Report: Occidental to buy Altura

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Occidental Petroleum Corp. will buy Altura Energy Ltd. for $3.5 billion, Bloomberg News Service reported Friday, quoting sources close to the transaction. Executives for Occidental were unavailable for comment.

"This is exciting news," said Jim Henry, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and chairman of Henry Petroleum. "I know Occidental was one of the top candidates, and if they finalize the deal, it could be good for the Permian Basin."

Henry said the news was fascinating because it opened the door to the possibility that headquarters for the new company might move to the Permian Basin. It has long been a sore spot with community leaders that Altura chose to operate the largest oil company in the Permian Basin from Houston.

"Occidental could move the headquarters of Altura to Midland. If Occidental did decide to move to Midland they would find a large reservoir of talent to replace those who did not want to leave Houston. The worst that could happen is that they would leave everything in Houston. But, the fact that Bob Irelan, Occidental executive vice president of worldwide production, is a former Midlander and operated all of Conoco's onshore production from Midland, speaks well for our chances. Irelan knows the Basin, and its potential and he has bought into the Midland spirit."

Henry said the new company might be organized as a part of Oxy-USA, which already has a strong position in Midland, or it might be left as a stand-alone company.

Henry also noted that as Occidental rationalized the Altura assets, the trickle down of properties would be good for Permian Basin independents. He said the divestment of now-Altura assets would energize the independent community.

Texaco could send more jobs, payroll to Houston

By John Paul Pitts

Another 18 Midland jobs and $1 million in payroll could be headed to Houston later this year as Texaco converts to centralized accounting systems.

Texaco announced Friday that the company would centralize to Houston six financial components of the company including: joint venture accounting, accounts payable, accounts receivable, fixed assets accounting, financial accounting and land adminis-

Cupid's annual call keeps businesses busy building bouquets, filling balloons

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Answering Cupid's call is putting cash in Midland cash registers.

A number of local businesses are busy putting together special gifts for that special someone, creating new products and temporary new jobs.

Local flower shops are busy with what Greg Bay, owner of Flowerama, calls "our biggest season."

He said he has hired 10 extra people to fill and deliver orders and expects to be busy all weekend and Monday building bouquets and serving cash-and-carry customers.

What's in demand?

"Roses. Always roses, and we have plenty of them," he answered.

Mim Gaddy, owner of Michael's Flowers and Gifts, said that roses are popular, but so are mixed arrangements and gift baskets.

Like Bay, she has hired additional help and

February sales tax figures show 10.4 percent drop from receipts 1 year ago

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

"It's the worst possible news we could get at this point," said Councilman Jose Cuevas of the February sales tax figures. February numbers, which are based on December sales, show a 10.4 percent drop from one year ago.

This comes on the heels of back-to-back months with substantial increases: December by 16 percent, January by 11 percent.

Last month, Mayor Bobby Burns said the city was "getting stronger and stronger" and that 2000 would be "a very good year."

Marvin Wynn, president and chief executive of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said in January that if February's numbers were positive, then he would feel comfortable that the "economy has bottomed out and moved upward."

But, the numbers have dropped and Assistant City Manager Tommy Hudson said it was completely unexpected. "I'm surprised, but I'm very confident that we will meet the projections for the year."

According to a press release prepared by Public Information Officer Tina Jauz, fiscal year-to-date revenue is down 3.5 percent from the same time last year. The sales tax revenue now stands at $5,293,867.

Cuevas is worried the future budget will be severely affected. "December is the big check we really wait for — the barometer we really wait for," Cuevas said. "We'll probably have a shortfall on the year for sales tax, which could offset the budget next year. We have a lot of issues before us: police raises, employee raises. This issue doesn't help."

Last week the The Midland Municipal Police Officers Association was confident that the city could raise police salaries if sales tax revenues continued to strengthen. With this dip, the future is uncertain for any raises in any department, Cuevas said.

Sales tax numbers are down and as of April 1, the city will begin collecting the extra quarter of a cent sales tax revenue that will be used to fund construction of the Scharbauer Sports Complex.

Board, plaintiff-intervenors to discuss compromise

■ Trustees decide to include public, exclude attorneys.

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School Board voted unanimously Friday to sit down with the plaintiff-intervenors and discuss a mutual compromise on how to return to neighborhood schools, while maintaining some level of integration. The exact date and time of the meeting has not been established but Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. indicated it could occur as early as Thursday.

"We need to come to a final resolution and at this point, that's the way it needs to be done," said trustee George Lara, supporting such a meeting.

According to the board discussion, the meeting will involve the entire board, Baressi, other MISD staff members and eight representatives from the plaintiff-intervenors. A neutral meeting site is being discussed and the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has volunteered to mediate the meeting.

According to MISD board of trustees President Becky Oekerman, MHCC Executive Director David Diaz volunteered the chamber's services. She also said Viola Coleman, head of the Coleman intervenors, had agreed to having that party as a mediator.

Another intervenor, representing the League of United Latin American Citizens, Teresa Marmolejo, said Diaz or the chamber would be suspect as a mediating party.

"I don't understand why they would have to have a mediator," Ms. Marmolejo said. "I think that involving a third party is questionable."

Baressi said at Friday's meeting, that past experiences involving the intervenors and MISD representatives would indicate the need for mediation.

Still, Ms. Marmolejo didn't feel that the Hispanic chamber would be the best choice.

"They (MHCC) had a public press conference and endorsed the decision of the judge when it (the settlement agreement) came out," she said. "It sounds like this may be a conflict with their real feelings."

Trustee James Fuller raised another issue regarding the mediation. He didn't trust that Ms. Coleman actually had agreed to MHCC as a mediator. In fact, she had not.

"The director of the chamber contacted me and asked me if I would agree to mediation and I told him yes. I have had no further contact with him," Ms. Coleman said.

She did not agree, however, that MHCC would serve as the mediator.

Fuller didn't see the need for any mediation at all. "My point is that I believe we are at a point where the two entities can sit down and hash out a resolution. I feel it and I believe it can happen. That's why I'm going to stick to my position that we don't need a third party."

Police arrest man in girl's nine-year confinement

By Scott Stoddard
Associated Press

TOKYO — A man accused of abducting a girl off the street and keeping her in his bedroom for nine years had bound her legs and threatened to abandon her in the mountains if she tried to flee, police and news reports said Friday.

Nobuyuki Sato, 37, was arrested Friday on suspicion of abducting Fusako Sano, now 19, and imprisoning her in his second-floor bedroom, said a police spokesman who identified himself only by his last name, Mizuno.

Sato admitted most of the charges against him, the spokesman said. In 1990, he was driving around the city of Sanjo, about 160 miles northwest of Tokyo in Niigata prefecture, when he spotted the girl and pulled her into his car, national broadcaster NHK said, citing his deposition.

Sano, a 9-year-old fourth grader at the time, was last seen watching a baseball game in a schoolyard.

During the next nine years, Sano has said, she never ventured from the second story of her captor's house in a town outside Sanjo.

For the first three months of her captivity, Sano was bound hand and foot with tape and threatened with abandonment, NHK and Kyodo News agency reported. And as time passed, Sano became too afraid to attempt an escape, she has said.

Police also were questioning Sato's mother, who also lived in the house, Mizuno said.

The mother reportedly has said she did not know about her son's captive. Media reports said the son was violent and that she was afraid to go up to the second floor.

But police now say they believe that Sato's mother prepared meals for both the man and his captive, Kyodo quoted police as saying. Mizuno refused to comment on the report.

Sato has a troubled history. Neighbors said he became increasingly violent after his father died in 1989. They saw him break doors and windows in the family house, and noticed that his mother once had a black eye, NHK said.

He was arrested in 1989 for trying to kidnap another girl and was on probation when Sano disappeared, but police apparently never investigated him.

Years later, on Jan. 28, when police answered a call about a man — Sato — causing a disturbance at a hospital, Sano approached the officers and identified herself.

The young woman was hospitalized with post-traumatic stress disorder, including nightmares and weakened leg muscles.

Flood hits southern Africa

GABORONE, Botswana (AP) — Flooding from torrential rains sweeping across southern Africa blocked virtually all road traffic to Botswana's capital today, overflowed the reservoir and washed away the nation's only railway.

The heavy rains have pummeled the region for five days, causing scores of deaths. At least three people were reported swept away by flood waters and presumed dead in Kopong, a village 20 miles northwest of Gaborone. The downpours have caused widespread damage in the southeast to mud huts and crops.

The main road through Gaborone from Johannesburg to the south and north to Zambia, a major trucking route, was blocked by flooding on both sides of the city. Gaborone's reservoir was trickling over its walls, and rail officials said Botswana's railway was washed away in two places.

To the east, Mozambique's government has launched an emergency appeal for $2.7 million for rescue operations and immediate relief for flood victims in the south and center of the country. The floods and rains have killed at least 27 Mozambicans and destroyed roads and bridges as well as thousands of acres of crops.

Authorities are seeking inflatable dinghies for navigating swollen rivers to rescue people at risk of drowning, along with tents for the tens of thousands of temporarily homeless people and generators to provide electricity for shelters.

MEET: MISD trustees to discuss boundaries with plaintiff-intervenors

(From 1A)

Fuller said.

Baressi said, however, that Friday's vote was worded in such a way that the Hispanic chamber doesn't have to serve as the mediator.

The board generally agreed that the meeting should be held in public. Martha Manulik insisted on an open session.

"The wisdom of doing it in public is so every neighborhood in town could hear what is being discussed," Baressi said.

The board has primarily developed and discussed boundary changes in executive session for the past two months.

No fewer than four meetings have been held in executive session about proposed boundary changes. There also has been some question as to whether those meetings were even allowable under the law.

One other criteria of the upcoming meeting is that it won't involve the input of attorneys from either side. Lara insisted that lawyers not even be present at the meeting.

Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson attorney Charlie Tighe — who has announced his candidacy for school board — said he would come to the meeting but, "would not speak unless spoken to."

"Then we would make a conscientious decision not to speak to you," Fuller said.

Despite a few disagreements, everyone involved is pleased that the two parties will finally sit down together and hash out their differences.

"Let's go for it," Fuller said.

Ms. Coleman also was pleased. "At this point, I think there needs to be dialogue. We have been asking for this the whole five years (since MISD filed for unitary status) we have been involved. This is the first time the board has agreed to talk with us and if they are willing to do that, then we are willing to talk."

Even parents were glad to see the matter headed toward a resolution.

"I think it's great," Ellen Bryant said. "It's a step forward for the community. It's obvious MISD and the school board want to help the community and go back to neighborhood schools."

TEXACO: Midland could lose 18 jobs

(From 1A)

tration.

Rick Schneider, Permian Basin business unit manager, said Texaco was in the process of adapting a new accounting system and had to make the determination as to whether it would be more efficient and cost-effective to centralize or decentralize Texaco financial transactions business.

"The managers of the U.S. producing managers determined that it would be more cost effective to centralize the new integrated software," Schneider said. "We have not quantified the impact yet, and the impact may not come until late this year or early next year." He said further details on timing and jobs impacted would come over the next few months.

Schneider said he expected the impact, which could possibly affect other areas, to be limited. He said the centralization was part of Texaco's plan to stay competitive and thrive in the marketplace.

BUY: Deal could be bad for Basin, PBPA president says

(From 1A)

Oxy-USA, the U.S. entity of Occidental, is already a major player in the Permian Basin. According to Permian Basin asset manager Conrad Joseph, Oxy-USA has 102 employees in the Permian Basin with 50 in the Midland office. The subsidiary produces 17,000 barrels per day of oil and 80 million cubic feet of gas, from core fields such as the Welch field in Dawson County, the Dollarhide field in Andrews County, the West Seminole field in Gaines County and the Goldsmith and North Cowden fields in Ector County.

"It certainly fits the pattern of Occidental's strategy of recent years, which is to buy production," said Eugene Nowak, an analyst at ABN Amro Inc., in the Bloomberg story. In recent months Occidental has made several large acquisitions that include the U.S. government's 78 percent stake in the Elk Hills oil and gas field in California for $3.5 billion. The field was expected to yield one billion barrels of oil for Occidental.

In November, according to the Bloomberg report, Occidental agreed to buy Atlantic Richfield Co.'s Long Beach unit, a Southern California oil producer, for an undisclosed price.

Acquiring Altura, which is the largest oil and gas producer in the Permian Basin, would be a coup for the company that finds it easier and less expensive to buy domestic production than compete with larger, better-financed, major oil companies in the search for risky foreign reserves and expensive deep water reserves.

Last year, Altura produced 110,000 barrels of oil, 125 million cubic feet of natural gas, and 18,000 barrels of natural-gas liquids a day from more than 6,400 wells. The partnership employed 800 people.

According to Bloomberg, adding Altura would increase Occidental's production by more than a third. Occidental has said it has reserves of about 1.51 billion barrels of oil equivalent, which includes natural gas and natural-gas liquids, and worldwide production of about 325,000 barrels a day.

Houston-based Altura was formed in March 1997 when Amoco Corp. and Shell combined their Permian Basin oil and gas operations. British Petroleum Co. bought Amoco for $62 billion in 1998. BP Amoco owns 64 percent of Altura and Shell holds the rest.

HEARTS: Valentine's Day is good business

(From 1A)

expects to be open all weekend and Monday "until everything is delivered."

Valentine's Day, she said, is a lot of work, but a lot of fun.

"What's good about Valentine's Day is you can send gifts to everyone," she said.

Roses and candy are the symbols of Valentine's Day, and Midlanders are busy pleasing their loved ones' sweet tooth.

Laura Florez, owner of Candy Bouquet, said that she expects Monday, the actual Valentine's Day, to be her heaviest delivery day.

She said that since she opened last Feb. 1, she couldn't compare business last Valentine's Day with this year's demand, but already has 50 orders.

"Last year, people came in at the last minute, but this year I've been getting orders for a week and a half. I'll be open all weekend and we'll take orders until Monday and on Monday."

The Cookie Bouquet has already received 200 orders, estimates Leslie Sisneros, a staff member at the retailer.

"We're so swamped," she said, "but it's a good buy."

This year, she said, popular offerings are heart-shaped cookies decorated like tuxedos and evening gowns and rose-shaped cookies and even bear-shaped cookies dressed in prison stripes and surrounded by heart cookies and the saying "Prisoner of love."

Orders have been coming in since the first of the year, she said, and outside help will be used to fill and deliver the orders.

If florists say Valentine's Day is their biggest day of the year, card sellers say it ranks high for them as well.

"Valentine's Day is one of the biggest card seasons of the year, behind Christmas and Mother's Day," said Manager Barbara Dazey of Jamie's Hallmark in Midland Park Mall, who expects to be hit by a rush of last-minute shoppers this weekend.

The store sells gift items and wrapping paper as well, she said, noting that "stuffed animals sell pretty well at Valentine's."

Scherry Gatewood, assistant manager at Card and Party Factory, said Valentine's Day cards have been selling like crazy and business, already hectic, is expected to increase this weekend as last-minute shoppers hit the stores.

Most popular at the store are balloon bouquets, she said, followed by cards and party favors that are mostly used at school Valentine's Day parties.

Local manufacturers have been busy expanding their lines to include Valentine's Day products.

Candy manufacturer Duo Delights has introduced several new items for Valentine's Day, including a gold candleholder ringed in heart-shaped cutouts and filled with the company's candy, and a heart-shaped wire box filled with candies. For this Valentine's Day, the company introduced a Belgian wafer dipped in one of three flavored white chocolates.

Marsha Dameron, sales manager, said that all the company's Valentine's Day items were shipped out two weeks ago and have been sent all over the country.

She has found, she said, that people spend more per person at Valentine's Day because they're buying for fewer people than at Christmas.

"At Valentine's, they're only buying for one or two people so they're more inclined to buy a larger gift. I had a lady come in from — I think it was Monahans — who wanted the largest heart-shaped box I had filled with fudge. It cost almost $200 and she said it was worth it because it was for her husband and he was very sweet."

Jessie Herrera, The Herrera Law Firm guilty of contempt of court

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

The Herrera Law Firm, its principal partner, Jessie Herrera, and attorney Eli Salinas have been found guilty in federal district court of contempt of court, according to federal court documents filed in Midland Thursday. The decision was handed down by U.S. Judge Royal Furgeson following a bench trial in Midland July 30, in a complicated case of client swapping, false billing charges and perjury by attorneys.

Herrera, the law firm and Salinas were found guilty of criminal contempt by practicing law without authorization and by disobeying a court order by continuing to represent a client they were barred from representing.

The Herrera Law Firm was guilty of criminal contempt for failing to supervise Salinas and prevent him from practicing law without authorization.

Salinas was found guilty of criminal contempt for obstruction of justice by committing perjury for false affidavits and obstructing justice for falsely testifying under oath.

Herrera and Salinas face up to six months in jail when they appeared for sentencing April 13 before Furgeson. In addition, Furgeson can revoke their licenses to practice law, said U.S. Assistant District Attorney Mark Roomberg, who represented the government in the case.

Roomberg said the law firm's contempt of court troubles began in January of 1998 with a case in Ector County against Nelson Gonzales on drug conspiracy charges. Gonzales was represented by Tony Chavez, "but at some point, Gonzales wanted to switch to the Herreras."

Jesse Herrera filed a motion to replace Chavez with Herrera and the law firm in February 1998. Later in the month, Magistrate Judge L. Stewart Platt entered an order denying the motion for substitution until Chavez withdrew from the case.

Two days later, Salinas filed to represent Gonzales with Salinas and the firm as council on record. At the time, said Roomberg, Salinas was not licensed to practice before the U.S. District Court in Midland.

In spite of the potential for conflict of interest, the Herreras continued to represent Gonzales while Tony Chavez still had the case and Chavez knew of it, said Roomberg. On Feb. 26, 1998, Chavez moved to withdraw as the attorney and the Herreras moved to represent Nelson Gonzales.

Platt allowed Chavez out but did not allow the Herreras in, citing the potential conflict of interest as a result of allegations that the firm's investigator Ishmael Herrera had threatened a state prosecutor in Ector County over a state charge against Gonzales, said Roomberg.

Prohibited from representing Gonzales, the Herreras recruited another local attorney, Steve Hershberger, to be "the local council," not telling Hershberger that they had been excluded, said Roomberg.

Hershberger stayed with case until June of 1998, when he found out about the conflict, withdrew, and a new attorney was appointed.

The new attorney, Mike McLeaish, demanded some of his client's $10,000 retainer to the Herreras be returned to Gonzales. Furgeson asked for an explanation of expenses affidavit from the Herreras and Steve Hershberger to determine how much should go back to Gonzales.

"They both turn in expense affidavits, explained Roomberg, "but the problem is, comparing Hershberger's affidavit with Herreras, there is very few if any matches. For example, Eli Salinas claims he met with assistant U.S. Attorney Glenn Jackson. Mr. Jackson wrote he never had any meetings or phone calls," said Roomberg.

Later, the judge had a hearing where Salinas swore that his affidavit was correct and that Jessie Herrera had reviewed and approved it.

"So, you have the affidavit which is false, false testimony and disregarding a court order not to represent Nelson Gonzales," said Roomberg.

Judge Furgeson issued a show cause order for Aug. 6, 1998, as to why Salinas and the law firm should not be held in contempt for those three charges. At that time, he also appointed the U.S. assistant District Attorney's Office as special prosecutor in the case.

The bench trial, which lasted a half-day, was held July 30 with Tom Morgan representing The Herrera Law Firm and Jessie Herrera. Salinas was represented by Warren Heagey.

In separate troubles for The Herrera Law Firm, the government has alleged for months that former employees of the law firm and some Herrera family members have engaged in illegal drug transactions in and out of the law firm's offices. The firm's offices in Midland and Odessa have recently been sold to a former partner of Herrera's, Israel Guardiola.

Russian elections threaten vodka prices

By Nick Wadhams
Associated Press

MOSCOW — If there's one thing any Russian politician should know, it's that you don't get between Russians and their vodka.

But acting President Vladmir Putin, who will be fighting for his job in the March 26 elections, seems to be tempting fate.

On Thursday, the government announced that the minimum price of the vodka will rise by 30 percent at the end of the month. By Friday, Russians were lining up to buy the national liquor before the new prices take effect, cursing the decision across the board.

"The government hasn't got any money and it needs more, so it steals from us," said pensioner Alexei Dokchus, leaving a store outside the Kristall vodka factory in Moscow with 30 bottles after what he said was a three-hour wait in line. "Putin's going to lose a lot of votes to the communists because of this."

Few people expect the rise in vodka prices to significantly damage Putin's high popularity. But it was another indication of how important the alcohol industry is to government revenues: Even Putin is willing to risk some popularity points for cash from a reliable source.

In the latest step, the government raised the minimum price of a liter of alcohol to $2.10 after raising the excise tax on alcohol by 40 percent. The move is really about vodka, which brings in 80 percent of the government's tax revenues from the alcohol industry.

The government says the increase will add to government coffers and cripple the black market in alcohol. The theory is that the new minimum price will tip off police and consumers to fakes.

'The government hasn't got any money and it needs more, so it steals from us. Putin's going to lose a lot of votes to the communists because of this.'
— Alexei Dokchus, customer at vodka factory

"The new price will be proof that vodka being sold at a price cheaper than the minimum has not been made legally, or all taxes paid," said Pavel Shapkin, chairman of the National Alcohol Association.

Given past experience, the increase probably won't hurt the black market, which will probably respond by raising its prices. The government has made a national pastime of trying to stop illicit alcohol production, but it estimates that only half of the proceeds from alcohol sales was taxed last year.

For pensioners lined up at the store at the Kristall factory, one of the country's leading vodka producers, the increase just means another dig into meager incomes. The average person makes $56 a month, according to the most recent government figures.

"I'm buying vodka with all the money I've got in my pockets," said 60-year-old Vladimir Petrov, who said he planned to buy four bottles for about $5.50. "You think I'd be waiting in this line if I could get a bottle more cheaply?"

Sometimes, tinkering with the country's penchant for alcohol has had disastrous results. Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev launched an anti-alcohol campaign in the 1980s, but Soviets endured longer lines and higher prices and Gorbachev's reputation nose-dived.

Alcohol sellers say not a lot has changed since Gorbachev's days: Russians are still prepared to sacrifice to get their vodka.

"In our country, vodka is a purchase of the highest importance," said Dmitry Dovchenko, the director of a liquor store in Moscow who had run out of vodka by mid-afternoon. "Russians will never skimp on vodka — they'll just eat less."

Britain suspends power of Belfast Cabinet

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Britain resumed direct control over Northern Ireland on Friday, stripping power from the province's new Protestant-Catholic administration — its best chance at self-rule — in hopes of preventing the coalition's collapse.

But within hours of the move, the British and Irish governments announced that the Irish Republican Army had softened its traditional refusal to disarm. They called this "a development of real significance" that could allow the Belfast administration — a key plank of the province's 1998 peace accord — to regain powers soon.

That hopeful news, following an agonizing week of behind-the-scenes negotiations did not deter Northern Ireland Secretary Peter Mandelson from revoking the Cabinet's substantial powers just 72 days after handing them over.

Mandelson said that while taking such action was "deeply disappointing," it was necessary to discourage the Cabinet's major Protestant party, the Ulster Unionists, from resigning their posts.

The withdrawal of powers came despite a last-minute claim from Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams that the IRA had just offered the British government "a new and significant proposition to resolve the arms issue." He refused to say whether the outlawed group had agreed to abide by the peace accord's May deadline to disarm.

While Mandelson said the offering was inadequate and came too late, he emphasized that powers could be transferred back to Belfast once two key questions are answered: "Is there going to be weapons decommissioning by the IRA, and if so, when?"

The Ulster Unionists agreed in November to form the four-party Cabinet alongside politicians from the IRA-linked Sinn Fein. But as part of that American-brokered deal, the Irish Republican Army was supposed to start disarming in response.

But the province's disarmament commission reported Jan. 31 that the IRA had made no such commitments, triggering the crisis.

Mandelson's resumption of authority took pressure off the Ulster Unionists, which scheduled a party conference Saturday to debate whether to withdraw from the Cabinet.

That meeting will proceed, but Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble — who agreed to share power with Sinn Fein two months ago in hopes IRA disarmament would follow — now faces less risk of being forced to resign as Cabinet leader.

"I think it was extremely sad, but also necessary, for the government to return powers to London," Trimble said. "The reality is that we took a big risk in accepting Sinn Fein on a trial basis, and we were assured that the IRA would take similarly big risks in return. Once it became clear they would not, our position became impossible."

Trimble said he spoke to Adams an hour before the Sinn Fein leader issued his statement claiming a breakthrough — a statement issued just minutes before Mandelson's own announcement.

"Mr. Adams told me nothing new was on offer," Trimble said.

The British, Irish and U.S. governments consider Trimble's political survival essential for the Cabinet to work. It includes the province's major Catholic party, the pacifist Social Democratic and Labor Party or SDLP, and the hard-line Protestants of the Democratic Unionist Party.

Stripping the Cabinet's powers allows it to remain intact on paper. Were the Ulster Unionists to resign, it would collapse. A new election would have to be held in Northern Ireland in which Trimble's hard-line Protestant opponents would be likely to gain strength and make any new Cabinet even harder to form.

But SDLP deputy leader Seamus Mallon, the senior Catholic in the Cabinet, said Mandelson had only made matters worse by suspending their powers.

"Who could imagine that securing IRA decommissioning will be any less difficult now?" he asked IRA violence.

Afghan asylum claims could drag for months

By Caroline Byrne
Associated Press

LONDON — Britain has staked out a tough line against Afghans seeking asylum after a hijacking, but it could be months before a 'final decision. Afghanistan warned Friday that the hijackers could face death if they returned.

After a standoff ended early Thursday at London's Stansted airport, 74 of the freed hostages — almost half — requested asylum. Police have arrested 22 people who will likely face trial in Britain. The rest are still considering their options.

Some British tabloids on Friday were incensed over speculation that some of the Afghans might have used the hijacking to win asylum.

"No Entry" proclaimed one London tabloid, objecting to the prospective immigrants.

The Sun branded their temporary shelter near Stansted airport as "the Kabul Hilton." The tabloid wrote: "I watched in astonishment yesterday as a swish Hilton Hotel was turned into a four-star refugee camp for a bedraggled bunch of Afghan asylum seekers."

"Welcome to your Home Cheat Home," said a Daily Star headline.

"Hi, Jack! Where's the four-star hotel?" said The Mirror.

"Jack" refers to Home Secretary Jack Straw, who promised to review personally every asylum application and send the hostages home or to another country as soon as possible.

Even if their applications were rejected, they would have 12 days to file an appeal and an indeterminate amount of time for a hearing, the Home Office confirmed.

Because of the complex nature of human rights claims and the large number of applicants, the process would likely continue for several months or even a year, said Amnesty International spokesman Neil Durkin.

"Although there's an understandable need to bring the hijackers to justice, the home secretary must not risk sending innocent men, women and children back to a terrible fate," said Durkin.

> 'The women risk their lives. The children risk persecution and an unpleasant future.'
> -- Nick Hardwick, chief executive of Refugee Council

Meanwhile, Gen. Rahmatullah Safi, European representative for the Taliban, told BBC radio that in Afghanistan "punishment will be according to the law of Shariah, which is death."

But Taliban Foreign Minister Wakil Ahmed Muttawakil later said the death penalty was not automatic for hijackers, and he encouraged the hostages to return home. He has asked British authorities to deal with the hijackers in "accordance with British law and international norms."

It was not known if any of the hijackers have requested asylum.

A plane chartered by the Geneva-based International Organization for Migration arrived in England on Friday to ferry passengers back to Afghanistan, but the aircraft may not take off until next week.

"At the moment it looks like there are about 20 or so who have said they want to fly home," said Diane Grammer, spokeswoman for the organization.

Under the 1951 United Nations Convention on Refugees, Britain can refuse asylum to people who have committed grave crimes. But under the European Convention on Human rights, they may not be deported if there is a risk of them being tortured or ill-treated in their home state.

All of those on board — both hijackers and hostages — were at risk should they return to Afghanistan, said Nick Hardwick, chief executive of the Refugee Council.

"There is absolutely no doubt their lives would be in danger," said Hardwick. "It is not just what the government would do but what the government would incite others to do to them. ... The women risk their lives. The children risk persecution and an unpleasant future."

Britain has a sympathetic track record in dealing with Afghan claimants.

But Straw told the House of Commons that the fact that the passengers were on an internal flight made it difficult to believe they intended to claim asylum unless they were complicit in the hijacking.

The hijackers had taken over the Ariana Boeing 727 jet early Sunday during a short domestic flight from the Afghan capital of Kabul to the northern town of Mazar-e-Sharif.

Ventura jumps from national Reform Party, wants new party

By Rochelle Olson
Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Gov. Jesse Ventura, the Reform Party's marquee name and top officeholder, cut his ties to the national organization Friday, branding it a "hopelessly dysfunctional" group that drags down independent politicians like him.

His departure further hobbles an already limping third-party movement born as a gleam in the eye of billionaire Ross Perot.

Ventura encouraged Minnesota Reform Party officials to abandon the organization, too, and move to reclaim the Independence Party name of the early 1990s. Ventura said he may become an independent unless an Independence Party is formed.

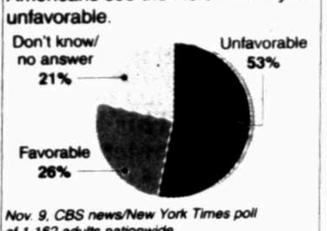

In making his decision, Ventura conferred with Donald Trump, the New York developer he is urging to run for president under the new party label.

Trump distributed a statement saying he was considering just that and would announce a decision on Monday. He said he wanted to see whether other states' Reform Party committees would affiliate with the Independence Party, but added that he wasn't worried about losing national Reform Party money.

The party stands to receive $12.6 million in federal matching funds because of Perot's support in the 1996 election.

Reform party blues

The struggling reform party received another blow when Minnesota Gov. Jessie Ventura announced his displeasure with the party. He is not alone. A recent poll shows many Americans see the Reform Party as unfavorable.

Nov. 9, CBS news/New York Times poll of 1,162 adults nationwide

In 1996, support for the Reform Party deteriorated in the form of fewer votes for Ross Perot in the presidential election. Here is the breakdown of the total votes.

Democratic Party candidate
Republican Party candidate
Reform Party candidate

1996 presidential election
Bill Clinton 49.2%
Bob Dole 40.7%
Ross Perot 8.4%

1992 presidential election
Bill Clinton 43.0%
George Bush 37.4%
Ross Perot 18.9%

Source: Congressional Quarterly America Votes AP

The Reform Party has been hampered for months by squabbling between founder Perot's allies and Ventura supporters. They sparred over the 2000 convention site, presidential candidates and the party's money.

Ventura made it clear he would not run for the White House and dismissed the best-known contender for the Reform nomination — former Republican Pat Buchanan — as "an anti-abortion extremist and unrealistic isolationist."

"In Minnesota, we cannot maintain our socially moderate identity while a right-winger heads our national ticket," Ventura said.

Ventura, a former pro wrestler, often cites his Navy SEAL background in teaching him never to quit, but he said Friday, "There comes a time when you have to cut bait and go. I believe very strongly this is the time." He called the national party "unworthy of my support and the support of the American people."

Ventura was flanked by Minnesota Reform Party officials and Lt. Gov. Mae Schunk as he made the announcement in a Rolling Stones jacket outside the governor's mansion on a raw 13-degree day. He said he wants to help build a "strong third-party movement here in Minnesota" and has been stung by top politicians' decisions not to join the party.

His move came a day before a meeting in Nashville, Tenn., at which Perot loyalists plan to try to oust national chairman Jack Gargan, the governor's ally.

In a letter to state party members, Ventura ally and state chairman Rick McCluhan said he plans to ask the Minnesota state central committee Saturday to call a convention to vote on disaffiliation.

Ventura and his supporters have never been close to the national Reform Party. Perot, who ran for president in 1996 under the Reform banner, provided no help in Ventura's 1998 victory.

The party has been struggling ever since, not only to settle on leadership but to find a unifying set of beliefs apart from a common disenchantment with the two established parties.

Former party chairman Russ Verney, a close Perot ally, said Ventura provided "zero" leadership for the party so his departure will have a minimal impact.

"It means that we're free of threats and we can once again go back to grass-roots democracy where every elected leader of the party can respond to their constituents instead of to ultimatums," Verney said.

Indeed, Ventura has never shown much interest in building the Minnesota or the national Reform parties. Some political observers considered Friday's move merely the latest in a continuing sideshow.

"It would be comical if it weren't so pathetic: the range of candidates considering a Reform Party candidacy, the squabbling, the egomania," said Thomas Mann, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, a nonpartisan think tank.

Boston highway project goes on and on and on

BOSTON (AP) — The Big Dig is becoming the Bottomless Pit.

Planners originally estimated that building an underground connection from the Massachusetts Turnpike to Boston's interstates would cost a few billion dollars. Now the cost has ballooned to at least $12 billion.

The three-mile project, which for a while was considered the largest public works project in the world, started in 1993 and was supposed to be done in 2001. But the completion date is now maybe five years down the road.

And to pay for the most recent overruns, state officials are now planning to double tolls, slash funding for other road projects and take back a promise to eliminate regular driver's license renewals in favor of lifetime licenses. And that won't even fill half of the gap.

Every day, the project soaks up $3 million as 4,000 workers dig away. For years, critics have cautioned that the state would have trouble paying for it. Now the critics are getting a chance to say "I told you so."

Last week, it was revealed that the Big Dig, officially known as the Central Artery Project, would cost $1.4 billion more than the previous estimate, partly because of problems tunneling under the channel that separates central Boston from its South Boston neighborhoods.

The Big Dig was dreamed up because the Massachusetts Turnpike ends in Boston and the old elevated highway that links it to interstates is too narrow, causing huge traffic tie-ups and an accident rate four times the national average for urban highways.

I reside in Midland, but I Live at Midland Community Theatre.

When I was eight years old, I sang my first solo in church. Ever since that moment, I have loved performing in front of a live audience! I did musicals in high school, but once I graduated I thought there would be no more opportunities to perform. When I realized that anyone can audition at Midland Community Theatre, I jumped at the chance! These last two years that I have been involved in MCT productions have been so wonderful!
The best part of being involved with Midland Community Theatre is that there is something for everyone. Even if you are not inclined to being on stage, there is a place for you in set-building, costume-making, helping with props, etc. I always feel at home at MCT, and I enjoy coming to life on the MCT stage!

When President Clinton comes to town, watch your car!

By Deb Riechmann
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The president is coming to town. Do you know where your car is?

Vacant vehicles can hide bombs and snipers. So before President Clinton moves about a city he's visiting, police often post "no parking" signs and tow hundreds of automobiles.

The president is protected, but drivers left playing hide-and-seek with their cars often are annoyed.

Drivers in Philadelphia and San Francisco beware. Clinton is scheduled to visit in the next few weeks.

In Chappaqua, N.Y., a handful of homeowners can no longer park on the street in their cul-de-sac where the president and Hillary Rodham Clinton bought a house. New Yorkers to the south know all too well what happens when they park in presidential no-parking zones.

"It was crazy. People had to go to work. Nobody knew where their cars were," said Ilene Marchese of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Her family's two cars were among 157 vehicles towed one night last year when Clinton was in the neighborhood to attend a political fund-raiser. The next morning, people trying to get to work were looking for their cars.

"It was impossible. People were screaming," she said. "This is Brooklyn. It doesn't take much to set people off, but I think it was so inconsiderate."

Clinton attends a fund-raiser in New Jersey. Twenty-five cars are ticketed and towed. Clinton goes to his wife's birthday celebration at the Ford Center for Performing Arts in Manhattan. Police post "no parking" signs on dozens of blocks and tow cars whose owners ignore the warning.

Drivers in Washington are the most frequent victims. Local police say they tow about 10,000 vehicles a year to secure streets so Clinton can make speeches, have lunch or catch a basketball game.

"People are pretty understanding; complaints are rare," said Chaun Yount, a spokeswoman for the Secret Service. "We want to inconvenience the public as little as possible, but we have to balance that with our security needs."

Sometimes there's even a perquisite. This week, when Clinton attended a fund-raiser in Georgetown, plows were dispatched to clear ice and snow from parking spots on the street. "I guess they didn't want anybody slipping and sliding around," said Valerie Burden, who moved two cars to make way for Clinton. "For those of us without driveways, it was great."

When people park in presidential no-parking zones, some cities' police departments tow cars to a nearby block. In other cities, cars are taken to impoundment lots.

"We post the signs. For the most part, people get the idea. If they choose to park there, we tow them. Well, we relocate them — to the nearest available, legal parking spot," said New York City Police Lt. Dennis Cirillo.

The White House sometimes gives the police short notice.

Aubrey Dirkes walked out of his Washington apartment one morning last year to learn that Clinton was having breakfast at a nearby hotel. "The entire street of cars was gone — maybe 10 or 15 cars," Dirkes said. "I looked for 'no parking' signs. They weren't there."

A police officer told him he'd just taken them down.

Baltimore Police Maj. John McEntee Jr. said the city tries to get signs posted three days in advance. Atlanta Police Lt. Pete Andresen said officers often go back to make sure signs are still in place. The earlier the signs go up, the fewer cars towed, they said.

When Clinton attended a fund-raiser at a private home in Elizabeth, N.J., 25 motorists who didn't move their cars were given $25 tickets and had to retrieve their vehicles from an impound lot.

"I'm sure nobody was happy about it," said Elizabeth Police Capt. Mark Kurdyla.

Raymond Lesniak, who hosted the fund-raiser, said the towing was necessary. "There could have been a car with a bomb," he said.

The practice didn't start with Clinton.

Back in 1992, about 90 cars were towed from around the University of Chicago when President Bush visited.

Sharazard Washington parked her light blue Mustang in an area later blanketed with "no parking" signs.

"I think it's important for our leaders to be secure, but I thought it was really crummy for them to put up the signs after the cars were already parked there," she said.

Washington said she sent her $25 parking ticket to the university president with a note that said: "You should take care of this."

He did.

Report: Public choice school movement flourishing

WASHINGTON — The number of charter schools nationwide grew by 40 percent last school year — representing growing interest in public schools created by parents and teachers and run with exemptions from most state laws and regulations, the Education Department said Friday.

With the increase in the 1998-99 school year, there are nearly 1,500 such schools serving 250,000 children, the department's fourth annual charter school report said.

"We can see that there is a continued need for our support of these schools," Education Secretary Richard Riley said in releasing the report Friday. "Public charter schools are providing parents and students with choice they want and deserve."

Supporters of charter schools, which include President Clinton and Republicans alike, say they give parents in poor communities a much-needed choice over the traditional schools that are failing to help their children.

The administration, though, favors public school choice over conservatives' proposals to use public funds to send children to private or parochial schools. Clinton is seeking a $30 million increase to a total $175 million for the federal program that helps states open more of the public charter schools.

Just eight years ago, when Clinton was first elected, there was one such school — in Minnesota. Today, 1,484 schools, many with multiple sites, operate in 27 states and the District of Columbia, with 37 states and the District having laws supporting their establishment. New York, Oklahoma and Oregon passed the latest measures last year.

Nearly 90,000 children were served by 421 newly opened charter schools in the last school year, the department reported.

A charter school, created by a group of teachers, community members or parents, is free of most state laws and regulations but must be approved by a local chartering authority. A charter outlines its goals, procedures and standards to that authority. Charters that fail to meet them are shut down; 27 schools closed under those circumstances last year, the report said.

Though charters serve less than 1 percent of all public schoolchildren, the charter school movement remains popular. Seven in 10 schools told department researchers they have waiting lists.

Yet charters have opponents who note that they could drain the most motivated students and families from traditional public schools — not to mention the public money needed to fix the failing schools in the first place.

Also, charters schools have run into trouble for serving specific populations and about a quarter of them do just that, the report said. By virtue of being based in minority communities where they have been especially popular or opened with specific purposes such as helping troubled children, some schools have ended up being predominantly black.

A growing number of parents are challenging decades-old desegregation orders to protect their charter schools.

But the Justice Department has blocked just three charters; roughly 50 more could be affected by court-ordered actions to end patterns of racial separation in school districts.

Identity, funding at stake as areas are redefined

By Laurence Arnold
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nobody can take away its proud slogan — "Furniture Capital of the World" — but some residents of High Point, N.C., worry the federal government is trying to erase the city's identity.

"No! No! No! Please do not group High Point, N.C., with Greensboro, N.C.!" Donna Machen wrote to the Metropolitan Area Standards Review Committee. "Last year the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce published that THEY were the Furniture Capital of the World. How dare them."

Across the country, regional rivalries are flaring over preliminary recommendations by the committee that is redefining metropolitan areas for Census 2000. Some of the suggested changes would figuratively wipe some cities off the map as they are absorbed into larger "megapolitan" areas.

The outcome will have wide-ranging implications. The government's definition of core metropolitan areas influences the distribution of federal funds, decisions by corporations about where to locate — even lists of "best places to live."

"A lot of federal government programs are based on the metropolitan statistical information," said Robert "Punky" Beauchamp, chairman of the Grand Forks-East Grand Forks Metropolitan Planning Organization. "If you're not part of that, you're just swept aside."

Grand Forks, N.D., and East Grand Forks, Minn., now constitute one metro area spanning the Red River, called the Grand Forks metropolitan area. Under the committee's recommendations, Grand Forks would be its own metropolitan area and East Grand Forks would be left out entirely.

Other communities fear being swallowed up by neighbors.

High Point, which gets equal billing in the current "Greensboro/Winston-Salem/High Point" metro area, would be wrapped into Greensboro, while several Massachusetts cities would be gobbled up by an enlarged Boston area.

Some communities see a long-awaited chance to assert themselves. The committee was flooded with hundreds of e-mails and form letters urging metropolitan status for Schuylkill County in eastern Pennsylvania, which is recovering from the decline of the coal industry.

The committee is to forward its final suggestions to the Office of Management and Budget, which will issue new guidelines before April 1.

The federal Bureau of the Budget, predecessor of the OMB, first defined metropolitan areas in 1949. Every decade since, the federal government has prepared for a census by re-evaluating the definitions.

If implemented, the committee's recommendations would be the most sweeping yet. The very phrase "metropolitan area" would be dropped, replaced by "core-based statistical area." There would be three such areas, in descending order: "megapolitan," "macropolitan" and "micropolitan."

Committee chairman James D. Fitzsimmons said the proposed standards are easier to explain and do a better job of noting population shifts in the past half-century.

"The whole point is to produce a set of standards that allow federal statistics to be reported in a way that squares with reality," said Fitzsimmons, an assistant chief in the Census Bureau's population division.

The committee filled two thick binders with suggestions and criticisms received during a public comment process that closed Dec. 30. The comments are now under review by the committee, which includes representatives of federal agencies that track transportation, labor, health and agriculture.

Only after the new standards are approved will the federal government set new boundaries and names for the areas. But publication of the proposed standards allowed some areas to predict the local impact.

How easy is it to win $1 million on a game show?

NEW YORK (AP) — Think the questions on "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire" are too easy? You try them, says the show's best-known winner.

"They're only easy if you know them," said John Carpenter, the Connecticut man who became the first of two million-dollar winners last November on ABC's hit game show.

The British insurer responsible for paying out the show's top prizes disagrees. Goshawk Syndicate filed suit in Britain's High Court of Justice to get out of its contract, worried it would have to pay too much unless the show asked harder questions and selected dumber contestants.

"Millionaire" host Regis Philbin said the company was "chicken."

"Can you believe this?" Philbin said on "Live with Regis & Kathie Lee" Friday. "This is what insurance is all about. It's a risk. You can't take the risk, don't insure the show to begin with."

Michael Davies, executive producer of "Millionaire," declined to talk about the lawsuit on Friday. But last month, he vigorously defended the show's questions.

"You have to answer every single question," he said. "The questions might be easy within their category, but there is such a broad range, it is almost impossible for anybody on a regular basis to be able to go through all the questions in any given stack."

To win $1 million, a contestant must answer 15 multiple-choice questions in a row correctly.

"It's much easier to play the game sitting in an easy chair at home than sitting across from Regis in the studio," said Doug Van Gundy, a West Virginia man who won $250,000.

The multiple-choice questions are frequently easy in the early rounds. One contestant was asked which condiment is also known as a Latin dance, correctly choosing salsa over the other options: mustard, mayonnaise and relish.

They get harder as the stakes grow higher. The first million-dollar winner won by correctly identifying the U.S. president to appear on the TV show "Laugh-In" (Richard Nixon). The second had to know the distance between the Earth and the sun (93 million miles).

Goshawk's policy required it to pay prizes of $500,000 or $1 million. Goshawk's responsibility didn't kick in until a $1.5 million deductible was met, and there was a ceiling of $5 million. The "Millionaire" production company, Buena Vista Entertainment Inc., was responsible for all smaller prizes.

Experts trace one computer used in attacks

By Ted Bridis
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Experts investigating attacks against major commercial Web sites this week confirmed Friday that a desktop computer used by vandals as a weapon has been traced to a California university.

There was no indication that anyone at the University of California at Santa Barbara was involved, only that one of its computers was believed to be among the dozens nationwide that were hacked and had electronic attack software secretly installed.

"They've attacked us in a way that hurts what we do as a university, and hurts all universities," said Robert Sugar, chairman of the school's information technology board. The school's computer was believed used in the attack against CNN's Web site on Tuesday.

Meanwhile, experts investigating the case suggested that the vandals in Monday's attack against the flagship Yahoo! Web site — the first to be shut down for hours — may have been far more sophisticated than originally believed.

A senior official with the FBI's National Infrastructure Protection Center, Ronald Dick, said previously that automated hacker tools widely available on the Internet mean that "a 15-year-old kid could launch these attacks."

"This is not something that it takes a great deal of sophistication to do," Dick said.

But e-mail from Yahoo! engineers describing the attack in unprecedented detail said the vandals apparently "knew about our topology and planned this large-scale attack in advance," and that other companies hit this week also were targeted "where it hurts the most."

This e-mail, sent as a warning to some Internet providers and obtained by The Associated Press, also described the Yahoo! attackers as "smart and above your average script-kiddie," a derisive term for an unskilled hacker, and said they "probably know both Unix and networking ... pretty well and learn about site topology to find weak spots."

An executive at GlobalCenter Inc., which provides Yahoo!'s Internet connection, also said Friday that engineers there were surprised during the attack, which flooded Yahoo! with more data each second than some major Web sites receive under normal conditions in an entire week.

"About an hour into the initial attack, they were already commenting about what appeared to be some level of sophistication," said Laurie Priddy, the company's executive vice president. "These (vandals) seemed pretty smart who were doing it."

"Denial of service tools are widely available and do not require great sophistication to use," a federal law enforcement official said Friday, requesting anonymity. "But what we've seen already does seem to be a somewhat sophisticated attack."

President Clinton said Friday that the Internet offers new opportunities for people "just mischievous and people who have far darker motives." But he also held out hope that America will "develop better defenses and better defenders."

"If you go back from the beginning of time, where things of value are stored, people with bad motives will try to get to those things," Clinton said at the White House. "Now vast things of values are stored in our computers and transactions of great values occur on the Internet."

In California, the university said its campus network programmer, Kevin Schmidt, noticed unusual computer traffic Tuesday night, roughly when CNN's Web site was shut down briefly. He called the network Wednesday to explain, and CNN called the FBI.

Also Friday, Excite.Com — a popular search engine for the Web — said its site also was targeted earlier this week by attackers. A flood of data disrupted service for about half its customers for about one hour Wednesday night until the attack suddenly ended without warning, spokeswoman Kelly Distefano said.

In these attacks, called "distributed denials of service," hackers secretly install software tools on dozens or hundreds of powerful but insecure computers — usually those of corporations or universities — then remotely direct crippling floods of electronic data at target Web sites.

Such attacks are similar to pranksters repeatedly dialing a company's telephone number to block all other incoming calls. University computers are favored targets among hackers because of generally lax security and fast Internet connections.

Sugar, a professor of physics, defended his university's security.

"This is an extraordinarily difficult job," Sugar said. "We can never make the network 100 percent secure. To attempt to would interfere with the university's research and instruction."

Pre-dawn blast breaks windows in Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — A small bomb exploded in the heart of Wall Street before daybreak Friday, shattering windows and slightly injuring one person.

There was no immediately claim of responsibility for the blast, which took place a few blocks from the New York Stock Exchange, Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said. Police were looking for a man seen in the area at the time.

"At this point it is not viewed as a terrorist act," Giuliani said. "They have no evidence to support that classification."

The device was a metal container containing black powder and cardboard, similar to a pipe bomb, Deputy Police Commissioner Patrick Kelleher said. No nails or other sharp objects were found inside it.

The bomb went off at 4:40 a.m. in front of an office building owned by Barclays Bank on the corner of Wall and Water streets, blowing out windows in that building and another nearby.

Four postal workers had walked past the device, realized it could be dangerous and ran away shortly before it exploded, Kelleher said. One of the four was treated for ringing in the ears.

"Had they been a few steps behind where they were, we could have had a much more significant tragedy," Kelleher said. The mayor, noting the four were only about 30 feet from the blast, said people could have been killed.

Dennis Theodore was working the overnight shift at World Co. LLC, one block from the blast.

"The windows shook. The whole building shook," he said. "I thought it was in my building, or right outside my building. That's how loud it was."

Barclays said its building, about 40 stories tall, had only minor damage. The bank does not occupy any space in the building. Instead, the building houses offices of J.P. Morgan and Dresdner Bank.

The explosion caused little disruption to the workday. Workers were allowed into the damaged buildings through other entrances and the stock exchange opened at its usual time.

In 1997, a small, homemade bomb went off before 6 a.m. outside a Wall Street office tower owned by Merrill Lynch, shattering glass but injuring no one. Police said there was no apparent connection to Friday's incident.

Gore leads candidates in payroll; Bush in television ads

By Jonathan D. Salant
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Vice President Al Gore has the biggest payroll of any presidential candidate, and Texas Gov. George W. Bush and former Sen. Bill Bradley have spent the most on television commercials, a computer analysis of their latest spending reports shows.

Meanwhile, Sen. John McCain's upstart GOP campaign spent more than a third of its money on fund raising between Jan. 1 and Dec. 31, 1999, according to the analysis by the Campaign Study Group, a research organization that analyzes campaign spending and expenditures.

When he was re-elected in 1996, President Clinton spent $6.4 million on salaries for his entire re-election campaign. Gore already spent $5.7 million through Dec. 31, more than any other candidate still in the race.

The vice president moved his campaign headquarters from Washington, D.C., to Nashville, Tenn., in October to cut costs and pare staff. Even so, Gore spent $1.1 million on rent and utilities in 1999, more than any other candidate.

Herbert Alexander, professor emeritus of political science at the University of Southern California, said Gore still has to worry about reaching the $40 million spending limit before the national convention in August. Gore must limit his spending because he is accepting taxpayer funds for his campaign.

"He's got to worry about what happens once he gets the nomination," Alexander said. "Because of the challenge by Bradley, he had to spend considerably more than he should have. He didn't conserve enough for the year 2000."

■ Gore raised $29 million for his campaign, while spending $23.2 million, including $6.9 million to raise the money.

■ Bradley took in $27.8 million while spending $19.5 million, including $3.8 million — far less than Gore — to get it.

Bradley's payroll was almost $1 million less than Gore's for the same period, allowing the former senator to spend 50 percent more than the vice president on television ads — $4.2 million to Gore's $2.8 million.

"Bill Bradley has outspent us on television everywhere but we've out-organized him on the ground," Gore spokesman Douglas Hattaway said.

Bradley campaign officials failed to return a call seeking comment.

On the Republican side:

■ Bush, who has raised more than $70 million — more than any other presidential candidate ever — spent $10.1 million on fund raising, more than a fourth of the $37.3 million he spent on his campaign through Dec. 31.

He spent more on television — $6.3 million — than on payroll — $5.5 million. In 1996, Republican presidential nominee Bob Dole spent a total of $7 million on TV throughout the campaign.

Unlike the other candidates, Bush is not accepting federal funds and therefore can spend as much as he wants.

The Texas governor also spent $6.9 million on other ways to reach voters, including campaign rallies, bumper stickers, phone banks, and mail such as a brochure sent to Virginia voters touting his record on education.

"It's important to look at it in terms of voter contact," Bush spokesman Scott McClellan said. "We are maximizing our resources to reach the greatest number of voters in the early key primary states."

■ McCain, meanwhile, spent $14.2 million through Dec. 31, with more than a third, $5.7 million, going for fund raising. He raised $15.7 million last year, including $2 million transferred from his Senate campaign account.

"That was the disadvantage McCain faced," Alexander said. "Back then, he had to scrounge. He had a relatively impoverished campaign."

Since the reports were filed, McCain turned his Feb. 1 victory in New Hampshire into a fund-raising bonanza, taking in more than $1 million over the Internet the next day.

McCain drops ads attacking George W. Bush

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — In an abrupt change of strategy, Sen. John McCain pulled ads attacking George W. Bush off the air Friday after advisers determined the commercials were compromising his campaign as a self-styled political outsider.

A week away from this state's critical Republican primary, McCain urged Bush to follow suit and pledge to run strictly positive ads. "We can't be involved in these kind of campaign activities," the Arizona senator said in the latest exchange between two candidates trying to portray each other as negative campaigners.

Bush quickly rejected the proposal, suggesting that McCain's decision was an act of politics, not principle.

"That's an old Washington trick. It's a bait-and-switch trick. He runs ads for 18 days defining me for something I'm not, and then all of a sudden says, 'OK, let's all be quiet.' I'm going to make sure that the people understand exactly what I believe and exactly where I stand," Bush said between campaign stops in Charleston.

The fracas began in the New Hampshire primary campaign, when a McCain ad suggested that Bush would damage Social Security. Bush fired back with an ad saying the Arizona senator distorted the truth in his spot. That prompted two hard-hitting McCain ads that compared Bush and his truth-telling to President Clinton.

As the South Carolina campaign heated up, the Texas governor's ad campaign has all but called McCain a hypocrite for denouncing special interests while seeking political donations from them.

"I hope that he will recognize the damage that this kind of thing does to the electorate," McCain said Friday.

After a surge of momentum generated by his landslide New Hampshire victory, McCain's own polling showed his progress slowed because of negative ads by both campaigns. The surveys did not pick up major slippage but confirmed the suspicion of some advisers that McCain's ads — particularly ones linking Bush to Clinton — tarnished his clean-scrubbed political image.

Exit polls from Tuesday's Delaware primary showed about one quarter of the Republican voters said McCain had made unfair attacks on his rivals.

The primary concern in McCain's camp, however, was voter turnout. His advisers fear that the campaign's nasty tone is alienating independent and Democratic voters who are the cornerstone of his campaign. Regardless of who voters blame for the negative turn of events, McCain stands to lose the most if the atmosphere suppresses turnout, his advisers concluded.

"There's no question that a negative war is going to lower turnout. We want more people to come," said campaign manager Rick Davis. "The more people who show up the better off we are."

Not easing up, Bush unveiled a new ad Friday that accused the Arizonan of going "over the line" with the Clinton comparison. "Disagree with me, fine, but do not challenge my integrity," the Texas governor says in the ad.

Bush's advisers say they plan to air another ad this weekend that is sharply critical of the Arizonan. Though they may be forced to tone down upcoming ads in response to McCain's challenge, aides said they do not plan to abandon their strategy to redefine McCain.

"This guy runs two weeks of negative ads comparing us to Bill Clinton and now he wants ease up? This is a guy who will say one thing and do another," said Bush strategist Karl Rove. "He's bowing to the negative consequences of accusing us of being like President Clinton."

Rebels earn OT victory over Odessa in House's final game at Chap Center

By Terry Williamson

Jon House got a win from his Rebels in his last home game as the head basketball coach at Midland Lee at Chaparral Center Friday night.

The Rebels outlasted the Odessa Bronchos 94-90 in overtime in a scoring marathon where you needed more than fingers and toes to count the baskets — and free throws.

"I'm just tickled for the kids," House said. "My last game (at home) really doesn't have anything to do with it. Anyway, I'll remember all the kids more than I will any of the wins when it's all over."

And it will be over for House shortly since Lee's last game of the season is Tuesday in San Angelo. House resigned his post, effective at the end of the season, in January.

"These kids could have folded their tent, but have hung in there all year," House said. "I'm happy for them."

The Rebels responded for House in this one. Lee overcame an eight-point deficit in the fourth quarter to take a lead, only to see Odessa

Gardner, Johnston post big games for district champion Bulldog squad

ODESSA — It was business as usual for the Midland High boys basketball team to close out its District 4-5A schedule Friday night, and most of the time business has been good.

The 75-66 win at Odessa Permian was typical of the way the district champion Bulldogs have been winning this season; perhaps a struggle in the first half where they fall behind by a few points before their more established players take over sometime in the third quarter and decide the outcome.

Midland High	75
Permian	66

Midland High's victory over Permian wasn't quite as close as the final score would indicate, although the Bulldogs never could comfortably hit cruise control. It wasn't spectacular, but it was enough to boost their record to 27-5 overall and 11-1 in district.

"Another day at the office," was MHS coach Jack Stephenson's evaluation of the victory. "It's always hard to play (in Permian's gym). We just didn't get it done in the first half but we played a lot better in the second."

The Bulldogs led the entire first period and went up 18-10 early in the second quarter on a layup by Chris Oldham. However, Permian responded with a 12-0 run to lead 22-18, which would be its biggest advantage of the game.

Trailing 32-31 at halftime, the Bulldogs turned to a pair of seniors to carry the load in the second half. Randy Gardner and Blake Johnston combined to score 35 of Midland High's 44 points in the second half in a variation on the inside-outside show.

Gardner scored Midland High's first 10 points of the second half to establish himself as the Bulldogs' most effective offensive weapon over the last two periods. He scored on put-back shots and layups as the Panthers were unable to stop him near the basket.

"(The Panthers) had a few holes inside and we had to find them after halftime," said Gardner, who scored 19 of his career high 27 points in the second half and also had a game high seven rebounds. "Blake and the guys just did a great job of getting me the ball. I hadn't been doing a good job of finishing lately, but I did it tonight so they kept going to me."

After missing his first shot of the third quarter, Gardner hit his last eight in a row and fin-

Jacks give coach win over Buzzards

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

ODESSA — The Odessa Jackalopes didn't need to wrap their birthday present for head coach Don McKee.

They just gave him a 5-2 victory over rival El Paso Friday night in front of 3,212 fans at the Jack Shack, making it a very happy "Heinz 57th" birthday.

The Jacks, which won their third straight game, put it away in the second period with three goals and outshooting the Buzzards, 19-5.

Very early it looked like El Paso might have a chance to ruin McKee's celebration with a goal just two minutes, 42 seconds into the contest. But the Jacks responded with four unanswered goals.

"We got it tonight with good work ethic," McKee said after the game. "I thought we were asleep in the first period. It was a situation where we needed to get a push between periods in order to get it going."

That little push the Jacks needed started just four minutes after the El Paso goal with a goal by Jason Heywood, who took a shot from left side and got it past El Paso goalie Todd Laurin. Heywood's goal looked almost too easy. Afterwards, McKee and Heywood said they got the Buzzards in a line change.

"I think it was important to score," Heywood said. "They scored the first goal and we needed to come back at home and score right on top of their goal."

A key in the victory was that the Jacks were able to shut down El Paso's first line with a line consisting of Mike Smith, Rick Girhiny and Savo Mitrovic.

"They shut the line down in the first period and shut it down in the second and I thought we had a very frustrated (Buzzard) Mr. (Martin) Menard," McKee said.

CINCINNATI — Now they're sleepless in Cincinnati.

Phone lines were jammed, ticket lines overflowed and it seemed the only topic of conversation on street corners Friday was some guy named Junior who was moving in from Seattle.

A day after one of biggest trades in baseball history brought Ken Griffey Jr. to the Cincinnati Reds, his hometown was in a frenzy unlike anything since Pete Rose — another favorite son — came home in 1984.

They're positively giddy over Griffey.

"It's just been a 48-hour onslaught — a very nice onslaught," said Mike Vassallo, the Reds' assistant director of media relations.

The Reds brought one of baseball's best players home on a private jet Thursday night after completing a four-for-one trade with Seattle. Griffey agreed to a nine-year contract that will keep him home for the rest of his career.

Grand jury indicts NFL star Lewis, associates

By James Pilcher
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — A grand jury indicted NFL star Ray Lewis and two associates on murder charges Friday for the stabbing deaths of two men after a Super Bowl party.

Fulton County District Attorney Paul Howard Jr. announced the indictments Friday, saying Lewis and the two other suspects were involved in a Jan. 31 fight that left the two victims dead.

Lewis, a three-time Pro Bowl linebacker for the Baltimore Ravens, remains in the Atlanta Detention Center without bail, charged with the deaths of Richard Lollar, 24, and Jacinth Baker, 21. Despite Friday's indictments, a bond hearing remains scheduled for Monday.

Howard would not say if Lewis stabbed one of the victims, but he can be charged with murder if he was involved in the fight — even if someone else killed the men.

Lady Chaps look solid in doubleheader sweep

Strong pitching and aggressive hitting combined for a doubleheader sweep by the Midland College Lady Chaparral softball team Friday. In their 2000 home opener, the Lady Chaps overpowered Schreiner College 7-0 and 8-4 at the Bill Williams Softball Complex.

Midland College Softball

Little-used Andrea Rodriguez, just 3-0 last season, threw a nifty four-hit shutout in the opener, striking out nine and walking just two.

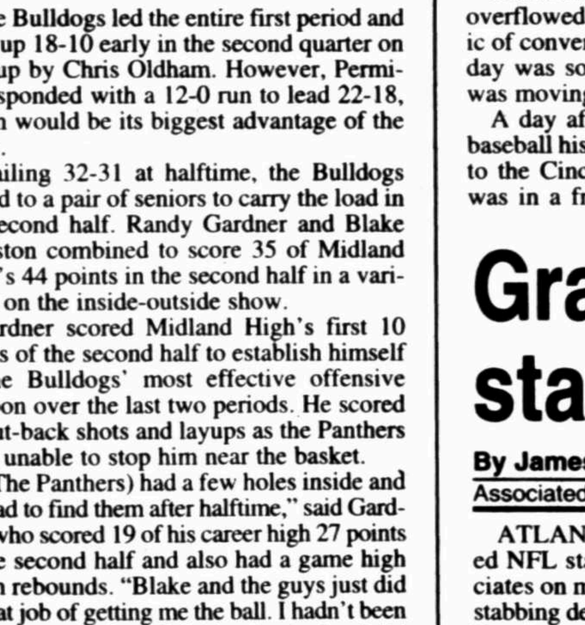

"Andrea pitched well the few times we used her last season and extremely well this fall," said MC coach Tommy Ramos. "We plan on having her as part of a three-pitcher rotation this year."

With one out in the bottom of the first, J. R. Chavira powered an 0-1 pitch over left field for the only run the Chaps would need. Melissa Martinez added a run, scoring on an error after a double. Newcomer Nicole Martinez slammed a homer over left in the second. Melissa Martinez scored again in the third after another double, then drove in two more runs in the fourth with her second double of the game. She scored on Lauren Wallace's single.

The Chaps (3-1) also took advantage of five errors by the Mountaineers (1-3), who hold dual status as an NCAA Division III and NAIA college.

Tiger makes move, still has work to do

■ Phil Mickelson is one of the leaders after the second round. Woods trails the lead pack by six.

By Doug Ferguson

SAN DIEGO — Tiger Woods was focused on making the cut. Phil Mickelson, one of the leaders after two rounds in the Buick Invitational, was focused on Tiger Woods.

Never mind that Mickelson has won 13 times on the PGA Tour, one of those in this tournament, played on what essentially is his home course. Or that Woods, despite five birdies on the back nine, was still six strokes out of the lead and searching for his swing.

The Streak has taken on a life of its own, and Mickelson wasn't about to ignore it.

And if watching or reading about Woods' six straight victories wasn't enough, Mickelson still remembers how Woods shot 62-65 last year on the weekend at Torrey Pines to rally from eight strokes back for a two-stroke victory.

"A six-shot lead," he said, "is nothing to be comfortable with."

Woods kept alive the most important streak Friday by making his 46th consecutive cut, which gave him two more days to catch Mickelson, Shigeki Maruyama and Kirk Triplett.

"Right now, I'm not too bad," Woods said after a hard-charging 68 brought him from the brink of disaster to within range of his seventh straight tour victory.

Big Spring girls advance

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring girls' basketball team earned a playoff berth Friday with a 48-42 win over San Angelo Lake View at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum as Melissa Forth had 13 points and Angela McGee had 10.

The game was the first part of a mini-tournament to decide the last two playoff spots in District 5-4A. While Sweetwater won the district at 10-0, three teams — Big Spring, Lake View and Snyder tied for second place at 6-4.

Big Spring (17-12) will play Snyder (12-15), which won a coin flip for the bye, at 4 p.m. today at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. That game will decide which teams get the No. 2 and No. 3 seeds from the district.

Both Trinity teams lose

After tying for second place, both of Trinity's basketball teams played district playoffs for their district's last playoff spot this week, and both lost.

The Trinity girls lost to Amarillo San Jacinto Christian 56-50 on Thursday in Lubbock. Trinity got 15 points from Catherine Durbin and 11 from Renee Rougeaux, but it wasn't enough to offset the 30 points scored by San Jacinto's Amy Newton. Trinity trailed by as much as 16 points and cut the deficit to three points with 24 seconds left, but the Lady Chargers fell just short.

The Lady Chargers finished the season at 14-15 overall and 7-3 in District 1-3A in the Texas Association of Private a. Parochial Schools. It was an improvement over the 11-18 they compiled last season.

"We came a long way, that's for sure," Trinity girls coach Jeff Young said.

The Trinity boys played against Lydia Patterson Friday in Van Horn. Young reported that Trinity lost, 74-70, but no other details were available.

Howard's Myers named to Hall

Former Howard College basketball star Archie Myers has been selected for induction into the National Junior College Basketball Hall of Fame, which is located in Hutchinson, Kan.

Myers, who played at Howard from 1970-72, is still the second all-time leading scorer in NJCAA history with 2,199 points. As a sophomore during the 1971-72 season, Myers averaged 36.5 points per game. In both his seasons, he was an NJCAA All-America selection, as well as all-region and MVP of the regional tournament.

He went on to play basketball at Stephen F. Austin State University, where he was the Lumberjacks' leading scorer with an average of 22.2 in 1973-74.

After leaving SFA, Myers served as an assistant coach at Midland College, then head coach at Odessa College. He then was the head coach at Keller High School for many years before taking his current job as head coach at Fort Worth Wyatt High School.

Three other men will be inducted with Myers, including two former Vincennes Junior College stars. Rickey Green led Vincennes to the national tournament twice, in 1974 and 1975, then played 12 seasons in the NBA. Dan Sparks was the center on Vincennes' national champion in 1965 and is now in his 21st season coaching the team.

Also being inducted is Virgil Motsinger, who won 605 games in 35 years as head coach at Southeastern Illinois College before retiring in 1997.

LEE: Rebels earn overtime victory

(From 1B)

High's Eric Espinosa hit a three-point shot to send the game into overtime. Lee scored 30 points in the fourth period, only to have to play another stanza where they outscored the Bronchos by a 13-9 margin.

And here's how you win a scoring shootout. Senior Chris Packer, playing in his last home game, went out on a big note, scoring a career high 33 points.

"I think I had 33 (points) in elementary school once," Packer said. "I just wanted to give our fans something to remember me for."

T.J. Glover came off the bench and seemed to energize the Rebels when he was in the game. Glover put in his career high 21 points on 8-of-11 shooting from the field and hit 5-of-7 free throws.

"I got a lot of playing time tonight and my game just seemed to come alive," Glover said. "This feels really good to win. That's back-to-back home wins for us and we haven't been doing that."

Also, Glover and Packer had back-to-back slams that were the highlights of the evening.

Then there was sophomore Eric Winston, who had 14 points. But get this news item: For the most part, Winston, not known for his charity success, did it at the free throw line, hitting 10-of-12 in the second half and nine in a row.

"I've never had nine free throws in a row or 10 in a game," Winston said. "The rim was giving me a good roll and it (the rim) doesn't do that for me — ever. I guess I was putting the right spin on the ball."

Junior Wendell Smith scored 10 points to round out the double digit attack for Lee.

But OHS, too, went on a scoring binge. Gary Williams scored 21 points and handed out some assists that only Midland High's Blake Johnston can dream of. Matt Sutherland whipped in another 21 while Greg Smithee had a double-double with 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Austin Mathis had 13 points and Chris Evans had 12 as OHS had five players in double figures.

The Bronchos, however, again ended up on the losing end of a basketball game. This team has been ahead of every team in the league, but can't seem to hang onto wins in the end. But they can score with just about anyone.

Lee is now 4-7 in 4-5A play with one last game to play. The Rebels travel to San Angelo Central Tuesday for a 7:30 p.m. game.

"We want to beat a team that is ahead of us in the standings," Glover said. "That would be a great way to end the season. We have nothing to lose, we're playing for pride."

MHS: Bulldogs end 4-5A schedule

(From 1B)

ished the game by making 11-of-12 from the floor.

"He's playing better now," said Stephenson of Gardner. "It's that time of year for him to start doing that and playing the way he's capable of."

Of course, Johnston, who had a game high 29 points, has been Midland High's most known quantity of the season. He hit back-to-back 3-pointers to start a 9-0 run late in the third quarter, feeding Gardner for a layup and a three-point play which ended the run and gave the Bulldogs a 56-45 lead. Permian never got any closer than eight after that.

The Panthers needed a win to even think about making the playoffs, but since San Angelo Central beat Abilene High, the game meant nothing, especially for the district champion Bulldogs, other than to stay in playing shape.

"Permian's always a tough place to play, but I didn't want to see the guys come out lackadaisical just because we'd already locked up district," Gardner said.

The Bulldogs will try to stay sharp with a practice game against Lubbock Monterey at 7 p.m. Monday at Chaparral Center. Stephenson wants to keep his team in a competitive groove and said MHS could play Seminole in another practice game a week from today.

"We need to play because after (Monday) we can't play the next week," said Stephenson, whose team will not only draw a first round bye when the playoffs start a week from Tuesday, but also has the final open district date. "We're used to playing twice a week and we'd like to keep doing that."

Luquente White had 10 points for Midland High. Roy Williams led Permian with 13, while Greg Houpe added 12.

Kwan finishes 3rd in short program

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Imagine, at 19 years of age, needing to hold off a youth wave. Michelle Kwan doesn't have to imagine it.

That challenge became very real Friday night when into a very ordinary national championships skated two extraordinary kids, Sasha Cohen and Sarah Hughes.

Not only did their performances in the women's short program lift the level of skating in what has been a lackluster U.S. Figure Skating Championships, but they surely woke up Kwan, who was third.

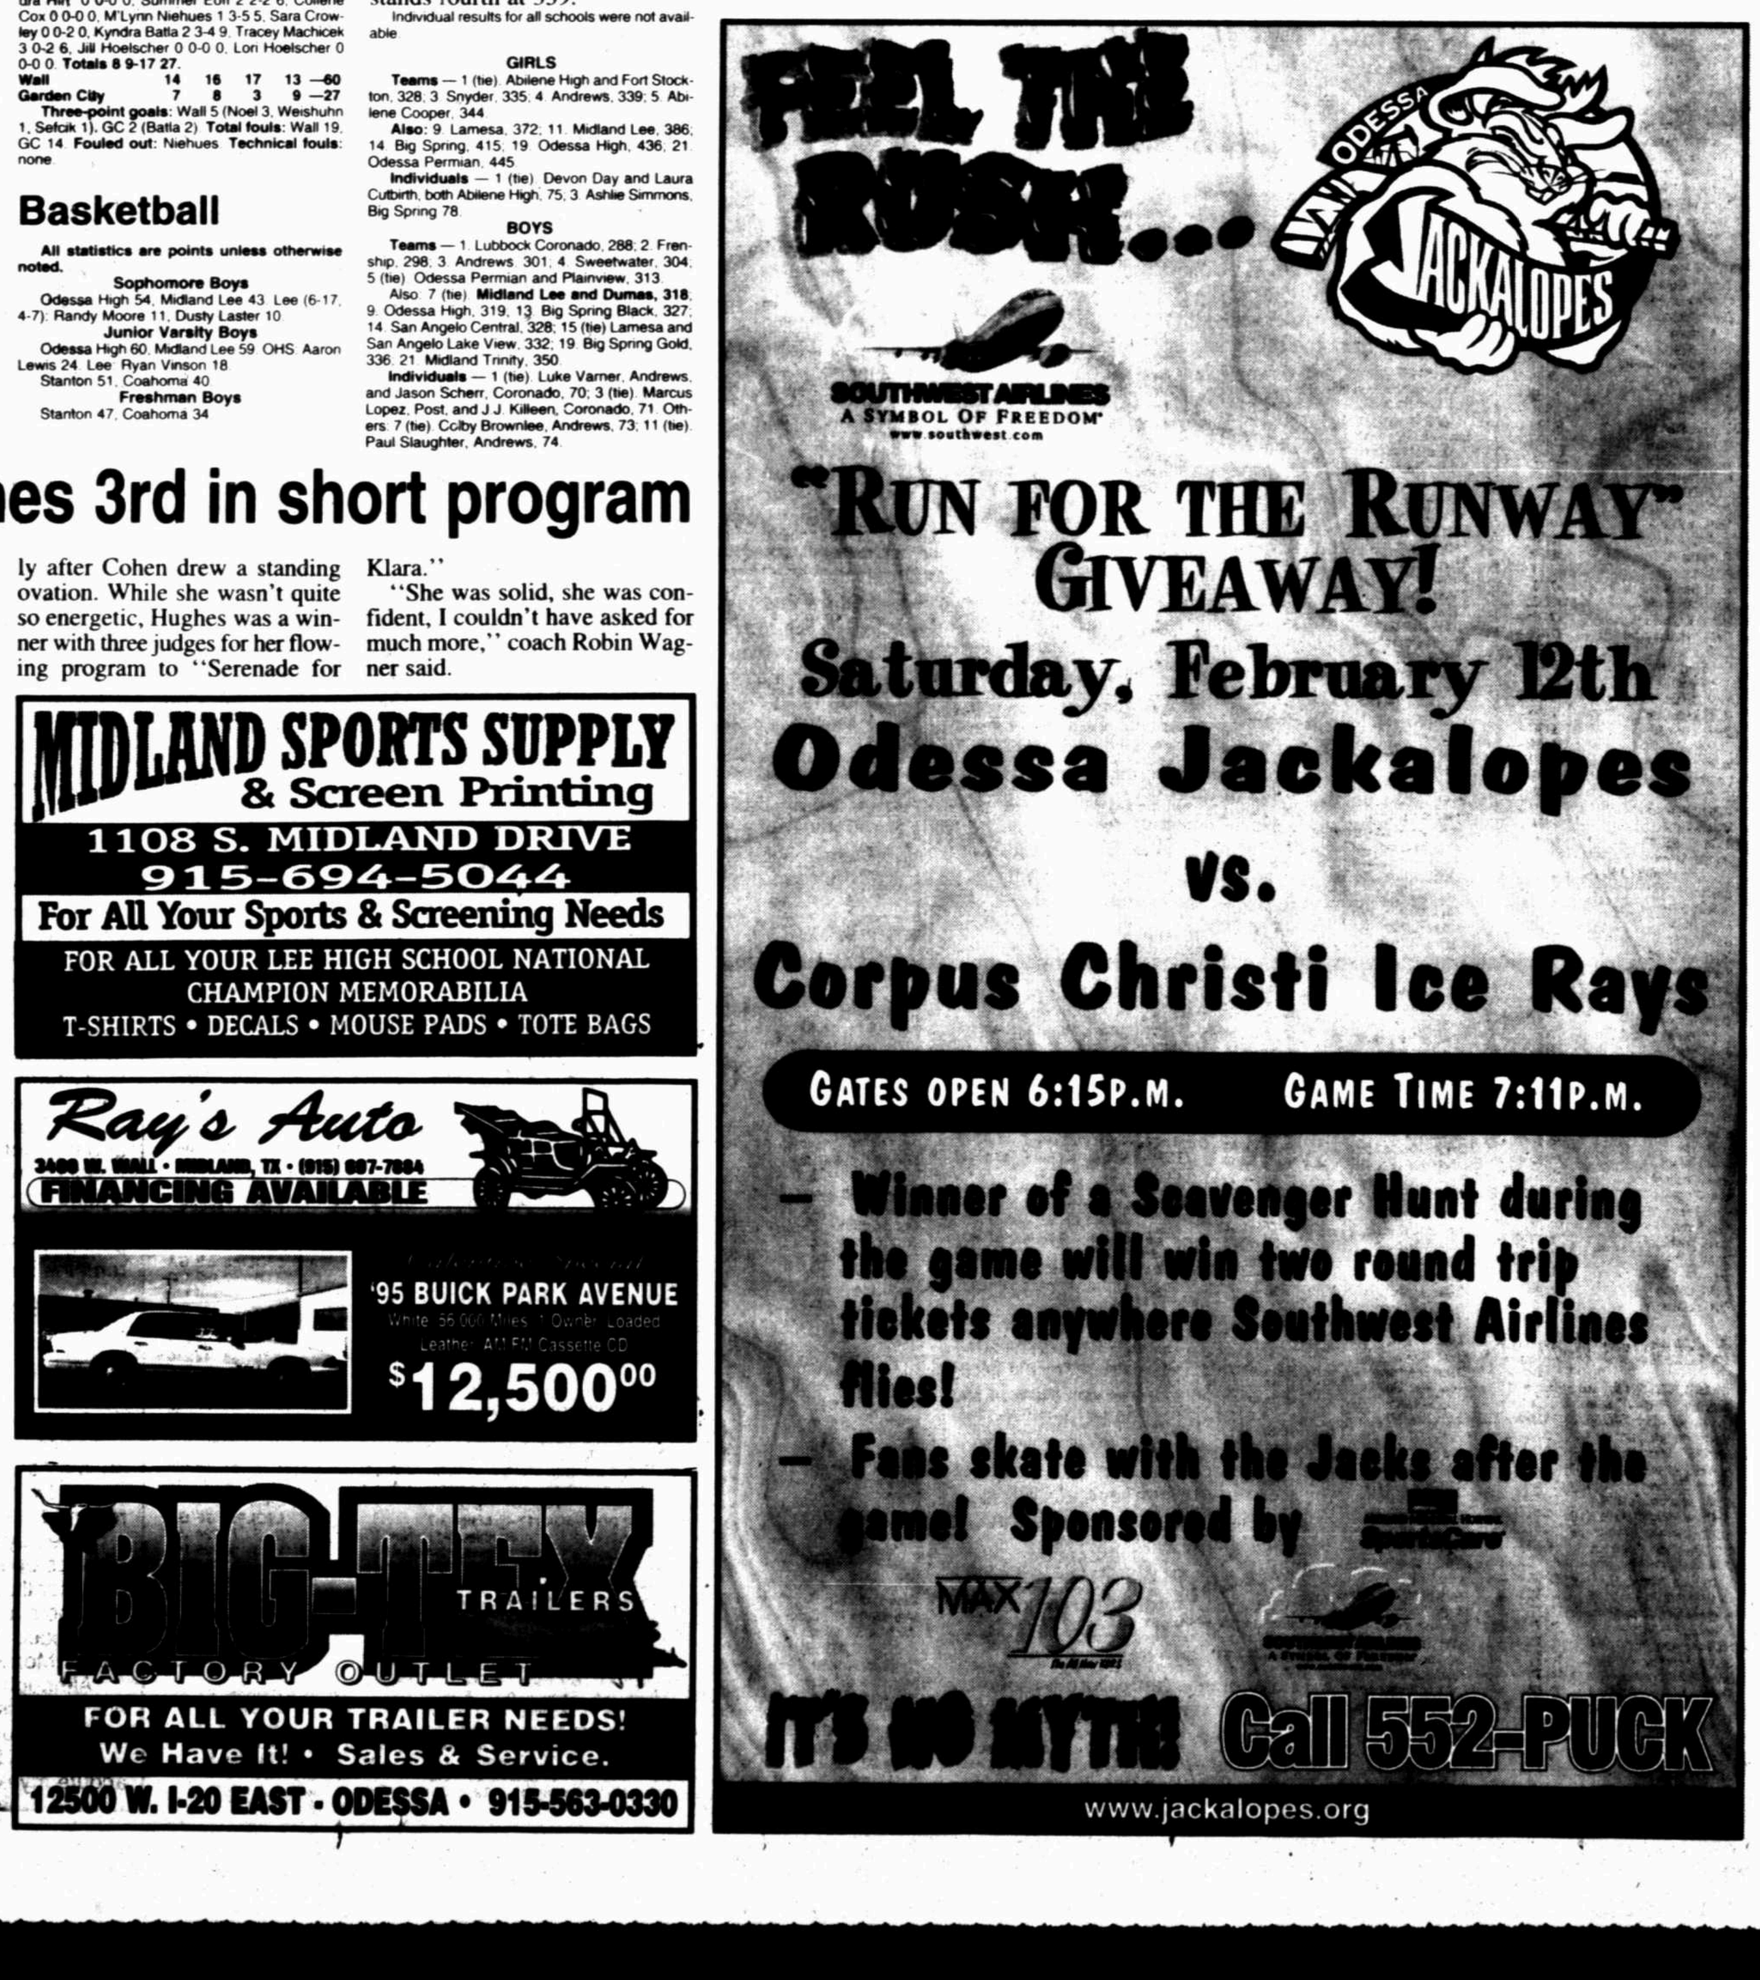

"I do see the future and it's incredible," Kwan said. "I can see the great potential and where we're sitting at world standards and how the U.S. looks against the world."

It will look awesome if these youngsters keep this up. They really didn't expect to surge ahead of Kwan so soon.

"I wouldn't really believe I could beat her, she's just so great," said Cohen, who is 15 but looks, oh, maybe 9.

Hughes, 14, took the ice directly after Cohen drew a standing ovation. While she wasn't quite so energetic, Hughes was a winner with three judges for her flowing program to "Serenade for Klara."

"She was solid, she was confident, I couldn't have asked for much more," coach Robin Wagner said.

NL Spring Training Preview

By Josh Dubow
AP Sports Writer

Team-by-team look at the National League in spring training, including players each club acquired and lost:

NL East

Atlanta Braves

Manager: Bobby Cox (11th season).
Training Town: Kissimmee, Fla.
Park: Disney Wide World of Sports Stadium.
Tickets: (407) 839-3900.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 17.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 22.
He's Here: OF Reggie Sanders, 2B Quilvio Veras, 1B Wally Joyner, OF Bobby Bonilla, LHP Paul Assenmacher, INF Trenidad Hubbard, RHP Rafael Medina.
He's Outta Here: 2B Bret Boone, 1B Ryan Klesko, RHP Russ Springer, SS Jose Hernandez, C Greg Myers, OF Gerald Williams.
Spring Chicken: Rafael Furcal. Hit .322 in Class-A and led minors with 96 stolen bases. Just 19, Furcal is shortstop the Braves have been lacking during their run of eight straight division titles. Expected to start season in Double-A.
Hot Spot: Just when it looked like Atlanta found its dominating closer, John Rocker went out and insulted nearly everybody. He'll miss the start of the season. Remains to be seen whether he will be accepted into the clubhouse or if his game will be affected by the hubbub.

Florida Marlins

Manager: John Boles (2nd Season).
Training Town: Viera, Fla.
Park: Space Coast Stadium.
Tickets: (321) 633-9200.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 19.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 23.
He's Here: RHP Dan Miceli, OF Brant Brown, RHP Ricky Bones.
He's Outta Here: RHP Brian Meadows, OF Bruce Aven, OF Todd Dunwoody, 3B Kevin Orie, RHP Dennis Springer, RHP Rafael Medina.
Spring Chicken: A.J. Burnett. Struggled in the minors last season before going 4-2 with a 3.48 ERA with the Marlins. Acquired two years ago for Al Leiter, Burnett has gotten more attention so far for nipple rings and tattoos than a 95 mph fastball and sharp curve.
Hot Spot: Mike Lowell showed signs of being a major league third baseman after return from testicular cancer. Trade of Orie, clears way for Lowell to show off 25-homer potential.

Montreal Expos

Manager: Felipe Alou (9th season).
Training Town: Jupiter, Fla.
Park: Roger Dean Stadium.
Tickets: (561) 966-3309.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 17.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 22.
He's Here: RHP Hideki Irabu, LHP Graeme Lloyd, 2B Mickey Morandini, C Charlie O'Brien.
He's Outta Here: OF James Mouton, OF Orlando Merced.
Spring Chicken: Tony Armas Jr. Son of the former AL home run champ was acquired in Pedro Martinez trade two years ago. Has three major league-quality pitches but probably needs another year of seasoning in the minors.
Hot Spot: Alou shuttled Michael Barrett between catcher and third base last season. It's time to make a decision on where to use the talented youngster. Trade Chris Widger and put Barrett behind the plate or keep him at third base.

New York Mets

Manager: Bobby Valentine (5th season).
Training Town: Port St. Lucie, Fla.
Park: St. Lucie County Stadium.
Tickets: (561) 871-2115.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 15.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 20.
He's Here: LHP Mike Hampton, 1B Todd Zeile, OF Derek Bell, LHP Jesse Orosco, LHP Bobby M. Jones, LHP Bill Pulsipher, LHP Rich Rodriguez, INF Charlie Hayes, RHP Dennis Springer, OF Jon Nunnally, INF Kurt Abbott, OF Curtis Pride, INF Garth Brooks.
He's Outta Here: OF Bobby Bonilla, 1B John Olerud, LHP Kenny Rogers, RHP Orel Hershiser, RHP Octavio Dotel, OF Roger Cedeno, LHP Chuck McElroy, RHP Masato Yoshii, OF Shawon Dunston, RHP Billy Taylor, INF Luis Lopez.
Spring Chicken: Alex Escobar. After a dominating 1998, injuries limited the outfielder to 11 at-bats last season. Has great power and speed and is one of the few top prospects left in the organization after trades for veterans.
Hot Spot: Zeile will be counted on to replace Olerud at first base. Infield defense was biggest strength for Mets last season, but Zeile has played only 76 games at first and once made four errors in one game there.

Philadelphia Phillies

Manager: Terry Francona (4th season).
Training Town: Clearwater, Fla.
Park: Jack Russell Stadium.
Tickets: (727) 442-8496.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 18.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 23.
He's Here: RHP Andy Ashby, RHP Mike Jackson, RHP Chris Brock, SS Felix Martinez, RHP Carlos Reyes, RHP Mark Brownson.
He's Outta Here: RHP Carlton Loewer, C Bobby Estalella, RHP Chad Ogea, RHP Yorkis Perez.
Spring Chicken: Pat Burrell. Perhaps the best hitting prospect in baseball, Burrell hit .333 with 28 homers and 90 RBIs in Double-A. Questions remain on defense, where Burrell has moved from third base to first to left field since being top pick in 1998.
Hot Spot: Pressure will be on Ashby to fill early void left by Curt Schilling's injury. Schilling is expected to miss at least April. Team collapsed down stretch in 1999 with Schilling on the shelf.

NL Central

Chicago Cubs

Manager: Don Baylor (1st season).
Training Town: Mesa, Ariz.
Park: HoHoKam Park.
Tickets: (800) 638-4253.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 13.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 18.
He's Here: RHP Ismael Valdes, 2B Eric Young, C Joe Girardi, SS Ricky Gutierrez, OF Damon Buford, 3B Willie Greene, INF Jeff Huson, RHP Brian Williams, RHP Greg McMichael.
He's Outta Here: RHP Terry Adams, RHP Steve Trachsel, INF Manny Alexander, RHP Dan Serafini, 3B Gary Gaetti, OF Lance Johnson, C Benito Santiago, SS Jeff Blauser, 2B Mickey Morandini, RHP Bobby Ayala, RHP Scott Sanders.
Spring Chicken: Corey Patterson. Hit .320 with 20 homers and 33 steals in first pro season. One of the top outfield prospects, the 20-year-old hit .368 in Arizona Fall League despite being its youngest player. Should start season at Double-A but could see Wrigley by September.
Hot Spot: With Kerry Wood leading them, Cubs earned the NL wild-card in 1998. Slipped 23 games last year with Wood sidelined with an elbow injury. Without a healthy Wood, could be "wait till next year" again for Cubs fans.

Cincinnati Reds

Manager: Jack McKeon (3rd season).
Training Town: Sarasota, Fla.
Park: Ed Smith Stadium.
Tickets: (813) 287-8844.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 16.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 21.
He's Here: OF Ken Griffey Jr., OF Dante Bichette, OF Deion Sanders, RHP Mark Portugal, OF Kimera Bartee, OF Alex Ochoa.
He's Outta Here: OF Greg Vaughn, RHP Juan Guzman, OF Mike Cameron, OF Jeffrey Hammonds, RHP Brett Tomko, RHP Stan Belinda, C Brian Johnson, OF Mark Sweeney.
Spring Chicken: Rob Bell. Right-hander came over from Atlanta before last season with Denny Neagle. Slowed by elbow soreness in 1999, Bell had 2.93 ERA in 80 innings. Best pitch is a hard curveball.
Hot Spot: Griffey took less money — about half as much — to play for his hometown team. Pressure will be on Junior now to deliver a winner.

Houston Astros

Manager: Larry Dierker (4th season).
Training Town: Kissimmee, Fla.
Park: Osceola County Stadium.
Tickets: (407) 839-3900.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 18.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 23.
He's Here: OF Roger Cedeno, RHP Octavio Dotel, RHP Dwight Gooden, RHP Mike Maddux, RHP Kip Gross, SS Adam Everett, INF Tripp Cromer.
He's Outta Here: LHP Mike Hampton, OF Carl Everett, OF Derek Bell, OF Stan Javier, SS Ricky Gutierrez, RHP Brian Williams, C Randy Knorr.
Spring Chicken: Dotel. Hard-throwing right-hander dominated Triple-A before helping Mets' playoff push. Acquired for ace Mike Hampton, Dotel needs another pitch. Maybe fellow Dominican Jose Lima could teach him changeup.
Hot Spot: Daryle Ward, Richard Hidalgo and Lance Berkman will be counted on to produce in outfield, especially if Moises Alou can't bounce back from knee injury. Cedeno will be expected to duplicate breakout season as he takes over center from Everett.

Milwaukee Brewers

Manager: Davey Lopes (1st season).
Training Town: Maryvale, Ariz.
Park: Maryvale Baseball Park.
Tickets: (480) 784-4444.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 17.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 22.
He's Here: RHP Juan Acevedo, C Henry Blanco, RHP Curt Leskanic, RHP Jamey Wright, RHP Jimmy Haynes, INF Jose Hernandez, OF James Mouton, OF Mark Sweeney, RHP Jaime Navarro, RHP John Snyder, INF Luis Lopez, C Tyler Houston.
He's Outta Here: 3B Jeff Cirillo, C Dave Nilsson, 2B Fernando Vina, LHP Mike Myers, LHP Scott Karl, RHP Hideo Nomo, RHP Eric Plunk, LHP Bill Pulsipher, OF Alex Ochoa, RHP Cal Eldred, INF Jose Valentin.
Spring Chicken: Nick Neugebauer. Dominating fastball and biting slider have drawn comparisons to Kerry Wood's pitches. Struck out 125 batters in 81 innings in Class-A.
Hot Spot: Hernandez (.266, 19 HRs, 62 RBIs in 1999) and Blanco (.232, 6, 28) will be expected to replace Cirillo (.326, 15, 88) and Nilsson (.309, 21, 62) for team that was ninth in NL in runs scored.

Pittsburgh Pirates

Manager: Gene Lamont (4th season).
Training Town: Bradenton, Fla.
Park: McKechnie Field.
Tickets: (813) 287-8844.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 17.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 22.
He's Here: OF Bruce Aven, OF Wil Cordero, INF Luis Sojo, RHP Mark Leiter.
He's Outta Here: OF Brant Brown, RHP Brad Clontz, 3B Ed Sprague, C Joe Oliver.
Spring Chicken: Chad Hermansen. Shifted from shortstop to center field to second base to left field back to center field and to right field. His bat remains consistent. Hit 32 homers in Triple-A and stole 19 bases. Can Bucs find spot in field for him?
Hot Spot: A grotesque ankle injury cut Jason Kendall's season short as he was establishing himself as one of best all-around catchers. Hit .332 with 61 runs and 22 stolen bass before injury July 4. Says he's in better shape than before he was hurt.

St. Louis Cardinals

Manager: Tony La Russa (5th season).
Training Town: Jupiter, Fla.
Park: Roger Dean Stadium.
Tickets: (314) 421-4400.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 17.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 21.
He's Here: 2B Fernando Vina, RHP Pat Hentgen, RHP Darryl Kile, RHP Andy Benes, LHP Paul Spoljaric, RHP Dave Veres, OF Dante Powell, OF Shawon Dunston, OF Brian McRae, 1B-OF Larry Sutton, C Mike Matheny.
He's Outta Here: RHP Juan Acevedo, RHP Lance Painter, RHP Manny Aybar, RHP Rick Croushore, RHP Jose Jimenez, RHP Ricky Bottalico, C Alberto Castillo, LHP Donovan Osborne, OF Darren Bragg, OF Willie McGee, LHP Darren Oliver.
Spring Chicken: Rich Ankiel. Top pitching prospect in baseball has great command of fastball and curve. Babied through the minors. Might be tough to do the same in a pennant race in the majors.
Hot Spot: Newcomers Hentgen, Kile and Benes will be counted on to boost pitching staff that was ninth in NL with 4.74 ERA. Healthy years from Matt Morris and Alan Benes, and a repeat All-Star performance by Kent Bottenfield, could be enough to put Mark McGwire in postseason.

NL West

Arizona Diamondbacks

Manager: Buck Showalter (3rd season).
Training Town: Tucson, Ariz.
Park: Tucson Electric Park.
Tickets: (800) 638-4253.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 17.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 22.
He's Here: RHP Brad Clontz, RHP Russ Springer, RHP Mike Morgan.
He's Outta Here: OF Dante Powell, RHP Andy Benes, RHP Gregg Olson.
Spring Chicken: Erubiel Durazo. Unknown first baseman came out of the Mexican League and tore up minor leagues, earning midseason promotion. Hit .329 with 11 homers in 155 at-bats with D-Backs.
Hot Spot: Travis Lee was first baseman of the future until a disappointing sophomore season and the emergence of Durazo forced him to right field this season.

Colorado Rockies

Manager: Buddy Bell (1st season).
Training Town: Tucson, Ariz.
Park: Hi Corbett Field.
Tickets: (800) 388-ROCK.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 18.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 22.
He's Here: 3B Jeff Cirillo, OF Jeffrey Hammonds, RHP Rolando Arrojo, RHP Masato Yoshii, RHP Stan Belinda, RHP Manny Aybar, RHP Rick Croushore, RHP Jose Jimenez, LHP Mike Myers, LHP Scott Karl, RHP Julian Tavarez, LHP Butch Henry, RHP Billy Taylor, INF Aaron Ledesma, OF Tom Goodwin, C Brent Mayne, C Scott Servais, OF Darren Bragg.
He's Outta Here: OF Dante Bichette, 3B Vinny Castilla, RHP Darryl Kile, RHP Dave Veres, RHP Curt Leskanic, C Henry Blanco, RHP Jamey Wright, LHP Bobby M. Jones, C Kirt Manwaring, INF Kurt Abbott.
Spring Chicken: Ben Petrick. Power-hitting catcher with speed, Petrick hit 27 homers last season, including four in September call-up.
Hot Spot: Acquired slew of low-ball pitchers and speedy fielders as Rockies shed power game for quickness in attempt to solve Coors Field.

Los Angeles Dodgers

Manager: Davey Johnson (2nd season).
Training Town: Vero Beach, Fla.
Park: Holman Stadium.
Tickets: (561) 569-6858.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 17.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 22.
He's Here: OF Shawn Green, RHP Terry Adams, RHP Gregg Olson, 3B Kevin Orie, RHP Dan Naulty, RHP Orel Hershiser, RHP Mike Fetters, F.P. Santangelo, SS Kevin Elster, C Chad Kreuter, OF Geronimo Berroa.
He's Outta Here: OF Raul Mondesi, RHP Ismael Valdes, 2B Eric Young, LHP Pedro Borbon.
Spring Chicken: Chin-Feng Chen. While there have been a number of successful Asian pitchers in the majors, Chen — a Taiwanese outfielder — could be the first big hitter. Batted .316 with 31 homers and 123 RBIs at Class-A.
Hot Spot: Want to use Darren Dreifort in the bullpen, a role he starred at in college. But agent Scott Boras knows there's more money in being a starter. Either way, Dreifort needs to add consistency to his sometimes dominating pitches.

San Diego Padres

Manager: Bruce Bochy (6th season).
Training Town: Peoria, Ariz.
Park: Peoria Stadium.
Tickets: (619) 220-8497.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 18.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 23.
He's Here: RHP Carlton Loewer, RHP Brian Meadows, 2B Bret Boone, 1B Ryan Klesko, RHP Dan Serafini, 3B Ed Sprague.
He's Outta Here: RHP Andy Ashby, 2B Quilvio Veras, 1B Wally Joyner, OF Reggie Sanders, RHP Dan Miceli, RHP Carlos Reyes, RHP Stan Spencer, RHP Matt Whiteside.
Spring Chicken: Sean Burroughs. Son of former AL MVP Jeff Burroughs, Sean's biggest claim to fame so far is winning consecutive Little League World Series titles in 1992-93. Hit .363 in minors last season with only six homers.
Hot Spot: Loss of Veras opens up leadoff spot. Eric Owens says he can do the job, but .327 on-base percentage should cause worry for Bochy. Owens led off 87 innings last year and didn't score once in those situations.

San Francisco Giants

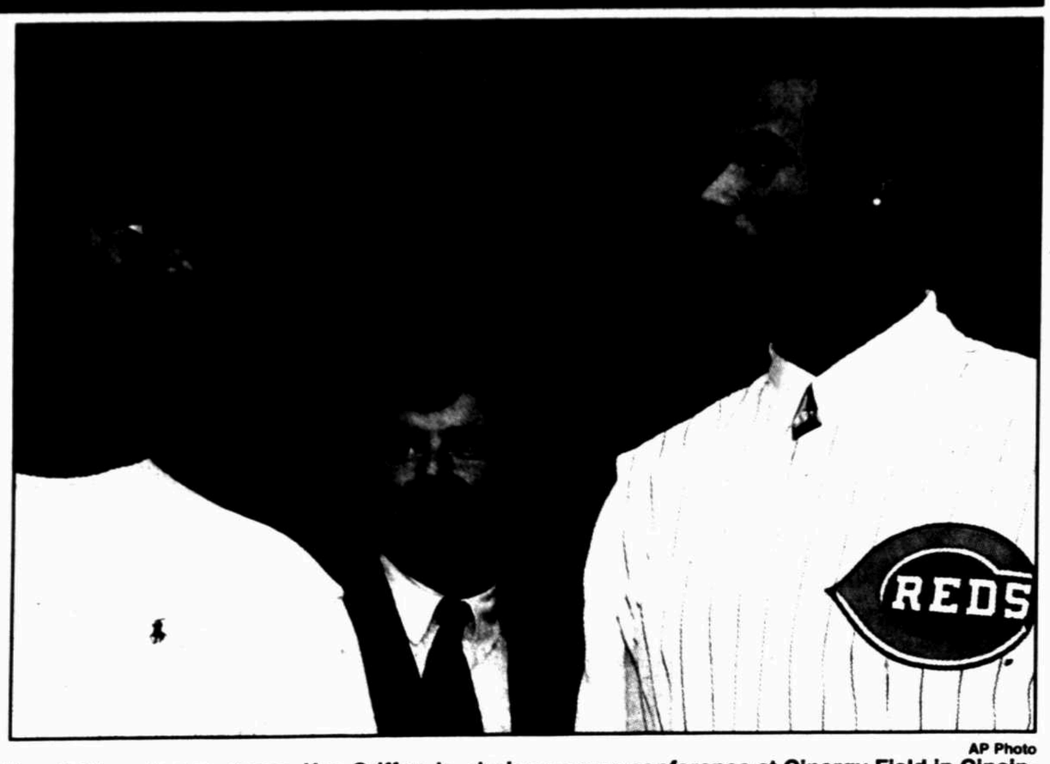

Manager: Dusty Baker (8th season).
Training Town: Scottsdale, Ariz.
Park: Scottsdale Stadium.
Tickets: (800) 225-2277.
Pitchers and Catchers Report: Feb. 17.
Rest of Squad: Feb. 22.
He's Here: C Bobby Estalella, 3B Russ Davis.
He's Outta Here: RHP Chris Brock, RHP Jerry Spradlin, RHP Julian Tavarez, C Brent Mayne, C Scott Servais, 3B Charlie Hayes, INF F.P. Santangelo, LHP Rich Rodriguez.
Spring Chicken: Joe Nathan. Drafted as shortstop, Nathan took year off in minors before returning as hard-throwing pitching prospect. Used 94 mph fastball and hard slider to go 7-4 with a 4.18 ERA for Giants.
Hot Spot: Davis will be expected to upgrade production at third base. His 21 homers and 59 RBIs were considerably more that the two homers and 36 RBIs last year's tandem of Hayes and Bill Mueller provided.

San Diego OF Gwynn wants extension, raise

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tony Gwynn, whose contract expires at the end of the season, wants an extension from the San Diego Padres in place before opening day and at a substantial raise.

A season after becoming the 22nd member of the 3,000-hit club, Gwynn will make $4.3 million in the final year of his contract. Despite his status as one of baseball's best hitters, Gwynn hasn't been the Padres' highest-paid player since 1997.

There are four Padres players scheduled to make more than Gwynn in 2000, led by reliever Randy Myers with a base salary of $6.25 million. Myers didn't throw a pitch last year because of a shoulder injury.

"I hope they take care of me for taking care of them," Gwynn told the San Diego Union-Tribune. "Heck, you get right down to the brass tacks, I carried this organization for a long time, but you never hear me say it, you never hear me toot my own horn, because this is where I want to be and that's what I'm supposed to do."

Gwynn said it would take a salary higher than the low $5 million range to sign him for 2001.

Gwynn said that if he doesn't sign an extension with the Padres, he would consider signing with an AL team and becoming a designated hitter.

Owner John Moores has said that he'd like to see Gwynn get the first hit in the Padres' new downtown ballpark, scheduled to open in 2002.

CHAP: MC gets sweep

(From 1B)

Martinez's homer to left. Melissa Martinez went all the way to third on a misplayed fly into right field. Jessica Cobos drove her in with a single and was one of three more Chaps who scored thanks to a pair of singles, an error, wild pitch, and passed ball.

Chavira was mowing down the Mountaineers from the mound. In the third, she crushed a line drive homer over the right-center fence. Midland got its final run in the sixth on Melissa Martinez's second homer of the day.

Schreiner tried to make it interesting as it manufactured its first run of the twin-bill in the fourth inning, plating the runner after an error and two singles, the second by Alexia Segovia, a pitcher-designated hitter who played her high school ball at Abilene.

In the fifth, Schreiner managed three more runs on two Midland errors, two fielder's choices, and just one single.

That was all the Lady Chaps would allow, as the Mountaineers went down in order their last two innings. Chavira closed the game in grand style, striking out the last three batters she faced.

"We had been working to eliminate our strike-outs and to do a better job of putting the ball in play when we got behind in the count," Ramos noted. "We stayed aggressive both at bat and on the bases."

Ramos said he wasn't surprised at Rodriguez's fine outing.

"We feel confident about using her and she feels very confident about pitching," he said.

He noted that he moved a lot of players around in the second game, playing his few reserves and putting them into different positions. The Lady Chaps have only 13 players for the spring campaign.

Midland now heads to Vernon Wednesday for two games: one with Vernon and one with Lamar, CO. Then they head to Fort Worth for the Cowtown Classic on Friday and Saturday. They'll be back home Tuesday, Feb. 22, for a doubleheader against Ranger Junior College. MC split a pair of games at Ranger on Tuesday. MC ventures to Odessa on Feb. 24, for a doubleheader against the UTPB Falcons.

Reds land 'Rolls-Royce' player for 'Volkswagen price'

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Ken Griffey Jr.'s contract was a bigger stunner than the trade itself: Teams and agents couldn't believe the Reds got him so cheaply — at least by baseball's current standards.

"If the player owns a Rolls-Royce and he chooses to sell it at Volkswagen prices, that's his right," agent Scott Boras said Friday.

A day after Griffey's $116.5 million, nine-year contract clinched his trade from Seattle to Cincinnati, the contract was the talk of baseball.

Because the total includes $57.5 million in deferred money that won't start earning interest until 2009, the Reds estimate its present-day value at between $9.2 million and $9.3 million annually, one agent, speaking on condition he not be identified, said Cincinnati general manager Jim Bowden told him.

Big money, but not so big in an era when Los Angeles pitcher Kevin Brown averages $15 million and Detroit outfielder Juan Gonzalez is expected to get $17.5 million a year or more in his extension.

"He has agreed to less than what the market value is, but to me, it is in a unique situation," Florida general manager Dave Dombrowski said. "A player had a desire to play in one place, had a right to control his destiny and was close to free agency. I don't know if it's any type of trendsetter."

In actual money, Griffey will receive $7 million this year and $6 million in each of the following eight seasons. By the time he approaches Hank Aaron's home-run record of 755, he might not be among the top 50 average annual salaries.

"This wasn't meant to be some trendsetter," said Griffey's agent, Brian Goldberg, who negotiated the deal. "This was the right situation for Kenny. It's not right for me to speak on behalf of other players and what their priorities are. You want the player to be treated fairly, but by the same token, you want the fans to still be able to come out, because with things getting priced too far out of line, there's no game. So you've got to strike that balance."

Cincinnati raised the price of its best tickets from $17 to $21 this year — the increase was announced in November. The New York Mets, who might have paid Griffey $20 million annually, have a top price of $57 this season.

Griffey's presence should build momentum for the Reds' new ballpark, which they hope will be ready for 2003.

"I believe this transaction has enhanced the franchise value of the Cincinnati Reds by somewhere between $50 and $100 million dollars immediately, and long term much more than that," said Tom Reich, who represented former Reds stars Joe Morgan and George Foster.

"They got a great deal in getting one of the greatest team-sports players of all-time in a community where his impact will be double because it's a hometown reunion."

In total dollars, Griffey's deal is baseball's highest, eclipsing Brown's $105 million, seven-year contract. But shortstop Derek Jeter has been negotiating a $118.5 million, seven-year deal with the New York Yankees (an average of $16,928,571), and Gonzalez and Detroit have been talking about an extension said to be worth $140 million.

But others have taken less than the top of the market. Mark McGwire is getting $9 million this season and recently exercised an $11 million option for 2001 — far less than he could have gotten as a free agent.

"Every contract signed, everything that gets booked, obviously has an effect on the marketplace — some positive, some negative," Yankees general manager Brian Cashman said.

Seattle shortstop Alex Rodriguez, eligible for free agency after the season, is thought to be the first candidate for a baseball contract averaging $20 million. Rodriguez has ruled out negotiating with the Mariners before becoming a free agent.

"The most shocking thing about this contract to me is a player who wants to win is coming into a market that is financially restricted," said Boras, Rodriguez's agent.

"He increases the value of the franchise, but there is no reward for him down the way for what increase in franchise value and revenue he will generate in the future. I understand the issue of what they can afford today, but when the stadium comes in and generates all this interest and revenue, is there anything for the player who is generating the money? I am assuming there's clauses in the contract that account for that."

Junior seeing red

Ken Griffey Jr. will become a Cincinnati Red under a deal he agreed to on Thursday.

TRADE: Scalpers make most of Griffey's arrival

(From 1B)

Even as Griffey's plane touched down, the Reds were unsure what kind of financial impact the trade ultimately would have on the 131-year-old franchise.

"I'll be honest with you, we won't know that answer until we get the response of the fans," chief operating officer John Allen said. "Over the last three months, we've been hearing, 'Get Junior, bring him home and we're coming out.'

"So I can't tell you what the economic impact is. It's up to the fans to determine what that is."

The Reds got the first part of the answer Friday, when their office phone lines were so overwhelmed by calls that employees had trouble getting lines out. There were lines at the ticket windows on a cold, drizzly day, and fans stretched out in the lobby waiting to order season tickets.

"Since early yesterday, the phones have just been ringing constantly to the point where they've been tying up lines," Vassallo said. "We've been having trouble making and receiving calls. It's just been overwhelming."

The Reds wouldn't estimate how many tickets were sold, but announced that windows would be open Saturday to accommodate demand.

"I think you could say unequivocally that it was one of the best days we've ever had, relative to selling tickets," spokesman Rob Butcher said.

Opening day already was sold out, so scalpers offered tickets Friday for hundreds of times face value just so fans could get that first glimpse of Junior in a Reds uniform.

The city hasn't gotten swept away by a baseball trade since Rose returned as player-manager in a 1984 trade with Montreal. A lot had happened to dampen local interest in baseball in the last 15 years.

Rose's gambling scandal got him banned from the game, slurs by previous owner Marge Schott cast the team in a bad light, and the 1994 players' strike extinguished a lot of interest in the city that boasts of the sport's first professional team.

Griffey's return was exactly what it needed to make it seem like the good old days.

"While the dollars are not unimportant, the emotional lift that something like this gives to a community and the national visibility that it creates are probably even more significant," said Roger Ruhl, vice president of marketing for the local chamber of commerce.

Part of it was the circumstances. Griffey accepted tens of millions of dollars less than he could have made as a free agent so he could return to small-market Cincinnati. He agreed to a $116.5 million deal Thursday night with most of the money deferred until after he retires — a move to help the tight-budget team.

Agent for Alex Rodriguez reiterates: We'll talk later

By John Hickey
Seattle Post-Intelligencer

SEATTLE — With Ken Grffey Jr. gone, the Mariners are suddenly and completely Alex Rodriguez's team.

No sooner had the Mariners announced the completion of the deal that sent Griffey to Cincinnati for four players, than they reiterated their interest in signing their lone remaining superstar, Rodriguez, to a long-term deal.

But if you listen to Rodriguez's agent, Scott Boras, the Mariners are dreaming. Boras said Rodriguez has decided he wants to wait until the end of the season to see if he wants to stay with Seattle for the long run.

Rodriguez is one of the few players in the game whose star shines as brightly as Griffey's. With Griffey gone, there is an evident need to lock in Rodriguez as Seattle's centerpiece.

"The Mariners have not contacted me," Rodriguez's agent, Scott Boras, said. "If they did, they'd find that the answer is still the same as it was when we talked in November. Alex wants to wait until the end of the season to see if he wants to stay with Seattle for the long run.

TRIAL: Lewis faces six charges, including murder aging and assisting in the commission of this crime," Howard said.

Defense lawyer Ed Garland called the indictments scandalous and compared Lewis to Richard Jewell, who was accused and then cleared in the 1996 Olympic bombing. Garland added that he would prove Lewis' "absolute innocence at Monday's bond hearing."

"You can almost hear the railroad whistle blowing as it goes down the track," Garland said. "The first passenger was Richard Jewell — this time it's Ray Lewis. At the Olympics there was another innocent person trying to help but was in the wrong place at the wrong time. They have just done to Ray Lewis what they did to Richard Jewell."

Five of the victims' family members attended the district attorney's news conference, and Vondie Boykin, Baker's aunt, read a brief statement.

The FBI has issued arrest warrants for the other two suspects, Reginald Oakley of Baltimore and Joseph Sweeting of Miami. Atlanta police say Lewis lied to officers to protect the two men.

Each of the men face six charges including felony murder and aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. A murder conviction in Georgia brings a sentence of life in prison or the death penalty.

Oakley, 31, and Sweeting, 34, are both being sought on federal charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. The FBI said they should be considered armed and dangerous, and mug shots of the two men were released.

Oakley agreed Friday to return to Atlanta and cooperate with police, WBAL-TV in Baltimore reported. Jesse Ingram, who said he is working with Oakley as a legal consultant, told the station that Oakley is nothing more than a witness.

Oakley has been convicted of a number of crimes, including assaulting a police officer, shooting into an occupied dwelling, trafficking cocaine and embezzlement, Jackson said.

Oakley was evicted from his apartment earlier this year, according to Mike Zimenski, a spokesman for the apartment building's management company.

Police in Dade County, Fla., said Sweeting has been charged with robbery, possession of a firearm by a felon, and carrying a concealed firearm.

Texas' Hale throws no-hitter

Associated Press

AUSTIN — University of Texas pitcher Beau Hale threw a no-hitter Friday, facing only two batters over the minimum in a 10-0 victory over Sam Houston State.

It was the first no-hitter for a Longhorn pitcher since March 3, 1987, when Mark Petkovsek beat Southwestern 2-1.

Hale (1-0) struck out 13 and walked just one batter as 12th-ranked Texas (5-2) recorded its third shutout of the season, the most by a Texas team since 1996.

Hale struck out five of the first six batters and retired the side in eight of nine innings, encountering baserunners in only the third inning.

A solid defensive performance aided in Hale's effort with 13 ground ball outs and one fly out to shortstop combining with the right-hander's career high 13 strikeouts.

Texas Tech 4, No. 6 Southern Cal 3

LUBBOCK — Held in check for eight innings, Texas Tech scored four runs in the ninth inning on two errors, a wild pitch and three walks to beat sixth-ranked Southern Cal 4-3 on Friday.

USC starter Mark Prior handcuffed the Red Raiders (5-1) on just three hits before being replaced with one out in the ninth. But relievers Ronald Flores and Pete Montrenes (1-1) could not hold the lead for the Trojans (4-2).

■ Texas Baseball

Marco Cunningham led off the bottom of the ninth by reaching on an error. Two batters later, Shaun Larkin also reached on an error, and designated hitter Chaz Eiguren pulled Tech to 4-1 on a single to center.

Larkin scored from third on a wild pitch, and after pinch hitter Chad Landry was walked intentionally to load the bases, Trey Lunsford and Eric McLamore drew back-to-back walks to win the game for the Red Raiders before a home crowd of 3,977.-1) could not hold the lead for the Trojans (4-2).

Texas A&M 6, Texas-Pan American 2

EDINBURG — Texas A&M left fielder Carlos Sepulveda hit two home runs to lead the Aggies to a 6-2 victory over Texas-Pan American.

JACKS: Odessa wins third straight

(From 1B)

Menard, the Buzzards' scoring leader, got so frustrated that he got a 10-minute game misconduct. As he was leaving the ice, Menard almost got into an altercation with a fan and then a Jack Shack security guard.

Benefiting from the Jacks' strong defensive play was Jacks' goalie Michael Tornquist, who saved 20 out of 22 shots.

"I guess everybody is on the same page now and everybody is just working hard. That's a big reason why we're playing so well," said Tornquist, who is coming off his fourth career shutout against San Angelo on Thursday. "It makes my job so much easier when the other team is taking poor shots. Things are going well right now."

Chris Morque, Smith and Adam Doyle all scored goals for the Jacks in the second period where Odessa showed total domination. The Jacks didn't even need one of their three power play opportunities to get the goals. In fact Morque's goal came after a five-on-three power play in which the Jacks failed to convert.

"We just outworked them in the second period," said McKee. "They (Buzzards) looked like a tired team which has been on a long road trip and haven't been home for a long time. They've spent 19 days on the road and I thought that showed tonight."

The Jacks were without a big gun in Paul Vincent, who McKee said came down with a stomach virus. He said he hopes it's just a "24-hour thing."

Closing out the scoring for the Jacks in the third period was Ryan Coristine.

The win marked the sixth out of eight meetings with El Paso and things have surely turned around since the days when the Buzzards used to give the Jacks so many headaches.

"We've done well against them," Heywood said. "It's a rivalry and we seem to get excited to play them, plus we've had a little bit of luck, too."

The Jacks close out their three-game homestand tonight against the Corpus Christi IceRays.

GOLF: Woods' streak could get serious test him at the top of the field, and he chipped in for birdie on his last hole at the South Course for a 5-under 67. That put him at 11-under 133, tied with Triplett and Maruyama, who each had 64s.

(From 1B)

Mickelson was the first victim in the streak that dates to August. He bogeyed two of the last three holes in the NEC Invitational and finished one stroke behind Woods at Firestone.

Woods seized control of that tournament with a 62 in the third round, the same score he had at Torrey Pines in the third round last year.

"It's kind of given he's going to go low, because he usually does," Mickelson said. "He's going to be playing in front of me. He's going to to have an opportunity to start creeping up the leaderboard before I tee off.

"You've got to be aware of that, you've got to expect it to happen and you've got to be able to counter."

Mickelson may be the best hope to end golf's longest winning streak in 52 years. Triplett, who went birdie-eagle-birdie-birdie on the back nine of the South course to roar into contention, has never won on the PGA Tour in 264 previous events.

"It's one more element you're battling," he said of Woods being in the hunt.

Maruyama, who went 5-0 in the Presidents Cup, said a victory this week would send the Japanese golf community into a state of euphoria. Asked whether he was the one to end The Streak, Maruyama broke into a wide smile.

"No chance," he said.

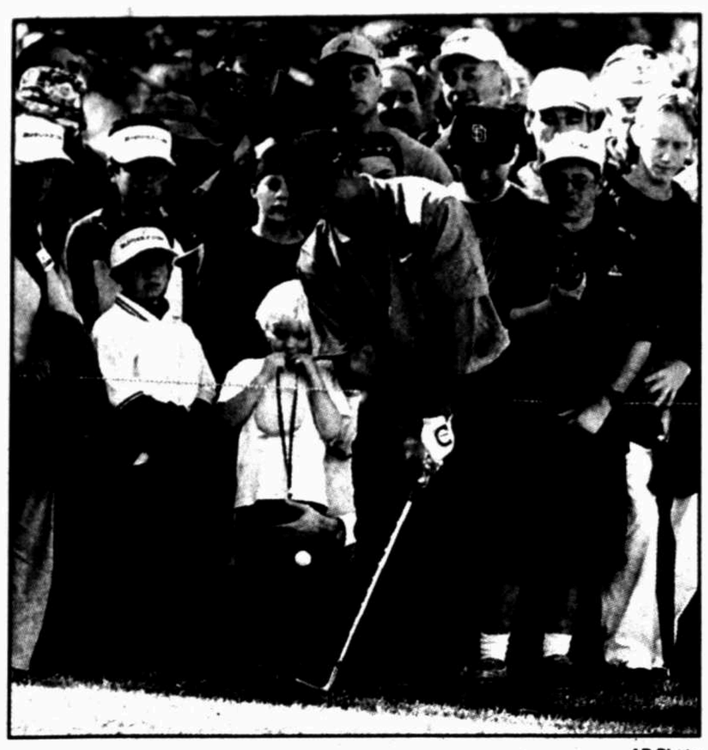

Woods at least has one. A week ago, he was eight strokes behind after 36 holes at Pebble Beach, five behind going into the final round and made up a seven-shot deficit over his final seven holes.

"I would much rather be 11- or 12-under par right now," Woods said. "It's just the way it is sometimes. You can't put it together when you want to. It's a little frustrating, but that's OK. Maybe I can turn it around on the weekend."

Sandy Lyle, who won the Masters and British Open before Woods was in high school, was at 134 after a bogey-free 66, followed by Bradley Hughes.

First-round leader Davis Love III was cruising along on the easier North course until a double bogey on the par-3 sixth hole wrecked his round. He finished with a 71 and was three strokes back at 136.

The last, and only, time Woods missed a cut was in the 1997 Canadian Open, two weeks before his first Ryder Cup.

Tiger Woods chunks a chip shot from behind the fifth green during Friday's second round of the Buick Invitational in San Diego. Woods made a six-foot putt for bogey on the hole.

Lanny Wadkins makes Senior PGA Tour debut

Associated Press

NAPLES, Fla. — Lanny Wadkins, the 21-time PGA Tour winner making his Senior PGA Tour debut, shot a 7-under-par 65 on Friday to move within a stroke of the leaders in the ACE Group Classic.

"I was probably a little bit more apprehensive, maybe a touch more excited than I would've been for a normal tournament," Wadkins said. "I wanted to play well. I had a lot of preseason hype so to speak.

"I wanted to go out and prove to everybody that I still can."

Dana Quigley and Jim Thorpe shared the first-round lead, shooting 64s on the Pelican Marsh course.

Thorpe, who had two second-place finished last season and finished 19th on the money list, holed a 40-foot eagle putt on No. 6 and birdied the final two holes to tie Quigley.

Tom Watson, playing his first full season on the senior tour, opened with a 69. The five-time British Open champion was 5-under after seven holes, but double-bogeyed No. 9.

Tom Kite, another former PGA Tour star in his first season on the senior tour, is skipping the event.

Daves fires 67 to take lead at LPGA LA tourney

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. — Laura Davies loves a good bet, so she couldn't resist the gamble of having lasik eye surgery less than 24 hours before playing in the LPGA Los Angeles Women's Championship.

The English star birdied three of the first nine holes, including a chip-in from 35 feet on the par-4, 371-yard 4th. She used a 9-iron to get within 20 feet and then birdied the par-4, 346-yard 14th.

Laura Philo, Moira Dunn and Janice Moodie of Scotland were tied at 68.

Blake signs with Saints; 49ers pressure Rice

By Josh Dubow
AP Sports Writer

Jeff Blake is coming to New Orleans and Jerry Rice could be leaving San Francisco as NFL teams began the free agency period Friday.

Blake signed a four-year contract, reportedly worth $17.4 million, on the same day the Saints let Danny Wuerffel and Billy Joe Hobert, two of their four quarterbacks last season, become free agents.

"This is the day we've been waiting for about 10 days — the start of free agency," Saints general manager Randy Mueller said.

Blake started most of last season for Cincinnati after rookie Akili Smith was hurt and completed 55.3 percent of his passes for 16 touchdowns with 14 interceptions.

The presence of Smith, the third overall pick in last year's draft, made Blake expendable in Cincinnati.

"I see this as a fresh start and a great opportunity," Blake said. "I'm very happy to be in a position where I don't have to look over my shoulder all the time. I can just relax and play here. My confidence is very high."

The signing was the first major move by the new administration of coach Jim Haslett and Mueller, who are trying to turn around a perennial loser.

"I think over the next week to 10 days we should be able to help the team," said Mueller, who joined the Saints from Seattle.

New Orleans finished 3-13 last season, its seventh straight year without a winning record. Coach Mike Ditka and general manager Bill Kuharich were fired Jan. 5.

The Saints appear to be losing cornerback Ashley Ambrose, who signed a $22.5 million, five-year contract with the Atlanta Falcons, according to CBS Sportsline. The Web site also reported that the Falcons signed New England wide receiver Shawn Jefferson to a $14.2 million, four-year deal.

Rice, the greatest receiver in NFL history, could be forced out of San Francisco unless he makes financial concessions to help the 49ers gain maneuvering room within the salary cap.

"We would very much like to have Jerry back," 49ers coach Steve Mariucci said. "The question would be how do we work it out?"

Over the last three weeks, the 49ers restructured the contracts of 14 players, including quarterback Steve Young, in an effort to wipe out a $24 million cap overrun.

However, the 49ers still need more room under the cap to be able to take part in free agency and to pay their draft picks. San Francisco, which had its first losing season since 1982, heads into the April draft with the third overall pick.

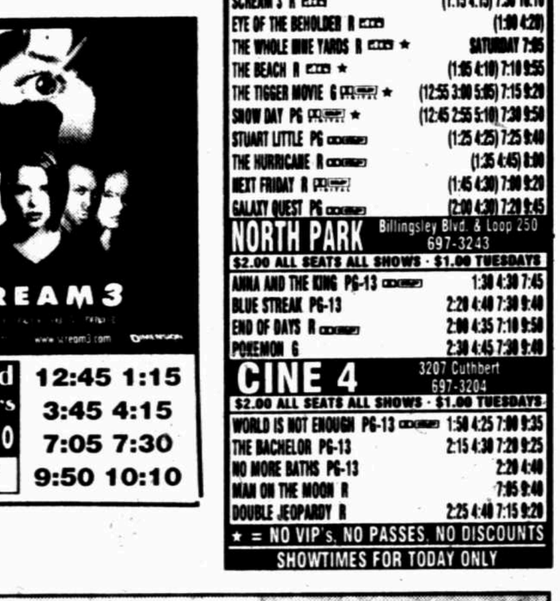

Rice, 37, the NFL's career receiving leader, has a 2000 cap figure of $5.49 million that the 49ers very much want to reduce.

Last season, Rice didn't have the same type of production that has characterized his brillian career but he still led the team with 67 receptions for 830 yards.

So far, Rice and his agent, Jim Steiner, have balked at the 49ers' insistence he lower his salary and try to make up for it through an incentive-based package.

When: 2 p.m.

Where: New Midland High Soccer Field

Records: MHS is 3-1 in District 4-5A and 9-2 overall; AHS is 3-0 and 8-2-1.

4-5A Significance: This is one of two marquee boys' games being played in the district today. With a 3-0 team visiting a 3-1 team, it rivals today's game in San Angelo, which pits Odessa Permian (3-0) against Central (2-1).

Notes: The Bulldogs are on a roll, having won three straight since opening district play with a 2-1 loss against Midland Lee. The Bulldogs need to stay on that roll, since today's game and Tuesday's at Odessa Permian are both against teams which are undefeated entering Saturday's play... MHS' shootout win over Central on Tuesday after a couple of years of trouble with that team could be a turning point. Today, the Bulldogs could show that that win was a springboard to better things. Or, the Bulldogs could have a letdown after an emotional win... This game features the top two scorers in 4-5A: Abilene's Daniel Flores (4 goals, 1 assist) and Midland's Ross Brunner (3 goals, 2 assists). MHS' Derek Weinkauf (2 and 1) is fourth in scoring...

Next: The Bulldogs visit Odessa Permian at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Midland Lee vs. Abilene Cooper

When: 2 p.m.

Where: Lee Soccer Complex, Abilene

Records: Lee is 1-2 in District 4-5A and 4-4-1 overall; Cooper is 0-4 and 4-9.

4-5A Significance: If the Rebels want to climb back into the playoff race, they need to keep Cooper winless in district play.

Notes: The Rebels had a whole week to think about their shootout loss against Abilene High last Saturday. They were off Tuesday... Cooper was shut out by Permian on Tuesday, 3-0. In fact, the Cougars have scored only two goals in four district games, and those (both by Simon Nagel) came in their district-opening 4-2 loss to Abilene High. Cooper has been shut out in its last three games... Lee is in similar shape, having scored two goals in a district-opening win over Midland High, then being shut out by Abilene High and Odessa Permian. Eric Mora and Shaun Gill have the Rebels only goals...

Next: The Rebels will host Odessa High at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Lee Soccer Field.

A missionary's life

Milton and Pat Brown of Atlanta are missionaries in Ecuador. They formerly were dorm parents at a school for missionaries' children. Now they concentrate on evangelism.

American couple organizes churches in Ecuador

■ Missionary for Christian and Missionary Alliance visits Fellowship Community Church in Midland.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

For Pat Brown, being in the world, not of it, is not an empty cliché, but a duty that is never closer to home than when she reads accounts in the paper surrounding the recent political events in Ecuador. While the overthrow of the government might have little relevance to most Christians, the news is personal to Mrs. Brown, who with her husband, Milton, has lived in Ecuador for 37 years. They are missionaries for the Christian and Missionary Alliance.

Mrs. Brown was in Midland recently to report to the Fellowship Community Church, as part of her duties during a year's sabbatical from the field, while her husband undergoes medical treatment in Georgia.

"I'm one of the people supported by the Alliance's Great Commission fund, and it's my duty to let the congregations see a face and know what God is doing through us, with their support," she said.

The Browns live in a small apartment on the outskirts of Quito, where they experience the same everyday lives as their indigenous neighbors.

"There's been a lot of political instability brought on largely by corruption and economic instability," Mrs. Brown explained. "We export oil, so we should have money. We also export coffee, bananas and roses. We have a lot of natural resources, and in that respect, it's a wealthy country, but no one knows for sure where all the wealth has gone.

"We woke up March 1, 1999, and read in the paper that the bank where most of us kept our money was closed. We eventually got our money, but it took months."

She said another area of great concern is Pichincha, a long-dormant volcano six miles away that came to life in 1998.

"It had not erupted since the mid-1600s, but in October 1998, authorities were aware that it was beginning to move. We were put on yellow alert, which meant that the volcano was about to become active, and we were to get water and emergency supplies and keep them on hand. Then in September 1999 we went to orange alert, and in October, ash began to fall. When (the volcano) spews out ash, it takes two hours from the time you see it coming from the volcano until it begins to fall on the city."

Although Quito isn't in the path of the lava flow, there are two villages nearby that have been evacuated.

"This is a terrible hardship, since

Controversy surrounds selection of new chaplain of the House

By Julia Lieblich
AP Religion Writer

WASHINGTON — To former House Speaker Tip O'Neill he was the Irish monsignor. And some Jews in Congress call him rabbi.

"I guess it's because I'm the closest guy around," says Lutheran Rev. James David Ford, the retiring chaplain of the House of Representatives, looking particularly sagelike in a new gray beard as he walks the Capitol halls.

A passing congressman asks him to consider keeping his job of 21 years — if only to end the controversy surrounding the selection of Ford's successor.

Overriding a bipartisan committee's choice of a Catholic priest as chaplain, the House leadership appointed the Rev. Charles Wright, a Presbyterian minister, continuing an unbroken tradition of Protestant chaplains since the House was established.

The decision has prompted questions about Congress' attitude toward pluralism and whether one religious figure can meet the spiritual needs of 435 members. Old questions have resurfaced about whether the chaplaincy should exist at all.

For 21 years, Ford, 68, rarely talked about his job. He's in the business of keeping secrets, and he jokes that if he wrote a book about those secrets he could afford not just to retire to Bermuda, but to buy Bermuda. Retirement affords him more freedom to reflect on his life in "the temple of compromise."

Ford and Senate Chaplain Lloyd Ogilvie are most visible when they open daily sessions with prayer. But Ford says he does his real work one-on-one on the House floor. He whispers in corners with Republicans and Democrats. "And if the talk gets serious they come to my office."

Its out-of-the-way location — security guards had trouble directing a reporter to it amid the maze of hallways in the Capitol basement — is comforting to members who don't want to be seen seeking clergy counsel.

AP Photo

Retiring House Chaplain Rev. James Ford, right, talks with Capitol security officer Bill Hines in the Capitol's Statuary Hall last week. Ford's departure has stirred a debate over who should be his successor.

Inside, a picture of the First Continental Congress reciting its first prayer hangs near a television tuned to CNN. Boat models line Ford's mantelpiece, including a replica of the 31-foot craft he sailed from Plymouth, England, to West Point, N.Y., in 1976.

There are no crosses adorning the walls, but a clerical collar adorns the man who began his career in a rural church in Ivanhoe, Minn. (pop. 719), where he had to unplug the organ to turn on the Christmas lights. In 1965, he became chaplain of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, where he stayed for 18 years, sometimes burying young men at whose marriages he had officiated.

Today, he hears the frustrations of new members of Congress who miss the influence they had back home, and old members who worry about their marriages. When gunmen opened fire in the Capitol in 1998, Ford comforted the family of a police officer as he lay mortally wounded.

Most of his visitors, he says, aren't thinking about religion.

"People aren't asking about the 'teleological suspension of the ethical,' " he says smiling, a reference to the philosophical proposition that an ethic may, in rare circumstances, be violated for a higher purpose.

"They ask me about their daily lives and what meaning there is."

Mostly, he says, he talks about faith, hope and love. "Faith," he says, "is about believing that life has meaning."

The theme pervades his prayers. When Congress was debating whether to authorize President George Bush to go to war in the Persian Gulf, Ford prayed for judgment and wisdom. But, in general, whether the topic is racial justice or feeding the hungry, "I don't pray by the headlines. I try to write timeless prayers."

Ford would not discuss the controversy surrounding his successor.

Tensions began last month after an 18-member bipartisan committee reviewed almost 50 applicants. Committee members selected the Rev. Timothy O'Brien, a Catholic priest, as their first choice.

Newsboys travel with 3,400-seat inflatable stadium

■ Rock group to perform in Midland Feb. 28 with SonicFlood and Beanbag.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

When The Newsboys perform in Midland Feb. 28, they will be carrying a lot of baggage — an inflatable, completely self-contained, air-conditioned stadium that seats 3,400.

The stage, which in is the center, is flanked by two curved video walls and features a sophisticated light and sound system.

The Newsboys' "Love, Liberty, Disco Tour," featuring SonicFlood and Beanbag, is scheduled for 7 p.m. The stadium will be set up in the parking lot at Christensen Stadium.

The Newsboys, Australians Phil Joel, Peter Furler, Jody Davis, Duncan Phillips and Jeff Frankenstein, have recorded eight albums — three gold, with four Dove awards, a Billboard Music Video award and two international Angel awards. Their latest, "Love, Liberty Disco," came out on Sparrow in November.

Known for their innovation and energy, the Newsboys conceived the idea of the traveling arena for their concerts in order to allow them more flexibility in scheduling concert tours to out-of-the-way places where accommodations might not otherwise be available.

Hugh Robertson, senior vice president of marketing and artist development for Sparrow Label Group, said the plan is to play up the festival atmosphere of the tour.

"We're incorporating sponsors and TV advertising to make this an unprecedented event in every community we visit.

"Our genius managers, Wes Campbell and Steve Campbell, discovered these enormous inflatable arenas that you can air-condition, and bought two of them, so that while we're doing the concert in one town, the other is already being taken to the next town on the tour and getting set up, so that by the time the group gets there, the arena is ready. They sort of leap frog each other."

Also featured in the concert is SonicFlood, which performs a blend of modern pop/rock and Brit rock.

These artists are relatively new as a team, having previously been associated with Zilch, Seven Day Jesus and dcTalk.

The concert's opening act is Beanbag, which has already established itself in Australia. The group, which formed in 1996, released its first CD, "Free Signal," in 1998.

Tickets, which are $15 in advance and $18 at the door, are available at Family Christian Stores in Midland and Odessa, Sound Source in Midland and The Master's Touch in Big Spring. They can also be purchased by phone at 800-462-7979.

Vatican seeks to squelch rumors that ailing pope will resign

By Victor L. Simpson
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY — The scenario has been the subject of whispers for years: An aging pope in failing health and no longer able to continue the highly public role that has been his hallmark, calls it quits and retires to a monastery in his native Poland.

Pure speculation, and not something Vatican officials like to talk about openly.

So when a top German bishop merely suggested recently that Pope John Paul II could at some time choose such an option, it set off a frenzy in the Italian press.

Continued alarms about the 79-year-old pope's health — that he will lose his speech and might have to use a wheelchair — have sent Vatican anger rising.

Even the pope seems annoyed.

At a recent audience, when Spanish schoolchildren chanted, "The whole world loves you," John Paul curtly responded: "Who knows?"

The Vatican has taken to angrily brushing off the alarm, seeing it as a campaign to undermine the office of the papacy.

"The Jubilee proceeds at the pope's pace, apparently faltering but internally vigorous," wrote editor Mario Agnes in the Vatican's daily newspaper L'Osservatore Romano.

This, he said, is an "objective reality that seems to annoy a hidden, meager group that from time to time announces, through some compliant media outlet, predictions without sense and without foundation."

Enough talk about resignation, the newspaper demanded in a later commentary. "Physical weakness does not mean incapacity."

Those close to the top dismiss out of hand the possibility that the pope, certainly a traditionalist, has any intention of resigning. He has spoken of his duty and how he has come to terms with his advancing years.

"It's not out of the realm of possibility, but as for the foreseeable future I think the answer is no," said

Making commitment to Jesus can take you on the ride of your life

Williams

A colleague once reported a serious discussion he had with a student: "I was going to join the Army, but, man, four years, that's a big commitment. So I got married instead."

Those pesky commitments. Don't they just take all the fun out of life? I remember being young once and terrified to make a mistake. When my husband, Stockton, and I got married, I teased, "You realize this is a trial marriage. We'll give it 50 years, then take it a year at a time."

God willing we should be so lucky.

We hit 21 years last December and are still going strong. What young people don't always realize is that a big commitment — like a marriage, like having children, like selecting a career, like becoming a Christian — doesn't turn the Rest of Your Life into a long and boring crawl through the Mojave Desert. You don't have to give up the scenic route with exciting twists and turns and titillating forks along the journey.

In our 21 years, Stockton and I have actually had many different marriages. First came the "starter marriage," with glowing evenings and four (at least) daily phone calls to each other at work because we couldn't bear to go two hours without hearing the sound of each other's voice.

Then the trash started sitting longer and longer, getting pungent before getting emptied, and I turned into a nag queen. At that point, we embarked on the "marriage of negotiations:" OK, I cook, you help with the dishes, and we both keep the toilet paper rolling over the top.

Currently, we are in the "I think I remember you from somewhere, but refresh my memory" marriage: we still share a room, but between two jobs, football, soccer, homework, percussion, youth group, birthday parties, and total exhaustion, we don't often get to finish our sentences, much less make it through a full-blown conversation.

We renew our relationship on occasional dates and in the summer when the kids are in camp. We have high hopes for the "empty nest" marriage, followed by grandparenting, also known as the "now, honey, how do these diapers work?" marriage.

Someone once said that Elizabeth Taylor hasn't had nine marriages; she's had one marriage nine times. She didn't stick around to discover the joys of the next stage.

Committing to anything over the long haul is daunting. Sometimes people think becoming a Christian means giving up all the fun stuff in life: getting even, making more money, wild parties, sleeping in on Sundays — whatever pleasures we think are not nice, because nice is boring.

The good news is that Christ is the perfect traveling companion. Sometimes marriages don't work out. Sometimes a

ECUADOR: Alliance's focus is overseas mission

(From 1C)

they're agricultural, and they're unable to reach their crops or their livestock."

A red alert will be issued when the crater explodes and lava starts to pour out. Another volcano 60 miles south of Quito is also erupting, she said.

Meanwhile, the missionaries of Quito go about their business, doing the work that God has given them to do.

The Christian and Missionary Alliance was begun in 1887 by a Presbyterian minister and is jointly run by members of several different denominations as an agency for evangelism. However, with the passage of time and an ever-increasing complexity of legal issues, it became impossible for the alliance to function as an ecumenical agency, so it was chartered as a denomination.

Mrs. Brown said she knew from an early age that she wanted to be a missionary.

"I grew up in Centerville, La., and became a Christian when I was 14," she said. "When I was a junior in high school, I heard of the martyrdom of five missionary men in Ecuador by the Auka Indians, now called the Huarani," she said. "When the news of that massacre reached Centerville, I said to my mother that I wanted someday to be a missionary to Ecuador, and her response was, 'Honey, you're too frail to be a missionary.'"

She may have been too polite to argue with her mother, but she didn't put the thought of missionary work out of her mind. Upon graduation, she went to Toccoa Falls College in northeast Georgia, a Bible college supported by the Alliance. While she was there, she met Milton Brown, an Alliance student from Ohio, who was also called to the mission field — in Ecuador.

"Our focus in the alliance is overseas mission, and we started out in evangelism, discipleship and church planting in Quito, but after two years, we heard that there was an urgent need for someone to live in the Alliance Christian Academy, a school for missionaries' children. We became house parents for the academy," she said.

The Browns had found a specialized ministry that would see them through the next two decades. They were full-time parents, seeing to the needs of the 24 children in their charge, hearing their prayers, helping them with their homework, and exercising a firm but loving discipline. Their two children grew up in the coed dorm, and shared their rooms and meals and parents with 22 other children. Ms. Brown said that when their daughter was in first grade, her roommate got into some minor kind of trouble and had to be disciplined.

"Every night, Becky would climb into her father's lap after supper," remembered Mrs. Brown, and that night after supper, Becky said, 'Dad, nobody in this dorm likes you.'

"But my husband told her that it was perfectly OK for her little roommate to be upset at him.

"He said, 'I'm not worried about what they think now, because we can't let anyone misbehave. I'm more interested in what they'll think 20 years down the road.'"

During their 18-year tenure as dorm parents, the Browns had some children with them for as long as 10 years; others came and went, depending on the ministries of their parents who were based not only in Ecuador, but all over South America.

Mrs. Brown said they tried to make the environment as family-like as possible.

"Our main theme was consideration," she said. "Whatever belongs to you, nobody else touches. Don't play music so loud that you'll bother people in the adjoining room. They had a list of things to do when they got up in the morning. Make the bed, empty the trash, and keep your room neat — not necessarily perfect.

"At the table, older kids sat with the little ones, to help them learn manners, and every night we had prayers."

She remembers with particular poignancy the prayer of one child after they had all attended the wedding of one of the widows of the long-ago massacre in the jungle.

"She married a man whose wife had also died, and that night after the wedding, one little girl prayed for them, 'And this time, Lord, don't let anyone die.'"

After leaving the academy as dorm parents in 1984, the Browns concentrated once again on evangelism, starting a second Alliance church in Quito.

She said they built their numbers as all Alliance churches do, through a disciple process, where seasoned Christians nurture newcomers in small groups, teaching them biblical principles broken down into the lowest common denominator, making the Bible accessible and understandable.

"We take them through a course of about eight weeks before they can be baptized. We want them to understand what we're all about, and that we're not some cult. We don't teach false doctrine, and we want them to be able to talk about what we're teaching them.

"We study the Bible in a very low-key and simplistic way, because most people have never read the Bible, and they think that no one can understand it.

"In our cell groups, we don't teach heavy doctrine. We let them enjoy the Bible and try to help them discover for themselves the great riches that are in God's Word."

The newcomers' strengths and talents are noted as well.

"The purpose of our cells is evangelism. We want people to know Jesus, and during the process of 'discipling,' we begin to see that some of these people will make good leaders, so we encourage them to take training to become cell leaders.

"By the time there are 10 to 12, or a maximum of about 20, we divide the cell and start another small group.

"We don't want them to be become too comfortable, where everyone in the group is a Christian and they all love one another, because they could go for years just meeting, and our purpose is much broader than that," Mrs. Brown said.

Once the second church in Quito had grown to 800 or so communicants, some 150 left to start up a daughter church, and the Browns went along to oversee its nurturing. Now there are more than 500 people in the second church.

Mrs. Brown said they are constantly presented with opportunities to talk to people about the love of Christ, and the urgent need to get to know him. The Browns follow the guidelines of an evangelistic organization — Evangelism Explosion — to formulate their conversations.

"The question I ask anyone, regardless of what religion they are, is, 'Are you sure that if you died right now, you would go to heaven?' And depending on that answer, I go from there. The second question regardless of the answer, is, 'Suppose you were to die right now — I hope this doesn't happen — and you should have to stand before God, and he says, 'Pat, why do you think I should let you into heaven?' What would you say to him?'

"The majority I've talked with aren't sure they're going to heaven, and they don't think anyone can be sure, and the answer to the second question is usually, 'I do the best I can.'

"Then I know they don't have a personal relationship with Christ. Because Jesus did it all. We don't have to do anything because of that grace.

"But once we receive that grace, we're going to do all we can to show him we love him."

HOUSE: Critics question whether chaplaincy is needed

(From 1C)

Speaker Dennis Hastert and Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas, the House majority leader, chose Wright instead.

Democrats protested, and Rep. Anna Eshoo, D-Calif., who is Catholic and served on the committee, said she detected bias against O'Brien, although House leaders deny it.

Georgetown University law professor Robert Drinan, a Catholic priest who served in Congress, doesn't see anti-Catholic sentiment. ''But for every chaplain to be white, male and Protestant is just out of whack,'' he says. (The Senate had a Catholic chaplain for a year in 1832.)

A Muslim was not invited to say the House's opening prayer until 1991, and there's never been a Buddhist or Hindu.

Discrimination against non-Protestant groups has declined dramatically in public life during the last generation, says Emory University religion and sociology professor Steven Tipton. Still, many members of Congress adhere to the Protestant model of ''seeking to be saints together within a priesthood of all believers,'' and may be suspicious of more hierarchical church models, he says.

Critics question the wisdom of employing one religious leader. ''You can't have a one-size-fits-call chaplain,'' says Barry Lynn of Americans United for the Separation of Church and State. Lynn, a Protestant minister who has served as a hospital chaplain, says he has seen too many religious leaders offer views about suffering and the afterlife that contradict the beliefs of people they are counseling.

Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., who is Jewish, says it doesn't have to be so.

''We're not dealing with narrow sectarian theological debates,'' says Lantos. ''People want to talk to Jim when their son is killed in an auto accident. It doesn't matter if he's a Lutheran minister, a priest or a rabbi.''

Lynn challenges the constitutionality of the chaplaincy. ''As a matter of fundamental principle,'' he says, ''taxpayers should not be supporting a person whose job is at its very core religious.'' The House chaplain is paid $138,000 a year.

Ford argues that no one is forced to attend his prayers and the office does not advance one religion. ''This is not a theological place,'' he says, surveying his sanctuary of two decades. ''This office says, 'Life has meaning. Congress has meaning. Let's talk about it.'''

VATICAN: Traditionalists think modernists are trying to ease pope out of office

(From 1C)

George Weigel, author of a recently published biography of John Paul.

''He's not the CEO of a corporation but the father of a family. You don't resign paternity,'' said Weigel.

Still, the pope's deteriorating health is plain to all.

His speech is slurred and his hands tremble, both symptoms associated with Parkinson's disease, a progressive neurological disorder. Since hip surgery following a fall in his bathroom in 1994, he has had difficulty walking and climbing stairs.

In a radio interview in January, Bishop Karl Lehmann, head of the German bishops conference, said he thought that the pope, ''if he were to feel that he is simply no longer capable enough to lead the church, ... he would have the strength and courage to say, 'I can no longer fill that which needs to be done.' ''

Lehmann's remarks have echoed throughout Catholic circles, with some supporters of the traditionalist pope suspecting an effort to ease him out. Quoting an article suggesting he could not function if unable to speak, the National Committee of Catholic Laymen, a conservative U.S. group, said in its newsletter, ''A silent church? A speechless pope? Sounds to us like wishful thinking on the part of the modernists.''

John Paul turns 80 in May. The health issue will clearly become more pressing in the months and years ahead. Church law has no procedure to declare incapacity.

It does provide for resignation, requiring only that this is done ''freely and that it be duly manifested, but not that it be accepted by anyone.''

As for the foreseeable future, John Paul is only barely paring back his schedule, although his doctors have pressed him to reduce it even further.

At the Vatican and elsewhere, there are many who believe that the sight of a pope battling his physical ailments sends out a positive signal.

''What's wrong with a pope in a wheelchair?'' Weigel asked.

LESLIE: Jesus never abuses us or leaves us

(From 1C)

worn-out career needs to be abandoned for a new vocation. Sometimes our commitment is taken from us whether we like it or not.

However, Jesus never abuses. He never leaves us empty. He never leaves us, period. He also doesn't promise that there won't be any potholes or flat tires — but you really don't have to bite off the Rest of Your Life at once, just one day at a time. And the ride is never dull. In fact, it's the ride of your life.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Feb. 12, 2000:

Make the most of this year. Many opportunities pop up out of what seem like emotional tremors. Go with the flow and be trusting. You have a strong sense of intuition. Know how to present yourself and maximize the moment. Where others don't deal with chaos, you plunge right in, knowing what to do. If you are single, you draw someone quite unusual. However, check him out carefully. Make sure he is who he says he is. If attached, allow your mate to hear your thoughts and fears. You bond closely.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★ Tension proves to be unusually high. Talk about feeling limited rather than letting it affect your mood. Allow a partner to participate in an important decision. Relax by listening to a favorite piece of music or going to a movie.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Take your time when you're not feeling sure of yourself. What could at first seem to be a difficult situation really isn't. Sort through what is going on. You'll come out a winner. Make calls to friends. Another's gesture means a lot.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★ Take some time off from the world to think. Touch base with a parent or boss who needs to hear from you. One-on-one relating proves unusually rewarding with a special friend. Don't try to extend past this level of socializing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Your determination makes what you want happen. A partner might question your decisions or actively disagree. Discussions need to be detached rather than personalized. By putting yourself in another's shoes, you are able to communicate well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Others have their quirks. Accepting them might be best, because you aren't going to change them. Discussions with partners allow greater understanding, if not agreement. Indulge another. Make an occasion everything he wants it to be.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Take the high road. Show a willingness to learn about new technologies and different styles. You can change your day-to-day life by breaking some patterns. Expand your horizons. Walk in another's shoes. A child or loved one does all he can to please you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Listening to others leads you in another direction. Be careful how much risk you take on. A discussion with a partner proves to be helpful in organizing day-to-day matters. You might opt for a major indulgence, even if you can't afford it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Others might seem testy as you watch your plans go up in smoke. Recognize that therein lies an opening or opportunity. What have you really wanted to do? Do it now! Creativity adds some sizzle to a relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Easy does it. Even you can get too busy for your own good. Take some time off. Willingly change plans if necessary. Another might be more unpredictable than usual. Enjoy yourself. Don't worry about another as much.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Expressing your softer side elicits the results you would like. Talks bring positive decisions. Allow another to flow with you. You don't always have to be in control. Loosen up about what is. Shake your head at a money risk.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★ Stay close to home. Don't push yourself. Sometimes you need to indulge yourself. Do the unexpected. Follow through on what is important to you. Do your research before you make a major purchase — you might find a better price than you think.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Tell it like it is. You might not agree with a friend who is being unusually testy. Your smile wins friends. Go out and join others. No one likes a good party as much as you do. You gain an unusual insight into another.

Taylor to be honored with award

PHILADELPHIA — Elizabeth Taylor will be the third recipient of the Marian Anderson Award, which honors artists who work to benefit humanity.

Taylor was chosen because of her work on behalf of AIDS awareness, research and patient care, Mayor John F. Street said Friday.

"This quintessential movie star took the spotlight, which has illuminated her acting career throughout her life, and bravely turned it on the battle against AIDS following the death of her close friend Rock Hudson," Street said.

Taylor is to accept the award in person during special programs June 25 and 26 at the Philadelphia Museum of Art. The first two recipients of the award, Harry Belafonte and Gregory Peck, are among the celebrities scheduled to pay tribute to Taylor at the ceremonies.

The award is named after the late opera singer and Philadelphia native who was the first black performer to sing at the White House.

CLOVER, S.C. — Queen Latifah visited a South Carolina high school to make good on a promise to a troubled teen-ager.

Carmen Houston, 16, quit school last year after she was ridiculed for being overweight. In December, the rapper, actress and talk show host promised Carmen that if the teen went back to school she would go to class with her on the first day.

Latifah, whose real name is Dana Owens, made good on the promise Feb. 1, walking to piano class with Carmen and making a speech to her fellow students.

"It was the first day I've gone to school and not gotten made fun of," Carmen said in a segment Wednesday on Latifah's talk show.

LOS ANGELES — Roberto Benigni, whose exuberance captivated Oscar viewers last year, will be a presenter at this year's Academy Awards.

Producers Richard and Lili Fini Zanuck said Thursday that Benigni had been added to the roster of presenters for the March 26 awards show.

Last year, Benigni won a best-actor Oscar for "Life Is Beautiful," which also took the award for foreign-language film.

Taking the stage to accept one of his awards, Benigni hopped over seatbacks to the delight of the crowd. He gave gushing speeches, at one point saying he would like to "lie down in the firmament making love to everybody."

BALTIMORE — The London Philharmonia Orchestra and Chorus will perform Franz Joseph Haydn's "The Creation" here next month to kick off a series of concerts commissioned by Pope John Paul II.

Baltimore will be the only venue in the United States for the series, which is aimed at celebrating religious diversity in the new millennium.

The Baltimore performances will take place March 26 and 27 at the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Assumption of the Blessed Mary. The series will continue at Westminster Cathedral in London; the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris; the Cathedral of Toledo, the Primatial, in Spain; the Vatican and the cities of Bethlehem, Nazareth and Jerusalem.

Maestro Gilbert Levine will conduct the concerts.

LOS ANGELES — A man who police say has been harassing Brooke Shields for 15 years, including sending nude photos of himself to her, pleaded innocent to stalking and weapons charges.

Mark Ronald Bailey, 41, entered his plea Thursday. He has two prior convictions involving Shields, one for trespassing at her New Jersey home in 1985 and another for making a terrorist threat against her in 1993.

His attorney, Lisa Polansky, said during a hearing last month her client has made some "statements that are somewhat bizarre and crude" but doesn't pose a clear threat to the actress.

Bailey was arrested Jan. 10 after detectives said they saw him pull a handgun out of his pocket while looking at his reflection outside a downtown building. Sheriff's Detective Merrill Ladenheim testified last month that Bailey had two letters he was about to mail to Shields.

Bailey's trial was scheduled for April 7.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — In a Feb. 6 story about a speech Margaret Thatcher gave at the College of William and Mary, The Associated Press erroneously reported that King William II of England granted the royal charter establishing the college in 1693.

It was King William III.
