By Pat Blair

Absentee voting for the upcoming June 7 runoff elections will start Wednesday, May 28, in the Aransas County Clerk's office.

Voting in the absentee election will continue through Tuesday, June 3. Aransas County voters who will not be in the county on regular election day Saturday, June 7 — or who are unable to go to the polls due to illness or infirmity — are eligible to cast absentee ballots.

Absentee voting may be done in person at the County Clerk's office between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. Or it may be done by mail by notifying the county clerk's office.

Twelve candidates are vying for six offices on the Democratic runoff ballot, including the county commissioner races for precincts 1 and 3.

The Pct. 1 commissioner's race is between John Lee and Rachel Garcia.

In Pct. 3, Jimmy Woods Jr. and Raymond Owens are vying for the commissioner's seat.

Also on the runoff election ballot, Bill Patman and Bob Barnes are contending for the U.S. Representative's seat, 14th District.

Remaining races and candidates on the Democratic runoff ballot are

Navigation District Opens Way To Seek Grant

By Eddie Bradley

The Aransas County Navigation District opened the way to seeking grant money to help fund improvements on Rockport's beach during a special meeting-workshop Tuesday night, May 20.

At that meeting, commissioners voted approval to a preliminary Parks and Wildlife drawing submitted by the Beach Improvement Committee — with the understanding that some changes will probably be needed in the plan in the future.

The Committee can now send the plans to Austin, where the TP&W will work up more detailed drawings

Three New Employees Join Pilot Staff

The Rockport Pilot has gained three new employees this past week, including a bookkeeper and two helpers in the composing room.

Newest member of the Pilot staff is bookkeeper Bobbie Drennon who is finishing her first full week on the job.

The latest additions to the composing room staff are Lynn Sharp and Debbie Wyrick who have been with the Pilot about three weeks now.

Bobbie comes to the Pilot with 20 years of bookkeeping experience under her belt. Prior to joining the newspaper, she worked for Vermillion Construction Company. She also worked for the sheriff's department and she and her husband, Charles, formerly owner of the Tall tale Restaurant.

They've lived in the Rockport area about 10 years, moving down here — "right after Celia," says Bobbie — from San Antonio.

She adds she's a partner in the C&B (for Charles and Bobbie) Construction Company, explaining she and her husband are building their home out on Copano Ridge. "I received a hammer for Mother's Day last year," she added.

Lynn Sharp, 20, is a native of Rockport, the son of Mr. and Mrs. H.R. Sharp on South Kossuth Street. He's a graduate of Rockport-Fulton High School and hopes to attend Del Mar night school starting next fall.

Debbie is a native of Tulsa, Oklahoma, where she graduated last year from Daniel Webster High School. She and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Wyrick, have lived in Rockport since January. Debbie, 18, is planning to go to secretarial school.

Pilot Ad Brings Results

A four-column-by-one-inch ad run only once a week — in the Pilot Weekender — has brought Rockport's First National Bank nearly 20,000 calls a month so far.

First National's "Time and Temperature" ad started running in January in the Pilot Weekender. Through April, more than 77,000 calls had been made to the bank's 3131 "Time and Temperature" phone number — an average of 19,287 calls per month.

At the end of the first four months, First National Bank is happy. . . the Pilot is very happy. . . and we hope you keep those calls coming. . .

A shrimp trawler belonging to two Fulton men capsized Tuesday, May 20, after colliding with a barge in the Intracoastal Waterway just south of Rockport.

The trawler Anlock, belonging to Loc Van Nguyen and Tran An Van of Fulton, collided with a northbound barge powered by the tugboat Carl Mack shortly after 4:30 p.m., according to Chief Warrant Officer Robert Tice of the Coast Guard Marine Safety Office in Corpus Christi.

No injuries were reported in the incident which occurred when the trawler's nets reportedly became entangled with the bow of the barge.

The two men on the trawler jumped to safety on the barge as the Anlock capsized, Tice said.

No damage to the Carl Mack was reported and the Houston-bound tug and its barge were later allowed to proceed.

Speaking Out

Given the choice between Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, who do you think has the best chance of being our next President? Why?

Richard S. Anderson,
Maryland

I believe both men would make a good President with God's help, but I believe Carter will win the election. Carter has done a good job to this point and I believe he will continue to do a good job, by the Grace of God.

Chris Johnson, Fulton

Jimmy Carter, because you don't change horses in the middle of the stream. He is more informed of the problems we are having.

Mrs. Bruce Preckwinkle,
Copano Village

Ronald Reagan. I think people are tired of Carter. I could be mistaken, but I believe they are.

Susie Williams,
N. Wood Street

I'd say Jimmy Carter, but that's just because he's the one I want to be President.

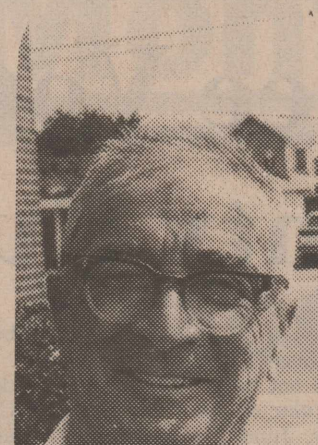

Mary Lee, Raht Street

I pick Ronald Reagan myself. Listening to him, I feel like he would do more for us.

Inez Prince,
Fulton Beach Road

Carter. I think he's doing a good job. He has failed at some things, but it isn't because he didn't try.

Sam Gendusa,
S. Water Street

Carter, you know that. He's the best man we ever had in this country. He has kept us out of war.

Ernest L. Meredith,
Oak Avenue

Neither one of them is fit to be President of the United States, but Carter will probably be elected. People who are qualified for the job are not interested in running for it because it interferes in their businesses.

Austin At Wharf

IT BEHOOVES US TO TAKE A BACKWARD LOOK. Let us recall the scene in Cuba slightly more than two decades ago. A bearded, fiery fellow called Fidel Castro with a hardy band of followers were harassing the forces of a cruel and vicious Batista.

Batista hadn't much if any sympathy from Americans. Castro on the other hand captured our imagination. He was in the tradition of our Spirit of '76, it seemed.

We overlooked one thing. Castro openly said that he was a Communist. "Oh well," we said. "His is a different brand of Communism, not like the Soviet stuff." Simplistically, we believed that when Castro conquered we'd get back to happy relations with Cuba, help rebuild it's economy in which we'd already made heavy investments, the cruise ships would return, the nostalgic among us would dream of revisiting Sloppy Joe's famous bar.

But no, only a few among us could believe that when Fidel said he was a Commie he meant it. Then, even as now, most of us thought of Communism as a wicked political philosophy. We ignored, as we still do, that it is more akin to a religion. It is a religion.

Communism has one thing which is in accord with the Christian religion. Christ told his followers to go into the world and spread his word. And thusly with Lenin. Amongst his followers and those who have become their successors, the first article of faith is world-wide domination of Communism.

Castro has been a good and faithful servant. And today, in the waning 20th century, his fanaticism is no less than that of the monks during the Inquisition.

South Texas' Public Television station KEDT, after an on again, off again act, is going to show "The Death of a Princess." Because of all the controversial publicity over the film, KEDT (Channel 16) will probably enjoy the biggest audience in its history.

I hope some donors will result because the station needs help and because people who protest the showing are threatening to withdraw their support.

Dorothy Stanish, the Caller-Times First Lady of Television summed up protesters succinctly when she wrote: "...a viewer who would withdraw his support solely on the basis of a controversial program with which he disagrees is asking for a television schedule filled with pap." And don't we have enough of that?

Viewers opposed to showing of the film are firm in their opinion that objections from Saudi Arabians should be adhered to. Haven't we enough trouble in the world without another enemy, and hasn't Saudi Arabia been about our best friend among the oil producing countries of the Middle East? Good argument.

On the other hand no reasonable viewer is likely to misinterpret the film as a representation of Saudi Arabian life, nor an indictment of it. True of course that the Saudis may not realize this.

Their people are not familiar, may have difficulty in understanding the "I'm from Missouri" attitude of Americans, perhaps find it incomprehensible that we ridicule every facet of our own life, on the screen, in books, magazines, whatever.

SO DESPITE THE DIPLOMATIC FUROR, WE applaud airing the film on KEDT. The First Amendment is upheld. Also because it focuses public attention upon an important question -- the lack of knowledge our people have about the Saudis and other Islamic societies, and the unknown influence of such ignorance on our policies toward the Islamic world.

Haven't we already seen what problems this gap has caused in Iran, and U.S. efforts to deal with them?

True, Western nations invest a lot of time and effort in intelligence, study the economics and politics of Middle Eastern countries. But what do they understand of the underlying social and religious forces which propel or resist change? What of the sensitivities of the people, the impact of modernization upon peoples whose way of life until comparatively recently has changed but little in centuries? What of the vast flow of 20th century technology flowing into Saudi Arabia, some of it good, some bad?

What is, what will be, the impact on local cultures which are still feudal? Truth of the matter is that we know so little about Middle East customs and culture. For example, we today have some 35,000 Americans in Saudi Arabia and it is safe to assume that no more than a scant handful have any knowledge of the language. Appalling neglect? Only in a sense because examination of Saudi society quickly reveals its secretness.

WITH THESE THINGS IN MIND, LET US REMEMBER when we muster round the boob tube to watch "The Death of a Princess" that the scenes before us are not a documentary, but instead that it is the piecing together of a few facts that have been filled in with reportorial probing and imagination.

True, the film may offer some insights into Saudi life, but few if any which can be assumed to be factual. A few, but very few, Westerners indeed have the knowledge to assess the worth of "Princess" beyond its entertainment value, and that is something that this writer, not having seen the film, cannot do.

And yet the film can be of value if it stirs the interest of a few of us to the realization of our long and dangerous indifference to the religion, the peoples and the culture that presently plays such an important role in the future of mankind.

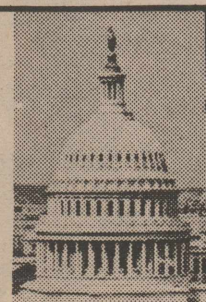

More, I feel obliged here to point out that those in this country who protest showing the film illustrate a long-standing weakness of our own society -- the never-silent voices of those who would inflict their judgments upon the whole of our society, those most dangerous and evil of all Americans -- the censors.--ahab

RECONSTITUTED MILK

Representative Frederick W. Richmond (N.Y.)...The Department of Agriculture currently has before it a petition by the Community Nutrition Institute to remove certain regulatory restrictions on the manufacture of reconstituted milk...

"I share with my colleagues a recent article on this subject written by Tanya Roberts and published by the Department of Agriculture.

RETHINKING

RECONSTITUTED MILK The Community Nutrition Institute recently petitioned USDA to amend current regulations which now largely eliminate the incentive to sell reconstituted milk. Reconstituted milk is composed of nonfat dry milk, milkfat and water which have been combined by the bottler.

Since reconstituted milk ingredients are easily and cheaply transported, the price of reconstituted milk would vary little among regions. In contrast, perishable and bulky fresh milk is expensive to transport.

If all the cost savings from reconstituted milk were passed on to consumers, price savings relative to fluid milk would vary somewhat throughout the country. For example, consumers in Miami could purchase reconstituted milk at 33 cents per gallon below the fresh milk price, while price discounts in Washington D.C. would be about 16 cents per gallon.

Farms located in the lowest cost production areas of Wisconsin and Minnesota, and surrounding areas would experience an increase in prices paid for their milk for use in reconstituted milk.

The farms in the South where costs are highest, would experience a decline in farm prices, depending on the extent consumers switched to reconstituted milk.

Farmers selling fresh milk in the drinking market would receive a lower price, and in turn, consumers would pay a lower price.

However, farmers selling to milk manufacturing plants will receive a higher price, which translates into a gain in income to farmers in the upper Midwest and surrounding areas of more than $150 million.

This increase would be passed on to consumers of cheese, butter and ice cream.

CRUMP'S GRASS

ROOTS COMMENT Reconstituted milk is not to be confused with nonfat dry milk.

The benefits of a change in reconstituted milk regulations is debatable. However, the bureaucrats could remove the restrictions on reconstituted milk and few Americans would be the wiser.

96 Committee Members Attend Luncheon, Show

Some 96 members and guests of the Women's Committee, Aransas County Medical Society Inc., attended the organization's luncheon and style show Friday, May 16.

They style show followed a short business meeting of the group during which members learned that various projects during 1980 to date have raised a little more than $18,000 for the organization.

The committee also voted to change the election of its officers to coincide with election of officers of ACMSI.

The style show was through arrangement of Mary Wilson who showed fashions from her Village Artisan shop in Rockport and was master of ceremonies for the presentation.

Models included Wanda Sorem, Betty French, Mary Coudy, Christine Stark, Linda Bechtol, Joann Haskell, Sara Bates and Jane Myers.

Aransas County paramedics Wendy Aston and Leonard Collier were special guests at the luncheon.

In changing the election of officers Friday, Women's Committee members voted to appoint a nominating committee in May, present a slate of nominees to the membership in June and install officers in July.

In the past, the nominating committee has been named in January and the officers installed in March.

The new system for the electing officers will become effective in 1981 and the present officers have agreed to serve the extra months from March, 1981, to the following July.

Eyes And Answers

APPOINTMENTS

Dear Dr. Pettie: I get a little provoked when I have trouble getting appointments with our family optometrist each August for my two children; I like to start the school year right. I sometimes think they are giving me the runaround.—Bothered Mother.

I know what you mean! But in this instance, I'm pleased to tell you I think you are mistaken about the runaround, simply because August is a heavily scheduled month for all eye doctors.

However, I am a bit surprised that yours has not scheduled your appointments a year in advance for your children, in some other month. Just before school starts is not necessarily the best time for their annual examination anyway. When their eyes are under normal stress during the nine-month school year is the time when the most dependable findings can be made.

I commend you for realizing the value of annual visual evaluations for your children; please continue that. But I suggest you ask the doctor to set up the two appointments in another month, preferably between October and May.

Your optometrist will be glad to send you annually a postal card specifying the appointment date well in advance. Just ask him.

Why does Bill Patman want you to pay $23.50 for a life-maintaining drug instead of $11.65?*

That's a very good question, especially if you're living on a fixed income and you depend on medically-prescribed medication.

Yet, in the last legislative session, Bill Patman voted against a bill that would allow pharmacists to fill prescriptions with less expensive generic drugs in place of their more expensive name-brand equivalents.

Why?

Bill Patman said, as quoted by the Texas Observer:

"To force a type of conduct we make it inconvenient to the doctor. . .if we start doing this in government I don't know where the end will be. It is highly improper. . .You're opening up the system to a lot of citizen abuse."

Inconvenient? Improper? Abusive?

What is more inconvenient, improper and abusive than forcing a person who lives on a fixed income to pay, in many cases, twice as much for the same equivalent medication?

*Price per 100 unit comparison of the name-brand drug Erythrocin ($23.50) and its generic substitute erythromycin ($11.65), based on a price survey conducted by members of Texas ACORN, released in January 1979 and published in the Texas Observer.

New Cookbook Offers Children's Recipes

Good nutrition can be fun for children to learn when they begin to cook in their own kitchens.

It's easy for them to do when they follow a recipe and understand the "ground rules" of the kitchen in advance.

And now there's a new recipe booklet that can help get them started with recipes developed and tested in the Betty Crocker Kitchens and tested by 8- to 12-year-olds in their own homes under adult observation.

"Cheeridole Cookbook for Kids" is a 12-page booklet filled with interesting recipes and color photographs of good-tasting, easy-to-make snacks, salads, cookies and desserts, including a special "Cheeridole Brunch" menu to serve the whole family.

All recipes use a favorite cereal of many children, Cheerios (R), as one of the ingredients.

It's ready and waiting on the kitchen shelf to be used in Crunchy Apple Salads, Pizza Snack, Yogurt Brunch Sundae and other recipes.

The "Fantastic Food Groups" are included in the "Cheeridole Cookbook for Kids," with examples of foods from each of the following: Valuable Vegetables and Fruits, Magical Milk, Marvelous Meats and Beautiful Breads and Cereals, as well as Exciting Extras.

Copies of this new recipe booklet are available on an individual basis by sending two Cheerios box bottoms or 25 cents with name, address and zip code to:

"Cheeridole Cookbook for Kids," Box 6, Dept. 825, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55460.

Healthful Hints

Most Often-Asked Questions On Nutrition

By Jean Glowka

Q. I have been hearing a lot about comfrey lately. Can you give us some information on it?

A. Used internally, comfrey is helpful for coughs, rheumatic pains, digestive disorders, eczema, anemia and colitis. Some feel that comfrey can cleanse the entire system of impurities and strengthen the blood.

Externally, poultices of comfrey have been useful in treating bruises, ulcerous wounds, boils and broken bones. Comfrey ointment is often used for sores, rashes, scratches, itches and burns.

Comfrey contains protein, being an especially good source of the amino acid lysine. It is one of the few vegetable sources of vitamin B-12 and is also rich in vitamins A, C, B-1, B-2, niacin, pantothenic acid, D, E and choline and the minerals calcium, potassium, phosphorus and other trace minerals.

Perhaps comfrey's "main claim to fame" is that it contains a healing agent called allantoin, which is known to promote granulation and formation of epithelial cells, thus increasing the speed with which nature can heal a wound, internal irritation or broken bone.

Q. I have a tendency to get ugly white spots on my skin. What can I do?

A. This condition is called "vitiligo" and is characterized by small white patches (depigmentation) or darkening of some areas of the skin. Studies have shown that this skin condition has completely cleared up when 1,000 or more milligrams of PABA (para-aminobenzoic acid, a B-vitamin) were taken daily, especially if generous amounts of pantothenic acid and fresh liver were obtained with it.

PABA is available in tablet and cream or ointment form and occurs naturally in liver, brewer's yeast, milk, yogurt, eggs, whole rice and cereals, whole wheat, wheat germ and molasses.

Until next week, folks, stay happy and healthy! It's a beautiful world!

Shrimp Season To Close

AUSTIN-The shrimp season for Texas' territorial waters in the Gulf of Mexico will be closed from June 1 to July 15, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission is authorized by an amendment to the 1975 Texas Shrimp Conservation Act to change the opening and closing dates if necessary to protect the small brown shrimp which migrate from the bays to the Gulf.

Tilefish Has Potential In Gulf

AUSTIN - A little-known fish species off the Texas Gulf Coast holds considerable promise for commercial harvest, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Tilefish are a significant commercial food species off the New England coast, but as yet have not made an appearance in the Texas market, according to biologists Terry J. Cody and Billy Fuls of Rockport.

To determine the feasibility of tilefish fishing off the central Texas coast, a research team aboard the vessel Western Gulf recently set a series of one-fourth-mile longlines at depths of 380 to 1,370 feet. A significant number of sets produced tilefish ranging in size from one to 20 pounds, with the average at 5.6 pounds, Cody said.

Cody pointed out that the commercial potential of tilefish in Texas was first recognized in the late 1960s when the National Marine Fisheries Service conducted exploratory cruises. In 1978, the Texas A&M University Marine Advisory Service investigated tilefish and grouper areas off the northern Texas coast.

The Texas A&M project found several areas that were commercially productive and indicated a considerable amount of favorable habitat should exist off Port O'Connor, Corpus Christi and Port Isabel, Cody said.

Biological surveys have indicated there is no early mass emigration of brown shrimp to the Gulf, so no change was recommended from the statutory June 1 closure, according to Shellfish Program Director C.E. Bryan.

The closed Gulf season is designed to protect the brown shrimp until they reach the minimum harvest size of 39 whole shrimp per pound or an average length of about 4½ inches, Bryan said.

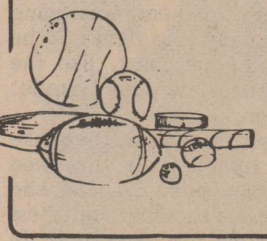

Hunting License Sales Increased

AUSTIN -- Sales of resident hunting and fishing licenses are ahead of last year's pace, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said.

During the first six months of the 1979-80 fiscal year which began September 1, 1979, the department posted gains in hunting, fishing and combination hunting/fishing licenses over the first half of 1978-79.

Department officials were encouraged by the rise in resident hunting license sales, which had declined somewhat in 1978-79.

The 313,977 hunting licenses sold represented a gain of 1,048 over the same period in 1978-79.

Resident combination hunting/fishing licenses for the six-month period gained by 41,803, which amounts to a revenue increase of $355,694 over the first six months of 1978-79.

Resident fishing license sales, which set a new revenue record in 1978-79, continued to increase, with 449,152 bringing in $1,800,289 revenue. This represents an increase of more than 11,000 licenses and $46,000 revenue over the first half of 1978-79.

Archery stamp sales also showed a significant increase of 2,879 stamps and $8,804 revenue over 1978-79. Officials attributed the rise in hunting license sales to generally favorable weather conditions early in 1979 which boosted production of quail, turkey and deer for the 1979-80 hunting seasons.

Jewfish Challenge Heavy Tackle

AUSTIN-Gulf Coast anglers who like to feel a healthy pull on the end of their line should try catching a jewfish.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologist Ken

Rice of Sebastian said while most of the larger specimens are taken from deep waters, some venture into near-shore areas during the spring and summer.

Jetty fishermen using heavy tackle and whole live or dead fish or crab for bait are the most likely to tangle with jewfish, which may attain sizes of several hundred pounds.

The thrill of catching a sizable jewfish would be rewarding, Rice said, and the fish also are good table fare.

Time To Reserve Campsites

AUSTIN - With the summer vacation season approaching, many Texans will be planning to spend time in state parks.

Prospective overnight park visitors who want to be assured of accommodations should be aware that cabins, campsites and group shelters are operated on a reservation basis in parks with these facilities.

To make a reservation, it is necessary to call, write or apply in person to the individual park. Reservations are not mandatory, but advisable to be assured of a campsite upon arrival.

No reservation fees are charged; however, a user fee is charged based on the type of facility occupied. Reservations cannot be made more than 90 days in advance for cabins or campsites, and requests will be accepted as late as 5 p.m. for occupancy by 8 p.m. Group facilities may be reserved for any date during the current calendar year.

Reservations made in person will be confirmed in writing, and telephone or mail requests received three days or more in advance of occupancy also will be confirmed in writing.

All reservations must be claimed by 8 p.m. on the first day of occupancy. In case of a delay, late arrival privileges will be granted if the visitor calls the park on the arrival date before 8 p.m.

Specific campsites or shelters cannot be reserved, but if a specific location is desired on arrival it will be honored if it is not occupied and if it will accommodate the visitor's equipment.

For specific information on facilities available in the state park system, write the Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas 78744, or call toll-free 1-800-252-9327 for a free Texas State Park Information brochure.

Bay Shrimping Season Underway

AUSTIN - Prospects are not encouraging for bay shrimpers as the annual bay shrimp season opened last week (May 15), according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Biological surveys show most Texas bays are below average in brown shrimp production this year, with the exception of Matagorda Bay, which may be somewhat above average.

Cool spring weather generally slowed growth rates of shrimp, and cold snaps during early April may have caused some mortality, particularly in Galveston Bay, according to Shellfish Program Director C.E. Bryan.

Department law enforcement officials point out that shrimpers should be aware that shrimping is prohibited in a number of small bays, coves and estuaries along the coast designated as shrimp nursery areas. Trawl operators should check with local game wardens or department offices to determine nursery area locations.

An exception to the nur-ery area shrimping ban allows persons who hold valid bait shrimp dealer's licenses and who maintained fixed places of business adjacent to the nursery areas prior to August 27, 1979, to operate not more than two licensed bait shrimp boats during any given day in waters adjacent to that place of business.

Texas bays are designated as major or bait bays. The holders of bay shrimp boat licenses are restricted to fishing major bays during the open season, and their daily limit is 300 pounds per boat.

The holders of bait shrimp licenses are allowed to fish the year round both in major bays and bait bays, and their limit is 150 pounds per day. Holders of a sport shrimp trawl license may use one 20-foot shrimp trawl in major or bait bays, and their limit is 15 pounds per person per day in major bays.

Two quarts of shrimp per day per person is allowed in bait bays.

Fishing Report

Sea Gun Marina---The marina has been having some good trout fishing during the week in spite of the bad weather, mostly caught on live bait.

Key Allegro Marina---Not much activity because of the bad weather.

Kleine's Rattlesnake Point Fishing Camp---Trout, gaff-top and redfish are being caught on live and frozen bait. The camp lost one of their cabanas in the strong winds during the week, and some boats were torn loose from the dock.

Causeway Pier---The fishing was good at the first of the week, but towards the end, not much activity.

Palm Harbor Marina---The fishing has improved. Trout and reds are being caught, mainly on live bait.

St. Charles Bay---The fishing has been fair. Redfish and trout have been caught near Alligator Egg Point, and flounder have been caught near Cow Chip Slew. St. Charles Bay reports plenty of live bait available at the marina for weekend fishing.

Some People Are Such 'Fraidy Cats'

By Eddie Bradley

When was the last time you were really scared? I mean REALLY scared.

I got to thinking about people being frightened this week when my family and I came home and saw something on our house. It brought back a lot of memories.

Our story begins when I was still a college student, about 100 or 200 years ago. Several of us student types came to Rockport for the summer to work at the Marine Lab.

It was our first day here, and a couple of us hadn't yet found places to stay. One of the permanent employees had a little farmstead out in the country and, since he was working in the bay that night, said that we could stay at his place -- if we would feed the cows.

Well, hot dog, that sounded like great fun to us, so we gladly took him up on the offer. By the time we got our gear together, found his house and drove into the yard, it was just getting dusk. It was that time of evening when everything loses its color and takes on varying shades of gray, like a black and white negative.

We decided to feed those cows while there was still some light left; besides they were all gathered over by the fence, looking at us and calling, "Foood, foood."

The storage shed was attached to the house. After the creaking door swung open, we realized that there was no light inside and that it would be necessary to sort of feel our way around in order to find everything.

I can't remember exactly how it came to be, but by some type of sleight of hand, my buddy decided that it would be me who went inside and did all this feeling around in the dark!

"He said the feed can was inside one of the sacks," my partner offered from outside as I plunged my arm into one of the grain containers. Looking around, all I could see of him was a dark outline silhouetted in the door. He was standing just outside, straining to see in, but not putting one foot within that shed.

Turning my attention back to the feed sacks, I groped around trying to feel the metal can. Suddenly an unusual sound from the door caused me to spin around.

At first all I saw was the outline of my partner's feet disappearing sideways, as if he had been jerked up by something. My eyes then darted downward; another movement had grabbed their attention.

A huge snake was beginning to coil up on the ground just in front of the door. It almost looked like a cartoon drawing, just a solid black snake caricature against the gray ground.

Having formed an ominous coil, the snake slowly moved its head back and forth and I was sure it was planning an attack on me. After what seemed an eternity, the creature crawled under the shed and I broad-jumped at least 50 feet out the door.

I followed gasping and gurgling sounds to my friend, who was lying across the car hood panting. "Oh my gosh," over and over and over. For a short while, I thought his heart was going to actually leap right out the front of his chest, like the creature in the movie, "Alien."

As it turned out, the snake had tumbled off the shed roof, landed on his head, slid down his shoulder and chest and then to the ground. In later, calmer moments, we figured it had probably been a harmless chicken snake, but on this night, our fears got the better of us and we found alternate sleeping quarters.

One of the bravest things I've ever done was to go back and finish feeding those cows, even if it was from the hood of the car!

Oh incidentally, what we saw on our house recently was a little garter snake up between two bricks, just under one of the eaves.

So far, it has been a stand-off, but I have faith and know that someday, that snake will leave and we'll be able to get back into our home!

The First National Bank of Rockport honors a student each month for outstanding achievements.

Bev's Beat

by Beverly Wilken

The way I've got it figured, the flu can get me two days of sympathy; food poisoning will get me three; and tonsillitis has gotten me four so far.

"Honey," began my loving husband. "Do you need anything? Can I get you some soup? Want me to rub your throat? Have you taken your medicine? Need another pillow? Are you warm enough? Here, let me get you some more juice."

I suppose some of you women out there are asking, "How do I get my husband to do that? How do I get him to wait on me when I'm ill?"

And the answer is: I have no idea.

Having a temperature of 102 and having to down pills the size of a banana hasn't always gotten me a free ticket out of doing the dishes. Maybe it was because this time I didn't walk around the house with a white lily in my hand moaning pitifully, "I'm sick. I'm soooo sick." (Actually, I've thought about it several times, but my throat hurts too bad to talk.)

I haven't laid out the dress I wanted to be buried in and I haven't even started the famous, "If anything should happen to me, (cough-wheeze) I want you to remarry", routine.

Usually, it's, "I don't feel good. I think I'll stay home from.....(a. work; b. the company picnic; c. my dentist appointment.) Him: "Well, why don't you go on, and if you get to feeling worse, then you can come home."

This time it was: Him: "I don't think you should go to work this week. You're sicker than you think." Me: "I'll be fine sweetheart. (Stiffing a wheeze and a cough.) Him: "Well, I'm going to stay home today 'oo, and take care of you."

Neighbors have sent food, the gang at the office has been splitting my work load, my husband sent me flowers and the mailman hasn't left me a single bill all week.

The clincher was when my friend Dee called. I answered the phone and she said, "Bev! You sound terrible! You sound worse than I did when I had that awwwwwwful cold last week!"

I smiled.

"Bev! she continued. "Is there anything I can do? You sound soooooo sick!"

I smiled again. "Do I really? Do I really sound sicker than YOU did?"

"Oh, my heavens, YES! You sound awwwwwwful!"

I hung up the telephone smugly. Nobody ever has an illness worse than Dee's! (I was so proud!)

Everybody's been hoverin over me like I was a gallo of unleaded or premium or something! It's been great!

So if you want to know how to get the maximum amount of sympathy for any illness, I still don't know. But I can tell you what to do when you get it.....ENJOY it!

and also figure cost estimates on getting the proposed work done. This package can then be used by the Navigation District in seeking grant money for the project.

Two questions concerning the commissioners' ideas for the beach had to be cleared up before the Beach Improvement Committee would submit the full set of plans, one involved the Salt Water Pool and the other involved the Bandshell area.

Regarding the pool, the commissioners recalled that they had already voted to dragline the swimming area and that the bottom material would probably be put along the north edge of the beach.

Following some discussion regarding propriety of putting aside funds for various projects without a set budget, the commissioners voted to build a 70-foot by 70-foot concrete slab adjacent to the Bandshell.

During the discussion, Chairman David Magulgin instructed that an accountant be contacted to set up a budget for the fiscal year to begin in June.

Regarding the dragline work on the Salt Water Pool, there seemed to be a question of the validity of the permit the District was going to work under in getting the job done. The commissioners are apparently planning to get together with the Corps of Engineers to solve the problem.

Some Fulton residents at the meeting asked about the status of the Fulton Harbor expansion plans and again expressed their opposition to diminishing the size of the park there.

Dan Shelton said that 80 percent of the people in Fulton are against taking away land from the park and added that putting a harbor in there would "create another Beaumont/Port Arthur area."

Commissioners Ken Faulkner and Bobby Landrum through that the Board should go ahead and try to get a permit for the expansion project and then look closely at the objections that had been raised.

When asked what the specific basis was for expanding the Fulton Harbor, the commissioners responded that there was a waiting list of about 75 people wanting boat slips and this would help meet their needs.

Audience members stated that there were more than 75 people who currently utilize that area as park land and that other boat slips are available, but people want District spaces because they are so inexpensive.

Magulgin observed that he was definitely having some second thoughts on the project.

Bill Cory appeared before the commissioners to request the use of Navigation District property by the Aransas County Recreational Planning Association, Inc. He requested a site about 75-feet square south of the flower boxes on the old Sea Fair site. It would be used for a two-day fund raising event to gather money for use on beach improvement. The exact date of the event was not yet known. The commissioners approved the request.

In other actions, Magulgin reported that the Corps of Engineers had not yet taken any action on setting a public hearing concerning the Cove Harbor North project.

The commissioners stated their intentions to dragline the boat launching area of Cove Harbor.

The commissioners voted to have Bernie DeForest arrange for repairs to a leaking air conditioner in the District offices and to get together with the county and try to arrange for a

Sheriff's Report

Truet A. Roach of Rt. 1 reported destruction of a mailbox, valued at $15, at his residence sometime between 8 a.m. Sunday, May 18, and 1 p.m. Monday, May 19.

Roach told sheriff's deputies that someone "smashed the mailbox flat" with a heavy object.

Lloyd Poulston said someone pried the front door open and entered his residence on Sabinal Street sometime between Tuesday, May 13, and Saturday, May 17.

Nothing was reported missing from the residence. Deputies said the burglar(s) tore a screen off the front porch and tried to pry the back door open, apparently in initial attempts to enter the house.

Four Sears color television sets were taken and a black and white set was damaged after someone shattered the window plate to gain entry to the Sears, Roebuck & Company Catalog Store on Highway 35 North.

The burglary occurred shortly after 2 p.m. Friday, May 16.

Charlie Garrett Has Worked At Lot Of Jobs, Seen A Lot Of Changes In County

By Pat Blair

From the time he first came to this area to help build the old causeway, Charlie Garrett has held a lot of jobs and seen a lot of changes in Aransas County.

That was back in 1928, when Charlie was working for Davis Pace. Davis Pace was contractor for the job of building a causeway across Copano Bay.

"That was the old causeway," says Charlie. "The narrow one." That's the structure that today is used as a fishing pier -- but it was "The" causeway until the late 1960s when the present structure was completed.

Charlie's first trip to the area lasted for eight days, while the construction crew drove test pilings across the bay.

Then he went back to Austin County, returning to Aransas County in 1929 to finish work on the causeway. "I was on it 11 months," he said.

It was during those 11 months that he met Nina Diederich -- who became Nina Garrett a year or two later. And in 1931, the Garretts returned to Rockport to stay.

Charlie was born in Merkle, and his family -- "My daddy was a cotton farmer" -- moved to "about 13 miles west of Waco when I was a baby." It was around 1927, about a year before his first trip to Rockport, that Garrett left Waco and went into construction work "building bridges."

At 72 -- born January 1, 1908 -- Charlie's seen "a lot of changes" in his lifetime. He recalled, "I saw my first airplane in World War I" -- a war in which Charlie was too young to enlist, though he's a veteran of World War II.

He also recalled the Model T his father bought in 1919 -- "It came in a boxcar and my older brother was down there (at the depot) three days putting it (the car) together."

Rockport too has changed since Charlie first came here to put down roots and raise his family. There was no Rockport Harbor when he came, no Little Bay Shores -- "That -- the development of Little Bay Shores -- 'was an asset,' he said, no Key Allegro, no airport."

Charlie was one of those who helped build the county airport in the early 1940s.

The way he tells it, he started out operating a Texaco Station when he first came to Rockport, then operated a Humble Station for a few years until Pearl Harbor.

"After Pearl Harbor, I gave up station work and went to work for a contractor on Matagorda Peninsula building barracks for the Air Force. When that job was over, I went to work for Rice Boatworks, building subchasers, and after that, I worked on building the airport."

Charlie was inducted into service "in the latter part of 1943" and served "two years and two months," including overseas duty in France.

Following his discharge, he went to work for Bailey Motor Company here, then in 1947 or '48, "I purchased one old truck from my brother and went into LP (liquid propane) gas business for about 20 years 'til I sold out to the natural gas people here."

"Then," he continued,

"I went to work for Coast Materials -- worked there about three years, then retired."

In the meantime, Charlie found time to serve a term on Rockport's city council back in the early '50s.

The way he got into that, he said, was "a guy stopped me on the road on a Friday evening and wanted me to go file for city council before 5 p.m. -- that was the deadline to file for the council. I said, 'What's wrong with the fellow in there now?' and the guy (the one who stopped Charlie) said, 'He doesn't want to run'."

As it turned out, Charlie was the only candidate for that spot on the ballot. He was elected, served his two years "then didn't file anymore" until 1960 when he decided it was time perhaps to run again.

Since then, he's put in nearly 18 years -- it will be 18 years next April -- as a city council member.

In the meantime, he and Nina have raised their family -- two sons, two daughters, 12 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Their sons are area residents: Charles F. Garrett lives in Corpus Christi and Jimmy L. Garrett is in Portland. Their oldest daughter, Betty Lou Livingston, is in Norman, Oklahoma. Janice Fay Chambers is a resident of Houston.

Charlie says he doesn't have a lot of hobbies: "I'm interested in baseball, but I don't play it anymore." He is active in the local VFW post, having served as commander three times. He's also served as district VFW commander.

When his current term on the city council expires in April, he said, he doesn't plan to run for re-election.

At 72 -- 73 by that time next year -- with all those decades of work behind him, including a total of 20 years serving the city, he's earned a rest. . .

Life's roughest years

Being a teen-ager can be torture . . . a lot of the time. And the early twenties don't flatten out that smoothly. There's a desperate loneliness about having problems your kid-brother hasn't encountered and your parents must have forgotten.

The loneliness is worst if your folks gave you nothing to believe in — or if they turned you off when they tried to share their convictions with you.

No one has to stay away from God. Many a young searcher has found his faith, found himself, and found his family in his quest for spiritual certainties.

Sunday morning there's more to do than lean on a tree.

LEARNING THE ROPES

Donna Arkell, seated, of Rockport's First National Bank, gets some pointers from Sandra Benavidez, marketing consultant from State National Services Inc. of Corpus Christi, on how to operate the bank's new mini-computer. The newly-installed Mohawk 21/40 Data Science Mini Computer will be used to capture and print all loan documentation — thus assuring all First National customers that all calculations are in compliance with new Federal Reserve Regulations, say bank personnel. Future uses for this Mohawk Mini Computer are word processing, general ledger and payroll accounting. [Pilot Photo By Beverly Wilken]

There's No Place Like Home Row Position

If the touch method helps typists become more productive, it figures that touch method calculating can do even more: you can save time and effort, and measure how much while you save it!

The secret is habit — a good habit of placing the fingers in the right position—and having a desktop calculator that knows where your fingers are most likely to strike, like one made by Victor Business Products.

Your three keys to success at touch method calculating are all in a row. You know them as "4," "5," and "6." But to your right hand they are home row position. Your index finger goes on the "4," your middle finger on the "5," and your ring finger on the "6." The secret to the touch method is teaching your hand that there's no place like home position. The other numeric keys may all have the same, comfortable dip in the surface, but only the "5" key has the bump. Now it's easy to strike keys above and below with the same finger you use for each key in the home row.

25 BUCKS

Jan Honeycutt of Fulton said she "couldn't believe it" when she learned she'd won 25 Bingo Bucks in the final week of the Pilot's Newspaper Bingo game. She was a little more able to believe it Thursday, May 22, when she actually had the "bucks" in her hands. Ms. Honeycutt was one of four winners who split the $100 pot at the end of the 13th — and final — week of Newspaper Bingo Friday, May 16. Her card, a red one, came from Super D. Cards of all colors were eligible to play during the final week of the game and the winners turned out to be three red cards and one purple. Also sharing the winnings were Mrs. L.A. Hagy and Walter Dickey, both of Rockport, who got their winning cards at The Smokery, and Viola Kepper of Fulton whose winning card came from Monroe's Carpets. [Pilot Photo By Pat Blair]

County Agent News

By Mike Rothrock
County Extension Agent
San Patricio-
Aransas Counties

Most strange folklore is generated by a problem which needs to be solved. Such problems include nematode control, non productivity of plants, insect control and cultural practices to improve Texas soil conditions.

What about the use of sugar for nematode control? It will work in a test tube, but unfortunately not in your garden soil.

The reason it works in a test tube is the osmotic differential between sugar water solution and the nematode's body will kill the poor critter -- what a way to go!

Unfortunately, you will never be able to add enough sugar to the soil to cause the same reaction.

All that you will accomplish is the production of a "sweet" soil or a place to grow "sugar" beets! (Bad joke!)

If you live in Texas, you have trouble with insects -- that's a fact of life! People have formulated all sorts of home remedies to counter this inevitable problem.

These include applying a sticky substance called tanglefoot to keep the insects from crawling up the tree, collecting insects for grinding in a blender to make a solution to spray on plants, and soaking cigarettes to make a solution which will give insects a nicotine fit.

The tanglefoot remedy would work great if the insects didn't have wings and didn't overwinter egg masses in the tops of trees. The only insect larvae or worms tanglefoot catches are the ones which travel down to the rough bark of a tree to shed their skins.

Maybe the stickiness will discourage squirrels!

The blending insects and soaking cigarettes systems may have some potential if marital harmony can be maintained. Most wives would not look kindly upon using the blender to make bug brew.

However, sick insects could transmit a natural virus or disease to fellow insects if the remains of the deceased were spread on plant foliage. In fact, this is the basis for the discovery and use of Bacillus thuringiensis, a bacteria used to control caterpillars such as cabbage loopers and tomato hornworms.

Products containing this Bacillus include Dipel, Bio-Spray, Thuricide and Biological Worm Killer. Always one to two teaspoons of a liquid detergent to each gallon of spray mix to insure good coverage on leaves.

Cigarettes soaked in water would make a solution containing a certain concentration of nicotine. Nicotine is defined as "a poisonous alkaloid obtained as colorless or nearly colorless, oily, acrid liquid."

It could kill the bugs -- scientists tell us that it's killing people every day!

The only problem with tobacco or blender-bug brews is the danger of spreading mosaic virus to garden plants. Insects spread virus from weeds to plants and tobacco has a potential of inherent virus.

If solutions are mixed from either of these sources, the gardener may be infecting rather than preventing. The cure may be worse than the ailment since the only remedy for a virus infected plant is elimination.

These are just a few of the old home remedies for surefire gardening success. Some work -- some are disastrous! Don't be too fast to ridicule a seemingly ridiculous remedy -- it may work.

There are no major morphological differences between the southern bald eagle (Haliaeetus l. leucocephalus) and the northern bald eagle (H. l. alascanus).

Until recently, they were afforded separate protection—the southern bald eagle as an endangered species and the northern eagle under the lesser protection of the Bald Eagle Protection Act and the Migratory Bird Treaty Act.

Now, however, protection for bald eagles varies according to where they are found. In Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Oregon, and Washington both subspecies are protected only as threatened; but they are considered endangered when in any of the other 43 conterminous states.

This two-level protection based on geography is necessary on the one hand because of the large number of northern bald eagles which breed and winter in the northern areas.

Southern bald eagles, some of which travel in spring as far as the northern areas, are few in number and tend to be widely dispersed. On the other hand, federal regulations regarding bald eagle status were changed in 1978 because the northern birds are difficult to identify, being only slightly larger than their southern cousins, and thus, not distinguishable except when in the hand and then only with a tape measure.

Nature Trails

Before the change in regulations, law enforcement involving bald eagles was complicated since only the southern subspecies was classified as endangered. Yet significant numbers of northern bald eagles winter in Texas and are easily confused with the approximately 50 southern bald eagles in the state during the same general time period.

Only the southern bald eagles are seen in association with any of the seven known, active bald eagle nests in Texas.

In one respect, it is unfortunate that legal de-emphasis of subspecific designations had to be made. The northern birds nest in the spring and go south with their young for the winter, while the southern birds nest in the fall and winter and disperse widely, for the summer.

This difference makes it necessary to continue separate subspecies management practices, regardless of the legal lumping made mostly to facilitate law enforcement protective efforts.

The southern bald eagle continues to be the subspecies of our greater concern because of its low population numbers.

PLANT CLINIC

Mike Rothrock, County Extension Agent, left, is shown surveying an eggplant with Jim Pearson of Pearson's Garden Center. Pearson's was the site of a plant diagnostic clinic sponsored by Texas A and M Lab on Thursday, May 22, from 9 to 11 a.m. Mr. Rothrock and three other plant experts answered questions concerning soil, plant and insect problems. The clinic was free to the public. [Pilot Photo By Beverly Wilken]

Nursing Home News

Activities at the Aransas Pass Nursing and Convalescent Center were many and varied the week of May 12-18.

Monday morning, Virginia Hillis was out to do her visiting with our residents.

Tuesday morning, our "Mending Ladies" from the First Presbyterian Church of Rockport were over and really had a very busy day. All of our residents look forward to these two ladies visits. "The Caring Ones" were out to play bingo with our people.

Wednesday morning, Gordon Couger came by with three hundred homemade cookies which he had baked. Our residents had them at social and coffee hour and for dessert. Thank you, Gordon, for being such a "nice guy!" Wednesday afternoon, Bro. Mark Lemke was out to conduct his weekly "Bible Study."

Thursday afternoon, we were honored to have a group of Senior Citizens from Ingleside come over and visit our residents. We thank Ophelia Garcia and Mr. Phillips for bringing the people to visit. Thursday afternoon, "The Golden Ones" were out to play bingo with our residents. Minnie Allen, a resident was honored on her 86th birthday by her family. Cake was served to about 25 friends.

Friday morning, the Aransas Pass Junior High School Girls Choir under the direction of Raymond Allen sang for our residents. This was a very good and well-received program. They were asked to come back soon. Also, Friday morning, was paint class time with Lyla and Frankie. The "Good Neighbor" ladies were also on hand to give out their snacks which they do each week. Thanks Pat, Faye and Ruth! Friday afternoon was "Old Fashioned Sing Along" time with the Rockport AARP. We were very happy to have this group back again.

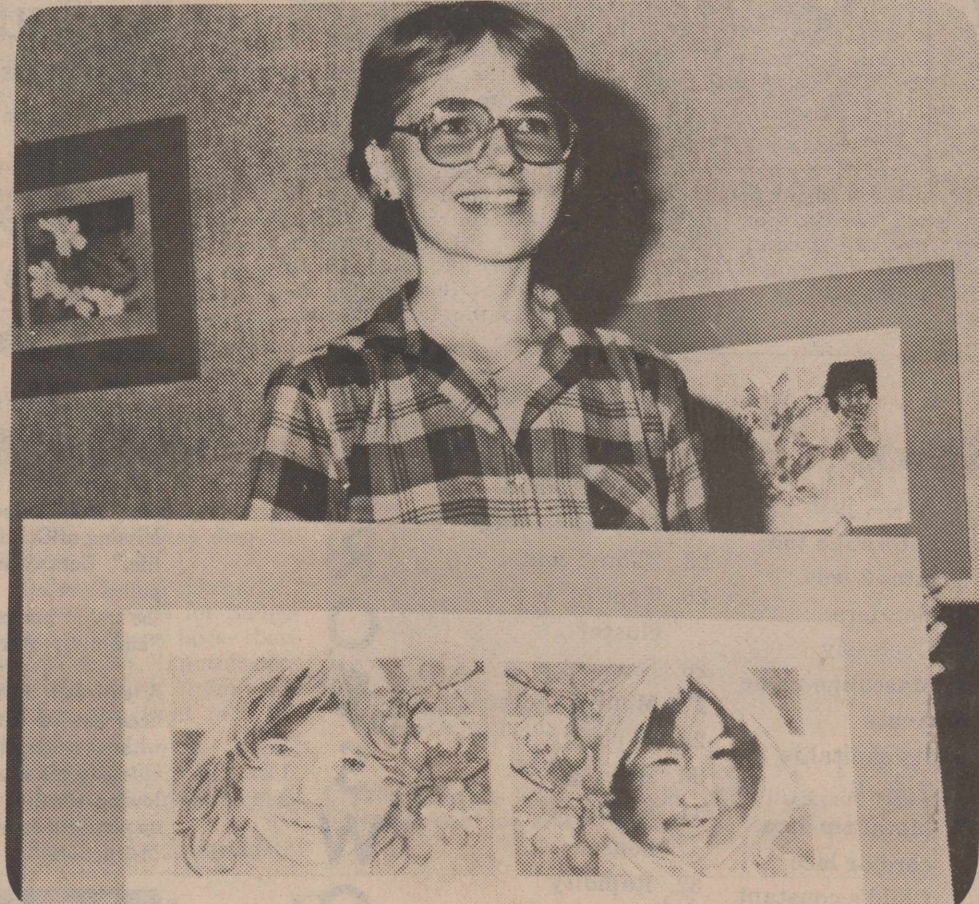

Saturday morning Father James Hamilton was out to give Holy Communion to our Catholic residents.

Sunday morning Church Services were held by Rev. Al Bankert. Sunday afternoon "The Cruz Family" was out to entertain our residents with beautiful singing and to give the residents boxes of Kleenex.

One more problem

Food prices are fast becoming a visible economics problem.

In fact, during 1978 alone they rose 10 percent and since 1973, they have risen an average of 9 percent a year — a rate which is almost double that of 1967-72. — CNS

BOOK ILLUSTRATIONS DISPLAYED

Randi Gullerud is shown with one of the original paintings she did for her book, "The Children and the Flowers." All the original illustrations for the book will be on display in the Community Room of Live Oak State Bank through May 30. They will then be shown in the Corpus Christi Museum during the month of June. Ms. Gullerud is currently working on the paintings for her new book, to be called "Seasons of A Child." She works with water colors in a way that really gives feeling to the children's faces. [Pilot Photo by Eddie Bradley]

Students Must Complete End Of Year Report If Receive Social Security

Men and women 18 to 22 who receive social security benefits because they are full-time students should make sure the "end of school year report" form they received is completed and returned to social security, says David Tutt, social security district manager in Corpus Christi.

If the form is not returned in time, benefits will be stopped until an investigation is completed.

After the student completes the top part of the form, he or she should take it to the school registrar who will certify the student's enrollment and return the form to social security.

The form must be completed even if there is no change in the student's plans.

Students should report to social security immediately if they make any change in their plans. Benefits can be paid only while a student is attending school full time.

A student who is not sure whether he or she will return to school in the fall should have his or her benefits stopped. This is true even though benefits can be paid during a vacation period of up to four months.

A student who plans to work during the summer and expects to earn more than $3,720 during 1980 should report this to social security. Some benefits will be withheld if a student earns more than $3,720.

More information about student's benefits can be obtained at the Corpus Christi social security office.

The office is located at 5733 S. Padre Island Drive, telephone number 992-1201.

Help For Hearing-Impaired

Television—which most Americans have taken for granted for years will soon open its doors to the nation's hearing-impaired population.

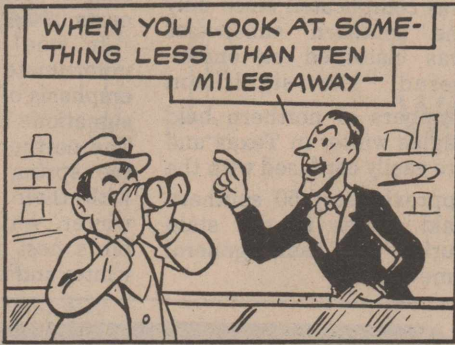

Because of a new system called "closed captioning," people with hearing impairments will be able to "hear" the audio portion of a TV program through subtitles (captions) of the sound-track which appear on the screen.

The National Captioning Institute (NCI) is pioneering

the effort to make prime-time television accessible to hearing-impaired people. NCI is the nonprofit organization charged with captioning programs for interested broadcasters and producers.

Viewers will need special decoding equipment on their home TV sets in order to receive the captions. An adapter unit that attaches to the back of any TV set, or a TV with already built-in decoding equipment, can be purchased from Sears, Roebuck and Co. beginning in 1980.

Mexican freetail bat colonies in the Carlsbad Caverns of New Mexico number an estimated nine million individuals.

Graeme Hurry of Coventry, England, was in no big hurry to call it a day—or night—after camping out. On June 19, 1978, he completed four years of sleeping under the stars and eclipsed his own world record set exactly three years earlier.

Long-term campers, hobbyists and collectors are finding a handy help in boilable, freezable special cooking pouches that you can seal yourself with a special appliance. This small yet versatile Seal-A-Meal system from Dazey comes with its own recipe and instruction book, and works equally well for putting airtight wraps on crackers, breads, small food portions—even model parts and small works of art.

island facts/fancies

From the time of Homer who wrote of Odysseus, who was tempted by the Sirens and charmed by Circe to visit their islands of pleasures, the lure of an island paradise has stirred the imagination of civilized man.

Jekyll Island, off the coast of Georgia, for example, was purchased in 1886 by a group of New York City millionaires. The island was so exclusive that an invitation to visit, if only for a few hours, was coveted by many socialites more than a seat on the New York Stock Exchange. Even the 18th century's most notorious pirates used islands as a tropical reprieve from the relentless pursuit of the British and Spanish navies. Their treasure is thought to remain hidden on many islands, including New York's Gardiner Island as well as the Keeling Islands in the Indian Ocean.

An Irish tramp approached a prosperous looking individual one day, soliciting alms. When he saw the man put his hand in his pocket the tramp cried out, "May the blessing of God follow you all your life." But when the wealthy one pulled out only his handkerchief, the tramp immediately added, "... and never overtake ye."

A railroad agent in Africa had been bawled out for doing things without orders from headquarters. One day his boss received the following startling telegram: "Tiger on platform eating conductor. Wire instructions."

The very small boy came home dejectedly from his first day at school. "Ain't goin' tomorrow," he sputtered. "Why not, dear," his mother asked. "Well, I can't read, and I can't write, and the teacher won't let me talk, so what's the use?"

PAR FOR THE COURSE

The Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, founded in 1754, is responsible for establishing 18 holes as the standard for a round of golf.

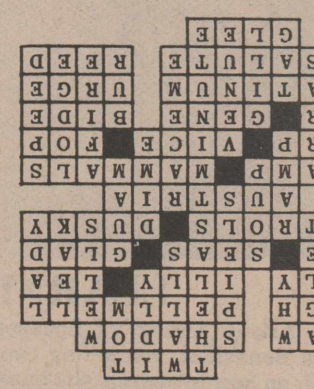

Golf attracts more than 16 million players in the U.S., 25% of them women, who play on more than 11,000 courses.

Jack Nicklaus is the only golfer to win the Masters Tournament two years in a row. He accomplished the feat in 1965 and 1966.

According to A-T-O Inc.'s Rawlings Golf, golf enthusiasts spend more than $600 million a year for equipment and clothing.

A teak tree must be at least 100 years old before it can be cut for timber.
