our real estate agents are not only keeping up, but leading the way.

"All the Realtors and all our affiliates are stars in our universe, the affiliates (abstract offices, mortgage lenders, media, etc.) are stars because they help all the buyers and sellers.

"We're a part of the largest trade association in the country, the National Association of Realtors, which is 760,000 strong. Our main goal is to protect and preserve homeownership and private property rights of the American people."

Ms. Tucker added that one of her main goals for the coming year is to work more closely with the Odessa Board of Realtors, and to continue building the bond between Midland and Odessa Realtors, "thereby building the entire Permian Basin."

ELECTION: Republicans charge Democrats with attempting to 'manufacture votes'

(From 1A)

structing a flawed recount process, Democrats said the GOP was forcing interminable delays.

"We will all be here until Christmas if this continues," said Charles Burton, a member of the Palm Beach County canvassing board deep into the hand recount of 462,350 ballots.

Passions rose later in the day when Republicans accused officials in Miami-Dade County of planning to take some ballots that can't be counted by machine, determine the voter's intent, then mark new ballots accordingly — pink-colored for identification — that the machines would accept.

"They've gone from counting votes, to looking for votes, to now they're going to manufacturing votes," charged Rep. John Sweeney, R-N.Y., who arrived in Florida during the day.

Mayco Villafana, spokesman for county, said if ballots are contested by either side, "the canvassing board can take that card, replace it with a pink duplicate and anyone can tell that it is a duplicate card and that there is an original."

Up the coast in Palm Beach County, Burton said the recounts were unprecedented.

"I don't think there is anyone in this room who has done this before."

Or anywhere else, for that matter, in a contest that left Bush and Gore dangling and the nation without a president-elect 11 days after the votes were cast. Neither man emerged from Election Day with enough Electoral College votes to claim victory.

And that made Florida, where Bush's brother is governor and where Gore and running mate Joseph Lieberman campaigned energetically, the decisive state.

Gore has pressed for the recounts, in the hope they will allow him to overtake Bush's narrow lead.

By early evening, the vice president had a net gain of 55 votes. Recounts from 210 of 609 precincts in Broward County showed him with a gain of 59 votes, but new totals from four of 531 precincts in Palm Beach County showed Bush with a gain of four.

CAF: Ghost Squadron among names being considered effective in January 2002.

Names would be proposed by CAF members, and a peer group of seven colonels would select four names to be placed on the ballot. Suggested names, Ms. Corbett noted, include Ghost Squadron, Colonels Air Force, Commemorative Air Force, and Heritage Air Force.

The old CAF name and its "Confederate" stereotype have inhibited the raising of funds from image-conscious corporations wary of the CAF name and what it conjures up, according to CAF officials.

Nevertheless, "There is excitement" among corporations "to do things" to benefit the CAF, noted CAF Col. Joe Cowan, the 57-year-old Wichita, Kan.-based chief of staff of the 11-member General Staff or board of directors.

The name "Confederate" in some quarters has become a liability. And the late Lloyd Nolen, a CAF co-founder, had forecast that liability in the 1970s as "the outfit," as he called the CAF, expanded.

"Lloyd Nolen in the 1970s brought up the fact that this name, as we grow, can be a liability to us," said Thompson, former CAF chief of staff. "He was a visionary."

The international aviation organization was launched by a Rio Grande Valley band of five flying enthusiasts who in 1957 had purchased a World War II P-51 Mustang fighter, called Old Red Nose, for $2,500.

Since then, the CAF has evolved to a 9,000 members, including 7,380 member-colonels, and more than 140 World War II-era (1939-1945) warplanes.

While the membership is nationwide and worldwide, there are CAF wings and squadrons in 27 United States states and in four foreign countries — Australia, New Zealand, France, and Switzerland.

The CAF's mission is to locate, restore and maintain in flying condition World War II-era aircraft that represent America's dedication to freedom and to honor the men and women who designed, built, maintained, and flew those aircraft.

"We are all equal" in the CAF, Cowan said. "We are all full colonels in this Confederate Air Force. There are no generals. There are no privates. That is being humorous. We have some members who think they are really colonels. It started out as a joke."

The CAF's 11-member General Staff in number equals the Confederacy's 11 states which had succeeded from the Union in 1860 and 1861.

CAF Col. Ray Kinney, 58, of Dallas noted that the CAF is "a very emotional organization" that is imbued with the history of World War II.

"And the support of all our people is based on a warm love of the aircraft and a love of the history," said Kinney, an executive who flies the vintage P-40 Warhawk and Corsair fighters. "We are a passionate organization. So we have those people who are very passionate for the name, and we have some people who are passionate against it."

Kinney noted that CAF "benefactors encouraged us to change" the CAF's name to better reflect its mission and to get rid of the Confederacy stereotyping.

"In many people's minds, the word 'Confederacy' brings up the an image of slavery and discrimination," Kinney said. "We, in no way, are associated with that kind of stuff. So, it gives us, in a way, a black-eye."

In the CAF's early years, "It was fun ... to talk about the Confederacy. The world has changed," Kinney said. "The Confederate Air Force has changed since then. So, it is appropriate in the spirit of that change we also change the name."

European Union begins building its own armed force

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The European Union begins building its own defense force Monday, a 60,000-man rapid reaction corps some say strengthens European security and others believe could be the first step in wrecking NATO.

Just a year after the 15 EU leaders decided at their summit in Helsinki, Finland, to launch the process, EU nations will begin pledging troops and equipment for the new force, which is essentially to be used for humanitarian, peacekeeping and peacemaking duties.

The Europeans say they need this force to act in crises where NATO as a whole — and the United States in particular — does not want to get involved. Some in the United States and Europe, however, view the push for a European force as part of a French-led effort to dilute Washington's influence on the continent.

Javier Solana, the EU's chief of foreign and security policy, says the Americans have no reason to worry.

"By pulling its full weight, the European Union will contribute to trans-Atlantic relations by better sharing the burden of security," Solana said. "We are doing what they have urged us to do for decades."

The United States says it supports the EU's foray into military affairs, known as the European Security and Defense Policy, as long as it's done right.

"Done properly, ESDP can increase the capabilities available to NATO and the EU to deter or respond to crises," Alexander Vershbow, the American ambassador to NATO, said in a speech last month. "Done poorly, this process can divide the trans-Atlantic alliance, lead to decreased U.S. engagement in European security matters and diminish European capacity to manage crises."

That is precisely what has more than a few Americans and Europeans worried.

No new military units are being created. When the EU defense ministers gather here Monday, they will be pledging existing troops and equipment to the EU. Many of those troops are also pledged to NATO.

No surprises are expected at Monday's pledging conference. A senior EU official said member countries have already indicated they will be pledging more than 100,000 soldiers, 400 combat aircraft and more than 400 ships. The EU needs a pool of 100,000-120,000 troops from which to draw the 60,000 because it is not possible to know in advance what kind of forces will be necessary for any given mission. If six-monthly rotation of forces is considered, that figure must be doubled to more than 200,000.

While the EU is eager to have its own military force — even one as small as 60,000 — it still wants to be able to fall back on NATO's assets.

The EU and NATO are deep into discussions about how the new relationship will work. NATO Secretary-General Lord Robertson insists the talks are making "good progress" in all areas. Other diplomats say the discussions are very difficult, not to say deadlocked.

More than anything else, the United States wants it to be clear that NATO is the first option for dealing with security crises and is not circumvented by the EU striking off on its own.

Washington is also concerned about unnecessary duplication, particularly in the area of planning. The Americans prefer that the new EU military entity use existing NATO planning structures rather than siphoning off energy and resources to create a separate facility for the EU, as the French would prefer.

In addition, European NATO members who are not also members of the EU, Turkey and Iceland in particular, worry about promising the EU automatic access to alliance assets when they are not a part of the EU decision-making process. The United States has been pushing for these countries to be allowed full participation in EU decisions concerning the force.

Sierra Leone's refugees face new terror in Guinea after fleeing war

CONAKRY, Guinea (AP) — Children screamed. Police beat back hordes of thieves. Two people tumbled into the ocean as thousands of refugees pushed, shoved, begged and bribed their way onto a rickety ferry home to war-ravaged Sierra Leone.

Terrorized in Guinea, the West African neighbor that once welcomed them, thousands of Sierra Leonean refugees are fleeing their camps, preferring to take their chances at home, where rebels have killed tens of thousands and systematically maimed many more.

"It is better to die in our home than in another country," said Finda Mondeh, 28, who set up a makeshift tent of plastic sheeting in the overflowing compound of the Sierra Leone Embassy on Wednesday to wait for the next boat home.

Mondeh fled Sierra Leone two years ago with what was left of her family after Revolutionary United Front rebels flogged her parents, burned down their house and kidnapped two brothers and later a sister — all children at the time.

At first the family was welcomed in Guinea, where they settled in a camp near southeastern Guekedou, on the Sierra Leone border. But now she says locals won't even talk to them. The family had to bribe soldiers to leave their camp for the capital. Along the way, she says they were repeatedly stopped at checkpoints, where they were strip-searched, beaten and forced to pay more bribes.

For more than 10 years, refugees have poured into Guinea, one of the world's poorest nations, from its troubled neighbors. A country about the size of Oregon, Guinea now accommodates some 500,000 refugees — more than any other country in the region — including 330,000 from Sierra Leone and 130,000 from Liberia.

Since September, however, fighting from neighboring conflicts has spread into Guinea's southern jungles, trapping the refugees between the region's various armed groups and increasing hostility from their Guinean hosts.

The government in Conakry says about 600 Guineans have been killed in cross-border raids it blames on Guinean dissidents, apparently military officers who led a failed 1996 coup.

The dissidents are supported by Liberia and Burkina Faso, the government says. Liberian President Charles Taylor is also the main backer of Sierra Leone's rebels, who Western military officials say are fighting alongside Guinea's dissidents on both sides of the border. Liberia, in turn, accuses Guinea of harboring Liberian guerrillas.

Convinced rebel forces were planning to march on Conakry, Guinean President Lansana Conte went on radio and television Sept. 9 to urge civilians and soldiers to "crush the invaders."

Conte accused Sierra Leonean refugees of harboring RUF rebels and demanded they be confined to their camps. Liberians, whose home country ended a brutal seven-year civil war in 1996, were told to go home.

That night, bands of Guinean youths armed with iron rods, sticks and knifes went door to door in Conakry and other towns in search of foreigners. Thousands of Liberians and Sierra Leoneans were rounded up, beaten, raped and robbed, according to the New York-based Human Rights Watch.

In the border areas, local authorities distributed guns to civilians, who set up dozens of checkpoints at which refugees continue to be threatened and harassed.

"The president, he says all of us are rebels," said Brima Koroma, 47, who was beaten and detained for two days by Conakry police, even though the RUF hacked off his left hand in Sierra Leone.

Aid workers who assisted the refugees were also accused of colluding with the rebels and harassed, according to relief organizations.

On Sept. 17, gunmen raided the southeastern town of Macenta, near the Liberian border, killing a U.N. employee in his home and kidnapping another who was later released.

The world body pulled out of the region, suspending food distribution to some 200,000 refugees for about six weeks. With armed soldiers and militiamen surrounding the camps, the refugees couldn't even reach their fields to supplement their meager food supplies.

The attacks shocked refugees and aid workers alike. Many of the refugees speak the same languages as their Guinean counterparts and share similar cultures. For years, they had done business together and lived side by side outside the camps.

Lamenting uncertainty, Clinton honors search for missing U.S. forces

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — President Clinton honored the search for U.S. forces missing in Vietnam, lamenting "the anguish of not knowing" their fate, then flew to this bustling city, known as Saigon before its surrender to communist forces in America's most humiliating military defeat.

Clinton, after two days in Hanoi, arrived near midnight Saturday night. Despite the hour, thousands lined the route for his 15-minute drive from the airport, many waving, some cheering, as his motorcade swept by.

On the final day of his groundbreaking Vietnam visit, Clinton was to meet John Baptist Pham Minh Man, archbishop of Ho Chi Minh City, thereby demonstrating support for the right to religious worship, White House officials said.

Leaving Hanoi, Clinton stood at attention on a floodlit tarmac as a U.S. military honor guard took possession of the remains of three missing Americans and sent them to Hawaii for identification.

Much of Saturday was devoted to American MIAs and Vietnamese children maimed from leftover mines and bombs in the Vietnam War, subjects that weighed heavily on Clinton's emotions.

The president visited a rice paddy outside Hanoi where recovery workers were digging through mud for any remains of Air Force fighter pilot Lawrence G. Evert, whose jet crashed on a bombing run in 1967. Evert's sons, David and Daniel from Chandler, Ariz., accompanied the president.

"When we were younger, about 6 and 8, we used to talk about how we would come over to Vietnam and come get him out of jail — we thought he was alive so we thought we'd come get him and take him home and rescue him," said David, now 39. "And we kind of feel like that's what we're doing right now."

AP Photo

President Clinton greets a Vietnamese girl after being presented with a bouquet of flowers upon his arrival at Tansonnhat airport in Ho Chi Minh City early today.

Tears welled in Clinton's eyes as he stood on a bamboo-supported platform beside the excavation pit.

"Whether we are American or Vietnamese," Clinton said, "I think we all want to know where our loved ones are buried."

Luong called Clinton's visit "a new page" in relations.

"It's a shame this is so short," Luong said. "I hope the next U.S. president will continue what we have started." U.S. Ambassador Pete Peterson said the visit had improved understanding and trust between the two nations.

After losing 58,000 Americans in Vietnam, the United States withdrew its combat forces in 1973. Two years later, on April 30, 1975, a rear guard of 11 Marines scrambled aboard a helicopter at the U.S. Embassy in a blaze of tear gas and smoke grenades. They fled Saigon as communist forces surged into the city and the U.S.-backed government announced an unconditional surrender.

Saigon was renamed Ho Chi Minh City in honor of the revolutionary leader who declared Vietnam's independence from French rule in 1945 and led the struggle against the United States.

In a striking gesture of reconciliation, Clinton went to the Communist Party headquarters in Hanoi and chatted amiably with party secretary Le Kha Phieu. He is head of an 18-member politburo that determines government policy.

"I hope you have enjoyed your stay," Phieu said.

"I'm very much enjoying my time here," Clinton replied. "The people have been very kind."

The president also attended a ceremony intended to raise consciousness about unexploded mines and bombs that still wound or kill 2,000 Vietnamese a year.

Clinton called land mines "the curse of innocent children all over the world."

"He met four children maimed by unexploded ordnance. Hoan Quang Sy, 11, extended both arms to Clinton in a traditional Asian greeting, but his left hand was gone, the result of an old bomb.

Neither country has signed a 1977 treaty outlawing land mines, which the United States stockpiles and Vietnam produces. The United States says mines are needed in the Korean Peninsula until an effective alternative is found.

Hospital staff gives personal loving care

It is Midland's, is certainly a memorial and definitely a hospital. I have good reason to share with you my experience with the heart of our hospital, and that is its staff. My mother, having lived a vibrant, unusual and very long life finally took ill in her 96th year. Her last eight weeks were spent in the care of our hospital. There are a lot of folks in many different professions who are critical to keeping us on life's even keel — often out of sight. I'm just trying to take a pause and shine a light on one important player — the medical staff, all the medical staff. These are folks performing three shifts, seven days a week — with enthusiasm, real personal loving care — where sincere dedication takes on real meaning. I cannot think of anything more demanding than the caring for an individual during life's final function. My God, bless these professionals and thank you fellow Midlanders for listening.

Outpouring of love lifts family in crisis

Oct. 10 would be a day that would forever change the life of my daughter, Teran. As a 15-year-old, she started her day as any other. As you well know, it did not end like every other day. For at 3:30 p.m., while in chemistry class, her beautiful little body was engulfed by flames. She was rushed to Lubbock by helicopter, where she would spend the next 18 days.

Yes, her life was forever changed. Of course the accident itself and the constant sitting at her bedside changed our daily lives, but the way you—Midland, Texas responded to us and to our crisis will be what ultimately changed my view of life forever. You see, I still have my beautiful Teran. She is alive. She will be scarred, but she is healing quickly. All of my prayers have been answered.

What I could never have imagined was how the extraordinary citizens of Midland would rally together around and for us. Our family, friends and co-workers were with us from the very beginning. That is what usually happens. What was unusual was all of the people that we did not know who were with us also. We received more phone calls, letters, cards, balloons, flowers, stuffed animals and prayers than I could have imagined. I always knew this was a wonderful city, but you have far exceeded anything I ever could have imagined.

I would like to thank you for the compassion you showed to Teran and to us. To anyone who prayed or called or sent money or gifts, you are all angels. You pulled us up in what proved to be one of the most difficult times of our lives, and your support is deeply appreciated.

Most importantly, I would like to thank David Dutchover for saving Teran's life. Young man, you will always be my hero!

We are truly grateful for all of the love and kindness you have shown. We will never be able to repay you, but with God's love, we thank you!

Remedy for railroad crossings needed

Would it be possible for the railroad people to install one revolving red flashing light similar to the ones used on police cars at each crossing? This would be visible from a great distance and could be seen from any angle when a train is in the area.

There may be reasons why this type of light would not be practical, but it would most certainly alert people to the fact that a train is in the area of a railroad crossing.

This is just a suggestion but it does seem that some remedy is needed now and not two or three years from now.

Guns in law-abiding hands will save lives

Are you considering gun control laws? Do you think because you do not own a gun, the rights guaranteed by the Second Amendment don't matter? See below, a list of countries that have abolished guns from law-abiding citizens. Also listed are the number of people exterminated in each of these countries because the government did not fear the possibility of them defending themselves, an uprising or any opposition.

Soviet Union from 1929-1953 — exterminated 20.0 million; Turkey from 1915-1917 — exterminated 1.5 million; Germany from 1939-1945 — exterminated 13.0 million; China from 1948-1952 — exterminated 20.0 million; Guatemala from 1964-1981 — exterminated .1 million; Uganda from 1971-1979 — exterminated .3 million; Cambodia from 1975-1977 — exterminated 1.0 million; Total of 56.0 million.

It has been more than two years since Australians were forced to surrender 640,381 personal fire arms to be destroyed, costing the government $500 million. The result: Assaults are up 8 percent. Armed robberies are up 44 percent. Homicides with firearms are up 300 percent. Guns in the hands of honest citizens save lives and property.

Would our parents have tolerated this?

Too often we pick up the newspaper and read disheartening stories. We ask ourselves, "what is our society coming to?" In the last few days I witnessed acts that begin to answer that question.

One Saturday, at Dollar General on Illinois, I saw two boys breaking into the coin box of a newspaper machine. Several people were around and I know they saw what was happening. Not only did they not say anything to the boys, but they behaved like "Schultz" from Hogan's Heros...they "saw nothing...nothing!" You tell me, who was more wrong? I decided to do the right thing and stopped the boys. Unfortunately, they didn't fear any consequences they might face. Where were their parents? Is this how they've raised their children to behave?

On Wednesday, something else outraged me. I was at Long John Silver's. Once again I saw an example of what's happening to our society. An elderly, handicapped couple parked and were slowly walking toward the entrance. At the same time two high school girls also were approaching the door..they stopped at the door. I thought the girls were going to open the door for the couple..wrong! They didn't! In fact they waited until the elderly lady opened the door then rudely walked inside as if the lady was their personal doorman! I doubt the girls considered their act thoughtless and rude.

I'm proud I've taught my three boys respect for the law, property and their fellow human beings...especially the elderly!

I feel we've become numb to violence, disrespect and rudeness. We accept this as commonplace behavior in society and we don't correct it. We expect our schools and courts to teach our children values, morals and manners; then we criticize them when they haven't done the job we expected.

This week look around and watch.

Would your parents have tolerated the problems you see? Would they have stood quietly by? How do your children behave? Are you sure?

What is our society coming to? Exactly what we teach our children to make it.

Many Midlanders 'trashed' their voting privileges

Today (Nov. 8) I am ashamed of Midland voters. Not the 39,696 who either voted absentee or endured inclement weather to cast their votes for candidates of whatever party. But the 31,902 who, while enjoying the freedom and "good life" — let's face it, even the poor live better than a majority of people throughout the world — of being an American, a Texan and a Midlander, cared so little for their future and the future of their children that they chose not to make a minimal effort to go to their polling place and mark their ballot. It matters less to me who they support be it a Republican, Democrat or any third party candidate than the fact that they literally "trashed" the privilege of living in a country where so many have given their lives to protect the liberty and opportunity for them to select their leaders.

Midlanders should be proud of our elections officials

I am writing to commend Midland County Elections Administrator Pat Eastup and the folks in her office. This is a very serious responsibility. We all take for granted they will run smoothly and the results will be known in a timely manner. In my dealings as a voter and working a bit in recent elections, all the people at the elections office have proved to be highly professional, knowledgeable, helpful, kind and understanding.

We should be proud to have such qualified folks overseeing voting in Midland County.

Show your appreciation with a card, a kind word, a smile or a bunch of cookies. Not on Nov. 28 though, that's my day. I'm brushing my teeth for a good smile and baking chocolate chip cookies. They have earned them.

It is clear American voters prefer Gore over Bush

Regardless of the rationalizations of the spin doctors, two facts concerning the recent presidential election are crystal clear and inescapable:

1. The American voters prefer Al Gore over George W. Bush to be their next president and

2. Because of the confusion in Palm Beach, Gov. Bush's razor-thin plurality does not accurately reflect the will of the Florida voters.

If Gov. Bush allows his personal ambition to thwart the will of the American voters, his presidency will forever be marked with an asterisk as he will be the only president in American history to be sworn in by mistake rather than the will of the voters. He will be a lame duck the moment he is sworn in. If he has the integrity he claims to have, he will release his electors to vote their conscience.

Hitler was elected by majority vote of people

How stupid can we get?

Recent political rhetoric: "I'm fighting for you, the hard-working middle class American, and I don't believe in giving a big tax break to the top 1 percent richest people in the country."

RE: News story in the Reporter-Telegram Nov. 11, page 5C, Oakland, California—"Bill Gates and his wife are giving $15 million to the city's public schools. In September the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation announced $56 million in grants to school districts nationwide."

Same day, same page: Los Angeles, California—The Screen Actors Guild has teed off on Tiger Woods, fining the golfer $100,000 for shooting a nonunion Buick commercial during a six-months strike against advertisers.

Same day, same paper, page 11: Hillary Rodham Clinton, senator-elect New York, "I believe strongly that in a democracy, we should respect the will of the people, and to me, that means it's time to do away with the Electoral College." She does not realize we are a Republic governed by law not majority.

1. How many of the middle class working Americans are going to give $56 million to anything. How many jobs are they going to provide?

2. Belong to the union and they will take care of you — especially if you are an individual who can make a lot of money because of ability.

3. Hitler was elected by a majority vote of the people.

We as a nation need to get our act together. If we continue with the things mentioned above, we are going to end up as another banana republic!!

God help America—with all the devils we have in control—we need his help!

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702 or you may fax to 682-3793.

They can also be faxed to 682-3793 or sent via e-mail to Letters@basinlink.com - Letters faxed or sent by e-mail should indicate they are for publication.

SPEAKING OUT

Longhorn Pipeline has potential to raise Texas economy

By David Dewhurst

Let me start by stating I am pro-pipeline. I have built and owned pipelines in my business career, and pipelines are the safest way to transport petroleum products throughout Texas and the U.S. I strongly favor competition, believing competition lowers, in this case, local gasoline prices.

Like most people, I believe that it makes sense to reactivate the 50-year-old Longhorn Pipeline, which carried crude oil from West Texas to Houston, and convert it into a higher pressure pipeline carrying gasoline and Jet-A from Houston to El Paso.

However, as land commissioner, my most important concern has been the health and safety of all Texans, especially the 51,000 people who live within 1,250 feet of the pipeline and risk injury or even death if the pipeline blows up. During the past 15 years there have been almost 6,000 pipeline incidents in which more than 1,600 people were injured and more than 320 people killed nationwide.

This year, on March 22, I spoke publicly and raised my concerns about improving the safety of this 50-year-old pipeline. I said I would be surprised if the owners of Longhorn Pipeline did not ultimately meet or exceed federal pipeline safety laws, allowing me to sign the pipeline easement.

Since that time, my staff and I have frequently met with Longhorn Pipeline representatives, and I am happy to report Longhorn Pipeline has made important changes that will increase safety. Not only has MTBE been taken out of the gasoline, but some 19 miles of the 50-year-old pipe will be replaced with new pipe over the Edwards Aquifer, and block valves will be installed near rivers to protect against spills.

Until the publication of a new federal rule just last week, interstate pipelines 30 years or older were not required to be internally inspected.

But this new rule only covers 37,000 of the nation's two million pipeline system. So there is still much to be done. Some 22 federal heath and safety laws passed by Congress, intended to improve pipeline safety, have never been enforced by the Clinton Administration. The recent tragic and fatal blowouts at Carlsbad, N.M., and in Texas have created a greater urgency that we meet with pipeline industry representatives and urge them to raise standards.

I am happy to report the industry's American Petroleum Institute has offered to raise interstate pipeline standards, and the Texas Railroad Commission, which has jurisdiction over intrastate pipelines, is moving to raise those standards. That's good for all of use.

No one knows better than I that pipelines are indispensable for our state's economy, and I applaud the industry's willingness to raise standards and better protect the lives of all Texans.

I am currently awaiting release of new safety rules from the U.S. Department of Transportation's Office of Pipeline Safety for pipelines crossing densely populated and environmentally sensitive areas. If these new rules and Longhorn Pipeline's mitigation plans meet or exceed all current federal health and safety standards, I will be able to sign an easement for the pipeline to operate over state lands.

Legally, my signature will not indicate the Longhorn Pipeline is safe, or the pipeline owners have done everything you or I would want them to do. That is not my job and must be done at the federal level. However, it will signify that Longhorn Pipeline has complied with all current federal safety laws.

As your land commissioner, I must and will strictly follow state and federal laws to protect our Texas families, which I swore an oath to do, and not impose my own standards.

Al Gore fights to save his lifelong political dreams

More and more Al Gore looks like a convicted man, sentenced to the gallows but refusing to accept his fate.

Thus, Gore's rapidly ballooning legal team continues to pursue every legal avenue to forestall the inevitable — the end of the road for the Gore 2000 presidential campaign.

But like a convicted man proclaiming his innocence to the very end, Al Gore refuses to give up. Witness the 11th hour, election night cellular phone call to the Bush campaign team in which Al Gore retracted his earlier admission that he lost the election. Or how about the after-the-fact cries of foul over the now-infamous butterfly Florida ballot? Where were the members of Al Gore's legal team and his political friends before Nov. 7 when the butterfly ballot was readily available for their inspection? Notice how deftly Al Gore's lawyers overrode the Florida Secretary of State as she tried to certify returns that had been counted not once, but twice.

Al Gore has spent his entire life preparing to be president of the United States. He has hungered for decades. Now he stands at the threshold of the White House and refuses to step aside.

Al Gore made his first run for the White House in 1988, but was unable to break out of a crowded Democratic field. Al Gore lacked the political courage to take on in 1992 a then post-Persian Gulf War, immensely popular President George Bush. Bill Clinton rolled the political dice, defeated Bush and Al Gore got a last-minute chance to tag along for the ride.

The Democrats have had eight years to dig into administrative posts in the executive branch and after their long absence during the 12 years of Ronald Reagan and George Bush, they aren't about to tell Al Gore he would be better served by standing aside and giving it another run in 2004. In addition, Al Gore is looking over his shoulder and can see Hillary Clinton basking in her unthinkable victory in New York, knowing the politically talented Clinton couple would stop at nothing to return to their Pennsylvania Avenue home.

For the moment, Al Gore's entire life is hanging by a mutilated, pregnant, bulging chad on a South Florida ballot that, by now, has been handled and rehandled by dozens of election judges.

If you keep reading and rereading the same book, can you try to interpret an ending other than the one the author intended?

If you keep appealing to judges, can you win an alternate verdict?

Will fickle public opinion ultimately swing to your advantage?

Can slick lawyers save a guilty man from the gallows?

Al Gore's political life hangs in the balance. He isn't about to cry uncle.

Today in History

Today is Sunday, Nov. 19, the 324th day of 2000. There are 42 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 19, 1863, President Lincoln delivered the Gettysburg Address as he dedicated a national cemetery at the site of the Civil War battlefield in Pennsylvania.

On this date:

In 1794, the United States and Britain signed the Jay Treaty, which resolved some issues left over from the Revolutionary War.

In 1831, the 20th president of the United States, James Garfield, was born in Orange, Ohio.

In 1919, the Senate rejected the Treaty of Versailles by a vote of 55-39, short of the two-thirds majority needed for ratification.

In 1942, during World War II, Russian forces launched their winter offensive against the Germans along the Don front.

In 1949, Monaco held a coronation for its new ruler, Prince Rainier III, six months after he succeeded his grandfather, Prince Louis II.

In 1959, Ford Motor Co. announced it was halting production of the unpopular "Edsel."

In 1969, Apollo 12 astronauts Charles Conrad and Alan Bean made man's second landing on the moon.

In 1977, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat became the first Arab leader to visit Israel.

In 1985, President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev met for the first time as they began their summit in Geneva.

In 1988, shipping heiress Christina Onassis died in Buenos Aires, Argentina, at age 37.

Ten years ago: Leaders of 16 NATO members and the remaining six Warsaw Pact nations signed treaties in Paris making sweeping cuts in conventional arms throughout Europe and pledging non-aggression toward one another. The pop duo Milli Vanilli were stripped of their Grammy Award because other singers had lent their voices to the "Girl You Know It's True" album.

What's the score after we know the score?

What's the score? That's all anyone's interested in right now — who's winning. As long as the race goes on that's the only question. And, as strange as it is, the uncertainty is exciting and energizing. For people like us who believe in the political process, it's heartening to see the public engaged.

Cokie & Steven Roberts

But once we know the score there's another question: How does the winner govern? The answers that we're getting on that one are pretty depressing. With each passing day of Extended Election 2000, politicians in Washington are growing more hostile and less likely to cooperate once the new Congress convenes.

"The first few weeks, it will be Kosovo," in the opinion of former Republican Congressman Jack Buechner. As someone who lost his Missouri seat by 50 votes, Buechner knows the bitterness caused by close elections. That bitter taste was on every tongue when the lame duck Congress came to town briefly last week. Politicians who had no particular brief for Al Gore or George W. Bush on November 6 were suddenly fierce partisans, each side convinced the other is stealing the election.

Democrats, knowing now that they will not take back the House of Representatives, desperately want to hold on to the presidency. They have learned in the Clinton years that his veto gave them more power. "Fight on!" they cheered when Gore campaign chairman Bill Daley visited them at the Capitol, advising him not to back off any court cases or hand counts. Republicans stare suspiciously at the people counting ballots in Florida and mutter darkly about "these people" who will "do anything to win." Though many Republicans praised Bill Daley in the past for his work on free-trade agreements, they've now transformed him into "Boss Daley," the son of a notorious "hand counter."

"We're sure running in short supply in responsibility," Democratic elder Bob Strauss told us. He's one of the few people counseling caution to the campaigns. Even Bob Dole, who can usually be counted on for some sanguinity, raised the specter on "This Week" of a boycott of the inauguration if Gore is elected. So far, the electorate, though divided, doesn't seem particularly polarized, according to the polls, but the politicians are moving into the trenches the way they did for impeachment or the Robert Bork nomination.

Where are the moderates? "They have a lot at stake," answers Mickey Edwards. "Asking them to rise above partisan considerations is asking a lot." Edwards, now at the Kennedy School at Harvard, was a Republican member of the House who knew when to compromise and when to hold the line. With the margins in the House and Senate so close, he argues, everyone's worried about committee chairmanships and other positions of power inside the institutions. But eventually, Edwards insists, those moderates in each party are going to have to find a way to "cool down tempers" and push for more power-sharing between the parties for there to be any hope of anyone governing.

What about the Republican resentment of the years under the thumb of Democratic House majorities? "Payback has already happened," Edwards answered. "We've had our turn. This time the country's interest has to come first." One of the themes that worked for Bush during the campaign, Edwards reminds us, was his emphasis on bipartisanship, on ending the rancorous tone in Washington. Members of Congress would do well to heed that message. But listening to the politicians this week, you'd think the voters had been telling them to battle away and keep up the bickering, because that's just what they're doing. And the longer the presidential campaign goes on, the worse it will get.

"Al Gore and George Bush are no longer candidates, they're litigants," Jack Buechner told us, "and when the lawyers take over, you become immersed in the minutiae of your side's argument." That's exactly what's happened on Capitol Hill, where every member is following every detail of the unfolding story and listening to the lawyers who tell them that their side's right and the other side's wrong.

With all the confusion over what's going on in the presidential election, Buechner contends, "Congress is going to have the responsibility to show there's order in the house." He believes self-preservation will lead the politicians to act responsibly in the end because "they'll realize they have to do something for the American people."

We hope he's right. "We don't want to come out of this a nation of cynics," says Bob Strauss. What a shame that would be after the engagement of the last week. But if the politicians stay on their polarized course, that's exactly what's likely to happen.

System is great, how about people?

We've learned a lot since Election Day, from the definition of a hanging chad to some of the finer points of Florida election law. Al Gore might have had his deeper reasons for saying that "Schoolchildren all over the United States are learning a lot about how a president is chosen in this country," but his words were true. It's been a big constitutional classroom for all of us.

Mostly we've gotten an education in legal, political and historical obscurities illuminated by a national spotlight. But the biggest lesson might have come from something that's been right in front of us all along: Government officials, on every level, elected and appointed, tend to be members of the two major political parties.

Rather

To use a notable example from this past week, Katherine Harris, Florida's secretary of state, is a Republican. When she announced that she was going to go by the letter of Florida election law and demand that all counties' ballots be in and certified exactly a week after Election Day, her party affiliation suddenly became a big issue.

In a news conference following Secretary Harris' decision, Gore's recount observer, former United States Secretary of State Warren Christopher, had this to say: "Her plan, I'm afraid, has the look of an effort to produce a particular result in the election ... it also looks like a move in the direction of partisan politics, and away from a nonpartisan administration of the election laws."

Was he right? Perhaps only Secretary Harris knows for sure. One could say from her fairly straightforward, if narrow, reading of the statute that she was merely doing her job. And the Gore camp, plus the Democratic counties that were still in the process of or anticipating performing hand recounts of ballots, were only doing their job by appealing that decision in court. Administrators administrate according to the laws they are given, and courts adjudicate when parties disagree on how these laws are int erpreted amid the real-time flow of events.

That wasn't how George Bush's people saw it, though. If the hand-counting in certain heavily Democratic counties continued past Secretary Harris' deadline, Bush Communications Director Karen Hughes said, these counties "are no longer recounting. They are reinventing, attempting to reinterpret the results of the election and the intentions of voters by subjective, not objective means."

Secretary Harris might have made it easy for Democrats to single her out as a co-chairperson for Bush's Florida campaign by giving the law's discretionary clause a reading narrow enough that it could only benefit the Republican candidate. And that sort of behavior has been the problem, in spades, on both sides. Both are in full campaign mode, neither Democrats nor Republicans having shown any willingness to make a single move that carries any risk of favoring more than their own side.

Each side knows that it is acting this way itself, so any move by the other side becomes another occasion to essentially accuse it of trying to steal the election. All part of the daily spin: The candidates playact while their seconds posture. And on both sides, all presumption of good faith on the part of our elected and appointed officials, almost all of whom have a partisan history of some sort, is swept aside — because that's the kind of thing strategy dictates. It's a good strategy ... for making America's electoral split a true divide.

A lot of people are saying that this whole mess has nonetheless shown us how great our system is. They're right — it's a great system. But right about now we might start wondering about the people who are using it.

Riff and raffish: Of POTUS and word-swapping

"POTUS Speaks" is the title of one of the early freshets in what will become a torrent of inside-the-Clinton-White-House memoirs. The acronym POTUS stands for the office to be occupied by whichever man we elected a couple of weeks ago.

I was present, if not at the birth of the acronym, at least when the spoken word was in its infancy. As a new White House speechwriter in 1969, I noticed the letters on one of the labels next to the five buttons on a telephone extension in the Cabinet Room and wondered aloud, "Who's this guy Potus?"

Safire

A member of the White House Communications Agency (we pronounced WHCA "Whacka") explained that since the Johnson administration, the phone line from the Oval Office was marked with the initials for "President of the United States."

I left in 1973 and turned out a novel a few years later about a blinded chief executive; a problem was, what should the bachelor president's love interest call him? A first name would seem presumptuous and "Mr. President" unromantic. Solution: POTUS, which was suitably irreverent without being awkwardly familiar.

Now to a word used in the memoir by Michael Waldman, POTUS Clinton's chief speechwriter. He describes the moment in his chief's first speech to Congress in 1993 when Clinton departed from the somewhat disorganized text. "He began to riff," writes Waldman, "to ad-lib, to revise entire paragraphs .... Sperling and I were scanning our single-spaced copies of the speech. 'He's ad-libbing! He's ad-libbing the State of the Union!' we shouted, and gave each other a high-five."

Whence riff? Rife means "abundant," probably associated with riff's sense of "the belly"; much fashion attention is now focused on exposing the bellybutton, or navel, in the midriff.

But for our immediate purposes, riff originated as a jazz term, one meaning of which is an ostinato phrase, a musical figure, often syncopated, used throughout a composition at the same pitch. First cited in 1935, riff is a solo improvisation that, when often repeated, becomes identified with the player who can "leave that bit in" until it becomes part of a routine.

The meaning of the musical term was then extended to any rhetorical improvisation or flight of oratory, as in a New Yorker use in 1970 of "some lovely comic riffs."

On the third hand, if any politician uses a vulgarity or deliberately dresses like a slob — but in a kind of attractive way — he is said to be raffish.

Raff may come from raft, in one sense "a large collection of rubbish," and I won't belabor the reader with a whole raft of citations.

Riff and raff are half-rhyming quasi-nouns from the Old French rifler, "to rifle, ransack," and raffler, "to ravage, snatch away," applied to things of little value.

Today's piece is less of a snobbish improvisation for society's elite than a raffish riff for the riffraff.

Kohl's diary reveals his pain at isolation from former allies

By Burt Herman
Associated Press

BERLIN — In the months after he was voted out of office in 1998, Helmut Kohl reveled in the attention he received as a departing elder statesman: hauling in international awards, bidding thousands of soldiers ceremonious farewells and sharing late nights with President Clinton in the White House.

The ex-chancellor wrote contentedly of stepping to the background as a political adviser for his Christian Democratic party, according to excerpts of his diary to be published Sunday in Welt am Sonntag. The complete diary hits bookstores Nov. 27.

However, that all changed when a financial scandal broke last year, putting his name back in the headlines and making him a pariah from the party he had led for a quarter-century.

"What I have been forced to experience since the fall of 1999 is an unprecedented campaign that breaks all borders of fair reporting," Kohl writes in the book's forward. "The goal of the campaign is to criminalize me and discredit my 16-year chancellorship. This I won't allow."

Although the book is titled "My Diary 1998-2000," the excerpts to be released today seem to have been written as a tailor-made defense of Kohl's actions — echoing his previous denials of not having known about the party's system of secret accounts and underscoring his will not to name secret donors.

Upon the first mention of the scandal, Kohl wrote Nov. 4, 1999, that he didn't know of a cash handover that was one of the earliest inklings of the corruption: former party treasurer Walther Leisler Kiep's admission that he received an off-the-books $430,000 contribution in Switzerland in 1991 from Karlheinz Schreiber, a German businessman who has figured prominently in the scandal.

Kohl said he called his hand-picked successor as party chairman, Wolfgang Schaeuble, that evening.

"We both at that time hadn't known anything of this event," Kohl wrote. "This party donation from Karlheinz Schreiber to Walther Leisler Kiep and therefore to the (Christian Democratic Union) isn't known to me."

In his diary, Kohl continually recalls the good old days when he was leading the country from the 1989 fall of the Berlin Wall to reunification less than a year later — contrasting those times with his disbelief over having his reputation shattered in the scandal. On Nov. 28, 1999, he remembers drafting the budget plan 10 years earlier to help recombine the country.

"More than a few remember this important historical date and speak of my farsighted political conduct," he wrote. "But today it's not about the appreciation of smart political transactions, but rather about the question of whether I was corrupt or not a criminal."

As the scandal develops, Kohl's increasing isolation from his party is evidenced as allies turn on him and start pointing the finger at him for not naming names, after his admission he received more than $870,000 in illegal anonymous donations.

He appears most distressed when Angela Merkel, the then-secretary general and East German whom he had helped up the party ranks, publicly calls on him to clear up the matter.

"That is the brutal request to resign as soon as possible from all official duties," he wrote Dec. 22, 1999. "What duties do I still have? The honorary chairmanship of the CDU ... I didn't apply for that. And the parliament mandate. That ends in year 2002 and was given to me by the voters.

"Without my clear vote for her she wouldn't have had this unprecedented political career," Kohl writes of Merkel, who has since taken over as party chairwoman after a shake-up that ousted Schaeuble.

Kohl seems to be obsessed with knowing if Schaeuble knew of the article, and remains confused as to why Schaeuble calls on him in public to name names while privately acknowledging to Kohl he knows he won't break his word. And all the while, he still looks back to the past.

"Just today I find the discrepancy especially strong," he wrote Dec. 22. "In the party presiding committee they talk about their separation from me, and in the media I see the pictures of the opening of the Brandenburg Gate from 10 years ago."

Gaza Strip gun battle leaves 2 dead

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Palestinian policeman opened fire on an isolated Israeli army position Saturday, killing a soldier and wounding two more before being shot to death, a day after Yasser Arafat ordered a stop to shooting attacks from areas under his control.

Israel accused Palestinian leaders of ordering the pre-dawn assault in Gaza Strip, and said it contradicted Arafat's call for restraint. The Palestinians, meanwhile, said they were investigating the shooting and urged Israel not to retaliate.

"The same Palestinian officials that on one hand call for a cease-fire, on the other hand send officers to carry out attacks," said Israeli Brig. Gen. Yair Naveh. "It is clear that the attacker did not act alone."

Arafat's announcement on Friday marked his first public statement ordering an end to shooting attacks on Israelis from territory under total Palestinian control. In the remarks, he didn't refer to land under Israeli control, and Saturday's shooting took place in an area where Israeli is responsible for security.

Still, his statement offered some hope that the level of violence might decline after more than seven weeks of fighting that has claimed more than 230 lives, most of them Palestinian.

But unrest broke out in several places in the West Bank and Gaza Strip on Saturday. In the Gaza shooting, the Palestinian policeman approached to within a few yards of the Israeli soldiers, who were guarding farmland used by Jewish settlers at Kfar Darom in central Gaza, said Israeli military spokesman Maj. Ran Adam.

AP Photo

Palestinian policemen carry the body of Palestinian security officer Baha Said from Shifa hospital in Gaza city, Saturday. Said was killed Saturday morning near Kfar Darom settlement in the central Gaza Strip.

The policeman, Baha Said, opened fire with an automatic rifle and hit three soldiers before being gunned down, Adam said. After Said was shot dead, Israeli soldiers also found a grenade in one of his pockets.

Said was a member of the Palestinian security forces in Gaza, according to Adam. Palestinian officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, described Said as an officer in the Preventive Security forces, a branch of the police.

The dead Israeli soldier was 21-year-old Staff Sgt. Baruch Flum. One of the injured soldiers was in critical condition with a bullet wound to the head, while the other received moderate injuries, the army added.

In Gaza, Israeli soldiers protect about 6,500 Jewish settlers living in heavily guarded enclaves among more than 1 million Palestinians.

Israeli soldiers have clashed day and night with Palestinians in Gaza since the fighting began. The military said the Palestinians have opened fire on Israeli targets in Gaza from 12 to 20 times a night over the past two weeks.

Several hours after the Saturday attack, four Palestinians belonging to Arafat's bodyguard unit were injured in an explosion at a post in Khan Yunis, in southern Gaza. Palestinian officials claimed the four were hurt when an Israeli helicopter fired rockets, but the Israelis denied carrying out any such assault.

"None of our helicopters have been in the area," said Adam, the Israeli military spokesman. Israel has acknowledged previous helicopter strikes, and Adam speculated that the explosion may have been caused by Palestinian munitions that accidentally went off.

Israeli soldiers have much discretion in opening fire

JERICHO, West Bank (AP) — Two dozen Palestinian teens took turns running up to a metal gate, throwing stones at an Israeli army watchtower, then pulling back to reload their slingshots.

Every few seconds, soldiers shot steel marbles with thin rubber coating at the youngsters, who ducked with each boom. Three boys were hurt, one in the head, but no one was killed.

Still, in the past seven weeks, clashes like this one Friday — about 5,000 across the West Bank and Gaza Strip by the army's count — have repeatedly turned fatal.

More than 200 Palestinians have been killed and 3,000 wounded by Israeli fire, prompting complaints by human rights groups that soldiers use excessive force.

Witnesses say soldiers sometimes change from rubber bullets to live ammunition when their lives appear in no danger — the army's yardstick for the use of the rounds. Palestinian and foreign doctors say many of the bullet injuries are to the heads and upper bodies of demonstrators, rather than to the legs where they would be less likely to kill.

The army said soldiers generally act with self-restraint, noting that there have been 1,500 incidents of Palestinians shooting on Israeli targets. Standing orders allow soldiers to shoot at Palestinians carrying guns and firebombs — and some of the deadliest clashes have erupted when Palestinian gunmen mingle among stone-throwers.

But Palestinians throwing stones can also draw live bullets from soldiers under the rules. Army commanders acknowledge that since the riots began Sept. 28, soldiers have been given more discretion on when to use live fire. "If a soldier thinks he is in mortal danger from even a stone, he is sometimes justified in using live fire," said Maj. Gen. Giora Eiland, chief of army operations.

In the past seven weeks, shootings have rarely been investigated, and there have been no courts martial.

With soldiers given discretion, results vary widely.

In downtown Hebron, rock-throwers and soldiers engage almost daily in intense battles along the narrow streets. Two Palestinians have been killed.

By contrast, 10 Palestinians, including five under the age of 16, have been shot dead at the Karni crossing between Gaza and Israel, even though a wide clearing around the soldiers makes it difficult for stone throwers to get close and endanger the soldiers.

During a clash at Karni last week, several dozen Palestinians stood about 200 yards away from the Israeli post, most taking cover behind a warehouse. Soldiers shot rubber bullets at rock-throwers dashing into the open, and seven Palestinians were hurt over a period of two hours, including one who was in serious condition with a head injury.

The steel pellets, coated with rubber, are considered non-lethal by the army, and are used routinely against rock-throwers, though they have been fatal at close range or when hitting the head or soft body parts.

"We have been asking the army for years to stop using rubber bullets as nonfatal ammunition," said Yael Shtein of the Israeli human rights group Betselem. "This is one of the main reasons why so many people are getting killed."

Thirteen soldiers, in addition to seven Israeli civilians, have been killed by Palestinian fire. More than 200 soldiers have been hurt, though the army gave no breakdown on type and severity of injury.

'We have been asking the army for years to stop using rubber bullets as nonfatal ammunition. This is one of the main reasons why so many people are getting killed.'
— Yael Shtein, of the Israeli human rights group Betselem

One reason for the lower casualty count is that soldiers are better protected — with helmets and bulletproof vests.

Palestinian rock-throwers generally face soldiers without shields, though they may seek cover behind makeshift barricades. Some teen-agers, trying to look especially fearless, go bare-chested, their shirts wrapped around their heads. Others dare soldiers to shoot, spreading their arms in a cocky dance.

When Palestinian gunmen join the stonethrowers, the Israeli response often gets stronger. On the third day of fighting, about 20 armed men fired from among 5,000 Palestinians at three dozen Israeli soldiers at a checkpoint south of the West Bank town of Nablus. The outnumbered soldiers returned fire, killing seven Palestinians and wounding about 100.

Every night, Palestinians have been firing at Israeli targets, including army posts and especially vulnerable Jewish settlements.

Such shootings, especially from the West Bank town of Beit Jalla on the Jerusalem neighborhood of Gilo, have drawn heavy Israeli fire from machine guns, tanks and helicopters.

Holidays can increase domestic violence

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

In an armed standoff last week, an Odessa man refused to come out of his house to talk to police about a charge of violence against a family member.

Last month, a Ward County sheriff's deputy was killed while responding to a domestic dispute.

Last year, 281 women were admitted to the Safe Place, a shelter for battered women, and those women brought with them 407 children. The Safe Place serves 15 counties in the Permian Basin.

Rebecca Grimaud, executive director for the Safe Place, said one of the best ways to combat domestic violence is early intervention. With programs to educate, like Project ADAM, which teaches positive change to batterers, the Safe Place is working toward ending domestic violence.

Unfortunately, though, local law enforcement officials are expecting an increase in violence, especially during the upcoming holiday season.

"Domestic dispute calls are some of the most dangerous calls our officers have to respond to," Sheriff Gary Painter said, adding that there is also a higher incidence of violence during the holidays because of arguments over money and child custody.

Painter also said the seriousness of any incident is often compounded by alcohol and narcotics.

"The main thing we have to do is separate the two people," he said. "If there is an assault, or a weapon involved, an arrest is usually made. Otherwise, one of the parties is asked to leave the scene, in order to calm down."

Painter also said domestic disputes are more dangerous for officers in rural areas, because their back-up is usually too far away to be effective.

He said some people handle the stress of the holidays with violence, and it doesn't work.

John Urby, Midland Police chief, said there is a 6 1/2 percent increase in domestic violence calls from 747 in fiscal year 1998-1999 to 797 in 1999-2000.

"We're expecting an increase in domestic violence for the holiday season. People are spending money on presents, trying to provide for their families, spending more time driving, and more alcohol is involved. All of that can lead to an increase in domestic violence calls," Urby said.

Urby said holidays can cause grief and strife in some homes.

He also said the level of danger for police is higher during domestic disputes than most other calls.

"It's difficult for us because we're called in during the problem, so we're viewed as part of the problem. We never get called in when people love each other and everyone is treating each other with respect," Urby said.

He added, "The holidays are a tough time for people. We want people to be joyous, but there can be a lot of reasons why people aren't."

When a weapon is involved, or the violence is a serious assault, Urby said the police handle the call as a top priority.

"It's hard for us, as police, but we're trained for it. It's our duty to the community, but we would just like to tell these people: Be nice. Love your family. Leave if the situation gets out of hand."

According to written materials distributed by the Federal Bureau of Investigations, the cycle of abuse usually occurs in three stages.

■ Stage One: Tension building. In this stage the victim is subjected to humiliation, verbal abuse and minor battering incidents.

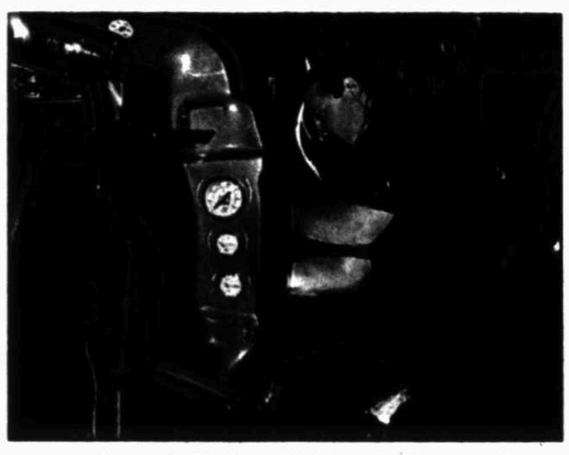

The victim usually accepts the responsibility for the violence against them.

■ Stage Two: The acute battering. Usually a focused episode, explosive and violent. It can be physical or sexual. The victim appears to be hysterical and uncooperative. The abuser appears to be calm and in control.

■ Stage Three: The honeymoon. The batterer will apologize, make promises, give gifts and affection which creates an atmosphere of hostility toward any intervention.

The cycle continues affecting the children and families of the couple and drawing law enforcement into "one of the most dangerous situations an officer can go into."

29th annual Tejano Car Show blends tradition and innovation

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

ODESSA — This weekend's 29th annual car show at the Ector County Coliseum has come a long way from its modest beginnings in a vacant lot on a dirt road, according to Nick Hernandez, the CEO of Texas Tours Entertainment, the company that puts on the show.

"I started toying with cars in the 1960s," Hernandez said. "We were putting 2x4 boards in the springs to jack up the car. I started painting cars and learned to lower them. Then I was doing it for other people. There were a lot of people modifying cars in those days, but there are a lot more now."

Hernandez said the people who modified cars in the area participated in parades, fundraisers and the annual Cinco de Mayo celebrations.

"We've always been community-oriented, and it just developed into the car show. Originally, it was on a dirt lot, then it moved to a ballroom, then a bigger ballroom, and then it grew into the coliseum," he added.

And grow it has.

This year's show fills six barns at the fairgrounds with cars, trucks, custom bicycles, bands and vendor booths from Harley Davidson and the Navy to Odessa College and local car clubs.

Hernandez also operates car shows in Lubbock and Corpus Christi. He said the Odessa car show operated through the lean years at the coliseum before it developed into the international sport it has become.

"We have car and bike builders from California to Miami and all over Mexico now, but it is the result of 29 years of hard work."

Eddie Zamarrom, Jr. was a judge for the car show this year. In addition to that, he works for Low Rider Magazine as a professional judge on the 15 shows they operate throughout the year.

"This has truly become international. Lowriders and fully modified cars are the biggest thing in Japan right now, and there are car clubs in Australia and Europe," Zamarrom said. He added there are car shows in America from New Jersey to Oregon to California to Florida.

"People think that low riders and modified cars are just in the southwest U.S. and they're just attended by Hispanics, but the appeal is nationwide and people of all races and ethnic backgrounds are involved."

Zamarrom has been with Low Rider Magazine for 8 years, and he said the Odessa car show is one of the top super car shows.

MISD officials find no policy on board attendance

By Danielle Belton
Staff Writer

When Midland Independent School District board member Shane Boring went to Austin on a work-related venture, his district went without representation for more than a month.

Although the recent absences by Boring were more of an exception rather than a rule, it did call into question whether or not there is an attendance policy for MISD board members.

According to MISD officials, they could find no record of any such policy.

Boring, who has represented the fourth district for more than a year and a half, has had near perfect attendance with the board of trustees until recently. Boring said that he had just received a new job as a branch manager with Robert Half International, a specialized staffing company opening a branch in Midland. His new job required him to leave for training in Austin.

Boring

Although Boring said he was concerned about missing the meetings, he pointed out he has spent as much as 100 hours a month at times working for MISD. He said while he's proud of being a board member, those 100 hours he worked were for free. Board members do not get paid for their services and Boring has a family to support.

"I'm just working to get the family fed," said Boring of his new job that has kept him away from home for the past month. "I'll be back soon."

Boring hopes to be back in Midland in time for the November 28 board meeting, but is making no guarantees.

"I should be back on the (November) 27th," Boring said. "So I should be able to attend the meeting on the 28th. But that would be that last meeting I would miss if I do miss it."

Since his absence the school board has

MISD board member disappears, comes back with a company

By Danielle Belton
Staff Writer

From beginning their search for a new superintendent to electing the first ever school attorney, the Midland Independent School District board of trustees has been as busy as ever making important decisions, yet something — or someone — was missing.

For the past two regular board meetings and a couple of special meetings in between, representative from the fourth district, Shane Boring, has been absent.

Although Boring has had near perfect attendance since he joined the board more than a year and a half ago, lately he has been nowhere to be found.

As it turns out, Boring wasn't so much missing, but busy making a business deal

GARY OTT

A pecan pie comes in handy for more than one reason

To be perfectly honest with you, I don't remember who conducted the survey, but the conclusion was quite clear and it remains etched in my mind: A family that plays together, stays together.

OK, it is not terribly shocking. In fact, it is downright obvious. If family members enjoy each other's company enough to do things together, such as play miniature golf as a "family unit" on a Friday night, then it only follows that they are probably going to continue spending quality time in the company of one another for years to come.

Ott

Yeah, that's what you would think.

And you would be right.

Except for one very big exception. A family that eats together, especially at the dining room table, doesn't always stay together.

At least, they don't necessarily ENJOY the experience, particularly if two of the family members — preferably a father and a son — hold opposing political views and are not shy about sharing those views.

For a clearer understanding of what we're talking about here, turn your television sets to Channel 34 — Nick at Nite — some evening and watch reruns of "All in the Family." For those of you too young to recall the original series, just remember this one simple fact while you're watching: Whenever Archie Bunker and Mike Stivic, in this case a son-in-law rather than a son, begin to, shall we say, "discuss" an emotional issue, such as President Nixon's handling of the Vietnam War, you will immediately gain a better appreciation of why the family meal is not always a satisfying way to spend 30 minutes.

In fact, it is often like the Vietnam War itself ... hot and furious, with both sides firing away at will.

For those of us who came of age during those turbulent times, the war was replayed on a daily basis ... and not just on Walter Cronkite's nightly news reports.

It happened in our homes.

Oddly enough, despite years of government-funded research on the matter, it has never been adequately determined why the dinner table has historically been so conducive to political outbursts, be they from the left or the right. Indeed, one would think that a belly full of roast beef and mashed potatoes would make the average person so fat and lazy, he wouldn't have the energy to engage in heated political rhetoric of any kind. But that's not the case. Instead, both sides stake out even more strident positions, usually becoming more extreme than they are in reality, and sometimes one or the other will become so demonstrative that a steady stream of cream gravy will crawl down his chin.

And when that happens, it is a sure sign the argument should cease immediately, or a massive heart attack could follow.

Again, like with the old "All in the Family" series, the person caught in the middle of this shouting match is almost always the poor mother, be it Edith Bunker, or your mom, or my mom, or any other mom, for that matter.

All she wants is for dinner time to be a happy time.

She loves her husband, right-wing fanatic though he is, and she loves her son, pinko liberal though he is.

And like any mother, she possesses that unique ability to love unconditionally, no matter how big a jerk the recipient might turn out to be.

That's why when the political argument reaches its zenith, she will often choose that precise moment to break out the pecan pie.

"Here we go," she says with a big smile, as if nothing out of the ordinary has been taking place. "You want a big piece or just a little sliver? Remember, we've got vanilla ice cream, too."

Chirp, chirp.

And believe it or not, this blatant attempt at bribery often works, at least until the two parties finish their slices of pie.

All the while, though, they eye each other suspiciously, daring the other to say something.

The mother, on the hand, just chirps away, "That was mighty good, if I do say so myself."

Then she giggles a nervous giggle.

The warring opponents do not.

They just stare.

I bring all of this up for one very simple reason. We are entering the holiday season, that special time of year when families gather from near and far. This Thursday, in fact, will be Thanksgiving.

As you and your loved ones take your seats around the dinner table, remember this: Don't talk politics. Don't talk sports. Don't talk religion.

But if you must, make sure there is an extra pecan pie in the oven ... especially if this year's presidential election happens to come up.

BORING: Disappearing board member announces business in Midland that could help Midland move up a few notches in the business world.

Boring was recently hired as branch manager for Robert Half International, a specialized staffing service firm that is opening an office here in Midland.

According to Boring, he has been in Austin for training in preparation for the opening of the Midland Branch of Robert Half International. The specialized staffing company will be bringing two of its major divisions to Midland.

The office will be open for business no later than December 4, Boring said.

Both the Office Team and the RHI Management Resources divisions will be opening offices in the new Midland branch. The Office Team division specializes in providing skilled temporary administrative and office personnel, while RHI Management Resources focuses on temporary, full-time and senior project professionals.

For the first few weeks, the branch offices will be located on the 12th floor at One Wall Plaza downtown. Boring hopes that by mid-January the executive suites in the permanent office downtown in the Summit Building on Illinois Avenue will be finished.

"We've signed a five-year lease so we plan on being here for a long time," Boring said.

In the past, Ralph Half International has only placed offices in major cities. It has only recently started tapping into smaller markets. The company, founded in 1948, has opened branches in Amarillo and Lubbock.

Boring said he was excited that the firm had made its move to Midland.

"The company has normally been affiliated with tier one and tier two markets," Boring said. "They saw an opportunity in tier three markets. There's a good opportunity in these tier three markets because no one is in them ... no one from what we can tell that's working in the area of accounting at all."

Boring was in town on Friday conducting interviews for the four staff positions for entry level managers. He said the firm will continue to hire on more staff as the branch grows.

Robert Half International was named by Fortune Magazine as one of the best staffing firms to work for in the country. It has more than 280 offices in North America, Europe and Asia.

Last year, the company's revenues were $2.1 billion and had a net income of $141 million. Robert Half International is currently on the New York Stock Exchange under the name RHI. Robert Half stock trades for about $33.16 per share. It is headquartered in Menlo Park, Calif.

POLICE REPORTS

Retaliation

A Midland man with the name Judge Young was found guilty Thursday of retaliation. Prosecutors proved the man threatened to kill a woman who complained to police about him.

Young, who lives in the 4400 block of Parkdale Drive, had numerous complaints lodged against him for rubbish in his front yard, according to assistant district attorney John Westbrook.

Westbrook said Young had an unkempt yard filled with paint cans, 20 to 30 bicycles, all of his bedroom furniture, and his clothes which were hung from trees.

The front of the house also sported broken out windows and a haphazard paint job, Westbrook said.

Young was convicted of the same offense in 1987, and served two years in prison after violating his probation.

Retaliation is a third degree felony with a possible sentence of two to 10 years in prison.

Money laundering

PECOS — John E. Bowman of Kentucky was arrested Friday for money laundering and possession of narcotics.

Bowman was stopped by the Sgt. Arnulfo Rivas of the Trans-Pecos Drug Task Force. Bowman first gave a false identification to Rivas, officers said. When he gave the correct identification, it was discovered that Bowman had a suspended license in Kentucky.

A brief search uncovered the narcotics and $7,820 hidden in a small compartment of the 1995 Chevrolet pickup Bowman was driving, officers said.

Bowman said he was going to Almagordo N.M. The money and the truck were seized. Bowman remains in custody.

MISD: New job keeps Boring away from meetings convened for two regular meetings as well as two special meetings for the superintendent search, according to George Lara. Although Boring was not there to represent the fourth district on important votes such as the adoption of the new insurance policy or the selection of the consulting firm for the superintendent search, he believes the board worked in the best interest of all of MISD in his absence.

"I support the board and its decisions," Boring said. "I think we have six other very competent people besides myself."

Boring said he wished he could have been more involved with many of the issues that came up for consideration by the board while he was in Austin. He said he would have liked to been involved in some of the meetings by phone, but he said that there is a policy that currently doesn't allow conference calls.

"There isn't much I can do from Austin," Boring said.

Boring said that he alerted the other board members of his new job and his absence. Neither MISD superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. nor board president George Lara were aware of any attendance policy regarding board members.

"He let the other board members and the superintendent know as a courtesy," Lara said. "But he did attend regularly beforehand."

Baressi said that Boring had been actively involved in the board and other MISD officials described him as a dedicated board member.

Up until now, since starting as a board member in May 1999, Boring had only missed two board meetings.

SHOW: Modified cars becoming internationally known

(From 1B)

"We (in the business) have a lot of respect for Nick (Hernandez) and his partner. They've never given up on this. If they had, others in the area probably would have given up also," Zamarrom said.

Zamarrom said the cars are judged on craftsmanship and the quality of the work. "The workmanship is getting better every year. There may be a car that was unbeatable five years ago, but now there are 10 cars that can beat it."

According to Zamarrom, the innovation from year to year is matched by a tradition of community values.

"There is a misconception that lowriders and gangs go hand in hand. The people that build these cars do it with their whole families. If the parents are modifying the car, the kids are cleaning it and polishing it. If the kids are building a lowrider bicycle, the parents will help pay for it because of good grades and to encourage their work ethic," Zamarrom said.

He also said there is feeling of camaraderie and brotherhood to car shows, and the sport itself.

The Super Car Show continues today from noon to 6 p.m. at the Ector County Coliseum.

Pre-winter blast chills Texas

Associated Press

Bands of snow followed a cold front across West Texas on Saturday while other parts of the state, including the Dallas-Fort Worth area and the Hill Country, braced for possible sleet and snow.

Fast-moving systems producing snowfall were rolling east-to-west across the South Plains during the afternoon Saturday, though the white stuff was not expected to accumulate on pavement. About 1 to 3 inches were possible on grassy areas, and no heavy accumulations into Sunday were expected.

The Dallas-Fort Worth area was under a winter weather advisory as residents braced for their first shot of pre-Thanksgiving snow in more than 20 years.

The National Weather Service warned of hazardous travel conditions as temperatures dropped, possibly freezing residual moisture on roadways. Bridges were particularly vulnerable because cold air rushes both under and over their surfaces, cooling the road faster.

"(Snow or sleet are) probably going to come down, and it's going to disrupt travel because of bridges and overpasses," said Joe Harris, a meteorologist for the weather service in Fort Worth. "Anything that falls probably won't melt until Sunday."

Street crews were on standby to handle any problems throughout the state's largest metropolitan area.

Saturday's temperatures in North Texas peaked in the 40s. By comparison, the average high for Nov. 18 in the Dallas-Fort Worth area is 66.

Meanwhile, the weather service said similar conditions were a "remote possibility" for the higher elevations of Central Texas, such as the Hill Country and locations on the Edwards Plateau. No accumulations were anticipated.

'Snow or sleet are probably going to come down, and it's going to disrupt travel because of bridges and overpasses.'
— Joe Harris, meteorologist

Even in areas not under threat of freezing precipitation, high temperatures at most Texas reporting stations were closer to the historic lows. Most of the state's eastern half endured rain throughout the day.

Chilly and wet conditions could not keep an estimated 25,000-plus from attending a remembrance ceremony for victims of the Texas A&M bonfire collapse. The memorial took place in the wee hours of Saturday morning, precisely one year after the log stack fell, killing 12 Aggies and injuring 27 others on the College Station campus.

"A little bit of rain and cold isn't going to keep Aggies away at a special time," said Rusty Thompson, the staff adviser to the 1999 bonfire.

Conditions statewide were expected to clear Sunday.

Harris County on schedule to eliminate pesky punchcards

HOUSTON (AP) — While no one has accused Harris County voters of being as electorally challenged as those in, say, Palm Beach County, Fla., Texas' largest county is on pace to ditch similar punchcard balloting within a year.

Officials say polling places for next November's municipal elections probably will be equipped either by touch-screen systems or computer keys, Harris County Clerk Beverly Kaufman said.

That will mean an end to punchcards, the preferred voting method in the county since 1982.

"As we have been reading, it does have some fallibility," Kaufman told the Houston Chronicle. However, the Republican noted that the changeover has been on track since before the mishmash of balloting problems that have stalled the presidential election in Florida this month.

The county is dumping punchcards — in which voters use a small stylus to poke out perforated "chads" next to their candidates' names — because its 12 ballot-counting machines are aging and replacement parts are scarce, Kaufman said.

Computerized voting also would make "voter intent" clear, removing human discretion in whether to count chads that were partially punched or slightly dimpled.

Not to mention that the counting system is imperfect, she added.

The county balked at switching to an optical scanner system in which a computer reads pencil marks. It was decided that the $7 million expenditure wouldn't advance voting technology and could lead to nontechnical problems such as double-voting, just as in the current system.

Computerized voting also would make "voter intent" clear, removing human discretion in whether to count chads that were partially punched or slightly dimpled.

Computer screens prevent double-voting and can be equipped to comply with a recent state law requiring new voting machines to allow visually impaired voters to cast their ballots confidentially. The screens can be equipped with earphones that provide audio instructions.

The screens would cost up to $20 million, but the county is considering leasing them.

Kaufman also said the results would be transmitted to a central voting office electronically, allowing countywide results to be complete within an hour. Currently, the process takes more than three hours if all precincts report promptly.

The imperfection of punchcard ballots was illustrated Friday in a routine manual recount of ballots in three randomly selected Harris County precincts.

Manual recount results in contests for state Supreme Court and railroad commissioner varied by one or two votes from the machine count in most of the tests. Tony Sirvello, Kaufman's elections chief, said such discrepancies are common.

Texas A&M Aggies hope bonfire collapse ceremony helps heal wounds

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The driving rain that fell during the ceremony marking the one-year anniversary of the fatal bonfire collapse at Texas A&M University helped cleanse and heal some of the lingering emotional wounds, students said.

"It was a healthy night for our university," said head yell leader Ricky Wood. "For some it brought closure. This was bonfire weather, it really was. It felt great being out there. It really brought back memories of bonfire."

More than 25,000 people huddled under umbrellas on the mud-slicked campus polo fields for a 40-minute memorial ceremony at 2:42 a.m. Saturday — the exact place and time A&M's bonfire log stack collapsed Nov. 18, 1999, killing 12 students.

The 59-foot stack of logs, weighing more than two jumbo jets, was being assembled for the school's annual pep rally on the eve of its football game against archrival Texas when it toppled. Twenty-seven people were injured.

"I think people got what they needed out of the ceremony. It was very poignant," A&M junior Laura Coward, 20, said. "To me it was amazing to see so many people stand in the pouring rain to honor those who were killed."

Family members of those who died sat together under umbrellas inside a 150-foot circle of orange plastic-mesh fencing laden with flowers, crosses and handwritten messages of inspiration and Scripture. Behind the families were 12 large wooden markers shaped like loops of ribbon, each painted maroon and white and bearing the name and graduation year of one of the twelve.

An adjacent area was set aside for those who were injured and their relatives.

The crowd gathered in a heavy silence broken only by the drumming of raindrops on umbrellas and jackets.

As the ceremony began, lights on the polo fields were turned off and a memorial flame atop a platform in the circle's center was lit. An off-site cannon was fired 12 times.

Over loudspeakers, an unseen person read a short statement.

"Instead of walking the journey of life by their sides, we now celebrate the time they spent with us — touching our lives in very special ways," the speaker said.

The speaker also read a short Jewish poem called "Gates of Prayer."

Then each victim's name was called and a family member or friend went up to the platform in the circle's center to light a candle in memoriam. The pouring rain delayed the lighting of the candles the first few times.

Family members then began lighting candles held by the people in the crowd, who cupped their hands over the delicate flames to shield them from the rain. The candlelight slowly spread across the polo fields, illuminating mournful faces.

"It shows how strong the bonfire tradition is," A&M senior Eric Dickens, 22, said. "I was more than willing to stand out in the rain and pay my respects."

The memorial flame was to remain lit until 8 p.m. Sunday, to correspond with the time when the last victim, Tim Kerlee Jr., died.

Saturday afternoon, College Station officials dedicated a plaque and 12 antique-style lampposts inscribed with the names of the victims at a city park near the university. The ceremony was moved indoors because of continuing rain.

"You are a support structure not found anywhere (else) in the world," Tim Kerlee Sr., father of one of the victims, told the crowd. "Our children are looking down, supporting us from above."

University officials also unveiled a wooden plaque to honor those who died in the bonfire collapse.

"The memorial service went well. I don't think (the rain) diminished from it," said Texas A&M President Ray Bowen. "It was an opportunity for the community to share its grief."

In June, Bowen announced the bonfire would continue, but not until at least 2002 and not without major changes, including greater school supervision and a professionally engineered design.

A five-member commission appointed and funded by the university had blamed the collapse on flawed construction techniques and the lack of adequate supervision of students assembling the stack.

ADVENTURES IN TEACHING

A letter from a daughter in college or let's keep our priorities straight

By R. Eric Setzler

Sitting at a local coffee shop, I had the 'pleasure' of listening to a father describe the trials and tribulations of having his daughter attend her first year of college in a different city. I have no idea who the man was or why he seemed so agitated about such an important step in his child's life.

Setzler

Everyone in the place found themselves trying to speak over his voice. He obviously lacked faith in his daughter's ability to succeed because his complaints included innocent mistakes that she had made as a child to problems with society in general. A sample of his comments were:

"She couldn't keep her room clean to save her soul. I'm sure she is living in mounds of dirty laundry."

"My money flowed through her fingers like water."

"Laura (name changed) was never a morning person. She will never make it to her morning classes."

His attitude reminded me of a fictitious letter that we used to circulate when I was in college (back in the days of the dinosaurs). We always dared each other to send it to parents, but never did. I've adapted it to modern times and this father's situation.

A letter from a daughter in college:

Dear Mom and Dad,

I know I haven't written lately, but I have a lot to tell you. In the four months since I left for college, a lot has happened. Please sit down now because you may be in for a shock.

First, there was the accident. It really wasn't my fault. You see my new friends from the dorm and I were out partying when they closed the bar. They got mad and busted up the place. I tried to stop them, but my head wouldn't quit spinning from these new drinks called 'margaritas'. What a rush! We had to leave in a hurry. Since it was my car, I insisted on driving home. I didn't mean to hit that van full of international soccer players. They were not hurt much, but somehow my car ended up totaled in the ditch.

Fortunately, I only spent sixteen days in intensive care. Wouldn't you know?

Since it happened on my first night here at college, I didn't have a chance to turn in the school insurance form yet. Have the soccer player's lawyers contacted you yet? Something about recovering money from all the exhibition games they had to cancel.

When I got out of the hospital, the inconsiderate police insisted on bringing me in for questioning. Man, I hate how those jails smell. And talk about a lack of privacy! I will never complain about college dormitories ever again.

Twenty-three women sharing the same toilet just isn't right. Finally, they had to let me go. The judge said it had something to do with the "cruel and unusual conditions of overcrowded jails in our state." Maybe our politicians got something right for change.

Hopefully the insurance will settle pretty soon and I can get my license back. I don't want to keep bumming rides on the interstate forever. That's how I met these motorcycle guys. They were really nice as long as there were plenty of drugs and alcohol.

Whew, you wouldn't want to be around them when their high wears off. Talk about mean. Well, that leads me to Dirk. At first, I was attracted to his long blonde ponytail and scraggily beard streaked with gray. However, he has a tattoo on his stomach of the Angel of Death.

I thought, "This man is religious. My parents would like that." We are soul mates. I now have a matching tattoo on my???never mind about that.

Well, time for the good news. Dirk and I were married in a special biker's ceremony. There was a full moon and a lot of guns being fired into the air.

Sorry, you couldn't be there. What a party you missed! I knew you would be pleased about saving all that money on the wedding ceremony. Believe me, you will need it later. More good news - you will be grandparents in about six months. I didn't tell you that we had to get married, but we wanted to do the right thing. I know how Dad used to get about homework and curfews and stuff. Finally, the best news of all - Dirk and I are going to leave our baby with you so we can take a long awaited honeymoon on the open road.

Surprise! We know that you will give her the same love and care that you gave me. Look how I turned out!

I know how happy you must be about this whole thing. But as you taught me, the good things in life are worth waiting for. We can't visit you until your new son-in-law gets out of jail. That bank job charge was just another example of the system cracking down on the under privileged. I know for a fact that he was just trying to provide for his future family and me at the time. I was getting dizzy after selling all that blood. He was such a dear!

My motorcycle family has promised to take care of us until then. Who needs prenatal care when you have Mother Nature and the boys to take care of you?

Let me give you a word of warning - When we get into town, my husband and I don't want some judgmental trip about our value systems. After all, Dirk is as old as you are mom.

Well, I know that this has all been a little bit of shock to you. But I have one more thing to tell you — There was no alcohol, accident, soccer players, jail, motorcycle gang, Dirk, marriage, and pregnancy. I wrote all that so you would keep the following bad news in perspective.

Everything is OK at college except that I am making a low "C" in Calculus 101 and Physics 245. I have decided to quit my part-time job to get my grades back up. As a result, I may need a little cash now then. Okay? I miss you and hope you miss me.

Love, Your Daughter.

As I tried to enjoy my coffee, I wished I had a version of this letter to give to the gentlemen. Instead I did the next best thing. I walked over and offered him the following remarks:

"Sir, I couldn't help overhearing your concerns about your daughter going to college. I've had a lot of experience with young people and I'm sure she will be successful and make you proud."

Surprised, he responded, "How can you be sure?"

With as much confidence as I could muster, I told him, "If she made it this far, your daughter must take after her mother."

The coffee shop was quiet for the first time in an hour.

Woman's database of assassination information envy of researchers

DALLAS (AP)— "I never thought I'd have prostitutes or Mafia in my house," says Mary Ferrell, her brown eyes flashing as her mind sifts through events of the past four decades.

"But I've had them all."

'All' includes the mercurial mother of an accused presidential assassin and scores of authors and researchers who, like her, are committed to solving the mystery of the 20th century:

Who killed JFK?

It matters little to critics, researchers and just plain old assassination buffs that there may be no mystery at all — that perhaps Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone, killed President Kennedy from his sixth-floor sniper's perch in the Texas School Book Depository on Nov. 22, 1963.

Such was the Warren Commission conclusion, although many remain unconvinced.

"In my heart," says Ferrell, "I believe Lee Harvey Oswald was a patsy, that he was used, and that there were other participants in the planning and execution and certainly in the cover-up."

Unlike most of her colleagues, however, Ferrell is quick to add: "I don't know that."

Still, when future generations delve into the events of November 1963, the odds are good they will sift through material compiled by this feisty, silver-haired researcher extraordinaire.

But maybe not.

At 77 and in uncertain health, Ferrell, a former legal secretary, worries that if her assassination research falls into the wrong hands it could be abused and distorted. Or worse.

"At my death," she says of portions of her collection, "I want them destroyed." That's not to suggest she intends to die anytime soon: "I'm not one of these people who wants to die. I don't give a damn if I'm a burden. I want to keep on living."

Ferrell stands as a font of credibility in a garden of conspiratorial nonsense. One of the original JFK researchers, she is widely recognized as competent, sensible, relentless, honest and, when necessary, outspoken.

"I simply try to avoid the idiot fringe. It's not easy," she says with a shrug.

Joking about many of the conspiracy theorists, she says: "We've been blessed with some of the biggest liars in the world. Some of my dearest friends will believe anything under the sun. "There's very few people in this that I believe."

Of Jim Garrison, the late conspiracy-obsessed district attorney, she says wryly: "He was the most charming, interesting man I've ever met. But, poor dear, he let this assassination drive him crazy."

Before Oliver Stone created the 1991 film 'JFK,' there was an assassination movie called 'Executive Action,' which starred Burt Lancaster and Robert Ryan, and blended facts into the fictional plot. The producers persuaded Ferrell to provide the authenticity, but she declined to accept money or credit.

Why?

"We have been called scavengers and critics of the Warren Report and some claim we're just in it for the money, As one who has never taken money for what I've done, maybe it will help uphold the credibility of the critics and researchers."

In essence, when Mary Ferrell speaks — not always softly — people listen, and her assassination-related collection is truly awesome.

Gaeton Fonzi, a former investigator for the House Select Committee on Assassinations, calls her the "guiding star for those who have devoted a part of their lives to pursuing the truth about the Kennedy assassination."

In the introduction of his book 'The Last Investigation,' Fonzi says Ferrell has inspired a generation of JFK researchers with her "gentle patience and guidance" as they "struggled to extract those rare gems of truth buried in the mountains of government documents, investigative reports and private research papers she has accumulated."

Says Gary Mack, curator of the Sixth Floor Museum at Dealey Plaza: "All the Kennedy researchers, since the moment it happened until decades in the future, will be totally indebted to Mary Ferrell for compiling a massive database of facts, figures and information."

'All the Kennedy researchers, since the moment it happened until decades in the future, will be totally indebted to Mary Ferrell for compiling a massive database of facts, figures and information.'

— Gary Mack, curator of the Sixth Floor Museum

A respected researcher in his own right, Mack says: "Mary's not really a theorist. She's a compiler. She gathers information and organizes it."

He recalls that in the late '70s, the House Select Committee contacted Ferrell for copies of certain documents that had been overlooked or misplaced by the National Archives.

"When a congressional investigating committee relies on a private citizen for government documents," he said, laughing, "you know that person knows what she's talking about."

Indeed, a diverse group has beaten a path to Ferrell's modest Dallas home. They include Jack Ruby's strippers, a driver for a New Orleans Mafia kingpin, most of the authors of JFK-related books, scores of fellow researchers, and the cantankerous and self-styled "Mother of History," Marguerite Oswald.

Norman Mailer, who penned 'Oswald's Tale,' was another who sought Ferrell's counsel, and she insists he was both likable and great fun.

But, she sighs, "I have met some of the weirdest people in the world."

The echoes of gunfire in Dealey Plaza had hardly faded that November day when Ferrell launched her quixotic crusade into the murders of Kennedy and police officer J.D. Tippit and, two days later, the slaying of Oswald by nightclub owner Jack Ruby.

Not an ardent Kennedy admirer, Ferrell was an unlikely candidate for such an endeavor, as reflected by her activities earlier that day.

"I was up in the Southland Center having lunch in the Chaparral Club and I didn't even care enough to go down on Elm Street to watch the motorcade," she recalls.

"Of course, I didn't want anything like that happening in Dallas. I thought it was a horrible thing."

To Ferrell, the murderous

JFK: Collection referenced by many sequence didn't make sense.

(From 6B)

The Tippit shooting, the police identification of Oswald in the darkened Texas Theater, his capture and finally his subsequent murder by Ruby seemed too coincidental.

"It just couldn't have happened this way," she says. "It just didn't seem plausible. . . . I began my quest that afternoon and I just never stopped."

Wasting no time, Ferrell combed the regular and special editions of the local papers that long, traumatic weekend for the names of witnesses -- often misspelled, she points out -- and began recording them alphabetically on index cards. She added information as it became available from newspapers and magazines and, years later, books. Once confidential government documents were declassified, she also obtained data from the National Archives.

"I ended up with over 40,000 3-by-5 index cards," she says, shaking her head in wonderment. "I built a database before I ever heard the term 'database.' "

She still has those typewritten cards, although her files are now computerized.

She also has a staggering collection of JFK-related books, magazines and newspaper articles.

"I have a few books that are very rare . . . some published in English, some in Russian. I'm not saying they've got anything really valuable to say, but the book itself is a rare item."

As early as 1968, she remembers with a chuckle, her books filled every nook and cranny of every room in her two-bedroom, yellow frame house, finally overflowing onto the bed.

"Honey," her husband, Buck, inquired one night, "if I built you a library out in back, would you put all these books out there and never bring another book in the house?"

Sure, she replied.

"He foolishly believed me. Of course, there are still books in the kitchen, the bathroom, the other bedroom, living room, everywhere. And that room out there — the library — you can hardly walk. But he did have that room built for me in 1968."

Before the '60s ran their clamorous course, Ferrell's research efforts took a pivotal turn.

"The same day that I started my database, there was a man over in Highland Park that began what he called his chronology," she recalls. "He put everything in his book, wrote it down minute by minute, in chronological order."

His name was Arch Kimbrough. He and Ferrell met in March 1967.

"I really did like him," Ferrell says. "He told me he was going to devote 20 years to the assassination, and if it was not solved at the end of 20 years, he was going to quit."

She and Kimbrough, now dead, became a team of sorts.

"What we did was swap our work," Ferrell says. "I gave him copies of my index cards and he gave me copies of his chronology."

On occasion, they traveled to Washington together to examine government documents at the National Archives. "Arch and I would be there when they opened and closed," she says.

And after 20 years?

"On Nov. 22, 1983, he stopped. He didn't want to hear 'assassination' again. And he thought I should stop, too. I said, 'No, I'm not going to stop. I never expected it to be solved by this time.' "

AP Photo

Mary Ferrell stands in the office library behind her Dallas home, July 25, with some of the research she has been collecting for 37 years on everything surrounding President John F. Kennedy's assassination.

Ferrell added the chronology to her research effort, and it now consists of some 10 volumes and thousands of pages.

"Each time something new came up, I put it into the chronology. . . . Lee's complete life is in these chronologies . . . but the chronology has everybody: Tippit and Ruby and Ruby's family . . . and a lot of people who had no business being in there at all."

And therein lies the dilemma, says Ferrell, one that might compel her to destroy much of her research on both the index cards and in the chronologies.

"The reason I can't let these things loose is because there's so much supposition in them."

Often, she says, she included someone in her database and chronologies without documentary proof of the person's possible or purported involvement: "If I had a reason for believing . . . I put it in there."

It created a paradox.

"There's work in there that will never be duplicated . . . valuable work, and I agree it should be saved," Ferrell concedes. "But maybe next to it is something that should be destroyed."

She says the solution would be to weed out the extraneous, undocumented, potentially embarrassing material. But after a serious run-in with cancer in 1997, her health won't permit such an undertaking.

"I took wonderful care of my library until I got sick," she says. "Now I don't know what to do."

Ultimately, she says, her daughter, Carol Anne Burtchaell, will make the decision.

"Those things that have been published — newspapers, magazines and books — Carol Anne can give those to anybody she wants," Ferrell says, but a leading candidate is Tennessee researcher Robert Chapman, whom she's worked with for 25 years.

"He's a reliable person and a good researcher."

Burtchaell, an IBM employee based in Dallas, says she is undecided about the published materials and the files and chronologies.

"I have promised to abide by Mother's wishes, but she has been so vague that I feel I have a lot of latitude," she says. "I hope, if I outlive her, that I can reach a consensus with my brother, Jim, who has taken an interest in the case, and Robert Chapman, who is also very interested and has been extremely kind to my mother."

The good news is that a significant portion of Ferrell's work is already electronically preserved outside her private collection.

At one point, she "culled out" more than 11,000 of her index cards and fed the information into a computer, then transferred it onto a CD-ROM. She also pulled from the chronologies Oswald's life from the time he joined the Marines in 1956 until the day he died in 1963.

Ferrell gave the CD to a mail-order book service called JFK Lancer, so named because Lancer was Kennedy's Secret Service code name on his 1963 trip to Texas. The Grand Prairie-based group primarily handles books dealing with political assassinations and also publishes a quarterly newsletter out of Southern California.

"They use that database and sell that CD-ROM for $60," Ferrell explains, "and it is financing scholarships for college students writing about the Kennedy assassination."

Because she can't prove a conspiracy, she decreed that applicants need not embrace such a concept to qualify.

"I can't prove definitely that Oswald wasn't the only shooter. . . . I think there were shots coming from the grassy knoll, but I can't prove that. I think the Zapruder film looks like it proves it . . . that Kennedy was hit from the front and his head went violently backward.

"But I don't know."

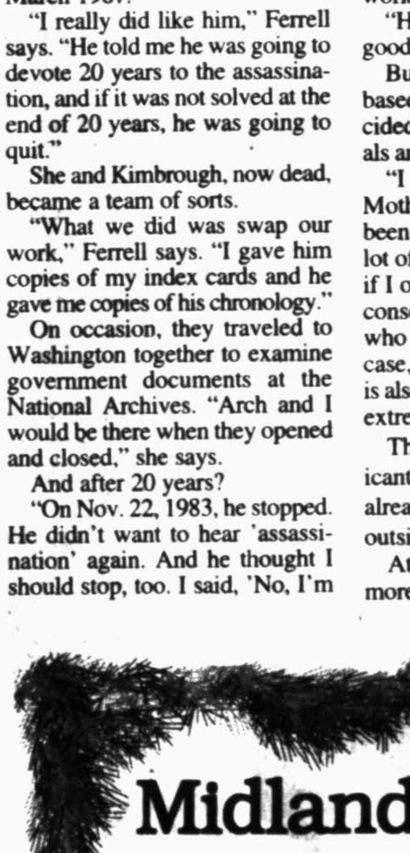

She is, however, more decisive about a purported coverup, which she believes was orchestrated by the U.S. government.

"It couldn't have been covered up by anyone else," she says. "They're the only ones who could control all these documents. That's as specific as I can get. I don't know that there was any other conspiracy. All of it may have been happenstance . . . but somebody went to a great deal of trouble to control the documents."

She insists there is evidence that the FBI forged documents, and cites as an example a page from a previously classified report on the assassination. Dated Nov. 30, 1963, Page 129 cites evidence that in effect would tend to put the assassin on the sixth floor of the School Book Depository and bolster the case against Oswald. However, what appears to be the original Page 129 of the same report was decidedly less conclusive. That page was discovered by a JFK researcher who stumbled across it tucked away in an unrelated document from the National Archives.

Convinced that the substitute page was a forgery, she wonders rhetorically: "If they'd forge one thing, why not believe they'd forge everything? You see why I get so angry and don't want to stop?"

Papa John's Pizza was established in 1984 in Jeffersonville, IN and was an immediate success. Founder John Schnatter was a mere 23 years old when he started his business with a simple concept - the perfection of one dish, (pizza) to be complimented with fast exceptional service.

Papa John's intentionally limits the menu items, (pizza, breadsticks, cheesesticks and drinks) to ensure consistency in our quality and fast and friendly service. Papa John's Pizza is proud to be a member of the Midland business community and we look forward to serving the community through our unsurpassed service and by supporting the efforts of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Message From The Chair

Over the past fifteen years, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has endeavored to provide its members with the necessary resources to succeed in what has become a unique and ever changing business environment. In fact, it is safe to say that the Hispanic Chamber has had an enormous impact upon the way we do business in Midland. As a long time supporter and recent board member I have had the opportunity to work along side fellow chamber members, many of them among Midland's finest and have experienced much personal growth as a result. I am proud to call Midland my home, and I am thankful to have this great opportunity to serve as board chair of the Midland Hispanic Chamber.

Midland is a place with so much to offer, not only to its residents but to our visitors as well. It is quite an accomplishment to be able to offer the amenities of the big city and yet still enjoy the cohesiveness, spirit and pride of a close knit community. Not to mention our West Texas hospitality!!! Midland has flourished in good times. Through trying times we have emerged an even stronger community. Among our greatest virtues is the diversity of our community and our willingness to work together. The Hispanic Chamber has worked to keep individuals and organizations working together to keep our economy strong and our businesses prosperous. I sincerely believe that the Hispanic Chamber has done much to improve our overall quality of life. Not only in an economic sense, but in areas of leadership development, education, and community development as well.

The Hispanic Chamber exists not to separate and divide, but to encourage participation and leadership from within. It is my hope that with the help of my fellow board members we can continue in that tradition and encourage even more participation from the ranks of the exploding Hispanic population. I am confident that with the support of the MHCC board staff and membership, we can make Midland even greater than it is today. I anticipate a very productive year ahead of us and look forward to serving the great city of Midland!!!

Diana Cano
Board Chair, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), pact has called for the gradual removal of tariffs and other trade barriers on most goods produced and sold in North America. NAFTA became effective in Canada, Mexico, and the United States on January 1, 1994. NAFTA forms the world's second largest free-trade zone, bringing together 365 million consumers in Canada, Mexico, and the United States in an open market. The largest free-trade zone is the European Economic Area (which includes the members of the European Union and the European Free Trade Association), which also became effective in 1994. NAFTA was built upon a 1989 trade agreement between the United States and Canada that eliminated or reduced many tariffs between the two countries. NAFTA called for immediately eliminating duties on half of all U.S. goods shipped to Mexico and gradually phasing out tariffs over a period of about 14 years. Restrictions are to be removed from many categories, including motor vehicles and automotive parts, computers, textiles, and agriculture. The treaty also protected intellectual property rights (patents, copyrights, and trademarks) and outlined the removal of restrictions on investment among the three countries. Mandates for minimum wages, working conditions, and environmental protection were added later as a result of supplemental agreements signed in 1993.

From fiscal year 1997 to 1998, U.S. farm and food exports to Mexico climbed from $881 million to $5.9 billion -- the highest level ever and the fourth record in 5 years under NAFTA. U.S. exports of soybeans, cotton, and rice all set new records. By value, more U.S. agricultural products went to Mexico last year than to China, Hong Kong, and Russia combined.

Texas exports reached $91 billion in 1999 and have grown by 51.7 percent since 1994 (in current dollars). Electronics, industrial machinery (the sector that includes both computers and oil and gas field machinery), and chemicals continue to account for the majority of Texas exports, accounting for nearly 74 percent. While the state's export growth in early 1999 continued to be slowed by the economic woes in South America and East Asia, they recovered to finish the year 4.8 percent higher than 1998. Meanwhile, exports for the United States, overall, increased by 1.8 percent in 1999. Texas' largest export gains continued to be led by Mexico and Canada which accounted for 57.3 percent of total state exports during 1999.

NETWORKING BREAKFAST

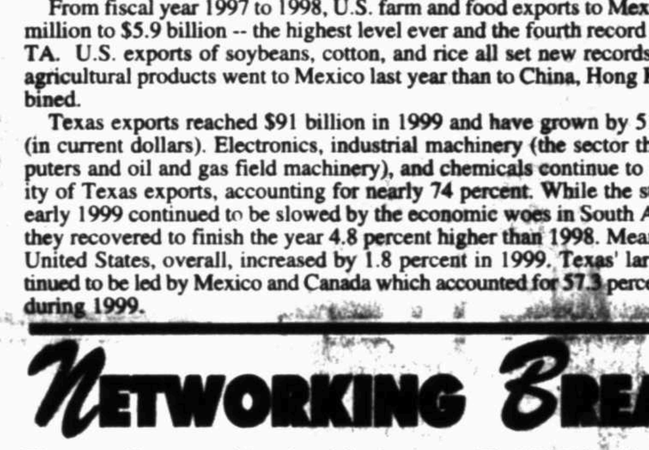

The monthly networking breakfast was established in 1990 by Midland College and was initially developed to promote procurement opportunities and address the difficulties that small businesses were experiencing in gaining access to corporate purchasing. It has recently evolved to include informative programs and presentations by experts in the fields of e-commerce, business financing, and tax updates to name a few. Attendees are allowed 30 seconds to promote their products or services and upon request may be allowed a 3' x 3' exhibit area on which to display goods or printed collateral.

This month's breakfast is scheduled for 7:00 a.m. on Tuesday November 21, 2000 and will feature a presentation by D'Ann Harris Director of Market Development with the Northwest Texas International Trade Center (NWT-ITC). The Northwest Texas International Trade Center is a state supported agency that promotes international trade opportunities for Texas companies. The agency accepts no fee for services from the buyer or seller.

The NWT-ITC has assisted Texas businesses in generating $151 million dollars in export sales since its inception in 1994. The center provides industry and market research, financial counseling, logistics and documentation assistance and international business matchmaking services. The NWT-ITC has over 750 companies registered as clients. A large percentage of NWT-ITC clients are in the energy, agriculture and computer technology industries. The remaining client base covers the vast majority of all other industries. The Northwest Texas International Trade Center was recently awarded the President's Award for Excellence upon recommendation of Secretary of Commerce William Daley for its efforts in promoting international trade.

The upcoming presentation will cover how the agency can be of assistance to clients looking to export. Information will also be provided on current opportunities in Central and South America as well as China.

The Networking Breakfast is held every third Tuesday of the month from 7:00 a.m. until 8:30 a.m. Ongoing sponsors include the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Midland College, Midland Chamber of Commerce, Midland Chamber of Black Entrepreneurs, Citizens Coalition, and UTPB. Cost of the breakfast is $5.00. For more information please contact Ralph Smith or Glen Yeary at 684-4100.

STEP UP TO SUCCESS

"Step Up to Success," an annual program coordinated by the Midland Hispanic Chamber, has served as a highly effective student leadership forum which targets "at risk" students and reaffirms self esteem with the help of community leaders and volunteers. The half day workshop was held October 13th at First Baptist Church. The Midland Hispanic Chamber coordinates the event annually along with the help of the Midland Independent School District. Over 80 junior high students from Abell, Alamo, Goddard, and San Jacinto participated in this year's program with over 30 volunteers serving as facilitators, presenters and speakers. As usual the program was a huge success and the MHCC thanks the following for their contributions to this worthwhile endeavor.

Waco Bound: MCHS makes 4A state final

Mustangs end repeat road for defending 4A champs

Staff Report

GROESBECK — Midland Christian will play for a state football championship next week in Waco.

McClendon

The Mustangs bombed Houston Second Baptist here Saturday afternoon, 31-13, in the TAPPS 4A semifinals to move into its first ever chance of winning an 11-man state title next week.

Midland Christian will face Fort Worth Christian at 4:30 p.m. at Floyd Casey Stadium in Waco next Saturday. Fort Worth Christian and MCHS are in the same district, so the state championship will come out of TAPPS District 1-4A.

Fort Worth Christian, 8-4 on the season, defeated Midland Christian, 35-28, in a district game earlier this season. However, MC coach Greg McClendon is happy to have the rematch.

"They (Fort Worth Christian) beat us on a muddy field, but we staged a great comeback in that game," McClendon said. "We said all along that we were playing in the best district in the state. One of our teams, Denton Liberty, had to stay at home, and they were good, too."

Despite the score of this semifinal game, it was the Mustang defense that turned the tide, leading to the chance to play for their first title.

"Our defense won this football game for us," McClendon said. "We made three

Katy stops Trinity's bid for repeat state crowns

JUNCTION — In any football game, a team is going to find it difficult to win if it loses five fumbles in the first half. Compound that with the quality of opposition you'll find in a semifinal playoff game, and five fumbles will ruin a team.

That's what happened to the Trinity Chargers on Saturday in their semifinal game in the Class 3A of the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools.

On a sloppy wet field, the Faith West Eagles of Katy turned two of Trinity's five fumbles into 14 points, then totally dominated the second half to earn a 30-0 victory. The prize for Faith West (9-3) is a berth in the TAPPS 3A championship game next weekend in Waco.

"We felt like we had to win the turnovers and win the field position game, and we didn't do it," said John Wilkins, who finished 9-3 in his first year back in coaching and Trinity's first year playing 11-man football. "In the second half, they took over and dominated the game. There wasn't much we could do about it."

It wasn't just the fumbles that hurt, it was the great field position Faith West got when it recovered the fumbles. On

Red Raiders fall to No. 1 Sooners

By Owen Canfield

NORMAN, Okla. — Top-ranked Oklahoma didn't look the part for much of the day against Texas Tech. With the game on the line, that changed.

Led by Josh Heupel, the Sooners drove 71 yards in 12 plays and chewed up more than five minutes of the clock to score the clinching touchdown in a 27-13 victory Saturday.

Heupel was intercepted twice and had a season-low 248 yards passing, but was 7-of-8 for 60 yards on the final drive, including a 15-yard completion on a third-and-4 play to set up the touchdown.

"For our guys to put that drive together says a lot about their character and toughness," coach Bob Stoops said. "And Josh comes up with the huge play there at the end."

The victory gave the Sooners (10-0, 7-0 Big 12) the Big 12 South Division championship. They close out the regular season next week against Oklahoma State, then will play North Division winner Kansas State on Dec. 2 in Kansas City for the conference championship.

Texas Tech (7-5, 3-5) put up a good fight in coach Mike Leach's return to Norman, getting within eight at 21-13 midway through the fourth. But Oklahoma ended any upset hopes with the late drive.

"Basically we didn't have any tempo and rhythm," Heupel said. "When our offense is clicking on all cylinders, we have a tempo and rhythm inside the huddle. We weren't able to get that.

"Fortunately, we were able to get out of here with a win."

As Oklahoma's offensive coordinator last year, Leach installed the spread offense that Oklahoma has used to lead the nation in scoring at 44.7 points per game. His Red Raiders controlled the clock much of the day, with Kliff Kingsbury completing 41 of 61 passes for 295 yards.

Florida State gets landslide decision

By Richard Rosenblatt

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida State made a strong case for a chance to defend its national championship, beating Florida in the game that usually gives the winner a title shot.

Chris Weinke fought off the flu and threw for 353 yards and three touchdowns — two to Marvin Minnis — as No. 3 Florida State had a surprisingly easy time beating its bitter state rival 30-7 on Saturday night.

The Seminoles (10-1) completed their regular season by beating the No. 4 Gators (9-2) for the third year in a row, but now have to wait two weeks to find out if they'll play for the Bowl Championship Series' title in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 3.

Florida, the SEC East champion, still has a chance to play in the Sugar Bowl if it beats Auburn in the league title game Dec. 2.

The Seminoles can feel good about their chances because the winner of the Florida-Florida State game has gone on to play for the title five of the last seven years.

In the 45th meeting between these powers, a Doak Campbell Stadium-record crowd of 83,042 witnessed the Seminoles most impressive performance of the season.

Weinke completed 23 of 44 passes, and his second TD pass of the game — a 34-yarder to Minnis in the first quarter — made him the Atlantic Coast Conference's career passing leader, moving him ahead of Duke's Ben Bennett. Weinke, who also enhanced his Heisman Trophy chances, has thrown for 9,789 yards in his career.

Minnis, who caught three TD passes in last week's win over Wake Forest, had eight catches for 187 yards. For Florida, Jesse

MHS turns tables on No. 7 Monterey

BIG SPRING — The Midland High girls basketball team pulled off the "double whammy" in the Saturday night finals of the Pizza Inn-vitational.

Midland High Girls Basketball

Not only did 3-1 MHS win the tournament title, but it came against No. 7 state ranked Lubbock Monterey, a team that had defeated the Lady Bulldogs on Tuesday, by a narrow 50-47 count.

"That was a double whammy for us," said MHS coach Terry Gray. "We converted some of those easy shots we missed when we played them the first time, and we didn't get rattled in this game. The first time we played them, we seemed overly impressed with the Monterey name. This was still a tough win for us, but a good win."

Edrea Rogers, who won the MVP title for the tournament, poured in 24 points to pace the victory. Jenny Jones had 10 points.

Jones, Laquoria Harris and Laura Koch also landed berths on the all-tournament team. Koch had six points against Monterey while Harris had four. MHS posted a 3-0 mark in the tournament. Now both Midland High and Lubbock Monterey have identical records of 3-1 for the season.

Big Spring has no problem with Canyon

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — This year's edition of the Big Spring football team took a huge first step toward redemption Saturday afternoon with cold efficiency.

On a day when strong winds and blowing snow made Lowery Field look like the high school equivalent of Lambeau Field or the since demolished Metropolitan Stadium, the Steers simply went about their work in a fashion that got them there in the first place. Big Spring quickly forgot two straight losses to end the regular season by pounding Canyon 35-14 in a Class 4A Small School bi-district playoff game.

For a group of seniors who had only tasted playoff heartache over the past two seasons, beating Canyon will at least leave them with a positive feeling about their final high school season.

"We lost our sophomore and junior years in the first round and we were sick of it," said senior linebacker Bowe Butler, who spearheaded a stellar defensive effort. "That's why our motto this year was 'unfinished business.'"

Lady Chaps claim battle of 1 vs. 2

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

If Midlanders ever wanted to see a national championship caliber type game, they could have found one Saturday at Chaparral Center.

In the final game of the Lady Chap Classic, No. 1 Midland College faced No. 2 Utah Valley State in a battle of two of the best women's junior college programs in the country. This game certainly lived up to its billing.

Whether is was clutch shots, missed opportunities or two overtimes, the Lady Chaps survived the marathon with a 91-82 victory over the Wolverines.

If fans' hearts were jumping and if the sweat was pouring down in the final minutes of the double overtime, who could blame them? This game had everything a die-hard basketball fan could want when seeing the top two teams in the country this early in the season.

Midland College Women

Both teams were tied at the end of regulation at 72-72. They were again deadlocked at 75-75 at the end of the first overtime. But in the second overtime, the Lady Chaps (8-1) took over and took advantage of the Wolverines being without three of their top players, who had fouled out.

An 8-2 run to start the second overtime by the Lady Chaps gave them the edge to hold off a very feisty bunch from Utah Valley State.

"I knew it had to end eventually," said Midland College coach Ron Jones, who was hoarse after more than two hours of barking instructions to his players. "We hit some big shots in consecutive possessions in the second overtime. I think we could've won it in regulation but we struggled to score in the last couple of minutes and didn't get a chance to put it away."

Three Lady Chaps scored in double figures with sophomore post Chanovia Rhodes leading the way with 22. Freshman Amisha Carter added 21 and fellow frosh Veronique Aless'e had 12.

"(This win) made us closer, stronger and let us know that we had to fight for what we want," said Rhodes, who added 13 boards. "Coach always tells us that we take for granted our opponents because we think that just because we have talent, we're going to win. Tonight, we showed that it wasn't about the talent, it was about us coming together as one."

It was a good game for Rhodes, considering that she has been feeling a little under the weather and sat out Friday night's 114-31 win over Jacksonville. On Saturday, the 6-foot-3 Rhodes not only had to combat her illness, she also had to go up against Utah Valley's 6-4 post Ashleigh Chamberlain.

"She was big," said Rhodes about going up against Chamberlain. 'I just stayed in there because I knew if I would go down, my team would go down. I'm the captain, and as long as I kept cheering my team on, they were right there with me."

This was a much better team performance for the Lady Chaps than Thursday when they lost to Angelina College, 78-73. Jones was definitely happy to see the spunk his team showed.

"It was a good game, we competed hard and I think that game will help us learn how to compete," Jones said. "I think Utah Valley played better than they have all weekend. I thought both teams felt like they needed wins because we both got upset by Angelina this week.

"I know we're one of the top five or six teams in the country. This is the first time we played hard for the entire game. I hope that's a sign of us starting to mature a bit."

Classic Note: In the early game, Angelina went 3-0 for the tournament with a 98-48 win over Jacksonville.

Chaparral men drop first game of season

Staff Report

WEATHERFORD — Just in case you were holding out hope that the Midland College Chaparrals would post an undefeated season, forget it.

The Chaps dropped their first game of the year after winning five in a row to start the season, losing here Saturday to Cisco Junior College, 63-61.

And this loss was a tough one since Cisco hit a two-foot basket off an inbounds pass with 1.8 seconds left on the shot to take the game after a three-point shot by MC's Armon Tillman had tied the game at 61-61 just a couple of seconds earlier.

"We didn't play with a lot of energy, and it cost us the game," said MC coach Junsie Cotten. "Cisco deserved to win becasue they played harder than we did. This should be a great learning lesson for our team, and we need to see how we handle a little adversity. I hope this was a vaulable lesson learned for our team."

Quannas White led the Chaps with 14 points while Jason Williams had 11 in the low scoring game. Adam Norris led the Cisco with a game-high 16 points.

MC held to a meager 26-23 lead at the half. Cisco climbed to 6-4 on the season with the win.

The Chaps now return home for a Monday meeting at Chaparral Center with the Lubbock Christian Junior Varsity.

In other WJCAC action: Frank Phillips College defeated Lamar Community College 106-105 in overtime.

George Washington downs Texas A&M

WASHINGTON (AP)— George Washington got 24 points from Mike King and 21 from Chris Monroe as the Colonials pulled away from Texas A&M to win their season opener 94-74 Saturday night.

George Washington, (1-0) in a game that featured 54 total fouls, got most of its offense from the free throw line, converting on 31 of 46 attempts. Monroe scored 13 of his points from the line.

Texas A&M, (0-1) despite holding the Colonials to 33 percent shooting in the second half, never got closer than 13 down the stretch when a Carlton Brown baseline jumper made it 76-63. Brown led the Aggies with 15 points.

Lady Rebels win twice

The Midland Lee girls played twice Saturday, sweeping games with Lubbock High and Odessa Permian in the consolation bracket.

In the first game, Lee defeated Lubbock High, 62-48, as Shamera Bryson and Shandi Neatherlin each scored 14 points. It was the first win of the season for Lee.

But Lee came back with a 51-43 win over Permian to climb to 2-3 for the year as Bryson and Neatherlin were hot again with 18 and 16 points respectively. Bryson earned all-tournament honors for her games in the tournament. Permian hit eight three-pointers against the Lady Rebels in the losing cause.

Cypress Falls defeats SA Clark for 5A crown

Associated Press

SAN MARCOS — Cypress Falls looked to be in trouble against San Antonio Clark after losing the lead late in the second game.

Cypress Falls rallied though, winning the game and the match 15-10, 15-13 to claim the Class 5A UIL State volleyball title Saturday evening.

Cypress falls trailed 13-12 in the second game, but got two straight points, both on kills by Kari Kelley, to regain the lead at 14-13. A San Antonio Clark (37-2) handling error gave Cypress Falls (40-2) the title.

Joanna Benestante led Cypress Falls with 14 kills, while Samantha Fisher added nine kills for the Golden Eagles. Tournament most valuable player Krystal Kolkhorst had 27 assists for Cypress Falls.

SAN MARCOS — New Braunfels handed Longview Pine Tree its first loss of the season, claiming the Class 4A state volleyball championship in the process.

Pine Tree hadn't lost a game all season, but the Lady Unicorns posted a 15-10, 5-15, 15-11 victory.

Michelle Popp led New Braunfels (34-7) with 18 kills, and Natalie Walther had 38 assists. Kate Kennedy added 16 kills for the Lady Unicorns.

Caldwell wins 3A volleyball title over Texarkana Pleasant Grove

SAN MARCOS — Caldwell won its second title in three year, defeating Texarkana Pleasant Grove 15-2, 15-7, in the finals of the Class 3A state volleyball tournament.

■ UIL Volleyball

Caldwell, which also won the state title in 1998, was down 10-4 in the first game, but two straight aces by Lindsey Miller, who finished with four in the match, sparked the Hornets to an 11-point run to close out Pleasant Grove.

Tournament MVP Beth Karasek led Caldwell (36-3) with 16 kills and 12 digs and Andrea Wilde had 36 assists.

Jewett Leon wins seventh title with victory over Nocona

SAN MARCOS — Head coach Billy Evans, who is retiring after coaching at Jewett Leon for 42 years, went out in a blaze of glory.

Evans guided Jewett Leon to its seventh UIL State volleyball title in 19 trips, as the Cougars defeated Nocona 15-4, 15-2.

Evans finishes his career with a 1079-181 record. He is ranked second all-time nationally in career high school volleyball coaching victories.

Lindsey Jones, who was named tournament most valuable player, led Jewett Leon (35-3) with 21 kills, while Laurie Engleman added 17 assists for the Cougars.

Windthorst takes Class 1A state title

SAN MARCOS — Windthorst won its fourth straight Class 1A UIL state volleyball title Saturday morning with a 15-4, 15-1 win over Round Top-Carmine.

Windthorst senior Heather Schreiber won her fourth straight Most Valuable Player award, leading the Trojanettes with 13 kills.

Jana Vieth had 14 assists to lead Windthorst (33-7), which has now won seven out of the last 10 Class 1A state titles (1993-'95, 1997-2000).

Tomlinson rushes for 305 yards; TCU bombs UTEP

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — While this wasn't even LaDainian Tomlinson best game against Texas El Paso, it was the most satisfying.

Tomlinson ran for a season-high 305 yards and three touchdowns as No. 15 Texas Christian (9-1, 6-1 WAC) won 47-14 Saturday, ending UTEP's seven-game winning streak and providing a huge response to the trash talking heard all week.

"What this was was dragging them into the backyard," said Tomlinson, who set a NCAA Division I-A record with 406 yards against UTEP last year. "It just amazes me that as good a team as we are, people still say things about us."

The Miners (8-3, 7-1), had talked publicly about winning outright Western Athletic Conference title and then celebrating by tearing down TCU's goal posts and hoisting the trophy at midfield. And, they said, there was no way that Tomlinson was going to have another record-setting day.

They were wrong on all accounts.

"We were not going to let that happen," TCU coach Dennis Franchione said. "We just made sure the players managed to hear all those statements."

While Tomlinson didn't equal his NCAA record of a year ago and scored only half as many touchdowns, he became the WAC's career rushing leader and only the ninth runner in NCAA history to go over 5,000 career yards.

"When people challenge us, I think we play better," Tomlinson said.

Now UTEP has to wait to see if it will have to share its first WAC title and to which bowl it will be going. TCU would have to lose Friday at SMU for the Miners to win the title outright.

The Miners scored first, when Rocky Perez threw a 3-yard TD pass to Lee Mays midway through the first quarter, six plays after a fumble by TCU quarterback Casey Printers was recovered by Trey Merkens at the Frogs' 20.

After that, it was all Tomlinson and TCU, which had 529 total yards.

Tomlinson had 33 carries, and increased his NCAA-leading rushing total to 1,984 yards. He has 5,089 career yards. Tomlinson also has more than 100 yards in 12 straight games, a streak that began with the record game against UTEP last November.

Perez set a UTEP single-season record with 26 TD passes, 15 of them to Mays.

Oklahoma State runs over Baylor

Associated Press

STILLWATER, Okla. — Quarterback Aso Pogi ran for four touchdowns as Oklahoma State broke a seven-game losing streak by beating Baylor 50-22 Saturday, giving the Bears their 21st straight Big 12 Conference loss.

Pogi completed 14 of 18 passes and scored on runs of 6 and 5 yards, and twice went over from the 1 for the Cowboys (3-7, 1-7). The Bears (2-9, 0-8) couldn't overcome a series of early turnovers or an Oklahoma State defense that allowed only 66 yards rushing.

Reggie White had 78 yards of Oklahoma State's 240 yards rushing.

Oklahoma State's defense kept the Cowboys in position to score throughout the first half.

Bears freahman quarterback Josh Zachry was sacked in the first seconds and fumbled for a 19-yard loss that put the Cowboys on Baylor's 1-yard line. Pogi followed with an easy touchdown dive.

Baylor's first four possessions ended in turnovers and set up Oklahoma State scoring drives each time. The Bears didn't reach Cowboys territory until midway through the second quarter.

Zachry, the fifth different quarterback this season for the Bears, hit Reggie Newhouse with a 9-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter and threw a 20-yard scoring pass to Robert Quiroga midway through the fourth. Zachry was 17 for 35 for 227 yards, but was intercepted three times.

It was Oklahoma State's biggest margin of victory since beating Kansas last season 45-13,

Nevada beats Rice, secures title

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press Writer

RENO, Nev. — David Neill passed for 236 yards and a touchdown and Del Bates intercepted a pass with 5 seconds left Saturday to secure Nevada's first win ever in the Western Athletic Conference, 34-28 over Rice.

An offensive interference call nullified Ben Wulf's 26-yard pass to Sean White at Nevada's 30-yard line with 16 seconds left and Bates picked off the next attempt to thwart the Owls' comeback attempt.

Marquis Starks ran for 58 yards and two touchdowns for Nevada (2-9, 1-5), which completes its first year in the WAC Saturday at Tulsa. The win snapped the Wolf Pack's seven-game losing streak, their longest since 1964.

For Rice, former Stanton High School standout Kyle Herm scored a rushing touchdown. Herm rushed for 35 yards and passed for another 17.

Freshman Robbie Beck rushed for a game-high 84 yards for Rice, which suffered its eighth straight loss on the road and closed a disappointing season at 3-8 overall, 2-6 in the WAC.

Jamie Tyler ran for two touchdowns in the fourth quarter to pull Rice to within 31-28 but Nevada's Nate Burleson recovered the ensuing onside kick with 2:23 left.

Louisville downs Houston, takes title

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Nathan Smith kicked four field goals and quarterback Dave Ragone passed for two touchdowns and ran for another as the Louisville Cardinals wrapped up the Conference-USA championship and Liberty Bowl berth with a 32-13 victory over the Houston Cougars Saturday.

Louisville (9-2, 6-1 in C-USA) won its fourth straight game and prepared to accept a bid to the Liberty Bowl on Dec. 29 in Memphis, Tenn.

The Cardinals captured their third conference title. The Cardinals won Missouri Valley Conference titles in 1970 and 1972. Houston finished its season at 3-8, 2-5.

Louisville's defense picked off four passes by Jason McKinley and two of those set up points for the Cardinals.

Leading 15-13 at the half, the Cardinals took charge with 17-unanswered points.

Fresno State tops SMU

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Derrick Ward scored on a 53-yard run as Fresno State beat Southern Methodist 14-7 on Saturday.

Ward, sidelined for most of this season by injuries after leading the Bulldogs in rushing last year, also had a 1-yard scoring run and finished with 79 yards rushing.

Ward gained 875 yards last season, but had just 71 yards rushing for the year entering the game.

Fresno State (6-4, 4-2 WAC) had to hold off a late SMU rally to extend its home winning streak to 15 games.

Ward gave the Bulldogs the early lead, scoring on the 53-yard run on Fresno's third offensive play of the game.

Fresno State got great field position late in the second quarter when Dante Marsh forced a fumble and teammate Thabiti Lockhart recovered at the SMU 16.

Ward capped off a short scoring drive with a 1-yard run to give the Bulldogs a 14-0 halftime lead.

Josh McCown got SMU on the scoreboard in the fourth quarter with a 28-yard toss to Jefferson.

Ravens get 1st shot at 'America's Team'

By David Ginsburg
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — It's been a busy week for the Baltimore Ravens, for reasons that have nothing to do with game preparation or the media crush in the wake of their rousing win over the Tennessee Titans.

For the first time in 19 years, the Dallas Cowboys are coming to town. The game was sold out months ago, and the players are scrambling to accomodate friends and family yearning to watch the Ravens' inaugural game against America's Team.

"Everyone's running around for tickets," said right tackle Spencer Folau, who quickly used up his allotment of six. "I've gotten so many calls this week. ... Even if they were 1-10, it wouldn't matter. Everyone wants to see this team."

The Cowboys (4-6) aren't nearly as good as they once were. But they still have Troy Aikman and Emmitt Smith, they still wear those distinctive silver and blue uniforms, and they still are arguably the most popular team in professional sports.

"We've got a great Dallas Cowboy team coming in," Ravens coach Brian Billick said. "I say great because they are still America's Team, make no doubt about it. This was one of the first games we sold out. Fox has their No. 1 crew, and they're not here to see the Baltimore Ravens. They're here to see Troy and Emmitt and the Dallas Cowboys."

Some of the Ravens feel the same way.

"It will be interesting to see some of those guys who won championships," Baltimore guard Mike Flynn said. "Troy Aikman and Emmitt Smith, seeing them on field will be a little special."

The last time the Cowboys visited Baltimore was in 1981 for a game against the Colts, long before Aikman and Smith teamed to make Dallas a perennial contender. It's been a down year for the 'Boys, but no one would dare consider them merely another sub-.500 team.

"America's Team is just something people put on us for being one of the most successful franchises in the NFL, and I would have to say we still have that reputation," first-year coach Dave Campo said.

"When you look at what this team has done over time, the Super Bowls they've won, this franchise has been as successful as any one in the league," Aikman said.

Coming off their upset of the defending AFC champion Titans, the Ravens (7-4) have a much better shot at reaching the postseason than do the Cowboys. But neither team is talking about the playoffs — the Ravens don't want to get ahead of themselves, and the Cowboys simply want to see how it all plays out.

"There will be fines levied for anybody in this organization who talks about the 'P' word, who talks about anything but the Dallas Cowboys," Billick said this week.

"We don't even talk about playoffs," Campo said. "All we talk about is getting ready for this game against Baltimore. At this point our guys are playing extremely hard, not playing very smart at times. That's something we have to do this week."

If Dallas is to mount a playoff charge, Aikman must be healthy. The quarterback has been sidelined because of a concussion and bothered by a bad back, but his aching back won't keep him out of Sunday's game.

"It doesn't feel great, but it's not going to keep me from playing this week," he said.

Smith, who gained a mere 16 yards on 17 carries last week (the worst total of his career) in the Cowboys' 23-6 rout of Cincinnati, now faces the top-ranked defense in the league. The Ravens haven't allowed a 100-yard rusher in 28 games.

"It's another challenge for our defense, Emmitt Smith, a Hall of Fame back, runnning behind a strong offensive line," Billick said. "I'm sure they feel like, even though we've been incredible against the run, that they can come in and push us around a little bit."

It was suggested this week that Billick might be harboring some resentment toward the Cowboys, who cut him from the team in the late '70s.

"They let me hang around longer I deserved," Billick laughed. "There's no revenge involved here."

Jets vs. Dolphins: It's a day game, so people will be awake for the end

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

The New York Jets' 40-37 comeback win in overtime over Miami on a Monday night a month ago was supposed to send the Jets north in the AFC East standings and the Dolphins south.

It did the opposite. The Dolphins have won their three games since and the Jets have lost their three. So when the teams meet again Sunday at Miami, it's New York that has to stop the negative momentum.

The pattern has been the same for the Jets as in that Monday night contest, when they trailed 30-7 after three quarters, then scored 30 fourth-quarter points to send the game into overtime. In each of the subsequent three losses — to Buffalo, Denver and Indianapolis — they've fallen behind early, then rallied, but came up short at the end.

How do they solve the problem?

"We just need to play sound football all the time," cornerback Aaron Glenn said. "We know we can do it, because we've done it before."

The Dolphins, who at 8-2 have a one-game lead over Indianapolis in the AFC East, fell behind 17-0 to Green Bay after the Jets' debacle. But they rallied to win 28-20, then beat Detroit and San Diego, outscoring the three 68-18 over the span of just more than 10 quarters.

The game is particularly important for the Jets (6-4), who figure they must win four of their last six to make the playoffs. That won't be easy. Besides the Dolphins, they still must face the Colts, Raiders and Ravens. The four teams are a combined 30-11.

The Dolphins are approaching this game with positive memories, concentrating on those first three quarters at the Meadowlands.

Washington (6-4) at St. Louis (8-2) (Monday night)

Trent Green, the former Redskin, knocked the Giants down a peg last week. Now he gets a chance to do the same to Washington and keep the Redskins behind New York in the NFC East.

Green threw for four TDs and ran for another in New Jersey, largely because his offensive line gave him time. The Redskins might not — their cornerbacks are better than New York's, so they are more likely to blitz and play man-to-man against Isaac Bruce, Torry Holt and Az Hakim.

Green has 12 TD passes and only three interceptions since replacing injured Kurt Warner, so Warner need not hurry back. Even Marshall Faulk wasn't missed in New York because Green scrambled for 54 yards. But Faulk is planning to play Monday.

Oakland (8-2) at New Orleans (7-3)

Two teams coming off bad weeks.

The Raiders lost for the second time to Denver, and the Saints lost Ricky Williams with a broken ankle in their win at Carolina.

So New Orleans can only hope that Chad Morton, the sixth-round pick who will replace Williams, can do what sixth-round running backs Terrell Davis and Mike Anderson have done in Denver. And they have to hope Williams' absence won't put more pressure on Jeff Blake.

Monday's Game

Washington at St. Louis, 8 p.m.

Detroit (6-4) at New York Giants (7-3)

The Giants move back into their own class after losing to St. Louis, a defeat that demonstrates New York belongs in the NFL's middle class, not among its elite. Still, the Giants lead the NFC East.

The Lions won ugly, 13-10 over Atlanta, in Gary Moeller's first game as head coach. This will be only their third game outdoors in 11 starts and is critical to their playoff hopes. A victory would give them a tiebreaker over the Giants if it comes to that.

Indianapolis (7-3) at Green Bay (4-6)

The last time the Colts went outside to play an NFC Central team, they were shocked in Chicago, which means they presumably learned their lesson. They may have been looking ahead to the Jets, but they can't look ahead in Lambeau Field to their showdown next week with Miami.

The Packers probably must win out to make the playoffs. Brett Favre, who sprained a foot last week at Tampa Bay, insists he'll make his 136th straight start.

Arizona (3-7) at Philadelphia (7-4)

The Eagles, a half-game behind New York, have a shot at the NFC East title, although they have to finish ahead of the Giants, who beat them twice. This, along with meetings with Cleveland and Cincinnati, is one of three games they have no excuse for losing.

The Cardinals are playing much harder and better under Dave McGinnis than they did under Vince Tobin. But McGinnis acknowledges his injury-beset team lacks the talent to compete with better teams.

Buffalo (6-4) at Kansas City (5-5)

This could be an AFC playoff elimination game, particularly for the Chiefs, who allowed 70 points to the Raiders and 49ers in trips to the Bay Area the past two weeks and are now in deep trouble.

Wade Phillips has reinstalled Rob Johnson at quarterback for the Bills, prompting a frenzied debate in western New York. Doug Flutie is in the bullpen.

San Diego (0-10) at Denver (6-4)

The Broncos still have a shot at the AFC West, even with Gus Frerotte at quarterback for Brian Griese, because their schedule is easy. Griese played three quarters against Oakland with a separated shoulder, but now won't play for at least three games.

The Chargers, with five losses by four points or less, should win one of these weeks. But they've been saying that all season.

Cleveland (3-8) at Tennessee (8-2)

Unlike last week's loss to Baltimore, this one is unlikely to come down to a missed extra point by the Titans' Al Del Greco. This might be one of the rare blowouts by the Titans, whose biggest margin of victory this year is 14 points.

The Browns' win over New England last week ensured they will finish with a better record than in their expansion season of 1999. But without QB Tim Couch, they'll be underdogs the rest of the way.

Jacksonville (3-7) at Pittsburgh (5-5)

The Steelers were told by the NFL this week that for the third time this season, officials erred on a key play — in this case an onside kick that helped the Eagles beat them last week. That loss put them in critical condition in the highly competitive AFC.

Jacksonville's been on the critical list all season. Just as winning used to be contagious for the Jaguars, losing has become so now.

Dallas (4-6) at Baltimore (7-4)

The Ravens have started scoring touchdowns again with Trent Dilfer at quarterback, which is bad news for the Cowboys, who keep losing players. The latest casualty is punter Micah Knorr, who before he broke a leg last week, handed off to kicker Tim Seder on a fake field goal for one of the most unique touchdowns in the NFL in years.

Tampa Bay (6-4) at Chicago (2-8)

The Bucs under Tony Dungy are utterly predictable; they start slowly and finish strong. They've now won three straight after going 3-4, and Shaun King is quietly producing at quarterback: 15 TD passes and only eight interceptions.

Chicago is just glad to have a quarterback. Shane Matthews is replacing injured Cade McNown and Jim Miller.

Carolina (4-6) at Minnesota (8-2)

Daunte Culpepper threw for 302 yards and four TDs last week when Minnesota returned to the Metrodome after two losses outdoors in real weather. That could wind up a problem unless the Vikings get home field in the playoffs.

Carolina's playoff hopes just about disappeared last week in the loss to New Orleans.

Atlanta (3-8) at San Francisco (3-8)

This is a more palatable season for the 49ers than the Falcons. They've found their quarterback in Jeff Garcia and the young defense finally played well last week in a 21-7 win over Kansas City. So they have hope for the future.

The Falcons, on the other hand, are ravaged by injuries, and Dan Reeves reportedly is considering retirement, at least as coach.

Cincinnati (2-9) at New England (2-8)

Both teams were embarrassed last week, particularly the Patriots, who were beaten at Cleveland as Drew Bledsoe tried to play with a bruised thumb. The Bengals have benched Akili Smith and will go with Scott Mitchell at quarterback this week.

TECH: OU sputters, still gets victory

ond interception of Heupel to get a field goal early in the fourth, then took advantage of good field position to set up Kingsbury's 15-yard touchdown pass to Tim Baker to get within 21-13 with 7:13 to play.

That's when Heupel took over. He spread the ball to four receivers on the final drive, including a 15-yarder to tight end Matt Anderson on a bootleg pass that placed the ball at the 3-yard line. Quentin Griffin scored on the next play.

Stoops said it was Heupel who came up with the bootleg call during a timeout.

"He says, 'Let's fake the run and roll to the right. It gives me a chance to run with it or eat it,'" Stoops said. "Matt Anderson's covered. He puts the ball just out of the reach of the defender and Matt makes a great catch."

The touchdown came with just 1:53 remaining and ensured that Leach wouldn't play the spoiler in his return.

"I thought our defense did a really good job keeping a lid on them, making 'em work for everything they got," Leach said. "We just tried to keep changing the looks. We got some turnovers and got the ball back sometimes."

Heupel wound up 24-of-38. The Sooners had 11 penalties for 124 yards, had a field goal and an extra point blocked, lost two of their four fumbles, finished with their lowest point total of the season and second-lowest yardage total.

Portrayal of talent promoter 'not so glamorous'

THE OPERATOR: DAVID GEFFEN BUILDS, BUYS, AND SELLS THE NEW HOLLYWOOD
by Tom King
(Random House, 2000, $25.95, 591 pages)

Review by Meta Minton

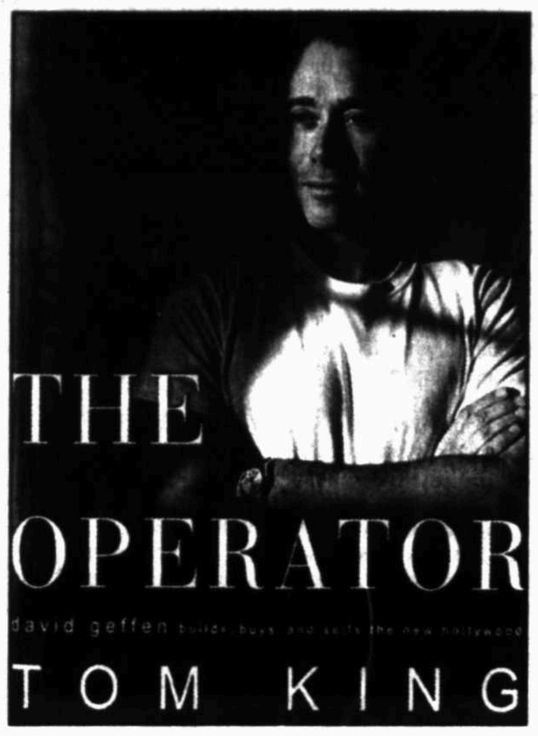

Those of us who formed many of our musical tastes in the 1970's, can vaguely remember seeing the name David Geffen on album jackets of the Eagles, Linda Ronstadt and Jackson Browne.

Today, we see the name in movie theaters associated with Dreamworks, the movie studio co-created by Geffen, Steven Spielberg and Jeffrey Katzenberg. But, who is this guy, Geffen?

Wall Street Journal reporter Tom King tries to unravel the mystery that is the man in his new book "The Operator." King's effort, when he originally embarked on the project, was endorsed by Geffen. When King started asking a few too many probing questions, Geffen, in a scene that becomes all-too-familiar in the book, throws a tirade and cuts King off.

It is not a flattering portrait of a determined man who was born to Jewish immigrants in Brooklyn, dropped out of college, but became a millionaire before his 30th birthday thanks to an uncanny ability to spot talent, give it room to grow—and then skim off the top a good portion of the money generated by that talent.

If you occasionally like to read (but not buy) the tabloids at the airport newsstand, you'll enjoy the not-so-glamorous look behind the curtain. Browne, the soulful, sensitive songwriter hooks up with Geffen early, but Browne remains distracted and oblivious to all that is swirling around him. Through Browne, Geffen discovers Don Henlye and Glen Frey and pieces the Eagles together, sending them to his personal dentist to get their teeth fixed before he sends them into the studio. Geffen convinces Graham Nash, Stephen Stills and David Crosby to come together as a group, but before long he's at war with Stills and Crosby.

In 1981 he persuades Paul Simon to rejoin Art Garfunkel on stage in Central Park for a historic reunion. Shortly after the concert, Geffen and Simon are feuding over music distribution rights.

Geffen nurses Joni Mitchell and Laura Nyro through personal turmoil, but deserts them when he feels their careers begin to falter.

In this deal-making wake, Geffen leaves Henley feeling double crossed, David Crosby feeling cheated and Simon feeling deceived. So Geffen moves onto Broadway and Hollywood.

Geffen Personally selects Tom Cruise for the lead role in 1983's "Risky Business." It's Geffen's first movie hit and launches Cruise to superstardom.

He brings "Cats" and "Dreamgirls" to the New York stage and scores a Tony Award.

Geffen's personal life is tumultuous. Convinced at an early age he is homosexual, he tries to go straight and pursues relationships with Cher and Marlo Thomas. Both women, eventually move on.

For someone who dropped out of college and got his start in the entertainment world in the mail room at the William Morris Agency, you have to admire the fact that Geffen scratched and clawed his way to the top. You probably won't admire the way he did it—throwing tantrums, manipulating musical publishing rights and lying to his clients.

Early in his career, Geffen was the beneficiary of precious advice from his one-time father figure, Ahmet Ertegun of Atlantic Records. (Ertegun was later a recipient of Geffen's trademark backstabbing.) "You walk very slowly and maybe by chance you'll bump into a genius, and he'll make you rich," Ertegun told a young David Geffen.

Geffen apparently took the advice to heart and he's got million of dollars to prove it. But Geffen also has a long list of famous enemies.

The book is available at the Midland County Library.

Fifth annual Texas book festival celebrated in Austin

Linda Anderson
MRT Correspondent

AUSTIN — In spite of the recent confusing and continuing saga of the 2000 presidential election, politics was not the main topic of conversation at the Texas State Capitol Building complex last weekend. The occasion was the fifth annual Texas Book Festival, and the hundreds of book-lovers attending the Nov. 10-12 event were more likely to be discussing books, authors and all things literary than politics. Honorary chairman for the event which benefits Texas public library was Texas first lady Laura Bush.

Almost 150 writers and authors, most of whom have ties to Texas, participated.

Readers of all ages, in all sizes of family groups, attended the weekend-long festival, which kicked off with First Edition Literary Gala 6:30-10 p.m. Friday.

The black-tie gourmet event featured some authors reading from their works and a silent auction of literary memorabilia.

On Saturday, the Texas Book Festival Bookend Award Ceremony at 10:30 a.m. honored Texas author John Graves, author of "Goodbye to a River," the story of his canoe trip down the Brazos River, as well as "Hard Scrabble:Observations on a Patch of Land" and "From a Limestone Ledge: Some Essays and Other Ruminations About Country Life in Texas."

Readings and panel discussions were scheduled between 10:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Sunday. The authors on the panels and doing the readings represented almost every literary genre imaginable. John Kelso, humor columnist for the Austin American-Statesman and author of "Texas Curiosities," Bob Phillips, the "Texas Country Reporter," and David Wharton, author of "The Soul of a Small Texas Town: Photographs, Memories and History from McDade," participated in a panel discussion on "The Souls of Small Texas Towns."

The audience—some of whom were sitting on the floor because all the seats were taken—exploded in laughter when members of the panel were asked when a small town ceased to be a small town and became more urban, and Kelso quipped: "When Starbuck's moves in."

Best-selling author Sandra Brown, along with Robert Flynn, ("The Devil's Tiger"), Lawrence Wright ("God's Favorite") and Stephen Harrigan ("The Gates of the Alamo") told their audience about "Page-Turners: How Writers Keep Readers Up All Night."

Politics wasn't completely ignored at the festival, as Bill Crawford ("Democrats Do the Dumbest Things" and "Texas Death Row"), Nicholas Lemann ("The Big Test: The Secret History of the American Meritocracy") and Marvin Olasky ("Compassionate Conservatism: What It Is, What It Does and How It Can Save America") discussed "Left, Right and in the Middle: Pundits on Politics."

Liz Carpenter ("Start With A Laugh"), Celia Morris ("Finding Celia's Place"), Liz Smith ("Natural Blonde") and moderator Linda Ellerbee ("Get Real" book series) presented a panel discussion on "Uppity Women, Unite!" that was so popular that half the people who were standing in line to get in were turned away for lack of even standing room.

Meanwhile, in another part of the building, participatory journalist George Plimpton, author of, among other books, "Paper Lion," was reading from his "Pet Peeves: Or Whatever Happened to Dr. Rawff?" Plimpton, who was giggling along with his audience, at one point was laughing so hard as his own words that he only half-way jokingly suggested that someone from the audience come up and read for him.

At the same time, poet Pat Mora was reading from her work, "My Own True Name," and children's illustrators Don Tate II ("Say Hey! A Song of Willie Mays"), Gwendolyn Guillory Thigpen ("Angel of the Alamo"), Terry Widener ("American Champion Swimmer: Gertrude Ederle," "Peg and the Whale" and "Shoe Magic") discussed their craft.

Texas Poets Laureate James Hoggard ("Medea in Taos" and "Rain in a Sunlit Sky") and Walt McDonald ("Whatever the Wind Delivers" and "All Occasions") were on hand.

And, in an appropriate presentation for this election year, Michael R. Beschloss discussed "The American Heritage Illustrate History of the Presidents."

On Sunday the star attraction was Ted Koppel, host of ABC-TV's "Nightline" news show, who was at the festival to discuss his new book, "Off Camera: Private Thoughts Made Public." But because of the current election confusion, most of the questions from the audience involved the recent and still-unresolved presidential election. Koppel spoke on this historic event and his and his network's role in election night coverage. He also discussed some of his thoughts on journalism, the prison system and racism.

Sunday afternoon science fiction/fantasy authors Aaron Allston ("Starfighters of Adumar"), Neal Barrett Jr.("Perpetuity Blues" and "The Hereafter Gang"), Marsha Wells of College Station ("Wheel of the Infinite") and Gene Wolfe ("Strange Travelers" and "In Green's Jungle") spoke on "Fantastic Worlds: The Geography of Fantasy."

At the same time, down the hall, mystery writers James Carlos Blake ("Wildwood Boys"), Christopher Cook ("Robbers"), Joe R. Lansdale ("The Bottoms" and "High Cotton: Selected Stories of Joe R. Lansdale") and Clay Reynolds ("Monument") were talking about "It's Noir or Never: Writers Explore the Dark Side."

Others authors participating in the weekend-long event included Gene Kranz ("Failure Is Not An Option: Mission Control from Mercury to Apollo 13 and Beyond"), H.W. Brands ("The First American: The Life and Times of Benjamin Franklin") and Larry Dossey, M.D. ("Reinventing Medicine"), as well as several children's authors including Kathi Appelt of College Station ("Kissing Tennessee and Other Stories from the Stardust Dance"), Becky Chavarria-Chairez ("Magda's Tortillas/Las Tortillas de Magda") and Brian Floca ("Dinosaurs at the Ends of the Earth").

Outside the capitol building, visitors could buy lunch, listen to music or browse in the book-sellers' tents. But perhaps the most interesting entertainment was provide by the protesters, who stood on the steps of the capitol building and expressed their views on the presidential election. One festival-goer pointed out that they seemed to be as evenly divided as the country — 45 percent for Gov. George Bush, 45 percent for Vice President Al Gore and the rest wanting to do the whole thing over.

Funds raised from the event will benefit public libraries in Texas. The 1999 Texas Book Festival provided 125 public libraries with grants of up to $2,500.

Linda Anderson, former Lifestyle Editor for the Midland Reporter Telegram is now the Lifestyle Writer/Extension Communications Specialist for Texas A&M.

True Story of Native American abuse in New Mexico unsettling

THE BROKEN CIRCLE: A TRUE STORY OF MURDER AND MAGIC IN INDIAN COUNTRY
by Rodney Barker
(Ivy Books, 1992, $4.99, 339 pages)

Review by Pamela C. Allen

Chokecherry Canyon, outside of Farmington, New Mexico is a teenage party area littered with crushed beer cans, .22-caliber bullet hulls and broken glass.

In the Spring of 1974 it became the site of senseless cruelty and depravity when three white teens tortured three Native Americans who died in agony.

This outrage sparked national attention that summer when the three youths were tried and given what amounted to a slap on their wrists. They each were put away for a year in the state reform school.

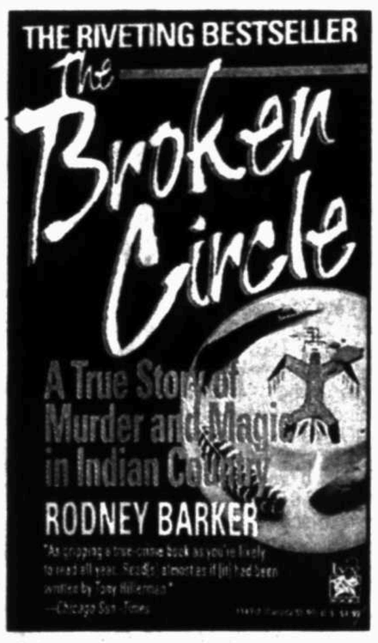

Navajo protesters marched in downtown Farmington that summer with palatable anger than was reminiscent of Selma or Montgomery.

Did the Navajo Shamans make the teenagers atone for their sins against theses Native Americans by casting spells? That's what THE BROKEN CIRCLE tries to answer.

The accused murderers are all dead now, but the causes for their deaths are open to conjecture.

Rodney Barker brings us into the dusty canyons, into the hogans of the Navajos, to document the racial strife between the whites of Farmington and the Navajo Nation that surrounds the city. The reader comes away with a small understanding of another view of the prejudice that still exists today, one that you will not see on the silver screen.

Barker writes, "...when a circle is closed there is no way for evil spirits to get out, they are trapped within; and the break in a circle serves as an escape route, a spirit path for bad to depart and good to enter.

In a fashion parallel to a closed circle, for 17 years rumor and gossip, grudges and emotions, family secrets and tribal taboos have surrounded and contained this story; and as I put these words down, I see them as the final strokes that leave an airing break in the encircling line."

This was a book that was hard to put down, especially when you've been up to Farmington a number of times and you have family there as I do. What happened was real. What I feel about the area when I go up there is very real, even before I read this book. It has always felt unsettling to me.

I will read this book again—it's well written and has an extremely personal feel to it.

Barker lives in Santa Fe and writes about his state with much intelligence and sensitivity.

Books for young readers

Staff Report

COLLEGE STATION — The Texas Book Festival, presented last weekend on the grounds of the Texas State Capitol Building complex in Austin, celebrated books and reading for many Texans. Dorothy James, assistant professor and Texas Agricultural Extension Service specialist in family life, said reading not only helps children's minds grow and develop, but also reading out loud to children can be a bonding experience for both parents and children.

"Access to books is very important. It stimulates a child to become a reader." When these life-long readers grow up and read to their own children, they will be influencing a whole new generation of readers.

Experts advise parents that reading is a pleasure for even very young children. According to information from James, children as young as 1 year old can participate in "reading" by pointing out pictures in the book or magazine being read to them, and helping hold the book and turn the pages. Children in the toddler years and older 18 months and up like to have a regular story time, often just before bedtime. And they often prefer to hear the same favorite story or stories again and again. Children appreciate and need different kinds of books to help them develop different skills, James went on, including:

- Picture story books with drawings and pictures, which don't necessarily need words. These pictures can tell children stories about familiar experiences, such as family situations or feelings.
- Concept books that teach a simple idea such as "up and down" or "in and out."
- Counting, colors and alphabets books which teach about numbers, letters and colors.
- Participation books that let children enhance the story by, for example, pulling tabs to have extra pictures appear on the page.
- Rhythms and finger plays, which help children develop language skills.
- Informational books when they get older.

James also suggested a list of books that parents might use when building their young children's libraries:

- "Alexander and the Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Day" by Judith Voirst (age 3 and older) 1972
- "Becca Backward, Becca Frontward" by Bruce McMillan (age 2 and older) 1986
- "Caps for Sale" by Esphyr Slobodkina (age 2 and older) 1996
- "Dr. Seuss's ABC: An Amazing Book" by Dr. Seuss, (age 18 months and older) 1996
- "Jump Frog Jump" by Robert Kalan, (age 2 and older) 1989
- "My Very First Mother Goose" edited by Iona Archibald Opie (for ages 1 and older), 1996
- "Once Upon A Childhood" by Dolores C. Chupela (age 2 and older), 1998
- "Shadows and Reflection" by Tana Hoban (age 18 months and older), 1990
- "The M&M Counting Books" by Barbara Barbieri McGrath (age 2 and older), 1997
- "The Goodnight Moon Room" by Margaret Wise Brown (age 1 and older), 1984
- "The Very Hungry Caterpillar Board Book" by Eric Carle (age 18 months and older), 1994
- "There is a Nightmare in My Closet" by Mercer Mayer (age 3 and older), 1992
- "Where the Wild Things Are" by Maurice Sandek (age 3 and older) 1988

No. 8 Oregon State wins 104th Civil War, dominating Oregon

Associated Press

With almost cruel quickness, Oregon State crushed its intrastate rival's Rose Bowl hopes. Then, the Beavers watched as their own dreams of Pasadena came to an end.

Jonathan Smith threw two first-quarter touchdown passes to Robert Prescott, and Jake Cookus had three of his team's five interceptions as No. 8 Oregon State reached 10 victories for the first time in school history by dominating No. 5 Oregon 23-13 on Saturday in the 104th Civil War.

That one setback cost the Beavers (10-1, 7-1) their first trip to the Rose Bowl since the 1964 season. Washington, which beat Oregon State 33-30 in Seattle on Oct. 7, clinched the berth by defeating Washington State.

Washington (10-1, 7-1) ended up in a three-way tie with Oregon State and Oregon (9-2, 7-1), and even though the Huskies lost to Oregon, they won the tiebreaker based on non-conference records. Washington went 3-0, while the Ducks won two and lost to Wisconsin.

Rose Bowl or not, the Beavers finished their best season ever, topping their 9-1-1 mark in 1939. It was just last year that they stopped an NCAA-record streak of 28 straight losing seasons.

Oregon State's Ken Simonton, the top rusher in the Pac-10 at 136.1 yards per game, gained 113, and his 20-yard touchdown midway through the third quarter extended the Beavers' lead to 23-7.

Smith completed 14 of 27 passes for 246 yards, and Prescott had six receptions for 109 yards. Oregon's Joey Harrington completed 24 of 46 passes for 333 yards.

No. 6 Washington 51, Washington St. 3

PULLMAN, Wash. — Washington reached the Rose Bowl for the first time in eight years, with Marques Tuiasosopo throwing three touchdown passes.

The Huskies (10-1, 7-1 Pac-10) tied with Oregon State and Oregon for the conference lead, but edged the Ducks and Beavers in the tiebreaker for the trip to Pasadena.

No. 2 Miami 26, Syracuse 0

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — James Jackson gained 101 yards on 23 carries and scored twice for Miami.

Miami (9-1, 6-0 Big East), which has one game left, against Boston College, entered the game second in the BCS standings.

Syracuse did not gain a first down on seven of its eight possessions in the first half as freshman quarterback R.J. Anderson failed to generate anything offensively. The Orangemen gained 42 yards on 29 plays in the half and had only two first downs.

Miami's Ken Dorsey was 9-of-19 for 183 yards in the first half, and finished 16-of-28 for 263 yards and a TD.

No. 9 Kansas St. 28, Missouri 24

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Josh Scobey scored twice in a 25-point second quarter as Kansas State clinched a berth in the Big 12 championship game.

Kansas State (10-2, 6-2) won the North Division for the second time in three years and will play Oklahoma for the conference title.

Scobey, who has 16 touchdowns, scored on runs of 4 and 1 yards in the second quarter as Kansas State took a 25-21 lead.

No. 11 Notre Dame 45, Rutgers 17

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Matt LoVecchio threw two touchdowns and Terrance Howard ran for two more in their return home to New Jersey as Notre Dame posted its sixth straight win.

The Irish (8-2) also forced five turnovers in moving within a win of potentially qualifying for a Bowl Championship Series bid.

Because it is not in a conference, Notre Dame must win nine games and be ranked in the Top 12 to merit consideration for BCS game. The Irish will finish the regular season at Southern California.

Irish kicker Nick Setta, who last week ran for a touchdown on a fake field goal against Boston College, threw a 25-yard scoring pass to fullback Tom Lopienski on another fake.

Arkansas 17, No. 13 Mississippi St. 10, OT

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Brandon Holmes had a 7-yard touchdown run in overtime, and Arkansas stopped Mississippi State on fourth-and-goal at the 1 on the final play.

Holmes carried the ball on all five overtime plays for Arkansas (5-5, 2-5 SEC) and finished with 95 yards on 16 carries.

The Razorbacks blocked a 25-yard field-goal attempt by Scott Westerfield on the final play of regulation.

No. 16 Clemson 16, No. 25 South Carolina 14

CLEMSON, S.C. — Aaron Hunt's third field goal, a 25-yarder with seven seconds left, lifted Clemson past South Carolina.

The Tigers (9-2) looked dead after Thomas Hill fell on Derek Watson's fumble in the end zone with 59 seconds to go for a 14-13 lead. But Clemson's Woody Dantzler found Rod Gardner for a 50-yard reception to South Carolina's 8 with 10 seconds remaining and Hunt struck it through to send Death Valley into a frenzy.

The Gamecocks finished the regular season 7-4 after entering the year with a 21-game losing streak.

No. 17 Purdue 41, Indiana 13

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue earned its first Rose Bowl berth in 34 years, with Montrell Lowe rushing for a career-high 208 yards and four touchdowns.

Drew Brees completed 20 of 29 passes for 216 yards and a touchdown, and also ran for a score.

The Boilermakers (8-3, 6-2) had to win to clinch a share of the Big Ten title — and a trip to Pasadena.

Indiana quarterback Antwaan Randle El threw a 10-yard TD pass to Versie Gaddis early in the second quarter to join former Michigan star Rick Leach as the only Division I-A players to throw for 200 points and rush for 200 points.

goal line stands to get the ball back, and we blocked a punt and turned it into a touchdown."

The Mustangs had to come from behind to take the win. Houston Second Baptist took a 7-0 lead in the first quarter on a 37-yard run by Ron Bloomstrom.

MCHS didn't get untracked until the second quarter, but the 17 points scored by the Mustangs in that period led to the victory.

Josh Gunter's 3-yard TD run and Greg Ross' extra point tied the game at 7-7, and MCHS took the lead and never looked back later in the period when quarterback Jamie Beeghley hit Chase Feeler with a 7-yard TD pass for a 14-7 lead. Ross added a 39-yard field goal as time expired at the half for a 17-7 margin.

The Mustangs really put the game away in the third period when Coy Riley blocked a HSB punt attempt and Cody Crossland recovered the ball in the end zone. T.J. Midkiff's 15-yard TD run in the fourth quarter completed MCHS' scoring, and HSB scored late for the final margin.

"I don't think anybody early in the year would have given these kids credit for what they have done this season," McClendon said. "They don't know they are outsized against the teams we have been playing. This is a great win for us because Second Baptist is a very good team. Our defense was able to hold them down."

MCHS' Gunter rushed for 149 yards on 30 carries. Feeler caught two passes for 38 yards.

Mustangs Hoofs: Fort Worth Christian got to the title game against MCHS with a 20-12 win on Friday over Austin Hyde Park... Hyde Park was the team that ended Midland Christian's state playoff run the last two seasons... When MCHS travels to Waco, it will be its seventh trip of the year over 500 miles... The Mustangs are now 9-3 on the season...

STEERS: Big Spring RB Woodruff breaks 1,000-yard mark for season face El Paso Riverside in an area round game at 2 p.m. (MST) in Artesia, N.M.

Although Big Spring (7-4) almost doubled up Canyon in both first downs and total yardage, the game was tighter than the score indicated. Canyon (6-5) cut Big Spring's lead to 21-14 on the first play of the fourth quarter when quarterback Matt Allen scored his second touchdown of the day on a keeper from three yards.

But unlike last year against Brownwood, when the Steers couldn't hold a nine-point lead in the second half, they made sure this lead held up. They answered Canyon's score by marching 66 yards on 11 plays as Jason Choate hit Clarence Wilkins from 15 yards out for the clinching score.

"I think the big deal was when they (Canyon) scored a touchdown we came back to score," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler. "I felt we played as consistently on both sides of the ball as we've been playing all season."

The game had the earmarks of disaster early for the Steers. On the game's first possession, Allen kept the ball on an option and sprinted 55 yards for a score to put the Eagles up 7-0.

But an indication that it would be Big Spring's afternoon came only three plays later. Jason Woodruff took a handoff and went straight up the middle, almost untouched for a 60-yard score to tie the game at 7-7.

Woodruff, who along with Bowe Butler and Choate is a three-year starter, finished the day with 171 yards and three touchdowns on 23 carries.

"My line just did a wonderful job blocking and I always tell them if they give me a little crack of daylight I can take off," said Woodruff. "Everybody just had to step up and play their best."

Later in the quarter, a gamble coach Butler took with the coin toss paid off. After winning the toss, the Steers elected to defend the north goal, putting the wind at their backs. As the clock ticked down to end the quarter and Canyon was faced with a fourth-and 22 at its own 5-yard line, Big Spring called timeout with 14 seconds left, forcing the Eagles to kick into the wind.

Wade Conner's punt only went 30 yards and Choate returned it to the Canyon 29. Seven plays later, Woodruff carried it over from a yard out to give the Steers a 13-7 lead which they never relinquished.

"We got great field position out of it," said Butler of calling timeout before the Canyon punt. "We decided that since we were going to be down there anyway we might as well make them kick into the wind if the time came."

Except for a drive late in the third quarter to cut the deficit to seven, Canyon didn't put much together offensively after its first score.

"We had our opportunities early but we didn't take advantage of them," said Canyon coach Blake Bryant. "In a game like this, field position is the key and that sure did help them (Big Spring)."

But field position alone didn't help explain the strong performance of the Big Spring offense. While the ability of Woodruff — who passed the 1,000-yard mark for the season in the game — to run the ball wasn't a question, the Steers needed to be more than a ground team to advance.

In that sense, Choate came through with what might have been the best game of his career at quarterback. Choate, who missed all six of his passes in last week's regular season ending loss to Wolfforth Frenship, completed 9-of-10 for 93 yards.

"We worked real hard all week on passing the ball and just because I had a bad game last week doesn't mean I couldn't get the job done," said Choate.

Where, when will they play

Two area teams who won Friday night now know exactly where they'll be heading next week for the UIL football playoffs.

Both Class 4A Andrews and Class 3A Greenwood will play next Saturday afternoon in area round games.

Andrews (8-3) will enjoy a rare chance to host a postseason game Saturday when it faces El Paso Parkland in a 4A Division II contest at 2 p.m. in the Mustang Bowl. The Mustangs advanced by defeating Borger 10-3 Friday night.

Greenwood (8-3) will face Sanford-Fritch on Saturday in a 3A Division II game at 1 p.m. at Lubbock's Lowrey Field. Greenwood defeated Kermit 28-20 Friday night.

Stanton (9-2), which beat Sundown 27-6, will play the winner of Saturday's Mason-Ozona game at a site and time to be determined.

TRINITY: Chargers' season ends just short of finals after 30-0 loss to Katy Faith West the first four of the fumbles, Faith West's average starting point was the Trinity 30-yard line. Considering that, Trinity's defense did well to hold Faith West to only two touchdowns.

Faith West needed only two plays to score after recovering one fumble at the Trinity 19-yard line. Quarterback Daniel Forrest hit Jeff Geloneck for a 19-yard touchdown pass, and Geloneck-'s kick gave Faith West a 7-0 lead early in the second quarter. Late in the quarter, Faith West recovered a fumble at the Trinity 29-yard line, and five plays later, Forrest found Brandon Rice for a 17-yard touchdown. Rice actually came down fighting for the ball with Trinity's Matt Midkiff, and Midkiff never let go, but a touchdown was ruled.

Trinity had a shot at scoring before halftime when Dustin Truitt's interception set the Chargers up at midfield. They moved to the Faith West 20-yard line with 26 seconds left, but Midkiff, Trinity's quarterback, fumbled when he tried to stop his throwing motion. The Eagles recovered, ending the threat.

"We had a chance to get something before the half. That hurt," Wilkins said of the lost opportunity.

In the second half, Faith West put together long drives and kept Trinity's drives as short as possible. Faith West's first two drives of the second half consisted of 11 and seven plays, respectively. The Eagles got only three points out those two drives — Geloneck's 30-yard field goal put them up 17-0 with 4:37 left in the fourth quarter — but they kept the ball away from Trinity.

"Because the field was so muddy, we thought if we could get on top, we could control the ball and win the game," said Faith West head coach Stephon Leary. "Trinity is a good team. They're well-coached, and they showed good sportmanship. We were fortunate to come out on the winning end."

Trinity wasn't fortunate, to say the least. Nothing worked. The Chargers' only possession of the third quarter went 1-2-3 punt. The Chargers' next two possessions also went 1-2-3 punt, and their last possession of the game went 1-interception. The Chargers ran 14 plays (including the punts, one of which was blocked) and gained only 14 yards in the second half.

The Eagles added two fourth quarter touchdowns — a nine-yard run by Forrest and a two-yard pass from Forrest to Rice — without trying to run the score up. The Chargers did block the extra point kick on the final touchdown.

For the Chargers, it was a bad end to a good season.

"I'm disappointed that we lost, but I'm not disappointed in the season," Wilkins said. "This will hurt for a while, especially for the seniors. But we had a tremendous year. Going from playing TCAL six-man to where we are now is a long way. I feel good about the kids. Even in the losses, they played hard. And they played hard today."

Trinity's seniors graduate with three consecutive semifinals in football: a TCAL six-man title game appearance in 1998; a TCAL six-man championship in 1999; and a better-than-some-expected transition to 11-man football in 2000.

"We've come a long way in the last four years," said Daniel Valles, one of seven seniors on the Trinity roster. "We've been to two state championships and won one. It's a shame it had to end this way, but it was a nice ride."

Rebels, 2-0, bomb Kermit by 59

Staff Report

Midland Lee bombed Class 3A Kermit 88-29 at the Lee gym Saturday night to move to 2-0 on the season.

Kyle Shatzer led the way with 14 points while Wendell Smith had 13. Andy Brignon added 10.

"This game gave us a chance to work on our zone defense, which we hadn't done much of, and it was a chance to play a lot of kids," said Lee's first year coach Mark Coffman. "We did a good job in two of the four quarters and were a little more patient offensively than we were against Big Spring on Thursday."

Things get tougher for Lee in a hurry. On Tuesday, the Rebels travel to Lubbock Monterey for a 7:30 p.m. game and then have a date with Austin Westlake on Friday at 1:30 p.m.

"We jump out of the refrigerator into the microwave this week," Coffman said.

Wilks leads Rice to win over Navy

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Mike Wilks scored 27 points, one shy of his career high, to lead Rice to a season opening 69-51 victory over Navy on Saturday.

Rice had lost 13 straight road games — 16 straight including games at neutral sites. Navy had won 15 straight home games, and was able to take an early lead before Rice found its shooting touch.

The Midshipmen (0-2) held several small advantages in the early going, and were up 13-9 with 10:15 left in the first half. Wilks hit two free throws, then drove for a hoop to tie it with 9:02 remaining, part of a 10-0 run that gave Rice a lead it never lost.

GENERAL INFORMATION:

To ensure the integrity of our newspaper, for the benefit of our readers and advertisers, the Midland Reporter- Telegram reserves the right the revise, reclassify, edit or refuse any advertising. We also reserve the right to convert all advertising into digital and/or audio-text formats within our other products and services.

Please check your ad the first day it appears, and, if you find a mistake, please call our office at 682-6222 so we can correct the error immediately. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. If an error does occur, you can choose to rerun your ad once for free, or we'll gladly refund the cost of the portion of the ad affected by the error. If an ad is inadvertently omitted, we will assume liability up to the cost of the ad itself -- consequently, we will publish your ad in our next available edition or refund the price you have paid.

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classifications require payment in advance. Credit applications are required for business accounts.

We welcome your suggestions or comments. Please call: Brandi Alexander, Telephone Sales Supervisor, 687-8813.

PLACING AN AD:

Call 682-6222, Monday through Friday, from 8a.m. – 6p.m.

A friendly Advertising Consultant will help you word and schedule your ad for best results.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

❶ Promote Your Merchandise - The more descriptive you are the more likely your merchandise will appeal to someone.

❷ Check The Market Value - The most common mistake that occurs is over or under pricing your goods.

❸ Always Include The Price - People are more likely to respond when they know the price range.

❹ Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item, such as "Stove" or "Guitar" rather than "Kenmore" or "Gibson", "Ford 1997" instead of "1997 Ford", or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR PROPOSALS

Competitive sealed proposals addressed to Board of Regents of The University of Texas System will be received by the Office of Facilities Planning and Construction, The University of Texas System at the Devonian Room of the Mesa Building at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, Odessa, Texas on Thursday, December 14, 2000 at 2:00 p.m. for:

THE PRESIDENTIAL MUSEUM
THE UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS OF
THE PERMIAN BASIN
PROJECT NO. 501-005

A Pre-Proposal Conference will be held in the Falcon Room at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, 4901 E. University Avenue, Odessa, Texas at 10:00 a.m., local time, Tuesday, November 28, 2000.

HISTORICALLY UNDERUTILIZED BUSINESSES

It is the policy of The University of Texas System, and each of its component institutions, to promote and encourage contracting and subcontracting opportunities for Historically Underutilized Businesses (HUBs) in all contracts,. Accordingly, the Office of Facilities Planning and Construction (OFPC) has adopted Exhibit H, Policy on Utilization of Historically Underutilized Business (Policy). The Policy applies to all contracts with an expected value of $100,000 or more. If OFPC determines that subcontracting opportunities are probable, then a HUB Subcontracting Plan is a required element of the Response. Failure to submit a required HUB Subcontracting Plan will result in rejection of the Response.

STATEMENT OF PROBABILITY

The University of Texas System, Office of Facilities Planning and Construction (OFPC) has determined that subcontracting opportunities are probable in connection with this procurement solicitation. Therefore, a HUB Subcontracting Plan (HSP) is required as a part of the Respondent's response (bid, proposal, offer, or other applicable expression of interest). The Respondent shall develop and administer a HSP as a part of the Respondent's response in accordance with the OFPC Policy on Utilization of Historically Underutilized Businesses (HUBs), Exhibit H.

Bid security of five percent (5%) of the proposal must be furnished. A Performance Bond and Payment Bond in an amount of one hundred percent (100%) of the contract price will be required.

The proposer selected for award of the contract will be the proposer whose proposal is most advantageous to the Owner. The Owner is not bound to accept the lowest priced proposal if that proposal is not in the best interest of the Owner, as determined by the Owner.

Plans and specifications may be obtained from Rhotenberry Wellen Architects, 1102 W. Texas Avenue, Midland, Texas 79701, telephone 915-682-1252, fax 915-682-1257, attention: Travis Durham.

IF YOU ARE READING THIS AD, YOU ARE UNHAPPY, YOU ARE EITHER OUT OF WORK, OR YOU JUST HAVE A "JOB"

Do you want a career? Do you want to earn $30,000+ per year? Do you want a benefit package second to none? I am going to hire 5 people this week to service families in the Midland area with funeral and cemetery pre-arrangements. The people I am looking for must be honest, sincere, self-motivated, and be willing to treat every person they talk to the same way they would want to be treated. I work strictly above board, and I expect the same from the people that work with me. If you have these qualifications, I would very much enjoy talking to you, and explain the benefits our company has to offer you.

Interviewing at 11:30 AM, Monday, November 20th & Tuesday, November 21st. Resthaven Memorial Park Ellis North Chapel 1002 W. Loop 250 N

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

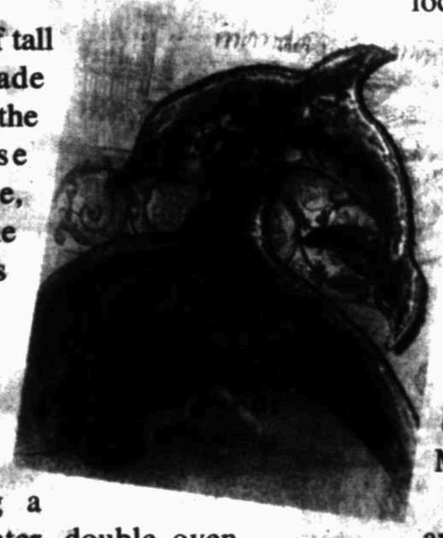

Escape To...

4600 Meadowwood Court

This is a home in Meadowland Estates, a James Isbell development, and if you've ever walked through a James Isbell home, you'll recognize the quality trademarks here from the moment you walk through the door.

From the soaring height of the ceiling down to the gleam of tile underfoot, you'll see the unmistakable signs that here is a home built to accommodate the millennial homeowner.

There is the wealth of tall windows, some made taller with transoms, the built-in bookcase flanking the fireplace, the design around the living areas that takes into account the way we live today, with a gourmet kitchen meant to be seen while being functional, featuring a large island work center, double oven and walk-in pantry, all in plain sight of the living area.

The elegance is unmistakable, yet understated. (Check out the chandelier in the formal dining room, the whitewashed cabinetry, the crown molding, plantation shutters and built-in storage that is so perfectly placed as to be subtle, appearing just where you need it without calling attention to itself.)

Step into the master bath and you'll feel the warm, with natural light pouring in from glass block tiles around the Jacuzzi tub and the separate shower, the plentitude of mirrors and the immaculate whiteness of the his and her vanities, as well as a spacious walk-in closet with double racks for hanging clothing and shelving for everything, all out of the way yet easily in reach.

The large utility is tile floored, with sink and built-in whitewashed cabinets and plenty of room for freezer or hanging out of season clothing.

The patio and back yard are huge-large enough for a pool, but you won't bother, since the homeowners association provides a lovely pool and clubhouse for your enjoyment.

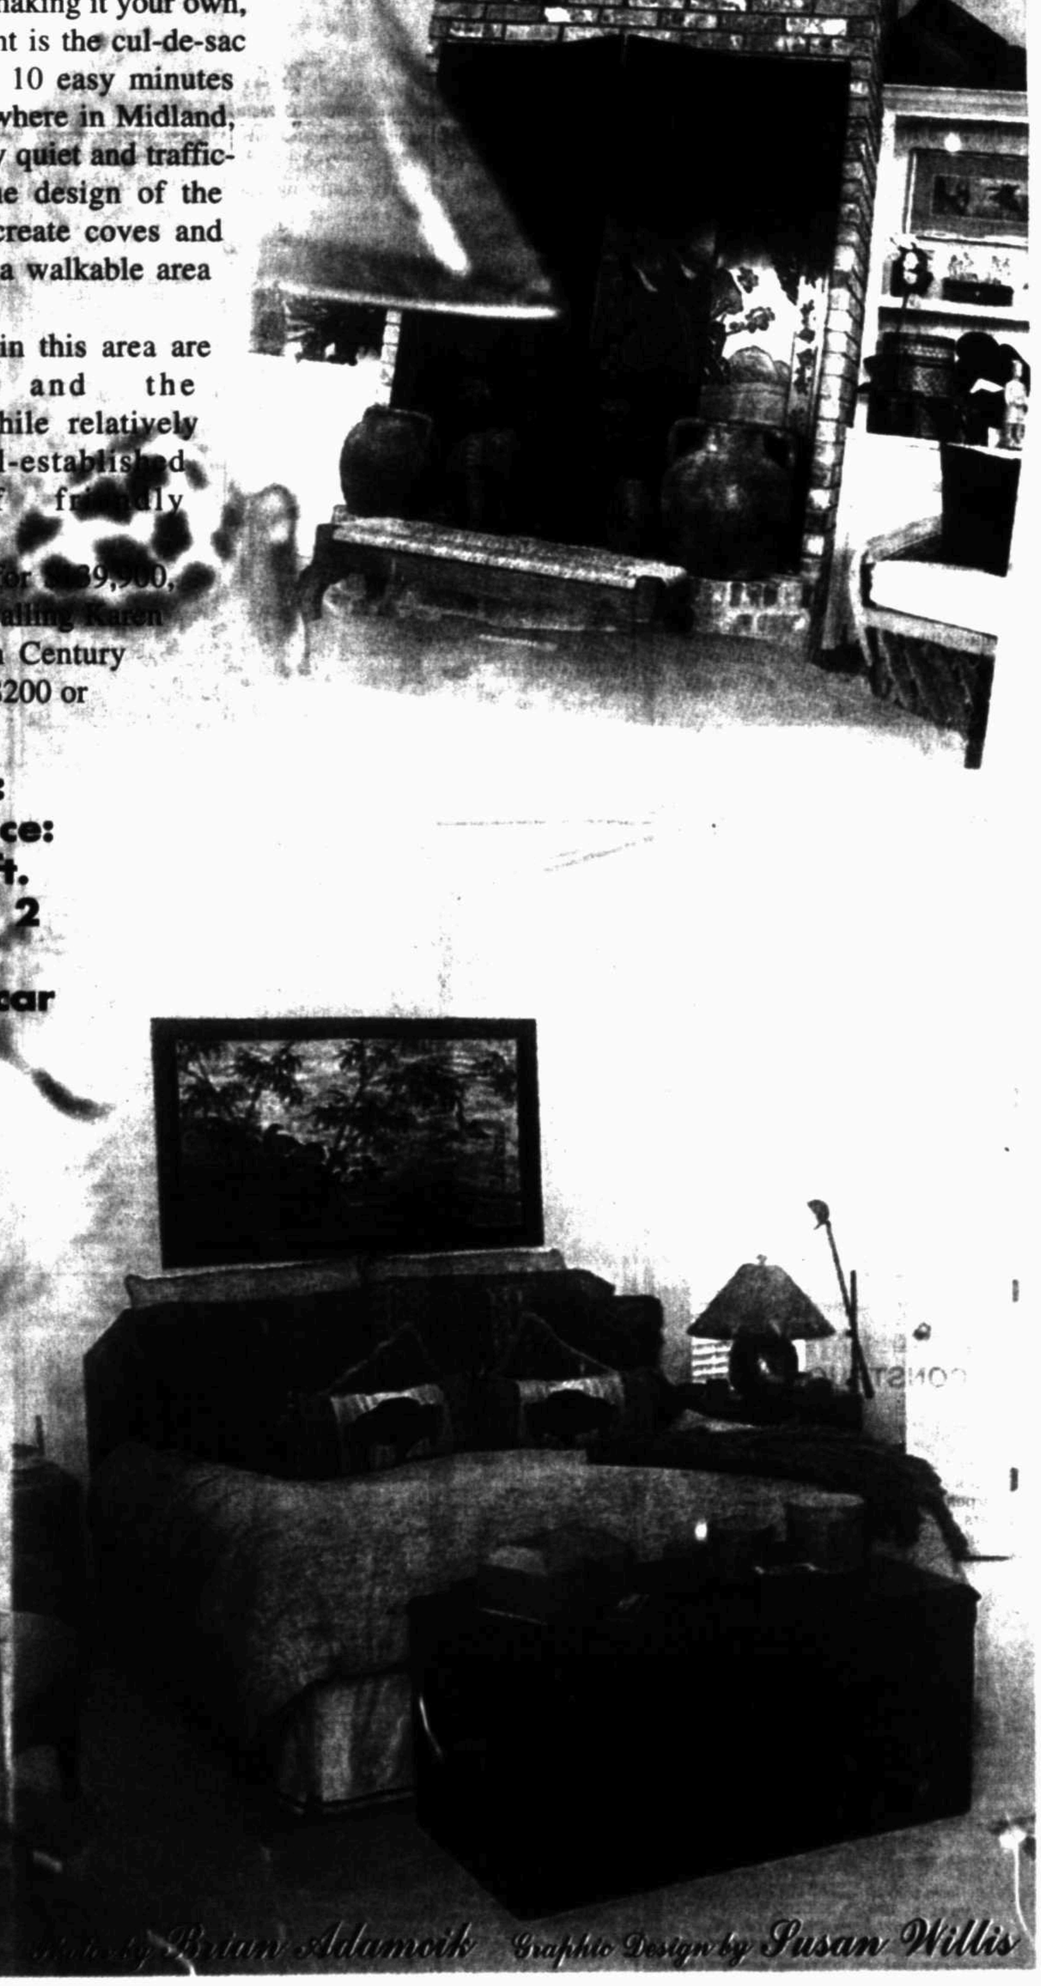

While there is obvious value in having a home such as this, where the essentials of good design are all in place to allow you to use your imagination in making it your own, perhaps equally important is the cul-de-sac location, within 5 to 10 easy minutes driving to anywhere in Midland, yet wonderfully quiet and traffic-free, due to the design of the streets, which create coves and cul-de-sacs and a walkable area day and night.

All the homes in this area are Isbell-built, and the neighborhood, while relatively new, is a well-established community of friendly Midlanders.

This home lists for $239,900, and can be seen by calling Karen Foster, with Kay Sutton Century 21 Realtors, phone 570-8200 or 697-4434.

Statistics:
Livable space: 2057 sq. ft.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S PEN

Giving Warmth to Frozen Pipes

If water fails to flow from a faucet during extremely cold weather, chances are the water in the pipe has frozen. To help you thaw frozen pipes quickly and safely, The Permian Basin Board of REALTORS® has some tips.

Before starting the thawing process, be sure to open some of the faucets in the house to prevent a pressure buildup in frozen pipe, which can occur when heat is applied to melt the ice inside.

Once faucets have been opened, the area of pipe where the ice is lodged must be located. Look for the frozen area to be at the coldest point in the house, usually an unheated basement, an attic, or in pipes that pass along a cold wall.

"Sometimes a frozen pipe may be between the walls or above the ceiling where you can't get to it. When this happens, heat applied to the exposed area of pipe eventually will travel through the pipe and warm the area you can't reach," Bill Scott, president of the Permian Basin Board of REALTORS® says.

You can also locate the frozen section of pipe by feeling along its length for the coldest spot. In the case of copper and lead pipes, the frozen section may be detected by a slight bulge.

Frozen pipes can be thawed a number of ways. For example, heat can be applied with a heat lamp or photographic flood lamp positioned as close to the pipe as possible without allowing it to touch. Arrange the lamp so that it will remain in place without your holding it. A badly frozen pipe may take several hours to thaw.

Heat can also be applied with a hair dryer, a clothes iron, a candle, or even a vacuum cleaner. If your vacuum cleaner is the canister type, insert the hose in the exhaust outlet and let the warm air blow onto the pipe. Towels soaked in hot water can be used to thaw frozen pipes, but this can be a much slower and messier job.

The fastest way to thaw a frozen pipe is to use a propane torch. This must be done with extreme caution, since the intense heat from the torch may cause steam to build up an explosive pressure inside the pipe.

"If you do use a torch, move it constantly back and forth along the length of the pipe and remove the flame every two minutes or so to let the pipe cool," Bill Scott recommends. "This will help eliminate the possibility of steam built-up."

Frozen drain pipes can be thawed easily by running hot water into the drain. If this fails to work after several minutes, mix a solution of chemical drain cleaner in cold water and pour it into the drain. The chemical reaction between the drain cleaner and the water generates heat that is usually sufficient to melt the ice. If you use this method, be sure to protect your hands and avoid splashing the mixture on counter surfaces and clothing.

A properly installed plumbing system in your best defense against frozen pipes. You may also choose to insulate your pipes. Insulation keeps cold water from freezing in winter and sweating in summer, and will reduce heat losses from hot water pipes as well.

Insulation comes in a number of forms. Consult with your local hardware or plumbing specialist for advice regarding which products are most effective and easy to use.

Preventive maintenance is the best and most inexpensive way to keep your pipes from freezing.

The Permian Basin Board of REALTORS® is one of more than 1,800 local boards and associations of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors. As the nations' largest trade association, NAR is "The Voice for Real Estate," representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Bill Scott, President Permian Basin Board of Realtors, Inc.

SELLING AT A LOSS

QUESTION: It looks like I'm the exception to the rule. I put a lot of money into renovating an overpriced home and now I'll have to sell at a loss. Any suggestions?

Printz

ANSWER: You might consider renting the house out for at least a year or so before selling. In that way, the house will be considered a business investment and you can deduct the loss as a business expense.

While you're renting it out, you can also benefit from other tax benefits such as depreciation and maintenance expense deductions. If you sell a house which is your primary residence and take a loss, this loss is not tax deductible. This is a tricky area, so check with your accountant.

This article submitted by Victoria Printz, of RE/MAX of Midland.

HOUSE HUNTING - HOW MANY PEOPLE DOES IT TAKE?

Although it is tempting, when you decide to buy a house, to shop around with different agents and companies to get the best buy - that is really a mistake. Finding one agent that you are compatible with will get you better results.

Pine

In today's market most Realtors are members of the area multiple listing service, willingly share information on their listings with other agents and have access to any piece of property that is listed via the computer network database. The one agent you select will have a better feel for what you are looking for because that agent has been with you - looking at more than one house and seeing what your likes and dislikes are. He or she has seen your reaction to other houses and can make better use of your time, and his, to find that just right property. Knowing that you are going to work exclusively with that one agent, that agent will be more apt to expend more effort to give you better service and quicker results. Both buyer and agent will be rewarded by this arrangement.

Being Thankful for Midland, Texas, USA

Like you, we are thankful for our faith, family, friends, associates and health. We are also grateful that we live in this city, this state, this nation.

A trip this past year heightened our awareness of the latter, and gave meaning to "the good ol' USA."

We saw Russia and grieved for a nation with little or no relationship to a higher being. Breathtakingly beautiful onion domed churches have become mere tourist sites, warehouses or abandoned edifices. Weddings, blessed throughout history as a sacred ritual, in Russia are 15 minute government conducted ceremonies held in barren state owned "wedding halls." Our guide was completely puzzled by the concept of a wedding as a religious ceremony in a church.

Also, we saw acres of 8 story buildings where 400,000 people lived in government owned flats, and they were the lucky ones! Home ownership is impossible for all but the wealthiest because of an economy and banking industry too unstable to make a home mortgage possible, even for a 3 to 5 year period! We saw Polan, a country whose citizens, buildings and landscapes are scarred by centuries of "liberation," war, economic and physical turmoil. We were told the average income is $500 a month; that even though new mothers are given a generous maternity leave, they are required to go back to work and the baby to day care; that land is owned by the government, therefore homes and flats are constructed on leasehold interests only, even rural workers lease their lands. We saw the Netherlands, a beautiful idyllic country, but the staggering 38% to 60% income tax and 24% employer contributed taxes on wages. Citizens do receive a high level of health care and income guarantees: an employee losing his job receives 70% of his previous wages from the government for the first 12 months and approximately $11,000 per year after that until he obtains another position, even if it is forever. It is any surprise that the unemployment rate is 50% or more; that half the people work and are taxed to support the other half? So this Thanksgiving we hope you will join us in being ever thankful for Midland, Texas, USA, even with its imperfections of confusing elections, conflicts over bond proposals, lack of rainfall, taxes that we deem high, etc. We are blessed with growing active churches throughout the city, jobs for most of our citizens, a generous giving spirit that enables our United Way to leap over its campaign goal and provide services for thousands, boards and governments that do attempt to faithfully serve the people, we could go on and on.

We are most fortunate.

HEALTHY Thanksgiving

By Emily Baker

The Thanksgiving check list: Pumpkin pie? Check. Cranberry sauce? Check. Sweet potatoes? Check. Soy turkey? Check. Football game? Check. Wait a minute, soy turkey?

Soy turkey is some vegetarians' answer to a holiday that traditionally revolves around eating turkey.

According to Larry Satterfield, vegetarian and owner of Midland's Natural Foods Market, soy products, or tofu, have been greatly improved over the last few years.

Tofu is made much like cheese. Soy beans are cooked and liquid is pressed out of the beans. Then the soy curds are skimmed off the liquid and pressed into a cheese-like solid, Satterfield said.

Satterfield said that he became a vegetarian because he thinks it is healthier.

"Then the more I read about animal products, the less I wanted to eat them," he said. "Animal products are high in cholesterol and have no fiber."

Satterfield said that his feelings toward animals also factored into his decision.

"I think they value their own life," he said. "I don't care to kill an animal to have a meal."

Satterfield said that he does not judge those who eat meat, but cautions about the health risks associated with eating meat.

"I read that eating red meat contributes to gout," he said. "The highest instances of gout are in Nebraska where they eat a lot of beef. World-wide, the highest instances are in Argentina, where, of course, they are famous for their cattle ranches."

Red meat contains high amounts of uric acid that crystallizes in the blood, he said.

"It is like having sand in the joints," he said. "It can be very painful."

Satterfield said that he has been healthier since his decision to become a vegetarian. He said he can eat as much as he wants and has stayed within two pounds of 148 for the last nine years.

"I'm 43 years old and I feel better now than I did when I was 23," he said, attributing his health to his diet.

Satterfield said there are different types of vegetarians. Some exclude all animal products from their diets while others eat milk and cheese and eggs. Satterfield said he does not eat any animal products.

He said that the animal products are higher in fat than fruits and vegetables and contain growth hormones and antibiotics.

"I saw on "20/20" a study that was done about girls who are (developing earlier)," he said, stating that some of the girls in the study were having periods as early as age 5. "They attributed that to the growth hormones in the food they eat."

According to the study, higher instances of cancers, especially female cancers, are a side effect of eating growth hormones in meat.

He said he heard a comment on a radio program that stated even though the United States is the highest consumer of milk products in the world, it also has the highest rate of osteoporosis. He said this was attributed to the pasteurization process the milk goes through.

Despite the high cholesterol, lack of fiber and high chemical content in meat, Satterfield said that he doesn't eat meat because he believes humans were not designed to eat meat.

"Think about nature," he said. "A tiger eats meat. They eat the meat raw which still has enzymes in it. Their system is also designed so that what they eat goes through them in about six hours. In (humans) food has to go through about 28 feet (inside the body)."

Satterfield said that meat also contains natural chemicals such as triptophans, which are like natural sedatives. Tripotphans are used by the brain to produce a sort of sleep hormone.

"Turkey contains large amounts of triptophan, which is why people get sleepy on Thanksgiving," Satterfield said.

Satterfield said he advocates organically grown fruits and vegetables, which are produce grown without the use of pesticides.

"If bugs die (from eating the pesticides), why should I eat it," he said. "And we eat a much larger quantity than that little bug."

He said he thinks the organically grown fruits and vegetables taste better, and he has received comments from his customers agreeing.

"I used to eat the bananas from the grocery store," he said. "Then I started carrying the organic ones and they taste so much better. They have so much more flavor."

Deleting animal products from the diet takes out sources of protein and calcium. Satterfield said that those nutrients can easily be replaced. He recommends green, leafy vegetables, prunes, oats, soy beans and almonds for calcium and nuts, avocados, soy, lentils, rice and beans for protein.

"Nuts also have lots of fiber and no cholesterol," Satterfield said. He said it is true that nuts can contain high fat amounts but stresses that the fats in nuts are unsaturated fats, which are healthier than the fats found in meat.

"The body does need some fats," he said.

So, are vegetarians like meat eaters and tend to overeat on Thanksgiving?

"Some do," he said. "Some of us try to eat more responsibly. I remember how bad I feel when I do overeat and that helps me not to do that."

'I'm 43 years old and I feel better now than I did when I was 23.'

Texas-Size Garage Sale calls for Texas-size fun

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

The old adage, "One person's trash is another's treasure," certainly proved to be true when Community & Senior Services held its 11th annual Texas-Size Garage Sale recently.

Executive Director Kelly Ives announced at the recent sponsor appreciation party that this year's sale raised $68,000, up 20 per cent from last year. Proceeds will benefit Meals-on-Wheels, which now serves 450 senior citizens, and Homebound Services for the elderly and disabled.

Harrison

Sarilyn and Bill Black opened their lovely home in Racquet Club South for the party. The sponsors enjoyed cocktails and hors d'oeuvres and both silent and live auctions, which will raise further revenue for the CSS programs. Bill Huber of Tuscola, Ill., father of CSS Development Director Jami Owen, served as auctioneer for the event.

Among the partygoers were Ruth McFarland, Sudy and H. G. Bedford, Susan and Bob Spears, Liz and Jim Henderson, Marilyn and Neal Allen, Judy and James Devenport, Barbra and Trey Grafa, and Betty and Don Ewan.

Joanie Holt was honorary chairman of this year's benefit.

Midlander's Heather Johnson is having the experience of a lifetime. A graduate of the University of Texas-Austin, she is now studying for her master's degree at London's Royal College of Music.

Her mother, Jeanie Johnson, tells us that Heather, who is not inclined to be tongue-tied, found herself only able to stare when Prince Charles made an appearance there recently. She was simply awed by his royal presence.

Jeanie and Tom were joined by their other children, Hollen and Hilary, who work in Washington, D.C., and Tom, a senior at UT-Austin, for a trip to Scotland this past August. Being present for Heather's performance in the musical, "Blues in the Night," at the International Music Festival in Edinburgh was the highlight of their trip. In addition, they enjoyed other festival performances and seeing places and things of interest.

"In fact," says Jeanie "I consider this particular trip -- getting to be with my family for 10 days in such a beautiful setting as Scotland -- the highlight of our travel experiences."

A group of Permian Basin residents headed south recently for the 34th Annual Terlingua International Chili Championship held near Big Bend National Park.

The event, which is sponsored by the Chili Appreciation Society International, took place the weekend of Nov. 3. Friday's schedule included Buffalo Hot Wing, bean and salsa cook-offs.

Saturday featured the chili cook-off and the showmanship competition. Scott Whitaker and the Smoking Guns Band provided the entertainment.

Actually, the locals traveled to Terlingua earlier in the week to take in some precook-off jeeping and sightseeing in the back country and to meet up with those who have become friends over the years from past cook-offs.

This particular group included Joe Hathaway, Harry Harrison, Nancy Calhoun and Beau Poteet, all of Midland; Richard Erwin and Chris Cypher, both of Monahans, and Susie and Bruce Day of Gardendale. They were joined by longtime friends Mary and Ron Sturman of Clear Lake.

Area residents seen competing in the cook-off were Tamara Dees and Patsy and Lee Roy Childress, all of Midland; Kathy and Dave Boon of Odessa, and Karen and Roger Bains of Rankin.

What a romantic way to start the new year and the new millenium! Former Midlander Britt Gardner proposed to Sally Caraway just as the clock was striking midnight last New Year's Eve. After her affirmitive reply, they were feted at a round of parties, which culminated with their Nov. 4 wedding at St. Cecilia Catholic Church in Houston.

A reception followed the ceremony at The St. Regis, with music provided by Doppelganger. On the eve of the wedding, a rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's mother, Joann P. Gardner of Midland, at Houston's Grappino di Nino. Sally was honored with a bridesmaid luncheon earlier that day in the Directors' Dining Room of Houston Country Club.

Prenuptial festivities began last February with an engagement party, themed "A Cause for Celebration," at Midland Country Club. Hosts and hostesses were the groom's mother; his brother and sister-in-law, Bryce and Pam Pace, and longtime friends Sara and Brent Watson and Marion and Robert H. Frazier.

In May, Sally was honored with a bridal display shower in the Garden Room at Midland Country Club. The hostesses were Sadie (Mrs. George) Alther, Pat (Mrs. Addison) Barker, Hermine (Mrs. Eugene) Erwin, Louise (Mrs. John) Gee, Marion (Mrs. Robert H.) Frazier, Lolly (Mrs. Lester) Van Pelt Jr., Sara (Mrs. Brent) Watson, and the late Jane (Mrs. Paul) Scherzer, all of Midland, and Pam (Mrs. Charles) Pendleton of Granbury.

In Houston, Sally was honored with a luncheon and kitchen shower, and she and Britt were the honorees at a "Patio and Lawn Stuff" Party.

The couple departed from the wedding and reception in a white 1966 Rolls Royce Princess.

After a honeymoon to the Hawaiian Islands, they are at home in Houston.

Midlanders attending the wedding were Christa and Barr Bolger, Marion and Robert H. Frazier, Sara and Brent Watson, and Elloui and Louis Moseley.

Former Midlanders included Pat and James A. Alexander of Austin, Mary Lee and Porter Baswell of Canyon Lake, Kari and Rob Bramer of Carrollton, Libby and Kent Crowley of Plano, Claudia and William Ofield of Katy, Bita and the Rev. Richard Schmidt of North Richland Hills, Sid Schmidt of Friendswood, Carolyn (Mrs. Roland) Wilson of Horseshoe Bay, and Kim and Kelly Cherryhomes, Fay and John Nirider, and Stephanie Martin Dalton of Houston.

HELL ON WHEELS

Trials and tribulations of selling a book

By Jean Starnes

I have been considering publishing another book. This one will have some of my newspaper columns interlaced with several short stories.

It will also contain a few sketches.

Foolish me, I thought I could have it printed and sell it here and to family and freinds outside of Midland.

I found out the stores won't handle books unless you go through a publisher.

The search for a publisher sometimes takes years, and you end up with a drawer full of rejection notices. I've been there and done that.

A friend told me about a company that would publish and sell on demand. The only catch is they only do business over the Internet. The writer has to have access to the Internet.

Back in 1991, when I was thinking about buying a computer, I debated with myself — and everyone else — on whether or not I could use one. Before making a decision, I signed up for a basic computer class at Midland College. At the end of the session the instructor told me, "Jean, buy one without a mouse." I did, and that computer enabled me to do the reams of paperwork for the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens in a third of the time.

Without that computer I would not have had the guts to write my first book, "Hell on Wheels," especially after rewriting it four times. To me the Word Perfect Spell Checker that found and corrected my many typing mistakes came straight from heaven.

Starnes

My 1991 computer, needless to say, didn't have Internet, so to get online, I was forced to buy a new computer. Many people said, "You'll love it. You won't know what you did without it."

I've had my new computer for six days, and let me tell you, those people lied. I have never spent six days as frustrating in my whole life.

In the manual the instructions say, "Click the mouse once," or "Double click the mouse." The first day I worked for five hours and single clicked that varmint correctly twice.

As for double-clicking, forget that. It reminded me of trying to thread yarn through the eye of a regular sewing needle.

When I bought the computer, I carefully told the sales person, "I cannot use the mouse." She said that the keyboard can be used instead. What she didn't tell me was the mouse had to be used to program the computer to use the keys.

At the end of that first day I called the store and sounded so desperate that an employee came to my apartment and programmed the keyboard. When he left, I put that rodent on the floor in the corner.

On the third day, the computer kept freezing up. It baulked four times in an hour.

That didn't lead to good, smooth writing. The next day I went to the store for the computer class and that machine also froze. I decided the Windows computers freak out without their furry companion.

ONE WEEK LATER

One the sixth day I couldn't even persuade the darn machine to turn off so I could start over after it froze. Again I telephoned the store. The assistant manager said, "It's against company policies to go to the customers' homes, but in your case we'll make an exception.

I'll be out in a short while, pick up the computer and bring it to the shop." After the day I had had, I tried to be grateful but didn't quite make it.

The next day when I checked with the store, the technician said, "We have to order a whole new inside and it will take three of four days to arrive."

I knew half of this column had already been lost and I didn't want to wait four or five days to finish it. Of course, I thought. When a person pays almost $2,000 for a gadget, it should work longer than six days.

My old computer felt as comfortable as an old jogging suit. That machine didn't have Internet, music, pictures or even games, but it did type and keep a spread sheet. And not once in 10 years did it freeze up.

Maybe I'm too old for the new computers. Maybe if I had taken a middle step between 1991 and 2000, the jump wouldn't have been so great. Or maybe if I had bought a different computer, I wouldn't have had to go through a week of hell.

On the day I had the most trouble with the new computer trying to get it to just type, a message flashed on the monitor, "Do you want to play games now?" I almost threw the whole thing out the window. In my opnion having games on a working computer is like using the family Bible for a door stop.

I'm finishing this column on my brother's computer that has been stripped of all games and non-essentials.

I told the company they could keep that frozen computer with all its games, music and pictures. I'm having a computer made without all that garbage. Wish me luck!

Jean Starnes' autobiography is titled, "Hell on Wheels."

Seed for Thought

Ground breaking news for your winter planting

By Deborah Benge Frost

When mid-November rolls around, flower planting usually comes to an abrupt stop. We frequently think it's too late to plant, but it's not! It's not too late for... poppies. Poppies of various types make wonderful spring and summer color, but they need to be planted in the fall. Poppy seeds should sprout readily with the cooler temps and moisture we've received.

Poppies are an old fashioned flower that our Grandmothers grew in their flower gardens and for good reasons, they are dependable, hardy, drought tolerant, easy to grow from seed, free flowering and absolutely gorgeous. Poppies are a natural for our dry, alkaline growing conditions.

Plant poppies in sunny sites with well-drained soils. If the soil is hard and compacted or poorly drained, till or spade in about 4 inches of organic matter. Actually, any soil situation will benefit from several inches of organic matter. Preplant fertilizer is not usually necessary since poppies prefer soils on the "lean side".

Poppy seeds are small so they can be mixed with sand and broadcast or they can be put in a shaker dispenser for even distribution. If the planting site is mulched, push the mulch aside to expose a bare 4 inch diameter spot and plant a few seeds in the cleared spot. Make these "spots" about 12 to 15 inches apart. Regardless of how the seeds are sown, press the seed into the soil surface or just cover with a thin layer of soil and press soil surface.

After poppy seeds are sown, keep the soil moist for 7 to 21 days. If the seed bed dries out during the three week period, germination will be poor. A light dusting of grass mulch will help hold moisture and improve germination ... but just the thinnest layer of a fine textured mulch. Once seedlings are up, thin them to 12 inches apart.

Two of the very best poppies for our area are the California and Mexican, Eschscholzia Californica or E. Mexicana. These poppies are particularly drought and heat tolerant and dazzling in the landscape. The California poppy is a brilliant silky orange and the Mexican poppy is very similar but with more gold and a somewhat smaller stature. There are some exciting new colors on the market, like pink, apricot, red, cream, white and rose shades. Plants get about 1-2 feet tall and wide and have finely dissected blue green foliage.

Some of the other poppies to consider include the old fashioned, Papaver somniferum, whose seeds have been passed around for generations. These seeds are not available commercially, so you may need to swap seeds with gardening buddies. The blooms are large, 3-5 inches wide, single or double, white, pink, red, mauve and bicolor. The center of many of these poppies have black or very dark blotches in the center of the flower and a very prominent, showy seed head that develops after flowering.

DEAR ABBY

Over the river and through the woods is painful journey

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: As a child, I adored my grandparents. I couldn't wait until Sundays when we would go to their house and spend all day with them. My grandparents have now passed on, and I have my own children.

I now live in a different state and many miles from my family. When we visit my parents, I leave their home with the feeling they felt our time with them was "bothersome." My parents wave my kids outside when they would rather stay inside where their grandparents are. They make comments about my children's behavior, such as "too excited" or "they're hyperactive." My children are NOT hyper. They are excited to see family members they haven't seen all year.

Van Buren

I thought having grandchildren was something special. Instead, after they spend a mere two hours with us, I get the impression my parents have had enough. They are not old. They are only in their mid-60s.

I am tired of traveling halfway across the United States to visit my family and leaving for home feeling we outstayed our welcome. We stay in a hotel and rent our own car. We are doing all we can to make our visits easy for everyone.

I am angry and hope this is published in their local newspaper for them to see. What has happened to grandparents today? At one time, grandchildren were a treasure. It breaks my heart. — DISAPPOINTED DAUGHTER, HOPEDALE, MASS.

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Your parents are giving you a message you should heed. Whether your children are hyperactive or simply high-spirited, their antics are too much for their grandparents to cope with.

It would be wonderful if your parents lived up to your ideal of how they "should" be. However, at this point, they are not likely to change.

Harboring anger will not improve the situation.

Keep your family visits as short and sweet as possible. Explain to your exuberant children that their grandparents are no longer used to having children around, so they must be on their very best behavior when visiting.

Your parents may bond and enjoy a warm relationship with your children when they are older. Hold a good thought.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to share a sweet and unusual experience I had with a stranger while Christmas shopping last year.

The cashier totaled my merchandise and said it came to $28.60.

I handed her my credit card, but it didn't register in the machine. I gave her another card. It, too, didn't work. The cashier said something must be wrong with the machine.

A lady standing behind me asked the cashier, "How much was that?" The cashier told her and the lady said, "I'll take care of it," and handed her $30. I was astounded! I said, "Lady, don't do that. I'm able to pay for this." She said, "I'm sure you are, but I want to give it to you as a Christmas present."

The cashier handed her the change and the sales slip, which she gave to me in case I needed to return the merchandise.

I was so stunned I didn't get her name or address. I want to tell her how much the gift was appreciated by both me and my wife. — THANKFUL TEXAN

DEAR THANKFUL: I'm printing your letter, but you didn't have to ask her name. It's evident: She was Mrs. Santa Claus.

"Pack-It" up with foil packet cooking from Reynolds

RICHMOND, VA - Dinner conversation tonight could kick off with compliments from your husband on the delicious meal you've prepared in foil packets using Reynolds Wrap Aluminum Foil - a real treat, instead of the same old take-out or frozen.

And while you clean up -by just tossing the empty foil into the appropriate receptacle--you and your husband could debate how to spend a week in Hawaii: Kicking back on the beach, sweating it out on a day hike into the rain forest or hitting the dance club scene.

And, just how will all this happen? Call 1-800-745-4000 or go to reynoldskitchens.com and enter Reynolds "Pack-It" Up and Go Sweepstakes, with a grand prize of a trip for two to Hawaii.

Just for entering, The Reynolds Kitchens will send you a free recipe booklet, Elegance made Easy, filled with eight incredibly simple and great-tasting foil packet cooking dishes you'll add to your recipe collection in a heartbeat.

Think about it: enjoy an elegant and easy dinner for two and take a shot at winning an adventurous week-long Hawaiian vacation, or one of 20 first prizes of a $100 American Express gift certificate. The sweepstakes begins on September 1, 2000 and runs through December 31, 2000.

"With our Elegance Made Easy brochure and the 'Pack-It' Up and Go Sweepstakes, we are trying to inspire more real-food cooking, especially among newlyweds or couples who are just starting to cook for two," said Pat Schweitzer, senior home economist for The Reynolds Kitchens.

"These younger women tell us that they want to learn more about cooking 'real food' with fresh ingredients. Foil packet cooking is perfect for these women, because foil packets are easy to prepare, easy to clean up, and the packets lock in all the flavor and nutrients of a meal, so every dinner is a scrumptious success.

Packet cooking keeps meats juicy and tender too, with enhanced taste, color and texture."

Pat added that make-ahead foil packets can be prepared in just minutes in the morning and refrigerated, then popped in the oven or on the grill that night after work.

And if one person prefers different flavorings, you can customize each packet individually. Here's a preview of a few of the recipes in the Elegance Made Easy recipe booklet:

For a true taste of the tropics, say "Aloha" to Tropical Chicken Packets.

Center a boneless chicken breast on a sheet of heavy duty aluminum foil and top with juicy pineapple chunks and red bell pepper strips.

Spoon on a tangy teriyaki sauce laced with brown sugar and fresh ginger, fold into a packet and bake or grill. The vegetables and fruit burst with flavor, texture and color because they cook in their own aromatic steam.

Count on this South Pacific palate-pleaser, featuring an unbelievably fast prep time of only eight minutes and served over hot cooked rice, as a mealtime passport to the land of sun and fun.

Ginger Salmon with Spinach will generate a tidal wave of compliments praising your growing culinary talents. A rub of fresh ginger followed by a drizzle of seasoned rice vinegar infuses your salmon fillet packets with exotic island flavorings.

As with all packet cooking recipes, the all-in-one meal of Chicken with Pine Nut Couscous is bound to boost quality time with your husband, because there's no clean up after dinner.

Arrange a store-bought couscous mix around a chicken breast, then sprinkle with spices and sliced zucchini. Then add this gem of an entree-garnished with jewel-like cherry tomatoes-to your growing file of easy and elegant recipes.

In addition to entering the sweepstakes by calling the toll-free number or by going online, consumers may enter by mail. Print your name, street address, city, state, ZIP code, e-mail address (if applicable) and daytime phone number on an official entry form attached to cartons of Reynolds Wrap aluminum foil, a mail-in certificate available in InStyle magazine, or a 3 by 5 piece of paper, and mail in an envelope to Reynolds "Pack-It" Up and Go Entries, P.O. Box 9018, Bridgeport, NJ, 08014. All entries must be submitted or postmarked by 12/31/00. The "Pack-It" Up and Go sweepstakes is void in Florida or where prohibited by law. No purchase necessary to enter. Sweepstakes subject to Official Rules available at reynoldskitchens.com or send a self addressed, stamped envelope to Reynolds "Pack It" Up & Go Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 9111, Bridgeport, NJ 08014. VT residents omit return postage.

SEED: Poppy plants eager to peek out

(From 2E)

Some selections have a fringy petal margin which lead to the name Carnation poppy. The plants have attractive waxy blue foliage. Plants grow about 3 feet tall and 7 inches wide and have good drought tolerance.

The Shirley poppy, Papaver rhoeas, sometimes called corn or Flanders poppy, is well suited to the area. This delicate and slender poppy comes in white, pink, lilac, orange, yellow and red. Sow it in drifts so the delicate flowers will make an attractive show. Sow it in the fall too.

Poppies planted in mass will give a shining, fluttery drift of delightful color. They bloom about the same time as many other cool season annuals like larkspur, corn flowers, and bluebonnets so you can have tons of spectacular color if you plant in the fall.

Don't miss this opportunity to have a color packed spring with the carefree beauty of poppies planted this fall.

While pushing the envelope in terms of planting tender subtropical plants may be exciting... it can also be costly. There are a number of plants that we grow that are really USDA Plant Hardiness Zone 8 or 9, rather than Zone 7 which is recommended for our area. A few steps taken at planting time and or during the fall can give these tender plants a fighting chance should our winter temperatures take a lengthy plunge.

With our generally warm fall days, it's hard to imagine sub-freezing weather in light of the many mild winters we've had, but it's still a good idea to take protective steps for those tender beauties you may have tucked here and there in the landscape. Here are a few somewhat tender plants that have become favorites among area gardeners.

Coral vine or Queens Wreath vine, Antigonon leptopus, is damaged at 30 F and can be killed at 20. Red Bird of Paradise or Pride of Barbados, Caesalpinia pulcherrima, is damaged at 30 degrees F and can be killed at few degrees lower. Butterfly vine or yellow orchid vine, Mascagnia macroptera, is killed somewhere around 22-24 degrees F. A fall blooming favorite, Mexican bush sage, Salvia luecantha, is killed at 24-26 degrees F. Two fall blooming perennial marigolds are damaged at; Mexican mint marigold, Tagetes lucida, 32 F and Mountain Marigold or Cooper Canyon Daisy, T. lemmoni, at 30. Yellow bells or Esperanza, Tecoma stans var angustata, is damaged at 30 and T. stans var stans is damaged at 28. While these plants love the heat and intense sunlight of West Texas, they don't like the colder temperatures that are frequently experienced in the winter.

Tender plants can survive our colder winters if they are planted in a protected site that provides them with a microclimate of protection. Areas that contain lots of concrete, paving, and sheltering walls can be just the ticket. South facing brick, cinder block or concrete can be especially effective in absorbing, retaining and releasing heat to the immediate area. These are the sites to look for with really marginal plants.

Another trick to winter survival involves surrounding the base of the tender plant with large or flat stones that will absorb heat during the day and keep the soil and roots warm during cold nights. This technique works well with plants that die to the ground and resprout rapidly the next year, like Coral vine.

This may seem like a lot of trouble, but it will save you money and a plant that already has an established root system is more likely to put on a bigger, better show this spring or summer. Meanwhile prepare for potentially cold weather by protecting your tender treasures.

What happens when a thirst to stay hydrated gets out of control?

By Jessie Milligan
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

My name is Jessie M., and I drink too much.

I down a minimum of eight 8-ounce glasses of water a day, three cups of nonfat milk, three mugs or glasses of green or black tea, a serving of soy beverage, a glass of purple grape juice or an occasional glass of red wine, a glass of calcium-fortified orange juice and, now and then, some pineapple juice for the magnesium. Plus coffee, although it is dehydrating.

At first I would not admit it. I was in denial. Daily, I would pour a pitcher full of 64 ounces of water and would not go to sleep until it was drained. I bought colorful juice containers meant to fit in lunch boxes and fat bottles of juice that stole most of the refrigerator shelf space. I had to buy a special iced-tea pitcher that fit on the refrigerator-door shelf, and nightly I would brew green tea with a dollop of North Dallas Honey Co. honey and a squeeze of fresh lemon.

I became a woman obsessed.

It started one day while I was smoking a cigarette and reading Prevention magazine. Sadly, I am not making this up. While reading, I suffered a terrible collision of ideas. I had a habit bad for my health. I wanted to be healthy.

So I arrived at a conclusion: I would start drinking more water.

One drink led to another. I included milk for the calcium, tea for the phytonutrients, although to this day I'm not sure what a phytonutrient is. This went on for years. As I aged, I included soy beverages, believing this would somehow ease me into menopause, plus fight cancer. Then OJ manufacturers began adding calcium to their product. I found this irresistible. My bones will thank me. Magnesium helps absorb calcium, so I started on pineapple juice. Grape juice or wine helps prevent clogged arteries. I do a little cranberry now and then as well. You may see where this is heading. I've had to clench my teeth to stop myself from getting involved with wheatgrass smoothies. If researchers find one more healthy thing to drink, I may explode.

One night, I did what thousands of other people around the world do — I decided to solve my problem by logging onto the Internet and searching for my own solution.

I checked an Internet search engine for the phrase "eight glasses a day." I received 92,400 responses, which roughly compares with the number of times I visit the bathroom in a given week. A good portion of those trips are in the middle of the night.

I searched and searched on Web sites. As night fell and the house grew dark, I hunched before the glowing computer screen. Then, finally, insight flashed while I peered at www.mayohealth.org and the health page at www.msn.com.

Now I have a new plan.

WATER: Water makes the world go round and round

Milk, juices and other beverages are about 90 percent water. So those drinks don't have to be added on top of my 64 fluid ounces of water. Those healthy beverages can be included, along with clear water, as part of my daily fluid consumption. Aha!

Plain water must be part of the diet. It is the best thing to drink because our bodies are about half water. We are not half Diet Coke, nor are we half Dr Pepper, although we may feel related.

We need to get plain water into our watery selves, but not to the point that we slosh when we walk.

I can substitute solid food for my calcium and magnesium, and add more veggies and fruit to my diet to make up for the loss of green tea.

I will drink a glass of OJ, a glass of water and a cup of coffee before work, if I get up early enough. I will drink two 16-ounce bottles of water at work.

I will drink a glass of water when I get home in the evening, then have a cool glass of tea or a warm mug of milk.

On my days off, when I'm at home, what the heck, I'll add another bottle of water or two.

EVERYTHING YOU WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT WATER

Bodies of water

The human body is, on the average, 50 percent water. Parts of us are made up of even more water.

Brain, 85 percent water
Lean muscle, 80 percent water
Blood, 80 percent water
Fat, 25 percent water
Bone, 22 percent water

Water may prevent certain diseases. It can prevent kidney stones, and one study has shown that women who drank more than five glasses of water a day had a risk of colon cancer that was 45 percent less than those who drank two or fewer glasses a day. The International Bottled Water Association says its surveys show Americans who don't drink enough water complain of at least one of the following symptoms: frequent tiredness, dry or itchy skin, headaches, indigestion or lapses in concentration.

How much to drink?

Divide your weight in half. The answer is the approximate minimum number of fluid ounces you should drink daily.

The common "eight glasses of day" or 64 fluid ounces is the minimum amount a person who weighs 128 pounds should drink. Weigh more, drink more.

Why so much? The "average" person loses about 10 cups of water a day to body functions.

Three to four cups of water are derived each day from solid foods. Because that's such a rough estimate, dietitians say it is better to count only fluids when figuring your daily intake.

When counting fluids, don't include coffee, caffeinated beverages or alcohol. They are dehydrating. Milk, juice and a low-caffeine tea, such as green tea, are about 90 percent water, so they can be included in a calculation of daily fluid intake. Nonetheless, daily fluids should include plain water.

When to drink more?

Increase water intake when it is hot, humid or cold, or when you are visiting a higher altitude. Water is a regulator that helps our bodies adjust to climatic change.

Increase water intake as physical activity increases. Drink water before, during and after exercise.

Sports drinks usually aren't necessary unless you are working very hard for 90 minutes straight or, if it is particularly hot, for 60 minutes straight. Otherwise, you may be taking in more sodium than you need.

What time of day?

If you are thirsty, you've already started to dehydrate. Dietitians say it's best to keep the body regularly rehydrated throughout the day.

That means a glass of water upon rising, several throughout the day, and one before you go to bed so that cellular function continues properly throughout the night.

Why we don't drink enough water

More than half of Americans say they don't drink eight glasses of water a day, according to a survey by the International Bottled Water Association.

The reasons they gave:

Too busy — 21 percent
Don't like the taste — 13 percent
Prefer other beverages — 12 percent
Forgot — 10 percent
Not feeling thirsty — 8 percent
No bottled water available — 4 percent
Can't leave their desks for a "hydration break" — 4 percent
Worry about too many restroom breaks — 2 percent

Water safety

The Food and Drug Administration regulates bottled water. Nonetheless, the Natural Resources Defense Council studied 103 brands of bottled water, and in March 1999 announced that a third of those contained at least one sample of bacteria or a chemical that exceeded the industry guidelines, although none so harmful as to cause a recall.

Also, we can contaminate bottled water ourselves. The Mayo Clinic says every time you drink from a bottle of water, the bacteria in your mouth contaminates the water in the bottle.

Wash water bottles in hot, soapy water or run them through the dishwasher before using them again, the clinic advises.

The Environmental Protection Agency regulates the purity and safety of tap water. It requires public suppliers to notify residents if tap water is unsafe.

Yet breakouts of water-borne disease occur now and then. The worst in this country was in 1993 in Milwaukee, where 100 people died and 403,000 were reported sickened with intestinal disease when the parasite cryptosporidium got into the city's water supply. The parasite is resistant to chlorine and ordinary filters.

Cryptosporidium is a parasite from the intestines of warm-blooded animals. Milwaukee's outbreak is believed to have been caused from runoff from slaughterhouses into a lake that holds the city water supply.

HOME & GARDEN

Fountain grass

The pompous pampas

Maiden Hair Grass

Zebra Grass

Pidecats Gramma Grass

Now that colder months are descending upon us, gardeners will have the opportunity to reflect upon their landscape and consider their successes and failures. While we cherish our successes, every gardener has had at least one failure and we usually learn from them. For one thing, it gives us the chance to be open to new ideas and try new things. As we pour over the seed catalogs and plant brochures this winter, dreaming of glorious sweeps of color and lush foliage, let us take a moment to consider grass. No, not the kind you have to fertilize like crazy to get it to grow vigorously, just to turn around and mow it more often. We're talking ornamental grasses here.

Grasses have been around for a very long time. They just didn't have good press or get "discovered" as ornamentals until recently. The emergence of ornaments is our good fortune if we have the opportunity to learn more about them and have a greater selection to choose from at our local landscape centers. What are ornamental grasses and how could they impact your landscape? The grass family, Gramineae, contains more than 1,400 species here in the United States alone. In addition, there are more than 7,000 species found worldwide. That gives us an exceptionally wide variety of plants to choose from. Because they do not put on showy flowers to attract pollinators, they must rely upon the wind to carry their pollen. Midland's windy weather offers the perfect setting to both spread the grass pollen and showcase one of the many advantages of grasses — movement. Whereas the tender stems of many flowering plants such as lilies and hollyhocks can be damaged by our incessant breezes, ornamental grasses come alive and put on a fluid, rhythmic show. Movement is only one of the many beautiful aspects of ornamentals. When the grasses are left still, they are blessed with wonderful architectural shapes, which can be used as a garden focal point or to frame other plants. The same plant chosen to serve as a backdrop to highlight nearby flowers will serve as a striking counterpoint in the winter when the flowers have spent their blossoms. With the vast choice of shapes, colors and sizes there is certainly a grass that could be incorporated into your garden. Tired of worn-out bushes and blocky expanses of green shrubbery that require continual trimming to maintain that "boxed" look? Clear your mind of the traditional vision of green rings of plants around your foundation and let it wander to consider touches of height, color and movement. Ornamental grasses are low maintenance plants. They do require cutting back and occasional dividing. You may have some annual grasses sprout in areas where the wind has carried the seed, but an easy tug will dispense with an unwanted freebie.

Ornamental grasses can be annuals or perennials and consideration should be given to each. Annuals will live and die in one growing seasons and must be replaced if they don't reseed themselves. This offers an advantage if you are testing a site for grass and are not sure if it will work with the surrounding plants. At the end of the season you can rethink your location and plant accordingly for next year. Most perennials will die back in the winter and sprout from the root structure the next year, although evergreen grasses are also available. If the location you have chosen is not suitable, you can always dig up the clump and move it where you think it will be more appropriate. It is important with perennials that the mature size is considered when choosing a site for planting. Another consideration in site selection is what direction the sun will hit the plants. Most grasses put on beautiful flower and seed heads and some can be quite colorful. Many grasses have attractive seed heads that may also be incorporated in decorations after you are through enjoying them in the garden. If you have a shade garden or just a shady corner of your yard to contend with, you can use one of the many species that prefer shade.

If you have Liriope in your yard you have already taken the first step in adding ornamentals to your landscape. Many of you are also familiar with pampas grass. In most cases it is not appropriate to plant pampas grass due to its mature size. It has a tendency to "take over" the landscape. Care must be taken with this specimen to keep it trimmed and tamed. If you have your heart set on pampas grass, there is a miniature specimen available, which will be easier to maintain while offering the same striking flower head.

The following ornamental grasses have been seen flourishing in our West Texas landscape:

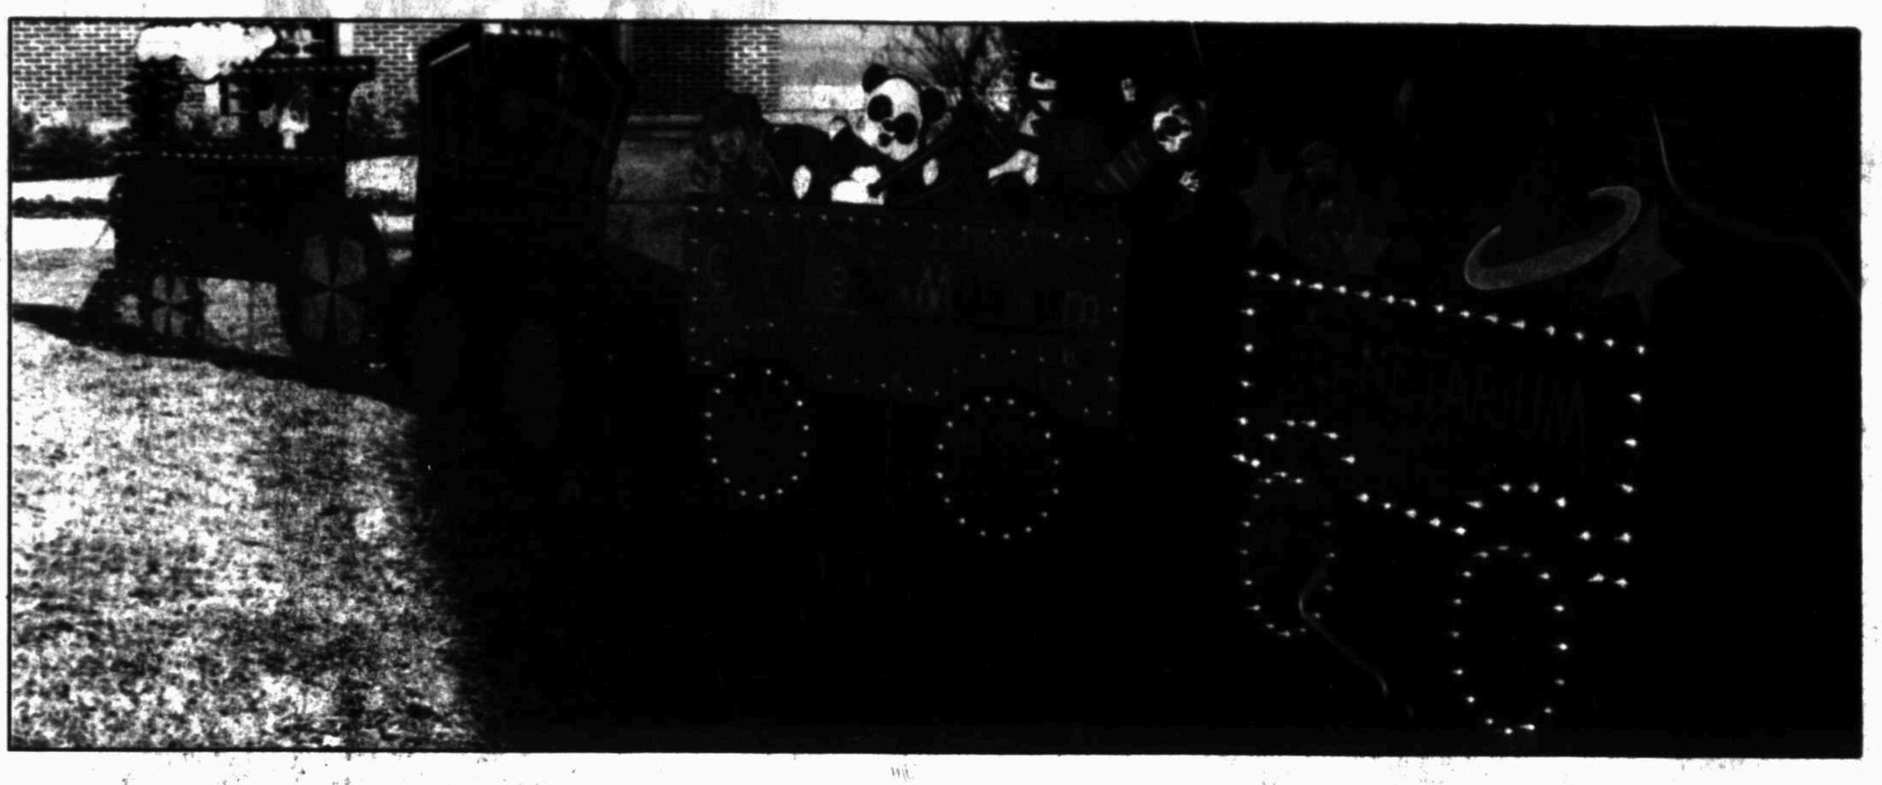

- Sideoats gramma is native to our area and grows to 8"-24" tall with a 6"-12" spread. It has a delicate seed head resembling a comb and is drought tolerant once established. It is a warm seasoned perennial that likes full sun.
- Variegated Sedge (in the Carex family) is a clumping sedge with stiff, arching leaves. This perennial can be green with white or creamy yellow stripes. It will grow to a height of 8"-18" and spread 1"-2'. These prefer light shade where the soil remains a little moister, but can be grown in full sun if the soil is watered properly.
- Lemongrass is an edible ornamental that is a tender perennial here in our area. This plant grows from 3"-6' tall and has a spread of 2"-3'. The leaves can be used in cooking to infuse an Asian taste to dishes. It is drought tolerant once established, but since it is only hard to Zone 9, it must be cut back, the rootstock must be dug and placed indoors, or if you choose to take a chance overwintering it outdoors, the plant must be heavily protected in hard winters. I
- Umbrella Plant is versatile and prolific. This member of the sedge family has whorls of leafy bracts resembling an umbrella on top of tall triangular stems. This perennial can be used both in the yard and placed in pots in the pond. If used in the pond it can reached a height of 4', while the same plant in the yard will probably be a little shorter. It can reach a spread of 3-5'.
- Blue Fescue is a gorgeous low, tufted clumping grass that looks spectacular in masses. It has powder blue leaves and can be used as an accent plant. It will grow to 4-8" in height and will spread 6-8". Here in West Texas we should place it in partial shade due to our hot summers.
- The Miscanthus family also offers some beautiful choices for this area. They include zebra grass which features striped grass blades topped by creamy plumes of flowers hanging to one side. This grass can grow to 6' tall and have a spread of 3-4'. Another member of this family is maiden grass, which can get from 5-7' tall and 2-4' wide. This background specimen had narrow foliage that is topped by plumed flowers in autumn.
- The Pennisetum family offers several types of fountain grass that do beautifully here. Some are perennial and some, like the popular purple fountain grass, are tender perennials, which should be considered annuals. Purple fountain grass dots our landscape in both large and miniature varieties adding vibrant purple notes of color topped by reddish-purple flower plumes.

We are blessed with many choices of ornamental grasses here in the Permian Basin and these suggestions have only scratched the surface of what can be successfully grown here. It has been said before and bears repeating - check out the abundant literature available on ornamental grasses, visit gardens, ask questions, and educate yourself at the local garden centers. Go see the ornamental specimens in person, feel their leaf structure, read the label for height and spread, choose carefully, and then go home and have fun adding them to your garden. Whether you mass them for visual impact or use a beautifully structured single specimen as a garden highlight, ornamental grasses can add grace and movement to your landscape.

Christmas at the Mansion

By Georgia Temple

Mr. and Mrs. Claus are special guests on Friday evening when the Museum of the Southwest opens for its third annual Christmas at the Mansion celebration.

"We anticipate an extremely large crowd that evening," said Cindi Mladenka, marketing director of the facility. "We will have carolers and refreshments, and Mr. and Mrs. Claus will attend from the North pole. We feel, because our opening kicks off the Thanksgiving weekend, that it really does bring the holiday to the community in a fun and festive way."

The doors of the museum will be open from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Visitors can view the decorated trees and holiday-wrapped museum as well as the miniature doll house displays and religious artifacts exhibit. The Southwest Express, housed in the Depot (the Stables Gallery) will be open for business and tickets are priced lower this year. Adult admission is $3 and children 12 and younger are $1.

"The centerpiece of Christmas at the Mansion is our 200-foot, 'O' gauge, model train exhibit, which features 12 trains that can run simultaneously on the double-tiered track," Ms. Mladenka said of the Southwest Express.

A Christmas shop will be open through Dec. 24 for those who want "one of a kind items," said Ms. Mladenka, noting that the shop also handles works on consignment. The s shop is open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Teas and luncheons and special Saturday activities for families are part of the festivities that run through Jan. 2. Weekend visitors will find live music, punch and cookies and the chance to have a photo made with Santa between 2 and 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Thursday afternoon teas from 3 to 4:30 p.m. are planned for Dec. 7, 14 and 21. The teas are free. Gourmet luncheons on Wednesdays require reservations and cost $12.50 per person. To reserve a place call 683-2882.

"We have a volunteer who is doing the lunches, and she's a crack cook," said Mary de Compiegne, this year's chairman of Christmas at the Mansion. "That's really going to be wonderful."

The Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum climbs into the spotlight on Dec. 16 when the facility hosts "Celebrations from Around the World" from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"The entire family can come and enjoy celebrations of Hanukkah, Kwanzaa, Las Posadas and a Victorian Christmas with a 'live nativ-

Jacqueline Bigar's Stars

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Nov. 19, 2000:

You have an unusual ability to make what you want happen. Your endurance and strength separate you from others. Use your finances to pursue a goal. Know when to re-evaluate decisions. Others often test your limits. Learn to deal with taciturn people. If you are single, popularity soars. Keep a relationship light until you really get to know the person well. If you are attached, work on better communication, where neither of you needs to be right or wrong. VIRGO points the way to what you want.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★ Make it OK to relax and take it easy. Not everyone is bright-eyed and bushy-tailed all the time. Another really can understand that you might want a day close to home or a lazy day. Still, stretch and make an important call. Tonight: Be a couch potato.

This week: Stick to your projects, and you'll gain. Others feel passionately about what you should do.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ Don't take another's behavior personally. Others clearly need space and are out of sorts. You too might like a little less formality and a little more relaxation. Communication flourishes when you are relaxed. Tonight: Think about what another is saying.

This week: Someone depends on you. Use your ingenuity and spunk to enhance your work and financial situation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ Honor your priorities and don't allow anyone to impose his values or ideas on you. You know what you want. Make it OK to pull back and take the day at your pace, as you would like. Someone might be put out, but he will understand. Tonight: Happy at home.

This week: Deal with personal matters on Monday. Clear the field so your mind can focus on work and your creativity can flow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ You could be disappointed by a friend or loved one. Rather than getting into the situation, make a new set of plans. Get together with someone you always enjoy for maybe a movie and a meal. The change in pace renews your perspective. Tonight: Out and about.

This week: Speak your mind and mean what you say. Your words could be etched in another's memory.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Pressure builds. You honor your responsibilities and feel the pressure of events. Loosen up and establish your limits. You cannot push yourself like this. Distract yourself by focusing on something that you enjoy. Tonight: Treat a loved one to dinner.

This week: Take a strong but overdue financial action. Others express their opinions all week. Use your ingenuity at work.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ You are in a strong position emotionally and physically. If plans need to be changed, suit yourself. Fill in with something you've always wanted to do. By relaxing and expressing an easy attitude, everything works out anyway. Tonight: Go for what you want.

This week: On Monday, you are the lead actor. Unfortunately, it is downhill after that. Deal with security and finances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★ Sometimes, knowing where your empire ends and where you no longer have control is instrumental to your well-being. A testy partner might encourage you to play ostrich or become a recluse. Don't deal with finances right now. Tonight: Easy works.

This week: Listen to a partner on Monday. He means it! After that, you are on cruise control.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Though another tests your limits, you might need to establish better give-and-take with this person. Be understanding about a natural shyness or a need to be reclusive. Join friends for a celebration. Good news surrounds your friendships. Tonight: Kick up your heels.

This week: Ask questions on Monday. You get excellent answers. Mull them over before you decide.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ You meet another's demand. Your sense of responsibility manifests itself. However, you could be taking on too much. If you feel tired, you need to take some time off for yourself. Ultimately, everyone will be better off if you take care of yourself. Tonight: Make plans work for you.

This week: You assume control on Monday and get what you want. Thursday could be a bit confusing, though.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★★ Though others around you could get stuck, you are able to break through. Take in a movie or go to a place where you can forget yourself. Touch base with a loved one at a distance. Tonight: Try something completely different.

This week: Do your research. Separate facts and theory. Assume responsibility at work midweek. Others listen.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ A partner has a lot on his mind. Help this person talk. Be open to sharing. Don't get caught up in "shoulds." Dote on another. Tonight: Dinner for two.

This week: You could find a conversation heavy on Monday. But with insight and perspective, doors open. You see the possibilities; others don't.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Reach out for another. Be willing to break past an immediate snafu. You could be challenged by others and their ideas. Just listen and share. Nothing is engraved in stone. Understand more of what you want from another as well. Tonight: Go along with another's plans.

This week: Others seek you out. Communication takes on a serious tone. Negotiate what you want this week.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	4♣	4♠	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

"South starts out with 10 tricks at his four-spade contract. However, a ruff by East at trick one reduces that number to nine. Your task, Mr. Phelps, is to recover that missing trick. As usual, should you or your men fail, the American Contract Bridge League will deny all knowledge of your action!"

North-South had no problem reaching game in spades despite West's preempt. Although South had a strong holding, there was no safe way to proceed when North could do no more than compete with four spades over four clubs.

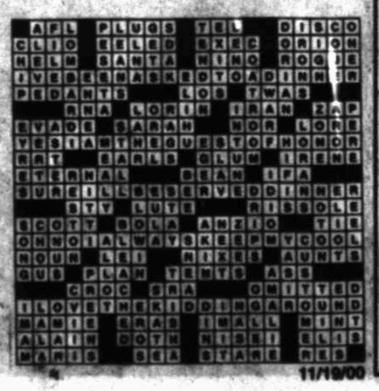

After the opening lead of the queen of clubs, declarer put up dummy's ace and East ruffed. How should you proceed?

If you followed from hand with a low club before stopping to plan your campaign, it is already too late. There is now no way to avoid losing three tricks in the red suits against best defense. To make your game you will need an endplay, and only West can be trapped. The first stage in your campaign must be to jettison the king of clubs at trick one!

Suppose East returns a trump, as good as any. Win and cash all your red-suit winners and since West has followed to a trump and the three red-suit cards, you know West is down to nothing but clubs. It is time to throw West on lead by exiting with a club.

On West's forced club return, discard a diamond from dummy and a heart from hand. That completes the defensive book. On the next club lead, ruff on the table while discarding the last heart from hand. Now you can ruff two hearts in hand and a diamond on the board to make the rest of the tricks!

FESTIVE: Museum counting on crowds for annual event

ity,'" Ms. Mladenka said, adding that the cost is $5 "for a car load."

Christmas at the Mansion, which features activities at four sites on the grounds — the Art Museum, the Children's Museum, the Blakemore Planetarium and the Depot — has been popular since its inception two years ago.

"We were actually floored by the attendance we had in 1999," director Tom Jones said of the annual event. "We had 19,000 come through the museum between Thanksgiving and New Year's specifically for the Christmas at the Mansion activities. And we have every reason to believe that figure will grow this year."

The annual vent has not been an inexpensive one for the museum.

"We invested a lot of money up front in this project, and we're hoping that we will generate a net profit this year," Jones said. "The first-year event paid for 80 percent of the project. And the second-year event paid for the balance. It was a small net profit last year. This year, we're hoping to do a lot better since all our expenses have essentially been paid up front."

The museum hopes to raise "in the neighborhood of $80,000," Jones said.

The success of doing so rests with the sponsors the museum is able to bring into the project.

"And we've been very successful this year in securing sponsorships," Jones said. "I think sponsorships to-date are a little in excess of $40,000, so we're halfway there."

Mrs. de Compiegne also said that Christmas at the Mansion was "off to a very good start. The whole climate of Midland is much more up with the price of oil.

"I think we will have a bigger crowd because it's built on the last two years. People come and they want to come back. It's a marvelous event to bring your children to."

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sundays. With the exception of the model train exhibit, the luncheons, the special Celebrations Day on Dec. 15 in the Children's Museum and the planetarium sky shows, no admission is charged.

The Southwest Express, located on the grounds of the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., will be running from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Holiday hours for the train are 2 to 5 p.m. Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. New Year's Day. The last day the Depot is in operation is Jan. 2 (11 a.m. to 5 p.m.). The Depot is closed Christmas Day. For more information, call 683-2882.

The event would not be possible without the help of volunteers and sponsors and those who loan their art and collections for others to enjoy during the season, said Mrs. de Compiegne.

"It's not just a one person act," Mrs. de Compiegne said. "We call on many people to help, and we have a tremendous positive response."

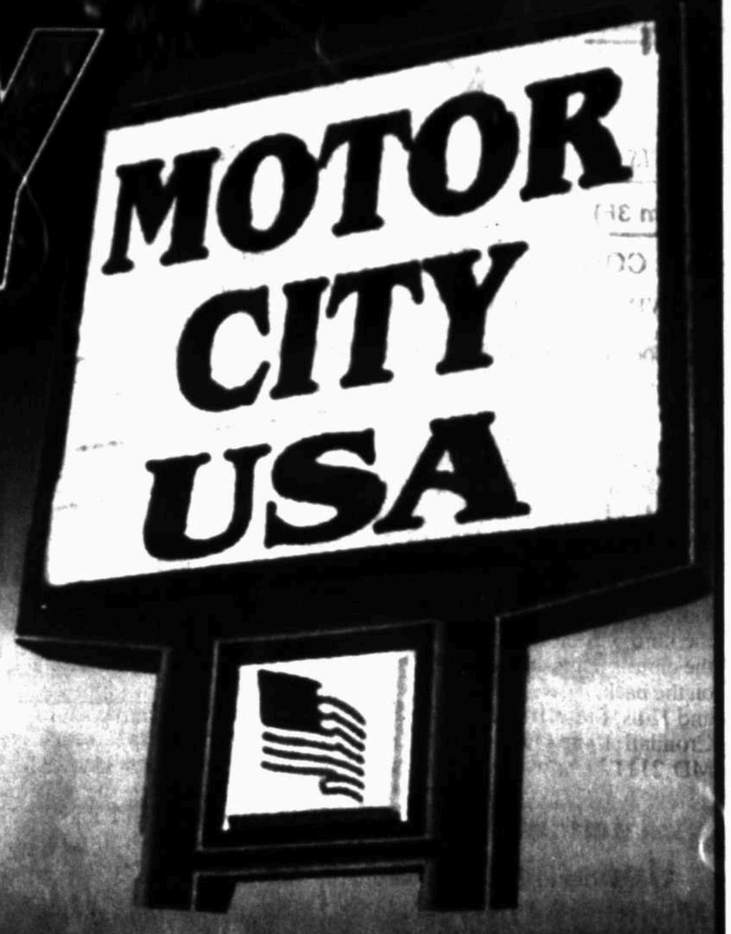

The third annual Christmas at the Mansion offers, Mrs. de Compiegne said, "A wide range from an old-fashioned Christmas to a country Christmas to an elegant Christmas. What I love is that people are very willing to help the museum. I think they feel it's marvelous exposure for them, and I think they are all working for a common cause — to enjoy Christmas in a wonderful setting."

Board of trustees to meet

The Midland College Board of Trustees will meet in regular session 4 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 21 at the Gibson Board Room of the Pevehouse Administration Building.

Spring, winter interim registraion underway

Early registration is underway for spring classes and the Winter Interim session at Midland College in the Student Services area of the Scharbauer Student Center. Students may early register for both sessions 8 a.m.-5 p.m. through Dec. 8.

The Winter Interim session, which lets students earn three hours of college credit in just 12 days, is Dec. 18-Jan. 4. Students also may register for the session 8-9 a.m., Monday, Dec. 18—the day classes start.

Spring semester classes begin Jan. 16. Registration for the spring session begins again, Jan. 2, after the Christmas break.

A special registration day with extended office hours, 8 a.m.-7:30 p.m., will be Wednesday, Jan. 10.

Holiday evening

The sixth annual Hallway Art Sale opens 7-9 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 30 in the art wing of the Allison Fine Arts Building.

The sale continues 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Friday and Saturday, Dec. 1 and 2; and 1-4 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 3. A commission on all sales will go toward a scholarship fund for needy art students.

The opening of the Hallway Art Sale is part of Midland College's annual Holiday Evening Thursday, Nov. 30. Other events include:

6-7:30 p.m.—Chili Supper sponsored by Students in Philanthropy, at south end of the Chap Center preceding the basketball game, Chaps vs. Wayland Baptist JV at 8 p.m.

6:30-6:45 p.m.—Campus Christmas Lighting at the Hodge Carillon Tower.

7 p.m.—Opening reception for the Fall Student Art Show in McCormick Gallery in the Allison Fine Arts Building, with entertainment provided by the Midland College Winds.

8 p.m.—Chaparral Singers Christmas Concert in the Wagner and Brown Auditorium in the AFA Building.

And Visions ....

... of expanding services & training to benefit area children are part of MC's Child Development Director Rita Stotts' plans

by Katherine Allen

Visions of sugar plums aren't the only visions on the Midland College campus these days.

"I have a vision," Rita Stotts, Director of Child Development, said. Innovative ideas from Stotts and her staff at the MC Child Care and Development program at the Helen L. Greathouse Children's Center is one of the reasons for the college's growth.

Her vision is multi-faceted and includes bringing the most innovative child care curriculum to the Permian Basin, national accreditation for the MC program, another facility in Midland and expanding current facilities.

The MC Child Development program serves three main purposes:

—To provide day care services to MC staff and students;

—To provide child development classes for MC students;

—To provide continuing education for area child care professionals.

The expanding child development curriculum continues to draw more MC students. Stotts said she has seen her program expand from 10 students in 1993 to 70-80 per semester now.

"I think my faculty shares my vision," Stotts said.

Stotts said she is constantly searching for the latest and greatest child care education ideas. Her search led her to the University of North Texas (UNT) and the Velma E. Schmidt Success for Life Curriculum, developed by a UNT student.

"We were some of the first students for this curriculum," Stotts said. "I took my teachers to UNT six times. This was a commitment for the teachers and for the funding. But I want to bring new projects back to West Texas and keep abreast of what's up in the state and in the nation."

Stotts and her teachers spent one year evaluating the program, incorporating the test programs ideas into the MC curriculum and giving the UNT monitors feedback.

"The Success for Life curriculum is cross-disciplinary and includes music, art, math and psychology among other disciplines," Stotts said.

Another goal for Stotts is national accreditation for the child development program.

"I would like to have our program accredited by the National Association for Education for Young Children," Stotts said. "We are currently working for that and it is the highest accreditation you can earn."

The MC program is currently designated four-star, the highest designation, by West Texas Opportunities Child Care Management Systems.

Stotts is passionate about making the program the best it can be.

"We're always going to be as appropriate as we can," Stotts said. "I look at us as a leader for other centers, as a role model. We can never get complacent."

Opening other child care facilities in Midland, another goal for Stotts, was realized when the Manor Care Children's Center opened in September.

Stotts was approached by Lucy Woodside, Director of Development at Manor Park.

Woodside had heard of the Eden Concept about four years ago, a concept incorporating animals, pets, plants and kids into a nursing home environment to make that environment friendlier, more normal.

"We applied for a grant from the Helen Greathouse Foundation," Woodside said.

"Then we approached Midland College to see if there was any way that a child care center could be established here. Midland College expressed interest and the project went forward.

The child care facility offers care for the children of Manor Park employees, MC students and the community at large. The facility opens at 5:30 a.m. to accommodate parents with early schedules. Closing is at 5:30 p.m. The facility has room for 15-17 children.

Woodside said she knows of no other employer in the Permian Basin with on-site child care.

The pilot program has proved an unqualified success.

"I can't say enough good things about the program," Woodside said. "We value our coalition with Midland College. [The child care center] couldn't have happened without MC's willingness to help."

The older residents, designated grandpals, have responded to the children with open arms.

One resident, whose grandchildren live far away, loves children and answered the center's request for volunteers before it opened. She and the children now have a wonderful relationship, beneficial to both.

Another resident anticipates the "wagon train" of children in wagons pulled around a grassy enclosure every afternoon. She lays on her bed and waves to the children as they go by.

Another gentleman comes for the children's music time. He never spoke to the children but was approached by a little girl who put her hands on his checks and he responded with a big smile.

"The children know the residents well enough by now that they recognize a new resident," Tracy Roome, MC Child Development Coordinator, said.

"We would like to open another facility in Midland," Stotts said. "One option might be a facility for Cogdell South Facility students."

Stotts also looks to expand her main campus facility. "There is a real need for infant-toddler care in Midland," Stotts said. "We would like to have an infant-toddler lab at MC.

"We're always looking for things we can do for the community."

Stotts continues to think ahead about new projects. "I want to continue to provide the very best care and training for early childhood," Stotts said.

International trade to be Networking Breakfast topic

How Permian Basin businesses can take advantage of international trade opportunities will be the topic of this month's Networking Breakfast.

D'Ann Harris

D'Ann Harris, a representative of the Northwest Texas International Trade Commission (NWTITC) in Lubbock, will be guest speaker. She will speak on "New Dollars for West Texas," and export potential for area businesses.

Harris acted as coordinator of export operations for four years for a local firm before joining the ITC staff as Director of Market Development.

Having grown up as a native of Lea County, New Mexico, Harris is knowledgeable about the oil and gas industry.

She has more than 10 years of management and marketing experience in the financial, medical, and manufacturing industries. Harris was instrumental in the start-up and maintenance of one of the largest consumer offerings in the game and toy industry.

The NWTITC is a state-supported agency, hosted by Texas Tech University, that promotes international trade opportunities for Texas companies.

The NWTITC has helped Texas businesses generate $151 million in export sales through market selection, research, financial counseling and matchmaking, since its inception in 1994. The NWTITC also assists foreign companies interested in locating suppliers.

The monthly breakfast is set for 7-8:30 a.m., Tuesday, Nov. 21 in the Roadrunner Room of the Scharbauer Student Center. From 7-7:30 a.m. early arrivals meet and distribute brochures and business cards.

The breakfasts are designed to put vendors in touch with buyers. Purchasing agents can attend and list upcoming bid items and other products and services they need.

Breakfast is served at 7:30, and attendees are given 30 seconds to introduce themselves and talk about their business.

The monthly Networking Breakfasts are sponsored by the Midland College Business and Economic Development Center, the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, the Midland Hispanic Chamber, the Citizens Coalition, the UTPB Small Business Development Center and the Better Business Bureau.

Cost is $5 at the door, and the public is invited. For more information, call 684-4100 or contact Ralph Smith at rsmith@midland.cc.tx. us.

It'll be tough to top 'Too Close to Call' multi-network sitcom

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — As we continue to sort out Election Year 2000, another task lies on the horizon.

This is a mission much larger than figuring out who we chose as our next president. We've got to look beyond that. We've got to get cracking on Campaign 2004.

The challenge will be great. This go-around, after months of apathy from the voters, after months of studied blandness from the major-party candidates, after months of restlessness from the media, election night erupted, no, not with a new president, but with an entertainment free-for-all.

Without warning, viewers were treated to plot twists! Conflicts! Mystery! False leads! Highly paid anchors with egg on their face! Even odd new terms like "butterfly ballot" and "hanging chad"! Who needs "Madigan Men" and "Freakylinks"? The networks' coverage of this presidential whowonit has been the best fall programming in years!

To give credit where it's due, we voters played a pivotal role by finessing that cliffhanger between Gov. George W. Bush and Vice President Al Gore. Then the newscasters, bless 'em, whipped suspense into vaudeville when they called the election for Bush — then, stunningly, un-called it.

But the fun can't last forever. Like other fresh, kookie fare gone stale ("Ally McBeal" comes to mind), the multi-network sitcom "Too Close to Call" is beginning to grate. Too many complications. Not enough action. And a much too dragged-out ending.

Even so, the bar is set sky-high for future campaigns. How will we ever top ourselves next time?

One way is with a different breed of presidential candidate. This year, the virtue of Gore and Bush as statesmen or pols was beside the point. In the area that really counts for most of us — their stature as entertainers — they clearly proved lacking.

This was particularly vivid in a year when not only were TV humorists poking fun at the candidates, but also, more than ever before, the candidates themselves got into the act.

In a joint TV appearance that was widely covered and repeatedly excerpted by news outlets, Bush and Gore lent their skills at self-parody to "Saturday Night Live" in a 90-second sketch seen by five times more viewers than their 30-minute solo, noncomedic sessions on Fox a week earlier.

On "SNL's Presidential Bash 2000," Bush poked fun at his alleged sense of entitlement ("my father was president," he bragged) and at his penchant for mangling language (he described the comedy of "SNL" as "offensible").

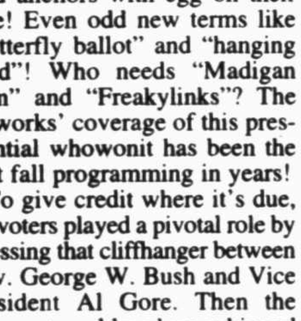

Overhearing Bush, Gore spoofed his own know-it-all image by letting out a long, impatient sigh — the sort of sigh for which he was criticized in the first presidential debate — and by boasting, "I was one of the very FIRST to be offended by material on 'Saturday Night Live.'"

It was a shrewd strategy for both men. They came off looking like good sports and clued-in, besides. They were in on the joke, even when the joke was on them.

Bush and Gore understood how, in the life cycle of campaign rhetoric, a carefully crafted concept like "fuzzy math" or "lock box" would be introduced in all seriousness by a candidate. Then, with blinding speed, TV's jesters would turn it into a punch line.

But understanding doesn't guarantee adroitness. Why continue to accept our candidates from the world of politics, then expect them to remake themselves into world-class entertainers? For the 2004 presidential race, why not make things easy and nominate seasoned comedians?

Now what this country lacks are bold new real-life programs. In 2004, we need wisecracks as great as the American people. And we need a great leader to deliver them.

PERMIAN BASIN
OIL & GAS REPORT

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 2000 SERVING WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

EOG employees make inspections at a gas plant in Panola County. Natural gas processing is a vital part of the Texas economy.

Gas processing has major impact on Basin

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

The Permian Basin, because it is one of the most mature oil and gas producing areas in the U.S., has a well-defined gas processing infrastructure that plays a very significant role in the economies of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico.

One of the largest gas processing provinces in the U.S., the 78 gas plants in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico process approximately 7 billion cubic feet daily of natural gas, yet the industry sector seldom gets the credit it deserves for adding value, jobs and revenue to the local producing area.

Gas processors say processing adds approximately 25 percent value to the gas stream. If that is the case, 7 billion cubic feet in today's $5 gas market would add about $35 million per day to the local economies of West Texas and New Mexico.

Enough value to create thousands of jobs for building and maintaining the high cost Permian Basin infrastructure, say processors. Included are jobs in pipeline construction, repairs, and monitoring; compressor sales, rentals and maintenance; gas plant construction, maintenance and operations, plus hundreds more in flow monitoring, accounting and administration. Duke Energy Field Services, the largest processor in the Basin, employs a total of 560.

Perhaps the reason many do not see gas processing as a major revenue contributor and employer is that many still view natural gas processing simply as a means to treat natural gas in order to clean and make it consistent in quality. To send natural gas down the line for residential use without removing the volatile liquids would have resulted in sputtering, popping and flashing at the burner tip.

Texas producers working to supply processors with gas

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Gas processors should have an abundance of raw material to work with in upcoming months, according to the Texas Railroad

According to filings with the Texas Railroad Commission, producers have become very active and that will mean more natural gas and casing head gas headed toward plants.

Texas oil and gas wells produced 459,654,908 Mcf of gas in August, based on preliminary figures, up from the August 1999 preliminary gas production total of 444,881,084 Mcf.

The state's preliminary crude oil production for August averaged 1,060,711 barrels daily, down from 1,068,346 averaged daily in August 1999. The preliminary crude production figure for August is 32,882,041 barrels, down from 33,118,732 barrels produced last August.

Texas oil and natural gas production came from 148,793 oil and 54,410 gas wells.

Permian Basin counties comprised the commission's top ten producing counties in August. Gaines County led crude production, with 2,759,789 barrels produced in August, followed by Yoakum with 2,258,475 barrels and Andrews with 2,198,269 barrels.

Other counties include Hockley, 1,932,467 barrels, Ector with 1,769,879 barrels, Pecos with 1,072,054 barrels, Upton with 1,020,856 barrels, Crane with 926,503 barrels, Midland with 880,165 barrels and Scurry with 625,334 barrels.

South and East Texas dominated the list of top ten gas producing counties, but two Permian Basin counties made the list: Pecos County with 20,661,681 Mcf and Crockett with 9,822,360 Mcf produced in August.

More supplies could be headed for natural gas processors, as the commission issued a total of 1,147 drilling permits in October, up from 874 in October 1999. The commission has issued a total of 10,008 permits this year, up from 6,742 in the first 10 months of 1999. The October total included 869 permits to drill new oil and gas wells, 55 to reenter existing well bores and 223 for recompletions. The permits also included 287 oil, 281 gas, 541 oil and gas, 29 injection and nine other permits.

Operators reported 298 oil, 429 gas, 29 injection and one other completion in October, up sharply from 167 oil, 414 gas, 15 injection and two other completions in October last year.

So far this year, operators have completed 6,641 wells, up from 4,768 in the same period of 1999.

Patterson agrees to buy Jones Drilling assets

SNYDER, Texas — Patterson Energy, Inc. and Jones Drilling Corp. and its affiliates Henderson Welding, Inc., L.E.J. Truck and Crane, Inc. and LE Jones Drilling Company, executed an agreement in principle whereby Patterson would acquire the Jones Entities or their assets.

The assets consist primarily of 21 drilling rigs (of which 14 are currently operable, one is expected to be operable by the end of the year and six will require additional capital expenditure), fleet of rig moving trucks, drilling facilities, shops and equipment yards in Duncan, Oklahoma and Bridgeport, Texas. The drilling rigs range from 450 to 1,000 horsepower with drilling capacity ranging from 5,000 to 15,000 feet.

The Jones Entities conduct operations primarily in southern Oklahoma, the Permian Basin of West Texas and Eastern New Mexico and the Barnett Shale area of North Central Texas. The purchase price of $36.2 million will consist of 810,070 shares of Patterson's common stock and $14.5 million cash. Consummation of the acquisition is subject to, among other matters, the execution of a mutually agreeable definitive agreement expected to be executed in early to mid-December 2000 and expiration of the waiting period under the Hart-Scott-Rodino antitrust improvements act of 1976.

The six non-operable drilling rigs require certain capital expenditures, including drill pipe for each of the rigs. Patterson estimates these expenditures will approximate $4 million to $6 million. Refurbishment of the six rigs is expected to be completed at various times during fiscal 2001.

LaWayne Jones, founder of Jones Drilling, stated: "Joining forces with Patterson represents a great opportunity for our company and our employees that will carry forward our commitment to providing service to our customers. We are proud of what we have accomplished in our markets over the past 45 years, and we look forward to the benefits of joining with a market leader of the caliber of Patterson. We are particularly pleased that Patterson intends to continue to supervise drilling operations in Oklahoma from our offices in Duncan." Jones Drilling is represented in the transaction by the Dallas office of the investment banking firm, Dain Rauscher Wessels.

IMPACT: Area has best developed infrastructure

(From 1)

Today, however, gas processing has become an industry in its own — a vast system that removes natural gas liquids such as propane and ethane from the gas stream for sale to fuel and petrochemical markets.

Some natural gas liquids dropped out of Permian Basin gas streams are sold to Huntsman Corp. in Odessa, to create even more Permian Basin jobs. But much more is sent to the Mont Belvieu hub near Houston for use in Gulf Coast petrochemical operations.

Consolidation has been rampant. The Crane, North Cowden, Midland Farms, the Foster plant in West Odessa, the Imperial and Santa Rosa have all closed.

But the Permian Basin still has one of the largest and best developed gas processing infrastructures in the U.S. There are 58 gas plants in the Texas Permian Basin, 17 of which have capacity of over 100 Mmcfd, with a total capacity of 4.2 billion cubic feet per day or approximately 25 percent of the total Texas capacity of 16.8 billion cubic feet daily.

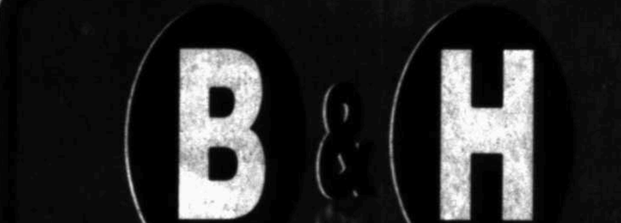

The plants range in size from 1.5 Mmcfd for the Allen Hill plant in Tom Green County to 250 Mmcfd for the Block 31 plant in Crane County. Only Louisiana, Michigan, Alaska and the rest of Texas have more processing capacity than the Texas Permian Basin.

In Southeast New Mexico 20 plants account for 1.38 billion cubic feet per day, about half of the total New Mexico capacity of 2.8 billion. Interestingly, 1.1 billion comes from only two San Juan County plants — the San Juan, which has a capacity of 500 Mmcfd, and the Chaco plant with 600 MMcfd.

Combined Texas-New Mexico Permian Basin capacity is 7 billion. Only Alaska, Louisiana and the rest of Texas exceed the Permian Basin in gas processing capacity.

WTG Gas Processing buys Texaco interests in natural gas plants

From Staff Reports

WTG Gas Processing, L. P., a Midland, Texas-based Limited Partnership, has acquired the interests of Texaco Exploration and Production Inc. in three West Texas natural gas processing plants.

WTG Gas Processing, L. P. announced this week that it acquired a 90.56 percent interest in the East Vealmoor Gas Plant located in northeast Howard County, Texas near Big Spring, and a 97.81 percent interest in the Fuller Gas Plant located north of Snyder, Texas in Scurry County, and a 15.89 percent interest in the Torch Energy Marketing-operated Snyder Gas Plant located just west of Snyder, Texas.

The East Vealmoor and Fuller Plants are now operated by WTG Gas Processing L. P., according to J.L. Davis, president of Vealmoor GP, Inc., its general partner. The plants have extensive low pressure gathering systems in close proximity to each other, covering various portions of Howard, Borden, Dawson, Martin, Scurry, Kent, and Mitchell Counties. Total natural gas gathered by the two operated gas plants approximates 24,000 Mcfd, producing approximately 260,000 gallons per day of plant products in total.

The Torch operated Snyder Plant handles approximately 14,000 MCFD of non-CO2 laden gas, and produces approximately 180,000 gallons per day of plant products,total.

Davis stated, "The purchase of these strategic gas plant interests complements the gas plant and other activities of other owned entities, specifically West Texas Gas, Inc. (motor fuel, propane, and natural gas distribution), and Davis Gas Processing (various gas plants at locations near Post, Roby, Big Lake, McCamey, and other West Texas and New Mexico locations). The purchase of these interests was timely due to the decline in gas available to process at our other plants because of a lack of drilling in recent years. The purchase allows us to utilize our existing assets to good advantage."

TMBR/Sharp has income of $1.6 million

TMBR/Sharp Drilling, Inc. has reported net income of $1.6 million, or 33 cents per basic share, on revenues of $9.5 million for the second quarter, compared to a loss of $248,000, or 5 cents per share, on revenues of $4.2 million for the comparable quarter of last fiscal year.

For the six months ended September 30, 2000, the drilling company reported net income of $2.7 million, or 55 cents per share compared to a loss of $1.0 million, or 21 cents per share, in the year-earlier period. Revenues more than doubled to $17.8 million from $6.4 million.

Thomas C. Brown, Chairman of the Board, said higher drilling rates on the heels of higher oil and gas prices were driving the performance. He said rig utilization rates, which more than doubled to 67% in the previous quarter.

Shell invests $300 million in Chinese offshore company to enter Asian market

BEIJING (Bloomberg) — The Royal Dutch/Shell Group, the world's No. 2 publicly traded oil company, agreed to invest as much as $300 million in China National Offshore Oil Corp. and jointly develop oil and gas projects to increase its sales in Asia's fastest growing energy market.

Shell will buy 20 percent of the shares CNOOC, China's third-largest oil company and the top offshore oil producer, plans to sell in Hong Kong and New York next February.

The agreement leaves Shell well-placed to increase sales in an oil market likely to surpass Japan as Asia's biggest within 10 years. Exxon Mobil Corp. and BP Amoco Plc, Shell's two biggest rivals, have also invested in China as it opens its oil market before joining the World Trade Organization.

The agreement would also help hasten the pace at which Shell develops its joint venture project with CNOOC to build a $4 billion, 800,000 ton-a-year petrochemical plant in the southern province of Guangdong, analysts said.

In September, Shell bought a $403 million stake in China's largest refiner, China Petroleum & Chemical Company, or Sinopec.

China will likely see oil demand grow 4.7 percent a year between now and 2010, analysts said. China uses 4.4 million barrels of crude oil a day.

"CNOOC is one of China's three major oil and gas companies with an important role to play in supplying China's future energy needs and helping fuel its economic growth," said Tan Ek Kia, chairman of Shell Companies in North East Asia.

With Shell onboard, investment in CNOOC's share offer now totals about $770 million. Hutchison Whampoa Ltd., Hong Kong Electric Holdings Ltd., the Singapore Government Investment Corp., American International Group Inc., American International Assurance and CGU-CDC China Capital Partners have already agreed to buy a total of $470 million of the shares.

Under the alliance contract, Shell and CNOOC will search for oil and gas in Bohai Bay, off northeastern China. They will also develop gas fields in the Xihu Trough of the East China Sea.

Shell and CNOOC will conduct studies to build a gas pipeline linking major cities and provinces such as Shanghai and Guangdong on China's prosperous east coast.

"The oil and gas field in Bohai Bay and the gas reserves in the East China Sea have significant development potential," said Wei Liucheng, CNOOC's president. "We believe the strategic alliance will strengthen this relationship."

FERC action disappoints pipeline customers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Pipeline Transportation Customer Coalition (PTCC), a broad group of pipeline customers, registered concerns with Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) chairman James Hoecker about the way pipelines are attempting to implement Order 637.

In an October 31 letter to Chairman Hoecker, the PTCC said many pipelines are interpreting Order 637 to mean they can propose a tariff structure and operational changes that are more costly to customers. Such changes are not in the spirit of Order 637, which is designed to develop a more fluid and competitive interstate grid with fewer impediments to doing business on interstate pipelines.

"We are disappointed by these developments and strongly urge the Commission to hew to the course it established in Order No. 637 for evaluating pipeline penalties..., and other mechanisms that restrict operational flexibility." Order 637, requires interstate natural gas pipelines to increase operational flexibility and decrease reliance on penalties. PTCC believes there is widespread support for this structure among natural gas shippers.

PTCC is comprised of the American Forest & Paper Association, the American Iron and Steel Institute, the American Public Gas Association, the Domestic Petroleum Council, Dynegy Marketing and Trade, the Georgia Industrial Group, the Independent Petroleum Association of America, the Natural Gas Supply Association, and the Process Gas Consumers Group.

Pipeline infrastructure critical to processing

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

In May, Bob Phillips, president, El Paso Field Services Co., posed several challenges to the Texas Railroad Commission at its State of the Industry Hearing. Chief among the challenges was how to deal with the growing resentment of the public towards pipelines.

Phillips said the Texas natural gas industry now stands poised at the brink of its most productive future, but will first have to meet the challenge of expanding natural gas production and the natural gas infrastructure. But that was before pipeline tragedies in Carlsbad and Abilene and the glare of publicity on the Longhorn Partners Pipeline. Now the second challenge appears to have become distinctly more difficult than the first.

Said Phillips: "Pipelines must expand the infrastructure to accommodate increased production and insure adequate deliverability. These pipelines will be critically important to support the necessary new production, as they are the only viable way to move our product to the marketplace."

But, even before Carlsbad and Abilene, the executive recognized pipeline expansion might be a problem.

He said "Several important issues must be resolved prior to any significant expansion of the pipeline infrastructure," pointing out that the pipeline industry, particularly the lines which carry hazardous liquids, had recently come under a great deal of criticism and scrutiny, because of a general resistance to new pipeline projects and the rallying cry NIMBY — Not in My Backyard.

Nowhere has the NIMBY cry been more vocal or publicized than over the Longhorn Pipeline, which became a target for competitors, environmentalists and concerned citizen Because of ongoing claims and scrutiny, what should have been a three to four month review of the project extended to 18 months, and was passed only after Longhorn partners agreed to mediation measures beyond reasonable requirements. When finalized the Longhorn pipeline will carry refined products (gasoline and diesel) from Houston to landlocked western markets.

Phillips said that it is essential to get products to markets, but it is virtually impossible to reach market areas without being close to someone's "backyard." He also pointed out that in many cases, pipelines were built and were operating safely long before neighborhoods and commercial development moved in. The executive said the decision by natural gas companies to build, as well as actual construction projects have been slowed by pipeline criticism.

Phillips told the Texas Railroad Commission that: "Irresponsible and unauthorized encroachment by third parties is a growing problem, especially in metropolitan areas. Lawmakers and regulators should take a firm stand to prevent encroachment and preserve the safety of pipeline systems. Pipeline safety is always a paramount concern, and that is best achieved with the enforcement of uniform safety standards and consistent, predictable permitting processes."

Workmen prepare a pipeline pig. Building and maintaining a safe and viable pipeline infrastructure may be a challenge in light of recent pipeline mishaps and the possibility of stricter maintenance and safety rules.

File photo

It is essential to get products to markets, but it is virtually impossible to reach market areas without being close to someone's backyard.

Bob Phillips, president
El Paso Field Services

He recommended to the commissioners that if Texas is to capture its share of the new market growth, legislators, regulators, the natural gas industry, and landowners must develop mechanisms that promote the timely and economic construction of new pipelines in a safe and environmentally responsible manner.

He also recommended incentives to allow investors to a reasonable rate of return for funding facility expansion. "Otherwise capital will be difficult to attract."

Further, "increased activity in power generation will necessitate different levels of gas transportation service. Flexibility in service and rate design will be key to accommodating the needs of the growing power industry in Texas."

Since many pipeline projects serve more than one purpose, he said, there must be reasonable regulatory accommodation for the appropriate recovery of costs from the different customers who use and benefit from such projects. "Please bear in mind that if rates of return are not fair and reasonable, proposed new facilities will remain on the drawing boards. We believe it is the responsibility of the regulatory body to work with industry to insure reliable sources of supply and transportation through reasonable rates and flexible services."

Finally, he said "Texas intrastate pipelines are part of the national gas market. Not only do the intrastates compete with each other, they compete with the interstate pipelines and alternate fuels as well. Intrastate pipelines often serve huge swing loads for customers that have fuel switching capabilities, and will switch to alternative fuels based on price. The Railroad Commission's regulatory policies should remain consistent with a competitive national marketplace, or the Texas intrastate pipelines will be put at a disadvantage."

The prime fear of the industry at the field level, however, is that a host of mishaps and growing opposition will translate to unreasonable regulations that will retard construction of gathering systems and even plants. "We can only hope that unreasonable regulations are not imposed on gathering systems," said Jim Henry, former PBPA president.

A rig works in sight of downtown Midland. Basin gas processors say that every processing facility must be backed by an active drilling program.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

In a mature area such as the Permian Basin, where fields decline at the rate of 10-20 percent per year, every natural gas plant must be backed by a solid drilling program to maintain volumes.

"It is either increase drilling or keep on reaching out further and further for gas volumes," said Ron Barcroft, Duke Energy. "There is a limit, however, as to how far out you can reach."

Meanwhile, remote areas are not seeing a real boom in oil-well drilling because waterflood and CO2 projects contaminate gas. "The only thing that helps in the old fields is new drilling for oil wells, and fresh casinghead gas," said one operator.

Thanks to high oil and gas prices, gas processing plants in the Basin could get substantial help in building gas volume over the next couple of years. That's because it has now become about as economical for oil companies to grow through the drill bit, as by acquisition and because there is a definite preference for natural gas, as operators sense a long term high trend for gas prices.

When Westwin Energy launched its operations last month, President Keith Weiser noted that the strategy of the company would be to grow with the drill bit and select acquisitions only as they make economic sense. After a cash infusion from financial partner Enron North America, the new Midland oil company is now engaged upon a 100 well drilling program.

Gas-dominated drilling may also get a boost from Duke Energy Field Services. The largest gas processor in the Basin has developed its own financial group and program to stimulate drilling. While the finance arm seldom gets involved in wildcatting, it is active in financing infill and development drilling.

"We steer away from being producers," said Barcroft, "but we will partner up with operators to get new wells drilled. About all we ask is that they dedicate the gas to our system." He said operators can pay back the loans with cash or inkind gas payments.

Also supporting the possibility that drilling activity in the Basin is poised for an increase is an industry report that links that possibility to extraordinarily low levels in the acquisition and divestiture market. The Cornerstone Quarterly Reserve Report, which tracks oil and gas acquisition and divestiture activity, says reserve values are still high, but the number of transactions hit a record low in the third quarter of this year, and that creates a climate conducive to growing by drill bit.

Underlying the high value-low A&D activity climate, says Cornerstone is "a convergence of dramatically reduced pressure to sell properties, and a reluctance of buyers to jump into the market." The higher price expectations make it difficult for new oil companies looking to get a start with acquisitions, leaving the drill bit as the logical option.

For only the fourth time since 1994, the median value of oil and gas reserves traded in the third quarter broke the $5 barrier; however, only 26 deals were finaled in the third quarter of 2000, down 47 percent from the second quarter. The previous low for transactions was 42 deals in the third quarter of 1997.

Said one Midland operator: "This is not a good time to acquire assets, because operators seem convinced that higher prices will likely prevail. They are not anxious to sell profitable assets, especially assets that are paying down bank debt at a rate never seen before. With a high dollar on assets, the drill bit looks very attractive for growth." That climate, say insiders, will be good for gas processing in the Permian Basin, that more development and infill drilling will result in additional gas capacity for area plants.

Another factor that is likely to increase capacity is a definite leaning of operators toward natural gas. According to the Cornerstone Report, 81 percent of the deals finaled in the third quarter were gas-dominated transactions in which gas accounts for 50 percent of Barrels of Oil Equivalent, while gas reserves accounted for 61.5 percent of total BOEs traded. This is a 24.2 percent jump over the second quarter 2000.

Among the large gas-dominated transactions were Anadarko's $11.9 purchase of Union Pacific Resources, and BP Amoco's purchase of Vastar, Arco's gas unit. The purchase of Union Pacific included 3.291 Tcf of gas reserves and made Anadarko the fifth largest owner of gas reserves.

In other significant gas deals, Devon acquired 1.1 Tcf with the Santa Fe Snyder merger. Chesapeake's purchase of Gothic Energy Corp. involved 297.6 Bcf, and Vastar Resources brought 2.651 Tcf of reserves.

Gas processors are keeping fingers crossed that as operators make 2001 budget plans they will lean on the drill bit and lean toward natural gas.

Duke Energy names Energy Services CFO

HOUSTON — Duke Energy announced that its Energy Services unit has appointed Kirk B. Michael vice president and chief financial officer, finance and planning. Most recently, Michael was vice president of planning and finance for Energy Services.

Michael will be responsible for evaluating existing and new business opportunities against strategic objectives and operating goals, while focusing on business planning and reporting, financial planning and the capital investment program. Also, he supports investor relations. He is based in Houston.

Energy Services is composed of Duke Energy North America, Duke Energy International, Duke Energy Merchants, Duke Engineering & Services, Duke/Fluor Daniel and DukeSolutions.

Previously, Michael was director of business unit finance, where he was accountable for project financing of power plant projects and natural gas pipelines. He began his career with the company in 1980 as a project coordinator for Panhandle Eastern Corp. in Houston, where he held various positions of increasing responsibility, principally in the areas of project development and finance. Prior to joining the company, Michael served in a variety of operational and managerial roles for Houston Lighting & Power and held engineering and operating roles as a nuclear submarine officer in the U.S. Navy.

Southwestern Energy tests Louisiana strike

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Southwestern Energy Co. announced the initial flow test of the Robertson 1 well on its Havilah prospect in Lafayette Parish, Louisiana.

The well tested at a daily rate of 7.0 million cubic feet of gas and 245 barrels of condensate from the Nodosaria formation at a depth of approximately 14,500 feet. The well is currently shut-in pending construction of production facilities. Initial production is expected near the end of the year.

Southwestern Energy is the operator of the well and holds a 27.5 percent working interest. Other working interest partners in the well are BTA Oil Producers, Edge Petroleum and Seneca Resources Corp., a subsidiary of National Fuel Gas Company.

"The Robertson 1 well now puts our success rate at three out of four exploration wells in south Louisiana and is solid evidence that our exploration program is working," stated Harold M. Korell, President and Chief Executive Officer of Southwestern Energy. "Our exploration program is continuing to gain momentum and is a testimony to the hard work of our people. Looking ahead to 2001, we continue to be excited about the opportunities we have to create value through the drillbit."

Southwestern Energy Company is an integrated natural gas company whose wholly-owned subsidiaries are engaged in gas and oil exploration and production, natural gas gathering, transmission, and marketing, and natural gas distribution.

AUTO-CYCLE™ Plus
Production Automation System
Plunger Lift Systems & Controls

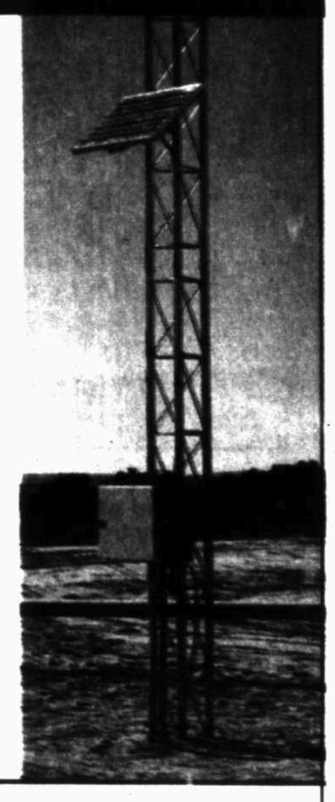

Auto-Cycle™ Plus provides access and control to any well site location, any time.

After 20 years of helping producers make gas wells flow more efficiently, Ferguson Beauregard offers an innovative solution to the age-old problem of plunger lift control.

Introducing the Auto-Cycle™ Plus Production Automation System.

This system combines our most advanced Liquilift® electronic plunger lift controller and Windows-based operator interface software for laptop or desktop PC. Automating numerous functions, the controller records the analytical reservoir information so production problems can be diagnosed with greater accuracy and efficiency. Data presentation is provided by the PC software in format that is simple to use and easy to configure, using hardware that is high in reliability and low in cost.

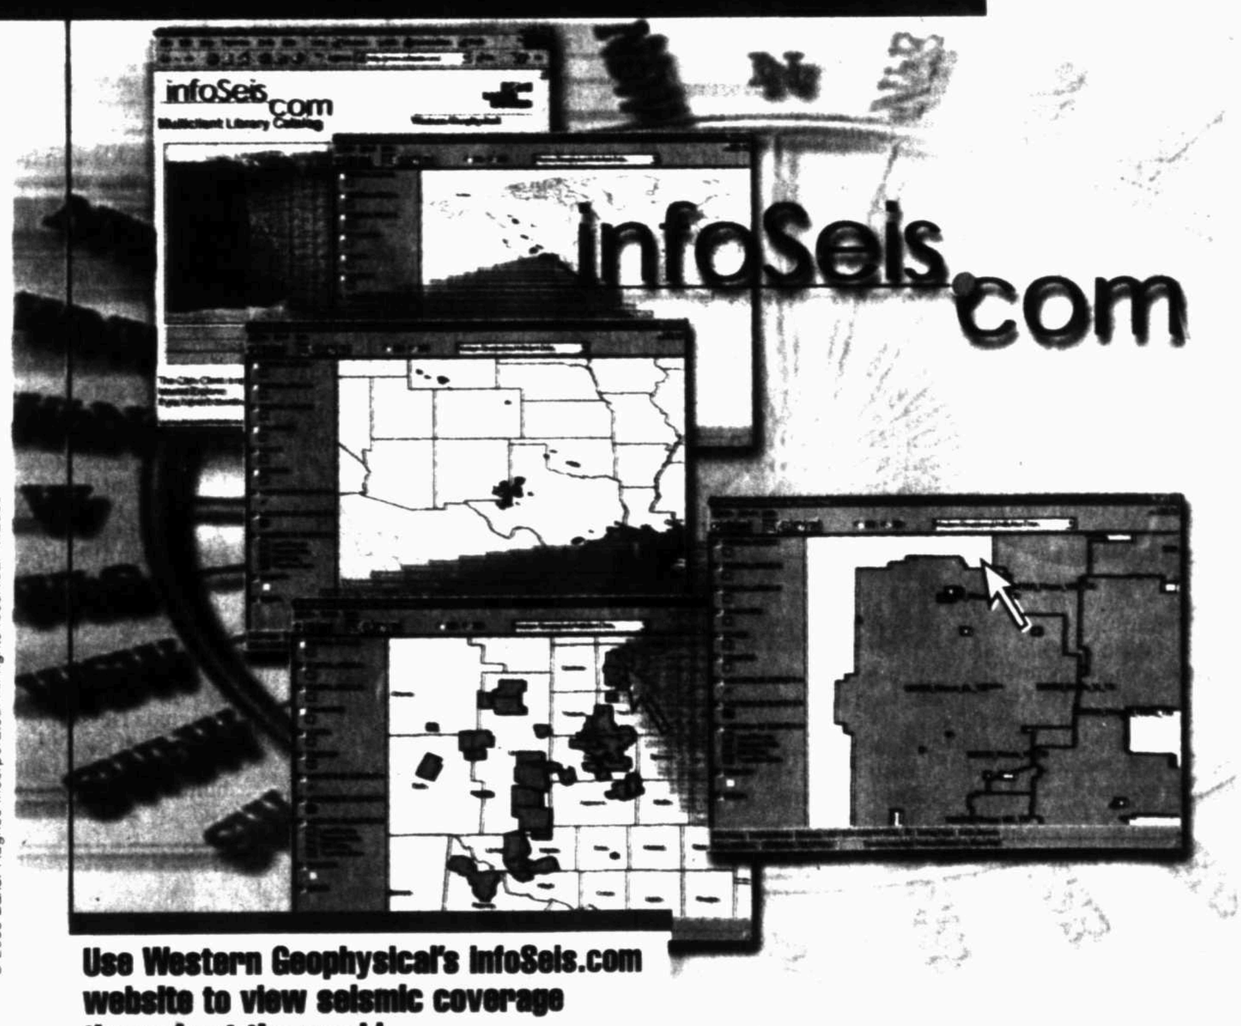

The Auto Cycle™ Plus combination of Liquilift controller and "host" PC platforms offers operational benefits and system versatility unmatched by any other production automation system on the market today.

Higher gas prices, activity strain processing facilities

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Increased oil and gas activity could result in the need to build more processing or gathering systems.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Higher natural gas production brought about by $5 gas prices, increased development and drilling is putting a strain on gas processing facilities in some areas of the Permian Basin, says an industry spokesman.

"Our biggest problem is constantly trying to determine how to handle all the gas," said Ron Barcroft, Duke Energy Field Services, the largest gas processor in the Basin. "In some areas we are fine, but in other areas we are stretching capacity to the limit." He said the company was continually building line and "looping" to stay ahead of the game. Looping is the laying of parallel pipelines in the same right of way to increase pipeline capacity.

Continued natural gas development, he said, could cause Basin processors to begin looking at the possibility of either adding new gathering systems to get gas to plants where there is spare capacity, or to add capacity by building new plants.

Barcroft attributes the increased gas capacity in the Basin not only to increased drilling but the addition of more marginal gas and sour gas into the market. He said processors must now gear up not only for added capacity but more marginal gas and sour gas, which requires more in handling.

> "Our biggest problem is constantly trying to determine how to handle all the gas."
> Ron Barcroft, Duke Energy Field Services

He said the long term view is for higher and stable gas prices. And if gas prices do hold, some gas fields with high CO2 content, such as Terrell and Gaines counties, will probably open up and support additional drilling around existing plants.

"It is all a function of price," said Barcroft. "If you have a gas that is 50 percent CO2, and gas prices are $2, that means each Mcf yields only $1 of gas. Subtract 30-40 cents for processing and it gets uneconomical very quickly. But when gas is selling for $4-$5, high CO2 gas quickly can become economical, and perhaps even support drilling."

Natural gas liquids track oil prices and for processors, the ideal market situation is high liquids prices and low gas prices. "But that is not always the best situation," said Barcroft. "When gas prices are low you don't get the drilling, and drilling is essential to keep gas plants going." He said very hot gas drilling areas such as Lea and Eddy counties, where a number of operator have very active programs could be one of the first areas to see new plant capacity added. Higher gas prices are working out well for gas processors and producers.

Barcroft expects gas prices to remain relatively high because of demand, and doesn't expect Canadian gas will drive the market down. "Even if Canadian gas comes in we will still have a short supply. We are at a place where we are extremely high on consumption. and short of reserves." He said the biggest problems facing natural gas development are too many drilling regulations and areas closed to drilling.

Senator: Spend more oil profits

New York (Bloomberg) -- Exxon Mobil Corp., the world's biggest publicly traded oil company, should put more of its record profits toward boosting oil and natural-gas production, U.S. Senator Charles Schumer said.

Exxon Mobil posted profit from operations of $4.29 billion in the third quarter, the largest quarterly profit ever recorded by a publicly traded company.

"One would expect that after enjoying record earnings, Exxon Mobil would increase its investment in exploration and drilling new wells," Schumer, a New York Democrat, wrote in a Nov. 2 letter to Chairman and Chief Executive Lee Raymond.

While oil companies have argued for years that low energy prices deterred them from drilling, "this is no longer the case," Schumer added. He has warned that heating oil supplies might run scarce this winter and campaigned for the release of extra oil from government reserves.

Exxon Mobil spokeswoman Suzanne McCarron said the company's exploration spending for the year's first nine months fell 24 percent to $4.91 billion. It has increased output by about 3.5 percent, though, after completing construction on projects in the Gulf of Mexico, Canada.

Alaska fields very, very good to Phillips

Bartlesville (Bloomberg) -- Phillips Petroleum Co. shares have soared 53 percent since mid-March, when the company agreed to buy Atlantic Richfield Co.'s Alaskan oilfields for $7 billion.

The rise dwarfs the seven-month gains of 8 percent to 12 percent, on average, for Exxon Mobil Corp., Texaco Inc., Conoco Inc. and Phillips's other oil-industry rivals.

The Alaskan fields almost doubled Phillips's oil reserves to 4.1 billion barrels and gave the company a stake in the huge Prudhoe Bay natural-gas field. Since March, U.S. oil prices have averaged more than $30 a barrel, 50 percent above the average during the past decade, and gas prices have reached record highs.

Phillips expects its oil production to rise 50 percent this year and another 17 percent next year, with most of the increase coming from Alaska.

Phillips's third-quarter profit more than doubled to $505 million, or $1.96 a share, from $221 million, or 87 cents, a year earlier. Oil output more than doubled.

Phillips completed the Alaska purchase in April. The company's reserves now exceed the 2.55 billion barrels held by Conoco, the fourth-largest U.S. oil company by 1999 revenue. Phillips is No. 6.

The fields were on the market because the U.S. Federal Trade Commission had ruled Arco must sell its Arco Alaska unit before merging with BP Amoco Plc, also a large Alaskan oil producer.

While Alaskan natural gas is now "stranded" because there's no pipeline to move it south, the higher prices have revived proposals to build a line toward U.S. markets. Phillips wants to start gas shipments by 2007.

Besides Alaska, Phillips has major exploration projects in Venezuela, Australia and China. The company owns three U.S. refineries and sells gasoline through 5,600 Phillips 66 outlets in 28 states. It had $13.9 billion in revenue last year.

Phillips shares rose 4.2 percent the week of March 13, when the company announced the purchase of the Alaskan fields.

Investors didn't warm up to the Alaskan purchase right away because of the almost $6.5 billion in debt Phillips took on, analysts say. Also, oil prices slipped to $24 a barrel in late April from $31 in mid-March, adding to concern that Phillips may have bitten off more than it could chew.

Nymex crude oil has averaged $30.36 a barrel since then, easing concern. For oil companies, when prices rise above what it costs to find, extract and ship the sludge -- usually $10 to $15 or so -- every dollar goes right to earnings.

Phillips expects to reduce its debt as a percentage of capital to about 55 percent by year-end, from 59 percent in June and 57 percent in September, said spokeswoman Kristi DesJarlais.

The company is expected to earn $2.15 a share in the fourth quarter, the average estimate of analysts polled by First Call/Thomson Financial. A year earlier, Phillips made $215 million, or 84 cents.

For the year, Phillips is expected to make a record $6.87 a share, according to First Call. Individual estimates for 2001 are as high as $8.05.

Analysts say Phillips stock has risen along with investors' confidence in Chief Executive James Mulva, who succeeded Wayne Allen in July 1999.

Phillips put its natural-gas processing unit into a joint venture with Duke Energy Corp. in April, and combined its chemicals business with Chevron Corp.'s in June. Phillips received $1.2 billion from the gas venture and $800 million from the chemical alliance, both of which freed Phillips's management to focus on oil and gas exploration.

The Bartlesville, Oklahoma-based company plans to put its refining and gasoline-station network into a joint venture in a year or so, after making improvements at its largest refinery.

Phillips's recent successes aren't entirely Mulva's doing, analysts note. The joint ventures were on the drawing board when he took over, and he had nothing to do with the FTC forcing Arco to sell its Alaskan fields, or with soaring oil and gas prices.

Phillips's shares gained just 6.2 percent from 1997 through 1999, as low oil prices cut profit. In those three years, the Standard & Poor's 500 almost doubled.

Since March 1, Phillips is up 60 percent while the S&P 500 has risen less than 1 percent. The company's stock performance is in the top tenth of the index.

Phillips shares now trade at about 11 times annual earnings, higher than the ratios for rivals Conoco and USX-Marathon Group, which each had more revenue than Phillips last year. Conoco's price-to-earnings ratio is 9.3, while Marathon's is 7.7.

Since March, Phillips's stock surge has boosted its market value by more than $5 billion, equal to the market value of rival Amerada Hess Corp., which had revenue of $7 billion last year. Phillips is now valued at $15.6 billion, almost the same as Conoco.

Seismic data with or without a few wireline logs are often the only materials available for study when making crucial decisions about exploration or development programs. This commonly leads to "scientific successes" but economic failures because reservoir rock properties or fluid flow characteristics (or both) are different than expected. This course focuses on reservoir rocks and how to read them. How to diagnose reservoirs that are influenced mainly by depositional, diagenetic, or fracture characteristics and how to recognize those genetic pore types in cores or rock samples. Once recognized in cores, the correspondence between core lithology and core analyses (porosity, permeability, and saturation) can be evaluated. Where capillary pressure data are available, the relationships between pore geometry and reservoir fluid behavior can be evaluated to map flow units. Finally, some rock types can be linked to log signatures to aid in mapping across zones where cores are not available.

Site Evaluations • Delineation • Remediation • Restoration • Regulatory Compliance & Closures

A sampling of contaminant must be identified and the parameters of contamination defined before starting a remediation project.

SITE ASSESSMENT SAMPLING AND LABORATORY ANALYSIS

Analytical methods used are determined by regulatory requirements. ALLSTATE SERVICES then uses this information, along with the general land characteristics and regulatory guidelines, to determine the most efficient and economical method of remediation.

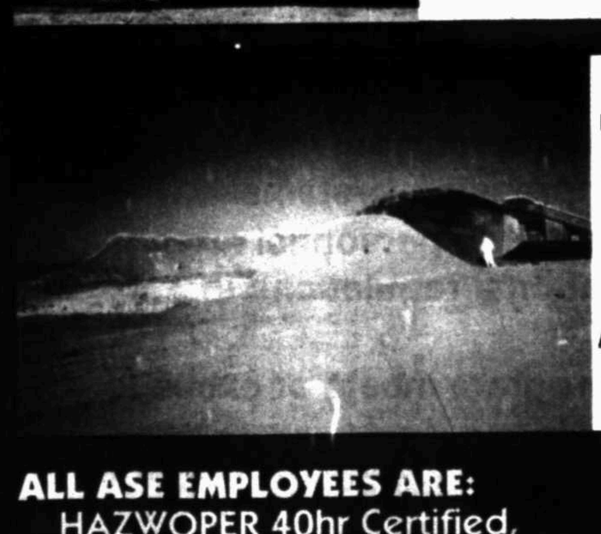

SOIL SHREDDING

Soil shredding is the physical pulverizing (particle-izing) and homogenization of contaminated soil. This particleization is accomplished utilizing specially engineered equipment to break the contaminated soil into fine particles. Rocks and other oversize debris are rejected into a separate pile. This process also oxygenates the soil, a very desirable feature.

ALLSTATE SERVICES pioneered and then refined this technology over the past five years and has incorporated several proprietary features into their unit.

ALLSTATE SERVICES has processed over 950,000 cubic yards of all types of soil through their shredder, in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

BIOREMEDIATION

Bioremediation involves using micoorganisms and their capacity to remove pollutants by biodegradation. These microbes can be indigenous or introduced. The byproducts of Bioremediation: water and carbon dioxide are nontoxic and have no harmful effects on the environment and living organisms. ALLSTATE SERVICES uses different vendors of microbes, each one with a specific usage application according to site characteristics, clients goals and limitations on time and space..

BIOREACTOR

ALLSTATE SERVICES also recommends Bioreactors as a remedial alternative. When time is a factor, Bioreactors work in conjunction with the bioremediation process. Using various combinations of water, nutrients and air, applied at different intervals during the day, Bioreactors can greatly accelerate the biodegradation process.

ALL ASE EMPLOYEES ARE:

SCBA/Respirator Certified

STABILIZATION/SOLIDIFICATION

The basic stabilization/solidification procedure involves mixing of a reagent with the soil, curing of the mixture, and disposition of the solidified soil.

The objective of this procedure is to reduce the classification from Hazardous Waste Material, requiring transfer to a hazardous waste landfill, to a Class Two Hazardous Waste Material, that can be disposed of in a municipal landfill or on site.

The next time you have an environmental remediation problem, call the pioneers. We offer site specific solutions for your site specific problems

Serving the environmental industry in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Alaska since 1993.

Timeless strategies for all market conditions

It may be tough to stay focused on investing when the markets are constantly changing. But in order to make the most of the money you invest, you should keep two words in mind—long-term. Trying to time your investing with short-term market news and events can be costly to your hard-earned money, not to mention time-consuming. Here are some timeless strategies to help you develop a long-term solid investment strategy.

1. Invest based on realistic returns. Stock market returns in recent years have been unusually high compared with long-term historic averages. From 1995 through 1999 the stock market (as measured by the S&P Composite) posted annual returns from 21.04 percent to 37.54 percent—a dramatic increase over the 80-year average annual returns from 1919 through 1999 of 11.1 percent. Keep in mind, past performance cannot guarantee future results.

Joe Fortner

2. Patiently accept volatility. The 11.1 percent market return is not a steady year-to-year number. It can vary greatly from year to year, with some years being in negative territory. During the past 80 years, the average variance of that average 11.1 percent return, called the standard deviation, was 20.65 percent for common stocks. Small-cap stocks, with an average annual return of 12.75 percent, have a standard deviation of 39.22 percent. What these numbers mean is that a common stock could fluctuate in value up to twice as much as its average return and a small-cap stock up to three times. For example, to potentially achieve a 15 percent return on small-cap stocks, you may have to tolerate a price fluctuation of up to 45 percent.

3. Think long-term. Volatility is part of investing. The more you understand the market, historical returns and volatility, the better prepared you are to invest. For example, if you look at the 25-year period from 1975 to 1999, in any given year your gains in small-cap stocks could have been more than 70 percent and your losses nearly 20 percent. With large-caps, you could have had about half that volatility. But the longer you held, the less volatility you could have had because your investments have the potential to "level out." Keep in mind past performance does not guarantee future results.

4. Stay in the market. For investors who try to "time the market," consider the following example: If you had invested $10,000 on January 1, 1987 and missed the best 40 market days of an 11-year trading period attempting to time the market, you would have lost out on a lot of money. By staying invested on all days during this period (including the notorious 1987 stock market crash), your $10,000 investment would have been worth $52,400, versus $19,280 if you had missed the 40 best days during this period. It's not market timing but time in the market that can bring about long-term success. This example is for illustrative purposes only and does not reflect the performance of any particular investment.

5. Diversify. Big investing bets with just one or two companies, industries or classes of investments may produce big returns but at a high risk. A more prudent strategy may be to spread your dollars across different investments or "asset classes" (stocks, bonds, cash and their respective subclasses) that perform differently under various market conditions.

As you determine your asset allocation, there are five major elements you should consider:

1. Your financial goals
2. Your current financial situation
3. Your ability to make future investments
4. Your tolerance for short-term market volatility
5. Your investing time frame.

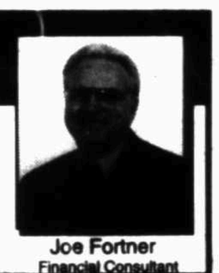

Your financial consultant can discuss with you how these strategies can best meet your needs and fulfill your investment objectives.

Why vent dollars to the atmosphere? Capture them with a HY-BON® Vapor Recovery System.

Greater Profit Potential

Examine the profit-making potential of a HY-BON® Vapor Recovery System from the sale of gas vapors recovered from your stock tanks. HY-BON® Vapor Recovery Systems are fully automatic and totally reliable, requiring minimum attention and maintenance. They come in a selection of sizes to cover most requirements.

These units are easily transported and the panel can be either skid mounted or mounted off-skid. Units can be rotary screw, rotary vane or reciprocating. They are engineered to resist corrosion caused by H_2S or CO_2.

The HY-BON® Vapor Recovery System meets environmental requirements for collection of emissions, including the Texas Railroad Commission's Rule 36 and NACE Rule MR-01-075.

Acquisition cost is low with systems often paying out in less than a month. Units can be rented, leased or purchased through our flexible, customer-oriented acquisition plan.
