Allied Live Oak announces plans for new 'mini-bank'

By PAT BLAIR
Managing editor

Allied Live Oak Bank will open the first "mini-bank" in Aransas County, subject to necessary regulatory approvals, Bank President Tim Gilles announced Thursday afternoon.

NEW BANK FACILITY was announced by Allied Live Oak Bank President Tim Gilles Thursday afternoon.

Gilles made the announcement during a meeting at Live Oak Center attended by members of the bank's board of directors, employees and Rockport city officials including Mayor Burt Mills and City Manager Herman Johnson.

The new facility will be located in Live Oak Plaza on Hwy. 35 North, close to Wal-Mart and Rockport Country Club Estates, Gilles added.

He said a new change in state banking regulations had made this new type of facility possible. The mini-bank will offer the same services available at the main bank, including full savings, checking and new account services as well as loan applications, certificates of deposit and check orders.

"It will do just about everything we can do here," Gilles said during the conference. The decision to open the new facility is a result of Allied Live Oak's success here, he said: "We have enjoyed some good growth, and convenience is the name of the game.

"It's a real pleasure to be able to make an announcement like this," he added.

Gilles gave special acknowledgment to Dr. Thomas R. McKinley for making available the space the new bank facility will occupy and to Jerre Ledbetter for his assistance. He then introduced Conwell Smith, chairman of the bank's board of directors, who thanked those who attended the conference.

Anticipated opening date of the Allied Live Oak Mini-bank is around mid-December of this year.

Allied Live Oak Bank first received its charter as Live Oak State Bank in September 1973 with six members on its board of directors including George Cone who served as its president until his retirement. He was succeeded by Larry Boone then by Gilles.

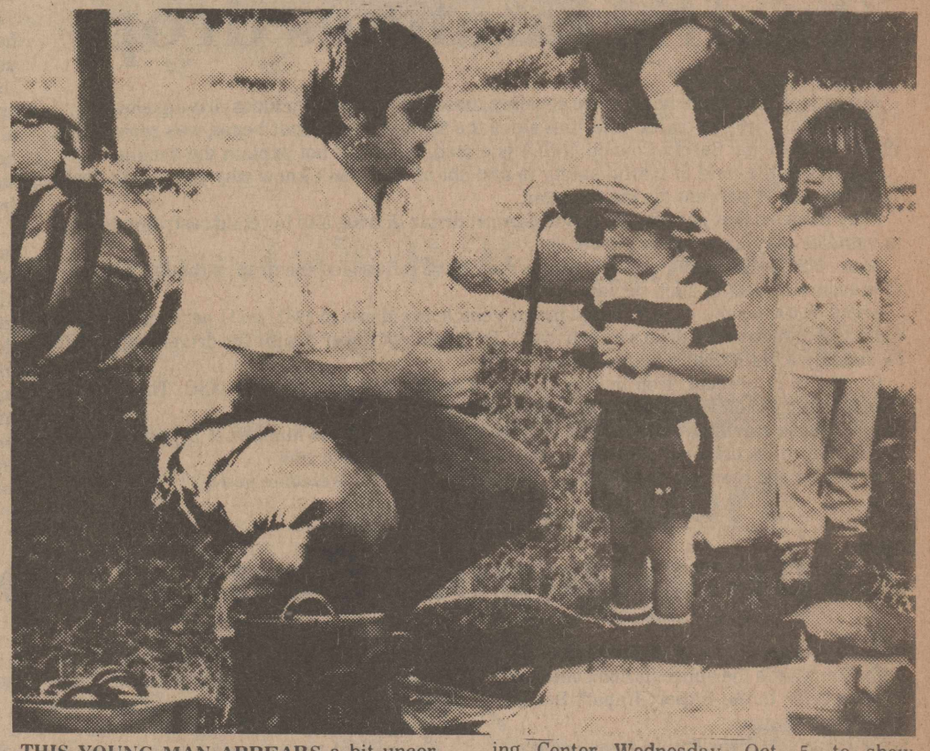

In 1981-82 the bank merged with Allied Bancshares and became Allied Live Oak and in late 1982-83, the bank remodeled, creating the Live Oak Center.

Early this year, Gilles said, the bank extended its hours at the drive-in windows for the convenience of its patrons, from 7:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and 7:30 a.m. until 6 p.m. Fridays.

Gilles added there are no immediate plans for drive-in facilities at the new mini-bank.

The bank's deposits have grown from $149,626.58 when it opened its doors for business in 1973 to a little more than $41 million as of this past Thursday morning. Deposits have been "growing steadily," Gilles said, adding the first three quarters of this year were "very successful."

The bank has loans currently outstanding of a little more than $26 million, Gilles said, "virtually all in the Rockport-Fulton area."

Blevins Harbor

Dredge decision deferred

A decision on whether to proceed with maintenance dredging of Blevins Harbor was deferred to Oct. 18 due to the need for additional information at Tuesday night's meeting of the Aransas County Navigation District.

A question was raised earlier on who owns the bottom rights in the dredge area, located at the juncture of Little Bay and Aransas Bay at the Key Allegro Bridge.

At Tuesday's meeting, ACND Chairman Hillis Dominguez said a survey had been done in the area and the bottom rights belong to the navigation district. Commissioner Hal McKnight said in his opinion the district should proceed with the project if a sponsoring agent can be found.

The district has set aside $5,000 of its own funds for the project and has secured agreement from the City of Rockport, the Key Allegro Canal Owners Association and Allegro North to participate in funding the project.

In other action Tuesday, the commissioners voted to deny a request by Jackson Seafood for lease of an area behind the Sea Shell Shoppe lease in Rockport Harbor.

The commissioners agreed one reason the area has not been leased in the past is to provide parking area for people using the boat ramp. Following the board's action, John Jackson, who presented the request for Jackson Seafood, said, "If it's the district's desire to make it (the area in question) available to the public, I think it should be paved."

Jackson followed this with a formal request for water, electricity and a pier at the

Fulton opts for temporary repairs to fire station while seeking HUD grant

By LESLIE ABRAMS
Staff writer

FULTON — During a workshop meeting Tuesday evening, Oct. 4, Fulton Mayor L.E. Casterline announced he would like to make temporary repairs on the Fulton Fire Station and to apply for a federal Housing and Urban Development (HUD) grant to build a new town hall and fire station.

Although council members expect any type of grant action to take two to three years, most expressed their belief that this is a better solution than spending $25-30,000 on remodeling the fire station.

A list of necessary repairs and their estimated costs will be submitted at next Tuesday's meeting. Several volunteer firemen told the council that the restrooms in the fire station don't always work, the roof leaks, sags and at one point fell in and damaged some firefighting equipment.

Representatives of an Austin engineering firm are expected to be present at next week's meeting to discuss the feasibility of applying for a grant to build a new fire station and town hall. The same engineering firm will be developing a comprehensive study of the feasibility of the town applying for a HUD grant to build a sanitary sewer system. A public hearing on the sewer grant proposal is scheduled for the Tuesday, Oct. 11 meeting.

Fulton attorney Gene Garcia announced that the town will need to make some sort of lease agreement with the volunteer firemen due to the fact that the fire station, a town-owned building, is used by persons who are not employees of the Town of Fulton. The council will work out the terms of any such lease with the fire department.

The council accepted the 1983-84 budget of $84,100 and set the tax rate at 3½ cents per $100 valuation. Discounts for early payment of taxes are 3 percent in October, 2 percent in November and 1 percent in December.

Penalties plus interest for late payment are 7 percent in February, 9 percent in March, 11 percent in April, 13 percent in May, 15 percent in June and 18 percent in July, with interest increasing by 1 percent each month after.

A motion by Alderman Leslie Cole and seconded by Alderwoman Lynelle Hunt to accept the revenue sharing proposal whereby the town would give $2,500 in revenue sharing funds to the fire department was unanimously approved.

An ordinance formally annexing Block 61, outlots 106, 107, 108 and 109, was adopted by the council on its third reading.

First reading was held of a subdivision ordinance which would give Fulton a half-mile extra-territorial jurisdiction. The second reading will be held during next Tuesday's meeting.

A man interested in leasing the bait-concession stand at L.E. Casterline Fishing Pier told the council he plans to establish a coffee shop-type place which would serve breakfast and lunch. He would also sell frozen bait and fishing tackle, and make several improvements in the existing stand, as well as pay all utilities on the pier. He plans to submit a formal bid this week for consideration at Tuesday's regular meeting.

Revenue bond issue to be topic at ACND workshop

A revenue bond issue to fund rewiring of Rockport Harbor and additional harbor improvements in the county and methods for increasing recreational revenues to the county navigation district were placed on the agenda for the district's Oct. 18 workshop following discussion during a meeting this past Tuesday night.

Following discussion at the Aransas County Navigation District's last meeting on revenue sharing bonds to finance the proposed rewiring of Rockport Harbor, Charles T. Sharpless, vice president of First Southwest, was invited to speak to the district commissioners Tuesday.

Sharpless told the commissioners the district "would have no problem issuing bonds of up to $630,000."

The commissioners were looking at three possible alternatives, ACND Chairman Hillis Dominguez said as the discussion started: $90,000 which would cover the cost of the Rockport Harbor rewiring project or $250,000 or $400,000 issues that would cover additional improvements to ACND facilities.

Sharpless presented commissioners with debt service schedules for those three alternatives. He advised the commissioners, if they are planning to use bonds to pay for the harbor rewiring project, to wait until the bonds have been authorized before they let the contract or let the contract with the stipulation that payment for the work will come from revenue bonds.

He suggested the commissioners determine what projects they want to fund then "get a ballpark idea of the costs" to determine how much in revenue bonds they want to issue.

Commissioner Hal McKnight suggested if the district is going to issue revenue bonds, the issue should cover more than just the harbor rewiring costs.

Commissioner David Maguglin at this point said, "$100,000 for Rockport Harbor, $200,000 for Cove Harbor improvements."

Dominguez observed the district has permission from the Army Corps of Engineers to fill in about two more acres at Cove Harbor, on the north and east levies.

After McKnight suggested, "Let's don't saddle ourselves down just with Cove Harbor," Maguglin changed his suggestion to include $200,000 for improvements to all three harbors — a total bond issue of $300,000.

Commissioner Charlie Augustine suggested

Tax rate, budget are on utility district agenda

LAMAR — Consideration of the proposed 1983-84 budget and setting of a tax rate are expected to be on the agenda of Tuesday night's meeting of the Aransas County Municipal Utility District No. 1 (ACMUD) at the district office on 8th Street in Lamar.

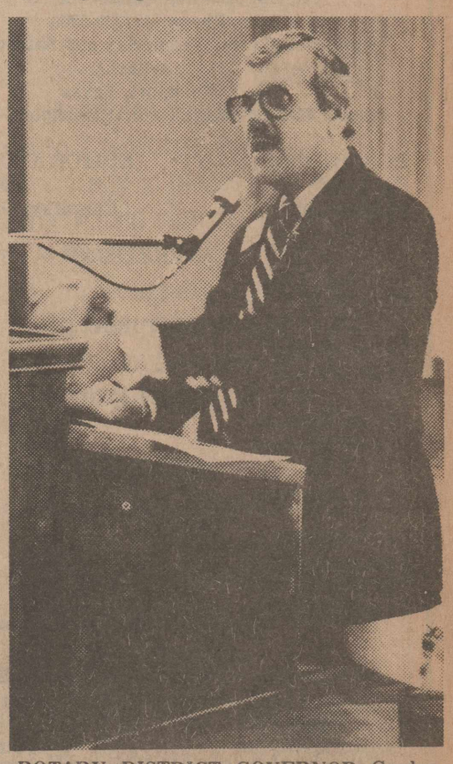

Also scheduled is discussion on supplying water to the Goose Island State Park if water service has not started by that time and a look at the proposed contract between the utility district and District Operator David McCluskey.

Board members as of this past week were considering a budget operating in the black for the coming year, with anticipated expenses of $75,000 versus anticipated revenues of $100,000.

To meet the district's bond obligations, a tax rate fairly close to last year's $3.19 per $100 valuation is expected.

Also on Tuesday night's agenda will be consideration of the audit for the fiscal year ending July 31, 1983.

The district recently completed tie-in of its facilities to the Lamar Water Supply Corp. and has begun service to LWS customers.

ROTARY DISTRICT GOVERNOR Gaylan Duncan was guest speaker at the Rockport Rotary Club meeting Wednesday. Perfect attendance awards were presented to three Rotarians. Story is on page 4a.

Our debt to the space program

By JOHN TOWER
U.S. Senator for Texas

No one who watched the Space Shuttle Challenger's spectacular night landing last month could fail to have been impressed by this amazing display of talent and technology. But our nation's continuing success in space sometimes make it difficult to remember just how recent it was that space travel was just a dream.

October marks the 25th anniversary of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's (NASA) founding. By creating this agency in 1958, Congress committed the United States to manned exploration of space. Alan Shepherd Jr.'s 1961 space flight thrilled the nation — though the 14.8-minute flight only reached a height of 115 miles above the earth.

When John Kennedy vowed that year that we would put a man on the moon — and return hims safely — by the decade's end, many scoffed at the notion. Yet in 1969, Neil Armstrong stood on the moon and said, "One small step for a man; one giant leap for mankind."

Capitol update

Today, the space shuttle program already is providing practical, vital services through its scientific experiments and its satellite delivery capability.

This astounding progress can be credited to our strong national commitment to achieve our goals and to the many talented men and women who have worked on NASA's projects over the past two-and-a-half decades. I am proud to note that much of this work has been done at the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center in Houston.

Our successes in space have been a tremendous source of national pride and have brought acclaim and admiration from throughout the world. However, the space program also has been a source of more direct benefits to all of us through the technology which came from its development.

The space program has brought us everything from television cameras which allow doctors to see inside the human body to freeze-dried ice cream. The need for purified drinking water in space led to the development of compact filters that produce chemically pure water. The space program has helped in the development of computer technologies.

Your weather forecasts come from satellites, and, in many cases, so does your television signal. Even the voice on the telephone may come to you via satellite.

The steady stream of technological innovations and advancements resulting form NASA's research and development efforts has affected nearly every facet of our lives — home and automotive design, fire prevention and protective measures for firefighters, biomedical implants and diagnostic instrumentation, bridge construction, food processing equipment, farm machinery, computerized banking, traffic controls and highway safety, microelectric products, sporting goods, energy systems and industrial process of almost every description.

As we celebrate 25 years of reaching for excellence and achieving it in space and aeronautics, we realize that we did not get to our present position of leadership by accident. We got there because we had the imagination to dream great dreams and the national will to fulfill them.

Traffic fatalities drop

Americans may be driving more sensibly these days, which includes driving slower.

The biggest drop in traffic fatalities since the 55 mph speed limit began was recorded in 1982. The National Safety Council (NSC) is elated, but could not explain the decline.

Experts in the field of traffic safety in and out of NSC don't know why the traffic death rate dropped 11 percent during the year.

They theorize that nationwide drives against drunk driving and for child restraint devices in vehicles may have led to the decline.

Also, NSC's driving safety campaigns may have influenced the drop, although it is hard to measure effects of such drives.

About 46,000 people were killed in motor vehicle accidents in 1982, an 11 percent decrease from 1981. Much of the drop was attributed to 17 percent fewer deaths for drivers aged 45 to 64, usually a statistically stable group.

In 1974, a 17 percent drop in overall traffic deaths was recorded by NSC. This was attributable to the 55 mph speed law, new at the time.

Even more startling than the 1982 fatality drop was that the number of drivers and the number of miles driven increased more than 20 percent since 1974.

Whatever the reasons, the highway death rate decline is welcome news.

Export-Import Bank slipping out of its proper role

By Congressman BILL PATMAN

Ex-Im. That's the abbreviation commonly used to refer to the Export-Import Bank of the United States.

Congress set up the Ex-Im Bank in 1945 to support exports and imports between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, our ally in World War II.

The role of Ex-Im was expanded to promote trade between the U.S. and its territories and with other foreign nations and their business interests.

Not only has Ex-Im become a participant in a significant share of U.S. exports, it also has become a strong influence as an instrument of U.S. foreign economic policy.

The philosophy behind creation and financing the Ex-Im has been that expansion of export of U.S. goods and services are good for our domestic economy.

That's an excellent philosophy. But there was a very disturbing development a few weeks ago. In an unprecedented action, the Ex-Im informed Congress that it was planning to extend $2 billion in loan guarantees to the government of Mexico and Brazil.

Ex-Im said the purpose was to shore up the finances of these two countries.

Many of us in Congress were disturbed. Disturbed because the guarantees, as originally announced, were not tied to any U.S. export contracts.

Thus, Ex-Im was announcing that it was making two tremendously large guarantees of loans to two financially-shaky countries.

There was no indication that specific American exports were to be helped by the guarantees.

We certainly want to help our Latin-American friends to the South. The encouragement of exports and imports between us, Mexico and Brazil is clearly desirable. We need to help strengthen their economies as well as ours.

But many of us questioned the wisdom and legality of the loan guarantees.

Our reasons for questioning were these:

— The Export-Import law requires that any loan or financial guarantee which exceeds $100 million must include a detailed description of the purposes of the transaction.

— The law requires the Ex-Im to identify the party or parties requesting the loan or financial guarantee.

— The law requires identification of the nature of the goods or services to be exported.

— The law requires that Ex-Im identify the use for which the goods or services are to be exported.

All these requirements are safeguards which Congress put into the law to safeguard the proper use and the credibility of the Ex-Im as a lending agency of the United States.

These requirements were not met by the Ex-Im when it announced the $2 billion in loan guarantees. For these reasons, I introduced a resolution asking the U.S. House to call on Ex-Im to delay the loan guarantee until Congress had an opportunity to examine them.

The logical place for such examination would be in the normal budget and appropriation process for fiscal 1984, which began Oct. 1.

I also asked the Congressional Research Service to analyze the loan guarantees. That analysis found that the Ex-Im's "profitability is of concern if Congress is not to be faced with large Ex-Im losses at a time when there is a large overall federal deficit."

I fear that the Ex-Im may be slipping into the role of a foreign aid agency, rather than a sound, prudent bank lender. I will be working for Congressional action to bring Ex-Im back to its proper role.

Austin at Wharf

A FEW DAYS AGO I praised the speech made by the president of a teachers union affiliated with the AFL-CIO. Since then that same union has endorsed Walter Mondale for president. Despairing parents ofter observe, "will children never learn?" I am tempted to make the same observation with respect to teachers. In the last presidential election that same union supported Jimmy Carter, even though it seemed, rightly, to so many of us that he was bound to be a loser in his second time around.

Of course last year in Texas the teachers threw their weight into the Mark White camp. But what did they get? They still made a terrible mistake for the very simple reason that those who voted for Reagan and against White are for the most part those most concerned about their childrens' education.

Intelligentsia amongst Democrats and liberals will pounce upon my last remark with glee. Even though they may know better they will very likely charge me with implying that only the educated and wealthy care about their children.

It follows then that I must again endorse a remark made by the earlier mentioned union leader; school administrators should be able to go onto the nation's university campuses equipped with the dollars and other enticements and so compete with IBM, etc., for the best and brightest, and so entice them into teaching. I happen to accept and believe that, but at the same time acknowledge and accept that for at least some time to come the concept is idealistic, even wild.

On the other hand let me contend that most of us interested in better education, and all conservatives, have long lamented what we have come to believe as fact; academics are liberals, socialists, even communists. The statement is silly only to the extent that it is widely held, yet often enough justified.

SIMPLY, AND PERHAPS crudely, if we really want better teachers we are going to have to buy them, but not just with dollars. Concerned as teachers are with pay, they are also concerned with discipline and lack of respect from students and even the community at large. Teachers want and deserve, I think, to be regarded as members of the community.

By that I mean they must be placed in a position where they don't feel obliged to tell themselves "because I'm a teacher I can't do . . ." Example: A teacher and his wife may elect to go out for dinner, but if they want a cocktail or wine with dinner, well, they'd go out of town. Carry this example into every other facet of living. We force them or cause them to feel that they are creatures apart.

And so to those of you interested in better education, and especially conservatives, I would say bring the people who teach your children into the mainstream and I more than suspect that your ranks will gain in numbers.

THE OTHER DAY I was in the line for the ferry to Port Aransas. From a vehicle coming off the ferry a couple of beverage tins were tossed and went rattling across the pavement. Had I been able to swing out of the line of cars, turn around and follow the oaf and overtake him, and had I been brave enough, I might have slapped a citizen's arrest on him. Instead I mumbled a few oaths not fit for repeating in a family newspaper.

No too many minutes later and only by chance I met a lady who is heading a drive to clean up Mustang Island. No small task. Over the years I have witnessed and supported what are called "Clean Up, Paint Up, Fix Up" drives, always with tongue in cheek. The worth of such events, usually lasting only a week, are little more than an ego trip for a handful of eager beavers. If a town is clean and kept clean it is because of the pride, will and civilized instincts of the people, and even then they have to contend with ignorant slovens such as the one I met at the ferry.

All this I mention because the Port Aransas cleanup effort seems to be different. True, a special week has been set, but the aforementioned lady and her cohorts have been working on the project for weeks, and not just with endeavors to publicize the event. They are already hard at work, cleaning up, setting an example. If I lived in a dream world I might hope that by the beginning of "the week" their island would be so clean that their fellow citizens would find nothing to do but admire.

Another thing about this drive (drive is one of those words I intensely dislike) is that the leaders are not blaming tourists for the rundown aspects of their town. They acknowledge their own share of the blame as only they must. Visitors can't be blamed for tall grass in vacant lots, junk-filled yards.

Now I'd like to take a look at this campaign not after the designated week, but in six months. By that time, the ignorant bum I met at the ferry may at least have learned to throw his empties at a trash container. If the lady persists, in another six years he may learn to pause long enough to attend that his empties make the inside of the can. I reckon that clown kind of got my wind up.

Growth of special interest groups causes concern

By LLOYD BENTSEN
U.S. Senator

The halls of Congress are frequented, not only by elected officials, government workers and tourists buy by representatives of special interest groups promoting their causes to any who will listen.

There are more than 10,000 lobbyists who know their way around our nation's capital. They represent hundreds of groups competing for a share of dwindling federal dollars.

They can argue convincingly that federal spending cuts would be disastrous, or beneficial, depending on who they represent. A congressman's ears can ring by the end of a busy day.

Official registries list 4,000 lobbyists for the 1,600 trade and professional organizations, 1,250 representatives for individual corporations and a like number pushing the interests of minorities, religious groups, senior citizens, women, environmentalists, social welfare agencies and a hodge-podge of other causes.

With sophisticated direct mail fund-raising techniques, these single-interest or special-interest groups are supported by millions of dollars in contributions each year.

Watching Washington

They have only one interest and wield their money and influence to achieve it. They tell elected officials "we don't care about your overall voting record, the only thing that counts is how you vote on this one issue."

While it's understandable that lobbyists try to protect their programs, public officials must place national interests above the needs of any one interest group.

This growth of special interest groups is a troubling development. It threatens the success of our two-party system, which survives by virtue of its ability to forge the diverse elements of American society into two — rather than dozens — of opposing voices.

By uniting special interests, the two-party system in America has operated on the tradition of bargain and compromise, unlike Europe where unbending splinter parties make accommodation impossible and often stall their governments in deadlock.

While our nation has always tried to ensure that the majority rules, it does not do so at the price of denying basic rights to smaller groups.

But the atmosphere of public debate in recent years has become so fragmented that it is more and more difficult to figure out the will of the majority.

Those Americans who compose the middle ground — the consensus that governs this country — are speaking not with one voice, but with many. And this is weakening the bonds that hold us together as a nation.

We seem to be approaching a time when minorities will speak only to minorities, environmentalists only to environmentalists and so on down the line.

It's time for Americans to think hard about our unity and sense of purpose as Americans.

How 'bout that?

From a tax standpoint, cash winnings from lotteries, races, games of chance and raffles are viewed as income on the federal tax return, say Internal Revenue Service officials.

Similarly, contest prize money and awards from employers are also considered as taxable income by the IRS and must be reported.

The IRS adds that property items won in contests or donated by employers such as household appliances, all-expense-paid vacations or cars, must also be included in income at fair market value. Both cash and noncash winnings are shown on Form 1040 as "Other Income."

The IRS notes that gambling losses may be deducted to the extent of the winnings if deductions are itemized.

How 'bout that?

The Live Oak Peninsula philosopher

TV has some good points, too

Editor's note: The Live Oak Peninsula Philosopher on his grassburr ranch defends television this week, more or less.

Dear Editor:

Other than the organization that argues the earth is flat, I guess the next group least likely to attract many members is the Society for the Eradication of Television.

There is such an organization and it wants people to turn off their TV sets and leave them off.

"People have become addicted to the tube," members say, claiming endless watching has just about destroyed conversation.

I don't understand the argument. I thought one big advantage of television is it eliminates conversation. My contention is that anybody who can't say all he's got to say during the commercials is bound to be repeating himself.

Also, the anti-TV group says, getting rid of television gives you more time to read. They don't say what they're reading, but if it's some of the recent best-sellers, they'd be just as informed watching a rerun of the "Beverly Hillbillies."

Actually, the people who ought to be fighting television are politicians. It has just about ruined them.

Years ago, when people saw their congressman or senator maybe just once a year and could go a lifetime without ever seeing a president, a vice president or a cabinet member, those dignitaries took on a mystique that made them seem larger than life. Some people would stay up half the night to get a chance to see one of them pass through town on a train.

Nowadays, you can sit at home and see all the great ones on television, and it turns out they are just ordinary human beings like the rest of us. When the camera closes in on them, most of them stumble and fumble and duck and dodge and don't seem to have any better answers to problems than you and me, especially me. Some of them don't even know what the problems are.

This is democracy and I'm in favor of it. What's on TV tonight?

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Charlotte Plummer's Restaurant sold to Terry's Interstate Inc.

Charlotte Plummer's Seafare Restaurant in Fulton has been bought by Terry's Interstate Inc., a firm which owns Terry's Restaurants, located all over the country along interstate highways and the Coach Light Inn Motels in Texas and New Mexico.

The firm is a limited partnership run by two brothers, Terry Cooper, president, and his younger brother, Stephen Cooper, executive vice president. Terry's Interstate Inc. has been in existence since 1960. One of the firm's partners is Bob Lilly, former defense tackle for the Dallas Cowboys.

Charlotte Plummer's is the first non-interstate restaurant the firm has purchased. While a few changes in the kitchen and dining room will be made, the Coopers said in an interview Friday, Sept. 23, that the name will remain the same and so will most of the menu.

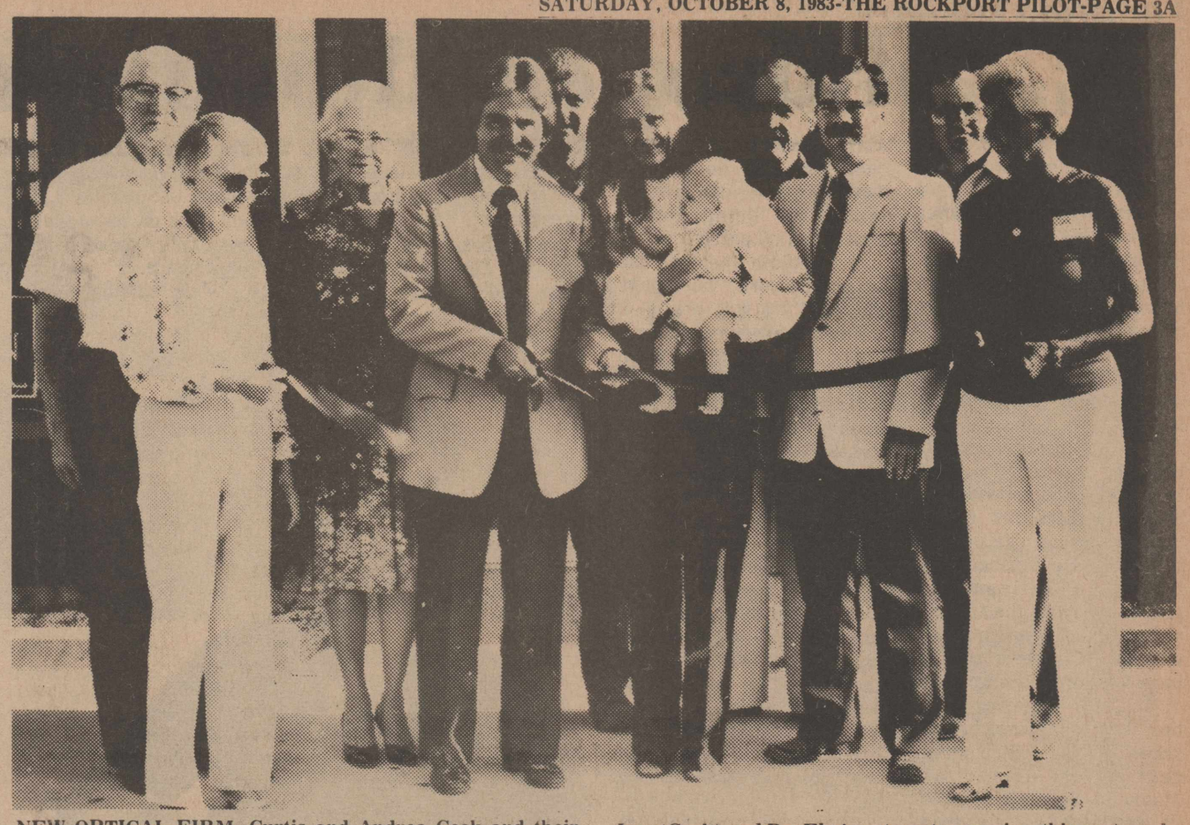

In addition to adding a bar inside the restaurant, the elder Cooper said, "We're making it brighter and a little different inside. The concept has been successful, so there's no sense in changing it."

The firm has also purchased Charlotte Plummer's banquet room across the street but does not plan any changes there.

The brothers said that they may initiate a few specialty items on the menu and they plan to work closely with the community on a "special project or two." "We plan to spend a lot of time down here." Stephen Cooper said.

Most of Charlotte Plummer's employees will stay on with the new owners. They will, however, be hiring a new manager to run the restaurant.

Although the restaurant has been closed for remodeling for several weeks, the Coopers said they plan to open just prior to the start of Rockport SeaFair.

Financially troubled computer industry needs to read the book

By SCOTT BURNS

What do you do with an Osborne computer?

This is not a joke or variation on lugubrious books with titles like "100 Uses for a Dead Cat."

It is a serious question that has been on the minds of hundreds of microcomputer retailers since Osborne Computer, manufacturer of the first low-cost and portable computer, filed for protection from its creditors in a Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

While there has been much attention to the dilemma faced by Osborne suppliers who were left holding the receivables bag, there has been less attention to the computer industry you and I see most — the retail stores.

In the days after the bankruptcy filing, most stores are playing "wait and see." The hope is that someone will rescue the company and production will resume. In other words, they are hoping the problem will go away.

If it doesn't, they are faced with the problem of selling the Osborne computers in inventory at what inevitably would be a much reduced price. Still worse, the Osborne has been a big Christmas item and would have to be replaced, quickly, with a comparable machine lest the stores lose potential sales.

In fact, a rescue is unlikely and Osborne Computer may live on only as a Harvard Business School case study because it shows all too well how fast the Leading Edge moves and how deep it cuts.

Only two years ago, Adam Osborne created waves by introducing a complete, portable computer system equipped with the most commonly used software programs at a market-wrenching $1,595. For about half the price of comparable equipment, you not only got the machine, you got software for word processing, spreadsheets and the BASIC programming language.

Weeks later, IBM announced the IBM PC, a microcomputer based on a 16-bit processor. It was, and is, relatively expensive and not intended for portability. Since they were selling to different markets, virtually no one saw the introduction of the PC as the death knell of Osborne.

But it was.

Look what others did:

Only a few months after the IBM PC announcement, Compaq Computer was formed to produce a machine that offered all the functions of the IBM and portability.

Ken Price, director of communications at Compaq, told me: "In order to run the major, powerful programs used in the business marketplace, youve got to have compatibility with the machine that created the standard — the IBM . . . So we set out to make a machine as compatible as possible . . . one that would allow people to buy IBM software off the shelf, put it in our machine and run it . . . while reading the manuals written for the IBM."

At about the same time, other manufacturers began to build IBM "clones." Texas Instruments, Digital Equipment, Zenith, NEC, Televideo and legions of other companies announced new machines using the same processor and with differing degrees of IBM compatibility.

But Osborne did nothing. According to industry sources, the company had barely basic development work on an IBM-compatible machine when they announced it only a few months ago.

The immediate consequence of that announcement was that orders and sales for the older machine disappeared even though the new machine wasn't developed, let alone ready for market.

Osborne had joined what might be called the "Virtual Industry," the multitude of technology companies that don't exist beyond press releases and announce ideas as though they were saleable products.

In fact, achieving true compatibility isn't easy. Few of the IBM "clones" have it.

Jack White, vice president for marketing at Columbia Data Products, says, "There's no cheap ticket to get into this market. It's expensive to get rule compatibility . . . We've got 40 man-years of development invested in it."

For Columbia, the results of that effort have been a major coup. A bootstrap-financed Maryland company that has been in business for eight years, it has $64 million in open orders for its machine, White says, and hopes to be able to deliver some $58 million worth during the second half of this year, a massive change from first-half shipments of $9 million.

What's it all mean?

Simply this:

Adam Osborne, the man who wrote "Running Wild: The Next Industrial Revolution," didn't take his own book seriously.

And if you're thinking about buying a personal computer, the only machines to consider are IBM and its true compatibles.

Dillon named SW Bell manager

Al Dillon has been named Southwestern Bell's new community relations manager for the Rockport area.

Dillon, who will be based in Kingsville, has some nine years experience with the telephone company, most of it dealing with customers on a daily basis.

His new role will be to oversee service and civic concerns as they effect the company and the community. His new position is a result of company reorganization due to the changing market for telephone service, according to company officials.

"With consolidation and the relocation of some of our offices in many of the cities we serve, and the massive changes that are occurring within our industry," he said, "we are concerned about keeping the channels of communication open with our customers.

"These are times that we need to be more visible," he added, "not less."

He said the telephone company has always been interested in the communities it serves, but due to mechanization and centralization, the company runs the risk of "losing touch" with its customers.

Dillon served as manager of the residence service center in Longview before being appointed to his new position. He began his career with the Bell system in 1974 as a service order writer and has held various positions with the company in the Dallas area.

He added he anticipates frequent travel to the cities for which he has community relations responsibilities, including Rockport. "I look forward to working with the various communities," he added.

He enjoys playing golf and building golf clubs as a sideline.

Save money with a heat pump for heating and air conditioning

You can lower your utility bills substantially by using an electric heat pump to provide the heating and cooling that account for as much as 65 to 70 percent of the electricity consumed in your home. It's a super-efficient device that should be included in any new house you build or buy. Or maybe you'll want to consider adding a heat pump to your present home to increase the efficiency of your heating/cooling system.

Although its name is somewhat misleading, the heat pump actually is designed to keep you comfortable all year long. It warms your house during the winter and air conditions it during the summer – and does both more efficiently than any other combination unit now available.

What makes it so efficient? the heat pump simply moves heat – a less expensive process than making heat, as gas and other conventional systems must do.

In cold weather, the heat pump absorbs the heat always present in outside air and transfers it inside. In hot weather, it removes heat from the interior to air condition and dehumidify your home.

The heat pump is an especially good choice for South Texas because it performs most economically in places with a relatively mild climate. In the area served by Central Power and Light Company, a properly installed heat pump can produce at least 2½ units of heat for every unit of energy needed to run it.

If you'd like more details, just inquire at your CPL office. We'll be happy to give you information about heat pumps and other devices that help you use energy wisely.

For Brian Lenhart

European holiday takes unexpected turn

By PAT BLAIR
Managing editor

When Brian Lenhart went to Germany last December to visit his "oldest and dearest friend," he was contemplating Christmas in Munich . . . snow . . . a European holiday . . .

What he didn't know — until later — was that his friend was planning Christmas in Israel . . .

Brian is no stranger to travel. A resident of Rockport since around 1981, he remembers his family "moved around like gypsies 'til 1965." He finished high school in Killeen and graduated from the University of Texas in Austin in 1980 with a B.A. degree in government with pre-law emphasis.

"I'm still bantering about the idea of going to law school," he said during a recent interview at his Magnolia Street residence. "I just never got around to taking the law schools admissions test."

In the meantime he and his stepfather Bill Thomas have formed their own companies, the Coastal Mudlogging Service and the Coastal Oilfield Services for equipment rental.

"I've spent almost three years working on oil fields," Brian said. "I came straight out of college and to this work. There's not a great deal you can do with a degree in American government, so, being fourth generation oil patch . . .

"I complain about it," he says of the work, "but it pays the rent."

But Brian was ready for a break last December when his friend — now a lieutenant in the Green Berets — called him with an invitation to come to Germany for Christmas. "I thought that was a bully idea," Brian says, "so I went."

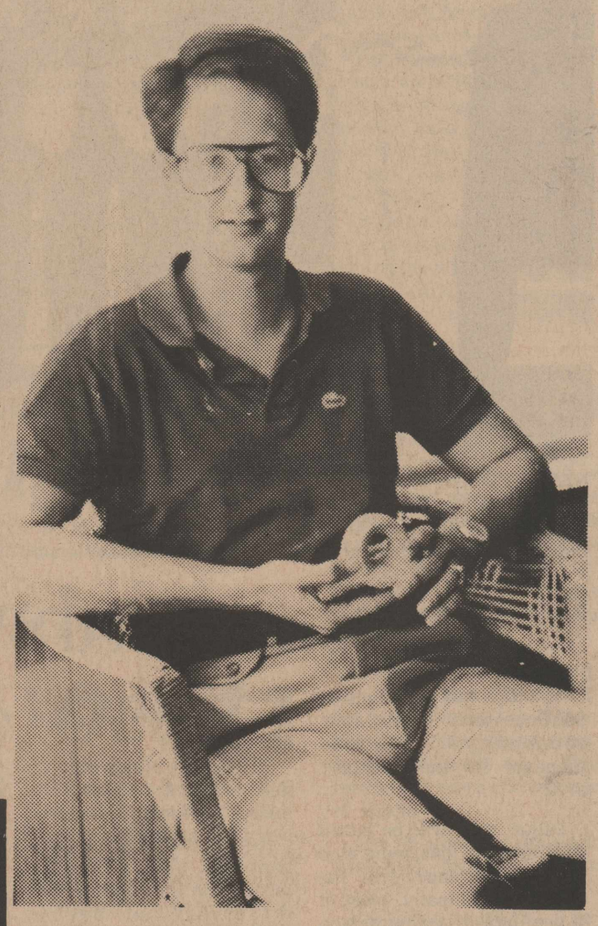

He spent less than two days in Germany — although it included a trip to Dachau "which was a very humbling experience" — before he and his friend David were on their way to Israel. "We were met at the airport in Tel Aviv by David's mom and brother and checked into the Diplomat Hotel on Dec. 23.

"That night," Brian adds, "I called my Mom (Ann Thomas of Rockport) to tell her I was in Tel Aviv." (Ann recalls she was somewhat surprised by that revelation . . .)

For Brian, the next several days were something of a whirlwind tour through the Holy Land, including a trip to the ruins of Caesaria on the Israeli coast — a major port during the days of Roman occupation — and a visit to Herrod's Palace, "totally reconstructed and now a restaurant."

On the beach, Brian added, "We dug up shards of glass and ancient pottery handles. They (the Israeli government) let you dig with your hands but no tools." He brought back pieces of glass and pottery as souvenirs of that experience.

"We were talking about the legacies of history while we were on the beach," Brian added, "and Corporal Gibson (a military attache to his friend's mother) picked up a pull tab and said, 'Here's the British legacy'."

The tour included Nazareth and the Church of the Annunciation, Capernum, Meggido — "what will be the valley of Armageddon" — Jericho, Masada ("You can still see the Roman encampments") and the Dead Sea which, Brian discovered, lives up to its reputation for saltiness and resultant buoyancy.

"I don't swim very well," he said, showing a photograph of himself floating on the Dead Sea, "but there I was Johnny Weismuller."

Christmas Eve included a trip to Bethlehem. "Christmas in America will never be the same." He described the city as being "very festive — a very carnival atmosphere." But he remembers also the visit to the Church of the Nativity to hear prayers and Christmas carols. "We had some coins blessed on the spot believed to be where Christ was born — that was a very humble moment."

There was also a trip to Jerasulem on Christmas Eve and a visit to the Wailing Wall where "I didn't see the sign that said 'No photographs,' so I took one. This man came running over and started hitting me and saying, 'No photos, no photos.' They said I was very fortunate they didn't take my camera away."

Christmas Day was spent in El Gorah, the Sinai, in Egypt, and the day after that, in Cairo. Brian remembers Cairo as the place where he and David "got lost looking for a place to eat."

Egypt included, naturally, visits to Gizah and the pyramids where Brian "played 'Lawrence of Egypt' and rode a camel." Brian's friend returned to Germany before the end of December (his leave was up) but Brian who had returned to Tel Aviv spent a few more days in the Holy Land. He and his friend's brother arrived in Germany on New Year's Eve and had a "big celebration — we went to bed and to sleep."

He spent a few more days in Germany including one memorable day when "we ate at a McDonald's, of all places."

Now, Brian adds, "I'm plotting my next European tour — if I can get away. David is getting married next summer and we would like one final, childish romp around the continent before he settles down."

As for Brian's future plans — they aren't all settled yet. "I'm a frustrated writer," he said. "I lettered in journalism in high school."

But in college he didn't pursue writing because "I had two things in mind — I was either going to the Naval Academy or I was going to be the next F. Lee Bailey." He actually secured congressional appointments for the Navy but was disqualified because of vision problems.

And by the time he got out of college, he wasn't too certain if he wanted to pursue a career in law.

But for the moment he's content working with his dad in the oil fields.

And dreaming about his next trip to Europe . . .

Consumers can support Olympics

Consumers in Missouri, Pennsylvania, Texas and Vermont will be able to purchase ski wear and support the U.S. Olympic Training Center (USOTC) at the same time.

"This special point-of-sale program gives consumers the opportunity to purchase Obermeyer ski wear at a fraction of the manufacturer's suggested retail price. With each purchase, Miller High Life will make a donation to the USOTC in the consumer's name," said Doug Roges, Miller High Life brand manager.

Ski wear, which identifies the wearer as "Proud Sponsors of the U.S.O.T.C.," includes caps, sweaters and parkas.

The company will promote the ski wear with point-of-sale material and local newspaper advertising inserts in the four states.

"As part of the newspaper inserts, we will include a bonus coupon worth $20 off the purchase price of the ski parka," Rogers said.

Rotarians receive service pins

Three Rockport Rotarians received pins for perfect attendance in a meeting highlighted by the presence of Rotary District Governor R. Gaylan Duncan at noon Wednesday.

Vann Taylor, himself a past district governor and Paul Harris Fellow, received a pin from Duncan for 13 years of perfect attendance at Rotary meetings.

A five-year pin was presented to Calvin Scholz, a director of the Rockport Rotary Club, and a four-year pin went to Ed Beasley, a past president of the Rockport Rotary.

Duncan is president of Colonial Services Inc. which operates a chain of 13 funeral homes in South Texas. He was accomapnied to the meeting this week by his wife, Marie.

He began his talk to the Rotary members with an observance that "all the Rotarians in your club are the doers in your community" noting, "I have found this to be true in most Rotary clubs."

He outlined for local Rotarians some of the activities of Rotary International, the Rotarians' parent organization which boasts nearly 1 million members in more than 20,000 clubs in more than 150 countries, and he cited goals and projects for the coming year, including a goal of a net gain of four new members for the Rockport Rotary.

"I feel you will live up to the theme of Rotary," he told those present: "Share Rotary and serve people" through community involvement.

Among plans for the coming year is the District Rotary Conference in Victoria April 5-7 and an exchange program with the Rotary District 701 in Canada that will bring five young men from that district to South Texas in late February or March.

Next fall, Duncan said, District 593 — which includes the Rockport club — will have the opportunity to send five young men and a Rotary sponsor from this area to the Canadian district for a return visit.

Junior Varsity whips Flour Bluff 28-0

THE PIRATE JV WON 28-0 Thursday night against Flour Bluff, taking their second district victory. Above, James Huff carries the ball on his way to his second touchdown of the night, in the third quarter. In addition to Huff's two touchdowns, Todd Billeiter scored late in the third and John Solis made all four point-after attempts. Coach Tom Carrerra summed up the JV victory — "They played real good ball, especially the line. They didn't make many mistakes out there and it was a team effort." In other Thursday night action, the Pirate freshmen lost 32-0 to Flour Bluff in a tough game that left four players injured, one of which, Haun Ngo, was hospitalized with a severe chin cut and possible concussion. The Pirate freshmen are 1-1 in district play.

Area fishing report

Beach Road Bait House — 729-8614 —Some nice trout off the pier — "better than keepers." Sheephead and, believe it or not, a flounder caught in a cast net. Reds are too little to keep. Plenty of live bait over the weekend — perch and shrimp.

Key Allegro — 729-2761 —"Pretty good this week." Lot of snapper activity 8-10 miles out and plenty of reds and trout from the bays, around Mud Island. No report of billfish. Plenty of frozen bay and offshore bait.

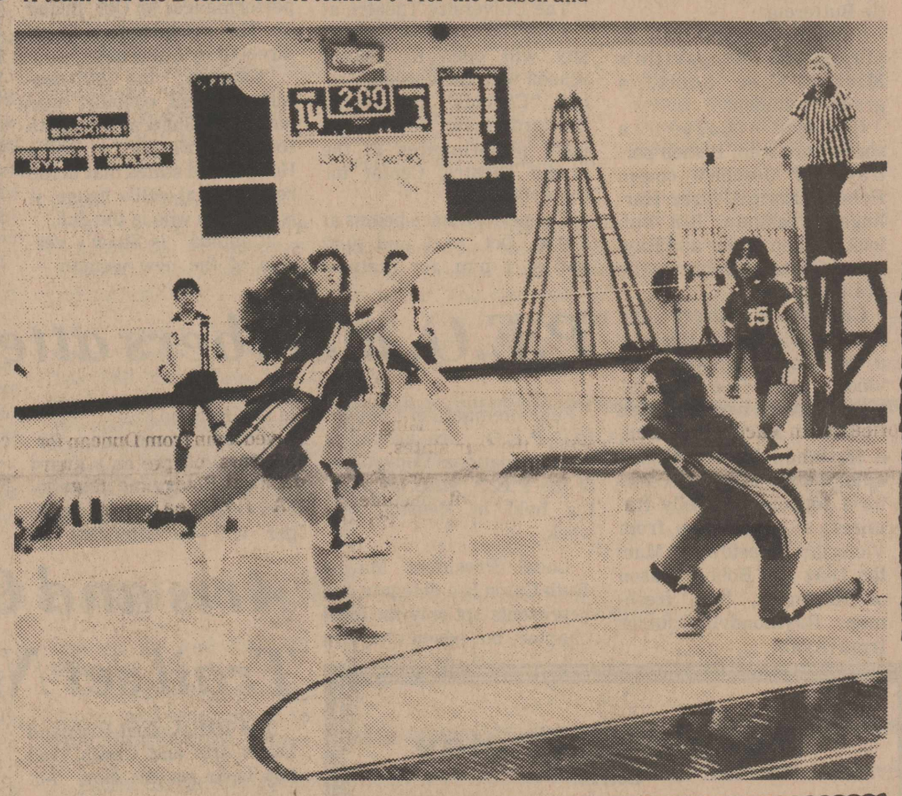

Sea Gun — 729-2341 —"Been catching some pretty good fish this week." Reds and trout in the 4-5-pound range. Mostly charter boat catches in Copano, St. Charles and Mesquite Bay. Live bait for the weekend.

Fulton Harbor Bait — 729-8532 —Some nice croakers off the wall. Live bait for the weekend.

Sandollar — 729-8562 —Real good from midnight - 5:30 a.m. Trout and croakers off the pier on live and dead bait. "More than enough live bait for the weekend." Live mullet and perch.

Palm Harbor — 729-8540 —Good out here. Better in the afternoons around 4-6 p.m. than in the mornings. Plenty of reds and trout caught. Planning to have live bait for the weekend.

THE TOUGH JV volleyball team had its winning streak broken Thursday night, losing to Sinton 13-15, 2-15. Above, second game action in the last minutes of play. Right, Johnie Jordon in action. This leaves the JV with a 11-4 season record and 2-1 for district. The team is coached by Sharon Niehues.

Texas A&I to produce 'H.M.S. Pinafore' Oct. 11

KINGSVILLE — Texas A&I University's music department will present the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta "H.M.S. Pinafore" Oct. 11-14 in Jones Auditorium.

Performances Oct. 11 and 12 are scheduled at 9 a.m. for area groups. Admission is $1 per student. Reservations should be confirmed in advance. Call 595-2803 for details.

Evening performances on Oct. 13 and 14 will begin at 8 p.m. General admission is $2, $1 for Texas A&I students with identification.

The two-act operetta is a delightful tale of love and inequities in social rank. Director Robert Scott has double-cast most of the key characters to give more students performing experience.

Kingsville sophomore Charlie Leon and Sammy Guiterrez, a senior from Bishop, will play Sir Joseph Porter, First Lord of the Admiralty. Eric Lopez and Casimiro Alanis play seaman Ralph Rackstraw.

Susan Holemon, a Ricardo teacher, and Kingsville senior Karen McNutt will be Josephine, the captain's daughter. Kingsville junior Kaye Robinson and Bishop sophomore Cynthia Sendejo play the peddler-woman, Little Buttercup.

Captain Corcoran will be played by Kingsville's Michael Lee Scott, a graduate student.

Carolyn Lacy, a sophomore from Bishop portrays Sir Joseph's cousin Hebe. Eluterio Alvarez, Harlingen freshman, Bill Bullock, Bishop junior and Raymond Garza of Hebbronville are the sailors.

Wide garden beds allow bigger harvest

Would you like to grow and harvest more vegetables from your garden without having to enlarge your gardening space? If so, try wide-bed planting to get higher yields of certain vegetables.

Wide-bed planting is nothing more than broadcasting seed over the top of your planting beds rather than seeding in single rows. This results in a more efficient use of space.

Not all crops are suited to wide-bed planting. Crops like tomatoes, peppers, squash, beans and potatoes must have adequate space to yield large amounts of quality produce.

But fast-maturing, small-space-requiring vegetables like spinach, lettuce, carrots, mustard, onions, turnips, beets and radishes are well-suited to broadcast planting. Individual plants grown closer together will probably not produce as much as they would have if they were spaced according to seed packet instructions, but the total volume of produce will be greater.

Before you form wide beds, till the soil to a depth of 6 to 10 inches and work in deeply 1½ to 2 pounds of 10-20-10 fertilizer per 100 square feet.

Work your soil into ridges and furrows. The ridges should be about 6 to 8 inches high and about 3 to 4 feet apart. Using the back of a garden rake, flatten the tops of the ridges until they're about 14 to 24 inches wide. Remove any large clods or debris from the seeding area.

To seed your wide bed, sprinkle the seed evenly over the bed surface. For especially tiny seed, mix the seed 50-50 with sand to make planting easier.

Using the back of a garden hoe, gently tamp the seed into the ground while the soil is still slightly moist. Seed will germinate better if it is in good contact with the soil. Cover the seed with soil from outside the planting area. Smoth the covering soil using the flat side of your rake, retamp the bed and water as needed.

Weeds may be an early problem and should be removed as they appear. As the vegetables grow larger, their close spacing will effectively shade out weeds. Thinning is usually necessary, since it is hard to broadcast the seed evenly and thinly enough at planting time. It is best to thin when the plants have developed their second set of leaves.

Keep your beds well watered and fertilized, and the result will be more produce in less space.

CCSU theatre opens season with comedy

The University Theatre at Corpus Christi State University will open its 1983-84 season with the classic comedy "Candida" by George Bernard Shaw Oct. 13 for eight performances at the Studio Theatre, Center for the Arts.

The performance begins at 8 p.m. Oct. 13-15 and 20-22 and at 2 p.m. for matinee performances on Oct. 16 and 23. The production is being directed by Sue Finely.

"Candida," the 19th century English comedy, was written by Shaw as a reply to Ibsen's Nora in "A Doll's House" and states that in the real, typical doll's house, it is the man who is the doll.

"Candida" is Shaw's version of the new woman — strong-willed, independent, self-assured, decisive. In the play, she must choose between the love of her husband, a clergyman, and that of a young poet of romantic temperament. "Candida" chooses between the two on the basis of her instinct and her love, not her honor.

The cast includes Keigh Newlin as Candida, David Martin as Morrell, Tom Smith as Marchbanks, Kelly Von Kinstley as Prosperine, John Wardashki as Lexy and Colin Sykes as Burgess.

General admission is $3. Advanced tickets may be purchased in the Center for the Arts office on the CCSU campus Mondays and Thursdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Fridays from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Phone reservations will be accepted the day of the performance only and on Fridays for weekend performances. For ticket information call the box office, 991-6931.

P.E.O. members attend international convention

Four members of Chapter EO, P.E.O., are attending the International Convention of the P.E.O. Sisterhood being held in Houston this week.

Local President Mamie Ruth Caton is a delegate and represents not only the local chapter, but seven chapters in San Antonio.

Margy Reese was appointed to serve as a guard at the convention. Dorothy Eastridge and Lois Stoudinger will be attending as visitors.

P.E.O. is an international organization of over 250,000 women who are interested in helping women achieve an education. In the 114 years since its founding, thousands of girls have received financial help, enabling them to get an education which would not have been possible otherwise.

Besides the Educational Loan Fund, there is an International Peace Scholarship program that is aimed at helping girls from foreign countries to attain advanced degrees so that they may return to their homelands to help their own people.

Cottey College in Nevada, Mo., is owned entirely by the P.E.O. Sisterhood and is a two-year college for girls.

The latest program is designed to help women who have left school and need to support a family.

P.E.O. saw this need and started a continuing education program.

The local chapter of P.E.O. was organized in October 1970.

By ANN THOMAS

Bananas are the topic. Did you know that unripe bananas contain a great deal of starch which is to a large extent changed into sugar as it ripens? A banana measuring 6½ inches long has 88 calories, 1.2 grams of protein, 0.2 grams of fat and 23 grams of carbohydrates.

Fresh bananas can be used in varying degrees of ripeness which enhances their use by lengthening the time between purchasing and using them either in their natural state or in a recipe. This compensates somewhat for the price we pay for them.

Remember that years old song "You must never put bananas in the refrigerator . . . cha-cha-cha?" Forget that. If you don't want them to ripen quickly go ahead and do it. The skins may become very dark causing you to think that all is lost. Don't throw the fruit away before first peeling it to be sure its past salvaging. To keep an unpeeled banana from darkening sprinkle it with lemon juice. If it's to be used in a salad with a cream dressing just dab the excess juice off with a paper towel.

BANANA MEAT LOAF
- 2 pounds ground meat
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 tablespoon instant minced onion
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce
- 2 cups soft bread crumbs, lightly packed
- 1½ cups ripe bananas

Mix all of the ingredients lightly with the exception of the bananas. When this is done, add the fruit and mix lightly. Using a 9-inch by 5-inch by 3-inch loaf pan press the mixture into it and bake in 350 degree oven for 1 hour. Yields six servings.

WALDORF SALAD
- 3 large firm bananas
- 2 large red apples with peel
- ¾ cup chopped walnuts
- ½ cup mayonnaise

Slice the bananas in 1/8-inch slices. Chop the apples into bite-sized pieces; add the nuts and mix with dressing. Place on fresh spinach or lettuce leaves. Yields six servings.

BANANA BREAD
- 1¼ cups flour
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ½ cup shortening
- 2 large, very ripe bananas
- 2 medium eggs

Sift dry ingrdients together. Cut in the shortening. Puree or mash thoroughly the bananas and add along with eggs which have been beaten. Using a greased and floured pan (9 inches square) bake in 350 degree oven 35 minutes. Loosen edges and cool on rack before cutting.

TIPPSY BANANA IN A BLANKET PIE
- Pastry for double pie crust
- 8 ripe bananas, cut in halves and then lengthwise
- ¾ cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons nutmeg
- 4 tablespoons rum
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 tablespoon milk

Line bottom of the pan with pastry, then line it with bananas. Mix the sugar and nutmeg then pour evenly on the fruit. Sprinkle with the run and dot with the butter. Cover with the top layer of pastry and dot with the butter. Cover with the top layer of pastry then brush with milk. Bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes, then at 350 degrees for another 15 minutes. Serve warm or cold with or without whipped topping.

Some simple ways to use bananas are:

Alternate a layer of butterscotch pudding with sliced bananas, crushed heath bars or peanut brittle. Top with whipped cream.

Combine sliced bananas with shredded coconut and fresh orange slices or mandarin oranges. Or just use a little undiluted frozen O.J.

Sliced bananas with chocolate syrup drizzled over and salted nuts sprinkled on.

Banana and peanut butter sandwich.

One last thing: recipes in which bananas are fried usually mean for you to see the plantation bananas which are those large, mostly green things that look like . . . what else? A banana.

Spiced grapefruit a unique gift idea

The custom of sharing gifts with friends has existed for thousands of years. It has survived through the ages and is revitalized each year with the celebration of birthdays and various holidays.

The idea of giving a very personal gift, one homemade, has always been cherished. Nothing is considered more special, creating a very warm feeling for both the giver and the receiver. With the creation of Sweetly-Spiced Ruby Reds, a delightfully delicious taste of sunshine can now be shared with friends and family.

The Sweetly-Spiced Ruby Red recipe is very unique. Whereas the flavor of spice comes from cinnamon and clove, much of the sweetness comes naturally — from the Ruby Reds themselves! These Ruby Reds come from the lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas. In a sub-tropical climate, the grapefruit mature on the tree, producing fruit that is sweet and full of juice. They are also filled with nutrition. Grapefruit are rich in Vitamin C and have the added bonus of Vitamin A. Texas Ruby Reds also contain good amounts of potassium while being low in both sodium and calories.

During the Texas grapefruit season from October to May, this easily prepared recipe can be enjoyed over and over again. Packaged in a variety of containers, it can be added to a gift basket of fruit or presented just by itself. Your gift can then be enjoyed by adding the spiced grapefruit sections to a party condiment tray or gracing the serving platter of a favorite fish or chicken dish. In most cases though, they will probably be enjoyed straight from the jar. No matter how you serve them, Sweetly-Spiced Ruby Reds will become a favorite.

For the Sweetly-Spiced Ruby Red recipe, you will need to section several grapefruit. To simplify the sectioning procedure, follow these guidelines. Using a sharp knife, cut off both ends of the grapefruit, cutting all the way through to the flesh of the fruit. Then with the fruit standing on end, cut the peel away, cutting from the top to the bottom of the fruit in about 1-inch strips. Be sure to cut deep enough to remove all the white pulp. To release the sections, cut down beside the membrane of each section to the core, gently turning the knife sideways several times to loosen the section at the center. Then turn the knife the opposite direction to loosen the section on the other side and turn out. Other sections are now easily removed in the same manner.

SWEETLY-SPICED RUBY REDS
- 5 Texas Ruby Red grapefruit
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 cup white vinegar
- 1 teaspoon whole cloves
- 2 sticks cinnamon

Peel and section grapefruit over a bowl, reserving juice. Pack sections into jars and set aside.

Combine ½ cup grapefruit juice and remaining ingredients in a saucepan; bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Strain to remove spices. Pour hot liquid into jars, covering sections completely. Cover and cool at room temperature. Refrigerate overnight before using.

SWEETLY-SPICED GRAPEFRUIT makes a unique homemade gift for birthdays, holidays or any occasion.

Food

Enriched pasta is an important source of vitamins

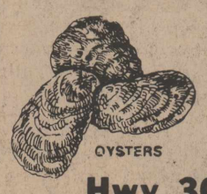

Pasta, like other grain products, has a bad image — everyone seems to think pasta is fattening! As with all foods, what we put on, or with the food, and how much we eat is what makes the food "fattening."

Pasta is no more caloric than many other foods we consume daily. One cup of tender cooked spaghetti provides 155 calories compared to a hamburger bun at 120 calories.

Enriched pasta is also an important source of the B vitamins such as thiamin, niacin and riboflavin, as well as iron. Some protein is provided by pasta products, but it is not a major source of protein in the diet.

Pasta, which includes macaroni, spaghetti and noodles in hundreds of shapes and sizes, is usually made from duram wheat. This hard wheat produces a product that holds its shape well during cooking.

EPA grants $4 million for Las Cruces wastewater treatment plant

Through the awarding of a grant, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has given Las Cruces, N. Mex., more than $4 million dollars to build a new wastewater treatment plant.

The grant for $4,132,711 is the federal share of the first phase of an improvement project that is expected to cost $20 million when completed. The total price of this phase of the project is expected to be $5,275,827 with a state share of $659,208 and the local share at $483,908.

The New Mexico Environmental Improvement Division (NMEID), the state's population control agency, ranks community wastewater treatment plant projects according to need on what is commonly called the state's "priority list," and the EPA funds these projects accordingly.

Dick Whittington, EPA Region 6 Administrator, said, "EPA is funding this project because the present plant is overloaded and can't handle the treatment demands on the plant brought about by increased growth in the area during the past several years.

"This is a segmented grant because major projects of this kind are too costly to fund entirely in one fiscal year. The Las Cruces project will be funded by five separate, segmented grants over the span of the project," Whittington added.

The first phase of the project is scheduled to begin in March 1984, and the new plant is expected to be operating sometime in 1987. To help cut costs, the new plant will use some of the existing structures.

The federal grant pays 75 percent of the eligible costs of the project. Projects using alternative or innovative technology are eligible for 85 percent federal funding of that technology. Alternative technology is technology that is proven but is not conventional wastewater treatment technology. Innovative technology is totally new technology.

The Las Cruces project uses alternative technology — so that part of the project is eligible for 85 percent funding.

The alternative technology in the Las Cruces project is the anaerobic digestion of sludge in which micro-organisms digest raw sludge, turning it into harmless, inert material. The sludge is used for land application wherein it is plowed into soil to a depth of three to four inches. The sludge, which is then covered with soil, decomposes to a stable state, providing nutrients that enrich the soil.

The methane gas produced from the sludge during the digestion process will run a generator for a boiler on the plant site that heats water which flows into a heat exchanger. The heat exchanger keeps the sludge at a constant, controlled temperature so the sludge-digesting micro-organisms can work at maximum effectiveness. The methane gas operation is part of the fundable alternative technology at the plant.

EPA's grants program is authorized in the Clean Water Act of 1977, an amendment of the Clean Water Act of 1972, the original water pollution control law enacted by Congress at that time.

Jackson Seafood lease "to get the benefits of the slip we are presently leasing." He added that in his opinion a pier in that area would be of benefit to the public as well as to Jackson Seafood.

Commissioner David Maguglin pointed out the ACND could not act on Jackson's requests Tuesday because they were not on the agenda, adding, "I think we should bring it up at the (Oct. 18) workshop meeting."

Commissioners voted unanimously to post a "no trespassing" sign on navigation district property at the Fulton Harbor boat ramp facility to prohibit the tying up of boats. The navigation district has received complaints from people trying to use the boat ramp because unauthorized boats tied in the area block access.

David Rittiman appeared before the commission to outline some problems he is having finding a place to dock his experimental boat and the commissioners suggested he get with Harbormaster Bernie DeForest.

A name change on the Nesloney lease in Cove Harbor was approved subject to the navigation commissioners receiving written confirmation from Nesloney's ex-partner that he is no longer involved in the lease.

Dominguez told the other commissioners he authorized purchase of marina operator's legal liability insurance coverage at a cost of $1,000 annual premium for $2,500 deductible coverage.

Workshop

the district consider the matter in a workshop session, to which Maguglin and the other commissioners agreed.

In other business relating to the Rockport Harbor rewiring project, the commissioners were told the plans and specifications for the project, being prepared by Goldston Engineers, still were not complete. Action was deferred until the regular session that will follow the workshop on Oct. 18.

The second item set for the Oct. 18 workshop was presented by Augustine, appointed earlier by Dominguez to study ways of increasing revenues from the district's recreational facilities.

In the district's budget as revised last month, Augustine noted, there was a $26,956.86 deficit in the recreational fund. "The problem, basically," he said, "is that harbors generate revenues but recreation doesn't."

Augustine noted the "most obvious" way to increase revenues would be to increase the district's ad valorem tax, but he added this is a "last resort."

Augustine made the following recommendations, which will be considered more closely at the workshop meeting:

— A current study by Texas A&M University of the beach should be reviewed in depth when it is completed.

— Representatives from the navigation district should approach officials of Rockport and Fulton regarding the feasibility of a hotel/motel occupancy tax with part of the revenues being given to the navigation district. Augustine said he is not certain whether such a tax could be levied by either city or if the proceeds — to be used to promote tourism — could be used by the navigation district.

— The navigation district should consider raising the cost to a "fair and equitable amount" on future leases of navigation recreational lands.

— The commissioners should consider asking the guaranteed return of a percentage of gross profits from special events held on the beach. Officials pointed out this is done with such events as the Bayfest in Corpus Christi.

— The navigation should "actively pursue" federal and state grants, seeking participation of Rockport and Fulton in the process.

— The district should "expedite completion" of the present grant program funding improvements to Rockport Beach.

— The district should designate one area for use by all special events and should devise a master plan for this area.

— A clean-up deposit should be required of all organizations using navigation district lands for special events.

Compost a natural garden fertilizer

By TED BRICE
"The Garden Editor"

This day and time we hear the word recycle used with almost everything. The gardeners have been recycling for hundreds of years by using compost.

There is no item in the original state that has a claim on the word compost. Compost is a decayed product of nature that has changed from its natural state into a decomposed state.

To understand the composting procedure, think of it as a way of speeding up the natural decomposition of organic waste material (plant, vegetable and fruit) by micro-organisms, such as fungi and bacteria which consume this waste and produce nutrient-rich compost. In the forest this process takes many years. There are packaged compost items made from animal manure, gin waste, rice hulls, sugar cane, pine, saw dust, etc.

You can make your own compost. This can be done by accumulating your grass clippings, leaves and garbage in what is called a compost pile. These items are added to a controlled pile and the decayed or composted material is removed from the botton of the pile. As the items decay the center of the compost pile builds up a very high heat and in some commercial companies piles of compost have caught fire with this extreme heat.

Composting microorganisms produce heat within the pile due to the excess energy they release. This in turn promotes faster composting. However, it is necessary to prevent this excess energy from escaping at a faster rate than it is generated.

Micro-organisms require water for reproduction and decomposition activities; therefore, the material must remain moist. It is necessary to regulate the moisture content which will vary with the type of material. Basically the moisture is sufficient when the surface of the particles glisten — the material should be as damp as a well squeezed-out sponge. You should check the moisture content frequently.

If there is an excess of high-in-carbon materials (dead leaves), extra nitrogen may be added as an activator. The best organic activators are packaged or animal manures, dried blood, real bone meal and hoof and horn meal.

Some commercial activators are high in nitrogen but chemically prepared (such as lawn fertilizer) and thus may adversely effect efficient natural organisms including earthworms. The resultant compost may also not have the same disease-resistant properties.

Most commercially prepared activators contain inoculants of several types of organisms, enzymes and hormones which have to be dissolved in water. This often makes the conditions too wet and causes an unpleasant putrid smell. These chemical preparations are not essential if local bacteria are present from garden soil. I recommend compost by Phostrogen, applied in powder form.

There are many homemade compost bins, some are very good but most lack several of the necessary items needed to make good compost. The English have been composting for many years and we can benefit from their years of experience.

The Barclay Rothschild Company of Toronto, Canada, is making this experience available to the gardeners of the United States by offering the "Soilsaver" and the "Rapitrotter" compost bins.

If you would like more information on these compost bins write "The Garden Editor" care of this newspaper.

Good gardening until next week from your garden editor, Ted Brice!

Ron Paul offers to help U.N. move

Congressman Ron Paul, sponsor of a bill to end U.S. participation in the United Nations, called "long overdue" the statement last week by Charles Lichenstein, a U.S. delegate to the international organization encouraging the Soviet Union to propose removing the U.N. from American soil if it is unhappy with the way the U.S. is fulfilling its obligations as host country.

The statement came in a heated exchange between the American delegate and a Soviet official who complained about the decisions of New York and New Jersey not to allow a Soviet jet carrying Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko to land at airports within those states. Rejecting a state department offer that his plane come to McGuire Air Force Base, Gromyko canceled his scheduled appearance at the General Assembly.

"The notion that we have been ill-mannered hosts is preposterous," Congressman Paul said. "We let them into our country to use the U.N. to disparage this nation and foment international discord. We allow them to remain, even when it is well-known that they use the U.N. as a nest for spies. Frankly, I can't imagine what more thay could want. If they think they could find more gracious hosts elsewhere, why, I'll help them pack their bags."

Congressman Paul called Lichenstein's response to the Soviets "completely appropriate under the circumstances and utterly refreshing. It is tremendously encouraging, after years of diplomatic doubletalk where the Communists' tender feelings are concerned. For decades we have listened in silence to Soviet tirades at the U.N. It's time that we encouraged them to leave."

Congressman Paul said he would "lose very little sleep" if the Soviets decided to urge their client-states in the U.N. to seek a new headquarters in some other country. "If they got together and decided that, say, Gdansk were a more suitable location and moved the U.S. to Poland, well, that would be just ideal. It would reveal the U.N. for the sham that it is."

The United States receives very few benefits from the U.N. presence on American soil, Congressman Paul said. Since the U.N.'s creation, American taxpayers have kicked in $10.7 billion, money which has been used for many anti-American activities. "I don't think we should sit around and wait for the Soviets to make up their minds on this matter," he said. "We should end our own participation in this international farce."

Mealy announces bid for Congress

GEORGETOWN — Georgetown attorney Chris Mealy has announced he is putting together his organization for an attempt to run for the 14th Congressional District seat now held by Bill Patman.

The 14th district includes Aransas County.

Mealy is a former prosecutor and assistant general counsel with Gov. Bill Clements. He said he has completed his filing with the Federal Election Commission to establish himself as a candidate and plans a formal announcement in the near future.

Agricultural trainees to go back to nature

What could be more enriching for beef, sheep, other livestock and grain producers than sharing agricultural and cultural ideas with student-trainees from other developed countries?

MAST International, an agricultural student-trainee program expects to place in 1984 more than 100 student-trainees, ages 20-26, that have agricultural schooling, have operated tractors and have handled beef, sheep or other livestock for at least two years.

These student-trainees from Australia, Denmark, England, Finland, France, Germany, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway and Sweden, can speak English and also plan to continue farming when they return home.

Interested families can host the trainees for one or more eight-month periods beginning Jan. 11-Sept. 10, 1984, for Australian, English and New Zealand beef and/or sheep trainees. Other livestock or crop only trainees are possible during this period.

The other periods are March 23 - Nov. 22, 1984, and/or Aug. 23 - March 22, 1984.

Trainees from all countries and for all kinds of farms and ranches are expected for these periods. The international student-trainee will work the same hours as the host family and in return, the student-trainee will learn about new systems of farming and/or ranching, the American culture and family and new agricultural methods and technologies related to his or her career goals.

MAST International, administered through the Agricultural Extension Service, University of Minnesota, has brought together 1,600 international student-trainees with more than 1,000 American agricultural producers and families since 1949.

According to one farmer who hosted a student, the experience was a positive one. "I spent the same number of hours as before on the farm without getting worn out, thanks to someone who was not only an exciting companion but also an experienced worker."

Families wishing to host must be willing to accept the trainee as a member of the family or production team, must be interested in the trainee as a person and as a representative from another country and be willing to provide training as well as experience and be able and willing to pay approximately $500 to $525 per month, provide room, board and laundry, plus appropriate work insurance.

A reciprocal program is also available for young Americans to these countries.

For an application form and further information contact Fred Hoefer, Agricultural Extension Service, 405W Coffey Hall, 1420 Eckles Avenue, St. Paul, Minn. 55108, telephone number (612) 373-0725.

TCU mascot keeps school on its toes

The horned toad may be a scarce creature these days, but not in Fort Worth — especially during football season.

The Texas horned lizard, or horned toad or frog as they've commonly called, is the designated mascot of Texas Christian University's Fighting Frogs. This tough critter who can survive the heat of the Lone Star State is the symbol of the school's athletic teams and thus the entire student body.

Not content with a masquerading cheerleader, Chancellor William Tucker wanted — and got — the real thing. However, he also needed to see to it that this very important campus frog could survive the rigors of captivity.

When biologist Dr. Gary Ferguson joined the TCU faculty nine years ago, he should have looked more closely at his job description. Hidden in the fine print may have been the requirement that the professor be expert in charge of keeping the TCU chancellor's personal horned frog alive and well — because that's what he's been doing the last couple of years.

"Horned lizards are extremely difficult to keep in captivity," Ferguson says. "That is one of the reasons they are protected by the Fish and Game Commission, and pet stores can no longer sell them."

One of the most interesting aspects, according to the biologist, "is that we have been unusually successful at keeping them by being willing to laboriously go after their preferred food — ants."

TCU's special pet lives in the student government office where everyone can drop by to admire him. He does, however, have to be "hibernated during winter months," Ferguson reports, until the right ants reappear.

The reason Ferguson was drafted for this unusual consultation is that he is an expert on lizards after studying them for 20 years. His real specialty, however, includes not horned frogs but chameleons — those little horned lizards that can change color, disappear to all but the most skilled eye when danger appears and shoot out their tongues up to twice their body length to catch unsuspecting insects for food.

Ferguson thinks he may well have the largest collection of chameleons in the country in his TCU labs.

Funny names have always tickled my giggle-box. I guess that's the reason I find the Bible a funny Book!

Every time I run across the names of those countries in the Bible I laugh, and wonder what they mean. There are the Canaanites and the Hittites, the Perizzites and the Amorites, the Ogites and the Nodites, and on and on, until after a while you expect to see "the terimites." As a kid with a wild imagination, I figured out the meanings of most of them.

The Hittites were obviously the first baseball players, and without a doubt, the Amorites were the lovers. Ogites were tall people with elongated vocal chords, who pronounced their "O's" more like "Aw". And sitting in the congregation listening to the preacher were the Nodites who responded with Z-Z-Z-Z-Z-Z! It's just a shame that we no longer have such enjoyable names around today. I've thought up a few for the present.

How about "Fadites" for all those folks who jump at every fad that comes along — from exercise to diets — from religions to fashions? "Loafites" would make a nice handle for those who are allergic to work. Those who form their own exclusive little worlds could be called "the Clickites." With the growing desire to get something for nothing in our casinos and lottery systems, how about a name like, "Freebite" for the gamblers?

I guess I had better round this thing off before I get somebody mad — like the Crabites. Anyway, I'm glad that God gave me a Book that's not boring. (He probably thinks some things are funny too!!)

YOU AND YOUR HEALTH

by Peter J. Esse, M.D.

Dear Dr. Esse: My father has cancer of the lungs. I've appreciated everything our doctor has done in making the diagnosis and taking care of him. But there's this exception. He has taken away all hope. He has told my father he can expect to live no longer than six months. I think every patient, dying or not, has the right to cling to hope. Don't you agree that the doctor shouldn't have been so sure my father would be dead within a few months? Mrs. L.

Dear Mrs. L.: Perhaps your father, for business or other reasons, insisted on knowing how long he could expect to live. But even so, there should always be hope. In addition, his doctor might have said, "But we'll give you medicines to alleviate pain and keep you comfortable," or "I will not abandon you. I'll still come around to visit you and help."

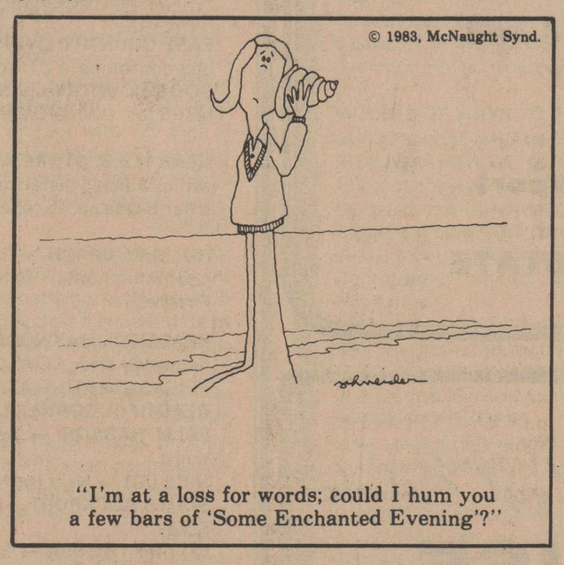

There's an excellent commentary in JAMA (9/25/81) on hope by Howard Brody, M.D. Here are some excerpts:

"It is possible to tell the patient his true diagnosis in such a way as to leave him and his family emotionally devastated." (As in your father's case, Mrs. L.) — "We also know that the physician is placed in a pivotal role to influence the patient's ideas and emotions for better or for worse." (We believe that doctors should not forget this.)

Doctors should also keep reminding themselves: "One does not have to practice medicine for long before one becomes aware of the profound emotional impact that our most innocent, off-handed remarks can have on our patients."

We agree, Mrs. L., that patients like your father need all the hope that we can instill, especially when the prognosis is poor.

LAFFS

"I'm at a loss for words; could I hum you a few bars of 'Some Enchanted Evening'?"

"A man ought to read just as inclination leads him, for what he reads as a task will do him little good."
Samuel Johnson

Softball was developed in 1887 in Chicago and was originally designed as an indoor game.

When Harvard College was founded in 1636 it was surrounded by a tall stockade to keep out prowling wolves.

As a child, England's Queen Victoria was nicknamed "Drina."

Lyndon B. Johnson was the first President to be sworn into office on an airplane.

SHELLAC SAVER — Once it's been opened, store unused shellac in glass bottles to help prevent it from turning stiff and gummy. It's the metal container that often causes the resin in shellac to become solid.

FLAVORFUL — If you really want to taste the vanilla flavor in your cooking, double the amount of vanilla called for in your recipe.

FREEZER TIP — Easiest way to make sure all the air is out of your freezer-bound packages is this: insert a straw into the plastic bag, close the bag and suck out the air. Quickly remove the straw, twist the bag and seal.

RISE ABOVE IT — If you've any doubts about your yeast outliving its shelf life, give it a test before using. One teaspoon dissolved in a little lukewarm water with a bit of sugar should start to foam lightly in about 5 minutes. If it doesn't, discard the yeast.

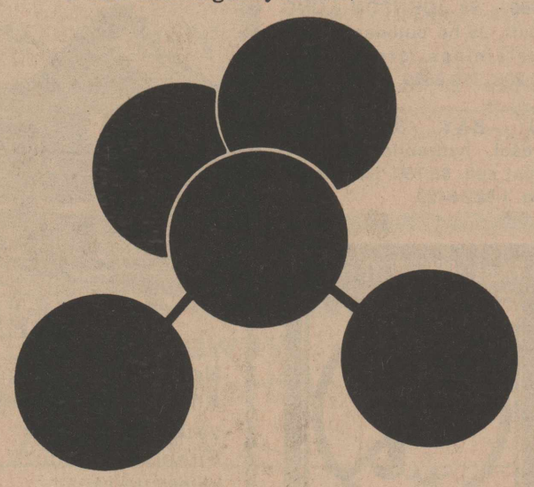

HAIR OF THE DOG — To help garments shed animal hairs, run them through a dryer cycle set on cool or no-heat.

WAX JOB — After baking a batch of waffles, let the iron cool slightly and then lay a piece of waxed paper across the bottom grid before closing. It will help prevent sticking when you next use it.

HIGH AND MIGHTY — If you beat 1 teaspoon of white vinegar into 4 or more egg whites, they'll hold their shape beautifully when beaten stiff. It's a good idea when making meringues.

TROUBLE SPOTS — A guide to working on those unsightly perspiration stains: sponge old stains with white vinegar, recent ones with ammonia; then rinse and launder in water as hot as fabric can tolerate. For stubborn stains, soak in warm white vinegar.

Natural Gas Methane Molecule

Natural Gas Fuels Autos

Natural gas is an attractive alternative to gasoline as a fuel for fleet vehicles and may become the fuel of the future for millions of private cars, according to the American Gas Association.

Compressed or liquefied natural gas is cleaner burning than gasoline, costs much less, and has a proven safety record.

Today more than 30,000 cars and trucks run on natural gas in the United States.

Studies show that natural gas vehicles are safer than those powered by other fuels. A 1979 survey of major natural gas-powered fleet vehicles operating between 1970 and 1979 showed that there were no failures or fires involving natural gas systems in over 1300 collisions involving natural gas fueled vehicles.

On the national average, natural gas today costs the equivalent of approximately 95 cents per gallon of gasoline when used as a transportation fuel, compared to an actual national average gasoline price of $1.25 per gallon.

In addition to the cost advantage, an American Gas Association (A.G.A.) study has found that a natural gas fueled vehicle produces 0 to 40 percent of the air emissions of a gasoline powered vehicle.

The conversion of the nation's seven million fleet vehicles which now consume 650,000 barrels of oil per day would require approximately 1.4 trillion cubic feet (Tcf) of gas—about seven percent of the present natural gas consumption in the United States and about seven percent of the total transportation fuel market. Conversion of these vehicles to natural gas could save more than the 650,000 barrels in oil imports per day at a savings in foreign energy payments of about $7 billion annually.

Expanded use of natural gas as a vehicle fuel could be an important step toward ending U.S. reliance on foreign oil.

A natural-gas powered vehicle also has many advantages over an electric car:

- A natural gas vehicle can be refueled in 5 minutes vs 8 hours to 12 hours recharging time for an electric car.
- A natural gas vehicle's top speed is the same as a gasoline-powered vehicle vs 40 mph to 50 mph top speed for an electric car.
- Standard passenger capacity for the natural gas car vs current four passenger capacity for electric cars.

Ford Motor Company recently developed a sporty two-passenger urban car with an engine designed to operate solely on natural gas.

Bill Patman briefs

The Federal Reserve System has suspended penalties for early withdrawal of time deposits by bank customers affected by Hurricane Alicia, according to Congressman Bill Patman.

However, the new regulations apply only in counties designated as disaster areas by the president.

A depositor will not be penalized for withdrawing money from a time deposit before maturity if he can show he suffered propperty or other financial loss as a result of Hurricane Alicia. This provision will remain in effect through Feb. 18, 1984.

The regulations affect depositors in nine Texas counties — Brazoria, Chambers, Fort Bend, Galveston, Harris and Matagorda. Matagorda and part of Brazoria counties are in Congressman Patman's 14th District.

for Upgrading Residential Bathrooms in the Eighties

In-Room Spa for Homes and Apartments is No. 1 Amenity

A complete ThermaSol Ultima Spa fits in the same space as a conventional bathtub, yet includes a combination steambath, shower and whirlpool jet tub, all enclosed with acrylic walls and ceiling and sliding glass doors. The self-contained, modular Ultima Spa is easy to install and is available in three basic sizes — 5' x 30½", 5' x 42" and 6' x 36" — also coming in a variety of colors to match most bathroom fixtures. For further information, write to: ThermaSol, Ltd., Dept. MS, ThermaSol Plaza, Leonia, NJ 07605.

The consensus of America's home and apartment owners is that the in-room spa is the number one amenity they want in their bathrooms in the '80s.

A beautiful and practical addition to any home and apartment, the spa consists of a steambath, shower and whirlpool jet tub. Previously thought of mainly as a luxury item, it now has been placed within the reach of the average home-owner through the engineering efforts of the world's leader in the field.

Manufactured by ThermaSol, Ltd., which has been producing residential and commercial steambath and whirlpool jet tub equipment for nearly 25 years and has installed them in 19 countries in addition to the United States, the new unit is called the Ultima Spa, and it sells for little more than half the cost of any combination of its components from other sources.

Created with the high-style '80s in mind, the Ultima Spa is a self-contained modular unit featuring a steambath, shower and whirlpool jet tub, all enclosed with acrylic walls and ceiling and sliding glass doors. It comes in a great variety of colors to match most other bathroom fixtures, and as an added plus, its steam device allows a fragrance to be dispensed during use, if the bather wishes.

When a whirlpool is desired, the tub is filled to a level above its six adjustable hydro-massage jets, and a 3/4-horsepower motor turned on to create a steady and soothing flow of water and air through ThermaSol's patented one-pipe combination feed. Once the bather is in the tub, the mixture can be changed as desired by a convenient air-intake manifold control mounted inside for easy access.

The home and apartment owner also need not worry about any special construction in connection with installation of the Ultima Spa. Each one is individually packaged with factory-assembled and tested plumbing to eliminate job-site costs of putting it together. Because Ultima Spas are modular and self-contained, walls and floors of the bathroom are safe from steam condensation, and tile grout also remains unaffected.

The steambath involves a tap onto a water pipe, and a line run from the steam generator to the outlet in the tub. Electrical installation requires a 220-volt 20-amp circuit. The steam generator may be located above the Ultima Spa in the attic area, in a closet or in the basement, up to 50 feet away.

Additional information is available by writing to ThermaSol, Ltd., 15148 Bledsoe St., Sylmar, CA 91342, or by calling toll-free (800) 423-2477.

Missionary Sam Borde to speak at Fulton Community Church

FULTON — Sam Borde, a missionary from India, will be speaker at the 10:45 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. services of the Fulton Community Church Sunday, Oct. 9.

This is a return visit to the Fulton church by Brother Borde who is a native of India and is supported by the church in his missionary work.

Brother Borde travels throughout south India overseeing churches in that part of the country. He also operates an orphanage and a Bible school. Only about 1 percent of India's population are Christians.

The Rev. Richard Giller is pastor of Fulton Community Church.

THE NEW SHAPE of Fulton Community Church is shown in this photo. Patricia Giller, wife of the Rev. Richard Giller, pastor of the church, says the congregation hopes to be in the new sanctuary by the first of the year. The church borrowed money to finish construction of the new sanctuary and is now in the process of raising funds — and any donations — to pay off the loan.

Baptist Young Women collect for orphanage

The Baptist Young Women of Rockport First Baptist are collecting items to be sent Oct. 15 to the Matamoros Baptist Orphanage.

Items may be placed in the box set up in the church foyer. The orphanage needs rice, flour, sugar, pinto and refried beans, soap, deodorant, toothbrushes, toothpaste, hairbrushes and combs, first aid supplies and insect spray.

Methodist women hold bazaar workshop

The women of First United Methodist Church will have a bazaar workshop at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the church's recreation room.

The bazaar is set for Nov. 9 this year and a change has been made: instead of the sidewalk cafe, this year's bazaar will feature a "buffeteria" serving a chicken spaghetti lunch.

Plans made for antique show and sale

VICTORIA — Plans are being made for the annual Antique Show and Sale sponsored by the Women of St. Francis Episcopal Church of Victoria and set for Oct. 21, 22 and 23.

The 13th annual show will be at the Victoria Community Center and will feature antique dealers from a wide area of the country. The show is the sole fund-raising project for the Women of St. Francis Church who receive their profits from sales of tickets, baked goods and New England handwoven baskets which are available at the show.

Tickets may be obtained in advance from any member of the Women of St. Francis Church or from the church office between 9 a.m. and noon on weekdays.

Laity Sunday is Oct. 9

Laity Sunday will be observed this week, Oct. 9, at First United Methodist Church, with lay members of the church being in charge of the services.

The church Council on Ministries will meet at 7 p.m. Monday at the church.

What's your excuse this Sunday?

The following was sent to us from First Baptist Church of Rockport. Although it is from a church in another city, it could apply equally here.

Damascus United Methodist Church has planned a special "No Excuse Sunday" for Oct. 18.

According to the church newsletter, special provisions will be made for those who always have a good excuse for not getting to church on Sunday mornings.

Cots will be provided in the narthex for those who insist that Sunday is their only day to sleep. A section with lounging chairs will be available for those who find the pews too hard. For those who stayed up late on Saturday partying or watching television, there will be a supply of Murine.

For those who insist that "the roof would cave in" if they showed up at church, construction helmets will be provided. For those who find the building too cold or too hot, there will be blankets and fans. Those wishing to list the hypocrites present will be given score cards, and for those who like to visit on Sundays there will be plenty of relatives and friends.

Some people cannot make it to church because they must cook Sunday dinner; for them the ubiquitous TV dinner.

The sanctuary will be decorated with poinsettias and Easter lillies for those who have never seen the church without them, and clocks will be prominently situated for those who must time the service so as to be home for the football game.

Services will be held at 8:30 a.m. and 11 a.m.

Young Life to aid parking during SeaFair

Members of Aransas County's Young Life organization will be doing their part to ensure the success of this weekend's SeaFair by directing parking around the SeaFair grounds.

Young Life is an interdenominational organization for young people in the community. Its purpose is to introduce adolescents to the person of Jesus Christ and His relevance to life today.

The hour-long meetings of the organization consist of singing, skits and conversation with Young Life leaders who are interested and involved in the activities and problems of the youth.

Walking in the light

By the Rev.
BARNETT RENFRO
Pastor, First United Methodist Church

To walk in the light means that we confess our sins without reserve. Sometimes we do not really confess our sins, but admit our sins more than confess them. Or maybe, we seek to explain or excuse them away.

We think of the evil nature we have inherited, that's the reason for our sins. We think of the defects in our education or up-bringing, that's the reason for our sins. We think of our weak nature or our quick temper.

We do not deny what we have done, but we do not confess it either. To walk in the light requires us to accept our responsibilities without reserve, to own our sin that we may be able to disown it. The person who makes up their mind not to confess their sins, but to understand their sin and to explain it, is walking in darkness.

Finally, to walk in the light means that when we confess our sins to God we do not keep a secret hold of them in our hearts. When there is something hidden in our heart, hidden from God the darkness is as deep as it can be.

Maybe someone has wronged you and you are waiting for them to make that right. You will say, "Someday that so-in-so will make it right with me, someday that person will confess their sin." Why wait on someone else? Why not confess your sin now? There can be no cordial Christian overflow from the heart to others as long as you are holding on to that kind of attitude.

Walk in the light and you shall know the blessings of God.

Some 28 quarts of gumbo were auctioned off for an average of $16.52 per quart following the final day's judging of the 1981 World Championship Gumbo cookoff. The exhibitors

Fran Rogers

Corpus Christi native Fran Rogers has been exhibiting her oil paintings — primarily seascapes and scenes of the South Texas area — in Rockport's SeaFair for three years.

Two years ago, she moved her gallery from Port Aransas to Holiday Beach. She has been paintings for eight years and believes that being a native to this area gives her a special feeling for her paintings of the Texas beach area that is her "first love."

She has just completed a successful showing in the Corpus Christi Bayfest; her paintings have been shown throughout Texas and have been placed throughout the U.S. and Europe.

Jean Levering

Jean Levering of Smithville has been making hand-thrown stoneware and porcelain pottery for over 10 years.

She studied art at the University of Texas and has exhibited in faculty-student art shows at the University Art Museum.

SeaFair is one of her favorite arts and crafts shows and she has attended each year for the past several years. Her booth in Tent G will feature casseroles, bowls, cups, vases and other items.

Mrs. Newsom is a native of Pleasanton and the "crafts" half of the team. She has been collecting craft items since 1978 when she took it up as a hobby. Mrs. Gallo makes the ceramics — and has been for 35 years. She has "a few pieces" on exhibit on consignment at the Candy Kitchen here in Rockport.

Their booth will be 7 in Tent F.

Rockport Home & Garden Club

The Rockport Home and Garden Club is sponsoring a plant booth at SeaFair. Each member of the club has grown 10 plants to be sold during the two-day festival.

The Rockport Home and Garden Club is involved in several civic beautification projects including providing the redwood boxes, shrub beds and garden maintenance at the Ski Basin Park; landscape of the triangle between Hwy. 35 and Fulton Beach Road; sponsorship of the Yard of the Month contest; and decoration of the Aransas County Public Library each year at Christmas.

The club raises funds with the sale of calendars, books and gift wrap as well as with the SeaFair plant booth.

The Seafood Producers Association won the 1976 Best Overall Parade Entry award and the Rockport-Fulton High School Band won the Special Appreciation award in that year's SeaFair parade.

Sandra Kinslow

Driftwood painting is the specialty of artist Sandra Kinslow of San Antonio.

The self-taught artist paints in both acrylics and oils but prefers the speed and versatility of acrylics best for the original subjects — nautical, rustic and wildlife — she paints on the pieces of driftwood she collects on fishing and beachcombing trips to the coast.

This year will be her third in Rockport's SeaFair. She has also shown in the Fiesta De San Antonio for the past four years, the Wurst Craft Show & Sale in New Braunfels and the River Art Show among others.

Earl Schultz

Another first-timer at Rockport's SeaFair this year is Earl Schultz, 22, of Houston, whose specialty is art glass — stained, leaded bevelled and etched.

Schultz has been working with art glass for three years. His interest in art goes back to age 7 when he did his first oil painting; since then he has worked in various media including watercolor, pen and ink and airbrush.

He holds an associate of applied science in drafting design technology from North Harris County College and plans to return to college to study art next year. He has exhibited in shows in Spring and Brookshire.

Mrs. Wilburn T. Toalson

Hand-quilted items are the specialty of Mrs. Wilburn T. Toalson, one of the first-time exhibitors in this year's SeaFair.

Married, the mother of three and grandmother of five, Mrs. Toalson "loves to quilt" and has been practicing the art/craft for the past 15 years. Her work will be in Tent I, booth 2.

Arlene Morgan

This is Arlene Morgan's fifth year to exhibit her oil paintings — featuring wildlife landscapes and still lifes — at Rockport's SeaFair.

A San Antonio native, she's lived in Corpus Christi for the past 10 years, has been painting for 15 and teaching her craft for nine years.

She's a member of the Art Community Center in Corpus Christi and has has one-woman shows at the Corpus Christi Museum, Bayfront Plaza and La Pasada Gallery and has a permanent collection in the Corpus Christi Museum.

Her exhibit of original oil paintings, minor paintings and potpourri will be in Tent A, booth 8.

Larry Machecek

Wooden toys and puzzles handcrafted by Larry Machacek of Porter will be featured in Tent F, booth 1.

Machacek, a self-taught artist, has been making wooden toys and puzzles for eight years. This will be his first year as an exhibitor during SeaFair.

He was born in Freeport in 1947, attended Brazosport High School and Sam Houston State University, where he majored in industrial arts.

Milton F. Krueger

Milton Krueger is a first-time exhibitor in Rockport's SeaFair and his display of original color photo prints will include not only his works but those of his daughter, Elizabeth, and son, Milton.

Self-taught, Krueger was an amateur photographer for 40 years then turned professional in 1982 when he retired from Armco. His business, Krueger Photographics of Pasadena, is now one month old.

He has exhibited his photographs in shows in Lake Buchanan, the Live Oak Art Festival in Columbus and will be at the Buchanan Gallery fall show in November.

Bear Creek Potters

Jim and Peggy Daniell, the Bear Creek Potters, are well-known to Rockport's SeaFair-goers. They've been exhibiting in the event every year since it began nine years ago.

Working in clay, the Daniells create wheel-thrown stoneware pottery and hand-sculpted works; no molds are used in the process. Their pottery is functional and decorative, their sculpture both realistic and fantasy.

The Daniells participate annually at the Texas State Arts/Crafts Fair in Kerrville as well as shows in Austin, Dallas, Corpus Christi and Houston. They are listed in the "Texas Monthly" Guidebook.

Manley Springs

A self-taught maker of furniture, Manley Springs uses a variety of wood, brass and nautical artifacts for his creations. A ship's door becomes a coffee table, the telegraph stanchion supports a dining table . . .

Players ready for SeaFair Doubles Tournament

The second annual SeaFair Doubles tournament scheduled for Oct. 8 and 9 is expected to be one of the highlights of this year's SeaFair weekend, according to Ike Boling. Boling is president of the Rockport Tennis Association, the SeaFair doubles sponsor.

Men and women's doubles, mixed doubles and consolation doubles are included in the program. There are two divisons in both men and women's doubles — age 39 and under and age 40 and older. Mixed doubles have no age divisions. All events are to be played the best two of three sets, with no add scoring to the semifinals and finals, then a 12-point tie-breaker at six all.

Trophies will be awarded to winners and runners-up in the three main divisions as well as to the winners in the consolation division.

Because of the large field of players, it is expected that most of the tennis courts in the Rockport area will be required for the tournament. Finals matches will be played Sunday afternoon at the Rockport Resort Tennis and Swim Club.

All players must register by 8 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 9, at the resort or 30 minutes before their scheduled match.

Art Weiss is tournament director, assisted by Boling, Mary John Lynch and Polly Bracht.

Arts, crafts — you can find it all at Rockport SeaFair

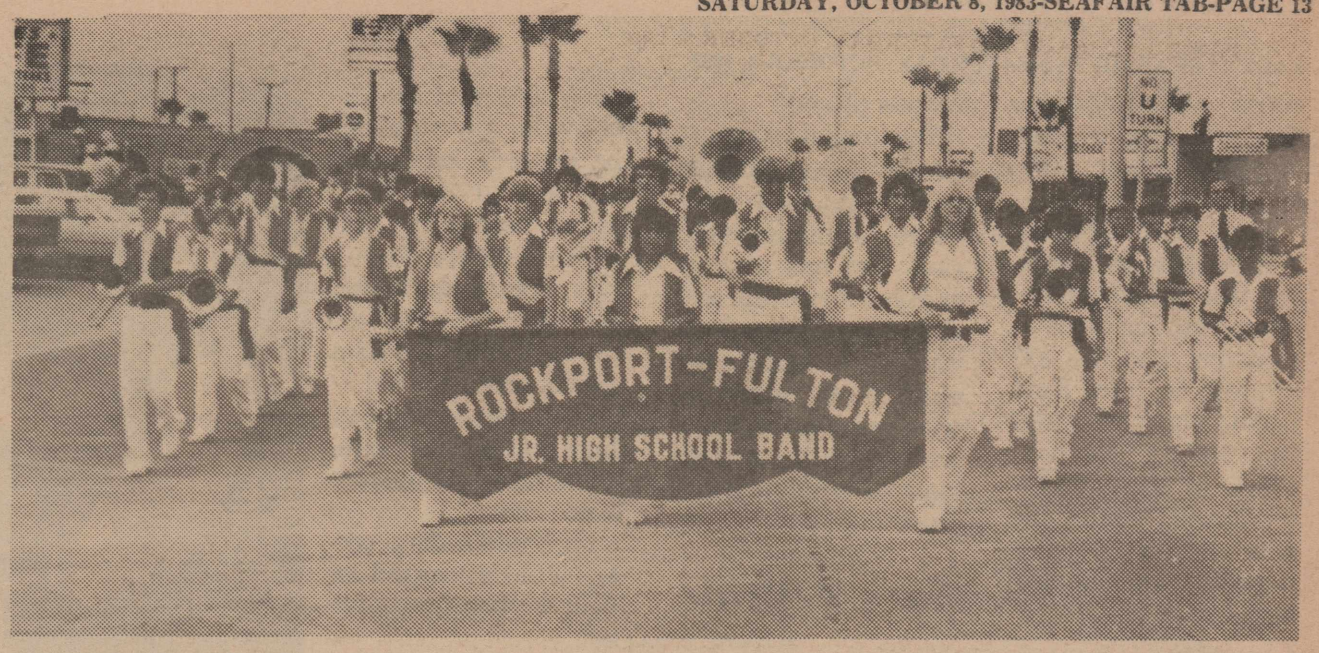

Owner of the Marlinspike Trading Co., Springs has been practicing his craft for five years, since he built a deck then tried to find furnishings for it — and made his own when he couldn't find anything that met his standards for quality and durability.

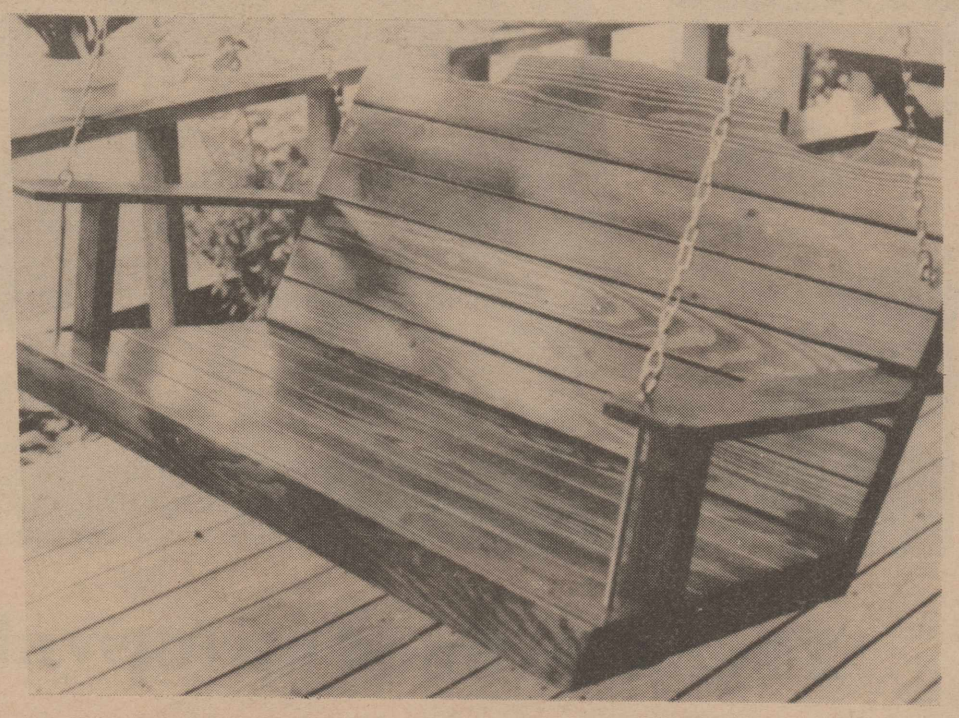

His Marlinspike company is located in Corpus Christi; this is Springs' second SeaFair as an exhibitor.

Ellen Weinstein

Hand-embroidered Mexican dresses are the offering of Ellen Weinstein, 33, of San Antonio, showing for the first time this year at a Rockport SeaFair.

She has been an artist/craftsman for two years and has exhibited at shows in Midland and Dallas.

Tom & Mary Musto

The specialty of Tom and Mary Ann Musto, exhibiting in their first SeaFair this year, is porch and deck furniture — swings, gliders and benches in both contemporary and old-fashioned designs.

Using fine redwood and heart white pine, Tom practices a craft he learned from his father, now 80 and still active in furniture craft.

Tom is a native of Tennessee, his wife of Washington State, but they consider themselves Texans, having lived here since 1967. They have exhibited in the Pecan Street Arts & Crafts Festival in Austin.

Crowds at Rockport's first SeaFair were estimated at around 10,000 or more. Last year's SeaFair VIII drew an estimated 45,000. Some have estimated as many as 60,000 may be here for this year's SeaFair IX.

Luke & Margie Wade

Luke Wade, accompanied by his wife Margie to this year's SeaFair, has been a photographer for five years.

This will be the first year for the Wades to exhibit in SeaFair, but they have entered shows of the San Antonio Art League, the Shepard Art League and Wichita Falls.

Wade has had an extension course on wildlife photography through the University of Houston.

Linda Berthelsen

A native Texan, Linda Berthelsen is no stranger to the Rockport area since her family, Don and Alice May Berthelsen, live on Key Allegro.

But this is the first time for her to exhibit her free-form weaving. A weaver for two years and needle craftsman for 10, Linda uses fibers to combine "traditional needlework technique, natural trea-

She is primarily self-taught although she did attend an off-loom weaving class in Houston. She has exhibited in the Fort Bend County Fair and the Kelsey Seybold Clinic in Missouri City, Texas., where she now resides with her husband and daugh-

Gertie Slosson

This year marks Gertie Slosson's sixth as an exhibitor at SeaFair.

Slosson has been painting in oils for the past 10 years and has exhibited in San Antonio, Houston, Kerrville, Victoria and Corpus Christi.

She turned to art after the last of her six children had left home, although she says she has always enjoyed drawing and sketching. She took classes weekly for eight years, studying with local teachers as well-known artists such as Windburg and Dick Turner.

Cory McBride

A weaver who works in handspun and naturally-dyed wools, Cory McBride has been practicing his craft for seven years — which is also the number of years he has been exhibiting in Rockport's SeaFair.

The Rockport SeaFair is just one of many arts and crafts festivals throughout the country in which the 36-year-old Floridian exhibits his works. "Our weavings are unique and varied," he says of his work, "using techniques centuries old." The actual weaving is done on a European horizontal tapestry loom.

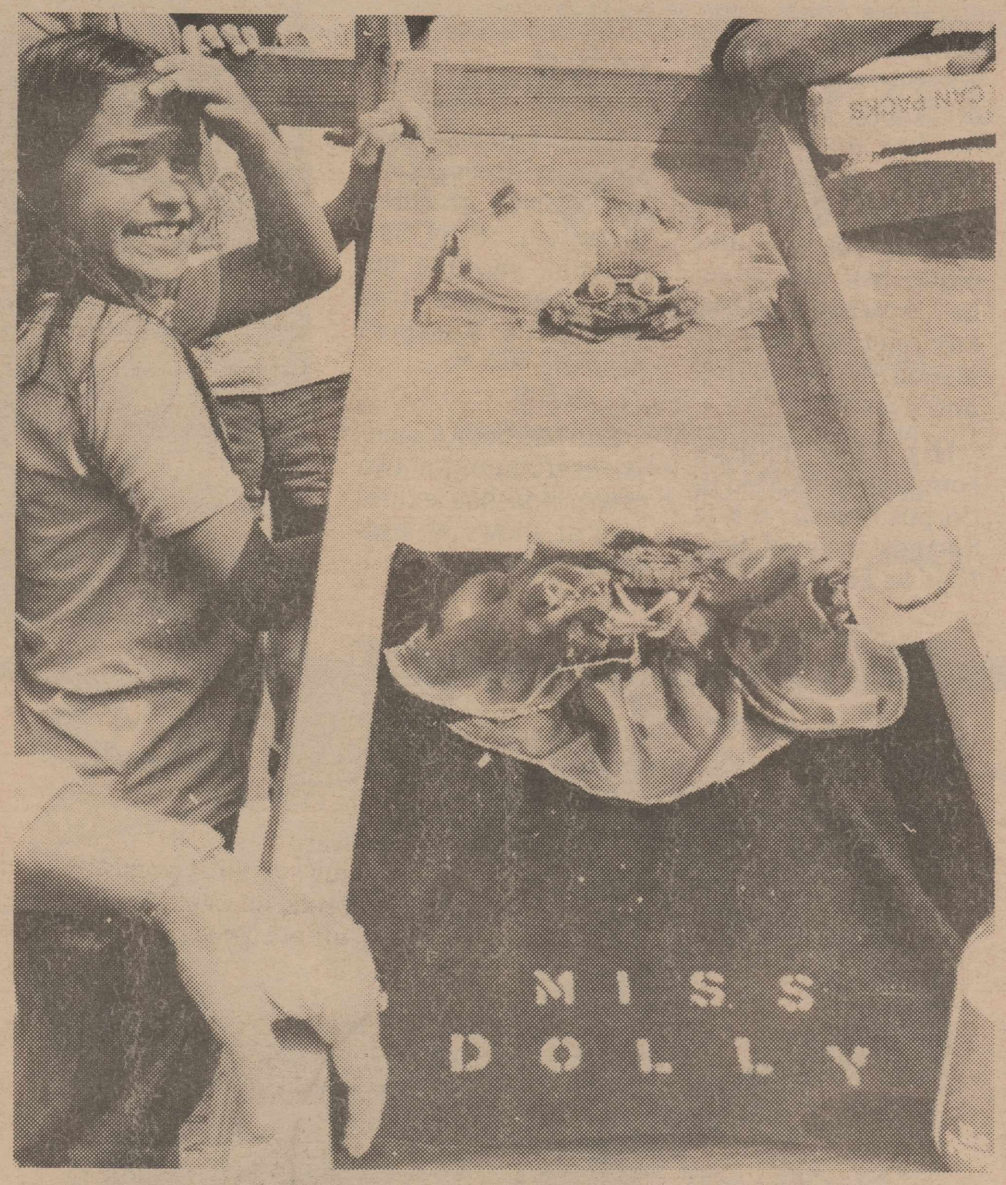

McBride's Zapotec Art will be located in Tent F, booths 9 and 10.

Cookoff winners

Rockport's first World Championship Gumbo Cookoff, held at the 1975 SeaFair I, was won by a Rockport mother/daughter team, Helen Ratliff and her mother Peggy as "Dusty Smith." The cookoff drew 36 entries from Rockport and nine other cities.

Smashing success

Bill Christian, credited with originating SeaFair, opened the 1975 ceremonies by smashing a champagne bottle on the bumper of his golf cart reportedly "purloined from Live Oak Country Club" for the occasion.

24 entries lined up for 9th annual crab races

Two of the most popular SeaFair events are the annual crab races and beauty contest. Twenty-four crabs have been entered in this year's races, which are set for 2 p.m. Saturday.

The crab beauty contest will follow at the same time on Sunday.

Crab race entries are "What-a-Crab," entered by Whataburger; "Cruiser," entered by Travel Gallery; "Super Sonic," entered by Sonic Drive-In; "Edgy," entered by Alfred Edge Co. Realtors; "Trixie," entered by Bobby W. Dear Debbie

DEAR DEBBIE:

I am a 62-year-old woman who just recently retired. My husband and I successfully raised our three children who, until recently, were out on their own. However, now my oldest daughter, at 34 years of age, has decided to move back in with us. She is getting a divorce and says she has nowhere else to turn. While I love her and feel very sorry for her, I am not thrilled with this situation. My husband is even less so. He feels she should go out and get a job. She has no children to worry about and should be able to support herself. However, since she moved in, it's like she's a teenager all over again. She sleeps until noon, drops her clothes and belongings wherever she feels like and doesn't lift a finger. She won't even do the dishes after dinner. How can I resolve this?

NO YOUNG MOM

DEAR MOM:

It's often difficult for a parent to stand by while a child is suffering. At the same time, it is rather foolish for a parent to believe he can pick up the pieces just like he did when the child was very young. A 34-year-old woman is an adult and should have full adult responsibilities. Frankly, I find her inconsiderate behavior incredibly immature. However, rather than come down hard on her, I would simply sit her down and gently explain that she cannot live with you. Don't make excuses, either. There must be no room for doubt in her mind that you actually mean what you say. Set a deadline for her to be out of the house and stick to it. While it may be one of the hardest things you've ever done, in the long run, she'll be better off for it.

DEAR DEBBIE:

I am a woman who is rapidly approaching 30. However, that isn't what's bothering me. I went through a separation and divorce a couple of years ago and did some wildly indiscreet things. Even up to some months ago, I was still doing these things. Looking back on it now, I can't believe it was actually me. Consequently, I'm finding it very difficult to live it down. I feel I'm over whatever it was that drove me to do what I did. Yet, I can't forgive myself. I need to know how I can effectively put this all behind me once and for all. Do you have any suggestions?

REMORSEFUL

DEAR REMORSEFUL:

To begin with, you are not alone. Many separated women (and men for that matter) go through a period of "wildness." I suppose it's part rebellion, part disillusionment and part self-searching. Once again single, the person seeks to "prove" he can be successful at it, so to speak.

Eventually, as in your case, the realization hits that it's not necessary to prove anything and you can get on with your life, finally. That's when the guilt sets in. However, believe me, there's no place for it. Think about what took place. Didn't you learn from your experiences? Don't you feel you know more about life and people now? You should. That's a positive thing. Take all the negative things and get rid of them. There's really no place for them. After all, what you did can never detract from who you are as a person. In fact, in some ways, it can actually add to it. Forgive yourself. It's about time.

Soap Bubbles ..... By Seli Groves

Before the frost is on the pumpkin pie and the Thanksgiving turkey leftovers are tucked into the freezer, several big moves will have taken place on many soaps. Among those being moved out will be some of the bigger names whose storylines will be coming to an abrupt end. Some major scripters will also find their typewriter ribbons winding down to an unrenewable fade-out. The motives behind these maneuvers are at least three-fold: (1) to bring on new stories and new stars to hype the ratings; (2) to shake out some of the more difficult personalities and (3) to make some economies in already tightened budgets.

Lynn Wood, the marvelously talented woman who plays Allison Bancroft on "Young & the Restless" describes her character in this way: "Allison is a lion — a person determined to protect the ones she loves. First it was her son and now it's her grandchild. Although she may be perceived by others as manipulative, she is actually highly moral and honest. She does what she feels is best for her loved ones, not for herself." Lynn, Brett Hadley (Carl) and other stars are planning to do a production of Shaw's masterpiece, "Don Juan in Hell." We'll tell you more about that later on.

TERRY DAVID

Terry David (Stacey, "Another World") and her director husband expect their second child the second week in March.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? Catherine Mary Stewart (Kayla Brady, "Days of Our Lives") was born Catherine Mary Nursall in Canada. Her favorite childhood idol was James Stewart. She changed her last name to match his when she went into show business. (Since September 10, she's added another name: Findlater, courtesy of her marriage to John Findlater.) Catherine's good friend, Beth Maitland (Traci, "Y&R") also idolized the lean lanky actor whose full name is James Maitland Stewart. Beth adopted his middle monicker as her own. As Jimmy Stewart would say, "Waaaal, now, isn't that something!?!"

CAST AWEIGHS: Add these names to our cast lists: Jack Betts, erstwhile villain of "One Life to Live," replaces Robert Milli as Lars on "All My Children;" Sandy Faison is Dr. Beth Correll on "Edge of Night."

"TEXAS" RIDES AGAIN. Late in 1982 "Texas" rode off into the sunset and most of us thought we'd never again see the slick, well-made saddle soap on TV again. Not so. Turner Broadcastng bought all three years of the serial and has begun (as of October 3) beaming it via cable in one-half hour segments.

REPLY TO: Linda G., Ca. Don Hastings was the original Jack Lane on "Edge of Night." He now plays Bob Hughes on "As the World Turns." Both shows made their debut the same day, April 2, 1956. (NOTE: Your word is welcome. Any comments you want directed to producers, et al, can be sent to this column c/o this publication. We'll forward them on your behalf.)

The new fact-filled "FYI" book is due out end of October. Watch for it.

The Wine Rack

By BIANCA St. JOHN

Western Wines

Wineries have existed in Washington, Oregon and Idaho since the late 1960's, and the vinifera, or European-style, grape vine has grown in Washington state's Columbia River Valley since before 1910, but it is only in the last ten years, that these Pacific Northwest wines have started to come into their own. And, at this year's annual wine competition in Seattle, sponsored by the local Enological Society, the seven professional judges were impressed. A grand prize went to the 1979 Quilceda Creek Vintners cabernet sauvignon; it is a somewhat rare and very important compliment when a group of judges designates a wine in any competition for this honor.

Pinot noir is the grape used to make the marvelous French red wines of Burgundy, and most interesting to note is that the Northwest of this country is closer latitudinally to the great wine-producing areas of France than is California. What this means is that this area of the U.S. has a similar climate — long warm days, cooler nights, a shorter season of intense sunlight — to some of Europe's most esteemed vineyards.

Among the wines that will be worth your seeking out from the Pacific Northwest are the 1980 vintage pinot noirs, especially from Oregon, and 1982 vintage white wines — white riesling, sauvignon blanc, chardonnay and chenin blanc.

A problem you'll surely encounter in finding these wines is that, unless you live in the area, they can be quite scarce. Quilceda Creek Vintners, for example, produces only about 1,000 gallons of wine per year. While planted vine acreage in the region is 16 times greater now than it was 40 years ago, and the number of wineries in the three-state area has grown to over 70, the wine-making industry here seems small compared to California.

MEDICINE CHEST

Your Professional:
Troy True, Reg. Pharmacist

Why do some people fail to take the medicines their doctor prescribes? — C.P.

There are lots of reasons. One common reason is fear of dependency on the doctor. To some extent, we all dislike being dependent on somebody else. Another is family related, i.e. defying another family member order to "take your medicine." Also, many patients are embarrassed to take medicine at work or in social situations. There is always the forgetful patient. Once the problem is identified, helpful steps can be taken to get the patient on track in taking their medicine again.

I am on a low salt diet and I take a water pill to control my blood pressure. Could the water pill increase my craving for salt? — B.B.

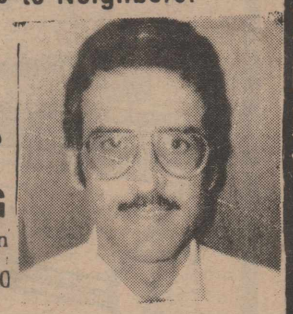

Yes. In some patients this occurs with water pills classified as thiazide diuretics. If you withstand the salt reduction for about 3 months, your craving for salt will subside. It's worth the effort.

Is there any medicine nursing mothers can take to increase milk? — G.D.

One medicine has been used for this purpose, even though it has not been approved by the F.D.A. for this use. It's called chlorpromazine, and it requires a doctor's prescription. The brand name is Thorazine. This drug (which is a powerful tranquilizer) stimulates the hypothalmus to secrete a hormone which triggers milk production.

Ask Kate

How old is Foxy Mike?

By Seli Groves

How old is Michael J. Fox of "Family Ties"? My sister claims he's much older than he looks. — A.M.

It depends on how old you think he looks. Fox is 23, which is a few years older than the character he plays.

YOUNG VETERAN — Hasn't the little boy in "Cujo" done TV commercials? I remember one where he was taking a plane ride and got wings from the captain. — F.A.

Danny Pintauro is a veteran of not only many commercials, but the soap "As the World Turns."

DOG DAZE — What was the name of the movie in which a dead dog comes back to earth as a human to find his killer? I think Dick Powell starred. — H.H.

Powell did play the avenging Alsatian in "You Never Can Tell," a minor 1951 comedy.

GONE LON — Didn't Lon Chaney Jr. play Frankenstein in "Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein"? Needless to say, there's a bet on this. — S.F.

No, he played the Wolfman, whom Bud and Lou also ran into, along with Dracula (Bela Lugosi). Glenn Strange took over the monster's chores in that still delightful 1948 movie. Chaney did play Frankenstein's creation in "The Ghost of Frankenstein," and originated the Wolfman.

Sock it to me... again

By Andy Noble

"Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In," arguably the most innovative TV show of the 1960s, is returning to TV — in syndication.

The show, which ran from 1967 to 1973, will be seen in half-hour packages (edited down from the original hour), with newly announced lead-ins by Gary Owens.

"Laugh-In" — a rapid-faced, tightly edited melange of sight gags, blackouts, topical satire and sketches — was the first series to truly take advantage of television's electronic technology. The show also spawned such memorable phrases as "sock it to me," "here come the judge" and "you bet your sweet bippy." Its ensemble players included such future stars as Goldie Hawn and Lily Tomlin.

But will it work 15 years later? George Schlatter, the show's executive producer, says he doesn't anticipate many problems.

"We're taking out just a few of the topical references — everything in the way of world issues existed then as it exists now. We haven't fixed anything. Ronald Reagan's political philosophy is no different now than it was in 1968 when he was governor of California," says Schlatter, who today is executive producer of "Real People."

Some segments will be cut. "Once we did a segment where we said 'continuing with Laugh-In's philosophy that there's something good to be said about everyone, here's our salute to Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.' In the whole cast no one could think of anything to say. That will come out because he's turned around, he's a sick man now. But he was fair game in the '60s."

And yes... among those syndicated episodes is the October 1968 cameo in which presidential candidate Richard Nixon said, "sock it to me?" — an appearance that many political analysts claimed boosted his credibility among voters.

" 'Laugh-In' didn't have any anger, there was no political platform. We were not trying to change political views, but to comment humorously on all political views," says Schlatter. "It wasn't a mean show, it was a funny show that had politics as part of its format.

"The one disappointment about 'Laugh-In' was when it came out, because it was new and innovative and broke every existing mold, you thought 'well, this will now generate a new surge of creativity and experimentation in other shows.' It didn't. All TV did was to copy 'Laugh-In.'

WORLD SERIES

Howard Cosell, along with Al Michaels, handle the announcing chores when ABC Sports airs the 1983 World Series, beginning TUESDAY, OCT. 11.

STRANGE INVADERS, from Orion Pictures. Directed and written by Michael Laughlin. Starring Paul LeMat, Diana Scarwid, Nancy Allen. Rated 'PG' ★ ★ ★

By J.T. YURKO

At the end of the classic sci-fi film "The Thing" (the original, not the recent remake) the reporter is about to tell the world how he and a small group of friends just defeated a creature from outer space. He begins by saying, "Watch the skies."

As "Strange Invaders" begins, the opening credits tell us that the aliens have already landed and completely taken over a small town in Illinois. They vaporized the town's inhabitants and took on human form. These are quasi-docile aliens. Unlike "Invasion of the Body Snatchers," they are not set on conquering the earth. Instead they are quite content to perpetuate the lifestyle of the year they landed, 1957.

The viewer quickly recognizes what lies ahead in this spoof/send-up/hommage to the low-budget sci-fi films of the 1950s. But director/writer Michael Laughlin doesn't play it for Mel Brooks-like laughs. Laughlin's tongue is pressed quite firmly in cheek, and he retains the right level of camp, corn and inside jokes.

And there are tons of inside jokes. If you are a fan of '50s sci-fi films like those mentioned above, you are bound to enjoy this film more than the average viewer. In fact, spotting the film fan will be easy; he or she will be the one in the movie theater who keeps talking to their date pointing out all the references to those movies.

Such a movie could easily become silly, but Laughlin and a terrific cast force us to laugh with the film and not at it. Paul LeMat discovers the town stuck in 1957 when he searches for his ex-wife, nicely played by Diana Scarwid. Nancy Allen is delightful as a tabloid reporter, and Louise Fletcher plays the director of the National Center for UFO Studies.

Even if you're not a fan of such sci-fi epics, "Strange Invaders" has enough gags of its own well worth watching. And if you've a mind to see a message of conformity hidden behind the tongue-in-cheek humor, feel free to do so. It is your inalienable right.

Absent Atkins hopes to be CMA winner

By Joan Crosby

When the annual Country Music Awards are telecast over CBS-TV on Monday Oct. 10, don't look for nominee Chet Atkins to be on the show. He's not sure where he'll be, but he knows he won't be at Nashville's Grand Ole Opry, where the awards take place.

"I was nominated for years and years and I went to the awards and never won. Then I said the heck with it and I didn't go last year and I won."

Atkins, the great guitarist, is once again nominated for instrumentalist of the year.

"Since I seem to have found how to win, I'm not going to be there again this year. I don't know where I'll be. I have a European tour coming up and I may be on my way by then," he said, by telephone from his Nashville home.

"I live in an area called Hackberry Heaven. It's filled with hackberry trees and they are ugly things with small leaves and berries that drip on cars. I wish the city would agree to cut them all down and replace them with maple trees," he says.

On the subject of country music, Atkins says there was a big change after the war.

Chet Atkins

"People moved to the city then, and there was a blending. The public has changed since the Beatles and Presley. We country folk joined them and they joined us and now it is a blending of rock 'n' roll and rhythm and blues and everything. There's little pure country music anymore. Thank God there are some, like Ricky Skaggs and Bill Monroe, who are still pure country."

Atkins' European tour will take him to Norway, France, Belgium, Germany and England. He says that European audiences "tend to like the pure stuff."

"They want to hear old things, songs I recorded maybe 15 or 20 years ago."
