Will German offer lead to pact?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan says West Germany's offer to dismantle its Pershing missiles removes an obstacle to a U.S.-Soviet arms control agreement, and a Soviet official said today the development does indicate "some movement" toward a pact.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl announced Wednesday that West Germany will eventually destroy its Pershing 1A missiles if the superpowers agree to scrap medium- and shorter-range nuclear weapons.

Reagan aides said the West German action will be subject to further consultation with the United States and other NATO allies. They said they had not been informed of a timetable for removal of the missiles.

"I think there is some movement," said Vitaliy Churkin, a staff member of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party.

"But of course it remains to be seen what the details of what the West Germans and Americans have in mind are," Churkin said in an interview from Chautauqua, N.Y., on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" today. "The details can be very important in arms control negotiations."

■ Reagan praises Kohl's decision on missiles — 2A

A senior administration official said the White House was alerted to Kohl's announcement a day in advance — first by a telephone call from Kohl's office to national security adviser Frank C. Carlucci and then by a letter from the chancellor to the president.

A paragraph was hurriedly inserted into Reagan's long-planned foreign policy address here Wednesday to reflect the development. Reagan said Soviet insistence that any arms control treaty would apply to the Pershings was "without foundation," but that Kohl had "removed even this artificial obstacle from consideration."

"We are therefore hopeful that the Soviet Union will demonstrate that there is substance behind the rhetoric they have repeated so often of late — that they genuinely want a stabilizing INF agreement," the president said.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, in a statement issued shortly before the president spoke, said the disposition of the missiles "is a matter for the Federal Republic of Germany to decide, in consultation with NATO."

"We therefore understand and support the statement...which was made today by the chancellor," Fitzwater said. He added that NATO "must retain a robust, modern and survivable nuclear deterrent for the foreseeable future."

Reagan, taking a five-day break in Los Angeles from his annual August vacation at his ranch north of Santa Barbara, was meeting today with leaders of the administration-backed Contra rebels fighting against Nicaragua's leftist government.

Kohl's announcement came one day after U.S. negotiators in Geneva proposed less stringent monitoring under the arms control treaty. The revised U.S. position was an outgrowth of the Soviets' recent agreement to dismantle all short- and intermediate-range missiles instead of having each side retain 100 as proposed earlier. Monitoring, or verification, has long been a sticking point in U.S.-Soviet negotiations.

The president and first lady Nancy Reagan flew here Tuesday from their ranch, where they went on Aug. 13 to begin their vacation.

Dole pushes for energy policy

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Senate Minority Leader and Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole, making a brief campaign stop in Midland Wednesday, said recent events in the Persian Gulf clearly demonstrate the need for a strong national energy policy.

Speaking to a gathering of about 100 oilmen and civic leaders at Midland Petroleum Club, Dole said the domestic oil industry should be restored to viability as a part of that energy policy, and added that he would support a floor under oil prices if elected president.

"We can't have the swings from $10 to $35," Dole said, suggesting that $22 a barrel might be a suitable floor. He added, however, that he didn't think the industry could get an import fee, because of the political makeup in Congress and the fact that the industry was split on the issue.

Other measures Dole said he supports to help the ailing oil industry include: repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax; a 25 percent percentage depletion allowance for new, enhanced and stripper production; and expensing of the heavy front-end costs of geological and geophysical work, instead of recovery through depletion.

Dole would also increase percentage depletion limitation percentages from 50 percent of income to 100 percent, and would repeal the anti-transfer rule for percentage depletion, he said.

The native of Russell, Kan., an oil producing area, also favors increasing the designation for stripper wells from 10 to 15 barrels per day, but is undecided on outright tax credits for exploration.

As for his chances of becoming president, Dole said it appeared to be a race between he and Vice President George Bush.

"A few months ago, it looked like George Bush was a shoo-in for the nomination, but no longer. He now has 96 percent recognition and I have 70 percent, but in those polls among Democrats I do better than the vice president."

The Kansas senator said he didn't think he could win Texas from Texan George Bush, but thought he could pick up a considerable number of the state's 111 delegates to the Republican Convention.

Accused arms dealer hasn't yet faced grand jury

From Staff Reports

A 47-year-old Portuguese man charged with conspiracy to buy $2 million in stolen missile parts, Victor Fonseca, did not appear before a Midland County grand jury Wednesday, an assistant district attorney said today.

However, testimony was heard from Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter and Sheriff's Criminal Investigations chief Capt. Clayton McKinney, Asst. District Attorney Ralph Petty said.

Petty said he conducted questioning of the pair before the grand jury because District Attorney Al Schorre was needed to prosecute a murder trial in district court.

Judge Perry D. Pickett late this morning ruled that Midland County Commissioners had no justification under the Texas Open Meetings Act for closing a Monday meeting to the public.

The closed-door session was held by commissioners to question Sheriff Gary Painter about his role in the recent arms sale sting.

The judge's decision came following a lawsuit which was filed Wednesday by the Midland Reporter-Telegram which sought access to tapes of the session. The newspaper had claimed that the reasons cited by the county for closing the meeting were not covered by provisions in the Open Meetings Act.

A report on the closed meeting will be published in Friday's edition.

The grand jury inquiry likely will continue during its next regular session Sept. 16, although a chance exists a special session may be called to hear the case.

John Hill, chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court, announces his resignation and return to private legal practice.

Clements says he'll choose Hill's successor on 'merit'

By STEVE LEVINE
and JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements pledged to use "merit, ability and willingness to serve" in selecting a replacement for John L. Hill Jr., who announced he will step down as chief justice of the Supreme Court of Texas effective Jan. 1.

In tendering his surprise resignation Wednesday, Democrat Hill vowed never to seek another political office and asked Republican Clements to put aside partisan considerations and create a special panel to propose his successor. Hill said he probably will practice law in Houston while he intensifies his campaign to change the way Texas judges are selected.

The 63-year-old former secretary of state and attorney general said he feels "a real hurt" about possibly letting down supporters who expected him to serve until the Dec. 31, 1990, end of his six-year term. "I am not going away," Hill said.

"I am trying to fulfill, in the best way I think I can, the commitment I made to the people of Texas, and that was to try to reform the judiciary."

Although he disagreed, sometimes vehemently, with the other eight Supreme Court justices over judicial selection, Hill said he leaves the court with no ill will toward his colleagues. "The big, big problem is the excessive amount of campaign money that's involved in judicial politics today," he told surprised reporters.

"It's creating a perception of impropriety and it's causing harm to the system."

Justice Raul Gonzalez, one of two who supported a moderate version of Hill's plan to replace an elected judiciary with a system that selects judges by reviewing their qualifications, said he was shocked by the chief justice's announcement. "I feel a great disappointment," Gonzalez said.

Justice William Kilgarlin, one of Hill's staunchest opponents on the court, said differences over judicial selection did not interfere with the workings of the state's highest civil court. "I think he tried hard," Kilgarlin said. "It was difficult stepping in with no prior experience."

Hill, who lost to Clements in the 1978 governor's race, said he is delaying his resignation until Jan. 1 to give Clements a chance to use merit selection to choose his successor. Hill proposed that Clements create a balanced, 15-member nominating commission that would submit three candidates for the governor to pick from.

"This would be an excellent opportunity to test at the highest level a procedure that works so well in other states," he said. When asked whether he expects Clements — who this week named Republican Kent Hance to a Railroad Commission vacancy — would abide by his request, Hill said: "If there's anything we ought to agree on in our two great parties, it is that our judiciary is above politics."

Walsh seeks cables about arms trading

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran-Contra independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh is looking for missing CIA cables about the early trading of arms for American hostages, according to testimony from the CIA's chief of covert activities.

The agency's deputy director for operations, Clair George, told congressional investigators he had discussed the matter with investigators for Walsh, even alluding to the possibility of a cover-up, which he called unlikely.

George's expurgated testimony was made public Wednesday by congressional Iran-Contra investigators. He was answering questions about two secret messages sent from Portugal and verified to investigators by four witnesses, informing CIA headquarters that a shipment of U.S.-made missiles was being sent to Iran in an effort to free American hostages.

Top agency officials have insisted they knew nothing about the weapons until later.

The House and Senate Iran-Contra committees were scheduled today to release the depositions of two close associates of Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, Marine Lt. Col. Robert L. Earl and Coast Guard Cmdr. Craig Coy, both of whom have made multiple appearances before investigators.

They were asked in particular about what went on in North's office as the affair unraveled last November, including the shredding of documents.

In portions of Earl's testimony already released, he disputed North's contention that North continued to shred documents under the noses of Justice Department investigators in his office last November.

And Earl testified that North had told him of a telephone call from President Reagan in which the president said it was "important that I not know" about the diversion of funds from Iran arms sales to the Contras. North said he couldn't remember telling Earl any such thing, and said the president's remark was more like, "I just didn't know."

Earl and Coy both worked for North on the National Security Council staff and were assigned to counterterrorism duties, which North headed.

In other developments:

—Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., the vice chairman of the Senate investigating committee, complained in a letter to Republican Party Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf Jr. about the party's use of North in a fund-raising appeal. Rudman reminded the GOP chief that North had deceived the president and others in the administration, and said: "I deeply regret the message that your letter carried."

—In Miami, Alfredo Cesar Aguirre, a member of the Nicaraguan Contra political directorate, said the rebels themselves will propose to Reagan that their U.S. military aid be suspended to demonstrate a commitment to Central American peace. He said that message would be carried to Reagan in a meeting today and later to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas.

George's testimony shed little light on the dangling question of what CIA headquarters knew about the November 1985 shipment by Israel of Hawk missiles to Iran in exchange for hostages.

Documents have indicated that retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, who had been asked by the White House to help with the logistics of the shipment, had told two CIA agents in Portugal that the shipment contained missiles, and not oil drilling equipment as a cover story had suggested.

Researchers hope 'bulking agent' will aid dieters

By JODI PERRAS

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Every dieter's fantasy — a chocolate cake with two-thirds of the calories removed — is also a dream of researchers here.

At Purdue University's Whistler Center for Carbohydrate Research, scientists are working on new and expanded uses for carbohydrates, including research on a "bulking agent" that can be used to bake cookies, cakes and pies with fewer calories, said James N. BeMiller, the center's director.

BeMiller says an artificial sweetener such as aspartame, known under the brand name NutraSweet, is used mainly in beverages. "You can't use it in something like cakes or cookies or pies because the sugar you put in those products does more than provide sweetness."

A bulking agent used with aspartame would hold moisture and add bulk to the product, making it indistinguishable from the cakes Mom used to make. The center's scientists are working to develop such an agent.

Researchers at the center, named for Purdue Professor Roy L. Whistler, are also:

— Looking for a way to use corn instead of petroleum to make trash bags and plastic containers that are biodegradable, thus helping both Midwestern farmers and the environment.

— Using carbohydrates to make a new polysaccharide, which is used in powdered drinks and baker's emulsions. Polysaccharides now come from a crop which is difficult to acquire because it is grown in a volatile region of Africa south of the Sahara, BeMiller said.

— Trying to use carbohydrate-based materials in place of fats in some foods, such as margarine, to reduce the calorie content.

Carbohydrates are organic compounds, including sugars and starches, which form a class of foods that give the body energy.

BeMiller is probably most excited about research being done on enzyme inhibitors, which can be used to study certain rare, genetic diseases.

"There are some diseases for which there are no animal models. We can't study them in dogs or laboratory rats. But there are inhibitors that can be used to generate the diseases in laboratory rats," he said.

People suffering from those diseases, which are known as storage diseases, cannot break down complex carbohydrates. As a result, the carbohydrates build up in their cells, causing severe mental retardation and early death, he said.

Research done at the Whistler center is underwritten by corporate sponsors.

Still, said BeMiller, "It's really not our role or goal in life to find new products.

"We develop new knowledge which can then be used by others to find new products. People in industry don't take the time or money to do the basic research, and that's what we can do."

Companies such as Kraft Inc., NutraSweet Co., and Hershey Foods Corp. benefit from research done at the center, and negotiations are pending with General Foods Corp. and Nabisco Brands Inc., said Philip Nelson, head of Purdue's department of food sciences.

Decision makes pact possible

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's decision to dismantle 72 Pershing 1A missiles removes the last big roadblock to a U.S.-Soviet arms control treaty but may set a precedent for new attempts to divide the Western allies.

President Reagan praised Kohl's action Wednesday in a foreign policy speech in Los Angeles, but the German leader's decision made some American officials nervous. One U.S. official, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said it could set a difficult precedent, encouraging the Soviets to try to impose restrictions on French and British nuclear arms in future negotiations with the United States.

The Soviets made such an attempt a few years ago, but withdrew their demands when the Reagan administration insisted on excluding the British and French systems from U.S.-Soviet talks on intermediate-range missiles in Europe, and the two allies concurred.

Last spring, when the Soviets zeroed in on the Pershings, the Reagan administration decided to resist firmly. The demand was condemned as an 11th-hour negotiating gambit and rejected.

The West Germans also resisted. They said the elimination of the Pershing 1As and other missiles in Europe would leave them vulnerable to invasion by the superior conventional forces of the Warsaw Pact.

The Soviets insisted that because the nuclear warheads for the Pershings were under American control they should be part of any U.S.-Soviet arms deal.

But the United States dug in its heels. Even while Reagan a month ago said he was "heartened" by prospects for an arms control accord in Europe, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the Soviets were raising the Pershing issue as a way of "whipsawing" the alliance and causing friction between Bonn and Washington.

Veteran Soviet arms control negotiator Viktor P. Karpov attacked the U.S. position on the Pershings and assailed Washington for becoming "more rigid" as an agreement drew near.

Even after Kohl's announcement, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said the allies' weapons would not be part of U.S.-Soviet negotiations. "That position has not changed," she said.

"The U.S. owns, controls and maintains the warheads," the State Department said in a brief statement later.

Reagan had sent Frank C. Carlucci, his national security adviser, to Bonn earlier this month to assure Kohl that he would have U.S. support whatever he decided to do about the Soviet demands.

Carlucci did not put pressure the West German leader to yield, nor did he even suggest what he might do about the Pershings, said U.S. officials in Washington and in Los Angeles, where Reagan injected praise for Kohl into a foreign policy speech.

Koop feels Florida AIDS episode proves need for parenteducation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, upset by the "raw deal" afforded three brothers at a Florida school, says the episode underscores the need for parent education to head off unwarranted fears about AIDS in schools.

Koop commented in a telephone interview Wednesday after a bomb threat forced evacuation of an elementary school in Arcadia, Fla., for the second straight day.

The threats came after the Ray brothers — Ricky, 10, Robert, 9, and Randy, 8 — returned to class Monday under a federal court ruling that they should be educated with other children.

The school board, at the urging of many other parents, had barred the boys from the classroom last fall.

Their doctors say the youngsters, all hemophiliacs, carry AIDS antibodies indicating they have the virus even though they show no symptoms of the disease itself. Physicians say the three probably were exposed to the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus through plasma products used to clot their blood.

Koop said he first heard about the Florida case 10 months ago and "was very disturbed that the father had gotten such a raw deal from everybody" in fighting to have them admitted to school.

"It is a shame that these youngsters are getting the same treatment I thought we had gotten rid of," Koop said.

Attendance at Memorial Elementary School was 410 on Wednesday, up from the prior two days but still far below anticipated enrollment of 693 children.

Some parents in the rural community have called for a week-long boycott to protest the court order that returned the Ray brothers to class.

While many school districts have accepted AIDS-infected children with less turmoil, Koop said he fears the Florida situation is "a microcosm of the country."

"I think it's going to happen everyplace," he said. "It seems it's going to be settled at every local community, which is too bad."

Interrupting a vacation in New England to make himself available for the interview, Koop expressed a measure of frustration, along with sadness and resignation, at the difficulty of convincing people that AIDS is not spread through casual contact.

AIDS attacks the body's immune system, rendering it incapable of resisting other diseases and infections. The AIDS virus is spread through contact with blood, semen and other bodily fluids from infected persons.

Its chief victims have been homosexual men and intravenous drug users, although a small percentage of cases are attributed to transfusions of contaminated blood and to heterosexual contact.

As of Aug. 10, AIDS had been diagnosed in 40,051 Americans, of whom more than half, or 23,165, have died since 1979, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control. No one is known to have recovered from AIDS.

"I know it's very difficult for education to take hold of prejudiced minds," Koop said. "I wish I could show people what marvelous records the hemophiliac associations have.

"People see the president holding an AIDS baby and not being afraid. It makes you wonder what it takes for people to understand."

Koop referred to a widely distributed recent photograph of President Reagan holding an infant with AIDS during a visit to a National Institutes of Health hospital near Washington.

"I think prior education is the clue," said Koop. "I have been recommending that schools and work sites prepare all their constituents for the day this will happen to them.

"This takes time. It would be nice if it had taken place earlier in Florida. This should be an example for other parents and teachers to know that when an AIDS patient comes to their schools — and it will happen — that there is no reason to be afraid."

Juror angered by 11th-hour dismissal

CASEYVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A woman who for 3½ years sat on the jury in one of the nation's longest trials said she "cried all the way home" after being dismissed for a conflict of interest 30 minutes before deliberations began.

"I cry when I'm mad. I think I'm mad because they let me go," a tearful Barbara McCann said Wednesday. "I think I would have liked to voice my opinion."

Mrs. McCann, 49, of Caseyville, began serving on the jury Feb. 22, 1984, in a $135 million lawsuit filed against the Monsanto Co. over a 19,000-gallon chemical spill containing less than a teaspoonful of dioxin, a toxic chemical.

Mrs. McCann said she sat in the jury box for 621 days before the judge removed her Wednesday because Rex Carr, the attorney for the 65 plaintiffs, also represents plaintiffs in a lawsuit against a relative of hers.

Deliberations at the Belleville courthouse were scheduled to resume today.

An alternate replaced Mrs. McCann on the 12-member jury before it received the case, which involved 182 witnesses and 6,000 exhibits and generated more than 100,000 pages of transcripts.

"We appreciate what you've given up in your personal lives," St. Clair County Circuit Judge Richard Goldenhersh said as he began instructions to the jury, minus Mrs. McCann.

"I cried all the way home," said Mrs. McCann, a department-store sales clerk and mother of five.

Mrs. McCann said she informed the judge of the possible conflict when it developed midway through the trial. She would not give details of the other case or say why the judge did not remove her at the time.

Goldenhersh would not comment. Calls to Carr's home Wednesday night went unanswered. However, David Snively, a Monsanto attorney, confirmed Mrs. McCann informed the judge about 17 months ago. He would not comment further.

The jury was not sequestered during the trial, which results from a derailment near Sturgeon, Mo., in 1979 in which a Monsanto wood preservative was spilled.

The plaintiffs are seeking $100 million in punitive damages and $35.4 million in compensatory damages for health problems they say resulted from dioxin exposure, such as birth defects, cancer, fatigue, headaches, joint pain, high blood pressure and nausea.

Monsanto contends the amount of dioxin was too small to have such effects.

Dioxin, a byproduct of the manufacture of some herbicides and pesticides, is known to cause brain, heart and genetic damage in laboratory animals, but the risk to humans remains subject to debate.

Earlier Wednesday, Carr ended 12 hours of closing arguments by urging jurors to award a "sizeable sum" to his clients.

"You have to say with this verdict, Monsanto, we're not going to stand for this any more. You can't get away with this fraud,'" he said. "When a company is $3½ billion in size, you can see you're not going to get their attention with $20 million, $30 million."

Republicans hope for inroad into court

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic Chief Justice John Hill's early exit from the state Supreme Court probably hands the Republicans a top state job they had not dreamed of winning.

"This is so much easier than elections," state GOP Chairman George Strake of Houston said Wednesday after Hill announced he would leave the bench Jan. 1.

Republican Gov. Bill Clements will appoint a chief justice who will serve until the 1988 elections. Candidates will then vie for the remainder of Hill's term, which ends in 1990. Strake said Clements should make sure the appointee is a qualified judge, a Republican and electable in 1988.

"We have to know what to do with the breaks when we get them," Strake said.

In Sherman, Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle heard about Hill's surprise announcement from a reporter.

"I'm startled that John Hill would do this. Obviously, it gives Clements an appointment I'd just as soon he not have," Slagle said.

But he predicted Democrats would win the job back in November 1988.

"I am confident that Texas Democrats will have the opportunity to select one of several well-qualified individuals who would be excellent winning candidates," Slagle said.

Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez, a Democrat, said, "I am shocked and disappointed and very, very surprised. I did not see it coming and I don't think anybody in the court did. I just wish he hadn't done it."

But Gonzalez said the appointment of a Republican did not concern him.

"We don't make decisions on this court based on political affiliation. I don't fear the appointment of a man or woman of political integrity," he said.

Clements appointed two Republican justices to Supreme Court vacancies during his first term, selecting State District Judge Ruby Sondock and Austin lawyer Will Garwood. Ms. Sondock did not seek re-election to the high court and regained her district judgeship in Houston.

Garwood sought re-election but was defeated. He was subsequently appointed to a seat on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

HILL

Clements praised Hill's service to the state and pledged a "comprehensive review" to select a judge to sit through the 1988 elections. "No stone will be left unturned in my efforts to find the very best individual for the position," the governor said.

"As always, merit, ability and willingness to serve the people of Texas will be criteria in guiding my selection process."

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls and chief sponsor of Hill's plan in the Legislature, called Hill an "able, capable, fair" judge whom Texans will miss. Farabee called Hill's plans "admirable" but said he sees "greater partisanship" in Clements' recent appointments and expects the GOP will pressure the governor to put a Republican on the court.

During his first term as governor, Clements named one Republican and one Democrat, the state's first female justice, to the high court. Republican Will Garwood lost a re-election bid and Democrat Ruby Sondock chose not to run.

FONSECA

Petty said that the district attorney's office continues to gather evidence to present to the grand jury, including video tapes of the arrest shot by a ABC News film crew.

Fonseca's arrest was the result of a 5-month sheriff's department investigation that culminated the "sting" operation broadcast by ABC News last Wednesday.

The man allegedly was acting at the request of a high-level Iranian intelligence officer in helping obtain aiming components for Hawk missiles.

He remains in the Midland County Jail in lieu of $500,000 bond. If convicted of the second degree felony, he could face a sentence of two to 20 years in state prison and a fine of up to $10,000.

DOLE

In other issues: He said Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork should and would be confirmed. He called Bork a practioner of judicial restraint, a judge who wanted to interpret the law rather than make it. "He doesn't want to be in Congress," jested Dole.

Dole favors the current peace plan in Nicaragua, but says it should be on an even playing field: "If we are to stop sending support to the Contras, the Soviet Union should stop sending aid to the Sandinistas."

He also would immediately end trade with Iran, who continues to export 45,000 barrels of oil daily to the U.S. as well as other products, including pistachio nuts. "I attached that proposal to the trade bill and got only 69 votes," he added.

He sees the $2.4 trillion deficit as the biggest problem facing America, and said it was a problem too big to pass on to this generation's grandchildren.

Iran won't accept 'ignominious peace'

NICOSIA, Cyprus — In Iran's most direct comment yet on a proposed cease-fire, Prime Minister Hussein Musavi said his country will never accept "an ignominious peace" with Iraq to end the 7-year-old war.

Musavi apparently rejected an Arab League ultimatum Tuesday that Iran accept a cease-fire resolution by the U.N. Security Council by Sept. 20 or risk a break in relations with Arab nations.

Musavi's remarks, reported Wednesday by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, made no direct reference to the Arab League demand.

In another development, Egypt's top military official was quoted as saying his nation and other Arab oil states have given Iraq $181 billion during its war with Iran to the detriment of their own economic development.

In the Persian Gulf, meanwhile, sandstorms drastically reduced visibility Wednesday, and shipping executives puzzled over the location of a convoy of Kuwaiti tankers and U.S. Navy escorts, or whether there was one at all.

Asked about the proposed Iran-Iraq cease-fire, deputy State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said Wednesday: "Unless the Iranians officially indicate their acceptance very soon, we believe the U.N. Security Council must move ahead to consider enforcement measures."

U.S. delegates are consulting with other members of the 15-nation council about imposing sanctions on Iran for failing to comply with the resolution, which the Reagan administration shepherded through the council.

Iraq has not attacked shipping in the gulf since the resolution was passed July 20.

The Iraqi News Agency praised the Arab League action and called Wednesday for a boycott of Iran that would force it "to accept a comprehensive and lasting peace."

Iraqi forces invaded western Iran in September 1980 following border skirmishes and acts of sabotage in Iraq which Baghdad blamed on the Iranians. Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, who withdrew his troops to the border in June 1982 largely under Iranian military pressure, has been seeking a negotiated settlement for several years.

Pinochet wants opposition 'neutralized'

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet's government has prepared a secret plan ordering Chilean mayors to "neutralize" opposition groups and make an all-out effort to keep the military in power, official documents show.

The plan, drawn up by the Interior Ministry, was presented to 300 mayors at a closed-door conference Aug. 10-12 in the resort city of Vina del Mar.

The Associated Press obtained the documents, a 12-page political analysis and a detailed action plan, from a source who insisted on anonymity.

The plan for the mayors complained the opposition had organized a "gigantic" anti-government publicity campaign.

"In each town there are organized centers that carry out these campaigns, and which must be located, permanently watched, analyzed in their action and neutralized in an adequate manner," it said.

To neutralize dissidents, the mayors must denounce opposition efforts as "contrary to the public interest and progress," the document instructed.

The agenda also said government resources must be used "for consolidating the regime and projecting it beyond 1989."

Mayors are appointed by Pinochet, who seized power in a 1973 military coup.

The 71-year-old military leader has not officially announced he is running for another term, but he has toured the country constantly since last year calling for the "projection" of his regime.

Chileans are scheduled to vote by early 1989 on a yes-or-no ballot on a single candidate chosen by Pinochet and the other armed forces chiefs. If the candidate is approved, he would serve an eight-year term. If the vote is no, arrangements would be made for a more open election.

The analysis, titled "Problems Presented By Chilean Socio-Political Evolution," warned of a serious challenge to the regime in the 1989 election.

The election "will not be...a friendly contest in which exist consensus on the rules of the game," the analysis said. "On the contrary, it will decide the survival of the regime itself."

"The mayors' political role demands that they assume a personal pledge to the values and principles of the regime, to the government as the instrument for consolidation and to his excellency the president of the republic as the legitimate leader of the process," it said.

Loyalty of town workers to the regime must be "permanently reviewed," the analysis added.

Italian inmates douse hostages with gasoline

ROME (AP) — Rebel inmates doused some of their 21 hostages with gasoline and threatened to kill them unless they were allowed to escape in a helicopter. Negotiators refused to make a deal until the only female hostage was freed.

Authorities reported little progress today in talks with the six inmates, who took over the prison administration building and infirmary Tuesday.

There were no reports of serious injury to the hostages. The six inmates were armed with pistols and knives and claimed to have explosives.

Mario Tuti, 40, a convicted right-wing terrorist leading the rebels, told the Italian news agency ANSA the band had "nothing to lose" and warned against delay.

"I'm talking about hell. Here everything could explode from one moment to the next," one hostage, Dr. Sergio Carlotti, was quoted by La Repubblica as telling a fellow prison doctor by telephone.

"They have four bombs with the fuses all ready. Most of the guards are tied with their hands behind their backs and face down on the ground. Two of them are strung across the windows, like crucifixes. Another four are also tied up on the pavement, doused with gasoline and they threaten at each moment to set them on fire," the hostage said.

Police helicopters circled the four-story modern prison, which stands within 16th-century walls, and 350 police surrounded the facility. No journalists were allowed near the 400-inmate prison.

The rebel prisoners offered to free their hostages in return for a helicopter and a pilot to ferry them off the island about 6 miles off Tuscany on Italy's west-central coast.

At a news conference inside the prison this morning, negotiators said they had insisted on the release of the only female hostage, 29-year-old social worker Rossella Giazzi, as "an indispensable condition" for supplying a helicopter.

The island of Elba is a popular resort of 30,000 people. From May 1814 to February 1815, Elba was a sovereign principality under the exiled Napoleon I, who lived in a villa 90 miles from the prison.

The rebel prisoners freed four hostages early in the rebellion. On Wednesday, they released a guard and at least three sick inmates who were trapped in the infirmary during the revolt.

The negotiators, who are magistrates, told the news conference that 36 people are still in the infirmary: the six rebel inmates, two inmates who had disassociated themselves from the revolt, seven infirmary patients and the 21 prison staff members held hostage.

Besides Ms. Giazzi, the captured staff include guards, prison director Cosimo Giordano, a psychologist and two other civilians.

Mining firm fires 10,000 strikers

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's largest mining company fired 10,000 black strikers who refused to return to work today after their union rejected a new offer to end a nationwide strike.

Anglo American Corp.'s decision to resume mass firings came one day after members of the National Union of Mineworkers voted overwhelmingly to reject a mining company contract proposal that offered slight improvements in benefits but no additional pay.

In another development, the country's main black labor federation, the Congress of South African Trade Unions said today it is preparing for a national strike in support of the mineworkers.

Thousands of Anglo workers engaged in the 18-day-old strike face return-to-work ultimatums over the next two days.

At one Anglo gold mine, Western Deep Levels, about 3,000 strikers were taking part today in an underground sit-in. The company did not say why the strikers staged the sit-in, but the union claimed they were forced underground on Wednesday night.

Anglo American, the company worst hit by the strike, had suspended return-to-work ultimatums for thousands of strikers threatened with dismissal so they could vote Wednesday on the contract offer by the Chamber of Mines, which represents the six major mining houses.

Last week, Anglo fired about 7,000 striking workers and closed two economically marginal gold mines.

Gulf action may trip War Powers Act

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic legislators say the Reagan administration's decision to grant danger pay to U.S. military personnel in the Persian Gulf means it is time to invoke the War Powers Act, but White House officials say the 1973 law still doesn't need to be triggered.

"To my mind, this decision is one more reason why the War Powers Act should apply, and I think the War Powers question will keep coming up again and again," said Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Pell, speaking Wednesday by telephone from his Newport home, said he intends to push next month for Senate approval of a bill requiring the War Powers Act to be put into use.

"I'm not sure if it will pass," Pell said. "You never know until you try, but I'll support it."

The Pentagon announced Wednesday that about 10,000 military personnel serving in the volatile gulf region will receive the $110 monthly bonus, a decision expected to cost $1.1 million a month. The pay will be retroactive to the beginning of August.

The Defense Department had been under pressure from the Democratic-controlled Congress to grant the danger pay. Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., author of a law requiring the money, applauded the decision.

"I am glad the politics of reflagging and whether to invoke the War Powers Act have been separated from danger pay," she said.

The debate over the "imminent danger" pay mirrors the dispute over the War Powers Act, which was passed in the waning days of the Vietnam War by a Congress that wanted to limit the authority of the executive branch to send troops into combat.

It limits a president's ability to send military personnel — without congressional authorization — "into situations where imminent involvement in hostilities is clearly indicated by the circumstances." The personnel must be withdrawn within 60 days unless Congress specifically approves their deployment.

The administration has refused to invoke the War Powers Act, saying U.S. forces are in the gulf only to ensure the safe passage of oil tankers through international waters as part of President Reagan's policy of protecting 11 Kuwaiti ships.

Congressional critics counter that by protecting ships of Kuwait, an ally of Iraq, the United States risks being drawn into the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. They note the May 17 attack on the Navy frigate Stark, which killed 37 U.S. seamen.

Although neither the House nor Senate formally has sought to invoke the War Powers Act, 114 members of both chambers have filed suit in U.S. District Court asking that the law's provisions be set into motion.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., echoed Pell's statements. "The administration can't have it both ways," Levin said.

But national security adviser Frank C. Carlucci disagreed, saying "there's a different legal standard" between the War Powers Act and the imminent danger pay.

Talking to reporters in Los Angeles where he accompanied Reagan, Carlucci said: "The broader language in the history of this authority (for danger pay) makes it clear that it's available in situations where the War Powers resolution is not applicable.

"The special pay is where we advise where there is a threat of physical harm or imminent danger, whereas the War Powers resolution involves only an imminent involvement in hostilities."

Pell disagreed. "In my opinion, if they're going to give combat pay, and they should, they can't argue that no combat or hostilities are likely," he said.

The extra pay will go to the Navy crews on ships in the Persian Gulf, the Strait of Hormuz and a small portion of the Gulf of Oman, as well as personnel stationed in Kuwait and Bahrain.

Dr. David J. Armor, acting assistant defense secretary for manpower, said the decision on the danger pay was unrelated to the War Powers debate.

He noted that Congress approved a law in 1983 authorizing the danger pay even if there is no immediate threat of the United States being drawn into hostilities.

"This used to be called combat pay," Armor said. "But in 1983 (the law) was amended to include areas for which there was some exposure to risk or imminent danger.

Appeals panel wins victory for schools

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal appeals panel has allowed Alabama public schools to use 44 textbooks that a U.S. judge ruled promoted a godless religion, saying his banishment order violated the separation of church and state.

Opponents of the ban said Wednesday's decision by the 11th U.S. Court of Appeals was a victory for school children everywhere, but a lawyer for Christian fundamentalists who filed the lawsuit said they would appeal the ruling.

The three-judge panel's dismissal of the lawsuit was "just a step on the road to the Supreme Court," said lawyer Bob Sherling of Mobile, Ala.

The panel said U.S. District Judge Brevard Hand's order turned the First Amendment requirement that the government be neutral on the subject of religion "into an affirmative obligation to speak about religion."

It was the second setback in three days for Christian fundamentalists in textbook cases. On Monday, a federal appeals court in Cincinnati dismissed a lawsuit filed by Tennesee fundamentalists seeking to shield their children from "godless" texts.

In the Alabama case, Hand banned 39 history and social studies textbooks for improperly excluding references to religion, and five home economics textbooks for promoting "secular humanism."

Fundamentalists define secular humanism as the belief that people should solve their own problems without the aid of God.

The Atlanta-based appeals court said even if secular humanism is a religion, which the government may not lawfully promote, it was not shown Alabama promoted it by using the textbooks.

"Examination of the contents of these textbooks...reveals that the message conveyed is not one of endorsement of secular humanism or any religion," U.S. Circuit Judge Frank Johnson Jr. of Alabama wrote in the opinion.

Honduras arrests four in bombing of U.S. soldiers

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The military blamed foreign leftists for a restaurant bombing that wounded five U.S. servicemen this month, and it said four suspects had been arrested.

The arrests were announced late Wednesday after a meeting of President Jose Azcona Hoyo, armed forces chief Gen. Humberto Regalado Hernandez and top military and political officials.

Authorities were seeking other suspects in the Aug. 8 pipe bomb explosion in the town of Comayagua, near the Palmerola air base where 1,200 U.S. soldiers are stationed, the press office said in a brief statement.

The bomb was placed in a window of a Chinese restaurant frequented by U.S. servicemen in Comayagua, located 55 miles north of Tegucigalpa and 7 miles north of the Palmerola base. A U.S. civilian and six Honduran civilians were also slightly wounded.

The statement said they were arrested in Comayagua but did not say when they were detained.

Nicaraguan foreign minister accuses U.S. of spying, backing up Contras

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto accused the Reagan administration of using its air and naval forces to spy on Nicaragua and charged that American planes have been helping the Contra rebels.

In a protest note to Secretary of State George P. Shultz, D'Escoto charged that the alleged spying and two recent rebel attacks on Nicaraguan farmworkers show Washington is out to "frustrate" a new Central American peace plan.

Wednesday's note urged the United States to end all aid to the Contras fighting the leftist Sandinista government, and to support a peace plan signed Aug. 7 in Guatemala by five Central American presidents.

It protested an attack in which D'Escoto said five people were killed, including a 9-year-old girl and two other civilians. Ortega said the Contra attack took place Monday at a farm cooperative in Jinotega province, 115 miles north of the capital.

Earlier this week Nicaragua protested the killing of five agrarian reform workers whose car was ambushed Saturday near the Jinotega town of San Antocio de las Cuchillas.

The latest protest said U.S. aircraft "engaged in espionage work" have flown over Nicaragua five times since the peace plan was signed. It said "units of the U.S. Navy have remained off our coasts, in the Caribbean sea, on tasks of surveilling and spying."

The foreign minister also charged that U.S. planes "coming from Honduran and Costa Rican airspaces have carried out missions of exploration and supply for the rebel forces."

Jailed opposition leaders on hunger strike

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Two opposition leaders began a hunger strike Wednesday to protest their sentence of 30 days in jail for helping organize an anti-government demonstration, one of their lawyers said.

Attorney Luis Vega Miranda said in an interview that Lino Hernandez Trigueros and Alberto Saborio "went on a hunger strike in the jail of a police station near the Eastern Market of the capital where they are being held."

Hernandez Trigueros is president of the Permanent Commission on Human Rights, a private watchdog group. Saborio is general secretary of the opposition Conservative Party and president of the Nicaraguan Bar Association.

Police arrested both for taking part in a street demonstration Aug. 15 organized by the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate, a coalition of opposition groups, in defiance a state of national emergency imposed by the leftist Sandinista government in 1982.

The two were summarily sentenced by police to 30 days imprisonment for disturbing the peace, under special powers of search and arrest granted the government by the national emergency law, which among other provisions bans public meetings without prior authorization.

"They consider the sentence imposed by police as unjust and repressive and they say they will keep up their hunger strike until their suppressed rights are restored," Vega Miranda said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Journalists march in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Police used tear gas to break up a student demonstration at the national university, and 1,000 journalists and supporters marched to protest the government's closing of opposition media.

Riot police watched as the journalists began a four-mile march along the city's main commercial street Wednesday, but made no effort to block the demonstration.

Protesters carried signs demanding the reopening of three opposition newspapers, two radio stations and a weekly magazine closed indefinitely July 26 for allegedly spreading information disruptive to the public peace.

The journalists distributed leaflets along the march route that said, "The journalist who sells his pen is just as wretched as the bureaucrat or businessman who buys it."

66 arrested in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Police arrested 66 people today and surrounded the headquarters of a militant union in a crackdown following the largest strike of President Corazon Aquino's administration.

Brig. Gen. Alfredo Lim, Manila's police chief, said Medardo Roda, chairman of United Association of Transport Workers Nationwide, was arrested today for "inciting to sedition."

Roda heads a union of passenger jeep drivers affiliated with the militant May 1st Movement, which spearheaded Wednesday's strike demanding a rollback of fuel prices that the government increased Aug. 14.

In addition to Roda, police arrested 28 people, mostly students, who marched to the union headquarters to protest the crackdown.

Officials said 37 more were arrested in various parts of the city while urging drivers to continue the strike. They faced charges ranging from "grave coercion" to "public disturbance," police said.

Japan denies reports

TOKYO (AP) — The Foreign Ministry today denied it had summoned home top diplomats from the United States because of serious strains in U.S.-Japanese ties.

A ministry official said Japan's ambassador to the United States, Nobuo Matsunaga, and the consuls general in New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Honolulu, Boston, Atlanta and Kansas City, Mo., will gather in Tokyo to plan the visit to the United States this fall of Crown Prince Akihito and Crown Princess Michiko.

Hance appointment good for industry

In choosing former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance to fill the vacancy on the Railroad Commission created when longtime commission chairman Mack Wallace announced he would be departing, Gov. Bill Clements placed the vital position in the hands of a man who knows the oil industry as well as the bureaucracy that all too often entangles it in Washington, D.C.

Without a doubt, that knowledge and experience gives Hance a good opportunity to carry on the important work done by Wallace on the three-member commission.

Hance, who served this congressional district during the latter '70s, before giving up his seat there to seek a seat in the U.S. Senate literally "knows the ropes" in Washington. What's more, Hance is familiar with working both sides of the aisle. Although he was still a registered Democrat while serving this congressional district, then called the 19th, Hance was one of those so-called "Boll Weevils" who backed President Ronald Reagan's conservative approach to government even though it placed them under pressure from stalwarts of the Democratic Party line.

Since leaving public service, Hance has been practicing law but chose to come back to politics when Wallace resigned from the Railroad Commission. We're glad Hance decided to do that because we know his conservative credentials and allegiance to Texas and the oil industry will serve all Texans well.

Apparently there are others who believe the appointment of Hance will prove in the best interests of Texas and the oil industry. Harry Spannaus, executive vice-president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said that organization is "delighted" with the appointment of Hance to the RRC. Spannaus said the association believes that Hance's knowledge and understanding of the independent petroleum industry will be of great benefit. He added that the association also believes Hance will be an excellent candidate for re-election in 1988 and 1990.

Prior to Clements' appointment of Hance, who joined the Republican Party prior to making a bid for the nomination for governor in 1986, we noted that what the Railroad Commission needed in light of Wallace's departure was a commissioner who could be an effective spokesman for the oil industry and one who was willing, as Wallace always was, to fight the battle for the oil industry at all times. In Kent Hance, the Railroad Commission has just such a man.

U.S. sweet revenge

Every day, the Soviet Union buys $6 million worth of Cuban sugar and pays $10 million for it. That's how Fidel Castro's sick socialist economy creeps by.

Unfortunately, the United States treats its own neighbors and allies in the Caribbean with much greater disdain — not to mention its own consumers. To protect inefficient U.S. sugar growers, we artificially limit sugar imports from other countries. This drives the U.S. price up to 22 cents a pound, while it drives the world price down to 6 cents.

Under a law passed in 1981, the United States has cut its import quotas by 82 percent, and in the process practically wiped out what's left of the economies of the Dominican Republic (which has lost more than $240 million a year in precious exports), Haiti and Jamaica. One of the most recent converts to democracy, the Philippines, also has been hurt.

On top of this, our apparel and textile quotas make it virtually impossible for these nations to ship any significant amounts to the United States, even if they buy and use U.S. fabrics.

This makes a mockery of the liberal arguments that we should spread democracy in Central American and the Caribbean Basin by "peaceful means" instead of through Contra aid. Most of those who oppose aid to the anti-communist resistance in Nicaragua also were among those who voted to gut President Reagan's 1983 Caribbean Basin Initiative by taking away all of its freer trade provisions to protect their own special interests.

Now, a couple of very sensible free-trade Democrats, Reps. Sam Gibbons of Florida and J. J. Pickle of Texas, have teamed to write and promote a piece of legislation that would allow duty-free imports of clothing made from U.S. fabrics in Caribbean countries, and to more than triple the sugar quotas for 12 Caribbean countries. In effect, this would restore the Caribbean Basin Initiative plan to its original concept.

As Gibbons said, increased trade is preferable to guns as a way to help "these nations work their way out of the present economic morass" they are in, and to "create business certainty and provide a long-term investment climate ... so that economic prosperity will ensure political stability." Under their bill, Caribbean nations would have their sugar export quotas raised from 340,000 tons a year to 1,124 million tons annually, the level that existed in 1984.

This also would help American consumers by lowering U.S. sugar prices by 5-10 cents a pound — but don't expect the fat-cat sugar and textile lobbies to go along with it. The textile industry, which has enjoyed an 838 percent increase in the price of its publicly traded stocks since 1982, is determined to get still more protection. It likes the idea of a government-assisted sugar cartel. At the same time, the sugar lobby, bolstered by the profitable corn sugar crowd, desperately wants to shut out cheap Caribbean sugar.

So, the Cubans will go on selling their sugar to Moscow at subsidized prices, while their Caribbean colleagues go on losing their markets and revenues to U.S. protectionism. It's a stupid, self-defeating policy that is sure to drive more of these countries into the Marxist morass. But that's the way Congress is these days — all posture and no policy.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Aug. 27, the 239th day of 1987. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Aug. 27, 1883, the island volcano Krakatoa blew up. Tidal waves resulting from the cataclysmic explosions in Indonesia's Sunda Strait claimed some 36,000 lives in Java and Sumatra.

On this date:

In 1770, the German philosopher Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel was born in Stuttgart.

In 1859, Col. Edwin L. Drake drilled the first successful oil well in the United States near Titusville, Pa.

In 1908, Lyndon B. Johnson, the 36th President of the United States, was born near Stonewall, Texas.

In 1928, the Kellogg-Briand Pact was signed in Paris, outlawing war and providing for the peaceful settlement of disputes.

In 1945, American troops began landing in Japan at the end of World War II.

In 1962, the United States launched the Mariner 2 space probe, which flew past Venus the following December.

In 1967, Brian Epstein, the manager of the Beatles, was found dead in his London flat from an apparently accidental overdose of sleeping pills.

In 1975, Haile Selassie, the last emperor of Ethiopia's 3,000-year-old monarchy, died in Addis Ababa at the age of 83 almost a year after his overthrow in a military coup.

U.S. paid for football mom's trips

WASHINGTON — The fine art of parenting is a matter of deep concern at the Department of Health and Human Services, but the subsidy of football mothers is definitely not part of the program.

Jack Anderson

This is the conclusion of the department's Board of Ethics, which has asked a top HHS official to repay the cost of trips she made at government expense to see her son play football.

Dr. Jean Elder, an expert on the disabled, was also moved from her job as acting assistant director for Human Development Services to a position of lesser responsibility as special assistant to Secretary Otis R. Bowen. Elder retained her $73,400 salary during the job switch, according to an HHS spokesman.

An unrepentent Elder maintained that her attendance at the games was "part of her commitment as a parent," according to a report prepared by the HHS inspector general. "She said her staff knew that she always planned on attending every game unless government business required her to be somewhere else," the report states.

However, the report continues, "Dr. Elder emphatically denied that she ever requested any staff members to drum up" official trips that would enable her to attend her son's football games.

Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., first raised questions about the trips this May, after Elder was nominated to become assistant secretary for Human Development Services. Now, our associate Stewart Harris has obtained the results of the subsequent inspector general's probe and copies of the vouchers for Elder's trips from 1983 through 1985.

The inspector general's investigators concluded that government business was not conducted on five out of 11 trips flagged by Humphrey; they also questioned the necessity of other trips. Examples:

— On Friday, Oct. 20, 1983, Elder traveled to Lansing, Mich., to take care of business that was normally handled in a 20-minute telephone conference call. An Elder aide told investigators that the trip was arranged because "Elder wanted to be in Lansing that weekend and (her staffers) were to find a reason for her to be there." Elder's son Paul, a linebacker, hit the gridiron the following day at nearby Albion College, where he was going to school. The trip cost the taxpayers $295, according to the vouchers.

— The following fall, Elder's staff instructed Indiana officials to "develop an agenda" for an Elder trip to Indianapolis in late September. Says the inspector general's report: "Staff members stated that Dr. Elder asked that the trip be set up on Sept. 21, 1984, because her son was playing football in Indiana that weekend." That trip carried a $276 price tag.

— Elder returned to Michigan a month later. Wayne State University officials were informed beforehand she would be in town on Friday, Oct. 26, 1984, and that they should schedule a luncheon. The younger Elder had a home game that Saturday at Albion College. Cost of Elder's trip: $357.

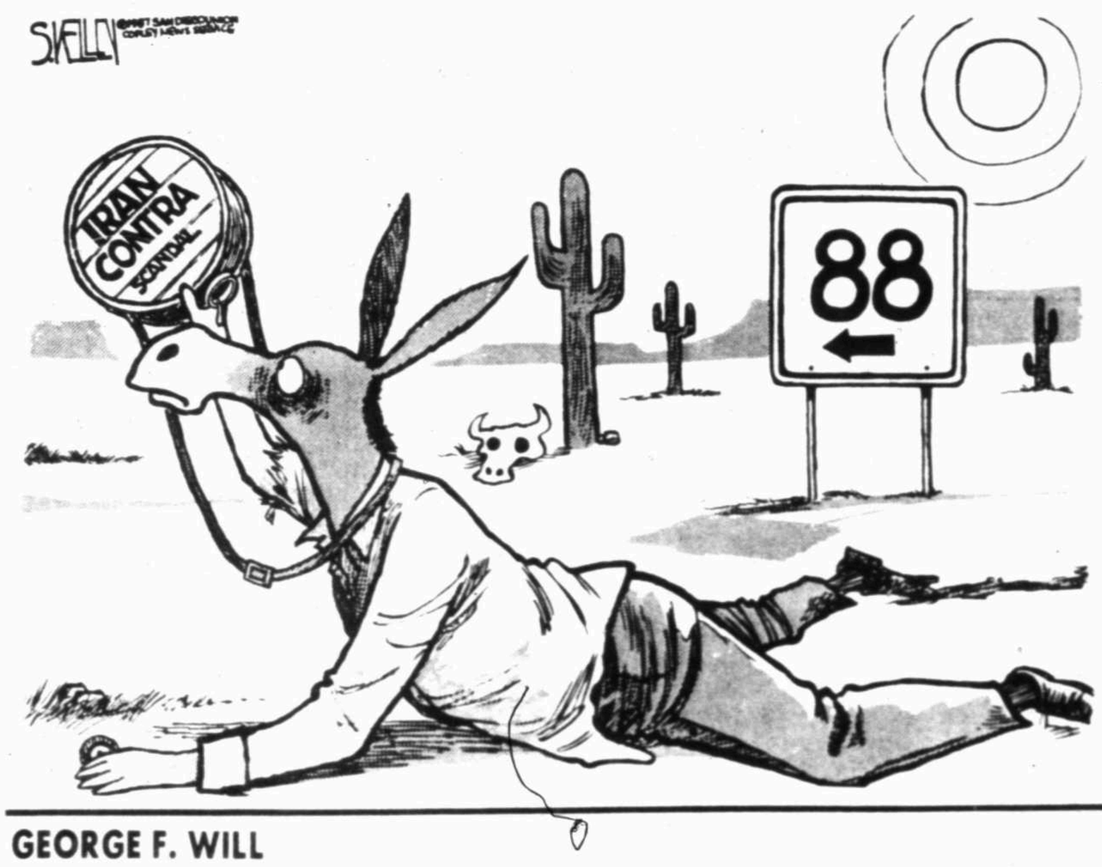

— A month later, Elder detoured to Albion on her return from a four-day conference in Nashville. There was "no documented reason for the Albion part of the trip," reported the inspector general. "According to staff members, the travel order was amended after the trip to include travel to Albion and backdated."

— Elder took five Friday trips to Michigan and Ohio in 1985. All of them preceded Albion College football games, according to the inspector general. In two of these cases, her staff told investigators, decisions to travel were based "on Dr. Elder's calendar, which had all Albion College football games listed."

In a written response to Bowen, Elder challenged the inspector general's report as "inaccurate" and the result of "investigative incompetence or misrepresentation." She told us in an interview that much of the information had been provided by a disgruntled employee and that the investigation resulted from the efforts of a right-wing "cabal" that had been after her since she joined HHS in 1982.

Footnote: HHS has a history of subsidizing the travel of football mothers.

MOBBING THE BANKS? — Bank regulators and Justice Department officials are worried that organized criminals are infiltrating financial institutions. Banks and savings and loans are being targeted for takeovers by the mob, our sources say, and the FBI has seen more such institutions go under because of ties to organized crime than at any other time in recent history. Three years ago, the bureau prosecuted 7,000 financial fraud cases with losses totaling $382 million. Losses are expected to soar to $3 billion this year.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Washington Post columnist Mike Causey recently reported that the price of a first-class stamp — which will probably go to 25 cents next spring — could climb to 30 cents within three years. The reason: to finance the recently negotiated wage-and-benefit package that will push the average carrier and clerk's salary to nearly $28,000 a year. Given the surly character of some postal workers we routinely encounter, the 25-cent letter will be no bargain, and a 30-cent one much less so.

High-flying solons shouldn't decry air safety

WASHINGTON — To the accusation that they report only bad news, journalists reply: We can't be expected to report planes that land safely. But when a crash crystallizes anxiety about air safety, journalism should stress the news — yes, news — that flying is astonishingly safe.

George F. Will

Travel on U.S. commercial airlines is the safest form of transportation ever devised. Considering the hazards to pedestrians though the ages — prehistoric tigers, medieval brigands and today's muggers — flying is much safer than walking. And it has been becoming safer. The fatality rate per flying hour in 1986 was about half what it was in 1978. That drop coincided with deregulation, which dropped fares and democratized air travel. In 1967, only 10 percent of the population had ever flown. Last year alone, 31 percent of the adult population flew. In 1978, 275 million flew. This year, 450 million will.

The irrational fear of flying involves a mistaken apprehension of mid-air collision, particularly with small private planes that are 98 percent of all aircraft. Their operators constitute an upscale and ferocious lobby in defense of the sovereign American right to be mobile. They are not apt to be grounded. But they, too, have a remarkable safety record.

Still, as a safety expert says, it is possible to skate successfully on thin ice, but is better to skate on thick ice. Increased vigilance and spending are in order. The post-deregulation proliferation and then merging of airlines (today nine carriers have 90 percent of the passengers; at 15 major airports, one carrier has at least 50 percent or two have at least 70 percent of the business) has caused financial and morale problems that are producing maintenance and operational problems.

Today safety is being purchased by sacrificing service. Delays are inevitable because of the rising ratio of metal to tarmac. The number of planes is increasing much more rapidly than airport facilities. Everyone wants more airports; no one wants one next door. American government is a thickening web of blocking mechanisms, and Americans are increasingly skillful and aggressive in using those mechanisms, principally courts, to stymie action. Los Angeles, Chicago, Miami and other cities need new airports, but there probably will be no major airport built in the foreseeable future.

The problem is not money. There is a $5.6 billion surplus in the Aviation Trust Fund — your tax dollars not at work. The money is put there by users of the air system, principally travelers who pay an 8 percent excise tax on tickets. The politics of "deficit reduction" causes the administration and Congress to hoard the trust fund, to avoid adding a drop to the bucket of red ink.

This is preposterous parsimony in an air system short of controllers and the remarkable technology for early warning of wind shears, the cause of three crashes that have killed 404 people since 1975. If another such crash occurs because available technology was not purchased, there will be blood on the hands of all those who have made cheese-paring conservatism the doctrine of this decade.

Unsound policies, and posturing as a substitute for policy, flourish when the public has irrational risk perceptions. Journalism often manufactures these.

Facts about AIDS filter slowly through the fog of media-driven alarm, facts such as reports from the Centers for Disease Control that there is no evidence that AIDS will reach epidemic proportions among heterosexuals other than intravenous drug abusers. Because highway and handgun carnage is constant and spread across the continent, the carnage is not as telegenic or newsworthy as rare air tragedies.

But journalism should do justice to the fact that last year the average daily death rate from automobile accidents was 126. The average Sunday toll was probably higher than the 156 killed in the Detroit air crash two Sundays ago. Any politician inflaming public anxiety by declaiming about the "crisis" in air safety should be asked how he voted on increasing from 55 to 65 miles per hour the speed limit on rural interstate highways. That change will have the predictable result of producing far more fatalities each year than will result from airplane mishaps.

Suicide and homicide together are, after accidents and cancer and heart disease, the fourth leading cause of American deaths. Guns were involved in 61 percent — approximately 12,000 — of last year's 19,796 homicides. That one-year total of gun-related homicides is nearly double the number of fatalities from all accidents in the history of U.S. commercial aviation. Lawmakers who will not control handguns should not fly around making speeches about air safety.

Plausible deniability's an age-old excuse!

One of the good things to come out of the Iran-contra hearings was the phrase "plausible deniability" used by the White House minions. The object of plausible deniability was to give the President an out if anyone attempted to trace dirty White House linen to the Oval Office.

Art Buchwald

"The President didn't know because I didn't tell him," bragged Admiral Poindexter during the hearings, thus giving Mr. Reagan the deniability he so badly needed during the worst period of his term.

It is also believed that other witnesses provided themselves with plausible deniability while cooking up various covert actions, but each witness was judged differently. The public decided in the case of Albert Hakim that his deniability was a work of treachery, while in the case of Ollie North it was an act of patriotism.

Although plausible deniability became fashionable during the Iran-contra hearings it is really as old as American apple pie, and there isn't a segment of our society that doesn't use it.

For example, suppose you are waiting on a check from a company. This is the kind of plausible deniability the firm provides: "We're sorry but Mr. Wigwam, who signs our checks, is in the hospital and won't be back for three months." Or "We regret our computer is down and we will not be able to deal with the problem until we hear from our programmer in Tokyo."

Tradesmen all carry plausible deniability cards in their wallets, which they take out and recite at will. "I didn't promise to deliver the slipcovers in August — I told you I would have them ready between August and November. It's written right here in my pocket calendar." That or "We were there yesterday but no one answered the door."

Personnel managers are experts in plausible deniability. "There must be some mistake. We never offered you a job — we just told you that if something opened up you would get equal consideration. If you don't accept this as a reasonable explanation we will shred all copies of your resume."

Even schoolchildren learn early in life to provide themselves with deniability. "I didn't know I was supposed to do homework because nobody told me." Or "Miss Mathers said I didn't have to turn in my term paper until Tuesday. I have the date marked in my assignment book, so she must have gotten her instructions all wrong."

And while we're at it, let's not forget the P.D. practiced by teenagers. "The reason I didn't bring the car home last night is it broke down and I could not find anyone to fix it, and I didn't want to leave it sitting out there on the Beltway, so I guarded it all night long."

"What proof do you have?"

"Penny sat up with me so I wouldn't get cold."

Plausible deniability is the most important kind of deniability there is. It is a story that can't be shaken whether told by an airline clerk who tells you you have no reservation or an auto mechanic who claims he has repaired your brakes. No one in the country could live without it. Even in affairs of the heart P.D. plays a most vital role. Who in this great country has not been caught going out with somebody while he or she belongs to another, and in defense uses the ultimate excuse, "I was only following orders."

Nunn out of '88 race

Nunn

ATLANTA (AP) — Sen. Sam Nunn, who had been considered a potentially strong conservative candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said today he will not run for the presidency in 1988 because of his family and Senate responsibilities.

Nunn spokesman Scott Maxwell said Nunn was sending out letters to the many supporters who encouraged him to run, telling them he had decided against running.

A conservative Southern Democrat, Nunn is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and the party's pre-eminent expert on defense matters.

Rep. Buddy Darden, D-Ga., said Nunn called him this morning to say he would not run. "He told me he felt that he would make a poor presidential candidate because he would be too distracted by his duties with the Armed Services Committee," Darden said.

Nunn's letter to supporters said he had been "surprised and honored by the many sincere offers of political and financial support that I have received from both old and new friends throughout the nation.

"I have decided not to enter the 1988 presidential race. My new responsibility as chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee weighs heavily in this decision. I know myself pretty well, and I have concluded that if I attempted to run for president, and also carry out my Senate duties, I would wind up doing neither well.

"With a son in high school and a daughter in college, I am also concerned about the impact of a presidential campaign on my family."

Darden and other Georgia Democrats said they were disappointed.

"I was very, very sad to hear that," the congressman said. "I think he would have made an excellent president."

Laxalt drops out; Republicans eager to fill void

Laxalt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Laxalt's decision to drop out of the race for president leaves at least three of the six remaining Republican contenders laying claim to the conservative philosophy of the former Nevada senator.

Laxalt, 65, announced Wednesday he was ending his pursuit of the presidency for financial reasons. "While the political response was encouraging, the financial outlook was not as bright," he said.

His departure leaves Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and former Delaware Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV as the main conservative contenders to carry the "Reagan revolution" into 1988.

Laxalt helped usher in that revolution by chairing Reagan's three presidential campaigns and is a close friend of the president.

Kemp and du Pont claim to represent the brand of conservatism that brought Reagan to the White House in 1980, and mentions of Reagan were prominent in their reactions to Laxalt's withdrawl.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, though not invoking the spirit of Reaganism, cited his friendship with Laxalt and similar voting records in the Senate.

In a statement issued without fanfare through a news wire that carries press releases, Laxalt said that "even if our projections for fund raising had been met, the money, in my opinion, would have been inadequate to conduct a viable presidential campaign."

Laxalt, who has raised more than $1 million, has said that he wanted to have $2 million in the bank by Oct. 1.

"In a way I am saddened to see Paul Laxalt withdraw from the race because he was promoting the same conservative principles I promote," Kemp said in a statement. "I know that Paul will resume his role as a major leader of the Republican Party. I hope he will work with those of us who share his principles in taking the Reagan revolution to its next stage in the next administration."

Dave Hoppe, Kemp's administrative assistant, said Laxalt "certainly" would be involved in a Kemp administration.

"One would be foolish not to involve the talents of a man like Paul Laxalt in any conservative Republican administration," he said.

Du Pont said in a statement: "Paul Laxalt was a central figure in the changes that Ronald Reagan helped us make after he was elected in 1980, and I expect Paul will continue to play a dominant role in advocating the same kind of common sense changes during the 1988 campaign, even though he will not be a candidate."

A Dole spokeswoman said his campaign "sees a lot of opportunity to attract Senator Laxalt's supporters, particularly in the West."

"Senator Laxalt and Senator Dole are both close friends and they both have similar records in the Senate," said Mari Maseng, the Dole campaign's communications director.

The presidential campaign of Vice President George Bush refused, for its part, to acknowledge directly the benefit of Laxalt's withdrawal.

"He is truly the best friend a Republican president could ever have," Bush campaign chairman Lee Atwater said. "Several months ago, when Senator Laxalt got into the race, political experts seemed unanimous in their opinion that the vice president got hurt the most because of his relationship and closeness to President Reagan.

"So if you believe what the experts say, then the vice president now would have more to gain by him leaving the race. But we don't look at it that way. We just say that a good man is out of the race."

NATION in brief

Air Force resumes tests of AMRAAM missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force is renewing testing of its new AMRAAM air-to-air missile after a month-long suspension prompted by an unexpected failure of the weapon.

Testing resumed at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida on Aug. 22, when an AMRAAM successfully tracked and intercepted a jet-powered drone after being fired from an F-15 fighter, the service said Wednesday.

It was the first test since a July 17 trial ended in unexpected failure. The Air Force last week said the failure was linked to a computer software problem in the missile's autopilot guidance system that has since been corrected.

The AMRAAM — Advanced Medium Range Air-to-Air Missile — is a so-called "smart" missile that has been under development since 1981.

IRS raises interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service in October will increase the rate of interest that it levies on overdue tax bills and pays on overdue refunds.

Starting Oct. 1, the interest rate on underpayments will increase from 9 percent to 10 percent, and the interest rate the IRS pays taxpayers on overdue refunds will rise from 8 percent to 9 percent.

The agency sets the rates every three months, with the rate on underpayments always 1 percent higher than the rate on overpayments. The increases announced Wednesday were the first changes since Jan. 1.

Malpractice limits urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group that is pushing for limits on medical malpractice awards is turning its attention to state legislatures because it says Congress is unlikely to enact such restrictions at the national level.

James K. Coyne, a former GOP congressman from Pennsylvania who now heads the American Tort Reform Association, said Wednesday that without action by Congress, "it takes 50 different battlefields" to make progress toward revamping "the lottery, roulette wheel (system) that we have today."

Kirk Johnson, general counsel of the American Medical Association, joined Coyne at a news conference to call for action at both the state and federal level.

Coyne said a main objective of his association, which claims about 400 trade associations, businesses and professional groups, will be to generate grassroots pressure to prompt legislators to act.

PRECIPITATION: Rain, Showers, Snow, Flurries

FRONTS: Cold, Warm, Stationary, Occluded

TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH — (Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING — (A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

Forecast for 8 AM Friday

In North Texas, showers and scattered thunderstorms eastern half late tonight and Friday. Cooler Friday. Lows tonight from around 60 west to the lower 70s southeast. Highs on Friday from the lower 80s to near 90.

In West Texas, scattered showers and thunderstorms tonight becoming widely scattered Friday. Locally heavy rain east central and southeast tonight. Cooler southeast today. A little warmer north Friday. Lows tonight mid 50s to 70s.

In South Texas, scattered thunderstorms north and southeast, widely scattered elsewhere through Friday. Otherwise generally partly cloudy. Highs Friday in the 90s. 100 to 104 southwest. Lows tonight in the 70s, lower 80s along the coast.

Partly cloudy skies expected

Skies will be partly cloudy tonight with a 30 percent chance of rain, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The low temperature should be in the lower 60s with winds northeasterly at five to 10 mph.

Friday's skies will remain partly cloudy with the chance of thunderstorms decreasing to 20 percent. The high is expected to be in the lower 80s with winds being northeasterly to easterly at five to 10 mph.

Wednesday's high of 82 was 21 degrees under the record high of 103 set for that date in 1964. Today's low of 62 was only one degree above the record low of 61 set for this date in 1961.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms were widespread across Texas today and forecasts called for the precipitation to continue through Friday across most of the state.

Forecasts called for occasional showers and thunderstorms spreading across much of the state tonight and Friday.

Forecasters warned of the possibility of locally heavy rain over central and southeastern portions of West Texas tonight.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s with a few readings expected to dip into the mid 50s in the mountains of Southwest Texas.

Highs Friday will be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

Showers and a few embedded thunderstorms were being reported over the Panhandle and South Plains at dawn behind a weak cold front that stretches across Northwest Texas.

NATION

Snow fell today in South Dakota, while a slow-moving cold front brought a band of showers and thunderstorms from the upper Ohio Valley to the southern Plains.

Rain was common in the upper Ohio Valley and lower Great Lakes, and from southern Missouri to southern Kansas and northwestern Texas.

An unwelcome reprise of rainfall in the Chicago area brought out sandbags and mops as hundreds of residents flocked to suburban centers to apply for government disaster aid to help recover from flooding just two weeks ago.

Authorities declared states of emergency Wednesday in Cook and Du Page counties as the already record monthly rainfall increased with a daylong downpour of 2.46 inches by 7 p.m. Wednesday. But the worst appeared to be over by Wednesday night, with only light rain expected in the area today.

Efforts to recruit volunteer crossing guards unsuccessful

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The City of Midland has been unable to recruit volunteers for its crossing guard program that was cut about $30,000 this year in expectation of free help, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said Wednesday.

McGregor said he didn't know why the six-week effort failed to recruit any volunteer crossing guards, but officials will continue to try to drum up free labor.

"We've had tremendous success getting people everywhere else," he said.

The city's volunteer coordinator, Paul Tryson, has recruited nine volunteers for the city's new Midland Volunteer Program, but none have wanted to work as crossing guards, McGregor said.

Under the plan, paid guards would continue to work the busier crossings, while volunteers would man the crossings where traffic is slower, officials said.

Police Chief Richard Czech met Wednesday morning with the leaders of Volunteers in Public Schools to inform them about the city's desire for volunteer crossing guards, Czech said.

City officials will also meet with PTA officials about the volunteer need, McGregor said.

The $90,000 program with 19 part-time employees, was cut by about $30,000, or three guards, during budget hearings this summer, McGregor said.

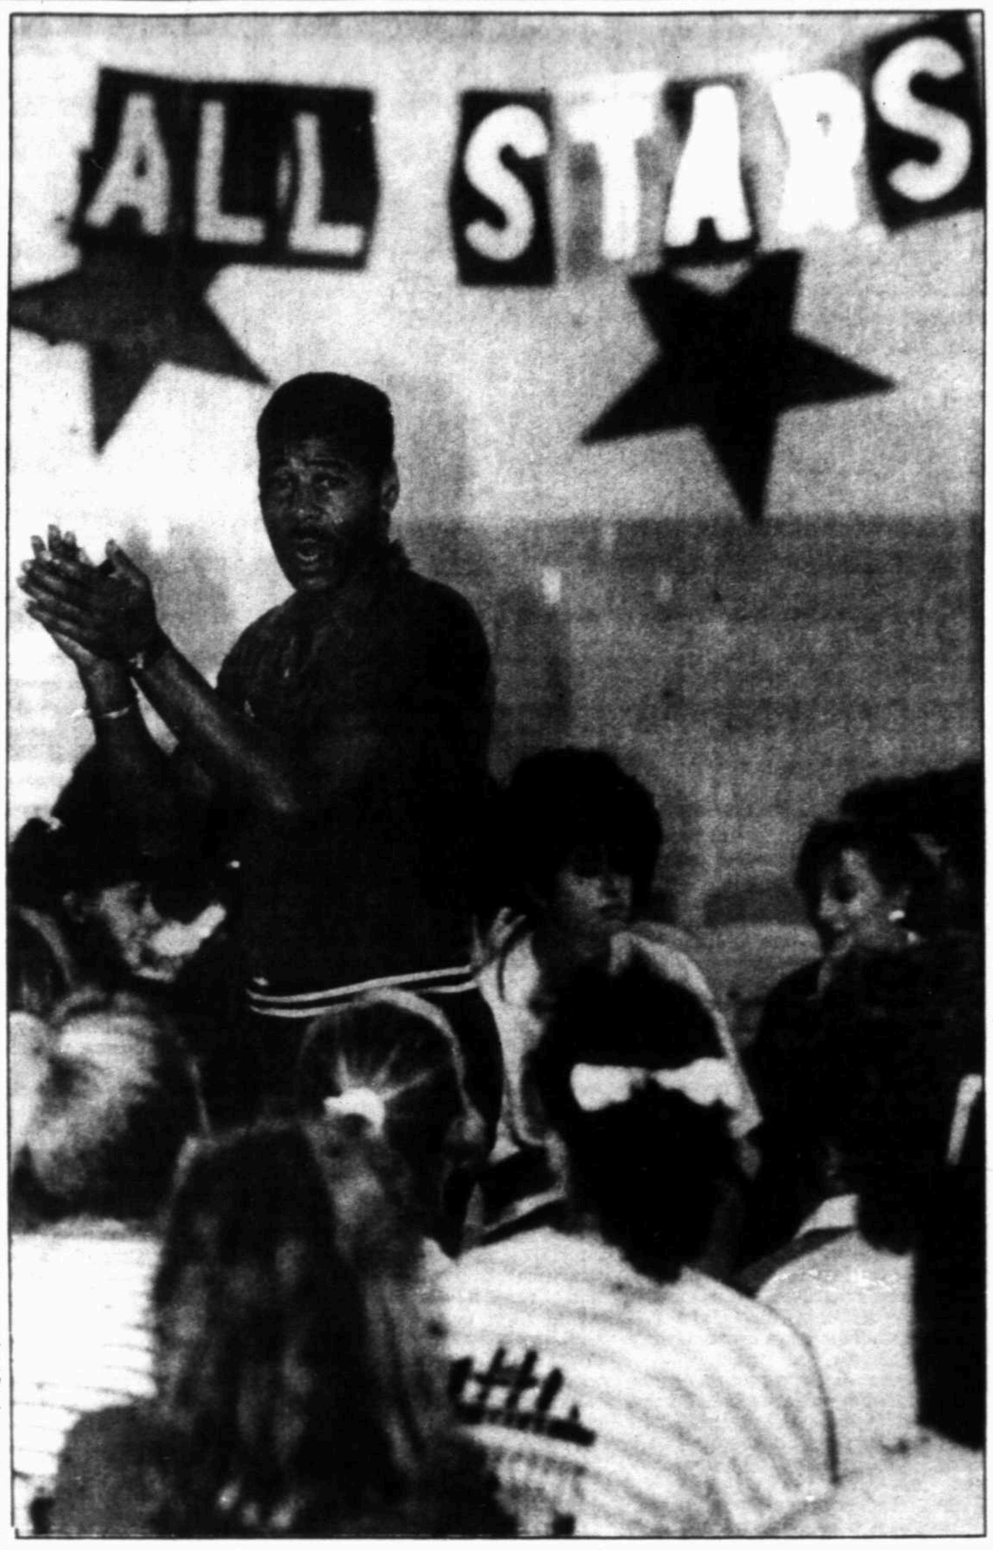

Unless some volunteers are recruited by January, the guards' salaries may have to be cut from the present level of $5.10 to $6.20 an hour to $4 to $4.50 an hour to close the gap on the budget cuts made in the program's funding, McGregor said.

Meanwhile, with school starting next Tuesday, three more guards — who work an hour and 15 minutes in the morning and the same period in the afternoon — have been hired to take up the slack, he said.

To make up the cuts in the program, the city staff also might ask for more money out of the $12 million surplus fund or combine money from the surplus fund with salary cuts, he added.

Also, a survey on the 19 crosswalks areas will be conducted to see if some areas have low traffic and no need for a guard, McGregor said.

"If we find some of the crosswalk areas can be reduced, maybe we can do that also," he said.

Fisher: Enhanced 911 worth cost

Advisory board to explore feasibility of system

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County Judge Jan Fisher said Wednesday members of a newly created emergency communications advisory board are scheduled to meet for the first time next Tuesday to explore the feasibility of implementing enhanced 911 phone service.

"I personally think enhanced 911 would be worth the cost," the judge said. "And, I'm basing that on the cost (estimate) I've heard today, which ranges from a low of $200,000 to $500,000."

On Monday, Ector County commissioners named retired County Purchasing Agent Everett Berry and John Landgraf, a partner in the engineering counsulting firm of Landgraf & Crutcher and immediate past president of the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce, to the advisory board.

The Odessa City Council Tuesday voted to appoint Mayor Don Carter to the board.

The Goldsmith City Council representative will be Clifford White. Other members include John Scott, named by the Ector County Volunteer Fire Department Advisory Board, and Betty White, representing Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., as a non-voting board member.

Enhancement of the existing 911 phone system would mean the phone number and location of persons dialing the emergency phone number for police, fire or medical assistance would be automatically displayed on a computer video terminal without any vocal contact with the caller.

Ms. Fisher said the system would be particularly beneficial in instances where, perhaps, young children taught to call the emergency number, but unable to give a name, address or describe an emergency situation, would have help dispatched to their location.

The response would be the same for anyone unable to verbally communicate their needs for any reason, she said.

According Ms. Fisher, the communication advisory board will be considering several funding options. One proposal calls for a tax of up to 6 percent on residential and business phone bills. Another would simply fund the cost of the enhanced service from general revenue funds.

> "I personally think enhanced 911 would be worth the cost. And, I'm basing that on the cost (estimate) I've heard today, which ranges from a low of $200,000 to $500,000."
>
> — Ector County Judge Jan Fisher

The imlementation of a tax on phone bills would require formation of a communications district. The proposition would require a vote of Ector County citizens prior to Jan. 1, 1988.

Should local governmental entities decide not to seek creation of a communications district with taxing authority, Ms. Fisher said, the future of such service would shift to control of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, which encompasses a 17-county area.

Local governmental entities even then would have the option of forming their own district and utilizing tax revenues to fund the enhanced system.

The judge indicated, however, she favors immediate action and that some of the other options offer a delay in implementation of a couple of years.

"Ultimately," she added, "even if a person does not believe enhanced 911 service is important and doesn't want it funded, the truth of the matter is, the state government believes it is, so you're going to have it whether you think it's desirable or not," stated Ms. Fisher.

During Tuesday's city council meeting, Acting City Manager Curtis Snow advised council members to retain local control of any emergency communications district that is formed.

Attorney for murder defendant calls trial 'a case of the mind'

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

A Midland attorney summing up his defense this morning of a 35-year-old man charged with murder called the trial in 142nd District Court "a case of the mind."

"It's a case of whether or not the hand was guided by the mind at a particular point in time," said Jeff Hinkley, attorney for Manuel Parra Gonzales, a former Midland parks groundskeeper.

A May 14 Midland County grand jury indictment alleged that Gonzales on April 23 shot Ruben Huitron of Midland, a distant cousin, with a .30-.30-caliber rifle.

Gonzales, a Mexican national with permanent resident alien status in the United States, has spent a total of 15 years in this country, according to the facts as they emerged in Judge Pat Baskin's courtroom.

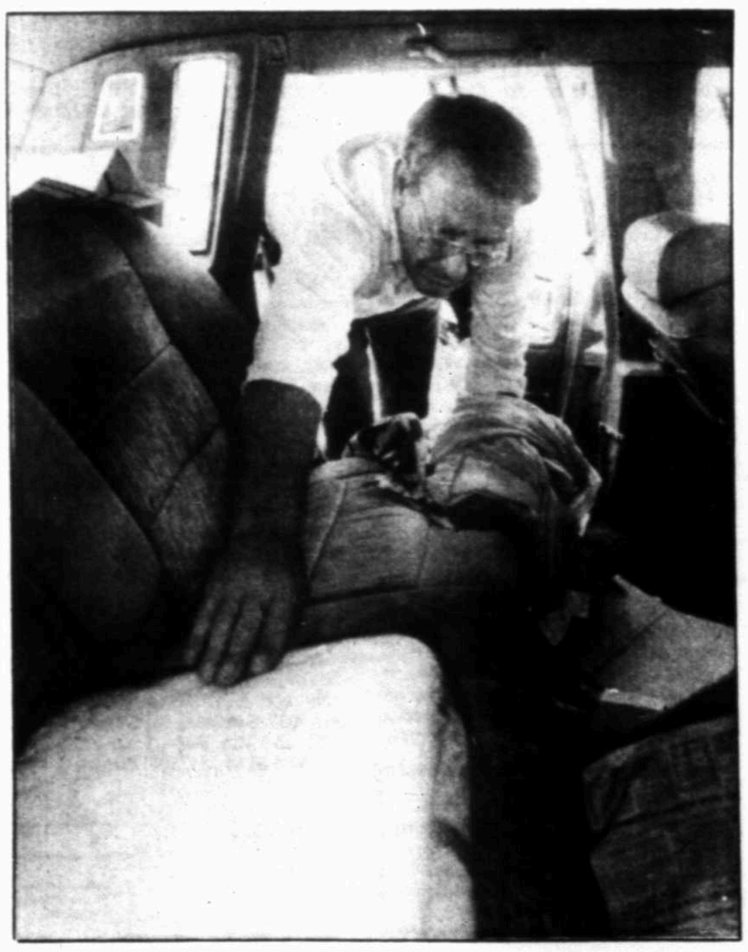

Hinkley of Midland said Wednesday his client testified earlier that in 1974 he had been raped by the deceased and the victim had "constantly been tormenting him on many occasions over the years."

Hinkley, however, said his client did not remember the alleged rape because he had passed out before its occurance.

Gonzales had gone looking for the man on the day of the shooting, intending to find out why the man kept taunting him and to ask him to stop, Hinkley said the defendant testified.

Gonzales testified and heard other witnesses with the aid of an interpreter.

Painter: Bust will put dent in black tar heroin trade

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said Wednesday the drug bust he conducted late that afternoon should make a sizable dent in the black tar heroin trade in the city.

Two Midlanders were arrested between 3:30 and 5 p.m. Wednesday at a southeast-side convenience store for possession of cocaine and heroin, Painter said.

Painter enlisted the aid of the Midland Police Department's canine unit to conduct the bust, said a police department spokesman today.

Painter's jurisdiction encompasses the city as well as the county and that is why his department had authorization to arrest the two, the police department spokesman said.

The man and the woman were expected to be arraigned sometime this afternoon and are being held in the Midland County Jail without bond, said a sheriff's department spokesman this morning.

The woman was the proprietor of the convenience store, Painter said.

The sheriff added that he considered the woman to be a "major" heroin dealer in Midland and that the man arrested confessed Wednesday he was out on parole for possession of heroin.

The sheriff's department had served a search warrant on the woman late last year, but it was to no avail, the sheriff said.

Midland County taxing units receive $92,209 from banks' franchise tax

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

State Comptroller Bob Bullock says 2,011 taxing units received checks totaling $9.4 million from this year's franchise tax on banks.

Taxing jurisdictions in Midland County received $92,209. Midland County Hospital District received $34,436, Midland Independent School District got $369,368 and Midland Junior College District netted $45,722, according to the study issued earlier this week.

In Ector County, checks totaled $42,963, while the Ector County Independent School District received $109,711.

Banks have paid franchise taxes since 1984, when the Texas Legislature allocated receipts from the tax to cities, counties, school districts and other local taxing units where the banks are located.

Banks are taxed at the same rate as other state corporations and the tax is prorated among local taxing units based on their tax rates.

Because of declining local tax revenues, the Comptroller's office reported Midland County taxing units received less money this year than in prior years.

Midland County allocations dropped 9.55 percent from the 1986 payment of $101,950. MCHD received 6.19 percent less than it received last year, MISD got 11.87 percent less in total payments, and MJCD earned 9.44 percent less than last year.

Ector County recorded an 18.28 percent decline in allocations from the $52,575 it received in 1986. ECISD earned 16.92 percent less from the franchise tax.

Other counties statewide also received less money from the tax on banks this year as the result of de-

Unveiling new cars by dealers faded bit of Americana

Todd

It's almost September, and the drama ought to be building up to a crescendo right now. But it's not. It's a faded piece of Americana, a sort of tamed but exciting ballyhoo — new-car announcements.

It was a gimmick, and it worked.

If memory serves me true, new-car dealers in the 1950s and probably earlier announced striking designs and redesigns of automobile models. But they cloaked those designs and built up the drama until the unveiling, which was associated with fall and the beginning of another school year.

The drama was intriguing.

On the days of the new showings, veils would be removed from chrome-stripped cars, and showroom windows would be striped of paper to reveal the new-car models.

Boys, who only could afford to look and not buy, were eager to compare any resemblance of the new models with older models or to compare envisioned attributes and liabilities of one model with those of competing models.

The unveilings were exciting even if the new models didn't match the expectations of youthful car fanciers.

The radical redesigns that marked the transition from the 1940s to the 1950s were far more exciting than going into town for a Saturday-afternoon ice-cream cone and moving-picture show, as we called movies then, and rivaled the drum rolls of Christmas-gift giving. I remember the advent of Ford's sporty Thunderbird and its rival, the Chevrolet Corvette.

Now, those touring sports cars — those driving machines — made more of an initial impact on some of us poor boys than did the burst of rock-'n'-roll music and rivaled the sensuous streamlined beauty of the nation's best girl, the Marilyn Monroe of the 1950s.

Then came along the revolutionary Edsel. It bombed out but never really was a dud; it had many fine and grand features. But the sedan never grabbed the nation's attention with the flair with which the sporty Thunderbird and Corvette did. Despite its fancy interior features, it was without the outward style of the Chevrolet of 1955, 1956, and 1957.

The Edsel died shortly after its introduction in the late 1950s. Today, Edsel fans and proud owners treasure the car just like aficionados of the Corvair, the Hudson, the Packard, the DeSoto, the Nash, the Henry J, the Kaiser, the Willys Jeep, the Scout and other extinct models.

The automobile admirers' godsend of the 1960s must be the original Mustang, which, like the early models of the Thunderbird and the Corvette, are classics.

Americans, you might say, are a queer lot when it comes to their cars. Indeed, you might be safer flirting with a fellow's best gal than you would be messing with his car.

That's his pride — his showpiece. But I wouldn't advise messing with either. Chances are, the automobile will outlast his girl and will be about as faithful to him as he is to it.

The girl might have a different perspective, but I wouldn't know about that.

Dallas doctors correct facial deformities of blind prodigy

Blind pianist Jermaine Gardner, 4, plays for his mother, Jaqueline Kess-Gardner, two months after he had surgery at a Dallas hospital to correct facial deformities caused by birth defects.

AP Laserphoto

BALTIMORE (AP) — Blind musical prodigy Jermaine Gardner will grow up with one less physical stumbling block, thanks to a special foundation that paid for his facial reconstructive surgery.

"Like my nose?" the 4-year-old boy asks when visitors come to hear him perform works of Beethoven, Bach, Mozart, Chopin and Liszt memorized from tape recordings.

Last month he successfully underwent surgery to correct facial deformities he was born with: an abnormally bulged forehead, eyes spaced far apart, and a nose lacking a bridge.

Doctors at a Dallas hospital reshaped Jermaine's face and sculpted a new nose, allowing him to wear dark glasses for the first time. The surgery was paid for by the Texas-based Foundation for Craniofacial Deformities, which donates operations for up to four children annually through funds provided by the General Electric Foundation.

Although Jermaine can't see the difference, he can feel it.

"He feels the change. He loves what's happened. All of it," said his mother, Jacqueline Kess-Gardner, 34.

The July 27 procedures at Humana Advanced Surgical Insitute at Medical City Dallas were the first phase of surgery. Jermaine still faces further reconstructive work in January. The total cost of the procedures is about $200,000.

The surgery should spare him some of the psychological trauma of growing up disfigured, his mother said. "Other kids can be cruel about looks, more so than the blindness. We want him to have as many advantages as possible."

Jermaine's musical ability was apparent when as an infant he climbed up to a piano and played a song he had just heard. At 13 months, he could play the melody of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

His talent has drawn attention from national magazines and television, and landed him special performances. Publicity from one of those events changed his life.

In May, Ms. Kess-Gardner and her autoworker husband, James Gardner, 36, accepted an invitation for their son to perform in Los Angeles at a surprise birthday party for Stevie Wonder, who shares Jermaine's blindness.

Jermaine played memorized selections from Wonder's album, "The Secret Life of Plants," she said, and the singer gave Jermaine an expensive keyboard synthesizer. The relationship brought Jermaine to the attention of the foundation.

His parents had some reservations about the operation for correcting his "facial clefting syndrome," a medical description for a range of birth-related facial deformities of unknown cause.

It involved peeling back the skin from part of Jermaine's face and head, moving his eye sockets closer together, lifting his cheeks, reshaping his forehead and taking some of the removed bone to construct a bridge for his nose.

Even though Dr. Kenneth Salyer assured Ms. Kess-Gardner that only low risks were associated with the procedure, she "worried about brain damage."

"I was worried that we'd jeopardize the gift God gave him just for a new nose," she said.

Jermaine's only complaint after the operation was that his face "felt fat." However, his mother had a moment of panic when he went to the piano 12 days after surgery and tried to play, but lost his concentration.

"I nearly freaked," she said.

But his gift returned in time for a thank-you recital he and his brother, Jamaal, 9, also a pianist, gave for a standing room-only crowd of more than 200 hospital patients, employees and visitors.

The publicity has had both good and bad effects, said Ms. Kess-Gardner. "I get a lot of calls from parents of blind kids, and it's nice to talk to them and let them know that you just never know what your children can accomplish. If other kids can be helped as a result of Jermaine, it's great."

But she's had to fend off interview requests and benefit performance invitations. The family got an unlisted telephone number and installed a high fence around the backyard to discourage gawkers.

"He can't really perform for everybody who asks, or he'll be burned out at age 4," said his mother. "I still want him to feel it's fun, not a chore."

Student discipline techniques illustrated

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County school district trustees engaged in "role playing" during a special meeting Wednesday night to illustrate the benefits of assertive discipline techniques in classes from kindergarten through 12th grade.

Bert Sims, a former high school principal who now represents Lee Canter & Associates of Santa Monica, Calif., explained that Canter developed the assertive discipline techniques in 1972 as a systematic classroom management tool.

The system, he said, incorporates specific fixed rules and consequences for unacceptable behavior by students.

According to Sims, some 750,000 teachers have been impacted by the system since its inception and, as a result of implementation of the program in schools around the country, including Midland County, about 13 million students have become "very high achieving," he stated.

Assertive discipline concentrates on eliminating negative behavior on the part of students, which inhibits learning, through utilization of positive reionforcement techniques by teachers.

In effect, assertive discipline presents fixed rules, posted prominently in each classroom, along with consequences (punishments) meted out for each infraction of acceptable behavior standards.

The system, according to Sims, leaves nothing to a student's imagination. Every student is made pointedly aware of the standards of acceptable behavior.

Sims said that, by having the system prevail throughout the various echelons of a school district, there are no surprises.

A principal, he added, doesn't have to wonder why a student is sent to him or her for disciplinary measures. The principal knows, under the system, that a student has "earned" a specific number of demerits for unacceptable behavior in a classroom. Students also earn credits for acceptable behavior in class, he said.

Such fixed procedures, Sims said, benefit school boards too, because they are assured teachers have been properly responding and — theoretically — not precipitating situations that could lead to lawsuits concerning deprivation of students' due process rights, Sims said.

ECISD Board President Vickie Gomez and board member Bill Turner were singled out by Sims as the "ideal" and "problem" students.

Ms. Gomez was instructed to raise her hand to answer every question, while Turner was instructed to continually touch her, a violation of acceptable behavior, Sims said.

Sims verbally and physically demonstrated how an "unassertive" teacher might handle such an infraction of rules, how a "hostile" teacher would react to the same situation and why a teacher using assertive classroom management techniques was the most effective of the three.

Part of the assertive discipline program involves placing the name of a misbehaving student on the classroom blackboard, with checks marked for each infraction.

Ms. Gomez questioned if this would work with senior students. Sims assured her that, as a former high school principal, he found that students in the higher grades respond just as well to assertive discipline methods as do students in lower grades.

The program was first introduced in lower grades of the ECISD system last year. This year, teachers in all grades are being instructed in assertive discipline techniques.

ECISD Superintendent Hugh Hayes said he has seen the system work well in other school systems and is pleased it is being implemented in the Ector County school system.

Clean-up volunteers sought

From Staff Reports

Volunteers are still needed for Saturday's Midland Pride Day, an event designed to clean up Midland.

Volunteers will meet at the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, 401 N. Weatherford, at 8:30 a.m. Saturday for assignments.

According to organizers, a total of 50 senior citizens' yards will be cleaned during the course of the day.

Volunteers should bring working gloves, rakes, shovels and lawn mowers.

They also need bring a sack lunch. The should wear a large hat and suntan lotion, organizers said.

The event is being sponsored by Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Midland Jaycees, Eastside Economic Development Task Force, Clean Midland, City of Midland Code Enforcement, League of United Latin American Citizens, Volunteer Center, Knights of Columbus, Casa De Amigos and Citywide Community Services.

For additional information, call 682-2960, 682-5326 or 684-5866.

Police probe robbery

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating an aggravated robbery which occurred early this morning.

Reports said the suspect entered the lobby of the Greyhound Bus Lines Terminal at 1308 W. Front St. shortly before 3 a.m.

The counter attendant, Abel Paredes, told police the suspect crawled through a package shoot to get behind the counter.

Once behind the counter, Paredes told police the suspect approached him with a knife.

Reports said Paredes backed away from the counter and the suspect then opened the cash drawer and took about $70 in coins and bills.

The suspect left the bus station on foot south across the railroad tracks, reports said.

Paredes was not injured in the robbery.

The suspect was described as a Hispanic male, about 27-years-old, 5-feet, 8-inches tall, about 160 pounds and had black hair and brown eyes.

New DA appointed

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements this morning selected a Monahans lawyer to be the new district attorney for Reeves, Ward and Loving counties.

Hal R. Upchurch will replace Jack L. McGowen of Pecos, who resigned, effective Sept. 2. The post will then be on the 1988 ballot.

Upchurch, 43, is a member of the Monahans Chamber of Commerce and earned his law degree from the University of Houston.

Cattle truck overturns

AMARILLO (AP) — A cattle truck overturned today at an Interstate 40 interchange, spilling steers into rush-hour traffic and killing a person inside the truck, officials say.

Another person in the truck was seriously injured, said police who scurried to lasso the cattle that blocked all lanes of the interchange at about 7:30 a.m.

Police spokesman Ralph Fletcher said law enforcement officers and people from the Amarillo Livestock Auction are "searching on foot, in pickups and cars" for the 25 to 50 head of cattle.

The tractor-trailer rig flipped over near an exit ramp and rolled down a shallow embankment. Potter and Randall county authorities were summoned to round up portable pens.

Wednesday, however, "we had the proper opportunity," Painter said. The search warrant garnered deputies at least 32 "papers" of black tar heroin and unquantified amounts of cocaine, the sheriff continued.

A substance believed to be heroin was found in the woman's pants pockets, a deputy said Wednesday.

When searching a car belonging to one of the suspects, authorities found new clothing and a bedspread which was believed to be materials traded for drugs, Sheriff's Department officer Joe Carr said.

The convenience store sold — besides usual grocery items — accoutrements for the practice of voodoo and witchcraft, Painter confirmed.

TRIAL

The defense Wednesday afternoon presented a series of witnesses, many of them Midland Parks and Recreation Department employees, who vouched for the defendant's character.

Also testifying to Gonzales' "peaceful" and "law abiding" nature was the man's current employer, Dick Sparks, for whom the defendant works as a pipe yard laborer.

A Lubbock psychologist, Dr. Richard Wall, testified Wednesday afternoon about the defendant's state of mind during a three-hour interview June 22.

Wall said the man when talking about events surrounding the shooting was in a tense emotional state. He was suffering from what the psychologist called a "post traumatic stress disorder" similar to that experienced by Vietnam veterans.

Huitron's sometimes "graphic" taunts were the source of prolonged periods of stress to the defendant, the doctor testified.

Because of the teasing, the man had suffered recurrent flashbacks and "night terrors" that detrimentally affected his family life, the doctor testified.

Gonzales, the father of five children, had questioned his capabilies as a father and husband because of the taunts, the doctor said.

As a result, Gonzales suffered from "decompression" on the day of the shooting, an episode where he lost "the organization of personality" and could "no longer function in an organized, adult, consistent way," Wall said.

Said Hinkley during his summation this morning, "Ruben took from that man something that was very personal and very vital."

Still to come this morning was final arguments by District Attorney Al Schorre and jury deliberations.

AT&T ANNOUNCES UPCOMING PRICE CHANGES FOR SOME TEXAS INTRASTATE SERVICES

AT&T announces the following price changes for some of its Texas intrastate services. These changes, which more closely reflect the actual costs incurred by AT&T in providing these services, will become effective on October 1, 1987.

- SDN (Software Defined Network) Schedule B prices will be reduced an overall 7.1%. Schedule C prices will be reduced 4.4% for the initial 30-second rate period of each call.
- WATS 80 service prices for both the initial period 80-hour usage and additional period usage will increase 5%.
- The monthly prices for AT&T's Private Line Service will increase up to $25 per channel termination for Analog services and 10% for Digital Data Services.
- A $25 monthly surcharge will also apply to any private lines which may be used to access the local exchange network, unless certified as exempt by the customer. The $25 surcharge, which was previously authorized by the Public Utility Commission of Texas, is a flow through of charges assessed by the Local Exchange Companies to AT&T for those Private Line services.

The combined effect of these price changes is expected to produce approximately $4.99 million annual revenue, which is approximately .5% of AT&T's annual revenues for all Texas intrastate services.

If you have questions regarding the changes for Private Line service, please call AT&T toll-free at 1-800-345-5092. If you have questions regarding the WATS or SDN price changes, please call our business consultants toll-free at 1-800-222-0400. AT&T's tariffs reflecting these changes will be filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas on August 31, 1987, with an effective date of October 1, 1987.

Persons who have questions regarding this tariff filing may also contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas in writing, at 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or by calling the Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223, or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 for teletypewriter for the deaf.

Men say teen offered sex to have family killed

STATE

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two men have told San Antonio investigators a 15-year-old high school girl offered them sex in exchange for the contract slayings of three members of her family, the San Antonio Express-News reported today.

The slayings of the girl's mother, 11-year-old sister and 6-year-old brother did not take place only because one of the two men called the FBI and cooperated with the investigation, a source close to the probe told the newspaper.

The men did accept sex from the 15-year-old Judson High School student, authorities say.

"They (the men) were following her (the girl) like Charles Manson," the source told the newspaper.

Alonzo Randolf III, 21, of San Antonio, was being held in the Bexar County Jail today on a charge of conspiracy to commit murder. He was jailed Wednesday night when he failed to post bond set by Night Magistrate Quon Lew, according to court records.

The teen-age girl was turned over to juvenile authorities on a similar charge.

No charges have been filed against the other man, a 20-year-old who police said called the FBI and cooperated with authorities.

"He (Randolf) was saying, 'The murders will happen, only (the girl) can stop this,'" the source said. The man made the comment while talking to FBI agents and the Texas Rangers, the source said.

The man who cooperated with police said he was good with a rifle and at first agreed to assist in the murders, which were to have been committed late today, the source said.

The men at first agreed to the murders for "more than $1,000," the source said, but when the girl said she did not have the money, the men agreed to sex as payment.

Both men had sex with the teen at separate times between Sunday and Tuesday, all three told investigators, the source said.

The girl said she hated her mother and wanted her killed, but it was not clear why the girl also wanted her sister and brother killed, the source said.

The girl suggested that the men "cut their throats," reports indicated.

The girl objected when one of the men suggested that they could burn the family home down to cover up the slayings because she said she didn't want to lose her belongings.

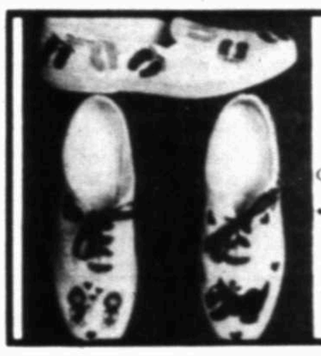

In her statement, the girl, described by police as a chronic runaway, told authorities she had used LSD, a hallucinatory drug.

Dallas doctors correct facial deformities of blind prodigy

Blind pianist Jermaine Gardner, 4, plays for his mother, Jaqueline Kess-Gardner, two months after he had surgery at a Dallas hospital to correct facial deformities caused by birth defects.

AP Laserphoto

BALTIMORE (AP) — Blind musical prodigy Jermaine Gardner will grow up with one less physical stumbling block, thanks to a special foundation that paid for his facial reconstructive surgery.

"Like my nose?" the 4-year-old boy asks when visitors come to hear him perform works of Beethoven, Bach, Mozart, Chopin and Liszt memorized from tape recordings.

Last month he successfully underwent surgery to correct facial deformities he was born with: an abnormally bulged forehead, eyes spaced far apart, and a nose lacking a bridge.

Doctors at a Dallas hospital reshaped Jermaine's face and sculpted a new nose, allowing him to wear dark glasses for the first time. The surgery was paid for by the Texas-based Foundation for Craniofacial Deformities, which donates operations for up to four children annually through funds provided by the General Electric Foundation.

Although Jermaine can't see the difference, he can feel it.

"He feels the change. He loves what's happened. All of it," said his mother, Jacqueline Kess-Gardner, 34.

The July 27 procedures at Humana Advanced Surgical Insitute at Medical City Dallas were the first phase of surgery. Jermaine still faces further reconstructive work in January. The total cost of the procedures is about $200,000.

The surgery should spare him some of the psychological trauma of growing up disfigured, his mother said. "Other kids can be cruel about looks, more so than the blindness. We want him to have as many advantages as possible."

Jermaine's musical ability was apparent when as an infant he climbed up to a piano and played a song he had just heard. At 13 months, he could play the melody of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

His talent has drawn attention from national magazines and television, and landed him special performances. Publicity from one of those events changed his life.

In May, Ms. Kess-Gardner and her autoworker husband, James Gardner, 36, accepted an invitation for their son to perform in Los Angeles at a surprise birthday party for Stevie Wonder, who shares Jermaine's blindness.

Jermaine played memorized selections from Wonder's album, "The Secret Life of Plants," she said, and the singer gave Jermaine an expensive keyboard synthesizer. The relationship brought Jermaine to the attention of the foundation.

His parents had some reservations about the operation for correcting his "facial clefting syndrome," a medical description for a range of birth-related facial deformities of unknown cause.

It involved peeling back the skin from part of Jermaine's face and head, moving his eye sockets closer together, lifting his cheeks, reshaping his forehead and taking some of the removed bone to construct a bridge for his nose.

Even though Dr. Kenneth Salyer assured Ms. Kess-Gardner that only low risks were associated with the procedure, she "worried about brain damage."

"I was worried that we'd jeopardize the gift God gave him just for a new nose," she said.

Jermaine's only complaint after the operation was that his face "felt fat." However, his mother had a moment of panic when he went to the piano 12 days after surgery and tried to play, but lost his concentration.

"I nearly freaked," she said.

But his gift returned in time for a thank-you recital he and his brother, Jamaal, 9, also a pianist, gave for a standing room-only crowd of more than 200 hospital patients, employees and visitors.

The publicity has had both good and bad effects, said Ms. Kess-Gardner. "I get a lot of calls from parents of blind kids, and it's nice to talk to them and let them know that you just never know what your children can accomplish. If other kids can be helped as a result of Jermaine, it's great."

But she's had to fend off interview requests and benefit performance invitations. The family got an unlisted telephone number and installed a high fence around the backyard to discourage gawkers.

"He can't really perform for everybody who asks, or he'll be burned out at age 4," said his mother. "I still want him to feel it's fun, not a chore."

Student discipline techniques illustrated

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County school district trustees engaged in "role playing" during a special meeting Wednesday night to illustrate the benefits of assertive discipline techniques in classes from kindergarten through 12th grade.

Bert Sims, a former high school principal who now represents Lee Canter & Associates of Santa Monica, Calif., explained that Canter developed the assertive discipline techniques in 1972 as a systematic classroom management tool.

The system, he said, incorporates specific fixed rules and consequences for unacceptable behavior by students.

According to Sims, some 750,000 teachers have been impacted by the system since its inception and, as a result of implementation of the program in schools around the country, including Midland County, about 13 million students have become "very high achieving," he stated.

Assertive discipline concentrates on eliminating negative behavior on the part of students, which inhibits learning, through utilization of positive reionforcement techniques by teachers.

In effect, assertive discipline presents fixed rules, posted prominently in each classroom, along with consequences (punishments) meted out for each infraction of acceptable behavior standards.

The system, according to Sims, leaves nothing to a student's imagination. Every student is made pointedly aware of the standards of acceptable behavior.

Sims said that, by having the system prevail throughout the various echelons of a school district, there are no surprises.

A principal, he added, doesn't have to wonder why a student is sent to him or her for disciplinary measures. The principal knows, under the system, that a student has "earned" a specific number of demerits for unacceptable behavior in a classroom. Students also earn credits for acceptable behavior in class, he said.

Such fixed procedures, Sims said, benefit school boards too, because they are assured teachers have been properly responding and — theoretically — not precipitating situations that could lead to lawsuits concerning deprivation of students' due process rights, Sims said.

ECISD Board President Vickie Gomez and board member Bill Turner were singled out by Sims as the "ideal" and "problem" students.

Ms. Gomez was instructed to raise her hand to answer every question, while Turner was instructed to continually touch her, a violation of acceptable behavior, Sims said.

Sims verbally and physically demonstrated how an "unassertive" teacher might handle such an infraction of rules, how a "hostile" teacher would react to the same situation and why a teacher using assertive classroom management techniques was the most effective of the three.

Part of the assertive discipline program involves placing the name of a misbehaving student on the classroom blackboard, with checks marked for each infraction.

Ms. Gomez questioned if this would work with senior students. Sims assured her that, as a former high school principal, he found that students in the higher grades respond just as well to assertive discipline methods as do students in lower grades.

The program was first introduced in lower grades of the ECISD system last year. This year, teachers in all grades are being instructed in assertive discipline techniques.

ECISD Superintendent Hugh Hayes said he has seen the system work well in other school systems and is pleased it is being implemented in the Ector County school system.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Clean-up volunteers sought

From Staff Reports

Volunteers are still needed for Saturday's Midland Pride Day, an event designed to clean up Midland.

Volunteers will meet at the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, 401 N. Weatherford, at 8:30 a.m. Saturday for assignments.

According to organizers, a total of 50 senior citizens' yards will be cleaned during the course of the day.

Volunteers should bring working gloves, rakes, shovels and lawn mowers.

They also need bring a sack lunch. The should wear a large hat and suntan lotion, organizers said.

The event is being sponsored by Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Midland Jaycees, Eastside Economic Development Task Force, Clean Midland, City of Midland Code Enforcement, League of United Latin American Citizens, Volunteer Center, Knights of Columbus, Casa De Amigos and Citywide Community Services.

For additional information, call 682-2960, 682-5326 or 684-5866.

Police probe robbery

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating an aggravated robbery which occurred early this morning.

Reports said the suspect entered the lobby of the Greyhound Bus Lines Terminal at 1308 W. Front St. shortly before 3 a.m.

The counter attendant, Abel Paredes, told police the suspect crawled through a package shoot to get behind the counter.

Once behind the counter, Paredes told police the suspect approached him with a knife.

Reports said Paredes backed away from the counter and the suspect then opened the cash drawer and took about $70 in coins and bills.

The suspect left the bus station on foot south across the railroad tracks, reports said.

Paredes was not injured in the robbery.

The suspect was described as a Hispanic male, about 27-years-old, 5-feet, 8-inches tall, about 160 pounds and had black hair and brown eyes.

New DA appointed

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements this morning selected a Monahans lawyer to be the new district attorney for Reeves, Ward and Loving counties.

Hal R. Upchurch will replace Jack L. McGowen of Pecos, who resigned, effective Sept. 2. The post will then be on the 1988 ballot.

Upchurch, 43, is a member of the Monahans Chamber of Commerce and earned his law degree from the University of Houston.

Cattle truck overturns

AMARILLO (AP) — A cattle truck overturned today at an Interstate 40 interchange, spilling steers into rush-hour traffic and killing a person inside the truck, officials say.

Another person in the truck was seriously injured, said police who scurried to lasso the cattle that blocked all lanes of the interchange at about 7:30 a.m.

Police spokesman Ralph Fletcher said law enforcement officers and people from the Amarillo Livestock Auction are "searching on foot, in pickups and cars" for the 25 to 50 head of cattle.

The tractor-trailer rig flipped over near an exit ramp and rolled down a shallow embankment. Potter and Randall county authorities were summoned to round up portable pens.

Wednesday, however, "we had the proper opportunity," Painter said. The search warrant garnered deputies at least 32 "papers" of black tar heroin and unquantified amounts of cocaine, the sheriff continued.

A substance believed to be heroin was found in the woman's pants pockets, a deputy said Wednesday.

When searching a car belonging to one of the suspects, authorities found new clothing and a bedspread which was believed to be materials traded for drugs, Sheriff's Department officer Joe Carr said.

The convenience store sold — besides usual grocery items — accoutrements for the practice of voodoo and witchcraft, Painter confirmed.

TRIAL

The defense Wednesday afternoon presented a series of witnesses, many of them Midland Parks and Recreation Department employees, who vouched for the defendant's character.

Also testifying to Gonzales' "peaceful" and "law abiding" nature was the man's current employer, Dick Sparks, for whom the defendant works as a pipe yard laborer.

A Lubbock psychologist, Dr. Richard Wall, testified Wednesday afternoon about the defendant's state of mind during a three-hour interview June 22.

Wall said the man when talking about events surrounding the shooting was in a tense emotional state. He was suffering from what the psychologist called a "post traumatic stress disorder" similar to that experienced by Vietnam veterans.

Huitron's sometimes "graphic" taunts were the source of prolonged periods of stress to the defendant, the doctor testified.

Because of the teasing, the man had suffered recurrent flashbacks and "night terrors" that detrimentally affected his family life, the doctor testified.

Gonzales, the father of five children, had questioned his capabilies as a father and husband because of the taunts, the doctor said.

As a result, Gonzales suffered from "decompression" on the day of the shooting, an episode where he lost "the organization of personality" and could "no longer function in an organized, adult, consistent way," Wall said.

Said Hinkley during his summation this morning, "Ruben took from that man something that was very personal and very vital."

Still to come this morning was final arguments by District Attorney Al Schorre and jury deliberations.

TAX

clining local tax revenues, the comptroller's office reported.

Harris County received $4.3 million. The Houston Independent School District received $1.75 million and the city of Houston got $1.3 million.

Payments to taxing units in Dallas County totaled $1.6 million. Dallas ISD's payment was $583,603 and the city of Dallas received $535,806.

Tarrant County checks totaled $265,666, and total payments in Bexar County were $851,832.

AT&T ANNOUNCES UPCOMING PRICE CHANGES FOR SOME TEXAS INTRASTATE SERVICES

AT&T announces the following price changes for some of its Texas intrastate services. These changes, which more closely reflect the actual costs incurred by AT&T in providing these services, will become effective on October 1, 1987.

- SDN (Software Defined Network) Schedule B prices will be reduced an overall 7.1%. Schedule C prices will be reduced 4.4% for the initial 30-second rate period of each call.
- WATS 80 service prices for both the initial period 80-hour usage and additional period usage will increase 5%.
- The monthly prices for AT&T's Private Line Service will increase up to $25 per channel termination for Analog services and 10% for Digital Data Services.
- A $25 monthly surcharge will also apply to any private lines which may be used to access the local exchange network, unless certified as exempt by the customer. The $25 surcharge, which was previously authorized by the Public Utility Commission of Texas, is a flow through of charges assessed by the Local Exchange Companies to AT&T for those Private Line services.

The combined effect of these price changes is expected to produce approximately $4.99 million annual revenue, which is approximately .5% of AT&T's annual revenues for all Texas intrastate services.

If you have questions regarding the changes for Private Line service, please call AT&T toll-free at 1-800-345-5092. If you have questions regarding the WATS or SDN price changes, please call our business consultants toll-free at 1-800-222-0400. AT&T's tariffs reflecting these changes will be filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas on August 31, 1987, with an effective date of October 1, 1987.

Persons who have questions regarding this tariff filing may also contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas in writing, at 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or by calling the Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223, or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 for teletypewriter for the deaf.

Men say teen offered sex to have family killed

STATE

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two men have told San Antonio investigators a 15-year-old high school girl offered them sex in exchange for the contract slayings of three members of her family, the San Antonio Express-News reported today.

The slayings of the girl's mother, 11-year-old sister and 6-year-old brother did not take place only because one of the two men called the FBI and cooperated with the investigation, a source close to the probe told the newspaper.

The men did accept sex from the 15-year-old Judson High School student, authorities say.

"They (the men) were following her (the girl) like Charles Manson," the source told the newspaper.

Alonzo Randolf III, 21, of San Antonio, was being held in the Bexar County Jail today on a charge of conspiracy to commit murder. He was jailed Wednesday night when he failed to post bond set by Night Magistrate Quon Lew, according to court records.

The teen-age girl was turned over to juvenile authorities on a similar charge.

No charges have been filed against the other man, a 20-year-old who police said called the FBI and cooperated with authorities.

"He (Randolf) was saying, 'The murders will happen, only (the girl) can stop this,'" the source said. The man made the comment while talking to FBI agents and the Texas Rangers, the source said.

The man who cooperated with police said he was good with a rifle and at first agreed to assist in the murders, which were to have been committed late today, the source said.

The men at first agreed to the murders for "more than $1,000," the source said, but when the girl said she did not have the money, the men agreed to sex as payment.

Both men had sex with the teen at separate times between Sunday and Tuesday, all three told investigators, the source said.

The girl said she hated her mother and wanted her killed, but it was not clear why the girl also wanted her sister and brother killed, the source said.

The girl suggested that the men "cut their throats," reports indicated.

The girl objected when one of the men suggested that they could burn the family home down to cover up the slayings because she said she didn't want to lose her belongings.

In her statement, the girl, described by police as a chronic runaway, told authorities she had used LSD, a hallucinatory drug.

Little People educates public about dwarfism

By TED DUNCOMBE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The day his son Christopher was born, Steve Pers wondered when the boy would become a first-round draft pick for the Philadelphia Eagles.

A few hours later, a doctor told him never.

"He said, 'I just want you to know he's a dwarf,' " Pers recalled. "And then he started to go away. I grabbed him and asked, 'But is his mind OK?' "

The way the doctor announced the news 12 years ago hurt Pers, but he said he realizes now it was not unusual. Today he's involved with a local branch of Little People of America Inc., which not only learns about the medical aspects of dwarfism but also spreads information among parents and physicians.

"It's been not infrequent that doctors simply won't deal with dwarfs," said geneticist Charles I. Scott, chairman of the national group's medical advisory board. "That's changing."

A quarter-century ago, experts thought just three types of dwarfism existed, Scott said. Today, more than 100 types have been identified and possibly another 100 have been found in isolated cases, he said.

The increased knowledge has brought sweeping change to the medical treatment available to alleviate complications associated with dwarfism, said Scott, one of several medical experts speaking and giving workshops here recently during the Little People of America's 29th annual convention.

The convention drew more than 850 people, many of whom are dwarfs.

Scott's comments reflect what others see as a increasing sensitivity to the medical needs of little people.

"Public awareness is increasing," said Daniel R. Margulies, national president of the San Bruno, Calif.-based organization. "Things get better all the time."

The group helps distribute information to doctors who don't normally see dwarfism and helps educate members about new research findings.

"By recognizing a specific kind of short stature, you then know an individual is at risk for or has a given disorder," said Scott, director of the department of genetics at the Alfred I. du Pont Institute in Wilmington, Del.

The diagnosis allows doctors, for example, to perform surgery to strengthen fragile vertebrae that could otherwise damage the spinal cord and cause paralysis, he said.

Babies with achondroplasia, the most common form of dwarfism, sometimes have trouble breathing because their spinal cord is pinched at the neck, says Reed E. Pyeritz, a specialist in internal medicine and medical genetics at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

Surgeons now can enlarge the opening where the spinal cord enters the brain, relieving pressure on the spinal cord and preventing suffocation, he said.

"The major medical complications are usually secondary to the skeletal problems," Pyeritz said.

Other medical advances for dwarfs include hip replacement surgery and alignment of bowed legs, Scott said.

"Using a total hip replacement, they can now get around where they often used to be bedridden," he said. "The hardware's not off the rack. They have to have it made. But it's made a revolution for little people."

Scott said a major part of his role on the medical advisory board has been informing doctors of the advances at their disposal.

Cases of measles rising, CDC says

Hearst News Service

A new rash of measles has broken out around the country and its complications can be deadly serious.

There were twice as many cases of measles reported in the United States in 1986 than in the previous year, according to an article in Redbook, and that is four times as many cases as were reported in 1983.

Measles is on the rise, with regional epidemics sending thousands of youngsters to bed and complications landing many in the hospital.

"One of the primary reasons is a lack of vaccination among children 16 months to 4 years of age," said Dr. Stephen Preblud, of the Division of Immunization at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

These children should be getting live-virus measles vaccine, first licensed in the United States in 1968, which is 95 percent effective. The live-virus vaccine was largely responsible for reducing incidence of measles to an all-time low in 1983.

"What concerns us most," Preblud said, "is not so much the number of measles cases now, which is small compared with the number of cases we had in pre-vaccine years. Rather, it's the increase, especially among preschoolers.

"These children are old enough to be vaccinated — and should be receiving the shot if they've reached their 15th month — but they are not being vaccinated.

"Perhaps this is occurring in part because parents believe the earlier decline in measles has made their children safe. That's not true, and it's of great concern to us."

The reason for that concern is the serious complications that can develop in measles patients, including middle ear infection, pneumonia and encephalitis — inflammation of the brain, which can lead to brain damage and even death.

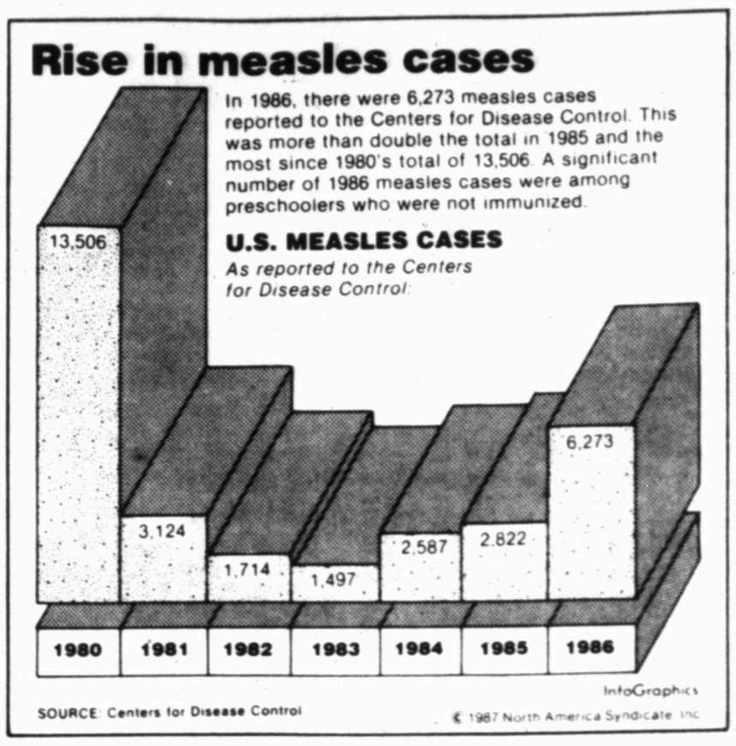

Another reason for alarm is the rapidity with which measles can spread from preschoolers throughout a community. In the Jersey City, N.J., area in November 1985, one preschool child became sick with measles. By June 1986 more than 900 cases had been reported — the largest outbreak in America in five years.

By the peak of the epidemic there had been one measles-associated case of encephalitis, more than 30 cases of pneumonia and some incidence of adult measles.

The Centers for Disease Control estimates that from 5 to 20 percent of adults are susceptible to childhood diseases such as measles, mumps and rubella (German measles), including hundreds of thousands of young adults who fell into the "immunization gap." They were never vaccinated, nor exposed to the diseases.

These diseases are more severe in adults than in children. In 1985, during college campus measles outbreaks in Boston and Illinois, as many as half of the infected young adults had to be hospitalized and three died of respiratory complications.

To guard against measles, make sure you and every child in your family has been vaccinated.

Research begins on vaccine to prevent AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Work on a vaccine to prevent AIDS has been expedited but it may be the mid-1990s before it could be available for wide use, the doctor overseeing human trials of the experimental vaccine said.

"Things are moving along extraordinarily quickly," Dr. Anthony S. Fauci said. "However, it is being done in a very well developed scientific fashion.

"There really has been no cutting of corners or what have you."

Scientists said they have begun soliciting the 81 volunteers who will take part in the test, which will run from six months to a year, and that the first subject could be vaccinated as early as next month.

"Even if we are fortunate enough to develop a safe and effective vaccine, it won't be until well into the 1990s, probably mid-1990s, before such a preparation is available for widespread use," Fauci said.

The prototype vaccine, made by MicroGeneSys Inc., a drug and biological products firm in West Haven, Conn., is the first of several similar candidate agents to win approval from the Food and Drug Administration for clinical trials. The approval was announced last week.

The tests, which will be conducted at the National Institutes of Health Clinical Center in Bethesda, Md., are designed solely to determine the safety of the potential vaccine and whether it raises any kind of immune response against the virus that causes AIDS, officials said.

The question of whether the preparation, derived from an inert protein from the virus that causes AIDS, will prevent people from getting the disease will be addressed in future studies, said Fauci, director of the NIH unit sponsoring the trial.

Vaccines made from inactive proteins of the virus are safe for volunteers and it is impossible for such a preparation to give anyone AIDS, he added.

Fauci told a briefing Tuesday that the first test group will include 75 homosexual men who are not infected with the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Homosexual males are one of the groups at the highest risk of contracting AIDS, and Fauci said they would be asked to volunteer because homosexuals eventually will be prime candidates for a vaccine if one is developed.

The volunteers, who must agree to follow safe sexual practices and other AIDS-avoidance behavior during the trial, will get various doses of the vaccine and some will get booster injections later, scientists said. Some of the participants will be in control groups and get injections of another type of protein.

AIDS is a contagious and incurable disease that attacks the body's immune system, rendering it incapable of resisting other diseases and infections.

Scientists think loss of one gene linked to colon, rectum cancers

By MALCOLM RITTER

NEW YORK (AP) — The loss of a gene that suppresses cell growth may play a key role in up to 40 percent of cases of colon and rectum cancer, the nation's second leading malignant disease, scientists reported.

Once the gene is isolated and analyzed, scientists may be able to develop better treatments for the cancer and an inherited predisposition toward it, one of the researchers said.

Colorectal cancer is the nation's second most common serious cancer, with an estimated 145,000 cases and 60,000 deaths this year.

The research found evidence for loss of the gene in about a quarter of colorectal tumors examined. But for technical reasons, the true figure may be 40 percent, said Walter Bodmer, director of research at the Imperial Cancer Research Fund in London.

Bodmer co-wrote two papers on the gene with colleagues in England and Israel in today's issue of the British journal Nature.

Scientists should be able to isolate the gene within a few years, Bodmer said in a telephone interview.

Bert Vogelstein, associate oncology professor at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, called the work important.

"Genes that suppress tumorigenesis (tumor development) and are lost during the development of cancer are probably important in a wide variety of human cancers," said Vogelstein. "This is a first step in identification of a gene which may be important in colon cancer."

Evidence of similar genes has been found in a form of lung cancer, the nation's most common serious cancer, and in several rare cancers, said Robert Weinberg of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Genes lie along threadlike molecules called chromosomes. Chromosomes come in pairs, one inherited from each parent, so each person generally gets two copies of each gene.

The research says copies of the gene linked to colorectal cancer are on the pair of chromosomes designated number 5. It also suggests that colorectal cancer may arise after both gene copies are lost or damaged.

The role of the gene is not known. But each copy in a cell appears to order production of some substance that keeps the cell's growth in check, Bodmer said. So if one copy is lost or damaged, production of the substance declines, and the cell may grow into a polyp.

That may be the case in familial adenomatous polyposis, an inherited condition that produces hundreds of intestinal polyps and predisposes a person to colorectal cancer, Bodmer said.

The person inherits the faulty copy of the gene. A polyp can progress toward cancer if the other gene copy then disappears, he said.

The same process may promote spontaneous cancers if one normal copy, and then the second, is lost or damaged, he said.

Other changes in the cell also are needed to produce cancer, researchers wrote.

For their study, the researchers noted that the second gene copy could be lost if a portion of the chromosome that carries it disappears. Such chromosomal losses can occur as cells reproduce.

So scientists looked for evidence of losses from chromosome 5, by comparing chromosomes from spontaneous colorectal tumors to those of tissues taken from adjacent normal tissue.

Evidence of loss appeared for 10 of 44 tumors studied with one test, six of 17 studied with another, and six of the 15 tumors studied with both tests.

Results suggest that cells usually lose their second copy of the gene through losing an entire chromosome 5, Bodmer said.

Familial adenomatous polyposis is estimated to occur in one in 10,000 to one in 5,000 people and lead to about 1 percent of colorectal cancers.

Bodmer and colleagues found that a bit of genetic material on chromosome 5 tended to follow polyposis through 79 people in six families.

WHEN FEET NEED REALIGNMENT

If you've developed a callus or build-up of thickened skin in certain areas of your feet, your feet may need realignment to prevent more serious foot disorders from developing.

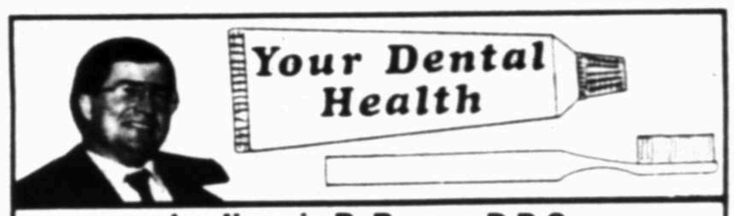

Calluses usually occur in areas of the feet subject to heavy friction and pressure, such as under the bony areas on the ball of the foot. The cause can often be traced to an improperly align foot. In some ways, this is similar to what happens to automobile tires when a car is out of alignment. A misaligned foot tries to compensate for the excessive wear by developing calluses. When affected area becomes red, swollen, and unusually warm to the touch there may be an infection present.

You should have properly balanced feet to give your body the support it needs. When your feet are out of alignment, as evidenced by calluses, this can throw other parts of your body out of balance as well, including your legs, hips, and back.

Examination and treatment by your foot specialist can bring you the help you need to restore your feet and body to proper balance.

This column is presented as a public service in the interest of promoting better podiatric care for the community.

HINT:
If flatfeet produce pain, a child may benefit from custom supports.

REMOVABLE PARTIAL DENTURES

The removable partial denture is a restoration that replaces one or more, but less than all of the natural teeth. It can be removed and replaced at will. It is most commonly used where fixed bridgework cannot be utilized, as in cases where too many teeth in a row are missing, or where there are no back teeth to support a fixed bridge. Removable partials rest on the tissues and ridges that remain after the teeth have been extracted, and are held in place by the remaining teeth. The two basic types of removable partial dentures are the clasp partial denture and the precision removable denture. The former has hooks the externally clasp the supporting teeth. The latter type differs in that the supporting teeth are crowned and the partial denture hooks into but not around them.

If teeth are missing and are not replaced, the teeth surrounding or opposite the gap will gradually drift toward it. This causes malocclusion or misalignment to the teeth. Regular check-ups for men, women and children are a must and, not only do regular dental check-ups prevent costly repairs, but in the long run, it costs less, too. We ask that you consider our office as your center for dental care. We're in Midland at 2215 N. Midland Dr., 699-6663, and in Odessa, 337-4555. We're open for your convenience Mon thru Sat 8 till 5 and we look forward to serving you.

HINT:
Unlike the clasp partial denture, the precision removable denture does not readily show visible means of support.

HEARING AS A SOCIAL TOOL

An older person's hearing may throw a needless and surmountable barrier in his way. It can lead to discouragement by the failure to understand what others say. Or, it may lead to the fear of making an inappropriate reply. As a result, he may find it easier to withdraw into isolation, rather than coping with the frustrations. Such a person may have already lost much social contact because of mandatory retirement, death of a spouse, separation from his children, or perhaps living alone. In fact, several experts believe that some of the "senility" of old age really reflects a breakdown in social communication and an emotional reaction to isolation in a fading world. It is left to concerned friends, relatives, or even the hearing-impaired themselves to investigate the possible benefits of a hearing aid in order to overcome this block to happiness.

Hearing affects our daily life and social interaction with others. If you have a hearing loss, you may well find the answer at AUDIO ACOUSTICS HEARING CENTERS, INC, 32 Village Court. We have the hearing instruments that allow the vibrant sound of life to return so that you may enjoy your lifestyle and your friendships. We have been serving the West Texas area since 1975. Tel. 682-5033. Open 9-5 Mon.-Fri.

HINT:
Aside from the social consequences, consider the physical risks to the hearing-impaired.

CONGESTIVE HEART FAILURE

Congestive heart failure occurs when the heart's output cannot match the demands of the body. Either the heart pumps inadequately or the demands put upon it are excessive. In either case, the body retains sodium (salt) which leads to a retention of excess water. The most obvious areas of water accumulation are in the lungs and legs. Shortness of breath and/or breathing difficulty occur as a result of fluid buildup. When accompanied by wheezing and coughing the condition is known as cardiac asthma. These are signs of serious heart disease and are indications for intensive treatment. It is important that this condition be brought to the attention of the physician immediately, and addressed as soon as possible.

There are some factors that cannot be changed which will increase the risk of cardiovascular disease. These include advancing age, race, and a family history of heart disease. Regular physical examinations are important in the early detection of health problems. The MEDI-HELP, INC., is located at 805 W. Wadley @ A, offering general medical care for the whole family. Treatment is provided for fractures, lacerations, and allergies. X-ray and lab facilities are also available. Hours: 8-8, 7 days a week. Tel. 687-2704. Workers compensation welcomed.

HINT: The principal symptoms of heart disease are pounding of the heart, shortness of breath, swelling of the legs, fainting and pain.

Mexico buses bound for Mass must be insured, officials say

FORT WORTH (AP) — State officials say they will turn back at the border any Mexican bus bound for the papal mass in San Antonio that does not carry sufficient liability insurance, despite the difficulty of obtaining such coverage.

A federal law in effect since late 1983 requires foreign passenger buses entering the United States to carry $5 million in American liability insurance.

Few companies offer the federally required insurance, and those which do charge premiums as high as $9,500 for a three-day trip, said Porfirio Casas, a Rio Grande Valley insurance agent who has insured Mexican buses in the past.

U.S. Customs Service agents routinely check Mexican passenger buses for proof of the required insurance coverage, said Jerry Smith, Texas director of motor carrier safety for the Department of Transportation.

Buses without the required insurance coverage are turned back, he said.

Smith said the policy will still be in effect at U.S.-Mexican border crossings in the days before Pope John Paul II's Sept. 13 visit, despite the numbers of visitors expected.

Buses without the required insurance coverage will be turned back. ..."We won't make exceptions for people coming into the interior. ...We can't make exceptions."

— Jerry Smith, Texas director of motor carrier safety for Department of Transportation

"We won't make exceptions for people coming into the interior," Smith said Tuesday. "We can't make exceptions."

But some Mexican bus operators fear they will have to cancel their pilgrimages due to lack of insurance.

"It's an absolute nightmare," said Regi Mackay, a Monterrey, Mexico, travel agent who hoped to bring two busloads of pilgrims, about 75 people in all, to San Antonio next month.

"My bus operator hasn't been able to sleep for three days," she said. "We can't find anybody to insure our buses. I have until Saturday to find someone or I will have to cancel the trip."

About 30 buses have been chartered from Monterrey alone to make the trip, Ms. Mackay said, adding that other operators are encountering the same difficulty getting coverage.

Catholic Church officials in Texas are expecting as many as 125,000 Mexican citizens to travel to San Antonio for the papal Mass.

State Board of Insurance spokesman Lee Jones termed the situation "real bleak. At this point, I don't have an answer for these people."

Archdiocese lists guidelines for papal visit

SAN ANTONIO — Banners, signs, glass containers, alcohol, tents, sleeping bags and walkie-talkies are expressly forbidden at the Mass by Pope John Paul II, archdiocesan officials disclosed Tuesday.

"The reason we don't want people to bring signs...is that it will hinder the view of the people behind them," said Father David Garcia, chairman of the Mass site committee and secretary to Archbishop Patrick Flores.

"The reason for banning alcoholic beverages is we want to preserve the religious atmosphere of the event," he said.

Walkie-talkies are banned because security officials are afraid they would interrupt their communications on the site, Garcia said. Glass containers could break, also causing safety problems.

Tents and sleeping bags are prohibited, as is any camping.

Archdiocesan officials also released the following list of hints titled "How to Cope with the Pope."

— Bring and drink water. Plastic milk jugs, thermoses or canteens should be brought. Water will be available at the Mass site, but may be inconvenient to secure once seated.

— Bring a blanket or seat cushion. Bring suntan lotion and apply frequently throughout the Mass. If riding the bus, all items must fit on your lap.

— Wear a hat and loose-fitting cotton clothing. No suits or ties. Since walking will be required, footwear should be appropriate to avoid blisters.

— People at high risk — in general, those under 7 years old and over 70 — should not come to the site.

— Food concessions will be available on the outside boundary of the site. Food should be purchased upon arrival at the site, since once seated, movement may be difficult.

— People on medication should bring their medicine in its own bottle and wear medical identification.

— Anyone who becomes flushed or confused should be taken to a Red Cross station immediately. Medical stations will be available on the site. Early birds should bring a flashlight.

— Move around as little as possible at the site.

— Turn off your home air conditioner five to seven days ahead to acclimatize your body to heat.

Paul and Iona Firica

Family reunited with defector from Romania

AUSTIN (AP) — A crowd of about 200 waved U.S. flags and roses as the wife and daughter of a Romanian defector arrived here after being allowed to leave Romania.

Signs with the words that translate "welcome to America" greeted the wife and daughter of Romanian defector Paul Firica at the Robert Mueller Municipal Airport Wednesday.

Ioana Firica, 46, and her daughter Violetta Firica, 18, arrived on Pan American airlines Wednesday night amid waving U.S. flags, red and yellow roses and about 200 members of the Central Assembly of God, which will co-sponsor the women. The church, and members Nancy and Al Dolan co-sponsor Paul Firica, and will also co-sponsor his family.

Firica, who has lived in Austin since his defection in November 1985, abandoned his Romanian ship in a Houston port. Firica had been a merchant seaman. He had not seen his family in nearly two years.

Shouts of "praise the Lord" and murmured "hallelujahs" wafted around the family as Firica kissed and hugged his wife and daughter.

The congregation sang "Our God Reigns" in English and Romanian for the family.

Firica said he got only two hours' sleep Tuesday night in anticipation of his family's arrival.

"I was very, very anxious. But I am very, very happy. It's my life," Firica said. "It is a beautiful night for me and my family. I see this day for many months in my dreams. It is a big victory."

U.S. Rep. Jake Pickle welcomed the women to Austin.

Dallas leads nation in rate of new cases of AIDS

DALLAS (AP) — While it is still far from leading the country in total number of cases, the Dallas area outpaced the nation last year in the rate of new cases of AIDS, federal health officials said.

There was an increase of 73 percent in 1986 over 1985 as the area reported 287 new AIDS cases, according to Centers for Disease Control statistics.

New York, which has reported more AIDS cases than any other city in the United States, had an increase of 29 percent; San Francisco had a 39 percent increase and Los Angeles a 44 percent increase.

While Dallas may have reported a higher percentage increase in AIDS cases, cities such as New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles still report far more cases every year, said Ann Freeman, program manager of the Dallas County Health Department's AIDS Prevention Program.

Dr. Charles Haley, chief of epidemiology for the health department, attributed the increase to Dallas' position on the "epidemic curve."

Epidemics typically start out slowly, then increase to a peak before declining, he said. Some of the larger cities, where the epidemic struck first, are further along on the epidemic curve, and the number of new cases is beginning to decline, Haley said.

Ms. Freeman said she was discouraged initially by the increase, given the massive education effort of the health department and other organizations.

But she said new cases reported in 1986 reflect infections that occurred five and six years ago. Someone infected with the AIDS virus may not develop symptoms of the disease for years, if ever, according to epidemiologists.

"There are people developing AIDS now who have been infected five years or more, really before we knew much about it," Ms. Freeman said.

Atlanta-based CDC estimates that 30 percent of those who are infected with the acquire immune deficiency syndrome virus, human immunodeficiency virus or HIV, later develop symptoms of the disease.

Since the epidemic began in Dallas County in 1981, 661 AIDS cases have been reported, statistics show. By comparison, New York has reported 10,200 cases.

So far this year, the Dallas area has reported 191 new cases, or an increase of 66 percent over 1986. But a CDC spokesman said that because of reporting lag time, comparing that figure with other statistics in other cities is premature.

STATE in brief

Dallas council approves business smoking law

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas City Council has approved a smoking-in-the-workplace ordinance that requires businesses with five or more employees to develop written policies about smoking and designate areas that shield non-smokers from second-hand smoke.

The ordinance passed Wednesday on a 9-2 vote and takes effect March 1.

Compliance will be voluntary, but smokers or businesses that don't accommodate non-smokers will be subject to fines of up to $500 each.

City health officials said the ordinance would be enforced by health inspectors and administrators only when the city receives complaints against businesses that fail to meet the law's requirements.

Jim Wood, assistant director of the Health and Human Services Department, said citations would be issued only after three warnings.

Convention backs Jackson

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — The National Baptist Convention USA, Inc., the nation's largest black denomination, stands behind presidential candidate Rev. Jesse Jackson, convention President Rev. T.J. Jemison said Tuesday.

Although the convention doesn't actually endorse a candidate, its president can. Jemison, of Baton Rouge, La., said Jackson is the Democratic Party's front-runner.

"He has attracted more white support this time more than last time," said Jemison. "We believe he'll be the president not only of black people but of America." Jemison, 66, added that 90 percent of all National Baptist clergy would agree with him. Jackson is a member of Jemison's denomination.

Jackson is slated to speak to a projected 40,000 National Baptists in Houston Sept. 7 through 13 at their annual convention. Convention business will center on the black family, narcotics use among blacks and black economics, Jemison said.

"We hope to address the nation from our platform in Houston and say some things that will help turn us around as far as unemployment, narcotics and the black family," he said. "We'll do our best to support the black family be cause the black family will support the black church."

Oyster population down

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Parks and Wildlife Department experts Thursday might recommend that there be no oyster harvest season in Texas this year, a department spokesman said Wednesday.

David Cottom said heavy rainfall has caused freshwater infiltration into the state's salt-water bays, decreasing the oyster population.

The oyster harvest season normally begins in November and continues through April. Last year's season was curtailed because of red tide problems along the coast.

Cottom said the Parks and Wildlife Commission could decide Thursday on whether there will be an oyster season this year.

Thieves target golf courses

AUSTIN (AP) — People are losing more than golf balls, their temper and golf matches at Morris Williams Golf Course, prompting police to caution golfers to be alert for suspicious persons on the course.

The warning came Wednesdaey following three recent armed robberies on the course.

Police said a robber, believed to be the same man, held up a total of six golfers at the eighth and 13th holes with a small-caliber revolver.

No one was injured in the robberies at the course where four golfers were robbed in July 1985 and two were attacked in November 1984.

Media being charged fee to attend Farm Aid

Associated Press

Farm Aid III officials are charging reporters and photographers $25 apiece to attend the Sept. 19 concert at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, and several Nebraska media representatives said they were concerned by the fee.

News directors at KKAR radio and WOWT television in Omaha said Wednesday the stations would not pay the fee. Steve Murphy of WOWT said his station would give $150 to help farmers but would not pay for credentials.

Farm Aid organizers say the fee would be used to cover costs to construct a special camera platform and an interview area for the media to use during the concert at Memorial Stadium.

News officials called The Associated Press and complained about the press credential fee. The AP office in Omaha received calls from KKAR, WOWT, KSYZ radio in Grand Island, the NTV television netork, KTIV television in Sioux City, Iowa, and the editor of the Norfolk Daily News.

The callers said they feared charging for press credentials would set a precedent that might force the news media to have to pay to cover other public events.

Tickets to the concert sold to the general public for $20.

Farm Aid charged reporters and photographers $25 to cover last year's concert in Austin, Texas. There was no charge for the first concert in 1985 at Champaign, Ill.

Taste-testers go crackers over Quackers

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

Another reader just made my day by writing me a letter full of kind words — and the name of a suggested new product to try.

She wrote: "Have you tried Nabisco Quackers? They're so cute, and the cheddar cheese if really good. If nothing else, the ad on the back of the box is fun to read!"

Sounded terrific to me, so the first time I got the chance, I grabbed a box. The young taste-testers and I — along with a little help from our friends — checked out the quackers — er, crackers — for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Quackers, duck-shaped snack crackers, are available in three flavors: sour cream and onion, cheddar cheese and original. At the reader's recommendation (and because we are just partial to it), we chose the cheddar cheese flavor.

A 7½-ounce box of Quackers cost $1.69 at a local supermarket, which is not unusual for snack crackers. (Price at other locations may vary.) Label advertising gushes: "Delicious, little bite-size snacks with great taste and a crisp, light texture. And the duck shape means they're fun to eat too.

"Try Quackers in all three flavors ... You'll go Quazy for the taste of Quackers!"

Advertising on the back of the box begins "It's op• ı season on new Quackers, the quaziest, qunchiest, quispiest little duck shaped snacks ever to fit the bill. And to help you avoid a wild goose chase in catching your quarry, we've identified the three most popular Quackers species. The choice is yours. Waddle it be? ..." (As one friend put it, these crackers "are guaranteed to make you talk like Elmer Fudd.")

The taste-test proved to be a rousing success. Not only did the little people just love the cheesy, duck-shaped crackers, but the teenagers and the adult kids loved them too.

In fact, we had quite a debate over the virtues of Quackers as opposed to other cheese snack crackers. According to the little children, Quackers won. (The only drawback that might exist is that Quackers are covered with cheddar cheese "dust," kind of like flavored potato chips are, and this dust does remain on fingers and possibly clothes. However, as far as I can tell, the cheese dust washes off clothes and makes Quackers truly a "finger-licking good" snack.)

Will we buy them again? Judging from the speed at which the little taste-testers wolfed them down, I have to buy them again — probably in the other two flavors, too.

But if you want to know about the ad on the back of the box that the reader said was "fun to read," you'll have to check out the supermarket shelves. (It is a cute label ad — all about the different species of Quackers.)

EXTENSION EXTRA

Vitamins no substitute for a good diet

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

While you're out buying clothes, school supplies and lunch boxes to get your children started in the new school year, should you also be buying vitamins? The answer is "probably not."

Normal, healthy children who eat a varied and balanced diet will get an adequate amount of all the necessary nutrients their bodies need, so a vitamin-mineral supplement is unnecessary.

Consider the foods your children eat regularly. For example, if a child eats a bowl of fortified cereal every day, it may be similar to taking a vitamin, depending on the degree of fortification.

The labels on cereals and other fortified foods list the percentage of the recommended daily allowances (RDAs) of vitamins and minerals contained in a serving of the product. According to specialists, a number of these products contain 100 percent of the daily requirements for adults.

If your child has a consistently poor appetite or eats only a limited variety of foods, a check-up by a physician is appropriate. The doctor may suggest a vitamin-mineral supplement to improve overall nutritional health.

However, because excessive amounts of some nutrients, such as vitamins A and D, can be toxic, it is advisable not to give a child supplements without checking with a doctor.

Giving children vitamins can easily lull parents into a false sense of security that the child's nutritional needs are being met. But a supplement is not an adequate substitute for a good diet.

The best thing parents can do to get children off to a healthy start on the school year is to stick to the basics: encourage them to eat a good breakfast, pack a nutritious lunch and have plenty of healthy snack foods around for after school.

BETTER BUSINESS

Insufficent stock of advertised items creates unhappy customers

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

A store stands to lose valuable customers if they don't have a sufficient stock of advertised merchandise on hand to meet a reasonably-anticipated demand for the items.

If you own or manage a store and are in doubt about advertising an item of limited quantity or a clearance sale item, clearly disclose the number of items available or print "while supplies last" in your ad.

Nothing irritates a customer more than to make a special trip to a store to purchase an advertised item only to find that it's unavailable.

A raincheck won't make up for the disappointment and inconvenience. Also, if your salespeople try to substitute a similar item for the item advertised, you might be accused of "bait and switch," even if that was not the intent.

If sufficient quantities are not available, your ad may, in fact, create more unhappy customers than loyal, satisfied ones. Spend your ad dollars wisely and have enough of your product on hand to meet the demand.

Aromatic discs are powerful sales tools

Copley News Service

Advertisers really are "sniffing out the competition." They're doing it with the help of "Sniff-Teasers," plastic discs that emit aromas to attract the attention of customers.

Designed by New York-based Ledan Inc., Sniff-Teasers can be molded into just about any shape imaginable. The discs emit aromas such as bacon, perfume and chocolate.

Because the sense of smell can create powerful emotions, Ledan President Daniel Leo says Sniff-Teasers are powerful marketing tools. For example, he says when you smell coconut, you think of the beach.

User-friendly training planes being designed

Associated Press

Aviation is ailing because fewer people are learning to fly and buying small airplanes — and the cure may lie in designing the most user-friendly training airplane ever built.

A team that included some major aviation experts spent a day recently doing just that for Popular Mechanics, and the results — the PM Scorpion — were reported in the current issue.

The experts included Burt Rutan, designer of a wide variety of airplanes, test pilot and astronaut Wally Schirra, aviation industrialist-entrepreneur Frank Christensen, aviation journalist and pilot Fred Mackerodt and aviation illustrator Mark McCandlish.

The plane they wanted to replace, the 1936 Piper J-3, or Piper Cub, has been the standard by which all other trainer and entry-level aircraft have been judged. It also is the ultimate in low-tech engineering.

But today the high cost of flight instruction and training aircraft has contributed to the decline in student starts and the number of new pilots who buy small planes.

The cause of the price hike is a complex interplay of inflation, labor, FAA costs and product liability insurance but one problem is surely solvable — developing inexpensive hardware.

The experts were determined to design a revolutionary new plane that would be an entry-level training platform that removed all hardware barriers between flight and student pilot.

They started with the seating — neither side-by-side, nor tandem, but staggered to provide ample elbow room and face-to-face access. The plane would be controlled by a side stick on an arm rest.

A major change was the instrument panel, which has been added to, at random, as new gauges and instruments were added to airplanes.

The new plane would have one easy-to-decipher visual display. The heart of the Scorpion's avionics would be a pair of inexpensive microprocessors. The processors would collect all flight information, do all the ingesting and extrapolating and feed the results into a menu-driven graph control display projected on the lower windshield.

The displays would not be numbers or figures — just simple graphic designs or iconography that immediately convey all the information normally found on all those little dials aboard a more traditional aircraft.

Since the soul of the new machine would be its microchips, the airplane could look like almost anything. The group's guidelines for airframe design were simple — keep the parts count low to aid in manufacturing and reduce expense. Keep it small — less than a 24-foot wingspan — and make it a visual grabber.

The 200-mph plane would be put together like a plastic model airplane in large sections, with engines adapted from automotive or industrial models.

After a start-up investment estimated at $150 million-$200 million, a realistic price for the Scorpion fell between $25,000 and $30,000 for airframe, avionics and engines, including dealer markup. But product liability and other issues could drive the price higher.

"All the things we've talked about are possible," Christensen said.

DEAR ABBY

Teen resents grandpa's girlfriend

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My son, "Charles," who is almost 14, has always had a wonderful relationship with my father — his grandfather — until a few months ago. For about a year and a half, Charles would stop at his grandpa's on the way to school, and they would have breakfast together. Charles even had a key to Dad's house, and would start preparing breakfast while Dad was shaving.

This, of course, was on school days. However, one Saturday morning, Charles had to be at school to practice for a play. He went to his grandpa's as he usually did on school days, let himself in with his own key and found Grandpa having breakfast with an attractive lady — both in their pajamas!

Charles never did go to school for play practice. Instead, he stormed home and locked himself in his room. Now he will talk to no one, and rushes out of the room when his once-beloved grandpa visits us. We are all terribly upset by his attitude. Dad is heartbroken because he can't seem to get through to his only grandson. Dad has been a widower for over eight years. The lady is well-known to my wife and me. She is a lovely person and a widow.

How can we get through to Charles and persuade him that Dad has not committed a terrible crime? Don't suggest our minister, Abby. He is rather conservative and does not approve of "living in sin." — CANADIAN DAD

DEAR DAD: You are assuming that Charles is angry with Grandpa for "living in sin." I think he's angry for another reason — he's jealous of the intimate relationship Grandpa has with the attractive lady. Charles needs to talk about his feelings honestly — if not with you and Grandpa, then with a counselor. When he admits to himself why he overreacted, he will be able to handle it in a more mature manner.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine recently received the following thank-you note for her wedding gift:

"Dear Mrs. ( ),

"Thank you for the $10. I know it will come in handy. Love, (signed by the bride)"

Included was the following:

"From the Good News New Testament (today's English version), fourth edition: James 4:8: Come near to God and he will come near to you. Wash your hands, you sinners! Purify your hearts, you hypocrites!"

Abby, needless to say, my friend was shocked. Don't you think it would have been better had the bride sent no thank-you note at all than to send this cruel, insulting message? — PATTI IN CHINA GROVE, N.C.

DEAR PATTI: Yes. I, too, am shocked. Perhaps the bride was more disturbed than vicious. Pray for her.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of six years thinks it is perfectly OK to visit my 17-year-old daughter's bedroom at bedtime to "talk" to her. She sleeps in the nude and makes very little effort to cover up.

I am vehemently opposed to this and have told my husband so, but he thinks I am paranoid, crazy and evil-minded. Am I? — WONDERING IN SAN ANTONIO

DEAR WONDERING: Not in my book. And if you haven't already spoken to your daughter about the impropriety of these nocturnal visits, it's time you did.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Consumers credited with borrowing on wiser loans

Associated Press

Give Consumers a Lot of Credit: As widely predicted, consumers are shifting some of their borrowing away from traditional consumer loans, on which the interest deduction is being phased out, to home-equity loans, on which interest is still deductible.

But so far consumers don't appear to have lost their heads, or the roofs over them.

The total volume of home-equity loans nationwide is smaller than originally estimated. According to Eugene Sherman, chief ecomomist for the Federal Home Loan Bank of New York, home equity loan are "not so large as to cause a major change in the economy."

David Olson of SMR Research in Columbia, Md., thinks the typical home-equity borrower, who is 42 and earns $40,000 a year, is well equipped to handle the debt, as indicated by very low delinquency rates.

Actually, despite the common perception that Americans are profligate spenders, consumers behave fairly rationally and predictably in their use of credit, expanding debt rapidly as the economy pulls out of a recession, and then slowing down.

True to form, consumer credit is expected to grow at a lower rate this year than in 1986.

Changing Times magazine performed an independent analysis of consumer well-being, which showed that the steady growth of debt during the current five-year economic expansion hasn't prevented prosperity, as measured by household net worth and spending, from moving steadily upward.

Food prices now palatable

Associated Press

The biggest increases in food prices for the year may already be behind us. Economists have been predicting a price bubble this summer due to short stocks of beef and pork. As supplies increase later this year, prices should settle down.

But food prices aren't entirely unaffected by the terms of international trade.

Despite a 10 percent increase in our domestic citrus crop, for instance, prices stayed firm. Reason: The U.S. exported a lot of oranges — to Japan.

End of summer still height of burglary season

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — If you are planning on taking one last short vacation before school starts, be advised that it's still burglary season.

Empty houses make it the busy season for burglars who hope to capitalize on all those empty homes.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation reports that there were 2.9 million burglaries in the United States in 1985, two-thirds of them in people's homes, and the average loss was $974.

The combination of idle young people who are out of school and lots of empty houses helps boost burglary rates in the summer, warns the Insurance Information Institute.

The insurance specialists say the place to start is with locks — lock doors and windows, of course, and don't forget attic, basement and garage entries.

Deadbolt or double cylinder locks are best for doors, and many excellent window locks are sold.

Many police departments will do free or inexpensive home security audits and give advice in preventing thefts and burglaries, they add.

Many people hide keys in places outside their homes, attached to the mailbox or under a rock in the garden and so forth. Don't do this, say the insurance experts; burglars have seen it all, and they know where to look.

While away from home, keep the place looking lived-in, with timers on lights, set for various times. Have a neighbor collect your mail and newspapers and keep an eye on your property. Tell them how long you will be away and where you can be reached.

The fewer people who know you are away from home, the better, so don't advertise your absence in society columns or by telling people who don't need to know.

Valuables should be locked in a safe or safe deposit box. Any left at home should be inventoried and the list, with photos, kept safely away from home. That will be a big help in the event of an insurance claim.

Electronic equipment is very popular with burglars and hard to hide away, so insurance officials suggest marking it in an inconspicuous place with your initials or Social Security number engraved on it.

Many police departments will lend you an electric engraving pen to do this, and it can help trace the item and prove it is yours.

Finally, when you return from vacation check the house for signs of entry before going in — surprising a thief could be a deadly mistake.

Milwaukee's hitless Paul Molitor
...thinking of things that could have been

Molitor's hit streak finally halted

Manning's winning hit robs chance to extend string

Associated Press

Paul Molitor went 0-for-4 in trying for the big 4-0.

The fifth-longest hitting streak in modern major league history ended at 39 games Wednesday night when Molitor failed to get the ball out of the infield as his Milwaukee Brewers beat the Cleveland Indians 1-0 in 10 innings.

"It was meant to be 39 and not 40," Molitor said. "It's been humbling and I'm glad for the opportunity. In a lot of ways, it's disappointing."

Molitor was on deck when pinch-hitter Rick Manning singled home pinch-runner Mike Felder from second base with one out in the 10th. The County Stadium crowd of 11,246 booed Manning, but Molitor ran to congratulate him.

"I went up to Rick and he said 'Sorry,' and I said 'Sorry? You won the game,'" Molitor said. "The irony is the distortion of priorities. You have the home team win in extra innings and the crowd goes silent."

A minute later, the crowd gave Molitor a standing ovation and called him from the dugout. Attendance was held down by a day-long rain that canceled batting practice.

Molitor was shut down by Cleveland rookie John Farrell, who gave up three hits in nine shutout innings in his second major league start. Molitor struck out in the first inning, grounded into a double play in the third and grounded out in the sixth.

In the eighth, Molitor reached on first baseman Pat Tabler's error. Molitor hit a slow grounder, and third baseman Brook Jacoby's throw beat him by two steps, but Tabler dropped the toss.

On Aug. 18, Molitor had been the first batter Farrell faced in his major league debut, and Molitor singled.

"I didn't do anything differently than I've been doing all my life," Farrell said. "The situation at hand was a once-in-a-lifetime chance."

Molitor fell one game short of tying Ty Cobb for the fourth-longest streak. Molitor's streak was the longest in the majors since Pete Rose set a National League record by hitting in 44 straight in 1978. The major league record is 56 by Joe DiMaggio.

In 1941, DiMaggio's streak ended in a game against Cleveland. This year, the Indians' pitching staff ranks as the worst in the majors, but Farrell was too tough.

Cleveland Manager Doc Edwards faced a difficult decision in the eighth, when Molitor came to the plate with a runner on second base and two outs. One option was to walk Molitor, who batted .405 during his streak and is hitting .365 for the season, and pitch to Robin Yount.

"After 39 games we felt the percentages were against him. If it was ever going to stop, this would be the night," Edwards said. "I looked at John and said, 'What do you want to do?' He said, 'Let's go for it.'"

Molitor then reached on Tabler's error, but Yount popped up to end the inning.

In the 10th, Rob Deer was hit by a pitch from Doug Jones, 3-4, and Felder took second on a groundout. Manning batted for Juan Castillo and singled to center field.

"My job is to drive in a run. I have no second thoughts," Manning said.

Overlooked in the Molitor drama was Teddy Higuera's superb pitching. Higuera, 13-9, went all 10 innings and gave up just three hits and struck out 10.

Molitor was not the only player to go hitless. Cleveland's Brett Butler also went 0-for-4 and his 19-game hitting streak ended.

Royals 2, Rangers 0

Danny Jackson pitched a four-hitter and struck out seven as Kansas City beat visiting Texas.

Jackson, 7-15, pitched his ninth complete game and helped the Royals stop a three-game losing streak. He walked the bases loaded in the fifth but retired Bob Brower on a grounder to end the inning.

Charlie Hough, 14-9, shut out Kansas City on three hits until giving up four straight hits with two outs in the seventh. Ross Jones and Willie Wilson singled, Kevin Seitzer hit a two-run doubvle and George Brett followed with an RBI single.

Tigers 10, Twins 8

Pinch-hitter Matt Nokes lined a two-run single with two outs in the ninth inning that put Detroit ahead and Chet Lemon followed with a three-run homer as the Tigers won at Minnesota.

The Tigers lead the AL by one-half game over idle Toronto. The Twins lost for the eighth time in nine games and had their AL West lead cut to one-half game over Oakland.

Rebs, 'Dogs set for scrimmages

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee and Midland High will get their first taste of outside football competition Friday in two separate scrimmage sessions, but if you are a Lee fan, it will take a day off from work and an early wake-up call to see the Rebels play.

Lee travels to Ozona to face Class 5A Del Rio. The major problem here is that the scrimmage session is set for an unusual 11 a.m. start.

"We have to have our kids back Friday afternoon for the "All-Stars" drug program at the school, so that's why we're having the scrimmage so early," said Miller. "I don't know if it will make any difference or not, but we need to see a few things from the kids and I don't know if we can wake them up in time."

Doug McCutchen's Bulldogs get a three-way test with Class 4A Pecos, beginning at 5 p.m. today when the sophomores host the Pecos sophs at the MHS practice field at Memorial Stadium.

On Friday, the MHS junior varsity will meet Pecos in Pecos at 5:30 p.m. and the two varsities will follow around 7 p.m.

Midland High missed practice sessions Wednesday due to the "All-Stars" program, adding to the woes that McCutchen has had to endure through the first two weeks of drills.

"We're still trying to find players for all the positions," said McCutchen. "After all the move-outs, injuries and dropouts we've had, we're really cut thin.

"We still have questions in the offensive line, defensive secondary and at running back."

McCutchen lost potential starting running back Paul Gary this week when he decided to drop football and second team defensive end Gilbert Rendon was injured.

Miller will be looking at his linebackers, hoping two or three will come to the front. He will also have his eyes on the offensive line, where overall experience is lacking.

Both scrimmages are rematches from last year when both Midland teams won.

The two teams will have one week left to prepare for their respective season openers Sept. 4. Lee will host Lubbock Coronado in an 8 p.m. opener at Memorial Stadium while the Bulldogs will travel for a 7:30 p.m. date with Lubbock Monterey at Lowrey Field.

Both teams have the same pre-district schedule as last year when both carried perfect 3-0 marks into the district opener, which again this year, will be against each other.

Harris' no-hitter stalls Angel playoff bid

From Staff and Wire Reports

WICHITA, Kan. — Greg Harris pitched the first nine-inning no-hitter in the Texas League this season as the Wichita Pilots defeated the Midland Angels 7-0 here Wednesday night and it couldn't have come at a worse time as far as the Angels are concerned.

The loss dropped Midland 1½ games behind the El Paso Diablos in the chase for the second half Western Division title and there are only three nights left in which Midland can make up that deficit.

For Harris, it was the first no-hitter in his professional career, but he said he had a no-hitter in high school in North Carolina. Harris, 12-11, walked seven and struck out six. Harris' seven walks was a season high for the righty. He had never allowed more than four in any single game prior to his no-hitter.

Matt Kinzer had pitched a seven-inning no-hitter for the Arkansas Travelers against the Tulsa Drillers in June.

The closest thing to a base hit for Midland came in the eighth with one out and John Hotchkiss at first base. Doug Davis hit a sinking line drive to right field that was trapped by Wichita's Chris Knabenshue. He picked up the ball and fired to second base, forcing Hotchkiss. It would not have been a no-hitter if Hotchkiss hadn't walked.

Harris also had some other fine fielding plays behind him. Shortstop Roberto Alomar robbed Bill Geivett of a hit in the third, ranging far to his left, and snared a hard line drive off the bat of Stan Holmes in the seventh.

Second baseman Mike DeButch ranged to his right to rob Brian Brady of a hit in the fifth.

The Pilots scored two runs in the second inning on a sacrifice fly by Scott Rainey and a single by Roberto Alomar to give Harris all the support he would need.

The losing pitcher was Phil Venturino, 11-6.

St. Louis' Vince Coleman celebrates after hitting his first home run of the year in a 5-4 win over the Houston Astros Wednesday. Coleman also doubled and singled in the game.

Coleman enters home run derby

Cardinals push Astros further behind Giants

Associated Press

Watch out Andre Dawson, Eric Davis and Dale Murphy. Vince Coleman is flexing his muscles.

Coleman homered, singled, doubled, and scored the winning run on Tommy Herr's grounder in the seventh inning, lifting St. Louis over Houston 5-4 Wednesday for the Cardinals' fifth victory in six games.

Coleman's second major-league homer in 1,914 plate appearances gave St. Louis a 4-2 lead through five innings. Billy Hatcher's two-out, two-run double off reliever Ken Dayley, 8-4, in the top of the seventh had tied the score 4-4.

Coleman's only previous home run was inside the park off Len Barker of Atlanta on May 21, 1985, his rookie year.

"It's a lot of fun to do it," he said of his opposite-field homer over the gate in right field, 386 feet away. "I had confidence in my ability that I'd hit at least one. I feel awfully proud."

AS IT turned out, however, it was Coleman's speed rather than his power that won won the game for St. Louis. He scored three runs and stole his 83rd and 84th bases.

"He had a helluva day," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said of Coleman, who slid home with the winning run on a dash from third base after Houston threw out Herr at first base in the seventh inning.

"That last piece of baserunning was a beauty. Really, it turned out bigger than the home run," Herzog said. "(Astros shortstop) Dale (Berra) did right. He looked him (Coleman) back and threw (Herr's grounder) to first."

Glenn Davis hit a two-run homer for Houston, his 21st, in the first. Jack Clark matched that with his 34th for St. Louis, and the Cardinals went ahead 3-2 on Ozzie Smith's sacrifice fly after Coleman singled and stole bases on consecutive pitches.

"I'd like to see the times he gets on base with nobody out and scores," Astros starter Jim Deshaies said of Coleman. "It must be up there at 90 percent."

The victory kept St. Louis 4½ games ahead of New York in the NL East.

Giants 2, Phillies 0

Bob Brenly's two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning lifted San Francisco over host Philadelphia, the Giants' fourth straight victory.

The win gave the Giants a 2½-game lead over Houston in the NL West.

Phillies starter Shane Rawley, who had held the Giants to two hits and struck out a career-high 10, gave up a bad-hop single to Chris Speier with two outs in the ninth. Brenly then hit a 1-0 pitch over the left-field fence for his 15th home run. "I hit an off-speed pitch that he got up, Brenly said of his game-winning homer.

Don Robinson, 9-6, pitched 1 1-3 innings to earn the victory. Robinson took over for starter Dave Dravecky with two outs in the eighth. Dravecky allowed five hits.

Mets 3, Dodgers 2

Keith Hernandez hit a home run in the sixth inning to extend his hitting streak to a career-high 16 games and Ron Darling pitched six-hit ball for 7 1-3 innings as New York beat Los Angeles at Shea Stadium.

Darling, 11-8, has won seven of his last eight decisions. He struck out eight and walked three. Randy Myers came on after Darling allowed a single and walk in eighth. Hernandez's throwing error on Tito Landrum's grounder allowed Pedro Guerrero to score. Roger McDowell came on and got the final four outs for his 20th save.

The Mets used three pitchers in the eighth and the Dodgers five to establish a major-league record for most pitchers in an inning. The last time the Dodgers used five pitchers in an inning was 1927 when they played in Brooklyn.

Pirates 6, Reds 5

Al Pedrique's run-scoring bloop single with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning extended Cincinnati's season-high losing streak to six games.

The defeat dropped the third-place Reds five games behind San Francisco in the NL West.

Johnny Ray started the Pittsburgh ninth with a double off reliever John Franco, 7-4, and moved to third on pitcher Jeff Robinson's sacrifice. With the infield and outfield drawn in, John Cangelosi grounded out to shortstop for the second out. Pedrique then singled just beyond the reach of second baseman Kurt Stillwell into right field to give the Pirates a three-game sweep.

Expos 6, Padres 5

Tim Wallach hit an infield single with the bases loaded and two outs in the 12th inning as Montreal beat host San Diego.

Herm Winningham doubled with one out off Lance McCullers, 7-7, and after Tim Raines was intentionally walked, Mitch Webster singled to fill the bases.

McCullers struck out Tom Foley but Wallach hit a grounder off shortstop Garry Templeton's glove to give the Expos a 9-1 record in extra innings.

The Padres loaded the bases with one out in the 11th, but Randy Ready struck out and Stan Jefferson grounded out.

Trailing 5-2, Montreal scored three runs in the ninth on Hubie Brooks' RBI pinch single and Wallace Johnson's two-run pinch double.

Ivan Lendl has been named as the No. 1 men's seed for the U.S. Open tennis tournament.

Lendl, Graf top U.S. Open tennis seeds

NEW YORK (AP) — Steffi Graf of West Germany and Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia will be the top seeds next week when singles competition begins at the U.S. Open tennis tournament.

Seedings for the year's last Grand Slam event were announced Wednesday by the United States Tennis Association.

Defending champion Martina Navratilova, who recently lost her No. 1 ranking to Graf, is seeded second in women's singles. Chris Evert, a six-time Open champion, is seeded third.

It is the 16th consecutive year Evert has been seeded at the Open, a new women's record. It is also the first time since 1980 that someone other than Navratilova or Evert has been the top female seed at the Open.

Lendl, who will be seeking his third consecutive singles crown, is the top male seed for the second year in a row. Stefan Edberg of Sweden is seeded second, followed by countryman Mats Wilander at No. 3.

The highest American seed in the 16-man draw is five-time Open champion Jimmy Connors. It is the 16th year in a row Connors has been seeded in the Open, one shy of the men's record held by Frank Parker.

Two-time Wimbledon champion Boris Becker of West Germany is seeded fourth in men's singles, followed by Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia, Connors, defending Wimbledon champion Pat Cash of Australia, four-time Open winner John McEnroe, Andres Gomez of Ecuador and Joakim Nystrom of Sweden.

'Red Devil' proving human

Japan still loves Bob Horner

By CLYDE HABERMAN
New York Times News Service

TOKYO — So it turns out that Bob Horner is human, after all.

Back in the spring, a lot of Japanese baseball watchers weren't so sure.

They were calling him the Red Devil, sometimes the Blond Ogre, a man of Brobdingnagian size and power, a hitter who merely had to think of a home run and it was as good as done.

Anyone would have excused the Japanese their hyperbole, given the way Horner had stormed ashore in early May to take up his station at third base for the Yakult Swallows of the Central League.

Fresh from the United States and a contract dispute with the Atlanta Braves, he hit a home run in his first game. The next day he banged out three more. Game No. 3 produced nothing, mainly because opposing pitchers thought it made more sense to walk him three times. But in his fourth game Horner bounced back with two more shots over the fence.

Six home runs in four games.

SUDDENLY, ALL of Japan was talking not about trade surpluses but about this hulking import. Television commentators delivered impassioned lectures on how to get him out. Publishers tripped over each other to put out magazines devoted to the Ho-Na Gensho, or Horner phenomenon. Battalions of photographers stalked the new Swallow wherever he went. In a matter of days his face became as familiar as the prime minister's.

Predictably, one could hear a few xenophobic mutterings, mostly well-worn twaddle from some sports circles about how foreigners should be banned because they were ruining the Japanese game. There arose, too, a conviction that Japan's single-season record of 55 home runs, held by the great Sadaharu Oh, was doomed.

Well, it is nearly September, and Oh has nothing to worry about.

For sure, Horner is still hitting homers. He had 21 as of Wednesday, a more-than-admirable number for a man who has played in only 56 games, having started the season late and then missing some action because of injuries.

But setting records? Not this year. Then again, Horner said, "that's not my bag."

Although the man has proved to be mortal, the Ho-Na Gensho shows no sign of fading, at least to judge from the Horner dolls, Horner T-shirts, Horner megaphones and other Horner paraphernalia that went on sale this week at a Tokyo department store.

Of course, American ballplayers have long been a fixture in Japan. They are appreciated — some would say merely tolerated — for their power. Six of the nine leading home-run hitters in the Central League are Americans. (Horner is tied for seventh place.) In the rival Pacific League, Americans hold five places among the top 10.

In one vital respect, however, Horner is different.

Previous imports tended to be major league has-beens or never-wases. Horner is believed to be the first American to choose Japan in the prime of his career. Through nine seasons with Atlanta, he batted .278 and hit 215 home runs, including 4 on a single day last year. Just turned 30, he is young, with ample youth ahead of him.

But Horner turned his back on the Braves as a free agent early this year, rejecting contract offers of $3.9 million for two seasons and $4.5 million for three seasons. He also took his battle to court, joining in a lawsuit accusing American baseball owners of collusion to hold down salaries for free agents.

Against that background, he was a relatively easy catch for Yakult. All it took was a one-year deal reportedly worth $2 million, by far the largest salary in Japanese baseball history. That is a lot of money for a man likely to play at most 95 games. It is also more than twice the amount paid to the top homegrown star, Mitsuhiro Ochiai, or to the previous reigning American star, a slugger from Oklahoma named Randy Bass.

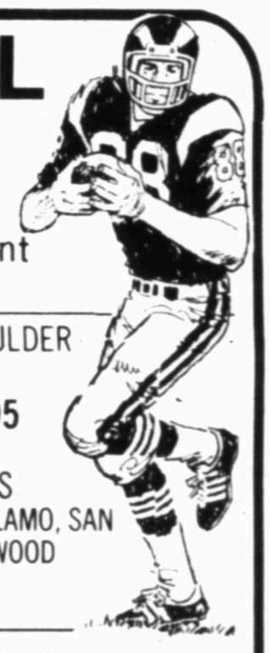

At those prices, some resentment may have been expected. Indeed, soon after Horner signed, the Japanese sports press arched its collective eyebrows, with cavils that he tended to be overweight, to be injury-prone, to be overly fond of beer. Even now, some writers question how hard he tries on the field.

But his early home-run barrage silenced most of the critics. So did the obvious fact that Yakult was getting more than its money worth.

Club officials say that they now average 37,000 fans a game at Tokyo's Jingu Stadium, compared with a pre-Horner attendance of 27,000. Those extra fans easily pay for his salary, plus a good deal more.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Productivity and profits will rise if you are more thorough in the year ahead. Remember that "haste makes waste." Marital ties become stronger. Your personal relationships benefit from a change in attitude. Your originality moves you into the spotlight at work. Cash is easier to come by. Always take the high road in your dealings with others. Add on to your home instead of buying a new place.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: America's first saint Mother Elizabeth Seton, actor Charles Boyer, Yankees manager Lou Piniella, pitcher Ron Guidry, actor Ben Gazzara, legendary Chicago Cubs manager Charlie Grimm, actress Nancy Kulp, Olympic skating star Scott Hamilton, actors Donald O'Connor and David Soul.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your instincts keep you from making a giant mistake while yur faith carries you through a difficult moment. Love is in the air! You could not be happier about a new relationship or job.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can put your child's needs first and still not neglect your health. Diet and exercise help you stay fit. A business deal could sizzle and you would still show a profit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your work is more satisfying now. You know what you want and how to achieve it. Give credit to those who help you make a big sale or discovery. Call home today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A relationship may be hard to decipher until you separate fact from fantasy. Do not try to force your opinion on someone with an opposing viewpoint. You are feeling more outgoing. Socialize!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are in a party mood, but should not mix business with pleasure. If a romance turns sour, it probably was not meant to be. Cheer up! Better times lie just ahead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be diplomatic and your requests will probably be honored. Put airline tickets in a safe place. Conquer one last obstacle and you will enjoy smooth sailing where your finances are concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mate deserves a break. Take the whole family out to dinner. A pleasure trip brings you special benefits — perhaps even romance. Manage your travel funds with special care. Do not pick up every check.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your charisma has everyone running to help you. Do not get carried away with your power. Spend some time outdoors hiking, gardening or participating in sports. Self-improvement activities enjoy highly favorable influences.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study a problem and possible solutions over the weekend. A child's views are enlightening and worthy of consideration. Pursue romance with enthusiasm. All systems are go!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Look to the future, not the past. Spend more time with people who are your intellectual equals. You are happiest when you feel challenged. Remain true to your high ideals in work and romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Showing off or acting egotistical will turn off your companions and could upset your weekend plans. An important relationship survives a dispute. Short trips are better than extended travel. Call home frequently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get what you have been yearning for. Trust your instincts and a business deal will go like clockwork. You find yourself more interested in power than money. Set realistic goals.

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

If the opponents prevent you from carrying out your initial plan, see if there's an alternative available. Don't persevere blindly along your original path until it is too late to adopt countermeasures.

North-South were playing weak two-bids, and South had maximum values for his action at this vulnerability. North was not sure a heart game would make, but he certainly wanted to preempt the opponents out of a possible spade contract.

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy and he was faced with four possible black-suit losers. Since all would be well if he could ruff a spade on the board, declarer immediately led a spade. West won and shifted to a trump.

Paying no heed to the defenders' intent, declarer led another spade. West won and removed dummy's last trump. Declarer drew the remaining trump and tried the club finesse. East took his queen and cashed a winning spade for down one.

Once the defenders had shifted to a trump, declarer should have realized he would never be able to ruff a spade. Therefore, he should have looked for another way to avoid losing four tricks. Besides the club finesse, there was the possibility of a 3-3 club split.

Declarer should have won the trump switch in hand and immediately finessed in clubs, while dummy still had a trump to control the third round of spades. The defenders then would have had no counter. Declarer could win any non-spade return, draw trumps and cash the king-ace of clubs. When that suit divided evenly, the table's fourth club would take care of South's third spade.

105-year-old woman 'too mean to die'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Proclaiming she was "too mean to die," 105-year-old Mildred Holt traded quips with Johnny Carson and became the oldest guest of "The Tonight Show."

"You're the oldest person I have ever met and ever had on the show," Carson told Mrs. Holt, who was born July 17, 1882.

"That's the way it is at home," said Mrs. Holt of Ellsworth, Kan. "I'm always the oldest one they ever met."

The feisty Kansan asked that they not make fun of her home state.

"I met a man at the hotel and he said, 'Where're you from?' and I said Kansas and he said, 'Oh, my goodness.' That made me mad," she said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jailed Sean Penn can't escape those who want an off-screen glimpse of the bad-boy actor famed for his scuffles with photographers, a newspaper says.

"Everybody sneaks a peek at him through the little window on his door," an anonymous source was quoted as saying in Wednesday's Los Angeles Herald Examiner. "Nurses, doctors, trusties, sometimes five people at a time."

Penn, 27, checked into the Los Angeles County Jail on Aug. 22 to serve the second portion of a 60-day sentence for probation violations.

A judge ordered him jailed after a fight with a man who tried to photograph him on the set of the film "Colors." Penn was placed on probation earlier this year after a barroom brawl with a man he thought was trying to kiss his pop singer wife, Madonna.

The actor was assigned to a separate section of the jail reserved for inmates thought to be at risk from the general jail population.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Ed Koch says he's not upset by a satirical article about his city set to appear in The Miami Herald on Sunday.

The article, a spoof of a New York Times story about Miami, is captioned "Can New York Save Itself? A city beset by garbage and yuppies."

"This is really a nice spoof," Koch told reporters who asked him about the article Wednesday. "I have nothing critical to say...of Miami. It's a spoof. It's nice. I'm in a good mood."

Convention debates power, duties of executive

Associated Press

EDITOR'S NOTE — This day-by-day account of 1787, the year that the U.S. Constitution was written, blends the significant with the small, personal details that bring history to life. The authors spent three years in research and writing, drawing on letters and personal diaries as well as the better-known historical documents. The writers are David D.C. Dutcher, David A. Kimball, Robert K. Sutton and Anna Coxe Toogood, all of the Independence National Historical Park in Philadelphia, where the Constitution was created 200 years ago.

1787 Constitution Daybook

Monday, Aug. 27, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Today was cool and rainy, with temperature in the 60s.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia had two or more congressional delegates present. Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland, and Georgia had one each. Congress would not meet.

CONVENTION TODAY

Consideration of Article X, Section 2, powers and duties of the executive, was resumed.

Luther Martin (Md.) moved to allow the president the power to pardon only after a conviction. James Wilson (Pa.) pointed out the need to use pardons to obtain testimony, and Martin withdrew the motion.

Robert Morris (Pa.) objected to having the Supreme Court try the president on impeachment and to having the president of the Senate succeed the president. James Madison (Va.) agreed, and suggested that when vacancies occurred, the powers of the president devolve on the Council (Cabinet). Postponed.

Article XI, on the judiciary, came up. William Samuel Johnson (Conn.) suggested that the judicial power should extend to both law and equity. George Read (Del.) opposed, but the motion carried. John Dickinson (Del.) moved to make judges removable by executive on application of Congress.

Consideration line by line continued and several clarifying amendments were approved.

DELEGATES TODAY

Secretary for Foreign Affairs John Jay wrote from New York to his father-in-law, Gov. William Livingston, a New Jersey delegate to the Convention, giving his opinion of Virginia delegate George Mason ("I thank you for introducing Col. Mason to me; he really is a man of Talents and an agreeable companion. There are few with whom on so short an acquaintance I have been so much pleased and I regret that it was not convenient to him to have remained longer in this city....") as well as news of Livingston's extended family.

William Samuel Johnson dined at his boarding house and then went to Robert Edge Pine's studio to sit again for his portrait.

LOOKING BACK

Debate on the Judiciary

Today's debate on the judiciary is typical of the attention to detail the delegates gave to almost every provision, and is illustrative of their thinking.

John Dickinson (Del.) moved to amend the section on tenure and salary to provide that judges may be removed by the executive at the request of both houses of the legislature. At that point, we turn to James Madison's notes:

"Mr. Gerry 2ded. the motion.

"Mr. Govr. Morris thought it a contradiction in terms to say that the Judges should hold their offices during good behavior, and yet be removeable without a trial. Besides it was fundamentally wrong to subject Judges to so arbitrary an authority.

"Mr. Sherman saw no contradiction or impropriety if this were made part of the Constitutional regulation of the Judiciary establishment. He observed that a like provision was contained in the British Statutes.

"Mr. Rutlidge: 'If the supreme Court is to judge between the U.S. and particular States, this alone is an insuperable objection to the motion.'

"Mr. Wilson considered such a provision in the British Government as less dangerous than here, the House of Lords & House of Commons being less likely to concur on the same occasions. Chief Justice Holt, he remarked, had successively offended by his independent conduct, both houses of Parliament. Had this happened at the same time, he would have been ousted. The Judges would be in a bad situation if made to depend on every gust of faction which might prevail in the two branches of our Govt.

"Mr. Randolph opposed the motion as weakening too much the independence of the Judges.

"Mr. Dickinson was not apprehensive that the Legislature composed of different branches constructed on such different principles, would improperly unite for the purpose of displacing a Judge —

"On the question for agreeing to Mr. Dickinson's Motion N.H. no. Mas. abst Ct. ay. N.J. abst Pa. no. Del. no. Md no. Va. no N.C. abst. S.C. no Geo no. (Ayes — 1; noes — 7; absent-3).

"On the question on Sect. 2 art XI as reported. Del. & Maryd. only no."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be diplomatic and your requests will probably be honored. Put airline tickets in a safe place. Conquer one last obstacle and you will enjoy smooth sailing where your finances are concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mate deserves a break. Take the whole family out to dinner. A pleasure trip brings you special benefits — perhaps even romance. Manage your travel funds with special care. Do not pick up every check.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your charisma has everyone running to help you. Do not get carried away with your power. Spend some time outdoors hiking, gardening or participating in sports. Self improvement activities enjoy highly favorable influences.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study a problem and possible solutions over the weekend. A child's views are enlightening and worthy of consideration. Pursue romance with enthusiasm. All systems are go!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Look to the future, not the past. Spend more time with people who are your intellectual equals. You are happiest when you feel challenged. Remain true to your high ideals in work and romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Showing off or acting egotistical will turn off your companions and could upset your weekend plans. An important relationship survives a dispute. Short trips are better than extended travel. Call home frequently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get what you have been yearning for. Trust your instincts and a business deal will go like clockwork. You find yourself more interested in power than money. Set realistic goals.

If the opponents prevent you from carrying out your initial plan, see if there's an alternative available. Don't persevere blindly along your original path until it is too late to adopt countermeasures.

North-South were playing weak two-bids, and South had maximum values for his action at this vulnerability. North was not sure a heart game would make, but he certainly wanted to preempt the opponents out of a possible spade contract.

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy and he was faced with four possible black-suit losers. Since all would be well if he could ruff a spade on the board, declarer immediately led a spade. West won and shifted to a trump.

Paying no heed to the defenders' intent, declarer led another spade. West won and removed dummy's last trump. Declarer drew the remaining trump and tried the club finesse. East took his queen and cashed a winning spade for down one.

Once the defenders had shifted to a trump, declarer should have realized he would never be able to ruff a spade. Therefore, he should have looked for another way to avoid losing four tricks. Besides the club finesse, there was the possibility of a 3-3 club split.

Declarer should have won the trump switch in hand and immediately finessed in clubs, while dummy still had a trump to control the third round of spades. The defenders then would have had no counter. Declarer could win any non-spade return, draw trumps and cash the king-ace of clubs. When that suit divided evenly, the table's fourth club would take care of South's third spade.

105-year-old woman 'too mean to die'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Proclaiming she was "too mean to die," 105-year-old Mildred Holt traded quips with Johnny Carson and became the oldest guest of "The Tonight Show."

"You're the oldest person I have ever met and ever had on the show," Carson told Mrs. Holt, who was born July 17, 1882.

"That's the way it is at home," said Mrs. Holt of Ellsworth, Kan. "I'm always the oldest one they ever met."

Dressed in a powder blue outfit with pearls and corsage and sipping a highball, Mrs. Holt recalled during Wednesday's show her family's first automobile in 1914, supporting Teddy Roosevelt for president and giving up driving just two years ago.

The feisty Kansan asked that they not make fun of her home state.

"I met a man at the hotel and he said, 'Where're you from?' and I said Kansas and he said, 'Oh, my goodness.' That made me mad," she said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jailed Sean Penn can't escape those who want an off-screen glimpse of the bad-boy actor famed for his scuffles with photographers, a newspaper says.

"Everybody sneaks a peek at him through the little window on his door," an anonymous source was quoted as saying in Wednesday's Los Angeles Herald Examiner. "Nurses, doctors, trusties, sometimes five people at a time."

Penn, 27, checked into the Los Angeles County Jail on Aug. 22 to serve the second portion of a 60-day sentence for probation violations.

A judge ordered him jailed after a fight with a man who tried to photograph him on the set of the film "Colors." Penn was placed on probation earlier this year after a barroom brawl with a man he thought was trying to kiss his pop singer wife, Madonna.

The actor was assigned to a separate section of the jail reserved for inmates thought to be at risk from the general jail population.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Ed Koch says he's not upset by a satirical article about his city set to appear in The Miami Herald on Sunday.

The article, a spoof of a New York Times story about Miami, is captioned "Can New York Save Itself? A city beset by garbage and yuppies."

"This is really a nice spoof," Koch told reporters who asked him about the article Wednesday. "I have nothing critical to say...of Miami. It's a spoof. It's nice. I'm in a good mood."

Convention debates power, duties of executive

Associated Press

EDITOR'S NOTE — This day-by-day account of 1787, the year that the U.S. Constitution was written, blends the significant with the small, personal details that bring history to life. The authors spent three years in research and writing, drawing on letters and personal diaries as well as the better-known historical documents. The writers are David D.C. Dutcher, David A. Kimball, Robert K. Sutton and Anna Coxe Toogood, all of the Independence National Historical Park in Philadelphia, where the Constitution was created 200 years ago.

Monday, Aug. 27, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Today was cool and rainy, with temperature in the 60s.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia had two or more congressional delegates present. Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland, and Georgia had one each. Congress would not meet.

CONVENTION TODAY

Consideration of Article X, Section 2, powers and duties of the executive, was resumed.

Luther Martin (Md.) moved to allow the president the power to pardon only after a conviction. James Wilson (Pa.) pointed out the need to use pardons to obtain testimony, and Martin withdrew the motion.

Robert Morris (Pa.) objected to having the Supreme Court try the president on impeachment and to having the president of the Senate succeed the president. James Madison (Va.) agreed, and suggested that when vacancies occurred, the powers of the president devolve on the Council (Cabinet). Postponed.

Article XI, on the judiciary, came up. William Samuel Johnson (Conn.) suggested that the judicial power should extend to both law and equity. George Read (Del.) opposed, but the motion carried. John Dickinson (Del.) moved to make judges removable by executive on application of Congress.

1787 Constitution Daybook

Consideration line by line continued and several clarifying amendments were approved.

DELEGATES TODAY

Secretary for Foreign Affairs John Jay wrote from New York to his father-in-law, Gov. William Livingston, a New Jersey delegate to the Convention, giving his opinion of Virginia delegate George Mason ("I thank you for introducing Col. Mason to me; he really is a man of Talents and an agreeable companion. There are few with whom on so short an acquaintance I have been so much pleased and I regret that it was not convenient to him to have remained longer in this city...") as well as news of Livingston's extended family.

William Samuel Johnson dined at his boarding house and then went to Robert Edge Pine's studio to sit again for his portrait.

LOOKING BACK

Debate on the Judiciary

Today's debate on the judiciary is typical of the attention to detail the delegates gave to almost every provision, and is illustrative of their thinking.

John Dickinson (Del.) moved to amend the section on tenure and salary to provide that judges may be removed by the executive at the request of both houses of the legislature. At that point, we turn to James Madison's notes:

"Mr. Gerry 2ded. the motion.

"Mr. Govr. Morris thought it a contradiction in terms to say that the Judges should hold their offices during good behavior, and yet be removeable without a trial. Besides it was fundamentally wrong to subject Judges to so arbitrary an authority.

"Mr. Sherman saw no contradiction or impropriety if this were made part of the Constitutional regulation of the Judiciary establishment. He observed that a like provision was contained in the British Statutes.

"Mr. Rutlidge: 'If the supreme Court is to judge between the U.S. and particular States, this alone is an insuperable objection to the motion.'

"Mr. Wilson considered such a provision in the British Government as less dangerous than here, the House of Lords & House of Commons being less likely to concur on the same occasions. Chief Justice Holt, he remarked, had successively offended by his independent conduct, both houses of Parliament. Had this happened at the same time, he would have been ousted. The Judges would be in a bad situation if made to depend on every gust of faction which might prevail in the two branches of our Govt.

"Mr. Randolph opposed the motion as weakening too much the independence of the Judges.

"Mr. Dickinson was not apprehensive that the Legislature composed of different branches constructed on such different principles, would improperly unite for the purpose of displacing a Judge —

"On the question for agreeing to Mr. Dickinson's Motion N.H. no. Mas. abst Ct. ay. N.J. abst Pa. no. Del. no. Md no. Va. no N.C. abst. S.C. no Geo no. (Ayes — 1; noes — 7; absent-3).

"On the question on Sect. 2 art XI as reported. Del. & Maryd. only no."

ANGELS

It was good news for El Paso, who defeated San Antonio 3-2 Wednesday to add some needed cushion down the final three-game stretch.

The Diablos lost to last place San Antonio Tuesday to see their lead shrink to a meager ½-game, but got it back on Wednesday with the key win.

Darryel Walters drove in the game-winning RBI in the fifth inning for El Paso. The winning run was allowed on base by an error by San Antonio shortstop Juan Bustabad.

The winning pitcher was Dan Scarpetta, 4-4. The loser was Dave Elchorn, 3-8.

AL

Jeff Reardon, 6-7, relieved to start the ninth for Minnesota with a 6-5 lead. Darrell Evans drew a leadoff walk, Bill Madlock walked with one out and Alan Trammell's two-out single loaded the bases. Nokes then singled on an 0-2 pitch and Lemon followed with his second home run of the game.

Dan Petry, 8-6, got the victory and Willie Hernandez got the final out for his seventh save. The Twins scored twice in the ninth against Mike Henneman on Kent Hrbek's RBI double and Trammell's error at shortstop.

Greg Gagne homered and drove in three runs for Minnesota and Tom Brunansky also homered for the Twins. Jim Morrison hit a three-run homer for the Tigers.

White Sox 5, Red Sox 3

Carlton Fisk again socked Boston, hitting two home runs as Chicago won at Fenway Park.

Fisk, who left the Red Sox in 1981 and signed with the White Sox as a free agent, has hit 24 homers and driven in 54 runs in 70 games against Boston. He hit a solo homer in the second inning off Roger Clemens and a two-run shot in the fourth, giving him 17 home runs this season and 298 in his career.

Bill Long, 8-6, gave up three runs on seven hits in 7⅓ innings and Scott Nielsen got his second save.

Clemens, 13-8, had won five straight decisions. He allowed five runs on five hits in seven innings.

Jays find Rick Leach, but questions remain

TORONTO (AP) — Toronto Blue Jays outfielder Rick Leach, who disappeared for more 17 hours at the end of a road trip, has arrived in Detroit refusing to explain why he failed to show up for a game in Seattle.

Leach was able to duck most of the reporters waiting at Detroit Metropolitan Airport by arriving on a Northwest flight from Minneapolis instead of the expected direct flight from Seattle.

He was spotted with his wife, Angela, hurrying into a family car outside the airport terminal.

"I can't comment," Leach said. "There may be a statement (today)."

He refused to say whether he would continue on to Toronto today or remain with his family in nearby Flint, Mich.

Blue Jays Manager Jimy Williams had not heard from Leach by Wednesday afternoon, but he wanted to talk to him sometime before the game tonight in Toronto against the Oakland Athletics.

"We've just got to do what we think is the right thing," Williams said. "I want to talk to him before we consider anything. There's two sides to every story."

Lou Giampetroni, Leach's father-in-law, told the Toronto Globe and Mail that Leach went into hiding in Seattle after a "personal problem" between him and his wife.

Angela Leach, who refused to be interviewed Wednesday, was accompanying her husband on a West Coast road trip for the first time.

"When all the facts are known, I think we'll find out that a dispute between Rick and Ang was probably what happened," Giampetroni said. "But, for the life of me, I just can't understand why he reacted so strongly. It's a pretty tough way to show your displeasure."

Leach, who also missed the Blue Jays' charter flight to Toronto following the game Tuesday, reappeared at a Seattle airport hotel Wednesday morning.

Dick Leach, Rick's father, said he talked with his son just before noon Wednesday after waiting up all night for a call.

"He indicated he was safe and making arrangements to report back to the Blue Jays," Dick Leach said in a telephone interview from Flint, Mich. "I was very, very happy just to hear his voice and hear that he's alive.

"There's something bothering him. What, I don't know. He's never been involved with drugs. I don't think he's unhappy with the Blue Jays' organization. He has never shared it with me and I don't really want to speculate."

Leach, 30, was reported to have told his father that he wanted to go back to Flint to visit his two sons, Matthew and Michael.

Leach planned to call Pat Gillick, Jays vice-president of baseball, with an explanation after landing in Detroit, a team spokesman said.

"It's between (Leach) and his wife and the team," Jays traveling secretary Mike Mitchell said from Seattle. Mitchell, along with pitcher Jimmy Key's wife, Cindy, and Leach's wife, Angela, stayed behind to look for Leach on Tuesday night.

Leach's teammates and others who know the former University of Michigan star quarterback said Wednesday the action was completely "out of character."

Shoot Yeah top qualifier for $2.5 million, 440-yard All American Futurity at Ruidoso

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Shoot Yeah, a 2-year-old colt, was the top qualifier Wednesday for the $2.5 million All American Futurity, the richest quarter horse race in the world.

The 440-yard race will be run on Labor Day at Ruidoso Downs, where the race originated in 1959. The winner of the futurity will earn $1 million.

Shoot Yeah, owned by a Lawton, Okla., partnership, won his trial race in a time of 21.610 seconds. The 10 finalists for the race were determined from eight time trials Wednesday.

Seventy-two horses competed in the time trials. The original field of nominees had been trimmed to 72 horses through an elimination round of trials two weeks ago.

Henderson recounts use of cocaine

DALLAS (AP) — Former linebacker Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson says in his autobiography, "Out of Control," that he used drugs while playing for four different NFL teams and secretly sniffed a cocaine-laced inhaler during Super Bowl XIII as a Dallas Cowboy.

Henderson, a former first-round draft pick of the Cowboys, traced his drug use from his days with Dallas to San Francisco, Houston and Miami to a stint in a California prison.

"I began the book four years ago. It started out as an angry project. I wanted to expose the NFL, the Dallas Cowboys, and all the superstars who did drugs. I didn't get a deal on that type of program," Henderson said Wednesday in a telephone interview from Los Angeles.

"Now I've changed my life. This is now the real story about Thomas Henderson. My book is brutal to Thomas Henderson. It's not a self-serving yearbook like some you read. I hope it does a service to the public."

HENDERSON, who gets a check for $700 a month from the NFL for a neck injury, said he hopes what happened to him helps someone else. "I know there are skeptics out there. But I've been chemically free for three years and 10 months. I don't even drink a beer when I play golf."

Although he visited recently with Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, Henderson said none of his former teammates will talk to him about his book.

"They didn't call me in prison so why should they call me now?" said Henderson, who served time after pleading no contest to sexual battery and bribery in California.

He was released last Oct. 15 and now gives lectures on the evils of drug abuse.

In his book with co-author Peter Knobler, Henderson says that at the Super Bowl game against Pittsburgh in 1978, he put 1½ grams of cocaine powder into an inhaler and mixed it with water.

"My baggage to the bowl was my coke," he said. "I was going to get banged around out there and my nose was going to hurt ... So besides having an addiction and a real habit, I needed cocaine as medication. I had to anesthetize my face."

Sometime during the second half, Henderson said, "I pulled out my Vicks Inhaler. The Orange Bowl holds about 80,000 screaming fans, plus there were about 200 million watching worldwide on TV, and there I was on the sideline taking a couple of major snorts in front of them all. We lost that day. I lost that day. I was out of control."

He said he was wired on cocaine his last day as a Dallas Cowboy after "the terrible towel" incident in 1979.

In a losing cause to the Washington Redskins, Henderson mugged for the national television cameras on the sidelines, waving the towel in front of the lens. Linebacker Coach Jerry Tubbs caught Henderson's act and told Coach Tom Landry.

On the flight back to Dallas, Henderson said he drank gin "and snorted a noseful of coke in the lavatory." Then he shouted he wanted to be traded and cursed some coaches.

The next day Landry ordered Henderson to his office.

Preparing for his meeting with Landry, Henderson said, "I laid out a line of coke about a half a gram long and snorted it all."

He said Landry, wiping away tears, told him, "You can play football for somebody else. I just can't handle you anymore. I'm putting you on waivers."

Henderson announced his retirement the next day at a news conference.

"Cocaine was my agent, cocaine was my attorney, cocaine made most of my major decisions," Henderson wrote in his book. "It was a big mistake. By retiring, I gave myself to the Cowboys forever; they would have to be compensated before another team could sign me."

Henderson said Landry "had all the qualities of a great coach, but if Tom Landry would ever once hug a player, or walk on the field when a man is down hurt, that player would probably jump up and run off the field.

"It'd be like Jesus walking through and healing the sick. Landry acted like he didn't care but I think deep down he really did; he just worked at being hard."

Landry said he had just skimmed the book but found the parts he read "very vulgar."

He said he talked with Henderson recently when the former linebacker visited the Cowboys training camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif. "I hope he's cleaning up his act. He seemed to while he was out here," Landry said.

He said he knew something was wrong with Henderson during his career with the Cowboys, but "there was no way to prove he was into cocaine. I mentioned he needed to look out for it several times. It was hard to convince him. Drugs take a powerful hold on your life."

Henderson detailed how he played under the influence of cocaine for Bill Walsh at San Francisco, Bum Phillips at Houston and Don Shula at Miami.

ALONG THE way he went to a drug rehabilitation center, suffered a neck injury and got into freebasing.

Playing for the Oilers, Henderson said in his book: "I was completely gone ... I was lucky I didn't kill somebody. I was lucky I didn't kill myself."

Henderson said he became so paranoid that on a flight back from a game he almost stabbed lineman Mike Stensrud, who was trying to apologize to him for a long-running feud.

"Stensrud said, 'I just want to let you know that it's over.' I was so doped up ... on freebasing cocaine that I had almost committed murder," Henderson said. "His neck had been wide open and I would have stabbed him in it. Cocaine had almost made me a murderer."

Henderson said the message in his book to parents is to watch out for their children's role models.

"It's OK to watch somebody score a touchdown and cheer but when you start looking for role models past the dinner table then something is wrong at the dinner table," Henderson said.

Henderson said he would like to help NFL teams by talking to the players about substance abuse.

In his book, Henderson concludes: "I am living one day at a time and I have been sober now for almost four years. I live in hope."

Said Landry: "It's a sad story. I just hope he's OK now. I hope he's cured."

Eligibility restored to Austin

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The NCAA Eligibility Committee voted Wednesday to restore the eligibility of University of Pittsburgh senior defensive back Teryl Austin, who admitted taking money last year from pro sports agent Norby Walters in violation of NCAA rules.

Austin must sit out Pitt's first two games against Brigham Young on Sept. 2 and North Carolina State on Sept. 12, but will be permitted to play in the Panthers' remaining games.

Austin apparently will become the first student-athlete permitted by the NCAA to resume his collegiate career after prematurely taking money from or signing a contract with a sports agent.

"I'm not sure how much he's going to help us after missing all of camp, and there are a lot of things he'll have to do to catch up," said Pitt Coach Mike Gottfried. "But anything that will help clean up the agent problem, I'm for."

Gottfried said he has been told by knowledgable sources that as many as 300 underclassmen athletes may have been under contract to agents last year.

"From what I understand, the NCAA thinks it can help put a halt to this by encouraging the kid to come forward and admit his mistake, and I'm for it," Gottfried said.

The NCAA ruled Austin must repay the $2,500 he received from Walters and be free of any contractural obligation before he can play again.

"By taking this action, we hope we can encourage student-athletes who have signed with agents to come forward with the knowledge that the eligibility committee will consider restoring a substantial part of their remaining eligibility," said Lew Cryer, chairman of the Eligibility Committee and commissioner of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

"We do not believe any student should be restored to eligibility while he remains under contract to an agent or retains the benefit provided by the agent, but if those problems are resolved, we will consider restoration of eligibility," he said.

Austin, from Sharon, Pa., was declared neligible in June after admitting he signed last year with Walters' New York-based agency, World Sports & Entertainment, Inc., and accepted $2,500 in a loan and monthly payments.

The 6-foot-2, 190-pound free safety was one of the NCAA interception leaders with seven in 1985, but failed to pick off a pass last season as Pitt's defensive secondary was often exploited by opposing offenses.

Red & The Red Hots ignite Joey's

The Show of the season is on stage this weekend at Joey's Restaurant. Red & The Red Hots will perform Friday and Saturday nights, 9:30 p.m. to 2 a.m.

Late Night At Joey's is proud to present this stylish group whose specialty is the Big Band Sound of the 40's.

Red Young, the band's namesake, is an accomplished and talented vocalist and keyboard man. Two female singers, acoustic bass, drums and horns round out the sound that will keep your toes tapping all night long.

Artistic direction, including wardrobe, hair, make-up and choreography, stage and lighting design are a product of PATAN. Formerly a make-up artist, PATAN and Red met while on tour with Linda Rondstadt.

The talents combining to create Red & The Red Hots have resulted in a positive and professional show. The music and moods created are as viable today as they were 40 years ago.

Midland audiences of all ages will enjoy this innovative and polished act that have found a balance between fun up-beat songs and romantic melodies.

Come early and enjoy a delicious meal before the show at Joey's Restaurant, located at the corner of Midland Drive and Neely in the Mesa Verde Shopping Center.

Joey's, in addition to providing good entertainment and excellent food (including steaks, seafood, prime rib, gourmet burgers and the best chicken fried steak in the area), offers you this and more in a nice, clean, comfortable atmosphere with plenty of lighted parking for your convenience.

Joey's also features a premium well in their bar, along with a great wine list.

So, if you are in the mood for excellent dining and some fun and dancing along with your night out, then Joey's Restaurant is the place to be.

Dollar renews slide

LONDON (AP) — The dollar resumed its fall against European currencies and the Japanese yen today after a midweek improvement. Gold was stronger.

Dealers said only the fear of central bank intervention and a flareup in the Persian Gulf was deterring markets from driving the dollar lower.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.40 yen to a closing 142.55 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at 142.25 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

—1.8206 West German marks, down from 1.8292

—1.5002 Swiss francs, down from 1.5055

—6.0805 French francs, down from 6.1055

—2.0523 Dutch guilders, down from 2.0605

—1,317.50 Italian lire, down from 1,323.75

—1.3195 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3220

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.6218, compared with $1.6135 Wednesday.

GOLD

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $458.20 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $457.50. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $458.25.

In Zurich, the bid price was $458.65, up from $458 late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $2.80 to close at a bid $459.49.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $7.74 a troy ounce, up from Wednesday's $7.71.

OPEC announcements push price over $19

From Staff and Wire Reports

The prospect that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries may come to grips with its supply glut has sent oil futures prices back above $19 per barrel.

The futures market rallied Wednesday in response to reports that the cartel's pricing and quotas committees would meet soon. The rally also was driven by technical factors, analysts said.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, October contracts for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, settled at $19.46 per 42-gallon barrel, up 82 cents from Tuesday.

Permian Basin posted prices remained at $19 this morning, as buyers watched world markets closely for price movements in this mornings trading. Postings came down by 50 cents to the $19 per barrel level earlier in the week.

Futures contracts had not closed above $19 since last Thursday, when it finished at $19.42. Wednesday's jump in the benchmark price was also the biggest one-day spike since a 83-cent leap July 28, when the contract settled at $21.32.

Prices for refined products also joined in Wednesday's rally. September contracts for wholesale unleaded gasoline closed at 50.90 cents per gallon, up 1.60 cents, while wholesale heating oil contracts for September settled at 51.18 cents per gallon, up 2.13 cents per gallon.

Though prices have fallen from what they were several weeks ago, consumers are unlikely to see much difference at the retail level soon. The main reason is that it takes weeks for the raw crude to be shipped, refined and distributed to the final point of sale.

On Tuesday, OPEC President Rilwanu Lukman told a news conference in Lagos, Nigeria, that he would meet in Vienna on Friday with representatives from Indonesia and Venezuela to find ways to make members honor their quotas.

Another five-member team would meet to review and monitor oil prices, he said.

The 13-nation cartel's self-imposed production quota is 16.6 million barrels a day. In recent weeks, however, several members have been exceeding their limits, causing supplies to outstrip world demand and leading to fears of another price war that could bring on a second market crash in two years.

Some industry-watchers have pegged the cartel's overall surplus at as much as 3 million barrels a day, but Lukman denied that Tuesday. He said the level of overproduction is between 1.1 million and 1.2 million barrels a day.

The idea that those production levels would be curtailed sent short sellers scurrying for cover Wednesday, analysts said. Traders "feel uncomfortable being short and going into an OPEC meeting," said Mike Himmel, an analyst at the Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. securities firm.

In a short sale, a trader borrows a contract and sells it, hoping to replace it later with another contract bought at a lower price.

If the price rises, however — as has happened after some previous OPEC gatherings — the trader loses money from having to replace it with a contract bought at a higher price.

"There were plenty of shorts going into (Wednesday's) market," Himmel said, adding that their buying fueled the rally.

U.S. cannot discount oil from Middle East

Driller warns congressional aides

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Ten congressional aides from such areas as diverse as New York, Pennsylvania, Utah and Washington had their understanding of the oil industry expanded Wednesday night by a strong warning from the chairman of the world's largest drilling company.

Robert Parker, chairman of Parker Drilling Co. of Tulsa, told the aides, visiting Midland as part of an information tour sponsored by West Texas Producers' Forum, that it was a serious mistake for anyone to think America could get by without Middle East oil.

"There is a notion that everything would be all right if the Persian Gulf were closed, because we only get seven percent of our oil from there — that's simply not true," warned the energy advisor to the Reagan administration and member of the National Petroleum Council.

If the Straits of Hormuz were closed today, he informed, the world would lose 8 million barrels of oil that could not be replaced, resulting in severe worldwide economic disruption. "A little shortage of oil can cause a hell of an impact in the world." He called the notion of an insignificant seven percent loss frivolous.

He said the U.S. could not depend on Mexico, Venezuela and Canada for oil if there were a disruption of oil supplies in the Persian Gulf, because Japan and Europe would begin chasing that oil and paying any price to get it.

"They would have no choice," he said. "They would have to pay whatever price was put on a barrel; a tanker of oil could change prices four or five times before it reached its destination."

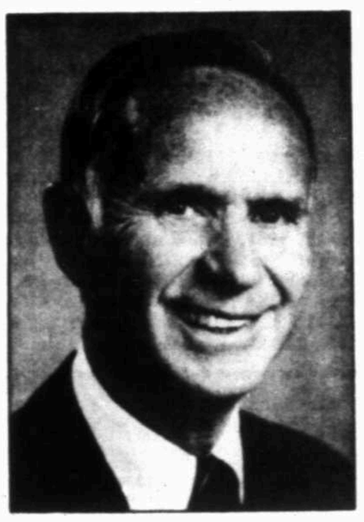

Parker told the group of almost 100 at the Plaza Club that we must keep the Persian Gulf open, but the nation must maintain an option to Middle East oil: "Make no mistake about it, Middle East oil is absolutely essential to this country — but so is our oil."

Saying that the cost of a military presence in the Gulf drove oil prices from the region up to $140 a barrel, he said it didn't make sense to be fighting for Middle East oil, but not drilling for our own.

Parker, whose firm drills for oil worldwide, explained that 35 nations had increased exploration activity, but the U.S. was not one of them: "I fear it will take a crisis in the Middle East to revive exploration in this country."

He discredited the notion of many, including some major oil companies, that there is no oil left to be found in America, saying there was still oil to be found but it would be deeper and harder to find.

"Still," said Parker, "the deepest, most expensive oil you can find today in America will be cheaper than OPEC oil tomorrow."

Parker

While he recognizes U.S. dependency on Middle East oil, he is not so certain it will be there when we need it, describing the Middle East as an unstable area, seething with hate, he says control of the vast oil reserves in the Middle East is shaky.

"I have been to the Persian Gulf four times this year. It is unstable beyond belief, and so close to all out war. I think ownership of the oil reserves there could change at any moment."

He calls religion — not politics — the root problem in the Middle East. "Everybody hates everybody."

He said Congress and the President should be concerned about Middle East oil but they should be just as concerned about U.S. oil, and blamed the lack of a viable energy policy on bad advise given the President: "Garbage in...garbage out."

Record trade gap drives Wall Street into retreat

Associated Press

A rising tide of imports overpowered a smaller increase in exports to push the U.S. trade deficit to a record high of $39.5 billion in the second quarter.

The Commerce Department's latest negative report Wednesday on the nation's trade picture pulled the dollar down against all major currencies except the British pound.

On Wall Street, the stock market paused for a round of profit-taking following its latest record-setting session. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues fell 20.57 points to 2,701.85.

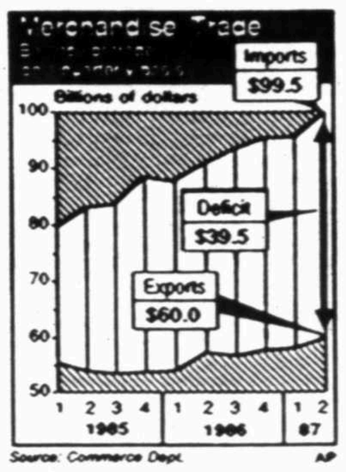

Oil futures prices, meanwhile, zoomed above $19 a barrel, as traders concluded that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was finally facing up to the problem of its excess production.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, October contracts for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude oil, closed at $19.46 per 42-gallon barrel, up 82 cents from Tuesday's close.

In other economic developments Wednesday:

—An article in Fortune magazine said the average American lives better now than 30 years ago and has to work fewer hours to pay for standard items like kitchen stoves, car tune-ups, haircuts and beer.

—A survey by an executive recruiting firm found that a majority of the top U.S. companies are unprepared to deal with AIDS despite growing evidence the fatal disease could eventually cost corporate America billions of dollars.

—Contracting for new construction rose 1 percent in July, aided by a revival in the building of single-family homes, said a report by the F.W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co.

The Commerce Department said the widening in the gap between what the United States sells abroad and what it purchases followed a shortfall of $38.8 billion in the January-to-March quarter, the previous record for a three-month period.

Wednesday's report for the second quarter showed that, despite a large decline in the value of the dollar which in theory should make U.S. goods more competitive, the deficit worsened in terms of value and volume.

Midland residential market outperforming state norms

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The local real estate market is outperforming the statewide average, with residential sales activity up more than 42 percent compared to last year, Midland Board of Realtors president Anita Noles told members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce's board of directors.

Through the end of July, the Texas Board of Realtors reports activity up more than 26 percent since last year, Noles said. "Local market activity is up 42.7 percent from last year. During July, 167 homes with a total value of $13.3 million were sold."

That compares to 133 homes totaling $9.3 million in valuation last July. The average home sale price is up almost $10,000 to $79,730, Noles reported. As of July 31, 1,410 homes were listed by local realtors, she said.

Other business completed at the group's monthly board meeting Wednesday included the official election of John Fowler as board president. Fowler's election followed a move by the board to change titles among board officers "to more closely align them with corporate structure," explained Wayne Merritt, now chairman of the chamber board.

The group's top staff position, now held by former Oklahoman Fowler, will be held by the president. The top elected slot will carry the title of chairman of the board.

Picking up on the appeal generated by the Scharbauers' Kentucky Derby champion Alysheba, the chamber adopted a horse racing theme for its annual membership drive. "The membership derby is off and running," announced Joanne Langston, membership drive coordinator.

In getting out of the starting gate, the membership group has assembled 19 teams comprising 175 volunteer salesmen for the chamber. Training for the sales teams has begun in three separate sessions, building up to a kick-off breakfast Sept. 9. More than 100 prizes, including Caribbean vacations, have been donated for the top sales teams.

The three-week membership drive will culminate in the group's annual meeting luncheon Sept. 29.

John Bushman, chairman of Midland's Home Savings Association gave the first status report on his company's "It's up to me!" campaign. "We really don't consider it a Home Savings' project. It's a Permian Basin effort," Busman told the chamber board.

The company made its first $500 award for worthy economic development ideas to Midlander Rosemary Fields for her concept for creating a second-hand toy store outlet.

The "It's up to me!" program has made Home Savings a virtual Basin-wide economic development suggestion box. Thus far, nearly 100 job creation ideas have poured into the S&L's office, Bushman said. He estimated that another nine or ten of the ideas may be good enough to merit the top $500 cash prize.

GM closing clouds workers' futures

NORWOOD, Ohio (AP) — Life after General Motors means going back to school or trying other lines of work for many of the 4,000 people who lost their jobs when a 65-year-old auto assembly plant in this Cincinnati suburb closed.

The last car, a Chevrolet Camaro IROC, came off the line at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, said spokeswoman Betsy Hayhow. A 19-year employee, Wendell Spurlock, won the $22,000 red sports car in a raffle among the workers, she said.

The Milford man walked down the assembly line as the car was being put together and shook hands with every worker who put a part on the car.

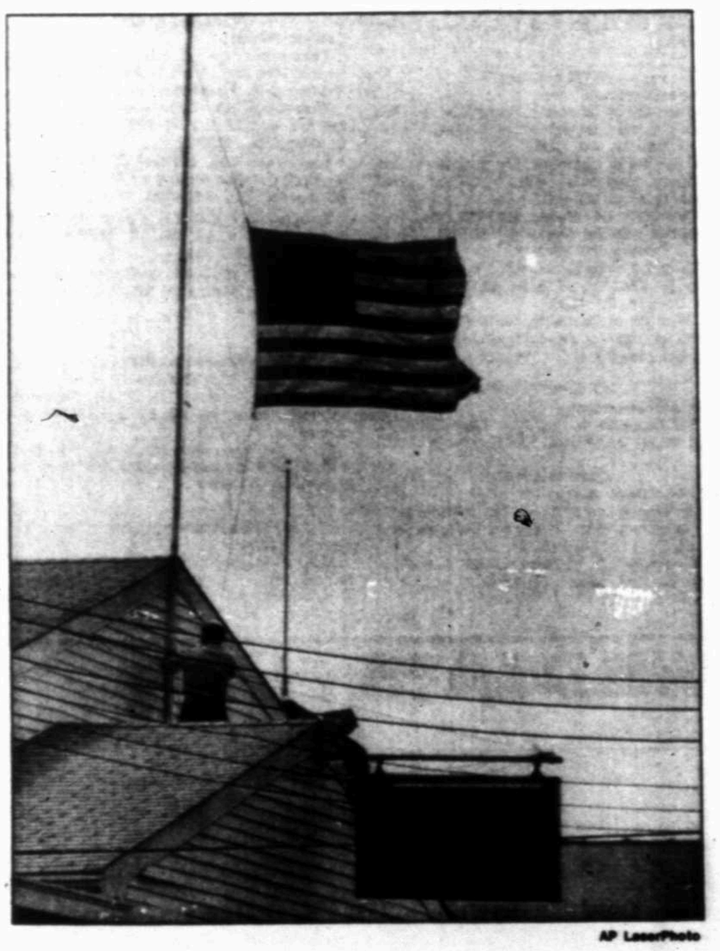

The shutdown is the first of 11 partial or complete closings announced by GM in November. A total of 29,000 jobs will be eliminated in a $10 billion reorganization the automaker said will remove excess production.

"There are guys in there who can do anything — artists, cabinet makers, teachers, people with college educations," said Mike Gaddis, 53, of Florence, Ky., a 22-year employee who has enrolled in technical school, taking general courses.

About 500 workers have signed up for job retraining programs co-sponsored by GM and the United Auto Workers, said Cleon Montgomery, a union official.

The automaker does not yet know how many employees can transfer to other GM plants, Ms. Hayhow said.

"I came here to earn my college tuition 19 years ago," said Michael McDaniel, 37. "When I saved it up, I went and bought a new car, and I've been here ever since. Now my son is going to college next year. I have the money saved for it, but we may be rethinking that. I may go back myself."

Thrift probe eyes ex-governor, regulators

DALLAS (AP) — The financial records of more than 100 individuals, including those of the state's top thrift regulator, a former governor and former lieutenant governor, have been subpoenaed by a federal grand jury as part of a U.S. Justice Department criminal investigation of Texas banks and savings associations, state and federal officials say.

Among the prominent Texans named in the expanded grand jury subpoena list are Texas Savings and Loan Commissioner L. Linton Bowman III, former Texas Gov. John Connally, former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and Gene Phillips, the chairman of Southmark Corp., one of Dallas' largest corporations, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The list brings to about 410 the number of individuals whose financial records are being sought by investigators from about 25 to 35 Texas savings associations.

The Dallas Morning News quoted federal officials today as saying the list does not represent indictments but is simply a fishing list for financial documents that may be used as evidence in subsequent criminal investigations and court cases.

"The whole list would total about 400 names," said one federal official, who asked not to be identified. "But a great number of those would be custodians of records, bank officers and others whose records would be routinely examined or who would have the authority to release the records of thsoe who are actually under investigation."

Bowman told the Morning News he understood that the subpoenas seek records from savings associations at which investigators believe he may have had loans.

"Since I became a bureaucrat in 1980, I have not gotten a loan or the proceeds of loan either directly or indirectly from a state-chartered S&L in this state," Bowman said.

Bowman is a partner in an active real estate firm with the former chairman of failed Vernon Savings Association of Dallas, according to state records.

Environmentalists assail plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of environmental groups is challenging the offshore oil and gas leasing plan adopted last month by Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel for the nation's outer continental shelf.

"Hodel's plan is an attack on our nation's natural heritage — its magnificent coastline and marine resources," said Sarah Chasis, an attorney with the Natural Resources Defense Council.

In a lawsuit prepared for filing today in the U.S. Court of Appeals, the coalition says Hodel failed to balance the potential for adverse coastal effects with the potential for discovery of oil and gas resources, as required by the Continental Shelf Lands Act.

The suit also says he failed to consider alternatives to proceeding with oil leasing in vulnerable areas, as required by the National Environmental Policy Act. It asks the court to cancel the plan, signed July 2 by Hodel, and return it to the Interior secretary for revision.

"This plan is arrogant and dishonest," said James Thornton, another attorney with the council. "It's arrogant because Hodel walked away from negotiations trying to find a reasonable resolution, and what's dishonest is his contention that we need to drill at once ... for energy security."

Amoco finals three in Ector County

From Staff Reports

AMOCO PRODUCTION CO., Midland has finaled three oil wells in the South Foster field of Ector County approximately 3 miles west of Odessa.

The No. 187 South Foster Unit was potentialed pumping 207 barrels of 39.6 API gravity crude with a gas/oil ratio of 251:1 on July 18.

Production was through perforations shot from 4,018 to 4,238 ft. which had been acidized with 4,000 gallons of 15% NeFe and fractured with 45,000 gallons gel and 140,000 lbs. of 12/20 mesh sand.

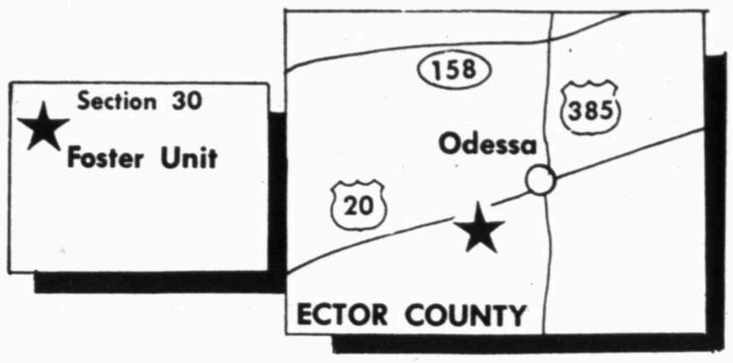

Drilled to a depth of 4,375 ft. with 5½-in. casing set at 4,374 ft., it is plugged back to 4,280 ft.

Location is 2,185 ft. from west and 789 ft. from south lines of section 30, block 42, T2S of the T&PRR Survey. Formation tops are listed as Queen 3863 ft. and Grayburg 3895 ft. Top of pay is 4018 ft.

The No. 186 South Foster Unit was potentialed on Aug. 8 to pump 120 barrels 36.9 API gravity crude, 60 Mcfgd and 310 barrels of water with a gas/oil ratio of 500:1.

The well was drilled to a depth of 4,679 ft. and perforations were made between 4,018 and 4,240 ft. Acidizing was done with 3750 gallons of 15% NeFe and fracturing was accomplished with 40,000 gallons gel and 140,000 lbs. of 12/20 sand.

The well is located 612 ft. from the west and 4,679 ft. from the south lines of section 30, block 42, T2S of the T&PRR survey.

Drilled to a depth of 3,500 ft., the well was plugged back to 3,451 ft. on a ground elevation of 3,307 ft.

Production was through perforations shot from 2,000 to 2,258 ft., which had been acidized with 4,000 gallons of 15% NeFe and fractured with 51,000 gallons and 265,000 lbs. of 16/30 sand.

The No. 5 Downie Ranch is located 25 miles south of Sanderson in section 6, block R3 of the GC&SFRR Survey.

Formation tops are: Base Creataceous 643; Caballos 1630; Ordovician 2800. Top of pay is listed at 2,000 ft.

Midland firm strikes 105 barrel oil well

CARLOW CORP., Midland has completed its No. 2 TXL 'A' 5 miles east of Goldsmith.

The 5,948-ft. well was potentialed pumping 105 barrels of 38 API gravity crude along with 54 Mcfgd and 43 barrels of water daily producing a gas/oil ratio of 514:1.

Casing was set to a depth of 5,948 ft. Perforations were shot from 5,146 to 5302 ft. and the well was acicized using 6,500 gallons of 15% NeFe.

Location is 330 ft. from the east and north lines in section 33, block 43, T1N of the T&PRR Survey.

Formation tops are listed as: Grayburg 3,940; San Andres 4,300; Holt 5,141. Top of pay is 5,146 ft.

Pecos' Thistle Field gains 115 bopd well

SHELL WESTERN EXPLORATION & PRODUCTION INC., Houston reported a 115-barrel completion in the Thistle Field in Pecos County.

The No. 5 Downie Ranch was potentialed on Aug. 13 to pump 115 barrels of 33.4 API gravity crude, with 34 Mcfgd, and no water producing a gas/oil ratio of 304:1.

On a ground elevation of 2,915 ft., formation tops are Queen 3,839 ft., and Grayburg 3,867 ft. Top of pay is listed as 3,946 ft.

Panhandle sets long-term gas sale contracts

JACKSON, Mich., — Consumers Power Co. and Panhandle Eastern Corp. announced that Panhandle Eastern's two interstate natural gas pipelines have agreed to new, long-term contracts for the utility's more than 1.2 million gas customers. The contracts, covering natural gas sales and transportation service, replace and extend the service term of those currently in effect.

The 10-year contracts, which are subject to approval by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, involve Panhandle Eastern subsidiaries Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. and Trunkline Gas Co.

"The renegotiated contracts will allow Consumers Power to better match future supplies with demand and, in the near term, reduce gas costs to our customers," said William T. McCormick Jr., Consumers Power Co. chairman.

Robert D. Hunsucker, president and chief executive officer of Panhandle Eastern, said, "These agreements provide a significant and predictable long-term market for Panhandle and its producers while also ensur5o a reliable future supply of natural gas for Michigan at competitive prices."

You may have more than one reason to buy a Mercedes-Benz.

Mercedes-Benz takes its commitment to safety extremely seriously. In fact, every time you and your family get into the car, a whole network of reassuring technology rides with you.

Consider the Mercedes-Benz Anti-lock Braking System (ABS), for example. Pioneered by Mercedes-Benz and standard on most current models, this ingenious computerized system helps prevent wheel lockup and skidding in sudden braking on slippery road surfaces and in sudden stops.

The Supplemental Restraint System (SRS), another Mercedes-Benz first, includes a driver's-side air bag, knee bolster and emergency tensioning retractors on both front 3-point seat belts. As standard equipment in every new Mercedes-Benz.

Mercedes-Benz safety design isn't simply tacked on. It's an integral part of the automobile's basic design. From a rigid passenger compartment, with impact-absorbing "crumple zones" fore and aft. To a steering column designed to resist rearward displacement in major frontal impact.

These and myriad other features exemplify the safety-conscious Mercedes-Benz engineering philosophy. Come in and talk to us, your authorized Mercedes-Benz dealer. And test-drive one of this philosophy's finest expressions.

Like no other dealers in the world.
