Midland woman hurt in shootings in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH (AP) — Two men are under arrest and one still at large today after bloody shootings that police say are the worst outbreak of gang violence in recent years.

A 22-year-old man was killed and nine other people, including Midlander Guadalupe Pena and two young children, were wounded early Sunday in the shootings on the city's north side.

Police said the bloodshed apparently was part of a long-standing feud that has intensified recently between two rival Mexican-American gangs, La Loma and Varrio Gran Norte.

"Since the gangs have become known to our department, this is the worst I've seen," police Detective Ron Pendergraft said Sunday. "Look at the victims. We've got one dead and nine wounded. It looks like it's going to be a long, hot summer."

A truckload of gang members drove past three houses around 1 a.m. and one of them fired a shotgun repeatedly into the structures, city police spokesman Doug Clarke said.

"They drove by and bang, bang, bang, bang," he said. "And then they just kept on going to the next place."

At the first house, Domingo Duran Jr., who lived there with his parents, was hit several times and pronounced dead at the scene. Four others were wounded there.

Duran was killed just hours after being released on bail from city jail, where he had been held for investigation of attempted murder in connection with a shooting Friday night, Clarke said.

The gang members then drove to two other neighborhood houses and opened fire, Clarke said.

Although each of the shootings appears gang-related, several of the victims, including the children, were innocent bystanders, police said.

The gunmen "were after particular individuals in each situation," police Detective Paul Kratz said. "But they didn't show any regard for innocent bystanders."

A 16-year-old was arrested about 8 a.m. and remains in the Tarrant County Juvenile Detention Center, police said, adding that a 20-year-old was arrested three hours later. No charges had been filed by early today, and police said they are seeking a third man in the shootings.

Kratz said the feud between the two gangs had been going on for about a year but had intensified in the last several months.

Power outage

About 12 homes were without power this morning after this pickup truck hit a Texas Electric Service Co. pole near the corner of South Main and Griffin streets at about 6:30 a.m. Details were unavailable from the police department at press time, but the driver reportedly broke his collarbone in the accident. TESCO employees expected to have power restored to the area by mid-morning.

Officials say death toll from tornadoes may increase

Associated Press

As residents of tornado-stricken Pennsylvania and Ohio towns consoled one another and cleared away rubble, officials said the death toll could top the 87 already reported and that one hard-hit town had almost no warning of the wave of deadly twisters.

In Pennsylvania, where at least 62 people died and more than 700 were injured after the state's worst tornado outbreak Friday, Gov. Dick Thornburgh declared a state disaster emergency for 13 counties, where 1,658 houses were destroyed and damage could exceed $200 million dollars.

"I asked Gov. Thornburgh when he toured the city Saturday for $50 million," said Mayor Helen Duby of Wheatland, where seven people died and more than 50 houses were destroyed. "I asked for the moon. But I'll settle for half a moon."

■ Amish already rebuilding after disaster —Page 4A

In Ohio, where at least 12 people were killed, Gov. Richard Celeste asked President Reagan for federal disaster relief for four counties where damage was estimated at $45 million.

"I wish I could say that we won't find any more bodies, but I can't," Ken Robinson, head of the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency, said Sunday. "They're still going through the rubble."

There were no reports of looting, but Pennsylvania held 522 National Guardsmen and 90 state police in damaged areas Sunday, Robison said. Ohio had 9 p.m. curfews in some areas and about 700 guardsmen were still on duty.

In the Ontario, Canada, city of Barrie, which had eight of the region's 13 fatalities, authorities Sunday demobilized 300 Canadian Armed Forces personnel sent into the area. Officials said about 440 houses would have to be razed.

In Pittsburgh, meteorologist Bob Davis of the National Weather Service said at least five tornadoes "stayed on the ground for a good period of time" in Pennsylvania.

"It's just like somebody scraped a swath right out of the ground and everything's obliterated. We don't normally see that in this area because of the hills. Usually it jumps."

The weather service warning, sent to weather radio channels and some broadcasters and newspapers, came eight minutes after state police first saw a funnel cloud near Albion, Davis said Sunday.

"We're really required to have some indication of the existence of a tornado before we put one (a warning) out," Davis said. "You want to try to save them for the exclusive times when they are there on the ground."

OPEC ministers discussing ways to uphold pricing, quota systems

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Nine ministers of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries held a second round of talks today to deliberate ways of upholding the cartel's pricing and quota systems.

As the meeting began, Mana Saeed Oteiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, warned that action will be taken against member countries violating OPEC's rulings on production quotas.

Oteiba told the English-language Arab News that the council "will review the oil market situation and how member countries are committed to their quotas within the 16 million barrel per day ceiling.

"We will tell them (the overproducers) that we will not stand handcuffed if overproduction continues. And that also applies to non-OPEC producers. The oil market is a very sensitive one, and we call on every producer inside and outside OPEC to stand up to its responsibility," Oteiba said.

Oteiba said possible retaliation against overproducers will be discussed at the full OPEC ministerial session scheduled for July 22 in Geneva, Switzerland.

Arab News also quoted Nigeria's oil minister, Tam David West as saying he never proposed a production cut to stabilize prices.

Nigeria is considered OPEC's weakest link because it produces crude that competes with the North Sea grade that non-OPEC Britain and Norway produce. Industry sources said that up until last week, Nigeria was overproducing by 300,000 barrels per day, which is more than the total production of OPEC member Ecuador.

But the U.A.E. oil minister, before leaving Abu Dhabi for Taif Sunday, told the Emirates News Agency that the OPEC member states were ready to lower their 16 million barrels per day production ceiling if that became necessary to remedy the present imbalance on the world oil market which threatens a new price war.

Study: Pleading guilty nets shorter sentence

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who pleaded guilty to serious crimes in 1983 generally got shorter prison sentences than those who were found guilty by a judge or jury after a trial, according to a Justice Department study.

It also concluded that felony defendants who pleaded guilty were somewhat less likely than others to be sentenced to prison.

Overall, those who entered guilty pleas to such offenses as rape, robbery, assault, aggravated assault and larceny, burglary and drug trafficking, had prison sentences averaging six years, while those found guilty at trial had sentences averaging 10.7 years, said the Bureau of Justice Statistics.

Moreover, those who pleaded guilty to a lower charge were less likely to be sentenced to prison than those who pleaded guilty to the highest initial charge brought against them, the report said.

The conclusions were drawn from an analysis by the Bureau of Justice Statistics of court felony criminal and sentencing records in 18 large urban counties in 15 states during 1983, involving a total of around 15,000 cases. Statistics were furnished to the bureau by the National Association of Criminal Justice Planners and by officials in the 18 jurisdictions.

Speechmaking no longer as profitable for some senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty U.S. senators sustained income losses averaging $28,128 last year as a result of a self-imposed limit on the amount of money a member can take home from the lucrative speechmaking circuit.

The losses ranged from a high of $107,288 for Richard Lugar, R-Ind., to a low of $70 for Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., who like most of their colleagues were paid official salaries of $72,600 in 1984.

The earnings drop resulted from a decision the Senate reluctantly made in mid-1983 to follow the House's lead and limit the amount of so-called honoraria members can keep from making speeches and writing articles.

The limit is 30 percent of official salary — a maximum of $21,780 last year — with a requirement that any money over the limit be given to charity.

As a result, 1984 was a relatively lean year for the Senate's most active speakers and a bumper one for their favorite charities, according to a review of financial disclosure statements filed by members earlier this month.

Overall, senators collected nearly $1.8 million in honoraria last year, the vast bulk of it for talking to business and labor groups and on college campuses, generally for $1,000 or $2,000 a speech, plus expenses.

The total, however, was down sharply from the $3 million senators racked up with their oratory in 1983 as some members hit the trail more often before the limit took effect on Jan. 1, 1984. Honoraria earnings were nearly $2.4 million in 1982 and about $1.7 million in 1981.

The limit also caused a sharp jump in the amount of honoraria money given away. Charities got 21 percent of the total last year, reversing a trend that had seen such contributions fall from 10.2 percent in 1981 to 6 percent in 1983.

TORNADOES

But the warning came only two minutes before the twister virtually flattened Albion, killing nine people, injuring 75 and damaging or destroying 202 houses. Only 70 houses were left untouched.

"We didn't lose everything," said Susan Larsen, 36, as she looked across her empty lot in Albion. "I've got my children and my husband. These are sticks and nails I lost."

But Raymond Camp, chief of Albion's volunteer fire department, said he turned on the local cable television system's weather channel and heard nothing about a tornado watch.

"There was never any warning that we heard," Camp said Sunday. "When we were digging people out that was a comment that I heard over and over."

The Salvation Army was weighted down with more donations of food and clothes than the victims need and asked for money instead.

Panel to hold hearings on tax plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business enters the spotlight Tuesday as the House Ways and Means Committee, with long lines of lobbyists at its doors, pushes forward with hearings on the impact of President Reagan's tax plan.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the tax panel's chairman, plans a three-month airing of the plan, with no bill-drafting until after Labor Day.

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, starts hearings next week but plans to hold off on fashioning a bill until the Ways and Means panel finishes its work.

"With luck, we'll have a bill on the president's desk by Christmas," Packwood said after Reagan last week unveiled his plan to lower income tax rates and condense the number of brackets from 14 to three.

House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., cautioned, however, that it "may be a bit optimistic" to shoot for a tax bill under the White House Christmas tree. But he said it was worth a try.

Lawmakers foresee a timetable that could easily spill into next year because of conflicts guaranteed to arise over the specifics of Reagan's plan.

Streams of lobbyists are converging on the Ways and Means Committee and could turn both panels into pressure cookers by fall.

Rep. Fortney H. Stark, D-Calif., said last week that only closed-door drafting sessions offer hope of putting a bill resembling Reagan's plan on the president's desk this year. He said that mainly would stem "posturing by egotists" on the panel but said lobbying pressures also played a part.

Even then, he said, House floor amendments would have to be barred to meet a 1985 deadline. He said the outlook was dimmer in the Senate, where leaders lack means to head off floor amendments.

"Whatever comes out of the Senate is going to look like a Rube Goldberg invention," Stark chortled.

Almost every lawmaker urges "tax reform," but there is no agreement on specifics.

Cattlemen have been branded "losers" in early readings of the plan by Capitol Hill staffers, a label sure to register with Western lawmakers. Liberals clamor for an end to tax breaks for energy companies, a view without much appeal to oil-state congressmen.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., and others representing high-tax states in the East blasts a provision to wipe out the deduction of state and local tax payments.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo agrees. "This plan is dynamite for the rich people," he said Sunday, appearing on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley." "I make $100,000 as governor. I'll do extremely well. This is a program that takes care of the people at the top. The people in the middle suffer."

But Treasury Secretary James Baker III cited projections that the provision eliminating the writeoff for local taxes would increase federal revenues by $40 billion in 1990. "With respect to state and local tax deductions, if you should eliminate that from this proposal I don't think you have tax reform," said Baker.

How business would fare will be the focus of a Ways and Means hearing Tuesday at which five corporate chief executives are set to testify.

They are John H. Bryan Jr. of Sara Lee Corp., James L. Ferguson of General Foods Corp., William R. Howell of J.C. Penney Co., Lewis W. Lehr of 3M Co., John M. Richman of Dart & Kraft Inc., and John G. Smale of Procter and Gamble.

Early business reaction to Reagan's plan has been divided.

Internal Revenue Service Commission Roscoe Egger and former Treasury Department officials address the panel Wednesday. A subcommittee takes up the tax burdens of low-income wage earners Thursday. Labor leaders and economists get their chance next week.

In other action, the Senate this week debates whether to cut research funds for President Reagan's "Star Wars" anti-missile system from a $302 billion defense authorization bill.

Reagan had sought authority to spend $3.7 billion next year for "Star Wars" research. The Senate, under new budget constraints, is considering $2.97 billion, with a battle developing over proposed further cuts.

"To cut back on these ideas now, before they are thoroughly examined, may well cause us to throw out some of the best innovation without our knowing it," Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said.

The defense debate also could produce a showdown on whether to require strict U.S. adherence to provisions of the SALT II arms treaty. The pact's expiration later this year coincides with a buildup in the submarine fleet that could exceed treaty limits.

The Senate also could begin debate on efforts to restrict U.S. aid to Contra rebels in Nicaragua. Opponents of the aid seek to attach the restrictions to a State Department authorization bill.

Syrian troops reportedly entering Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — With Israel planning to complete its withdrawal from Lebanon this week, Syrian troops are reported preparing to move into the capital to stop the chaotic fighting that has raged here for two weeks.

In Beirut today, sniper fire and grenade attacks killed three people and wounded 25, including a French truce observer, in fighting in embattled refugee camps and on the Green Line dividing the city into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Police said two people died and 19 were wounded in overnight clashes in and around west Beirut's Chatilla camp and suburban Bourj el-Barajneh, with one killed and five wounded in skirmishes along Beirut's demarcation line.

Col. Antoine Devirieu, commander of the 57-member French truce observer team in Beirut, said Sgt. Maj. Jean-Louis Kohler was wounded in the foot by a bullet at the unit's headquarters on the Green Line.

Since the Shiite Moslem militia Amal attacked the Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra, Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh on May 19, 504 people have died and 2,082 have been wounded in the fighting, by police count.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres of Israel announced Sunday that Israel would complete its withdrawal from Lebanon by Thursday, the third anniversary of the invasion that Israel launched to crush the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Three days before the announced withdrawal, Israeli troops today raided a Shitte Moslem village in South Lebanon, blew up three houses and seized 40 men, U.N. spokesman Timur Goksel said.

The crackdown on Majdal Salim was the first major raid by the Israelis since late April, when they completed the second stage of their three-phase pullback from Lebanon.

Lebanese Red Cross workers carry a wounded Palestinian into the Kamal Jumblat hospital in the Druse suburb of Shweifat in Beirut.

Elsewhere, the Christian commander of Lebanon's main air force base was assassinated and his son was seriously wounded by a carload of gunmen in eastern Lebanon on Sunday.

The killers of Col. Suleiman Daoud Mazloum, commander of the air base at Riyaq, in the Bekaa Valley, sped away after the attack. The reason for the assault in the eastern village of Ablah was not known.

In nearby Baalbek, Lebanese sources close to Syrian intelligence said Sunday that Syrian army troops are grouping in two remote bases to move to Beirut's eastern outskirts under a joint Lebanese-Syrian security plan.

Authoritative sources said the Syrians and the Lebanese units will form a peacekeeping force to oversee President Amin Gemayel's blueprint to disengage the warring factions in the capital.

One Lebanese source said the move could come "in a week to ten days," once the Israeli withdrawal is complete.

The Syrians sent troops into Beirut in 1976 to quell civil war fighting under an Arab League mandate. They left the city in 1982 after Israel invaded. They have kept a force estimated at 30,000 men, with tanks, in north and east Lebanon.

OPEC

Before the first session got underway at the conference palace here late Sunday, 10 oil ministers — nine from OPEC nations and one from Mexico — met informally for more than three hours at the residence of the Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani.

Yamani chairs OPEC's executive council, which includes, Saudi Arabia, Nigeria, Venezuela, Indonesia and the United Arab Emirates.

Apart from the council and non-OPEC Mexico, four other OPEC member countries — Ecuador, Iraq, Iran and Kuwait — were attending the Taif talks.

Conference sources said that the remaining OPEC members — Libya, Algeria, Qatar, and Gabon — were not expected to join the talks.

A full OPEC conference is set for July 22 in Geneva, Switzerland.

After the Sunday session, none of the ministers spoke to reporters, except Yamani, who said only that, "We dealt with the present situation."

The ministers were to discuss complaints about a number of OPEC members not abiding by the production quotas and pricing structure decreed by the cartel.

Conference sources said that the Taif meeting was expected to blame Ecuador for allegedly surpassing its 183,000-barrel-a-day production quota by about 90,000 barrels.

The same sources said that Nigeria also was producing 1.7 million barrels a day, instead of its quota of 1.4 million barrels.

The African country, they said, also has been offering discounts on its prices in oil-for-goods barter deals with Italy, Austria, France and Brazil.

SHOOTINGS

"They shot at each other's houses and there were some injuries, but nothing like this," Kratz said. "I know myself of three or four incidents, and I'm sure there are others that other detectives had worked."

Those wounded were:

— Guadalupe Pena, a 37-year-old Midland woman, was wounded in a third shooting. Ms. Pena, who was visiting friends, was treated and released from Harris Hospital after receiving pellet wounds in the upper chest and left arm.

— Duran's mother, Petra "Betty" Zavala, 50, who was in critical condition Sunday night at St. Joseph Hospital with shotgun wounds to the head and neck;

— Her grandchildren, Frank Sanchez, 5, and 3-year-old Angelica Rodriquez. Frank was in stable condition Sunday night at Fort Worth Osteopathic Hospital suffering from shotgun wounds to the head. Angelica was listed in... condition at Osteopathic Hospital with multiple gunshot wounds, including abdominal wounds;

— Duran's brother, Joseph Zavala, 16, who was in stable condition at St. Joseph with wounds to the back and shoulder;

— Sarah Rebecca "Becky" Saldivar, who was in stable condition at St. Joseph with wounds to the leg, stomach and arm;

— Joe Jimenez, 15, who was in serious condition late Sunday at John Peter Smith Hospital with gunshot wounds to the arm;

— Jesus Jayme, 19, who was in fair condition at JPS with undisclosed wounds;

— 16-year-old Abraham Ramos, who was treated at JPS and was released.

INCOME

In the limit-free year of 1983, 12 senators had honoraria exceeding their official salaries. Last year, only Lugar and Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., took in more from speechmaking than lawmaking, according to available disclosure reports.

Dole continued to be the highest honoraria earner in 1984 at $112,094, but to get under the limit he gave $91,079 to charities, including $10,000 to the Dole Foundation. In 1983, he kept nearly $107,000 of the $187,400 he received.

Lugar kept $129,065 of the $132,450 he got in 1983. Under the limit last year, he collected $81,850 in speech fees but gave $60,073 to charities, leaving a net personal income loss of $107,288 from 1983 to 1984.

Robert Packwood, R-Ore., reported honoraria totaling $106,879 — with no charitable contributions — in 1983. He has yet to file his 1984 statement, but staying within the limit means an income loss of $85,099.

Other big net losers last year were Jake Garn, R-Utah, $78,040; David Durenberger, R-Minn., $71,970; Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., $68,570; Charles Mathias, R-Md., $63,145; Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., $56,850; Bennett Johnston, D-La., $55,990; Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., $51,929; and Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., $51,150.

All told, 50 senators who had 1983 honoraria earnings above $21,780 took cuts in that source of income last year. Twenty-four others who were below that figure in 1983 increased their earnings last year.

In most cases, the 50 senators with 1983 earnings above $21,780 cut back on their speechmaking last year. Notable exceptions were Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, whose total honoraria rose from $24,150 to $38,650, and Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., from $25,000 to $35,597. Both met the limit with charitable contributions.

The arrival of the limit had barely an impact on Simpson, who got $21,850 in 1983 and $21,780 last year.

Eighteen senators who gave no honoraria earnings to charity in 1983 turned toward philanthropy last year when their outside income exceeded the limit. The biggest giver in this group was John Chafee, R-R.I., at $24,182. It cost Pete Wilson, R-Calif., a $1,220 charitable donation to keep within the limit.

Ten senators — with only one Republican, John Warner of Virginia, among them — accepted no speechmaking fees last year.

Phil Shandler, a spokesman for Carl Levin, D-Mich., said his boss won't take them because "when he makes a public speech, it is as a U.S. senator, for which he is already compensated."

The Senate's three top officials — majority and minority leaders and president pro tempore — were paid $82,100 last year and were each allowed to earn up to $24,600 in honoraria.

SENTENCE

The study was the latest in a series carried out by the Justice Department's information-gathering bureau to give law enforcement policy-makers insights into criminal sentencing procedures in states and localities.

"From this study of more than 15,000 cases, we know more precisely the kinds of sentences that convicted felons receive and some of the factors that influence judges when they decide whether to send an offender to prison and for how long," said Steven R. Schlesinger, the bureau's director.

"Until recently, one of the big gaps in our criminal justice data has been the lack of reliable information about felony sentences," he said.

The study confirmed some aspects about the criminal justice system that have long been suspected by criminologists and law enforcement officials. There were "substantial variations" in the average prison sentences meted out for seven felony crimes among the 18 jurisdictions in 15 states.

Sentences for robbery convictions varied from 3.8 years to 20.6 years, depending on where the convict was sentenced, for instance.

But the report did show that "there was great consistency in how sentence lengths were ordered" concerning the seven categories of crimes within the individual jurisdictions.

In 15 of the 18 jurisdictions, rape sentences were longer than robbery sentences; in 13, robbery sentences were longer than those for aggravated assault, and in 14, aggravated assault sentences exceeded the average length of burglary sentences. In 17 of the 18 jurisdictions, the report said, the average sentence for burglary was greater than that for larceny.

Overall, 71 percent of those convicted of serious crimes in 18 large urban counties across the country in 1983 were sentenced to serve time in prison or local jails, the report said.

Approximately 28 percent of the defendants were allowed to go free on probation, while the remaining 1 percent got a sentence other than incarceration or probation, usually a fine or restitution to the crime victim.

Man says security guards slipped grenade in wife's purse as 'test'

EL PASO (AP) — A San Antonio man is demanding that El Paso airport officials apologize for a guard he says slipped a hand grenade into his wife's purse to test the airport's security system.

"I was flabbergasted," Ken Bryce, 29, said Sunday. "But the security people just laughed and said they couldn't believe we were upset about it. They didn't even apologize."

El Paso airport authorities say they will begin an investigation today into the incident that Bryce, a medical student at the University of Texas at San Antonio, says left his family scared witless.

Bryce says that he, his wife, Carol, and their 6-month-old son, Justin, had just gone through security at El Paso International Airport Saturday when their carry-on baggage came through the X-ray machine. That's when he says he saw the grenade in a side pocket of his wife's purse.

"My first thought was for the safety of my wife and son," Bryce said. "I grabbed for the grenade, intending to throw it away from us, not thinking about all the people coming up that concourse. A security guard grabbed my hand and said, 'No, don't touch it.'

"My next thought was that someone who had wanted to get the grenade on a plane had planted it on us, and that we would spend the rest of our lives in prison," he said.

"The airline managements and the (Federal Aviation Administration) test those machines regularly," an El Paso Airport official said, "but they usually coordinate with everyone involved. We did have some irregularity or deviance from procedures. We are on top of it and we will get to the bottom."

The incident will be discussed at a Wednesday meeting.

Airlines contract with a security firm for guards to operate the X-ray machines and metal detectors. Those guards do not work for the airport's own security office.

"When we got to Dallas our hearts were still thumping," Bryce said.

Driver's license test printed in Khmer easing life of Cambodian refugees

DALLAS (AP) — A driver's license test printed in Khmer is easing life for Cambodian refugees in Dallas who may not yet speak English but still need to be able to drive to work.

Printed last month, the test is removing roadblocks to the independence and success of Dallas' estimated 5,000 Cambodians, officials said.

"It (a license) opens up employment and other opportunities. Without it, they (the refugees) are relegated to the most menial of jobs," said Reid Heller, a volunteer with the National Council of Jewish Women-Khmer Community Development Project.

As a farmer in the rice fields of Cambodia, Noy Sespent more than 60 hours translating the text to the Asian community.

"What's good about (the translation) is it informs them of the state laws," he said. "From reading it in their own language, it will educate them much more."

Translated driver's license tests are not new. A Spanish version has been available for 30 years. Tests are offered in Korean, Vietnamese, Laotian, Chinese and German.

But the addition of a Khmer test will specifically help Cambodians.

Indians gather for annual powwow

LIVINGSTON (AP) — Indians from tribes across the United States gathered here over the weekend to powwow, dance and preserve their ancient heritage.

LaVan Watts was one of those who came to the annual powwow at the Alabama-Coushatta Reservation near this Southeast Texas town.

"When I'm dancing, I feel like I am all alone," said Watts, who danced to the Indian drumbeats. "There is something special about feeling the beat of the drum. I could dance all night."

A registered Indian with the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Watts said gourd dancing was to begin at 6:30 p.m., followed at 8:30 p.m. by social dancing.

"But since we are on Indian time, the dancing...(began) when the Indians are ready," he said.

Watts said his interest in his Indian heritage was rekindled several years ago by a white man — Bill Miles, who he said has an intense interest in Indian lore.

"Bill has an Indian heart, which is much more important than Indian blood," said Watts.

One-quarter Chocktaw and one-sixteenth Chickasaw, Watts studied Indian customs and history and has attended 13 of the 14 annual powwows at the Indian reservation.

"I do this to honor my Indian grandmother, who died two years ago," said Watts. "I loved her very much. We have been blessed through her. I want my children to know where they came from."

He said many of his friends are Indians, and he has danced the gourd dance with them.

DOW's skimmers come home to roost

FREEPORT (AP) — A flock of colorful sea birds has flown in from South America for the 17th season to enjoy its unusual summer home — the middle of a parking lot at the Dow Chemical USA plant.

Plant workers have been stopping by the lot lately to see the 850 to 900 orange-billed black skimmers complacently nesting there. Even environmentalists have tossed bouquets at Dow for protecting the nesting birds.

"I think this is a remarkable instance, and quite unusual," said Carmine Stahl, executive director of the Houston Audubon Society. "They've done a good job down there. They discovered some nesting pairs some years ago and sealed off the area."

Normally, the skimmers summer on the islands in Galveston Bay, he said.

"On some islands, we've lost a lot of nesting sites because of human disturbances of many kinds," Stahl said, citing both boat traffic and erosion.

Stahl said he knew of no other Texas nesting sites as unusual as Dow's fenced-in parking lot.

Later this summer, the lot is expected to be bustling with baby birds.

Dogs' killings poison neighbors' relations

MONTGOMERY (AP) — A rash of nearly 50 dog poisonings over the past two years in this community of wooded rolling hills has residents pointing fingers at each other.

The cases of strychnine poisonings attracted outside attention about two years ago when a mother received an anonymous letter warning her to control her children or they too might be harmed.

The children weren't harmed, but the killings of dogs continued. Three more died last month.

"There's some people out there, I'm not kidding, who've threatened to kill someone if they find out who's doing it," said Kathyrn O'Brien.

Ms. O'Brien, 35, has had two dogs killed, one while it was in her yard.

She said she understands the problems of older residents of the subdivision who have fallen under suspicion because they don't like dogs running in their well-kept yards.

Amish rebuild after tornado strikes

In Atlantic, 'We all go to work'

NATION

ATLANTIC, Pa. (AP) — The Amish don't carry insurance against disasters such as the killer tornadoes that splintered homes across northwestern Pennsylvania, but Atlantic's 26 Amish families plan to begin rebuilding immediately, with a little help from their brethren.

"Most of the barns would have to be done before too long for grain and hay and cattle. We figure to begin as quickly as possible," said Edward D. Yoder, 58, bishop for one of the two Amish congregations in this Crawford County community.

In the non-mechanized, self-help world of the Amish, insurance comes not in the form of written agreements but in a spiritual covenant among friends.

"When something like this happens, we call Spartansburg, Punxsutawney, Troutville, Middlefield, New Wilmington, Mercer and we all get together," Yoder said.

"Some call it a bee. We say frolly. Everybody brings eats and we all go to work," said Yoder, a man with thick, strong fingers and a gentle handshake.

The Amish, sometimes called Pennsylvania Dutch, are members of a strict sect of Mennonites founded in the 17th century.

They are clean-living, hard-working people who were attracted to Atlantic, Pa., for its good soil, on which they raise grain, vegetables, dairy cattle and pigs. They shun mechanized conveniences and rely on no one but God and themselves.

"They'll be rebuilt by the end of summer," non-Amish neighbor George Ball said Saturday, taking a break from the work of clearing the wreckage of the home he bought three years ago.

"I don't know what I'm going to do," he said. "I'm not covered."

Ball said he was trying to have his homeowner's insurance reinstated when the vicious twisters struck Friday. "They canceled me a month or two ago. They sent my check back. They said it was two days late," he said.

Amish men in straw hats, bib overalls and beards were already walking through Atlantic as early as Saturday, hammers and crowbars in hand, assessing the damage.

Yoder, a carpenter and mason, said full-scale efforts would probably begin as soon as the local Amish buried Andy G. Byler, 77, one of three lay preachers for his congregation. Byler, the only Amish man among five local fatalities, was whisked off his porch by the tornado.

His body was found along a gully several hundred feet away, but his family escaped serious injury, Yoder said.

Yoder, who wears a traditional unclipped beard but no mustache, said at least 10 Amish barns and homes were leveled, and one of the two Amish schools was damaged.

A total of about 80 buildings in Atlantic were flattened. Most of the secular homes were insured, officials said.

The home Yoder shares with his wife and one of his four children was not damaged.

"There's going to be a lot of work," Yoder said.

Baker: State, local tax deductions are unfair

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, defending the administration's tax plan, says eliminating the deduction for state and local taxes is a must and that without it, "I don't think you have tax reform."

Baker said the current deduction for state and local taxes — income, sales and property taxes — benefits people who itemize their tax returns and taxpayers who live where state and local taxes are high.

"You've got 35 states that are subsidizing the itemizers, those high bracket taxpayers in the 15 high tax states," Baker said Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, a Democrat, appearing on the same program, said President Reagan's tax overhaul plan would favor the rich.

Cuomo asserted that Reagan could find ways to retain the state and local tax deduction in his tax overhaul proposal but would rather keep provisions that help stockholders and the oil and gas industry.

"This plan is dynamite for the rich people," Cuomo said. "I make $100,000 as governor. I'll do extremely well. This is a program that takes care of the people at the top. The people in the middle suffer."

Baker cited projections that the provision eliminating the writeoff for local taxes would increase federal revenues by $40 billion in 1990.

"With respect to state and local tax deductions, if you should eliminate that from this proposal I don't think you have tax reform," said Baker.

"You're just not going to find the revenue elsewhere; there's too much revenue involved," he said.

An ABC News poll, meanwhile, said 65 percent of the American people who have heard of Reagan's tax plan support it, while 24 percent opposed it 11 percent have no opinion.

In an apparent indication of how residents of larger states may feel about the local and state tax deduction, the poll said 62 percent of New York state residents oppose the provision while only 27 percent favor it.

ABC said the poll — of 509 Americans interviewed by telephone on May 30 — has a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

A Newsweek poll, conducted by the Gallup Organization, said a 49 percent plurality found the new tax proposal a good idea. But by a 54 percent to 37 percent, respondents disapproved of removing the deduction for state and local taxes.

The Newsweek survey suggested voters may be apathetic on the issue. Respondents were asked to rate six issues in terms of their importance to the nation, and tax reform was last. The poll surveyed 759 adults May 29-30 and had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Key members of the Ways and Means Committee, which is responsible for the legislation in the House, predicted it will be hard to keep special interests from hacking away at the bill.

"This is going to be the biggest political brawl that Washington and the country has ever seen," said Rep. Richardpe we can keep the people's commitment and response generally as high as it has been."

Uneven tax reform could disillusion the taxpayer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan can find plenty of support when he says the tax system is turning many Americans into cheats, but the drive for tax reform could backfire politically if voters are disillusioned with the result.

Taking to the road last week to drum up support for rewriting the tax code, Reagan denounced the current law as "so rigged, so unfair, that it corrupts otherwise honest people by encouraging them to cheat."

Polls indicate most Americans would respond, "You bet!"

They'd also agree with Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., that "working families file their tax forms with the nagging feeling" if they conclude that once again they've come out on the short end of so-called tax reform.

There's a long history of politicians launching efforts to rewrite the tax code by claiming that special interests were getting a free ride while honest citizens were forced to pay more than their share.

"The time has come when our tax laws should cease their encouragement of luxury spending as a charge on the federal treasury," President John F. Kennedy said in 1961. "The slogan, 'It's deductible,' should pass from our scene."

"The time has come when our tax laws should cease their encouragement of luxury spending as a charge on the federal treasury. The slogan, 'It's deductible,' should pass from our scene."

John F. Kennedy, 1961

That appeal for change might just as well have come from Reagan this year or from President Carter, who also tried to eliminate many deductions including the "three-martini lunch," which came to symbolize a flagrant abuse of the tax system.

Kennedy and Carter failed to get the changes they wanted. Those efforts caused people, especially those who could afford the expert advice, to learn to take advantage of some of the more obscure sections of the code. People looking for ways to shelter money from the tax collector began to discover the advantages of owning even a small part of an orange grove, or a cattle ranch.

Greeks elect Papandreou's Socialists

WORLD

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Huge crowds poured into the streets today to celebrate the election victory of Premier Andreas Papandreou's Socialists, who have loosened ties with America and NATO and pledged to shut down U.S. military bases.

Papandreou, 66, an American himself for 20 years and a former college dean at the University of California at Berkeley, told reporters today:

"I believe this vote is a triumph...It's a great defeat for the reactionary forces, whether they're Greek or foreign. The Greek people don't expect anything from anyone."

This morning, returns from 14,650 out of 14,738 polling stations showed the Socialist party, known officially as the Pan-Hellenic Socialist Movement, with 45.82 percent of the vote.

The conservative New Democracy Party received 40.84 percent, the Moscow-line Greek Communist Party 9.89 and the Communist Party of the Interior, or Eurocommunists, 1.84 percent, with small parties receiving the remainder and no seats in Parliament.

About 80 percent of those eligible voted. The Socialist party won an overall majority of 161 seats in the 300-member, single-chamber Parliament. New Democracy received 125, the Communists, 13, and the Eurocommunists, 1. Seats are allotted in proportion to the popular vote.

The Socialists announced the formation of a 20-member transition Cabinet, to be sworn in Wednesday by President Christos Sartzetakis. It will remain in power until the new Parliament meets.

As Papandreou spoke, tens of thousands of cheering supporters surrounded his home in the fashionable suburb of Kastri. Traffic jams clogged streets from Kastri to the city center, about 12 miles away.

Some supporters outside the premier's home carried black wooden coffins and chanting, "The right is dead."

Among those elected by the Socialists was Papandreou's American-educated son, George. The premier's wife, Margaret, 62, also is American. As head of the Women's Union of Greece, she campaigned vigorously all around the country for her husband.

Greek voters roundly rejected New Democracy's platform of closer ties with the United States and supply-side economic policies.

New Democracy leader Constantine Mitsotakis, conceding defeat, claimed that "democracy had been sorely tested" during a bitter election campaign.

"The state is falling apart," Mitsotakis, 67, told reporters. He claimed police had looked on while rampaging Socialist supporters attacked New Democracy electoral centers in six provincial towns on Sunday night.

Islamic Jihad releases photograph of kidnapped American

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Islamic Jihad group today released a color photograph of kidnapped American David Jacobsen, but denied earlier telephoned claims it killed a Briton and carried out bombings in Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

A typewritten statement in Arabic accompanied by the photo of Jacobsen was sent to a Western news agency in Beirut.

The statement, which did not mention Jacobsen's kidnapping, accused the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency of killing British teacher Denis Hill, 53, in Beirut last week.

It charged that the CIA was behind the attempted assassination May 25 of the Emir of Kuwait and two bombings in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, May 17 in a bid to "sabotage" the fundamentalist Moslem group.

The photograph showed Jacobsen from the waist up wearing a blue shirt against a backdrop of a white sheet with a red pattern of ducks and leaves. The American's face was grim.

Jacobsen, 54, manager of the American University Hospital in Beirut, was abducted last Tuesday as he walked from the university campus to the hospital a block away.

In a telephoned statement a day later, a caller claiming to belong to Islamic Jihad, said the group kidnapped Jacobsen and killed Hill, an English teacher at the American University, as he tried to escape from gunmen who kidnapped him.

Islamic Jihad is a shadowy underground group that is believed to have links to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime in Iran.

"The explosions in the Saudi Arabian kingdom, the attempt to kill the Emir of Kuwait, the murder of one of the teachers at the American University of Beirut were (carried out) by the hands of hit teams belonging to the Central Intelligence Agency," the statement said.

The statement said the bombings were attributed to Islamic Jihad to "sabotage its reputation" and served a warning that "our heroes are capable on carrying out any kind of operations."

"(President) Reagan's threats and his declaration of alert will not affect our will and capabilities," the statement said.

Last month, anonymous callers claimed that Islamic Jihad was behind two bombings in Riyadh that killed one person and a suicide bombing against Kuwait's ruler, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, May 25, that left four dead. The Emir escaped with minor facial cuts.

Islamic Jihad said it was behind the suicide bomb attacks on the U.S. Embassy, an embassy annex and U.S. Marine and French paratroop bases in Beirut in 1983 and 1984. Nearly 400 people were killed in the attacks.

The abduction last month of Jacobsen and two Frenchmen, researcher Michel Suerat and journalist Jean-Paul Kauffman, raised to 11 the number of Westerners missing in the capital since March 1984.

The other missing Americans are William Buckley, 56, a U.S. Embassy political officer; Presbyterian minister the Rev. Benjamin Weir, 60; Roman Catholic priest the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, 50.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Prisoners die in protest in crowded Brazilian jail

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Prisoners in an overcrowded jail in east-central Brazil have strangled another cellmate, bringing to 16 the number of prisoners killed in a protest against poor living conditions, police said.

"The victim, like most of the 15 others, was singled out by fellow cellmates to die and then strangled with a sheet to draw attention to their complaints regarding jail conditions," said officer Enio Pereira from one of two jails in Belo Horizonte, 260 miles north of Rio, where the killings are taking place.

At both jails, more than 200 inmates are being held for up to two years in crammed, windowless cells meant to confine detainees for several days before their transfer to overcrowded state penitentiaries.

Pereira said prisoners have threatened to continue the killings despite police promises they will be transferred.

He said to stop further killings, more guards are being placed on duty.

Man shot at beauty contest

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Five gunmen on motorcycles killed a radio commentator attending a beauty-queen contest at which his daughter was to be crowned a princess, police reported.

They said Sunday that scores of witnesses saw the killing of commentator Nabakodonosor Velez, 47, who also headed an association of bus drivers in Cebu city, the central Philippines.

Police did not identify a company of Velez, who also was killed.

Investigators said they had not determined if Velez was slain because of his broadcast commentaries, his activities with the transport industry or a personal grudge. His commentaries frequently dealt with social issues, including crime and prostitution.

Velez' daughter was among those to be crowned a princess of Cebu Saturday night when he and his companion were shot down by the killers, who escaped.

National Press Club President Antonio Nieva said Velez was the 11th Filipino journalist murdered in the last 18 months and the second Cebu radio commentator slain in five months.

Soldiers were blamed for two of the 10 previous killings, but the others remain unsolved. All of the victims except one, a police reporter for a Manila newspaper, worked in the provinces.

Families to be reunited

PEKING (AP) — China's Red Cross Society has offered to hold talks with its Taiwan counterpart on reuniting families separated when the Nationalist government fled to Taiwan 36 years ago, the official news agency Xinhua reported.

Xinhua said Public Health Minister Cui Yueli announced the proposal Saturday after he was elected president of the Chinese Red Cross Society at its fourth national congress in Peking.

"He made a sincere offer to the Red Cross Society of Taiwan: We are ready to discuss at any time and any place the reunion of people separated by the Taiwan Straits," Xinhua said.

More than 2 million mainland Chinese fled with the Nationalists to Taiwan in 1949, when the Communist Party took power after a civil war. The Nationalists still contend that they are China's sole legitimate government.

Most Taiwan Chinese have never seen their relatives in China and cannot communicate with them directly because the Nationalists ban all contact with mainland, 93 miles across the Taiwan Straits.

Brandt doubts meeting

HAMBURG, West Germany (LAT) — Willy Brandt, Social Democratic Party chairman and former West German chancellor, says that after a recent visit with the Soviet leader, he doubts that President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev will meet this year.

"The way things are between the two big powers, the Russians have no special desire to make a visit to Washington and they will also not regard a meeting on the periphery of the United Nations as appropriate," Brandt said in an interview with Der Spiegel magazine. There has speculation that Reagan and Gorbachev would meet in the fall during a U.N. General Assembly session in New York.

Brandt, who had lengthy discussions with Gorbachov recently in Moscow, said that the Soviets were "no less interested than Mr. Reagan" in a meeting of both leaders. But he said Soviet conditions made it appear unlikely that the meeting would be held this year.

Soviets strike Afghans

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan guerrillas are falling back in the face of a Soviet offensive employing an armored assault, air strikes and helicopter-borne commandos behind enemy lines in Afghanistan's Kunar Valley, the rebels said today.

The Afghan Information Center in Peshawar, set up by refugee academics, said today that major guerrilla units were withdrawing from the nearby valley in eastern Afghanistan.

Radio Marti evolving

WASHINGTON (LAT) — Two weeks after its debut, Radio Marti, the Reagan administration's controversial broadcasting service to Cuba, appears to be evolving into a surprisingly soft-sell propaganda operation with heavy doses of Spanish-accented news and music.

U.S. officials in Washington say they have no idea yet how the station is going over in Cuba, although it apparently can be heard without serious interference on the island.

But they say they have rave reviews from the Cuban-American community in the United States and from others who applaud a program schedule that is clearly unfriendly to President Fidel Castro but lacks strident rhetoric.

Four Salvadoran police die during shootout in emergency room held by striking workers

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Showing a tough face to organized labor, the government of President Jose Napoleon Duarte Sunday sent police to raid public hospitals and clinics that were occupied by health workers striking for higher pay.

Four plainclothes policemen died of gunshot wounds under confusing circumstances during the assault here on the General Hospital of Social Security, largest of the occupied facilities.

General Hospital strikers said that the victims died in a shootout in the emergency room among the police themselves. Police officials said that the plainclothesmen were sent to infiltrate the hospital before the all-out raid. Authorities would not confirm that the men died because of a mixup.

Some striking workers suffered cuts on their wrists from being bound and forced to lie on the floor.

Four strikers were arrested, including two union leaders. Police remained on the hospital grounds throughout the day, ostensibly to ensure that any patient seeking treatment would receive attention.

Besides the General Hospital, four other hospitals and about 20 clinics were taken by the police, official spokesmen said. The raids began simultaneously at 3 a.m. There was no report of violence in the other facilities.

All the health centers involved are run by the Salvadoran Institute of Social Security, a government welfare agency.

Since May 6, a strike and occupation by the 6,000-member Salvadoran Social Security Institute Workers Union had limited treatment at the hospitals to emergency cases. The strike also tied up pension payments handled by the institute.

The raids followed a Saturday speech by Duarte in which the president charged that a wave of strikes was planned by leftist insurgents who have infiltrated the unions.

A Salvadoran civil court declared the Social Security strike illegal last Monday. Later, a military judge called the hospital occupation a terrorist act, opening the way for police action.

"Negotiations with the union can continue," said Social Security director Jorge Bustamente, a Chicago-trained gynecologist. "What cannot continue are acts of violence or terror, like the occupation of a hospital."

"We are not subversives," countered Jorge Lara, one of the strike leaders. "All we want is higher wages."

The raid on the General Hospital was preceded by a government-ordered electricity blackout in the western San Salvador neighborhood where the eight-story hospital stands.

Under the light of a nearly full moon, black-clad SWAT-style troopers from the Treasury Police lowered themselves from a helicopter onto the roof of the hospital. Others broke through doors on the ground floor. Once inside, they herded workers and some patients into the hallways of the building and tied the hands of many behind their backs.

Soon afterward, National Police, dressed in light green shirts and dark trousers and armed with G-3 rifles, entered to explore the building.

The government press office brought reporters to the scene.

"You are witnesses to what happened," said Lt. Col. Enzo Rubio, who directed the raid. "We tried to manage the operation so as not to create problems."

Rubio said that four or five pistols were found among the strikers.

Hospital workers were angered by the raid. "It is like always — repression," said one orderly awaiting police interrogation.

Hospital workers said that a woman patient died of a heart attack on the operating table during the melee.

"The left has lost control of the streets and is trying to win them back," said Julio Rey Prendes, a top Duarte aide and newly named communications minister, in a recent interview.

Song immortalizes Salazar's accused killer

'Corridos' tell of smugglers' deeds

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Long before the name of accused drug baron Rafael Caro Quintero became a household word throughout Mexico, popular bands were making hits with songs describing the adventures of narcotics traffickers.

But now, Caro Quintero, who is charged in the kidnap-slaying of U.S. special agent Enrique Camarena Salazar, has been immortalized in the latest "corrido" to come out of northern Mexico.

The just-released song, "The Black Marquis Band," is subtitled "Corrido of Rafael Caro Quintero" and recounts one group's version of the hottest news story in Mexico.

"Through the sweet-smelling streets of the 'Perla Tapatia' (Guadalajara)
The Black Marquis Band of drug traffickers and police —
Camarena and Zavala. They kidnapped in broad daylight
They hid them well;"

"Of them nobody knew," begins the song by the "Zafiros," a musical group from the northwestern border city of Tijuana.

"When they learned about Camarena
the American police checked car by car
at each border checkpoint.
Afterward, they found them dead,
the Mexican police.
They had been put in bags
on Michoacan land
Rafael Caro Quintero with his people were grabbed in San Jose, Costa Rica, and to Mexico they were transferred
By the Americans
they also should be tried."

The Tigers of the North from Sinaloa state on the Pacific coast, the Linares Cadets and other musical groups that play corridos — polka-style ballads with oomp-pa-pa beats and sing-song lyrics that northern Mexicans have adopted as their own — also are enjoying a renewed interest in their songs since Camarena's disappearance Feb. 7.

"They say they came from the south in a colored car.

Salazar

Quintero

They carried 100 kilograms of cocaine

They were on the road to Chicago..." begins the song "The Red Car Band."

Caro Quintero, who was located in Costa Rica and deported to Mexico where he remains behind bars, has triggered a countrywide scandal with his allegations of massive police corruption.

Stories of Camarena's abduction in Guadalajara, the discovery of his body on March 5, Caro Quintero's capture and his accusations that tied Jalisco state policemen to drug-trafficking bribes have dominated newspaper and broadcast coverage.

Nearly 40 people, including Caro Quintero and Ernesto Fonseca, the reputed head of Mexico's underworld drug empire, have been ordered to stand trial as part of the investigation into the slaying of Camarena and a Mexican pilot who had worked with him.

In Monterrey, one entrepeneur has begun selling Caro Quintero T-shirts, and spreading rumors about his life has become a popular pastime.

The daily Mexico City newspaper La Jornada published a letter from one of its readers which said Caro Quintero was present at a wedding March 2 during which a slaying took place.

Worthy of note

In the past few days two Midlanders were cited for their extraordinary service, one of them posthumously. Their accomplishments are worthy of note.

Roy Merket, who served for 40 years as a law enforcement officer and court bailiff before his death last year at the age of 64, posthumously was presented the Liberty Bell Award for outstanding community service by the Midland County Young Lawyers Association.

Duke Jimerson, a former district governor for Lions International, will be presented the prestigious International 300 Key Award in June. When he receives the honor, Jimerson will become the fifth living person to receive the noteworthy honor.

Numerous individuals in Midland County came into contact with Merket at Midland County Courthouse in his years of service. Said Vann Culp, judge of 238th State District Court, in honoring Merket prior to his death: "Roy loves people. It is his natural talent to make people feel comfortable in judicial settings that sometimes may appear awful to the average person. Roy is a big man, and with respect to his innermost being, he has a big heart."

Jimerson's honor and his service to mankind are commendable. The honor is rendered even more prestigious by the fact that he will be the youngest recipient ever of the Lions International award. In 1982 and 1983, Jimerson received the International President's Award.

Congratulations to Florence Merket, wife of the late honoree, and Jimerson on their respectable awards. All Midland should be proud.

An 'A' for effort

For the third time in four years, Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyoming, has introduced a bill to clarify the nation's tangled immigration laws and to halt the influx of illegal aliens.

Few items of legislation have been so beset with attacks from special interests than the Wyoming senator's project. And, along the way, Simpson appears to have lost his chief collaborator on previous bills, Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Kentucky.

The new bill, which would delay granting legal status to illegal aliens until better control is achieved on our borders is fairly assured of passage in the Senate but its fate is uncertain in the House where it lacks a sponsor.

Whatever path Sen. Simpson takes on the alien question produces thorns. Conservatives invariably oppose his measures as too mild and liberals hit them as too severe. Politicians are gun-shy because of the possible alienation of their Hispanic support and employers are wary of the penalties prescribed for the hiring of illegal aliens.

The latest version of Simpson's proposal, however, does have the full support of Attorney General Edwin Meese and has won the endorsement of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce which opposed earlier measures as being too burdensome for employers.

Meanwhile, if Congress ever gets around to giving high marks for diligence, patience and dogged determinaion, Sen. Simpson deserves to go to the head of the receiving line.

Another View:

Drag it aboard!

Determined to take back with him a sampling of American consumer treasures, a Swiss friend of ours boarded his flight home with a microwave oven under one arm and a waterbed (without the water) under the other.

"Somehow I managed to get them on the plane," he wrote, "but fitting them under the seat was a little tricky."

Millions of domestic airline passengers make our Swiss friend look like a piker. They lug with them baggage that runs the gamut from bowling balls and Christmas trees to grandfather clocks, leaky car batteries and, in one unconfirmed case, an embalmed body stashed in a garment bag.

"Out of control" is the way the Federal Aviation Agency describes the problems associated with carryon baggage. Investigators for the agency say excess baggage weight can affect a plane's airworthiness and upset the fuel requirements and takeoff speed. Carryon baggage, which is supposed to be stowed under seats or in overhead compartments, can also become dislodged in turbulence and pose safety hazards.

Small wonder then that the FAA is considering a crackdown on carryons. The nation's 21,000 unionized flight attendants, who have the unhappy task of policing the baggage-crammers, want rules requiring airlines to measure and limit carryons.

It's an overdue corrective. Sure, there would be some delays. But if passengers know the rules in advance, they'll be more likely to forgo unwieldly baggage or check it before boarding. Where is it written that, for the price of an airline ticket, you are also entitled to space for your Christmas tree?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, June 3, the 154th day of 1985. There are 211 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 3, 1963, Pope John XXIII died at the age of 81, ending a papacy marked by innovative reforms within the Roman Catholic Church.

On this date:

In 1621, the Dutch West India Company received a charter for New Netherlands — now known as New York.

In 1808, Jefferson Davis — the first and only president of the Confederacy — was born.

In 1935, the French liner Normandie set a record on its maiden voyage, arriving in New York after crossing the Atlantic in just four days, 11 hours and 42 minutes.

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford ended his week-long European tour with a visit to Rome for talks with Italian President Giovanni Leone and Pope Paul VI.

Five years ago: In the latest round of primaries, President Jimmy Carter won enough delegates to ensure his renomination.

One year ago: During a visit to Ireland, the land of his ancestors, President Reagan stopped by Ballyporeen in County Tipperary.

Today's birthdays: Actor Maurice Evans is 84. Actor Tony Curtis is 60. Actress Colleen Dewhurst is 59. Poet Allen Ginsberg is 59. Musician Curtis Mayfield is 43.

Thought for today: "Civil liberties are always safe as long as their exercise doesn't bother anyone." — New York Times editorial, Jan. 3, 1941.

Embassy safety gets budget ax

WASHINGTON — In recent years our diplomats, as the targets of terrorists, have put their lives on the line. So imagine, if you will, the State Department bureaucrats turning down an embassy's request for $130,000 to beef up its security. And imagine also that the embassy in question is the one in Beirut.

Jack Anderson

Hard to believe, isn't it?

But that appears to be what's happened.

When Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew requested this relatively modest sum to protect his people in the front lines of Beirut, he got no sympathy from the rear-echelon commandos who man the swivel chairs in Washington. They reminded him, in effect, that money doesn't grow on trees. They also lectured him about spending funds on security without dotting all the i's.

As a final insult, the Foggy Bottom featherheads told the ambassador that if he seriously expected to get the money he needs, he'd have to promise to follow strict budgetary protocol in the future, review all the embassy's expenditures and submit a "state of your budget" report.

After Bartholomew does all this, they'll think about his request for $130,000.

State Department officials have refused to discuss any aspect of the situation with us on security grounds. One spokesman huffed that he didn't see how this was a story at all. We'll let you be the judge. Here's what we've learned:

From a cable stamped "confidential" obtained by our associate Donald Goldberg, it appears that Beirut asked for the $130,000 to hire guards and trailers for embassy property outside the fortified compound. A State Department budget officer was sent to look things over.

"While we realize your need for the requested funds," the cable stated, "we want to share with you our appreciation of the situation."

The cable whined in some detail about the grim budget conditions in Washington: "Funding is very tight.... (Security) has expended its supplemental.... (Other offices) are already down to emergency reserves in their regular budget." (Don't the people in Beirut appreciate how rough things are back home? Dealing with Congress, stuck in traffic on I-66, trying to get tickets to the Kennedy Center?)

The cable then adopts a sternly admonitory tone: "It appears that you have expended funds beyond those ... allotted or available. In addition, we are concerned that funds allotted for security guards have been expended on other projects."

Having established that the embassy was undeserving of sympathy from the people in Washington who are really suffering hardships, the cable laid down "certain steps" that should be taken "to get control of the situation and before we can provide any increased funding."

First, prepare a "state of your budget" report.

"Second, you should ensure that no expenditures are made for which funds are not available or obligated.... Before any obligations can be made an officer must certify that funds are available. This applies to regular post funds as well as special security ... allotments."

Third, the cable said, "you should review current plans as well as ongoing programs for expenditures of all types to ensure that they are absolutely required (include such categories as overtime, lease of vehicles, etc.)."

The cable offers a glimmer of sympathy. "While we understand the necessity for security and continued embassy operations, the state of the budget is such that expenditures which are not critical may not be made."

But it closes with the bureaucracy firmly in charge: "On receipt of your report, we will review your request for increased funding."

ROBOT REPORT: In a chat with us, President Reagan described an astonishing high-tech demonstration in the White House. He watched in amazement, he said, as a robot performed simulated brain surgery on a skull model. Another robot methodically washed a window after first opening the curtain with human care. It was a baffling performance, Reagan said, for someone like himself who "can't operate a pocket calculator."

WE TOLD YOU FIRST: In April, we reported that Navy documents showed long-suppressed evidence that South Africa exploded a nuclear device in 1979. The Washington Office on Africa, a public-interest group, has now released supporting evidence and Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., and other House members have asked President Reagan to "impose an immediate and unconditional embargo on all nuclear relations with South Africa."

Dole endangering tax reform?

WASHINGTON — Top-level advisers to President Reagan view Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, who has staked his reputation on budget-cutting, as the greatest single danger to tax reform on Capitol Hill.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Private word circulating inside the White House is that Dole, to protect the budget-cutting leadership he hopes will advance his presidential ambitions, wants the Reagan tax reform to die in the House and never reach the Senate.

Although intimates of the Republican leader scoff at such talk, White House aides say they are convinced that he does not want the bill to come to the Senate and then become law. Credit would go to Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood and Dole's long, hard work to cut the budget would be quickly forgotten.

'MACHIAVELLI' ATWATER

A top-secret 1984 action memorandum is raising eyebrows for counseling the Reagan-Bush campaign to enlist "top Pentagon brass" in an all-out attack against Walter Mondale's foreign policy in the event Reagan lost the second debate last fall.

Described in vivid detail by authors Jack Germond and Jules Witcover in their new 1984 campaign book, "Wake Us When It's Over," the memo drafted by deputy campaign director Lee Atwater was catch-up insurance in case Ronald Reagan lost the national security debate in Kansas City. "We should not hesitate to violate protocols by enlisting top Pentagon brass to help" Reagan recover any lost ground, it said. Defense officials are supposed to stay out of presidential campaigns.

When Reagan won, the six-page memo went into mothballs. One insider, noting Germond and Witcover called it worthy of Niccolo Machiavelli, whose name is synonymous with political manipulation, said privately it was what he would want from his political aide if he were running for president. Atwater, now a consultant, is a political adviser to Vice President George Bush, a leading 1988 White House hopeful.

GABBY SAM LEWIS

Highly-regarded U.S. Ambassador Sam Lewis' attack on right-wing Israeli leader Ariel Sharon stunned — but did not anger — top Reagan administration diplomats, who attributed it to Lewis' desire to stir up political turmoil before resigning and returning here as a foreign policy consultant.

Lewis' public charge that Sharon both misled and damaged the U.S. with the Israeli attack on Lebanon in June 1982 raised a major league political storm in Israel, pitting the longest-serving ambassador in U.S. history against the hero of Israel's right-wing Likudniks.

State Department officials, who detest Sharon, privately say Lewis sought two results: to soften criticism that he has sometimes acted as an Israeli flak and to create a controversy, making him a more popular figure on the lecture circuit when he returns home.

MUTING KEMP'S CRITICISM

Reaganite Republicans close to Rep. Jack Kemp were horrified when they read that the author of low, supply-side tax rates was knocking President Reagan's tax reform as one he could "not support" so long as the top individual tax rate stayed at 35 percent.

"Jack should have been leading the praise," one Kemp ally told us, "while holding the door open for improvement." Instead, initial Kemp reaction in all the media was negative on Reagan's most important domestic second-term initiative.

In fact, Kemp is not so negative. His statement was written for the press while he was beyond reach on a transcontinental flight. The next day, aware that his blast at the reform proposals made him look like a Reagan foe to the very Reaganites he will need in his presidential bid, he put the record straight: The program is "good" and "I want to make it better."

REGAN COURTS PRESS

White House chief of staff Don Regan, trying hard to emerge from a long run of bad personal reviews, has decided that his predecessor, James Baker III, was right to spend almost one-third of his time with newsmen.

Before switching places with Baker, then-Treasury Secretary Regan studied the schedules of Baker and other top White House aides. He was amazed to learn that Baker spent so much time talking to reporters: one-third on the press, one-third on Congress and one-third in presidential meetings, Baker told Regan.

When Regan started taking bad press hits, he understood why and began to do exactly what Baker did. His press notices have improved somewhat.

RUSSELL BAKER

Progress has its pitfalls!

NEW YORK — Until recently, I have been embarrassed by my distaste for approximately 97 percent of everything that passes for progress. This was partly due to a reluctance to ally myself with mossbacks. No sensitive person can fail to wince at the suspicion that the only people who share his dislike for progress are those who have only recently accepted the abolition of slavery, and then only because economists concluded that slavery made for inefficient business personnel.

Russell Baker

There was also the age problem. Applauding whatever is called progress is thought to be natural to the young, while deploring it is commonly regarded as evidence of decrepitude. Old fogies hate progress, supposedly. Who would not be embarrassed to be thought an old fogy? Even old fogies deny their fogyism.

Yet, is it not dishonest to pretend a respect for progress simply because of vanity, which deters you from conceding that in some matters you see eye to eye with the slavers, while also encouraging you to try to pass for a youth?

Obviously. Still, it was not a sensible intellectual analysis of my position that exposed its falsity to me. No. Logic, rational thought — these I avoid. They are school sports, which lead only to the debating society, where young people are conditioned to the foolish idea that winning the argument is important. Winning the argument is for children; an adult is someone who has learned that winning the argument rarely has anything to do with getting results.

"Getting results" — how American that phrase looks. How unembarrassing to be in favor of "getting results." Here was the phrase that made it possible at last to put aside my fears, after all those years of faking a respect for progress, and speak from the heart. Progress — or at least 97 percent of what is called progress — is not only not progress; much of it is a disaster, and much more of it a nightmare.

To put it in more American terms, almost all progress gets either no results at all, or no results worth getting, or results so dreadful, and often incurable, that life is blighted by them ever afterward.

I started thinking about the "getting-results" test a few weeks ago when the federal budget director, David Stockman, lectured Congress on the wastefulness of having a government-subsidized passenger railroad system. Railroad time was over, he said. Progress had blessed us now with airplanes, and buses and cars.

Assuming Stockman is correct, what a depressing prospect progress has given us. True, when you are in a hurry to cover immense distances, airplanes are splendid. Except for the rich and expense-account classes in first class, though, air travelers are also subjected to discomforts and disciplines, sometimes bordering on outright bullying, that make most modern air travel little more alluring than cattle transport.

Here is a typical case of progress leading to barbarity, which is scarcely too strong a word to describe the modern air travel President Reagan's budgeteers say is all we can afford.

When considering lurches backward toward the abyss like this one, I recall the president's 1984 campaign and its talk of the country standing tall once more, of happy days being here again, of a better life that all would share. That campaign was boasting about progress, and its aftermath in the transportation division — Stockman's prescription of more pain and suffering at the airport — typifies the customary aftermath of progress: to whit, pain, suffering, backward lurches toward barbarity.

This is the same progress (transportation divisions) that has made it almost impossible for Americans ever to experience the pleasure of crossing the oceans by ship, and to travel from work to the tract house in the ravaged wheat field without daily doses of noxious gases and hours of cultivating hatred for one's highway neighbor.

Now the usual youth will say, "So you wish you were living back there in the good old days when surgeons had to take out your kidneys without any anesthetic, do you?"

Come off it, kiddies. I can see that 3 percent of progress is the real stuff, and a lot of that 3 percent has happened at the hospital. On the other hand, the hospital is also where progress has placed that insane computer that charges you $2.75 for an aspirin tablet.

At the hospital, too, progress can now keep your heart beating forever while you stare forever unblinking, unfeeling, untalking, unknowing, uncaring at a point 5,000 miles away forever. That's progress at its worst. Worse even than air travel.

Douglas reminisces after friend's death

Kirk Douglas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kirk Douglas, who is more interested in the future than the past, is not addicted to reminiscence. However, the tight-jawed star recently took one of his infrequent looks backward on his 40 years in Hollywood.

The reason for Douglas' memory trip was the recent death of Albert Maltz, one of the "Unfriendly 10" — film personalities who were jailed and blacklisted in the 1950s because they refused to testify about their radical politics. Maltz died April 26 at age 76 from complications of a stroke he suffered last July.

The blacklist was finally broken in 1959 when Douglas openly employed the late Dalton Trumbo to work on the script of "Spartacus."

"I felt badly about those people," Douglas said. "They weren't trying to overthrow the government. I didn't share their beliefs, any more than I am in sympathy with the opinions of Vanessa Redgrave. But I support her suit against the Boston Symphony. That's a blacklist."

Miss Redgrave sued the orchestra for $5 million after it canceled six performances in 1982 of Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex," which she was to narrate. She said she was blacklisted because of her support of the Palistine Liberation Organization.

Douglas said that during the 1950s, the studios surreptitiously hired blacklisted writers — Trumbo even earned an Academy Award for writing "The Brave One" under an alias. Douglas himself first secretly employed Trumbo for a much-needed rewrite of "Spartacus."

"Then one day I decided 'no more secrets,'" said the producer-star. "I left a pass for him at the Universal gate. The news was out, and you know what? The sky didn't fall in. Other companies started hiring blacklisted writers and actors."

Today Douglas reflects: "I don't go out to make enemies, but I'm not afraid of doing so. I know that some people say, 'What a difficult guy Kirk Douglas is.' My answer to that is: 'Did Joseph Mankiewicz say I was difficult? Did Elia Kazan, Billy Wilder, William Wyler, Howard Hawks and other directors I worked with?' Maybe people who say that are the ones who weren't doing their job.

"I admit I was too impatient in my younger years. But throughout my career in films, I never expected anyone to work harder than I do."

His next project is a CBS movie, "Amos," in which he plays a 78-year-old man. "At last," he said, "a part that I'm too young for."

At 68 Douglas appears unwilling either to mellow or to age, though he did agree to take his wife, Anne, on a European vacation, the first non-business trip of their 30-year marriage. He still works out daily and visits the offices of Bryna Productions, named after his mother.

After a decade, NBC's back on top

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC won the ratings "sweeps" conducted in May by both the A.C. Nielsen Co. and the Arbitron Ratings Co., ending a decade-long drought for the network, figures from both services showed today.

It was the first time since November 1974 that NBC finished No. 1 in a sweep conducted by either Nielsen or Arbitron, and the double triumph was the first for the network since February 1969.

The sweeps, which help set television advertising rates, are done quarterly, and NBC had not been the top network in May since 1972.

The May sweeps are particularly important because stations in about 200 cities use the results to set advertising rates for fall programs.

NBC finished second to CBS in the recently completed fall season.

Ratings figures from both the Arbitron survey, done May 1-28, and the Nielsen sampling, May 2-29, were identical: 14.5 for NBC, 14.1 for CBS and 12.8 for ABC.

One rating point is equivalent to 849,000 homes, or 1 percent of those in the country with TV. Thus, in an average minute during the May sweeps, 14.5 percent of the country's homes with television were watching NBC programs.

Storms may cool area temperatures

From Staff and Wire Reports

The possibility of thunderstorms may cool temperatures in the Midland area through Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight with a low near 70, decreasing Tuesday to a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms with an afternoon high in the lower 90s. Winds will be from the southeast at 10 to 20 mph tonight, shifting to the south at 15 to 20 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 96 was four degrees below the record set in 1977. This morning's low was 19 degrees above the 1947 record of 47.

STATE

A weak stationary front prompted showers and a few thunderstorms across Northwest Texas today, and forecasters predicted more widely scattered precipitation through the beginning of this week.

The front stretched from Northeast New Mexico eastward through near Lubbock to the Red River northwest of Wichita Falls and into western Oklahoma. Low clouds moved northward across South, Central and East Texas as moist air moved inland from the Gulf of Mexico. High clouds were scattered across the north and west.

Winds statewide were generally south at 10 to 20 mph. Gusts from dying thunderstorms along the Texas-New Mexico border kicked up dust in the Lubbock area, reducing visibilities to 4 miles.

Widely scattered thunderstorms were expected through Tuesday in the west and far south. High temperatures should range from the upper 80s in the northwest to near 105 in the Big Bend.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms were widespread today across the South, the nation's midsection and the West as a Florida heat wave prompted health warnings.

A severe thunderstorm watch was in effect for parts of east central Missouri, central and southern Illinois and central and eastern Oklahoma.

Showers and thunderstorms spread from western and northern Texas to Missouri, Kentucky and Ohio and rumbled across the eastern Carolinas, the west central Plains and from the central Rockies to California. Rain showers were scattered across Montana.

Leconte upsets Noah

French Open

PARIS (AP) — An inspired Henri Leconte upset fellow Frenchman Yannick Noah 6-3, 6-4, 6-7, 4-6, 6-1 at the French Open tennis tournament Sunday in an emotion-charged, fourth-round match before a frenzied partisan crowd.

Noah, winner of the 1983 French Open, came back from two sets down to set the stage for a dramatic finish. But the hard-hitting, 22-year-old Leconte, who teamed with Noah to capture the doubles title here last year, never let the No. 9 seed get started in the decisive set.

The victory sends Leconte, who also eliminated fifth-seeded Andres Gomez of Ecuador, into the quarterfinals against No. 4 Mats Wilander, a 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 winner over Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia.

In the other fourth-round men's singles matches played Sunday, top-seeded John McEnroe eliminated No. 12 Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden 6-3, 7-5, 6-2, while another Swede, No. 7 Joakim Nystrom, stopped Chile's Hans Gildemeister 7-6, 6-1, 6-1.

In women's fourth-round singles matches, No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd downed No. 11 Steffi Graf of West Germany 6-2, 6-3; Terry Phelps, an 18-year-old right-hander from Larchmont, N.Y., upset No. 8 Carling Bassett 4-6, 6-0, 6-3 when the Canadian totally lost concentration; No. 4 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria defeated No. 10 Bonnie Gadusek of Largo, Fla., 7-5, 6-3; and 15-year-old Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, the No. 14 seed, ousted South Africa's Rosalyn Fairbank 6-0, 1-6, 7-5.

In the bottom half of the women's singles draw, Lloyd will now face Phelps and Maleeva will play Sabatini.

The steady progress of McEnroe and Lloyd almost went unnoticed as the French fans fixed their attentions on their "final" between Leconte and Noah.

Leconte broke Noah in the fourth game of the fifth set to go ahead 3-1, held serve and then broke Noah again at love to take a commanding 5-1 lead. Leconte fought off a service break point in the seventh game, slammed a cross-court backhand volley home to take the advantage and finished off the match with another winning volley off a weak service return.

"I could not play the match thinking I was playing Yannick Noah," said Leconte, who concedes that he has always thought of the 25-year-old Noah as something of a "big brother." "I just had to go out and think I was playing just another player."

Leconte, who burst on the scene in 1980 by winning the French Open junior boys' title, has long been tagged as "an eternal hopeful" who looked as though he would never fulfill his promise. Initial comparisons early in his career were with another powerful left-hander, the legendary Australian Rod Laver.

But coming into this $2.2 million clay court Grand Slam event, Leconte had switched coaches, shed 15 pounds and tamed his instinct to attack on every point.

Punching Lakers set up Celtics for kayo

By ROY S. JOHNSON
New YorkTimes News Service

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — From the onset of the playoffs, the Los Angeles Lakers have denied that their motivation stems from revenge. But they played Sunday afternoon with the kind of fire and emotion that contradicted that assertion.

The result was a convincing 136-111 triumph over the Boston Celtics that gave the Lakers a 2-1 lead in the 4-of-7-game championship series, with the next game Wednesday and the following one at the Forum here.

Three altercations broke out, one resulting in the ejection of the Celtics' Ray Williams in the final period. The others occurred in the first half and both involved the Celtics' Kevin McHale, who led all scorers with 31 points.

"I don't know if it's anger," said James Worthy, whose 29 points led the victors. "But we remember the kind of things they used against us last year. We can't let that happen again. We can't back down."

In the final series last year, the Lakers lost two games after victory had seemed assured, and eventually lost the series, 4-2.

Now, not only because of their magnificent play, the momentum has swung to the Lakers, who were routed in the first game. They have succeeded in erasing their all-finesse image, replacing it with that of physical and mental toughness.

"Those kinds of things are going to happen, unless one team backs off," said Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the shouting matches and bench-clearing episodes. "I don't see anybody trying to hurt anybody out there. Everybody just wants to win."

Abdul-Jabbar, whose brilliant play in the second game ignited his team, continued his pace. After scoring 16 of his 26 points in the first half and making such uncharacteristic plays as diving for loose balls and dribbling upcourt to lead a fast break — "I make those kind of plays in my dreams all the time," he said with a smile — he played spectacular defense in the second half. The 38-year-old center held Robert Parish without a point or a rebound after intermission.

Abdul-Jabbar also had 14 rebounds, 7 assists, 2 steals and 2 blocked shots. Parish finished with 17 points and 8 rebounds.

"I think what happens in the regular season is that players tend to play naturally, doing what comes easily for them," said the Laker coach, Pat Riley. "When it gets to the playoffs, they go beyond that. They do things they don't do all the time."

A skyhook in the third period pushed Abdul-Jabbar ahead of Jerry West, the former Laker guard and now the general manager, as the league's leading playoff scorer. He now has 4,459 points in 16 seasons.

Worthy, in his third season, has finally found his niche on this talent-laden team — as a second low-post scoring threat and a menacing wing on the break. It has not hurt his motivation that he is mostly guarded by Larry Bird, generally regarded as the best player in the sport.

Worthy exploded in the second period for 15 points and helped the Lakers overcome a 48-38 deficit to take a 65-59 halftime lead.

The Lakers took command in the third period. After Boston had pulled to 71-67, the Lakers went on a 27-13 surge for a 98-80 margin.

Worthy added 12 of his 14 third-period points in the run, capping it with a nifty steal from Scott Wedman and a flying fast-break dunk.

By then, Coach K.C. Jones could see the inevitable and benched many of his starters, including Parish and Bird.

Bird scored 20 points, but he hit only 4 of 13 shots in the first half and finished with 8 for 21. "That didn't help our cause a bit," said Jones.

The Celtics hit only one of their first 10 shots in the fourth quarter, allowing Riley to replace his starters.

Heuer four-hits Midland, 6-0

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO—Mark Heuer struck out nine and walked none in hurling San Antonio's Dodgers to a 6-0 Texas League win over the Midland Angels before 1,954 fans here Sunday night.

The 6-4 righthander from Mount Prospect, Ill., notched his fifth win of the year in handing Midland its third shutout defeat of the season. Both of Heuer's defeats have come at the hands of the Angels, 6-2 and 18-5.

The win also halted a three-game losing streak for the Dodgers and tied the current series at 1-1. San Antonio leads the season's series 7-5.

Centerfielder Devon White had two of Midland's four hits.

As it turned out, the Dodgers gave Heuer all the runs he needed in the first inning on a three-run burst against Don Timberlake, 3-6. Ken Harvey singled and Reggie Williams beat out a bunt single. Catcher Todd Gauntlett then delivered a single to center and when White's throw was wild to third, Williams got up and scrambled home with a second run and Gauntlett went to third on Timberlake's wild throw to the plate.

Birdie Putt

Bill Glasson reacts to birdie putt on 14th hole, but he saved his best for last, a 50-footer on the final hole to edge Larry Mize for the Kemper Open title.

Glasson admits to nerves

Kemper Open

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Bill Glasson admits to getting nervous during the final round of the $500,000 Kemper Open. And that was before he reached the final hole.

"I wasn't thinking about too much going out," Glasson said Sunday after he edged Larry Mize and Corey Pavin by one stroke with a 42-foot-plus putt on the 18th hole. The putt meant $90,000 for Glasson, his biggest day since entering the circuit as a pro last year.

"I was in a good position to make a good check and that's what I was interested in," said Glasson.

Glasson, who lost his card as a rookie last year and requalified last fall, was tied for fifth place, six strokes behind Mize, at the start of the day. After making four birdies, including the final three holes on the front nine, he began the back nine with another birdie, on the par-5, 493-yard No. 10.

"By the time I birdied 10, I felt it would be a good day," said the 25-year-old. "I lost a little concentration with the bogey at 11."

He said he regained some of the concentration with a par at No. 12, then birdied the next two holes and saved par on Nos. 15 and 16. "By then, I was seriously choking," he said. "I couldn't even talk. I told my caddy, Mike (Harmon), he had to get me through, he had to take me in."

Glasson bogeyed No.17 and, he said: "That took all the burden off my back. That took the pressure away. All the tension was gone."

On the final hole, he hit a 3-wood from the tee and had 196 yards left to the pin. "I decided to step on a 7-iron. At that point, I didn't want to smooth anything. I was going for the pin.

"I got my second shot in front of George Archer's ball (on the green)," he continued, saying he got his line to the hole from Archer's ball.

"I wasn't trying to make the putt," he said, before anyone even asked him. "I just didn't want to three-putt."

"If you told me I had to make the putt at 18 to win the tournament, I probably would have hit into the lake," said the 25-year-old.

Dooley wants allowance for players

DALLAS (AP) — College football players used to get $15 a month for "laundry and incidentals" in addition to their scholarship money.

"When I was an athlete you received $10 a month, and I know how helpful that was to me," says Georgia Coach Vince Dooley. "Now, also being an athletic director, I can see what this can do. What this really comes down to is a need thing."

Attempts to restore some form of expense money have been rejected several times at the NCAA's annual convention because of the cost. Now, members of the College Football Association's coaches committee, chaired by Dooley, have come up with a new plan.

As explained Sunday by Dooley, it would give players $600 a year in spending money — $60 a month over a 10-month period — and would be funded by making them pay for "complimentary" tickets.

Dooley thinks his committee has found a way to make the plan applicable to football only, although howls of protest are bound to arise from other sports, both men's and women's.

"If you can fund it — that's the rationale behind it," Dooley said of the plan, which could be presented to the NCAA's regular convention next January.

Angels grow their own now

Most of the players seen on today's major league farm club wind up in someone else's major league lineup, or, at least, that's the way it seems.

But don't suggest that to California Angels' Player Personnel Director Bill Bavasi, unless you'd like to see the short hairs on the back of his neck bristle.

"That's not the case with us," he defends. "Not since we adopted the policy of growing and keeping our own."

Bavasi admits that back in 1980, the Angels could lay legitimate claim to only one farm-grown product on the California roster.

"But it has changed. This year's club has 11 players who were brought up through the farm system and it's going to get better in the future," Bavasi assures.

HE ADMITS sometimes young prospects are traded off to fill an immediate need. "We traded Ken Landreaux, pitchers Paul Hartzell and Brad Havens and third baseman Dave Engle to get Rod Carew from the Twins, but I look on Carew as a product of our farm system."

Although he wasn't hitting for much at the time the Angels traded him, Bavasi says, "We knew Tom Brunansky would be good." It was just a case of surrending young talent to fill an immediate need to help in a pennant race. Brunansky is hitting home runs with the Twins instead of the Angels as a result of a trade.

"Even though we might have the best shortstop in the game playing for the California club, it doesn't stop us from developing shortstops in the minors," Bavasi said. "You never know what may happen. You might wind up trading the major leaguer and then you'd have to have someone to take his place. Or maybe you'd trade that top minor league shortstop to get the player you need for the major league team."

BAVASI spent the last homestand in Midland viewing his future California Angels, or players he hopes will live up to the potential that interested scouts in the first place.

After a banner year, best record in the minor leagues, at Redwood last season, the jump to the Texas League has been a big one for some of the young hands and the first half of the season has been a struggle.

Already Bavasi's visit for a first hand glimpse at Midland's Texas League club has resulted in some changes and perhaps there will be more to come.

BAVASI is the youngest of the baseball family that got its start in the game when dad Buzzy was with the Brooklyn Dodgers. When the Dodgers moved west, Bill left home in Bronxville for the coast and attended college at the University of California at San Diego.

Bavasi is convinced that outside of the major leagues, "AA baseball is the best in the minors. You've got young kids here on their way up. Some of them are capable of making the big leagues in one jump. In AAA, you have a lot of players on their way back down after being in the majors and other players are on hold.

"It's the only place you have loyalty to a team. The day of a Mickey Mantle is gone," he adds wistfully of the Oklahoma Kid who came to the major leagues as a Yankee and remained a Yankee until he retired.

"I'm glad to have him us," says Bavasi, "But somehow I will always think of Reggie Jackson with the Oakland A's. That's where he started and belonged."

Of course, with free agency the day of a player staying with one team for a career became a thing of the past. And for the fans brought up in this present era, it apparently doesn't mean that much.

With super stars jumping to the highest bidder, it means even a team like the Texas Rangers or Chicago Cubs can harbor hopes of turning things around, if the price is right. As a matter of fact, the Cubs are the prime illustration at the moment.

As for Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's attempt to check the sweep of drugs through the game with a manadatory drug test of all baseball personnel, minor league players and front office, Bavasi pointed out that "The Angels tested all their young players in spring training and we run spot checks during the season. I've been tested already."

However, there isn't much that can be done about policing the major leagues unless the players' union agrees.

Lopez wins title with finishing 65

LPGA

MASON, Ohio — Nancy Lopez said she turned her anger and frustration of the last three days into positive motivation for victory Sunday, as she overcame the effects of her two-stroke, slow-play penalty and ran away with the 31st LPGA championship by a stunning eight shots over Alice Miller.

The 28-year-old Miss Lopez was visibly upset after having been penalized for undue delay on the 17th hole Thursday while she was taking the first-round lead. She later admitted what had been obvious — that the penalty bothered her for the next two rounds. But she held the lead after two rounds and was tied with Miss Miller for the lead after three.

Sunday she took off early and settled the issue on the front nine of the soggy Grizzly Course at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center with some of the most precise golf in her successful career. She finished with her second 7-under-par 65 for a total of 15-under 273. Her first three rounds were 65 (including the two penalty shots), 71 and 72.

Miss Miller, seeking her second major victory of the year after winning the Nabisco Dinah Shore in April, went into a slump and shot a 73 for 281. Pat Bradley birdied the final hole to tie Lori Garbacz for third at 284.

"I was very upset Thursday," Miss Lopez said. "And I was still upset yesterday. But when I got up today I had to make up my mind that since I was still mad, I had to be mad positively. I was able to make that madness make me more determined."

Rarely has Miss Lopez better combined her long, accurate drives with deadly iron shots and excellent putting to produce a more devastating effect than she did in gaining the 31st victory of her professional career, her second tour triumph in a row and her second Ladies Professional Golf Association title. She won the other one on this course in 1978 during her rookie year. That was the fourth of her LPGA record of five consecutive triumphs.

This was the sixth time that she had won won two or more tournaments in succession. She won the Chrysler-Plymouth Classic in New Jersey two weeks ago and did not play last week at Corning, N.Y.

"I felt real calm," Miss Lopez said. "I never felt nervous. I felt loose all day. I felt it was my tournament."

When Miss Lopez is playing her best, as she did Sunday, she is a killer who gives no quarter. She did not give Miss Miller a chance as she missed only one green in regulation, hit every fairway far out from the tees on the 14 driving holes, hit all four par-3 greens and birdied two of them from less than 14 feet.

The one green she missed was the ninth, where her 5-iron shot skipped over the putting surface. But she chipped back and sank a par-saving, 12-foot putt. Miss Miller missed a 3-foot par putt to fall five shots back at the turn.

Miss Lopez's share of the $250,000 purse was $37,500, so she increased her earnings to $1,382,009 since joining the tour. She moved into second place on the year's money list with $155,103.

Miss Miller, the year's leader, got $23,125 for a total of $217,125. She set an LPGA record by breaking the $200,000 mark in just 15 tournaments.

Dallas Baptist advances in NAIA series

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) — Jay Johnson led a balanced Dallas Baptist College hitting attack with three singles as the Indians eliminated Southern California College of Costa Mesa, Calif., from the NAIA Baseball World Series at Lewis-Clark State College with a 9-2 semifinal victory Sunday.

The Indians had 14 hits in the game but left 12 runners on base. After falling behind 2-0, Dallas Baptist scored three runs in the second inning and two in the third to take a 5-2 lead. A four-run sixth inning added insurance.

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — Mario Andretti dominated the field on the way to an easy victory Sunday in the Miller American 200 Indy-car race at Wisconsin State Fairgrounds Park. Andretti, who put his Lola-Cosworth on the pole the previous day with a track record lap of 147.608 mph, led all but four of the 200 laps around the flat one-mile oval on the way to his second victory in three starts this season.

Tom Sneva, driving one of Dan Gurney's Eagle race cars, finished second, a distant 12.72 seconds behind. Rick Mears was third, his March the only other car on the same lap with the leaders.

Terry Labonte outdueled veteran Bobby Allison for the lead on the 80th lap Sunday, then pulled away in the final 15 laps to win the Budweiser 400 at Riverside Raceway for the second consecutive year. The victory, Labonte's first in 1985, ran his NASCAR Winston Cup point total to 1,815, 49 more than runner-up Bill Elliott.

Hamada, who was in second place after Saturday's second round, tied leader Tu Ai-yu of Taiwan and Japan's Nayoko Yoshikawa on the par-5 15th hole with her fourth birdie of the day...

Brian Jones of Australia surged from behind with an eight-under-par 63, birdied the fourth extra hole of a sudden death playoff against Japan's Nobumitsu Yuhara and won the Mitsubishi Galant Tournament Sunday. Jones started the final round five strokes off the pace in 10th spot and Yuhara also came from behind with a 66, leaving the two tied at 272, 12-under par on the 6,681-yard, par-71 Kume Country Club course. In the playoff, Jones and Yuhara played even for three holes but on the fourth, the 540-yard, par-5 18th, Jones shot a birdie while Yuhara needed five strokes to reach the green as his second shot went out of bounds...

Dashing Phoebe wins rich Kansas Futurity

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Dashing Phoebe, with Jerry Nicodemus aboard, posted a 1¼-length victory in Sunday's $512,090 Kansas Futurity at Ruidoso Downs horse racetrack.

The 4-5 choice took the lead a dozen strides out of the gates and never was seriously threatened for the remainder of the race.

Mango Moon, a 5-1 shot, gained ground in a race for place with King Of Sting, who went off at nearly 15-1. Mango Moon prevailed by a head at the wire with Alex Baldillez in the saddle.

Jon DeBus then brought home the third run with a single up the middle.

Even North Pole applies

DALLAS (AP) — Orders for nearly 134,000 tickets to the 1986 NCAA Final Four basketball championship have poured in from as far away as the North Pole and London.

But only between 3,000 and 4,000 tickets will be available to the general public.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J10 ♡AJ1076 ◇KJ5 ♣A94
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Dble	1 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—We hope you weren't even thinking about bidding two hearts. You told your story with your takeout double, and partner couldn't act. On the auction, the hearts rate to be stacked behind you, and any sortie by you could prove expensive.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A9 ♡AQ ◇K97 ♣AK10652
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠

What do you bid now?
A.—You have a very powerful hand, and you must signal this to partner as soon as possible. Cue-bid two spades. That will allow you to explore all possibilities without fear that partner will suddenly drop the auction.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠3 ♡KQ6 ◇AQ1095 ♣A763
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—This is a hand where you want to describe your shape while showing strength. The correct way to tackle it is to bid three clubs first. That is forcing. At your next turn you will raise hearts, and partner should have a complete picture of your hand.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK876 ♡AQ ◇Q1098 ♣73
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dble	Rdble	2 ◇

What action do you take?
A.—In the light of the auction, we can't believe that East really prefers diamonds to hearts or clubs. It looks as if West's double might be off shape. For the moment, we would double for penalties. That will leave partner well placed to make a decision as the auction develops.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K6 ♡KQ1052 ◇AJ83 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner is showing an enormous major two-suiter. On the strength of your two-over-one response and ace of diamonds, he is prepared to contract for a small slam. He knows nothing about your king of spades—that card must solidify the only gap in his holding. Bid seven hearts.

Q.6—As South vulnerable, you hold:
♠976 ♡A9 ◇KJ93 ♣J1052
Partner opens the bidding with three no trump. What do you do respond?
A.—This is a matter of simple arithmetic. Partner has shown 27 points and you have 9. That means your side has enough for small slam (34 combined HCP) but not enough for a grand slam for which you need at least 37 HCP. Bid six no trump.

Bruce Springsteen's concert in Ireland draws 100,000 'well-behaved' fans

B. Springsteen

SLANE, Ireland (AP) — Bruce Springsteen kicked off a 12-city European tour by drawing the biggest rock concert crowd ever in Ireland, 100,000 screaming fans.

Springsteen charmed them during the four-hour rockathon with his quips — "I'm just a prisoner of rock 'n' roll" — and his explanation that the only thing he did well in high school was play the guitar.

New Jersey-born Springsteen burst into the ampitheater in this tiny community by the River Boyne with his signature song, "Born in the USA."

After an encore of "Twist and Shout," he said, "If anybody needs help to get of there, raise your hand." Tens of thousands of hands were raised.

Police had feared trouble at the Saturday concert, but Chief Superintendent Michael Bohan said the crowd was "extremely well-behaved."

M. Streep

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — Actress Meryl Streep says her plans to become known as a serious actress after her early work as a comedian worked too well, and that now she'd "kill for a comedy role."

"I was always very anxious that people take me seriously and not think that everything I did was for a laugh," Miss Streep said Sunday at Lafayette College's commencement. "Of course, it's all worked much too effectively now, and I'm a very serious actress."

The 1971 Vassar graduate started out in musical comedy and played such roles as Daisy Mae in "Li'l Abner." She won an Academy Award for best actress in 1982 for her portrayal of a Polish Holocaust survivor in "Sophie's Choice."

She told graduates to avoid trying to live up to someone else's expectations, but to "find that personal Rosetta Stone, your own true nature, the code by which you measure right and wrong."

In other awards, Folsom, a white German shepherd from Columbia Pictures' "Body Double" was top dog and Silver, from ABC-TV's "The Yellow Rose" was the equine winner.

Kal Kan Foods, a pet-food manufacturer, co-sponsored the awards with the American Humane Association, a nonprofit group founded in 1939 to ensure humane treatment of movie animals.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As the crowd inside watched the Hal Roach comedy "On the Wrong Trek," Roach was wandering the streets in his Buick, as thoroughly lost as Laurel and Hardy in one of his films.

The scene was the streets of Los Angeles, but it wasn't a remake of a classic Roach two-reeler. The 93-year-old comedy pioneer eventually arrived to get a life achievement award from the Los Angeles Film Teachers Association.

"I must have circled this block two or three times," the producer quipped Saturday after he finally pulled up outside the Four Star Theater.

In his 50-year Hollywood career, Roach helped launch Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Will Rogers, Harold Lloyd and the Our Gang crowd, including Robert Blake, Jackie Cooper, Nanette Fabray and Spanky McFarland.

He won two Oscars for best short subjects: "The Music Box" in 1931 and "Bored of Education" with Our Gang in 1936.

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Times columnist Russell Baker and Claude F. Sitton, editorial director and vice president of The News and Observer and The Raleigh Times in North Carolina, have been elected to the Pulitzer Prize board.

Announcement of their election was made Sunday by Columbia University President Michael I. Sovern.

Sovern also announced that board members Eugene C. Patterson, chairman of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Baker has won two Pulitzers, one in 1979 for distinguished commentary and the second in 1983 for his biography, "Growing Up."

Sitton won the Pulitzer for commentary in 1983.

The Pulitzer board comprises 15 elected members, the president of Columbia University, which sponsors the prizes, and the administrator of the Pulitzer Prizes.• • •

Twins rally to snap 10-game skid

Associated Press

For all of their determination and all of their positive thoughts, Ken Schrom and the Minnesota Twins still seemed headed toward their 11th straight loss.

That is, until little-used Mike Stenhouse hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning Sunday that rallied the Twins past the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4.

"I didn't even think about losing," Schrom said. "I tried to be positive. I was determined to break the streak."

Streaks are nothing new for the Twins this year. They lost nine consecutive games early in the season before immediately rebounding to win 10 straight. Schrom had already lost twice during the new 10-game skid.

Gibson, 5-2, said he planned, at worst, to walk Stenhouse.

"I tried to bounce it," Gibson said. "If he fishes for it, fine. If not, I walk him."

Instead, the ball sailed over the right-field wall at the Metrodome for Stenhouse's third home run of the year.

"The guy's only hitting .196 but that doesn't mean he's not capable of hitting one out. He proved that," Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger said.

American League

Mariners 7, Yankees 6

Alvin Davis drove in three runs and ex-Yankee Domingo Ramos hit his first home run and had an RBI single to help Seattle hold off New York. It was a sweet victory for the Mariners, even though Manager Chuck Cottier wasn't around to see it.

Cottier charged onto the field in the third inning to argue a check-swing by New York's Dave Winfield that was called a ball, and was quickly ejected.

Cottier got so infuriated with first-base umpire Durwood Merrill — who had ruled that Winfield did not swing — he pulled first base off its peg and threw it into right field. On his way to the clubhouse, Cottier stopped in the Seattle dugout to pick out four bats and four helmets, which he tossed onto the field.

Tigers 4, Angels 3

Darrell Evans led off the bottom of the ninth inning with a home run off the facing of the second deck in right field at Tiger Stadium to lead Detroit over California.

Evans connected for his ninth homer of the season off reliever Donnie Moore, 3-2. Moore had entered the game in the eighth and had yielded a solo home run to Lance Parrish that tied the score 3-3.

Willie Hernandez, 4-1, pitched the ninth inning for the victory.

Indians 5-2, Blue Jays 4-5

The first double-header in the major leagues this season wound up as a split in Toronto.

Cleveland rallied to win the first game when Jerry Willard hit a three-run double in the ninth inning off Dave Stieb. The Indians had managed just four hits going into the ninth, but an error by Stieb opened the gates.

Bloop singles by Mike Hargrove and George Vukovich loaded the bases with one out, setting up Willard's key hit.

Brook Jacoby homered in each game for the Indians, who broke a four-game losing streak by winning the opener.

Orioles 10, A's 1

Wayne Gross, Eddie Murray and Cal Ripken Jr. provided all the offense Baltimore needed to rut visiting Oakland.

Gross broke out of a 3-for-34 slump with two homers and drove in four runs. Murray went 4-for-4 with two doubles in driving home three runs, and Ripken had three singles and scored three times.

Murray, 18-for-33 in his last nine games against the A's, also drew a walk in reaching base in all five at-bats.

Red Sox 12, Rangers 3

Jim Rice stroked four hits, including his 10th home run, and drove in three runs to lead Boston's season-high 18-hit attack.

Rick Miller added three singles and Wade Boggs, Steve Lyons, Bill Buckner and Marty Barrett got two hits apiece as every starting Red Sox batter had at least one hit. Miller, Barrett, Glenn Hoffman and Mike Easler drove in two runs each.

Easler put host Boston ahead for good with a two-run double during a four-run fifth inning that broke a 3-3 tie.

White Sox 4, Royals 1

Greg Walker hit a three-run homer that capped Chicago's four-run uprising against Kansas City starter Mark Gubicza.

Richard Dotson, 3-3, allowed six hits before leaving in the seventh inning. Bob James pitched the ninth for his 10th save. It was the White Sox' fifth consecutive win.

Bucs' DeLeon can stop worrying

Associated Press

Jose DeLeon, who had worried about his major-league future, can rest easy.

The 24-year-old right-hander was on a 1-16 streak that extended back to last season, after a 13-7 start over his first 1½ years in the majors. He was 0-7 in 1985 and had a string of 11 winless starts.

DeLeon took a load off his mind Sunday, combining with Al Holland on a two-hitter as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Atlanta Braves 5-0.

In his last start, DeLeon was knocked out by the Astros in the second inning, and had wondered if it would be his last start. The Pirates had sent two other struggling pitchers to the minors.

National League

"I was really thinking that they'd send me down," DeLeon said. "I went to bed that night in Houston and only slept a couple of hours. I was thinking about it because I knew I hadn't been doing the job."

DeLeon allowed only one hit in five innings to gain his first victory this year. He walked one batter and struck out five before being forced out by a blister on his pitching hand.

Giants 3, Phillies 1

Vida Blue hadn't won a game as a starter since Sept. 13, 1982, but held the Phillies to one hit in five innings. Frank Williams and Mark Davis hurled hitless relief to secure the victory.

Mets 7, Padres 3

Gary Carter and Danny Heep each hit two-run homers, welcoming Calvin Schiraldi, 2-0, back from the disabled list. Schiraldi survived a two-run homer by Tony Gwynn in the first inning and hurled five innings for the victory.

Reds 8, Cardinals 3

Pete Rose doubled twice and singled, drove home two runs and scored twice. The three hits gave the 44-year-old player-manager a career total of 4,138 hits, only 54 shy of breaking Ty Cobb's all-time major-league record.

Astros 4, Cubs 3

Terry Puhl sliced a two-run double down the left-field line in the fifth inning and Bill Doran struck a solo home run in the eighth for Houston. Doran had doubled in the second inning, when the Astros scored on a bases-loaded walk.

Mike Scott, 3-2, allowed only four hits in eight innings. He retired 15 of the first 16 batters he faced, walked only one and struck out eight batters, equaling his career high. Dave Smith gave up an unearned run but pitched a hitless ninth for his eighth save.

DOOLEY

He explained that to finance the new proposal, football players would not be allowed their four complimentary tickets to each game, as currently permitted, but could purchase those tickets at faculty rates, usually half-price. The cost of the tickets, he said, would be deducted from the $60-a-month stipend.

"This would eliminate abuses concerning complimentary tickets and also provide for funds to support the incidental expense allowance," Dooley said.

At its convention last January, the NCAA outlawed actually handing players complimentary tickets, which often have been sold illegally, and approved instead a gate list of family members who could use the tickets. Dooley said the coaches' proposal would also provide a gate list for parents and relatives.

Grant Teaff of Baylor said he "was once opposed to such an idea. I have now changed my stance. We should set a sum — $50 a month, $25 a month. I feel we can cut out a lot of the penny-ante stuff that's now going on."

The plan also drew support from the University of Miami's Jimmy Johnson.

"You have to understand that we are dealing with a lot of minorities who have no assistance from home each month," he said. "They're totally on their own. I feel you could eliminate a lot of uneasy feelings (about illegal payments) with this."

Bill Yung (CQ) of Texas-El Paso said a monthly payment "would keep some of the players from practically begging or going out to hock something."

Another supporter was Marshall Criser, president of the University of Florida, whose school was hit with a heavy NCAA probation last year for numerous violations.

"There ought to be some spending money," Criser said. "If there were, there might be less inclination for a coach to lend a player a car or give him money to go home and see his 'sick mother.' The way it is now invites ways to violate the rules."

Dooley announced the coaches' proposal as the CFA wound up its ninth annual meeting. Both the coaches and the CFA's Board of Directors adopted resolutions in favor of "improving the integrity of intercollegiate athletics, and especially in the sport of football."

The NCAA will hold a special convention later this month in New Orleans to vote on legislation that would establish stiffer penalties for major violations and repeat violators, including possible curtailment of a particular sport for up to two years.

The CFA's athletic directors committee expressed concern "about eliminating a sport for one or two years," according to committee chairman Homer Rice of Georgia Tech. "That would penalize many innocent people. It would penalize other members of a conference and the young people in the sport.

"We're not opposed to strong penalties against a coach or a player or an institution by taking away scholarships. But football revenue carries a lot of sports and it might be unfair to a lot of people."

Garden waits

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Boston Garden is waiting.

The 15 championship banners and the retired uniform numbers hanging from the rafters are waiting.

The 14,890 who make up the raucous capacity crowds are waiting.

They're waiting to work their magic on the Los Angeles Lakers. They're waiting to continue the Celtics' mystique of never losing the final game of a National Basketball Association championship series at home.

But they may never get the chance. Despite having the best record in the NBA during the regular season, the Celtics believe their "homecourt advantage" in the finals has been severely diluted by a travel format that is being used for the first time in 30 years.

To save travel costs and alleviate travel fatigue, NBA owners voted to have the team with the best record play the first, second, sixth and seventh games at home, with the other team hosting Games 3, 4 and 5. The previously used format was to play two games in one city, the next two in the other and then hop from city to city until the best-of-seven series was settled.

"I think it's terrible," said Red Auerbach, president of the Celtics and the coach of nine Boston championship teams, of the new format. "It's just too long to be away. The other team is just a fat cat, sitting and waiting. I think it's an advantage to the team playing three in a row at home. They get to stay at their homes for eight days.

"Meanwhile, we get bored, sitting around the hotel and doing nothing. You play a game and sit around three days. It's not good."

The Lakers, after winning the second game of the series at Boston Garden and then Game 3 135-111 on Sunday at the Inglewood Forum, have a chance to win the championship without having to return to the East Coast.

If they do go back, even if they should have a 3-2 lead, history would not be on their side. The Celtics are 15-1 in the championship series, with the only final-game loss coming in a sixth game at St. Louis in 1958, and the Lakers are 0-8 in the finals against Boston.

But lest it sound like sour grapes, the Celtics were unhappy with the 2-3-2 format even after winning the series opener 148-114. They knew if they didn't win Game 2, and they didn't, they could be in trouble.

"I never did like it from the start," star forward Larry Bird said. "What you've got to do is win the first two games at home, then you don't have to worry about it."

"I wish it was the old format," said the Celtics' Kevin McHale. "There's no use crying in your soup, but we're at a disadvantage."

Not surprisingly, the Lakers are happy about the prospect of two more games in front of a friendly crowd.

"I like it a lot," Lakers guard Byron Scott said. "There's less traveling. I think it's a lot more reasonable."

But if the Lakers win their third title since 1980, Scott won't let a change in format taint the victory.

"The homecourt advantage in a series like this is not going to mean too much because you've got two great teams," Scott said. "The best team's going to win no matter what the format is. They beat us last year and the format had nothing to do with it. It really doesn't make a difference. You can win on either team's court."

Lakers owner Jerry Buss said he has no strong feelings for or against the new format.

But he chuckled when he heard the Celtics were unhappy with the format.

"I'm glad they're looking for excuses," he said.

Jim Wall, owner of Jim's Pecan Grove Grocery, works in his office, framed by more than 800 hats and caps customers have brought him over the years.

Neighborhood stops

In today's world of super-supermarkets, the "Mom and Pop" neighborhood grocery stores have found their niche.

To survive in a heavily competitive business against national chain stores, Midland's many small, family-owned grocers have carved out their own place on the block by offering specialty items, concentrating heavily on the beer and cigarette crowd and often, by being in a good location.

Bill and Elaine Crawford, of Mrs. Crawford's Country Store depend on their location. Theirs' is the only store for miles.

Built on a dusty corner lot on County Road 60 West, six miles west of Midland, the small, crowded building is a modern version of the old general store. At Crawford's you can buy detergent, plumbing fixtures and hamburgers hot off the grill — cooked by Crawford.

Known as "Mr. C" by his helpers, Crawford is an integral part of the store. You can't go to Mrs. Crawford's Country Store and not talk to a Crawford.

The store was originally housed in an old barn that Crawford bought and refurbished in 1971.

"I wanted to do something to build up to retirement," said Crawford, who still works as an electrical technician for the U.S. Postal Service.

"A guy who works 24 hours a day doesn't have much time to get into trouble," he said with a laugh.

And Crawford works.

Running back and forth from the kitchen where he's cooking french fries to the check-out counter to ring up groceries and answer the phone, he keeps a hectic pace for a small country store.

The store is a hangout for residents nearby who drop in for a sandwich and just to chat with Crawford. A bulletin board for announcements hangs overhead, as well as a sign saying "no credit".

"We used to let people buy things on credit 'til we went broke," he chuckled.

A magazine rack filled with "The Plain Truth", an older-type scale and a soft ice cream machine are in the front of the three-aisle store, with a rack of plumbing supplies on the back wall.

Crawford takes a breather and sits down at the small kitchen table, where his customers eat lunch in the middle of the store.

"I'll tell you what," he said. "I sure don't have trouble sleeping at night."

While Crawford gets the lunchtime crowd off the roadway, Mike Stephenson of Cotton Flat Grocery gets the after-work crowd — anxious for a cold beer.

"Most of our business is beer and cigarettes," said Stephenson, 21, the son of owner Rod, who also owns Rod Stephenson Construction Company.

The Stephensons have owned the store, a small, wood structure a mile past the interstate on Cotton Flat Road, for eight years. They also carry other food and houseware items, although beer and cigarettes is, by and large, their bread and butter.

The Crawfords run a Mom and Pop store; the Stephensons have a father and son business.

And the Curries have a Mom and son empire.

Gramm: Tax reform proposals will help middle-income families

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm says middle-income families will benefit most from President Reagan's tax reform proposals because their tax rates will be lower and their major deductions will remain intact.

Gramm, R-Texas, said Sunday that families with incomes of $12,000 or less would effectively be removed from federal tax rolls while the wealthier would pay more in taxes at 35 percent than they are paying now at the rate of 50 percent.

The basic goals of the Reagan tax reform measures were elimination of deductions and lowering of marginal rates, Gramm told members of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association at their annual meeting.

He said goals of the Reagan tax reform measures were elimination of deductions and lowering of marginal rates.

"But if you look at the deductions that it eliminates, it does not eliminate deductions that are used by middle income citizens," Gramm said, adding home mortgage interest and charitable donations were the most important deductions used by families earning $20,000 to $50,000.

Gramm said middle-income families usually don't have enough capital for tax-motivated financial planning "beyond an IRA type investment, and in fact we're doubling the ability to use IRAs."

Such families also will see their tax rate drop to 25 percent from 35 percent, he said.

"If you want to know who's going to gain the most if this package is adopted, it's going to be a two or more wage-earner family with all of their income on a W-2 form, no business to write off the car or the pickup against, no professional association to write off the vacation to Hawaii or Europe or Mexico against, and they are going to be the single largest beneficiary to this package," Gramm said.

Gramm, an economist who won a Senate seat last fall by defeating Lloyd Doggett of Austin, said Democrats in Congress are rushing to claim credit for reform proposals.

He said "there is a belief in Washington that tax reform is a fundamentally realigning issue, and it could have an impact like Social Security for 25 years in the future.

Police continue investigation of armed robbery

From Staff Reports

Police are continuing their investigation of the Saturday armed robbery of a Midland pharmacy by two men who escaped with an undetermined amount of cash and drugs.

The two men walked into Bill Wood's Pharmacy, 402 Andrews Highway, at about 12:05 p.m., police said. They were both about 30 years old, and one carried a pistol. One of the men demanded money from the cash register; the other demanded restricted drugs from the pharmacists. The two men fled when a customer came in, police said.

In other police reports from the weekend, a pizza-delivery man was robbed of the pizza he was trying to deliver to an apartment at 4715 W. Wadley.

Christian Woessner was trying to deliver a Domino's pizza at the Wydewood Apartments at 12:30 a.m. Sunday when he found he'd been given the wrong address. As Woessner was returning to his car a man ran up, knocked him down and took the pizza, according to reports. The value of the pizza was $15.55; the value of the warming cover was about $47.

Caren Caples of Oilpatch Mobile Home Park on South Lamesa reported someone slashed 15 tires worth a total of $1,500 sometime between Friday night and Saturday morning. The tires were from three cars and a motorcycle, and two spares were also slashed, according to reports.

Fannie Warren, 1412 E. Chestnut, reported the theft of a $375 BMX bicycle at about 6 p.m. Sunday. The bike was taken from her garage, reports said.

A $1,200 cash register was taken from Mr. C's Grocery store at 5406 Thomason sometime between 9 p.m. Saturday and 6 a.m. Sunday, reports said.

Ice plant worker braved fumes to shut off valves

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 33-year-old worker braved heavy ammonia fumes to turn off about 25 valves after an explosion at an ice plant killed four people, authorities said.

Jim Davis, a sales manager for Lone Star Ice and Food Stores, was not hospitalized immediately but checked himself into a hospital the day after the Wednesday explosion.

He was in good condition Sunday at a local hospital, where he was being treated for exposure to ammonia fumes.

Officials have said they have been unable to determine what caused an ammonia tank to explode, blowing a 40-foot hole in the back wall of the Southern-Henke Ice Co. manufacturing plant.

Four workers were killed, 17 firefighters were overcome with ammonia fumes and several bystanders also were hurt.

Davis said firefighters helped him as he turned off the valves after the explosion.

"What we were trying to do was shut off the ammonia that was left in those tanks," Davis said Sunday, when he was listed in good condition at a local hospital.

Davis said he was away from his office when his secretary paged him about the explosion.

When he arrived at the scene about 10 minutes later, company officials said they needed someone to go in with firefighters and turn off the valves to the ammonia tanks. Ammonia is used as a coolant to make ice.

"They told me which valves needed to be turned off, so I kind of volunteered," he said.

Davis said he wore breathing gear and gloves loaned to him by firefighters, who held a ladder for him while he groped his way through the hazy blast area.

Teacher hopes jet rides lead to shuttle trip

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin English teacher and tennis coach is trying everything from hitching rides on jets to taking a speech class for a one-in-118 chance.

He wants to be an astronaut.

Since the April announcement that he is one of two Texas teachers in the nationwide competition for a citizen-in-space flight on the space shuttle next January, Steve Warren has been working to better his odds.

Friends and acquaintances have congratulated him and wished him well.

Recently, he said, his old high school English teacher who he had not heard from in 20 years phoned.

"That was Ada Anderson," Warren said in the dining room of his west Austin home after hanging up the phone. "She just wanted to wish me the best. She said I had been one of her best students ever, but I doubt that, seriously."

A lot more people may have called Warren, but been unable to reach him.

Warren, who teaches at Austin High School, has been busy trying to prepare for the selection process which will pick only one teacher from the 118 contenders — two from each state and others from the District of Columbia and U.S. territories.

He has toured NASA facilities in Houston, and studied the manual for shuttle astronauts. He has been working on two experiments that he proposed as part of the selection process, and is taking a speech course "as a confidence builder and to learn how to enunciate better and to lose some of this thick Texas accent."

And Saturday morning he got as close as he could to space by hitching a ride on an F-4 fighter plane at Bergstrom Air Force Base.

Warren said that during interviews in April with Texas Education Agency officials who chose the two Texas contenders from more than 400 applicants, the teachers were asked what they had done to prepare for a shuttle flight since President Reagan announced that a teacher would go into space.

Lightning likely cause of fire in six oil tanks

From Staff Reports

Lightning was the cause of a Saturday night oil-tank fire east of Midland, according to fire reports.

The six 200-barrel tanks on County Road 120 belonging to Brazos Petroleum were destroyed by the fire, which required 12,000 gallons of water to extinguish. The fire was reported at about 9:30 p.m. and firefighters had returned to their stations by 1 a.m., reports said.

In other fire reports from the weekend, a house at 61 Mary Circle in Greenwood was damaged Sunday morning by a 3 a.m. fire which was extinguished with 100 gallons. The probable cause was a cigarette left on a couch, reports said. There was heavy damage to the living room and attic, and heavy smoke damage throughout the house, which is owned by Ralph Case.

A cross on top of the Ranchland Heights Baptist Church caught fire about 10:30 p.m. Saturday. The fire, which was put out with 10 gallons of water, caused minor damage to the roof, reports said. The cause was undetermined.

EL PASO (AP) — Wearing a tie or a coat in El Paso's hot summer sun could get people in trouble with Mayor Jonathan Rogers.

STORES

"This is sort of Nita territory that you're in," said Bill Currie, of the south Midland neighborhood where his mother owns three businesses in two blocks. A ceramics store, restuarant and a grocery store all bear the name, Nita's.

Currie runs Nita's Country Store, a medium-sized grocer that caters heavily to a Mexican clientele.

A line of spices, pastries and various other grocery items are all imported from Mexico.

"We get a lot of people who come in her that compete in chili cook-offs," said Currie. Currie points to some of the spices.

"And some of the people have old remedies — cough medicines and other home remedies — where they need special ingredients," he said. "We try and order them if we can."

Currie leases the back of the store to Don's Meat Market, where customers can buy half-beefs and specially prepared chili meat.

The Mexican trade is apparent in Nita's Country Store. One whole cooler bin contains nothing but whole pig's heads.

"People buy those to make tamales with," said Currie.

While the Curries depend on the Mexican customers, Jim Wall of Jim's Pecan Grove Grocery has a different clientele — residents of a nearby trailer park.

"I know three-quarters of them by name," said Wall, who has a house right across the street from the modern grocery store.

Wall is a "working owner", as he likes to say. He talks with pride of his store as he slices meat at the counter in the rear of the store — a store that he has doubled in size through expansion.

"I was a grocery store manager for ten years and decided to open my store," he said.

That Wall's customers know him is evident as well. His tiny walled-in office hold more than 800 baseball caps with different logos that his customers have brought by.

Copy editor finds Lone Star can has 'the real thing'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — No crying in his beer for San Antonio Express-News copy editor Steven Tharpe.

Tharpe got a surprise recently when he popped 45 cents into a soft drink machine at the office and out came a Lone Star beer can.

"My first instinct was to open it, but I knew I still had a couple of hours of work," Tharpe said.

After showing the can to his fellow workers, there was a run on the machine. But the vending machine failed to yield another can of Lone Star.

Another staffer popped open Tharpe's can, only to find it was filled with Diet Coke.

Apparently the beer can somehow became mixed with Coke cans before they were filled by Coca-Cola, which along with Lone Star, gets its cans from American Can Co., the newspaper reported.

Californian suspected in spy case

Man employed by military contractor

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — An employee of a military contractor in California has been implicated in a purported Soviet spy ring, government officials said Sunday night.

The employee, a former Navy worker who lives near Sacramento, Calif., has been interrogated by federal agents, according to the officials, who asked not to be named. They said he was suspected of smuggling secret material from the Alameda Naval Air Station near Oakland, Calif. They declined to be more specific about the type of material.

They also said that John A. Walker Jr., who has been accused of being the leader of the ring, was hired by the Navy to give lie detector tests to sailors charged with misconduct, a post that may have given him access to highly classified information.

Meanwhile, federal agents poring over documents found in Walker's home in Norfolk, Va., reported that they had found receipts from a trip that he apparently made to Mexico in 1975.

A copy of the non-fiction book "Falcon and the Snowman" was found in the house, with a bookmark placed between two pages that describe a 1975 meeting in Mexico City between a Russian diplomat and a California man who wanted to pass secrets to the Soviet Union, according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. That meeting took place seven days after the date reportedly stamped on Walker's receipts.

Walker and his brother and son have been arrested and charged with espionage.

According to the officials, classified military documents were found in the office of the brother, Arthur Walker. The brothers both served in the Navy, and Arthur worked most recently for VSE Corp., a military contractor based in Virginia.

The documents, the officials said, included information about designs for ships that would be used as command-and-control centers at sea.

The sources said that the California man, who has been identified in affidavits only as "D," had permitted federal agents to search his home.

They would not say what was found inside, nor would they describe the ties between "D" and John Walker, a retired Navy communications officer. In a secret message to a Russian diplomat, Walker used the code name "D" to describe the California man, the officials said.

A former employee of John Walker's private detective agency in Norfolk, Va., said that Walker had made frequent trips to San Francisco to visit a business partner.

The officials have said that at least three California men who worked with Walker in the Navy are under surveillance by law-enforcement agents.

In a thorough search of Walker's home in Norfolk, Va., FBI agents found hundreds of items that are listed in an evidence log that the bureau made public last week.

On May 20, the log says, agents found an American Express receipt, dated May 11, 1975, from Tampico, Mexico, in a bathroom closet.

Elsewhere in the house, according to the log, was a copy of the 1979 book, "The Falcon and the Snowman," the story of two Californians who were convicted of selling American satellite secrets to the Soviet Union.

A slip of paper was placed between pages 108 and 109, which describe a Mexico City meeting on May 18, 1975, between a Soviet diplomat and Andrew Daulton Lee, one of the convicted spies.

In the book, Lee and Christopher Boyce, two Californians then in their 20s, were convicted of smuggling highly classified satellite secrets to a Soviet agent based in Mexico.

Shultz, Weinberger to lock horns on expiring SALT II agreement

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and Secretary of State George P. Shultz are expected to clash today at a closed National Security Council meeting called to discuss ways to handle expiration of the SALT II arms control agreement at the end of this year, according to informed sources.

Weinberger will argue that President Reagan should announce next week that at the end of the year the United States will abandon its promise to abide by provisions of the unratified treaty, sources said.

The defense secretary, who has gained Reagan's blessing in past arms-control disputes with Shultz, will contend that the administration's policy of respecting the treaty as long as the Soviet Union shows restraint has been, in the words of one official, "totally unsuccessful" in getting Moscow to comply with the provisions of the treaty.

This source said Weinberger wants the president to begin preparing the country and the world for the expiration of the pact on Dec. 31.

Weinberger will also argue, one source said, that "Soviet forces will essentially be the same over the next five years with or without (the treaty) limits..., as will ours."

The defense secretary is also expected to say that loss of the verification provisions in the SALT II agreement, which prohibit camouflage of missiles and coding test data, will have a minimal effect on the United States "since the Soviets are doing everything now as a practical matter to defeat" permitted U.S. land- and satellite-based intelligence gathering.

Shultz, however, another source said, "will argue there is no need to make a decision now" and that announcing it will only add to Washington's problems with its West European allies over Reagan's "Star Wars" research program, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Shultz is expected to stress that the current policy gives the president flexibility to exceed some treaty limits if necessary.

"If the Soviets change their approach and begin adhering toward strict compliance, we can change, too," one source said Shultz will argue.

Today's White House meeting was to beaimed at settling inter-agency differences before the president sends a report to Congress June 10 on his policies toward the SALT pact and other arms control agreements.

The president was not expected to make any decision today. Instead, sources said, Shultz will take soundings with NATO foreign ministers in Lisbon on Wednesday and Thursday, and a presidential decision will come by the weekend.

Weinberger also appears to have won the first skirmish on the SALT II issue. The Pentagon view has apparently prevailed on what to do when a new Trident submarine, the USS Alaska, goes on sea trials in August carrying 24 intercontinental missiles, placing the United States 14 missiles over a SALT II limit of 1,200 for such weapons.

NATION IN BRIEF

De Lorean venturing into sports cars again

DETROIT (AP) — Automaker John Z. De Lorean, whose venture to make a stainless steel-skinned sports car failed, is trying to revive his dream of producing a high-performance car, according to the Detroit Free Press.

Sources in Ohio and in Northern Ireland said the 60-year-old former General Motors executive hopes to produce a car similar to the DMC-12, which was built by the De Lorean Motor Co. from 1979 until it went bankrupt in 1982, the newspaper reported Sunday.

"I've seen the design on the car, and it's beautiful," said Marvin Katz, vice president of Kapac Co., a Columbus, Ohio-based auto parts distributor. "It's all done."

Katz, whose company acquired most of De Lorean Motor's parts inventory after it went bankrupt, said De Lorean outlined the new car project to him about a month ago during a meeting in New York. Katz said he has an agreement to sell parts to De Lorean if the car goes into production, the Free Press said.

The new car would be "a modified De Lorean with a larger engine and transmission and wheels," said Katz.

Porn-control bill passes

ALBANY, N.Y. (LAT) — The display of pornographic materials in establishments where public access is not restricted, such as drugstores and supermarkets, would be banned under a measure passed here last week by the State Legislature.

Current law prohibits the display of "offensive sexual material" in areas visible from public streets or sidewalks. The new legislation is intended to include such places as the insides of stationery stores, to protect children and other members of the public from viewing pornography unwillingly, such as on magazine covers.

The bill would not prohibit the sale of the material at those places but would require that offensive sections be covered.

The measure is not intended to shut such establishments as pornography shops, which generally impose restrictions on who can enter, including minimum age requirements or entry fees.

Violators would be subject to fines of up to $1,000 and jail sentences of up to six months.

Pacemaker horse races

DEVON, Pa. (AP) — Call Me Buckie, a 9-year-old horse with a lot of heart — and a pacemaker to be sure it keeps beating — didn't win any ribbons, but was the local favorite as he compeermanent pacemaker.

Virginia Reef, a cardiology specialist from the New Bolton center who implanted the pacemaker in Call Me Buckie in March, was in the saddle for one of two events in which the horse participated.

"We brought him here to show that he can go back and perform the way he once did," said Reef. "We didn't expect him to win. Plus, we thought it would be fun."

Reef implanted the pacemaker after drugs failed to correct the horse's heart condition, which caused him to faint in his stall.

The device, an advanced model with a variable speed feature that enabled the animal to return to competition, was donated by the widow of a Pennsylvania man who had used it for two weeks before dying of respiratory complications.

Fifty prison inmates, 12 deputies injured in Los Angeles County Jail disturbance

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — At least 50 Los Angeles County Jail inmates and a dozen sheriff's deputies were injured Sunday when fire hoses and night sticks were used to control prisoners who refused to return to their cells after the noon meal.

A Sheriff's Department spokesman said a two-hour standoff was finally ended by members of the sheriff's Special Weapons Team (SWT) who entered a modular cellblock area where inmates had armed themselves with broom handles and cups of a strong caustic substance, and subdued the prisoners individually.

"In the process," Sgt. Steve Finley said, "about 40 of the inmates received minor injuries and 10 or 12 others were more seriously hurt. They were treated at the scene by paramedics and jail clinic personnel, as were several deputies who had minor injuries. One deputy, however, received a back injury that may be more serious. He was taken to White Memorial Hospital for treatment."

Finley said the cause of the disorder was under investigation but may be connected to disciplinary action taken against one inmate who was removed by jail deputies shortly before the standoff began.

He said it was the most serious such incident at the jail since an April 1980, revolt in which 21 prisoners were hurt.

Deputy Sheriff Steve Fitzsimmons said the trouble began as inmates were returning to their cells from the noon meal. Six prisoners refused to enter their cells, he said, and incited other inmates to join them in resistance. Within 20 minutes, he said, 65 of the 90 men in the cellblock were out of their cells.

Methods of pre-selecting baby's sex are unreliable

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — For most couples, pregnancy is a time of anticipation: Is it a boy or girl, is it healthy, who will it resemble? A small number of couples, however, want to take the mystery out of pregnancy: They want their child to be a particular sex, and they are willing to pay thousands of dollars, listen to anybody or try any method that promises to change the odds of conceiving a boy or girl.

By using special douches, charting body temperatures or having sperm treated before the mother is inseminated, the couple is told, a child of the coveted sex will be born. According to an informal survey of obstetricians, fertility experts and experimental geneticists from around the country, these couples are mostly being fooled by false promises.

No sex preselection method has yet been proven effective according to the rigorous standards of professional medical journals. And those who promote the various techniques say that none are guaranteed.

Techniques that rely on separating sperm "have not been show to work in humans," said Dr. Kurt Hirschhorn, chairman of pediatrics at the Mt. Sinai Medical Center in Manhattan. Methods that require women to follow set regimens prior to conception do not succeed either, according to the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

BUT IF A sex-selection technique ever is perfected, medical experts say, the ethical and social consequences could be disturbing.

According to the demographer Dr. Charles Westoff of Princeton University, studies show that most Americans want a boy and a girl in that order.

"If we had a technology available to predetermine the sex ratio of children it would not have any dramatic effect on the sex ratio overall," Westoff said. "But the order of birth would change dramatically."

The number of male firstborns with little sisters would double, he said. "The implications are anybody's guess," Westoff said. Birth order is widely believed to affect personality, academic achievement and later success in life.

Today many couples spend as much as $250 per month on treatments in an attempt to determine the sex of their children. They explain their needs in letters such as these, which were addressed to Gametrics Ltd., a center in Sausalito, Calif., that promotes a procedure to separate sperm in an attempt to insure that male conceptions are more likely to occur.

From a farmer's wife:

"I dearly want another child. But my husband doesn't want another girl. He farms and would love to have a son to farm with him. This would definitely be our last child."

From a woman with five sons:

"My desire to have a daughter is still very much a part of me. I guess it has been my life's dream. I guess if there's any way to have one, I would."

FROM THE MOTHER of three girls:

"We wanted a boy all three pregnancies. As much as I love our girls, I feel something is missing. When I see my husband's eyes when he see a little boy with a baseball cap on or football shirt, I ache for him. He coaches midget football. He loves to hunt and he collects guns. He always used to say, 'I'll save this one for my boy.'"

From a distraught woman:

"My husband is from the Middle East. I have had three pregnancies and two girls. With the third pregnancy we had an amniocentesis and it was a girl so it was aborted. The pressure from my mother-in-law and my husband's sisters to have a boy is unbearable."

It is hard to know how many couples want to alter the odds in favor of having a child of a particular sex. Nan Chico, a sociologist at California State University at Hayward, says that such a desire seems to be the exception rather than the rule. Professor Chico has catalogued more than 6,000 letters written to Gametrics over the last 10 years. A third of the letters gave specific reasons why the couples wanted to choose the sex of their next baby.

The vast majority of couples, Professor Chico said, have two or three children of the same sex and want one more of the opposite sex. Only 17 couples indicated they wanted to choose the sex of their firstborn (11 elected boys and six wanted girls). Many couples had had children by previous marriages and wanted just one more, of a specific sex, in their current marriage.

PROFESSOR CHICO said many couples "think modern medicine can do anything." There are embryo transfers, test tube babies, genetic engineering and prenatal diagnostics, she said, "So why not sex preselection?"

Dr. Ferdinand Beernink,an obstetrician-gynocologist at Advanced Reproductive Services in Berkeley, Calif., which also offers the same sperm separation procedure developed at Gametrics, said many of his clients, some of whom come from abroad, face cultural pressure to produce a male heir. This is particularly true, he said, of Asians, East Indians, people from the Middle East and Nigerians.

Worldwide, 106 boys are born for every 100 girls. Despite their slight advantage at birth, however, boys have a higher infant death rate, so girls soon outnumber boys.

The promise of sex-selection techniques is that couples can alter those odds. Two books on the subject have just been revised.

One of the books, "How To Choose the Sex of Your Baby" by Landrum Shettles and David Rorvik is based on a finding made 25 years ago by the Dr. Sophia Kleegman of New York University Medical School. She discovered that, for reasons still unknown, more boy babies are born to women who conceive as a result of artificial insemination given on the day of ovulation or the day before ovulation.

DR. SHETTLES, a specialist in reproduction, and Rorvik say the same results may be obtained by women who conceive naturally at the time of ovulation. They advise charting body temperature to know when ovulation occurs and to douche with liquids that are said to create a favorable environment for either male or female sperm. Critics of this method say Dr. Kleegman's findings are not relevant to natural conception.

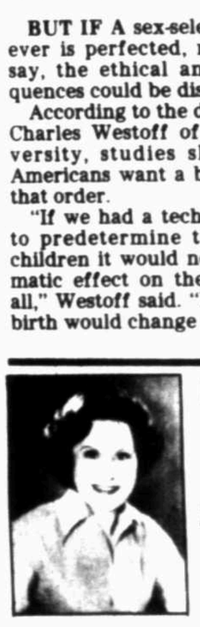
The other book, "Boy or Girl?" by Elizabeth Whelan, appears to contradict the advice of the first book. According to the book, written in 1977, girls are more likely to be born when conceived close to ovulation. Boys are favored when sperm are introduced earlier in the cycle, the book says.

A spokesman for the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology says that such "rhythm" techniques do not provide consistent, predictable results.

Even Dr. Whelan, who has a Ph.D. in public health, has had second thoughts about raising the hopes of couples who want to determine the sex of their baby. "The honest to God truth is that we don't have an answer," she said in a telephone interview. Her research, she said, shows a slight correlation to skewing the 50-50 odds in a way "that could only warm the heart of a statistician." "I try to warn people not to accept false promises from someone wanting to make a quick buck."

ANOTHER METHOD aimed at sex selection involves separating sperm, which are produced in two varieties, X and Y. When an X-bearing sperm fertilizes an egg, a girl is conceived. A Y-bearing sperm produces male embryos. Sperm separation techniques try to collect sperm of one variety over the other and artificially inseminate a woman with the sperm of the desired sex.

Dr. Ronald Ericsson, founder and president of Gametrics, was the first to offer such a service. His semen-filtering technique favors the collection of X sperm, which generally swim faster than Y sperm. He has licensed his method to 36 clinics around the world and says that of a total of 198 successful pregnancies, 156 were boys and 42 were girls. He says the sample size is too small to prove the validity of his technique.



DEAR ABBY

Battering dished out for quote on cake

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I would like to clear up a misconception that has been perpetrated over the years concerning Marie Antoinette's famous statement, "Let them eat cake."

Years ago, the French bakers would make a mixture of flour and water that they spread on the bricks of the oven. This hardened crust provided a clean surface on which to place the dough for baking bread. At the end of each day, the baker would scrape off this crusty substance and put it in buckets out the back door for the beggars. This substance was called "cake," which later became confused with the sweet pastry that only the well-to-do could afford. — GRETCHEN HABEL, BELLEVILLE, MICH.

DEAR GRETCHEN: Another defender of Marie Antoinette offers this informative morsel:

DEAR ABBY: Please, please, please! While Marie Antoinette may have been no paragon of virtue, let us not damn her further by repeating that malicious retort, "Let them eat cake," after being told the peasants had no bread.

The person who translated that remark was obviously not as familiar with the French language as he should have been.

Properly translated, it should have read, "Let them eat the little cakes" — meaning the small, round, flat cakes of flour or meal — a far cry from a delicacy. Those little cakes (or something similar) are still eaten by the very poor in backward countries. — H.S. BALLARD, KETTERING, OHIO

DEAR H.S. BALLARD: Read on for an interesting bit of icing on the cake:

DEAR ABBY: Love your column, Abby, but might I suggest eating crow rather than cake for allowing a nasty misquote to slip by?

A letter on the etiquette for eating wedding cake ended by attributing "Let them eat cake" to Marie Antoinette. This much maligned queen had too much class to utter such a remark.

In the sixth book of his "Confessions," written in 1766, Jean Jacques Rousseau refers to an incident that happened in 1740, 15 years before Marie Antoinette was born:

"At length I recalled the thoughtless remark of a great princess, who, when she was told the peasants had no bread, replied, 'Let them eat cake.'"

In The Dictionary of Misinformation, author Tom Burnam notes the writing of Alphonse Karr, who in 1843 explained that a duchess of Tuscany supposedly uttered the remark in 1760. Karr contended the quote was used to discredit Marie Antoinette.

Serious biographers of the queen do not even grace the remark with a comment.

As a newspaper editor, I hate to see such dubious — and ugly — statements creep into print.

And I have a more personal reason as well: I am the great-great-great-grandson of the man who claims to be her son, the lost dauphin, Louis XVII. As the inheritor of a family legend, I have been compelled to defend the honor of Marie Antoinette many times.

I would appreciate your correcting this matter. — L. MICHAEL MAY, NEWS EDITOR, THE SEWICKLEY HERALD, SEWICKLEY, PA.

DEAR MR. MAY: Your letter takes the cake. Now, please pass the crow.

(Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

One quarter of all American families headed by single parents

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than one-quarter of all families with children have only one parent present, the Census Bureau reported recently.

Single-parent family groups constitute 25.7 percent of all family situations, up from 21.5 percent in 1980 and only 12.9 percent in 1970, the bureau reported in its 1984 study of household and family characteristics.

Premarital birth, separation and divorce were the prime factors in the growth in one-parent families over the last two decades, the bureau said.

While the increase occurred among both black and white families, blacks reported a considerably higher ratio of one-parent situations, totaling nearly three out of five families in 1984, Census officials said.

The study found that 59.2 percent of black families with children had only one parent present, up from 51.9 percent in 1980 and 35.7 percent in 1970.

By contrast, the 1984 figure for whites was 20.1 percent, up from 17.1 percent in 1980 and 10.1 percent in 1970.

Mothers continue to predominate in caring for children in one-parent households.

Apple juice every day causes problems

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

An apple a day is one thing, but a glass of apple juice a day may cause chronic diarrhea, two University of Connecticut doctors who treated several children with the problem report in the American Journal of Diseases of Children. "Withdrawal of apple juice from the diets of these subjects was curative in all cases," they report.

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell sharply in early European trading today in what dealers said was a delayed reaction to last week's disappointing U.S. economic indicators. Gold prices rose.

The immediate effect of the unexpectedly weak U.S. economic statistics for April was muted because many dealers were out of the market last week attending an international foreign exchange dealers conference in Toronto.

With the market back at full strength, dealers said there was strong downward pressure on the dollar as a result of the weak April indicators. These included a 0.5 percent decline in U.S. factory orders, a 0.2 percent drop in durable goods orders and a 0.8 percent decline in nondurable goods orders.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell more than one Japanese yen to close at 250.40 yen compared with 251.78 yen late Friday.

Other mid-morning dollar rates compared with last Friday's included:

—3.0368 West German marks, down from 3.0675.

—2.5605 Swiss francs, down from 2.5965.

—9.2725 French francs, down from 9.3950.

—3.4260 Dutch guilders, down from 3.4840.

—1,943.00 Italian lire, down from 1,971.00.

—1.3700 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3760.

The British pound cost $1.2965, more expensive than the $1.2870 price late Friday.

In London, the city's five major bullion dealers set a recommended gold price of $316.85 an ounce, up from an opening bid of $316.60 and last Friday's closing bid of $315.70.

In Zurich, gold was trading at a bid price of $317.10, up from $313.50.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of $1.90 an ounce to close at $318.20 compared with $316.30 on Saturday.

Silver bullion prices were also higher on the London market where the metal was selling at a bid price of $6.22 an ounce compared with $6.175 late Friday.

Officials say no new trade protection needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan already has the power he needs to defend U.S. industry against "targeting" by Japan and other countries, the General Accounting Office says.

"Many government and private-sector leaders believe that the effort by U.S. industries to retain or regain international competitiveness on their own is futile in the face of 'unfair' collaboration between foreign governments and industries," said the GAO.

"Such collaboration, which is generally called foreign industrial targeting, focuses government aid, market protectioon and special regulatory treatment on selected industries, giving them an unfair advantage in competing with U.S. firms," the study says.

The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, sent the report to the secretaries of state, commerce and labor and the U.S. trade representative, as well as to the president of the Senate and the speaker of the House of Representatives.

The report notes that aid by the Japanese government to Japanese industry is often singled out.

"The Japanese targeting of the semiconductor industry illustrates a successful example of the 'picking the winners' type of targeting," it says.

But it adds that Japanses efforts to develop a strong aircraft industry have not been successful. It cites the British-French development of the supersonic Concorde passenger plane as another example of unsuccessful targeting.

"One problem in addressing foreign industrial targeting is that all nations, including the United States, provide some type of assistance to selected industries," the report says. "... The United States, for example. provides susbstantial assistance to the defense industry in an effort to help ensure national security.

It questions the importance of targeting in the case of autos, saying that the Japanese protected their home market when their industry was young, but that later the industry rebelled against the Japanese government's wishes.

"We believe that current (U.S.) trade law ... is able adequately to address those foreign industrial targeting practises that are judged to unfairly injure U.S. commerce," the report concludes. "Thus we offer no recommendations for changes in the law.

"The president can retaliate against the nation with the unfair practice by raising tariffs on goods from that country, otherwise restricting that country's exports to the United States, or suspending or withdrawing concessions granted to that nation under existing trade agreements," the report said.

Exchange set to stay open if strike occurs

NEW YORK (AP) — Business will continue at the New York Stock Exchange regardless of whether pages and "blue jackets" who work on the trading floor go on strike, an exchange vice president said.

The 900 members of the exchange workers' union had called a meeting for 8 a.m. today, two hours before the start of trading, to either ratify a new contract or vote to strike.

A federal mediator called both parties to the bargaining table Sunday night to discuss a contract that covers employees of the NYSE, the New York Futures Exchange and the Securities Information Accounting Corp.

"Regardless of the outcome, the exchange will be open," said Richard Torrenzano, vice president and chief spokesman of the NYSE. "Since August, we have trained hundreds of management-level employees to pitch in."

The managers would work alongside a "contingency group trained to handle snow storms and transit strikes," he said.

Local 153 of the Office and Professional Employees International Union, fearing that planned automation of the exchange would result in layoffs, sought continued wages for fired workers with more than 20 years' seniority.

Torrenzano said that under "worst case" estimates, about 300 trading floor jobs could be eliminated through automation. Some of the cuts would be offset by newly created jobs and attrition would be favored over layoffs, he said.

Management resisted the continued pay demand even though it would affect a small percentage of the employees.

Most pages and reporters — nicknamed "blue jackets" for the blue cloth coats they wear on the exchange floor — earn an average salary of $560 a week. A floor worker with seven years' experience earns just under $30,000 for a 31½-hour week, Torrenzano said.

Pages run messages from one trader to another and reporters listen to transactions and enter the data into an electronic reader that converts the information into the video version of ticker tape.

Their contract, which traditionally covers three years, expired Nov. 3 and the union set today as a cutoff for negotiations.

In addition, the exchange made several offers to help laid-off employees, including job counseling, retraining, aptitude testing and financial planning.

Reynolds, Nabisco finalize $4.9 billion merger

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The proposed $4.9 billion merger of R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. and Nabisco Brands Inc. is part of Reynolds' push to reduce its dependence on tobacco sales, company officials say.

The agreement announced Sunday would rival the $5 billion acquisition of Signal Cos. by Allied Corp. as the largest non-oil merger in U.S. history and would create the nation's largest consumer products company.

The merger, subject to approval by Nabisco shareholders, brings together the No. 2 U.S. tobacco company and the nation's No. 4 food company.

The merger is "a friendly agreement" and "one of the largest deals in business history," said Reynolds spokesman Peter O. Allan. The two companies have more than 163,000 employees worldwide.

Under the terms of agreement, R.J. Reynolds, based in Winston-Salem, said it plans Tuesday to offer to buy up to 51 percent of Nabisco's 57.7 million shares of common stock at $85 per share in cash.

The company's remaining common stock will be exchanged for $42.50 in new senior debt securities of Reynolds, and $42.50 stated value of a new preferred RJR stock, company officials said. New debt securities are a form of company bonds that earn interest, a company spokesman said.

The debt securities and preferred stock are designed to have an aggregate value of $85.

"If it's $90 a share, it's a good deal. If it's less than that, it's a better deal (for Reynolds)," George Thompson, an analyst with Prudential-Bache Securities, said last week before the merger agreement was announced.

The agreement was announced in a joint news release by J. Tylee Wilson, chairman and chief executive officer of Reynolds, and F. Ross Johnson, Nabisco's vice chairman and chief executive officer.

The combined companies will have annual sales of more than $19 billion, making the merged firms the largest U.S.-based consumer products company, the two company officials said.

Procter & Gamble Co. had been the top U.S.-based consumer products firm, with annual sales of $12.9 billion, Allan said.

The merger would change Reynolds from a tobacco company with major consumer businesses to a consumer products company with major tobacco interests, Allan said. Reynolds owns Del Monte foods, Heublein spirits and wines, Canada Dry, Sun-Kist and Hawaiian Punch beverages and Kentucky Fried Chicken.

No shareholder meeting has been set and Allan said the merger probably will not be completed until this fall.

As part of the merger agreement, Nabisco has granted Reynolds an option to purchase about 10.6 million shares of Nabisco stock at $85 per share and an option to buy Nabisco's U.S. Biscuit division for $1.65 billion, officials said.

Johnson said that the merger was a "positive, progressive move and will enhance the future of Nabisco."

New Texas Instruments chief could bring fresh approach

DALLAS (AP) — The new president and chief executive officer of Texas Instruments inherits a company which is technically outstanding but lacks sensitivity to changing markets and the public, analysts say.

The announcement a week ago that Jerry Junkins had been elected to replace a suddenly resigning J. Fred Bucy came in a terse, four-paragraph statement.

But it launched a wave of speculation by competitors and analysts.

They said Junkins' more personable style will be a breath of fresh air in a staid corporation, but also suggested TI still faces the same soft semiconductor market.

"I think you're going to see TI end up being a more open company," a former co-worker turned competitor told the Dallas Times Herald. "Fred (Bucy) didn't communicate well with anybody — he didn't talk to the customers.

"(Junkins) is going to have a lot of housekeeping, but I think he'll be more open with the investment community and the press."

Christopher Kirby, a semiconductor analyst with Sanford C. Bernstein in New York, agreed that Junkins' election is a positive move for TI, "particularly in the context of the semiconductor industry, which is concentrated in (California's) Silicon Valley.

"Many companies out there are more open and at ease with the financial community," Kirby said. "It's a different attitude, a different mind-set."

Kirby acknowledges that some protectiveness is good. As a defense contractor and player in the highly competitive high-tech field, TI should guard some of its secrets, Kirby said.

In its release, TI said Bucy, 56, resigned to pursue other interests and take early retirement. Industry sources said Bucy left after years of rivalry with Chairman Mark Shepherd Jr.

Junkins, 47, ascends to the top of the world's largest integrated circuit manufacturer at a particularly difficult time.

The company is mired in perhaps the worst sales slump the semiconductor industry has ever experienced. Bucy himself said at TI's annual meeting that he expected 1985 to be a "poor year for profits."

TI's performance in the first quarter was far worse than industry analysts had expected. The company's first quarter earnings slid to $9.1 million, or 37 cents per share, compared with $79.8 million, or $3.32 a share a year earlier.

The company has also taken a beating on Wall Street. Uncertainty over the management change and continued depressed outlooks for the semiconductor industry in the second quarter sent TI's stock plunging 3 points to new 52-week lows of 87½ on Wednesday and 87⅜ on Thursday.

Junkins will have his hands full just trying to get the semiconductor business back on track, analysts said.

"I don't think at this point in time there will be major strategic changes," Kirby said.

TI, Voice Control reach out-of-court settlement

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments and Voice Control Systems Inc. have announced an out-of-court settlement of a lawsuit involving a dispute over voice recognition technology.

According to Saturday's announcement, the two companies will retain control over their trade secrets while VCS will market its own voice recognition techonology, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Attempts by The Associated Press to reach company officials for comment Sunday were unsuccessful.

The suit, filed by Texas Instruments, contended that two VCS engineers had stolen trade secrets while working for TI.

The accusation led the Dallas County district attorney's office to conduct an investigation. A state district judge ordered VCS not to use or destroy any property belonging to Texas Instruments.

Assistant District Attorney Richard Zadina, who is heading the investigation, said the settlement would not affect the criminal probe.

Roger Ward, a two-time Indianapolis 500 winner and a former member of the VCS board of directors, has said the company's voice-recognition technology is unique and was developed more than a year before the first former employee of Texas Instruments came to work for the company.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Creating IRAs for your children is a good idea if it's affordable

Doyle

Q. It occurs to my husband and me that we could greatly improve our children's financial situations by making a $2,000 gift to each of them, with the understanding the money is to be used to open individual retirement accounts.

To make this fair, we would make the gift to each child when he or she reached a certain age, such as 28 or 29. They are in their 20s now and we know they would have to be earning incomes in order to open IRAs. Do you see any flaw in this plan?

A. None, as long as you impress upon your children that they should keep the IRAs in force. If your offspring cash in their IRAs, that will defeat the purpose of your generous plan.

Assuming your children maintain their IRAs, the $2,000 you give to open each account should grow to a tidy sum by the time each child reaches retirement age. And, if each of those young adults can afford it, he or she should continue to put money into his or her IRA in subsequent years.

By providing the money for the children to open IRAs, you'll get them started toward solid financial planning.

Some parents make gifts of money to their adult children every year, so that the children can make annual contributions to IRAs. That's a great idea, providing it doesn't leave the parents strapped for cash.

Q. We recently put $2,000 into an individual retirement account with a no-load mutual fund that invests in common stocks. Now, do we just sit back and let our investment in this fund grow?

A. You can "sit back" for a while. But you should keep an eye on your investment, by checking the value of the mutual fund's share in newspapers and by reading the shareholder reports the fund mails to you.

The per share value of a mutual fund holding common stocks rises and falls pretty much in line with the ups and downs of the overall stock market. However, some mutual funds "outperform" the market by doing better, while others "underperform" the market.

A note of caution. No one mutual fund turns in the best performance, year in and year out. Nor, does any individual fund show up on the performance tail-end consistently. With a mutual fund, you should be satisfied if your investment does about as well as the general stock market. The annual and quarterly reports your fund sends you should list a comparison of the fund's performance against a measurement of the overall market, such as the Standard & Poor's Index or the Dow Jones Industrial Average.

If your mutual fund underperforms the market for a couple of years, you would be wise to move your money elsewhere.

Q. After my father died, we discovered he had been into the stock market. But, except for his broker, he had confided to no one about those dealings. Most of the stocks have been sold and the money has been put into bank certificates of deposit, to provide a more secure income for my mother.

However, my father had a debenture, which is not redeemable for approximately 20 years. Exactly what is a debenture?

A. It's a corporate debt security, similar to a bond. As is the case with a bond, the company that issued the debenture has pledged to pay annual interest and to redeem the debenture at its face value when it reaches its maturity date.

Most bonds are secured by liens on specific things, such as a mortgage on a piece of property.

A debenture, on the other hand, is backed only by the general credit of the company that issued it. Think of a debenture as an unsecured corporate IOU.

Q. My U.S. Savings Bonds are all registered in my name "or" the names of my different children and grandchildren. Can I have my stocks registered that way?

A. No. You can have your stocks reissued in joint ownership with the word "and" between your name and the names of other owners. But putting the word "or" between the names of joint owners of stocks is an unacceptable form of registration. No transfer agent that knows its business will register stocks that way.

Over the years, photocopies of stock certificates with "or" between owners' names have come to this column. All I can say is that some transfer agents goof.

Q. About 11 years ago, I bought 100 shares of preferred stock from which I receive dividends of $8 per share a year. I paid $85 a share. The stock now is around $62.

When I purchased this stock, the broker told me it would be called at $98 in five years. That wasn't so. When, if ever, will this stock be called?

A. Not until the company that issued the preferred stock can sell new securities at a lower "money cost" than it is paying on the preferred. And that won't happen until interest rates come way down.

Almost all preferred stocks have "call provisions," giving the issuing companies the right to call in those stocks and pay them off at a predetermined price.

The $98 call price you cite seems a bit odd. The details of each call provision are spelled out in the small print on the stock certificate. Read it to be sure of the call price. For this exercise, however, we'll use the $98 number.

Because the company pays $8 in dividends on stock it could redeem at $98, it would be to the company's advantage to sell new securities and use the proceeds from that sale to redeem the preferred, only if it has to pay dividends or interest of less than 8.16 percent on the new securities.

Dividends on preferred stocks and interest on bonds are much higher than that these days. With a $62 price and an $8 dividend, the current yield — dividend divided by market price — on your preferred stock is 12.9 percent.

The big problem individual investors run into with preferreds is that most of those stocks pay fixed dividends, which never change and, as a result, don't provide protection against inflation.

When interest rates go up, the market values of fixed-income securities fall. And, because companies won't call in preferred stocks when money costs are high, investors can be stuck with preferreds forever.

Q. Isn't it possible for a stock to go up in price on its ex-dividend date, even though the amount of the dividend is deducted from its price?

A. Sure. If there's more buying demand than selling pressure that day, the stock's price will rise. If things are the other way about, the price will fall.

Let's say XYZ closed at $40 a share on Monday and that it goes ex-dividend $1 on Tuesday. At Tuesday's opening, the stock automatically is marked down to $39 and can go up or down from that level.

If XYZ closes at, say, $39.25 on Tuesday, newspaper stock tables will show it was up 25 cents that day. If you weren't aware that XYZ had gone ex-dividend $1, you would think it was down 75 cents. Not so, because the ex-dividend adjustment has to be taken into account.

Tidal wave of statistics can drown unwary investors in stock market

NEW YORK (AP) — As just about anyone with money to manage will readily attest, nothing can be as slippery as a statistic.

Economists, both professional and amateur, keep a close watch on the steady stream of economic data produced by the government — inflation and unemployment rates, gross national product, leading indicators, and so forth.

Yet two different experts, working with the same "hard" numbers, can reach opposite conclusions not only about where the economy is headed in the future, but about how it is doing now.

Stock market investors are familiar with the feeling that comes when you read of a strong day in the market, and then look up an individual stock you own and find that it has dropped ⅝ of a point.

A bank may advertise that a six-month certificate of deposit offers an effective annual yield of X percent. But anyone who buys that certificate won't realize that precise return for a full year, unless interest rates are at precisely today's level six months from the purchase date, when the certificate matures and the money is reinvested in a new one.

Or suppose you own shares of a mutual fund that rises 100 percent in a strong market, and drops only 50 percent in a subsequent decline. Your net profit: $0.00 — since a rise from, say, $10 to $20 is a 100 percent gain, while a drop from $20 to $10 is a 50 percent loss.

Writing in this month's issue of the magazine American Demographics, John G. Keane, director of the Bureau of the Census, declares:

"Despite centuries of statistical evolution, burgeoning computer technology, and an expanding educational emphasis on quantitative methods, people frequently abuse statistics. This abuse misleads an unwary public."

Sometimes, Keane observes, it takes the form of simple mathematical error, if not conscious deception. As an example, he cited a dress shop that promoted a special sale.

Buyers were offered 10 percent off on the price of the first dress, and 15 percent off on the second, for "total savings — 25 percent!"

"Shoppers with a rudimentary knowledge of statistics, however, knew that they would save less than 15 percent," Keane said.

When government entities such as the Federal Reserve, the census bureau and the departments of commerce and labor issue economic statistics, they generally go to some effort to point out the limitations of the data.

But the numbers still can cause rapid swings in securities prices, even in markets dominated by professionals who are presumably well aware of the statistics' tenuous nature.

As Keane points out, economic statistics are typically issued so frequently that no single number can be taken as evidence of any lasting trend. Furthermore, he notes, they are often reported on a preliminary basis, and later revised when more information is available.

The revisions are sometimes so great, he says, that they suggest a completely different picture from the one painted by the preliminary data.

The profusion of statistics available to today's savers, investors and business people with a need to plan is a logical outgrowth of a large and complex economy. The alternative — no information at all — does not recommend itself.

However, Keane says, bad statistics, or good ones misapplied, can lead to great confusion and costly mistakes.

Neil Simon wins Tony for best play; Twain's 'Big River' wins seven Tonys

NEW YORK (AP) — More than two decades and 22 plays after he first began putting dreams on Broadway, Neil Simon, the Great White Way's most successful playwright, has captured his first Tony Award for best play of the year.

Simon's "Biloxi Blues" and "Big River," a musical version of Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," were the big winners Sunday night as Broadway honored the best of the 1984-85 season at the 39th annual Tony Awards.

"I have always dreamed, naturally, of winning a Tony," said Simon, whose first Broadway play was "Come Blow Your Horn" in 1961. "I just didn't think I'd have to dream through 22 plays to do it. But it was worth the sleep."

In 1965, Simon won a Tony for "The Odd Couple" as best author, a category eliminated the next year, but he lost the best play award to Frank Gilroy's "The Subject Was Roses." Simon was given a special Tony in 1975.

"Big River" was the night's biggest winner, capturing seven prizes including best musical and a best score award for country and western superstar Roger Miller, who bounded to the Shubert Theater's stage and proclaimed: "Thank God for Mark Twain."

Other "Big River" winners included Ron Richardson, as Jim, the runaway slave, for featured actor in a musical; Des McAnuff for direction of a musical; Heidi Landesman for scenic designer and Richard Rydell for lighting.

Derek Jacobi was named best actor in a play for his performance as Benedick in the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of "Much Ado About Nothing."

"This is icing on a very, very rich cake," said an overcome Jacobi, who alternated appearances in the Shakespearean classic with "Cyrano de Bergerac" on Broadway last season. "Before I suffer from chronic indigestion, thank you very much," he said.

Stockard Channing took the best actress in a play award for her role as the mother of a severely retarded child in "Joe Egg," which was named best revival.

"Biloxi Blues," Simon's comedy about a young writer coming of age during World War II, also brought awards to director Gene Saks, his third Tony for direction, and to Barry Miller, who won the featured acting award for his portrayal of a young Jewish intellectual drafted into the Army.

Judith Ivey, as the good-hearted floozy in "Hurlyburly," picked up her second featured acting award.

Winner of piano competition calls it 'opportunity of lifetime'

FORT WORTH (AP) — Jose Feghali, the seventh gold medalist in the 24-year history of the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, says he had been preparing for the event since he was 13 years old.

"It's the opportunity of a lifetime," the Brazil native, who first played in public at the age of five, said as he triumphed over 35 other pianists in the prestigious contest on Sunday.

The 24-year-old Feghali, who now lives in London, beat 35 other pianists in the prestigious contest.

Feghali received a standing ovation as he walked onstage to receive the medal from Van Cliburn, who became an overnight celebrity when he won the Tchaikovsky International Competition in Moscow in 1958.

Feghali played the first movement of Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 at the award ceremony, the same piece with which Cliburn won his famous victory.

With the medal, Feghali won a debut recital at Carnegie Hall in New York City, a 30-month concert tour of North America and Europe, the chance to make several recordings and a $12,000 cash prize.

Awards ceremony host F. Murray Abraham, the Oscar-winning actor who played Mozart's rival, Salieri, in the film "Amadeus," announced the winner.

Second-place honors went to Philippe Bianconi, 25, of France, who received a New York recital debut, $8,000, a 30-month concert tour and a recording on the Vox Cum Laude label.

Third was Barry Douglas, 25, of Northern Ireland, who represented the United Kingdom. The bronze medalist also will get the 30-month concert tour and a Vox Cum Laude recording as well as $6,000 cash.

Fourth place went to Emma Takhmizian, 27, of Bulgaria; fifth to Karoly Mocsari, 22, of Hungary; and sixth to Hans-Christian Wille, 27, of West Germany.

Two special prizes were also awarded by the 11-member international jury. The award for best chamber music performance was shared by Feghali and Kathryn Selby, a semifinalist from Australia.

The award for best actress, musical, was eliminated this season because there was only one eligible candidate. A special Tony award for continued excellence by a regional theater was given to the Steppenwolf Theater Company of Chicago.

Special awards also were given to the New York State Council on the Arts, for its distinguished support and assistance to the theater, and to actor Yul Brynner for his unprecedented record of 4,500 performances in "The King and I."

The Lawrence Langer Award for lifetime achievement in the theater was given to Edwin Lester, founder and 40 years general director of the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera.

PBS to broadcast rebuttal to 13-part 'Vietnam' series

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Public television officials say their decision to broadcast virtually uncut a conservative, media-watchdog group's rebuttal to PBS' award-winning Vietnam series is "an historic experiment" that could set a standard for dealing with criticism.

Accuracy in Media's one-hour critique of PBS' 13-part "Vietnam: A Television History" will be broadcast June 26 as part of the two-hour "Vietnam: Op-Ed — An Inside Story Special."

AIM, a conservative group that frequently has attacked journalistic organizations, called the 1983 Vietnam series "distorted and inaccurate." The AIM program will be narrated by actor Charlton Heston.

Addressing a group of newspaper TV critics at their annual meeting here, Bruce L. Christensen, PBS' president, said: "We didn't cave in. I'm proud of the series and it will run again. But that doesn't mean there should be no other view expressed on TV."

Barry Chase, PBS' vice president for news and public affairs, said the series was "one of our finest hours," but AIM was given airtime because "we believe in the proposition that viewers ought to make up their own minds."

Added Chase: "This represents the first time in recent years that a national broadcast service has presented such criticism of its own series. It should represent an historic experiment in its field, and possibly a model for handling such disputes in the future."

AIM came to PBS with a completed documentary and PBS decided to put it on the air within the "Inside Story" umbrella. The program, moderated by Harvard Law School professor Arthur Miller, will include analysis of AIM's program and its major charges, a look at AIM's political background and a roundtable discussion of the issue of press responsibility.

"No, this doesn't open the floodgates" to a wave of rebuttal documentaries, said Chase. Future responsible requests for air time will be judged on a case-by-case basis. "There will not be a simple green light," he added.

The producers of the Vietnam documentary, including executive producer Stanley Karnow, have "steadfastly refused to participate," said Ned Schnurman, executive producer of the "Inside Story" special.

"We didn't start out to embarrass them and we don't intend to embarrass them," said Schnurman. "If they felt that by not participating, they would help to make (AIM's program) go away, then they don't know journalism."

Schnurman added, "When it comes to criticism of their work, journalists are as thin-skinned as any group around."

Chase said PBS didn't want to heavily edit the rebuttal program, but deleted AIM's four on-air accusations of "deliberate distortions" by the "Vietnam" producers.

UPI files financial statement itemizing $40 million in debt

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — In a detailed financial statement filed with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court, United Press International has itemized more than $40 million in debts — including 1,400 pages devoted to unsecured creditors — and assets of about $24 million.

The news service, which filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code on April 28, also said in the documents filed on Friday that it was "investigating possible fraudulent transactions," but did not specify what the transactions were or their dollar value.

The company's management has been publicly critical of the owners of the news service for selling some of UPI's assets, asserting that some of the assets were sold at far below their actual value, and bankruptcy law theoretically could permit the recovery of some of these assets.
