Pilot to compete in England

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Gene Beggs, the premier aerobatic pilot of West Texas, will focus his 18 years of flying experience into a single event — the 1986 World Aerobatic Championship — in England in August.

Beggs, a 42-year-old Southwest Airlines pilot and a flight instructor, is one of five members of the United States Men's World Aerobatic Team, which in 1984 won the biennial World Aerobatic Championship in Hungary.

The U.S. has won the championship four times — 1970, 1972, 1980 and 1984 - since world competition began in 1960. Czechoslovakia won the first championship.

Since the 1984 victory, Beggs said he is "much more confident and much more at ease because I know what to expect at a world championship."

Out of the 20 world-class teams competing in 1984, Czechoslovakia and Russia placed second and third, respectively, in the men's competition. In the women's aerobatics, Russia placed first, and the United States came in second.

Cities feeling economic ills

AUSTIN (AP) — State government isn't all that's feeling the squeeze of the economic plunge. Local governments are having to pinch pennies, too.

Cost-cutting measures that state lawmakers are only beginning to consider to cope with the $2.3 billion budget shortfall already have been taken by many Texas cities, officials say.

City workers are losing their jobs in Houston. Workers are seeing paychecks shrink in Dallas. In Austin, where sales tax revenues and fees are flattening from the post-boom slowdown, the city has cut $12.3 million from its current budget.

A special session of the Texas Legislature appears likely to deal with the state's budget crisis. Lawmakers have said they will consider both spending cuts and tax increases.

But what could provide relief for the state could spell trouble for local governments.

"Some of the things the state does, if they no longer do it, the cities will have to pick up the costs," said Jared Hazleton, president of the Texas Research League, a non-profit research group that studies state and local finance.

"If the state cuts back on aid to local schools, that means more local taxes in more districts. If the state puts prisoners back into county jails, that raises the cost of county government," Hazleton said.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said he recognizes the plight of local government.

"I have recognized for a long time they have severe problems, and if the Legislature allows the pressure to be placed on property taxes, then we are going to have some revolts that will make Proposition 13 look like a cakewalk," he said, referring to the California initiative which rolled back property tax rates.

The state sales tax rate currently stands at 4¼ percent. Cities are allowed to add an extra penny.

If the Legislature raised the rate to 5 percent, it wouldn't help cities. However, if the state taxes currently exempted merchandise and services, cities would reap some additional money.

The only direct aid to local governments in Texas is for public education, which also is a large portion of the state budget.

Survey: MISD administrative salaries competitive

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Beginning teacher salaries in Midland are below the state average, while administrative salaries are highly competitive across West Texas and with larger school districts such as Dallas and Austin, a Reporter-Telegram survey shows.

Midland Independent School District reported last month that its beginning teacher salary was below the state average for districts with enrollment of 10,000 or more students.

The cause, officials said, was the Legislature's equalization of school finances three years ago.

In 1985-86, teachers here earned $18,300 per year, while Austin ISD reported it's beginning teachers received $19,250, and Dallas and Ector County ISD's teachers earned $19,000 apiece.

To compete with other school districts, trustees voted last month to cut $1 million in payroll costs, including administrative, to offset an average 4 percent increase in teacher salaries with beginning teachers receiving the bulk of the increase.

Administrative salaries, on the other hand, are highly competitive across West Texas and with the larger school districts such as Dallas and Austin, the survey shows.

The salaries included average pay for officials in Ector County, Lubbock, Abilene, Amarillo, El Paso, Dallas, Austin and San Angelo when more than one person had the same job title.

Figures were gathered from school district personnel and business offices.

Dr. Joseph P. Baressi, MISD superintendent, and the school's highest paid employee, receives an annual base salary of $96,000.

That ranked second in the survey behind his Dallas Independent School District counterpart, Linus Wright, but ahead of superintendents in other larger school districts such as Austin, El Paso, Lubbock and Amarillo.

Austin ISD has a school district enrollment of 58,791 students — about three times the size of Midland ISD. Figures show El Paso ISD with about 58,911, Lubbock ISD with about 28,268 and Amarillo ISD with approximately 27,298.

Austin's superintendent makes $89,000 while El Paso's receives $86,156. Lubbock and Amarillo superintendents earn $78,750 and $80,600 respectively.

Board president Bill Jackson said the district must offer competitive salaries to attract the highest quality personnel.

"Good people are hard to find and, to attract them, you have to offer them something...Money is one," he said.

Compared to other districts, MISD employs fewer administrators and, therefore, can afford to pay higher salaries, Jackson said.

In some cases, the district offers fewer fringe benefits to its top paid administrators to justify larger base salaries, he added.

Black Advisory Council says proposed funds not enough

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A Black Advisory Council member told the City Council Tuesday that $4,000 in grant money is not enough to build a proposed tutorial and senior citizen center.

"We want more than a little and it's going to take more than a little to implement this program. The need is great," said James Fuller, a Black Advisory Council member.

The advisory council had initially asked for $279,000.

Fuller was among the representatives of 15 organizations that went before the City Council vying for $689,000 in Community Development Block Grant funds.

Originally, the groups had requested more than $1.5 million.

Final funding will be approved August 12 by the City Council. The council will have a public work session August 5 to consider requests.

The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended the black organization receive $4,000 to use for a feasibility study for a career reassessment/tutorial and senior citizen center on the city's southside.

"The $4,000 we would elect not to utilize for a feasibility study for the simple reason we have already undertaken that," Fuller said.

The Black Advisory Council originally asked for the $279,000 to buy a building and set up the community center.

The group lowered its request during the meeting Tuesday to $66,000, saying they had opted to rent — and not buy — two buildings at 100 N. Lee St. and and 102 N. Lee St.

Langtry Village was the only organization among 16 that withdrew its $7,066 request for landscaping.

The organization found a source of money elsewhere, said Langtry Village President Bobby Trimble.

The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended June 17 organizations receive the following funding:

— $139,000 for the Eastside Economic Development Task Force to develop a loan fund for small businesses and to develop a small business incubator sharing secretarial and copying services. The task force asked for $222,000.

— $105,000 for the city Planning and Development Department to administer the community development funds. The department requested $105,000.

— $102,000 for city Code Enforcement to continue the demolition of vacant buildings and clearing vacant lots. Code Enforcement requested $102,000.

— $75,000 for Public Works to construct a bridge at Scharbauer Drive and Hemlock Avenue. The department asked for up to $345,000 to repair streets.

Houston officials collect threatened Accent

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston officials are collecting about 100,000 Accent flavor enhancer containers after a cyanide-tampering threat and are telling consumers not to use Accent purchased since June 25.

Some 3,300 stores in metropolitan Houston began removing the packages Tuesday after officials received an anonymous threat that six 4.5-ounce units had been poisoned, authorities said.

"It comes at a time when we are redesigning the package so that would not be possible," said Les Landes, spokesman for Pet Inc., the St. Louis-based producer. "It is truly ironic."

"All we want to do is get them off the shelves," said Anthony Whitehead, director of the Houston investigations office of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. "Then, we'll try sorting through to see if there's anything to it (the threat)."

No illnesses or tampered Accent packages had been reported late Tuesday as FDA officials began investigating with FBI and state officials, Whitehead said.

The threat was the second product tampering scare in Houston since March. A nationwide removal of Contac cold capsules, Teldrin allergy relief capsules and Dietac appetite suppressant capsules was ordered after authorities found contaminated capsules in Houston and Orlando, Fla. Edward Arlen Marks, 24, was arrested in Los Angeles in late May and charged in connection with the March capsule tampering.

Officials limited the Accent removal to Houston as an anonymous letter writer said he had tampered with the containers only in this metropolitan area, Whitehead said. The letter was postmarked July 3 with a Houston zip code, he said.

"Claims were made by the writer that he had poisoned some containers with cyanide and placed them on store shelves," according to a FDA written statement released Tuesday.

The design of the Accent package would allow someone to tamper with the product and return it to a store shelf undetected, Landes said. He said the company had already started redesigning the package.

Explosion damages Paris police buiing; One dead, four injured

PARIS (AP) — An explosion ripped through a police building in central Paris today, killing one person and injuring at least four others, fire officials said.

The cause of the blast was not immediately known, but there were indications it was due to a gas leak, the officials said.

The explosion shortly before 4 p.m. caused considerable damage to the fifth and sixth floors of the building, an annex to the criminal investigations division in Chatelet, a crowded commercial district in the heart of Paris.

It was not immediately clear whether the victims were police officers.

CITIES

"If the Legislature is going to attempt to balance the state budget primarily with spending reductions as opposed to revenue increases, school districts are not going to come out of that scot-free," said John Kennedy, senior research association for the Texas Research League.

County governments, which have fewer revenue options than cities, also are feeling the recession.

The three major courses of city revenues are property taxes, sales taxes and user fees. Kennedy said he expects cities to look at raising fees citizens pay for such services as water.

"Municipalities may very well go to the option of bigger hikes in water rates. From an economic standpoint, water has been underpriced for a long time," he said.

Hazleton said cities may follow the state's lead and look first at the option of cutting services.

Ohio tanker car fire extinguished

MIAMISBURG, Ohio (AP) — Firefighters using water and sand today extinguished a fire in an overturned tank car that spewed a poison cloud over parts of three cities, injuring at least 183 people and forcing 17,500 to flee their homes.

Many of the evacuees returned home late Tuesday, but hundreds remained overnight in makeshift shelters after seven Baltimore & Ohio cars, including one carrying white phosphorus, derailed earlier in this Dayton suburb.

Fire officials said the phosphorus, a component of rat poison and weapons, had stopped burning, and were reluctantly letting people return home.

"The phosphorus has burned itself out," said Norman Mason, among a host of city officials answering phones at the city building.

Firefighters covered the chemical with sand and dirt to prevent it from reigniting, said Miamisburg city planner Mike Grauwelman.

White phosphorus burns in contact with air at temperatures over 86 degrees Fahrenheit, said Pat Madigan of the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency. It was about 90 degrees when the cars derailed.

Assistant city manager John Weithofer said residents were not being encouraged to return home, but were told that if they did, they should listen to news broadcasts as crews try to right the derailed cars. He estimated that about 1,500 people remained out of their homes today.

City Manager Dennis Kissinger said authorities were concerned that there might still be some sulfur in the area. A tanker full of sulfur was removed late Tuesday. Sulfur burning in combination with phosphorous can produce highly toxic by-products.

AP Laserphoto

As a railroad tanker car burns, a column of white phosphorous and smoke rises from the wreckage.

"We've got some signs that we've got sulfur out there and we're trying to figure out where it's coming from," Kissinger said.

Chessie System officials said the phosphorous tank car, one of four that overturned, was being examined but there had been no attempt to right it.

"They're still watching it before they start doing anything with it," said Dale Jackson, a railroad dispatcher at Miamisburg. "They want to make sure it's OK."

"I heard the crash," said Ron Hinton, foreman at Karolton Envelope Co., about 200 yards away. "I looked out and saw all the smoke and flames coming out, so I just told everybody to shut their machines down and get out."

At least 183 people were treated at hospitals for symptoms that included shortness of breath, burning eyes and nausea. There were no reports of serious injuries, but hospital officials said at least 11 people were admitted, most of them with breathing problems that were aggravated by the fumes.

About 10,000 people were evacuated from northern Miamisburg, 3,000 from West Carrollton and another 3,500 from Moraine, said city Development Director Ron Parker. About 1,000 people were evacuated from Jefferson Township, said police Officer Walter Hetzel.

An area about three miles long and one-half mile wide was evacuated, said Miami Valley disaster services director Ed Kovar.

"We're trying to keep this a party atmosphere," said Jerry Cohen, a Red Cross supervisor who was working at a shelter set up at Miamisburg High School. "We have plenty of pop and potato chips; the kids are happy."

Hospitals reported dozens of people complaining of effects of the fumes, including burning eyes, nausea and chest pains. Doug Paplaczyk, a spokesman for Miami Valley Hospital, said at least 41 people were treated there. At least 28 were treated at Sycamore Hospital, 48 at Kettering Medical Center, 25 at St. Elizabeth Medical Center, 25 at Good Samaritan Hospital and Health Center and 16 at Southview and Grandview hospitals.

The fumes could cause nausea, vomiting and diarrhea and can burn the skin and eyes on contact, said Ms. Madigan. In sufficient concentrations, she said, the fumes can be fatal.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad chief train dispatcher Richard Monday said the cause of the derailment was not known.

The phosphorus was manfactured by Enco of Islington, Ontario, Canada, and was en route to Albright & Wilson Inc. of Fernald, near Cincinnati, said Ms. Madigan. Sam Goodson, plant manager for Albright & Wilson, said the phosphorus was to be converted into phosphoric acid, which is used in the food and beverage industry as well as in detergents.

Bombing kills West German industrial leader

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A bomb today tore through the armor-plated car of the chief of research of the Siemens electronics group, killing him and his driver as they drove to work. Officials said the Red Army Faction terror group claimed responsibility for the attack.

Beckurts

The federal prosecutor's office said in a statement a letter was left at the scene of the explosion claiming the bombing was carried out by the Red Army Faction's Mara Cagol commando unit.

It was not immediately known who Mara Cagol was. Red Army terrorists have often carried out attacks in the name of radical activists.

The slain research chief, Karl Heinz Beckurts, 56, was a nuclear physicist and a member of the managing board at Siemens AG, West Germany's largest electronics group and, with annual sales of $27 billion, one of the nation's largest companies.

Police identified Beckurts' driver as 42-year-old Ekkehard Kroppler. They said the car following Beckurts' was also damaged by the blast.

The bomb was detonated as Beckurts' car passed through suburban Munich shortly after leaving his home in the posh suburb of Strasslach, police reported.

The blast ripped through the armor-plated luxury car and sent flames shooting 65 feet into the air.

Police said the bomb had been set in or at the side of the road, and discounted earlier reports that the explosives had been planted in the car's trunk. A cable attached to the bomb led to a detonator set in a nearby woods, police said.

Werner Osel, a spokesman for Siemens, denied reports that Beckurts had been working on research for the U.S. "Star Wars" missile defense program.

Osel said Beckurts had taken part along with other Siemens officials and representatives of other German high-technology companies, in talks with Bonn officials about participation in the program officially known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

BEGGS

"Before, I naturally was in awe at the whole thing," said Beggs, "and wondering how I would perform amid that talent, environment and that kind of pressure. I found after going to Hungary that it really is nothing more than another aerobatic contest."

IN THE CONTEST at South Cerney Airfield near Gloucester west of London, Beggs will be performing combinations of spins, loops, rolls, 360-degree turns and hammerhead stalls in the "unlimited" — ultimate — aerobatic category. The contest will be held Aug. 1 to 17.

The competitors will be flying in four contest levels: known compulsory, unknown compulsory, free-style, and four-minute air show.

Prior to the competition, the U.S. aerobatic pilots will undergo two weeks of "intensive" aerobatic training at Winchester, Va., and then in Scotland.

The nine U.S. aerobatic pilots, team manager Bob Carmichael of Plano, transportation officer Paul Erdmann of Midland, and team interpreter, physician, trainer, video technician and two aerobatic judges will fly to England from Dover, Del., in an U.S. Air Force Lockheed Galaxy C-5A, the world's largest operational cargo aircraft. The aircraft will haul intact the pilots' nine aerobatic airplanes and a complement of spare parts, including engines, propellers and fuel pumps.

Erdmann arranged for the C-5A to fly the aerobatic aircraft to England and back for $70,000 — the round-trip fee paid by the U.S. Aerobatic Foundation.

The U.S. Aerobatic Foundation is the fund-raising branch of the International Aerobatic Club (IAC), which sanctions aerobatic competition in the United States.

"THE U.S. AEROBATIC team receives no federal funds," noted Erdmann, who is an IAC director and is president of the West Texas Aerobatic Club (IAC Chapter 71). "Contrast this with the Soviet Union where the government hand picks their pilots, provides the aircraft, fuel and training environment for full-time preparation and training."

The Soviet pilots are "completely government subsidized," he said.

By contrast, U.S. pilots receive no government assistance.

There are five pilots on the U.S. men's team and four pilots on the U.S. women's team. Most are seasoned in world competition.

BEGGS, WHO HAD visions of flying since age 4 when he watched airplanes take off from a rural air field, has logged 15,000 hours in flight as pilot in command. He soloed in 1968 in a 65-horsepower Taylorcraft, learned spin recovery in the T-craft, and first began flying aerobatics in a Cessna Aerobat in 1970, when he was doing flight instructing for Harold Vroman Aviation. Later, Beggs started his owned flight school at Midland Regional Airport.

He talked about the camaraderie among aerobatic pilots.

"We have very good, experienced pilots," Beggs said. "You'll find that all over the world, people who fly are very much the same — particularly when you narrow it down to a special-interest group like this aerobatic group. All over the world, there is a spirit of kinship."

The most important mental tool in aerobatics is "mental imaging," Beggs said.

"You have to be able to see what you are going to do in competition. To accomplish any task, you have to be able to see it very vividly and very clearly in your mind. Once you get that picture in your mind of what you want to do, then it's not so difficult to go up and duplicate it in the air."

Negative thinking must be avoided. Discipline and self-confidence must be built, he said.

Beggs, who views aerobatics as the "ultimate form of flying," said that aerobatics is a "very physically- and mentally-demanding sport. Aerobatics is just a natural continuation of my desire to learn more about flying."

MISD

Board member Betsy Robinson said she believes there's room to trim administrative salaries, but would support a small increase this year because the district found ways to cut total payroll costs by $1 million.

"We've always tried to hire the best and to get the best you have to pay for it," she said.

The average Midland ISD assistant superintendent salary also was among the highest of its group in the survey. The $62,000 figure ranked second to Dallas' ($63,409).

But the average salary for assistant superintendents is ahead of the remaining school districts in the survey. It outranks Ector County's by nearly $4,000 and El Paso's by about $11,000.

The next highest ranked salaries on the survey are those for school district athletic directors.

Midland ISD's Gil Bartosh earns $55,000 annually — about $3,500 more than No. 2 Ector County, whose athletic director, Jack Brewer, earns $51,453 annually.

Midland's high school principals net an average salary of $51,377 — the fourth highest ranked in the survey.

The district's junior high school principals ranked fourth in their group behind Dallas, Austin and Lubbock; and elementary school principals ranked third behind Austin and Dallas.

The average Midland ISD counselor salaries were the highest in that category in the survey. The counselors earn an average $38,796 per year compared to Dallas' ($32,373), Ector County's ($32,052), and El Paso's ($31,797).

Today's funeral will close teen-ager's search for roots

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Rodrigo Rojas Denegri, a 19-year-old with a passion for photography, returned to Chile last month to seek his roots in the troubled land he left a decade ago to grow up in the United States with his mother.

His search ended abruptly last week in one of the most horrifying deaths in Chile's continuing political strife. Today, he will be buried.

According to witnesses, an army patrol seized Rojas and an 18-year-old woman during an anti-government demonstration, doused them with flammable liquid and set them ablaze.

Rojas died Sunday after four days in a crowded clinic ill-equipped for burn treatment. His death prompted international condemnation and a judicial probe of the army that has kept President Augusto Pinochet in power nearly 13 years.

Hundreds of dissident leaders and activists filed past the youth's closed casket Tuesday at the headquarters of Chile's independent Human Rights Commission.

His mother, Veronica Denegri de Rojas, made her own traumatic homecoming to watch her son die.

During the wake, she raised new questions about the case, charging that doctors under government pressure had blocked her son's transfer to Chile's best burn hospital.

"The doctors and the government make their denials, but nobody believes them," she told reporters. "They burned my son and let him die. It pains me that it takes his death to demonstrate the truth."

Ms. Denegri, an active supporter of the leftist government toppled by Pinochet in 1973, fled the country after his secret police held her prisoner without charge for 5½ months during which she said she was tortured.

She is now a government social worker in Rockville, Md.

Rojas, the older of two sons she raised in the United States, dropped out of school to work in Washington as a free-lance photographer while teaching himself computer electronics.

"He was an intelligent, curious boy, always studying and reading," she said. "He had many things going for him, but he lacked a sense of his roots. That's why he came back."

Rojas got a job as a computer assistant for a University of Chile medical professor, took hundreds of photos around Santiago to try to sell in the United States and contemplated settling in Chile for good.

His last photographs, taken during a nationwide anti-government strike last Wednesday, were never developed. They disappeared with his camera.

Hector Salazar, Ms. Denegri's lawyer, said several witnesses who were ready to testify agreed on this account:

Army soldiers with blackened faces came upon a student demonstration near downtown Santiago and seized Rojas and an engineering major, Carmen Gloria Quintana. They beat the teen-agers with the butts of their automatic rifles.

"It looked like it was the patrol commander who ordered a soldier to go to their truck to get the gasoline can," said Pedro Martinez, a demonstrator who said he hid in a factory nearby. "They soaked the boy and set him on fire. He screamed and rolled around on the ground. Then he passed out and was left smoking."

Rojas and the young woman, both burned over two-thirds of their bodies, were wrapped in blankets and dumped in suburban Quilicura.

Aquino says she'll forgive rebels if they pledge to back constitution

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino today said she will forgive pro-Marcos politician Arturo Tolentino and soldiers who led a 38-hour revolt against her if they pledge allegiance to the revolutionary constitution by which she governs.

Mrs. Aquino said she decided to be magnanimous because the rebellion, which ended Tuesday, did not cause any violence and because the rebels heeded her ultimatum to surrender.

She said, however, that she would no longer tolerate attempts by supporters of ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos to destabilize the government.

She also said she would no longer allow demonstrations "that are not truly an exercise of freedom of speech and assembly but are designed to further the rebel cause."

"Certain people have trifled too long with the dignity and stability of the present government and the new constitutional order," she said, referring to weekly demonstrations by Marcos supporters who claim he is still president.

"There will be elections soon where you can test the continuing mandate of this government," she said.

Mrs. Aquino abolished the Marcos-controlled National Assembly after coming to power Feb. 25. Since then, she has been ruling by decree under a revolutionary constitution.

She has said elections would be held once a constitution-writing commission has completed its task, probably next year.

Mrs. Aquino read a statement to reporters after a two-hour Cabinet meeting and would not answer questions.

Presidential Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo said sedition charges might be filed against Tolentino and military leaders if they don't accept Mrs. Aquino's offer.

He also said Mrs. Aquino did not intend to ban all demonstrations by Marcos loyalists, but wanted to make clear that she "will not allow a repetition" of the mini-revolt.

Tolentino, 75, could not immediately be reached for comment. He has not returned telephone calls since the rebellion fizzled at dawn Tuesday.

Tolentino has said he acted on behalf of Marcos when he proclaimed himself acting Philippine president outside the Manila Hotel on Sunday. He had served as a foreign minister under Marcos and was his running mate in the Feb. 7 election.

Marcos, speaking from exile in Hawaii, denied any involvement in the rebellion. "I asked them to stop this matter of Tolentino asserting authority," Marcos told NBC television.

During the short-lived revolt, Tolentino had the backing of four generals, nearly 300 soldiers and scores of civilians who were holed up in the luxurious Manila Hotel.

Thirty-eight hours later, his last civilian and military supporters left the hotel and surrendered to government authorities.

Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile told the few dozen officers and soldiers who saw the rebellion through to the end and surrendered that the government will honor its pledge not to punish them.

"I stand on this even to the point of gambling...my own position to see to it that what we have promised you will be fulfilled," he said Tuesday at a meeting with them in an army gymnasium.

Gen. Jose Maria Zumel, military leader of the rebellion, said: "It's always nice to be back with our comrades in arms."

Tolentino abandoned his revolt hours before it officially ended Tuesday morning.

He left the government-owned Manila Hotel, which he had declared his presidential headquarters, long before his supporters walked quietly out the front door and rebel military leaders left through the rear.

The bayside hotel was Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters early in World War II and when president, Marcos used it for lavish functions. Hundreds of Marcos and Tolentino supporters left it ransacked and littered.

PAN supporters block streets to protest vote fraud

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — About 200 backers of the opposition National Action Party blocked street intersections in Chihuahua to protest alleged vote fraud in the state elections.

They said they also were demonstrating support for the week-long hunger strike of the city's mayor, who was fasting to draw attention to his call for democratic elections.

Those taking part in the Tuesday night protests parked their cars at 17 intersections in the central part of the state capital of Chihuahua in an hour-long demonstration.

It was the first major demonstration since Sunday's state elections for governor, 67 mayors and 14 legislators in the national Congress.

The ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), has declared its gubernatorial candidate, Fernando Baeza, the winner, although official results will not be released until Sunday.

Introducing InterAct.

For state-of-the-art banking no matter what state you're in.

InterFirst Banks would like you to meet the InterAct Banking Card. The beginning of a brand new age in simple banking.

Now simple banking is here, there and everywhere. Of course, you'll be able to make all the ordinary transactions you'd expect. But the InterAct Banking Card is also part of the PLUS SYSTEM,* an advanced Automated Teller Machine network that spans the country. So, with an InterAct Banking Card in hand, you can now get up to $400 cash in any city across the U.S. and Canada at any ATM displaying the PLUS SYSTEM* sign. You can also use your InterAct Banking Card instead of writing a check at any retailer featuring a PULSE* point-of-sale terminal.

InterAct has your number. Another new feature of the InterAct Banking Card is that you can select your own PIC (Personal Identification Code) to make it easier to remember. Just visit your bank and choose four numbers or letters. And, of course, your PIC is totally confidential.

Get ready to interact with InterAct. If you presently have an ATM card from InterFirst, expect your new InterAct Banking Card in the coming few weeks. If you don't have either card, just stop by an InterFirst Bank near you. It would be our pleasure to introduce you to InterAct. We believe in you.

South African unions ask attorneys to challenge indoor meeting ban

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Three major South African labor unions have asked attorneys to file a legal challenge to the government's new ban on indoor meetings by certain groups, a lawyer in the case said today.

The government on Monday declared the ban on indoor gatherings by 33 organizations, including virtually every major anti-apartheid group and most major unions.

All student councils were also included.

The ban, effective in the Johannesburg and Roodeport areas where the groups have their headquarters, came at a time of delicate wage negotiations involving at least 1 million mining and metal workers.

It was unclear whether the prohibition included meetings linked to wage talks or how many people constituted a gathering.

"It will be a selective enforcement, really," said Peter Harris of the Cheadle, Thompson and Haysom law firm handling the case for the unions. "If there's a particular meeting which they want to break up, they're going to break it up."

He said the urgent application to declare the ban on indooor meetings invalid must be filed in Transvaal Supreme Court today or Thursday to be heard Monday.

Harris said the application is being filed on behalf of the Metal and Allied Workers Union, the National Union of Mineworkers and the Commercial, Catering and Allied Workers Union.

Outdoor meetings had already been banned under regulations that accompanied the nationwide state of emergency decreed on June 12.

The validity of those regulations was challenged in a separate court appeal filed Friday by the Metal and Allied Workers Union in Natal province's Supreme Court, and scheduled for hearing on Monday.

In arguments before the court Tuesday, union officials said the regulations that accompanied the emergency are invalid because President P.W. Botha issued them before the state of emergency itself was proclaimed.

The union officials also said an emergency regulation prohibiting "subversive statements" is too vague and therefore unenforceable.

The emergency regulations give authorities sweeping powers and place severe restrictions on journalists who may not quote "subversive statements," report the activities of security forces without official permission or reveal the names of people jailed without charge.

Piroshaw Camay, general secretary of the Council of Unions of South Africa, was quoted as saying that to date, most unions have gone ahead with normal activities.

"If this implies disobedience, then that's what it is," Business Day quoted him as saying.

Former Israeli security chief admits crimes in affidavit

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The outgoing head of Israel's domestic intelligence service has told the Supreme Court that he committed crimes in connection with the beating deaths of two Palestinian bus hijackers.

The former chief of Shin Bet, Avraham Shalom, made his statement in an affidavit filed Tuesday in response to a court order that he explain why he had asked President Chaim Herzog for immunity from prosecution in the case.

"In my request for a pardon I saw an admission of crimes. The phrasing of the pardon request was not meant to provide legal justification which nullifies the offenses, but to explain the framework in which I acted," Shalom said in the affidavit.

The two Palestinians were beaten to death after troops stormed a hijacked bus in April 1984.

Two commissions of inquiry, one military and one civilian, failed to determine who inflicted the fatal blows.

Shalom resigned June 25 after Herzog pardoned him and granted him immunity from prosecution in the case. Five petitions filed with the Supreme Court by lawyers and Parliament members challenged Herzog's decision.

The text of Shalom's statement and of a similar affidavit by another Shin Bet official were circulated by the national Itim news agency Tuesday and read on Israel radio. The other official's name was not revealed for reasons of security, the radio reported.

In his pardon request to Herzog, read last week in the Supreme Court, Shalom said he was being accused of ordering the killing of the two hijackers and falsifying testimony at subsequent inquiries.

In Tuesday's affidavit Shalom did not specify what crimes he had committed, saying he had asked for a pardon "for the offenses mentioned in the complaint" filed by former attorney general Yitzhak Zamir, who asked police to investigate the Shin Bet chief.

Shalom said he sought the pardon in view of the limited defense possibilities offered him and his men because of secrecy restrictions, and out of concern for the exposure of state secrets in case of a probe of the Shin Bet.

In his letter to Herzog, Shalom contended that he acted in the case with permission from political leaders.

The daily Haaretz and weekly Koteret Rashit reported last week that Shalom told Prime Minister Shimon Peres he had blanket approval from then-premier Yitzhak Shamir to kill terrorists caught during hostage-rescue operations.

Shamir, who is currently Israel's foreign minister, was quoted as saying in a newspaper interview published Tuesday that he discussed the killing of hostage-taking terrorists, but denied ordering the 1984 slayings.

Price rise hurts Mexican egg sales

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Sales of eggs, a chief protein source among Mexico's poor, have dropped 30 percent in the capital since the government allowed the price to rise by more than one-third last month, a consumer group said in a report.

Egg prices were among the biggest contributors to a 7.5 percent increase in food and beverage costs in June, when consumer prices rose 6.4 percent in the biggest monthly jump since January, the central bank reported this week.

The government, saddled with payments on a $97.6 billion foreign debt and falling oil profits, has been raising the prices of some subsidized goods to save money.

On June 20 it allowed the price for a kilogram — 14 medium-size eggs — to rise from 340 pesos, about 54 cents, to 460 pesos, about 73 cents. The minimum wage in Mexico City is 1,850 pesos or about $2.93 at the latest exchange rate.

The private Association for Studies for the Defense of the Consumer said it surveyed markets around Mexico City to determine the price hike's effects and found the sharpest decline in egg sales in poor neighborhoods.

Arturo Lomeli, president of the group, told the newspaper Uno Mas Uno the higher egg prices had serious implications for the health of the estimated 24 million Mexicans who cannot afford meat.

Lomeli said the poor had increasingly relied on eggs as a cheap protein source while official beef prices rose 433 percent between June 1983 and June 1986. But in the same period, he said, a kilogram of eggs rose 631 percent.

Lomeli's group issues frequent reports on the effects of government pricing policies on consumers' habits.

WORLD IN BRIEF

U.S. reportedly talking privately with Cuba

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A diplomatic source said representatives of Cuba and the United States have met privately in Mexico City to discuss reviving an immigration agreement suspended by Cuban President Fidel Castro last year.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity for reasons of protocol, said the delegations met Tuesday, after arriving in the Mexican capital Monday night.

Castro suspended the immigration agreement in May 1985, after the U.S. government started broadcasting on Radio Marti to the communist-ruled island.

The Cuban leader charged that the broadcasts by the Florida-based station operated by Washington's Voice of America were U.S. propaganda.

Radio Marti, named for Cuban poet and Spanish war hero Jose Marti, broadcasts 17 hours a day, offering news, commentaries and music to Cuban listeners.

The New York Times, in today's editions, quoted Reagan administration officials in Washington as saying Cuba has dropped its insistence that Radio Marti cease operations.

The newspaper said that instead, Cuba was seeking an agreement that would recognize its right to broadcast over an AM frequency to the United States.

Hess moved to hospital

BERLIN (AP) — Rudolf Hess, the last imprisoned Nazi leader, has been moved from Spandau Prison to a British military hospital because he said he didn't feel well, a spokesman for the British forces said.

The spokesman, Anderson Purdon, told The Associated Press today that the 92-year-old Hess was hospitalized late Tuesday. The hospital is in West Berlin's Charlottenburg district, not far from the 600-cell prison where Hess is the only inmate.

Iran: Brigades wiped out

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran's official news agency reported today that pre-dawn air strikes by Iranian warplanes wiped out four Iraqi brigades, killing or wounding 2,300 soldiers.

The Islamic Republic News Agency, in a report monitored in Nicosia, also said 155 Iraqi soldiers were taken prisoner in ground fighting around the Iranian border city of Mehran.

The air strikes came on the 10th day of Iran's offensive around Mehran, a small city in the central sector of the 730-mile-long battlefront.

"FASHIONS FOR THE GENEROUS FIGURE"

Travelers urged to use automobile safety belts

By JENNIFER JUERGENS

NEW YORK (AP) — With the threat of terrorism abroad making domestic travel more attractive and lower gas prices making it less expensive to see the United States, cars, vans, buses and campers are crowding U.S. roads and highways.

And because of this, traffic safety experts predict an increase this summer over the more than 13,000 auto fatalities recorded in June, July and August of 1985.

Deaths in automobile accidents is the fourth largest killer in America behind heart disease, cancer and stroke. But there is a way to make traveling by car safer, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

If seat belt use were to increase to 70 percent nationally, more than 9,000 lives would be saved and over 300 injuries would be prevented or reduced in severity each year, the safety group says.

The New York Coalition for Safety Belt Use says that more than twice the number of some 1.2 million Americans who have died fighting this country's nine wars over the last 200 years have died of motor vehicle-related injuries on U.S. highways in less than half that time.

In 1984, there were more than 46,000 fatalities in more than 18 million motor vehicle crashes — a collision every 19 seconds, one death every 11 minutes.

New York enacted the nation's first safety belt use law in January 1985, and since then, the state has achieved "the lowest highway fatality rate in recorded history," reports Gov. Mario Cuomo. Also, the governor noted, in 1985 there were approximately 52,000 head injuries on the state's highways, compared with more than 60,000 in 1984, even though seat belt usage in 1985 was only 50 percent.

In New Jersey, 407 drivers and front-seat passengers died in auto accidents from March through December 1985 as compared with 468 for the March-December average of the previous five years. Since New Jersey has passed its seat belt law, front-seat fatalities have been cut by 13 percent.

Michigan's implementation of the state's safety belt use law seven months ago has saved 87 lives — a 14 percent decline from the same period during the previous years.

Illinois fatalities for January showed a decrease of 17 percent, compared to the five-year January average of 75 fatalities, according to the Illinois Department of Transportation. Illinois' total 1985 traffic fatality count of 1,522 was the lowest number recorded since 1924, when there were 1,065 traffic deaths.

The Michigan and Illinois belt use laws have been in effect since July 1, 1985.

Texas enacted its seat belt law on Sept. 1, 1985, and during the first three months after the law took effect, 460 traffic fatalities occurred among front-seat occupants, compared with 562 deaths during the same period in 1984 — 102 lives were saved, an 18 percent decrease in fatalites.

Twenty-five states have enacted safety belt use laws and five states — Arkansas, Montana, Oregon, North Dakota and Wyoming — have legislation pending.

Public opinion surveys in seven states and in Washington, D.C., show public support for these laws is gaining across the nation as more states pass such legislation.

In the five states that have had safety belt use laws the longest, public support continues to rise, the surveys show. Compared with results of earlier polls, public support is up by 20 percent in New Jersey, up by 15 percent in Michigan, up by 12 percent in Nebraska, up by 11 percent in New York and up by 8 percent in Illinois.

Migrating birds possible threat

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Ducks, geese and other birds migrating from the Soviet Union may be so radioactive they are dangerous to eat, wildlife biologists warn.

"Wildlife tend to accumulate higher levels of radioactive contaminants than do domestic animals," said I. Lehr Brisbin Jr., a radiation biologist at the University of Georgia's Savannah River Ecology Laboratory. After the Chernobyl reactor accident, he said, in some wildlife "the contamination levels were above the levels allowed for human consumption."

Among several thousand ornithologists meeting in Ottawa, Canada, last week, Brisbin said Monday, "the consensus was that the problems in Eastern Europe are as bad as we feared. Many game birds and other wildlife populations did receive significant amounts of radiation."

While ornithologists worry about the birds, he said, there is also strong reason to worry about the impact on human health. One of the most dangerous contaminants, cesium-137, tends to accumulate in game birds' muscle tissue, and muscle tissue is the meat that people eat.

No measurements in wildlife have been reported from the Ukraine, the region of the reactor accident, Brisbin said, even though an immediate report of damage to migratory birds and their habitat is required under an existing treaty signed by the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Because of radiation danger, some use of wildlife for food — such as Laplanders' consumption of reindeer in northern Norway — has already been halted.

"That is devastating to people who are utterly dependent on fish and game," Brisbin said.

Perseverance pays

Down through history are numerous examples of how perseverance pays off where the struggle for freedom and basic human rights is concerned. The American Revolution is only one example, although an unmistakable pattern for others.

While the United States was celebrating its independence and freedom during a glorious Fourth of July weekend, something quite the opposite was happening in Poland. The communist dictators in that beleaguered nation concluded a party convention emphasizing that the Poles would not soon be celebrating their liberty and independence.

A total of 1,776 delegates attended the Tenth Communist Party Congress in Warsaw's Palace of Culture. Among them was a man from Moscow, Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev, and of course Poland's chief, General Wojciech Jaruzelski.

To no one's surprise, Jaruzelski was reelected to the post of Poland's Communist Party leader. Also to no one's surprise, he said his government would tolerate no dissent. He had in mind the most persistent thorn in the Polish Communist Party's flesh, the labor union called Solidarity. About 300 brave leaders of that group of fighters for freedom are in jail, but inspired by the spirit of Lech Walesa, the union's members continue to annoy the Moscow-Warsaw axis.

General Jaruzelski's statement about his resistance to dissent was a non-transparent admission that he is aware of the influence of Solidarity, the first free trade union in the Soviet bloc. Even though Lech Walesa has removed himself somewhat from public life, the opposition he personifies remains a durable fact in Poland's political life.

Whether under the heel of Germany's Hitler or the communists of Moscow, the Poles are not the kind of people who give up easily.

It is the brave people who fight oppression in countries around the globe — and, in so doing, pay a high price in suffering — who make the quality of perseverance such a valuable commodity.

Why sustain tax level?

I am sure by now that there are plenty of irate taxpayers in Midland who are, like myself, wondering why their property taxes have gone up even though their home assessments have nosedived.

My home has devalued by over $7,000 from the previous appraisal (and nearly $18,000 from the original purchase price), yet my estimated property taxes have increased by $105 this year alone. The explanation I was given by the County Appraiser's Office is that the tax estimates are based upon what it would take for the various taxing agencies to realize the same income as last year as the tax base erodes. As we all know, the tax base is eroding because of the loss of many people who have been laid off from the oil industry and this in turn has created a housing glut and severe devaluation of real estate.

The tax authorities, understanding the plight of those who remain and may be the next victims of the oil economy, elect to squeeze more money out of the "survivors" instead of working with us to hold costs down. I can offer at least two examples of waste which is costing us tax dollars:

1. Personal use of city vehicles, specifically police cars. We are told that officers who drive the cars around on their off-hours serve as a visual deterrent to crime. I often see entire families driving around town in police cars and can only think that I am paying for the use and maintenance of the vehicle (I also think the family could be at risk in a marked car).

2. I can set my calendar watch to the activity of the street crew that comes every four weeks to fill the same potholes in the street in front of my office. The holes are often wet from sprinkler runoff, and in a matter of days, the new asphalt pops right out of the hole. This has been going on for over a year.

I am sure there are a few more items any one of us can add to the list of wasteful expenditures by the same agencies who are trying to get more dollars out of fewer people. The loss of taxpayers in Midland should translate to reduced expenditures by the city and county, but instead I am being asked to help sustain the same level of activity as in the past several years.

City pay scales too high

For the past several weeks, I have been very concerned about how I was going to pay this year's taxes, as our business has been unable to pay the usual salary.

I was also concerned when our City Council spent $75,000 in order to fire our Chief of Police, then another $25,000 to hire another one. I thought we elected people supposedly capable of hiring and firing.

In the June 30th edition of the paper, our mayor wanted to cut city employees' salaries a whopping 3% while everyone else is taking a 20% cut or no job at all. Ms. Heok actually said, "You're asking less people to do more work for less pay." The city employees are really overworked. For example, about two weeks before the rains started four men spent three hours sweeping and shoveling the dirt and gravel out of the potholes at the intersection of South Pratt and West Florida Streets. No one ever showed up to fill them. During the rain another two men cleaned them out again so they would dry out. It took them two hours. The holes are still there as they have been for several years. Since they almost have enough dirt in them now to drive over, I suppose the city will be here to clean them out again.

Also, how about the pay-scale of our city manager and others? I'd like to see the pay-scale of all city employees, including those overworked street and sanitation department employees, lowered.

Instead we lowered property values and raised taxes to make up the difference. I think a 20% cut might put us in line with other cities our size, let alone help the tax burden we are all carrying. We should start with the city and county; I believe we'd see a big difference in our tax burden.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 9, the 190th day of 1986. There are 175 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 9, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was read aloud to Gen. George Washington's troops in New York.

On this date:

In 1755, British Gen. Edward Braddock was mortally wounded as his troops suffered a massive defeat at the hands of French, Canadian and Indian forces near present-day Pittsburgh. One of the survivors was an aide to Braddock — Col. George Washington.

In 1816, Argentina declared its independence from Spain.

In 1819, sewing-machine inventor Elias Howe was born in Spencer, Mass.

In 1850, the 12th president of the United States, Zachary Taylor, died in the White House, having served only one year and four months of his term.

In 1947, the engagement of Britain's Princess Elizabeth to Lt. Philip Mountbatten was announced.

In 1982, the second-worst air disaster in U.S. history occurred when a Pan Am Boeing 727 crashed in Kenner, La., killing 146 people aboard and eight people on the ground.

Ten years ago: Uganda called on the U.N. Security Council to condemn Israel for its raid on Entebbe Airport to rescue hostages held by pro-Palestinian hijackers.

Thought for today: "Children are a great comfort in your old age, and they help you reach it faster, too." — Anonymous.

HUD boss won't take Scalia's place

WASHINGTON — The only black member of President Reagan's Cabinet, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr., was recently offered a federal appellate court seat. But he politely turned it down, evidently hoping that he will be named to the Supreme Court before Reagan leaves office.

Jack Anderson

Pierce is well regarded at HUD and the White House after nearly six years in the Cabinet. But when he was first appointed, he was so unassuming that Reagan mistook him for one among a delegation of big-city mayors invited to the White House.

According to congressional sources, the offer of an appellate judgeship was made in a telephone call to Pierce on June 26 from Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. The senator asked Pierce if he would be interested in appointment to the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., which faces a vacancy with the nomination of Judge Antonin Scalia to the Supreme Court.

Pierce declined the offer and joked to Thurmond that he was holding out for a seat on the high court. Neither Pierce nor his press spokesman would comment, but sources told our associate Lucette Lagnado that Pierce's lighthearted response cloaked a serious hope that he will get a Supreme Court nomination. His decision to decline the appellate judgeship, therefore, is clearly a gamble.

The White House certainly has a "short list" of possible replacements ready for the next high court vacancy, and Pierce may not be on it. Thurmond may have been trying to signal Pierce that an appeals court seat was the best he could hope for anytime soon.

One knowledgeable Supreme Court watcher told us it would have been wiser for Pierce to have accepted the offer of an appellate judgeship, which historically has been a solid steppingstone to the highest court. Even a brief tenure on the appellate bench would make him an attractive choice for the Supreme Court — especially if he had breezed through his earlier Senate confirmation, as Pierce could have been expected to.

At 63, Pierce has more than ethnic and political considerations going for him. His intellectual and professional background is distinguished.

He graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Cornell in 1947, and from the law school there in 1949. He served as a first lieutenant with the Army's criminal investigation division during World War II.

During the Eisenhower administration, Pierce became the first black to serve as assistant to an undersecretary of labor; during the Nixon administration, he became the first black to be general counsel to the Treasury Department.

Pierce served as an assistant district attorney and assistant U.S. attorney in Manhattan, and was twice appointed to interim New York state judgeships by the late Gov. Nelson Rockefeller. He lost two campaigns for full 14-year judgeships, running in a heavily Democratic district.

Pierce was the first black to become a partner in a major New York law firm, when he joined Battle, Fowler, Jaffin & Kheel in 1961. He was earning a six-figure income at the prestigious labor law firm when he left to become HUD secretary in 1981.

Unbeknownst to Pierce, a high FBI official in the 1960s suggested that he be put forward in a secret scheme to replace the late Martin Luther King Jr. as the nation's top civil rights leader.

BUREAUCRAT BUMPED: The State Department has been rebuffed in its bid to get a chauffeured limousine for its chief of protocol — the official in charge of red carpets and seating arrangements at Foggy Bottom functions. State argued that the job, currently held by Selwa Roosevelt, requires partying into the wee hours, but the comptroller general was unimpressed. The chief of protocol, he pointed out, is not among the high officials entitled by law to be chauffeured between home and work, and "increased efficiency ... or convenience for the official passenger is not sufficient to overcome the plain statutory prohibition."

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: It's not always easy to be a scheming superpower, as witness the Soviet Union's attempt to patch up the bitter personal and political differences between two of the Kremlin's favorite troublemakers: Palestinian Liberation Organization chief Yasir Arafat and Syrian President Hafez Assad. The two men have detested each other for years, but the Soviets are trying to bring them together.

MINI-EDITORIAL: We commend Project Censored, a research program that identified the 10 worst-covered stories of 1985. Media self-censorship is indeed a serious problem. But we'd like to correct Project Censored's statement that the slaughter of innocents in East Timor "has been unreported by the American press since it started in 1975." Since 1979, when word first began leaking out of the unhappy island, we have repeatedly disclosed the horrors visited upon the helpless civilian population by Indonesian troops using U.S.-supplied weapons.

U.S., Soviets should see SALT through mirror

WASHINGTON — July marks the beginning of the official silly season here and in Moscow, and this year's promises to be a dandy. Consider, for example, the opening remarks of President Reagan and General Secretary Gorbachev.

James Reston

The other day, the Soviet leader suggested that U.S. and Soviet officials meet at Geneva later this month to discuss Reagan's decision not to abide by the strategic arms limitation agreement of 1979, known as SALT II.

The idea, supported by the NATO allies, was that the Standing Consultative Commission, a body of U.S. and Soviet arms experts, should get together on July 22 and see whether SALT II was "dead" as some officials here said, or merely sleeping.

Asked about this on his way back from a California vacation, the president responded, perhaps not quite seriously, with the first wisecrack of the season. "Too much salt isn't good for you," he said.

Not to be outdone, Gorbachev came back with a couple of howlers of his own. In a speech to the Polish Communist Party congress, he charged the president with "open obstruction" of the arms control negotiations, and — get this — said his hopes for progress now depended on the "anxieties" of the American people and Congress and the Western allies about Reagan's policies.

This, of course, is standard "silly season" procedure, the first rule of which is that officials say whatever obstructs their objectives, and deny precisely what they are obviously doing.

For example, Gorbachev said in Warsaw that Moscow has "no intention of driving wedges between Washington and its NATO allies," which if true would reverse Moscow's policy of the last 40 years, but is actually the funniest remark he has made since he promised to make vodka unpopular.

It would probably be a mistake, however, to take all this hot-weather rubbish too seriously. It is all a part of the official swagger. The president didn't really mean to kiss off the offer of a Geneva talk on SALT. That decision hasn't been made, it's just that he'd rather make a wisecrack than be wise.

Likewise, Gorbachev is probably too smart not to know that appealing to the Congress and the American people over the head of the president is about the only thing that would make Reagan's mystifying arms policy popular. After the summer exhibition games, the chances are that the two leaders will cool off and make arrangements for the promised second summit meeting.

For the truth is that both sides need an arms control agreement and will have to reduce their rhetoric to reality, even if they have to tame their subordinates, who, unlike Reagan and Gorbachev, really think there's no point in having another agreement that can't be verified and probably won't be kept.

To begin with, it will probably be necessary for both Reagan and Gorbachev to take a hard look at the arms proposals that they have made and wonder how they look from the other side.

I had a letter the other day on that topic from Gerard Smith, who represented the United States in the negotiations for the first SALT agreement with the Soviet Union. Herewith, published with his agreement:

"As we hear the administration's demands that the Soviets correct their arms control behavior," he wrote, "I've been asking myself what we Americans would think if the Soviets had:

— "Failed to ratify the three latest arms control agreements that their premier had signed;

— "Walked away from negotiations for a comprehensive test ban and for limitations on anti-satellite systems;

— "Announced that they were making an all-out effort to develop nationwide defenses banned by the ABM treaty;

— "Announced that that treaty's correct interpretation permitted the development and testing of systems which the treaty by its very terms prohibited; — "Had refrained from starting negotiations about strategic arms for many months, and then made offers which their former minister of foreign affairs had acknowledged to be non-negotiable and 'absurd';

— "While claiming violations, had refrained from making effective use of the Standing Consultative Commission to resolve disputes or was reported to have denied permission for its delegates to raise the issues; — "Announced that it was breaking out of an agreement setting ceilings on missiles and bombers because of the bad behavior of the other party.

"This," wrote Smith, "is what we have done, and I suggest that it warrants a degree of caution in making judgments about Soviet behavior."

Well, as Reagan is always saying, no doubt another list could be made of Soviet actions that, looked at from Washington, would justify the Reagan administration's policies. But it wouldn't be silly for both sides to see themselves as others see them. At least it would give them something to think about before Smiling Mike comes to Washington.

'Pet lovers' double as their kids' parents!

When I rang the bell, Marge Bathurst answered it. She pulled me inside. "Shut the door. Hurry, shut the door."

"What's up?" I asked.

"I don't want the dog to get out."

"I didn't know you had a dog," I said.

"We do now. Our son Melvin brought him home from Penn State and dumped him in our laps. He said he couldn't leave Goliath on campus, and asked us to take care of him for the weekend while he went to Vancouver."

Art Buchwald

"When did all this happen?"

"I think it was eight months ago," she said.

Marge's husband Jeff came into the room. "Jeff, when did Melvin leave Goliath with us?"

"It must be 12 years by now," Jeff said.

Goliath, a very large sheepdog, entered the room, went over to Jeff and sniffed his pants. Then he shuffled over to me and licked my hand. Having worked up a good foam, he stuck his head into my lap.

"He likes you," Marge said.

"You can have him," Jeff told me. "I'll even give you his water dish."

Marge said, "Jeff, he can't have the dog. Goliath has only one master."

"If he means so much to him why did he leave him behind?" I asked.

"Because," Jeff said, "he didn't want Goliath kidnapped by Nicaraguan terrorists."

"Hush," Marge said. "Goliath will hear you."

Jeff grunted. "Maybe he'll run away and find Melvin like dogs do in the Walt Disney films."

"Don't listen to him," Marge said. "He loves the dog. He walks him every night."

"At 11 o'clock," Jeff said. "Do you know why? It's the only time little kids are locked safely in their houses, so Goliath can't roll over and crush them."

Marge said defensively, "Melvin would never own a mean dog."

Jeff said, "Forget the dog for a minute. Tell him about the mice."

"We're having a problem with Goliath because Melvin's sister Holly left five mice with us when she went to Newport for the summer."

"What's wrong with mice?" I asked.

Jeff said, "I'm allergic to mice."

"How can you have them in the house then?" I asked.

Marge said, "Those mice mean everything to Holly. Jeff can put up with a little allergy to keep his own daughter's pets safe from harm. Holly says she'll take them back as soon as she can find an apartment that permits animals."

"Did any of your other children leave their pets with you?"

Jeff replied, "Do parrots count — because if they do, we have one in the dining room."

Marge said, "It belongs to our youngest son, Gary, and it doesn't bother anybody."

Jeff said, "I don't know what 'bother' means, but there aren't many people who can live with a bird who says, 'Have a nice one,' all day long."

"As I see it," I said, "you people are going to spend your entire summer pet-sitting for your children."

Jeff said, "It figures. They would die if they had to give up their animals."

Probe increases tension in U.S.-Israeli relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charges that Israel illegally smuggled U.S. technology to build cluster bombs comes amid already strained relations between the two allies stemming from the discovery of an Israeli espionage ring in the United States.

The U.S. attorney's office in the District of Columbia is continuing its investigation of the Israeli spy network involving Jonathan Jay Pollard, the Navy counterintelligence analyst who pleaded guilty to espionage and implicated four Israelis as co-conspirators.

In the wake of that probe, the U.S. Customs Service and the Justice Department are investigating allegations that Israel tried to obtain technology from private contractors in the United States, Customs spokesman Dave Hoover said Tuesday night.

Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten refused to confirm or deny the existence of the investigation, and a call to the Israeli Embassy in Washington seeking comment was not returned late Tuesday.

Federal agents investigating the alleged smuggling of the bombs technology searched two companies in Iowa — Vector Corp. in Marion and Bexco International in Cedar Rapids — Hoover said in a telephone interview.

A search was planned for Assembly Machines Inc. in Erie, Pa., he said.

Vector Corp. makes equipment for compressing and coding medicine capsules, according to CBS News, which first reported the story, and to federal law enforcement officials. U.S. officials say the equipment can easily be converted to military use.

CBS said several Israelis who work at their defense missions purchasing office in New York are being subpoenaed, and noted that they would not have diplomatic immunity.

Israeli Military Industries, a branch of Israeli Military Defense located in New York City, approached Vector about obtaining the technology, Hoover said. He added that he had no information on how law enforcement officials learned of the contact.

Some IMI officials have been subpoenaed, he said.

Although search warrants were executed, affidavits have been sealed by U.S. district courts in the companies' area, Hoover said.

The Customs spokesman said a number of other companies had been subpoenaed in the investigation, but he could not provide their names.

Vector attorney Tom Buresch said agents carrying guns seized an undetermined number of boxes filled with documents and contracts Tuesday.

"I really don't know what's going on. ... I'm not sure what's what or who's who, so it's hard to comment right now," Buresch said.

A spokeswoman at Bexco International, which is in a residence in Cedar Rapids, said the company was involved in export management, according to a report on KGAN-TV in Cedar Rapids. The station said the woman refused to give her name.

Donald Stevens, a vice president for Assembly Machines Inc., said Tuesday the company would have no comment until it learns more about the investigation.

The probe is focusing on a possible violation of the Arms Export Control Act, which limits defense items that may be exported from the United States. Exporting of such items must be done under license.

The United States had been supplying Israel with the bombs prior to 1982, but revoked its approval because of reports of Israeli use of the bombs in their Lebanese invasion. When detonated, cluster bombs release hundreds of smaller explosives.

Israeli Ambassador Meir Rosenne was called to the State Department on Tuesday and informed of the investigation, officials said.

Pollard, who pleaded guilty June 4 to espionage, is continuing to cooperate with authorities in the investigation into the now-exposed Israeli spy ring.

Government bans usage of sulfite preservatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is issuing regulations today banning the use of sulfite preservatives on fresh fruits and vegetables in restaurant salad bars, suspected in at least 13 deaths nationwide.

The regulations, which take effect in 30 days, remove six types of sulfite preservatives from FDA's list of food additives generally recognized as safe.

Adoption of the rules follows nearly two years of debate in Congress and within FDA and the scientific community on the possible dangers from sulfite preservatives, particularly those used on restaurant salad bars.

Sulfites have long been used to make fresh fruits and vegetables look more attractive. Sulfites keep lettuce from wilting, for example, and prevent apple slices from turning brown.

They are harmless for most people — but not to an estimated 500,000 sensitive people, mostly asthmatics, who can suffer an allergic reaction to the substances.

Most reactions are mild, resulting only in nausea, hives, diarrhea or shortness of breath. But severe reactions can send a person into shock and constrict the air passages, causing suffocation.

The National Restaurant Association and the Produce Marketing Association, in endorsing the proposal for a ban last year, said most restaurants have stopped using the preservatives because of the hazard.

"Salad bars have been associated with most of the serious problems, and the idea of posting signs in restaurants when sulfites have been added has not been universally accepted," FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young said in a statement Tuesday. "Thus, we believe we must ban the sulfites in this use."

Hot weather will continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Hot weather is expected to continue with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal calling for fair skies tonight and Thursday.

The low tonight is expected to be near 70 degrees. Winds will be from the south at 5 to 15 mph.

Thursday's high will be in the mid 90s and winds will be from the south at 5 to 15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 90 was 13 degrees cooler than the record of 103 set in 1964. The overnight low of 63 was 7 degrees warmer than the record of 56 set in 1979.

STATE

A weak high-pressure ridge centered over the east coast kept skies mostly clear across Texas today, except for some cloudiness in western sections.

Moisture in the form of low-level clouds dotted parts of the far West Texas mountains while some high clouds were visible over parts of North and West Texas.

Winds were light northeasterly over the Trans Pecos and southerly at speeds of 5 to 15 mph elsewhere in the state.

Early-morning temperatures dropped into the 50s over the mountainous southwest while readings in the 60s and 70s were common across the rest of Texas. Extremes ranged from 58 degrees at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 80 degrees at the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi.

Skies should be fair to partly cloudy through Thursday with a chance of scattered mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Highs were expected to range from the upper 80s along the coast to near 102 in the Big Bend.

NATION

A long stationary front across the nation's midsection brought storms and flash flood watches, while suffocating heat continued to blanket parts of the east.

The front extended from parts of the lower Missouri Valley across the southern Great Lakes to the upper Ohio Valley. Some of the thunderstorms brought heavy rain and damaging winds.

Flash flood watches were in effect today in southeastern Nebraska, extreme northern Missouri and parts of northern Illinois. A flood watch was posted for southwest portions of Pennsylvania. Heavy rain has fallen across the watch areas and more rain and flash flooding were possible, the National Weather Service said early today.

High School

HOUSTON — Houston Wheatley must give up district and regional basketball championships because its team used a player who was ineligible to compete under the state no pass-no play rule, officials said. School officials had misinterpreted the controversial rule and had allowed senior Eddie Cumbo to play guard although he was given an F in a math course in the third six-week period. Cumbo was allowed to raise his grade to passing by taking make-up tests, after the failing grade was reported. The teacher could have given him an incomplete instead of an F, which would have made the teen-ager eligible for play...

Cowboys

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif., — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry proclaimed the football season officially under way Tuesday following the first fist-fight of training camp. Second-year players Kevin Brooks, a 276-pound defensive lineman, and Crawford Ker, a 293-pound offensive guard, exchanged a few punches during a pass protection drill in afternoon practice at the Cowboys California Lutheran University training camp.

"It's like the first robin of spring," said Landry, who is in his 27th season as the cowboys head coach. "When you see players start fighting, it means the off-season is over. It's time for football again."

Upshaw accuses Rozelle of grandstand play

By STEVE WILSTEIN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — National Football League Players Association President Gene Upshaw on Tuesday accused NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle of "making a grandstand play" by mandating random drug tests for players.

The union, meanwhile, filed a grievance to block the plan which is scheduled to be implemented when the players go to training camp this month.

Upshaw, who said the players are "not willing to accept that the drug problem has gotten any worse," called the grievance the first step in what could be a legal challenge to the program announced Monday by Rozelle.

The commissioner said while the grievance came as no surprise, he was disappointed in the union's stance.

"The issue of drug abuse by NFL players has arrived at a stage where everyone is being hurt — players, clubs and the league in general. My preference would have been to implement these improvements to our current drug program with union support," said Rozelle in a statement issued by the league.

The grievance was sent to the NFL Management Council, which is the bargaining agent for the owners, all 28 clubs and Rozelle. It asked the council to respond within 24 hours, rather than the usual seven days, to the union's demand that Rozelle's program be reviewed by an arbitrator.

Jack Donlan, executive director of the council, said he would examine the grievance and respond in seven days.

If the council does not agree to arbitration, the union would go to court seeking a temporary injunction against the plan, said union attorney Dick Berthelsen.

Upshaw said the union is "very concerned" about drug use among players but has an obligation to protect the rights of the players, especially confidentiality of drug counseling, and uphold the terms of its collective bargaining agreement.

"We plan to take all the steps necessary to protect the rights of the players," Upshaw said at a news conference.

The drug-testing plan, which calls for two urine samples from each player at random times during the season, violates the bargaining agreement reached in 1982, Berthelsen said. He said the grievance asks for a quick meeting between the union and management and a continuation of the "status quo" until an arbitrator can be brought in.

Berthelsen said many people are trying to paint the union as protecting players using drugs, but he said, "the bigger issue at stake here is whether we have a collective bargaining agreement."

Upshaw said the union is not opposed to all anti-drug plans, but wants to negotiate a program through collective bargaining.

"I think the NFL and Pete Rozelle are making a grandstand play," Upshaw said. "Pete Rozelle is saying, 'I'll change society.'

"What is his motivation? I think it's all public pressure," Upshaw said. "We're not willing to accept that the drug problem has gotten any worse. We have talked to Rozelle. He said it's gotten worse. We asked him how. He just said it did."

Upshaw said he felt remorse about the recent cocaine-related deaths of Cleveland Browns defensive back Don Rogers and Maryland basketball star Len Bias, but said drug-testing probably wouldn't have helped them.

"I attended Don Rogers' funeral last week and it had an impact on me," Upshaw said. "But I also feel a responsibility to the players that are still here that I represent. I'm not sure, and everyone would admit, even random testing wouldn't have helped Don Rogers.

"We cannot legislate morality," he said. "At some point in time, the player has to take the responsibility to do the things and accept the things that are right."

Bell produces for Cincinnati

National League

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

After hitting into two double plays and also striking out with the bases loaded, Buddy Bell had only one thought in mind when he came to bat in the ninth with a man on first and his Cincinnati team down by two runs.

"I was just trying not to hit into a double play," he said.

This time, he sent the ball over the left-field fence for a home run to tie the game and set up a 10th-inning rally capped by Tony Perez's RBI single that gave the Reds a 5-4 victory over the New York Mets Tuesday night.

It was the first time after 47 games this season that the National League East-leading Mets had lost with a lead in the ninth inning. It was also the seventh victory in nine games for the rivitalized Reds.

Reds 5, Mets 4

Before hitting his game-tying homer off Mets relief ace Jesse Orosco, Bell had stranded seven runners in his first three plate appearances.

Parker led off the tenth with a ground-rule double on the first pitch from Roger McDowell, 7-2, who relieved to start the inning. Parker moved to third on Eric Davis' tapper and Perez followed with a ground ball past the Mets' drawn-in infield into center field.

Astros 4, Expos 1

Denny Walling hit a two-run homer off ace Montreal reliever Jeff Reardon in the eighth inning to cap a four-run Houston comeback over the Expos. Jay Tibbs, 4-5, took a 1-0 lead into the eighth, allowing just three hits over the first seven innings, but he tired and Reardon failed to protect the lead.

Winner Nolan Ryan, 5-6, pitched seven innings of five-hit ball before Charlie Kerfeld came in for his third save. Ryan struck out nine and allowed five hits in seven innings, walking two.

Montreal took a 1-0 lead in the sixth on Hubie Brooks' sacrifice fly, his 50th RBI of the season.

Phillies 8, Braves 2

Mike Schmidt broke out of a slump with a two-run homer and rookie Bruce Ruffin pitched an eight-hitter to lead Philadelphia over Atlanta.

Schmidt was 0-for-22 before hitting his 475th career home run in the fourth, tying Stan Musial and Willie Stargell for 15th place on the all-time list.

Cardinals 1, Dodgers 0

Tim Conroy and Ricky Horton combined on a five-hitter and Mike Lavalliere broke a scoreless tie with a run-scoring single in the top of the seventh inning to lead St. Louis over Los Angeles.

Padres 4, Pirates 2

Tony Gwynn hit a three-run homer to cap a four-run rally in the bottom of the eighth inning, leading San Diego over Pittsburgh.

Gwynn, snapping an 0-for-12 streak, connected on a 2-0 pitch off Pirate left-hander Larry McWilliams, who had just entered the game in relief of Rick Reuschel, 4-10.

Cubs 4, Giants 1

Shawon Dunston homered and drove in two runs in support of Dennis Eckersley's six-hit pitching as Chicago defeated San Francisco. The loss dropped San Francisco into a first-place tie with Houston in the NL West.

USSR hanky-panky upsets U.S. coaches

Controversy

By BERT ROSENTHAL

MOSCOW (AP) — Harry Groves and Ken Foreman, coaches of the American men's and women's track teams, couldn't believe what they were seeing. Miler Steve Scott and hurdler Stephanie Hightower were just as perplexed.

What upset them was the way in which the Soviet Union was using "hanky-panky," as Groves put it, to win medals in some events of the Goodwill Games.

Groves said the most glaring case came in the men's 1,500 meters.

The meet isn't being conducted "like any other international meet I've ever seen in my 28 or 29 years of coaching," Groves said.

In the 1,500, the Soviet's top runner, Pavel Yakovlev, ran in the slower of two final heats and won in 3 minutes, 39.96 seconds. In the second heat, another Soviet, Igor Lotorev, outkicked Scott to win in 3:40.18 to the American's 3:40.31.

"Sure, I finished second in my heat, and was beaten by a Russian," Scott said. "But according to them, I was beaten by two Russians and that makes it twice as bad."

Scott said he was unaware that the 1,500 final would be run in heats "until after the race was over."

Groves said the other races subject to dispute were the men's 110-meter high hurdles and the men's 3,000-meter steeplechase.

In the hurdles, Alexei Prokofiev of the Soviet Union won the first heat in 13.28, equalling the European record. He wound up getting the silver medal when Greg Foster and Keith Talley had times of 13.25 and 13.31, respectively, in the second heat.

In the steeplechase, Micah Boinet of Kenya got out quickly in the first heat and won in 8:28.20, but didn't get a medal. The second heat was won by Hagen Melzer of East Germany in 8:23.06, followed by silver medalist Henry Marsh of the United States and bronze medalist Nikolay Matyushenko of the Soviet Union.

Groves said that, before the games, the two superpowers had agreed that some finals would be split, but no preliminary heats would be run.

This Day in Baseball

1902 — Philadelphia's Rube Waddell beat Boston's Bill Dinneen 4-2 in 17 innings when light-hitting Monte Cross hit a two-run homer for the A's.

1932 — New York's Ben Chapman hit three homers against the Tigers, including two inside-the-park blows at Yankee Stadium.

1940 — The National League recorded the first shutout in All-Star play with a 4-0 win at Sportsman's Park in St. Louis. Five pitchers — Paul Derringer, Bucky Walters, Whit Wyatt, Larry French, and Carl Hubbell — held the American League to three hits. Max West provided the offense hit a three-run homer.

1946 — After a one-year break due to war travel restrictions, the American League trounced the National League 12-0 at Fenway Park in the most one-sided of the All-Star games. Ted Williams of the Red Sox didn't disappoint the hometown fans with two homers and two singles for five RBI. One of the home runs came against Rip Sewell's famed "blooper pitch."

1968 — Willie McCovey hit into a first-inning double play, scoring Willie Mays with the only run of the 39th All-Star game, played at the Houston Astrodome. It was the first All-Star Game played indoors and the first 1-0 contest in All-Star history.

1976 — Larry Dierker of the Houston Astros no-hit the Montreal Expos 6-0.

Midland teams advance

Little League

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING— Two Midland teams stayed alive in the winner's bracket of the Little League tournament here Tuesday night.

Midland Eastern beat Midland Mid City, 4-3, and Midland Western defeated Big Spring International, 21-1. Midland Tower, however, dropped into the losers bracket of the double elimination tournament, losing to Big Spring Texas, 2-1.

Michael Bolton and Raymond Dominquez each homered in Western's win.

The 16-team tournament continues tonight, 8 p.m., with Odesss Jim Parker vs. Odessa Alamo; West Odessa vs. Big Spring National in winner's bracket games while in the loser's bracket, Lamesa plays Coahoma. Games are being played at the three Big Spring LL fields.

This is the first year Odessa has participated in the area tournament.

In Monday's action, North Central Little League of Midland won its opener 8-2 over Lamesa as Brian Rounding pitched a three-hitter. The big sticks in the eight-hit attack were Richie Gerth, who hit a grand slam and a double, and Mike Melzer, who contributed two hits.

North Central will play its second game Saturday.

In other action Monday, Odessa Northeast Texas defeated Odessa Salinas, 6-5.

TED BATTLES

Does anyone really care?

Somehow the feeling pervades that once all this blows over, it will be business as usual. Until then, however, the the alarums and excursions both on stage and in the wings is more for show than dough.

Of course, it is sincerely hoped that such is not the case, that the cocaine induced deaths of Len Bias and Dan Rogers instigate meaningful reform, but, if you'll pardon the tynicism, this all has an air of deja vu about it.

We've heard the promises, yea vows, to do something about the drug epidemic in athletics.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle's latest gesture, the drug tests for all, any time, any where, anybody, was predictable. So were the protests of the Players' Union over the invasion of privacy.

ACTUALLY, the drug tests are for public consumption. Maybe they'd catch a few of the more careless, but if it's as bad as feared, it's little more than slapping a bandaid on a terminal cancer patient.

Maybe we're wrong, but the suspicion is that with the money involved, it wouldn't take much to doctor the results to protect the involved. Pete and all of his investigators can do little to to stem the tide, otherwise it wouldn't have reached its present proportions.

Rozelle put the NFL in the headlines with his edict, but the plight of pro football goes for the rest of pro sports, and college, as well.

SOME already have drug programs. Some don't. The NBA was the first to implement a program. A player treated three times is suspended for a minimum of two years.

The National Hockey League has no program, adopting the attitude, "If you use illegal drugs, get out of our league. We don't want you."

The NFL has had manadatory testing at the start of training camp since 1982.

All come up short. Just pick up your daily paper or flip to your favorite TV channel. Surgery is imperative. Instead we get psychotherapy.

Of course, there is outrage. One pro football coach urged a "crack down" after the deaths of Bias and Rogers. What he had in mind was an "education" program "to eradicate this festering sore."

It seems perusal of the daily sports section offers all the education needed. Now, if he is referring to instruction in the various grades of cocaine, crack and heroin and the best way to snort the stuff and how and where to obtain it, I suppose that's an education of sorts. Let's not be so rash as to clean this thing up, the theory might be, but let's make it safer for the junkie and in that way no one interferes with the entrepreneur.

MAYBE Rozelle can pull it off. It would be nice to be wrong, for a change.

But to do it, he'll have to beat the NFL Players' Association.

Gene Upshaw's stand might be defensible, if the barn weren't burning around him. People are dying and the NFLPA is standing its ground, protesting an invasion of privacy. The union protests Rozelle has no business interfering.

They are probably right. If the NFLPA had any regard for the health, and future of its individual members, instead of its greed for power, it would have been the one to make, yea, demand, steps be taken to protect its members and preserve the integrity of the game, not the commissioner.

Steinbrenner raps Winfield performance

ARLINGTON (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner says he has not been responsible for slumping outfielder Dave Winfield's recent benchings against right-handed pitchers ... but may be in the future.

In a statement released by Yankee officials before Tuesday night's game against Texas, Steinbrenner said that if Winfield "is quoted accurately that I have been responsible for the fact that (Manager) Lou Piniella has seen fit to bench him against right-handed pitchers, he is off base.

"Now, if he were to say that I fully support the move to bench him vs. right-handed pitchers at this time, he would be absolutely accurate. And if he now says, following his public outburst yesterday (Monday), that I am responsible from this point on, he may very well be accurate."

Winfield was not in the starting lineup Monday night against Texas' right-handed knuckleballer Charlie Hough. He has not started against several right-handers lately because of a .230 batting average, which was even lower before he went 4-for-8 in the last two games. He got into Monday night's game after Hough was knocked out of the game and had a double and triple.

"Dave Winfield has not been able to hit good right-handed pitching this year, and we are about halfway through the season. I know Dave is trying 100 percent, but the figures do not lie. Against our four traditionally strongest competitors in the AL East — Baltimore, Boston, Toronto and Detroit — Winfield has come to bat 91 times and has a batting average against those teams of .187. Against Boston, Toronto and Detroit, the Eastern teams we've played most recently, he is batting .160, .150 and .167, respectively. Against those three teams, with predominantly right-handed pitching, he has been to bat 69 times, producing only five RBIs.

Increased energy decreases disease

What is aerobic exercise?

The exercise fad of the '70s has turned into the lifestyle of the '80s. People are spending their evenings playing softball and soccer, jogging and working out in the gym.

The net result is increased energy and decreased disease. Clinical evidence strongly suggests that regular exercise decreases the incidence of some of the more common chronic diseases. Thus high blood pressure, obesity, and high cholesterol levels are favorable affected by exercise, decreasing the incidence of heart disease.

The average amateur athlete performs his or her sport activity for relaxation and for physical fitness. Few, however, realize the most opitmal method for "getting in shape."

Exercise physiologists define physical fitness in terms of the body's ability to use oxygen. With exercise training, a person's abiltiy to do work increases and so does their ability to use oxygen. They are "getting in shape."

The maximal amount of oxygen an individual can use is called VO2MAX. Physiologists have demonstrated that the most efficient range for burning fat is 65-70 percent of VO2MAX. This is where the term "aerobic" comes from. Higher than 70 percent of VO2MAX exercise is then in the anerobic phase.

Anerobic exercise causes the body to burn carbohydrates for energy whereas aerobic exercise burns fat. Our bodys use carbohydrates for quick energy and store fats for sustained energy. it is more effective to exercise at a moderate rate and keep breathing at 65-70 percent of maximum than to exercise strenuously and exceed the 70 percent threshold.

This simply means a person can burn more fat working out at a moderate rate than he or she can by working out as hard as possible.

This basic physiological principle is valid for all kinds of exercise programs or sports.

GAMES—

That, however, proved not to be the case in the women's 100-meter hurdles. That event featured preliminaries before Tuesday night's final.

Foreman said he didn't find out there would be heats in the hurdles "until we were leaving the warmup track coming into the stadium. This is like a circus — on opening night."

"They didn't tell us until we got to the holding tank," Hightower, the American record-holder who clipped a hurdle and failed to finish her heat, said. "After they did it, I was mad."

Because of the last-minute change, Hightower said, there was considerable turmoil among officials in the holding tank, and the heats were redrawn three times.

"The whole meet is a mess," Hightower said. "It's very poorly organized."

Part of the transportation problems developed in getting athletes from their hotel to the track, she said. "The women's 400-meter hurdlers got lost coming here, and they had only 45 minutes (about half the usual time) to warm up."

JIM MURRAY

Sorry, Lady, but try again next year, maybe

The caller was polite, even apologetic. Could I, she wondered, be persuaded to do a column on a thoroughly worthwhile topic, the dinner for retinitis pigmentosa?

I was patient, cautious. She had to remember, I assured her, that there were thousands of worthwhile causes out there and I couldn't do a piece on each and every one of them. Three hundred a year and I would be out of readers. I had to restrict my generous impulses. The readers wanted to read about second basemen, fist-fighters.

AND THEN, I got the letter ...

"Dear Mr. Murray," it began.

"This is the third time I've placed this piece of paper in the typewriter and each time I find after the letter is done that my fingers were on the wrong keys. God, what a pain!

"I can write this to you because you know the frustration of not being able to read your own words.... RP has taken most of (my sight) and it's a little like typing with invisible ink.... It seems to be there and then it is gone.

"We are honoring Dr. Jerry Buss and Pacific Bell President Ted Saenger for their contributions to RP at the Century Plaza on July 9th. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar will present the award to Dr. Buss and Angie Dickinson will present to Ted Saenger. Rafer Johnson and Chick Hearn will be part of the program as well. Kareem has a special job at this dinner. I've sent him a pair of glasses just like the ones I've enclosed ... and asked him to help me make the public more aware of their availability and the fact they protect the retina while we search for a cure. Kareem has graciously consented to do this special evening and we are very grateful to him.

"When my two sons were diagnosed as going blind from RP just like me ... well, it seemed as if my world fell in ... you know the fright. Somehow, though, because it was Jim and Richard and they seemed so small and defenseless, it was different. It was even more unbearable than my own situation, if that could be possible. I was a painter and spent every waking hour dreaming of my next painting and the colors that would leave my brush and enter canvas creating a world of discovery every inch of the way. I truly loved painting and miss it so very much.

"Over the years, people are reaching out to recognize the need for RP research. There is so much to be grateful for, so much yet to do. One never knows where research will lead. So, we go on.

"Can you help? The dinner needs more people to attend and your article could make a great difference ... the silent auction, if it is possible to write about it, needs items, too. Whatever you do, we will be happy.

Sincerely,
Helen Harris
President RP International

WELL, of course, I don't know, Helen. You see, there are so many more important things going on in the world. I mean, the Dodgers are in a slump. What's that you say? How can 25 guys who can see 20/20 be described as "in a slump"? You say a "slump" is sitting 5 feet in front of a TV set and not being able to see it? A "slump" is not missing a fastball on a 3-and-2 count, a "slump" is when the whole world is reduced to looking like something viewed through the small end of a dark telescope, getting darker.

Then, there is, of course, the terrible drug stories to be called attention to. I'm sure you agree. What? You say it is terrible what those magnificent young specimens do to themselves. But, what about kids who are doomed to a life in a black box through no fault of their own? What about kids who don't want to see a curveball, just a sunset? What about little Michelle Burke who told the broadcaster, Vin Scully "I am not a poster child, I am a little girl."?

Well, I'm sorry, Helen, I wish I could help, I really do. But, you know how it is. They're breaking world records over in Oslo and Moscow. People are wondering if Wade Boggs can hit .400. People are really concerned over the condition of the Dodger pitching staff. It's all they talk about.

I really wish we could fit in something about little kids whose sight is leaving forever. I wish you would get a huge crowd at the Century Plaza banquet Wednesday night.

I really wish I could find a way to fit it in. But, you understand.

Maybe, next year.

BASEBALL— Montreal's Tim Raines says he has a stiff neck from watching baseballs sail over his head into the stands for home runs. "There's been a lot of them (homers) in the last two days," Raines said after a 12-1 mauling by Houston. Raines saw three balls go sailing over the fence Monday night — one day after Atlanta slugger Bob Horner became the 11th major leaguer to hit four homers in a game...

The Yokohama Taiyo Whales ended their Japanese League losing streak at 13 by beating the Chunichi Dragons 10-2. Carlos Ponce drove in three runs with two home runs and now has 16 homers...

BASKETBALL— State prosecutors prepared "about 10 more" subpoenas Tuesday for people who will be questioned by a grand jury investigating the cocaine-related death of Maryland's Len Bias. State's Attorney Arthur A. Marshall Jr. said that brings to more than 70 the number of prospective witnesses for the grand jury session beginning July 21...

Steinbrenner raps Winfield performance

ARLINGTON (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner says he has not been responsible for slumping outfielder Dave Winfield's recent benchings against right-handed pitchers ... but may be in the future.

In a statement released by Yankee officials before Tuesday night's game against Texas, Steinbrenner said that if Winfield "is quoted accurately that I have been responsible for the fact that (Manager) Lou Piniella has seen fit to bench him against right-handed pitchers, he is off base.

"Now, if he were to say that I fully support the move to bench him vs. right-handed pitchers at this time, he would be absolutely accurate. And if he now says, following his public outburst yesterday (Monday), that I am responsible from this point on, he may very well be accurate."

Winfield was not in the starting lineup Monday night against Texas' right-handed knuckleballer Charlie Hough. He has not started against several right-handers lately because of a .230 batting average, which was even lower before he went 4-for-8 in the last two games. He got into Monday night's game after Hough was knocked out of the game and had a double and triple.

"Dave Winfield has not been able to hit good right-handed pitching this year, and we are about halfway through the season. I know Dave is trying 100 percent, but the figures do not lie. Against our four traditionally strongest competitors in the AL East — Baltimore, Boston, Toronto and Detroit — Winfield has come to bat 91 times and has a batting average against those teams of .187. Against Boston, Toronto and Detroit, the Eastern teams we've played most recently, he is batting .160, .150 and .167, respectively. Against those three teams, with predominantly right-handed pitching, he has been to bat 69 times, producing only five RBIs.

Increased energy decreases disease

What is aerobic exercise?

The exercise fad of the '70s has turned into the lifestyle of the '80s. People are spending their evenings playing softball and soccer, jogging and working out in the gym.

The net result is increased energy and decreased disease. Clinical evidence strongly suggests that regular exercise decreases the incidence of some of the more common chronic diseases. Thus high blood pressure, obesity, and high cholesterol levels are favorable affected by exercise, decreasing the incidence of heart disease.

The average amateur athlete performs his or her sport activity for relaxation and for physical fitness. Few, however, realize the most opitmal method for "getting in shape."

Exercise physiologists define physical fitness in terms of the body's ability to use oxygen. With exercise training, a person's abiltiy to do work increases and so does their ability to use oxygen. They are "getting in shape."

The maximal amount of oxygen an individual can use is called VO2MAX. Physiologists have demonstrated that the most efficient range for burning fat is 65-70 percent of VO2MAX. This is where the term "aerobic" comes from. Higher than 70 percent of VO2MAX exercise is then in the anerobic phase.

Anerobic exercise causes the body to burn carbohydrates for energy whereas aerobic exercise burns fat. Our bodys use carbohydrates for quick energy and store fats for sustained energy. it is more effective to exercise at a moderate rate and keep breathing at 65-70 percent of maximum than to exercise strenuously and exceed the 70 percent threshold.

This simply means a person can burn more fat working out at a moderate rate than he or she can by working out as hard as possible.

This basic physiological principle is valid for all kinds of exercise programs or sports.

Dr. Cochran is President of the Midland Orthopedic Clinic and specializes in Sports Medicine and Arthroscopic Joint Surgery.

GAMES—

That, however, proved not to be the case in the women's 100-meter hurdles. That event featured preliminaries before Tuesday night's final.

Foreman said he didn't find out there would be heats in the hurdles "until we were leaving the warmup track coming into the stadium. This is like a circus — on opening night."

"They didn't tell us until we got to the holding tank," Hightower, the American record-holder who clipped a hurdle and failed to finish her heat, said. "After they did it, I was mad."

Because of the last-minute change, Hightower said, there was considerable turmoil among officials in the holding tank, and the heats were redrawn three times.

"The whole meet is a mess," Hightower said. "It's very poorly organized."

Part of the transportation problems developed in getting athletes from their hotel to the track, she said. "The women's 400-meter hurdlers got lost coming here, and they had only 45 minutes (about half the usual time) to warm up."

JIM MURRAY

Sorry, Lady, but try again next year, maybe

The caller was polite, even apologetic. Could I, she wondered, be persuaded to do a column on a thoroughly worthwhile topic, the dinner for retinitis pigmentosa?

I was patient, cautious. She had to remember, I assured her, that there were thousands of worthwhile causes out there and I couldn't do a piece on each and every one of them. Three hundred a year and I would be out of readers. I had to restrict my generous impulses. The readers wanted to read about second basemen, fist-fighters.

AND THEN, I got the letter ...

"Dear Mr. Murray," it began.

"This is the third time I've placed this piece of paper in the typewriter and each time I find after the letter is done that my fingers were on the wrong keys. God, what a pain!

"I can write this to you because you know the frustration of not being able to read your own words.... RP has taken most of (my sight) and it's a little like typing with invisible ink.... It seems to be there and then it is gone.

"We are honoring Dr. Jerry Buss and Pacific Bell President Ted Saenger for their contributions to RP at the Century Plaza on July 9th. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar will present the award to Dr. Buss and Angie Dickinson will present to Ted Saenger. Rafer Johnson and Chick Hearn will be part of the program as well. Kareem has a special job at this dinner. I've sent him a pair of glasses just like the ones I've enclosed ... and asked him to help me make the public more aware of their availability and the fact they protect the retina while we search for a cure. Kareem has graciously consented to do this special evening and we are very grateful to him.

"When my two sons were diagnosed as going blind from RP just like me ... well, it seemed as if my world fell in ... you know the fright. Somehow, though, because it was Jim and Richard and they seemed so small and defenseless, it was different. It was even more unbearable than my own situation, if that could be possible. I was a painter and spent every waking hour dreaming of my next painting and the colors that would leave my brush and enter canvas creating a world of discovery every inch of the way. I truly loved painting and miss it so very much.

"Over the years, people are reaching out to recognize the need for RP research. There is so much to be grateful for, so much yet to do. One never knows where research will lead. So, we go on.

"Can you help? The dinner needs more people to attend and your article could make a great difference ... the silent auction, if it is possible to write about it, needs items, too. Whatever you do, we will be happy.

Sincerely,
Helen Harris
President RP International

WELL, of course, I don't know, Helen. You see, there are so many more important things going on in the world. I mean, the Dodgers are in a slump. What's that you say? How can 25 guys who can see 20/20 be described as "in a slump"? You say a "slump" is sitting 5 feet in front of a TV set and not being able to see it? A "slump" is not missing a fastball on a 3-and-2 count, a "slump" is when the whole world is reduced to looking like something viewed through the small end of a dark telescope, getting darker.

Then, there is, of course, the terrible drug stories to be called attention to. I'm sure you agree. What? You say it is terrible what those magnificent young specimens do to themselves. But, what about kids who are doomed to a life in a black box through no fault of their own? What about kids who don't want to see a curveball, just a sunset? What about little Michelle Burke who told the broadcaster, Vin Scully "I am not a poster child, I am a little girl."

Well, I'm sorry, Helen, I wish I could help, I really do. But, you know how it is. They're breaking world records over in Oslo and Moscow. People are wondering if Wade Boggs can hit .400. People are really concerned over the condition of the Dodger pitching staff. It's all they talk about.

I really wish we could fit in something about little kids whose sight is leaving forever. I wish you would get a huge crowd at the Century Plaza banquet Wednesday night.

I really wish I could find a way to fit it in. But, you understand.

Maybe, next year.

BASEBALL— Montreal's Tim Raines says he has a stiff neck from watching baseballs sail over his head into the stands for home runs. "There's been a lot of them (homers) in the last two days," Raines said after a 12-1 mauling by Houston. Raines saw three balls go sailing over the fence Monday night — one day after Atlanta slugger Bob Horner became the 11th major leaguer to hit four homers in a game...

The Yokohama Taiyo Whales ended their Japanese League losing streak at 13 by beating the Chunichi Dragons 10-2. Carlos Ponce drove in three runs with two home runs and now has 16 homers...

BASKETBALL— State prosecutors prepared "about 10 more" subpoenas Tuesday for people who will be questioned by a grand jury investigating the cocaine-related death of Maryland's Len Bias. State's Attorney Arthur A. Marshall Jr. said that brings to more than 70 the number of prospective witnesses for the grand jury session beginning July 21...

Denver Nuggets guard Alex English is spending part of his off-season sampling life on the silver screen. English, 32, has a lead role in the movie "The Amazing Grace and Chuck," which also features film stars Gregory Peck and Jamie Lee Curtis....

FOOTBALL— Carl "Spider" Lockhart, 43, mainstay of the New York Giants' defense for 11 years and the club's No. 3 all-time leading pass interceptor, died of cancer...

The NFLPA has filed a grievance to block Commissioner Pete Rozelle's attempt to mandate random drug tests for players."We plan to take all the steps necessary to protect the rights of the players," NFLPA chief Gene Upshaw ...

Safety Dave Duerson of the Chicago Bears says NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle's drug testing program treats players "like cattle" and is a "power grab."... "We have to stop Rozelle now before it becomes a dictatorship."...

Joe Namath says he was surprised and baffled by ABC-TV's decision to take him out of the broadcasting booth for Monday Night Football."I'm under contract to them and I'm not doing anything else in sports. I certainly am disappointed because I loved the job and I was starting to feel good about it."....

GOLF— Mac O'Grady might pursue legal action to appeal his six-event suspension by the PGA Tour. Attorney Steve Novak said "I talked to the (appeals) committee chairman today and he told me they had affirmed the commissioner's decision (to suspend O'Grady-)...Since we've exhausted all of our administrative avenues, we may have to consider legal action as an alternative."...

GOODWILL GAMES— TV ratings for the Goodwill Games for the first weekend of competition averaged from a 2.6 Sunday afternoon to a 1.4 Sunday night. The Nielsen ratings, which averaged a 1.7 for Saturday and a 2.0 for Sunday, included WTBS, and 12 metered major markets. TBS has added 65 syndicated stations to supplement WTBS, thus providing coverage to 81 percent of the U.S...

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Thursday, July 10, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Creative projects will prove especially successful later this year. Do not take any financial risks, especially in the late summer and fall. You hit it off better with partners and co-workers. Family members will find they appreciate you more. Romantically you will find you are happier and luckier.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Ballad singer Arlo Guthrie, ABC commentator David Brinkley, slugger Andre Dawson, authors Saul Bellow and Jean Kerr, tennis star Arthur Ashe, the Kansas City Royals' Hal McRae and the Los Angeles Dodgers' Bob Bailor.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Diplomacy is the key to strengthening family ties today. Financial aggressiveness begins to pay off in the marketplace. Promoting a peaceful solution will restore harmony with your mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be patient as career and financial plans are moving along according to plan. Your charming personality wins points with a difficult associate. Your mate or partner requires the kid-glove treatment today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not demand perfection and others will go more than halfway to please you. A casual lunch with an old friend buoys your ego. Comparison shopping pays off for those on a limited budget.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hobbies could be an excellent source of extra income. Include loved ones in future career plans. Your mate may offer some excellent alternatives if cash is a problem. Romance sizzles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Changes may be forced upon you due to a fluctuation in the family fortunes. But your integrity assists you in developing new ways to beat a cash shortage. Your love life soars.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Major undertakings should be handled by a professional. Keep abreast of the latest developments in your field. Knowledge is the key to success. Renew your passport in preparation for future travels.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There may be a sudden change in plans, but good things are brewing, especially on the home front. Postpone signing any legal documents or agreements until more information is available. Trust your instincts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A banker offers loan or investment advice. This is a great day for finalizing business arrangements. Superiors welcome your suggestions. You may even be under consideration for a promotion. Strive for excellence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Arguments could arise at home if your loved ones reveal their true feelings. This situation calls for tact and extreme patience. A platonic relationship appeals more than a romantic one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A thrilling financial offer sweeps you off your feet. Do whatever it takes to improve your means of transportation, even if you have to buy a new car. An evening date looks very promising.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The subtle use of power works wonders at the office this week. You are surrounded by people who love you, and that makes this a special day, no matter what else happens.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those connected with medicine or hospitals will enjoy favorable influences. A sudden change puts your career back on the right track. You feel a sudden attraction for the sea right now. Indulge yourself.

WHERE'S THE ENTRY?

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠5 ♡AJ9642 ◇8542 ♣75
WEST ♠KJ732 ♡K85 ◇J3 ♣983		EAST ♠AQ964 ♡Q1073 ◇Q109 ♣J
	SOUTH ♠108 ♡Void ◇AK76 ♣AKQ10642

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1♡	1♠
2◇	2♠	Pass	Pass
5♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠

If the opponents thwart one of your plans, don't blindly pursue that path. Cast around for an alternative line that will give you a shot at your contract.

In the modern style, South's reverse bid of two diamonds is forcing for one round. However, West's bid removed any obligation from North, who seized the opportunity to show his weakness by passing. South then bid what he hoped he could make.

West's trump lead struck a telling blow for his side; with any other lead, declarer would have had time to ruff a spade in dummy. Had declarer doggedly won and led a spade, West would win and play another trump, and declarer would have to surrender two spade tricks and a diamond.

One spade could go on the ace of hearts if declarer could find a way to get to the table in time. The only suit that offered any transportation was diamonds, and for that to succeed it would have to break 3-2. Since declarer would need the second trump in dummy to control spades, he immediately cashed the ace-king of diamonds, and when both defenders followed all was well. Declarer led a third round of the suit and he was in control.

No matter what the defenders did, declarer was home. West ruffed the third diamond and led another trump, but the eight of diamonds was declarer's entry to the board to take a spade discard on the ace of hearts, and all was well.

Russian-born ballet superstars get 'on with the dance' at gala benefit

NEW YORK (AP) — They both trained at the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad and defected from the Soviet Union, and for the first time in almost a decade, ballet superstars Mikhail Baryshnikov and Rudolf Nureyev danced together.

The occasion Tuesday night was a gala fund-raiser for the Metropolitan Opera, Baryshnikov's American Ballet Theater and Nureyev's Paris Opera Ballet.

Opera singer Martina Arroyo sang the American and French national anthems, and Gene Kelly opened the show by saying, "On with the dance!"

Nureyev and Baryshnikov danced with Leslie Caron in a medley of songs connected with Miss Caron's movie career, including bits from "Gigi," "Fanny," "An American in Paris" and "Lili."

Other highlights included a version of Twyla Tharp's "Push Comes to Shove" performed by Baryshnikov with Nureyev appearing on stage at the end; and Act 3 of "Raymonda," with Nureyev dancing to his own choreography.

Nureyev, 48, and Baryshnikov, 38, defected to the West from the Soviet Union in 1961 and 1974, respectively, and last danced together in Paul Taylor's "From Sea to Shining Sea" almost 10 years ago in New York.

Ticket prices for Tuesday's gala ranged from $35 to $250, with $1,000 tickets including a dinner after the performance.

Huston

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar-winning director John Huston has been released from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center after five days of treatment for emphysema, his publicist says.

Huston, 79, was released Tuesday and will be recuperating at his home, publicist Irene Hamen said.

Huston won Oscars for writing and directing "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre," and also directed such movies as "The Maltese Falcon," "The African Queen," "The Asphalt Jungle" and "Prizzi's Honor."

NORFOLK, Neb. (AP) — Johnny Carson's hometown has named a street after him.

The city council on Monday designated 13th Street as Johnny Carson Boulevard. The action will not change the official addresses along the street, but signs showing the commemorative name will be put up.

The project was pushed by Norfolk businessman Dennis Reeves, who earlier got billboards placed on the outskirts of town that say, "Here's Norfolk. Home of Johnny Carson."

The "Tonight Show" host was born in Iowa, but spent most of his childhood in Norfolk.

• • •

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Toni Georgiana, who endured a lawsuit and hate mail during her disputed reign as Miss New Jersey, says she's looking for peace and quiet during a six-month stay in Aruba.

Miss Georgiana, 22, crowned her successor, Karyn Darleen Zoschke, 25, in Cherry Hill on Saturday night and the next day boarded a plane for her trip to the Aruba Concorde Hotel & Casino, where she is one of six Sands Copa Girls dancing in a revue called "Celebration."

The beauty queen said she was bitter for months about the controversy that enveloped her after last year's runner-up unsuccessfully sued her, alleging she didn't deserve the crown because she was from Pennsylvania.

AP Laserphoto

Dancers Mikhail Baryshnikov and Leslie Caron perform during a dress rehearsal at New York's Metropolitan Opera House Tuesday afternoon. They, along with dancer Rudolf Nureyev and other well-known artists, performed in a benefit there Tuesday night.

But that feeling has receded and, Miss Georgiana said, she's now stronger.

"It was the best thing that could have happened," she said Tuesday from Aruba. "I was so naive before. I needed a little kick to wake me up."

Miss Georgiana was sued by runner-up Laura Ann Bridges, who contended that the winner, a Pennsylvania resident, had moved to New Jersey to take classes only for the year of her reign.

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Earl Zwingle is excited after seeing President Reagan at the Statue of Liberty torch-lighting ceremony — the president was wearing the necktie Zwingle had sent him.

Zwingle, 76, had sent Reagan one of the many ties made from his 10-year-old design — tiny white torches with orange flames set on a navy blue background.

"I was bowled over when there it was on his neck," said Zwingle, as he watched Thursday night's ceremonies on television. "Still, I didn't know how he could turn it down. It sure...was the appropriate neckwear for that night."

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar turned in a mixed performance in light European trading early today. Gold bullion prices rose.

Concern over possible intervention by central banks was supporting the dollar, traders said, but evidence of sluggish U.S. economic growth and speculation over a possible fall in U.S. interest rates were undercutting the currency.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Tuesday:

—2.1675 West German marks, up from 2.1650

—1.7694 Swiss francs, up from 1.7683

—6.9535 French francs, up from 6.9525

—2.4435 Dutch guilders, down from 2.4465

—1,492.50 Italian lire, up from 1,487.25

—1.3785 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3793

The British pound fell to $1.5360 from $1.5370.

After rising Tuesday, the dollar resumed its slide in Tokyo today, closing at 160.10 Japanese yen, down from 160.65 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $350.35 a troy ounce, up from $348 late Tuesday. A London dealer said there was active trading during the morning session, mainly due to professional buying.

In Zurich, gold was quoted at a bid of $350.90, up from $347.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $350.09, up from $345.13.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at $5.14 an ounce, up 1 cent.

Marathon lays off 26 here

From Staff and Wire Reports

Approximately 26 employees have been termiated by Marathon Oil Co. in Midland, according to Marathon employees.

According to sources, those laid off Monday included nine professionals including six geologists, with the remaining 17 terminations being spread across the non-professional ranks. There were no terminations at the management level.

Unlike the Marathon Houston office which told all employees to attend a company-wide meeting Monday where they were laid off, management and personnel represenatives went from office to office and told affected employees in person they had been terminated.

"They began around 8 a.m. and it was over by 10 p.m.," said a Marathon employee.

Employees had expected terminations to come shortly after the end of June, but no one was certain how severe the cuts would be. The Midland office of Marathon had received a notice from corporate headquarters in Findlay, Ohio around the end of May offering one more round of voluntary early retirement and putting June 30 as the deadline.

A newspaper story in the Findlay Courier last week quoted Marathon officials as saying falling oil prices was forcing the oil company to accept early retirements and terminate others in an attempt to cut its payroll by $20 million.

Marathon spokesman William Ryder Tuesday said additional layoffs are planned but refused to say how many people will be affected until all of them have been notified.

So far 1,120 people have either accepted early retirement or been laid off since the company first began making cuts Feb. 1, the newspaper reported.

In the first phase, nearly 57 percent or 600 of the eligible workers left the company, a subsidiary of USX Corp., which changed its name Tuesday from U.S. Steel Corp.

A second reduction phase, which began July 1, affects 520 employees.

At the Findlay headquarters, 301 people have accepted the offer, the newspaper reported.

The cuts were ordered to reduce staff size when the company found itself with too large of a work force that resulted from cuts to its capital expense and exploration budgets.

Employees who are age 50 or over by June 30 were offered early retirement.

Other employees will be given a severance package under what the company calls its "Special Termination Program."

It includes two weeks pay for each year of service, with a minimum of four weeks and a maximum of 52 weeks. They will be allowed to continue their medical coverage for up to six months.

Marathon and other American oil companies recently were told by President Reagan to give up their Libyian operations after he ordered bombings in retaliation for that country's support of terroist activities.

Experts see prices heading lower

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Experts say oil prices are heading toward $10 per barrel, because of continued downward pressure.

Prices of crude oil and petroleum products posted a mixed record in light trading Tuesday.

West Texas Intermediate crude oil, the major American grade, rose slightly, as did heating oil and gasoline. But British North Sea crude oil slipped further below $10 a barrel for the second consecutive day.

However, oil industry analysts said they expected overall crude oil prices to slip toward the $10-a-barrel level.

"It's just got a downward head of steam," said Stephen Smith, senior vice president at Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass. "I don't see a way it'll turn around before $10 and below."

Peter C. Beutel, assistant director of Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc., said the market was merely "catching its breath." He added, "It's going to test the $10 level, and I think it's no more than 50-50 it'll find support there."

The August futures contract for West Texas Intermediate crude oil closed at 11.22 a barrel, up 3 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange, and at $11.20 a barrel, up 5 cents, on the London-based open market.

Local economic activity index weakens in May

From Staff Reports

With the significant exceptions of utility service figures and saving and loan deposits, economic indicators for Midland slid far below last year's figures during May.

According to figures released at today's Midland Chamber of Commerce meeting, construction and employment suffered the biggest losses.

Valuations of new construction projects permitted from January through May of this year are less than half those authorized during the same period in 1985 — $11.1 million compared to $23.3 million a year ago.

The average value of each planned project is down 16.6 percent as well, as the total number of permits granted in the first five months of 1986 is down by less than half, from 192 to 110.

May employment indices showed total employment in the city more than seven percent lower in May 1986 than in 1985, with 46,200 employed this year compared to 49,800 a year ago.

The number of unemployed more than doubled from 2,700 to 6,100 during the 12-month period, as did the unemployment rate, from 5.1 percent to a record-high 11.7 percent.

The total tally of households receiving utility services continues to stand slightly higher than year-ago levels. Gas service shows the strongest increase, with better than 3 percent more customers this year than last. Water and electric service figures are up about 1 percent each, while Southwestern Bell figures show one fewer customer this year than last.

Deposits at thrift institutions continue to flourish, while banks show significantly lower deposits than a year ago. Midland S&Ls are holding more than 13 percent more on behalf of their customers, a total of nearly $600 million. City banks had $1.5 billion in customer deposits on the books in May, more than $120 million less than in May 1985.

Total receipts at the city's post offices in May were down nearly $100,000 compared to year-ago figures, however cumulative totals for the first five months of 1986 are comparable to 1985's receipts.

The total number of possible residential mail delivery points was flat with the preceding month at 41,984. This figure reflecs only the number of possible service locations, not the actual number of residential postal customers.

Reduced business activity is being reflected in air traffic figures, which show that commercial airlines have boarded nearly 30,000 fewer passengers at Midland Regional Airport so far this year.

U.S. Steel announces restructuring

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

U.S. Steel took the word steel out of its corporate name Tuesday and replaced it with the letter X — the company's stock symbol on the New York Stock Exchange since 1924.

Renaming itself USX Corp., the company also announced a long-expected corporate restructuring that would make its steel division one of four operating units. Both moves were intended to reflect the diminishing importance to the overall company of its steel operations.

USX would become a holding company. In addition to the company's steel division, which will be called USS, there will be three other operating units: Marathon Oil, Texas Oil & Gas and U.S. Diversified Group. The diversified unit will be created through the consolidation of U.S. Steel's chemical business, its energy equipment manufacturing unit, its steel distribution centers and its construction, real estate, consulting and transportation operations.

David Roderick, U.S. Steel's chairman, said the reorganization will give the company greater flexibility to diversify into new businesses that are more profitable than steel. Industry analysts also said the restructuring is intended to turn the company's troubled steel operations into a separate, standalone unit forced to pay its own way without being subsidized by other, more profitable divisions of U.S. Steel.

RepublicBank income plunges in second quarter

DALLAS (AP) — RepublicBank Corp. reported its earnings dropped 84 percent during the second quarter, due largely to the depressed Texas economy.

The company on Tuesday reported net income in the second quarter of $5.7 million, or 13 cents per share, compared with $35.5 million, or $1.16 per share, during the same period last year.

For the first six months, income was $28.8 million, or 89 cents per share, compared with $70.9 million, or $2.32 per share, in the first half of 1985.

In a prepared statement, chairman Gerald W. Fronterhouse said the bank's "performance this year reflects the current challenging economic environment in Texas."

"I do not think you can understate the erosion in the last six to 12 months in the energy industry, and now real estate is rapidly becoming a trouble spot," said Frank W. Anderson, an analyst at Weber, Hall, Sale & Associates of Dallas.

The bank holding company, the 18th largest in the country and the largest in Texas with total assets of $22.5 billion as of June 30, added $61 million to its allowance for loan losses during the first six months this year.

The provision for loan losses of $78.5 million in the second quarter exceeded charge-offs of $53.8 million, thus increasing the allowance from the first quarter by $24.7 million to $285.7 million, or 1.84 percent of loans outstanding, RepublicBank said in a statement.

"The increase in reserves and the strong capital position of RepublicBank provide the framework to handle the broad-based growth in Texas that we are confident will occur in the years ahead," Fronterhouse said.

New service helps find money for college

By MELLA McEWEN

Approximately $145 million in scholastic aid went unclaimed last year, according to Bill Cornelius, vice president of HORIZON FINANCIAL NETWORK.

That's why Horizon has formed the National Scholarship Service, which promises to locate five to 25 sources for financial aid to attend college, all for a $69 fee. It's located in Suite 264 at 3303 N. Midkiff.

Clients complete a student data-form listing areas of interest, and will receive a computerized list of scholarships and other financial aid in those areas. The service guarantees that at least five sources will be found, or the fee will be refunded.

The service points out that, according to a survey by the American Legion's Education and Scholarship Program, over $4 billion is available in student scholarships, loans and part-time jobs.

THE HARRIS CORP., which recently acquired Lanier Business Products, and Exxon Office Systems Corp. has relocated its Midland office from 3416 W. Wall, Suite 106, to 4305 N. Garfield, in the Garfield Plaza, effective July 1.

Larry Little, branch manager, said the move was to gain additional space "for the continued growth of local staff." Harris markets telephone systems, dictation equipment, word processors, small business computers and P.C. networks in the Midland area. Third quarter fiscal 1985, which ended in March, 1986, produced the highest sales volume in one quarter since the office opened in 1978.

Not too long ago, AT&T announced that it was cutting long distance rates of interstate calls an average 12 percent, closely followed by rate reductions by MCI and Spring.

However, CLAYDESTA COMMUNICATIONS asserts that these rate reductions really won't mean much to Texas callers."Of all the long distance calls made in the state of Texas, 70 percent stay within the state while 30 percent go out of state. If, for example, a customer had a $30 long distance bill, applying the 70/30 percentage and AT&T's [illegible] average rate decrease, it would result in a 3.6 percent savings, or just over $1 saved on that bill," explained Ron Hughes, director of marketing and sales for ClayDesta.

"When you take a close look at the situation, you'll find that we're only talking about 4 percent of a Texan's phone bill," he continued.

A native Midlander has returned home to open a new office for CREDIT SYSTEMS, a third-party collection agency.

Margie Robinson, a former Midland Memorial Hospital employee, wil manage the Midland branch of the Arlington-based company, according to Terry Battle, a vice president with the firm. The Midland office is located in Suite 220 of the Texas American Bank building. "We do unsecured collections - loans that have no collateral. We do commercial collections - businesses that owe business, and consumer collections - individuals who owe businesses," said Battle. "It's important to keep bills paid, but in tough times like these, it's really important.

JENKINS JEWELRY & LUGGAGE is now open in its new location in the Western Bank building on Andrews Highway.

Store Manager Scooter Jenkins points out that there is plenty of parking, and the store is easily accessible and easier to find. One reason for the move, he said, was that the store owners wanted on the street, where visibility is much better. "We were having some problems with visibility in the shopping center," he said. The new location now has two entrances - from the front, or from the atrium.

He added that he's very pleased with the new location, which is larger "and has a better layout, overall. We still have a large selection of jewelry and watches, and the largest selection of luggage in West Texas."

He also noted that Jenkins Jewelers has been in Midland for almost 40 years, and is the oldest independent [illegible]

Ashland Oil charged with illegal payoffs

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Securities and Exchange Commission Tuesday accused Ashland Oil Inc. and a former chairman of making $29 million in illegal foreign payoffs between 1980 and 1982 to win crude oil contracts in Oman.

Both Ashland and the former chairman, Orin E. Atkins, who resigned in September 1981, settled with the SEC but neither admitted nor denied violating the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977, which prohibits American companies from paying bribes abroad to get business contracts.

They did agree to a permanent injunction that restrains them from future violations of the foreign corrupt practices provision of the Securities and Exchange Act. No money penalty was sought against either Atkins or the crude oil refining company, based in Ashland, Ky.

The complaint Tuesday, which was filed in federal district court for the District of Columbia, marked the second time in 11 years that Ashland had been accused of illegal payments by the SEC. In 1975, Ashland admitted $1.2 million in foreign and domestic payments.

In its charges Tuesday, the SEC said that, beginning in 1979, Atkins began negotations with James T.W. Landon, a British citizen and an official of the government of Oman, over the purchase of mining rights in what was then Rhodesia, now Zimbabwe, as well as "the possibilites of Ashland obtaining crude oil from Oman."

In the wake of the 1979 Iranian revolution, Ashland had lost its primary source of crude oil, and was looking for a new supplier that would offer it below-market-rate prices. While Landon was said to had paid only $876,700 for the chrome mining rights, Atkins authorized Ashland payments of $29 million in a two-and-a-half year period for the mining rights.

By 1980, Ashland was awarded a contract by the Omani petroleum minister for the purchase of 20,000 barrels of crude oil a day "initially at a discount of $3 a barrel," the SEC said. An internal analysis by Ashland calculated that such a contract would save the company $22 million a year if the price differential continued through 1981, and that Ashland could make a profit of $40 million a year by reselling the crude oil on the spot market.

Wall Street broker under investigation

NEW YORK (AP) — Another Wall Street professional has come under scrutiny in the federal government's crackdown on illegal insider trading, according to the investment company that formerly employed him.

David S. Brown, who had been a vice president in Goldman Sachs & rities and Exchange Commission informed the firm that he was under investigation, Goldman Sachs spokesman Edward G. Novotny said Tuesday.

Brown's resignation was the latest development related to the SEC's insider trading case against Dennis B. Levine, a former merger specialist at another Wall Street investment firm, Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

"We are shocked and dismayed at this development," Novotny said, reading a prepared statement over the telephone. He said Brown, an attorney, had joined Goldman Sachs three years ago and that the firm was cooperating in the SEC investigation, but declined to elaborate.

Brown could not be reached for comment. His attorney Michael Armstrong, at the New York law firm Barrett Smith Schapiro Simon & Armstrong, declined to comment except to confirm that he represents Brown.

The SEC had no comment. According to agency policy, the SEC neither confirms nor denies the existence of an investigation until it is made public in court proceedings, said Mary McCue, an official in the SEC's Washington headquarters.

Levine was accused in mid-May of using advance knowledge of 54 pending corporate takeovers to reap $12.6 million in illicit stock-trading profits, an activity known as insider trading. It is the biggest such case in Wall Street history and has shaken the financial community.

Since then, authorities have broadened their investigation and a federal grand jury indicted five others in an alleged scheme to profit from advance knowledge of takeovers stolen from the prominent New York law firm of Paul Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison.

Earlier this month, the SEC charged two former investment bankers with involvment in the Levine case. Ira B. Sokolow, formerly in the merger and acquisition department of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., and Robert M. Wilkis, formerly of Lazard Freres & Co. and E.F. Hutton & Co., reportedly agreed to implicate others in the government probe.

Texas to get $50 million from lawsuit settlement

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Texas will receive at least $50 million in the settlement of a lawsuit involving oil overcharges by domestic oil companies, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Tuesday.

Texas' share of the money will come from a $1.5 billion fund that was held in escrow during litigation with oil companies that produce stripper wells — those that pump less than 10 barrels of oil a day.

Mattox said the settlement was signed in Wichita, Kan., by U.S. District Judge Frank Theis, who will hold the settlement for 30 days to give parties involved in the case a chance to object.

The lawsuit was filed by the oil industry in 1978 over the Department of Energy's regulatory treatment of crude oil from stripper wells. The DOE rules led to cheaper oil prices, resulting in overcharges before and during the litigation.

Under terms of the settlement agreement, all major energy consumers — including the airline industry, agricultural cooperatives and others who paid the overcharges, will be compensated, Mattox said.

The rest of the money will be divided between the states and the federal government.

Texas initial share could reach $55 million, but the state could receive an additional $90 million over the next few years becasue of the settlement's two-step distribution plan, Mattox said. Texas will have a greater say in how to spend the stripper well money than it did in funds from the settlement of a separate lawsuit against Exxon earlier this year, he said.

The federal judge in the $157 million Exxon settlement restricted the money to five specific energy-related programs. The stripper well money can also be used for carpooling, school busing, mass transit and agriculture programs that are conservation-related and approved by the DOE.

However, Brent North Sea crude oil fell 10 cents, to $9.75 a barrel. The Brent oil had traded, but not closed, at $9.70 a barrel on April 1, the lowest mark for a British crude oil in 13 years.

Prices of petroleum products all recorded slight gains of less than half a cent on the futures market. Heating oil closed at 33 cents a gallon, while leaded and unleaded gasoline ended at 35 cents a gallon.

Reports from the Middle East indicated that Saudi Arabia, the linchpin of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, had increased its production last month to 5 million to 5.5 million barrels a day, substantially above its official quota of 4.35 million barrels a day.

However, analysts said that news contributed little to the market's weak condition, in part because Tuesday's announcement simply confirmed rumors last month.

Rather, the analysts said the market was continuing the slide that began last week following OPEC's failure to approve a plan to restrain production.

Nonetheless, analysts said that the confirmation of the Saudi production increase underscored their expectations of lower oil prices.

Economists doubt benefits of cheaper dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — Economists are getting more pessimistic about the benefits of the cheaper dollar.

Most experts still think the drop in the dollar's value against other currencies will help shrink the huge U.S. trade deficit. But many say the shrinkage will be smaller and take longer to show up than they predicted earlier this year.

"The consensus has shifted a bit," said David Wyss, chief financial economist for Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. "In the prevailing view, if anything, we're a little behind schedule."

The yawning trade gap frustrates politicians, business people and union leaders, who are waiting impatiently for the results of the sharp improvement in the dollar's competitiveness.

The dollar dipped again Monday in Tokyo, hitting a post-World War II low of 159.25 Japanese yen. The dollar rose later in New York, where it hit 162.05 yen, up from 161.165 on Thursday. There was no trading Friday in New York in observance of Independence Day.

A cheap dollar is expected to help the U.S. trade position by making American goods less expensive overseas, thus encouraging sales, while at the same time raising the cost of foreign goods sold in the United States, cutting into buying by Americans.

However, the U.S. trade deficit has been more stubborn than predicted, and economists say there are two key reasons.

One is that Europe, Central America, the OPEC nations and some other key trading partners of the United States have weaker-than-expected economies and cannot absorb more American exports, even though the dollar's slide had made them better bargains.

Another reason is that American buyers have taken longer than expected to switch from foreign to domestic suppliers. Foreign suppliers have slashed their profit margins to hang onto American customers.

"We're still expecting improvements in trade this year, but they're going to be slow and — at least for this year and next year — fairly moderate," said David Berson, senior economist at Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates in Philadelphia.

The pessimism is widespread: In December, Chase Econometrics Associates in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., had been predicting the nation's merchandise trade deficit this year would be about the same as 1985's record $148.5 billion. Now it pegs the 1986 trade gap at about $165 billion.

Citing similar reasons, Wharton and Data Resources have both added about $10 billion to their projections of the 1986 merchandise trade gap since the start of the year.

Moreover, the trade deficit should remain above $100 billion a year until at least 1988 or 1989, most forecasters say.

A minority viewpoint — that the cheap dollar will actually hurt America's trade position, at least with Japan — is expressed by Kenichi Ohmae, managing director of the Japanese office of the U.S. consulting firm McKinsey & Co.

Ohmae argues that many products imported from Japan, such as videocassette recorders, compact disks and certain computer memory chips, are produced in small numbers or not at all in the United States.

Ohmae contends Americans have no choice but to buy from Japan, and since the products cost more now because of the cheaper dollar, the trade deficit goes up, not down. Japan is America's No. 2 trading partner after Canada.

"Unlike the government, American corporations are not terribly interested in exporting out of the U.S. Many are already very successful in becoming insiders in the key markets of the world," Ohmae argued in a column in the Wall Street Journal last week.

But most other economists say that if the dollar remains low for long enough, American companies will invest more in domestic manufacturing, and other nations, such as Japan, will build more U.S. factories. Eventually, that will help the trade gap.

"It took us four or five years to get into this mess and it's going to take four or five years to get out of it," Wyss said.

In the case of Japan, Americans should not count on any big increase in Japanese demand for their products, said Masaru Takagi, senior economist at Fuji Bank Ltd. in New York.

"We Japanese have very small room for imports from the U.S. Even if there's a 30 or 40 percent lower price, still we prefer the quality of the (Japanese) products," Takagi said.

Still, there are glimmers of hope. While U.S. imports have been rising this year, exports have, too, in a switch from 1985.

Plan would export Alaskan oil

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Energy Secretary John Herrington says he favors a change in the law that would allow exporting Alaskan North Slope crude oil to Asia.

"Yes, I do support it, and I think the president supports it and we'd like to see it happen," he said at an Anchorage news conference.

But Herrington said political opposition to making America an oil exporting country likely will stymie supporters of shipping Alaskan oil to Asia.

"There is political opposition to the export of Alaskan oil," he said. That opposition, principally from the maritime industry, may be sufficient to keep laws in place that prohibit the export of Alaskan crude.

Herrington went beyond a recent Commerce Department report that said it makes economic sense to export Alaskan oil, but which stopped short of endorsing it.

Proponents say Asian allies would become less dependent on Mideast oil supplies and that purchase of Alaskan oil would improve the U.S. balance of trade. Alaskan oil could be replaced by Mexican oil, which is closer to U.S. refineries.

People Express directors considering takeover offers

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — After apparently considering takeover offers all day, directors of People Express adjourned late Tuesday without taking any action.

"Deliberations will resume Wednesday morning," said a spokeswoman for the parent company of financially ailing People Express Airlines. Asked what deliberations meant, she said "they are considering various alternatives" which she didn't identify.

The company announced last month that it would sell the airline in whole or part to alleviate its financial condition. Ever since, rumors have swept Wall Street about which companies were considering a bid or had made approaches to People.

The most persistant speculation has centered on Texas Air Corp., parent of Continental Airlines, which is said to have offered $9 to $12 per share for People. Other carriers that have been mentioned as being interested in purchasing all or part of People have been United Airlines, Western Airlines and Delta Air Lines. None has commented publicly, however.

People Express, which also owns Denver-based Frontier Airlines and Britt Airways, suffered a loss of $58 million in the first 1986 quarter.

In over-the-counter trading Tuesday, shares of People Express fell 12.5 cents to $9.375. It was the second most active issue on the over-the-counter market as 2.8 million shares were traded.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Earned interest not IRA contribution

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I opened an individual retirement account last year and deposited $2,000 in it. I plan to put the same amount in this year. The $2,000 I put in last year is earning interest and that presents a problem.

As a single person, the maximum I am allowed to contribute to the IRA annually is $2,000. If I put $2,000 in this year, that amount and the interest will exceed $2,000. To avoid "over contributing," I will withdraw the interest.

Because I am under age 59½, there is supposed to be a 10 percent tax penalty on IRA withdrawals. I can understand paying regular income tax on the interest I take out. But why should I have to pay the additional 10 percent penalty on money I withdraw to stay within the letter of the law and abide by the IRA contribution limits?

Doyle

A. For the simple reason that you would be withdrawing money from your IRA before you reach 59½. Anyone who takes money out of an IRA before reaching that age or becoming permanently disabled must pay regular income tax, plus the 10 percent penalty.

However, you don't have to withdraw the interest your IRA earns. You're badly mixed up about the contribution limits. That interest does not count as a contribution.

The money you put into an IRA, plus everything that it earns in the form of interest, dividends or growth in value, is sheltered from income tax until you withdraw it.

If you leave your IRA intact for many years, the interest it earns each year will compound and might actually exceed the money you put in as contributions.

As long as you can afford to leave your IRA untouched, don't withdraw the interest. By tapping the IRA before age 59½, you would be subject to an unnecessary tax bite.

• • •

Q. I am out of work and my unemployment compensation has run out. I have an individual retirement account with a local bank. Can I draw money out of the IRA without paying a penalty?

A. Not unless you are at least 59½ years old or are permanently disabled. If you're under that age and in good health, there are no exceptions to the rule that you must pay regular federal income tax and a 10 percent penalty tax on IRA withdrawals.

However, because you are unemployed and if you have no other taxable income, you're probably in a very low income tax bracket. As a result, the tax bite on the IRA withdrawals might not be terribly large.

But there is another thing you have to be careful about. If your IRA is in certificates of deposit, as many bank IRAs are, you'll probably have to pay early withdrawal penalties to the bank if the CD are cashed before their maturity dates.

Federally insured banks and savings and loan associations are allowed to waive early withdrawal penalties on IRA CDs for people 59½ and older. Some waive that penalty. Some don't.

Q. My husband, now age 68, retired in 1979 with a profit sharing payment from his company, which he put into a rollover bank IRA. We have taken the interest each month to supplement our income.

The interest has dropped so low we wonder if it can be taken out of the IRA and put into a credit union or some other place paying more, without getting hit with big income tax.

A. The IRA can be moved to another IRA sponsor or trustee, such as a credit union, without paying tax. That can be accomplished through a trustee-to-trustee transfer, in which your husband never touches the money. Or, he can close his present IRA and put the money in another IRA at a different trustee or sponsor within 60 days.

But, if he just closes his present IRA and does not open another, income tax will be due on all that money.

The easy way to accomplish what you have in mind is to contact the credit union or other institution to which the money is to be moved and have that outfit handle all the paperwork through a trustee-to-trustee transfer.

• • •

Q. I was somewhat distressed when the value of my investment in a no-load municipal bond mutual fund declined. I discussed this with my broker and he recommended that I simply buy individual municipal bonds directly from him. He said his firm would retain the bonds and keep tabs on them for me. Would that be better than investing through the mutual fund?

A. Unless you buy in very large amounts, your total cost almost certainly would be higher buying individual bonds. The price markup on relatively small purchases of municipal bonds usually is substantial.

Also, you reduce your risk through diversification when you invest through a mutual fund, because the mutual fund holds many different securities.

Lots of people invest in individual municipal bonds. Some leave their bonds with brokers. Others take possession of their bonds. But more and more investors like the diversification and convenience mutual funds provide.

Goetz upset as charges reinstated

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz, ordered again to stand trial on attempted murder and assault charges from the 1984 shootings of four youths on a subway, says he's disgusted with the legal system.

The New York Court of Appeals on Tuesday unanimously reinstated four counts of each charge against Goetz. Trial has been set Sept. 2 before Judge Stephen Crane, who had dismissed the charges against Goetz.

"I was vindicated a long time ago, some people just haven't noticed it," Goetz said of Tuesday's decision in Albany. "I wish New York could resolve its problems without putting me on trial. I'm pretty disgusted with the system."

The maximum penalty for attempted murder is 25 years imprisonment; for assault it's 15 years. In addition, Goetz faces a charge of criminal possession of weapons, which carries a possible 15-year sentence, and reckless endangerment, which carries a maximum seven years in prison.

The 39-year-old electronics worker admits shooting four black teenagers on Dec. 22, 1984, after one asked him for $5 on a Manhattan subway.

Goetz, who had been injured in a mugging in 1981, said he was acting in self-defense when he opened fire because he feared he was about to be robbed. The teen-agers have said they were panhandling.

The shooting turned Goetz into an international figure when he surrendered eight days later in Concord, N.H. Supporters called him a crime victim with the courage to fight back and opponents called him a trigger-happy vigilante.

In its decision, the state's highest court said Goetz admitted that once he concluded the youths were going to attack him he decided to "murder (the four youths), to hurt them, to make them suffer as much as possible."

The decision also quotes Goetz as saying that "if I had had more (bullets), I would have shot them again, and again, and again."

If the charges were dropped, the court said, a dangerous precedent would be set, allowing others to escape charges by claiming they believed they were justified in attacking others even if a reasonable person wouldn't consider the attack justified.

The intermediate-level Appellate Division had ruled that the prosecutor erred by telling grand jury members to consider what any reasonable person would have done when confronted by the same situation as Goetz.

The high court ruling "is significant because it clarifies the law of justification in New York," District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said.

Goetz' attorney, Barry Slotnick, said that although he was disappointed, no appeal was planned.

Goetz said he wasn't sure what message the trial might deliver, but added: "Perhaps the most important thing is that New York is going to have to look at where it's going."

Three youths shot by Goetz — Troy Canty, James Ramseur and Barry Allen — have recovered, but the fourth — Darrell Cabey — was permanently paralyzed and brain damaged, authorities said.

Center wants auto recall due to seat-belt problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Center for Auto Safety is asking the government to order the recall of 1.2 million Honda and Toyota cars, saying the automakers haven't done enough to remedy seat-belt problems.

The private consumer group petitioned the Department of Transportation Tuesday to recall 234,000 1982-83 Toyota Celicas and 938,000 1979-81 Honda Accords and Civics.

The DOT last year requested voluntary recalls of the cars due to seat belt problems, but withdrew the request this spring after Toyota Motor Co. notified drivers that it would fix the problem for free, and American Honda Motor Co. announced it was offering a lifetime guarantee for seat belts on 1970-86 vehicles.

The Toyota seat belts retract slowly and allow too much slack, while the Honda seat belts can twist and jam, the safety center said.

"In departing from its historically strong enforcement stance, DOT sets a dangerous policy when it exempts Honda and Toyota from recalling over a million cars with defective seat belts that endanger the cars' occupants," center officials wrote to Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

Postal profit promising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General Albert V. Casey is predicting a $414 million profit this budget year for the Postal Service, a dramatic recovery which almost certainly will stave off general rate increases in 1986 or 1987.

The agency posted a $251 million loss in the 1985 budget year, which ended last Sept. 30. It takes 18 months to prepare and implement a rate increase, and none is in the works, spokesman Robert Hoobing said Tuesday.

Casey has estimated that a penny increase in the price of a first-class stamp equals about $600 million in revenue.

U.S., Thailand in training

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Thailand will stage a large military training exercise next month that will feature an amphibious landing, Special Forces operations and extensive air and sea deployments, the Pentagon announced.

The exercise, code-named Cobra Gold 86, is the fifth in a series of routine "joint-combined training exercises" conducted with Thailand. It will begin Aug. 4 and extend through Aug. 13.

Roughly 9,300 U.S. servicemen will join about 3,500 members of the Royal Thai Armed Forces during the course of the exercise. Eleven U.S. warships, led by the battleship New Jersey, will join 19 Thai vessels for the naval portion of the exercise, according to a Pentagon statement issued Tuesday.

The U.S. Air Force will also deploy some F-16 fighters based in South Korea to Cobra Gold, marking the first time that front-line fighter has been used for an exercise in Thailand.

"The exercise will provide training for Thai and U.S. participating commanders and their staffs in planning, command and control and execution of air, land, sea and amphibious operations. Thai and U.S. military personnel will also be involved in amphibious mine-laying and sweeping, explosive ordnance disposal and special warfare operations."

Army improvements costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army's ambitious plans to improve the quality of recruits with financial incentives could cost as much as $785 million over the next five years but would be generally successful, according to a Congressional Budget Office report.

Bennett: Drug ban needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary William J. Bennett, noting the recent drug deaths of two young athletes, said that every college president in the nation should begin and strictly enforce a ban on drugs on campus.

"Such a policy could, in fact, be enforced. It should be enforced," Bennett said.

Strange items turn up in garbage

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Anecdotes about valuables being mistakenly consigned to the garbage are legend, but modern waste collection methods are giving rise to a whole new type of amazing stories about what can be found in the garbage, according to a Pittsburgh-based waste management firm.

Much urban garbage collection today involves the use of large containers or dumpsters, and sanitation crews have become aware that growing numbers of homeless people are using them for shelter, the Chambers Development Co. notes. As a result, the containers are now examined carefully before transfer to the garbage truck.

Employees are also especially cautious at institutions, including prisons and hospitals. Some drivers toot their horns to warn any dumpster occupants, and most check the contents before emptying receptacles at correctional and health care facilities.

In one town in Pennsylvania, workers report, a young man named Greg dutifully exits the dumpster when the collection truck arrives, taking with him all of his belongings. Once the pickup has been made, he re-stows his personal effects and resumes residence.

Other stories also contain an element of pathos. One concerns a woman who, believing her dog had been taken to a landfill after being hit by an automobile, sought to recover his remains for a more seemly interment. When she learned that searching 50 tons of waste and landfill would be impossible, she adopted the practice of making regular visits to the site and leaving potted flowers in memory of her dearly loved pet.

Despite the relatively new problems, lost valuables still dominate the list of anecdotes compiled by Chambers employees. Misplaced jewelry heads the list and is rarely recovered; the suspicion is that it frequently doesn't even get to the garbage truck but, if it did, in most cases tons of debris cover it before any search could be organized.

Not all lost items have gone unrecovered, however.

— A mile down the road after a pickup at a private home, a driver noticed unopened mail on top of the rearloader pile. He pulled out the letters and, upon completing his route, called the customer to see if the mail was intentionally discarded. The customer raced down to the office and recovered $35,000 worth of checks from a stock sale.

— A newspaper reporter on an investigative story suddenly realized his hand-written notes from a series of interviews had disappeared, apparently tossed away by a janitor. Asked to check the day's pickup from the reporter's home area, workers miraculously turned up part of the notes.

— The month's payroll at a small South Carolina military office couldn't be located as the troops lined up to receive their checks. Chambers was asked to trace the early morning trash pickup from a few hours prior to the discovery. Luckily, the truck was just arriving at the landfill and the $13,000 packet was retrieved.

Every recovery isn't welcomed, however, the firm's officials point out. Discovery of a sack of cocaine led to the conviction and imprisonment of a drug dealer.

Free beeper service alerts fathers-to-be

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The father-to-be who is on the go at work, or is jittery out on the golf course, will get special treatment at a Philadelphia hospital bent on making sure dad doesn't miss the birth of a child.

Albert Einstein Medical Center is loaning out telephone pagers to men who just can't afford to sit by a telephone waiting for word that their wives are headed for the delivery room at Einstein. The special service is free, according to hospital vice president Robert B. Kimmel, and is also the result of a situation Kimmel found himself in eight months ago.

"Here I was, 43 years old and I'm about to become a father," Kimmel said. "But my job takes me from one place to the next.

"I didn't want to miss the big event and I didn't want my wife frantically phoning around trying to find me," he said. "So I came up with this."

The special service that came out of that situation is known as "D.O.C." or "Dad-On-Call." It comes complete with a sticker on the side which shows a stork on its way with baby.

It's simply a telephone pager, like the ones that Einstein doctors use. The caller can dial a number to make the pager beep, hence the commonly used term "beeper," and at the same time transmit a telephone number the person being paged is supposed to call.

Try A Change Of Pace picnic

Blue skies and warm breezes are perfect encouragements to gather family and friends together in outdoor activities. Plan a picnic along with some physical activity, and you'll create a winning combination of diet and exercise that will appeal to everyone.

Long bike rides in the neighborhood or nature hikes in the park offer both a change of scenery and good exercise. In addition to increasing blood circulation and strengthening muscles, bike riding and brisk walks burn several hundreds of calories. An hour-long walk at a good pace for 2.5 miles burns about 200 calories, while an hour-long bike ride for 5.5 miles burns 210 calories!

Activity and warm weather build appetites for cool, refreshing meals. Pack a picnic lunch for a light meal on the grass to refuel after your summer fun.

Fresh seasonal fruits and vegetables are at their best in taste, color and availability, and in price. Combine freshly picked California grapes with oranges and apples to provide a simple yet satisfying fruit salad rich both in color and natural vitamins. Fruit salad is also easy to prepare and helps to avoid hours in a hot kitchen. Just pack individual portions in sandwich bags and you're ready to go!

For a change, try nutritious and delicately flavorful Alaska canned salmon in a hearty sandwich with curly lettuce trimmings. Just pop your light meal in a sandwich bag and enjoy your activities knowing the freshness is safely sealed in your bags.

Additional fresh fruit such as bunches of red, green or blue/black grapes or simple but elegant grape tarts (not shown) are good choices for an upbeat dessert.

Totable Salmon Rye Sandwiches

1 can (15-1/2 ounces) or 2 cans (7-1/2 or 7-3/4 ounces each) Alaska salmon, drained and flaked
1/4 cup radishes, cut into small matchstick pieces
3 tablespoons minced green onions
2 tablespoons chopped dill pickle
2 tablespoons each mayonnaise and Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon dill pickle juice
1/8 teaspoon cracked black pepper
8 slices thick slice rye bread, buttered
Leafy lettuce or alfalfa sprouts

Combine salmon, radishes, green onions, pickle, mayonnaise, mustard, pickle juice and pepper; mix well. Spread mixture on 4 slices rye bread; top with lettuce and/or sprouts. Place remaining bread on top. Cut each sandwich in half and pack in sandwich bags.
Makes 4 sandwiches.

Creamy Grape & Yogurt Salad

1/2 cup vanilla-flavored yogurt
2-3 teaspoons minced candied ginger
2 cups red and green grapes, seeded if necessary
1 can (11 ounces) Mandarin oranges, drained
1 pear*, pared, cored and sliced

Combine yogurt and ginger; let stand 30 minutes. Combine all fruits; gently stir in yogurt mixture.
Makes 4 to 6 servings.

*One can (16 ounces) pears, drained and cut into chunks can be substituted.

Salmon Rice Salad

1 can (7-1/2 or 7-3/4 ounces) Alaska salmon
1/3 cup uncooked rice
1-1/2 teaspoons curry powder
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
Water
3 tablespoons sliced olives
2 tablespoons each minced green onions and parsley
1/4 cup dairy sour cream or plain yogurt
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel
Salt to taste
1 each green and red pepper, seeded and quartered vertically
1 cucumber, quartered vertically, seeded and pared if desired and cut into 3-inch lengths
Lettuce leaves

Drain salmon reserving liquid; flake. Sauté rice and curry powder in hot oil about 2 minutes or until rice turns opaque. Add water to reserved salmon liquid to equal 1 cup. Add to rice; bring mixture to boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer about 20 minutes or until all liquid is absorbed. Remove mixture to large bowl. Add salmon, olives, green onions, parsley and sour cream, mayonnaise, lemon juice and lemon peel; mix well. Salt to taste. Refrigerate at least 1 hour. Serve with peppers and cucumber to scoop salad or wrap salad in lettuce.
Makes 4 servings.

Quick Grape Tarts

Pastry*
4-1/2 teaspoons sugar
1-1/2 teaspoons flour
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
3/4 to 1 pound red grapes, seeded if necessary
2 to 3 teaspoons butter or margarine
2 to 3 tablespoons chopped pistachios or almonds

Press 2 to 3 teaspoons pastry into each of 12 (2-1/2-inches) tart pans. Combine sugar, flour and cinnamon; spoon about 1/2 teaspoon of mixture into each tart pan. Fill each with 3 to 6 grapes and top with about 1/8 teaspoon butter and about 1/2 teaspoon pistachios. Place tarts on cookie tray for ease of handling and bake at 375° F. about 20 minutes or until filling bubbles and pastry is golden. Makes 12 tarts.

Pastry: Combine 1 cup flour, 1/3 cup butter or margarine and 2 tablespoons sugar; gently rub between fingers until mixture holds together. Makes pastry for 12 (2-1/2-inches) tart pans.

Serving Tip: Tarts can be packed in sandwich bags for totable desserts.

*Packaged pastry for single crust pie can be substituted.

Suggestions For Brown Bag Diners

Here are some tips for toting portable meals:

- Bacteria thrives in the range of 40 to 125° F. A perishable bag meal shouldn't be in this temperature zone without refrigeration for more than two or three hours, including preparation time.
- Keep foods cold by packing them into bags, baskets or boxes along with a chilled can of juice, frozen sandwiches or cookies. Frozen items will thaw in time for lunch. Or, seal ice cubes in a zipper-top bag; pack along with your meal.
- For variety, use salad dressing such as Thousand Island or Creamy Garlic to make excellent spreads for sandwiches. Or, use canned seafood such as salmon that can be used straight from the can.
- Spread butter, margarine or mayonnaise right up to the edges on both slices of bread to prevent sandwich fillings from seeping through and jellies and jams from "weeping."
- Pack separate sandwich bags of garnishes such as lettuce, tomato and green pepper slices, and celery sticks. Salad greens stay especially crisp if first wrapped in a damp paper towel.
- Save money by purchasing large containers of chips, cookies and other snack items. Portion-pack them in sandwich bags and seal tightly to preserve freshness.
- Pack fragile items such as fruit, potato chips or cookies into recloseable bags, with a cushion of air before sealing bag.

Potato salad prepared ahead

Associated Press

NO-CHOP POTATO SALAD

1 24-ounce package frozen hash brown potatoes with onion and peppers
3 stalks celery, thinly sliced (1½ cups)
1 8-ounce container sour cream dip with chives
⅔ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon white wine vinegar
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
½ teaspoon salt
3 hard-cooked eggs, coarsely chopped

In a 3- or 4-quart saucepan cook potatoes with onion and peppers in a large amount of boiling water, covered, 6 to 8 minutes or until potatoes are tender; drain well. In a large bowl combine cooked potatoes and celery. Set aside. In a small bowl combine dip, mayonnaise, sugar, vinegar, mustard and salt. Add mayonnaise mixture to potato mixture; toss lightly to coat. Gently fold in eggs. Turn into a 2- or 2½-quart moisture- and vaporproof serving container. Cover; chill several hours or overnight.

To transport, pack bowl containing salad on ice or with several frozen ice packs in a well insulated cooler. Serve within 3 hours. Makes 20 servings.

WHAT'S COOKING

Brother, sister team up in kitchen

By ELIZABETH EDWIN
Lifestyle Writer

Often brothers and sisters live in the same house, but beyond that neither the two shall meet. This is not the case with the brother/sister team of Adam and Sarah Vaughan. They both enjoy snow skiing, music and cooking.

"They go skiing about 10 or 12 times every year," said Lucille Vaughan, their mother. "They love it."

These two also enjoy watching MTV together and topping their list of favorites are Miami Sound Machine, Whitney Houston and Huey Lewis and the News. Their musical interest goes beyond watching the stars, though. Each creates some music of their own on the family piano.

"We have to practice 30 minutes a day, five days a week during school, but in the summer we only have to practice three times a week," Adam said.

Adam, a 10-year-old sixth grader at Fannin Elementary, has been playing the piano for two years and lists Beethoven and Bach as his favorite composers. Sarah is 8-years-old and is a fourth grader at Fannin. She has been playing the piano for a year.

Besides music, Adam also is involved with the Boy Scouts and has recently returned from the Boy Scout summer camp. Adam said he likes science and would like to be a geophysicist when he grows up.

Sarah enjoys gymnastics and has been a student at Midland School of Gymnastics for the past year.

"The trampoline is my favorite," Sarah said.

Both Adam and Sarah are enjoying their summer vacation from school, spending most of their time swimming. The highlight of their summer will be an upcoming family trip to Houston.

"We're driving to Houston sometime in July to see the Olympic tryouts. These are the people trying out for the 1988 Olympic team," Adam said. "We are going to stay with some friends and they got us the tickets."

The Houston friends are the McFarland's and "they are as close to us as family," Mrs. Vaughan said.

In fact, Adam's favorite meal to prepare is Renee McFarland's recipe for Enchilada Casserole.

"I like to cook," Adam said. "I like to make enchilada casseroles. Really I like any kind of Mexican food."

Sarah Vaughan

Adam said his mother taught him how to cook and he prepares the casserole almost single-handedly.

Sarah, on the other hand, said both her mother and her brother have helped her learn to cook.

"Sarah does real well. They both do," Mrs. Vaughan said as she watched her children prepare dinner for the family.

Right now, Adam has a little easier time around the kitchen. Sarah hasn't quite grown tall enough to reach everything.

After climbing on cabinets to reach bowls and standing on tiptoe to read the recipe and add the ingredients, Sarah is ready for mom to help her place the crust for the Lemon Squares in the oven.

"Sarah made them (the Lemon Squares) for me to take to a party that I was supposed to bring a dessert to," Mrs. Vaughan said.

The following recipes are among Adam's and Sarah's favorites.

RENEE'S ENCHILADA CASSEROLE

1 pound ground beef, seasoned
1 small can evaporated milk
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 can enchilada sauce (or make your own; a recipe follows)
6 corn tortillas
½ to 1 cup grated cheese

Brown ground beef with seasoning, chili powder, salt and pepper, minced onions). Dip tortillas in hot grease until limp; drain and tear into bite-size pieces. Add all ingredients together and bake at 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes. Stir once while cooking.

ENCHILADA SAUCE

1 can tomato sauce
2 cans water
3 tablespoons cooking oil
1½ tablespoons chili powder
2 tablespoons flour
pinch of sugar

Combined all ingredients and bring to a boil, then cover and cook 10 minutes longer.

LEMON SQUARES

1 cup flour
½ cup butter or margarine, softened
¼ cup confectioner's sugar
2 eggs
1 cup granulated sugar
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Mix throughly flour, butter and confectioner's sugar. Press in bottom of ungreased pan. Bake 20 minutes.

Beat remaining ingredients three minutes or until light and fluffy. Pour over baked crust. Return to oven and bake 25 minutes longer. Cool and cut into squares.

Honey Granola Bars made with either raisins or chocolate pieces

Associated Press

HONEY GRANOLA BARS

1 cup granola
⅓ cup raisins or semisweet chocolate pieces
1 cup quick-cooking rolled oats
⅓ cup all-purpose flour
⅓ cup flaked coconut
⅓ cup chopped almonds
¼ cup toasted wheat germ
¼ cup packed brown sugar
1 slightly beaten egg
⅓ cup honey
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla

In a large bowl combine granola, oats, flour, coconut, almonds, raisins or chocolate pieces, wheat germ and brown sugar. In a small bowl combine egg, honey, butter and vanilla; add to dry mixture, stirring until all is moistened. Spread evenly in a greased 12 by 7½ by 2-inch baking pan. Bake in a 325-degree oven for 30-35 minutes or until light brown on edges. Cool completely in pan. To serve, cut into bars. Makes 24.

BUG?

When cooking outdoors, are you "bugged" by the mess of charcoal, or the hassle of LP tanks, and the bother of bugs? Now's the time to move up to a clean, always-ready gas grill and get an electric bug zapper free!

Buy Now and get a FREE Bug Killer

Buy a new Ducane or Preway gas grill before August 1, 1986, and get a Charmglow Rid-O-Ray bug killer, a $149.95 value, free!

The Rid-O-Ray zaps bugs dead, instantly and safely, to make your outdoor activities more enjoyable. The lantern-style black light lamp lures bugs to an electric grid and sparks them dead. Model 10W256 operates on standard 110 volt household current for pennies a day, and you can install it yourself in minutes.

Ducane cast-aluminum grills feature top-ported aluminized-steel burners, which last longer and save gas, and a unique coal grate designed to prevent flare-ups. Some models have Rotis-A-Grate, a separate vertical burner for cooking from behind the meat, and porcelainized-steel cooking grids.

DEAR ABBY

Therapist may be woman's pain in the neck

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 50-year-old woman who has never married. I am still a virgin, but I am not obsessed by the fact. (What I've never had, I don't miss.)

In the last 30 years I have been to many psychiatrists, psychologists and several chiropractors. (I got more help from the chiropractors, but the relief was only temporary.)

The problem has been a chronic pain in my neck, and every medical doctor I saw tried to tell me it was all in my head. Last week I went to yet another therapist who told me that the pain in my neck would disappear overnight if I would just hop into bed with a man — any man — regardless of whether I had any kind of feelings for him or not. I protested, saying I could not hop into bed with a man unless I had some loving feelings for him. He said I was being childish, that sex is normal — then he volunteered to be my "first."

I said, "No, I couldn't go to bed with a man unless I loved him. To do otherwise would be immoral, and I pride myself on being a moral person."

Am I wrong? Please answer soon. I want to show your answer to my therapist. — NORMAL IN VIRGINIA

DEAR NORMAL: I agree with you. Show this to your therapist. Suggesting that you hop into bed with just any man is bad enough, but volunteering his services is a violation of professional ethics. Find another therapist. Your therapist needs a therapist.

DEAR ABBY: My problem concerns my nephew who has just graduated from high school and also has a birthday coming soon. I would like to give him a sizable cash gift for both his birthday and graduation, but I know that he is heavily involved in drugs (both using and dealing) and I fear the money will be used for drugs.

I considered opening a savings account for him, but if he found out about it, he would never let his mother rest until she gave him the money.

He has just begun counseling. Perhaps the money should go toward that, but I'm afraid if he found out he'd quit counseling. Material things are out of the question — he says he doesn't want anything!

We are well-off financially; we love him very much and are not ready to give up on him. — CONCERNED AUNT

DEAR CONCERNED: Send cards for his graduation and birthday, and after he has conquered his drug problem, then consider presenting him with a material gift. Do not open a savings account in his name knowing that if he learns of it, he will nag his mother until she hands it over. And do not give him any money. If he receives a sizable cash gift he might be tempted to blow it.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since you printed the letter about the state of Delaware ("Dela-where?") in your column, I have been trying to recall the words to a song I used to know years ago.

It went something like this: "What did Dela wear, boys? What did Dela wear? She wore a New Jersey, she wore a New Jersey," etc.

Can you or any of your readers come up with the rest of the lyrics? — G.L. IN SLIDELL, LA.

DEAR G.L.: I can't. But I'll bet somebody out there will. Watch this space.

CONFIDENTIAL TO FRAN SCHAFFEE IN CARY, ILL.: Your sister (the one who insists that I make up everything that appears in my column) is only half right. I "make up" all the answers; my readers provide the problems.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Pizza barbecued

CHICAGO (UPI) — There's nothing like chicken or ribs cooked outside on the barbecue, but have you ever tried to barbecue a pizza? Pizza-maker John Geocaris has and he says it's great.

Geocaris, the president of Chicago's Bravo! Pizzas, says pizza cooked on a grill develops a pleasingly smoky flavor without losing its basic pizza taste.

The secret is to watch it closely so the crust doesn't burn.

If yours is a gas grill, Bravo company test cooks advise a medium setting. Spread one layer of heavy aluminum foil on the grilling surace with the shiny side down. Put the pizza on the foil, close the grill cover and bake for 15 to 20 minutes.

On a kettle style or open top grill, preheat the coals until they're hot and spread the charcoal around the edge of the grill so they're not directly under the pizza area. Spread foil over the grilling surface, same as with a gas grill, and place the pizza on the foil. Close the lid on the kettle or make a foil tent on an open grill to cover the pizza. Bake until the pizza is golden brown.

THE BUTCHER

Chicken cookouts sizzle

By MERLE ELLIS

Even with beef prices as low as they have been in a long time, it's likely to be chicken that sizzles on most barbecue grills this season. That's understandable! There is no more versatile meat in the world than chicken, and chicken is cheap — if you buy it right. If you're one of those paying a premium for boneless chicken breasts or those cute little boneless nuggets they've come out with, you have to know that you could easily be eating steak for less. If you buy chickens whole, they are the best buy in the meatcase.

For grilling, chickens split or quartered work far and away the best. And you don't have to pay the butcher a premium to do it for you. It's a snap to do it yourself. Not only do you do it better, but you get all of the goodies in those little packages that come inside the whole bird. The butcher keeps those if he splits your chicken. Also, when he does it he simply zips it through the electric meat saw and leaves the backbone and breastbone in the bird. When you do it with your boning knife you can easily remove those bones so that the bird will lie flat on the grill and cook more uniformly.

To split a fryer, first remove the package of giblets. Save those for the soup stock or feed 'em to the cat. Hold the bird firmly by the legs with the back toward you and the breast on the cutting board. With your boning knife make a cut from one side of the tail straight down along one side of the backbone to the neck. Do the same on the other side and lift out the narrow strip of backbone. Next, cut through the piece of white cartilage at the front of the breast bone so that you can pop the bone up and pull it out. The bird is ready now, if you like, to be grilled whole. To split into halves simply cut along the line where the breast bone came out. To make your quarters, simply cut each half in half again following the natural contour of the breast.

Chicken grills best over moderate heat. You should be able to hold the palm of your hand a few inches over the coals for three or four seconds; any less and the coals are too hot.

I like to start chicken on the grill with the skin side down for the first few minutes of cooking in order to get a nice color and pretty grill marks on the skin. After the first three or four minutes, I turn the chicken at a 90-degree angle, still with the skin side down, to achieve an attractive crisscross grill pattern.

After about 10 minutes total time on the skin side, turn the chicken and finish cooking skin side up. A 3- to 3½-pound chicken flattened, split or quartered will take approximately 25-35 minutes to grill in a covered cooker, a bit longer on an open grill. They are done when the juices run yellow when pierced with a fork.

Here is a recipe for a delicious "Deviled Chicken" from a marvelous new book on grilling called, appropriately, "The Grilling Book" by A. Cort Sinnes with recipes by Jay Harlow and published by Aris Books.

DEVILED CHICKEN

Juice of one lemon
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
3 or 4 dashes Tabasco sauce
1 chicken flattened, split or quartered

Combine all ingredients except chicken in a large bowl. Let mixture sit a few minutes to allow flavors to combine. Taste and correct seasoning. Rub mixture over chicken about 30 minutes before grilling.

Build moderate fire in covered or open grill. When fire settles down to glowing stage, start chicken on skin side. Turn after 10 minutes and continue cooking from bone side until juices run yellow when chicken is pierced with a fork or skewer near joint, about 25 to 35 minutes total cooking time. Baste frequently with excess marinade while grilling.

LEMON BUTTER MARINADE

¼ cup fresh lemon juice
1 small onion, grated
2 or 3 cloves garlic, minced
½ teaspoon celery salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon each dried rosemary, thyme and marjoram

Combine all ingredients. Use to marinate chicken for an hour or so before grilling. Heat sauce and use to baste during grilling. Makes about 1 cup.

American women's eating habits studied

NEW YORK (UPI) — A woman's place is no longer in the kitchen, according to a national study which found that women are spending less time preparing meals and are eating out more.

"Women and Food," a study of 2,077 adult women commissioned by The Conde Nast Publications, also revealed that one-third of the female population is part of the phenomenon called "grazing," or eating "only when hungry."

However, even though their eating habits have changed, 72 percent of the women reported that they like to cook, but only one in 50 considered herself a gourmet cook.

New cooking trends emerging among American women appear to be health and convenience oriented. According to the survey results, frying is out (56 percent say they are frying less than three years ago), broiling is in (31 percent are broiling more) and baking has remained constant. Eighty percent are eating out more or the same amount as three years ago.

Microwaves are very in: 80 percent of all the respondents who have microwaves say they use them for cooking and 25 percent use them for baking.

Almost three-quarters of the women said taste is at least three times more important than price in selecting food products. The same proportion said they skip meals, usually breakfast or lunch.

U.S. women spend an average of 53 minutes preparing a typical meal, which represents a reduction for nearly half the sample. Still, almost three-quarters of the women reported they do all the cooking in the house themselves, although they felt that other members of the household are doing more than they did three years ago.

Workshop weapon in war against drugs

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Kristy Rains, a Midland eighth-grader, painted a grim picture of the drug problems at her junior high school.

"I see kids who come to school on sleeping pills," said Kristy, who attends Alamo Junior High School. "They don't take them to go to sleep...just to feel good and impress other kids who might call them mean names if they don't take drugs.

"I think they're troublemakers and doing it for the attention."

She was participating Tuesday in a Chemical Abuse Workshop, one effort by the Midland Independent School District to win its war against drugs.

The workshop, which ends today, included an estimated 40 junior and senior high students and teachers.

The workshop will cost about $3,000, an official said. It will be funded by Clearview Hospital, the Downtown Lions Club, the Council Against Substance Abuse and Neighbors Against Burglaries and Crime.

Miss Rains is a member of her school's PUSH organization (Prevention Using Students' Help).

She said if she is offered cigarettes or drugs at school — which she contends has happened in the girls' restroom — she said she tells them she "knows better."

The program presented ideas on education, treatment and prevention of chemical substance abuse.

The program, given by a Minnesota-based substance abuse institute, explained the insidious manner drugs infiltrate a student's "social system," which includes his family, friends, teachers, job and extracurricular activities.

David Zarek, program consultant for the institute, said:

"Developing a drug problem is a lot like falling in love. You begin to balance your life around it, spending more time, money and energy on it, but then you can't get out.

"You've come to psychologically crave the reward you received from this object of your love."

Zarek said this is a chemical society.

"We've been taught we need chemical help to handle grief, stress, getting up in the morning or going to sleep at night. We facilitate our socialization process with chemicals as well," he said.

Drug abuse can begin with nothing more than experimentation at after-school parties, said Mary Ellen Harris, another institute consultant.

She said a child's first introduction to alcohol or marijuana will usually occur in the seventh or eighth grade.

"The first stage is experiementation. It is a new dimension in their lives and their tolerance is low.

"They get drunk on one-half a beer or a puff off a joint."

A problem will form when students actively begin seeking that mood swing, she said.

"The kids will only go to parties, for instance, when they know drugs will be there.

"They can still control the frequency of their use, but it's important to ask here, 'why are they feeling the need to medicate their feelings?' " she added.

The third phase evolves when the students have developed a dependent lifestyle, Ms. Harris said.

"Drug abuse becomes their No. 1 priority. They blame all the problems created by drugs on their social system.

"And no matter how a mom will try, at this point, she can't win with kindness, whether it's in the form of a favorite dinner or offers of counseling," she said.

Ms. Harris said the key is catching them before their social system has closed up around them — old friends have left them, grades have fallen, they've been kicked off the football team or fired from their job.

The workshop strengthens the "Intervention" campaign begun by MISD last March.

The campaign also includes in-house support groups.

Inside the schools, "core teams" — volunteer teachers, staff, counselors, administrators and abuse counselors — assess students' chemical dependencies and attempt to provide support for them once their problem is being treated.

"The community and school district were aware of the drug problem in Midland junior and high schools, which is a little higher than the national average," Pat Cobb, an MISD drug abuse counselor, said.

No statistics were given, but she attributed the claim to the regional isolation, surplus of money due to higher incomes and drug availability.

Lee High School football coach Earl Miller said he hopes the children will begin to understand that drugs are a problem that can happen to them and not just "the other people."

Council to remove traffic signs at 25 intersections

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

A Midland neighborhood has too many stop and yield signs — and the city is going to take them down.

The move is the first in culling all unneeded stop and yield signs in the entire city, said Public Works Director Fred Baker.

It comes after a recommendation from the city's traffic engineer, Baker said.

The City Council approved the move Tuesday; removal of the signs will begin next week.

Deputy City Manager Fred Poe also was formally approved as the next city manager effective next year.

City Manager James Brown announced last week he would retire Jan. 31, 1987.

Other items approved were a smoking ban at designated areas of the Midland Regional Airport, and the final approval of a nuisance water ordinance.

The primary reasons for the traffic sign removals are to save money for the city and to streamline traffic, Baker said.

"It will reduce the delay to the public," said Baker, noting it will also ease wear-and-tear on vehicles traveling in the area.

On intersections left without stop or yield signs, a large white dot will be painted on the streets to help caution drivers, Baker said.

The study by the engineer examined 61 residential intersections in the area between Wall, Front, Garfield and "A" streets.

The study involved the computation of traffic flow on the various streets.

Of those 61, 25 intersections will be left without stop or yield signs. No major streets will be affected by the change, Baker said.

"Historically, we have found in intersections with no signs, a driver is more cautious in determining whether he has a clean right-of-way to see if he can proceed," Baker said.

Baker said the city will use the signs in other areas of the city.

He said his department also plans to study the rest of Midland to see where signs can be removed.

By removing the signs, the city saves upkeep costs, Baker said.

Poe, 59, was unanimously approved to succeed Brown.

Fishing to be outlawed at park's pond

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

The fish and the ducks at the Wadley Barron Park got some help Tuesday from City Hall.

But the fishermen are apparently out of luck.

After hearing about problems ranging from littering to duck abuse, the City Council amended an ordinance on first reading to outlaw fishing at the park's pond.

The issue now must come up for a routine second reading. If approved, the ordinance may begin by August.

The problem surfaced a year ago, officials said, when the city began receiving complaints from near-by residents.

MISD board adopts policy for cutting district's workforce

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland school board members Tuesday adopted a policy for reducing the district's workforce even though they believe it probably won't be needed.

The policy, approved on first reading, would reduce the district's workforce when the board determines it cannot meet its contractual obiligation to employees during the school year.

The decline could be spurred by funding cuts, declining enrollment, tax revenue reductions or any other area that would create a need to reduce funding for personnel.

Trustees and administrators believe it is extremely unlikely that a reduction in force would ever become an issue in Midland, but the Texas Association of School Boards recommends all boards create such a policy.

"I view the RIF policy as a nonissue," Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi said.

"There is absolutely no reason to suspect that the policy will ever be needed. In fact there's every indication that more staff will be needed this fall because of a projected increase in enrollment," he said.

The reduction in force would be implemented on a districtwide basis — rather than by school.

The superintendent would submit to the board a recommendation for dismissing specific certified employees after reviewing each on the basis of certification, performance, professional background and seniority.

After considering the superintent's recommendation, the board would determine which employees to dismiss.

The employee then would be given a list of the reasons and conditions for dismissal and would, upon request, be granted a hearing.

In other action, the board implemented cost-saving measures by discontinuing educational grants to teachers and adjusting the annual sick leave rebate and retirement sick leave rebate.

The sick leave rebate reimburses employees who complete the year with more than 30 days of accrued sick leave with the current substitute rate or a portion of the rate.

The retirement sick leave rebate reimburses an employee who completes 10 years of service with the district.

Employees with 30 or more years of service will receive full pay up to 30 days under the revision, while employees with 20 to 29 years and 10 to 19 years will receive two-thirds pay and one-third pay respectively.

The board also adopted a policy that would reimburse trustees for travel expenses from board-related workshops, conferences and meetings.

The allowance would pay for necessary travel expenses including transportation, lodging, meals, registration fees and gratuities.

All expenses will be funded from a budget account designated for Board of Trustees — Travel and Subsistance.

Council plans $5 million in budget cuts

From Staff Reports

The City Council has met citizens' demand to "tighten their belts" with its proposed $57 million budget, said Mayor Carroll Thomas Tuesday.

"I am very pleased with the result. We've shown a responsiveness to the local economy and citizens' desires that we tighten our belts and reduce expenses," Thomas said.

The budget for the current year is about $62 million.

Reduced personnel and salary reductions make up the majority of a proposed $5 million cut from the city's 1986 budget, Thomas said.

The council presented a summary of its budget after concluding hearings Tuesday afternoon.

About $1.5 million in cuts will be made through salary reductions and by cutting 66 positions, he said. Only about 12 of the 66 positions targeted for elimination are filled, Thomas said.

"We don't expect to terminate more than a dozen," he said.

The council proposed reducing salaries 2 percent for those receiving less than $35,000 per year and 5 percent for those receiving more than $35,000.

"Nobody would like to have their salary reduced, but everybody realizes that these are difficult times for everyone. We are pleased that we didn't have to reduce it any further," Thomas said.

Time may be running out for Gramm-Rudman

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — When Congress returns to work next Monday after a two week July 4 holiday, the question of how to repair the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law will be uppermost in members' minds in the aftermath of Monday's U.S. Supreme Court's ruling that a key part of it is unconstitutional.

Time is running out in the remaining weeks of this congressional year and political pressures will be strong both to take decisive action to cut the deficit, now running close to $200 billion a year, and to protect cherished domestic programs and the military buildup.

Gramm-Rudman-Hollings was enacted to make automatic, across-the-board cuts in government spending if Congress is unwilling or unable to bring the deficit under control through convention legislative means, i.e., through spending cuts or tax increases or both.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, primary author of the plan to put the brakes on soaring federal deficits, is confident that Congress will remedy the flaw found by the court in the trigger for automatic spending cuts. The court struck down the provision that gave the comptroller general, who can be "fired" by Congress, executive power to order cuts, thus encroaching on the president's domain.

Gramm will try to amend the 1921 law by deleting Congress' ability to remove the comptroller general from his 15-year term. He will meet strong resistance from some members, including Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, who don't want to give up authority over the General Accounting Office, headed by the comptroller general.

Several members welcomed the opportunity to embrace the "fall back" process written in the law, to be used if the automatic procedure was found to be unconstitutional. Under the alternative process, the Office of Management and Budget and the Congressional Budget Office would estimate the 1987 fiscal deficit on Aug. 20 and their report would be forwarded to a joint congressional committee. The committee would report the CBO-OMB document as a joint resolution to both chambers within five days and without amendments. Each chamber would then schedule a vote on the resolution within five days after receiving it. If approved, the resolution would go to the president who would have 10 days to sign it.

"This Supreme Court decision ensures that the power of the purse will remain with Congress and not be delegated to the comptroller general," said Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, one of 11 congressmen who joined with Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., in bringing the legal challenge to the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law.

Reaction to the court's decision was uniformly in favor of living up to Gramm-Rudman-Hollings' commitment to take the medicine necessary to reduce the deficit to zero in phased steps by 1991.

The new deficit reducing law, enacted last December, already took one modest bite out of government spending last March, a 4.3 percent reduction in most programs that cost Texas approximately $50 million. When Congress returns, the first item on the agenda will be to ratify those cuts, a task Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee, says will be dfficult. "I'm not terribly upbeat, but we'll try," Domenici said.

Deciding how much the federal government should spend takes an enormous amount of congressional time and energy. The just-finished fiscal 1987 budget resolution is one large piece of a mosaic of fiscal decisions that Congress makes. Next comes the job of meeting the targets set out in the budget resolution. After that comes budget reconciliation, legislation to trim authorizations that don't fit under the ceilings, appropriations, and a request from the president to raise the limit on the national debt.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings act sets the limit on fiscal 1987's deficit at $144 billion, down from roughly $200 billion this year. Congress could avoid mandatory, across-the-board cuts envisioned in the law if it could hold the deficit below $144 billion, and the budget resolution approved June 26 shows a deficit just slightly under the limit, $142.6 billion.

The deficit estimate, however, was based on a variety of now-outdated economic indicators. For example, economic growth has been less robust than expected at the beginning of the budget cycle and that translates into lower revenues and a higher deficit.

In addition, some private economists have issued new warnings that the strict demands of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings, together with the roller-coaster impact of anticipated tax overhaul legislation, could further slow a weakening economy and cause the deficit to grow.

Appropriations committees have placed their spending bills on hold while waiting for the Supreme Court's decision. A three-judge lower court earlier had ruled Gramm-Rudman-Hollings to be unconstitutional, and the Supreme Court upheld that finding, so the decision was not a surprise.

Following are some of the major deadlines facing Congress:

By July 25, congressional committees must send to the House and Senate Budget committees their recommendations for "reconciliation" legislation to make some of the savings assumed in the budget resolution. The balance must come via the appropriations process and changes in other laws.

On Aug. 1, the government will bump up against the federal debt ceiling and Congress will have to raise it if the governmment continues to issue checks.

Aug. 15, the day Congress is scheduled to leave town for a summer recess and campaigning, is also the day set for the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings "snapshot" of the economy that is to be the basis of mandated across-the-board cuts to meet the law's deficit-reduction targets.

On Sept. 2, under the automatic procedure (if the law can be re-worked to make it legal), the president must issue the CBO-OMB-GAO report as a preliminary "sequester" order, making the required spending cuts.

By Oct. 1, the first day of the 1987 fiscal year, all regular appropriations bills are supposed be enacted, but Congress rarely meets this deadline.

Business turning sour for some dairy farmers

AP Laserphoto

Charles Mitchell attaches a milking machine to a dairy cow. The Pecos dairyman opens his operation in 1956, and 31 years later, he is not sure he'd do it again.

By TIM ROCHE

PECOS (AP) — The white-spotted dairy cow obviously had sensed the uneasiness of the city slicker even before his perspiring hands grasped her teats in an attempt to milk her.

But the 1,400-pound Holstein heifer soon was comforted by the caressing words of her owner and the familar feeling of a mechanical milker.

The visitor watched with widened eyes as Pecos dairyman Charles Mitchell connected four rubber-lined suction cups to the cow's udder — another round in 31 years of twice-daily milking on the largest dairy farm in West Texas.

Life on the farm, however, has changed somewhat since the depressed 1930s, when a maturing Mitchell hand-milked cows by the light of a kerosene lantern.

And, consequently, Mitchell said he's not sure whether he would do it all over again.

"When you come to work day after day and lose money year after year, it's hard to have any enthusiasm for the business," the 60-year-old Pecos dairy farmer said. "If I could go back and see what all was going to happen, I'm sure I would do something different from being a dairy farmer.

"Don't get me wrong, I'm not crying over spilled milk. This business has been good to me, but it has also been a headache," Mitchell said as he peered through the window of his farm's small headquarters.

"With so many years in the business and at my age, I don't have much left here. And right now, there's not too much money to be made in the dairy business. So, I decided it couldn't hurt to try (Dairy Termination Program)...My dairy is surviving solely on its equity — and that's all."

— Charles Mitchell

When his Reeves County business — Trans Pecos Dairy Inc. — opened Feb. 1, 1956, Mitchell said, he never imagined that the federal government would create an elaborate plan to reduce America's milk production.

But 31 years later, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has done just that.

The Dairy Termination Program, implemented last December by President Reagan, provides farmers with an incentive to dispose of their dairy cattle and cease milk production, said Susan Schneider, a program specialist with the federal agriculture department.

The government agreed to pay $1.8 billion to 13,988 dairymen in the nation, including 376 Texas farmers, who opted to end their careers in what they say is a dying business.

"There is too much milk in this country and something has to be done to curb the problem," the USDA specialist said from Washington. "Because of this, we have contracted with producers to reduce 12 billion pounds of milk."

Mitchell said many dairy farmers have sided with the dairy program but don't necessarily agree with it. "I'm sure many dairymen got into it because their bankers were pushing them," he said.

Mitchell admitted that he was among more than 270 other Texans who unsuccessfully applied to the program. He said the decision to try to leave the only career he has known since college was not made easily.

"With so many years in the business and at my age, I don't have much left here. And right now, there's not too much money to be made in the dairy business," Mitchell said. "So, I decided it couldn't hurt to try."

"My dairy is surviving solely on its equity — and that's all," he added.

Clad in a western shirt, blue jeans and dusty cowboy boots, Mitchell pointed out the window of his tan-colored pickup to his grazing cattle and described how the milk business has gone sour for many dairymen.

"The costs are more than what we're taking in," he said in a familiar Texas drawl. "There's just too much milk and not enough need."

Mitchell said that 60 percent of his revenues — which are earned through the estimated $1.03 he receives per gallon of raw milk sold to a milk producer's co-op group — are spent for cattle feed, while about 14 percent are used for salaries.

Although costs of milk remain relatively high in supermarkets and restaurants , Mitchell said the amount he receives for his production has decreased drastically.

But, he insists, the milk machines must continue to pump because his bills continue to rise as surely as the sun.

Mitchell said he once had hopes of buying out his partner's share in the Pecos dairy business and turning over the business to the only person who has shown any interest at all — his son, 30-year-old Greg Mitchell.

Use of tobacco products banned at Fort Hood buildings

FORT HOOD (AP) — The use of all tobacco products, including smokeless tobacco, has been banned in most indoor areas and all Army vehicles at Fort Hood, an Army spokesman said.

The prohibition, which goes a step beyond Department of the Army guidelines announced in June, affects dependents and civilians as well as military personnel, said Maj. George Creach of Fort Hood's public affairs office.

The policy became effective late Monday with the release of a policy letter by III Corps and Fort Hood Commanding General Crosbie E. Saint.

Each of the fort's buildings now will have designated smoking areas, while tobacco will be banned from most areas.

Saint's directive prohibits tobacco in "common use areas" such as auditoriums, conference rooms, classrooms, restrooms, gymnasiums and all Army-owned or -leased vehicles. Tobacco use in dining areas is prohibited unless separate rooms are provided for tobacco use, the directive said.

The Army-wide guidelines, which were intended primarily to severely limit smoking in Army facilities, were supplemented recently by the Forces Command (FORSCOM) Headquarters in Fort McPherson, Ga., to limit the usage of all tobacco.

FORSCOM units, the Army's combat units in the U.S. and Panama, were directed by FORSCOM headquarters July 2 to implement the stricter policies.

Creach said Tuesday that while the new rules may not be easy for some to accept, the rule will be enforced.

"It is the responsibility of the commanders and senior supervisors of each building and facility to enforce it," he said. "For military folks, what you're doing is giving them an order. If they violate it they're in violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice."

Enforcement of the rules for civilians could be more difficult. Civilian employees on post are divided into two groups — "bargaining units" and "non-bargaining units" — and can be dealt with according to which group they are in.

Non-bargaining units, Creach said, are primarily senior employees, supervisors and managers, and interns of the civil service. There are "steps that can be taken" should such employees refuse to comply with the directives, although they are time-consuming, Creach said.

Bargaining units are "normal, everyday employees...anyone who could join the union," Creach said.

The American Federation of Government Employees, is the civil servant's union.

Officials at both Fort Bliss, Texas, and Fort Sill, Okla., said those posts will follow DA guidelines only. A Public Affairs official at Bliss said that post had considered limiting the use of smokeless tobacco as well, but decided against it.

Fort Sill public information official Sheila Samples said the Oklahoma post followed DA guidelines as well. "We haven't deviated from that," she said, adding that Sill officials hadn't "addressed smokeless tobacco at all."

White receives 'invitation' to become Republican

AUSTIN (AP) — President Reagan's "personal invitation" notwithstanding, Gov. Mark White says he'll remain a Democrat.

Aides Tuesday distributed copies of a fund-raising mailing from the Republican National Committee that was sent to the governor's mansion in Austin.

It included the invitation from President Reagan to become a sustaining member of the GOP and to contribute money to the party. The invitation asked for donations of from $15 to $500 or more and urged recipients to help "in laying the foundation for a Republican victory in 1986."

White, who's seeking re-election against Republican Bill Clements, said thanks but no thanks.

In a letter to GOP National Chairman Frank Farenkopf Jr., White said Reagan hasn't been much help to Texas.

"The Republican administration in Washington has failed to respond to the crisis in this country brought about by falling oil prices caused by Saudi Arabia," the governor wrote.

Since the oil price plunge started last winter, White has urged Reagan to impose a tariff on imported oil. He says failure to impose the tariff is making the nation once again dangerously dependent on foreign oil supplies.

"The administration's failure to respond to this crisis is crippling the oil industry in Texas and has put thousands of Texans out of work," White told Farenkopf.

The invitation White received said sustaining membership in the Republican Party meant White would be invited to participate in an annual membership survey, consulted on major issues, eligible for special reports on 1986 campaigns and candidates and "asked to take part in grass roots efforts to help the president pass his programs through Congress."

The governor also was told that if he contributed $25 or more, he would "receive the behind-the-scenes, political news magazine" published by the Republican National Committee.

"Thank you again for your consideration," White replied, "but I will be working with the Democratic Party in laying the foundations for Democratic victories."

Midland man reports burglaries of two vehicles

From Staff Reports

The Midland Sheriff's Department today reported the burglary of an undetermined number of items from several vehicles.

John Sommer, 1701 Harvard, told authorities a 1980 Cadillac Seville, a 1980 International Transtar, and a 1972 Volvo were burglarized while parked at a business at 1806 Cloverdale Road. The value of the items was not reported.

The burglary of a table valued at $150 was reported. Raymond Blevins said the antique oak table was taken from a residence on County Road 1135, south of Loop 250. Entry was apparently gained through a west door.

The Midland Police Department reportedly have a suspect in the burglary late Monday of $300 cash from a residence. The burglary, which occurred at 406 W. Estes No. A between 9:20 and 9:45 p.m., was reported to police by Willie Goudeau and Greta Gill. The suspect, a 26-year-old, was named in the report.

Mattox thinks Anti-sodomy law won't be enforced

AUSTIN (AP) — Although the U.S. Supreme Court has upheld Texas' anti-sodomy statute, law enforcement officials probably will not actively enforce the ban, says Attorney General Jim Mattox.

He said Tuesday that there never has been a sodomy prosecution under that law.

"I don't think we're going to use the resources of the state in actual prosecution," Mattox said.

The high court on Monday upheld a lower appeals court ruling that kept the anti-sodomy law on the books. The law makes it a misdemeanor offense for persons of the same sex to engage in specified sex acts.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer of Dallas had ruled the law was unconstitutional. Mattox decided not to appeal on behalf of the state.

FISHING

Complaints mounted, leading to Tuesday's decision. A violation of the ordinance could result in up to a $200 fine.

Officials say the fishermen go to the pond, hoping to land catfish, bass and carp.

But some of their casts have gone awry.

Officials said one time some children reportedly were trying to catch a duck with a treble hook.

Then, about two months ago, a toddler was nearly hooked by an errant cast, said George Logan, city director of community service.

"It was a close call," Logan said. "A fisherman was casting and came within a foot to 18 inches of hitting the child."

Other problems cited in the City Council meeting included littering and what Logan described as "outlaw" fishing — fishing without a legal permit.

The decision came a year after some residents tried to increase the number of fishermen at the pond.

The residents asked the Parks and Recreation Commission to increase the number of permits issued.

The Commission denied the request, Logan said.

Since fishing has been allowed at the pond, some 100 permits have been issued, Logan said.

"Usually we have a line of five or six people at the first of the month asking for permits," he said.

Logan said the pond originally was not stocked for fishing.

"We did it for lake management. There are other private lakes available for the fishermen."

SIGNS

"I express my appreciation in your confidence," Poe told city council members. "I hope I can continue to do the best job I know how to do."

Poe, a 28-year City Hall veteran, now oversees the city's budget and is in charge of a myriad of other departments such as utilities and the city's fleet services.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said the council did not hesitate when picking Brown's replacement.

"We have a lot of confidence in you," Thomas told Poe. "We appreciate your talents."

The council applauded after Poe's approval.

When Poe becomes City Manager, he will select a person to fill the Deputy City Manager post.

Some officials have said Mike McGregor, assistant city manager, is probably the front-runner for the job.

When the Deputy City Manager post is filled, Brown said the city plans to leave the assistant city manager post open.

Counselors report calls increase since cocaine-related deaths

DALLAS (AP) — The cocaine-related deaths of athletes Len Bias and Don Rogers have scared users of the drug, but not made a big dent in the volume of narcotics traffic, some state law enforcement officials say.

"Our work has not slowed down," said Lt. David Davis of the Dallas Police Department's vice division.

"We've noticed a tremendous increase in use in the last year," said Lt. Pete Taylor, head of the Austin Police Department's narcotics detail. "...I don't see a shortage of it."

Davis said the athletes' deaths have, however, increased awareness of cocaine's lethal potential, and drug counselors report an increase in telephone calls from cocaine users.

Tracie Pogue, spokeswoman for the Dallas Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, said calls increased by about a third after the June 19 death of Bias, the No. 2 pick in the NBA draft, and the June 27 death of Rogers, a defensive back for the Cleveland Browns.

"It made them think of things they had never thought of before. Cocaine is funny that way. You can take a certain amount of it one time and be all right and take it again at another time in your life and you can die," Ms. Pogue said.

At the Cocaine Center, affiliated with Brookhaven Psychiatric Pavilion in Dallas, Dr. Larrie Arnold said college-age users and their parents began calling after the publicity over the athlete deaths.

Ms. Arnold, who is head of the center, said about 50 people were treated last year for cocaine dependence and that more than 20 people have been treated so far this year.

The biggest impact of the athletes' deaths is that both appeared to be in good health, she said.

"I think it has had an impression on these young healthy college kids. I think they just sort of thought it was a fun thing they could do and they just didn't think they could die," said Ms. Arnold, who is a psychiatrist and a psychoanalyst.

At a national treatment and referral center, the hotline 1-800-CO-CAINE, calls increased from about 1,200 per day to 2,200 per day, said spokeswoman Lisa Bensen.

The hotline is run by Fair Oaks Hospital in New Jersey. After the two athletes died, people calling in said they were frightened and asked what dosages of the drug are lethal, she said.

At Drug Recovery, a rehabilitation center in Dallas, calls and admissions have doubled since the deaths, said assistant manager Richard Nash.

Davis said police are now weighing in seizures by the kilos, while a year ago they were still weighing seizures by the gram. He said the growth in amounts seized is due mostly to more cocaine flowing through the area.

In May, the last month for which figures are available, the drug abuse division seized more than two kilos of cocaine, he said.

Perot says he will fight legislative efforts to cut education reforms

AUSTIN (AP) — Dallas computer magnate H. Ross Perot says he will fight any legislative effort to cut back recent education improvements to lower the state budget deficit.

Perot said Tuesday he will be "working actively" to defend the education improvements when the Legislature meets in special session this summer to explore ways to cut the state's projected $2.3 billion deficit.

He said if lawmakers want to economize in public school funding, they should slice "junk" in athletic programs and vocational education.

"If you've got to cut, then cut in the right places," he said. "We're throwing money out the window on vocational education. We don't need any more Astroturf. We don't need to pay coaches more than the median salary of teachers.

"We can't get our priorities screwed around," said Perot. "There's a lot of soft stuff they can cut out."

Several lawmakers have mentioned the possibility of cutting back some of the reforms Perot helped push through the 1984 Legislature.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said Monday the House may consider eliminating funding for the teacher career ladder, delaying class-size restrictions and lifting requirements for preschool programs for disadvantaged 4-year-olds.

Perot said he again would try to get a massive showing of public support to defend the programs.

"We'll gear up and go at it again," he said.

Perot said that saving the special programs for disadvantaged 4-year-olds is particularly crucial.

"On a cost-effective basis, it's worth millions and millions and millions of dollars down the road," he said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Man allegedly sets his wife ablaze with gasoline

HOUSTON (AP) — A man accused of dousing his wife with gasoline and setting her ablaze faces attempted murder charges, authorities said.

Jackie Robinson Williams, 39, was arrested Tuesday in Sugar Land and then transferred to the Harris County Jail, where he remained in lieu of $100,000 bond, said Robert Mackey, chief arson investigator for the Houston Fire Department.

Williams' 29-year-old wife, Shirley Smiley, was in critical condition Tuesday with second- and third-degree burns over 90 percent of her body, Hermann Hospital spokeswoman Marijo Gordy said.

Ms. Smiley was attacked Monday afternoon in her Houston apartment as she babysat two children who were not harmed, authorities said.

"She was sitting up and was in great pain," Gustavo Castro, a neighbor, said, after a maintenance man in the apartment complex extinguished the flames on the woman. "She was in very, very bad shape. I just couldn't believe it. She kept asking us for water."

Man has liver transplant

HOUSTON (AP) — A 28-year-old man today became the third person to undergo a liver transplant operation at Hermann Hospital, officials say.

Brian Ellis, an antique car buff, had been suffering from cholestatic jaundice. The transplant operation began Tuesday morning and lasted 16 hours, hospital officials said, because of the severity of his illness.

Ellis was in stable but improving condition in the surgical intensive care unit, said hospital spokeswoman Rickie Rosenberg.

The transplant team, headed by Dr. Charles T. Van Buren, went to St. Louis University Hospital in Missouri to procure the liver.

Van Buren headed the transplant team of University of Texas physicians and Hermann Hospital support personnel.

ILA shuts down docks

HOUSTON (AP) — The International Longshoremen's Association shut down Port of Houston docks for the third time in eight days in what officials said was apparently a protest against the presence of a stevedoring company that doesn't hire ILA labor.

The ILA on Tuesday idled five ships and five barges, which were to be worked at the Turning Basin public docks, and a container vessel at the Barbours Cut terminal.

A spokesman for a Houston ILA Local said the action was not authorized. Some ILA leaders were in Washington, D.C., for negotiations for a master contract with maritime employers.

Officials said the non-ILA workers who apparently prompted the walkout, employed by Henry Milam's Houston Stevedores Inc., continued unloading bags of flour from a train at a warehouse on Tuesday.

The presence of Milam's non-ILA crew had prompted ILA members to walk off their jobs at the port earlier this month, officials said.

Manager shot in holdup

ABILENE — A manager at a savings and loan was in stable condition after she was shot in the abdomen after handing over the contents of a cash drawer to a robber.

Mary Lapham, manager of the Brookhollow branch of Southwest Savings & Loan Association in Abilene, was in stable condition Tuesday night at Humana Hospital.

"I gave him the money. He turned and walked toward the door, stopped, then turned around and just shot me," she said.

Detective Sgt. Dan Spohn said the gunman walked into the savings office about 10:50 a.m. Tuesday. The gunman walked around a counter, pulled a revolver on Mrs. Lapham, and demanded she give him the contents of a cash tray, Spohn said.

Police said the robber fled on foot with an undisclosed amount of cash.

Mother commits suicide after daughter's killing

ARLINGTON (AP) — Grief over the shooting death of her 18-year-old daughter led a 50-year-old Arlington woman to kill herself with a prescription drug, according to the woman's son.

"I was expecting it. I wasn't expecting it this soon. To tell the truth, I've been watching my mother die, the deterioration of her personality," said Mercedes Branch's son Claudio, 20.

Mrs. Branch died Saturday from amytriptyline intoxication, an antidepressant drug. The medical examiner ruled her death a suicide.

"It had everything to do with Teresa," her son said.

"My mom didn't have many material possessions," he said. "Teresa was all she had. She was very proud of her. If she couldn't have Teresa, she didn't want to live."

After the slaying, Mrs. Branch would walk around the house crying and saying, "I want Teresa back," he said.

Miss Branch's car broke down on April 19 while she was on her way to her parent's house. She left a classmate in the car and began jogging to the house, a few blocks away.

The friend called police after Miss Branch did not appear for 1½ hours. Miss Branch's body was found in a church parking lot across the street from where she was parked at about 10:30 p.m.

Arlington police believe she was forced into a car, shot and her body was dumped in the lot. No arrests have been made.

"I don't think it would have mattered if they had made an arrest," Branch said. "It would never bring Teresa back."

He said Mrs. Branch seemed to take the news well at first, although she thought about the slaying constantly.

"The paranoia started. She was afraid the same thing was going to happen to her that happened to Teresa," he said.

She became more distant toward him, his 15-year-old brother John and their father, Kenneth, Branch said.

"One day last week, they were going to buy my brother shoes. They got in the car, and she broke up. The next thing I knew was they were calling me from the hospital," he said.

Pastor: Methodists should follow Bible on tough issues

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — United Methodists are "coming apart at the seams" because leaders don't follow the Bible on tough issues like abortion and homosexuality, a leading conservative Methodist says.

In a keynote address, the Rev. Ed Robb III told a meeting of the church's conservative Good News group that the "cannibalization of the gospel" has led the church's Rocky Mountain Annual conference to let gay minister Julian Rush of Denver continue work as a pastor.

Robb is pastor of the 1,400-member Woodlands United Methodist Church outside Houston.

"We have divorced ourselves from biblical truth and have jumped in bed with the secular humanists," said Robb, reading an address based on notes prepared by his father, evangelist and conservative political activist Eugene W. Robb.

The elder Robb could not attend because of health problems.

Nearly 2 million United Methodists have left the denomination in the last 20 years, Robb said. The church now has 9.5 million members.

In the Denver-based, Rocky Mountain Annual conference, records show membership was 106,241 in 1975 and 91,083 in 1985.

"There are some things that are non-negotiable for us evangelicals," said Robb in Monday night's speech. "We believe adultery is wrong, marriage is sacred, homosexuality is an abomination, human life from conception is sacred, abortion is evil, emancipation of women is right, working for the poor is a mandate, the suppression of liberty is diabolical...Why? Because the Bible tells us so."

Methodism, said Robb, "began as a mighty marching army," but has become "a tedious bureaucracy" that allows "a cafeteria-style approach" to the Bible in which members can "pick and choose what they wish."

Commission's study finds link between porn, sex crimes

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a year of study, Attorney General Edwin Meese's Commission on Pornography says there is a link between hard-core porn and sex crimes. The panel is calling for a law enforcement and citizen campaign of unprecedented scope against the $8 billion-a-year industry.

With two of the panel's 11 members disagreeing, the commission concluded that "substantial exposure to sexually violent materials ... bears causal relationship to antisocial acts of sexual violence and possibly to unlawful acts of sexual violence."

The commission also endorsed the view that "substantial exposure" to porn which depicts scenes that are degrading toward women "bears some causal relationship to ... unwanted sexual aggression."

Even before today's presentation to Meese, the commission's 2,000-page report, which has been available for inspection for two months, was condemned by civil liberties groups as a move toward censorship. It was praised by anti-pornography crusaders who seek to eliminate sexually explicit material from American life.

The work of the commission, whose chairman, U.S. Attorney Henry Hudson, first won a reputation as a porn-fighting county prosecutor in Virginia, has been under attack by liberals, some scientific researchers and two of the panel's 11 members.

The conclusion of the panel's survey of pornography in America reverses the findings of a government commission in 1970. That commission found no evidence of harm from pornography and recommended the repeal of all laws restricting pornography for adult consumers.

The Meese report contains 93 recommendations intended to serve as a guide for federal, state and local governments to conduct a massive law enforcement crackdown on pornography in the United States.

Two commissioners who dissented from the report's central finding, Woman's Day editor Ellen Levine and Columbia University psychologist Judith Becker, said the examples of pornography presented to the commission "were skewed to the very violent and extremely degrading."

They said "efforts to tease the current data into proof of a causal relationship link between" exposure to pornography and committing sex crimes " cannot be accepted."

"This commission's report launches a national crusade against dirty pictures, as if they had some mystical power to lead men to violence (and) obliterate the values taught by other institutions in our culture," said Barry Lynn, legislative counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union and a persistent critic of the commission.

Some researchers dispute the commission's findings and emphasize there is no demonstrable link between porn and sex crimes.

"The government would do well to prosecute people who commit crimes of violence against either sex, and stay out of the mind-control business," Dr. Carol Tavris, a social psychologist, said in a recent newspaper column.

At least one scientist said his work was misused by the commission to justify its conclusion of a link between hard-core porn and sexual violence. University of Wisconsin professor and researcher Edward Donnerstein said his research "doesn't mean that someone exposed to this material ... is going to go out there and commit a sexually violent crime. ... That's an awfully simple view of behavior."

The commission already has had a substantial impact. More than 8,000 drug and convenience stores have stopped selling adult magazines such as Playboy and Penthouse since the first of the year.

The 7-Eleven convenience store chain said it decided to pull the magazines from its shelves because of commission testimony linking pornography to child abuse and other crimes.

The commission's single most controversial action occurred when its executive director, Alan Sears, mailed a letter last February to nearly two dozen convenience and drug store chains which sell Playboy and Penthouse, saying the store chains had been identified in testimony given to the panel as distributors of pornography.

Sears' letter didn't say so, but the testimony had come from a Mississippi minister, Donald Wildmon, who heads the National Federation for Decency headquartered in Tupelo, Miss.

Scientists say quake won't relieve pressure of next one predicted

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Southern California's strongest earthquake in seven years injured at least 22 people and caused widespread damage, but scientists say it will not relieve enough pressure to delay a great quake predicted to hit the state.

Aftershocks from Tuesday's temblor, which measured 6.0 on the Richter scale, continued to rock the Palm Springs area today. At least three struck this morning, but few people called police and no damage was reported, said Sgt. Mike McCracken.

"They keep coming and going," he said. "I hope it doesn't get any worse."

The quake Tuesday morning buckled highways, sparked dozens of fires and damaged part of the state's aqueduct system. It also blacked out power to 110,000 homes for about three hours and rolled boulders the size of cars onto highways.

"Our greatest concern is the slim chance this might be a foreshock," said Tom Heaton, head of the U.S. Geological Survey's Pasadena office. About one in 20 earthquakes in California is followed by a larger temblor within five days, he said, but he added that the chances of a bigger aftershock diminish each day.

At Desert Hospital in Palm Springs, 18 people were treated for earthquake-related injuries that included cuts, abrasions, strains and chest pains, said spokeswoman Linda Riggs. Four others who were admitted to the hospital with stress-related ailments were in stable condition today, said a nursing supervisor who wouldn't give her name.

Initial reports indicated $2 million damage, said Riverside County emergency services officials, but that estimate was expected to rise as damage assessments continued.

The quake was centered about 12 miles northwest of Palm Springs or 110 miles east of Los Angeles, said Dennis Meredith, a spokesman for the seismology lab at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

At the Western Village Mobile Home Ranch, four miles northwest of Palm Springs, 37 mobile homes were damaged and two were reported total losses after being shaken off their foundations. Damage was estimated at $150,000.

"It looks like the devil's own hand stirred things up here," said Anna Abston, manager of the trailer park.

The earthquake, felt as far away as Arizona and Nevada, lasted 20 to 30 seconds and spawned dozens of aftershocks, some registering as high as 3.0 on the Richter scale.

Caltech seismologist Kate Hutton said the temblor was the strongest in seven years in Southern California but was far too small to significantly delay the great quake of 8.0 or more on the Richter scale that is expected within the next 30 years.

"Every earthquake relieves some stress," Ms. Hutton said. "But a 6.0 is just a drop in the bucket."

Had the quake struck closer to Los Angeles, damage would have been much more severe, officials said.

"If it had happened downtown, it might have been a different story," said Thomas Heaton, a U.S. Geological Survey scientist at Caltech. "It probably would have damaged pre-1930s buildings" — those built before earthquake-safety rules.

As it was, the Palm Springs area escaped more extensive damage because many of its buildings were built after a 1948 quake that measured 6.5 on the Richter scale.
