Accident Takes Lives of Two at Liberal, Kansas

A military parade and celebration was held at Liberal, Kans., Saturday afternoon to further the War Bond Campaign and was climaxed by a tragic accident which took the lives of two residents, Mrs. Sam Dodd, prominent Liberal woman and a sister-in-law of Mrs. M. H. Crum of this city, and Gordon Davis, nine year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Davis of Sublette.

A ride in a jeep was given to the persons buying bonds after the parade. Six persons were in the jeep when a car collided with it, about 6:30 o'clock, causing injuries to all the occupants. Gordon died a few hours later and Mrs. Dodd passed away Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Crum have been in Liberal since Sunday. Others attending the Dodd funeral, which was held Wednesday afternoon, 4:30 o'clock, were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bateman, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Crum, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Crum, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Miller, Mrs. Beulah LeMaster and Mrs. C. W. Claybaugh.

Borger Bridge Is Closed To Traffic

The bridge across the Canadian River on Highway No. 117 between Sunnunt and Borger is closed to traffic. Motorists going to Borger must detour a few miles south of Sunnunt through Plemmons and Phillips into Borger. The detour is a poor oil field road and one that should be avoided.

Perryton to Amarillo traffic will find a better route going west from Sunnunt to Dumas and then into Amarillo. The large gasoline transportation of the Schuster & Boren line is going to Borger by way of Canadian and Pampa.

The Borger Herald reports the closing of the bridge as follows: "A middle span, 190 feet in length collapsed about noon Saturday when a Stewart Construction Company truck loaded with a bulldozer was crossing the river. Some work was done yesterday on the Plemmons crossing to reinforce the bridge to take care of the increased traffic. Reasonably heavy loads were reported crossing the Plemmons bridge today."

County officials along with the highway department officers were in touch with Austin yesterday to get officials here to see about prompt repair of the bridge, according to Judge Norman Coffee. It is believed that it will take from one to two months to repair the crossing.

Church Services at Farnsworth, Sunday

Church services will be held at the Farnsworth schoolhouse Sunday afternoon, October 3, at 3 o'clock. Rev. W. E. Fisher, pastor of the Perryton Methodist church, will bring the message, using as his subject, "The Spirit of Evangelism." This will probably be the last service held at Farnsworth by Rev. Fisher before he attends Conference in November.

Dr. May Resumes Medical Practice

Dr. J. C. May, who has been looking after farming interests in Benton county, Arkansas for the past few months has returned to Perryton. Dr. May announces that he has re-opened his office for the active practice of medicine and surgery.

I Can't

If you feel that you can't buy War Bonds, take a few minutes off, and write your reasons on this piece of paper; then mail it to one of the hundreds of Ochiltree county boys, many of whom are at the fighting front. Your son, or your friend may be facing the hell-fire of modern war... your son or your friend may be lying, body-torn, on a blood-stained battlefield far away from home. Tell him the facts! Tell him that you just CAN'T buy War Bonds!

Back the Attack! Buy War Bonds. Third War Loan closes midnight, Saturday, October 2.

Ellis Theatre Sells $71,577.50 Third War Bonds for Showing of "Destroyer" Tonight

The advance ticket sale at the Ellis Theatre for "Destroyer," the War Bond show, has sold $71,577.50 worth of bonds, purchase price, since the sale opened last Saturday. Virb Conley, manager of the Ellis, stated Wednesday night that bonds will be on sale today and tonight at the theatre.

It is impossible to buy a ticket at any price to see tonight's War Bond show. The only ticket of admittance to this super-attraction is the purchase of War Bond of any denomination.

Mr. Conley is giving the theatre to the Third War Loan for tonight. Two full shows will be run and it is hoped that every seat will be filled at each performance.

All bonds purchased through the Ellis will be available for delivery at the theatre tonight. Those who have made advance purchases and who do not attend the show can get their bonds by calling at the First National Bank.

Virb Conley is not only giving his theatre for one night, but he has been working night and day selling bonds since the drive opened. Reward this patriotic sacrifice by attending "Destroyer" tonight. If you haven't bought a bond, buy a big one. If you have already purchased, buy another and a big one this time. Push the Ellis Theatre Third War Loan Bond drive to the $100,000 mark.

Because of its high standing among school organizations, the Perryton Band was asked by bomber school officials to represent Texas in a tri-state delegation. Similar invitations have been extended to high school bands in Beaver, Okla., and Liberal.

It is contemplated that bands representing the three states—Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas—will be placed at intervals on the flying field to entertain guests during the dedication ceremony, which will get underway promptly at 10 a. m. WACs in All States Drive

Lt. Emma A. Yukna, Pampa, recruiting officer for the Women's Army Corps, was in Perryton Wednesday afternoon in the interest of the WAC All States Campaign. During the 70 day period, September 27-December 7, a drive is under way to enlist 70,000 WACs. Texas' quota in this campaign is 7,224. Of this number, West Texas has been assigned 498, with Lt. Yukna's district assigned 50.

This district under Lt. Yukna includes the following counties: Ochiltree, Gray, Hansford, Lipscomb, Wheeler, Hutchinson, Hemphill and Roberts. Lt. Yukna's office is in the Pampa postoffice building and she can be reached there. Her phone number is 2280.

This All States Campaign is a civilian campaign, stated Lt. Yukna. Mayors and Governors are appointing a local chairman in each city to direct this special drive for WACs.

Women volunteering and accepted in the WACs the first part of October will be sent to Austin on October 18 to be sworn in by Governor Stevenson. This group will go thru their six weeks basic training as a Texas unit, and will carry the state insignia and a Texas flag. The slogan in the Texas campaign is "WAC to replace a fallen Texas hero."

To be eligible to join the WAC, women must be between 20 and 50 years of age, in sound health, with excellent character. For particulars contact Lt. Yukna.

Miss Lair Resigns as Beaver County Agent

Miss Estelle Lair who has served the people of Beaver County, Okla., as home demonstration agent since June 1941, resigned her position Saturday, September 18. A successor has not yet been named; however, every effort is being put forth to secure a home demonstration agent immediately to carry on the activities of the extension service with 4H Clubs and home demonstration clubs of the county.—The Herald-Democrat, Beaver, Okla.

Third War Loan Extended to Midnight, Saturday, October Second; $489,800 is the Goal

Three more days left for the people of Ochiltree county to loan their government $113,161 by the purchase of War Bonds in the Third War Loan. The quota for Ochiltree county is $489,800. Sales at the close of business Wednesday night were $376,639, over one hundred thousand dollars short of the goal.

The closing date of the Third War Loan campaign has been extended from today, Sept. 30, to midnight, Saturday, Oct. 2.

One week ago total sales for the county were $192,219. Sales since then have been $184,420. Sales the first three days of this week were $138,195.

Ochiltree county is making a splendid record. Of the $376,639 invested in bonds to date, every dollar is a bona fide sale. Over $222,000 of this amount is in "E" Bonds. This is a wonderful accomplishment, but it's not enough. We're going to have to dig deeper. We've got the money and we cannot fail our boys in the invasion hour. They are giving their lives, their health, their all. We're only asked to loan our money and be paid interest on the loan.

One hundred men with an investment of $1,000 each can put Ochiltree county over the top. Will you be one of the one hundred? You're not asked to give, you're only asked to loan. The boys in uniform are doing the giving!

There are many men in Ochiltree county who could invest five, ten and even twenty-five thousand dollars in these gilt-edged government securities.

Won't everyone of you heed this last appeal! Buy another bond, be it $18.75 or $25.00. Let it not be said that Ochiltree county failed to answer a single war effort call.

This lung, which is the same type as the one at Borger, and the aspirator attachment are at the Perryton hospital and will be available whenever there is a need for their use.

Ad Finds Tire

A. L. Shuler of the Gray, Okla., community placed a four line local in the classified section of the Herald last week describing a lost pickup tire and wheel and was rewarded by having it returned to him. The wheel had fallen from the pickup and rolled into the edge of a nearby field and was found Monday by G. M. Cooper, who was crossing the field. Mr. Shuler was very grateful for the cooperation shown him in helping hunt for the tire.

El Sombrero

Publishers Statement: Due to shortage of manpower in the mechanical department of the Herald, "El Sombrero" makes its 1943-44 debut in an abbreviated form. Until such time as we can obtain more help, "El Sombrero," as well as all other news of the Perryton community, will be held to a minimum with the Herald staff being the judge as to newsworthiness and value. We suggest to the staff of "El Sombrero" that their news be of the entire school and not Senior High and particularly the Senior Class; and that there be an equitable distribution of names in personal items and news stories, not the week-after-week playing up of a favored few.

Senior High Leads in Bond Sales Last Week

Again bonds and stamps are being sold among the three schools of Perryton. Senior High leads the sales this week with $1,380.00, grade school $421.00 and Junior High $435. Stamps are sold in the following denominations: 10c, 25c, 50c. Bonds any denomination.

It is made possible for the students of "P. H. S." to buy these stamps and bonds through the Victory Club. Edwin Fletcher is the president of this club, and Warren Marshall, sponsor. The Victory Club sold the total of $108,774.15 last year. It is their hope to double that this year and the student body won't let them down. Stamps and bonds will be sold next Thursday. Let's not disappoint this Club.

Rangers Lose To Guymon

Rangers bow before the fighting Tigers of Guymon, Okla. on the Perryton gridiron, Friday, Sept. 24. The Tigers ran up a score of 18-0.

The Rangers made an excellent showing in the first half of the game. They were deep into the enemy's territory more than once during this period. But were unable to cross the goal line. The half ended with the Rangers in possession of the ball on the Tiger's 32 yard line. Neither team had scored at the half.

The Tigers made their first touchdown after picking up a fumble and running over the goal line with no one near the ball carrier. This was in the first part of the third quarter. The second score was made in the last of the third quarter. Failing again to kick the extra point. The Rangers just couldn't start clicking that half. They were unable to hold the big, experienced team of Guymon.

The last touchdown was made at the end of the game. The try for conversion was no good. This left the final score 18-0 with the Tigers victorious.

In spite of the fact that the Rangers were defeated, they proved that they could take it. As the yell goes, "Whether we win or whether we lose, we're Rangers just the same."

Point System for Students Planned

Plans are in process of being formulated for a point system for students. The system will allow credit for special services, point credits rather than units. Special services, participation in student life, and attitudes toward the school program will count for qualification.

A committee, consisting of Martin L. Stevens, chairman, Miss Verna Harris, Miss Eugenia Mitchell, Gilbert Mize, and E. L. Goolsby, is at work on the system and will have a definite plan to be announced in the near future.

Hand Books Given To High Students

With the world situation as it is today, the students of P. H. S. are certainly a lucky group. This week a hand book was issued to every member of the senior and junior high school, including the teachers.

The title, El Libro Mano, means Hand Book. The school paper, El Sombrero is a Spanish word; thus a Spanish name for the hand book.

The purpose for El Libro Mano is certainly a worth while one. It is to stabilize the school program and help students find things. So often folks get confused about schedules, this will discourage confusion. It will help straighten many other small difficulties.

The contents is certainly plentiful. Everything a person needs to know about P. H. S. is between the covers. It is indexed so the desired information may be found quickly and easily. There is a scale drawing of the entire school house. The teachers and courses taught are named. And a host of other useful suggestions is within.

This book was given to the student body by the National Honor Society. They chose this project last spring. Starting to work late in August, Miss Eugenia Mitchell worked with the staff faithfully. From reports, the members have exerted a lot of energy on the composition of El Libro Mano. A few of the toilers are Opal Pearl Murray, Joy Lance, Joan Boston, Gale Rogers, and Kathleen Brillhart. Thank Kaddy for the sketch of the school house. Where there is work to be done Miss Verna Harris is to be found. She is the sponsor of the National Honor Society.

The book doesn't cost the students a cent, but it should be well taken care of. It is certain that El Libro Mano will be looked into more frequently than some of the text books that are supposed to be in use everyday.

well liked by the high school athletes. The boys learn much in the way of sports under the leadership of T. V. "Tom" Slack.

Last but not least is the Service Club. Miss Eugenia Mitchell and her club members do everything in their power to serve P. H. S. This club is helpful to the student body.

Martin L. Stevens announced that there may be more clubs later.

'Fired Wife' Opens Sunday

The hilarious results of a secret marriage are revealed with extraordinary effect in "Fired Wife," playing Sunday and Monday at the Ellis Theatre. The new comedy-drama, starring Robert Paige and Louise Allbritton, is one of the most mirthful and entertaining pictures in the current array of fun-films. Diana Barrymore and Walter Abel have leading featured roles.

'Nabody's Darling' Starts Next Tuesday

All the refreshing charm of youth is effectively showcased in "Nabody's Darling," playing next Tuesday and Wednesday at the Ellis. Heading the cast is a young lady who not so many years ago was endeavoring herself to Gene Autry's myriads of fans in juvenile "kid sister" portrayals. Her name is Mary Lee, and now she has grown up into charming and gracious adolescence.

The same fans who chuckled over her antics as a youngster will heartily applaud her polished and thoroughly believable performance as the adolescent school girl, in an academy whose students are almost exclusively offspring of the movie great. Playing opposite her is Jackie Moran, who also was well known as a child star not many years ago.

'Background to Danger' Stars George Raft

The great American appetite for exciting mystery and adventure stories should find satisfaction in the new film, "Background to Danger" which plays next Thursday and Friday at the Ellis. Little known Turkey holding the strategically important Dardanelles is the colorful locale of the film.

A sensational plot to disrupt Russian-Turkish relations is the basis for the picture, a story laid against a fast-moving melodrama of the far-flung counter-espionage network of the FBI. The film stars George Raft and Sydney Greenstreet and has a competent supporting cast headed by Peter Lorre and Brenda Marshall.

New Game Bird Thrives in Texas Panhandle

In the Panhandle, particularly in the Canadian River Country, the nesting ground has been built to order for Hungarian Partridges," writes Eltinge F. Warner, publisher of FIELD & STREAM, in the current issue of that popular sportsman's magazine. A wire from Gene Howe, of Amarillo, Texas, quoted in Mr. Warner's article, says that numerous large coveys have been raised from the original planting of 150 pairs of these speedy game birds shipped in from Canada last March and April.

The partridge planting project along with other Southwestern States, the climate and nesting conditions are ideal. Warner and his hunting pals talked to every one they could find who knew anything about Hungarians, particularly Fred Green of Calgary, who imported the first Huns to Alberta thirty-five years ago. They read everything they could scrape together on the life and habit of the little foreigner, and among other things discovered that the hen lays her eggs in a small depression such as a hoof-print, or anything similar; that unless the soil is sandy and drains off rapidly, the water in these depressions rots the eggs. That is why the Hungarian partridge has not done well in many parts of the United States. But in the Panhandle, and in similar areas of New Mexico, conditions are ideal.

On every ranch where the Huns were released the owners have agreed to take care of them and see that the coveys get a fair chance to multiply, and to furnish the game commission with periodical reports on how the birds are doing. A FIELD & STREAM "game protective association" was organized, pledged to take care of the little band.

Murrell L. Buckner, Chairman of the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster

Commission, and Gene Howe, a member of the commission, arranged for the distribution areas and supervised the planting. "We are three years from now there will be a short open season on Hungarians in the Southwestern states," he points out that the Huns are great migrants, and believes that the Texas stock will in time outdo its neighboring areas of origin in climate and conditions, just as the birds migrated from their original Alberta through Quebec and Ontario, until now there are literally millions of these birds in Canada and our own Northwest.

High School Clubs Are Organized

What is more important in the activities of the student body in general than the various Clubs? Again Perryton High School is offering a variety of entertaining as well as educational Clubs.

The Clubs were organized last Wednesday and they seem to be off to a flying start.

Of all the Clubs, none is more worthy of recognition than the Victory Club. Warren Marshall was chosen as sponsor of this active Club by its members and Martin L. Stevens will assist the members in their important problems.

"The Perryton High Players," are to be sponsored by Miss Verna Harris. This club was newly organized last year and will rate high among all activities this year.

The Manual Training Club, which is sponsored by E. L. Goolsby, is an old and reliable club and is run whole heartedly by the student body.

Miss Betty Jane Alexander will sponsor the Home Makers. This Club is very well liked by the girls of Perryton High School.

The Future Farmers of America is sponsored by C. H. Williams, who has always made this club very likeable.

Tomatoes Rich in Food Values

The tomato is a peculiarly important food. No other gives so many kinds of value. There is nothing to match the tomato in flavor, in color, or in variety of possibilities for the use of its food value. The food value of the tomato is just as high as that of an orange, grapefruit, or other citrus fruit.

Tomatoes are rich in Vitamins A, B, C, and E according to Sadie Howard Home Demonstration Agent. They also contain niacin, which is one of the factors in preventing pellagra. One medium ripe red tomato will furnish about half of the day's requirement for Vitamin C.

You'll get most of goodness from tomatoes if you eat them often and eat them raw. A clean, ripe tomato is a welcome addition to any meal. Or you may prefer to eat them in slices, almost to the seeds, spreading the sections, and stuffing. A good center filling might include cottage cheese with chopped onion or peanuts, or chicken salad.

If you slice tomatoes, it's more important to leave the skin on. But if you must peel them, dip them in hot water, then in cold water. After you skin them, keep them cold and covered until they are served. Fresh vegetable salad can stand generous amounts of tomatoes. A combination of green tomatoes, onion, lettuce, cucumbers, and tomatoes offer a good starter. Finally, if you have plenty of tomatoes on hand, be sure to can both tomatoes and juice for the time of the year when fresh ones aren't available.

Prepare Pullets For Fall Home

This is the season of the year when our pullets are coming into production. We should make certain that these birds are practically free of both internal and external parasites before they are moved into a laying house. According to County Agent Clay Spurlock, it is best to make a thorough examination of the pullets to determine if they are infested with parasites and if so treat them while on the range. Pullets should be moved to the permanent laying house approximately two weeks before they come into production.

Examine all pullets as they are placed in the laying house to determine if they have good body weight and are not showing colds or any other form of disease. Infectious bronchitis or laryngotracheitis may be evident in your flock at this time. The symptoms of bronchitis may include some of those seen in laryngotracheitis, such as gasping or mouth breathing, coughing, breathing noises, swelling of the nasal sinuses, nasal discharge, watering of the eyes, and swelling under the mandible. The lesions in uncomplicated bronchitis are located in the lungs, whereas in uncomplicated laryngotracheitis the principal tissue changes are found in the larynx and trachea. When an outbreak is found, strict sanitation should be followed. The feed and water containers should be thoroughly disinfected and a mild disinfectant used in the drinking water. A good spray should be used at least twice each day and should be sprayed over the heads of the birds so that they will inhale the vapors. If a good bronchial spray cannot be secured, the poultryman can use the following formula in making a satisfactory spray. Formula: One (1) part formaldehyde, two (2) parts glycerine, and seven (7) parts water.

Those pullets that are under-developed should be left on the range for several weeks. It is a good practice to feed heavily on grain to pullets even after they have started into production in order to maintain their body weight. It is advisable to keep growing mash before the pullets until they are in approximately 20 per cent lay. Then they should be gradually changed to a good laying mash, and this should be kept before them at all times. In order to insure good body weight and to prevent the pullets from going into a partial molt, it is a good practice to feed a fleshing mash. This should be fed preferably at noon at the rate of 3 pounds of dry weight of mash moistened with milk or water for each 100 hens. A good fleshing mash can be made by taking 50 pounds of laying mash and adding 25 pounds of ground barley and 25 pounds of ground oats, making 100 pounds of fleshing mash. For early hatched pullets Spurlock recommends feeding whole oats during the first few months of laying, thereby keeping pullets in good body weight and preventing the possibility of neck molt. Oats or a fleshing mash will maintain flesh without putting on an extra amount of fat.

Now is the time to make arrangements for winter laying quarters for the pullets. The house in which they are to be moved should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. These pullets should have at least three square feet of housing space each, and plenty of water space during the first few months of laying. The time spent in cleaning the poultry house before pullets are placed in it will result in having healthier and more vigorous pullets during the winter and spring production period.

Inhibitor Added Old Anti-Freeze Needs Corrosion

If you saved your anti-freeze solution from last winter the War Production Board advises you to add an "inhibitor" to prevent motor corrosion before you put it back in your automobile, truck, or tractor radiator for the coming winter.

Inhibitors come in the form of a liquid or powder. They prevent rust and corrosion but do not add to the protective strength of the anti-freeze solution.

Before an anti-freeze solution is put back into the radiator, it should be tested to determine what temperature it will protect against. If fresh anti-freeze is needed to strengthen the solution, it is better, W.P.B. says, that the same type of anti-freeze be added.

Adequate supplies of the permanent types of anti-freeze may be available only to motorists living in high altitudes. Motorists in other regions may add alcohol to strengthen their anti-freeze. Alcohol will mix satisfactorily with the permanent types of anti-freeze, although an accurate test, reading of the protective value of the resultant mixture cannot be obtained.

If you have left your anti-freeze in the radiator since last winter, new inhibitor should be added, W.P.B. advises, as it deteriorates after a season's use. The anti-freeze itself also loses its strength and should be tested to determine the amount of new anti-freeze that should be added along with the inhibitor.

Directions for use of inhibitors vary according to kind of inhibitor and anti-freeze solution, and motorists should follow instructions given by the manufacturers of the products they use.

Cover fresh meat loosely. Wipe with damp cloth just before cooking. If ground, store in extra cool place and cook soon.

Fish and other sea foods spoil in a few hours at room temperature. Cook at once, or wrap in wax paper to keep odor from other food, and store very cold.

Don't wash eggs before storing. Water destroys the protective film that keeps out air and odors. Wipe eggs off with dry, rough cloth. Store eggs in open bowl or wire basket in a cool place.

The fresher a vegetable when it is used, the better the taste, the less waste, and the more vitamins retained.

The cooling system of the motor should be thoroughly cleaned before adding any anti-freeze or inhibitor, and if the anti-freeze has been stored in a container since last winter, any sediment should be carefully removed before the solution is put back into the cooling system.

Realistic Postwar Program

Americans must not sit back and wait for the end of the war to come and then flounder around for solutions to the problems they will have to face, or worse still, be forced into accepting tailor-made solutions of theorists.

Fortunately, Americans aren't.

From Albert Lea, the Minnesota farm community of 12,000, there comes a concrete program for a "full-employment" peacetime economy. In what is probably one of the first community postwar planning studies in the United States, a survey probed into every facet of the town's economic potential to discover the jobs that will have to be found if there is to be a job for every man who wants one when the uniforms come off.

Through interviews with all local employers, data were obtained on the probable number of jobs that will exist after the war. Studies also were made on markets, farm income, business conditions, and projected public works in the community. Potential postwar customers in the city and nearby farming community were queried to learn what they wanted to buy in the first two postwar years.

Here is a community of citizens, genuinely concerned with the postwar picture, who do not lean back dolefully and wait for utter confusion, or indulge in the wishful thinking that envisages the brave new world of wonderful inventions to begin the moment hostilities cease.

Of course we cannot plan against all the eventualities that will occur after the war. But we can take stock now. And each community in the country should be "taking notes" of this kind to refer to when the crucial time comes.

For Tax Simplification

Is there anyone today who does not feel the impact of the complicated tax system? Can there be anyone who does not feel the need for simplification?

Let these people take heart, for from Senator Walter F. George, Chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, whose duty it is to investigate measures and methods for the simplification of taxes, comes this statement:

"If a statute is supplemented by complicated regulations or technical interpretations, little is accomplished by a simple law."

"However, I believe that the first step towards simplification which should be undertaken by the Committee is to make the income tax law more simple and understandable."

"I believe that emphasis should first be directed towards the income tax rather than the excess-profits tax, as I hope the excess-profits tax can be repealed immediately after the termination of the war, in order to encourage new ventures and stimulate private enterprise."

This is a very definite step in the right direction, and, more fortunately, it comes from a man thoroughly conversant with the nation's tax picture. Less preoccupation with the excess-profits laws which are draining industry's post-war reserves, and more attention to the tax quandary of the large majority of the nation would make this phase of the war program far easier to take.

Vocational Training and Employment Aids in Rehabilitation of Disabled Soldiers, Sailors

The readjustment and happiness of wounded soldiers and sailors with conspicuous physical disfigurements or disabilities or nervous manifestations will depend in large measure on the way their families and friends and the public at large behave toward them. This was stated today by the Office of War Information in a release which also summarized the rehabilitation and employment facilities for servicemen disabled in combat.

Thanks to modern therapy, many of the men suffering from even the severest wounds will be rehabilitated and enabled to lead lives of normal activity, engaging in industry, business or professions. But the most modern medical and psychiatric care, the finest surgery and appliances, expert rehabilitation, vocational training and employment opportunities are far from being all that is needed by the men who have suffered disfigurements and disabilities. Much of the work can be undone or will remain incomplete if the men's families and friends and the public at large fail to behave with restraint, intelligence and consideration. The OWI passes along a number of suggestions, made by the Surgeon General of the Army, concerning everyday behavior on the part of friends, family and acquaintances most calculated to lessen the inevitable difficulties of adjustment of disabled veterans.

If a formerly able-bodied young man returns from combat with a disfigurement or other serious disability—whether deafness, blindness, a shattered jaw, an amputation or burns—he is almost certain to be emotionally disturbed. In other cases the wound he brings back may be mental.

In his disturbed state the man has his own idea of what a cripple is—an idea which all too often approaches a popular conception arising from ignorance.

A soldier who finds himself without legs, for example, may well think of himself in the situation of the legless beggar he used to see pushing himself along on a little cart on the crowded sidewalks downtown—and he may think that is how others think of him, too. He does not yet know of the vital and interesting work being done—and done perfectly—by men with amputations in industry and in offices.

A greater proportion of employed handicapped persons are in professional and managerial jobs in this country than in any other kind of employment.

A man who is newly blinded may associate blindness with a limited, futile, kind of existence—selling shoelaces or chewing gum in a subway station. He has never had occasion to know about the hundreds of blind persons who are doing invaluable work in many kinds of war industries—sorting delicate precision instruments, inspecting parts by touch, etc.

It is only natural that maimed young men should think bitter thoughts, lose their self-confidence. It is the exceptional man who does not.

And yet, in case after case, maimed young men have been freed from their black thoughts and bitterness, and have had their self-confidence restored, by the professional, expert—and difficult—rehabilitation treatment they have received, as soon as possible after injury, in Army and Navy hospitals and in the hospitals of the Veterans' Administration. Disabled merchant seamen are cared for in U. S. Public Health Service Marine Hospitals.

In all these institutions, the restoration of self-confidence, as an aid in the restoration of physical health, is the immediate aim of doctors, nurses, and other personnel.

Men with amputations are entertained by professional solo dancers—who after going through their strenuous routine display their artificial limbs. Newly blinded men, under the charge of blind members of the hospital staff, are given messages to deliver in various parts of the building and encouraged to find their way around unaided. Men made totalling deaf (who often suffer as great an emotional shock as those who are blinded) are introduced to vivacious and charming young women members of the staff. They converse—the young women writing their questions or remarks on slips of paper and the men talking. After they have had a good time playing cards or other games, the young women—who have followed the men's conversation with complete normality—casually remark the fact that they, too, are totally deaf.

These are only a few examples of the great amount of confidence-restoring work being done in hospitals.

Details of accomplishments in the field of physical rehabilitation—the next step—becoming increasingly familiar to American readers of newspapers and magazines. Injured muscles are brought back into play, new or unused muscles are trained. When necessary, efficient surgical appliances are carefully fitted to replace amputated hands, feet or limbs. A typical case is that of a 22-year-old Second Lieutenant, in a mood of cynical despair following the loss of a hand in African fighting. Today, fitted with an artificial hand and wearing the Distinguished Service Cross, he has been promoted to Captain and is Assistant to the Commanding Officer in Charge of Plans and Training at a camp in a southern state.

Nervous disabilities resulting from combat experiences are treated with equal care. In some cases prolonged psychiatric treatment is necessary; occupational therapy cures others rapidly. One infantryman, for example, was brought to an evacuation hospital in the Solomon Islands suffering from fear, trembling and palpitations as a result of seeing the man next to him blown to pieces during an advance. The wise medical officer in charge asked him permission whether he would be willing to help out the hospital in an emergency by acting as litter-bearer. He said he would—and in caring for others soon lost his own symptoms and was able to return to duty. In that hospital, at least, a large proportion of those men with nervous disabilities suffered in combat who have been able to assume responsible duties have needed little if any other rehabilitation. Men who develop nervous disabilities before combat experience are usually either transferred to another branch of the service or honorably discharged.

When he has recovered his physical or psychic health and is discharged from the Army or Navy hospital, the serviceman in need of vocational training is eligible to receive it from the Veterans' Administration if he has suffered a ten percent or greater disability, resulting in a vocational handicap, while in service. If not, the same training is open to him through the Vocational Rehabilitation Division of the United States Office of Education, where, also at government expense, he will be taught the skills of a job. In every case, representatives of the Red Cross and other agencies are on hand in the hospitals to advise the men concerning their rights to pensions, training and employment and to give them any further guidance they may want.

Vocational training in the Veterans' Administration and other institutions is directed toward preparing the wounded man not only to fill a job in which his wound will not be a handicap, but to do important work which he will enjoy and for which he is temperamentally suited. In all cases, even those capable only of self-employment at home, the goal is useful, functional, independent living—not dependent, permanent residence in hospitals.

After vocational training comes employment, and here many agencies are working for the wounded serviceman.

The Veterans' Administration secures jobs for many of the men it has trained. Industry, which has gained considerable experience in the employment of handicapped workers during the current manpower shortage, is eager to hire returned servicemen because of their morale-raising effect on their fellow workers.

The Selective Service law contains provisions regarding the return of a discharged serviceman to his old job, and the Re-employment Division of Selective Service writes each discharged serviceman a letter explaining his rights and advising him on procedure. Few employers have thus far refused to take men back. Most of them are cooperative. In a case reported in a recent issue of Yank, the Army weekly, a private who had been an operator in a motion-picture theater before his induction was given a Certificate of Disability discharge. When his former employer was unwilling to take him back on the ground that his new operator was satisfactory and he didn't want to make a change, the ex-soldier reported the matter to the re-employment representative on his Draft Board, who in turn reported to Selective Service National Headquarters. The employer soon received a letter calling attention to the soldier's re-employment rights and asking if he was aware of his obligation under the law and about them and that you assume the machinery that could and would be invoked to enforce it. The ex-private was back on his job within a week.

The Army, the Navy, the Civil Service Commission, the United States Employment Service (USES), the Office of Education, and the Red Cross have all laid plans in advance for insuring the employment of discharged servicemen, including the disabled. Many men want not their old jobs but better jobs, and often they are trained so that they get them.

Great care is taken to see that men are properly placed. One sailor, blown off the deck of a battleship and badly burned, was left with a nervous disability after his wounds had healed. He was unable to control the shaking of his hands. When he returned home the USES office got him several jobs in succession, but he couldn't overcome his nervousness. The Veterans' Employment Representative, determined to find the right job for him, took him to a small machine shop, where he was given a job operating a punch and shear machine located in a secluded corner. Here he was able to adjust himself more readily to work and his nervousness diminished; today he is a valued employee, and the twitching of his hands is scarcely perceptible.

In an increasing number of cases the Army and the Navy do not discharge disabled men, but employ them in limited service after their physical rehabilitation, training them if necessary. A disabled Air Force pilot, for example, disqualified as a result of wounds, often gets a great psychological lift if he finds himself able to fill another kind of job in the Air Force. Often, too, technical skills acquired in the Army or Navy have fitted disabled servicemen to take jobs after discharge. Many of the ex-servicemen who have been taken out of the big game before it is finished want to stay as close to the war as possible, and increasingly they are being given the opportunity to do so.

In summary, Americans can rest assured that their wounded soldiers and sailors are being given the most modern medical and psychiatric care, the finest surgery and appliances, expert rehabilitation, vocational training and finally employment opportunities that confirm their hard-won feelings of independence. All these things are being provided, and provided by persons and organizations expert in their field, professionally equipped to further the welfare of wounded ex-servicemen.

But the American people—the families, friends and acquaintances of the disabled and disfigured men, and the public at large—have a responsibility in the matter too. It is up to them to further the men's progress during rehabilitation by considerate and cooperative behavior. Men who are working hard to acquire new self-confidence, or who have acquired it, must not be jolted out of it by thoughtless, uncontrolled manifestations of pity or horror or distaste or false cheeriness or too-cager curiosity or other emotionalism.

For the purpose of increasing public awareness of some of the problems faced by disabled and disfigured men in their search for rehabilitation and normal living, and for the purpose of indicating to what extent public cooperation can be of benefit, the Surgeon General of the Army has set forth a series of guide-posts not only for the families and friends of such men, but for all who may come in contact with them. The suggestions are intended especially for the period of rehabilitation in hospitals or vocational training centers, but they also hold good for later, after the wounded men's return to civilian life.

It is emphasized that they apply to all types of disability cases where the patient is emotionally disturbed: cases of disfigurement, such as burns or amputations; cases of blindness or deafness; and psychiatric cases, where the patient suffers from mental shock.

Already some of the men in Army and Navy hospitals, especially those suffering from psychic disturbances, turn to their homes because they are expressing unwillingness to re-dread the well-meant but emotionally trying welcome they know they would receive.

Self-discipline and restraint will have to be practiced by many persons who have never before been in the presence of disfigured or crippled men—especially by members of a disfigured man's family, and by his friends, when seeing him for the first time since his injury. This effort must be made if the men are not to receive set-backs in their progress.

1. TREAT THE MAIMED PERSON AS THE NORMAL PERSON HE ALWAYS HAS BEEN AND CONTINUES TO BE.

The loss of an arm or a jaw or an ear or a leg may change the appearance of a man. But personality and character are not necessarily changed. It is true that they are almost certain to be affected superficially and temporarily, until self-confidence is restored; but after that point a disabled man's personality may even grow, as the result of his own knowledge of the handicap which he has overcome and the respect of others. John, who has lost his jaw, is still everything his friends have always known him to be. His disfigurement does not make him into a different person, though it may well result in his growing to be a bigger one.

If you are disturbed by the disfigurement, discipline yourself so that your disturbance is not so apparent. Do not let horror or sorrow appear on your face or in your voice more easily avoid being the kind of or manner. This may not be easy, and you may not succeed entirely. But you will think of the feelings of the man you are visiting instead of your own. It is up to you to make him realize—without talking about it—that you feel about him exactly as always, and that his disfigurement is unimportant compared with your affection or friendship. The only difference could be an even increased respect for him.

There is much to be gained from contact with a person who has suffered a handicap and overcome it. Such a person often gains extraordinary largeness of character from his fight and his success, and those around him, in turn gain from his example.

Treating disabled men as normal people is particularly important in cases of mental disability. Often, in cases of this kind, the average person retains ancient prejudices, and approaches a patient either with distaste or as though he were a child or a fool. It should be kept in mind that vast strides have been made in recent years in the treatment and rehabilitation of the mentally and nervously afflicted. They are simply ill—and their illnesses are usually curable.

It should be emphasized also that excessive praise of a disabled man because of his disability is not helpful. A blinded hero is certainly entitled to much praise for his devotion and sacrifice; but sentimentalizing is far from having the permanent value of rehabilitation, training in Braille, a job, and independence.

2. DON'T ASK QUESTIONS OR GIVE ADVICE.

The man who has been disabled or disfigured may want to talk about himself or he may not. Respect his wishes. Do not mention the disfigurement unless he does.

If he does not want to talk about himself, talk about things he is interested in, or about objects in the room, or hobbies, or details of common interest. Don't talk about the war or about subjects related to his injury. Don't pry or hint.

If he is eager to talk about himself, listen and try to understand what he wants to express. If he asks you questions about himself—if he asks for your opinions concerning the adequacy of the treatment he is receiving, or his chances for recovery, or his prospects of getting a job—answer them as best you can, but don't become involved. Remember that your opinions on such matters are probably worth nothing. It is not your opinions, but those of the experts who are caring for him, that count. Your responsibility is to listen without doing harm. The proffering of opinions and advice without any knowledge to back them up CAN do harm.

The best answer to give a wounded man who asks you "Am I going to be good for anything?" is "If you WANT to be good for something, determination helps." If you are related to a wounded or disfigured man, make it your business to know about the rehabilitation and accomplishments of persons as badly handicapped as he is, or more so, and be able to tell him about them—not in a preachy way, but factually. Let him see that you know he will take full advantage of his opportunities.

In the special cases of disabled men who cannot talk, whether because of mental injury or because of physical injury of jaw or throat, it is up to you to talk to them—naturally, and phrasing your conversation so that it is clear you do not expect a reply. Try to be guided by the patient's reactions. If, due to shock or physical immobility, he shows no reaction, be casual and undisturbed. Unknown to you, he may be encouraged and reassured by your words.

3. BE CASUAL AND REALISTIC—NOT OVER-CHEERY.

The man you are visiting may feel depressed. It is his right to feel so. It is an offense to his dignity and his common sense to go into a routine of transparent "cheeriness." The express intent of cheering up is seldom convincing or effective.

Nor is it usually convincing or beneficial to try to minimize the crippling effect of maiming. By facing the reality of a man's disability yourself, you can help him face it.

Personal anxieties and problems of all kinds lose their capacity to frighten if they are brought out into the open, squarely faced and talked about. A disfigured man who finds his friends acting naturally and casually about his disfigurement will person who goes thru life shrinking if a child asks, "What's the matter with that man?"

If a person has one leg, it is better to admit that fact and not try to conceal it. If one is deaf, not treated as an embarrassing detail. A hearing aid or an artificial leg is just that and nothing more. The only difference it makes is that one hears or walks better with than without it.

4. DON'T WAIT ON THE DISABLED MAN TOO MUCH.

Even though a disabled soldier or sailor be surrounded with sympathy and given countless attentions, he may still despair. He may still feel himself as a martyr—an attitude which brings little happiness to him and no benefit to anybody else. His faith in his ability to do things is restored the rest of the treatment is easy.

If there is something the person can do for you, let him do it. Helping others is an important part of rehabilitation. In the hospital, men who have already learned to get about out of doors alone help others to do the same. The families of men who have returned to the homes can greatly help them by letting it be seen that they expect self-reliance and cooperation, and not being pessimistic or over-protective.

Christian Science

"Unreality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 3.

The Golden Text is: "If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Romans 8:31).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding" (Jeremiah 51:15).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Good cannot result in evil. As God Himself is good and is Spirit, goodness and spirituality must be immortal. Their opposites, evil and matter, are mortal error, and error has no creator" (page 277).

NEWS in the WORLD of RELIGION by W. W. REID

The Church of the Brethren, long identified with rural sections of America, has voted a $50,000 revolving fund to help young men of the Brethren Church establish themselves on farms. According to Secretary Leland F. Brubaker, the Church will buy a farm in a Brethren community, if the young man who wants it and the land also are approved by the local church. The young farmer will pay down about 10 per cent of the total value of the farm, and the remainder carried for twenty to thirty years at a rate at least 1 per cent lower than money available elsewhere. Dr. Brubaker believes this is a step which, if undertaken by other churches also, would lead to the rehabilitation of rural parishes. It is suggested that not only denominations but perhaps many local churches could organize cooperatively to help young men secure farms in this manner.

Led by Bishop Beverly D. Tucker, head of the Episcopal Diocese of Ohio, Clerical and lay workers are completing arrangements for the 54th General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church which will meet in Cleveland, October 2-11. This convention is the legislative body of the church, and meets in two houses: the House of Bishops, and the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies. The convention meets triennially. The first session was in 1788. Among the matters of business will be the adoption of a three-year missionary program; election of missionary bishops; action on union with the Presbyterian Church, and on the retirement of bishops at 72; election of a presiding bishop; and possible revision of the law on remarriage after divorce.

Anticipating early relief of Greece from Axis domination, the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions (Congregational-Christian Church) is organizing a self-supporting unit of volunteer workers to carry on, for one year, a social service, relief, and rehabilitation program. Each member contribute $2500, or have some church or organization contribute that amount; this will provide transportation, living expenses, and help toward relief. The party will consist of business men and women, teachers, nurses' aides, club leaders, Red Cross and social workers; members should be 24 to 65 years of age. The party will live at Pierce College, Athens. Service will range from conducting a rest house for mothers and children, to working in hospitals, assisting in recreational centers and cooperating with government and other relief agencies. It is expected that the party will sail shortly after the liberation of Greece. President Katherine McElroy of Pierce College is now at the church headquarters, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, recruiting the party.

One of the best-known and most colorful missionaries in the world will retire next year. He is Dr. Sam Higginbottom, principal of the Allahabad Agricultural Institute in India since 1911, and recently moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. Coming to the United States at the turn of the century from Wales, Dr. Higginbottom was sent to India as a teacher of economics by the Presbyterian Church. But during his first years of service, he was deeply impressed by the poverty of the people and especially by their inability to secure enough food to keep themselves properly fed. Returning to the United States, he took an agricultural degree at Ohio State University and went back to India to organize the Institute, the agricultural college of Allahabad University. Its graduates are serving in every province of India and elsewhere in Asia, teaching better farming and operating farm schools. Dr. Higginbottom has been influential in introducing many new food crops and farming methods to people of India. He will be succeeded by Dr. John L. Goheen, the organizer of the Sangli Agricultural and Industrial School in India.

The American-missionary-supported University of Nanking, China, now in temporary exile in Chengtu, West China, boasts of something new in educational service. It has a "Department of Educational Cinematography" which sends through-out Free China documentary and United States and Great Britain, and all assisting China and the United Nations in the prosecution of defense against Japan. These are shown to vast audiences, sometimes to as many as 10,000 people. The University has established a "National Microfilm Library" in Chungking, and sends copies of films to all parts of China. It is also manufacturing microfilms of about 400 subjects, and furnishing them to all film libraries in China. Films are also being produced of various Chinese industries and these are being shown throughout the United Nations.

I'M HERE... the enemy's just over the hill

We're Doing All We Can!

I've got something to say to you. I've got to make you understand. This is it. This is the zero hour. This is INVASION. My buddies and I don't like it over here, but we're going to stay, even if it means the thing—well, the thing we don't like to talk about. Because we're giving all we've got: Our minds, our strength, our blood. But you see, this isn't going to be enough. Not unless those planes we need snarl down out of the sky on the enemy just over there. Unless those tanks get here. Unless the supply ships get through. Unless there are enough bullets for this rifle. See what I mean?

Our Defenders Speak!

The Herald asks that men and women from this community serving in the armed forces write letters to this department for publication. Letters to relatives that would be of interest to the public will be published under this heading.

Dear Mr. Stewart and all:

With each move, I lose two or three days in getting the Ochiltree Herald. However, at last I have landed at a field where I expect to remain for the next few months. So the paper won't be needlessly delayed anymore. I'll just send you my new address.

The Hondo Navigation School is a rather pretty place, and they certainly try to give the students all the breaks possible. Each one is issued a very extensive set of equipment, which incidentally remains with him as long as he remains a navigator in the U. S. Army Air Corps. If anyone finds it hard to obtain a good watch, just tell them to join the air corps as a navigator. Because among this equipment are three excellent watches, a Waltham wrist watch, an Elgin stop watch and a Hamilton master watch.

I haven't begun flying from Hondo yet. In fact, our class only started yesterday, so as far, I find this quite fascinating work.

Thanks again for sending out the home town paper. I for one, really appreciate it.

With best regards,
A. C. Charles Bowen

August 30, 1943

Dear Folks:

Today was another rainy day. We have more rainy weather than I have ever seen. It seems to be always raining. Occasionally we do have a clear day on this air base. The average day doesn't go off with a bang as you might expect. There aren't any of the usual sound effects as bugle calls, roll out, etc., as you sometimes hear. Instead maybe enlisted men may be going by the hut with mess kits, and far in the distance you hear engines being tuned up for a mission. Then there are the boys who load the bombs, a complete night's sleep is a rare treat to them, as no one informs them officially until just before take off, that there is a mission. They rush bombs out in a movable rack and by rope and pulley arrangements they soon load them. They know what they are doing. Until the fuse caps are inserted the bombs will not go off. Once these are in, it slightly increases their chances of being blown to everlasting life. Should a rope break or a chain slide, but then there is a gadget that steers it through the air and releases the detonator. Therefore the bomb will not explode until it has dropped through space a certain distance.

As you go to breakfast everything is quiet and seems to be a picture.

As ever,
Ted
Lt. Ted Lehman

County Resident Cans 3,000 Quarts Food for Victory

In the past two years, Mrs. Emmett Bennett, of south part of Ochiltree County, has canned more than 3,000 quarts of fruit, vegetables and meat. The greater part of this food was produced by Mrs. Bennett.

"In 1942, I canned over 2,000 quarts, and raised over 1,000 chickens. This year, I raised 1,200 chickens and canned 900 quarts of fruit, vegetables and chickens," stated Mrs. Bennett. In addition to canning sufficient chicken for her family, she sold $150.00 fryers and had all the fried chicken that her family of five cared to eat.

With the help of her son, Maurice, Mrs. Bennett produces 90 percent of their living. In addition, she cares for an invalid husband and a paralyzed child.

Every year, Mrs. Bennett raises a large garden and the major part of the food for her home consumption. When she lived in Hemphill County, she won a blue ribbon for producing the most food of any woman in the county. She is setting an enviable record in the production of food for victory, and providing more food for our boys in service.

Wartime Lighting Suggestions

HOW TO GET MORE LIGHT FROM YOUR PRESENT EQUIPMENT

Keep Bulbs, Diffusing Bowls and Enclosing Globes Clean

You're paying for light you're not getting when dust and dirt accumulate on lighting equipment. Light meter tests show that simply by cleaning bulbs, diffusing bowls and enclosing globes you can increase light output as much as 30 to 50 percent. Unscrew bulbs and wipe them off with a damp cloth. Remove diffusing bowls, enclosing globes and other lighting glassware and wash in warm, soapy water. Be sure to dry all lighting equipment thoroughly before using again.

OTHER WAYS TO CONSERVE LIGHT

1. Keep shade linings light. Clean or brush regularly. Repaint or reline dark-colored paper or parchment shades.

2. Sit close enough to the lamp to get all the help it can give your eyes.

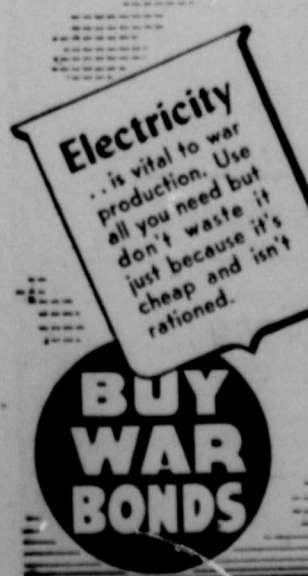

3. Avoid direct glare from lamp bulbs by using shades deep enough and wide enough.

4. Arrange furniture so one lamp can serve two people. But be sure lamp is not too far away from either person.

5. Have eyes examined regularly by a competent eyeglass specialist.

6. Turn off lamps not in use. Lamp bulbs use critical materials. Make them last longer.

Pre-Induction Training for Boys
More than one million 16- and 17-year-old boys will be enrolled in volunteer civilian pre-induction training courses in the nation's schools this fall, according to the War Department. Representing an enrollment of more than half of all the physically able boys at these age levels, the students are taking courses that will prepare them for more effective service in the armed forces. Officers at army reception centers record all pre-induction training on the soldier's permanent record card. This training is taken into consideration in making assignments to further training and army jobs.

Army Spends Million for Recreation
The army is spending more than a million dollars a month for recreation and athletic equipment for its fighting men at home and overseas, the War Department reports. Equipment is provided for the fa-rite outdoor sports of the fighting men, particularly baseball and football. Those preferring less active recreation have the choice of cards, dominoes, darts, chess, checkers, backgammon, or bingo. Included among the purchases are musical instruments.

be directed along a route enabling them to see virtually every phase of Army Air Forces life without leaving their automobiles.

Completing their tour of the field at the flying line, they will be directed to parking places on the runways. Here, guests will have an unobstructed panoramic view of the field and of the aerial show highlighting the ceremonies.

Outer gates of the field will be closed at 9:30 a. m. and all motorists will have reached the runway parking area in time to witness the start of the aerial show.

The field's unique sky parade will be a routine continuation of daily training to the military personnel involved, but it will be the average civilian's first opportunity to get a close-up of the intensive training for all emergencies given to the pilot-commanders of four-engine dreadnaughts.

Planes crossing the field in combat formations and making landings and take-offs will be manned by highly trained officers and enlisted men, who will give visitors a first-hand view of the Army Air Forces at work. All maneuvers will be explained fully over a public address system and further hook-ups will permit guests to hear comment from the air and directions from the control tower.

Many of the pilots taking part in the show will be flying their final missions from the southwest Kansas base, inasmuch as the graduation of the second class of airplane commanders since aerial flight training began last July 5.

Already commissioned as Army pilots, students arrive at Liberal Army Air Field for training as commanders of four-engine craft. After a rigorous nine-week course, successful students move from Liberal to tactical units for final instruction before flying their huge Liberators into combat.

Mrs. Ray Grabeel is Chosen Leader Parent-Teachers

The Perryton Parent-Teacher Association met for the initial meeting of this school year, Monday evening, September 27, in the High School auditorium. Mrs. Arvie Hale, vice president, was in charge.

The invocation was given by C. H. Williams. During the business meeting, Mrs. Ray Grabeel was elected to fill the office of the president, made vacant by the resignation of J. E. Mullins, who moved away.

Mrs. Kathryn Mills, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Louis Jacquet, gave two vocal selections, "My Songs with Wings Provided" by Hahn and "I Love You" by Greig. For round table discussion "Problems of the American Family Council" was directed by Warren Marshall. Students taking part were Cleo Hall, Betty Lu Buchanan, Alvena Records, Rosalie Reed, Peggy Lamb, Jimmy Key, Danny Ellis, Gale Rogers and Bill Parker. Some of the problems brought were: "Is it necessary to have one person as boss in the family? When a problem is under discussion, who should lead? Should parents determine the hour for children to come in from affairs? Should children be given an allowance? Should all high school graduates be given privileges of a college education?"

The sixth grade won the attendance prize. At the close of the meeting, as is the annual custom, a reception was held for the teachers. Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

The new president is very anxious to have the cooperation of all the patrons of the school district. "Your attendance at the meetings will benefit the community and further the work of the organization," she stated.
