Trade deficit drop leads to 40-point jump in market

NEW YORK (AP) — A plunge in the trade deficit electrified financial markets Friday for one of the best days since the October crash, jacking up the dollar, depressing interest rates and adding nearly 40 points to the Dow Jones average.

Economists cautioned that the one-month trade statistics released by the Commerce Department could be unreliable, and some characterized the market behavior as an overreaction.

But others called the market response justified because the trade report was surprisingly positive, reflecting a significant surge in exports that could help the economy avert a recession for the sixth straight year.

"This is what we want to do, sell more goods to the world. This is a plus," said John Makin, senior economist at the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research, a nonpartisan research and educational organization in Washington, D.C. "This is the trigger that's critical."

The Commerce Department said the trade deficit fell 25 percent in November to $13.2 billion, compared with the record $17.6 billion in October.

The main reason for the drop was a 9.4 percent rise in exports in November to $23.8 billion, a record for overseas sales of U.S. goods that was largely attributed to the dollar's protracted decline in value.

Secord wants grand jury to have hearing testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — A target of the criminal investigation into the Iran-Contra affair is trying to force prosecutors to present grand jurors with evidence he contends will exonerate him.

An attorney for retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord has asked a federal judge to order independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh to present grand jurors with testimony from last year's congressional hearings by Lt. Col. Oliver L. North and other witnesses "which directly exculpates Gen. Secord."

Walsh is resisting the move, saying the presentation of testimony obtained under congressional grants of limited immunity from prosecution would hobble his investigation.

According to court papers unsealed Thursday, Secord is also trying to get court permission to present his case directly to the grand jury, which in the coming weeks is expected to return indictments against him and other key participants in the Iran-Contra affair.

Walsh opposes Secord's unusual attempt to tell his side of the story to the grand jury, saying "the law does not require that independent counsel's investigation be tainted in this manner at the behest of a target of the investigation."

Walsh has gone to great pains to insulate his staff and the grand jurors from publicity surrounding the congressional testimony of North, former national security adviser John M. Poindexter, and other witnesses who testified under limited grants of immunity.

Secord wants a court order forcing Walsh to present this congressional testimony to the grand jury.

The "use immunity" grants by Congress prevent prosecutors from using the testimony of a particular immunized witness as evidence against that person in a criminal proceeding.

Walsh has filed evidence from his investigation under court seal to prove that it was obtained independently from any information that surfaced during immunized testimony at the congressional hearings.

The prosecutor contended in a reply brief that "in effect, Secord is demanding that independent counsel grant use immunity to the defense witnesses of his choice."

"The law is clear that defendants — much less targets of a grand jury — have no right to force the prosecutor to immunize witnesses," Walsh said.

Defendant says he shot man 'armed' with sock

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 24-year-old motel owner accused of murder told a jury Friday that he shot a motel guest three times because he feared for his own life.

Only after the victim removed his hand from his open shirt, did Todd Herbert Stephens discover the supposed weapon was a rolled up tube sock, he testified in 142nd State District Court Friday.

Closing arguments and jury deliberations in Stephens' trial were scheduled for a rare Saturday session before Judge Pat Baskin today.

Stephens, a Michigan native who owned the Sandpiper Inn, 3838 W. Wall Ave., told the seven-woman, five-man jury that on Sept. 6, 1987, a 25-year-old roustabout who witnesses said was drunk threatened to blackmail him for running a "whorehouse," then returned later to a small party in the motel office with his hand in his shirt.

Bernard Balero Jr., of Brownfield was shot to death just outside of the motel office, then staggered for several feet before he fell down and died, according to testimony. A pathologist told jurors late Thursday that one of the bullets hit him in the back.

The tall, dark-haired, bespectacled Stephens, dressed in a coat and tie, told his story to defense attorney Jeff Blackburn, as his mother, brother and several sisters watched.

Just after 2 a.m. on the morning of the shooting, Balero became upset when he lost a pool game to Stephens, according to the defendant. Balero then demanded the room number of a woman he wanted to see, and Stephens denied his request several times before complying, the accused man testified.

The victim, who Stephens described as "hot-blooded," then called him from one of the rooms, threatened the blackmail, and minutes later appeared at the motel office.

"I don't want money, I want you," Balero said menacingly, Stephens told jurors. "I was sure at the time that he had a gun and a knife...I wanted the police there — I felt my life was in danger."

Balero returned to the office and demanded that the owner step outside. Stephens, sitting on a counter, grabbed a five-shot .38-caliber pistol that sat beside him.

He aimed it at Balero, told him to "freeze," and after a pause Balero walked out of the office. He then paused again and appeared to reach into his shirt while turning around, Stephens testified.

"I was afraid he was going to shoot me because of the position of his hands," he continued. When Balero suddenly jerked his arm, "I knew he had a gun," Stephens told the jury.

"I did the only thing I could have done," he said. "I fired."

Even after the victim, wounded three times, staggered away, "I thought he was going to shoot me. Then I saw his hand come out with a tube sock rolled up."

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre rattled the defendant at the end of his 20-minute cross-examination during a quizzing about the rapid order of fire.

"So, what you did was empty the gun into him before you could ever see his hand even clear the shirt, to see what he had in his hand?" Schorre asked.

"Yes," the defendant said.

Later, after a discussion outside the presence of the jury, Baskin ruled that a Brownfield man could testify that Balero often carried a gun "stuffed in his pants," and was "violent and dangerous" when drunk.

Joe Martinez, 30, said Balero "wanted to be somebody — a big shot," and frequently started fights seemingly for no reason.

The prosecution's lone rebuttal witness was Juan Ledenza, Balero's half-brother, who was with him the night of the shooting.

The victim was "not violent," did not carry a gun, and was last seen by him going to bed, Ledenza said.

Early Friday, 21-year-old Delbert Beadle testified that Balero appeared to "put his hands up" and had begun to walk away "crouched over" when the defendant started firing the gun.

Beadle said the victim was "running away" when he was shot.

The first defense witness was Walter Edwards, 28, who also witnessed the confrontation, he told jurors.

Because Balero was "very intoxicated" and "mouthing off," Edwards suggested at one point that Stephens get his gun.

"I thought he was going to blow us away," Edwards said.

On cross-examination, Schorre wondered aloud if the victim could commit "first-degree felony assault with a sock."

Wagner, Brown can't get financing for USG takeover

CHICAGO (AP) — A business partnership headed by two Midland oilmen disclosed Thursday that it has been unable to come up with financing to take over Chicago-based USG Corp.

In a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Desert Partners L.P. said an unidentified investment banking firm had informed it that financing for an attractive tender offer for USG couldn't be arranged because of "current market conditions."

The stock market crash Oct. 19 has made it difficult to obtain financing for acquisitions.

Desert Partners, controlled by Midlanders Cyril Wagner Jr., and Jack E. Brown, holds a 9.9 percent stake in USG, a building products manufacturer.

USG declined to comment on Desert Partners' announcement.

"That doesn't prevent someone else from coming in," said Paul Kleinaitis, an analyst for Duff & Phelps Inc. in Chicago, "but Desert Partners is out to sea."

But Kleinaitis said interest in USG probably has lessened because the residential construction market is apparently in a cyclical downturn.

4 court candidates each raise more than $100,000

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Four Democratic Supreme Court candidates each have raised more than $100,000 so far for their races, according to campaign finance reports submitted Friday.

Two probable 1990 Democratic candidates for governor, however, reported raising far more than that during the last half of 1987. Attorney General Jim Mattox brought in slightly in more than $1 million, while Treasurer Ann Richards' picked up $511,000.

In the high court races, Justice Ted Robertson led the pack with $327,000 in contributions towards his bid for chief justice. Robertson reported receiving $20,000 from Houston lawyer Ernest Cannon, $15,000 from Houston lawyer Ronald Krist, $10,000 from the Port Arthur firm of Umphrey, Swearingen and Eddins.

Twenty-one contributors donated $5,000 to Robertson. Many of his large donations came from trial lawyers, who represent plaintiffs in lawsuits.

Robertson's Democratic opponent, Dallas attorney John Humphreys, had not filed by late Friday.

Newly appointed Republican Chief Justice Tom Phillips brought in $20,000. His largest contribution, $2,500, came from a Houston law firm that has campaigned against trial lawyer influence on the Supreme Court.

Justice William Kilgarlin, also with substantial trial lawyer support, brought in $206,000 from July 1 to Dec. 1 for his re-election attempt. Kilgarlin reported 12, $5,000 or more contributors.

Real estate broker cultivates interest in old farm machinery

By BETTY STEPHENSON

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Henry Barlow developed an interest in big farm machinery when he was a child growing up in Collin County, and his fascination has never waned.

"A threshing team used to ride an old machine from farm to farm, and I'd see the big steamer coming, so big and awesome when it turned into the pasture at our place," he said.

Barlow isn't a farmer anymore. He chose instead to go into real estate, which was how he came to own a 1912 Hart-Parr tractor.

"I was going to Moss Lake (in Cooke County) 14 or 15 years ago, and I passed by the old Jergelkey farm. They owned one of the old tractors, but they had moved to West Texas and were leasing the farm," he said.

Eventually, he bought the tractor, which was huge, rusty and didn't run. He transported the 10-ton tractor — which stands 10 feet, 8 inches tall — to his Denton home, where he put it in a shed. Later, he built a barn to hold it and bought a 1912 Ford as a companion for it.

The tractor sat in a barn 14 years, until Barlow was contacted in October by Ken Zwinggi of Lindsay, who restores old cars and farm machinery. He had tracked the machine through relatives of Jergelkey's former neighbors. Barlow asked Zwinggi if he would help get it restored.

The old tractor was one of three brought to Cooke County in 1912 on a railroad car. It was used last in 1935, when it pulled a grader used for terracing the owner's land.

Barlow had researched the machine enough to know that there are only four like it left in the United States. One is in Iowa, where the tractors were manufactured; another is in the Smithsonian Institution; and the third is in Perryton, Texas.

Barlow said the Oliver Co. bought out Hart-Parr, and the tractors were used to haul cannons to the Russian front in World War I. The model he owns, the "30-60," was called Old Reliable.

The tractor is powered by a two-cylinder, kerosene-burning engine. It has two gears, one forward and one reverse. The top speed is 2.3 mph.

Zwinggi and a friend, David Biffle, worked on the tractor for a month, first getting the engine started on gasoline and switching to kerosene.

"When it was new, it used a black oil in the radiator. No one knows what black oil is, so Biffle and I decided to put peanut oil in it. I had to have something slick that could take the heat," Zwinggi said. "We bought 60 gallons of peanut oil and we still don't know if we have enough."

Man puts in two cents worth — 45,000 times

WAYNESBORO, Va. (AP) — Luke Lockridge felt a $900 judgment against him in the death of two cattle was ridiculous, but he paid up — with 90,000 pennies, 580 pounds of coins.

"This is definitely a first," said a spokesman for the law office of Gordon W. Poindexter after the recent payment was delivered.

Lockridge, of Fishersville, was sued by neighbor Charles Blackwell, who alleged two of his cattle died after eating wilted wild cherry leaves that were thrown onto his property when Lockridge mowed a field last July.

Lockridge testified that he did not mow his field during the period in question and that Blackwell himself had wild cherry trees in the area where his cattle roamed. But he lost.

"I thought it was a ridiculous charge, a ridiculous ruling from the judge, so I thought I'd go ridiculous all the way and pay up in pennies," Lockridge said.

San Antonio water czar ends stormy career

By GEBE MARTINEZ

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — For more than two decades Robert Van Dyke has reigned as the city's water czar, overseeing vast growth in the city's water system while tangling with City Council members, citizen groups and environmentalists.

Whether he was standing before a cynical City Council or facing a hostile citizens group, his usually stony facial expression would change only with a slight raising of an eyebrow and perhaps a change in color as he prepared to issue his cool, exact reply.

But now, the man with the bristle-brush crew cut is smiling. After 25 years of service at the City Water Board — the first four as operations manager — he is leaving his $94,000 a year post as general manager to raise exotic animals on his 171-acre ranch near Luckenbach.

Recently he stepped down as general manager, but will continue for the month of January in the transition post of general manager emeritus.

Van Dyke, 59, said his appointment as general manager after his boss died of a heart attack was "the last thing I ever wanted to do."

His first task as general manager in 1966 was to ask the council for a rate increase. It did not go well, and he said recently, "It's been hell ever since," remembering his often-stormy relationship with the council.

Since Van Dyke took over the reins of the agency, the system's water pumping capacity has almost doubled — from 29.5 million gallons pumped in 1966 to 58.4 million 20 years later.

Water mains totaled 1,848 miles in 1966 compared to 3,236 miles in 1986, and there are 64 percent more customers than there were in 1966 — 138,498 compared with 227,598 in 1986.

"It's been a real challenge. I think it's been a very fine career to bring the professionalism into this utility that we have," he said. "The people here are the best."

He said the organization will survive without him, but believes he will be missed at City Hall.

"I think they (city officials) will miss me a great deal," Van Dyke said with a rare, big smile on his face. "The biggest headache in town will be gone."

Van Dyke's name does not usually bring smiles to the faces of city officials who have tangled with him in the past.

"He should have left a long time ago," responded one of Van Dyke's harshest critics, Councilman Frank Wing, who complained Van Dyke was insensitive to the rate payers and refused to track council policy even though the council has the final word on rate increases.

Wing referred to Van Dyke's "aloofness and arrogance" and "self righteousness," adding that Van Dyke acted like he was "the only one who knows what's good for the city."

But even those who disagreed with him on policy issues give him credit for knowing how to do his job.

"One testament to Mr. Van Dyke's administration and management skills," Mayor Henry Cisneros said, "is the quality of the water company and the manner in which it has served the growth of the city and the awards it has received."

He refused to discuss the personality clashes, saying they are in the past.

In recent years, Van Dyke, perhaps sensing the animosity he can raise, has not appeared before the council to argue for rate increases and left that task to his staffers.

But he can be equally critical of how the city handled the water utility and its rate increase requests.

"They nickeled and dimed us to death," he said, arguing that the councils over the years have not demanded as much of the board of City Public Service because the city relies on CPS revenues to balance its budget.

"The water board has been the whipping boy," he said, and added the utility is one of the best "in spite of everything everyone has done to give us a hard time."

Van Dyke and the water board had a hard time against Communities Organized for Public Service in the 1970s, when the group and some council members opposed the water main development policies, claiming they were aimed at North Side growth.

Sunrise happy hour big hit at Friendly Tavern

By FRAN HOLMES

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — The fun picks up about 7 a.m. at the Friendly Tavern — or just when most repectable nine-to-fivers are climbing out of bed to start the day.

By opening that early Monday through Friday, the Texarkana tavern, located on U.S. Highway 67, is catering to a clientele that is ending its work day, and soon will be heading home for a few hours of sleep.

Most Friendly customers are graveyard shift workers at Cooper Tire and Rubber Co., Alumax or other area industries that operate around the clock.

George Moore, the current tavern owner, gives all the credit to former owner Bill Ellis for the success of a 7 to 9 a.m. happy hour.

"To my morning customers, coming here at 7 or 8 in the morning is the same as someone who works during the day going out at 5 or 6 in the evening," said Ellis, who is only a Friendly customer these days.

When Ellis decided to switch the tavern's happy hour to mornings, he said, supplies were purchased on a day-to-day basis.

"The first day we did $34 (in sales)," Ellis said.

But he refused to get discouraged, even though he and his wife were the only tavern workers. Eventually, they were able to hire more help, he said.

Ellis said some of his regular morning happy hour customers used to tell him to keep the lights down low so no one would recognize them hanging out at the tavern.

"You'll notice that it's light enough to see in here," Ellis said. "People told me I needed to turn down the lights, but I'm not ashamed to be seen here, and I don't think customers are either."

Ellis said most of his customers come in to shoot pool or talk with friends and unwind after a tiring eight-hour shift.

"The first year we were open, Coca-Cola was our Number Two selling product," he said.

Although he no longer is involved with the tavern's business, Ellis said the Friendly will not serve customers who already have had enough. And even in the mornings, that happens on occasion.

"We'll make sure they get a ride home, and sometimes even arrange to get their cars to them," he said.

But drunkenness and rowdiness rarely are a problem at the Friendly, he said.

"Because we will put up with no trouble, we have no trouble," he said.

On a recent Friday morning — the day one semi-regular customer said is the most popular with Cooper Tire workers — none of the 30 or so customers seemed in the mood for anything but a good time.

Pool games were being played non-stop and customers talked and laughed above the sounds of Top 40 and country hits from the juke box.

Polaroid photographs lining the walls depicted parties that have taken place at the Friendly Tavern through the years. On one memorable occasion, Ellis said, a trained Brahma bull entertained customers.

"I was a Navy man, and I've traveled all over," Ellis said. "I thought I had seen everything, and then I opened this place."

Balmy weather in store for area

From Staff and Wire Reports

A balmy weekend with partly cloudy skies is in store for Midland according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Today the high should reach into the lower 70s. Winds should be from the southwest at 10-20 mph and sometimes gusty.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the lower 40s.

The high Sunday should be in the lower 60s.

The record high temperature for Friday was set in 1935 when it reached 79. The record low temperature for today was set in 1972 when it dropped to 15.

STATE

A high pressure system over the eastern United States and Colorado ushered in sunny skies over northern portions of Texas Friday, while low level winds delivered moisture from the Gulf of Mexico in the form of clouds to South Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Some scattered showers hit the lower Rio Grande Valley and Coastal Plains.

The forecast called for fair to partly cloudy skies today over West Texas. It was to be mostly cloudy and warmer with scattered showers in North and South Texas.

NATION

A cold front packing snow and strong wind with gusts up to 100 mph blew across the West on Friday, while a surprise storm dumped snow on coastal communities in the Carolinas. Record cold continued to grip the Northeast.

Forecasters issued gale warnings for the coast of Washington and Oregon, and posted high wind warnings for the southeastern plains of Wyoming.

Wind gusts of up to 100 mph hit Reno, Nev., and left up to 14 inches of snow on the ground in higher elevations of the Lake Tahoe area. Up to 8 inches were expected in the eastern mountains of Wyoming.

The Atlantic snowstorm dumped 5 inches on Wilmington, N.C., by noon, the third-highest total for a January storm in 117 years of records, the National Weather Service said.

Sunny and cool weather prevailed across much of the rest of the southeastern United States.

It was cloudy and cold in the Northeast, where afternoon temperatures were in the teens and single digits. Concord, N.H., had a record low of 19 degrees below zero.

Southerly winds spread milder weather across the central United States, leaving subfreezing temperatures confined to the area from the upper Mississippi Valley to the middle and northern Atlantic Coast.

Today's forecast called for rain across Washington, Oregon and California, with snow in higher elevations, rain and snow in western Arizona and the northern and central Rockies, rainshowers from Louisiana and south-central Texas to Missouri and southern Illinois, with rain most likely across Arkansas and eastern Texas, rain and snow showers scattered across the upper Mississippi Valley and the upper Great Lakes region and fair weather elsewhere.

New Mexicans offer job to Chicago man who lived in shack beside river

CHICAGO (AP) — A homeless man who lived in an open shack beside the Chicago River for nine months wore fresh clothes and a big smile Friday as he hopped on a bus bound for a new job and a new life in New Mexico.

"I just want to say I appreciate everything people have done for me," Harold Thomas said before he checked his bag and took a seat on the westward-bound Greyhound.

Thomas, 35, a carpenter who said he hasn't been able to find full-time work in more than a year, is accepting a job as a handyman on a ranch owned by Ethel and Roy Gilman of Portales, N. M.

The Gilmans made the job offer after reading an Associated Press story about Thomas and another man who built the shack last spring.

"Only God can touch people in their hearts. I couldn't compare this to anything, no way. I wish everyone would look out for the misfortunate," he said.

A week ago, Thomas was bundled in ill-fitting clothes, shifting his feet around a fire that kept the shack warm as below-zero temperatures gripped the Midwest.

For the two nights before his departure, he had a view of Lake Michigan and room service in the Hyatt Regency Chicago, free of charge.

"I'm afraid I gained 20 pounds," Thomas said. "When they see the bill, they won't want me back. When I get working on the ranch, I'll lose some weight."

Radio station WGN paid for the bus ticket and employees of Chicago-area K mart stores donated new clothes and shoes.

Thomas was wearing a flannel shirt, a Chicago Bears cap, blue jeans and a warm coat as he walked the six blocks from the hotel to the downtown bus station.

The 27-hour ride will take him through St. Louis, Oklahoma City and Amarillo, Texas, before he arrives this afternoon in New Mexico.

The man who shared the shack with Thomas, Tommy Ray, 37, is now living with relatives on the West Side who went to get him after they saw his picture in a Chicago newspaper, Thomas said.

Thomas and Ray decided to stay in the open shack on a trash-strewn lot just west of downtown because they were wary of the people in shelters. They said they were determined to find jobs and put a permanent roof over their heads.

Thomas said he was surprised at the speed with which their fortunes changed, and hoped his story would inspire more charity.

"I hope all the people who have more, can share," he said. "It doesn't need to be much."

Grain elevator explosion kills three people

HENDERSON, Ky. (AP) — A grain elevator exploded Friday, killing three people and injuring two, one of whom was trapped for 4½ hours about halfway up the 200-foot structure, authorities said.

The explosion at the Ellis Grain Co., which is owned by Owensboro Grain Co., rocked downtown Henderson about 4:30 p.m. and showered the immediate area with huge blocks of concrete.

"It's a common dust explosion," said G. Rodney Raby, field supervisor for the state fire marshal's Hazardous Waste Division. Grain dust is highly combustible.

A small fire was still burning about 170 feet up in the elevator late Friday night, said Fire Chief Charles Trodglen.

The body of one victim was found outside the bottom entrance door, and the other two inside the door, where they apparently had fallen from the upper levels, he said.

The trapped worker said the other two men were working near him when the blast occurred, Trodglen said.

Rescue workers reached the worker trapped about halfway up the elevator about 8:45 p.m. He was placed on a stretcher and lowered by cable about 50 feet to an awaiting cherry-picker, which then lowered him to the ground.

"He just said he was working there in the grain belt and it exploded and blew him to the front" of the elevator, said Assistant Fire Chief Larry Henshaw.

The worker was flown to a Louisville hospital for treatment of first- and second-degree burns to his face, said Trodglen.

The other injured worker was in the intensive care unit at a local hospital, a spokeswoman said.

Witnesses said the concrete outer shell of the metal structure blew, showering hundred-pound chunks of concrete around the area.

"We thought it was an earthquake at first, except it didn't keep shaking. It just boomed," said Ken Keown, who was at a YMCA about a half-mile away.

Keown said the explosion "loosened ceiling tiles and everything" at the YMCA.

Billy Davis said groceries flew off the shelves at a nearby store where he was shopping when the explosion occurred.

DEATHS

Marion Nichols

Services for Mrs. Marion Nichols will be today at 2 p.m. in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Nichols died at a Midland hospital early Friday morning.

She was born Aug. 19, 1935, in Midland, and lived here all her life. For the past 1½ years she owned and operated Convoy Restaurant.

She was a member of the First Baptist Church.

She was preceded in death by her father, Walter Chambers, in 1951; her mother, Katie Floyd, in 1981, and her brother, Walter Chambers Jr., in 1972.

Survivors include her daughter, Diann Birbeck of Midland; two grandchildren; two nieces and one nephew.

Pallbearers are to be Benny Galant, J.D. Long, Sylvistia Sims, Kevin Green, Lonnie Rex Long and Mike McCloud.

The family request that memorials be directed to Disabled American Veteran of the Tall City Chapter 58, P.O. Box 5285, Midland, 79794.

Roy L. Merrill Sr.

PLANO — Graveside services for Roy Lee Merrill Sr., 82, of Plano and formerly of Midland, were conducted 4 p.m. Monday at the Bethany Cemetery in Plano, with the Rev. Lauren Buck Medeiros officiating. Services were directed by Harrington-Bratcher-Dickey Funeral Home in Plano.

He was born on Jan. 10, 1906, in Glen Rose and was the son of William Thomas and Maggie Matthews Merrill. He was co-founder of the town of Dell City and was a rancher and oil man.

Survivors include his wife, Pauline Merrill of Plano; one son, Roy L. Merrill Jr. of Richardson; one brother, W.J. Merrill of Houston; one sister, Lola Hester of Odessa; and six grandchildren.

Dorothy Fly

Services for Dorothy Fly will be today at 11 a.m. in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Phil Click officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers were to be Cleland Atchison, Erle Robertson, Richard Morris, Dozier Truelove, J.R. Hudson and John Oliver.

Charlene Farr

Service for Charlene Farr of Odessa are scheduled for 3:30 p.m. today in the Alamo Heights Baptist Church with the Rev. J.E. Meeks officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Paul Hicks

Services for Paul Hicks will be today at 1:30 p.m. with the Rev. J.B. Stewart officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers were to be W.C. Osborn, Keys Curry, John Grimland, D. Ray McCarthey, Raymond Castillo and Lionel Craver.

SECORD

Walsh has offered Secord an opportunity to appear before the grand jury on Jan. 20, Jan. 22 and Jan. 25 if he confines his testimony to answering questions posed by prosecutors, according to the court papers in the case.

Secord's attorneys said in court papers that they suspect that Walsh is contemplating bringing charges that Secord, along with North and others, engaged in a "a conspiracy to misappropriate United States government funds."

Defense attorney Thomas C. Green said "there was abundant testimony at the joint hearings by the congressional committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair which directly exculpates Gen. Secord from any such charges."

Citing the testimony of Poindexter, North, and other officials, Green says Secord could not be charged with misappropriating proceeds from the sale of U.S. arms to Iran because those funds "belong to Gen. Secord, who was authorized by administration officials to conduct the enterprise as a private businessman, and who exercised complete control and supervision over the funds at all times."

"Even if Gen. Secord could be mistaken as to the ownership of the arms-sales proceeds, this testimony shows that the administration officials who recruited Gen. Secord led him to believe that these funds belonged to him."

Secord gave his congressional testimony without immunity.

COURT

Kilgarlin's Democratic opponent Carol Habermann brought in just $200. Republicans Camille Dunn and Nathan Hecht reported no contributions. Republican Ronald Block's forms were not filed Friday.

Former Congressman Jack Hightower reported raising $132,700 in his bid to unseat newly selected Justice Barbara Culver of Midland. Hightower's support included $20,000 each from the Texas Medical Association political action committee and from the Vinson & Elkins law firm of Houston, and $10,000 from the Texas Real Estate PAC.

Culver did not file her forms Friday.

Justice Raul Gonzalez brought in almost $108,000, including $4,500 in cash and computer equipment from the doctors' PAC and $3,000 from another group that opposes the trial lawyers. Neither his Democratic opponent Art Vega nor Republican Charles Ben Howell had filed by Friday evening.

State Republican Party Chairman George Strake said he believes the GOP can win its first Supreme Court election this year despite the Democrats' apparant early lead in fundraising. Pointing out that campaign contributions have become an issue in court races, Strake said: "It well could backfire on them."

Locally, Republican Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland reported $1,150 in contributions since July 1. Unopposed for re-election, Craddick received $500 from the Texas Electric Service Co. PAC, $300 from the Marathon Oil PAC and $250 from the ARCO PAC.

State Rep. Gary Watkins, the Odessa Democrat who faces no re-election opponents, reported $14,027 in contributions and $4,532 in expenses the final six months of 1987. Watkins' $500 contributors include Dr. Bob Holander of Odessa, the Bear Wholesalers PAC of Texas and the TESCO PAC.

Democratic Rep. Jim Rudd of Brownfield, also unopposed for re-election, collected $7,822 and spent $26,804 — including $4,000 for "political consultants." Major contributors include the Texas Optometrists PAC, which gave Rudd $2,500, and the Amoco Oil Co. PAC, which donated $1,500.

TRADE

"Obviously the numbers came in at a level better than most had expected," said John A. Conlon Jr., executive vice president at Nikko Securities Co. International in New York. "The impact on the dollar was immediate and dramatic, which led the stock and bond markets into a broad-based rally."

Nevertheless, he said, the buying binge probably was a temporary response to good news and not a long-term trend, especially in the stock market, where the gains were likely to induce selling next week by investors still nervous over the Oct. 19 crash and its uncertain aftermath.

"They were over-sensitive to the money supply two years ago and boxcar freight 20 years ago, which were indications of the economy at those times," he said.

The trade report spurred a hectic rally when stock trading opened on Wall Street. The Dow Jones industrial average jumped about 50 points and held that level through most of the day, falling slightly just before the close.

The country's best-known stock barometer ended with a 39.96-point advance to close at 1,956.07, and broader market indices also had good gains. About five stocks rose for every one that fell on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 197.94 million shares, considered an active day.

Lawmen probe burglary of pipe

From Staff Reports

Midland County Sheriff's Department officials are investigating a burglary that occurred shortly after 8 a.m. Friday, reports indicate.

Chris King, a 55-year-old farmer in Midland, told the sheriff's department someone had stolen 30 joints of irrigation pipe from his farm in Midland County.

The pipe was worth an estimated $4,500, reports said.

Americans 'running on empty' in life's fast lane

By TRISH HALL
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Because she wanted more free time, Sue Alstedt quit her job as a manager at AT&T. Then, to save even more time, she bought equipment to do her banking at home.

But she soon became impatient with the computer because it wasn't as fast as the one she had used at work. "I couldn't stand to wait for it, even though it was coming out at the rate of speech," she said.

Four years after leaving her high-pressure job Ms. Alstedt, who lives in Manhattan, still finds herself addicted to efficiency and speed. And she still hasn't solved her problem of not having enough time.

For instance, she did not have time to send Christmas cards this year. But then, of course, she does some consulting. And studies psychology. And...

According to market researchers and poll takers, Ms. Alstedt typifies a swelling complaint of people all over the United States, in large cities or small, with highly demanding careers or no job at all. Almost nobody, it seems, has enough time.

The sense that there is too much to do is especially acute at this time of year. Yet people can't seem to resist piling on more, with New Year's resolutions to exercise, cook healthful meals, take a course, help a cause.

"We have become walking resumes," said Geoff Godbey, an expert on leisure in the department of recreation and parks at Pennsylvania State University. "If you're not doing something, you're not creating and defining who you are."

Time, according to this way of thinking, is solely a resource to be expended on a goal.

The shift in values that Godbey describes has certainly been nudged along by the power of technology.

In his book "Time Wars," published in 1987 by Henry Holt & Co., Jeremy Rifkin argues that the relentless rhythms of computers are replacing those of natural life. The constant pressure to become ever more efficient, aided by high-technology tools, has enslaved the culture, he says.

FREE TIME. Leisure time. These notions confound social scientists. Definitions are highly subjective, they acknowledge, which is one reason polls and surveys on the subject have produced such widely varying data.

One large-scale study that has been carried out from 1965 to 1985 by the University of Maryland shows an overall increase in Americans' leisure time. John Robinson, a sociologist who heads the survey research center there, said two-earner households do have a time crunch.

But, he said, from 1965 to 1975 there was actually a gain of five hours a week in the average adult's leisure time. His analysis of the most recent data is not yet complete, but he said it did not seem to show a reversal of that trend.

The pollster Louis Harris sees things differently. His surveys suggest that the number of hours worked by Americans have increased by 20 percent since 1973, while the amount of leisure time has dropped by 32 percent. Government statistics do not support his assertion that people are working more hours, but he does not find that surprising.

"You've got a great number of salaried people now, and they don't get paid overtime," he said.

Their hours of work are not necessarily monitored by the government or even their employers. His surveys show that professional people work 52.2 hours a week, while small business people, the admired entrepreneurs of the 1980s, work 57.3 hours a week.

It's clear these salaried people should be worn out.

BUT SO, it seems, are the ones that Robinson surveyed, even though they ended up with the five extra hours of leisure time.

"They watched television more, and they slept more," he said. "That's what I refer to as post-industrious society."

According to A.C. Nielsen, television use has steadily risen, from six hours and 36 minutes daily per household in 1980 to seven hours and five minutes in 1987.

The increasing appeal of rest shows up over years of Gallup Polls. In 1938, the most popular ways to spend an evening were reading, watching movies and dancing. In 1986, the top choice was television, followed by resting, relaxing and reading. "In 1938, no one said resting and relaxing," said Coleen McMurray of the Gallup Poll.

It may be that people feel they need more rest because of the way they are using their time.

"They watch TV while eating dinner, while reading the newspaper, or they hold a meeting in a moving auto while eating a Burger King lunch," Godbey said. That leaves them without the unstructured time that is most refreshing, he said.

Steve Savage, one of the owners of New Video in New York, a chain of five video stores, finds the need to arrange things especially frustrating when it involves recreation.

"You have to make plans, and then you have to confirm your plans," he said. "It's part of your schedule; it's not the alternative."

The overscheduled lifestyle, chronicled in elaborate weekly planners whose replacement is a year-end ritual, may be one reason for weariness. But some people are simply wearing themselves out with chores, especially women.

IN A STUDY last year of 600 people with incomes greater than $25,000, Decision Research Corp. in Lexington, Mass., found that women had 25 percent less leisure time than men did. Studies have shown that married women who work often assume more of the household responsibilities than their husbands.

The rise in two-income households takes a large share of the blame for the time pressure that many couples face. When there is no one at home in the daytime, chores and errands have to be done on the weekend.

"What we see is a real feeling that there's less true leisure time, less time to wind down," said David Meer, vice president of the Daniel Yankelovich Group, a market research firm.

But the market researchers and poll takers say that complaints about pressure and lack of time are growing everywhere, among all groups.

Lives like Sally Minard's leave no doubt about why some people feel harried.

On the Monday before Christmas, she held a morning news conference at her office in New York, sped to the airport and took a flight to Chicago where she gave a dinner party for a client. The next day, she attended early meetings and then returned to New York in time to do some work at her advertising agency before giving a cocktail party for 50 people.

Ms. Minard, who is married and has two children, does not consider that pace unusual. And she is convinced that technology has been a factor.

"JUST THINK back to when you had to send something and wait for it to arrive," said Ms. Minard, a partner in Lotas Minard Patton McIver Inc. "Now, you're never waiting for the next step."

Grandmother's 'addiction' depends on lucky charms, fluorescent markers

By DAVE SAELENS

BEAUMONT (AP) — Joyce Davis rarely leaves home without a little blue teddy bear her granddaughter gave her and a bag full of fluorescent markers.

The bear is for luck and the markers are to keep score. And as far as Joyce is concerned, they're the two most important tools for her one true passion in life: bingo.

"I never miss a night. This is the only game to play," she says, arranging her teddy bear and a jar of candy and several purple and green and red markers called daubers around a dozen paper sheets of bingo cards. "I got so much invested in this my husband told me not to come home if I don't win."

The sign in front of Beaumont's newest bingo parlor on South 11th Street is simple enough. Five giant red letters spell out the catchy word on one outside wall of a plain white building, and that's it.

But it's more than enough to draw hundreds of folks like Joyce to its doors every Wednesday through Sunday, each with the hope that they'll walk away with one of eight $500 prizes up for grabs each night.

"I'm just a bingo addict," Joyce laughs, rattling off a list of bingo halls she frequents from Alabama to Vidor. "Plenty of people out here are like me; they're part of the furniture. I've seen them come out here in their house clothes."

The games rarely start before 7:30 each night, but most of the people who fill the bright, smoky hall arrive long before that. In the tense hours before the numbers start flying, these bingo Olympians follow a ritual of arranging their bingo cards, filling in free spots, situating daubers within arms' reach and placing stuffed animals and ceramic dinosaurs nearby to spread just enough luck on their games.

But if you think these games are the type you played as a kid, where you won if you simply filled out a vertical, horizontal or diagonal line across your bingo card, you're going to get lost in a hurry. With games bearing names like Crazy-T, Six Pack, Double Postage Stamps and Texas Cover-All, these die-hard number-crunchers make this particular pastime look more like a day on Wall Street than a night in a bingo parlor.

But rain or shine, you'll find Joyce sitting in what she calls her lucky spot on one end of the room, a plastic bag full of daubers and lucky charms at her feet and a jar of candy within reach.

"You usually have to get here early, because if other players hear you bingo one time, they head for where you were sitting next time," says Geraldine Chavis, who showed up a little late for this bingo session and lost her lucky chair to a quicker competitor.

Soon the numbered Ping-Pong balls are tumbling over one another in a windowed machine designed to do just that, and the only sound echoing through the hall is the rumble of overhead air-conditioning units and the announcer's deep, mellow voice.

Though silent, the room resembles an enormously wide bus with everyone facing the same direction. Heads begin bobbing slowly as they scan hundreds of bingo sheets, and hands clutching daubers hover back and forth across the sheets, looking for that one elusive number.

Billie Davis has seen plenty of these crowds. She manages the place owned by a Houston firm named Specialty Entertainments and run by four local agencies that benefit from nightly profits — Assumption Catholic School, Life Force, Senior Citizens Services of Port Arthur and My Wish Inc.

The announcer's smooth voice continues reading numbers, and across the room Joyce reaches into her plastic bag and pulls out a blue, rubber horseshoe and a wishbone from her Thanksgiving Day turkey.

"All right, it's time to get serious now," she says. Tension builds in the room as the game stretches on, until suddenly one voice breaks the stillness with a word that brings groans and muttered curses from the other 420 competitors.

Tax dollars might be used to verify petition signatures

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State tax dollars might finance the Republican Party's attempts to verify questionable signatures on presidential nominating petitions, state and party officials said Friday.

The party expects to spend about $20,000 in salaries and long-distance telephone bills to check the signatures on the petitions six presidential hopefuls submitted to get their names on the March 8 ballot. GOP spokesman Karen Parfitt Hughes said the party has "raised the question" of submitting those costs to the state for reimbursement.

"I really don't know whether we will or not," Hughes said.

The question arose Friday during a House Elections Committee meeting on the budget of the secretary of state's office. Rep. Bobby Aiken, D-Commerce, asked Assistant Secretary of State Randy Erben how his office would handle such a request.

"The issue is whether that expense is reasonable and necessary to the conduct of the primary," Erben said. "We have to consider it when it comes to us, and they might not even ask us."

The secretary of state's office controls the financing of the primary elections. It uses $10 million in taxpayers' money to supplement any filing fees and contributions the parties may receive.

The Texas Democratic Party allowed presidential hopefuls to present either petitions or a $4,000 filing fee to get their names on the ballot, while the Republicans accepted only petitions with a minimum of 5,000 valid signatures. "They caused their own problem," Ed Martin, executive director of the state Democratic Party, said of the GOP signature scandal.

"It's ironic that the party that would not allow filing for president by filing fee would have a fund made of state dollars and filing fees verify the alleged fraud in their petitions," Martin said.

Since Tuesday, 30 part-time workers have used the state GOP phone bank to call the purported signers of the six candidates' petitions. The investigations began in the wake of reports of forged signatures — including the names of several dead people — on the petitions of Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, former Gov. Pete du Pont of Delaware and former Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

Using spot checks, the party already has verified that the petitions of Vice President George Bush and former televangelist Pat Robertson have at least 5,000 valid signatures. The spot checks have continued with New York Rep. Jack Kemp's petitions.

Finally, the phone bank will call all of the persons whose names appear on the petitions.

The names of all six candidates will appear on the March 8 "Super Tuesday" ballot. However no candidate will be able to win any of the 111 Texas delegates to the national convention if he does not have the required 5,000 valid signatures.

FSLIC closes down Houston-based thrift

HOUSTON (AP) — Financially troubled First Savings Association of East Texas was closed Friday by federal regulators, and its insured deposits were transferred to University Savings Association, Houston, authorities said.

First Savings, a Houston-based thrift, operated one savings bank in Houston, two in San Augustine and one in Hemphill, and was the only savings association to serve San Augustine and Hemphill.

The transaction was structured so insured depositors would have continued service in the three Texas cities served by First Savings, Federal Home Loan Bank Board Chairman M. Danny Wall said.

First Savings was insolvent and its assets and earnings had dropped substantially due to unsound practices and regulatory violations, Wall said.

University Savings paid the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. approximately $1.3 million, or 3 percent of core deposits, to acquire the accounts.

First Savings' problems resulted from high-risk lending, deficit underwriting, rapid growth, excessive expenses and repeated violations of regulations, the FHLBB said in a statement.

The problems developed after Roy Daley acquired control late in 1982 and the thrift embarked on explosive growth, increasing assets from $32.8 million at the end of 1982 to $171.7 million by May 30, 1985, regulators said.

First Savings was placed under voluntary supervisory control by state regulators on Aug. 30, 1985, and continued to operate under state supervision.

Although unsafe practices were halted under state control, First Savings' financial position continued to deteriorate as a result of earlier lending practices, Wall said.

At the time of its closing, First Savings had $132 million in deposits, $62.9 million in assets, $131.96 million in total liabilities and a negative net worth of $69 million.

Scheduled assets of non-performing loans comprised 137 percent of the association's asset base.

University Savings is a $4.1 billion institution.

First Savings is the first FSLIC resolution handled this year. In 1987, there were 48 cases resolved by the FSLIC, 31 of which were resolved through assisted mergers or acquisitions.

Chief's salary to be used to fix water system

JEWETT (AP) — Dirty water and a cash crunch have put an end to the police force here.

Of course, there was only one officer left anyway — the police chief.

"It was a hard decision to make," Mayor Joe Holmes said. "We didn't want to do it, but we had to."

What seemed foremost on the minds of residents in this Leon County town 150 miles north of Houston was that the water from the city's three wells was changing color, and the tea-colored tint was staining clothes.

Residents demanded action.

Strapped for cash, council members decided to cut services in the town of 600, Holmes said, and Jewett Police Chief Dennis Whitted was fired. Earlier this week, the city council told Whitted to take a month of accrued vacation time.

Holmes said Whitted's $26,000 annual salary will be used to repair the water system.

Whitted, who had helped start the police department in 1982 and has seen it decline from three officers since last summer, believes the move might be bad.

"We're the only town in Leon County that's wet (sells alcohol)," he said. "We have a club here. There's going to be burglaries and stuff that's bound to happen."

But Holmes said Sheriff Royce Wilson lives 10 miles away, a deputy lives a few miles outside town and a state trooper lives in Jewett.

Boys prayed they would be found in cave

AUSTIN (AP) — Five boys lost 100 feet down in a cave were rescued after praying out loud that they would never go down there again.

"We prayed 20 times out loud, and then some of us slept," said 10-year-old Brandon Davis.

One of the rescuers, Bill Russell, had previously mapped the Travis County cave where the boys were found.

The youngsters shivered, cuddled, slept and prayed for about four hours before being rescued Thursday nigth by Russell and Craig Bittinger.

Worried parents and rescue workers cheered as the boys were led out, their clothes and faces caked with dirt, but uninjured and in good spirits.

"We prayed that if we ever got out of there, we'd never go in again," Davis said.

Along with Davis, the others rescued were Bobby Kline and Shawn Richardson, both 11, and Aaron Clemons and Matt Burden, both 10.

Officers from the Travis County sheriff's department, the Oak Hill volunteer fire departmernt and the Manchaca Emergency Medical Services were called after relatives said they hadn't seen the boys for several hours.

Their skateboards, a bicycle and a scooter were found on the ground near the cave opening.

Shawn Richardson said he and his friends began exploring the cave about 5 p.m., and it took them 30 minutes to go deep enough to get lost.

Russell, who explores caves as a hobby, said the boys were in Maple Run Cave, part of the Goat Cave preserve, which lies along the Balcones Fault line.

DA can refuse to give ABC Railey tapes

DALLAS (AP) — A planned ABC News "20/20" program next month on the near-fatal choking of a minister's wife may not include taped telephone messages by the preacher.

State District Judge Frank Andrews ruled Thursday that the Dallas County district attorney's office does not have to provide ABC with a copy of the answering machine messages from Walker Railey.

Andrews determined that the April 21 messages by Railey, who has since left the Methodist ministry, do not fall under public information statutes and do not have to be released to ABC News.

ABC attorney Charles Babcock said a decision on whether to appeal Andrews' ruling will be made soon.

Railey made the calls on the night Margaret "Peggy" Railey, 39, was attacked and left unconscious in the garage of their home. She remains in a coma.

ABC plans a segment on the Railey case on its "20/20" program, tentatively set for Feb. 5.

Railey, 40, has said he did not assault his wife, but has refused to cooperate with the Dallas police investigation.

Civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was remembered on his birthday Friday with memorial services, the renaming of a street long familiar to Monopoly fans and protests against racism at home and in South Africa.

King was "a man who dedicated his life to the pursuit of a dream, a dream not just for himself, but for you, for all of us, for America," President Reagan said in a message videotaped for transmission by satellite around the country.

King's widow, Coretta Scott King, was scheduled to present her annual "State of the Dream" address in Atlanta at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, of which she is president.

King was assassinated outside a Memphis, Tenn., motel on April 4, 1968. Friday would have been his 59th birthday; the national holiday observing King's birthday will be celebrated Monday.

But students in the Dallas suburb of Grand Prairie, Texas, will have to be in school. Their school board voted Thursday to hold classes Monday as a makeup day for a day missed because of an ice storm last week. "That is a blatant racist decision on the part of the school board," local NAACP president Lee Alcorn protested at the board meeting.

In memory of King, members of Operation PUSH, a civil rights group organized by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, protested South Africa's racial policy of apartheid outside that country's Chicago consulate.

High school students from Chicago and northwest Indiana met at Chicago's Malcolm X College to discuss the struggle for civil rights in the 1990s. In Evanston, Ill., students at Northwestern University planned a candlelight service in King's memory.

Reagan said King "reminded us that the destinies of all Americans were tied to one another, that the freedom of all Americans was inextricably bound together."

Education Secretary William J. Bennett, speaking in Atlanta, said King was "one of our greatest American citizens" and "the dream of equality and the dream of equal opportunity" must manifest itself in "equal intellectual opportunity in school,"

In a speech prepared for delivery at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, Bennett said King "had answers for the questions posed by his education. His answers inspired action."

"I believe we will find our strongest allies where Martin Luther King found his: in faith and in ideas — in education," he added.

"All of our children deserve our best education, and access to a school that provides it should not be an accident of where a student lives or of how much money his parents make," Bennett said.

In Atlantic City, N.J., Illinois Avenue, an address familiar to enthusiasts of the board game Monopoly, disappeared and was replaced by Dr. Martin Luther King Boulevard. The change was approved by City Council in May.

King's daughter, Bernice King, 23, spoke to more than 500 people at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles on Thursday to commemorate her father. The younger of King's two daughters, she was a preschooler when her father was killed.

"Unfortunately, everything has changed but nothing has changed," she said. "For those people who think we have arrived, you'd better look at who fills the jails of this country.. at who died because they cannot afford (adequate) health care...and at those who serve on the front lines of the Persian Gulf."

"There are those who say the movement is dead. The dream is alive because it's living in the heart and mind of every freedom-loving American," she said.

State officials in Springfield, Ill., unveiled a bronze, life-size statue of King in the Capitol rotunda Thursday, making him the first non-Illinoisan honored with a permanent memorial on the Statehouse grounds.

Gov. James R. Thompson said he doubts anyone else who was never a citizen of Illinois would ever be accorded a similar honor.

"Martin Luther King crossed the line from being simply a black person who took up a cause advocating for black persons, and advocated for all of us those qualities that we as a people must possess," the governor said.

Office furnishings sold to raise money for Deaver's legal costs

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Hundreds of people pawed through former White House aide Michael K. Deaver's empty trappings of power Friday at an office sale held to defray more than $1 million in legal costs left from a court battle that resulted in his perjury conviction.

"Not your typical garage sale, huh?" said a smiling saleswoman as $100,000 worth of Deaver's office furnishings were put on the block at the abandoned headquarters of his high-priced lobbying firm in this Washington suburb.

In the first hour of the three-day sale, business executives and curiosity-seekers snapped up about $25,000 worth of items, from a $15 set of highball glasses to a hand-painted Chinese screen with a $3,500 pricetag.

Unsold during the early hours was the biggest ticket item at the sale, a handmade, 19th-century English partner's desk that Deaver bought on one of his overseas business trips. Price: $20,000. Other antiques included two framed, original Audubon prints selling for $2,750 each.

There were several file drawers full of pencils, paper clips, scissors, erasers and memo pads, going for $15 apiece, a couple of $6 plastic trash baskets and an $85 automatic check-writing machine with a counter indicating that Deaver had written 14,662 checks before he stopped.

The only hint of Deaver's once-powerful Washington lobbying contacts was a coffee mug embossed with a gold seal of the U.S. Senate. It rested forlornly unclaimed for a souvenir hunter willing to part with $4.

Deaver was convicted Dec. 16 in U.S. District Court in Washington on three couns of lying to a federal grand jury and a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee that were investigating allegations of possible ethics law violations.

Deaver, a longtime confidant and adviser to President Reagan, quit as White House deputy chief of staff in May 1985 to form his own lobbying firm. He billed more than $3 million in client fees during seven months of contacting senior Reagan administration officials on behalf of the South Korean government and such corporate giants as the Boeing Co. and Trans World Airlines.

With Deaver's sentencing scheduled for Feb. 25, his lawyers planned to file motions in federal court Friday for a new trial. If his conviction stands, Deaver faces a possible prison term of 15 years and fines of $22,000.

Deaver, who remains free on his personal recognizance, could not be reached by telephone Friday. His friends and former associates said Deaver needs help paying legal expenses that are expected to exceed $1 million.

Deaver moved his lobbying firm from the fashionable Georgetown section of Washington last April to a block of new brick rowhouse offices in a marginal Alexandria neighborhood which he shared with a couple of lawyers, a dentist and the headquarters of the International Bottled Water Association.

The sale in Deaver's former rowhouse office was supervised by William G. Hodges, a local estate sales executive and antique dealer who had sold Deaver some of his more expensive office furnishings before Deaver gave up lobbying.

"I don't think he's embarrassed" by the sale, Hodges said, "and I think there are enough of his clients and personal friends around to make this sale a success."

Hodges said he is charging Deaver "less than the usual commission" for such sales.

He said the former White House aide had bought a "tasteful mix" of antiques and reproductions for his business, some of them during business trips to Britain and China.

"He was not trying to set up a museum but a very attractive office," Hodges said.

Firewood's not same unless it's gotten the hard way

By BOB LOTT

WACO — It was beginning to sleet as I ventured forth for milk and bread. My wife had said only yesterday, as she had said repeatedly in recent days, that we ought to get a stack of firewood delivered.

I hate the thought of paying for firewood. It's an admission of my laziness or lack of pioneer spirit.

Paying, though, is about the only way we ever get it these days, and I have been known to put off the transaction too long. Our woodpile is down to a rotting stick or two.

Sometime just that evening, my wife had said, "We need to build a fire." Here it was January already, and we still weren't using the fireplace. Aging ashes filled the thing and gave the cat something over which to crawl.

As I approached the convenience store, I saw the bundles of firewood there. Only a few years ago, I'd have thought it odd to see firewood at the quick-stop, waiting for you to take it home along with milk and bread, and perhaps, a squeeze bottle of nose spray or a rental movie.

Now firewood's so common at the quick-stop that it blends into the scenery as easily as the rental movies.

I got out of the car to examine the wood. The bundles were inviting: two long stacks that almost covered the sidewalk in front of the store. Neatly strapped together, each bundle contained five or so sticks of wood. Just about right for the average armload. Split and cured, the wood appeared to be red oak — even smelled of red oak, a better quality to burn than the loads of wood mixed with mesquite and cedar you can expect to have home-delivered.

No, I told myself. I would never purchase quick-stop firewood.

It just wouldn't seem right. A person ought to cut and split his own wood. If he does buy wood, he should buy it a cord or a rick at a time, mesquite, cedar and all, and at least have a respectable-looking woodpile.

And yet, I figured, wouldn't it be a nice thing if I brought home the milk and bread and an armful of wood? Not only could we eat this wintry evening, we could bask in the glow of a fire.

My wife would see further evidence that I'm not so set in my ways, that I'm indeed a modern man who can thrive in a world of microwave cooking, videocassette movies and quick-stop firewood.

I wrestled with these thoughts as I rounded up milk and bread. Maybe I should surprise my wife and get a bundle. The temptation grew, if the principle against it remained.

"How much for the firewood?" I asked the clerk as she totaled up the bill for the milk and bread.

She paused at the register and looked toward the front of the store. "Three forty-nine," she said. "Want some?"

"Believe not," I said, my tone implying that I saw that price as outrageous for five sticks of firewood.

But that wasn't the truth about what I was thinking. Comparatively speaking, $3.49 for an evening's fire isn't so bad. You can pay that much to rent a movie. I had used price as only a pretext to ward off temptation.

Our household is among the fortunate, the relative few when measured against global needs. We have central heat, an agreeable device that provides warmth independent of mesquite, cedar and ashes. The fireplace is a luxury, a symbol of middle-class status that redeems itself only when it produces a crackling therapy against the day's stresses.

I used to gather my own firewood, years ago when the family had arrived at that level in the social climb where fireplaces came with houses already warmed by central heat. To an extent, my pioneer spirit took the edge off the contradiction I saw in this signpost of a wastrel society. If I had to work hard to keep the fireplace going, don't you see, that justified it.

I wielded an ax, a chainsaw, a sledge hammer and two splitting wedges. I talked landowners out of fallen oaks and sometimes, even, persuaded growing sons to help make wood-gathering a family affair.

Today, the chainsaw probably wouldn't crank, and I probably couldn't find the energy. It's been a decade since we've burned much of anything but bought wood. But none of it ever comes from the quick-stop. Not so far.

I hate the thought of paying for firewood. It's an admission of my laziness or lack of pioneer spirit.

Then there were 2 Amigos after injury to Johnson

By BARRY WILNER

DENVER (AP) — The Broncos' Three Amigos may be down to two Sunday when Denver seeks its second straight Super Bowl berth against Cleveland and the Browns' Corner Brothers.

A groin injury suffered last Sunday has hospitalized Vance Johnson, the big brother among the Amigos.

"The doctors don't feel he'll be able to play," Coach Dan Reeves said Friday of Johnson, the Broncos' leading receiver this season.

Johnson was hurt on a late hit by Houston linebacker John Grimsley, who drove his helmet into the fallen Johnson. After practice Wednesday, Johnson seemed to be recovering. But he didn't work Thursday and then numbness in the right leg forced his hospitalization that night. He was diagnosed as having internal bleeding.

"If he hemorrhages again, he'll probably need surgery," Reeves said.

Johnson, who had 42 receptions for a 16.3-yard average and seven touchdowns, has been one of three big-play receivers for Denver. Dubbed the Three Amigos by John Elway, Johnson, Mark Jackson (26 catches, 16.8 average, two touchdowns) and rookie Ricky Nattiel (31, 20.3, 2) have the speed and moves to dominate secondaries.

Cleveland's Dawg Defense, however, has the NFL's best set of cornerbacks in Hanford Dixon and Frank Minnifield. They, too, have a nickname — Corner Brothers.

"I call them the All-Pros," Jackson said. "They're two of the best, they challenge you every step. They like to bump you and they're strong enough to knock you out of a play."

Dixon, in a sarcastic mood, said he "went on a diet this week to keep up with those guys. I think we're in trouble. We're just cornerbacks. They know where they're going and we don't."

In a more serious vein, Dixon added, "Honestly, I give credit when it is due and you have to give it to them. They're playing as well as any receivers in the league."

With Johnson not likely to play Sunday, Jackson and Nattiel must carry on the Three Amigos tradition. Unlike the film trio, the football amigos don't bumble their way through their duties.

"Although he's a big part of our offense, I don't think it will make too much of a difference," Jackson said. "We're deep at receiver. The way I see it, if somebody else was running in Vance's shoes, he'd make the big play."

Actually, Jackson figures to become Elway's chief target this week. Jackson played well in last year's AFC title game, catching the tying touchdown with 39 seconds to go in regulation time.

Nattiel is the other Amigo. He, Johnson and Jackson appear on posters and will be the object of a heavy marketing push after the Super Bowl.

Faldo birdie spree falls shy of mark

GORDON S. WHITE
N.Y. Times News Service

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Nick Faldo of England, winner of last year's British Open, posted seven consecutive birdies Friday to fall just one short of the American PGA Tour record of eight birdies in a row.

The spectacular string that began when he sank a 12-foot putt from the fringe of the seventh green at La-Costa Country Club enabled Faldo, who had no bogeys Friday, to score a seven-under-par 65. That gave the 30-year-old golfer a total of nine-under-par 135 for two rounds of the MONY Tournament of Champions.

Faldo was three strokes off the lead and tied for third place with Larry Nelson midway through this first event on the 1988 PGA Tour.

Steve Pate maintained the lead he gained in the first round Thursday when he shot his second 66 for 132. Pate has not had a bogey in the first 36 holes.

Not only did Faldo open his birdie run with a good putt from the fringe, but he made the second birdie by chipping in a 30-foot shot with an 8-iron. His approach to the eighth green had come up about five feet short of the green.

From then on, the birdies came rather easily with a 15-foot putt on the ninth hole and no birdie putt longer than 10 feet for the next four holes.

"I tried to keep on the same plane," Faldo said. "Just don't get excited. Those two first birdies gave me a lift, so all of a sudden I was in there with a chance for the lead."

The PGA Tour record of eight consecutive birdies was set by Bob Goalby in the final round of the 1961 U.S. Open in St. Petersburg, Fla. Fuzzy Zoeller had eight birdies in a row in the first round of the 1976 Quad Cities Tournament, and last July 23, Dewey Arnette had eight consecutive birds in the first round of the Buick Open.

The birdies ended for Faldo on Friday when a 3-iron shot at the par-3 14th hole bounced nearly 30 feet in back of and above the pin. This left him a fast downhill putt that trickled by the right side of the cup. He sank the three-footer to save par.

The PGA European Tour record is also eight consecutive birds — Ian Woosnam in the final round of the Benson & Hedges event in 1985 and Seve Ballesteros in the first round of the 1985 Italian Open.

Midland High's Kyle Lusby is on his way to the basket past an unidentified Abilene defender Friday in District 4-5A action. The Bulldogs took it on the chin, 66-51.

Abilene rips 'Dogs, 66-51

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

For once, Gerald Coppedge didn't need to press. Midland High did enough for both teams.

And though he didn't use his press for the first time in 20 years, Coppedge and the Abilene High Eagles still managed a runaway 66-51 victory over the Bulldogs Friday night at Chaparral Center.

Coppedge, the longtime AHS coach, said he has used his press in every game since he was a graduate assistant at Texas Tech. But against the press-conscious Bulldogs, he pulled back into a half-court defensive scheme while MHS applied the pressure.

But all that did was play into the quicker, taller Eagles' hands.

"Not pressing might have caught them by surprise a little bit," Coppedge said. "We've been giving up a lot of easy baskets off our press. We've had to outscore people to win. Tonight we made up our minds to hold people down and play a half-court defense."

The Eagles did hold MHS down, and the hawking half-court pressure disturbed the Bulldogs enough that they only shot a meager 31 percent (16-of-51) from the floor on the night. The Eagles shot an even 50 percent (30-of-60).

"It was my fault for going to the press in the first place," said MHS Coach Jack Stephenson. "We didn't get anything out of it and they got some easy ones. But we just didn't shoot well, I think we were intimidated by their size inside."

THE EAGLES were imposing inside with 6-7 Cory Lockridge and 6-8 Doug Brown plugging away down low, but the quickness of the forwards and guards was the ultimate killer for the Bulldogs, 2-2, 11-12 overall.

MHS applied the pressure after each made basket, but each time, the Eagles were quicker down the floor, filling the cylinder with short jumpers and uncontested lay-ups.

It was the kind of tempo the Eagles have grown accustomed to and everybody was getting in on the fun except the Bulldogs.

"We can run it up and down the floor if people will let us," Coppedge said.

And off missed baskets and by quickly breaking the 'Dogs press, the Eagles were clearly flying from the opening tip. AHS took control in the first eight minutes as Greg Denman took the lead on the break with six quick points.

TONY MOORE canned the Eagles only three-pointer until late in the fourth quarter then followed up with another basket on an offensive rebound and it was 17-9.

By halftime, AHS had jumped to a 14-point edge, 37-23, as the 'Dogs just couldn't get untracked offensively, and defensively couldn't handle the varied Eagle attack.

"Abilene High has some great players, no mistake about that, but we didn't play well tonight either," said Stephenson. "We executed all right, the thing just wouldn't go in for us and their size really seemed to bother us."

Six-foot-eight senior Doug Brown led the Eagles with 13 points and only Cornell McGee joined him in double figures with 12. But Abilene is finally starting to show the promise that has led coaches and observers to pick them as district favorites the last two seasons. They are now alone in second at 2-1, 13-6 overall.

"I don't think the rest of the district coaches like me, always picking us to win," Coppedge said. "Last year we had the size, but we didn't have the guards to bring it up the floor. There's no way we should've been picked to win last year.

"This year we're a legitimate pick to contend. But San Angelo and Odessa High are very tough, and Midland High and Odessa Permian can beat anyone on a given night."

"They've got the talent to win state, they might not even get out of this district, but people have won the state tournament with less talent," Stephenson said.

The Bulldogs are now off until Jan. 22, and on the heels of consecutive losses, Stephenson is glad for the brief respite.

"After two consecutive losses where we didn't play up to our capabilities, I'm glad we've got our open date," Stephenson said. "We're going to take a day off, concentrate on final exams and then get back to working on Odessa High for next Friday."

Mayfield's 39 paces Big Spring

By PETE HERNDON
MRT Correspondent

ANDREWS — After dropping a pair of early district basketball games to Snyder and Lamesa, the Big Spring Steers limped into Andrews Friday night facing virtual elimination in the District 2-4A race with a loss to the defending champions.

The Steers fate seemed all but sealed early in the game when 6-foot-6 post man Brian Mayfield drew three quick fouls and sat down while Andrews guard Gym Bice knifed through the Big Spring defense enroute to a 10-point first period.

Trailing 17-14 after the opening stanza, Steer Coach Boyce Paxton took a risk in re-inserting Mayfield and adding reserve Fred Reid.

Mayfield responded by staying clean on his shots, as well as his fouls, to pump in 39 points as the Steers stunned the Mustangs 77-71.

"He hung in there and played for us all the way," Paxton said after the game. "This is his fourth really big scoring night in district. I thought the kid that really gave us the lift, though, was Reid. He has had an up-and-down season, but he really came in and did a good job for us with the things he did tonight. He made his shots and got some key rebounds for us."

Reid's role in the support of Mayfield included 13 points and 11 rebounds as the Steers took advantage of a poor shooting performance by Andrews and Reid's leaping ability to blow the game open in the second period.

Andrews sank only one field goal in the period in 12 attempts at the bucket and the Steers weren't allowing any second opportunities, collecting 18 boards in the stanza to the Mustangs six.

"That about sums it up," Andrews coach Frank Bice said in the locker room afterward. "We had a real, real poor shooting performance altogether, especially in the second quarter."

While nothing went in for Andrews, seemingly nothing missed for Mayfield. He dominated the period with six baskets and a 4-4 effort from the charity stripe.

WHEN THE smoke cleared, a stunned Andrews crowd watched its team leave the floor trailing 37-24 at intermission. The cushion proved to be enough to allow the red-hot Steers to eventually waltz out of the gym still in the district race.

"This is the biggest win we've had in district so far," Paxton said of the victory which moves his team into a tie for third in the district race with the Mustangs at 5-2. "We should have won the first two that we lost, and now we have to play with our backs against the wall. I'm really proud of our effort tonight.

"It's a funny thing about this team, they seem to get up and play great in the big games and fall flat in the games that aren't. We're still trying to get our intensity up. It's not where we want it, but it's getting there."

Dorsett's departure unmourned?

Battles

Tony Dorsett's days with the Dallas Cowboys are numbered, providing Tex Schramm can find someone to assume his contract.

Perhaps there is someone around capable of tackling the national debt, or Tony's contract, but when you list the teams for which you are willing to play, as Tony has, it won't be that easy.

The prospect of the outspoken Dorsett moving on to ah, er greener pastures will make the fans who booed him during and after the strike happy.

We'll miss him. I've grown attached to Tony and his alleged faults. Well, maybe not attached to the faults, but at least I think I maybe understand them and make allowances.

As one who has watched as a heralded Heisman Trophy winner out of Pitt broke in with the Cowboys, he's like an old friend.

DESPITE all that talent, Tony never had it easy with the Cowboys and he didn't help matters by his actions or his words.

For one thing, Dorsett came to the Cowboys as the guaranteed ticket to the Super Bowl. All that the Cowboys were missing was a game-breaking running back and now, with Dorsett on the scene, they had him.

Well, it didn't quite work out that way. Coach Tom Landry has never been one to rush rookies. One of the rare exceptions was Calvin Hill, the classy back from Yale who made such an impression in the exhibition season that even Landry was convinced he was ready.

Despite his credentials, Dorsett didn't win a starting role until the 10th game of that 1977 season. Until then he had been sharing duty with Preston Pearson, the all-purpose back that Dallas picked up during a rummage sale in Pittsburgh.

Pearson was supposed to be a has-been when the Cowboys' acquired him, but he turned out to be an invaluable acquisition, a guy who always seemed to get the job done one way or another as those final few grains of sand slipped away.

SO CONTROVERSY began early. Dorsett wanted to play more. And then there were the off-field problems and finally, years later, the trouble with the IRS. None enhanced Dorsett's popularity with fans or management.

But Tony's worst fault was his inclination to pop off with the first thing that came to mind. It's something a lot of us do without really meaning what we say, but we don't call press conferences to make ourselves look foolish or have reporters lingering in the wings to record every word.

ANDREWS

INTENSITY WAS no problem for the Steers in the third period.

Behind a pair of baskets by Tyrone Foster and a Reid fast-break layup, the Steers quickly increased their lead to 43-26 and held the Mustangs at bay through the quarter.

Reid paced the charge with seven points in the stanza and a last-second hoop by Mayfield provided Big Spring with a 57-39 margin going into the final period.

The last chapter featured a pair of solo performances as the main attraction.

Bice got back on track for Andrews to produce 17 points during the eight-minute span enroute to a 34-point finish. But Mayfield kept the Ponies from making much headway until the final two minutes with 16 of his own.

The Mustangs, behind a flourish from Bice in the last 1:51, scored the last nine points before the buzzer to keep the score respectable.

"He didn't have his normal game shooting-wise," the Andrews coach said of his son's 12-30 from the field, although eight of the miscues came from three-point range with the Mustangs trailing. "But he played a Gym Bice ballgame in the fact that when the final seconds ticked off, he was still hustling.

"I was real proud of our kids the way they hung in there in the second half."

Andrews, now 16-6 overall, will host league-unbeaten Lamesa Tuesday night in the first-half finale while 15-8 Big Spring travels to Sweetwater.

Mack ready for Sunday

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Fullback Kevin Mack says he's fully recovered from the stomach virus that sent him to the locker room for most of the Cleveland Browns' 38-21 divisional playoff victory over Indianapolis last Saturday.

Mack rushed six times for 38 yards against the Colts before heading for the training room. He said he'd thought the uneasiness in his stomach before the game was just a case of pre-game nervousness, but it got worse as the game progressed.

Now that playoffs are over

MURRAY

Well, that amalgamated convention of annual party-poopers, the NFL playoffs has actually come and gone and left us with our standard quota of who-in-the-world-invited-thems. For instance:

— We still get John Elway and Karl Mecklenburg.

— We lose Walter Payton, Richard Dent, Jim McMahon and Mike Ditka.

— We lose Joe Montana, Jerry Rice and Bill Walsh.

— We lose Eric Dickerson, the floating football player from the floating franchise.

— We keep Bernie Kosar and the underhanded breaking-balls he keeps getting secondaries to go for and miss.

— We get the ever-popular Dave Butz, Joe Jacoby, Neal Olkewicz, and a quarterback to be named later, but I think Len Hauss and Chris Hanburger are gone.

— We get the Minnesota Vikings, whoever they are and in the unlikely event anyone wants them, but it does give us Anthony Carter, although Fran Tarkenton and the Purple People Eaters are long gone.

— We lose Ground Chuck Knox and his cast of dirt-eaters but Chuck never comes to these things or, if he does, stays long.

SO, THE Chicago Bears send their regrets, we're not going to get Jim McMahon to kick around — or vice versa — any more. The 49ers and Bill Walsh have another engagement, probably the opera. The New Orleans Saints? Newcomers to the neighborhood. No loss. Nobody knows them anyway.

What this could leave, of course, is a lunch-pail, hard hat, nosebleed-and-black-eye Super Bowl — Cleveland vs. Minnesota. Or even, Cleveland vs. Washington. You won't need San Diego and Mission Bay for that one. Central Park will do. June in January is not necessary. These teams could play on an ice floe. Ernie The Rock Durando vs. The Fighting Brakeman. Or the Meriden Buzzsaw.

But you still have a chance to return the game to its traditional boxer-vs.-puncher format. John Elway and those lightweight left-jab artists from Denver could still save us from a parking-lot fight Super Bowl.

In fact, if I were the rest of the league, or the teams still in the tournament, I might root for young Master Elway to get knocked out of the competition early.

THE FINESSE teams don't usually win Super Bowl finals. The arm-breakers usually do. The Steel Curtains, the Doomsday Defenses, the Gold Rushers.

The golden arms, the one-man teams have a great deal of trouble with these arm-twisters. The New York Giants of 1986-87, guys who played the game like Mafia loan-collectors, had no real trouble with Elway in Super XXI, even sacking him once for a safety in a 39-20 rout.

The trouble with Elway, though, is not only his utter indiscouragability, to coin a word, it's the fact that he doesn't seem to understand the situation.

Elway is more than a fighter-who-gets-up. Elway gets up laughing. Even when he gets sacked in the end zone.

Elway has this maddening habit of looking as if he's having the time of his life. I don't know whether it's a breathing disorder, a malfunction of the sinuses, but Elway manages to look as though he's having trouble not laughing at you.

IT'S UNNERVING. It doesn't matter whether he's just thrown a 65-yard touchdown pass or a goal line interception, Elway seems to grin.

Check the average NFL quarterback who comes to the sidelines after a monumental screw-up, a turnover, a pass a schoolyard quarterback wouldn't throw. Most of them come back to the bench and try to hide down the end or pretend to get on the phone to see if they can find someone to blame.

Not Elway. Elway comes back as if he expected somebody to give him a lollipop. He thrusts his helmet back on his head, his teeth are showing, he's smiling. He looks amused, for cryin' out loud. As if what the leave-blank-name-of-opponents did to him were cute. Like a puppy talking.

Elway's attitude seems to be "Son of a gun, how'd he ever get to that ball?"

In short, Elway seems to think the game's fun. Guys like that are hard to beat. The pitcher, Tom Seaver, was once asked if he didn't regret finding himself on the hill in the late innings of a tight game with the bases loaded and the cleanup hitter at bat with one out. Seaver looked at the questioner as if he hadn't heard him right. "Where would you rather be?" he demanded. "Watching it?! What would you rather be — bored?"

A LOT OF people were surprised at Sunday's playoff game in Denver. The game was well out of hand, Denver had it won in the fourth quarter, 27-3. On any other team, it was time for the backup quarterback, time to mothball a star.

John Elway was still in there. He looked as if he were trying his best not to laugh as he chivvied defenders into one false move after another with head fakes, pump fakes, rollouts, dropbacks. He looked like a kid on a merry-go-round instead of a guy trying to put his team in a Super Bowl.

Some day, a John Elway may get up slowly, may take the field biting his lip, may kick a water cooler, or avoid the coach's eyes after a bad throw. But, until he does, we may get a Super Bowl that's a matador vs. the bull, Tunney vs. Dempsey, Frank Merriwell vs. the bullies, Bugs Bunny against the world. We may get Bugs Elway out there chomping on a carrot and saying "Ah, what's up, Doc?" to some 300-pound tackle who just hit him too late to stop a 40-yard touchdown throw.

You have to wonder if maybe David was laughing to himself as he put stones in this slingshot and looked over at poor Goliath getting ready for his pass rush. There's a scene in the movie, "The Virginian," where the good guy says to the bad guy "If you want to call me that, mister, smile!" Well, Elway already is smiling.

Yankees could quit Pompano

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A deal to keep the New York Yankees' spring training camp in Broward County could collapse if Pompano Beach officials don't resolve problems surrounding a proposed training complex.

The deal to keep the Yankees in their long-time spring home in Fort Lauderdale hinges on a planned $1 million, four-field training complex for the club's minor league teams near Pompano Beach's municipal air park. The teams would move to the 30-acre complex from a smaller, older group of fields in Hollywood.

Two obstacles have arisen in recent weeks.

First, Pompano Beach commissioners learned that the clubhousethe Yankees required is much more lavish than the one city staff had envisioned. Pompano Beach isn't willing to finance the grander plans. Neither is Fort Lauderdale.

Then the Federal Aviation Administration — which must approve any projects to be built on air park land — threw a curve when it wanted to know the fair market value of the land.

FOOTBALL FACTS

DUELING BACKS

If you were one of the diehards who watched the game between St. Louis and Philadelphia at the end of the 1985 season, you witnessed the top rushing duel in the National Football League since 1970. Stump Mitchell of the Cardinals gained 179 yards and Earnest Jackson, then with the Eagles, gained 162.

The Mitchell-Jackson duel is one of four since '70 in which backs on opposing teams have rushed for more than 150 yards apiece. The duels are ranked in the accompanying chart according to the second-best rushing total in the game, not the combined rushing yardage of the two backs. A duel is only as good as its loser.

TOP RUSHING DUELS SINCE 1970

| Year | Running Back, Team | Yds. | Running Back, Team | Yds. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1985 | Stump Mitchell, St. Louis | 179 | Earnest Jackson, Philadelphia | 162 |
| 1979 | William Andrews, Atlanta | 167 | Chuck Muncie, New Orleans | 161 |
| 1978 | Greg Pruitt, Cleveland | 182 | Pete Johnson, Cleveland | 160 |

Cardinals' Chronology

A chronology of the Cardinal football franchise which is being moved to Phoenix for the 1988-89 season, pending league approval:

1920—The Chicago Cardinals are one of 11 charter members of the American Professional Football League, the forerunner of the National Football League.

1925—The Cardinals, coached by Norman Barry, win their first NFL championship.

1929—The Cardinals are purchased by Dr. David Jones, a Chicago dentist. Player-coach Ernie Nevers scores an NFL-record 40 points on six touchdowns and four extra-points against the Chicago Bears ThanksgivingDay to lead the Cardinals to a 40-6 victory.

1932—Charles W. Bidwell, Sr. purchases the club for $50,000.

1947—Led by the "Dream Backfield" of Paul Christman, Marshall Goldberg, Pat Hardy and Charley Trippi, the Cardinals win their second and last NFL title, defeating the Philadelphia Eagles 28-21. But Bidwell never lived to see it, having died of a heart attack in April. His widow, Violet, assumed control of the franchise.

1948—In a rematch of the 1947 championship game, the Cardinals play in a blizzard at Shibe Park in Philadelphia and are defeated 7-0 by the Eagles.

1959—The Cardinals trade star running back Ollie Matson to the Los Angeles Rams in exchange for Ken Panfil, Frank Fuller and, Art Hauser, offensive tackles; Glenn Holtzman and John Trasey, wide receivers; Larry Hickman, fullback; Don Brown, halfback, and two draft choices.

1960—The Cardinals move to St. Louis after finishing 2-9-1 the previous season.

1962—Violet Bidwell dies, leaving control of the franchise to her sons, Charles Jr. and William.

1972—William Bidwell becomes sole owner.

1974—In his second year as head coach, Don Coryell leads the team to a 10-4 record and its first playoff appearance since 1948. The Cardinals are eliminated in the first round of the playoffs by the Minnesota Vikings, 30-14.

1975—The Cardinals win nine of their last 10 games and make the playoffs for the second consecutive season. But in the opening round, the Cardinals fall behind the Los Angeles Rams 28-9 in the first half and are defeated 35-23.

1982—In a strike-shortened season, the Cardinals finish 5-4 and qualify for the playoffs as a wild card team. They are defeated 41-16 by the Green Bay Packers in the first round.

1988—Bidwell, who had complained the 54,392-seating capacity of Busch Stadium was too small, announces he is moving the franchise to Phoenix. He also cites the warmer Arizona climate as a reason for the switch.

Redskins' Green expected to start

By DAVID GINSBURG

HERNDON, Va. (AP) — Darrell Green practiced with the Washington Redskins defense Friday, and backfield coach Richie Petitbon expressed confidence that the injured cornerback would start in Sunday's NFC title game against Minnesota.

Green suffered pulled cartilage in his ribs in Washington's 21-17 victory over Chicago last Sunday. He had been working out on his own until Friday, when he ran at full speed for much of the session with the first-team defense.

"I thought he looked very good," Petitbon said. "And he's got two days to go, so I think he'll be fine.

"Darrell's going to play. There's no doubt in my mind," Petitbon said. "And I would think that he would probably (start)."

Green's injury has been described by Washington Coach Joe Gibbs as a "pain thing." There is no structural damage, but it is impossible to measure the amount of pain Green experiences every time he runs.

Asked if he thought Green would take a pain-killer Sunday, Petitbon said, "We want to get him as close to 100 percent as possible. I don't see that as being a big deal."

Green, who would not comment on his condition Friday, had said earlier this week he would not use a pain-killer.

The Redskins are counting on Green to help neutralize Minnesota wide receiver Anthony Carter, who riddled San Francisco last week for a playoff-record 227 receiving yards.

Petitbon said Green, a Pro Bowl selection for the third time in five years, likely would cover the speedy Carter "from time to time."

Gibbs liked what he saw of Green Friday.

"Darrell felt better," Gibbs said. "He ran 12 plays, and that was good news. The final decision won't be made until warmups Sunday, but I think he's improved each day."

If Green can't go, then rookie Brian Davis would start.

Meanwhile, defensive end Markus Koch missed practice for the third straight day with a viral infection. Gibbs said Koch showed up, but was sent home.

Vance Johnson

JOHNSON QUESTIONABLE— Vance Johnson, the Denver Broncos' leading receiver, was hospitalized for treatment of a groin injury. He was taken to St. Luke's Hospital Thursday suffering from internal bleeding in his right groin area and was expected to remain hospitalized a couple of days. His status for Sunday's AFC championship game against Cleveland was downgraded to doubtful. Johnson suffered the injury when he was speared by a Houston linebacker after catching a 31-yard pass in last week's 34-10 playoff victory.

BERENGUER SIGNS— Juan Berenguer signed a one-year $500,000 contract with Minnesota. Minnesota signed the portly right-hander as a free agent for $152,500 last year. After playing a key role in getting the Twins to the World Series, Berenguer threatened to play in Japan this season if his demands for $800,000 were not met.

VITALE SORRY— ESPN commentator Dick Vitale apologized to Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson after saying on national TV the coach was paying for a player's speech therapy. Vitale said he was trying to make a positive statement about Sanderson and didn't realize the remark would constitute a violation of NCAA rules.

BOXER ARRESTED— Family members expressed shock at the arrest of welterweight fighter Tommy Ayers, 24, of Cincinnati on charges he used and sold drugs.

DORSETT ON SOAP — Dallas Cowboys RB Tony Dorsett, who miss watching him on TV during the off-season, can see him in a 10-second appearance taped Wednesday on the CBS program "The Young and The Restless" air Feb. 2. Dorsett is seen at the opening of a scene at a singles bar, looking into an aquarium with a woman. Then the camera follows him across the room until he sits at a bar, Alston said.

Greek stirs up hornet's nest

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Sports commentator Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder said Friday that if blacks "take over coaching jobs like everybody wants them to, there's not going to be anything left for the white people."

In an interview with WRC-TV in Washington, Snyder also said a black athlete is better than a white because "he's been bred to be that way because of his thigh size and big size."

Snyder was interviewed at Duke Zeibert's, a popular Washington restaurant. WRC reporter Ed Hotaling went there on Martin Luther King's birthday to ask people about the progress blacks have made in society.

Parts of the Snyder interview were telecast Friday night on the "CBS Evening News." CBS anchor Dan Rather said WRC, an NBC owned and operated station, was flooded with complaints after it broadcast Snyder's remarks.

Rather then read an apology from Snyder:

"I'm truly sorry for my remarks earlier today and I offer a full, heartfelt apology to all I may have offended," Snyder said.

Snyder, known for his predictions on sporting events, has worked on CBS' "NFL Today" show for 12 years. He was in Washington for the NFC Championship game between Minnesota and the Redskins.

CBS spokeswoman Susan Kerr said no decision had been made as to whether Snyder will work Sunday's broadcast.

In the WRC interview, Snyder said blacks have been bred to be better athletes since the Civil War, when "the slave owner would breed his big black with his big woman so that he would have a big black kid. That's where it all started."

Snyder, 70, also said that if blacks "take over coaching jobs like everybody wants them to, there's not going to be anything left for the white people. I mean all the players are blacks. The only thing that the whites control is the coaching jobs."

"Now I'm not being derogatory about it, but that's all that's left for them," Snyder continued. "Black talent is beautiful, it's great, it's out there. The only thing left for the whites is a couple of coaching jobs."

The push for more black coaches and managers gained momentum last April after Los Angeles Dodgers executive Al Campanis said on national television that blacks lacked the "necessities" to manage in the major leagues. The remarks created a furor and Campanis resigned.

Snyder said one of the reasons blacks are better athletes is that whites are lazy.

"There's 10 players on a basketball court. If you find two whites you're lucky. Four out of five or nine out of 10 are black. Now that's because they practice and they play and practice and play. They're not lazy like the white athlete is."

70 major leaguers file for arbitration

NEW YORK (AP) — Seventy players filed for salary arbitration Friday while 11 others, including World Series MVP Frank Viola, reached agreements on new contracts.

Facing a midnight deadline, a total of 78 players had filed for arbitration by late afternoon while 34 others still had not made their intentions known.

Viola, who was 17-10 last season and 2-1 in the World Series, including a win in Game 7, agreed to a two-year $2.9 million contract.

He will earn $1.35 million this season and $1.55 million in 1989 and can earn an additional $450,000 each season in performace bonuses and $100,000 more each year in award bonuses.

Viola made $880,000 last season in a one-year contract after earning $525,000 in 1986 as a loser in arbitration.

Ten players agreed to one-year contracts Friday, including six pitchers. The pitchers agreeing were Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd of Boston, Ken Dayley of the St. Louis Cardinals ($610,000), Ted Power of the Kansas City Royals ($575,000), Andy McGaffigan of the Montreal Expos ($500,000), Andy Hawkins of the San Diego Padres ($453,000), Gene Nelson of the Oakland Athletics ($450,000), and Ken Schrom of the Cleveland Indians ($380,000).

Others agreeing were outfielder Gary Pettis of the Detroit Tigers ($400,000); catcher Mike Fitzgerald of the Montreal Expos ($335,000); and infielder Jackie Gutierrez of the Baltimore Orioles ($125,000).

Several of the players can earn additonal money in incentive bonuses.

Most of the players who filed for arbitration probably will reach agreements before their hearings are held in the first three weeks of February. Last year, 109 players filed and 83 settled before their hearings.

"This is for the player's protection," New York Mets vice president Al Harazin said. "We will continue the negotiation process."

"I expect everyone to file and we will exchange numbers next week," Cincinnati general manager Murray Cook said.

Players and owners have until Tuesday to submit their proposed salaries. The arbitrator must choose one number or the other and cannot compromise.

Among the players filing Friday were Dwight Gooden and Howard Johnson of the New York Mets; Greg Gagne, Kirby Puckett and Dan Gladden of Minnesota; Vince Coleman of St. Louis; Julio Franco of Cleveland; Ted Higuera and Rob Deer of Milwaukee and Mark Langston of Seattle.

Prominent players who had not made their intentions known included American League MVP George Bell of Toronto; Bret Saberhagen of Kansas City; Willie McGee of St. Louis; Lance Parrish of Philadelphia; Joe Carter of Cleveland and Kevin Bass of Houston.

In addition to those filing, five free agents last month agreed to go through the arbitration process with their old clubs.

Celtics down Kings, 122-86

Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics used the scoring of Kevin McHale and Larry Bird and a 14-0 spurt to take a 34-11 lead after one quarter, and rolled to a 122-86 NBA victory over the Sacramento Kings Friday night.

The Kings never were in the game after the midpoint of the opening period. The closest they came in the last three quarters was 63-44 with 10:03 left in the third quarter.

McHale had 14 of his 24 points and Bird had 13 of his 27 in the first period. Sacramento hit three of 19 shots, while Boston made 15 of 22 in the quarter.

The loss marred former Celtics center Bill Russell's first game at Boston Garden as Sacramento's coach.

The Kings, who are 1-14 on the road, were led by Kenny Smith with 16 points. Danny Ainge, who had 29 points, had five 3-pointers and extended his NBA record to 18 straight games with at least one.

76ers 119, Knicks 104

PHILADELPHIA — Charles Barkley scored 35 points and Cliff Robinson had 19 of his 20 points as the Philadelphia 76ers outscored the New York Knicks 69-46 in the second half for a 119-104 victory.

The win was the Sixers' sixth in their last seven games, while the Knicks have lost 15 of 16 road games this season, including 10 in a row.

Philadelphia took its first lead of the game, 64-63, on a 3-point shot by Barkley with 8:42 left in the third quarter. With the score tied 71-71, Barkley scored six points in a 12-2 Philadelphia spurt for an 83-73 lead at the end of the third period.

The 76ers led by as many as 20 points in the fourth quarter.

Patrick Ewing and Gerald Wilkins each scored 20 points to lead the Knicks.

Pistons 97, Cavaliers 93

PONTIAC, Mich. — Adrian Dantley scored 14 of his 38 points in the fourth quarter and the Detroit Pistons rallied from a 12-point deficit for a 97-93 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Cleveland took its biggest lead, 79-67, on a three-point play by Mark West with 40 seconds left in the third quarter.

But Dantley's three-point play later highlighted a 12-0 run as the Pistons took an 83-81 lead with 6:30 left in the game. Dantley scored six points in the final 3:38, including a running hook shot to give Detroit a 95-91 lead with a minute to go.

Cleveland was led by Brad Daugherty's 20 points and 10 rebounds.

TONY

Yet, over the years, Dorsett was a steady contributor to the Cowboys' success, if sometimes disgruntled because he didn't get to carry the ball as often as an Earl Campbell and rack up those really big yardage games.

Eventually, he came to appreciate, somewhat, Landry's judicious use of his talents. He was still playing when Campbell had hung 'em up.

AS IT turned out, Dorsett's insertion into the lineup as a starter was one the move that led Dallas to the Super Bowl that first season.

In what appears to have been Dorsett's last season with Dallas, he is departing in disfavor with Herschel Walker replacing him in the fans' favor. In contrast, Walter Payton's final season has been a triumphant tour of fond farewells.

That first year, however, Dorsett was the media's favorite. You had to wait until the third or fourth wave of reporters to gain an audience.

Driving back to the airport with Chicago writer Bob Marcus, a reporter remarked on Dorsett's poise and patience with the marathon interrogations.

"It is remarkable," said Marcus. "Especially, if you remember his early days at Pitt. In an interview, he was tongue-tied, almost a frightened kid."

When Dorsett was asked about the post-game press ordeals, "Don't you ever get tired of answering the same questions over and over."

"I don't get tired. As long as the reporters have questions to ask, I'll answer them."

When someone asked Dorsett that first year what the big difference between college and pro ball was, he never hesitated.

"It's coming into the locker room at half and watching players light up."

Thanks for the memories. Some of will miss you.

Pro-bound stars play in Shrine tilt

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Lorenzo White and many of the other college stars in today's East-West Shrine Game will be in the NFL the next time they play a football game.

"I've been on the road for the last month. I'm going home after this game to see my mother, then going back to school," said White, the running back who starred for Michigan State in the Rose Bowl victory over Southern Caliornia, then went to Japan for an all-star game.

White's mother got sick while in California for the Rose Bowl and recently underwent surgery at Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Tennessee's John Bruhin, a 285-pound offensive lineman, will be blocking for White, Michigan's Jamie Morris and other East backs Saturday at Stanford Stadium.

"The next two weeks I'll just ... work mostly on upper body strength and speed," Bruhin said.

A majority of the players gathered for the 63rd East-West Game, played for the benefit of Shriners hospitals for crippled children, are considered good pro prospects. They will be seeing each other again Feb. 1 when they show their stuff before coaches and scouts at the NFL's invitation-only combined test workouts at Indianapolis.

The East quarterbacks are Syracuse All-American Don McPherson and Cincinnati's Danny McCoin.

"I'm very confident in my ability," McPherson said.

"I'm very confident in my team's ability," he said, referring to the 1987 Syracuse team which had an 11-0 regular season record and 11-0-1 overall mark after a Sugar Bowl tie with Auburn. "I'm trying to keep that 0-1 off my mind."

San Jose State's Mike Perez, who passed for 6,775 yards and 40 touchdowns over the past two seasons, and Washington's Chris Chandler are the West quarterbacks. Other offensive players on the roster include running backs Brad Muster of Stanford and Lydell Carr of Oklahoma, and highly rated linemen Randall McDaniel of Arizona State and Dave Cadigan of Southern Cal.

The West's defensive talent includes All-American linebacker Dante Jones of Oklahoma and All-American lineman Chad Hennings of Air Force.

Several Little All-American players also will be playing. They include Holy Cross running back Gordie Lockbaum of the East and tight end Chris Verhulst of California's Chico State for the West.

The head coaches are Michigan State's George Perles for the East and Washington's Don James for the West.

With less than a week available for practice, things are kept relatively simple by the coaches.

But Perles said, "I think football is a simple game. I think we confuse things when we try to make it more than that."

He added, "You have to understand most of the coaches are physical education majors. If it wasn't for pro football and college football, we'd be teaching volleyball."

Hula stars to go all out

HONOLULU (AP) — It's considered a "fun" game by some, but Heisman Trophy winner Tim Brown and his fellow college all stars in the Hula Bowl say they will be making an all-out effort today to impress the dozens of pro scouts on hand.

Brown, who has been quoted as saying he was playing in the game for "fun," insists he will be making a strong effort.

"When I'm out on the field I'm 'full go' because I don't want to take a chance on getting hurt or messing up the play," said the Notre Dame wide receiver, who will play for the East.

However, he questioned whether any of the players, thrown into an atmosphere of sight-seeing and entertainment after 12 hard weeks of football, can play up to their abilities.

Defensive Tackle Al Noga of Hawaii insists he can.

"I'm not going to take this game like it's just for fun," he said.

Noga, who won All-American honors in his junior year, had a frustrating senior season fighting double-team blocks. He contends he can beat any offensive lineman one-on-one.

"I always have the frame of mind that when it's time to play football, you play hard," Noga said. "I want to win that MVP award by the end of the game."

Noga will have no easy chore, facing an East offensive line that includes 295-pound tackle John Elliott of Michigan and 290-pound Paul Gruber of Wisconsin.

Quarterbacks for the East will be Tom Tupa of Ohio State and Jeff Burger of Auburn.

Todd Santos of San Diego State and Craig Burnett of Wyoming will call signals for the West. They are expected to make frequent handoffs to Icky Woods, the Nevada-Las Vegas running back who was the nation's leading rusher during the past season. Woods was named to the West team after Gaston Green of UCLA withdrew because of a knee injury.

In addition to Noga and three Hawaii teammates, Aloha Stadium will be somewhat familier turf to at least four other players. Linebacker Clifford Charlton of Florida and fullback Mel Farr, linebacker Ken Norton and cornerback Dennis Price of UCLA were here for the Christmas Day Aloha Bowl game. It is Farr's second trip to the Hula Bowl — he was here 21 yeas ago at the age of four months when his father, Mel Farr Sr., played in the game.

The West team also includes strong safey Chuck Cecil of Arizona, the Most Valuable Player of the 1986 Aloha Bowl game.

Sixth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, 10th-seeded American Barbara Potter and No. 11 seed Sylvia Hanika of West Germany all scored straight set victories.

Floyd to fight fine suspension

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets guard Sleepy Floyd said he will appeal the $5,000 fine and one-game suspension levied against him for fighting during a game against the Phoenix Suns.

The NBA levied the punishment against Floyd just one day after the altercation in Phoenix on Wednesday night.

Floyd appeared briefly at The Summit before the Rockets game Thursday night against Portland. He was suspended from that game, which the Rockets won 103-98.

"I'm sorry it happened, but it happened," Floyd said. "I'll appeal the suspension. That's all I've got to say."

Floyd would not comment on what prompted the fight. He can appeal through his lawyer and the NBA Players Association.

Rod Thorn, the NBA's vice president of operations, said Floyd instigated the initial confrontation with Suns guard Jeff Hornacek. Floyd said after the players had been separated, Floyd twice renewed the fight.

"Such aggressive conduct, particularly going back after Hornacek once the original incident was over, must result in a strong penalty," Thorn said.

Cards lured west by warmer climate, bigger stadium

By RICK WARNER

NEW YORK (AP) — Warmer weather and a bigger stadium are luring the NFL Cardinals to Arizona after 28 years in St. Louis.

Team owner William Bidwill said Friday he wants to move the Cardinals to Phoenix before next season because "we can be more competitive there."

"One of the things I like about it is that I was sitting next to a man from Phoenix on the plane coming in and he told me it was 72 degrees there," Bidwill told reporters following a one-hour meeting with Commissioner Pete Roselle.

The Cardinals, who haven't made the playoffs since 1982, played before sparse crowds at Busch Stadium this season. Bidwill has complained about the stadium's 54,392-seat capacity for years, but political squabbling in St. Louis delayed proposals for a new facility.

To gain league approval, the move must be supported by at least 21 of the 28 club owners. The owners will vote on Bidwill's request at the league's annual meeting in March or possibly before then. Ironically, the meeting will be held in Phoenix this year.

Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell said he would support the move if a vote were held today.

ASKED if he would take legal action against the NFL if his request is rejected, Bidwill said: "I certainly don't want to sue anyone."

If the Cardinals move, it would be the third NFL franchise shift in the 1980s. The Raiders moved from Oakland to Los Angeles in 1982. Two years later, the Colts moved from Baltimore to Indianapolis.

Bidwill, who had until midnight to notify the NFL of his plans, had offers from several cities, including Baltimore, Jacksonville, Fla., and Memphis.

In St. Louis, where the Cardinals moved from Chicago in 1960, radio stations added to the melancholy mood by playing "By The Time I Get To Phoenix."

"I have mixed emotions about the whole thing," Cardinals offensive lineman Luis Sharpe said. "I feel real sorry for the fans of St. Louis. But I'm excited about going to a place like Phoenix. I'm sorry to leave the people here, but it was time to move on."

THE ANNOUNCEMENT was greeted with joy in Arizona, where the Cardinals hope to play next season at 70,491-seat Sun Devil Stadium in the Phoenix suburb of Tempe.

"I think this community will embrace the Cardinals with open arms," said Phoenix attorney Mike Gallagher.

Bidwill has been offered nearly $17 million annually in ticket and concession incentives to play at Sun Devil Stadium. The team would later have the option of moving into a proposed domed stadium to be built in downtown Phoenix.

THE PUSH for a larger stadium in St. Louis touched off a political war over where the facility should be built.

Last fall, Bidwill rejected a proposed 70,500-seat open-air stadium in St. Louis County. Last week, officials came up with an 11th-hour proposal for a domed stadium in downtown St. Louis. By then, however, Bidwill was leaning heavily toward the Arizona offer.

"You can't fight city hall," he said of the delays in St. Louis.

Miner Mania hits El Paso with a 'Woosh'

EL PASO (AP) — Miner mania has hit the city in the form of "Woosh," a novelty tune that pays tribute to the Texas-El Paso basketball team.

One of the morning disc jockeys on KLAQ-FM sang the song to the tune of "Tush," by Houston rock trio ZZ Top. Operations manager Nat Lamp composed the lyrics early this week after the Miners defeated fifth-ranked Wyoming and then Air Force to compile a 2-0 record in the Western Athletic Conference.

Sample lyrics: "Miners bad, Miners good. Beat Wyoming — knew they would. Flyboys looked like mush. 'Cause when Miners shoot the ball up, it comes down with a woosh."

"I was driving home one day and the Miners had beaten Wyoming and blew Air Force away, and I thought we need to come up with a song for them," Lamp said Friday. Morning disc jockey Courtney Rogers suggested using "Tush" because "it sort of rhymed with swish," Lamp said. "You know, everytime they shot the ball, it would go swish."

Other lyrics lament the fact that the Miners, who had compiled a 14-2 record before Friday night's game at San Diego State, had not made it into The Associated Press' Top 20 college basketball poll. The Miners came in 24th in voting by sportswriters.

"It's stupid, it's fun and it works," Lamp said of the three-minute song. "People here say there's nothing to do in this town. Well, we have some things, and the UTEP Miners are one of those things."

The song debuted Thursday morning and was played twice. The morning disc jockeys played it once again Friday.

Since Lamp wrote the lyrics, Texas-El Paso beat WAC rival Hawaii Thursday and was scheduled to play Friday night at San Diego State. Lamp said he would consider changing the lyrics to include the Hawaii and San Diego State games.

Because the team was out of town Thursday and Friday, the coaches and players had not heard it, Lamp said.

"I don't know what their reaction will be," he said. "It says, 'Hey, you guys did a good job, and the guys who didn't put them in the Top 20 don't know how good they are."

Browner aware greatness not automatic

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Joey Browner needs only to look down to remind himself that greatness isn't automatic.

On the back of his left football shoe, he has written: "To Do Is To Be."

"That means you need to do the little things — practice hard, work hard, sweat — to be a champion," the Minnesota Vikings' All-Pro strong safety said.

On his right shoe, he has written: "To Be Is To Do."

"To be a champion, you have to do the little things," Browner said.

Browner has done many little things — and quite a few big things — in his five years in the NFL. And he is within one game of finally becoming a champion.

The Vikings play the Washington Redskins Sunday for the NFC title and a spot in Super Bowl XXII. They left their Tampa training site Friday for Washington.

"Joey Browner is the best there is," Vikings Coach Jerry Burns said.

Browner's respect for Burns is mutual.

During the preseason, he caused a stir by refusing to play on punt and kickoff teams. He first earned national attention as a bone-jarring special teams player and went to his first Pro Bowl, after the 1985 season, in that capacity.

"They aren't paying me enough to play like a Pro Bowler at both positions," he said at the time.

Burns didn't force the issue. He said he knew Browner would play in important situations and said Browner takes — and gives — such a beating on defense that it might make him a better player to be off the field more.

Down the stretch, however, Browner began playing as the coverage man on punts. And in the playoffs, he again has been the main man down field in pursuit of punt and kickoff returners.

"It's a personal favor I'm doing for (Burns)," he said. "He's the man I care about. I'll do whatever I can to help him."

Browner comes from a large, athletic family. His five brothers also played major-college football. Three — Ross, Jimmy and Keith — also have played in the NFL.

He has studied martial arts since he was in grade school and has a black belt in Kenpo. He credits martial arts with giving him discipline and strong hands.

His wife, Valeria, is an international model who works mostly out of New York and Europe.

He said he earns enough in his private businesses — he is an investor in an Italian shoe company, for one — and doesn't need his annual NFL salary of about $400,000.

He is a philosophy buff. He got the sayings on his shoes from a course at Southern California.

But mostly, Browner is a good football player.

"Most people don't weigh 210 pounds, run the 40-yard dash in 4.55 (seconds), have great hands, jump high, change directions on a dime," defensive coordinator Floyd Peters said.

"He's like a cobra with his quickness. If there's a fumble, nobody beats Joey to it. He can play as good as a linebacker against the run and as a good as a good cornerback in one-on-one pass coverage. That's a wide range of abilities. You generally need to have two or three guys to do all those things but we get away with playing only one guy and moving him around."

Browner hits like a linebacker. And while he claims, "I'm not an intimidator," no less an authority than Chicago Coach Mike Ditka disagrees.

"There are receivers afraid to go over the middle against the Vikings," Ditka said, "because they know Joey Browner's there."

Midland Christian teams split contests

From Staff Reports

Kevin Wallum's 30 points weren't enough to overcome balanced scoring from Abilene Christian as the Midland Christian boys fell 73-56 in the nightcap of a basketball doubleheader Friday.

Abilene Christian's Chris Halla poured in 24 points to lead the way. RP Johnson added 10 for MC. The Mustangs fell to 1-1 in district play, 7-10 overall.

Elizabeth Coffman poured in 20 points to lead the Midland Christian girls to a 53-37 win over Abilene Christian in the early game. Coffman, a junior, led all scorers while Kim Jackson added 11.

The MC girls remained undefeated in district at 2-0, 12-5.

Both Midland Christian teams will travel to Amarillo Christian for games next Friday night.

Firms make pipelines agreement

CHICAGO (AP) — Santa Fe Southern Pacific Corp. and Koch Industries Inc. have entered into an agreement under which Koch will acquire two pipeline systems, the companies announced jointly today.

The two pipeline systems involved are the 1,943-mile Gulf Central System and the Chaparral System, which includes the 811-mile Chaparral pipeline and a number of smaller lines.

The Gulf Central System, stretching from the Gulf Coast to the Midwest, transports anhydrous ammonia fertilizer. The Chaparral system includes the Chaparral line that transports natural gas liquids from Eastern New Mexico and West Texas to Houston; a 117-mile petroleum products line between Amarillo, Texas and Clovis, N.M.; and a 39-mile line at Temple, Texas that transports diesel fuel.

Chicago-based Santa Fe announced restructuring plans last June to sell off three of its pipeline systems in order to focus its own pipeline business on refined petroleum products.

The agreement with Koch, of Wichita, Kan., leaves only the Black Mesa Pipeline still under Santa Fe control.

Help an addict. Threaten to fire him.

Addiction doesn't lend itself to halfway measures. Hard drugs lead to desperate situations.

People who deal with the problems of addiction say that one of the few shreds of hope for an addict is that a spouse or a boss will get tough.

Divorce. Dismissal. Prison. Those are the alternatives that get addicts into treatment.

If you want to help an addict in your company, don't be soft about it. Put the proposition in clear terms: Get well or get out.

It's no pleasure to threaten people. But if you don't care enough to get involved, who will?

And, if you do care, what should you do?

To find out how to set up a treatment program in your company, please call 1-800-843-4971. That's the National Institute on Drug Abuse hot line for managers and CEOs. It's manned by trained Employee Assistance Program planners and designers, from Monday through Friday, 9:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. Eastern Time. They won't tell you what to do, but they can outline the options. Then you can really help an addict.

Take This Child... ...And Nurse Him

"TAKE THIS CHILD . . . . . AND NURSE HIM." (Ex. 2:9)

These words are a command, given by the daughter of Egypt's king to Moses' mother when they found the little boy floating in the bushes.

And they are still a command. This is what God says to parents everytime a child is born or adopted into their lives. "Take this child . . . . and nurse him."

The king's daughter was commanding Moses' mother to nurse him by feeding him physically. But there was more. Nursing a child means more than putting food into his body. It means caring for all his physical needs as well as all his emotional, mental, and spiritual needs. It means loving, caring, ministering to the total needs of the child.

What a command! And what a privilege!

Presidential candidates possess variety of religious affiliations

NEW YORK (AP) — The contenders for the 1988 presidential nominations reflect a melange of religious adherence, including three in religiously mixed marriages.

All the major candidates are Christians, but one has a Jewish wife, and two who are Protestants have Roman Catholic wives.

In denominational affiliation, four candidates are Baptists, two Roman Catholics, two Episcopalians, two Presbyterians, and one each Methodist, Lutheran and Greek Orthodox.

The presidential race "is likely to be the fourth one in a row in which religion and church-state relations play an important role," writes Albert J. Menendez, associate editor of Church & State.

Menendez, of Washington, D.C., compiled the candidates' religious profiles for the monthly published by Americans United for Separation of Church and State.

He says the candidates "have found themselves under increasing scrutiny" about where they stand on church-state issues, "their personal religious convictions and how those beliefs relate to issues of public concern."

The seven Democrats include three Baptists, a Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox, Lutheran and Presbyterian. Of six Republicans, two are Episcopalians and the remainder a Catholic, Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian.

Most of the Democrats have indicated opposition to tax aid for church and private schools and to constitutional amendents to restrict abortion and allow organized prayer in public schools. Most of the Republicans have supported such steps.

Following are religious positions given of Republican candidates:

— Vice President George Bush, an Episcopalian, is a close friend of evangelist Billy Graham. Bush has favored school prayer, tuition tax credits for parochial schools and a ban on abortion except in cases of rape, incest or danger to the mother's life.

— U.S. Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, a Methodist, although he and his wife often attend St. John's Episcopal Church in Washington. He has supported tax credits for parochial schools and amendments to allow school prayer and ban abortion.

— U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York attends Washington's Presbyterian Church and has taught classes there, although he was reared a Christian Scientist. He has supported tuition tax credits, and a ban on federal funding of abortion.

— Alexander M. Haig Jr., a Roman Catholic, is the only GOP candidate opposing various anti-abortion measures although personally opposes abortion and federal funding of it. He favors aid to non-public schools and a moment's silence for prayer in public schools, but not a school prayer amendment.

— Former religious broadcaster Pat Robertson as a candidate gave up his Southern Baptist clergy credentials. He wants abortion banned by law and favors public school prayer and government aid to private and church-run schools.

— Former Delaware Gov. Pete duPont, an Episcopalian, advocates a voucher aid plan for private-church schools, voluntary prayer in public schools, and says the Supreme Court decision allowing abortion should be overturned.

Following are religious stands of the Democratic candidates:

— Jesse Jackson is an ordained Baptist minister and firm adherent of the social gospel for applying its principles in public affairs. He has criticized abortion, but opposed ammendments to outlaw it or to permit public school prayer.

— Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois is the son of a Lutheran minister and brother of another. Simon belongs to the conservative Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, and his wife is a Catholic.

RELIGION

RELIGION IN BRIEF

The Paul Fox Family

Family to sing, give testimony at First Church of Nazarene

The Paul Fox Family will be in concert 6 p.m. Sunday at the First Church of the Nazarene, 1208 W. Wall Ave.

"Mr. and Mrs. Fox and their six children, from Tennessee, will be singing and giving testimony of how God has blessed them as they have ministered across the United States," says a news release from the church.

Fox was formerly a chiropractor in Florida.

The public is invited to attend.

Aging seminar open to public

A free seminar entitled, "You and Your Aging Parents" will be presented by the Family ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday in the church's Family Center at 3600 W. Golf Course Road.

Speaker will be Dr. Bruce Davis, director of the Abilene Christian University's Center for the Study of Aging. Topic will include facts vs. myths on aging, potential conflict areas, community services available, retirement issues, and others relevant to the issue.

The public is invited and child care is available without charge by pre-registration. For more information, call Dr. Gary Grady at 694-8836.

'The Gathering' continues

The First Presbyterian Church of Midland's winter session of "The Gathering" began Wednesday and will continue for seven weeks.

Dinner will be served from 5:30-6:15 p.m. at a reasonable price. Adult classes will be held from 6:30-7:30 p.m. Children's choirs from four years old through the sixth grade will meet at this time.

The courses include Bible Study — Teachings from Philippians, instructed by Lynn Durham, Jr.; Raising Positive Children in a Negative World, conducted by Sue Rose; The Kingdom of the Cults, by Jack Armstrong; How to Build a Growing Sunday School, by Jane Ramsland; and Bible Study — The Book of Revelation, instructed by the Rev. Dick Braun. There is no charge for the courses.

For more information, call the church office at 684-7821.

Missionaries to Taiwan greeted

Rieder

The Rev. and Mrs. Stephen Rieder, missionaries to Taiwan, will be speaking at 10:50 a.m. Sunday at the First Church of the Nazarene, 1208 W. Wall Ave., and again at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Permian Basin Church of the Nazarene, 424 Neely Ave.

They will bring news of the work in Taiwan, which includes a display and a short slide presentation. The Reiders have been serving as missionaries for 20 years in the Church of the Nazarene.

He pastored in Pennsylvania before being appointed to the mission field.

Reider earned his B.A. degree at Eastern Nazarene College, Quincy, Mass., and his bachelor of divinity degree at Nazarene Theological Seminary, Kansas City, Mo. In Taiwan, he has served a council treasurer and also in the area of church planting.

He has served as academic dean of the Nazarene Bible College in Taipei.

The public is invited to hear the talk.

YSE winter session beginning

The Youth Spiritual Enlightment winter session will be held Jan. 23-24.

YSE is a non-profit, non-denominational organization established to promote Christian awareness in the daily lives of teenagers, says a news release from YSE.

Seminar classes will be held from 8 to 10:30 a.m. Jan. 23 at Greater St. Luke Church, 2401 W. 16th St.

In addition, the session includes mass choir rehearsals and a banquet. Speaker for the banquet being held Jan. 23 is Brother Kenneth Barnes of Atlanta, who now lives in Dallas.

The closing program will be held at 3 p.m. Jan. 24 at Greater St. Luke Baptist Church, Odessa.

For more information call Wanda McGrew, 682-0041. Transportation will be provided for youths traveling from Midland to Odessa.

Study groups from ARE form

Study groups based on "A Search for God" from the Association for Research and Enlightment will be starting in the near future.

The groups will have from 5 to 12 members who will meet in homes and offices throughout the week.

"They are not just discussion groups for intellectual understanding, but concern the application of different methods in learning unconditional love in the sharing and caring atmosphere of small groups," says a news release from ARE.

For more information call Merrilyn Walker, 684-8448.

Youth presentation scheduled

St. Ann's Youth Office is presenting two lecture/discussions with Mark and Louise Zwick of the Houston Catholic Worker Jan. 24.

The time for the first presentation has been changed to the following, 3 p.m. Jan. 24. The presentation will still be held in the Parish Conference Center across from the church. The public is invited to attend.

The second lecture/discussion will be at 6 p.m. Jan. 24 and is for high school students.

The Zwicks run Casa Juan Diego, a Catholic Worker house in Houston that provides food, shelter and counseling to Central American refugees. Casa Juan Diego also publishes a newspaper, the Houston Catholic Worker.

Casa Juan Diego is part of the Catholic Worker movement, which was started in New York City in 1931 by Dorothy Day and Peter Maurin. Catholic Workers practice voluntary poverty, the corporal and spiritual works of mercy and pacifism. In many cities, "houses of hospitality" like Casa Juan Diego give out meals and offer temporary shelter to the destitute and homeless.

FPC greets reknowned minister

The Rev. Bryant Kirkland, former pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church in New York City, will preach at the 8:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. worship services Sunday at Midland's First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

His theme will be "Unlock Your Spiritual Gifts" taken from Romans 12:3-12.

Kirkland retired as senior pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, one of the denomination's flagship churches, in February after 25 years of service. His retirement brought to a close 48 years of pastoring in Haddon Field, N.J., Tulsa, and Willow Grove and Marberth, Pa.

"He is widely recognized as one of the denomination's most talented, challenging and eloquent pulpiteers," says a news release from First Presbyterian Church.

A graduate of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill., and of Princeton Theological Seminary, Kirkland earned his master of theology degree from Eastern Baptist Seminary and holds doctors' degrees from numerous colleges and universities across the United States.

He has visited mission fields around the world on several occasions and has preached in South India, Lebanon, Thailand and Hong Kong.

Kirkland is a former president of the board of Trustees of Princeton Theological Seminary, where he is a lecturer of Homiletics. He held similar assignments there in 1981, 1983 and 1985, as well as at Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

Kirkland was recognized as "National Presbyterian Church Preacher of the Year" in 1965 and as "Clergyman of the Year" in 1975.

The Rev. Russell Ritchel, senior pastor of Midland's First Presbyterian Church, invites the public to attend.

Class targeted for parents

"No More Tantrums and Other Good News" is the WHEN Course for this month at Grace Presbyterian Church.

Being taught by Nancy Lowe, the class is for parents.

Other classes being taught include "Key Figures of the Old Testament," adult Bible study being taught in five parts by Mark Krause; and "Growing with Grace," a special three-week series for those interested in learning more about Grace Presbyterian or Presbyterianism in general, being taught by the Rev. Hawley Wolfe and the church's elders.

These classes are being offered during the church school hour beginning at 9:30 a.m. on Sundays.

In addition, the Youth Fellowship Group of Grace Presbyterian hosted a Chili Supper recently and sold themselves into slavery for a day to help fund the expenses of their winter retreat to Ruidoso, N.M., Thursday through Jan. 24.

The Youth group is for 7-12 graders and welcomes interested youth to join. the group meets at the church, 2810 N. Garfield St., Sundays from 4 to 6 p.m.

Film deals with self confidence

The Adult Education Ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ will present the film "Feeling More Self-Confident: A Guide to a Healthier Self Esteem" at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the church's Family Center.

The film is the work of Dr. Clyde Narramore, a Christian psychologist who is the founder of the Narramore Foundation and the author of numerous books.

"The film offers practical suggestions for developing a better self esteem and confidence through Christ and the impact a Christian view of self will have on a person," says a news release from the church.

The public is invited to attend. Classes are offered for children of all ages at the same time. For more information call Tim Walker, 694-8836.

Blackwood Brothers to perform

The Blackwood Brothers and family will perform a concert at Midland Christian Fellowship, 200 S. Baldwin St., at 7 p.m. Friday.

The performance will feature Donna Blackwood.

The Blackwood Brothers began right after the Depression in rural Chocktaw County, Miss. Only three of the original members were brothers — Roy, Doyle and James. The fourth member, R.W., was Roy's son.

They first came into national prominence in 1954, when they won the "Author Godfrey talent Scout Show" on the CBS-TV and radio network.

Since that time the group has won, among others, nine Grammy Awards, many Dove Awards for "Best Male Group" and Gospel Music Association awards for "Favorite Group."

MCF is located behind Texas American Bank and Dennis the Menace Park. No tickets will be sold. Donation and offerings will be received.

The public is invited to attend.

Films help parents love teens

A four-part film series entitled "How to Really Love Your Teenager" is to be shown at Golf Course Road Church of Christ Family Center beginning at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 27.

The film is the work of Dr. Ross Campbell, a Christian psychiatrist, author and lecturer on parent/child relationships.

For more information call Gary Grady at 694-8836.

Baptist conference scheduled

FORT WORTH — Many religious leaders were shocked to learn that Texas, often called the buckle of the Bible belt, has eight million people who are not members of any church.

Concerned that Texas is becoming a secular society, more than 15,000 people from throughout the state will converge on Fort Worth Monday through Wednesday for the Texas Baptist Evangelism Conference. Theme for the conference is "His Mind in Me."

Science of Mind classes begin

Science of the Mind workshops for the Permian Church of Religious Science begin Feb. 1 and continue once a week to mid-April.

Classes include Science of Mind I, "Mind," Tuesdays; Science of Mind III, "Consciousness," Mondays; Metaphysical Bible Interpretation, Wednesdays; and Practitioner II, Thursdays. Each class meets from 7 to 9 p.m.

Cost is $150 for each. Discounts are being offered for early payment, for senior citizens, junior church teachers and second person in the same family. Instructors will be the Rev. Nina Douglas, minister, and Frankie Bartol, practitioner.

"There is a tremendous potential within everyone," says Ms. Douglas. "And each can awaken this 'sleeping giant' and use it in their lives."

For more information or to sign up call 684-4230 or 699-0905.

Pastor sad over church's removal from group

RUTLEDGE, Tenn. (AP) — An East Tennessee pastor says he's saddened and worried about a Baptist group's decision to drop his church from its fellowship after its congregation elected two women deacons.

"It should be taken as another warning — one more little tremor — that fundamentalists now have free reign to...ensure conformity to their fundamentalist interpretations," the Rev. Kerry Bond, of Rutledge Baptist Church, said Tuesday.

"I'm really frightened of what this thing is coming to," he said. "We'd have hoped there was a deeper notion of fellowship."

The Grainger County Association of Baptists on Monday voted to drop the church's membership, the pastor said.

A secretary who answered the telephone Tuesday at the county association in Rutledge would not identify herself and said the group's mission director was out of town.

The association has a membership of 36 area churches. Of that number, 31 churches had representatives at the Baptist association's Monday meeting

Some quoted scriptures from the books of Acts and Timothy which they contended indicate women cannot be deacons, Bond said.

The passages referred "to the early church electing seven men to distribute food and necessities of life to Greek Christians...and...to qualifications for a deacon," he said.

"They concluded women were excluded from both passages," he said.

The role of women in the church is one key issue debated between fundamentalists and moderates within the Southern Baptist Convention.

Bond and others have said women can have a place in the church, while fundamentalists argue that strict interpretation of the Bible won't allow it.

Bond said he was "saddened by the action" taken by the local group but added Rutledge Baptist Church will continue its fellowship with the state association and the Southern Baptist Convention.

A church does not have to belong to its local association in order to have fellowship with the other two organizations, although the majority of the convention's members do, he said.

Local associations are not under the authority of the Southern Baptist Convention and can make their own decisions on matters such as this, he said.

Buddhist chaplains get endorsement

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Buddhists have been authorized to endorse chaplains to the U.S. armed forces, the first time such recognition has been extended outside the Judeo-Christian tradition.

The recogniton was accorded recently by the U.S. Armed Forces Chaplains Board to the Buddhist Churches of America, based here. It reports 150,000 adherents, 63 clergy and 63 temples in this country.

At least 2,493 Buddhists serve in the armed forces, according to the most recent Department of Defense religious survey in 1984.

While the department requires equal treatment of all religions, they must meet certain organizational requirements to certify chaplains, such as having a training institution that validates clergy credentials.

The Buddhist denomination says it met the requirements by affiliating its Institute of Buddhist Studies with the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley, Calif.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 17, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will have many chances to make smart financial moves, especially after March. Be ready! Good health is linked to adequate exercise and rest. Cut down on travel and use the phone to boost business profits. Ideas are most valuable when you can apply them in a practical way. More than ever you need optimistic, high-tech experts in your life. A change of environment may help you find success.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: elder statesman Benjamin Franklin, actress Betty White, catcher Darrell Porter, outfielder Chili Davis, boxers Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier, gangster Al Capone, playwright Anton Chekhov, actor James Earl Jones, puppeteer Shari Lewis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A fortune could be made or lost, depending on how you play the social game this weekend. Forge ahead with family activities even if your energy level rises and falls. Perseverance counts big!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will take great satisfaction in the privacy you find today. Turn off the television and catch up on your reading. Time spent with children is an investment in the future.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Recent pressures fade. You feel like doing somethng fun today. Inspiration comes from a visit you make to a special place. Quiet time may be hard to come by. Pursue romance in earnest.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Look forward to an active day outdoors. Fresh air rejuvenates you. A love relationship seems less right for you now. Perhaps you are ready to face the truth. Know your own heart.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Understanding and appreciation are the key to success in love and marriage. Travel can be inspiring. Your cash situation is better now than it has been for some time. Plan an outing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not neglect your domestic responsibilities. Devote more time to family affairs. Eating more meals at home is one way to save money. A favor you grant today will be richly repaid.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be on guard in the areas of romance and finance today. Be careful not to take anyone for granted. Hobbies are fine so long as they are not too expensive. Collect tax materials.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Financial matters merit close attention now. A relationship you have come to regard as permanent may need reinforcement. A change of attitude or lifestyle will help. Set new goals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance may be in a state of flux. Do not take anyone or anything for granted. Cut back on the money you spend on creative ventures. Seek family's cooperation in revising a budget.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Many of those looking for answers will not like what they find. You may have to make a major decision. Do so only after weighing the odds carefully. Mate is supportive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not give promises of support to people who need financial backing. Reading the newspapers will give you new employment or investment ideas. Singles may be on the threshold of a big discovery.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Postpone travel and spend a quiet day at home reading and relaxing. Family members need extra love and attention. Do not neglect them for a new friend. Romance is certain to be intriguing.

Ex-California governor being sued for payment for road maintenance

NEVADA CITY, Calif. (AP) — Former California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. is being sued in Small Claims Court for $159.10.

Ralph Hogan, president of the Montezuma Hills Property Owners Association, said Thursday that Brown owes the money for maintenance of a road that leads to the 160 acres he owns in the Sierra foothills about 130 air miles northeast of San Francisco.

Brown, now an attorney with a Los Angeles firm, said in a recent interview about his political future: "Somewhere maybe 20 years down the road I'll retire to my Nevada County ranch and run for district attorney of Nevada County, build myself a cabin up on the San Juan Ridge. But that's definitely a fallback position, the final, final option."

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Singer Michael Jackson plans to perform dozens of times over a span of 26 days in the Pensacola Civic Center, according to a spokesman for the entertainer.

Jackson

But each performance will take place before 10,000 empty seats, because Jackson will be rehearsing for his next cross-country concert tour.

Jackson will begin rehearsing up to three times daily Jan. 22 in this Florida panhandle city before beginning a 13-city tour Feb. 23 in Kansas City, Mo., his New York public relations representative said Thursday.

Pensacola, however, will not be one of the tour stops. If local residents want to see him perform they would have to travel at least 200 miles to Birmingham, Ala., the closest tour stop. The Civic Center here is smaller than the arenas the tour will play in.

Local officials see the rehearsals as a boost for the underbooked Civic Center and the local economy, which will benefit from the presence of dozens of musicians, dancers and other Jackson staff members.

• • •

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros says he had no choice but to say yes to the 'Just Say No' Foundation.

Cisneros

Cisneros accepted an invitation Thursday to serve as a trustee on the national board of the anti-drug foundation.

The invitation came from foundation President Tom Adams, who told the City Council on Thursday about the foundation's accomplishments.

"I suppose I can't say no!" Cisneros chuckled in accepting Adams' invitation to serve on the board.

Since its creation about three years ago, the group has helped establish 'Just Say No' clubs in schools throughout the country to help provide peer support and education for youths on how to reject drugs.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The band Alabama is singing the praises of the state of Alabama in television commercials that will soon air throughout the nation, lead singer Randy Owen said Friday.

Owen said he and bassist Teddy Gentry re-recorded the title song from their first album, "My Home's in Alabama," for a commercial attempting to lure tourists to the band's home state.

"It was a new undertaking for me and Teddy because we were trying to make a commercial instead of a hit record," said Owen, who donated his time for the project.

The commercial, plus magazine and newspaper ads featuring pictures of the band, will be the backbone of the state's $1.4 million tourism campaign this year, said Lisa Shivers, director of the Alabama Bureau of Tourism and Travel.

The ads, similar to ones Tennessee once used with Dolly Parton, stress that Alabama is "the state of surprises." They include pictures of Gulf Shore's beaches, the Alabama Symphony in Birmingham, the Alabama Shakespeare Festival in Montgomery, Decatur's balloon races and Huntsville's Space Camp.

• • •

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Folk singer Arlo Guthrie, known for his '60s ballad "You Can Get Anything You Want At Alice's Restaurant," is holding a benefit concert to help manatees and sea turtles.

Funds raised from the $20-a-ticket concert at Riverside Theatre Feb. 12 will go to the Pelican Island Audobon Society for education and environmental projects.

"The focus is primarily, but not exclusively, on manatees, sea turtles, and other environmental issues," said Guthrie, who has increasingly become involved in environment-related projects.

Guthrie has been active in Palm Beach's Ocean Impact Foundation, a group which rescues and helps rehabilitate injured mammals.

• • •

LONDON (AP) — Canadian-Irish author Brian Moore has won Britain's newest and richest fiction prize for his novel, "The Color of Blood."

"I am absolutely bowled over," said Moore, 66, who flew to London from Malibu, Calif., to receive the Sunday Express Book of the Year prize, worth about $36,000.

A five-judge panel on Thursday cited his thriller about a Roman Catholic cardinal escaping from an East European communist country as the "most literate and readable" of five finalists.

The judges included the novelists Monica Dickens, Hammond Innes and Auberon Waugh.

Moore said the fictional country in his novel was based on Poland, where he worked after World War II for the U.N. Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. He has written 15 other novels.

His rivals were William Boyd's "The New Confessions," Ronald Hardy's "Wings of the Wind," Noel Virtue's "The Redemption of Elsdon Bird" and Mary Wesley's "Not That Sort of Girl."

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Ballet, facing more than $1.8 million in debts, needs sweeping financial and organization changes to survive in 1988, according to a new report.

The dance company's executive board will meet Jan. 22 to act on recommendations included in the report by a consulting firm.

The report released Thursday, by Booz, Allen & Hamilton, recommends loan restructuring or forgiveness of $800,000 in debts held mainly by First RepublicBank, MCorp and CitiCorp.

Recruitment of new administrative management for the company also is recommended in the research, commissioned last November when the Dallas Ballet nearly shut down for lack of funds.

The report indicates $1 million should be raised immediately to pay staff and dancers for February's repertory production and "Swan Lake" in March.

It also recommends partial payment of the ballet's $360,000 debt to its small vendors.

Convicted shoplifter chosen to be juror at Nofziger's trial

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former court bailiff and a convicted shoplifter were among seven men and five women selected Friday as jurors for the conflict-of-interest trial of former presidential aide Lyn C. Nofziger.

The jury, plus four women and two men who were picked as alternates, are scheduled to be sworn in Tuesday before the prosecution and defense deliver opening arguments. The trial is expected to last three to six weeks.

Nofziger, 63, is accused of improperly lobbying former Reagan administration colleagues on behalf of Wedtech Corp. and two other clients after he resigned as White House political director in early 1982.

His business partner, Mark A. Bragg, is accused of aiding and abetting one of the four lobbying contacts Nofziger allegedly made in 1982. Each of the charges carries a two-year sentence and a $10,000 fine.

"We are very pleased with the jury," said Robert Plotkin, one of Nofziger's defense lawyers. "I think we will start out on a level playing field."

The jury was picked from a pool of 60 prospective jurors who had been screened during four days of questioning by U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Flannery.

The jurors were asked if their views about lobbying and alleged wrongdoing by other Reagan administration officials would impair their ability to fairly judge the evidence against Nofziger and Bragg.

Many prospective jurors had mentioned the Iran-Contra affair when asked to cite examples of alleged wrongdoing in the Reagan administration.

One of the jurors who was picked, the former court bailiff, said he thought Lt. Col. Oliver L. North "believed what he was doing was right."

"It appeared to me that he was the type of person who already had his own convictions," said juror Joseph Miles, now a social services representative for the District of Columbia government.

Juror Barrington Cummings, who once been convicted of misdeameanor charges of cocaine possession and shoplifting, told the judge during questioning: "I've been in trouble myself."

Nofziger is the first former high-ranking official to be charged directly with violating the revolving-door provisions of the Ethics in Government Act. He is accused of violating the provision that prohibits former officials from lobbying their old agency within a year of leaving government service.

Former White House deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver was convicted last month of lying to Congress and a grand jury that investigated his lobbying business for possible ethics law violations. Prosecutors later said Deaver was not charged with ethics-law violations because regulations implemented in 1983 made it difficult to prosecute him on the substantive charges.

Prosecutors on Friday asked the judge to bar defense lawyers from asking Attorney General Edwin Meese III and other prosecution witnesses about efforts by E. Bob Wallach, a lawyer and old friend of Meese, to lobby the White House for Wedtech.

Meese, who has acknowledged receiving a series of memos about Wedtech from Wallach in 1981, is expected to testify about a letter he received from Nofziger about the company's attempt to get a $32 million Army contract.

The defense had signaled that it would question Meese about numerous efforts to influence him on behalf of Wedtech to demonstrate that Nofziger played only a minimal role in the company's lobbying campaign.

Navy ships could evacuate U.S. citizens off Haiti

WASHINGTON (AP) — A flotilla of U.S. Navy warships participating in an exercise steamed toward Puerto Rico on Friday, placing them within easy range of Haiti should election-day violence there Sunday spur an evacuation of Americans.

The Navy, while acknowledging that ships engaged in FLEETEX 1-88 maneuvers had moved south toward Puerto Rico, refused to pinpoint the positions of the vessels.

However, Pentagon sources said the bulk of the force was sailing southward in the Atlantic off the southeast coast of Florida, while some amphibious vessels with Marines aboard had already arrived off Puerto Rico.

The island of Hispaniola, which Haiti shares with the Dominican Republic, lies directly west of Puerto Rico.

The United States cut off all but humanitarian aid to Haiti last November when the military-run government canceled an election.

The junta's plans for a new election have led to calls for a boycott by opposing political leaders and additional unrest.

According to one Pentagon official, some 7,000 Americans reside in Haiti. Although there have been no recent reports of injuries to Americans, the presence of such a large U.S. fleet in nearby waters would make it easy to mount an evacuation if one became necessary, the source said.

Moreover, the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay on the tip of Cuba is directly across from Haiti, the official noted.

"This would be an easy area for us to operate in even if we didn't have an exercise going on," said another official. "The exercise just makes it easier."

This source said the Pentagon had been engaging in "some prudent contingency planning, but nobody expects to have to do anything."

"We don't think this amounts to a democratic election, but we also don't see any great threat of physical violence to Americans."

FLEETEX 1-88, part of a continuing series of exercises staged every year, includes 37 U.S. warships from ports along the East Coast plus a handful of allied vessels.

Among the American ships are two aircraft carriers, the Eisenhower and Forrestal; a nuclear-powered cruiser, the Virginia; and seven amphibious landing or command ships carrying about 2,400 Marines.

American recounts daughter's death in terrorist bombing

ROME (AP) — An American journalist, testifying at the trial of Palestinian leader Abu Nidal, recounted Friday how he tried in vain to save his 11-year-old daughter from a grenade and rifle attack by terrorists on Rome's airport in 1985.

The fugitive extremist and two of his followers are on trial for the massacre, in which 16 people, including three terrorist commandos, were killed.

More than 70 people were wounded in the attack at Leonardo da Vinci airport in which the terrorists lobbed hand grenades at the check-in counters of TWA, the American carrier, and the Israeli airline El Al. The commandos also sprayed the check-in area and a terminal snack bar with gunfire from their Kalashnikov rifles.

Israeli security guards responded with fire. When the attack, which lasted less than two minutes, was over, three of the four commandos had been shot to death. The only commando to survive the attack, Mahmoud Ibrahim Khaled, also is the only defendant in Italian custody.

Judge Filippo Antonioni on Friday questioned 40 survivors of the Dec. 27, 1985, attack that began with a couple of loud explosions that some of the holiday travelers mistook at first for early New Year's Eve fireworks.

Among those questioned was an American, Victor L. Simpson, who has lived in Rome for 15 years where he is news editor for The Associated Press.

While his wife waited outside the terminal with the family dog, Simpson recalled, he entered the check-in area with a porter carrying the family's luggage for a vacation in New York.

His daughter, Natasha, was killed in the attack. Simpson, 45, suffered a bullet wound in the hand and his son, Michael, then 9, was wounded in the abdomen.

"My son was behind me. I was ahead with my daughter," Simpson said, sitting before the judge and with his back to the courtroom.

The courtroom, where chatter among lawyers and observers is common, became silent as Simpson spoke slowly and clearly in Italian.

A few seconds after he and his children walked into the terminal, he said, he "heard a boom, like a bomb...It was all confusion."

He said he pushed Natasha to the ground, and they lay stretched out together on the terminal floor.

"My son was 10 meters behind me. Then there was the shooting" and "much confusion," Simpson said.

He next recalled a paramedic arriving and taking him and his daughter away in an ambulance to the hospital.

"There was an operation performed on my daughter...but there was nothing to be done," he added.

She was one of four Americans killed.

Others testifying included an Italian tour guide who was accompanying a group of Greek tourists back to Athens on a TWA flight. Four of the Greeks were killed.

"What do I remember?" said Corrado Baratta, another Italian, traveling to Israel for vacation and injured in the leg. "I remember this: the crying and the shots whose noise will remain in my ears forever."

Most of the witnesses said that they saw or remembered little.

"I remember only the shots and then I fell to the ground," said Vincenzo Della Scala, an Italian whose father, Franco, was killed while he and the son were wheeling a luggage cart.

Defendant Khaled stayed away from Friday's session, exercising his right under Italian law not to attend his own trial. At an earlier session he said he felt his presence would cause further pain to survivors.

Khaled, 20, cooperated with investigators, telling them how the attack was coordinated in Damascus and how he and his fellow commandos practiced terrorist attacks in a training camp in Lebanon's Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley, according to the trial indictment.

Abu Nidal, whose real name is Sabri al-Banna, reportedly based his organization in Damascus but is believed to have moved the headquarters to Lebanon, with training camps in Libya, after being expelled.

The third defendant is Rashid el-Hamieda, a fugitive described in the indictment as helping to coordinate the attack.

Iranian boats attack two tankers

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran raided two ships in the Persian Gulf on Friday and said its troops were "on full alert" and poised to attack the entire Iraqi border.

Iraq claimed its warplanes attacked two more tankers, but the report could not be confirmed.

The Iranian raids on the 13,524-ton Norwegian-flag Igloo Espoo and the Liberian tanker Atlantic Charisma were the fourth and fifth of the week in the so-called "tanker war," an outgrowth of the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq conflict, following a nine-day lull.

Iran's Parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said Iran's 500,000 troops massed along the southern border with Iraq were "on full alert." He warned gulf Arab states to halt aid for Baghdad.

"Most of the provinces of Iraq, from Dohuk to Faw, now stand in a vertical line open to the attack of our forces," he said during his prayer sermon at Tehran University, broadcast by state-run Tehran Radio and monitored in Cyprus.

Dohuk is on the northern edge of Iraq and Faw is the Iranian-occupied southernmost tip of Iraqi territory on the border with Iran.

The speaker warned gulf Arab leaders and supporters of Iraq to "move toward justice before it is too late."

"If tomorrow you hear the music of war on Iranian radio and television, you should know that regrets will serve no purpose," Rafsanjani said.

Rafsanjani is Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's personal representative on the Supreme Defense Council, the body which decides policy in the 7-year-old war against Iraq.

Iranian warships raided the Atlantic Charisma off southern port of Dubai Friday night, said Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit in London.

Shipping executives in the gulf, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the 23,127-gross-ton ship, owned by Island Navigation Corp. of Hong Kong, later radioed that it suffered little damage.

At midday an Iranian speedboat blasted the Igloo Espoo with "machine guns and missiles," slightly injuring two of the 21 crewmen and igniting a fire in the deckhouse, said Olav Olufsen, technical director for Havtor Management of Oslo, Norway, the ship's operator.

Maritime salvage executives said the attack took place at the bend of the Strait of Hormuz, the mouth of the gulf. They said more than one speedboat might have been involved.

The tanker, jointly owned by the Norwegian Kvaerner Group and Neste of Finland, was headed for South Korea with a crew of seven Norwegians and 14 Filipinos and a full load of Saudi Arabian petroleum products, Olufsen said.

The official Iraqi News Agency reported Friday that Iraqi warplanes raiding near the Iranian coast "scored accurate and effective hits" on two "large naval targets," usually a reference to oil tankers.

The report, monitored in Cyprus, said one ship was struck Thursday night and the other Friday morning. Neither claim was independently confirmed.

December saw 34 ships attacks in the gulf, but there was only one — a New Year's day strike by Iraq — between Dec. 26 and Jan. 9.

Iran raids other shipping in the gulf in retaliation for strikes on its own oil traffic.

Rafsanjani's warning came amid intensified Syrian mediation efforts to contain hostilities in the gulf.

On Thursday, the official Syrian and Iranian news agencies reported Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa received a message from Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati, dealing with efforts to reduce tension in the gulf region through direct dialogue and without foreign interference.

Also Thursday, a well-connected diplomat in Abu Dhabi, capital of the United Arab Emirates, said talks between Iran and states of the Gulf Cooperation Council likely to begin there soon were intended as a step toward an overall peace settlement.

Last week, Arab diplomatic sources said Syria persuaded Iran to delay its planned attack.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak arrived unexpectedly in Baghdad, Iraq, on Friday and discussed the war and other Middle East issues with President Saddam Hussein, said Egyptian Embassy officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He flew in from Saudi Arabia and was to spend the night in Baghdad and fly to Amman, Jordan, on Saturday.

In Rome, the Chamber of Deputies approved a decree for financing Italy's naval task force in the gulf. The measure, which passed Thursday 270-188 with one abstention, goes to the Senate for final approval. It allocates $80 million for the first half of 1988.

Spaniards' defeat to be commemorated

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Displaying gold, guns and crucifixes recovered from sunken Spanish galleons, Britain on Friday launched a year-long commemoration of the defeat of the "Invincible Armada" of 1588.

The Spaniards, undismayed, joined in the celebration.

Spain dispatched a diplomat from its London embassy to the port city of Plymouth to open the first event of the 400th anniversary: a "Treasures of the Armada" exhibition of relics from Spanish ships wrecked on the northern Irish coast.

Sir Francis Drake and his fellow Elizabethan sea dogs sailed from Plymouth to challenge the Armada, which the Spaniards themselves dubbed "Invincible."

Later in the year, the city will re-enact a sea battle and the legendary game of bowls that Drake played on Plymouth Hoe before he set sail.

Throughout England in July, a chain of beacons will be lighted as they were 400 years ago to warn the nation of the Armada, which was sent by King Philip II of Roman Catholic Spain to crush England's young Protestant religion.

But in the quirky English way, the first event of the year isn't about the English victory; it's about the Spaniards.

"We wanted to show the story of the Spanish endeavor — how 130 ships set out with 8,000 seamen and 19,000 soldiers," said city curator Tristram Besterman. "It was the mightiest fleet ever assembled at that time and nearly 20,000 men in it diedfrom wounds, sickness, starvation and drowning."

A huge Spanish siege gun confronts visitors as they step into the City Museum and Art Gallery. Drake's portrait and his drum — the most treasured relic of the adventurer — are nearby.

But upstairs, all the relics come from two Spanish ships, the Girona and Trinidad Valencera.

Guns, gold and silver coins, velvet and lace fabrics, crucifixes, religious medallions, pewter plates, silver cutlery, shoes and an officer's scent bottle that he sniffed to mask the awful stench of shipboard life, are among the relics, which have been stored at the Ulster Museum since being salvaged in the 1960s and '70s.

A glass case contains gold chains, rings, pendants and decorations insured for about $1.77 million.

Siberia is 'land of opportunity' for Russia's young people

EDITOR'S NOTE — Soviet industrial development is moving rapidly eastward into the vast, untapped reaches of Siberia, and it is drawing thousands of young people with it. An Associated Press correspondent traveled more than 3,000 miles from her base in Moscow for a look at the young pioneers in their new surroundings and the role they play in Mikhail S. Gorbachev's plan to restructure Soviet society.

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS

TYNDA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Soviet young people are chasing a development boom into Siberia, braving its frigid hardships in exchange for the chance of a more promising future and higher rewards than those who stay behind.

Heeding the call of Komsomol, the Communist Party's youth organization, tens of thousands of university graduates each spring are pledging their first years of work to the taming of Siberia, which together with the Soviet Far East covers 5.3 million square miles — one and a half times the size of the United States.

Some come for the money. Salaries plus hardship bonuses average 400 rubles ($635) a month, twice the national average for skilled industrial workers.

Others come for the relative freedom they find 3,000 or more miles from Moscow and the bureaucracy that directs industry in the nation's European regions.

But their venture into a resources-rich but sleeping land, notorious for forced labor camps and penal colonies since the time of the Russian czars, also is a vital part of Mikhail S. Gorbachev's plan to transform the Soviet Union into an economic superpower as well as a military one.

Economists at the Siberian branch of the Soviet Academy of Sciences in Novosibirsk say full exploitation of the region's resources, when more extensively developed, could double the nation's industrial capacity.

While it still isn't a yuppie lifestyle 3,100 miles east-southeast of Moscow and just north of Manchuria in China, "it's a good place to start your life, in a new place where you can make a difference," said Vera Grinvald, a hydro engineer in her mid-30s and a mother of three children.

Despite their higher wages, many of Tynda's new pioneers live in shabby, concrete housing blocks propped on pillars drilled into the permafrost of this frontier boomtown.

Those working on the railroad live in insulated old railroad cars and construction shacks in a sort of circular trailer town that houses nearly half of Tynda's population of 63,000.

A maze of rutted asphalt roads connects hilltop highrises with a skirt of shantytowns, and in between the buildings are unplanted stretches of ground that freeze solid in winter and become seas of mud in two months of summer.

AP Laserphoto

Pedestrians pass an apartment block in the new section of Ust-Ilimsk in Siberia last month. The Communist Party slogan hanging from the balconies states that "The well-being of the people is the major goal of the party." Soviet young people are chasing a development boom into Siberia, braving its frigid hardships in exchange for the chance of a more promising future and higher rewards than those who stay behind.

For active young people, there isn't much to do after work but play basketball or go cross-country skiing.

But for a 17-year-old youth who gave his name only as Alexander said, "I don't feel isolated here. ...I have friends and a social life in Siberia. I don't have to live in Moscow to know who Michael Jackson is."

And simple things become pleasures.

"It's too hard to explain if you haven't lived through it," said Yelena Ivankovich of the local Communist Party Council. "After having water delivered to barrels outside our doors for a year, when we got running water to our street, we thought we were the most fortunate people in the world."

Tynda is the capital and midpoint of the Baikal-Amur Mainline railroad (BAM), the largest of Soviet "hero projects," a 1,938-mile trail of track blazed through virgin land the government has defined as the next economic heartland.

By the year 2000, the railroad and the enterprises it will carry eastward are expected to make Siberia the nation's fourth major industrial zone, joining the Volga River basin, the Ural Mountains and the Donetsk Valley.

BAM, hailed as "the project of the century," is intended to take people and tools into the Siberian frontier and transport the region's minerals, ores, gold and precious stones out to the western and southern areas of the country, where 90 percent of the population lives.

"We build BAM, and BAM builds us," said Yelena Fedorets, the young wife of a railroad builder, reciting one of the local slogans and saying she doesn't mind the difficult conditions.

Galina Maslennikova, now 38, moved here with her husband and two sons five years ago from the Ukraine to work on the railroad.

"The project was under way and workers were needed, and we wanted to do or part," she said.

Olga Chuikova, an economist in her mid 30s, has three sons and a spacious four-room apartment. She and her husband came to siberia 12 years ago.

"I never planned to stay long," she said. "But once I started to work, I got to like it here and now I don't plan to go anywhere else in my life."

Despite stalwalts such as Olga Chuikova, the government is still trying to to establish a stable work force in the region if it is to tap Siberia's wealth. BAM's director, Valery A. Gorbunov, said 30 percent of the railroad's employees leave the project each year.

But Vyacheslav Seliverstov, deputy director of the Siberian Economics Institute, said in an interview that 30 million people now live in Siberia and he suggested the normal population growth — with a birthrate 20 percent higher than the national average — will provide an adequate work force for the future.

The harsh climate and isolation are partly to blame for people leaving. Temperatures along the BAM route often drop to 58 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, and the great distances and shortage of transportation make travel difficult.

But some analysts also blame the system, which rewards production, yet pays scant attention to living conditions.

"For the ministries, the main priority has always been industrial indicators, and provision of social services has been left up to local governments," said Vladimir M. Pushkarev, a sociologist at the regional Economics Institute in Novosibirsk. "The problem in Siberia has been that when new cities are created from scratch, there is no local government."

On the Angara River about 750 miles west of Tynda is Ust-Ilimsk, a city that was built exactly from scratch 21 years ago as the site of a hydroelectic plant.

It now has a population of 106,000 and many of its residents are young people.

One is Tatyana Manatyeva, 29, a deputy director of a dormitory, where the average age of the 578 residents is 28.

She said she came to Ust-Ilimsk six years ago with two other single women from Kazakhstan and has a one-room apartment of her own — a rarity for single women living in Moscow or Leningrad.

"My heart drew me here," Ms. Manatyeva said. "From grammar school on I heard so much about Siberia and Ust-Ilimsk. It all sounded so romantic and adventurous."

What stands out in Ust-Ilimsk is the number of women — 20 percent more of them than men.

"We have a surplus of women, and we have trouble finding jobs for them now," said Andrei V. Andreyev of the city's Communist Party Council. "We've begun construction of a health institute and some sewing enterprises to provide more work for women."

One reason for the surplus is that half the marriages registered in the Soviet Union end in divorce, and many women raising children on their own find it difficult to get by in the European Soviet cities to the west. Wages for women workers back west average about 120 rubles ($190) a month, but in Ust-Ilimsk the average for women and men is 350 rubles ($555).

"Here a single woman can support herself and even one or two children, and we are seeing a lot of them coming to Ust-Ilimsk," Andreyev said.

Galina Makovetskaya, 31, a laborer now on maternity leave, said she and her husband had to live with their parents in their home city of Dnepropetrovsk where housing is as short as it is in most developed Soviet cities.

Siberia is one and half times the size of U.S.

Associated Press

Here are some facts and figures on Soviet Siberia:

THE LAND — The borders of Siberia are ill-defined, but the region is generally agreed to consist of the Asian land mass east of the Ural Mountains and northeast of Central Asia. Together with the Soviet Far East, along the Pacific coast, Siberia covers 5.3 million square miles, or one and a half times the size of the United States. The land is mostly taiga — rolling forests of evergreens and birch trees — with the tundra ice desert spreading across the north and the Arctic Circle, and grassy steppes to the southwest.

THE PEOPLE — The 30 million people living in Siberia represent most of the 100 or more nationalities that comprise the Soviet Union. They are concentrated along the Trans-Siberian Railroad that runs along the southern border.

THE ECONOMY — Aside from railroading, Siberians are engaged in heavy industries like machine building, chemical and fuel processing and mining. About 30 percent of the people are engaged in farming. The traditional pursuits of fur trapping and fishing remain important to the economy, but they have been outpaced over the past 30 years by heavy industry.

HISTORY — Siberia is an ancient land where hunters, trappers and fishermen have lived for centuries. But its emergence as an industrial base has occurred only over the last 40 years. Siberia was a land of exile during czarist times and remains so today, but it became a land of refuge during World War II when major industries were relocated there during the Nazi occupation of much of European sectors in the west.

Former Morton Thiokol purchaser pleads guilty to taking kickbacks

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A former Morton Thiokol Inc. purchaser has pleaded guilty to accepting kickbacks from defense subcontractors in return for awarding them business with the aerospace company, the U.S. Attorney's Office confirmed Friday.

U.S. Attorney Brent Ward said that John E. Ward, no relation, had pleaded guilty to one count each of mail fraud, filing a false tax return and receiving a kickback. John Ward is scheduled for sentencing March 15 by U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins.

A 98-count federal grand jury indictment handed up in October charged John Ward with 11 counts of mail fraud, 14 counts of wire fraud, one count of income tax evasion and the false tax report charge.

But as part of a plea bargain he changed his innocent plea to guilty during a closed hearing Tuesday. Prosecutors said they kept the deal secret to coincide with the sentencing Friday afternoon of Harold Stites, an Ogden supplier who earlier pleaded guilty to paying John Ward a kickback.

"In return for Ward's cooperation and guilty pleas, we agreed to limit the number of counts and not argue for more than a certain amount of incarceration at the time of sentencing," Brent Ward said. He declined to reveal what the government's recommendation would be.

Stites was sentenced by U.S District Judge Bruce S. Jenkins to a one-year suspended prison term, three years probation and a $30,000 fine.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Gregory Diamond said that over a four-year period from late 1982 to early 1986, Stites is estimated to have paid John Ward weekly sums ranging from $100 to $2,600 — between $30,000 and $50,000 total.

Brent Ward said prosecutors could not estimate how much John Ward had earned from his schemes, but that it was over $100,000.

"This situation with John Ward started and I didn't know how to stop it," Stites told the judge. "Mr. Ward would say, 'Hey, I need to borrow some money. Do you have any?' "

Diamond said the payments worked on a perrcentage basis, with Ward receiving 10 percent of Stites' 30 percent profit.

Sometimes, Stites said, "this money was passed in a magazine. Sometimes it was passed in a toolbox."

Stites, 50, said the Department of Defense had suspended dealings with his company, THESSCO, for up to 15 years, affecting up to half of the company's gross profits.

Defense attorney Glenn Mecham asked Jenkins not to fine his client too much because Stites had exhausted much of his income through payments to Ward and because of the government ban.

Neither Morton Thiokol nor any other current or former employees were charged in the kickback scheme, in which John Ward purportedly routed materials from subcontractors through three companies he secretly created and ran from his basement.

The scheme involved routine supply materials — such as batteries, paper towels and strapping metal — used during manufacture and development of space shuttle booster rockets, Navy Trident missiles and the Air Force's new Small Intercontinental Ballistic Missile, nicknamed the "Midgetman."

The supplies were purchased for use at the Chicago-based Morton Thiokol's Wasatch Operations in northern Utah.

Brent Ward said that with Ward's and other defendants' assistance, the government was expanding its investigation.

"We're enjoying the cooperation of a number of the defendants in this case," he said. "The investigation has widened considerably and we expect it to lead to further charges in the future against defense contractors."

Utah's chief federal prosecutor declined to reveal further details on the probe except to say "we're of course anxious to examine possible abuses by all defense contractors in Utah and their suppliers."

The charges were the result of a 14-month investigation by the FBI and five other federal agencies which was launched after John Ward left the company in May 1986. However, company officials said his resignation apparently had nothing to do with the investigation. Ward joined the company in 1979 as a buyer.

October's indictment, in addition to Ward and Stites, named seven other individuals and eight companies as defendants. They included: Evelyn Deese, president of ACME Seal and Fastener Inc. of Arlington, Texas; J. Paul Levine, president of New Haven Moving and Equipment Co., Los Angeles; Leo Engel, president of Wholesale Forklift Parts Co. Inc., Salt Lake City; Forman Dawson, owner and president of L&B Machining and Manufacturing Corp. of Placentia, Calif.; and Ira Kenneth Martin, a partner in Complete Industrial, one of the firms created by John Ward.

Levine pleaded guilty on behalf of himself and his company Jan. 8 and was fined a total of $20,000.

Iranians arrested allegedly trying to buy missile parts

BOSTON (AP) — An Iranian and his son were arrested Friday in a Boston railroad yard where they allegedly attempted to buy materials used in the Hawk antiaircraft defense system, officials said.

Ahmad Modarressi, 64, of Tehran, Iran, and Istanbul, Turkey, and his 29-year-old son Majid Modarressi, a resident alien of Cincinnati, were charged with conspiracy and violating the Arms Export Control Act, which prohibits shipment of arms or arms parts to countries not authorized for such shipments by the U.S. State Department.

The parts they were attempting to buy for $280,000, said U.S. Customs spokesman Ed Callanan, "are the brains of the system. They lock onto the missile and are responsible for seeking out aircraft that the missile destroys."

U.S. Magistrate Patti Saris ordered the two men held pending a bail hearing Tuesday.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Gary Crossen said a defense manufacturing official was approached by the younger Modarressi, who told the official that his father could use as many military spare parts as possible and wanted to purchase unlimited supplies of Stinger and Hawk missiles.

A price of $60 million was mentioned during the conversation, said Crossen, who refused to identify the manufacturing official or the company for which he works.

The official immediately contacted federal authorities, Callanan said.

The younger Modarressi told the manufacturing official that his father owned Anahid Import-Export Co. in Tehran. The son allegedly offered the official $100,000 if he could circumvent the State Department's end-user certificate, a department authorization on arms shipments overseas.

Officials in the U.S. Attorney's office said the Modarressis planned to purchase the tubes and other equipment and negotiated for the equipment to be flown directly to Tehran by private plane.

Crossen refused to say whether the Modarressis were working independently or in conjunction with the Iranian government.

According to a news release issued by Customs, the elder Modarressi, after purchasing the parts, would have participated in more lucrative sales.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1988 Regional Spelling Bee March 26 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 25. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

panache — (noun) If someone says your wardrobe reflects great "panache," that person is giving you a compliment. "Panache" means dash or showy in style and action. The word "panache" is French and based on the earlier Italian word "pennacchio," meaning "small cluster of feathers." Knights sometimes added feathers to ornament their metal helmets. Over time, panache has come to describe anything done with style or flair.

Naples residents try to preserve Utopia-by-the-sea

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the last 10 years, Florida's growth rate has been triple that of the nation's and Naples has been the country's fastest-growing metropolitan area in the 1980s. Residents of Naples, trying to preserve their Utopia-by-the-sea, are vowing not to repeat the mistakes of the boom cities of the past.

By DAN SEWELL

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — Fed up with harsh winters and a bleak economy in East Lansing, Mich., Jane Fitzpatrick and her husband dreamed of life by the sea in sunny South Florida.

They considered the teeming Atlantic "Gold Coast" first, but there was culture shock in Latinized Miami and in the nearly solid line of high-rises on the beaches stretching to West Palm Beach. They turned to Florida's southern Gulf Coast and found too many cars, too many people and too many shopping centers in cities such as Sarasota and Fort Myers.

Then they came to Naples, and found home.

"It had a much prettier look," Ms. Fitzpatrick, 35, recalls 2½ years later. "The people were friendly and it had a quaint feeling. And it looked like it had a chance. The damage hadn't been done yet."

Florida, the nation's fastest-growing state over the last three decades, surpassed Pennsylvania this year to become the fourth most-populous state. And Naples, a last frontier of year-round sun and sand, is a microcosm of that frantic growth. In Naples, the rush is on.

"This is a hot town," says John Mueller, whose Mueller Company is one of the city's leading real estate firms. "Everybody wants to get in on it. The real estate prices are zooming, especially on the beachfront lots. Once they're gone, there will be no more."

A palm-fringed waterfront lot in exclusive Port Royal worth $42,500 in 1973 is going for $475,000 today. One dazzling home sold for $1.1 million, and an offer of $2 million was received before closing was completed, Mueller says.

Mueller, whose Minnesota family years ago sold the egg noodle company that still bears its name, moved here with his wife in 1972. It seemed a perfect place to raise their two daughters.

The elegant interiors of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, which opened two years ago, are part of the rapid new growth of Naples, Fla. Another world-class hotel opened in the city last year.

"The economy was strong, but there wasn't the pressure," Mueller says. "It was a nice, sleepy town."

Naples is wide-awake now.

The population in the Naples area, fewer than 6,000 people just three decades ago, jumped from 85,971 in 1980 to about 125,000 at the end of 1986. A Dun & Bradstreet report released in March called Naples the fastest-growing metropolitan area in the nation.

The ultraplush Ritz-Carlton, where the valets wear tuxedos and giant floral displays rise from marble floors, opened two years ago and was joined last year by another world-class hotel, The Registry, which has counted among its guests celebrities such as Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr., Henry Kissinger, Brooke Shields, corporate chairmen and Arab sheiks.

That growth also has brought snarled traffic, one-hour waits at the best restaurants, and a flock of entrepreneurs.

There are dozens of banks, where as recently as 1960 the only bank in Collier County was in tiny Everglades City.

Now, Mueller says, "The financial competition is feverish; the stockbrokers, the Realtors, the lawyers are coming in to try to make their million."

"You can't always have your Utopia to yourself. Growth is inevitable. If it has to come, let's do it right."

Ms. Fitzpatrick is Collier County's growth management coordinator, a position just recently created. "We can't stop growth," she says, "but we can control growth."

Her job stems from landmark state legislation passed in 1985-86 as Florida's politicians tried to bridle growth in a state that has swelled in population from 5 million in 1960 and is expected to have 20 million residents by the year 2000. Every Florida county must submit plans in 1989 detailing how every inch of their land will be used.

Florida, which has no state income tax, last April extended its 5 percent sales tax to services including advertising, lawyers' fees and construction. The controversial expansion of the sales tax is expected to generate $761 million this fiscal year.

However, a special statewide commission reported earlier this year that with an average of 893 people moving to Florida each day, it will cost $52.9 billion to pay for growth-related needs such as new roads and new schools over the next 10 years.

"It staggers the mind," says Tom Pelham, head of the state's Department of Community Affairs in Tallahassee.

A special concern in the state that was discovered by Spanish explorer Juan Ponce de Leon during his search for the mythical Fountain of Youth is the large number of elderly people. While there were only 123,000 Americans over age 85 at the turn of the century, there are today 173,000 over 85 in Florida alone.

With longer lives meaning more years of retirement, the sunny peninsula has more than 2 million people over age 65, a population segment that has doubled in the past decade and a half.

Projections released in July by the University of Florida Bureau of Economic and Business Research indicate there will be 364,000 people over age 85 by the year 2000.

"What these numbers tell me is there's going to be a much heavier demand put on both private and public services over the next decade, especially in the area of health care," says John C. Henretta, a researcher with the university's Center for Gerontological Studies.

The continuing stream of people is also putting intense pressure on the environment.

An increasingly vocal and well-organized environmental lobby is insisting that more be done to protect the many sensitive wetlands.

"Florida is a bellwether state. How Florida manages its growth is going to continue to be a major issue," National Audubon Society head Peter Berle told the annual Everglades Coalition meeting this year.

Wolf kill pleases some, upsets others

AP Laserphoto

Wolf Haven America founder and president Stephen Kuntz pets Kathleen, a Buffalo wolf, in her enclosure at the non-profit wolf sanctuary near Tenino, Washington last summer. Kuntz wants people to know that wolves are noble, shy, intelligent animals, intensely affectionate and loyal to their mates and pups and unfairly portrayed as savage and malicious.

SEATTLE (AP) — In the dead of winter in remote forests near the top of the world, hunters firing semiautomatic weapons from helicopters ambush packs of gray wolves whose scant hopes of escape die in the deep snow.

The men with the guns are on government business.

The aerial hunt, which involves luring packs into clearings baited with dead moose, is part of British Columbia's wolf management program. It has fostered more intense debate than any wildlife issue since the baby seal hunt off Canada's east coast, halted five years ago after continual protest.

Demonstrations against the kill were scheduled recently in Vancouver, B.C.; Seattle; Portland, Ore.; San Francisco; Los Angeles, and Boulder, Colo., according to Myra Finkelstein, co-director of Friends of the Wolf, an activist group.

"Wolves elicit tremendous emotion in people," said Ralph Archibald, a wildlife biologist and carnivore specialist in the Wildlife Branch of the province's Ministry of Environment and Parks. "We're attempting to separate the emotional and socio-political issues from the technical ones. It's very easy to say but very difficult to do."

Since 1982, the government has killed 1,000 wolves in an attempt to increase the size of herds of elk, moose, caribou, mountain sheep and other large game animals sought by hunters. The powerful provincial hunting industry, which generates more than $35 million in annual revenue, has helped finance the kill in past years.

Ministry officials believe the program is working, but environmentalists and some biologists argue it is merely depleting the wolf population in British Columbia, which has dropped by tens of thousands of animals in the last 50 years. It is now estimated at 7,000 or fewer.

"I give the wolf 10 to 15 years in British Columbia," said biologist Jack Laufer, a director of the Northwest Wildlife Preservation Society in Vancouver, B.C. "They kill them on Vancouver Island because they're near deer. They kill them in the south because they don't want any wolves in their cattle. They kill them in the north because they eat moose. It's getting to the point where the wolf has nowhere to go."

Once plentiful across the northern half of the world, wolves have been shot, trapped, burned and hanged to extinction in much of their historic habitat. An estimated 20,000-24,000 live in North America, mostly in Alaska and Canada. Of 24 subspecies that once roamed freely, at least eight are extinct, including two native to British Columbia.

Wolves are protected as an endangered species in the continental United States, where programs are under way to reintroduce them where they have disappeared. Canada does not consider the wolf threatened, although it is listed as such by the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, a worldwide wildlife group.

"There are people who love wolves and say they can do no wrong and those who hate them and think they should be eliminated," said Don Robinson, chairman of the wildlife committee for the B.C. Wildlife Federation, a group of about 37,000 hunters and fishermen who support the control program. "The truth is probably somewhere in between. Wolves have a right to be here, but like rats, they sometimes impinge on what man wants to do."

Proponents say the program will stop the predation that has decimated big-game populations since the 1970s. Environmentalists and some biologists argue that the government studies used to justify the kill are flawed and fail to consider factors such as poaching, increased hunting and habitat loss that might have reduced the herds.

Concerned Americans have urged tourism boycotts of British Columbia until the kills stop. Howling protesters, several dressed in polyester wolf suits, recently chained themselves to the door of a fur shop on tony Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills to call attention to the Canadian hunt.

The ministry is scrutinizing the data used to justify the last three aerial hunts to determine if the program should be changed, a review prompted in part by public outcry and dissent within the ministry itself.

No hunt has been announced for 1988 pending completion of the review, but environmentalists are preparing to protest in the Kechika and Muskwa valleys in northeastern British Columbia, where the kill has taken place for three of the last four years.

Friends of the Wolf has scheduled a "Wolf Rendezvous" in mid-February to disrupt the Muskwa hunt. Three directors of the group plan to parachute into the valley, where other protesters will meet them.

Elk, caribou, moose, deer and even bison roam the rugged region, as do wolves, cougars, grizzlies and black bears. It also is home to guide-outfitters, hunters, trappers, Indians, conservationists, government biologists and foresters. It is a popular vacation spot for foreign hunters, often Americans and Germans, who pay thousands of dollars for guides and equipment to bag trophy animals.

"Not only have you got more rich natural systems up there than just about anywhere else, you've also got this God-awful mish-mash of human user groups who all have conflicting views," said Dr. Gordon Haber, a wildlife scientist asked by conservation groups to review the Kechika-Muskwa wolf control program. He plans to release his report later this winter.

"When you throw all the principals in the same pot, and they all start going at each other, which is essentially what's going on down there, you find yourself with a very interesting problem," said Haber, who has spent 25 years studying Alaskan wolves from his home north of Anchorage.

Wolves are fair game year-round on Vancouver Island, and in September the government opened the area north of the Montana border to wolf hunting and trapping for the first time in 20 years. The season was canceled less than two months later to avoid jeopardizing the U.S. wolf recovery program.

Aerial hunting began in 1984 on the recommendation of government biologist John Elliott, whose research, used to justify the Muskwa hunt, concluded that caribou populations in northeastern British Columbia had fallen by 75 percent, mountain sheep by 50 percent and moose by 80 percent.

Protest was mobilized by the revelation that private groups connected with hunting the game animals were helping finance the kill. The hunt was suspended in 1986 but resumed last year, when 125 wolves were killed.

"Someone sitting in a helicopter shooting wolves doesn't fit the image of a wildlife biologist most people have," Archibald said. "But looking at it practically, shooting wolves is the most humane and efficient way to remove those animals."

Elliott, who has himself participated in the kill, has stated a government goal of eradicating 75 percent of the estimated 180 to 400 Muskwa wolves. Biologists and conservationists believe that government support of wolf control has resulted in hundreds of unreported kills.

The wildlife preservation society estimated 6,100 wolves in British Columbia as of September. The latest government figure is 7,000, the same as in 1980.

"No one really knows," said the society's executive director Sherry Pettigrew, a fact that frustrates ecologists who believe the government should count the wolves and study the predator-prey relationship for at least several years before beginning control programs.

"Nowhere in British Columbia is there any attempt being made to eliminate wolves," said Dr. Ian McTaggart-Cowan, a renowned biologist, conservationist and wildlife consultant who taught Haber and Elliott as graduate students. "But it's a difficult situation up there. I have some sympathy for the people saying, 'Hold on a minute. Don't go too far until you know in more detail what you need to do to achieve your wildlife management objectives.'"

The government insists recent wolf control measures are reviving game animal populations, but other researchers dispute that. Four University of Guelph scientists who reviewed the statistics concluded the kill had "no biological basis or biological justification."

Indeed, some wolf ecologists believe the government program has worsened the situation because surviving single wolves or pairs now kill as many or more game animals for food than big migrating packs of wolves did.

"To me, it looks like a situation that was terribly mismanaged," biologist Laufer said. "They have overkilled the amount of moose and caribou they should have...but the scapegoat can't be one of the government biologists or the government. So it's got to be the wolf."

Unwanted wolves find haven among friends

TENINO, Wash. (AP) — On Friday nights when the weather is warm, 200 humans gather around a fire, throw back their heads and howl at the moon. Thirty-five wolves howl back. Then everybody howls together.

No wolves have lived in the Washington wild for more than 50 years. When the forest echoes with wolf song, it can only mean Howl-In time at Wolf Haven America, one of the nation's largest private sanctuaries for an animal as revered and reviled as any on Earth.

"All the wolves that are here were virtually marked for death in one form or another, (except) those that were born here," said Wolf Haven founder and president Stephen Kuntz, standing in front of a pack of Eastern timber wolves sent to him after they were used in a University of Connecticut research project into wolf behavior. "No one else would take them."

Twelve years ago, Kuntz answered a newspaper ad offering wolf pups and bought himself more problem than pet. Within a few years, Blackfoot was eating the furniture and ripping up the rugs; Kuntz had to get him out of the house.

He hooked up with another wolf owner; within four years, their seven wolves had become 16. Kuntz and his wife, Linda, incorporated when the other owner left five years ago.

Now the non-profit Wolf Haven has 35 wolves, all subspecies of the gray wolf, as well as three foxes and three coyotes. Some of the Wolf Haven residents are extremely rare, like white Arctic wolves Lucan and Clementine. Others are extinct in the wild, such as Buffalo wolves Kathleen and Windsong, whose ancestors roamed the Great Plains with the bison.

They live in 15 enclosures on 20 of the group's 60 acres about 80 miles south of Seattle, where guided tours are available on weekends year-round and Howl-Ins are held on summer Fridays.

"Some were family pets that people found didn't make very good pets," said Kuntz, adding that it is illegal for private citizens to keep wolves as pets or for any other purpose because they are an endangered species. "Some came from zoos that were overstocked. Some came from university projects. We took in these wolves and use them as educational tools for wolves in the wild."

What Kuntz and staff biologist Jack Laufer want people to know is that wolves are noble, shy, intelligent animals, intensely affectionate and loyal to their mates and pups and unfairly portrayed as savage and malicious. In fact, some of Wolf Haven's residents are downright friendly. Kathleen, the Buffalo wolf, leaps and licks like a happy puppy when Kuntz enters her enclosure.

"I see a lot of what we should be in them," Laufer said. "The family is much stronger for the wolf."

Accomplished mathematician 'king of checkers'

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Some may scoff at checkers as a game of children and old men. But Marion Tinsley smiles and says there is often a great deal of complexity lurking beneath what first appears to be quiet, unassuming and simple.

An accomplished mathematician, Tinsley is the undisputed king of checkers.

"Every good checker player needs to be able to play blindfolded," said Tinsley, who can use that technique to play games on up to 20 different boards at the same time.

The Encyclopedia of Checkers describes him this way: "Marion Tinsley is to checkers what Leonardo da Vinci was to science, what Michelangelo was to art and what Beethoven was to music."

Tinsley is ill at ease with that praise. To fend it off, he quotes the Jewish historian Josephus as saying, "Greeks have a high regard for form, but no regard for the truth."

He prefers the latter.

Gently spoken, the 60-year-old professor of higher mathematics at Florida A&M University is tall and thin with a courtly manner, not the sort of fellow you would expect to carry a nickname like "Two-Ton" Tinsley, the ruthless world champion of checkers who successfully defended his title in August in Petal, Miss.

"It's deceptive," he said of checkers. "The rules in checkers are simple so the untutored mind naturally assumes it is simple to play as well."

But, as in math, number systems with the simplest rules turn out to be the most complex, he said.

For that reason, Tinsley says, checkers is actually more complicated than chess, which has more extensive rules. And checker players use only half of the 64-space board on which both games are played.

If chess is like playing a game on an open field, Tinsley says checkers is looking into a deep well. That is because a checkers player has to look ahead of the game and see all possible moves in order to counter an opponent's move.

"I have to analyze and look ahead 15 or 20 moves and consider nearly all the possibilities," he said. "I just can't pick it out by judgment. The player who can look two moves ahead will beat one who looks only one move ahead."

Tinsley, whose IQ was tested above the genius level when he was a child, entered Ohio State University at 15 after skipping four grades. It was there that he found a book on checkers and mastered the game, mainly to keep from getting beaten by other family members.

"I was well conditioned to losing and I hated to lose," said Tinsley. "I found the book and said, 'Oh, revenge.'"

The study paid off. In about 30 years, Tinsley has lost four games.

He has succesfully defended the title seven times since 1955. He retired from the tournament circuit in 1958 when he came to Tallahassee and relinquished the title. He returned to competition in 1970, recaptured the title in 1975 and has held it since.

He defeated his best student, Don Lafferty of Kentucky, in a best-of-40-games match that lasted two weeks in August.

Tinsley still lives a quiet life in his two-story house on a hilltop. Currently on sabbatical, he is looking forward to retiring from the university and spending his time with mathematical research and his checkers.
