Expert IDs teen's remains

Police reopen Henry case as homicide

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Two years and 2½ months after she disappeared from her Midland home, Elizabeth Henry's remains were positively identified Thursday afternoon by a Denton forensics anthropologist.

Midland Police Department Sgt. David Garcia said the identification was based on race, sex, age, stature and dental characteristics of a human skeleton found on a ranch northwest of Midland.

Local law-enforcement agencies conducted a 2½-day search of the private property off of FM 1788, eight-tenths of a mile north of Highway 158, after a skull and other remains were found there Sunday by ranchers who were hunting. Officials were able to find about 90 percent of the skeleton.

The remains were determined to have been at the site for approximately two years, officials said.

The search also turned up personal items, including a watch and two rings that Miss Henry's parents had identified earlier in the week as belonging to the teen-ager.

Dr. H. Gill-King, the director of Laboratory of Forensic Anthropology at the University of North Texas, flew into Midland Thursday afternoon and spent about 3½ hours with Midland Police Department Identification Division members Karen Hare, Vance Oliver and David Clark, Ector County Medical Examiner Dr. Sparks Veasey and other medical and police officials studying the remains.

Revising the cost

WASHINGTON — A week after energizing critics by saying 40 percent of insured Americans would pay more under the president's health plan, the White House said Thursday the real number is only 30 percent. White House Budget Director Leon Panetta, dispatched to Congress to deliver the revised rosier numbers, said the 40 percent figure only took into account what people would pay in insurance premiums./5B

Bad-moods study

WASHINGTON — Feel depressed? Lonely? Restless? Bored? Upset? You're not alone. Almost 40 million American adults frequently fall into such negative moods, government health researchers reported Thursday. Those susceptible to foul moods were more likely to be smokers, and the moodiest men also tended to be heavy drinkers./7A

Houston unzoned

HOUSTON — Anthony Nixon isn't fazed by the maze of mansions, businesses and apartments he calls home. "I like it here because it's eclectic. I think anyone who moves into this neighborhood has to know that," Nixon said of the urban Montrose area. Nixon, like droves of other Houstonians, didn't vote in this week's election. But if he had, he would have cast his ballot against a proposal to bring zoning to the nation's fourth-largest city./3B

'It's Starting to Turn on Us'

—Radio call from Lilac Lane

A sudden shift of wind down a narrow canyon created a wall of flame that trapped four firefighters stationed on Lilac Lane to protect a mansion and nearby houses. All four were injured—some critically, some seriously. The erratic fire began about 1 a.m. Wednesday near Santa Susana Pass Road and burned to the southwest into Ventura County and along Box Canyon Road.

Chimney effect: The topography of Lilac Lane, narrow with high hillsides, formed a natural chimney flue, funneling the flames toward the firefighters.

1. At about 5 a.m., a radio call warns firefighters that gusting winds have suddenly shifted direction.
2. Escape impossible, four firefighters scramble into the cab. There is no time to don breathing masks.
3. Flames 40 to 50 feet high engulf the fire engine, breaking out the windows. The fire jumps the road, igniting the nearby hillside.
4. A minute later, the firefighters, burned and suffering from smoke inhalation, walk to a nearby fire engine for help.
5. The firefighters are treated at the scene and rushed to area hospitals.

State's delay gives new life to restitution center hopes

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — The Midland Community Restitution Center got at least a 15-day reprieve Thursday when a state criminal justice subcommittee decided to delay a decision on ending funding for the center until the subcommitte's next meeting on Nov. 19.

If repairs and renovations are completed within the next 10 days as promised, subcommittee members indicated they would recommend the center be allowed to operate again.

In the meantime, staff members from the Community Justice Assistance Division (CJAD) will revisit the center to see if the property is in 100 percent compliance with state recommendations. If the physical plant is not totally up to standards, the CJAD subcommittee members said they would recommend an immediate halt in state funding.

If repairs and renovations at the center are completed within the next week to 10 days as promised, subcommittee members indicated they would recommend the center be allowed to begin operating again.

The center then would have to prove it can correct all the program, procedure and management problems cited in a November 1992 state audit in order for funding to continue.

Sharing the harvest

Annual free feed puts thanks back in giving

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

A time for sharing the Thanksgiving harvest with people in need of a hearty holiday dinner and fellowship is scheduled for 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 25, at Midland Center.

"If they think they are in need, they are welcome," said Don Maier, a Midland restaurateur who is spearheading the free dinner.

Last year, 2,500 people were served Thanksgiving dinners in the celebration at the Golden Corral restaurant, where the meals are prepared.

"If you are driving a Cadillac and think you are in need, you are welcome," Maier said. "If you think you are in need, come down, and we will feed you."

Report: System fails, school is ho-hum for gifted children

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of America's brightest youngsters are bored and unchallenged in school, the Education Department said Thursday in a blistering report.

"The United States is squandering one of its most precious resources — the gifts, talents and high interests of many of its students," the report said. "In a broad range of intellectual and artistic endeavors, these youngsters are not challenged to do their best work."

About 2 million children nationwide, 5 percent of enrollment, are considered gifted and talented based on standout leadership or academic potential and skills.

In its first comprehensive study of the subject in 20 years, the department found:

Mikhail Gorbachev now ranks so low in popularity polls that it is doubtful he could be elected to any major office in Russia.

A hero in West, Gorbachev is target of scorn in Moscow

By Deborah Seward
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Life in the new Russia hasn't been easy for comrade Mikhail Gorbachev. A hero in the West, the former Soviet leader is a target of scorn and a symbol of failure in his own country.

Just before he flew to the United States this week at the invitation of Senate Republicans, a court ordered Gorbachev to apologize for insulting Moscow's mayor.

The slander lawsuit was the latest humiliating episode for Gorbachev, still treated as a powerful statesman abroad but a pariah at home.

Russia's disdain for the man who presided over the demise of communism is bewildering in the West, where the Nobel Peace Prize winner is credited with ending the Cold War and lifting the

Despite NAFTA hesitation, Canada names pro-trade cabinet

OTTAWA (NYT) — Jean Chretien formally took office on Thursday as Canada's 20th prime minister, and he immediately named a moderate, pragmatic Cabinet that is unlikely to walk away from free trade with the United States and Mexico.

The new ministers of finance and international trade, Paul Martin Jr. and Roy MacLaren, both have backgrounds in international business and reputations as staunch free-traders.

"It is a problem-solving Cabinet determined to rebuild the economy and boost Canadian exports, objectives that we wholeheartedly share," said Tim Reid, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

The choice was seen as highly significant because of the deep rift over trade in Chretien's Liberal Party, which won in a landslide in elections last week. The Liberals fought — and lost — 1988 elections on a platform calling for the scrapping of free trade, and a group within the party still backs that position today.

Chretien told a news conference late on Thursday that the United States and Mexico were "aware of our concerns, aware of what our party program is, and that we do intend to sit down with them, even though time is pressing, to obtain satisfaction."

The words and tone were softer than last week when Chretien warned that he might not implement the pact unless Canadian terms were met. There were no such warnings on Thursday.

Chretien's language and appointments were taken as an indication that his government will not seek a reopening of the North American Free Trade Agreement, a demand that could affect the vote on the accord by the U.S. House of Representatives scheduled for Nov. 17.

Instead, Canadian officials are passing the word that Ottawa will accept the pact as it is if the United States and Mexico commit to negotiate next year on specific improvements.

Clinton formally sent the final NAFTA legislation to Capital Hill on Wednesday, and said that while it still lacked sufficient support to guarantee approval, "rapid progress" was being made in attracting new backers.

The Liberal Party has called for renegotiation of NAFTA. Its party platform called for a set of rules covering unfair trade to prevent what Canadians consider to be often arbitrary harassment of their exports by American trade enforcement agencies.

American industries may demand retaliation in the form of high import duties if they can show that imports are unfairly priced.

Yet no international rules exist on what's fair and unfair. Canadians say rules would inhibit capricious American actions. They are jittery about the lack of rules because three-quarters of their exports go to the United States, and this accounts for about a fifth of their gross domestic product.

In the U.S. Congress, opponents of the accord have used Canadian objections to buttress their case that it is flawed. In turn, this has presented Clinton with new roadblocks in his efforts to win ratification.

In comments to reporters on Thursday, MacLaren, the new trade minister, sought to distance Canada from the congressional debate.

"The play in Washington is entirely of regional issues in the U.S., of local interest, and not whether Canada has one attitude or another," he said.

Chretien is expected to meet Clinton in Seattle on Nov. 19 to discuss the issues at what would be their first official encounter.

Peres hints of another breakthrough with Arabs

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres hinted of a new breakthrough in Arab-Israeli peace talks on Thursday, and Israeli media speculated it would come with Jordan.

Visiting Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa, meanwhile, was optimistic about getting Israel's talks with Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization back on track.

The PLO suspended talks this week, saying Israel's proposal for a troop pullout from the occupied Gaza Strip was inadequate. Talks with Syria have also stalled over Syrian demands for a total Israeli pullback from the Golan Heights, captured in 1967.

Peres set off a flurry of speculation about a surprise breakthrough in peace talks when he reportedly told an Israel TV interviewer before going on the air Wednesday to "remember the third of November."

Reports said Peres met secretly with senior officials of an Arab country this week. Israeli sources said Peres and Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin talked privately for many hours over the past two days. An Israeli foreign ministry spokesman could not confirm the report.

Israel television predicted Thursday that a breakthrough is near with Jordan. Economic committees from Israel and Jordan, formed last month, met in Paris on Thursday for their first face-to-face meeting, Israel radio reported.

Peres was the architect of the secret contacts that produced Israel's peace accord with the PLO, which calls for Palestinian autonomy to begin in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho.

In recent weeks, Israel has focused on implementing its agreement with the PLO, while talks with Syria, Lebanon and Jordan have taken a back seat.

Peres said on Thursday: "We do not exclude any country from the peace circle." He said that peace must include Syria, Lebanon and Jordan, as well as the Palestinians.

Moussa, after meeting with Rabin and senior Israeli generals in Tel Aviv, said he believed that Israel-PLO talks would resume next week.

There are also "definite hopes on the other tracks," he added, declining to elaborate.

Israel radio said Moussa was carrying a message from Rabin to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. Egypt, the only Arab country formally at peace with Israel, has served as a mediator between the Jewish state and Arab parties.

Peres said the breakdown in the Israeli-PLO talks on implementing the accord had been "to a certain extent based on a misunderstanding."

Speaking at a Labor Party gathering, Rabin also sounded upbeat. "I always said there would be ups and downs and even mini-crises. But I think in the end, we have reached the point of no return on the way to realizing the agreement."

However, there was no confirmation from the Palestinians that they would resume the talks.

Artist's rendering of English court scene during this week's toddler trial. Two 11-year-old boys, seated left and right of man, are accused of murdering James Bulger, 2, last February. Witnesses testified Thursday that the two boys dragged the toddler from a shopping mall.

British witnesses cite boys who drag toddler

By Karin Davies
Associated Press writer

PRESTON, England — A young man noticed a small boy sobbing outside a shopping mall. A cab driver watched two older boys drag the child away. A delivery man saw one boy kick the crying toddler.

No one intervened.

Sixty-one people remember seeing 2-year-old James Bulger at the mall or on the 2½-mile journey that ended in his tortured death last February.

On Thursday, some shed tears of remorse as they testified at the trial of two 11-year-old boys accused of abducting James from a Liverpool shopping mall and stoning him to death.

"It will never leave me because it upset me so much," said Kathleen Richardson.

From her seat on the top of a bus, she saw two boys each holding one of the frightened toddler's hands, swinging him high, and then one letting go.

She shouted, "What the hell are those kids doing to that poor child?" and the bus moved on, Mrs. Richardson said.

The pudgy, dark-haired boys, seated beside social workers on the fourth day of the hearing at Preston Crown Court, squirmed as they listened to the testimony.

The boys, who may be identified only as Child A and Child B by the press, were 10 at the time of the slaying and are the youngest children ever to be charged with murder in Britain.

They have pleaded innocent, although prosecutors say Child B confessed to police and Child A said he was there but only stood by while the child was killed.

James strayed from his mother while she was buying sausages in the mall on Feb. 12. Minutes later, security videotapes show the blue-eyed toddler being led from the shopping mall by the two boys.

The journey ended at a lonely railroad track where James was battered to death with bricks, stones and a piece of metal. The boys left his half-naked body on the track where a train later sliced it in two, prosecutors said.

Taxi driver David Keay said he was parked outside the shopping mall and saw two boys dragging a toddler. One lifted the child and held him in "a bear hug sort of thing," he said.

Malcolm Walton remembered a little boy "crying his eyes out" as he stood near two boys outside the mall.

Shedding tears, Lorna Brown whispered that she watched a toddler with a fresh bump on his forehead stumble across a street with two boys.

She said she felt uneasy and glanced back, but they had disappeared.

Child B's parents listened with their heads lowered. Child A's parents have not attended the trial.

Rightist strike paralyzes Haitian capital

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Pro-military rightists used a general strike Thursday to shut down businesses in the Haitian capital, already brought to a crawl by the international oil embargo.

Meanwhile, army leaders still weren't saying whether they would show up for a meeting today aimed at solving the political standoff over the return of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

U.N. and Haitian officials said they would meet in Port-au-Prince, with or without the military. Representatives of Aristide also said they would attend.

It was unclear what the meeting could accomplish without the military, which controls the country.

Most businesses in Port-au-Prince were closed Thursday and traffic was reduced to a trickle by the strike, called by the rightists to pressure the government to release gasoline stored in the country.

Traffic had been light anyway due to a worsening gasoline shortage caused by a U.N. oil and arms embargo imposed Oct. 19 to pressure the military to allow Aristide to come back.

The strike was to continue today, but organizers canceled it out of concern for "the difficulties of the population who live from one day to the next," Louis Jodel Chamblain, co-leader of the Front for the Advancement and Progress of Haiti, or FRAPH, said over Radio Metropole.

A Haitian court was to have ruled Thursday on a lawsuit by gasoline dealers against Shell, Texaco and Esso, Haiti's three gasoline distributors, to free the supplies. But the court, like other public offices, was closed by the strike.

A similar strike was called last week by FRAPH and an independent drivers' union. In the past, FRAPH has used intimidation to force businesses to comply, but no violence was reported Thursday.

The army has not said whether it will take part in today's talks. U.N. special envoy Dante Caputo said Aristide representatives and the president of Haiti's Senate had agreed to participate.

The head of the Chamber of Deputies, Antoine Joseph, said he would attend the talks, but only if all other parties, including the military, did so.

U.S. Ambassador William Swing urged Haitian army commander Raoul Cedras to attend the meeting, State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said in Washington.

But lawmakers with close military ties say it is unlikely the army will attend because Aristide has called for the immediate resignation of the high command.

The presence of Aristide representative Michael Barnes, a former U.S. congressman, at the negotiating table was another sticking point, Joseph said.

"Why does Aristide need a foreigner to represent him when he has a handpicked prime minister?" he said.

We have the best public relations people in the business: our employees.

Russian mechanized units come ashore at Georgian port

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Forces loyal to Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze claimed to recapture the rebel-held town of Khobi on Thursday as hundreds of Russian reinforcements came ashore to bolster the government.

Shevardnadze stood at harborside at the strategic port of Poti as a flotilla of nine Russian warships from the Black Sea Fleet began unloading troops, tanks and armored personnel carriers.

Shevardnadze turned to Russia for help in guarding ports and other installations from rebels seeking to restore ousted president Zviad Gamsakhurdia to power. The Russians have been deployed in recent days along key railway lines.

"I believe it is necessary for the Russians to assist us to control highways, airports and other communications systems," Shevardnadze said on Georgian television.

Shevardnadze held talks Thursday with Admiral Eduard Baltin, the Russian commander of the Black Sea Fleet. No details were immediately available.

The fleet sent to Poti is believed to be the largest force deployed so far by the Russians to aid the Georgian government in the civil war.

The Russians say they are not participating in operations against the rebels, but have fired back when attacked. Russian help to guard communications facilities has been a major boost for the government, which had suffered a series of defeats by the rebels.

Arabs accuse PLO official of spying for Israel

PARIS (NYT) — A key official at the PLO's Tunis headquarters has been arrested by the Tunisian authorities on charges of spying for Israel, the Palestine Liberation Organization has announced.

PLO officials said that the accused man, who held a key position in the office of the PLO security chief, had supplied the Israelis with highly secret information over the last two years.

The arrested Palestinian, 47-year-old Adnan Yassin, had access to virtually all sensitive files of the top leadership, the officials said. They also said he had planted listening devices in the office of Mahmoud Abbas, known as Abu Mazen, who negotiated the accord with Israel that was signed in September.

The Tunisian authorities, who tipped off the PLO to Yassin's activities and who arrested him about 10 days ago, said he confessed to having been recruited by Mossad, the Israeli foreign intelligence service, in France in 1991 while his wife was undergoing cancer treatment in a French hospital.

Tunisian and PLO officials said that the man, whose 24-year-old son Hani was also arrested as an accomplice, may be the highest-placed Israeli mole yet to be discovered in the PLO.

Israeli officials in Jerusalem said on Thursday that they knew nothing of the affair, observing standard policy.

But Israel has had a good deal of success over the last 45 years in recruiting Palestinians to inform on other Palestinians. PLO leaders had long voiced suspicion that Israel had placed moles within the organization.

"We are still investigating, but there is little question it is a landmark discovery," said a Palestinian official in Tunis who asked not not to be identified. "It may explain crucial leaks in the past and tragedies including the murder of several PLO leaders."

The arrest has refocu ed attention on several appointments by Yasser Arafat, the PLO chairman, of senior aides who are widely seen as lacking competence but known for loyalty.

Yassin's boss, Hakkam Balaawi, has been the focus of much of this criticism ever since Arafat gave him the sensitive position of security chief and named him to the 18-man executive council of the PLO.

Balaawi succeeded Atef Bessesou, who was killed in Paris by unknown people less than a year ago. Several PLO officials said on Thursday that the former security chief may have been killed as a result of information given by Yassin to his killers.

On Thursday, Balaawi tried to diminish the arrest, saying that Yassin "was an ordinary administrative attache at the PLO's embassy in Tunis."

But senior officials said that Yassin was given major responsibility by Balaawi to handle security for travelling members of the top PLO leadership and of those coming to meet with them in Tunis, and had unrestricted access to all members of PLO top command at their homes and offices.

According to these officials, Yassin's treachery was discovered when Tunisian authorities were told by the French secret service that he was taking delivery in Tunis of a car that had surveillence and eavesdropping equipment hidden in special compartments.

After the car arrived in Tunis the authorities searched the car and confirmed that it was loaded with what Tunisian and Palestinian officials described as extremely advanced communications and listening devices.

Cold front to cap high near 50

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high near 50 and north to northeast winds at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a low in the upper 20s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should become sunny with a high near 55.

After an overnight low of 46, Thursday's high reached 81, compared to the record high for that date of 89 set in 1988. The record low was 27 set in 1992.

STATE

A low-pressure trough over North Texas pumped warmer air into the region Thursday in advance of two approaching cold fronts.

Conditions were dry west of the trough, which extended into the Great Plains, and moist to the east as the first of the fronts neared Oklahoma, the National Weather Service said.

To the south, low-level moisture was spreading into gulf coastal sections from Brownsville to Port Arthur. Middle and high-level clouds swept across the rest of South Texas from Mexico on high-level winds.

Under the trough, high temperatures managed tc reach the 80s in West and South Texas, with 70s in the east.

Winds were mostly southerly east of the trough and westerly to southwesterly west of the trough at 10 to 30 mph with some gusts.

NATION

A winterlike storm stretched from the northern Rockies across the northern Plains on Thursday, lashing the region with heavy snow and strong wind.

The storm had dumped up to 10 inches of snow on the northern Big Horn Mountains of Wyoming by early afternoon.

Elsewhere, 4 inches of snow fell at Grand Forks, N.D., and at Thief River Falls and Bemidji in Minnesota. Walker, Minn., got six inches of snow.

A winter storm warning was posted through today for upper Michigan, with warnings for gale-force winds Friday night over much of the Great Lakes.

SYSTEM: U.S. fails its smartest, report says curriculum in five basic subject areas before starting the school year.

■ Most classroom teachers make few provisions for these children.

■ The curriculum offered to top students in the United States is less rigorous than that in other countries. The U.S. students do less homework, read fewer demanding books and aren't as well-prepared to enter the job force.

■ Talented poor and minority students suffer the most.

"As the nation strives to improve its schools, the concerns of students with outstanding talents must not be ignored," Education Secretary Richard Riley said in a foreward to the report. "All of our students, including the most able, can learn more than we now expect."

The report was to be presented Friday at the annual conference of the National Association for Gifted Children.

"We're saying that we need to raise the standards for all kids, including the gifted and talented kids;" said Pat O'Connell Ross, author of the report. "We especially need to pay more attention to serving minority and poor children."

Peter Rosenstein, executive director of the National Association for Gifted Children, said he agreed with the report's findings.

"What's happened in education for various reasons — some of them maybe political, some maybe financial, some maybe societal — is that we have not focused on the needs of gifted and talented children in this country," he said.

Inclusion is the buzz word these days, said Fred Brown, principal of Boyertown Elementary School in Pennsylvania and president-elect of the National Association of Elementary School Principals.

He said there is a belief that education for the gifted should be integrated in regular classroom activities.

"Quite often gifted children are independent learners and left to their own devices while children with learning disabilities are given additional help," he said.

The report also called for increased access to early childhood education, particularly among minority children.

The report urged teachers to use new criteria for deciding who is gifted, rather than relying just on test scores, and recommended that they develop new schools to teach high-level curricula.

If seventh-graders are ready to do calculus, schools should provide the opportunity for them to do it, Ross said. "If a child has a burning passion for writing, you need to give that child the opportunities to hone his or her skills."

Advanced placement courses are another example of how gifted children might be challenged, she said.

SCORN: Gorbachev is humiliated at home

(From 1A)

Iron Curtain.

But in Russia, Gorbachev is blamed by all sides for all things. He is held responsible for the collapse of the Soviet Union, the rise of ethnic violence and the ruin of the country's economy.

Gorbachev now ranks so low in popularity polls that it is doubtful he could be elected to any major office in Russia.

To enjoy the limelight, Gorbachev has to travel abroad, where he commands fat speaking fees many Russians envy and celebrity status they cannot fathom.

He was expected to earn about $70,000 this trip.

"He'll have a place in history for sure," said Gennady Kolukhin, a biologist. "But without a doubt, it will be a place of shame."

Nearly two years have passed since Gorbachev relinquished power Dec. 25, 1991, and the Soviet Union ceased to exist.

Gorbachev quickly vanished from the headlines in the Russian press and few stories about him appear these days.

Mayor Yuri Luzhkov's victory Tuesday in the slander lawsuit against Gorbachev was fodder for the press, which ignored his trip to the United States, where he was to speak before the National Republican Senatorial Committee on Thursday. Gorbachev had accused Luzhkov of financing country homes for city officials.

The former Communist Party daily Pravda didn't miss a chance to take a dig at Gorbachev's domestic woes in September.

Gorbachev's mother reportedly sold the family home to a Russian pop singer to get money to live. In its report, Pravda implied Gorbachev didn't care about his mother.

Not that Gorbachev's government monthly pension of about $3.39 provides much of an income to care for his family.

"It's not nice. It's cheap. Do they (government) really think Gorbachev is going to beg?" said Vladimir Poliakov, a spokesman for the former Soviet leader's think tank.

Gorbachev has increasingly attacked his old rival, Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

He has accused Yeltsin of violating the constitution and has condemned his use of tanks against his enemies in parliament — an especially ironic charge since the Soviet president sent troops and tanks against civilians in Georgia, Tajikistan and Lithuania during his rule.

Yeltsin has taken his own shots at Gorbachev. Last year, he released damaging Communist Party documents — some of which indicated Gorbachev continued Soviet support of terrorists — and he humiliated the former president by confiscating his limousine and much of his office space.

Every once in a while, Gorbachev drops hints he would like to "save the nation" by returning to politics.

But Gorbachev's attacks on Yeltsin haven't won him many fans, and recent public opinion polls don't give him much hope.

A poll taken in late October for the newspaper Nezavisimaya Gazeta ranked him 79th on a list of Russia's leading politicians. In a poll published this week for the Kuranty newspaper, only 3.6 percent of 1,407 Muscovites surveyed said they had confidence in Gorbachev.

REMAINS: Expert makes positive identification

the match of the remains with Miss Henry, he said when any bone materials have a suspected match, the first step in the case for the anthropologist is to try to attempt to prove the remains are not that person's.

"You have to remain objective," he said. "You try to disprove the remains belong to a certain person so that when a certain unique quality comes up, you know it is them. You try to get down to the point where all you are looking for is something truly unique to that person, not a common human characteristic."

Calls to the home of Miss Henry's parents were not returned.

Garcia said the case is now considered a homicide and will be investigated as such.

"The detectives will now go back and begin the whole case over again," he said. "It is totally the Midland Police Department's case now."

The Midland office of the FBI was assisting in the case while it was classified as a missing person.

The 17-year-old disappeared from her home at 3610 Apollo Court on Aug. 19, 1991, after she placed a 911 call, which ended after she said she had been tied up by her boyfriend and then screamed.

After the call, police arrived at the home to find the garage door open, the back door unlocked and no signs of struggle.

The next day, Miss Henry's vehicle was found at the Midland International Airport with her purse still inside.

Since that time, the case has gone nowhere. Local flyers and a nationwide ad campaign in June 1992 turned up no leads.

In December, traces of hair and fiber were found on a Unocal oil lease in Andrews County, but police could not confirm that they belonged to Miss Henry.

SHARING: Volunteers plan annual dinner

landers have the opportunity to enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner," said Bobby Trimble, volunteer coordinator for the dinner.

Trimble is president of Christmas in April, Midland's year-round volunteer housing-repair project for older and handicapped Midland homeowners.

"There are some who come out who don't have any place else to go" for Thanksgiving, Maier said. And they are welcome to join in the full-complement Thanksgiving dinner of turkey and the trimmings, potatoes, yams, green beans, cranberry sauce and pie.

In a letter to Midland's 140-plus church congregations, Trimble is asking for volunteers to donate their time, materials and resources, including funds, to help with the holiday dinner.

"Many of you who have helped in the past know the joy of being able to contribute to the happiness of those in need," Trimble wrote. "By joining together, it is our belief that we can raise the funds necessary to ensure that this project will continue to serve those who will need our help on this special day."

Last year, 370 people volunteered to serve dinners and clean up at the feast, in which 2,500 persons were fed. In the first year of the feast, 1,500 people were served dinners.

"This Thanksgiving, as we celebrate our abundant lives, Golden Corral, Downtown Lions Club and a host of community-minded organizations are teaming up to be sure all Midlanders have the opportunity to enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner," Trimble said.

Thanksgiving dinner invitations, printed in both English and Spanish, are to be issued inviting individuals and families to the free dinner.

Persons or organizations who wish to donate time or material to help out may contact Maier at Golden Corral at 689-7706.

Financial contributions may be made to Thanksgiving Celebration Dinner, Midland American Bank, P.O. Box 11156, Midland 79711.

Free invitations may be picked up at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane; Dellwood Senior Center, 3303 W. Illinois Ave.; Midland Baptist Crisis Center, 806 S. Baird St.; Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, 1410 N. Lamesa Road; the Salvation Army, 300 S. Baird St.; The Southeast Community Senior Center, 1803 E. Indiana Ave.; and St. Andrew's Mission, 1708 N. Fort Worth St.

Maier said Golden Corral restaurants in other communities help sponsor Thanksgiving meals on a day when most eating places are closed.

"We wanted to give something back to the community," Maier said. "Being a big corporation, you are limited in some respects in what you can do. We wanted to do something on a local basis to give back to the community on a day when restaurants are normally closed. It's a lot of fun to do. It benefits the community."

The dinner is being moved to the Midland Center this year since the Golden Corral will be open to the public on Thanksgiving Day. But in the 1990, 1991 and 1992 Thanksgivings, the restaurant was closed.

If there is a shortage of donated funds for buying food for the dinner, Maier said Golden Corral would underwrite any shortfall.

"Donations have paid for most of it," he said. "We are looking for the community to support the whole (undertaking in years to come). It has tremendous appeal for individuals who want to do something for others."

Maier said a byproduct of the Thanksgiving feed is that "a lot of people who help serve are people in need.

"They feel like they are needed and wanted and are part of a family."

DELAY: State's decision gives restitution center a reprieve

(From 1A)

The CJAD subcommittee's recommendation will go to the full Texas Department of Criminal Justice board today, where approval is expected.

The nine criminal justice board members serve on a variety of subcommittees, which meet on one day to take testimony and recommend actions for a vote by the full board the following day.

Judge Dean Rucker, administrative judge for the Midland Judicial District, said he was very pleased with the decision.

"We are most happy for the subcommittee members to come to Midland and inspect our center and I'm sure they will find it in full compliance," Rucker said.

Rucker was spokesman for a contingency from Midland that included Judges John Hyde of the 238th Texas District Court, Judge George "Jody" Gilles of the 142nd Texas District Court, County Judge at Law Al Walvoord, former Judge Vann Culp, County Judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer and County Commissioner Guy McCrary.

Gilberto Hinojosa of Brownsville, chairman of the CJAD subcommittee, suggested delaying a decision on funding because he said the Midland area desperately needs a restitution center. Hinojosa is a justice on the 13th District Court of Appeals in Corpus Christi.

He initially suggested tabling the matter until the CJAD subcommitte's January meeting because the center is receiving funding on a six-month basis until February.

CJAD subcommittee member Joshua Allen of Beamont, however, said he thought it would be irresponsible for the subcommittee not to follow the staff's recommendation to halt funding for the center.

"It scares me to hear of problems like this with this program and not have defunded it before this time," Allen said.

He said the state should not provide taxpayers' money for the center for any period longer than necessary, and suggested delaying a decision until the Nov. 19 meeting.

The center has not been in operation since February, when CJAD refused to certify the facility for occupancy. But it is receiving about $50,000 a month from the state on a temporary basis for employee salaries, who are continuing training, and for maintenance.

Hinojosa said he and perhaps other subcommittee members would visit the Midland center during the staff inspection.

The Midland center is one of only four such centers in West Texas, serving 208,000 square miles, or about half the state, Rucker said.

The restitution center serves as an alternative to prison, he said, and is designed to rehabilitate, train and help people who have lived without any real structure to their lives and who usually are chronically unemployed.

Until it was decertified in February, the center had 48 offenders living on site who worked during the day and attended rehabilitation programs in the evening. Employees at the center also were responsible for supervising about 3,000 Midland County probationers.

CJAD Director Dimitria Pope has suggested halting funds for the center because of severe problems over a period of a number of years.

A state audit by CJAD in November 1992 found extensive problems in management and a lack of effective programs for rehabilitation, along with physical plant problems involving safety and health issues, Ms. Pope told the subcommittee.

She cited a lengthly list of problems that included organizational confusion, a lack of communication among top officials, poor fiscal oversight of state funds, unclear objectives, a high turnover rate that included seven center directors in nine years, unethical practices between residents and staff members, an inexperienced staff, ceilings that allowed men to climb into the women's areas and spy on them in the rest rooms, smuggling of contraband such as marijuana into the center and an inadequate fire-alarm system.

"I can sum it up in two words — accountability and responsibility," Ms. Pope told the subcommittee.

"The Midland center has not been accountable and responsible for effective operations."

She said the Midland center has had problems since its inception in 1985, and the state threatened to shut it down previously in 1988.

Rucker said he did not deny there were deficiencies nor dispute any part of the audit report.

But he contended the center was correcting the problems, and that CJAD had not notified the center of any complaints since February.

Rucker said CJAD "still has not given us anything in writing to date on what we have not done."

In August, when the center informed CJAD about a delay in installing an electrically operated fire-alarm system, "things began to happen," Rucker said.

Nancy Bartlett, a CJAD administrative staff member, said she could show subcommittee members "stacks of correspondence back and forth." She said the staff had also made numerous phone calls to the center.

Ms. Bartlett said the inexperienced employees simply "did not understand the concept of a residential program without us holding their hands the entire time."

She described the situation since February as "continued chaos and turmoil in management."

Ms. Bartlett said all the physical plant problems were supposed to have been solved by Sept. 1, so the the center could receive residents again and be evaluated for 90 days on its programs in time for a recommendation on funding for the next six months.

Instead, it is now November and the subcommitee was deciding on whether to give the center another extension, she said.

The Midland center always has looked good at putting programs and solutions down on paper, but never has been good at putting them into practice, she said.

Rucker said the only physical plant corrections that remain are completing work on a fire-alarm system and installing hand railings for the handicapped.

He said the delay in installing a non-battery operated fire-alarm system was caused by competitive bidding problems. The hand railings are a material problem, he said, and it is hard to get delivery because of the huge demand creating by the new federal law to increase public accessibility for the handicapped.

Ms. Bartlett said the fire-alarm delay reported in August was "just the straw that broke the camel's back."

U.S. troops to clear Somali roadblocks

MOGADISHU, Somalia (NYT) — American soldiers in Somalia will use newly arrived tanks and armored personnel carriers to assist U.N. forces in clearing roadblocks from the streets of Mogadishu, the Pentagon said on Thursday.

The plan to help open supply routes in the city was part of the strategy the White House announced last month in dispatching the armored reinforcements to the East African country. But it represents a more assertive American posture than has been displayed in the weeks since, in which U.S. soldiers have remained essentially confined to guarded compounds.

The arrival of 30 M1A1 tanks and 42 Bradley fighting vehicles that had been sent to Somalia by ship has made it possible for American forces to resume the street-clearing operations, Clinton administration officials said.

But only several hundred of the 7,500 American soldiers now in Somalia are likely to take part in the operation, the officials said. They also said that half of the Marine contingent stationed offshore had been withdrawn from the region on Thursday, an indication that U.S. officials do not expect the remaining force to be involved in combat operations.

"We're going to do what we promised as far as opening lines of communication," a Clinton administration official said. "But it would be wrong to see this as representing some kind of new offensive."

In deciding to go forward now with the roadblock-clearing mission, other officials said, American commanders in Somalia were motivated in part by concern about the increasing numbers of street barriers that have been put up by armed militiamen since the renewal of interclan fighting last week.

The administration officials said they remained hopeful that Robert B. Oakley, President Clinton's special envoy to Somalia, could persuade the clan leaders to dismantle the barricades voluntarily. They said their efforts to call attention to the street-clearing operations were intended in part to add weight to the diplomatic efforts.

U.S. troops in Somalia took part until last May in some street patrols in Mogadishu in a bid to restore security in the capital and open the way for relief shipments. But they were forced essentially to withdraw from the city during the summer, when the undeclared war between the United Nations and forces loyal to Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid made them the targets of guerrilla attacks.

The question of how extensive a presence the United States might try to reassert has remained something of a mystery since Clinton sent thousands of extra troops to Somalia last month. But the descriptions provided on Thursday by the Pentagon and by administration officials suggested that any operations would remain highly limited.

A Pentagon spokesman, Capt. Michael Doubleday, said the use of armored vehicles would allow American forces to go back to "doing some of the things we did last spring" in seeking to make roads secure. But administration officials said there were no plans for U.S. soldiers to take part in regular patrols in the capital.

The American troops withdrawn from the waters off Somalia on Thursday included about 3,600 sailors and Marines from the 22nd Marine Expeditionary Unit, one of two such units sent to the region last month, the Pentagon said.

Terrorists attack Turkish targets in Europe

BERLIN (NYT) — Suspected Kurdish separatists attacked Turkish embassies and offices across Europe on Thursday, killing one person, wounding at least 23 others, and inflicting serious property damage. It was the second time this year that Turkish targets in Europe have been attacked in coordinated assaults.

The attacks on Thursday were carried out in at least 25 communities in Germany and 3 in Switzerland, as well as in London, Copenhagen, and Vienna. The fatality was in the German city of Wiesbaden, where a 30-year-old Turkish patron at a Turkish restaurant died in a firebomb attack.

Ten others were wounded in the Wiesbaden bombing. The police arrested four Kurds near the site of the attack, and 22 others were reportedly arrested in other German cities.

Leaflets found in Wiesbaden, and others left behind by assailants in Frankfurt and Bern, Switzerland, denounced Turkish policies against the Kurdish minority.

The Frankfurt leaflet accused the Turkish government of "systematic torture and killing" of Kurds, and asserted that "certain European countries" were supplying weapons that Turkish forces are using against Kurds.

"We will not remain silent in the face of the mass murder of Kurds!" the leaflet concluded.

In Istanbul, Prime Minister Tansu Ciller of Turkey said her government would not abandon its fight against the "terrorist plague" that she attributed to the separatist Kurdish Workers Party. She said new commando teams were being trained that would "fight the militants with their own methods."

Mrs. Ciller said the Workers Party was finding support in Armenia, Iran, Iraq, and Syria, and insisted that the governments of those countries "show us whether or not they are our friends."

"If not, we will do the necessary," she said. "Turkey will never lose the war against terrorism."

The traditional Kurdish homeland covers a region that includes parts of eastern Turkey as well as parts of Iran, Iraq, Syria, and several former Soviet republics. About half of the 20 million Kurds live in Turkey, where according to human rights groups they are not granted full equality with other Turks. Some of them belong to organizations, principally the Workers Party, that are fighting a secessionist guerrilla war.

The German foreign minister, Klaus Kinkel, said he had received news of Thursday's attacks with "horror and outrage," and he called for a ban on the Workers Party in Germany.

The attacks in Germany included firebombings and assaults on Turkish banks.

All passengers survive jet crash in Hong Kong harbor

HONG KONG (AP) — A Taiwanese jumbo jet landing in a windwhipped rainstorm skidded off the runway and belly-flopped into the harbor at Hong Kong's airport Thursday.

Rescuers formed a human chain to the China Airlines jet and, using rubber dinghies as stepping stones, led passengers off escape chutes and up the embankment onto the runway. They said 22 people were treated for minor injuries, shock and cold.

Arriving from Taipei at one of the world's busiest and most awkwardly positioned airports, the jumbo jet ended up in shallow water, its nosecone sheared off and its forward underbelly badly gashed.

Hong Kong authorities declined to say what caused the accident, but airline officials blamed rainwater on the tarmac.

Passengers said there was no panic and the half-hour evacuation was orderly.

The plane "came down with a bump — it dropped down very fast. I looked out of the window and the next thing I saw was the sea, and we just settled," said Kenny Bell, 46, a passenger from Poole, England.

An American passenger who identified himself only as Bud told Hong Kong radio that after the plane touched down, "We kept looking and looking and pretty soon we were running out of runway."

Then "we hear the plane bump off and drop down and (we) look out the window and say, 'Oh, water. We're in the water!'"

China Airlines' Hong Kong manager, Alex Liu, said the pilot veered left at the end of the runway to slow the plane and avoid rushing over the runway edge.

In Taiwan, airline spokesman Lo Chi gave the injured toll as 19, all from Hong Kong and Taiwan. The Hong Kong government said five people were injured slightly and 17 suffered shock and cold.

A tropical storm warning was in effect and winds were blowing at 44 mph when the accident occurred. The temperature was 73 degrees.

History-makers to present WWII facts

Aviators, political historians, researchers seeking wartime information and others should find the upcoming American Airpower Heritage Museum symposium entitled "A Sleeping Giant Awakens" worthwhile.

The symposium, to be offered Nov. 11-13 at the Confederate Air Force's headquarters at Midland International Airport, will offer a rare opportunity for interested individuals to learn World War II history from the fliers who made that history.

The lineup of featured speakers itself should generate extraordinary interest since it includes former U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater, a World War II pilot and non-rated test pilot who has logged more than 15,000 flight hours; Francis "Gabby" Gabreski, America's leading Wor ld War II flying ace in the European Theater and who was an ace in the Korean War; and post-World War II supersonic test pilot Scott Crossfield, who set many supersonic speed records.

In addition to the addresses by those men, the symposium will feature more than 20 sessions on various aspects of World War II, such as the role of women in the war, the building of America's industrial-military might, facts and myths of the "Memphis Belle" which was a Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, the legend of the B-17 Flying Fortress, and a psychological viewpoint of World War II.

Terese Buckley, the museum's curator of education, noted that the symposium is designed to enhance public knowledge of the events of 50 years ago that helped to shape today's society. With the outstanding group of speakers who will be giving first-hand information to those attending the symposium, the event should easily meet the goal of providing educational material about World War II.

In fact, "A Sleeping Giant Awakens" will give all those who attend a golden opportunity to learn history from those who made history during World War II — a half century ago!

'Belt Buckle Bunning' ruffles feathers

WASHINGTON — Is "Belt Buckle Bunning" up to his old tricks?

Rep. Jim Bunning, R-Ky. — who was given that nickname by his opponent during last year's election — has long been accused of sharpening his belt buckle in order to doctor baseballs during his major-league pitching career. Bunning denies the allegation, but a 1990 book by Dan Gutman ("It Ain't Cheatin' If You Don't Get Caught") nominates him for the "Scuffball Hall of Fame."

Anderson

Bunning, who has been frustrated by his failure to be enshrined in the Baseball Hall of Fame, has our vote for election to the Hotheads and Hypocrites' Hall of Shame. As fellow Kentucky Sen. Wendell Ford, a Democrat, says, Bunning is "pressing Newt Gingrich for the title of Mr. Nasty in the House."

In vintage Bunning-style, he recently called President Clinton "the most corrupt, the most amoral, the most despicable person I've ever seen in the presidency." Bunning jarred some of Washington's most seasoned hard-ball players with that hyperbole. One Senate Democratic leader, echoing a sentiment expressed by many on Capitol Hill, said: "I think even bitter partisans recognize that there is a line beyond which you just don't go, and he crossed it."

Bunning's lack of political sportsmanship registered with the normally unflappable first lady, Hillary Rodham Clinton.

According to friends, Ms. Clinton said: "I find it very interesting how people like Jim Bunning — given (his) reputation — can call my husband" those names.

Eric Deters, a ative Republican who once served as GOP chairman of Bunning's congressional district believes Bunning can't help himself. "The problem is he has a temper and he doesn't control it very well," Deters told our associate Ed Henry.

President Clinton could defend himself against Bunning's broadsides by invoking an old proverb: People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones.

Bunning, who refused to comment for this story, has said that when he called the president "amoral," he was "referring to the early-1992 allegations of infidelity, which Clinton answered by acknowledging that he had experienced marital problems."

But Bunning got a taste of his own medicine during last year's campaign. When Bunning accused Poore of failing to provide sufficient financial support for the children from his first marriage, Poore shot back by accusing Bunning of marital infidelity. The charge was unsubstantiated, but being on the receiving end of the rumor mill apparently did little to sensitize Bunning to Clinton's situation.

"At the very least, you would think (Bunning) would follow the golden rule," one aide to Ms. Clinton told us. "You know, 'Do unto others as you would want them to do unto you.'"

Bunning also was dogged by press accounts that revealed he lived for 32 years in neighborhoods that formally excluded blacks and other minorities. For example, the deed for a house that Bunning lived in for 29 years stipulated that, "No persons of any race other than (the) Caucasian race shall use or occupy any building of any lot, except . . . domestic servants of a different race domiciled with an owner or tenant."

Confronted with the controversy, Bunning — who has said he called Clinton "corrupt" and "despicable" because of "the total distortion and lying he has done" — gave three different versions of why he lived there.

Bunning won't be on any White House guest list anytime soon.

Mom would question verdicts in Denny trial

Perhaps for the first time ever, the old everybody-else-was-doing-it defense seems to have worked.

I know I've been trying it for years, but have never gotten anywhere with it. There was the time a group of us were in the woods with our air rifles.

Grizzard

We came upon an abandoned house. Somebody decided it would be fun to shoot out the windows of the house with our air rifles.

It was fun. Great fun. Glass going everywhere.

Later at home the phone rang.

My mother uttered those fateful words into it. "They WHAT?"

Turned out the house wasn't nearly as abandoned as we had thought it was. It was abandoned only to the extent the people who lived there were at work when we decided to shoot out their windows.

My defense?

"Everybody else was doing it, mother."

My mother spanked me, took away my air rifle privileges and sent me to bed — with — supper. Whenever I did anything wrong my mother spanked me and sent me to bed — with — supper. She made me eat liver.

When I was married I missed a dinner with my wife's aunt or somebody. That's because I was at a bar with a group of my friends.

My excuse?

"Everybody else stayed late," I said.

It didn't work then, either. My wife locked me out of our bedroom and forbade my more valuable privileges than that of the use of an air rifle.

The everybody-else-was-doing-it defense was always met with that inevitable question that always made you feel like an idiot, too.

Remember that?

"Everybody else was doing it, mother."

"Well, if everybody else jumped off a bridge, would that mean you would have to do it, too?"

But now we go to Los Angeles and the Reginald Denny trial. There's a videotape that shows clearly a defendant hitting another man in the head with a brick.

The blow nearly killed the man. Put him in the hospital for weeks.

The defense? There was a riot going on at the time and the defendant really didn't intend any harm.

Everybody-else-was-doing-it.

The jury bought it.

I can just see my mother on that jury.

"Well, if everybody else in South Central Los Angeles had decided to jump off a bridge, then would he have done THAT, too?"

My ex-wife would have voted to hang.

I wasn't at the trial. I wasn't a member of the jury. And nobody is yet to arrive at a better way to determine criminal guilt or innocence than by getting a dozen folks together to listen to evidence and argument and then vote their convictions based on those two elements.

So I am not here to cry about the travesties of justice, racial polarization and the fear of conviction based on what might transpire afterwards.

I'm just here to ask what, if anything, endures. For as long as there have been transgressions, it seems they could never — inside or outside a courtroom — be explained away by saying one just sort of got caught up in the spirit of the moment, in the push of the crowd, in a fit of emotional contagion and find a sympathizing ear.

I never could, and I ate a lot of liver and watched a lot of cars drive out of a lot of driveways as a result.

CHARLEY REESE

Committee turns confirmation into circus

To use mild language, I don't have much use for the Senate Judiciary Committee.

In recent years, it has allowed the confirmation process for judicial appointments to become a show and circus in which the news media and special interest groups play a bigger role than the senators themselves.

Reese

This is wrong. It doesn't matter which nominee is being trashed or smeared or which party is in the White House. As citizens, we have a vested interest in the integrity of our governmental processes. We have a vested interest in those processes not becoming so distorted and destructive of people's reputations that no decent person would even accept a presidential nomination.

Finally, we as citizens have a vested interest in our governmental processes always being fair and just.

For all those reasons, I was ticked off — I'm really trying to use mild language — to find a large package in my mail box from the Senate Judiciary Committee. It was addressed to me in care of my syndicate and was unsolicited.

In it were a couple of memorandums from some public servant named Mark R. Disler, who identifies himself as Republican staff director, Senate Judiciary Committee. The two memos are addressed to "interested parties" and te "interested persons." One dated Oct. 5, says: "Re: Nomination of Great Interest." The second, dated Oct. 12, says: "Re: Rosemary Barkett."

They are both about Florida Supreme Court Justice Rosemary Barkett, who has been nominated by President Clinton to be a federal appeals court judge in the 11th Circuit.

The package contains a number of cases in which she has written dissents and along with the package was the so-called analysis of them. Disler urges me to feel free to use them, though they are not for attribution. He's been in Washington too long. I don't let some staff turkey I never laid eyes on send me an unsolicited package of information, all acquired and paid for at the public's expense, and then be told not to attribute the information. I don't grant anonymity to cheap-shot artists. The public has a right to know how their public servant, in this case Mr. Mark R. Disler, is wasting their money.

If you see some other pundit pontificating about Justice Barkett as if they actually knew anything about her, you'll know their source: Little Mr. Leaker on the minority staff of the Judiciary Committee.

In the second memo, while repeating that his memoranda are not for attribution, he says, "...but you can feel free to use the information in them. Please write early and often. Thanks. You can contact Ed Whelan of my staff at the above number if you have questions."

I don't know what the official duties of the Republican staff director of the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee are, but they surely do not include instigating a disinformation campaign against a nominee. Somebody ought to fire this jerk. The so-called analyses of the cases he includes, written by his staff, are inept distortions. They are wrong characterizations, not analyses. Some are so far off the mark one wonders if the writers can even comprehend the English language.

The drift of this poisonous partisan so-called analyses is that Justice Barkett is soft on crime. In one such bit of garbage, they write, "...Barkett views herself as one of the enlightened elite who must override democratically enacted laws in order to bring about what the riff-raff would really want..." That's a damned lie.

Listen, I happen to know this lady justice. She is not soft on crime. She has one of finest legal minds in the country, a terrific set of moral values, and abiding respect for the U.S. Constitution and the principles of liberty and law. Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, and Patrick Henry would love her — and respect her brilliant mind. They would despise dimwit partisan pip-squeaks like Disler, who abuse their positions and the taxpayers.

Group offers thanks for food

Sunday, Oct. 24, the senior youth group at St. Stephen's Catholic Church sponsored a charitable scavenger hunt. The members requested cans of food and/or non-perishable items for the Permian Basin Food Bank. As a group, we collected over 500 items in a 30-minute time period.

The support given by the neighbors around St. Stephen's was miraculous. We thank each and every one of you for giving all that you generously did.

On behalf of the St. Stephen's Youth Group and the Permian Basin Food Bank, I thank you for the tremendous response. God Bless!

Libertarians: 'Join us. Be free'

I would like to thank the League of Women Voters for inviting me as chair of the Midland County Libertarian Party to participate in the Texas Constitution Amendments review sponsored by them. As the third largest political party in the U.S. and the only one with a founding principle (that the initiation of violence in a free country is immoral and illegal and that violence is justified only in defense of self or property), the Libertarian Party follows the principles of our founding fathers. The only thing one would give up in a libertarian society is the unjust ability to interfere in someone else's life but one would regain the right to run his own life and that of his children.

While the Democrats and Republicans have played (successfully) good cop/bad cop on the people to create the most oppressive government in our country's history, they have failed to note the shift by the people back towards the founding ideals of freedom, liberty and a desire for less government (i.e. Rush Limbaugh). A vocal minority calls for universal health care. Vocal minorities calls for the disarming of honest people while admitting they can do nothing to remove weapons from criminals.

The Midland County Libertarian Party is donating several books to the Midland County Library soon. They contain the political and social philosophy of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Henry, Adams, Smith, Paine and others. Read "The Law" by Frederic Bastiat. Learn how great we can be again. Perot accepts president's dare to debate NAFTA this month

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The White House dared Ross Perot Thursday to debate the North American Free Trade Agreement before the Nov. 17 congressional vote, a challenge Perot called "a desperate move" and quickly accepted.

President Clinton, on a NAFTA sales trip to the Midwest, dismissed anti-agreement arguments from the Texas businessman and said, "The vice president has challenged him to a debate on Larry King. Let's see if he takes it."

Perot, on Capitol Hill, quickly proposed three debates, one in Tampa on Sunday, one in Detroit next Wednesday and finally in Seattle on Nov. 14, shortly before the scheduled vote.

Perot said the challenge that he debate Vice President Al Gore was a "desperate move" made because "they've tried everything to sell the deal and they can't."

Gore said he was "delighted" that Perot had accepted his offer. The vice president said he was agreeable to more than one debate and confident that the time, place and number of debates could be worked out.

"We're delighted to have an exchange of ideas on this topic between Gore and Perot," said White House Communications Director Mark Gearan. "We feel we have the facts on our side."

Perot said the trade agreement is "dead on arrival" among ordinary citizens.

"If this is such a good deal, why doesn't everybody get excited about it?" he demanded. He called it "another stupid trade agreement rammed through by special interests ... dead on arrival" among ordinary citizens.

Clinton, in Lexington, Ky., told fellow Democrats not to be spooked into voting against free trade with Mexico by this week's Republican election victories. And then he went after Perot, a foe from the presidential campaign who has not gone away.

"That one fellow talks about the giant sucking sound," Clinton said, referring to Perot's charges that American plants would rush to Mexico because of cheaper labor and less stringent environmental rules.

"I know a little about this; I was the governor of a state that lost plants to Mexico," Clinton said. "I used to go stand at plants on the last day they were open and shake hands with people when they walked off the job for the last time."

"I want you to understand this very clearly from somebody who's lived through this: This agreement will make that less likely, not more likely," Clinton said.

He said Perot has "certainly done everything he could to cloud the atmosphere."

White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers, asked if Gore's challenge to debate Perot was giving the businessman credibility on the NAFTA issue, replied: "He has credibility, and he's playing on people's fears."

Clinton flew to Kentucky to appear at a Lexmark plant that makes computer equipment that is subject to a 20 percent tariff in Mexico. The trade agreement would eliminate the tariff.

With the House set to vote Nov. 17, the White House acknowledged it still lacks enough support but said things were picking up as a result of new deals with Mexico to protect politically sensitive American industries.

Survey links smoking, alcohol to bad moods

By Christopher Connell
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Feel depressed? Lonely? Restless? Bored? Upset? You're not alone.

Almost 40 million American adults frequently fall into such negative moods, government health researchers reported Thursday.

Those susceptible to foul moods were more likely to be smokers, and the moodiest men also tended to be heavy drinkers, according to Charlotte A. Schoenborn and John Horm of the National Center for Health Statistics.

"These findings suggest that emotional well-being may play a role in cigarette smoking and heavy drinking," their study said.

Some 43,782 adults were asked in an extensive 1991 health survey if they had felt such negative moods in the previous two weeks.

Those susceptible to foul moods were more likely to be smokers, moodiest men also were heavy drinkers.

Depression was more common among women (11 percent) than men (7 percent). Men were more restless (11 percent) than women (10 percent). Eleven percent of women and nine percent of men felt bored.

About six percent of women and three percent of men often felt lonely. Almost five percent of women and three percent of men said they often got upset.

Overall, the survey indicated that 22.5 million women and 17 million men often experienced at least one of these negative moods during the two weeks before being interviewed.

More than eight million had frequent bouts of three or more of the bad feelings.

Lonely adults were 60 to 70 percent more likely to smoke; the depressed were 40 to 50 percent more likely to light up.

The moodiest men were three times as likely to be heavy drinkers, the center said. But the researchers found no relationship between negative moods and heavy drinking for women.

They defined heavy drinking as three or more drinks a day for men and two or more for women.

Battle between televangelists to begin today

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lawyers for televangelist Jimmy Swaggart hope to persuade appeals court judges today that Swaggart's discussions of fellow evangelist Marvin Gorman's adultery did not cause the downfall of Gorman's ministry.

And even if it did, it should not cost Swaggart $6 million, Swaggart's lawyers say.

"We hope to convince them that the jury decision was against the overwhelming evidence and against the rule of law," said Phillip Wittmann, Swaggart's attorney.

Oral arguments in Swaggart's appeal of the judgement in Gorman's defamation case will be heard by a panel of the Louisiana Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

The former Assemblies of God ministers, both defrocked amid revelations of sexual misadventures, hurled charges at each other for years before Gorman went to court claiming Swaggart Ministries and others had toppled his once thriving ministry.

A jury in 1991 agreed with Gorman and awarded Marvin Gorman Ministries $9 million and Gorman $1 million. Judge Julian Bailes of Natchitoches, who presided at the trial, later reduced the award to $6 million for the ministries and $640,000 for Gorman.

Swaggart's attorneys argue that Gorman had only himself to blame for the collapse of his once thriving ministry. They want the appeals court to reverse the verdict or reduce the damages.

"The statements made against Gorman were either not defamatory because the were true, or they were made in the text of church discipline which the courts should not act on," Whittmann said.

Study: Lawyers get bundle of cleanup money

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of every three dollars out of the billions spent to clean the nation's worst toxic waste dumps is going for lawyers or to shift blame for the pollution, a Senate hearing was told Thursday.

A Rand Corp. study on how 108 companies spent money at 18 toxic waste sites under the federal Superfund law concluded that over a decade about 32 percent was spent on legal fees or other activities not related to cleanup.

Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., chairman of the Senate Environment subcommittee on Superfund, lamented, "Today we have less money to spend on cleanups because we spent so much money on lawyers."

The panel heard testimony from industry, private researchers, environmentalists and state officials on whether the stringent liability requirements of the 1980 Superfund law ought to be changed to reduce the flow of money for legal expenses.

Representatives of the chemical and insurance industries argued in easing of retroactive liability would reduce the reliance on lawyers. But New York attorney general Robert Abrams said, "Any tinkering with the liability scheme would be harmful ... and would delay cleanup."

Crews contain fires; residents sift ashes

By John Horn
Associated Press writer

MALIBU, Calif. — Alice Kavaldgian cried as she trudged through the ashes of her home. "This is it," she said, pointing to the clothes she was wearing. "I don't even have a sweater."

Kavaldgian was among thousands of residents chased from this celebrity enclave by an arson wildfire that roared out of the Santa Monica Mountains on Tuesday and burned 200 houses. One person was killed.

Some returned Thursday to see whether any of their past was still standing. Others waited at roadblocks hastily put up to allow fire or aircraft bombing runs over the remaining hot spots.

By Thursday, firefighters had contained 70 percent of the 18,500-acre wildfire, one of a series of blazes that have destroyed 1,000 homes, blackened 200,000 acres and injured nearly 200 people in Southern California since Oct. 26. Several were blamed on arsonists.

The Malibu fire claimed actor Sean Penn's $4 million Spanish-style mansion along with Ali MacGraw's home, with its panoramic view of the Pacific Ocean.

"I'm grateful to be alive. I'm grateful to my friends who helped save my animals. And I'm grateful to all the firefighters for their extraordinary efforts in saving so many people's lives," the star of the 1970 hit movie "Love Story" said in a statement released through her publicist.

Many celebrity homes, including the 100 mansions in the exclusive Malibu Colony, were spared.

With cool sea breezes mixing with wind gusts in the hills, crews and firefighting aircraft focused Thursday on the hot spots around Fernwood in Topanga Canyon.

Forecasters weren't expecting a return of the hot, dry Santa Ana winds from the deserts northeast of Los Angeles that fanned the worst of the fires.

Mike Pierson, 33, returned to his wood-sided house to find it intact. His relief, however, was subdued.

"My cousin's home is gone, my best friend's home is gone. Every person I grew up with, their home is gone," Pierson said. "I look here and I can't even tell where people live."

Chris Mitchell sat in her fully loaded car in the middle of a highway, unable to get home.

Nelson Carpentier returned to his Las Flores Canyon lot to find his home destroyed and his restored 1970 Mercedes-Benz a burned out shell.

Senate crime package features police, prisons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key Senate Democrats and Republicans reached agreement Thursday on a $22.2 billion crime bill to put 100,000 new policemen on the streets and build new prisons nationwide.

"I can say this is by far and away the most significant federal effort to deal with violent crime in America that has ever been undertaken in the U.S. Senate," said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee as the agreement was announced.

The bargain was struck shortly after the House Judiciary Committee sent the Brady gun control measure to the full House on a vote of 23-12.

Under the Senate agreement, drafted by Senate Appropriations Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., savings realized by the Clinton administration in eliminating 250,000 federal jobs over the next five years would be channeled into a new Violent Crime Reduction Trust Fund to pay for anti-crime measures. Byrd submitted the deal as an amendment to the bill. The Senate met into the night.

Among its supporters: Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas and Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the GOP floor manager of the crime bill.

The bipartisan plan would earmark $12.2 billion to fully finance the programs of the original and less ambitious crime bill which envisioned recruiting 60,000 new police officers.

The new blueprint would increase financing by $3.7 billion to add an additional 40,000 state and local law enforcement officers, to reach the 100,000 total.

The agreement also calls for authorizing these other programs:

—$3 billion to build and operate regional prisons.

—$1 billion to build jails, correctional boot camps and other minimum security state and local facilities.

—$2 billion to build and operate secure institutions to house violent juveniles.

"This is real and it is such a quantum leap from where we were a few hours ago that you have to pinch yourself," said Sen. John Kerrey, D-Mass., who helped engineer the deal.

The Senate, acting on a series of amendments to the crime bill, voted 95 to 4 to approve an amendment by Sen. Dianne Feinstein D-Calif., which would increase penalties for violent hate crimes by about a third.

The chamber also voted 100-0 to approve an amendment tightening federal child pornography laws.

On the other side of the Capitol, the House Judiciary Committee beat back GOP efforts to dilute the Brady bill.

Christopher: Russia's doctrine isn't threatening

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Warren Christopher assured Congress on Thursday that Russia's new military doctrine posed no nuclear threat to the United States or to its neighbors.

But Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., was not convinced. He said the new doctrine displayed "much more assertiveness" toward other former Soviet republics.

"It seems to me to be a bad day," Lugar told Christopher, who was testifying to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The doctrine alllows the use of Russian troops beyond Russia's borders and abandons an old pledge not to use nuclear weapons first.

"What we're seeing here is Russian military doctrine trying to catch up with the new reality in Russia," Christopher said. "This is a new development, a new doctrine, and obviously I'm prepared only to give you a very preliminary assessment of it."

■ More national news/5B

He went on to assure the committee the Russian government in diplomatic exchanges had confirmed military operations outside Russia "must conform with all international norms" and respect other countries' sovereignty.

"Nothing that we have seen in this new doctrine — as I say, we're just beginning to study it — contradicts that crucial principle," Christopher said.

"I do not read into it the apprehension that you do," Christopher told Lugar.

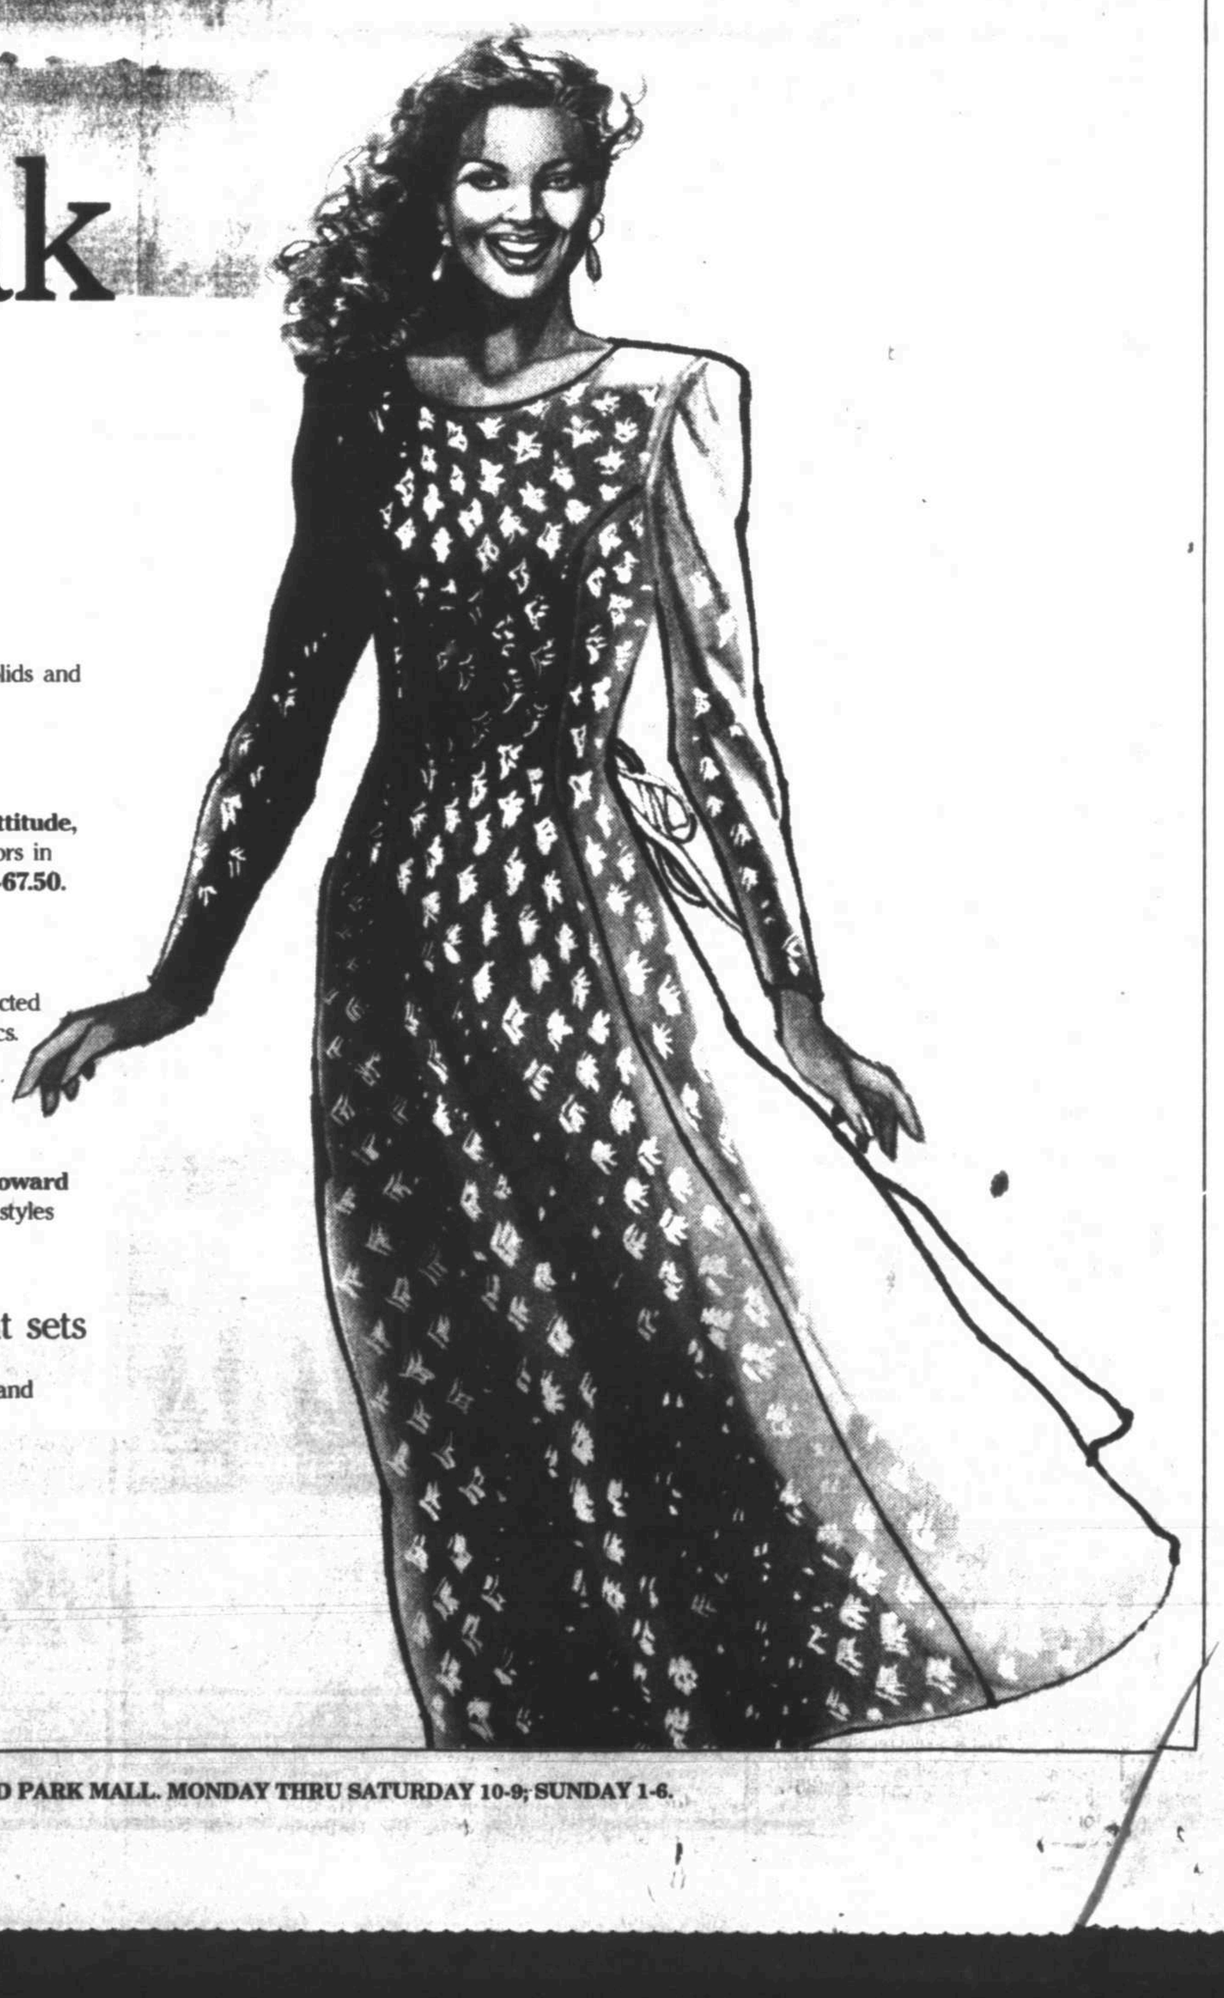

In fact, Christopher, who met in Moscow two weeks ago with President Boris Yeltsin, said Russia was committed to removing its remaining 16,000 troops from Latvia and 4,000 from Estonia and would not let a dispute over the rights of ethnic Russians in the Baltics slow that withdrawal.

But Lugar said the doctrine could be read in Hungary, Poland and the Czech Republic that Russian leaders "are determined to bring back the borders of the Soviet Union."

Russian troops are in Georgia, Moldova and Tajikistan, dealing with disorders in those former Soviet republics. Recently, Russian Foreign Minister Andrei V. Kozyrev wrote: "Either we learn to conduct military actions to support an established peace in the zones of our traditional geopolitcal interests, or we lose influence there, and the vacuum will be filled by others."

Q. What are the firefighter's protective clothing made of and how much does it weigh?

A. The coat and pants have three protective layers: outer, moisture and thermal, which inhibit the heat transfer to the firefighters. The Midland Fire Department uses Nomex, which is a fire-resistant material. This clothing must be rated to 500 degrees for a minimum of five minutes exposure. Along with the helmet, hood, gloves, boots and airpack, the weight is 45-50 pounds.

Questions about emergency medical services or firefighting should be sent to Lights & Siren, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, 79702-1152.

A portrait of Clayton W. Williams and his wife, Chicora, adorn a table at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, where a room has been dedicated to Williams' writings. He is the father of Clayton Williams Jr. of Midland.

Library dedicates room to Williams

Friends and family gathered at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library Thursday to honor longtime West Texan Clayton Wheat Williams and see a preview of what will be contained in the Williams Room.

"Clayton (Jr.) and the Williams family have made a contribution for the room and because of that it will be called the Williams Room," said Francis Stapp, the facility's director.

"No room has previously been named in honor of anyone except the Haley Room."

Spread throughout the library Thursday were papers, photographs, books, clippings and letters belonging to Williams, who died Sept. 9, 1983, in Fort Stockton, where he was born.

Both of his children, Clayton Williams Jr. and Janet Pollard, live here. The one-day exhibit, which will be displayed in the Williams Room in the future, was organized by Mrs. Pollard.

"When Daddy died, he asked me to promise I would write his life, and I started and then I kind of let it go for about 10 years," said Mrs. Pollard, who now has assembled 300 typewritten pages of her father's life.

"Then Claytie called and said why didn't we get Daddy's papers and books to the Haley, so I went down to Fort Stockton and started gathering books

Midland couple treats wounded whooping crane

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

An endangered whooping crane, which was injured by an apparent gunshot wound north of Midland earlier this week, was in "critical condition" in a San Antonio emergency pet clinic Thursday night.

"Hopefully, we will be able to keep him alive," said Dr. Melissa Hill, a veterinarian who had planned to perform surgery on the bird's broken right wing bones.

The two breaks came at mid-wing and caused the rare bird to loose a "tremendous amount of blood," Ms. Hill said. "If he survives the next 24 hours, then we are going to be in a lot better shape."

Surgery is being postponed until the bird — which stands about 5 feet tall and has a wingspan in the 6- to 7- foot range — recovers and is healthy again.

"Surgery has been pushed off until

Water tower's completion date extends again

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

It sounded simple: repaint the airport's water tower and include the Confederate Air Force logo for the organization's Dec. 7, 1991, museum and headquarters grand opening.

"Almost everything that could go wrong with that project did go wrong," said Ken Jones, the city's utilities director.

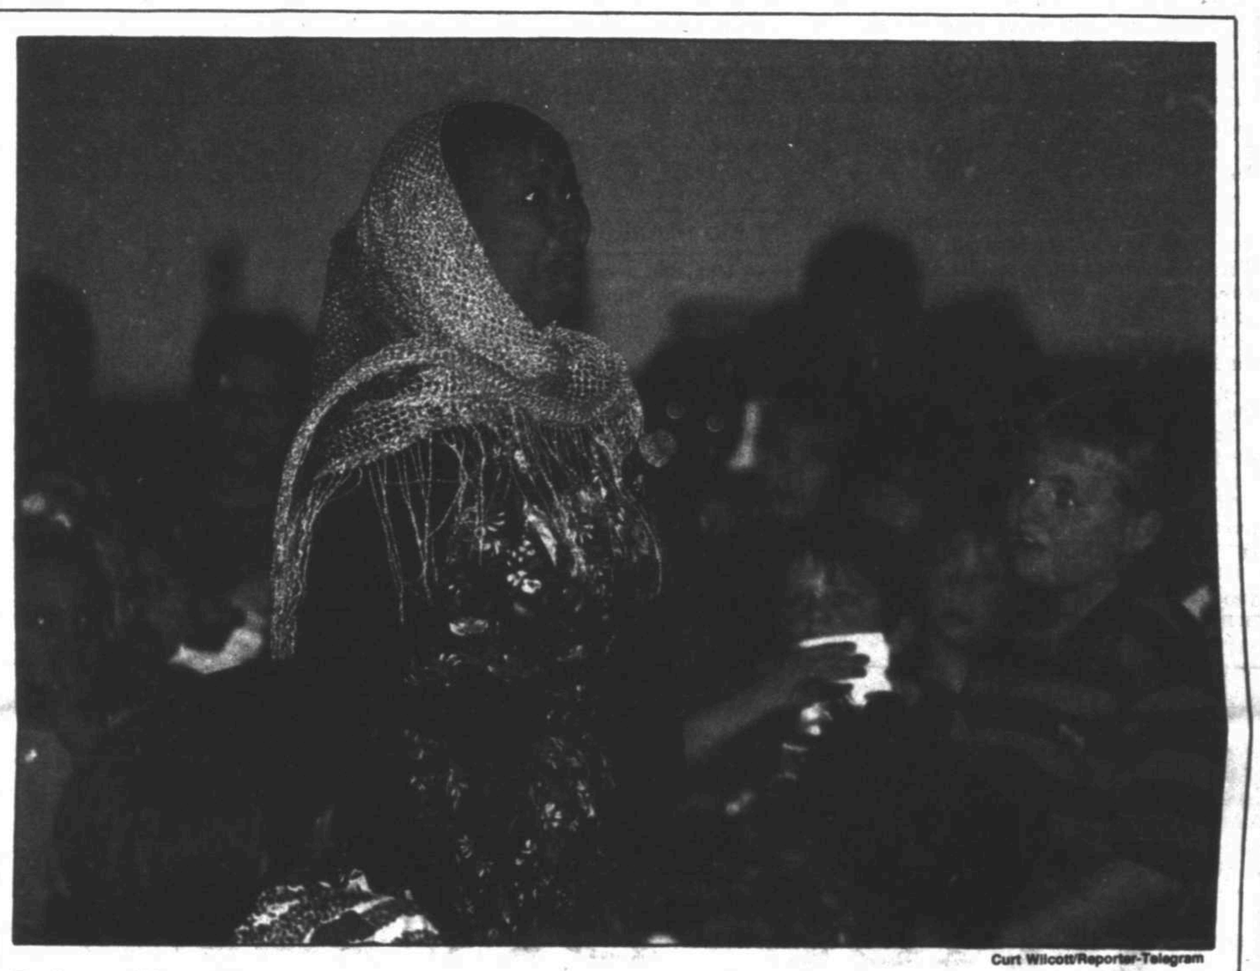

Completion of the project has been set for the spring of 1994.

In September 1991, the only hindrance concerned the lead-based paint that had been applied to the tower in the late 1960s. But a few precautions could easily overcome any possible problems.

So the city solicited bids.

NG Painting of Kerrville submitted a low bid of $87,000. But that contractor fell through after their bonding compa-

Performer Kijana Wiseman gets down to the level of third graders Thursday at Bowie Elementary School as she "cries" in her portrayal of a lost little girl.

Performer presents African history

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

From the moment Kijana Wiseman entered the gymnasium, garbed in African dress and swaying to music played by guitarist Jawad, she had third-graders captive in the cadence of her words.

The singer's lilting tones of African music, interspersed with complex clicks and joined by Jawad's parrot caws, brought the sounds of an African village to Bowie Elementary School Thursday afternoon.

Third-graders from Pease and Parker joined their Bowie peers in forming the chorus for the performer's songs.

"Mama Tiembo's getting married tonight; All the spirits will be chanting her delight," the youngsters sang with the performer.

In between verses she spoke about African customs and dress.

The versatile performer, who bills herself as a "griot" or West African keeper of oral history, has presented her show to various public school children in the district this week. Brought to the Tall City by the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, she will perform for the public at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Carver Cultural Center, 1300 E. Wall.

An accomplished singer with a 3.5 octave range and former educator with a master's degree in education, Ms. Wiseman is also an actress and one-woman black history show.

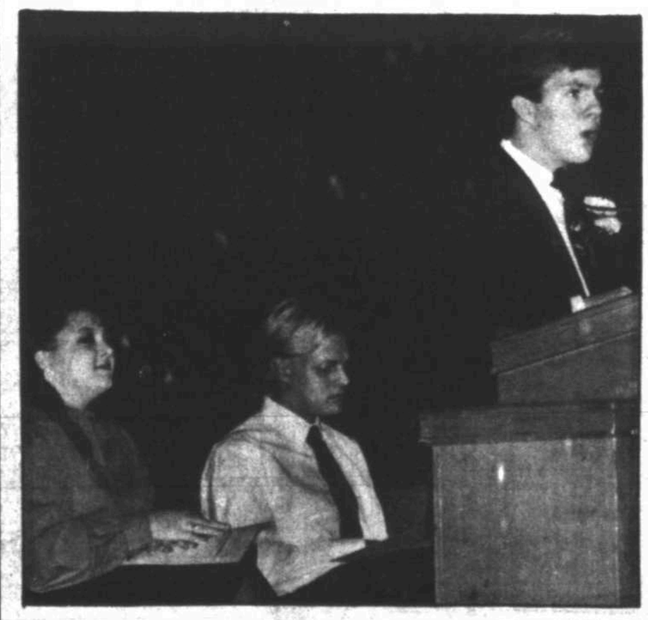

With a coat rack bearing hats, shawls and robes, she changes characters on stage and is backed by a slide show depicting Africans and African Americans. She takes the audience through black history with African songs, slave spirituals, vaudeville, jazz and gospel music.

Depicting blacks during the slave era, the singer said, "They took away our language, our families, our trust, but they couldn't take away our music, our spirituals," Ms. Wiseman said, before singing a few bars of "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen."

At one point in the show Ms. Wiseman donned choir robes and sang "I got a robe up in a 'da kingdom. Ain' a

BIRD: Endangered whooping crane receives care

the bird is more stable," the veterinarian said. "Then, at that point, we will be able to worry about the wing."

The whooping crane, also called the whooper, has become a symbol of wildlife conservation due to its near extinction.

The bird is protected by federal and state laws.

The crane was injured as it was nearing the end of its 2,500-mile flight from its nesting grounds in Canada to its wintering grounds in the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge near Rockport on the Texas Gulf Coast.

The fallen crane was discovered Monday morning by Dale Nelson, a foreman on a ranch north of Midland. It was caught by a group of ranchers, game wardens, and bird handlers, and initially was nourished and treated by Midge Erskine, a Midland bird rehabilitator who, with her husband, Woody, operates Eos Wildlife Refuge.

Mrs. Erskine, who has worked with wildlife for 20 years, said the bird gained strength under her care before being flown to San Antonio early Thursday morning.

"We nearly lost the bird three times in flight," Mrs. Erskine said.

She said she had notified Ms. Hill's clinic before the flight started that the "bird was under stress."

During the flight, the bird was supported in the plane's aisle by Mrs. Erskine and Dr. Steve Betton, a Midland veterinarian who works with wildlife.

"Stress kills the birds," Mrs. Erskine said Thursday night after she had returned from San Antonio. "Being with humans is stressful."

The saga of the bird's plight and care in Midland and its flight to San Antonio was videotaped by a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department camera operator.

"We had no idea this (shock) would happen," Mrs. Erskine said.

"It was a once-in-a-lifetime privilege to be in close contact with a bird like that," Mrs. Erskine said. "But the responsibility is like taking care of the crown jewels of England. We prayed all the way for that bird.

"There are 145 (whooping crane) birds in the wild, and I had Number 145, and his life was in mine and Woody's hands," she said. "That is an awesome responsibility."

Mrs. Erskine said she was "extremely thankful that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife and Texas Parks and Wildlife had enough faith in me and Woody that they let us handle the bird as we thought was best . . ."

She said her only regret was that her husband did not set the bird's broken wing prior to the flight.

Ms. Hill said the whooping crane "came off the plane extremely critical — almost dead."

The bird had gone into shock from "handling as much as anything else," Ms. Hill said.

"He got overheated. He got scared. He got frightened. He fought them (handlers) a little bit. He had lost a tremendous amount of blood from the initial injury."

By Thursday evening, the bird was in intensive care in an oxygen chamber and was under visual monitoring.

"At this point, he is still critical but much improved," Ms. Hill said.

Ms. Hill said she works "with a lot of the really severe trauma cases (in birds) and fractures — gunshot wounds and things like that."

She is the veterinarian for Last Chance Forever, a wildlife group that works primarily with birds of prey.

"We're hoping that we will be able to put this bird back together and get him out (flying) again," Ms. Hill said. "That is the end goal. I don't know if that is going to be a possibility yet or not. And we won't know until we get a chance to get more exams . . ."

Meanwhile, agents of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service are investigating the cause of the crane's injury.

"We are putting all of our resources on it," said Rob Lee, a Lubbock-based U.S. Fish and Wildlife agent. "We are going to pursue it with vigor, and see if we can find out just what happened to this bird. If somebody shot it, we are certainly going to found out who did it. We are going to hit the ground running."

TOWER: Contractor sets new completion date for project ny refused to accept a city contract requiring insurance to guarantee completion and payment to sub-contractors.

So City Council secured the second lowest bidder — Thomas Construction Co. of Chicago — for $136,000.

But the contractor died about two weeks later and completion was postponed until the spring of 1992.

As some consolation, the city of Odessa pledged $42,000 toward the effort, and Coca-Cola made a deal to give the CAF $30,000 for billboard advertising in exchange for some advertising space on the tower for a year.

But discussions to reach an agreement about what slogan or logo would be permitted on the tower spanned several months.

Meanwhile, the contractor's wife — the executor of his estate — assumed responsibility of the paint job. The inside of the tower was painted in the spring of 1992.

But the contractor failed to return that fall to paint the outside of the tower, officials said.

So a third contractor, Kerrville Painting Co., was lined up to do the job, at the cost of the bonding company for the previous contractor.

The outside was painted white this past spring.

But at about that time, the inside was found to be rusting due to a substandard paint job.

"It (the rust) has no effect on the water but does on the life of the tank," Jones said.

So the bonding company is responsible for having the inside repainted again, he said.

"But it's too cold for us to take it (the tower) out of service so we'll have to wait until spring," Jones said.

In addition, the inside needs to be repainted before CAF and Coca Cola advertisement decals can be affixed to the outside of the tower.

That's because equipment that will be used to repaint the inside can scar the decals, necessitating their application afterward, he said.

So when all is complete, the tower display will read "Home of the Confederate Air Force," with their wing logo, followed by the smaller "Enjoy Coca-Cola Classic" in red with white letters.

dat good News?"

Later she changed accessories to sing Billie Holiday songs.

"Billie Holiday sang from the heart. She sang about talent," Ms. Wiseman said. "Anybody out there who doesn't have talent?"

When a few third-graders raised their hands, she said, "You got talent. If you are alive you have talent. If you are breathing your job is to find what your talent is."

Before Ms. Wiseman arrived, Jawad, a musician and composer with a musical style similar to Al Jureau, performed a number that proved his talent as a solo performer.

"Kijana & Jawad" will present their show to pupils at Washington and Scharbauer elementary schools today.

Tickets to their Saturday public performance at Carver are $5 for adults and $3 for children. Tickets are available from both Regency Cleaners, Tom's Pharmacy, and Pages & Prints Bookstore.

"Tickets will be sold at the door if we have any left," said Robbyne Hocker Fuller, founding president of the chamber of entrepreneurs.

Houstonians love, hate mixed-up neighborhoods

HOUSTON (AP) — Anthony Nixon isn't fazed by the maze of mansions, businesses and apartments he calls home.

"I like it here because it's eclectic. I think anyone who moves into this neighborhood has to know that," Nixon said of the urban Montrose area.

"I think they're kind of bigots to move in here and then complain about things," said Nixon, whose neat two-story home sits down the street from a sometimes raucous Irish pub.

Whiners, he suggested, might consider a move to the more orderly suburbs.

Nixon, like droves of other Houstonians, didn't vote in this week's election. But if he had, he would have cast his ballot against a proposal to bring zoning to the nation's fourth-largest city.

Many of his more civic-minded residents felt the same way, and the proposal failed Tuesday, 52 percent to 48 percent. It was the third time in 45 years voters here have quashed zoning efforts.

The defeat means Houston — the land of erratic and explosive development — remains the largest city in the nation without a zoning ordinance.

"It's embarrassing to admit that Houston is once again going to stay in the Dark Ages," zoning proponent Bart Truxillo, who lives in the Heights neighborhood, another mixed-up area near downtown.

Zoning proponents said the ordinance was needed to protect residential areas in Houston, where businesses can wander into some neighborhoods with impunity.

Although Truxillo and Nixon are at opposite sides of the issue, both live in neighborhoods that are distinguished for their hodgepodge development.

In Nixon's neighborhood, one can walk to a convenience store, one of the most exclusive restaurants in town or even an adult bookstore.

The trendy Montrose area also is home to restaurants, bars, grocery stores, drug stores, tanning parlors, tattoo parlors, used clothing stores, washaterias, gay bars and at least one rather wild leather store.

Truxillo, meanwhile, lives in the historic Heights in a whimsical, 100-year-old house that many consider a local landmark.

"This is all about living in your house in the inner city and worrying about a truck repair facility moving in next to you," Truxillo said as he explains why zoning is needed.

Anti-zoning forces note that many parts of Houston are protected by deed restrictions, including the city's exclusive River Oaks neighborhood where there's only room for lavish mansions.

Former President George Bush and his wife Barbara also don't have to worry about businesses encroaching on their deed-restricted neighborhood in the upscale Memorial area in west Houston.

ROOM: Memorial library honors Williams and papers out of the basement, the bookshelves, the offices and out of my own cupboards."

The elder Williams received numerous honors including being inducted into the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum's Hall of Fame and being listed in the 1976-77 "Who's Who in the South and Southwest." Named an honorary lifetime member of the administrative board of the United Methodist Church on Nov. 20, 1973, Williams was a rancher, oilman, Pecos county commissioner for 18 years and an author.

"When times changed, so did he," Mrs. Pollard said. "He would learn something else."

The Williams Room, Mrs. Pollard said, "is for our children and our grandchildren. I hope it's a contribution which shows how a God-fearing, law-abiding, countryman lived his life."

On hand for the occasion and surrounded by old friends and family members was Fort Stockton resident Chicora "Chic" Ann Lee Graham Williams, Wiliams' wife of 56 years.

"I think it's putting memories in the most beautiful frames," Mrs. Williams said of the reception, which drew a standing-room-only-size crowd. Her eyes sparkled as she greeted with a smile and often a hug those who came to pay their respects.

"He would have loved every second of it," Mrs. Williams said of her husband and what his reaction would have been to the gathering.

The two met at a picnic. At the time, Mrs. Williams was attending Sul Ross at Alpine majoring in English and minoring in Spanish. Williams was working for the Texon Oil and Land Co. It was Mrs. Williams' brother, Oscar Graham, who worked for Williams, who introduced the two.

Soon, Williams was spending much of his time traveling back and forth to Alpine. When he asked Mrs. Williams to be his bride after their fifth date, she turned him down.

"He was going to a reunion of World War I veterans in Paris and he wanted to take her so he asked her to marry him," Mrs. Pollard said. She laughed. "Later when they married and she wanted to go to Paris, he told her, 'You had your chance.'"

Williams did not return empty-handed from his European trip. He brought his soon-to-be bride a diamond ring he had purchased in Holland.

Although Mrs. Williams has spent most of her life in Texas, she was not born here.

"I was born up in Indian Territory, that's why I'm a little bit brave," Mrs. Williams said, smiling.

When she was 6 months old, her family moved to Sterling City, where she remained until she graduated from high school and went off to college, first to Trinity, then to Sul Ross.

"We didn't have lots of money," Mrs. Williams said, recalling her formative years in Sterling City with her parents and her two brothers, Oscar and Joe Graham, both of whom are now gone. "My dad sold real estate. But, we had a good home."

She enjoyed her college days and was honored with a page in the yearbooks of both colleges.

"It was not that I was pretty, certainly I did not have money," Mrs. Williams said. "I think it was because I was a good sport and a good friend."

Mrs. Williams, now 88 years old, believes a strong, loving family is the answer to many of today's problems.

"The family is our strongest anchor for this day and time," she said. "My friends and my family are my biggest assets."

In her family, Mrs. Williams said, "We don't just love you when the sun shines. We love you when it gets dark."

When Mrs. Williams speaks of her nine grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren, her face lights up. She said, if she were going to give them advice it would be: "Love your family. Love your friends. And thank the good Lord you are as well as your are."

Conspiracy trial begins for 19-year-old white supremacist

GALVESTON (AP) — Prosecutors said Thursday a 19-year-old skinhead's friendship with two other white supremacists and their common bond of secrecy and racial hate comprised a murder conspiracy in a black man's slaying.

In opening statements Thursday, Tarrant County assistant district attorney Marvin Collins said the actions of Christopher Brosky, an avowed white supremacist, will show he is guilty of conspiracy to murder Donald Thomas.

"Three skinheads shared a common philosophy," Collins said. "That the white race is a superior race and the black race is inferior. It brought these three together in a small group."

Prosecutors say it was those shared beliefs and other commonalties that will prove Brosky was involved in a conspiracy to kill Thomas.

Brosky, convicted in March of Thomas' murder, was not the triggerman in the drive-by shooting in June 1991. His sentence by a confused Tarrant County jury was 10 years probation.

Prosecutors hope this second trial on organized crime and conspiracy charges will bring a stiffer sentence. If convicted, Brosky could face life in prison on the organized crime charge. The conspiracy charge carries a maximum of 20 years.

The case was moved 300 miles south to Galveston because of publicity in Tarrant County.

Thomas was drinking with friends after work when he was killed by shots fired from passing car.

In that car, Brosky was the backseat passenger. Joshua Hendry, the driver, pleaded guilty and received a 15-year murder sentence after agreeing to testify against Brosky.

The shooter, George Roberts, received a 40-year prison sentence for his cooperation with authorities and a plea of guilty.

Brosky's defense team stressed to jurors they could not convict their client solely on the expected testimony of Brosky's accomplices. They were also reminded several times that Brosky did not drive the car or pull the gun trigger.

"Donald Thomas, as far as I know, never hurt anyone in his whole life ... he had a perfect right to live," said Ward Casey, a Brosky defense attorney.

But Casey reminded the jury that Thomas "was killed by a 16-year-old with a shotgun."

The jury does not know Brosky was convicted of murder as an accomplice in Thomas' death.

"This case is ate up with reasonable doubt," Casey told jurors.

The first witness in what is expected to be a week-long trial was Thomas' widow, Carolyn.

In teary testimony, she told jurors about the early morning phone call she received, notifying her of her husband's death.

"I put the phone down and dropped to the floor and started crying," Ms. Thomas said in an emotion-choked voice, tears spilling down her face. "I just sat there for a while."

Dallas sheriff asks governor for special session on prisons

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards should call state legislators into special session to solve a county jail crisis now that voters have approved $1 billion in prison bonds, the Dallas County sheriff says.

Jim Bowles also invited Richards to tour the Dallas County jails, which are jammed with 50 percent more inmates than they were designed to hold.

Two-thirds of those prisoners are the state's responsibility, he said Wednesday.

"We've been waiting for years to get a fair shake out of the state," said Bowles. "We're having more violence and disease in the jail ... We're not made. This just has to be put on the table."

Chuck McDonald, a governor's spokesman, said "there's no possibility of a special session" but that Richards could not formally respond to Bowles' letter until it arrived.

The bond issue approved Tuesday will go toward building "state jails," which will be reserved for nonviolent offenders. State officials say this will free up maximum security offenders, making those inmates serve longer portions of their sentence.

Currently, more than 24,000 inmates are backed up in county jails around the state, with about 60,228 inmates in the state prison system. The prison capacity will more than double by 1997 to 128,000.

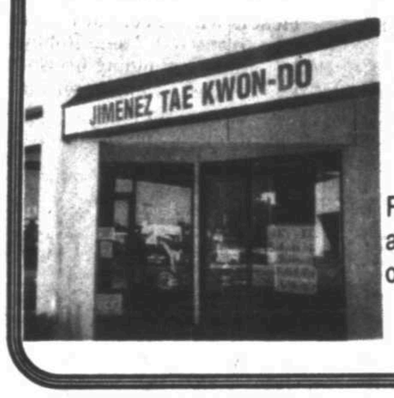

"The governor is completely sympathetic to the problem," said McDonald, but the prison bond package is the answer to overcrowding in county jails and state prisons alike.

Bowles said he wanted the letter, which was mailed to Richards Monday and faxed to reporters Wednesday, to become public after the election to avoid the appearance of trying to influence the prison bond issue.

Death row inmate acquitted of killings criticizes system

DALLAS (AP) — Muneer Mohammed Deeb, with the help of Amnesty International, is becoming the latest celebrity critic of Texas' criminal justice system.

Now living in the Dallas area, Deeb spent seven years on death row as the convicted mastermind of the 1982 stabbing murders of three teen-agers in Waco.

But Deeb is a free man after being retried and acquitted in January. He's speaking on behalf of the advocacy group for prisoners' rights and searching for a publisher for the book he's writing.

Amnesty International sent Deeb in June to the United Nations World Conference on Human Rights in Vienna, where he served on the Survivors Committee with the Dalai Lama and other Nobel laureates.

Next week, he'll be featured at a panel discussion on the death penalty at Southern Methodist University.

Jill Montgomery, 17, and her friends Kenneth Franks, 18, and Raylene Rice, 17, were stabbed repeatedly. Their throats were slashed and the girls were raped.

One law officer was led, through jailhouse gossip, to uncover a murder-for-hire plot allegedly concocted by Deeb, the co-owner of a small Waco convenience store.

Deeb, according to the prosecution scenario, hired David Wayne Spence to kill a former girlfriend, Gayle Kelley Reyes, on whom Deeb had taken out a $20,000 insurance policy.

However, Spence and his accomplices, Gilbert and Anthony Melendez, mistook Ms. Montgomery for Ms. Reyes. Spence was convicted and sentenced to death for the killings. The Melendez brothers pleaded guilty and received life sentences.

Deeb, in 1985, also was sentenced to die for Ms. Montgomery's murder. But in 1991, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned the conviction, saying that hearsay testimony from a cellmate of Spence's had been improperly allowed in the Deeb trial.

A new trial for Deeb was held in Fort Worth. That jury acquitted him.

Deeb was charged in March in Dallas with receiving and concealing stolen electronics in a police sting that led to more than a dozen charges against three of his cousins and an uncle.

If Deeb is convicted on the third-degree felony, he could be deported to his native Jordan. The 34-year-old man attributes his present problems to malicious pursuit by police.

> 'The way I look at it right now, they can take anybody off the street, because once you're accused, you have a very, very small chance of proving yourself innocent.'
> — Muneer M. Deeb
> acquitted inmate

Deeb says the same attitudes led to his arrest in Waco more than 10 years ago.

"The way I look at it right now, they can take anybody off the street, because once you're accused, you have a very, very small chance of proving yourself innocent," he said.

"Innocent until proven guilty is a myth."

Deeb's attorney for the retrial, high-profile Dick DeGuerin of Houston, called Deeb's release a vindication.

DeGuerin portrays Deeb as an outspoken foreigner whose store attracted "sleazy people."

Deeb was already unpopular in strictly Baptist Waco for selling beer and cigarettes to teens when he made an ill-conceived joke claiming responsibility for the killings, DeGuerin said.

"From that point on," said DeGuerin, "the whole town piled on and Deeb was a pariah. His store closed down. Nobody would go to his store. There was hate mail."

Amnesty International board member Rick Halperin, who organized the Nov. 11 panel, says Deeb's release is part of a pattern of Texas reversing itself in death row convictions.

"His is not an isolated case, where you think it's a fluke and it's just one guy," said Halperin. "If you do the type of work I'm involved in, you hear about this all the time."

Woman blames paramedics for her son's death

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities Thursday were awaiting autopsy results for a man whose mother said was twice refused ambulance transportation to a hospital after he began bleeding.

Troy Wells, who had been taking medication after teeth extractions, died Tuesday — one day after paramedics were twice called to his home when he complained of pain in his stomach and mouth.

"I begged them to take my baby. ... I begged them and begged them," Lorraine Wells said, crying. "He was throwing up blood and urinating blood, and they saw the blood.

Wells, 23, had been taking a pain reliever and penicillin after having his wisdom teeth removed last week.

"I thought that was serious, but they didn't think it was serious enough," said Ms. Wells. The family has no car.

But Dallas Fire Department officials said they had no indication that paramedics witnessed the man urinating blood. They declined further comment on Wednesday, saying they were investigating the case.

"At this time, we don't have all the facts and we are still gathering information," said Deputy Fire Chief Joe Vasquez, who oversees emergency medical services.

He said symptoms that would require ambulance transport to a hospital include trauma-related injuries, suspected heart attacks, unconsciousness and respiratory problems.

Analyses of tissue samples and toxicology test results were needed for a ruling in Wells' death, said Sheila Spotswood, a spokeswoman for the Dallas County medical examiner's office. She said that process usually takes several weeks.

A friend, asked to take Wells to a scheduled medical appointment Tuesday, was unable to rouse him when she knocked at the door. Wells' sister found him dead later that day.

Wells may have died from accidental overdose of a pain relief medication containing codeine, according to some authorities.

Hollywood grapples with deaths of stars

By John Horn
AP entertainment writer

LOS ANGELES — When River Phoenix died last weekend, he didn't just leave anguished family and friends. He also threw three films into disorder in the latest example of how Hollywood productions can become creative and financial disasters when a top star dies.

The problem is especially critical when the actor dies on the movie set. Those films — from Vic Morrow's "Twilight Zone: The Movie" to Brandon Lee's "The Crow" — become so tainted by tragedy they are impossible to release without a flood of negative publicity.

Phoenix didn't die on the set — he collapsed outside a nightclub. But he was a young, acclaimed actor who was much in demand, and his passing had other ramifications.

Over the years, when stars have died, filmmakers' solutions occasionally have been creative and sometimes downright ghoulish.

Perhaps the worst handling of an actor's death surrounded the passing of horror veteran Bela Lugosi, just two days into filming 1959's "Plan 9 From Outer Space." Instead of calling it quits, the filmmakers plowed ahead. A taller actor replaced Lugosi — holding a cape over his face.

For that and other reasons, "Plan 9 from Outer Space" is considered one of the worst major movies ever made.

Jean Harlow, the hard-living platinum blonde of the 1930s, was hospitalized for uremic poisoning in 1937 during the filming of "Saratoga" with Clark Gable. She died later that year from cerebral edema. Her many remaining scenes in the film were played by stand-in Mary Dees, filmed only from behind.

When Natalie Wood died during a 1981 boating accident, "Brainstorm" was completed without her. The same was true with "Twilight Zone." Both films received mildly positive reviews, but they never completely shook the stain of tragedy.

More recently, Brandon Lee was killed in a gun mishap on the set of "The Crow." That movie, very nearly completed when Lee died in March, was finished without him.

But Paramount Pictures, which had been scheduled to distribute the independent production, exercised an option on its distribution contract and declined to release it. While the studio did not publicly specify a reason, it was widely known that Lee's death — and the negative publicity it was still generating — was the primary cause.

Most of the focus on Phoenix's death has been on the movie "Dark Blood," which he was in the middle of filming when he died Sunday.

White House: Fewer to pay more for health

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Backpedaling from its earlier estimate that 40 percent of Americans will have to pay more for their health insurance under the Clinton reform plan, the White House said that the number is actually 30 percent.

Under questioning before the Senate Finance Committee, White House budget director Leon Panetta said that the administration had neglected to count the out-of-pocket costs that people now pay for deductibles and co-payments.

Panetta said that costs are still rising under the current system. "If we fail to pass this plan," he said Thursday, "100 percent of Americans will pay higher premiums, because that's where are health costs are going."

The earlier 40 percent projection by Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala instantly became an embarrassment to the administration and a ripe target for critics. White House healthcare czar Ira Magaziner has been making the rounds of television shows saying the earlier figure was misleading.

Opponents, however, said that the latest number juggling only demonstrates the unreliability of the plan's cost projections.

Committee chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., interrupted Panetta's testimony to note that the 37 million Americans who currently are uninsured pay nothing at all, implying that they should also be included in such calculations.

Moynihan said "it wouldn't surprise me" if the share of those paying more shot back up to 40 percent when the now-uninsured are included.

The Department of Health and Human Services estimates that 100 million people now have health insurance through their employers, meaning that by Panetta's calculations, 30 million would pay higher premiums under the Clinton plan.

Panetta said the administration believes that most people who see price increases will pay on average of $24 more a month. The White House said that half of those will receive better benefits in return, while the other half, mostly young people, would pay more for the same level of benefits.

Panetta also stressed that the remaining 70 percent of Americans with health insurance now would be "paying the same or less" in premiums, with average savings of $61 a month.

He insisted that most of the half a dozen or so other health care plans circulating in Congress would also force premiums up. Like the Clinton plan, many would require "community rating" of insurance premiums, he said. Under such a system, all consumers are pooled together regardless of risk, increasing costs for the young and healthy, whose payments help reduce premiums for the elderly and ill.

The budget chief also defended the administration's proposed limit on small business subsidies.

FAMILY MATTERS

Parents say adult daughter steals from them

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: Can you tell me what you re supposed to do with a 23-year-old daughter who steals from you? She and her worthless husband won't get jobs or can't keep jobs. One or both of them is always sick so they wind up getting fired or quitting. When I confront her and have concrete proof that she has stolen something (we have proof that she's also stolen cameras, a stereo and two guns, and pawned them), she says she does it because they don't have any money.

May

We would have given up on her long ago, but she has two children (4 and 1) who don't deserve to have to suffer like they do. So we listen to what she says and let her go off because of our grandchildren. Where we are now is that we think she stole some checks and we don't know what to do about it. She's done that in the past and cashed them because there "wasn't any food in the house." My husband is furious and wants to turn her in to the police. I am scared and don't know what to do. I don't want those children home alone with their father, but I know this has to stop.

My husband and I have worked hard all of our lives and have been successful. We live a good life and have provided all of our children with everything they have ever needed. We have always been honest and hard working. We never taught any of our kids to be like this. The other two are grown and doing well. She was our baby and maybe we did spoil her, but we never allowed her to steal.

She was a little wild in high school but nothing except some drinking and sneaking-out problems. She was doing OK working at one of our stores until she net the bum she's married to. He started her on using drugs for fun and I believe that they've been in trouble ever since. They had to get married so there wasn't anything we could do to get her away from him. She swears that they're not doing drugs now, but I don't know whether to believe her or not.

Can you give me some advice on what I should do? My husband wants to turn her in to the police but I don't think I could forgive myself if I did that. How would you feel if you sent your daughter to jail? MAD BUT SCARED

DEAR MAD: You and your husband are faced with a difficult problem. You may be helped by knowing that if your daughter is doing anything illegal — drugs and/or stealing — you are not really helping her by protecting her from the consequences of her actions. Your situation is the "pay me now or pay me later" quandary. I believe, based on your daughter's history, that it is time to consider what might be best for her and for her children. As you have found, the "price" just goes up as time goes on. Addiction is said to have only three possible outcomes: death, jail or recovery.

Sometimes in order to truly help our children we must let them face the consequences of their actions. I encourage you to call the Palmer Drug Abuse Program (685-0686) and attend their Parents' Program. You and your husband can get some very valuable ideas and support from other parents who have faced similar issues.

Facing these issues is very painful and difficult. I encourage you and your husband to take this first step to find out how to truly help your daughter and your grandchildren. It would break my heart too if my daughter were in this situation, but I would take the steps that I have suggested to you. The recovery process is a blessed process and it works to create a present and a future for everyone involved.

THE FOLLOWING TIPS ON HOW TO RAISE A HAPPY CHILD ARE OFFERED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

This week continues on the topic started last week regarding the results of a 40-year study at Harvard University that found regardless of intelligence, family income, ethnic background or education, those who worked as boys led happier and more productive lives.

The boys who worked in their homes or communities gained competence and came to feel that they were contributing, worthwhile members of their families and society. Because these children felt good about themselves, others felt good about them. The conclusion we can reach is that parents who "do everything" for their children may actually be performing a disservice. Children benefit tremendously from understanding the work ethic from first-hand experience. As one 11-year-old told his mother: "You only need to know three things about kids — don't hit them too much, don't yell at them too much and don't do too much for them."

People working at home are gaining in esteem

Associated Press

A record 6.9 million mothers worked at home last year, about a third of them telecommuting and the rest operating their own businesses.

Mothers and employment experts alike, Teri Lynn Karush wrote in an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, report that telecommuters and home-based business owners are held in higher esteem than in the past.

"A couple of years ago, people would hide that they were working at home," said Georganne Fiumara, director of Mothers Home Business Network, a New York area information and support group. "Now it's sort of a badge of honor."

One reason for this increasingly positive attitude is the more-accessible, less-expensive office equipment — fax machines, computers, modems and telephones.

"Most things can now be done at home in the same professional manner as they are in any large office," Fiumara said.

A threshold decision is whether to try to take your current job home or start your own business. Women who run their own shops can spend virtually all their time at home, but the same does not generally hold true of telecommuters.

"One of the biggest misconceptions is that people go home and are never heard from again," said Gil Gordon, a telecommuting consultant to businesses.

Most full-timers spend at least one or two days in the office every week. Before trying to work from home, make sure the job can be done there.

"It has to be portable," said Connie Goebel, project manager for telecommuting at Southern New England Telecommunications Corp., herself a telecommuting mother. "You can't be in a hot-potato spot where the president is going to call you into her office every five minutes."

Jobs that depend primarily on computer or communications equipment are ideal. So are those that require more written than face-to-face interaction. If you must trailblaze telecommuting at your firm, focus on your employer's needs, not your own, advised Sarah Edwards, co-author of the guide "Working From Home."

Some points to make:

Companies benefit from increased productivity. Home workers produce at their own pace and utilize peak energy hours. They don't succumb to office interruptions or socializing, nor to absenteeism caused by bad weather or sick children. As a valued employee, your employer will prefer having you work some days at home than not work at all. Ask for a modest commitment at first, perhaps one day a week for a month, or try a pilot project.

Experts agree entrepreneurship is more lucrative, if more risky, than telecommuting. Ask yourself if you have an entrepreneurial spirit. Can you afford to start your own business? Are you an office social queen? How much job security do you need?

"If your objective is to spend more time with your kids and not so much on your career, you don't want to get into a new field," Sarah Edwards advised.

Aggressive behavior hurts bullies, victims

By Dr. Lawrence Kutner
N.Y. Times News Service

Some bullying can be brought on by crises at home, like a parent's loss of a job, a severe illness or a divorce.

About a month ago, Keira Walsh, 11, was stopped by a classmate on her way to school in Madison, Wis. "He grabbed my bike so that I couldn't move," she recalled. "He cursed at me. He kept yelling in my ear. Someone had said something that he didn't like, and he was taking it out on other people."

Most classrooms include at least one highly aggressive child who tries to have his way by bullying. While adults realize that such children are seldom as threatening as they try to make themselves out to be, their peers see them quite differently. A 10-year-old who is extorting milk money or threatening to chase a child home after school can loom large in the fears of an 8-year-old. Handing over a quarter a day to avoid possibly being beaten up seems a small price to pay.

Teachers and psychologists have recently become more sensitive to the effects of bullying on both the victims and the bullies themselves. Some schools are developing programs to teach bullies and the ones they chronically pick on more appropriate and effective social skills. "We used to pay more attention to children who were withdrawn and depressed," said Dr. Deborah Capaldi, a developmental psychologist at the Oregon Social Learning Center, a private research institute in Eugene, Ore. "But now we know that it's the antisocial children who have problems later on during adolescence and adulthood. The children who start antisocial behavior early are the most at risk."

Researchers have noticed patterns in the backgrounds of bullies and their repeated victims. Highly aggressive children tend to view the world as a more dangerous and hostile place than other children do. They're also more easily provoked into a physical response to a perceived problem. "An aggressive child who gets bumped while waiting in line for a drink will tend to interpret it as a hostile act," said Dr. David Perry, a professor of psychology at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, who studies aggression among children. "Other children will give the person who bumped them the benefit of the doubt."

Highly aggressive behavior seldom disappears by itself. As children grow older, it often leads to academic trouble, as well as social and even legal problems. "About 50 percent of children who get into trouble at school because of aggressive behavior below the age of 10 continue to have serious behavior problems as adolescents," said Dr. Jan N. Hughes, a professor of educational psychology at Texas A&M University in College Station.

"Aggression in boys is different from aggression in girls," he continued. "Girls are aggressive by excluding others and saying mean things. Boys are aggressive by hitting and getting into fights."

Some bullying can be brought on by crises at home, like a parent's loss of a job, a severe illness or a divorce. Children often feel powerless and frustrated in those situations, but they worry that expressing their feelings directly toward their parents will only make matters worse. Instead, they choose much safer targets, like their classmates, on whom to test the limits of their power and control.

Perry has found, for example, that boys tend to become more aggressive in the first year or two after their parents divorce. This response doesn't seem to be common among younger girls, but it is seen among adolescent girls whose parents have separated.

Studies have also shown that bullies' parents generally behave differently from the parents of nonaggressive children. When they touch their children, they tend to be brusque and controlling, rather than reassuring. Discipline is often inconsistent, with the parents letting an infraction go on one occasion but punishing the child severely for it the next time.

The parents of aggressive children are also more likely to be physically or verbally aggressive toward each other and to use corporal punishment when they don't like their children's behavior.

Both of those behaviors reinforce the child's perception that aggression and violence are acceptable and appropriate solutions to problems.

Tips can help bullies' targets prevent abuse

N.Y. Times News Service

Although all children have run-ins with bullies on occasion, some are singled out repeatedly. Many adults think that these chronic victims of bullies are passive, shy children, but researchers say that's not always the case. Highly aggressive children, including bullies themselves, are at least as likely as nonaggressive ones to be picked on repeatedly. One reason is that aggressive children tend to be rejected by their classmates. They have difficulty forming friendships and spend much time alone. The social relationships they do form tend to be with other aggressive children.

The other group of chronic victims fits the stereotype of the insecure, socially isolated child. They tend to have low self-esteem and a less well developed sense of humor than other children their age. "Being a victim is also a stable trait," said Dr. David Perry, a professor of psychology at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton. "If you're picked on in the third grade, you're likely to be picked on in the sixth grade, too."

If your child is having problems with a bully, here are some things to keep in mind:

■ Don't assume it's a major problem. Sometimes, rushing in to help will make a victim feel even more inadequate. Take your cues from your child's reaction. "For some children, it can be a traumatic and shaming experience," said Dr. Peter A. Wyman, an associate professor of psychology at the University of Rochester, who studies how children respond to stress. "For others, the effects may be minimal and transitory."

■ If your child is a regular victim of bullies, help him make more friends. Children make friends by sharing social experiences. Help your child plan an outing to a skating rink or a video arcade with one or two classmates. Have other children over for dinner or for play. "Encourage your child to join organizations, such as scouts or a band or a karate club," Hughes said. "Children who have a network of friends tend not to be bullied."

■ Rehearse with your child how he might react. The first response, if possible, should be for the child to tell a teacher or a playground monitor. Safety at school is fundamentally the responsibility of adults. If telling an adult doesn't work, or if no adult is available, your child should use a series of escalating responses, beginning with ignoring the bully or forcefully telling him to stop. Fighting back, or otherwise responding at the bully's level, should be a last resort.

DEAR ABBY

Memories of Nov. 22, 1963, shared

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: We've all experienced a moment in our lives that is literally unforgettable. If you were 4 years old or older, you will remember where you were when you heard the numbing news that President Kennedy had been assassinated. (I was in Tokyo, Japan, vacationing with my husband.)

Van Buren

Last year, I asked my readers to send me a postcard telling me where they were when they heard the shocking news. I wisely rented a post office box so these postcards would not get mixed up with the routine Dear Abby mail, but I was not prepared for the deluge that was to follow.

In the first two weeks, I received more than 300,000 postcards — plus long letters — from people who were eager to share their recollections.

Mail came in from small towns and major cities — from Alaska to the Philippines, from Berlin to Africa. The recollections were heartwarming: "I was Jack's roommate at Harvard," wrote one reader who is now in his 70s. Another wrote, "My folks had a framed picture of President Kennedy in our living room ... next to the one of the pope."

Although this was the beginning of a violent chapter in American history, the responses reflected a less hectic time when children came home for lunch, their mothers ironed a lot, and families watched black-and-white TVs.

There were the inevitable theories of why and how — and a spattering of negative anecdotes, tales of "ESP" and premonitions — but the majority of the responses were moving tributes to our slain president.

Many of you wrote that you looked forward to reading what others were doing that fateful day, so I shared some of the responses in a Dec. 20, 1992, column, but it became clear that I had to share more of them. Thus, those recollections became a paperback book titled "Where Were You When President Kennedy Was Shot?" I asked Pierre Salinger, Kennedy's close friend and press secretary, if he would write the foreword. He accepted graciously without hesitation.

It's available in most bookstores, or from the publisher, Andrews and McMeel. Call (800) 913-ABBY, or write to: Abby's Kennedy Book, Andrews and McMeel, P.O. Box 419242, Kansas City, Mo. 64141. (The price is $6.95 plus $2 for postage and handling — payable in U.S. dollars.)

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Another Kind of Child in San Francisco" brought back a fond memory. My mother, who lives in Sweden, used to be very critical of all family members — but always behind their backs. Any relative who visited her had to listen to endless bad-mouthing of "what's wrong with so-and-so."

One day, one of her grandsons came for a visit. As soon as grandmother started her usual criticizing, he said: "Now, Grandma, you have 20 minutes to say nasty things about all the people I love, and then we're going to talk about pleasant things."

She was dumbfounded! She did not say anything at all for a full minute, and she never "used" her allotted 20 minutes to bad-mouth anybody.

As a matter of fact, after that, she changed dramatically, and today she's the sweetest 90-year-old lady you can imagine. — J.R.T.

DEAR ABBY: "Auntie J. in L.A." wrote to you saying that her nieces and nephews never wrote thank-you notes for the many gifts she had sent them. She blamed their parents for not having taught them better manners.

Abby, aunts can be teachers, too. Her next gift should be a box of thank-you cards with self-addressed envelopes. W.G. IN L.A.

For Abby's favorite family recipes, send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet No. 1, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Legal clinic helps elderly get justice

By Frank Fisher

CAIRO, Ill. (AP) — Since her husband died last year, 81-year-old Eva Childress has been subjected to a string of wrongs. A plumber left an all-night leak, the cemetery buried her spouse in the wrong grave and a dealership sold her the wrong car. So Childress, living on Social Security and unable to afford an attorney, turned to Southern Illinois University's legal clinic, where law students help hundreds of poor, elderly people get their day in court.

"You could go to 10 attorneys, and I bet nine of them wouldn't take the cases we do," said Mary Rudasill, a law professor and the program director.

Three attorneys at the clinic supervise up to 16 students a semester who canvass 13 counties in southern Illinois. They handle about 1,000 cases annually; cases range from elderly abuse charges, to wills and divorces, to miners' complicated black lung disability claims. Legal teams visit senior citizens' centers in each county at least once a month; they also drop by nursing homes and hospitals, if necessary. The service is free, although participants are responsible for paying their own court costs if they can.

The program doesn't handle criminal cases, malpractice, personal injury lawsuits or other cases where attorneys earn fees, but can refer clients to lawyers who do. Students like Kurt Wagner, who plans to graduate as a tax lawyer next spring, call the experience invaluable.

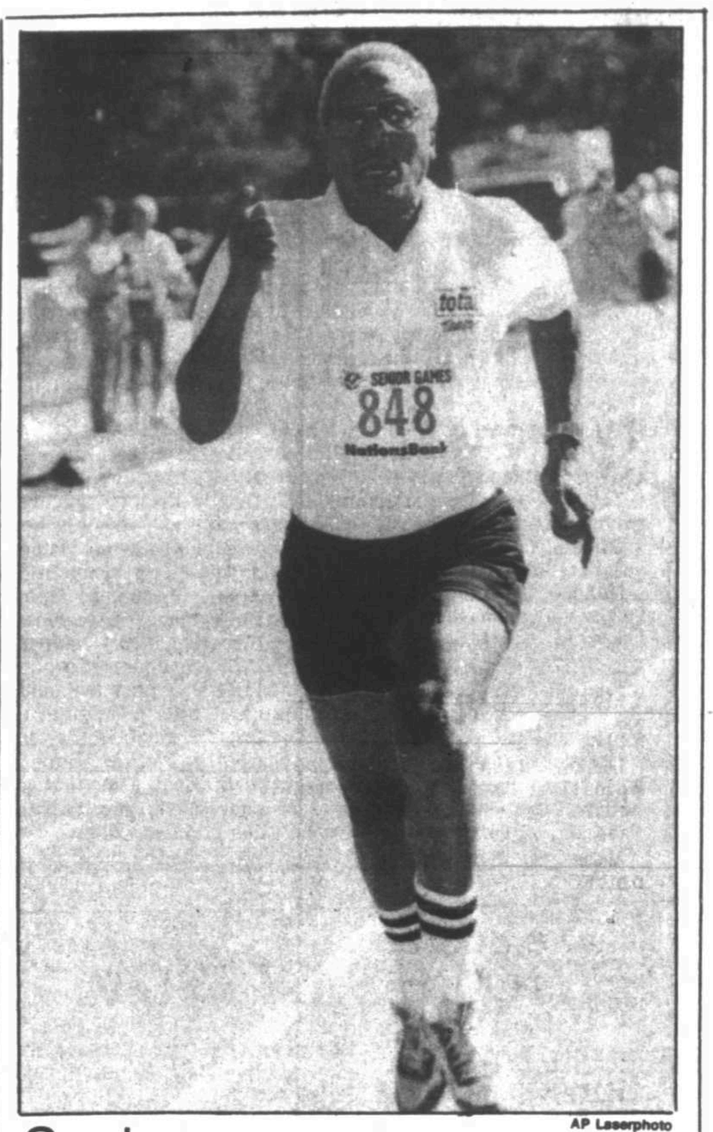

"The real appeal is to actually learn the practical side of law," said Wagner. "You get to interview real clients and draft legal documents. You normally don't get to do that in the classroom."

The variety of cases handled also makes life interesting for future attorneys. For example, Wagner, who spent much of last semester helping black lung sufferers apply for health benefits, might get a chance soon to argue a case before a state appellate court.

Childress walked into the Alexander County senior citizens' center one morning and said she needed help because she thought she bought a car with six cylinders, and instead was sold a four-cylinder model. The dealer offered to exchange the car if Childress came up with more money, but she thought that was unfair. "Funny things happen to me. I guess they just look at me and say I'm an old woman," Childress said.

Reflecting on his experiences, Wagner says, "You do get emotionally involved. You want to help out. So many seniors are in difficult situations. Sometimes, they even need protection from their own families."

Rudasill said she hoped that a stint in the clinic would open students' eyes to how law can help the less fortunate. "What we teach these students is that you can get a lot out of representing somebody who's not able to pay."

Being 'pleasantly plump' not always bad

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

What is it that sultanas and caliphs requiring sedan chairs for transportation, well-endowed dowagers, corpulent captains of capitalism, Jack Spratt's wife and other leviathans of nature enveloped in gross amounts of adipose tissue all have in common? Answer: They are fat and proud of this state of affairs. Their contemporary beholders eyed them as beautiful — an attitude contrary to present day societies' concept of pulchritude. It now seems that our role model is Twiggy and that one can not be either too thin or too rich! As a result, reducing diets and regimens abound and now constitute a vast seemingly limitless source of income and media grist for self-proclaimed "nutritionists" driven by a gross appetite for money.

The truth of the matter lies in the fact that although temporary weight reduction can be obtained, long-term success is practically nil. The reasons for this are difficult to identify since caloric intake and utilization depends on multiple factors: physical, mental, social and genetic. The National Institute of Health recently conducted a three-day conference on this subject with 24 in-depth studies involving all aspects, and finally reached the conclusion that much more research was necessary!

Young and middle-aged persons weighing 20 percent or more over calculated norms run a definite health risk, including hypertension, heart disease, diabetes, arthritis, gall bladder disease and cancer, and thereby possess a lower life expectancy. Recent statistical studies happily show, however, that the average healthy, non-hypertensive, non-diabetic, moderately overweight senior citizen can smugly relax in the knowledge that his or her life expectancy will not be impaired and that if one is over 80 it will even improve. The extra pounds can be considered the squirreling away of energy for combating elderly stress.

Philosophically speaking, one can consider gross obesity in young persons as a desecration of God's temple for the soul. It still remains the great American paradox: "Those not needing to lose weight trying to and those needing to do so not succeeding." The basic underlying factor is best described by L.V. Connelly: "Imprisoned in every fat man a thin one is wildly signaling to be let out." Perhaps the problem can be solved by having Hillary pontificate that plumpness is politically correct! But please, don't let yourself become a lard-belly!

At 93, 'safe driver' surrenders license

BELLEAIR, Fla. (AP) — On his 93rd birthday, Howard Connell voluntarily turned in his driver's license. He told an examiner he had enjoyed the privilege for 81 years and that was long enough. "I feel it's not fair to the public and not fair to my family for me to continue to drive," he told examiner Diana Messer.

Ms. Messer plugged his name into a computer and told him she didn't see any problem, that he had a "safe driver" designation from the Department of Motor Vehicles and not a ticket to his name.

As he left with a neighbor who became his unpaid chauffeur, Connell said he was going to have to adjust to losing the independence of being behind the wheel. "It's one of the last things you hold dear," he said.

Students scared

MADISON, Wis. — Dozens of University of Wisconsin students are selling their tickets for Saturday's football game against Ohio State in the aftermath of last weekend's stadium stampede.

"There are a lot of people selling their tickets because they're scared to go," Chris Gruhl, 20, a psychology student, said before a Thursday night pep rally.

Gruhl and others said many dormitory residents, particularly freshmen, have notes on bulletin boards offering their tickets for as low as $15 each. They said last week's going rate for a Michigan-Wisconsin ticket was about $30.

"You see more signs on bulletin boards than ever to sell tickets, dozens and dozens of them," said Angie Remington, 20, a marketing student.

NCAA nominates

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — Arizona athletic director Cedric Dempsey has been nominated to become the NCAA's new executive director, The Associated Press learned Thursday.

Dempsey was chosen by a search committee that narrowed a list of 250 candidates to Dempsey and three others. He would become the third executive director in the history of the college governing body.

He was selected over Judith Sweet, athletic director at the University of California-San Diego, and William Cobey, a former secretary of the North Carolina Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources.

R. Gerald Turner, chancellor of the University of Mississippi, was thought to be the front-runner among the four finalists until he withdrew his name after being interviewed Monday.

An official announcement was scheduled for 3 p.m. EST Friday at the NCAA's headquarters.

Mavs cut roster

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks reached the 12-man roster limit Thursday by placing last season's frontcourt starters Terry Davis and Sean Rooks on the injured list.

They likely will be replaced in the starting lineup by rookies Popeye Jones and Darren Morningstar when the Mavericks open the season Friday against Utah. The home opener is Saturday against Golden State.

Davis is recovering from reconstructive surgery on his left elbow, which was shattered in a May 2 automobile accident. He is out indefinitely after a season in which he blossomed into one of the team's top players.

Gut check time for Lee

■ Midland Lee's prospects tonight against Abilene Cooper are simple: win and go to the playoffs, lose and close the 1993 scrapbook.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Regular season football play ends today at 8 p.m. when Midland Lee hosts Abilene Cooper at Memorial Stadium. But as far as the Rebels are concerned, the state playoffs have already arrived.

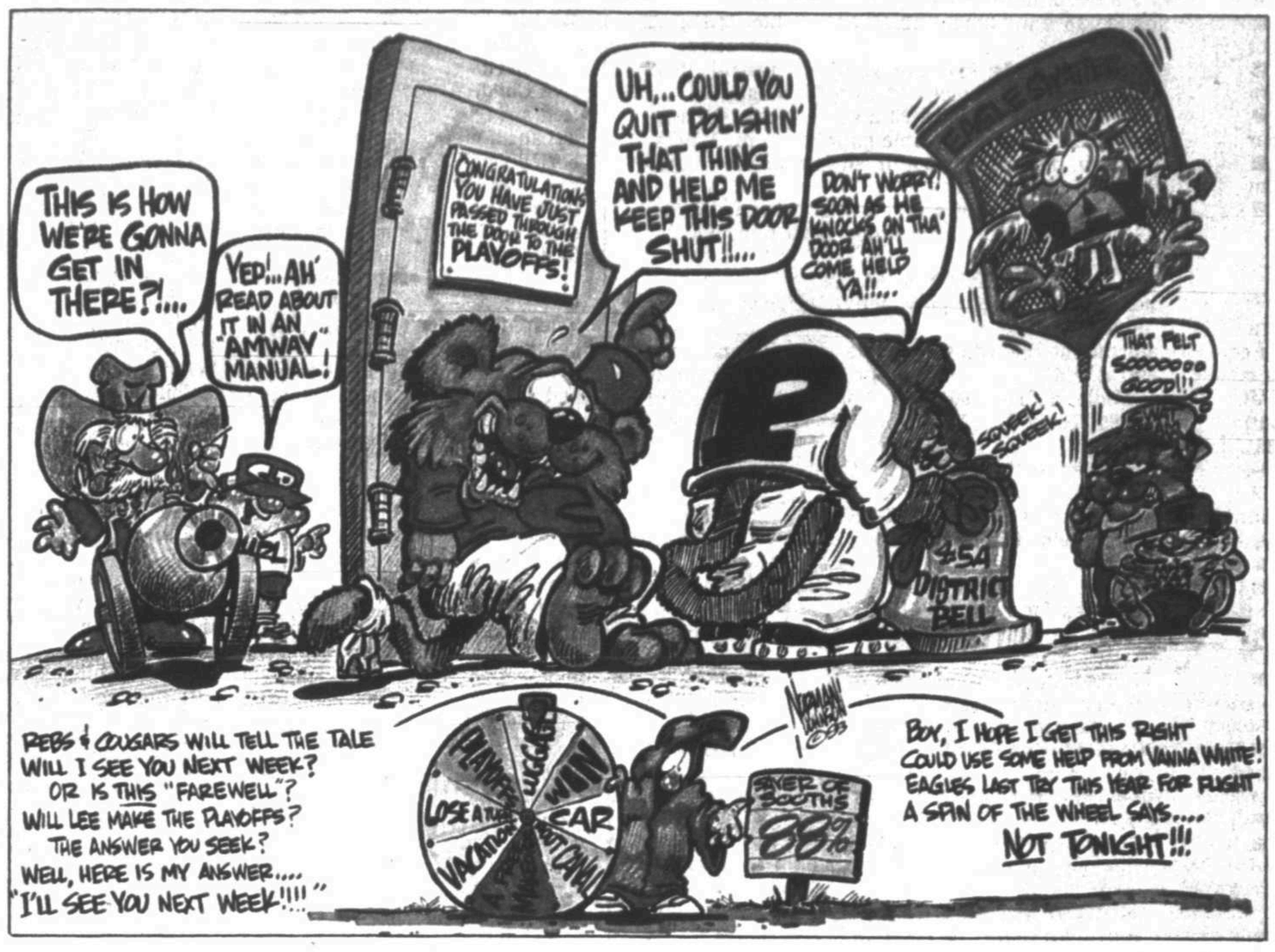

It's a sudden death shootout for the Rebels against the playoff bound Cougars, and nothing will keep the season going for Lee but a victory. It might as well be a playoff game.

"This is great, and that's the way I feel about it," says Lee head football coach Earl Miller. "Win, we're in. We'll be the first seed in the Small School division. We couldn't be in better shape.

"I know one thing. This is a hecka'va lot better than last year when we played this game for nothing."

The last time Cooper defeated Lee was back in 1983 when Lee went on to the Class 5A state finals before losing to San Antonio Judson. However, that

'Dogs, AHS fight to avoid cellar

■ Midland High and Abilene High, both with 0-9 records, try to stave off winless seasons in their game in Abilene tonight.

By Bill Petitt
Staff writer

When time passes and sports fans look back, remembering who was next-to-last in District 4-5A will be a lot harder to answer than who finished last. It's similiar to the teams that lose the World Series - no one remembers who finished second.

When you're at the bottom of the District 4-5A standings, finishing second is better than finishing first.

That's why Midland High will be looking for its first win of the season and a step out of the league cellar tonight when they face the winless Abilene High Eagles at Shotwell Stadium in Abilene.

Both teams mirror one another heading into the game. Both are at the bottom of the league statistics, both offensively and defensively. Both played difficult non-district schedules, and the glaring likeness is that both have yet to win this season.

"We match up pretty well with them," said Midland High football coach Ronnie Reeger. "They run a lot of counter sweep-type stuff. They trap inside better than average and use a lot of play action."

The Bulldogs are still smarting after allowing 36 second-half points in a 50-7 loss to San Angelo last week. Midland led the game 7-6 midway through the second quarter, but 344 yards in the second half overwhelmed a defense that has been decimated by injuries in district play.

MHS will be without linebackers Joel Taylor and Bill Kaul and defensive back Jeremy Kimbell for the finale.

The Bulldogs will depend on senior running back Roy Coats for most its offense. Coats is third in the league rushing with 772 yards and leads the Bulldogs in receiving with 19 receptions for 238 yards. A 228 yards performance tonight would give him 1,000 yards and would make him only the third 1,000-yard rusher in the district behind Mike Rose of Cooper and John Williams of Odessa Permian.

"There aren't too many people who get a 1,000 yards," said Reeger. "That would give us something to build on going into next year."

Coats has rushed for 350 yards the past two weeks against Odessa High and San Angelo.

"Defensively, they had five interceptions against San Angelo," said Reeger. "Looking down the schedule, things have fallen about the same between the two of us. Both of us played tough, non-district schedules and have had the same results in district."

Midland High will start senior quarterback Johnny Paredes for the second straight week. Paredes completed three-of-five for 46 yards in last week's game before being replaced by junior Craig Coleman in the second half. Cole-

Hornets-Bulls top 13-game NBA start

Associated Press

The Chicago Bulls — apparently on the way down — meet the Charlotte Hornets — a team on the way up — in the most significant game among 13 NBA openers Friday night.

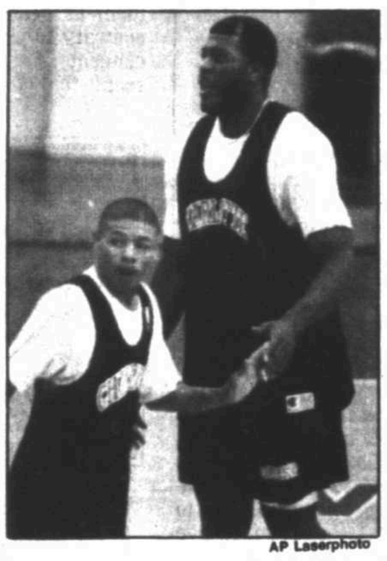

Even coach Phil Jackson calls the Bulls a longshot for their fourth consecutive league title following Michael Jordan's retirement, despite the return of most of the veterans who Jordan called "my supporting cast."

"I miss him, but we have to deal with reality," said guard John Paxson, whose 3-pointer with 3.9 seconds left in Game 6 against Phoenix was the decisive shot in the NBA Finals. "We still have a core of guys who won three championships, and we've added Toni Kukoc, who's very talented offensively."

The Bulls' preparation has been slowed by All-Star Scottie Pippen's recovery from offseason wrist and ankle surgery. He only played in Chicago's final two exhibition games.

"We would have liked to start growing as a team from Day 1 after Michael left, but we haven't had Scottie, either, for most of the pre-

Miller loves sudden death miseries

No one ever accused Midland Lee head football coach Earl Miller of backing away from a challenge. In fact, he seems to thrive on back-to-the-wall miseries.

Williamson

Lee's football season is on the line against Abilene Cooper tonight and Miller is tickled pink over the prospect.

"We went into this game last year without a chance at the playoffs. We have a chance this year. This is where you want to be," Miller says.

Of course, there is that 13-9 loss to Odessa High that has Lee in this must win bind. But Miller is offering no excuses over what might have been.

"You hear a lot about our disappointing loss to Odessa, but we're not apologizing to nobody for the season we've had," Miller says. "Our kids have played well this year. We just have to go out and take care of business Friday night."

Had Lee beaten OHS, the Rebels would be playing this game only for playoff seeding. Now it's a sudden death affair.

"Since I became head coach, we put teams in the playoffs six consecutive years," Miller said. "What people don't realize is that the playoffs ain't automatic in this league. It's a tough thing to do.

"The league is no weaker now than it was 15 years ago when I came here as an assistant. It's a war out there every night. You're lucky if you're in the fight for a playoff berth on the final night of the season. That's all you can ask. You just want to be in position to make it happen.

"I've always wanted our team to keep itself in position to control its own destiny and we've done that. We don't have to depend on anyone else to get to the playoffs. It's on our own shoulders. What more could you want?"

Miller, with sabre in hand, is drawing a second line in the sand for his team this year. The first time produced a 21-21 tie with then No. 1-ranked Odessa Permian. This fight-to-the-last-man attitude seems to work wonders at Lee.

TRIVIA QUESTION — (Courtesy of Tim McGraw): Which current District 4-5A coach, other than Miller, owns a victory over Odessa Permian?

While you're thinking, let's play the 4-5A Pickin' Game with a 33-11 (.750) record to date:

Midland Lee 28, Abilene Cooper 20: The Rebels have a lot going for them. They are desperate. They have won nine in a row over Cooper. They are at home. They are survivors. Lee leads the overall series by a meager 16-14-2 margin. Now, what will the weather have to say?

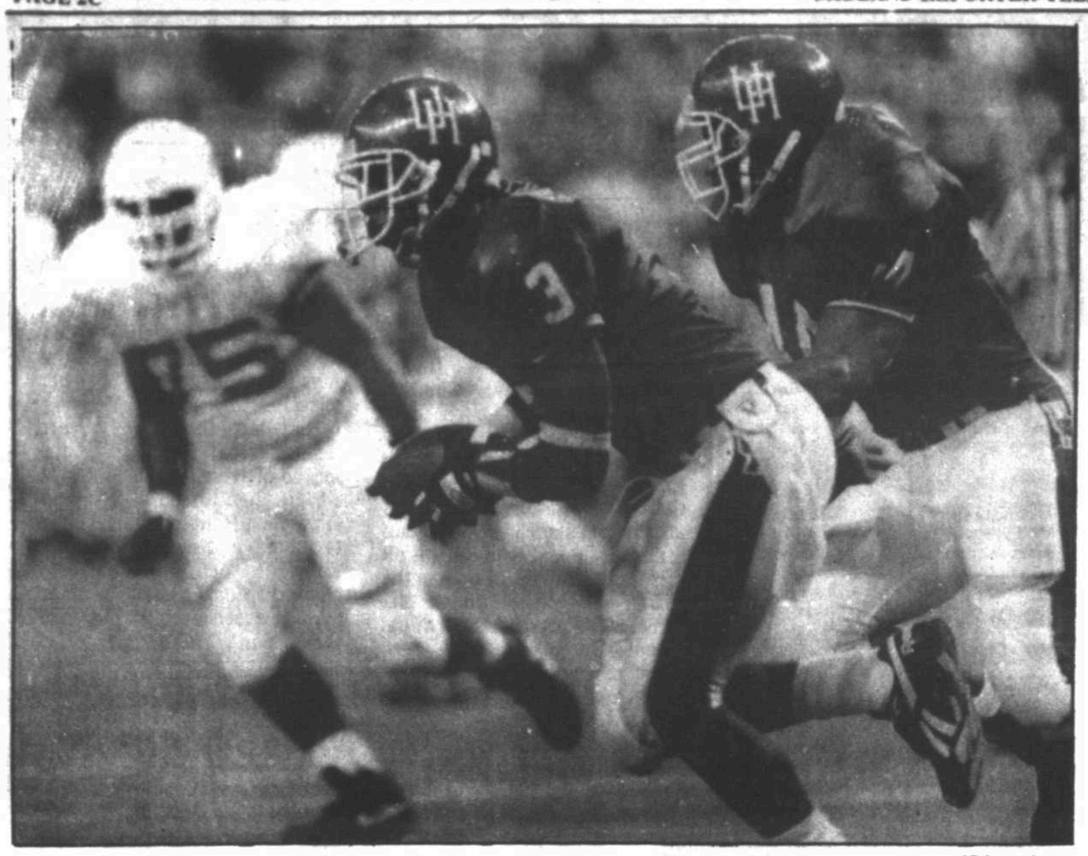

Midland High 21, Abilene High 15: For the second year in a row, the Bulldogs avoid a winless season with a win over the Eagles, a team that will end up winless this year. AHS owns a 20-12 record against MHS since 1961.

Odessa Permian 34, San Angelo 18: The Bobkitties own a 6-4-1 record at Ratliff Stadium. They last beat Permian in 1986 and tied Mojo in 1990 and both games were played at Ratliff. Still, the Panthers own a 24-9-1 overall advantage.

Open 7, Odessa High 0: The news from Memorial Stadium will leave the Bronchos in tears.

TRIVIA ANSWER: Abilene High's Carlous Stone is the only other coach, other than Miller, who owns a win over Permian. However, Stone's win came in 1990, 17-14, when he was coaching at Tyler. Miller has a 4-4-1 record against Mojo. No other coach in the league has ever beaten Permian.

'Horn win riles Helton

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas got a victory in the Astrodome and Houston coach Kim Helton got mad.

Curtis Jackson tricked Houston's defense with a 33-yard halfback pass for a touchdown and Scott Szeredy kicked a 56-yard field goal, capping a 17-point second quarter and leading Texas to a 34-16 victory over the Cougars on Thursday night.

The Longhorns (3-4-1, 3-1 Southwest Conference) snapped a three-game losing streak at Houston, where Texas hadn't won since a 34-24 victory in 1985.

"All in all, I'm satisfied with the way we played," Texas coach John Mackovic said. "Tonight, I decided to call everything. I've never called a reverse at that point in a game like I did tonight.

"When you play on national TV you want to pull out a few special plays."

Mackovic's play-calling didn't please Houston coach Kim Helton, who thought the Horns were trying to run up the score.

"I think I'm going to enjoy the competition with Mr. Mackovic," Helton said. "I'm disappointed in him running a naked bootleg at the end of the game. He let his quarterback run the option when they are 16 points up."

Houston (1-6-1, 1-3-1) was still in the game until Rodrick Walker scored on runs of 15 yards with 6:13 to play and 10 yards with 5:19 to go. The Cougars, held to 4 rushing yards in a 28-10 loss to Texas Christian last week, had more success against Texas, gaining 137.

The Longhorns took a 7-6 lead on the first play of the second quarter on a 1-yard run by Phil Brown.

An offsides penalty against Houston on a Texas punt gave the Longhorns a first down at the Cougars 48 and set up Jackson's 33-yard halfback pass to Cosmo Palmieri with 5:05 to go in the half.

Texas made it 17-6 at the half on Szeredy's field goal as time expired in the half.

Dallas can beat Giants, but can they top spread?

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

■ NFL Picks

The New York Giants lost to the New York Jets last week and Miami's Don Shula tied George Halas' career record for coaching victories.

They combine to make the Giants' foray to Texas Stadium to face the Dallas Cowboys into a co-game of the week rather than this week's Game of the Century, as it looked to be a couple of weeks ago.

For two teams with the same record, the spread is large — the Cowboys are favored by 9½ points. That's probably as it should be. Dallas has won all five games since Emmitt Smith showed up and remain way above the pack.

There's some sentiment, here, too.

Tom Landry, smarting a little less over his dismissal by Jerry Jones, has finally consented to be inducted into the Ring of Honor. Dan Reeves, the Giants' coach who got his start as an assistant under Landry, will be making his first regular-season coaching appearance in Texas Stadium in 13 years as a head coach.

All that aside, the matchup may be closer than the spread — Dallas does get a lot of action in Vegas. The Giants remain one of the league's best running teams and the Cowboys had some trouble against the run at Philadelphia last week.

So ...

COWBOYS, 20-14.

Miami (minus 1) at New York Jets: If Shula breaks the record here, it couldn't come against a better opponent. Not only did the Jets change his career by beating his Baltimore team in the 1969 Super Bowl, but even in their worst years, they've been like a gnat, always annoying.

In fact, Miami's only loss this year was to the Jets at Miami, 24-14.

That may work for the Dolphins.

The Jets may suffer a letdown after beating the Giants. The Dolphins, knowing they can get the Shula distractions out of the way, figure to be up.

DOLPHINS, 21-17.

Green Bay (off) at Kansas City (Monday night): Figure that Joe Montana is out because it may take a while for his hamstring to heal. So Dave Krieg gets to face the pass rush, augmented by Tony Bennett, that sacked Jim Harbaugh seven times last week,

A noteworthy stat is that Krieg is the NFL's career fumble leader.

PACKERS, 24-20.

Denver (plus 2) at Cleveland: Bernie Kosar is back for good for the Browns, whose main offensive weapons remain Eric Metcalf and the special teams.

BROWNS, 13-10.

San Diego (plus 4) at Minnesota: A theory: go against the backup quarterback who played well in relief last week, as Sean Salisbury did for Minnesota.

CHARGERS, 17-13.

Buffalo (minus 10) at New England: The Pats will keep it close. They trailed only 17-14 at Rich Stadium before giving up 21 points in the fourth quarter.

BILLS, 15-6.

Seattle (plus 8½) at Houston: Game three of the Oilers' get well schedule but ...

Teams coming of a bye week are 5-11 against teams that played the previous week.

OILERS, 20-19.

Pittsburgh (minus 10) at Cincinnati: Has anyone looked at what Jay Schroeder does when he has pressure on him?

STEELERS, 27-3.

Tampa Bay (plus 12) at Detroit: Does anyone remember that the Bucs beat the Lions 27-10 the first time?

LIONS, 27-10.

Ouch!

RAIDERS, 17-13.

Philadelphia (plus 1½) at Phoenix: Two more losses and Joe Bugel is gone — along with his Halloween masks.

Not this week.

CARDS, 20-17.

Indianapolis (plus 7) at Washington: How many interceptions can Mark Rypien throw this week?

None, if the Skins keep it on the ground.

REDSKINS, 27-17.

Last Week: 6-6 (spread); 7-5 (straight up).

Season: 53-46-3 (spread). 70-32 (straight up).

Trainer likes Bowe's chances

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The way Eddie Futch sees it, Evander Holyfield has three things working against his bid to recapture the heavyweight title Saturday night from Riddick Bowe.

Make that four, if you buy Futch's argument that Bowe is a much better fighter than he was when he took the undisputed title from Holyfield nearly a year ago.

"Generally speaking, fighters who win championships are 25 percent better than before they won the title," said Futch, Bowe's 82-year-old trainer. "Once they win the title, anything they've been taught before they feel they can do. They have the confidence of a champion."

If Bowe's two brief appearances since beating Holyfield are any indication, Futch appears to be right on the mark.

Bowe knocked out Michael Dokes in the first round of his first title defense, then stopped Jesse Ferguson in the second round of his only other title fight. Though the caliber of the opposition was admittedly suspect, Bowe wasted little time putting them away.

"I'm still in the learning process," Bowe said. "I learned a lot in the gym after winning the title. That's why those guys went out so quickly."

Bowe, undefeated in 34 fights, is a 4-1 favorite to beat Holyfield and retain the IBF and WBA titles. Bowe relinquished the WBC title he won from Holyfield rather than fight a mandatory bout against Lennox Lewis.

The odds for the scheduled 12-round fight at Caesars Palace reflect the belief of most boxing observers that Holyfield can do little more than he did in the first fight to beat a champion who is younger, bigger and hits harder.

"Evander can't be a better fighter than last time because he's got three things working against him that he didn't in the first fight," Futch said. "Holyfield's been off seven months, he changed trainers and he took a terrific beating the first time."

Futch, who has trained six heavyweight champions in a boxing career that has spanned 60 years, said Holyfield also faces a mental obstacle stemming from his first defeat.

"Mentally he knows what he went through the first time and when he gets hit in this fight it will all go through his mind," he said. "I saw it with (Jersey Joe) Walcott and (Rocky) Marciano. In their second fight, Walcott saw the same thing happening as in the first fight and was knocked out in the first round."

While Holyfield promises to come in the ring about 216 pounds — 10 pounds heavier than the first fight Nov. 13 — he will be facing an even bigger man in Bowe.

The champion, who weighed 235 pounds when winning the title, weighed in Thursday at 246, among the heaviest of the heavyweight champions of modern time. Holyfield weighed 217.

"He's in shape," Futch said. "He's 6-foot-5. If he was bulging, I'd be concerned. I want him to be strong and able to do the things he knows how to do."

Not only is Bowe big, he can move. The champion possesses rare combinations of size and movement, power and speed.

"He's one of the most complete big men around in some time," Holyfield grudgingly admits.

Bowe, who will earn about $10 million for the title defense, didn't eat for three days before the first fight because he wanted to show the media he was in shape.

Bowe removed his shirt after his final sparring session this week to show that he was not flabby, even with the added weight.

"When's the last time you saw a man weigh 250 pounds and move around like I do?" Bowe said. "I wasn't as strong as I could have been in the first fight. I was depleted from not eating."

Bowe made sure that wasn't going to be a problem by loading up a plate of food at Wednesday's press conference and devouring it quickly.

"He's a hungry fighter," Futch said.

MC: Chaparrals open play tonight

last season, they ended on a down note when a coin flip cost them a trip to the Region V Tournament despite a tie for third place. Their 20-8 record was nifty, but they were only 6-6 in the rugged Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

The Chaps were given a pre-season pick to finish second in the WJCAC this season behind last season's conference titleist Odessa. But the WJCAC is strange and two new coaches in the league, Tommy Collins at Howard and Larry Brown at South Plains, make crystal-ball-gazing a risky occupation.

However, the Chaparrals return five letter winners from last season, picked up two sophomore transfers and added eight highly-touted freshmen.

In a few minor changes, the conference scheduled all its WJCAC games in January and February, where a few used to be played in December. The conference also added a "pre-season" loop classic which is being played in Odessa this year. The two-day event has each WJCAC member playing two other loop teams. Midland has 15 non-conference games this fall, 12 of them in November, and the other three in the first week of December. Two tune-up games in early January are slated to get the Chaps ready for the conference battles.

MC head coach Steve Green starts his third season guiding the Chaps. The 1991-92 team finished 23-9 and 12-4 in conference. That was a second-place finished in the loop, followed by a semifinal Region V loss. Green has a new assistant in Mike Daniels, a graduate of Sul Ross, who had been assistant coach at Alvin Community College until that school decided to drop men's basketball this season. Green also has Paul Stueckler, the legendary former coach of the Midland Lee Rebels for 29 years, as an assistant.

Letter winner Kirk Ford, 6-foot-6, from Lafayette, La., returns with great stats from last season. He averaged 13.3 points and 4.3 rebounds while playing in all 28 games and starting 15 of them.

Calvin Morris, 6-7 letterman from Montgomery, Ala., averaged 6.5 points and 3.8 rebounds for the Chaps and also hit 35 percent (14 of 40) of his three-point attempts. Sophomore letter-winner Richard Edwards, 6-3, from Fort Worth Everman, averaged 4.7 points and 2.3 rebounds coming off the bench.

Steve Walston, 6-8, from Andrew Jackson High, Queens, N.Y., had a 9.4 points and 5.9 rebounds average last season while playing in 27 games. He averaged 58.1 percent on field goal attempts and scored in double figures in 12 games. Sophomore Luis Cambraia, 6-4, from Sao Paulo, Brazil, averaged 9 points per game and 2.3 rebounds. He averaged 29.9 percent on three-point attempts.

Sophomore transfer Andre Owens, 5-10, a graduate of Riley High in South Bend, Ind., played his freshman year at Tallahassee (Fla.) Junior College and was redshirted at Howard College last spring. He is battling for the starting position at point guard. Kevin Sims, from Houston Eisenhower, transferred to MC from Alvin after it dropped its men's basketball program.

man completed four-of-nine for 101 yards.

Abilene High has been alternating quarterbacks all season. Sophomore John Dallies and Richard Cortinez have been splitting playing time this season.

Dallies has been starting for the Eagles in district play. He has passed for 247 yards this season while Cortinez has 298 yards, but they have combined for 12 interceptions. Last week, Abilene had minus-five yards passing in a 37-0 loss to Odessa High.

Junior tailback Chris Jackson and sophomore fullback Nathan Mays give the Eagles an adequate running game. Jackson has 661 yards and four touchdowns this season and Mays has 400 yards through nine games.

NBA: Hornets ready to join elite season," Paxson said.

Along with veterans teams like New York and Cleveland, the young Hornets are ready to step in for the Bulls.

Third-year pro Larry Johnson, with a 12-year, $84 million contract extension, is expected to become one of the elite players in the NBA, but he will get help from new acquisition Hersey Hawkins at guard and center Alonzo Mourning, a defensive standout who also averaged 20 points last season as a rookie.

In other NBA openers Friday, it's New York at Boston, Washington at Philadelphia, Indiana at Atlanta, Portland at the Los Angeles Clippers, Orlando at Miami, Milwaukee at Cleveland, Minnesota at Detroit, New Jersey at Houston, Golden State at San Antonio, Dallas at Utah, Phoenix at the Los Angeles Lakers and Denver at Sacramento.

Seattle is the only team that will have to wait until Saturday night to start its season. The SuperSonics will be at Inglewood, Calif., to face the Lakers.

Cleveland, hoping to make a run for the title, has hired former Atlanta coach Mike Fratello to replace Lenny Wilkens.

"It's going to be almost like starting over for a lot of us," Cleveland point guard Mark Price said. "We have new coaches. We have to learn new plays. So right now, our focus is just trying to get some cohesiveness."

COOPER: Midland Lee's playoff hopes would end with a loss tonight

(From 1C)

scene won't be repeated this year since Lee can't afford to lose this one. If Cooper wins the game, Odessa High, which has finished district play with a 4-2 mark, will become 4-5A's third playoff team. Lee would be 3-2-1 with a loss and 4-1-1 with a win, sending Cooper into third place.

But Cooper coach Randy Allen feels his Cougars still have a lot to play for after falling to Permian last week, 15-7.

"We'll be in the playoffs win or lose," Allen said, "but if San Angelo can somehow beat Permian, we can win the district championship outright. Last year, we went into the game with only a chance to tie for the district title."

Cooper lost its last three games of the year last season, including a bi-district playoff loss to state semifinalist Amarillo High.

Cooper has come back this season, rolling to a 4-0 district record before meeting Permian last week. They have done it with a balanced attack that possesses fullback Mike Rose, who leads the league in rushing with 1,615 yards and 16 touchdowns. But Cooper also has quarterback Zac Allen, who leads the league in passing, throwing for 1,394 yards and 18 touchdowns.

"We have pretty much been consistent on offense all season with the run and pass," Allen said. "We wouldn't have committed to this offense if we didn't think we had the people to make it work.

"The weather played a big factor in the Permian game and we didn't have much consistency on offense."

It's little wonder then that Lee's game plan is simplistic in its approach to the meeting with Cooper.

"If they score, we have to score," Miller simply says. "Cooper's offense can cause you a lot of problems. The way they can pass and run, you have to give up something. They will score their share of points. We just hope our offense takes a little pride and answers the challenge."

And Lee also has weapons to throw at Cooper. Phillip Sims, who didn't make the trip to Dallas Jesuit because of sickness last week, still leads the team in rushing with 670 yards, but the other halfback, Marlon Henry, now has 652 yards rushing. Quarterback Courtney Turner has 491 yards rushing and another 792 yards passing. Fullback Jeremy Warren has 460 yards rushing. Cooper has no monopoly on balance.

"Lee has an outstanding team that scares you to death," Allen said. "I think their tie with Permian proves that they deserved the (No. 5) ranking they had earlier this year," Allen said. "They have to win and that makes them dangerous. They have so many returners back from last year, especially in the skill positions, that they can do a lot of things well. This is a tremendous challenge for our football team."

Lee also expects defensive back Undra Graves to return after missing three weeks with a deep thigh bruise. He is also a big threat on punt and kickoff returns and is used at wide receiver.

"It's been tough with Graves out," Miller said. "He can do a lot of things for you. We don't know how well he can play after being out so long, but we're going to find out."

Defensive end Brian Henderson injured a shoulder in the first quarter against Jesuit last week, but is expected back.

"Brian could have come back and played (against Jesuit), but we didn't want to take the chance. He's too valuable to our team," Miller said. "He will play with some pain, but he's a tough kid. You don't worry about him showing up for a game."

Allen also will bring a healthy team to Midland tonight.

"We're in pretty good shape, considering the part of the season we're in," Allen said. "Rose did go out for a couple of series against Permian last week, but he went back in. He's fine."

If Lee wins the game, the Rebels will start the Small School playoffs with a bi-district meeting against the loser of tonight's Amarillo High-Lubbock Monterey game, which is being played in Amarillo. Cooper would play the winner. Odessa Permian would play Lubbock Coronado in the Big School division.

However, if Lee loses, the playoff scene will have a shakeup. Odessa High will replace Odessa Permian in the Big School bracket, playing Lubbock Coronado. If Permian beats San Angelo, Permian would then play the loser of the Monterey-Amarillo game and Cooper would play the winner. If Cooper wins and Permian loses, those opponents would flip-flop.

But it's simple for Lee. Win, or it's basketball season.

Casillas tired of run-defense critics

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tony Casillas is tired of hearing how poorly the Dallas defense has performed against the run. He says the Cowboys will pass Sunday's test against the power running New York Giants with an A plus.

"I think we're still playing pretty good football," said the Cowboys tackle. "There can be no excuses on Sunday. It's time to get the job done. We're going to do it."

He acknowledged the Giants are hard to stop with their grinding, ball control offense.

"They just line up and run, run, run," he said. "It seems like they run it 75 percent of the time. I kind of like it. It's no big deal to them. They know what they are going to do and we know what they are going to do.

"It's not very pretty football. They just try to run it down your throat. They'll bring it to us. And we'll bring it to them."

Casillas lost his job early in the season but regained it because of his reputation as tough against the run.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A new, more self-disciplined approach helps you attain the kinds of victories that have eluded you recently. Scholastic achievement will come more easily, thanks to your renewed dedication to the cause of learning and research. A financial turnaround is possible by spring of 1994. Better organization and the adoption of high-tech developments put you miles ahead of the competition. A summer romance could lead to marriage.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Vivien Leigh, cowboy actor Roy Rogers, playwright Sam Shepard, actress Tatum O'Neal.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): To fend off a persistent admirer, be as emphatic as possible. Long-range savings programs are a great idea. Welcome an opportunity to purchase your dream car or plan a fabulous summer vacation!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Students now know what they want to do next. Be as financially generous to your family as possible. Anyone working in the medical field should make real progress this month.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Plunging headlong into a sideline love affair is not a good idea. Fulfill an agreement to the best of your ability. A large-scale project may take more time than anticipated. Settle down.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): There is no need for financial panic; you have a reserve or resource you have forgotten about. Face a setback stoically. Tomorrow will look brighter once you talk things over with your partner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not go to extremes or open your wallet too widely. Negotiate for better terms before signing a contract or agreement. Refuse to act without full knowledge of something taking place behind the scenes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seek good advice and act on it. You may have to travel on short notice. Show greater flexibility and understanding when dealing with loved ones. A romantic tie is strengthened by your words.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Beware of taking too much for granted where your dear ones are concerned. Do not tempt them with too much money. Concentrate on communications and visits that could brighten your financial future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be patient when others are slow to grasp your meaning. Great successes, like oak trees, can grow from something small. Your passionate nature is a turn-on to someone who knows you well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Continue to rely on your own intuition. A healthy skepticism can avert embarrassing errors in judgment. Practice preventive medicine; make appointments for dental and medical checkups.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your congenial mood sets the stage for successful teamwork today. Telling others what you hope to accomplish rallies support from fans and big thinkers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A powerful professional or personal alliance gives you new clout. People listen when you bring your ideas to the table. A longtime battle will end in victory.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A wave of inspiration sends your spirits into orbit. Apply your innovative ideas to the field of service. Seniors will get great satisfaction from involvement in humanitarian causes.

Opening lead: Six of ♡

There was a slight misplay that went unnoticed when this deal cropped up in a rubber-bridge game. Can you spot the perpetrator and the slip?

Both North and South were a little pushy in the auction. However, the final result was a reasonable spade game and, as the cards lay, the opening heart lead did declarer no harm.

Dummy's jack of hearts was played to the first trick and East won with the king of hearts. Since it did not seem right to shift to a minor suit or continue hearts, East returned a trump.

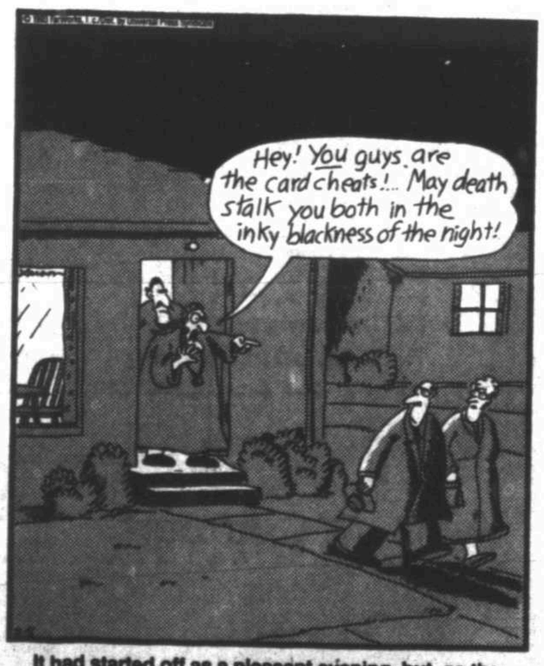

West took the ace of trumps and, thinking that the opening lead had struck oil, reverted to the nine of hearts. That was the end of the defense. The defenders could take the ace of hearts, but declarer was able to draw trumps, discard a diamond from dummy on the 13th heart and claim 10 tricks.

Did you spot the subtle error that made all the difference to the hand? East should have realized a heart continuation would be futile and a diamond shift was urgent, so that defender should have won the first trick with the ace of hearts! Now when West is in with the ace of trumps, the danger of a diamond discard from dummy on hearts is real and a diamond shift is imperative. That assures the defenders of four tricks.

Terence Reese expressed it so well: "Every defender thinks from time to time about deceiving declarer. Not so obvious are the occasions when it is advisable to misrepresent one's hand to partner for a tactical reason."

THE FAR SIDE

It had started off as a pleasant evening, but, as the Caldwells soon discovered (too late, regrettably), it was best not to try and trump the old gypsy woman.

Cheering crowd, Pied Piper greet British monarch in German town

HAMELIN, Germany — A cheering crowd of 10,000, including a Pied Piper playing a flute, welcomed Queen Elizabeth II to town on Thursday.

The British monarch visited as honorary colonel of the Royal Engineers based at Hamelin, which plays heavily on its local piper legend. After signing the town's visitor book, she inspected military equipment.

Elizabeth II

The Pied Piper of Hamelin is a legendary 13th century figure who rid the town of a plague of rats by playing the flute. When he was refused payment, the fairy tale figure took revenge by charming away all the town's children.

The queen arrived Wednesday in Hamelin, about 25 miles southwest of Hanover.

NEW YORK — Michael Jordan's retirement fantasy is to duck the celebrity spotlight like he used to dunk basketballs.

Now all he wants to do is take his three children on everyday family outings without drawing a crowd of star-struck autograph hounds.

"That would be my day. My perfect day," Jordan writes in his new photo book, "Rare Air: Michael on Michael," which reaches stores this week.

In an excerpt published in USA Weekend magazine, Jordan says nothing he's ever done on the basketball court compares to being a father, but his superstardom makes it hard to lead a normal life.

"Sometimes I wonder what it would be like not to be Michael Jordan," he says.

NEW YORK — Her mother's snobbery isolated singer Natalie Cole from blacks during childhood. Her father's legendary crooning cast a long shadow over her singing career. Then there were the drugs.

The Grammy-winner overcame many personal obstacles to define herself, finally putting it all together in 1983 at a Minnesota drug-treament center. "I discovered that I was still grieving about my dad, in a lot of pain about my mother and a lot of shame about how I had done all these things," Cole says in Sunday's Parade magazine. "I learned about forgiveness."

She recalled growing up in Los Angeles' exclusive Hancock Park section, where the Coles were the only black residents.

"When I got friendly with the (black) people who worked for us, my mother was appalled," said Cole, 43. "She wanted us to interact with a different society — outside the house."

Learning forgiveness meant putting such trials in perspective.

"It wan't just my mother," she said. "It's the way many black people are raised."

She was crushed by the death of her father when she was 15.

"Any kind of heartache pales in comparison to his death," Cole said, adding that his legacy brought career troubles too.

"People wanted to advertise me as Nat 'King' Cole's daughter," she said. "No name, just his daughter. I thought it was awful, and I fought it at every turn."

PEARL, Miss. — It's a cowboy cobbler's dream come true — whipping up a pair of python-skin boots for President Clinton.

"I'd have never dreamed of putting a pair of boots on the president of the United States," Dave Gardner said Wednesday. "It's something that will be with me the rest of my life. I feel the Lord has blessed me."

Gardner's cowhide leather boots average about $375 a pair. Nobody is saying how much he'll charge for Clinton's more exotic, custom-made pair.

The presidential footwear was ordered as a gift from Hayes T. Sullivan, an Arkansas farmer and longtime friend of the president nicknamed Bubba.

BUCKLAND, Mass. — Bill Cosby's wife bought a 365-acre dairy farm, not because she wants the freshest milk possible but to save the property from becoming a housing development.

Camille Cosby said Wednesday she wanted to "preserve valuable farmland in the area . . . and help retain the rural character of the town."

The purchase price was not disclosed.

The Cosbys live in nearby Shelburne. Mrs. Cosby has bought several large parcels in the northwestern Massacusetts area to preserve them as open space.

Farmer Steven Mayer's plans to subdivide Riverwind Farm when he moved his dairy operation to New Mexico sparked a scramble by local officials earlier this year to find some way to preserve the parcel.

JACKSON, Miss. — Pulitzer Prize-winning author Eudora Welty may not be a household name in the United States, but she is beloved in France.

At a private ceremony at her home, the University of Burgundy gave her an honorary doctorate Wednesday and presented her with its arts medal for her lifetime of work.

The 221-year-old institution in Dijon, France, also plans to name its new center for women's writing "Eudora" in her honor, university spokeswoman Daniele Pitavy-Souques said.

Welty, 84, was knighted by the French government in 1987.

She has been writing novels and stories for nearly 50 years.

Economy unfurls recovery flags

September's productivity, factory orders rise, jobless claims drop

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy unfurled more flags signaling a stronger recovery — sharply improved worker productivity in the third quarter, increased factory orders in September and fewer new claims for jobless benefits last week.

"All of the numbers are looking pretty good and moving in the right direction," said Sung Won Sohn, an economist with the Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis.

The Labor Department reported Thursday that productivity shot up at a 3.9 percent annual rate from July through September, rebounding from declines during the prior two quarters.

At the same time, the Commerce Department said factory orders increased 0.7 percent, to a seasonally adjusted $255.2 billion, the third advance in four months.

And in a third report, the Labor Department said the number of new claims for unemployment insurance dropped by 10,000 last week, to 338,000, the lowest level in a month.

A bimonthly business confidence index released Thursday by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce appeared to support the view the economy had begun to pick up. It rose to 46.4 in October from 45.6 in August, although it still was well below the 62.4 reached in both December and February.

"The upturn . . . is another sign that the recovery is picking up some steam after a particularly slow first half of the year," said Chamber economist Robert Barr.

The news followed an October survey by the Federal Reserve, released Wednesday, that also found a moderately growing economy, paced by consumer spending, particularly for autos, and by residential construction.

Still, major retailers reported Thursday that consumers were spending cautiously in October, which historically has been a good barometer of Christmas sales activity.

Discount stores and a revitalized Sears, Roebuck and Co. posted the strongest results. But some department stores and specialty apparel retailers reported poor sales, partly because warm weather curbed clothing purchases.

The new data preceded the Labor Department's next employment report. Many analysts predicted the department would report Friday that 135,000 new jobs were created in October, although the unemployment rate was expected to remain at 6.7 percent for the third straight month.

"The productivity and factory orders reports together tell a really impressive story of the U.S. economy that is continuing to boost the efficiency of its workers," said Stephen S. Roach, an economist for Morgan Stanley & Co. in New York. "That's excellent news for our competitive position."

Prices slip

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell slightly on Thursday, taking a break from the broad price swings of the past week.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December settled at $17.40 per barrel, down 9 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Prices moved within a 28-cent range during the day, reaching a low of the day before rising on reports of a small fire at the main pumping station for a Nigerian oil field.

The fire turned out to have little effect on prices following reports that shipments would be delayed only by a few days.

Prices have been whipped higher and lower in recent sessions as the market grappled with various estimates of October production by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The International Energy Agency is due to report on worldwide supply and demand figures Friday and should give a better indication of OPEC production.

Natural gas prices were higher, with contracts for delivery in December settling at $2.446 per 1,000 cubic feet, 0.5 cent higher.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar edged up against most currencies on Thursday as the foreign-exchange market positioned itself for monthly unemployment figures due from the Labor Department.

Gold prices rose. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $371.70 a troy ounce, up $4.50 from Wednesday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 108.18 yen, up from 107.66.

In New York, the British pound finished at $1.4810, cheaper than $1.4825 on Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday: 1.6950 German marks, up from 1.6930; 1.5015 Swiss francs, up from 1.5005; 5.9080 French francs, up from 5.9020; 1,642.00 Italian lire, up from 1,638.00; and 1.3054 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3088.

Stocks sink

NEW YORK — Investors dumped stocks again Thursday as rising interest rates sent the market reeling for a second straight session.

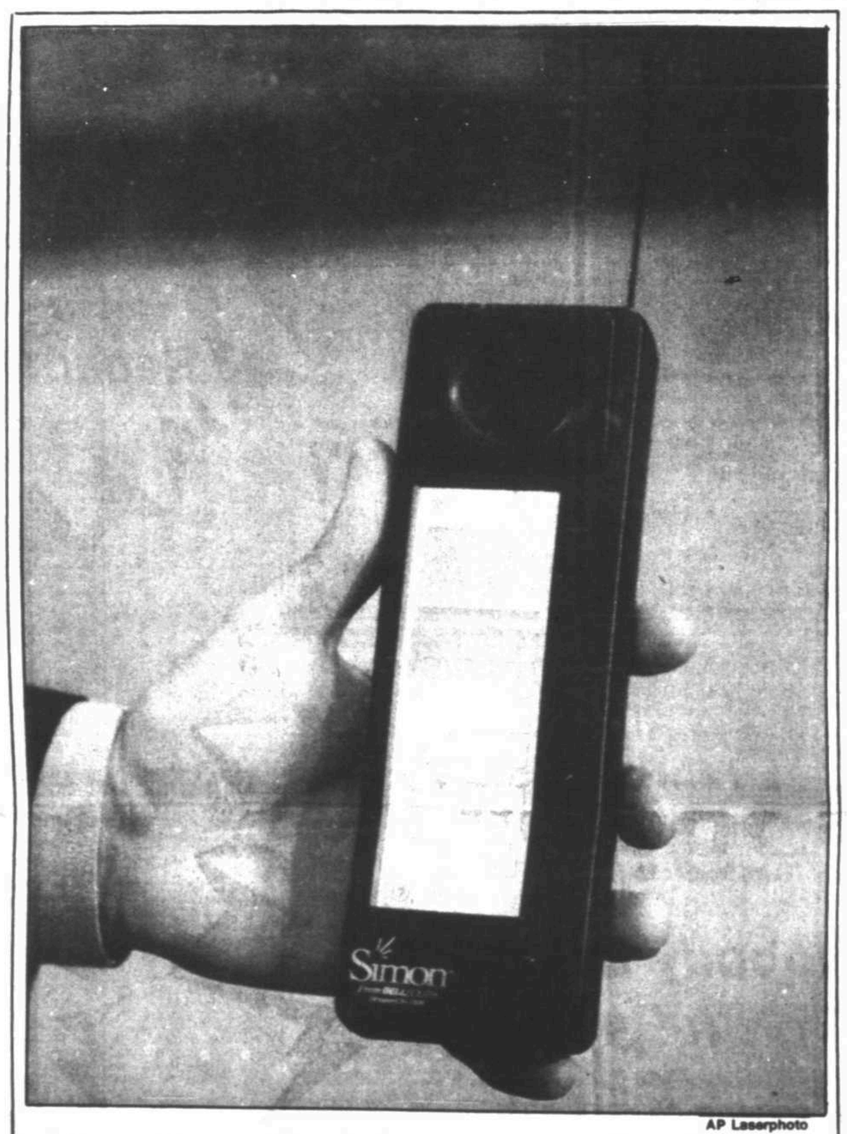

The Dow Jones industrial average skidded 36.89 to 3,624.98, extending the previous session's slide that knocked more than 35 points off the popular stock market measure.

Things were no better in the broader market and declining issues vastly outnumbered advances on the New York Stock Exchange by a margin of more than 3-to-1.

Losers were scattered through many sectors but companies such as banks and utilities that are especially sensitive to higher interest costs took the worst beating.

Southwestern Bell, Cox cable unit close in on $1 billion deal

ATLANTA (AP) — The next big marriage of cable and telephone companies could be between Cox Enterprises Inc. and Southwestern Bell Corp.

The two companies are close to a deal whereby Southwestern Bell would invest more than $1 billion in Cox's cable television unit, the Cox-owned Atlanta Journal and Constitution reported Thursday.

Neither company would comment on the report, which said the companies are expected to reach a definitive agreement around Thanksgiving.

The partnership would double the size of Atlanta-based Cox's cable system, already the sixth largest in the nation with 1.7 million subscribers and an estimated worth of $3.5 billion.

Such mergers are part of the so-called "information highway" that is rapidly blurring the lines between media, communications and computer industries. Among the predicted results of such mergers are movies being transmitted into homes over phone lines and interactive TV.

The biggest deal between cable and phone companies was inked last month between Bell Atlantic Corp., the giant Philadelphia-based telecommunications company, and cable TV leader Tele-Communications Inc.

That $21.4 billion pact was called "the most momentous deal of the decade" by James Quello of the Federal Communications Commission.

Under the discussions reported Thursday, Southwestern Bell, based in San Antonio, Texas, would make a $1 billion-plus investment in Cox's cable unit, thus giving the phone company the cable system and programming it needs to compete with the other merging companies.

Cox has been openly looking for a major partner for expansion.

"When you look at the explosive growth Cox desires, a partner makes sense," said Cox spokesman Dave Andersen. "And a partnership with a telephone company makes sense. We've talked to all seven of the regional Bells."

The privately held Cox now encompasses 17 daily newspapers, 24 cable television systems, 20 radio and television stations and an automobile auction business.

Cox also is in a partnership with BellSouth Enterprises Inc. to offer newspaper classified advertising and Yellow Pages information over the telephone. And the company last month invested $500 million in QVC Network Inc., which is trying to buy Paramount Communications Inc.

Analyst Stuart Rossmiller of Fitch Investor's Service said a Cox-Southwestern Bell alliance could take the form of Cox spinning off its cable business into a separate company.

Senator: Nashville's in line for federal approval of direct air route to London

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Nashville will get federal approval to operate a direct route to London, U.S. Sen. Jim Sasser said Thursday. But federal officials said no decision has been made.

Sasser said through a spokesman that White House sources have confirmed Nashville will get the route.

The official announcement will be made next week, Sasser spokesman Jim Pratt said.

"I think this is great news for the entire state. We can all look forward to the economic benefits that will derive from the opening of a transatlantic gateway at the Nashville International Airport," Sasser said in a statement.

Federal Department of Transportation officials were not ready to make the announcement Thursday, but Metro Nashville Mayor Phil Bredesen also received the news from Sasser, mayoral spokeswoman Tam Gordon said.

"It's our understanding we have the route. The paperwork is sitting on somebody's desk," Ms. Gordon said.

Transportation Secretary Frederico Pena has not made a decision on awarding the route, spokesman Richard Mintz said.

He said Pena will make his decision by the end of the month.

"I can't comment on where Sen. Sasser got his information. That has to come from them," Mintz said.

Nashville, Salt Lake City and Raleigh-Durham, N.C., are seeking two routes that had been operated by USAir.

Continental earnings jump in 3rd quarter

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines on Thursday reported third-quarter earnings of $12.4 million, or 53 cents per share, compared with losses of more than $29 million for the same period a year ago.

Houston-based Continental, which emerged from Chapter 11 bankruptcy April 28, said revenues for the three months ended Sept. 30 were $1.6 billion, about $150 million more than during third-quarter 1992.

The third-quarter figures include a one-time charge of about $13 million related to Continental's termination of routes to Australia and New Zealand.

The airline said the improvement was due in part to its new short-haul, no-frills service dubbed CALite, which started in earnest in some hubs last month.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

P-Es impossible to calculate for mutual funds

By Bill Doyle

Q: Why aren't price-earnings ratios quoted on mutual fund shares?

Doyle

A: Because, unlike individual stocks, the numbers are almost impossible to calculate on an up-to-date basis, and therefore can be virtually meaningless.

As the term indicates, a price-earnings ratio is the relationship between a stock's current market price and the stock's earnings per share.

Let's say XYZ Corp. reported a $40 million profit for the 12 months ended Sept. 30. We'll also say XYZ has 20 million shares outstanding -- owned by investors. That makes its earnings $2 per share. And let's say XYZ stock is trading at $30 per share.

Using those numbers, XYZ's price-earnings ratio — "P-E" for short, and sometimes referred to as "price-to-earnings ratio" — is 15-to-1, or just plain 15. Expressed another way, XYZ is "selling at 15 times earnings." The P-E is updated whenever the company releases an earnings report, typically quarterly.

The above exercise in arithmetic is easy for one stock. But a mutual fund holds stocks of many companies as investments. Different stocks have different P-Es. And all company reporting periods are not the same. The fiscal years of some companies match calendar years; others do not.

Occasionally, in a report to shareholders, a mutual fund will give the average P-E of stocks it holds. But trying to do that on a daily basis would be a nightmare.

Q: What protection does a mutual fund investor have that a person who has control of the fund's assets will not take off with some of those assets?

A: There are two basic protections, both mandated by the Investment Company Act of 1940 — the primary piece of federal legislation regulating mutual funds.

The first is the requirement that a fund's assets be held by a custodian, usually a bank. So, the people who run a fund seldom get their hands on the fund's assets.

The second is the rule that every fund officer or employee who is in a position to handle fund assets must be covered by a fidelity bond. In the extremely rare instances where assets were stolen from mutual funds, fidelity bonds have made those funds and their shareholders whole.

Also, virtually all securities that funds hold as investments are in book-entry form — recorded on computers, with no certificates printed. No Light-Fingered Louie can pick up certificates and walk away.

We all know it is impossible to legislate against greed. But the mutual fund business has been remarkably free from fraud. There have been cases of fund hanky-panky, but generall not involving out-and-out theft of assets.

Q: In reply to a reader who had been approached by a mutual fund salesman about investing in a tax-free and insured municipal bond mutual fund, you wrote that the advice was awful and you advised the reader not to "let the clown back in the house."

But you then confirmed what the salesman said. The dividends are tax-free and the fund is insured. All you did was add that the fund's share value will fluctuate and losses could occur if the bonds are sold before maturity.

Do bond funds hold bonds until maturity, or do they trade in and out like stock funds?

A: By definition, all mutual funds are "managed" investment companies, meaning they make changes in their investment portfolios. Yes, they trade in and out.

But you missed the point. The reader's letter said the salesman claimed that because of the insured feature, the investor would never lose money -- an unfounded claim that violated mutual fund sales rules.

Top-seeded Pete Sampras of the USA returns the ball to Switzerland's Marc Rosset in their third round match of the Paris tennis open Thursday.

Top-seed Sampras overcomes Rosset

■ Paris Open Indoors

PARIS (AP) — Top-seeded Pete Sampras knew the way to beat Marc Rosset was to beat Rosset's strength, his serve.

Sampras twice gained the needed breaks to beat the tall Swiss 7-5, 6-3 Thursday in the third round of the $2.1 million Paris Open.

Sampras meets another big server, Croatian Goran Ivanisevic, in Friday's quarterfinals. The ninth-seeded Croatian defeated seventh-seeded Michael Chang 7-6 (7-5), 7-5, serving 17 aces in a match that ended after midnight.

Three-time champion Boris Becker also advanced to the quarterfinals by beating Karel Novacek 7-6 (11-9), 6-2.

Fourth-seeded Michael Stich beat No. 13 Todd Martin 7-6 (7-3), 6-1 in the first match Thursday afternoon. In Friday's quarterfinals, Stich meets Stefan Edberg, who advanced Wednesday over No. 12 Czech Petr Korda 4-6, 6-4, 7-5. Stich beat Edberg in the quarterfinals of the Stockholm Open last week.

Also eighth-seeded Andrei Medvedev of Ukraine outlasted Henri Leconte of France 7-5, 6-7 (7-3), 6-3. Medvedev's quarterfinal opponent in Mark Woodforde of Australia, who beat Magnus Gustafsson of Sweden 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 in the third round.

Arnaud Boetsch of France eliminated American qualifier Jared Palmer 6-7 (7-5), 6-3, 6-4 to qualify to meet Becker on Friday.

Except for two forfeits, Becker has never lost in the Paris tournament. He won in 1986, 1989 and 1992, did not compete in 1987 and 1988, and pulled out in 1990 and 1991 because of injury and illness. He is seeded third this year.

Although Rosset's serve reached 125 mph and provided 18 aces, Sampras put pressure on as Rosset approached the net. It paid off in the 12th game of the first set when Sampras finally broke Rosset's service and won the set.

"His serve is one of the hardest-hitting serves on the tour," Sampras said. "But if you can get a read on it, you can hit a pretty good return. Obviously his backhand is not quite as strong as his forehand so I wanted to hit a lot of balls there."

In the fourth game of the second set, after five deuces, Sampras finally converted another break point to go up 3-1 and held the lead the rest of the way.

"Once I got that first set under my belt, I felt I got off to a good start and possibly get an early break off of him," Sampras said. "After the first set, I knew I was on the verge of closing him out and once I got that break I was in good shape."

Rosset had only one break point on Sampras's service and didn't take advantage of it. Sampras converted two of nine.

"It was the type of match where you just want to have to win the important points. He got a little discouraged in the second set but playing someone like Marc, you have to stay firm on your own service games and not lose your concentration."

Becker wasted five set points in the first set, including three at 0-40 in the 12th game, before winning in the tiebreaker against Novacek.

Becker thought the set was over when Novacek served one of the points that appeared to be out.

"There was one major mistake at 15-40 and his second serve was way out at set point," Becker said. "Everybody in the stands saw it. Karel saw it. Just the man on the chair and the machine didn't see it.

"We were playing 55 minutes until then and a fault like that can change a whole match around. I was really angry about it."

Becker got a bit of luck in the tiebreaker, similar to his three-set victory over Russian Andrei Olhovskiy the previous round. With Novacek having a set point at 6-5, Becker's shot hit the top of the next and fell over weakly to even the score.

After that, they traded points until 10-9 when Becker finished things with an ace, his seventh of the set.

After some early service breaks, Becker rolled through the second set in 31 minutes, ending the match with an ace.

Leconte lost the first set and won the second, as he had in his two previous matches giving the French crowd hope. Leconte even jumped to a 2-0 lead in the third set.

Then Medvedev took control of the match, taking advantage of three double faults by Leconte in the fourth game to even it at 2-2. Leconte had 10 double faults.

"The match turned when I made two double faults at 40-15 in that game," Leconte said. "If I had gone up 3-1 it would have been difficult for Andrei to come back."

Magee leads Kapalua

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — Andrew Magee, recording a birdie and eagle on consecutive holes, shot a 6-under-par 67 Thursday to take the first-round lead at the $1 million Kapalua International.

Two strokes back were Scott Hoch, Peter Jacobsen and Noland Henke on a day marked by sunny skies and stiff trade winds at the Kapalua Resort on the island of Maui.

The 52-man field is split for the first two rounds with half at the par-71 Bay Course and the other half at the par-73 Plantation Course. The final 36 holes are played at the Plantation.

Magee, who birdied two of the last three holes, played the more difficult Plantation Course, as did Henke. Jacobsen and Hoch played the Bay, where they equaled Magee's 67 but were two fewer strokes under par.

"I'm very happy with my round," Magee said. "If you start off well, it's a golf tournament. If you start poorly, it's a vacation. I guess I'm in a golf tournament."

Magee birdied the sixth hole and followed with his eagle at the 484-yard, par-4 seventh — "the highlight of the day." He used an 8-iron from 170 yards to hole the shot.

Magee finished his round with birdie putts of 35 and 20 feet at Nos. 16 and 18. He could have extended his advantage except for missing a 2-foot birdie attempt at No. 9.

"I had a very good putting day," he said. "I'm flattered. I really played good."

Magee is finishing his eighth season on the tour. His best finish this year was second at the Phoenix Open, and his earnings of $269,986 put him 62nd on the money list.

Playing even par over the first five holes left Magee wondering when and if the birdies would come.

"You just got to hang in there and be patient in the wind," he said. "This is the windiest day I think I've played here. It just seemed to get stronger and stronger."

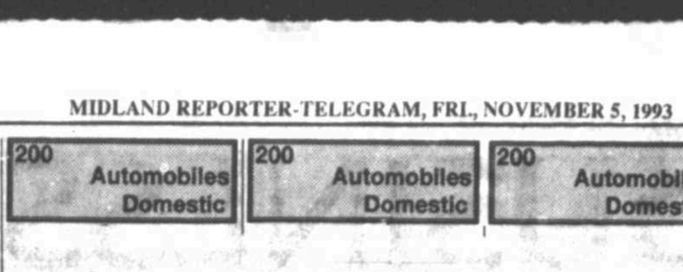

The Kapalua International, sponsored by Lincoln-Mercury, is not an official stop on the PGA Tour, but it is sanctioned by the PGA. First prize in this event is $180,000. However, money won at this tournament is not recognized on the official earnings list.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC
OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT ON THE ENVIRONMENT AND NOTICE TO PUBLIC OF REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:

On or about November 22, 1993, Midland County will request the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, to be used for the following project:

Sanitary Sewer Improvements
TCDP Funds: $218,000.00
County Funds: $73,512.00
Engineering Services
TCDP Funds: $24,000.00
General Administration
TCDP Funds $30,000.00

The above-referenced project activities will be carried out as part of the 1992 Texas Community Development Program (TCDP) project. The project will be carried out in a designated project area within Midland County. A map showing the location of the proposed sanitary sewer improvements is available for inspection at Midland County Judge Charles W. Seltzer's Office.

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT

It has been determined that such a request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment. Therefore, the above-named County has determined not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

The reasons for such a decision not to prepare such Statement are as follows:

SANITARY SEWER IMPROVEMENTS: The 1992 TCDP project would provide sanitary sewer service to an area which is currently served by septic tanks and cesspools. There is currently no sanitary sewer service in the area, and there are significant health concerns due to inadequate septic tanks and cesspools and treatment which has caused contamination of the water supply in the area as well as surrounding areas. The improvements would serve approximately 101 persons, of which approximately 97 percent are classified as "low to moderate income". The proposed project will complete the sanitary sewer system for the target area and all existing septic tanks and cesspools will be taken out of service. Midland County lacks adequate financial resources to undertake this important sanitary sewer improvements project without assistance from TCDP. The proposed project will allow Midland County to construct these much-needed sanitary sewer improvements. Construction will involve limited clearing and excavation in streets and alleys, but no major changes in topographic features are anticipated. No major changes in population density, land use, or demand for community facilities are expected over the course of this project. Existing support systems and infrastructure should not be affected by this project. There will be no negative impacts on the environment as a result of any activity or project undertaken with TCDP funds. Some increase in noise, dust or other nuisance levels may occur during construction, rehabilitation, reconstruction and/or demolition; however, such disturbances will be temporary and should not rise to current levels once construction is complete. None of the activities or projects to be undertaken will affect any known local, state or national historic, architectural or archaeological resources.

An Environmental Review Record with respect to the within project has been made by the above-named County that documents the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying upon request in Midland County Judge Charles W. Seltzer's office between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.

PUBLIC COMMENTS ON FINDING

All interested agencies, groups, and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by Midland County to the Midland County Judge Charles W. Seltzer's office on or before November 21, 1993. All such comments so received will be considered and Midland County will not request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action on the within project before the date specified in the preceding sentence.

RELEASE OF FUNDS

Midland County will undertake the project described with Texas Community Development Program funds from the Texas Department of Commerce under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended. Midland County is certifying to the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs that the County Judge, Charles W. Seltzer in his official capacity as County Judge, consents to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental assessments, decision making, and action; and has assumed the responsibilities which have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, Midland County may use the Texas Community Development Program funds, and the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and 24 CFR Part 58.

OBJECTIONS TO STATE RELEASE OF FUNDS

The Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is on one of the following bases: (a) that the certification was not in fact executed by the chief executive officer of the county; (b) that the Contractor approved by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs; or (b) that the Contractor's environmental review record for the project indicates the omission of a required decision, finding, or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedures (24 CFR 58), and may be addressed to the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs, 811 Barton Spring Road, Suite 300, Austin, Texas 78711-2410.

Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs. No objection received after December 6, 1993, will be considered by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs.
