U.S. wondering where's Khadafy?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Wednesday the United States has no late information on Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafy's whereabouts or condition.

Asked about an ABC report, aired at midday, that Khadafy is either dead or has left Libya, Speakes said, "I really wouldn't go that far. I'm not sure it's an accurate intelligence conclusion."

The network quoted unnamed American intelligence sources.

Speakes said, on the other hand, that he was not aware of any conclusive evidence Khadafy is alive. "We do not have anything" on Khadafy's whereabouts or his condition, Speakes said.

Libya claims 2nd raid

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Anti-aircraft fire broke out for a half-hour today in the capital, and Libyan officials said the target was a U.S. reconnaissance plane. Reporters heard small arms and mortar fire and saw apparent street skirmishes near Col. Moammar Khadafy's headquarters.

Libya radio claimed U.S. jets today raided the Tarhounah area, 50 miles south of Tripoli, and Allous, 40 miles east of Tripoli, and that four U.S. jets were shot down. It said the U.S. jets failed to hit their targets.

The radio also claimed four U.S. warplanes were shot down in a raid Tuesday night. U.S. officials said the only American attack was before dawn Tuesday, and Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said today that he could not discuss U.S. reconnaissance operations.

U.S. officials said they halted a search for a F-111 fighter-bomber with two crew members missing since the attack. They said it may have crashed in the Mediterranean en route to Libya.

Pentagon sources, while refusing to be specific, said efforts have been made to survey the Libyan targets using satellites and reconnaissance planes. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

Khadafy failed to appear today for a promised news conference, which was to have been his first public appearance since the bombing. Libyan officials insisted he was unhurt by the bombing and denied reports he had fled Libya.

About 70 reporters in a bus were nearing Khadafy's sprawling headquarters compound for today's news conference when small arms fire started about 500 feet from the vehicle.

"Gunfire started and they wheeled the bus around and started back. I turned and saw rounds ricocheting off the street," said Associated Press correspondent Robert H. Reid, who was on the bus. He said it was not clear who was involved in the fighting.

WTC NIRA rodeo to open tomorrow

The 1986 Western Texas College NIRA Rodeo — which begins its four-day run Thursday — will be dedicated to the memory of former county office holders Eldon Perry and Bill Zimmerman.

"Both Eldon and Bill showed their interest in young people and rodeo by donating their services to the WTC rodeo as well as others," said WTC Rodeo Coach Bob Doty.

Perry served as county commissioner for Pct. 1 and Zimmerman as adult and juvenile probation officer for Scurry County.

The rodeo is being held in conjunction with a full slate of WTC activities related to college homecoming events this weekend.

Rodeo performances will be nightly Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Scurry County Coliseum. Afternoon competition is slated also Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m.

Contestants from about 20 colleges and universities are entered, all from the southwest

Chamber facility to receive 'fixup'

A "paint-up, fix-up" for the Snyder Chamber of Commerce building and grounds was given tentative approval Tuesday by the chamber board.

The group authorized director Fred Castillo to prepare a detailed proposal for the renovation work. This is expected to be considered at the May meeting of the board.

General areas of repair pointed to included painting and possibly paneling some interior walls. Areas of worn carpet and tiled areas where carpet might be needed were noted also.

In addition, considerable work for the landscaping outside the building was also said needed. This would include replacing trees and shrubs.

The approval came during the regular April meeting of the chamber board.

Castillo reported to fellow directors also regarding a proposal to add a computer system to handle chamber records and business transactions. These plans are still being gathered, however, and no detailed proposal was given Tuesday.

The board also received an update on the March chamber ban-

Model club off 'flying'

By NOBLE B. YOUNG
SDN Staff Writer

Although barely three months old, members of the Snyder Model Airplane Club are reporting good progress in attracting members and getting beginners started in the radio controlled modeling hobby.

John Johnson, Cogdell Hospital pharmacist, and a small group of friends decided to organize a modeling club earlier this year. The group held their first monthly meeting in February.

At that time, only Johnson had much experience in the hobby and was the only one with a flying model.

Since that first meeting, attendance has grown with 15 to 20 on hand for most events.

According to Johnson, at least 10 members now possess models either flying or ready to fly.

According to member Larry

Despite fears to the contrary, most of us lived through yesterday's income tax deadline.

A cartoon in the Wall Street Journal helped make the day. The cartoon showed a man talking to his wife about a "fair tax."

He said, "My idea of a fair tax is to tax the rich, provide assistance for the poor, and leave the rest of us alone."

One fellow was philosophical about his tax paying. "I'm proud to be an American and pay taxes in the U.S. The only thing is--I could be just as proud for half the money."

Next Monday is a state holiday in observance of the Sequiscentennial. There has been a lot of interest in Texas trivia, but one teacher plans to rephrase one of her questions about Texas history. Here's why:

Where was the Texas Declaration of Independence signed?" the teacher asked.

A third grader answered, "On the bottom."

Juveniles linked to 17 cases

Police report 17 recent criminal incidents were cleared Tuesday afternoon with the arrests of two male juveniles, ages 14 and 15.

Offenses attributed to the pair range from burglary to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle with charges of misdemeanor possession of marijuana filed at the time of the arrests.

Around 11:50 a.m. Tuesday, Linda Good of 202 35th St. reported to police she had discovered two boys inside her residence.

U.S. received little support from allies

WASHINGTON (AP) — As in the past, the Reagan administration asked its European allies for help against Libya. And as usual, the United States got little support.

According to U.S. and European officials, the administration sought British, French and Spanish help in mounting the complicated, long-range air strike against Libya on Monday.

Britain said yes. France and Spain said no.

Afterward the United States looked to its NATO allies for expressions of support for the raid, which President Reagan said was aimed solely at terrorist targets and prompted by conclusive evidence of Libyan involvement in terrorism. Few nations applauded.

West German Foreign Minister Hans Deitrich Genscher, for example, told reporters after he met with Secretary of State George Shultz he thought the military approach was wrong.

Echoing the reaction voiced throughout Western Europe, Genscher said, "We prefer political efforts to tackle these problems."

Of all the allies, Britain was the most supportive of the U.S. action beforehand and afterward. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Britain approved the use of bombers based at U.S. fields in England.

Sir Geoffrey Howe, the British foreign minister, said after the raid that Britain had "clear evidence" of Libyan plans for more terrorist attacks, and "in those circumstances some action becomes not merely justifiable but essential."

Search reveals possible remains

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Divers have retrieved more pieces of Challenger's wrecked crew cabin, and radio communications indicate more astronaut remains may have been found.

A coded message from the USS Pierce on Tuesday referred to a "Tom O'Malley," a term used earlier by ships in the cabin search area. It is believed to indicate the recovery of remains.

Sources close to the investigation said last week that salvage crews felt they would find no more body parts after stormy weather left a deposit of silt over the cabin debris.

But the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said some remains of one of the seven astronauts had not been found, and when the weather cleared, a commercial scallop boat was hired for one day to help clear the silt and the search resumed.

No information was available on whether the newly-found remains, if there are such remains, belong to that one astronaut.

NASA has declined comment on the bodies out of deference to the families.

Once all the remains have been identified, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will hold a brief ceremony here and then turn them over to families.

Meanwhile, metallurgists and other experts continued their examination of a two-ton piece of the right booster rocket containing part of the joint that failed. Investigators believe that caused the Jan. 28 shuttle explosion.

The scorched 11-foot-by-20-foot chunk was unloaded from the salvage ship Stena Workhorse Tuesday and taken to a hangar. Clearly visible was a large hole burned through the joint and the surrounding steel casing. The Navy said the hole measured 15-by-28-inches.

Couple's Endless Arguments Act as Bedroom Wet Blanket

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I fight and argue all the time, but we never settle anything. He clams up because he's afraid if he really got mad, he will blow up, so he tells me to drop the subject and he won't let me talk anymore. When I drop it, a lot of resentment builds up, and the next time we fight, I bring up the last one which wasn't settled.

The big problem is that this causes problems in the bedroom. I, for one, cannot get intimate and loving when things are bothering me from our last fight. I have tried to tell him this, but he says stored-up resentment has nothing to do with intimate relations.

Don't say, "Go to a counselor." We have been to two—one for three years. It hasn't helped. We can't get a divorce either, as we are bound by God's word. Besides, we have no grounds for one. We have one child. What should we do?

RESENTMENT IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR RESENTMENT: Your husband is wrong. Stored-up resentment has everything to do with intimate relations. If two counselors have failed to explain this, you need a third, because that is the root of your problem. And in order to resolve it, it's imperative that a professional counselor teach you how to settle an argument and let go of the resentment, so it doesn't surface in the bedroom.

DEAR ABBY: As a licensed hairstylist, I have been asked the same two questions at least once a day for the last 25 years, so maybe if you answer them in your column, people will quit asking.

Question No. 1: "What do you charge for just a little trim?" First of all, the client pays for the barber's expertise—not for the amount of hair that is cut off and swept up. Also, "a little trim" usually requires some styling, shaping, thinning and cutting, so the price is the same as a regular haircut.

Question No. 2: "How much do you charge for children?" For some strange reason, most people seem to think that a child's haircut should cost half as much as an adult's. Actually it should cost twice as much, because it takes twice as long to give a child a proper haircut, and it's twice as much work. (I personally feel as though I've wrestled 10 rounds with a gorilla after cutting a child's hair.)

Please print this. I'd like to frame it and hang it in my shop.

JACQUES THE CLIPPER

DEAR JACQUES: Here it is, for those clients who expect you to trim (or shave) your prices.

DEAR ABBY: I read you daily in Korea and need some motherly advice. I am a young woman who became engaged five months ago. The problem is that I am in the military in Korea and my fiance (also in the military) is stationed far away.

Being so far from my fiance, I needed someone to spend some time with, so I met this other guy (also in the military, but he is stationed here), and we eventually fell in love. The truth is, I love them both and don't want to hurt either one. They both want to marry me. I am in a very confused state. Please tell me what to do.

ONE MAN TOO MANY

DEAR TOO MANY: Since you can't decide which man to marry, don't marry either one. If you were really in love with your fiance, you would have been too emotionally committed to him to have "needed" another guy to spend time with. Infatuation? Yes, ma'am. Love? No, sir!

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 30, married and have a 5-year-old son. We've been trying for three years to have another child. After many tests, my doctor put me on Clomid and progesterone for four months. I still can't get pregnant. Now he's suggesting that I take Robitussin cough syrup to get pregnant. Have you ever heard of this?

DEAR READER — It sounds peculiar, but Robitussin can help some women become pregnant. The cough mixture contains guaifenesin, a substance that thins mucus. If your cervical canal secretes mucus that is so thick that it prevents penetration by sperm, Robitussin can reduce mucous viscosity and permit fertilization to take place. Please don't become alarmed and think, as one of my patients did, that you could get pregnant just by drinking cough syrup; there's more to it than that.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a 12-year-old girl. I was born with a shallow hip socket. Could I pass it on to my family? Could I pop it out of place if I did splits?

DEAR READER — Some hip conditions are congenital or inherited. In many patients, stress — like doing a split — could cause a dislocation. I suggest that you discuss your hip problem with your doctor. He or she can give you the best advice for your particular condition.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is vanilla purchased in Central America or Mexico safe to use?

DEAR READER — The U.S. government requires careful control of foods that are manufactured, processed or packaged in this country — or that are imported. Other countries are not so picky. If, when abroad, you purchase vanilla extract that has been made in the United States, you are safe, providing the container has not been opened. On the other hand, vanilla packaged and sold in a foreign country may contain contaminants. Although the chances of becoming sick from such a product are unlikely, I'd advise caution in using foreign edibles that are packaged and sold in foreign countries.

DEAR DR. GOTT — When I was a baby, a doctor told my mother that I would have to take thyroid pills my whole life. Now, many years laters, I'm told I don't need them. However, I have a couple of lumps on my throat, near my jaws. Is this anything to get concerned about?

DEAR READER — Probably not. Doctors know a great deal more about thyroid problems than they did years ago. You may not need the thyroid pills. Your doctor can obtain a blood test that will indicate whether or not you are deficient in thyroid hormone. In addition, a physician can determine if the lumps you describe are in the thyroid gland (and could be kept small by using thyroid pills) or are in the surrounding tissue.

Guest speaker describes life as chapters in a book

Describing her life as chapters of a book, Grace Pryor of Austin spoke to members of the Snyder Christian Women's Club during that group's April luncheon in the Snyder Country Club.

"Through the chapters in my book, whether good or bad, I learned to do what God wanted me to do," she said.

She told the women present that her mother died when she was born. "I was given to my aunt and uncle. Although I called them "Mother and Daddy," I never felt like I really belonged. Because my real father lived near us, I called him "Daddy," too. I spent most of my childhood totally confused and lonely," she explained.

Grace described how she met her husband Dale and how a search for an apartment lead to her becoming a Christian. "But we began having financial problems because I wanted material gain, and we dropped out of church."

Through a series of events, she discovered that she "was not the person I should be." She explained that even through a move she did not want to make, God taught her to expect blessings through obedience.

Her son Lynn, currently minister of youth at Colonial Hill Baptist Church, was featured soloist for the luncheon.

As the meeting's special feature, county entomologist Deanna Myers offered a short presentation on beneficial insects and control of garden pests.

CWC's next meeting is set for May 14 in the Snyder Country Club. The luncheon will feature Harley Bynum with information on restoring photographs, harpist Kim Gorman and speaker Twanna Powell of Amarillo.

Daughter's of American Revolution held their State Conference in Austin on March 12-15. The 87th State Conference was presided over by the State Regent, Mrs. Billie Joe Lovett.

Local delegates attending were Mrs. Bernhard Bartels, regent; Martin Preuitt, Jr. Chapter; and Mrs. Henry F. Clark.

In the business session of the conference, reports of state officers and committee chairmen was made. Workshops included lineage research and junior member organization.

National vice-regent, Mrs. Wayne D. Tiner, distributed copies of her brochure, "Bernardo Galvez - unsung hero." The brochure detailed his part in the American Revolution. The Texas Legislature has passed a resolution honoring Galvez and authorizing future public school history text books to tell his story.

A plaque will be dedicated to him at the Galvez Hotel in Galveston on June 15.

Discussed was one of the least familiar projects of Texas DAR, the DAR Forest Program located in East Texas. It provided income of over $18,000 in the past year. Ten percent of this goes to pay the consulting forester.

Attending the conference were 458 delegates and 104 alternates. There were 144 chapters out of 172 that attended.

SHS Tigers aren't sharp, but win anyway

MONAHANS -- Jimmy Velasquez was at his best and his worst here Tuesday night but that wasn't anything different from most of the other Tiger players.

Snyder struggled and shined alternately in pulling off its sixth straight triumph, a 10-5 win over the Loboes. The Tigers, for example, managed a hot 11 hits from the bats yet committed eight errors in the field. And Velasquez, his usual sharp control eluding him at times, took eight batters to a full count and walked six of them while throwing a whopping 161 pitches, yet he recorded 13 strikeouts and gave up just six hits.

Clearly, it was the best and the worst of the Tigers.

"It was not one of our real good games but we'll take it," said Snyder Coach Albert Lewis afterward. "Monahans played real well. They challenged us. It wasn't a real good game for us but in our defense, the field in Monahans works against visiting teams. The background is white and the infield is caliche and it's real hard to pick up the ball. It was taking some bad hops, too."

Snyder got on the scoreboard first, with Velasquez' seventh home run of the season. The 320-foot shot over the left field fence came on the fourth pitch of the second inning, off of Monahans starter Alfonza Almonza. Later in the stanza, Brad Holcomb and Mike McWilliams cracked back-to-back doubles. Holcomb scored.

Monahans answered in the bottom of the second when Ronnie Ulrich walked and Edward Sanchez reached on a throwing error. The bases were loaded when Velasquez issued a two-out walk to John Hinds. Ronnie Molina then followed with a two-run single and Hinds came in on an error when Snyder tried to catch Molina stealing second.

The Loboes got another run in the third inning when Chad Wood singled aboard, reached second on a sacrifice bunt and scored on a single from Ulrich.

Snyder went back in front in the fifth inning. McWilliams bunted safely and took second on an error. Michael Long sent him scurrying home with a double. Chris Fryar later cracked a double which tied the game at 4-4. Justin Webb pushed Fryar across when he hit a shot the left fielder couldn't handle.

The Tigers added one run in the sixth and four more in the seventh as Monahans' pitching evaporated. In the sixth, Holcomb singled home pinch runner Michael Carter, who came into the game after Kenneth Pickering cracked a basehit. Holcomb's single would later prove to be the winning hit of the ballgame.

Snyder went on to load the bases in the inning, but Edward Sanchez came to the mound to replace Almonza and the Tigers produced no more runs.

In the seventh, Webb and Pickering both walked. Holcomb followed with a one-run single. McWilliams then got Snyder's third base on balls of the inning, sending Sanchez to the showers. Long greeted new pitcher Hinds with a bases-clearing triple to end the Snyder scoring.

Velasquez struggled to finish the game, hurling 45 pitches in the final inning. Two walks and an error served to load the bases. A fourth walk pushed Molina across with Monahans' final run.

Despite the six walks, Velasquez, 7-3 now and 3-0 in district play, made the key pitches when necessary. He struck out six straight batters in the fifth and sixth innings.

Snyder was led offensively by Holcomb, who was three-for-four from the plate. McWilliams was two-for-three and Velasquez and Long were both two-for-four. Six of the nine Snyder batters got at least one hit each.

The win brings Snyder to a 13-7 season record and leaves the team at 4-0 in District 2-4A play. The Tigers will entertain Fort Stockton at 8 p.m. Friday night in Moffett Field.

Monahans falls to 5-9 and 0-4.

Knepper handcuffs Giants; Houston rolls to victory, 8-3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Bob Knepper, who broke into major league baseball with the San Francisco Giants, now has eight consecutive pitching victories over them.

"For some reason, I always feel very relaxed here," the Houston Astros' left-hander said after continuing his domination in the Giants' home opener Tuesday.

An early 5-0 lead helped, too, Knepper said after the Astros' 8-3 victory in a six-homer power show before a crowd of 46,638 at Candlestick Park.

"I didn't have any of my stuff, but I got those early runs to work with," said Knepper, who beat the Giants with a five-hit shutout last week.

San Francisco starter Vida Blue said, "I think I got caught up in the hype of the game. I could have relaxed a little more."

The veteran left-hander, 0-2 this season after two matchups with Knepper, was seeking his 200th career victory Tuesday.

Houston hit four homers, and the first of two by Phil Garner gave the Astros a 3-0 lead before Blue retired a batter. Will Clark and Bob Brenly homered for the Giants.

Clark's two-run shot in the fifth inning was a show-stopper. The rookie first baseman homered at Houston on April 8 in his first big league at-bat, and he warmed up for homer No. 2 with singles his first two times up Tuesday. He got a standing ovation, bigger than those for Hall of Famers Willie McCovey and Willie Mays during pre-game introductions, after his homer.

"He left that pitch out over the plate and I hit it hard. That's my job," Clark said. "The reaction by the fans made me feel great. It's going to be fun playing in front of them."

Clark, a left-handed batter, is 5-for-7 against Knepper so far, and in his first seven big league games is hitting .355. He was in college, Mississippi State, a year ago and played in only 65 minor league games last summer.

"He has a chance to be a consistent .300 hitter through his career," Knepper said. "As long as he keeps working hard, he could be a great one."

Garner drove in the game's first four runs with his homers, Kevin Bass made it 5-0 with a solo shot off Blue, and Glenn Davis belted a three-run homer in the seventh off reliever Mark Davis.

Garner's four RBI gave him eight in the last two games. He also singled Tuesday and is hitting .600 (6 for 10) in the young season.

"Maybe I should just quit now," he said.

The Astros, not considered a power-hitting team, had only three homers, including two by Davis, in their first six games.

"The field was so damp today that we didn't think we could take advantage of our speed. So we went another way and used the long ball," Manager Hal Lanier joked.

Rookie grand-slams Seattle past Sutton, California, 9-4

by The Associated Press

At this rate, Seattle rookie Danny Tartabull will wind up with more than 80 home runs and almost 300 runs batted in this season.

For now, the Mariners rookie merely hopes to duplicate some of the things he has done during the first week of the 1986 season.

Tartabull continued his hot streak Tuesday night, hitting a grand-slam home run in the first inning that capped an eight-run explosion against Don Sutton, 0-2, and carried Seattle over the California Angels 9-4.

Tartabull, who has homered in four straight games, leads the major leagues with 14 runs batted in. He is hitting .353 and his four home runs ties him with Cincinnati's Dave Parker for the big-league high.

Elsewhere in the American League, New York beat Cleveland 6-2 and Oakland downed Minnesota 8-2. Detroit at Chicago was snowed out.

Sutton, bidding for his 296th career victory, started out well in California, retiring Tartabull on a ground ball to begin the game.

But Phil Bradley followed with a double and Ivan Calderon homered. Sutton then got Gorman Thomas on a fly ball.

Alvin Davis and Jim Presley singled and Dave Henderson hit a two-run double. After Steve Yeager and Spike Owen walked, Tartabull hit his slam over the left-center field fence.

Tartabull, a 23-year-old second baseman, hit 43 homers last season at Class AAA Calgary.

Yankees 6, Indians 2

Joe Niekro pitched four-hit ball over 7 1-3 innings and Mike Easler drove in three runs as New York raised its record to 6-1, the best in the major leagues.

Niekro, 1-0, gave up one run and leading the Yankees to their fifth straight victory. Dave Winfield and Ken Griffey each had three of New York's 13 hits.

Andre Thornton hit his second homer of the season for the Indians in the ninth off Brian Fisher, who pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his first save.

Athletics 8, Twins 2

Moose Haas, acquired before the season from Milwaukee, pitched a five-hitter for his second victory of the season over the Twins. Bill Bathe doubled home the tying run in the fifth inning and then scored on a sacrifice fly by Dwayne Murphy to give the Athletics a 3-2 lead.

Oakland scored four runs in the sixth on two-out, RBI singles by Bathe, Tony Phillips and Murphy off reliever Dennis Burtt, and Dusty Baker's run-scoring single against Pete Filson.

Bill Latham, acquired from the New York Mets in the off-season, took the loss in his first AL start.

Lady Tiger duo confident relay squads will do well

They are the unsung heroines of the Lady Tiger track team, the relay specialists who go largely unnoticed by everyone except their teammates and coaches.

Kim Koening and Yolanda Anderson makeup the backbone of Snyder's 400, 800 and 1,600 meter relays - races in which will in all probability make the difference between being a district champion or an also-ran at the 2-4A Track and Field Meet in Monahans this Saturday.

"I like running the relays," said Koening, a junior who has run individual races, such as the 200 meters, before. "I like everybody on the relays. We get along real well."

Anderson, who also enters the long jump competition and used to run the 100 meters, agrees. "I like it better than the 100. You have to do more to help."

Both girls agree there is more pressure in running the relays, but they readily accept it.

"The pressure doesn't really bother me," said Anderson, who is just a sophomore. "I know if they push me more I can go farther. I'm usually tired by the start of the 1,600 (the final event) but the girls always pump me up to go faster. They just help me to do my best and that's what I go out and do."

Like Anderson, Koening takes a lot of pride in the relays, both as an individual and as a member of the team.

"I like to know I'm running my best. I've done a lot better this year. I swam all year and I have been running all year."

She has a split time of 26.3 in the 800 meters and a 61.0 in the 1,600, generally considered Snyder's best two relays in terms of chances to qualify for region.

Koening is the lead off runner in the 400 and the third leg in both the 800 and 1,600.

"It can get scary," she admits. "I start psyching myself up early in the week. I have three handoffs and one flub can really mess it up."

She hands off to Karlene Thompson in the 800 and 1,600 relays and admits she has to be ready. Thompson holds the best split times in the two relays.

"Karlene always looks after me. You get tired by the time you reach the end of a 400 (in the 1,600 relay) but she never takes off and leaves me. But in the 800 I'd better be ready. She takes off," laughed Koening.

Both Koening and Anderson look for Snyder's relay teams to do well Saturday.

"I really enjoy the 800 relay best and I think we'll do real well in that Saturday. I think we'll do well in all of them," said Koening.

"I feel like we have a good chance of going past district," stated Anderson. "I feel we have a chance to go to state. That's one of my goals, to go to state."

Snyder has the district's best time in the 1,600 relay, a 4:14.0. Sweetwater is a fraction behind with a 4:14.4, followed by Fort Stockton with a 4:16.2.

Sweetwater's 1:45.1 leads the 800 contingent. Snyder has run a 1:45.3 and Fort Stockton a 1:47.0. In the 400, the best times have been a 50.3 by Fort Stockton, a 50.5 by Sweetwater, a 51.1 by Snyder and a 51.8 by Lake View.

Snyder's 400 order is Koening, Anderson, Stephanie McKnight and Sharnette Thompson. Katrina Reed leads off the 800 and is followed by Anderson, Koening and Karlene Thompson. The 1600 team consists of the same four girls though the order is Anderson, Reed, Koening and Karlene Thompson.

Spurs won't let record bother them in playoffs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - The San Antonio Spurs aren't letting their worst season in history stop them from being optimistic about their chances in the NBA playoffs.

The 35-47 Spurs take on the world champion Los Angeles Lakers, 62-20, Thursday in Inglewood, Calif., in the opening round of the playoffs.

"I think we've got a 50-50 chance to win," said Spurs forward Mike Mitchell.

"We'll have to play a perfect game. Then we can stun the world of basketball," he said.

"I think we can do it," agreed 6-4 guard Alvin Robertson. "If I didn't think that, then I shouldn't be playing."

Thursday's opener will be followed by a second game Saturday in Los Angeles. The third in the best of five series is scheduled in San Antonio April 23.

The Spurs' dismal record is due in part at least to heavy injuries.

Point guard Johnny Moore suffered a rare form of meningitis in December and was out for the season.

His replacement Wes Matthews has been haunted by an intestinal tract blockage that threatened to pull him from the roster in February.

Holmes set for fight with Michael Spinks

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - Larry Holmes Jr.'s prediction for his father's rematch against Michael Spinks Saturday night is, "We're going to knock his head off."

That's what dad told spectators Tuesday at his public workout.

Once again, the former heavyweight champion refused to talk to reporters except to exchange words with Dick Young, a New York Post columnist, who he ordered out of the workout.

Three members of Holmes' entourage carried Young from the room in which the fighters are training for the scheduled 15-round bout at the Las Vegas Hilton.

Many reporters left the workout after the incident.

Before Young's removal, Holmes had turned to a group of reporters and said, "If you want Dick Young in here, OK, but I won't be at the press conference tomorrow."

Spinks and Holmes were scheduled to attend a news conference at 11 a.m. PST today.

Later, Holmes told the crowd of several hundred people, who seemed to enjoy the commotion: "Most of these writers are not decent human beings."

"He's mad," Spinks said of Holmes' chip-on-the-shoulder behavior as he prepares for the fight. "It's his pride."

The 36-year-old Holmes was a 7½-5 favorite to avenge the only loss of his 49-fight career and regain the International Boxing Federation title.

Hines is hooked...

Texas bobsledder? Odessan is one

ODESSA, Texas (AP) - Thurman Hines laughed when his roommate discovered the advertisement last year seeking applicants for the U.S. bobsled team.

After all, Hines, a graduate of Odessa Permian High School, and Gil Wheeler were used to the hot, dry conditions in West Texas while running track at the University of Texas-El Paso.

A few weeks later, the Odessa product stood atop a bobsled run in West Germany and convinced a top driver from the host country that he was a veteran brakeman (the man who helps control the sled from the rear seat).

"He asked me, 'How many trips have you had this year,' and I said, oh, I'd had a dozen or so."

Europeans, Hines explained, don't like rookies on their runs. The 11 first-timers on the 18-member U.S. team had been advised to pass themselves off as experienced in order to get practice time.

Soon after arriving, the West Germans called and said some team members hadn't been able to reach the village because of snow. The Americans were welcome to fill those spots in practice.

So Hines' moment of truth arrived. He recalls it vividly.

"The very first time I went down, I pushed as far as I could and did everything we learned in the clinic (a lecture session at Lake Placid, N.Y.)," Hines said.

"Here I am hopping into this sled. It's zero degrees. I have no idea what it's supposed to feel like. I have a new helmet on and it's fogging up. We got to the first turn, and I thought I was going to throw up."

But he completed three runs that day. "The West German said, 'You really ride well.'" Hines said fear is a great motivator.

That ride down a mountain was nothing compared to the whirlwind of activity that caused the Odessan to become a winter athlete.

Hines said a two-day test was arranged in El Paso to determine athletes' physical abilities.

He decided against taking the test but changed his mind after the first day and took all eight segments of the exam of speed, jumping ability and strength in one day.

He and Wheeler qualified for the final testing in Lake Placid.

"We really scrambled" to get the $400 each to go to New York, Hines said. "Once we got there, we knew we had to make the team or we'd have to hitchhike all the way back to Texas."

They made the grade, were put on per diem expenses and attended the weeklong clinic to give them the basics of bobsledding.

Two weeks later, they were in West Germany challenging some of the top bobsled runs in the world.

Hines said he can't quite describe the thrill. "It's really a weird feeling going down the run. It's not like a roller coaster, because a roller coaster is too controlled."

On the Lake Placid track, which Hines called the most dangerous in the world because of longer straightaways and shorter turns than European layouts, sleds can hit a top speed over 100 mph.

Hines survived three crashes with nothing worse than a sprained wrist and a minor back problem.

"The crashes weren't fun, but if you crash and live ... it's a big thrill to go down, especially after you've crashed."

Hines missed a trip to the world championship when the driver of his sled, the USA III, suffered a severe injury when the metal tip of the runner broke off, sliced through the steel floor of the sled and went completely through one of the man's legs.

But Hines is hooked. Track in El Paso will keep him in shape until August, when he again plans to try out for the U.S. team. He hopes to compete in the 1988 Winter Olympics in Calgary, Canada. He'd like to be a driver by the 1992 Olympics.

Hines said he got plenty of attention in the cold, cold world. Bobsledding Texans are plenty rare, but bobsledding black Texans are even more unique, he noted.

Treasurer notes funds for county

Total county funds stand at a first quarter ending balance near $5 million, according to a report issued Monday by County Treasurer Billy Wayne Thompson.

The report, given to county commissioners, listed total receipts available through all funds on Jan. 1 at some $4,991,738. During the first quarter, the county's receipts were recorded as some $2,621,135 with disbursements listed at some $2,613,626.

General fund receipts were recorded at $882,614 with an additional $5,531 transferred into the fund. The county ended fiscal 1985 with some $2,646,071 on deposit. Dispersements were listed at about $937,889 with an additional $133,612 transferred out resulting in a balance of about $2,462,715.

Thompson noted that the hospital's operating fund was the only account showing a deficit for the quarter — listed as about $13,074. He explained that money was transferred from the hospital's depreciation fund — with assets listed at some $1,191,183 — after the quarter ended.

Cases linked to juveniles

The pair fled and were reportedly spotted about 1:30 p.m. running down the alley in the 200 Block of 35th St. The juveniles were taken into custody shortly after that report.

A large amount of property — reportedly stolen from residences and storage buildings over the past several months — was recovered after the arrests.

Specific incidents attributed to the pair include:

—Burglary of the Cheryl Watkins residence at 204 35th St. with an undetermined amount of cash taken April 14.

—Theft of a BMX type bicycle from the Patricia Goss residence at 3742 Ave. V in December.

—Burglary of an auto parked in the 1900 Block of Coleman Ave. with tapes and a necklace taken. The owner of the vehicle is not yet identified.

Regarding the unauthorized use of a vehicle cases, all vehicles were subsequently found abandonded. Most of the items said taken were recovered also.

Both suspects were released to the custody of their parents following questioning by police Tuesday evening.

Chamber board meets Tuesday

quet — a project now expected to be a "break-even" event regarding expenses and income.

Chamber Manager Mort Ewing noted the cost of audio-vidual equipment plus the approach of elevating all elements of the banquet "up at least one notch" contributed to the expenses.

The entertainment portion of the night — which featured five returning residents currently having successful careers in Hollywood — actually cost "about what we've spent in past years," Ewing noted.

The five stars received round-trip airfare tickets and complimentary banquet tickets for their family as their compensation. Band members for the group Maiden Voyage — who are guild members and consequently can't perform without pay — were paid some $1,500, he said.

The total cost of the banquet is now set at approximately $23,000.

During the monthly membership report, it was noted also that semi-annual chamber dues billed December are now running approximately 30 percent uncollected.

The billing was for $52,800, and to date some $36,800 of this amount has been returned.

Ewing said he believes the majority of unpaid dues can be attributed to "oversight."

Directors attending Tuesday's meeting were Jack Denman, board president, Phil Fortune, Fred Castillo, Max von Roeder, Barbara Williamson, Donna Gray, Elizabeth Potts and Mike Banta. Those absent were Jerry Vestal, Margaret Drum, John Daniel and Harley Bynum.

Libyan situation updated

"As we went back through neighborhoods in a rush, traffic was crazy. People were trying to get out of the way," he said.

Ibrahim Seger of the Foreign Information Department said, "It's anti-aircraft fire. When they heard an American plane overhead, they started shooting."

Libyan radio said a U.S. SR-71 Blackbird reconnaissance plane had violated Libyan airspace.

Libyan officials reacted angrily when they heard short-wave radio reports relaying the journalists' stories of street skirmishes. "It's not true, it's not true," Seger said.

Journalists in the Hotel Al Kabir saw a Libyan patrol boat fire cannon rounds along the Tripoli waterfront, but it was not clear who was firing or their target. Gunfire also was heard from the southern and northwestern sectors of Tripoli.

After the shooting ended, the reporters again were put on a bus to go to Khadafy's compound, several miles from central Tripoli. Khadafy lives and has his military headquarters there.

The Khadafy residence, a two-story blue and white cement building, was peppered with shrapnel from a bomb that left a large crater 10 yards away. Some interior walls were knocked down and plaster was piled up.

Dr. Mohammed Muafa, director of pediatrics at the Fatah University Hospital, said Tuesday he had come to the residence to treat Khadafy's wounded children. He said Khadafy's 15-month-old adopted daughter, Hana, died, and his sons Kanis, 3, and Seph al-Arab, 4½, were wounded.

Western diplomats estimated the death toll from the bombing at 100. Libyan officials would say only that many people were killed, and hospitals said up to 100 people were injured in one residential area.

President Reagan said he ordered the attack because evidence showed Libya plotted the April 5 bombing of a West Berlin discotheque in which a U.S. soldier and a Turkish woman were killed.

Today was the first time reporters were allowed near the Khadafy compound since the attack. A tennis court in the Khadafy compound had bomb and shell holes, and bits of shrapnel and debris littered the area. Trees had their branches blown off and power lines were down.

Khadafy did not appear. Seger said, "He is in Libya," but refused to elaborate.

Libyan officials and the state-run media have insisted Khadafy is alive, unhurt and in control of the country.

region of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association.

Western Texas College women will take the Southwest Region's first place standing into the rodeo. Western is currently in second place in the men's division, behind Tarleton State. Western and Tarleton have been swapping the lead throughout the season.

Any college student can compete in the rodeo, however each school may also designate a six-man team and a three-woman team. Only designated performers can contribute to team points.

At the end of the regular season, the Southwest Region champion and runnerup teams, and first and second place individuals in each event, will compete at the National Finals Rodeo in Bozeman, Mont.

Ticket prices for the rodeo are $4 for adults, $3 for students and $6 for box seats.

Featured at the Thursday night performance will be the announcement of this year's rodeo queen.

On Friday and Saturday night, special appearances of the Six White Horses from Hardin-Simmons University are scheduled.

Also on Saturday night, a homecoming king and queen will be named, selected from returning WTC ex-students.

For these returning students, a hospitality room will be set up in Room A of the coliseum.

Apprenticeship program slated

Apprenticeship programs in Texas will be discussed by Kenneth Lamkin of Lubbock in a meeting set for 11 a.m. Thursday at Western Texas College.

Lamkin is with the Bureau of Apprenticeship Training in Lubbock. The meeting is to be held in the Baptist Student Center on the south side of the WTC campus and is open to the public.

Apprentices are employed in every major industry, according to the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training. Training varies from one to six years. Apprentieceship gives workers versatility by teaching them all aspects of an occupation. Generally, those who complete an organized program of apprenticeship earn recognition as skilled workers and can expect to hold good jobs at good pay, Lamkin ays. Those trained by apprenticeship are more highly trained and more likely to be supervisors than workers trained in other ways.

'WTC Magazine' to air this week

"WTC Magazine," a video prepared by the Western Texas College journalism department, will air at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday on SCAT Channel 2.

This video includes a segment on wildflower Day programs at WTC on Thursday and Friday, information on homecoming and rodeo activities scheduled April 17-20 and a tribute to the Texas Sesquicentennial through a story on San Jacinto Day.

2 locals among cockfight arrests

Reports indicate two Scurry County men — from Hermleigh and Snyder — were among some 25 individuals charged with misdemeanor offenses related to a reported Sunday raid of an organized cockfight.

The raid occurred near Roscoe and was conducted by law enforcement officials in Nolan and Fisher Counties.

Both county men were charged with unlawful possession of paraphernalia, charges stemming from syringes and other instruments said used with the cockfighting. Bond for each was set at $1,000.

2 arrests noted

Police jailed two men on misdemeanor charges Tuesday.

One was charged with driving while intoxicated and the other jailed on warrants for unpaid traffic tickets issued outside Scurry County.

Model club is organized

DeVall, most meetings are simply devoted to flying or building models.

Currently the club has no officers and no membership dues.

They held their first two meetings at Snyder Hobbies downtown but moved their April meeting to Sam's Fishing Service.

The move to the oil field servicing company was, according to DeVall, to allow more room.

Those having problems with construction of their balsa wood airplane kits often bring them to the meetings for help and advice.

Thus far, all members have constructed their airplanes from kits and most meetings have been primarily devoted to helping each other with construction.

Flying meetings are now held most calm Saturday and Sunday afternoons in a field north of Northeast Elementary School.

Johnson and DeVall credit the initial success of the club — both in attracting members and teaching beginners to fly — to falling prices for the electronic gear and the recent invention of the "buddy cable".

Currently, the modelers say, a six channel radio control set-up — allowing all the controls found in a "real" airplane to be built into the model — can be purchased for as little at $140.

As recently as five years ago, a comparable rig would have cost upwards of $300.

Added to the radio cost is the price of an airplane kit — consisting of balsa and plywood parts for the airplane itself — and the engine — a tiny 2-stroke designed run on a mixture of alcohol, nitro methane and castor oil.

With the added costs of the airplane and engine, the price of entry to the hobby used to routinely run in excess of $500.

Average cost of planes the club members are now flying is estimated to be between $250-$300.

The "buddy cable" has also proved to be a cost saver as well as confidence builder.

The cable setup allows two radio control units to be hooked together so that an experienced pilot can give "dual" instruction to a beginner.

So far, Johnson has been doing most of the instruction.

For a lesson, Johnson will take control of the plane and execute the take off while the beginning pilot stands at his side with the second control unit.

Once airborne, the cable interconnect allows the student to take over the airplane to learn the feel of the controls while the instructor stands ready to take over if a problem arises.

Before the advent of the buddy cable, a beginner was "on his own," they note, having to fly the plane completely the first time out.

Hundreds of dollars worth of damage to planes, engines and radios on "first" flights used to keep fledgling pilots from continuing.

Club meetings are normally held at 7 p.m. on the first Thursday of the month.

According the DeVall, the club membership is not confined to those interested in only radio control airplanes. He said individuals interested in radio control boats or cars are also welcome.

Johnson says the club's immediate objective is to find a permanent flying field.

Currently, youth baseball and softball practices on open fields around town are limiting the clubs opportunities to fly.

An ideal field would be 1 to 2 acres outside the city limits with no overhead utility lines and few neighboring structures.

The club members say they have plenty of access to equipment for maintenance of a field and would be interested in talking to anyone who might be willing to trade use of a field for mowing, cleaning and even minor leveling and dirt work services.

TDHS officials say sexual abuse increasing

By Shirley A. Gorman
SDN News Editor

Brutally honest facts concerning sexual child abuse were presented Monday night to the approximately 30 people who attended the annual board meeting of the Scurry County Child Welfare Unit held at the Senior Center.

Randy Davis, local chairman and several representatives of the Department of Human Services in Abilene conducted the session.

Following the general, informational portion of the meeting, the TDHS representatives then presented a report about sexual child abuse which lasted for about 90 minutes.

...sexual abuse is when someone is manipulated, tricked or forced into sexual contact.

TDHS personnel presenting various aspects of the sexual child abuse problem included David Corey, Suzanne Shaw, and Bobby Thompson.

The facts presented were not pretty and at times the audience felt uncomfortable. Corey prefaced their report by relating some facts concerning a survey the "Los Angeles Times" conducted in July of 1985.

Of the 2,600 respondents, 22 percent said they had been sexually molested and many said this was the first time they have ever talked about it. Twenty-seven percent of the women responding to the survey had been molested and 16 percent of the men had. Ninety-three percent of the perpertrators had been men and 10 years was the most vulnerable age. Only three percent of the respondents said they had ever reported that they had been sexually abused. Seventy percent said that no effective action had ever been taken against the perpertrator.

"It (sexual abuse) is a continuing increasing problem and we have to deal with it."

Corey said the definition of sexual abuse is when someone is manipulated, tricked or forced into sexual contact.

He explained that the TDHS intervention in such cases is "child centered and family focused." "We want to protect the child, but at the same time minimize the impact on the family."

According to Corey, if their efforts can be coordinated then the child can be helped and the sexual abuse can be stopped. In 1984 he said they received 57 referrals per month in a 44 county area. By last year that figure had increased to 66 referrals a month.

"It is a continually increasing problem and we have to deal with it," Corey told the audience.

Referring back to the newspaper survey, Corey said that when the respondents were asked why they had never reported being molested they said either they were afraid to or they had no one to turn to.

"We want to make it possible for them to turn to someone," he said.

Corey then turned the program over to Suzanne Shaw who explained the screening procedure the TDHS goes through before officially investigating a case. She said they follow a very strict procedure and make sure that they have legitimate cause before they begin an investigation into a family.

"We receive about 15-20 calls per month at the Abilene office and we are real conscientious about making sure that the referral is a legitimate case of sexual child abuse before we proceed any further," she said.

Shaw explained that the initial investigation creates a crisis in the family. Several factors then continue to escalate the crisis including statement from the child, if the perpertrator has to move out and double household expenses are incurred, and legal fees incurred when the police and courts enter the picture.

"We try to get the perpetrator to move out rather than to move the child out of the home," Shaw explained.

She said they explain to the non-offending parent that the child has to be protected. In most cases the parent will prefer to have the perpertrator move out rather than to have the child taken from them and placed in a foster home.

She said that at this stage the perpertrator will deny doing anything wrong, but will consent to move out and get into a therapy program.

"The mother (since she is usually the non-offending parent) is the key to the investigation," Shaw told the audience. "It is crucial that she believes the sexual abuse has taken place. If she doesn't it makes things harder."

She said they try to get the entire family into counseling as soon as possible. The mother needs to believe and support the child. The father or step-father needs to admit what he did and agree to stay away from the family until he can learn to deal with his problem. She said they also talk to other siblings who may also have been victims of sexual abuse.

She said it is not unusual for both girls and boys to be abused in the same family.

Shaw said children are usually pretty truthful about being molested. "Kids lie to get out of trouble and not into it," she explained. "When they tell the truth they are afraid they will be taken away or not believed or hurt by the offending parent."

Sometimes she said these fears keep a child from reporting sexual abuse. "We look for specific information in a child's statement. This is hard to do with older children because they don't want to talk about it."

She added that young children don't know about sexual abuse unless they have seen it or experienced it.

Since 1983 when the Texas Legislature approved the videotaping of testimony of child abuse victims 12 and under, she said they have been videotaping interviews with children and using those interviews as the case progresses rather than to have the child tell the same story time and time again. If they have to keep repeating it she said they will clam up because they don't want to go on talking about it.

"If the offending parent has moved out then that often makes him work harder in therapy because he wants to be back with his family."

Shaw explained that one complaint about using videotaped testimony in court is that the accused is not directly confronted by his accuser.

"We want to protect the child, but at the same time minimize the impact on the family."

She assured the audience that case workers don't make up these cases, adding that they have enough legitimate cases to work on without doing that.

Shaw showed and excerpt from a video tape she had done of a nine-year-girl who had been sexually molested by her step-father.

Corey then told the audience what the TDHS tries to do in these cases. He said they try to heal the psychological damage to the child. He said some levels of society advocate castration for offenders while another small segment advocates that sex with children is okay. He said the rest of society struggles with answers that lie somewhere between the two extremes.

"Kids lie to get out of trouble not to get into it."

When dealing with sexual abuse cases, he said they always try to have the offending parent move out, but if that is impossible then the child is removed and placed into foster care.

He said they also work with other children in the home as well. They cooperate and coordinate with law enforcement agencies. They also communicate with whomever the person or family is seeking therapy from. They also work with schools so that the child's confidentiality is maintained and questions from other students are fielded properly.

"Treatment is hard, but not impossible," Corey said, adding that it takes at least a year before the family can be restored. Sometimes they cannot.

"If the offending parent has moved out then often that makes him work harder in therapy because he wants to be back with his family," he explained.

However, if the offending parent is sent to jail where no counseling is available then he said they usually get out in two to five years and either return to the same family or find another family and the sexual abuse starts all over again--only this time it can be more violent because of what the person experienced while in prison.

Corey told the audience that sexual abuse is a "planned, premeditated act and that this is what the perpertrator has to come to terms with."

He said the mother or non-offending parent also needs therapy as well as a lot of support. The other siblings are also included because they need to know what has happened to prevent it from happening to them. It is also important that they not blame their sibling.

Corey then explained the realities of treatment:

—the offending parent cannot always be made to move out and even if he does he can still manipulate the situation.

—the mother will often raise bail for her husband and bring him back into the home without the knowledge of the TDHS.

—some families never enter therapy or they get into a type of therapy that is not geared to sexual abuse.

—cases can and do "fall between the cracks" and the child is never protected.

—sex offenders are never cured, they just learn to manage their problem.

—victims feel too much pressure and often recant their story.

Corey said in all likelihood if a sexual abuse victim never gets proper treatment then they grow up to become sexual child abusers themselves.

Bobby Thompson then explained the intensive training program that TDHS personnel are subjected to before they are allowed to solo as caseworkers. The training includes working with a trained caseworker, learning how to videotape interviews with children, and receiving "mixed site" training with teaches more skills to the potential caseworkers.

Along with training, Thompson said the TDHS also has a small budget for prevention of sexual child abuse and that these funds are "stretched as far as they can go."

"Sexual abuse is a planned, premeditated act and this is what the perpertrator has to come to terms with."

He said they rely heavily on child welfare boards and the WHO project of which Snyder is part of a pilot program. WHO stands for We Help Ourselves and uses trained volunteers and puppets to work with children at school. The Touch Program is for elementary children and their parents. It emphasizes the various kinds of touch and the difference between good touching and bad touching. They also use live action plays to alert children to improper touching.

The Spiderman comic book and comic strip character is also used to educate children about the right kind of touching.

He said April has been designated Child Abuse Prevention Month and this Sunday is Child Abuse Prevention Sunday.

Corey concluded the program by saying that they seek to protect the child while also respecting parents rights. He said therapy for one family can cost as much as $10,000, but, he added, that that was cheaper than incarceration.
