Senate trial set, but rules still unclear

GOP leaders divided as they struggle for agreement with Democrats on how to conduct Clinton's impeachment trial

The Associated Press

Split even among themselves, Senate GOP leaders are struggling for agreement with Democrats on how to proceed when President Clinton's impeachment trial begins Thursday.

Beyond establishing a date to formally open the historic perjury and obstruction of justice trial, nearly everything else is unsettled -- from whether there will be witnesses to the length of the proceedings.

"It has to be done not only expeditiously, but fairly," Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said after meeting Tuesday with Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle and Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, who will preside over the first impeachment trial of a president in 130 years.

Some two weeks after a House vote made Clinton just the second impeached president in history, the 106th Congress takes its seats today with the trial at the top of the agenda. In the House, one of the first orders of business will be to reappoint the 13 House Republicans who will serve as prosecutors in the Senate trial.

Daschle told reporters Tuesday that starting the trial without a defined plan for proceeding would be an "invitation to a prolonged process that would take weeks if not months, probably months."

At the White House, spokesman Joe Lockhart said the uncertainty leaves the president's lawyers "in the position of preparing for all eventualities. In general, we'd like to know which direction we're going in, but we understand the process."

The White House signaled this week it would present an aggressive defense if the Senate conducted a full-blown trial.

A PRESIDENT ON TRIAL

"I am not at all worried about a two-to-three week process that could take us into mid-February."

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho

Fresh criticism surfaced among Republicans on Tuesday over the bipartisan plan for a proceeding as short as a week _ a proposal mostly favored by Democrats looking for a vote to censure the president rather than remove him from office. The likelihood of a longer trial, meanwhile, grew -- with some senators predicting it could last well into next month.

"I am not at all worried about a two-to-three week process that could take us into mid-February," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, a member of the GOP leadership.

The uncertainty persisted as the Senate's senior Democrat, Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, issued the first indication that any of the Senate's 45 Democrats could vote to remove Clinton from office.

If Senate convicts, Clinton could lose more than just job

WASHINGTON (AP) -- If the impeachment case against President Clinton led to conviction in a Senate trial, Clinton would lose far more than his job.

Under a 1958 law, Clinton would lose his $151,800 annual pension. He also would lose related benefits funded by Congress, such as the annual stipend former presidents traditionally receive to run an office and staff.

Although Congress may change that law, presidential and constitutional scholars said that is unlikely, even given Clinton's current stratospheric job approval ratings. The national mood may well change if the impeachment process leads to Clinton's removal from office, scholars said.

"Ordinary people will probably be outraged if he got a pension if he was impeached and convicted," said Akhil Reed Amar, a constitutional scholar at Yale University Law School.

Punishment could stop with the provisions of the 1958 pension law, but the senators who would be Clinton's jury in an impeachment trial this month could also take other steps. The Constitution spells out some possible consequences of a Senate conviction. Others could be negotiated by the White House, senators and

Public TV plans to air interview with Combest

Special to *The Brand

The new chairman of the U.S. House Agriculture Committee will be interviewed next week on public television about agriculture issues to be taken up during the 106th Congress.

Larry Combest

Rep. Larry Combest, a Lubbock Republican whose 19th District includes Deaf Smith County, will take over the committee leadership when new Congress convenes today. The committee is one of the most powerful positions in the House.

The interview will be conducted by James Hunt of KACV-TV, who will be expected to seek answers to these questions:

- What will his leadership mean for farmers and ranchers in the Panhandle?
- How can the government help those in agri-business get through these rough times?
- Will U.S. trade posture need to change?
- Is there a difference in what's important to producers in our regions vs. the interests of producers in other parts of the country?

The exclusive half-hour program, "Perspective: Combest on Agriculture," will air at 9:30 p.m. Jan. 12 on KACV-TV, the area public television station.

"We greatly appreciate Congressman Combest giving us this opportunity to provide our viewers with informative, in-depth discussion of issues he'll be dealing with as chairman," Hunt said. "With the session just beginning, this is an incredibly busy time for him."

A repeat broadcast of the program is scheduled to air at 5 p.m. Jan. 17.

Hereford students to spend day on job

Career Job Shadowing set for Groundhog Day

Special to *The Brand

On Groundhog Day (Feb. 2), 60 Hereford Independent School District students will spend a half-day with a professional in each student's chosen career.

Groundhog Day gives students from Hereford Junior High and Hereford High schools a chance to try one of their dream occupations 'on for size': welders, auto body repair, medical technicians, nurses or other careers. Some students might even want to look at being a teacher or working in the print media.

The Panhandle Tech-Prep/School-to-Careers Partnership is sponsoring a Panhandle-wide Groundhog Day. In the Hereford school district, Steve Nash is coordinating the programs for the district.

After Groundhog Day, students will make decisions based on personal experience instead of what they think is true or other's impressions. The students should have a better idea of what they'd like or not like to do and start preparing with the types of training needed.

Hereford Junior High School counselor Karen Roberts and HHS's career specialist Cliff Golden have put together students' and professional mentors' names for each campus.

The selection process included consistent attendance, grades and a written application. Additionally, teacher recommendations for students played a roll in the selection process.

During their shadowing experience, students will be treated as if they, too, are professionals. They will be expected to responsibly dress and act appropriately, be on time for 'work' and meet all personal duties.

For more information about Groundhog Day, call Nash at 363-7600, Roberts at 363-7630 or Golden at 363-7620.

Governor thinks about running

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush praised a potential rival for the GOP presidential nomination, said a big 2000 primary would be healthy and acknowledged thinking about a White House race almost daily.

But he still hasn't made up his mind about running, Bush said.

"I think about it just about every day, particularly when I get asked questions about it," Bush said.

Gov. George W. Bush praised a possible 2000 rival

However, he added quickly, nothing's changed. His decision — when it comes — will balance his concern for his family and his own ambitions.

After winning re-election last November with 69 percent of the vote and having led several recent opinion polls of GOP presidential prospects, Bush is the subject of intense national speculation about his future.

Bush, who will be sworn in for a second term Jan. 19, did praise a possible rival, Elizabeth Dole. Reports from Washington said the wife of 1996 GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole was leaving the American Red Cross to pursue a potential White House bid of her own.

"I think she's a really good person," Bush said. "I think she'd be a great candidate."

Brooklyn newspaper's predictions: some hits, but many were misses

NEW YORK (AP) — Electric lights will diminish crime and sidewalks will be kept sparkling clean. The new sport of hockey should increase in popularity but Brooklyn will lose its baseball team. Japan will become mighty and Germany will annex Poland.

These were some of the predictions at the dawn of the 20th century as reported by The Brooklyn Daily Eagle in an edition headlined "Things will be so different a hundred years hence."

On Sunday, Newsday of Long Island reprinted that entire 16-page issue of the Eagle, dated Dec. 30, 1900, as "a reminder of how much the world has changed, and is changing, still."

Some of the Eagle's crystal-ball readings were astoundingly sound. "The most potent force in modern commercial distribution, advertising, is sure to have a larger part in the world's life the coming hundred years than it has ever had before," read one article.

Among the Eagle's essayists was suffragist Susan B. Anthony. Writing 20 years before the Constitution was amended in 1920 to guarantee women the right to vote, she predicted it would come to pass and added that women would become "the peer of man in education, in art, in science, in literature: In the home, the church, the state."

Another writer predicted that the "union of the telephone and phonograph" would bring theater, opera, lectures and mass meetings "into the salon of one's own home. Under these circumstances people of the twentieth are likely to become

SAN ANTONIO (AP)-- Some Texans are feeling the effects of the winterstorm smacking the East Coast.

The Social Security Administration says people in several Texas cities, including San Antonio, Laredo, Georgetown and Corpus Christi, have complained about late checks this month. At least 100 people called U.S. Postal Service officials in San Antonio on Tuesday.

Government officials say the delays are due to weather-related transportation problems, the San Antonio Express-News reported today.

The problem seems to involve checks issued by the federal Treasury Department distribution center in Philadelphia, rocked by bad weather over the past week, said Dee O'Neil, a Social Security spokesman in Dallas. He didn't know how many checks were involved.

Judge rules against aquifer authority

Unincorporated areas feel the effect

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A final ruling in a lawsuit brought against the Edwards Aquifer Authority by a catfish farmer strikes down not only water pumping limits but also the agency's regional drought rules.

State District Judge Joseph Hart of Austin said the authority's board did not follow the state's Administrative Procedure Act because there was no "reasoned justification" for the pumping limits or the drought rules.

Both sets of regulations were adopted last year.

Hart indicated in a Dec. 1 letter to attorneys in the case he was tossing out the permitting rules, which contained formulas to determine how much water each of the aquifer's approximately 1,000 pumpers should get.

Hart's final judgment, signed last Thursday by lawyers in the case, also concludes the drought rules are invalid.

Greg Ellis, general manager of the 30-month-old state authority, said the aquifer region won't be greatly affected by the invalidation of the agency's drought rules because it doesn't affect drought management plans adopted by cities across the region.

Those plans are modeled after the authority's rules, Ellis said.

"The only people who really will be left without drought rules are those in unincorporated areas," Ellis was quoted as saying in the San Antonio Express-News on Tuesday.

A natural underground reservoir, the Edwards Aquifer is used by San Antonio for drinking water and by surrounding cities and counties for farming and other businesses.

Hart made the ruling in a lawsuit brought by Ronald Pucek, operator of Living Waters Artesian Springs, formerly a huge catfish-farming enterprise in southwestern Bexar County.

Uvalde County irrigators intervened in the lawsuit.

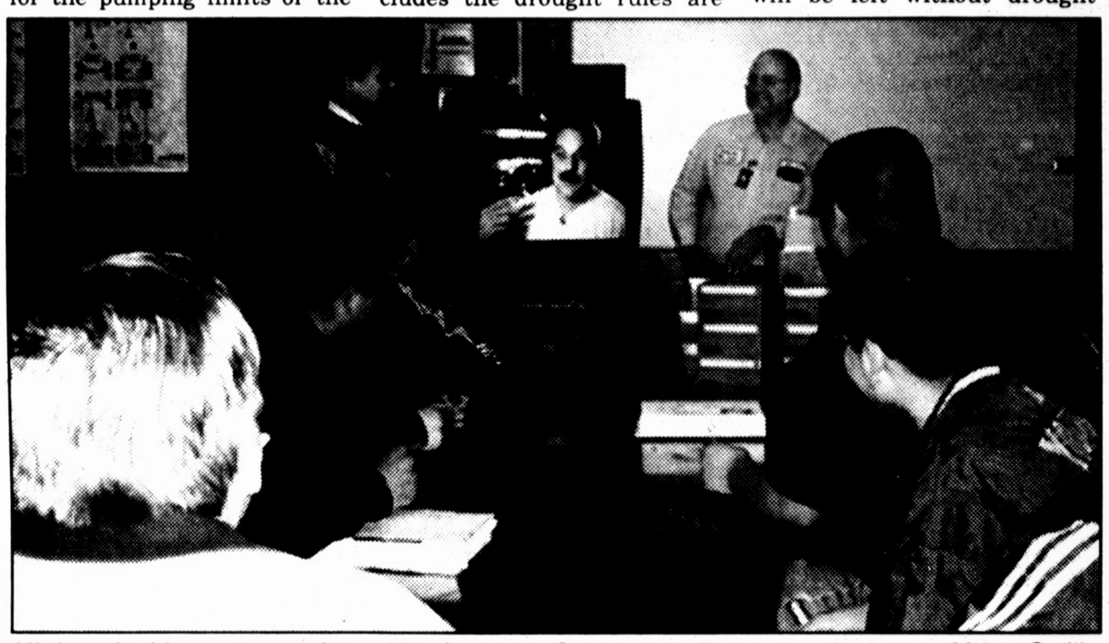

Ellis said the authority is moving toward repassage of the invalidated permitting and drought rules.

Pucek, under the invalidated permit rules, was to get only 15 percent of the water he wanted. He said the authority won't get by with passing the same rules.

Under the interim pumping authorization set out by the legislative act creating the authority, pumpers can take up to the maximum amount of water they withdrew in any one year between 1972 and 1993.

That collectively amounts to 792,000 acre-feet of water, although the most ever pumped in one year was an estimated 542,000 acre-feet. An acre-foot is 325,851 gallons.

The authority is required to reduce annual aquifer pumping to 450,000 acre-feet. It is trying to limit pumping through economic incentives.

Proposal raises Medicare eligibility age

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans would have to work two years longer or risk retiring without health insurance under a revived proposal to raise the eligibility age for Medicare from 65 to 67.

"It's a controversial proposal, obviously," said Sen. John Breaux, D-La., chairman of the National Bipartisan Commission on the Future of Medicare.

An hourlong discussion at a meeting Tuesday revealed that many of the commission's members believe the fact that Americans are living longer means a higher eligibility age could save Medicare money with minimal disruption to people's lives.

"We know the downsides on it," Breaux said. "I think there's been some good discussions on how to alleviate some of the obvious problems that are created by increasing eligibility age."

The commission, which must make recommendations for Medicare's future to Congress and President Clinton by March 1, has made no final decisions.

Without changes, Medicare is expected to face cash shortages starting in 2008 — just as the nation's huge baby boom generation is nearing retirement age.

Congress and Clinton would have to enact any changes to the program, which now provides health insurance to more than 38 million elderly and disabled Americans.

Breaux helped achieve Senate passage in 1997 of a proposal to raise Medicare's eligibility age, only to see it rejected as too controversial in later negotiations with the House and Clinton administration.

At Tuesday's meeting, only two of the 17 commission members expressed strong reservations about the basic idea of raising Medicare's eligibility age.

The proposal would slowly raise the Medicare eligibility age to 67, increasing it by about a month each year. People now age 62 and older would not be affected. People 38 and younger would feel the full brunt of the change, not getting Medicare benefits until age 67.

The change would be the same as the eligibility-age increase that Congress approved more than a decade ago for Social Security.

Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., and Samuel H. Howard, chairman of a Nashville, Tenn., company that operates health plans, said they feared such a change would hurt people who work at jobs requiring physical labor and minorities with lower life expectancies.

Others suggested those problems could be avoided by letting at least some people younger than age 67 pay an extra fee to enroll in Medicare early.

"If we are going to raise the age, I think there's general agreement to have a way to allow those who would have had it earlier to get it," said Rep. Bill Thomas, R-Calif., the commission's co-chairman.

Congressional leaders have promised only to hold hearings on the commission's recommendations. Clinton administration officials also have also declined to comment on specific proposals until after the recommendations are formally submitted.

Clinton has proposed opening Medicare to people as young as 55 who are willing to pay $300 to $400 a month to buy into the program.

Some commission members said that would go too far. "We don't want to create ... incentives to retire early that don't exist now," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Public opinion polls have shown that the idea of gradually raising the Medicare eligibility age is widely unpopular.

"I guarantee that every member of Congress is going to think about a 30-second ad of this," said Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb. But he added: "Of all the choices we've got to try to save money, this one may be the easiest."

Although raising the retirement age would save Medicare an estimated $620 billion over the next 30 years, that still would not be enough to keep the program afloat.

Commission members are also talking about additional changes to control costs.

Maxxam officials, federal regulators reach tenative redwood preservation agreement

HOUSTON (AP) — Maxxam Corp. has reached a tentative agreement with federal regulators that could finally pave the way for the preservation of ancient redwood groves in Northern California.

Company officials agreed in principle last week to a series of environmental safeguards regulators plan to impose on Maxxam's logging company, Pacific Lumber Co., the Houston Chronicle reported today.

Maxxam has not formally accepted the habitat conservation plan proposed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service, which would regulate logging on 211,000 acres of Pacific Lumber timberland for the next 50 years.

Regulators are trying to ensure that Pacific Lumber's logging practices provide adequate protections for species such as the northern spotted owl, the marbled murrelet and the coho salmon.

Maxxam officials said they cannot sign off on the plan until they have time to fully review the details.

The parties must reach an agreement on the habitat conservation plan to salvage a 2-year-old deal in which Pacific Lumber would sell the Headwaters Forest, the largest stand of old-growth redwood trees left in private hands, and other surrounding timberland to the federal and California governments.

The original plan called for the creation of a 7,500-acre preserve in exchange for $380 million in federal and state funds. The California Legislature also agreed to provide another $112 million to purchase an additional 2,000 acres.

Congress has authorized $250 million for the federal share of the purchase price, but that money must be used by March 1. And that deal is contingent upon approval of the habitat conservation plan, which covers acreage not sold under the Headwaters Forest deal.

Get back to healthy eating with satisfying low-fat potato chowder

After the holidays, it's time to slow down our hectic pace of the last few months. Many of us need to shed the few pounds we gained during this festive time, too. We're on the lookout for recipes that are low in fat and calories, yet rich and great tasting.

To help out, the home economists at Pioneer Flour Mills have developed a recipe for a thick and chunky, low-fat chowder to enjoy during the winter months.

Convenient no-fat gravy mixes add just the right flavor and a creamy texture that will satisfy even the heartiest of appetites, without adding extra calories from fat.

"This chowder is good 'comfort food' and will surely warm you up on those chilly winter nights," Wendy Hagerman, research and development specialist for Pioneer Flour Mills, said.

Tex-Mex Cheesy Potato and Corn Chowder combines vegetables, chicken broth, green chilies and Mexican cheese.

Serve this spicy and healthful chowder with Parmesan-Green Onion Biscuit Wedges. Made with low-fat biscuit and baking mix, seasoned with ranch salad dressing, these biscuit wedges can be in the oven in less than 10 minutes.

Tex-Mex Cheesy Potato and Corn Chowder

1 cup chopped celery
1 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 carton (32 oz.) or 2 cans (14 ½ oz. each) chicken broth
8 cups peeled and cubed potatoes (about 4 lb.)
1 can (16 oz.) whole kernel corn with red and green bell peppers
1 can (about 4 oz.) chopped green chilies
1 package (2.75 oz.) no-fat country gravy mix
2 cups skim milk
4 oz. processed Mexican cheese food, cut in ½-inch cubes

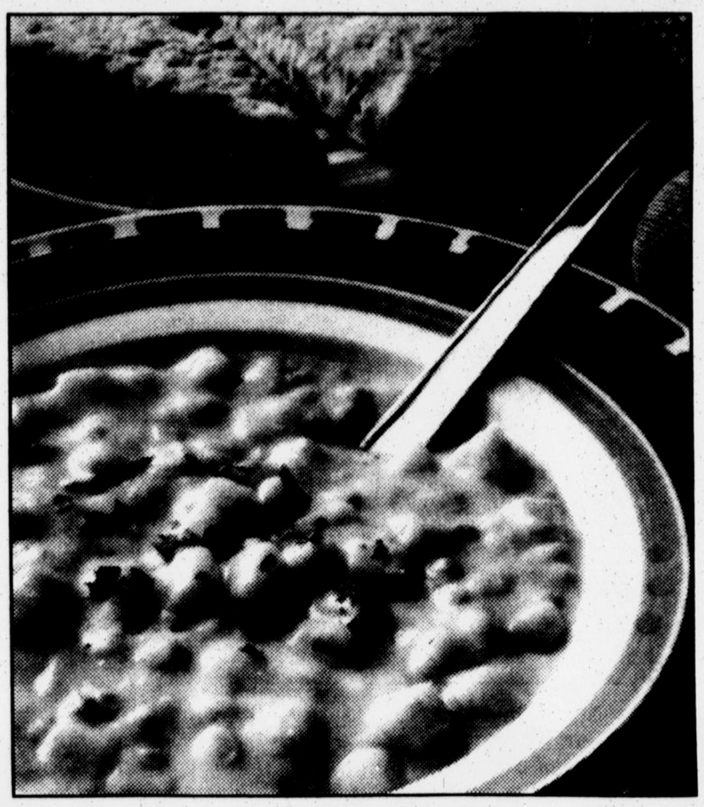

In large saucepan, cook and stir celery and onion in butter over medium-high heat until tender (about 5 minutes). Add chicken broth; bring to a boil. Add potatoes; cook over low heat for 20 to 25 minutes or until potatoes are soft, stirring occasionally. Stir in corn and chilies; return to boiling. Dissolve gravy mix in milk; stir into boiling mixture. Add cheese. Cook and stir over low heat until cheese in melted. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Parmesan-Green Onion Biscuit Wedges

3 cups low-fat biscuit and baking mix
½ cup shredded Parmesan cheese
3 tablespoons finely chopped green onions or chives
2/3 cup skim milk
½ cup fat-free peppercorn ranch salad dressing
Garlic salt

In large bowl, stir together biscuit and baking mix, cheese and green onions. In 1-cup glass measure, combine milk and salad dressing. Stir into biscuit and baking mix mixture to form a stiff dough.* Turn out onto surface dusted with additional biscuit and baking mix; knead 10 times. Roll dough into circle about ½ inch thick. Cut into 12 wedges. Place on baking sheet coated with cooking spray. Sprinkle with garlic salt. Bake at 400 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes or until biscuits are golden brown. Makes 12 biscuit wedges.

*If dough is sticky, add additional biscuit and baking mix as needed to form stiff dough.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am a new bride. My husband's family treats "Eddie," my husband, very unfairly. They are also cold to me and my 2-year-old son. I know they are not cold people because they are very affectionate toward Eddie's sisters and brothers and their children.

Eddie has had employment difficulties since we married and relocated. In the 18 months we have been together, my family has helped us out financially. They are not rich, just comfortable. Eddie's family is also comfortable, but they refuse to help us and say they can't afford it. Not true. They live a lavish lifestyle and have a substantial income.

I believe Eddie should learn how to demand equal treatment. He needs to ask for his share. He plans to adopt my son as soon as the boy is a little older. In the meantime, my son is being treated like a second-class citizen in comparison to the other grandchildren. If they buy a new outfit for their other 2-year-old grandson, they should buy one for our son, also. Right?

A psychologist told us this situation can change if we are willing to work at it. I believe we should start writing letters to my in-laws and tell them exactly how we feel. Eddie says it doesn't matter to him, but I know it hurts him plenty. What should we do about this? — Feeling Left Out in Florida

Dear Florida: Your letter has a whining quality that really turned me off. I suspect that same attitude turned off Eddie's parents, too. He is in no position to demand "equal treatment" or anything else. A gift is whatever people want to give. You seem to think that if your in-laws buy something for their other grandson, they should buy one for your child, too. Again, I say, a gift is not something you can demand. The good news is that you are in counseling. Terrific. I hope you will take this column to your next session and discuss your attitude problem. You need help.

Dear Ann Landers: Two years ago, I met a wonderful man, and we have been dating ever since. When "Bob" bought a home last May, he asked me to move in with him. I knew his mother would be moving in, too, but I thought it would be temporary.

Well, it's been eight months, and she is still here. I cook, clean and do laundry, but she does everything over again, saying I didn't do a good job. She has peculiar eating habits, which makes it difficult for me to prepare a tasty meal that everyone can enjoy. When I try to cook something she can eat, she claims my cooking "doesn't taste right" and adds other ingredients or dilutes it with water. She also tells me I shouldn't use a mop on the floor because "it's not clean unless you get down on your hands and knees and scrub."

I've told Bob several times that I am ready to pack up and leave, but he cries and begs me to stay. I honestly don't want to go, Ann. I really love the guy. Can you help me? — Exasperated in Salem, Ore.

Dear Salem: Face it. Your boyfriend is going to have to decide — either his mother must live elsewhere, or you leave — unless, of course, you are willing to put up with the old battle-ax forever.

Since you aren't married yet, there's a chance you may win the power struggle, but I wouldn't bet on it. Your future mother-in-law is going to be a thorn in your side, a fly in your ointment and a bone in your throat forever. Get some counseling to give yourself confidence and strength. You're going to need it.

Gem of the Day: If you think you are a person of influence, try ordering someone else's dog around.

More award winning 4-H recipes

Several Deaf Smith County 4-H members recently competed in the District 1 Food Show. Some of the winning recipes are featured here. Others will appear in future editions of The Brand.

One Bowl Bread
Chelsea Blain

9 cups unsifted flour
1-1/2 cups milk, scalded
1-1/2 cups water
2 sticks butter, melted
2 cups flour, if needed
2/3 cup sugar
4 beaten eggs
2 teaspoons salt
2 packages yeast

Put 9 cups of unsifted flour in bowl with well-sealing lid. Make a well in the center of the flour with a spoon. Scald the milk, then cool the milk by adding water to the milk. Pour into the well in the bowl. Combine the sugar, eggs, salt and yeast. Stir gently and pour into the well also. DO NOT STIR' Put on the lid, seal and wait for the bread to rise, about 2 hours.

Melt 2 sticks of butter and pour into the flour and milk mixture. Begin stirring ingredients until well mixed. Add additional flour if dough is sticky and continue kneading and adding flour until proper dough consistency. Replace lid and let rise (about 1 hour).

Sprinkle work surface with flour and turn dough out of bowl onto work surface. Knead dough, working in flour if needed. You don't want the dough to get too dry. Divide dough into thirds. This recipe makes 3 loaves, or you can make dinner rolls, cinnamon rolls, etc.

After you divide dough and prepare in loaves or rolls, let dough rise for 20 minutes. Bake at 375 degrees until brown. Loaves take 20-25 minutes, rolls take 15-20 minutes.

Tasty Veggie Squares
Dawn Auckerman

2 to 4 medium potatoes (differs according to dish size)
1 medium onion, grated
2 eggs, beaten
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 medium zucchini, thinly sliced
2 medium yellow summer squash, thinly sliced
1 small red onion, halved and thinly sliced
1 medium green bell pepper, thinly sliced
2 cloves of garlic, minced
16 cherry tomatoes, quartered or sliced Roma tomatoes
2 tablespoons fresh or dry basil, snipped
1 cup Mozzarella cheese, shredded

Finally shred potatoes and onion into a bowl. Combine potato mixture, eggs, flour and salt; mix well. Press into a well-greased, shallow casserole dish. Bake in a 425 degree oven for 15 minutes. Brush with 1 tablespoon of the olive oil; bake for 10 minutes more. Place under the broiler; broil 4 to 5 inches from the heat for 2 to 3 minutes or until golden and crisp.

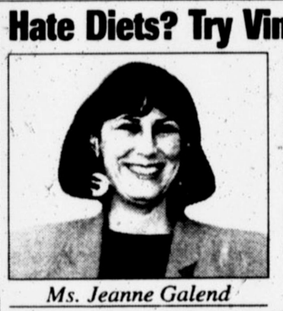

Meanwhile, in a large bowl, combine the zucchini, yellow squash, red onion, green bell pepper, and garlic. In a large skillet, heat the remaining tablespoon of olive oil and cook the vegetable mixture, 2 cups at a time, until vegetables are crisp-tender, stirring often. Spread with basil and mozzarella. Bake 425 degrees for 5 to 7 minutes or until cheese is melted. If desired, garnish with basil sprigs. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Players to vote on owners' proposal

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — David Stern is about to get his wish — a vote by NBA players on the owners' latest proposal to end the lockout.

But union director Billy Hunter doesn't think the commissioner will like the outcome.

The union's 19-member negotiating committee will tell players to reject the offer, Hunter said, so owners "understand the level of player resolve and the degree of opposition to the NBA's onerous demands."

"If they elect to go against the recommendation, then we'll have to live with that," Hunter said.

The union's negotiating committee had planned a meeting Tuesday, probably to discuss the ground rules for Wednesday's general membership vote of about 400 players.

Stern had been calling for a player vote for more than a week, and several players broke ranks with union leadership and publicly endorsed a secret ballot vote.

Hunter

"The majority has a right to control the destiny of an organization, and that's between them and their leadership," Stern said.

Nine owners on the labor relations committee unanimously rejected the union's latest proposal Monday and recommended scrapping the rest of the 1998-99 schedule.

Stern has already designated Thursday as the cutoff day for reaching an agreement.

After reviewing the union's proposal, he was anything but optimistic.

"I needed to see a proposal that reached for ours. Instead, I saw one that went backward," Stern said.

Said deputy commissioner Russ Granik: "I don't think there will be any negotiations about the 1998-99 season if there is no deal by Thursday. There's no point then in trying to resuscitate the season."

Stern and Granik also said the owners' negotiating committee would meet in New York, perhaps Wednesday night. But it was uncertain whether it would meet with the players' committee.

"We'll wait and see what they're going to do," union president Patrick Ewing said. "It's all a waiting game right now."

If no deal is reached, the league's Board of Governors — with one ownership representative from each of the 29 teams — could vote Thursday to scrap the rest of the schedule.

"Based upon how far apart we are, there's a lot more needed to be done than simply tweaking the offers," Granik said.

"We don't anticipate making a deal," Stern said. He opened the door for using replacement players in the 1999-2000 season by saying: "It's not necessarily a pretty sight early on, but obviously if we have to rebuild the league, we'll rebuild the league."

Said Stern: "We're going to lose a season and probably the careers of 20 percent of our players. It's a terrible thing."

Stern has said that if the season is scrapped, two rookie classes of about 35-40 players each would be on hand once the season starts up. That means about 80 of NBA's 400 players would lose their jobs to make room for the freshmen.

Stern also said that if a new league was formed, it would probably take the top 100 players and leave the rest out of work.

The NBA, which was supposed to begin its season Nov. 3, had never lost a game to labor strife until this season. So far, the first two months of the season have been wiped out. It would take three to four weeks after a settlement to begin a season of 45 to 50 games.

Herb Williams of the Knicks, a member of the union's executive committee, thinks the deadline might be extended.

"If a deal was done on the 9th or 10th, I'm sure David wouldn't say that just because we didn't do it on the 7th the season is over. It's a business, and sometimes you have to posture," Williams said.

The union's new offer included a limit on how much any player can earn. If accepted, the NBA would be the only professional sports league to limit the amount of money a top athlete is paid.

The key sticking point could center on how much revenue will be paid to the players during the six-year deal. The sides also differ on the length and terms of a new rookie salary scale and the dollar value of two salary cap exceptions.

In its proposal, the union wants 55 percent of revenue devoted to salaries in the fourth year, while owners have offered 53 percent.

Whitefaces shut down Marshall to hand Hornets 1st loss of season

By Bob Varmette
Hereford Brand Sports Writer

The first time Tulia and Hereford met this season it was the Mikey Marshall show.

The Whitefaces didn't want to see the sequel.

So they turned him off.

Hereford cancelled Marshall and ended Tulia's run as an unbeaten, edging the Hornets 58-52 in nondistrict basketball Tuesday night at Whiteface Gymnasium.

"I think we came out ready to play," Hereford coach Randy Dean said. "I was especially pleased with the composure that we showed in the third and the fourth quarters when the game was up for grabs."

Charles Sims led the Hornets with a game-high 26 points.

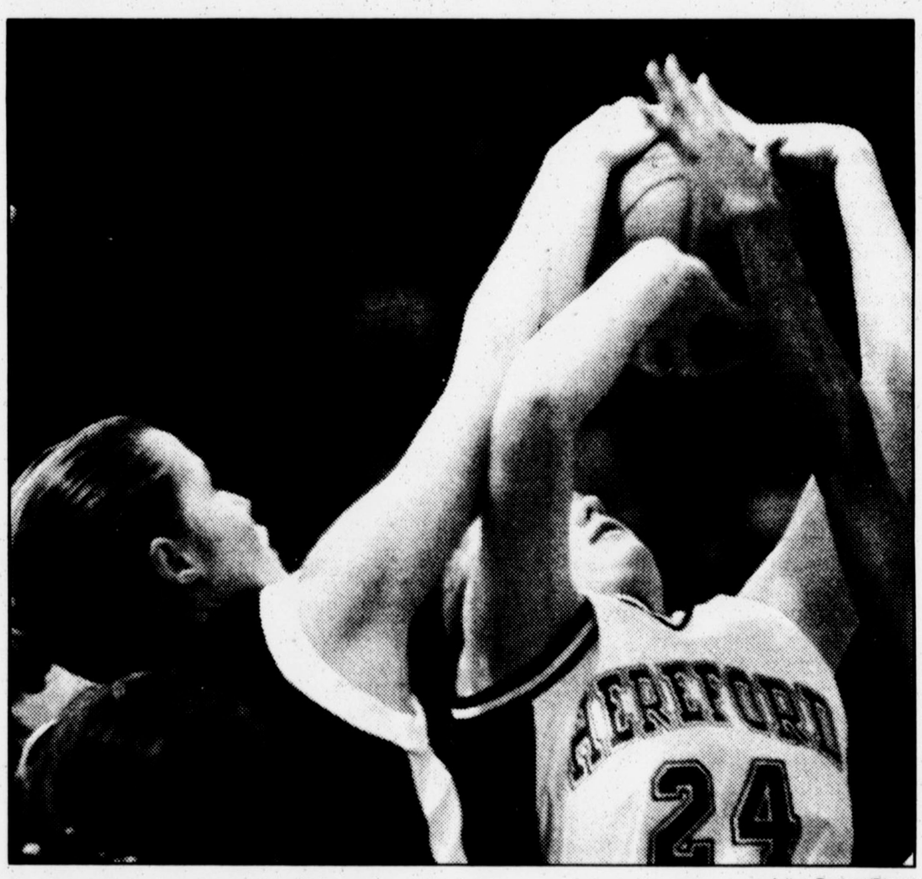

Hereford got three players in double figures. Cody Hodges had a perfect second half, hitting all of his shots from the field and the free throw line and led the Whitefaces with 17 points.

Chayse Rives added 15 and Slade Hodges had 13 points for Hereford.

The loss was the first in 18 games for the Hornets — the No. 2 team in Class 3A. Hereford improved to 15-5.

The Whitefaces had trouble with Marshall in the teams' first meeting Nov. 17 in Tulia. Marshall scored 28 points and had 12 rebounds in the Hornets 65-55 win. But the second time

Lady Whitefaces rout Tulia, 59-26

By Bob Varmette
Hereford Brand Sports Writer

What a difference two days makes.

In a slim victory over Hobbs, N.M., Saturday, Hereford committed 31 turnovers. Tuesday night, the Lady Whitefaces had only 14.

The difference was amazing. Instead of a two-point win, Hereford routed Tulia 59-26 in girls nondistrict basketball at Whiteface Gymnasium.

Tori Walker led Hereford (15-8) with 19 points. Valerie Guzman added 17 points — 15 in the first half — for the Lady Whitefaces.

Mandi Culwell led Tulia (8-10) with eight points and Sheila Hawthorne added seven points.

The difference on the scoreboard was evident in the shooting. Hereford was 24-for-50 (48 percent) from the field while the Lady Hornets were a cold 7-for-28 (25 percent).

The Lady Whitefaces also dominated the boards, grabbing 29 rebounds to 16 for Tulia. Three Lady Whitefaces — Guzman, Walker and Kristin Fangman — each had six rebounds to lead Hereford. Hawthorne had six to lead Tulia.

Hereford got out to a 12-2 lead with 4:07 left in the first quarter getting eight points from Guzman who hit four of her first five shots.

BCS title game wasn't of title caliber

"Except for the turnover-fest of the final minutes, the only suspense this Fiesta Bowl offered was when those few Tennessee fans who stayed behind switched from the game to Monday night's two-hour "Ally McBeal" extravaganza."

Commentary
By Jim Litke
AP Sports Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. — It was so bad an official got hurt. The surprising thing is he ruptured a tendon in his calf instead of his arm. That's how many yellow penalty flags littered the field.

Tennessee 23, Florida State 16 was tolerable as a first-round playoff game. Not as the national championship.

It's what happens when student-athletes and their coaches have too much time to study. It's what happens when they go without playing real games for too long, when the regular season ends the first week in December and the suits who run the Bowl Championship Series lead them around like show ponies for a month to build suspense.

Suspense?

The Kennedys' annual touch football game has to be more interesting than this.

Florida State had more penalty yards than rushing yards (110 vs. 108). They got caught roughing Tennessee's kicker twice. In the first half. Their own kicker hit himself with the ball. Attempting an onside kick.

"That's not the way we got to where we are," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said. "I thought we were a very sloppy football team tonight, but they were, too. Being off a month and a half — we probably could have done a little better if we hadn't been off that long.

"Both of us," he added, "laid off way too long."

Except for the turnover-fest of the final minutes, the only suspense this Fiesta Bowl offered was when those few Tennessee fans who stayed behind switched from the game to Monday night's two-hour "Ally McBeal" extravaganza.

Remember how smug the BCS power brokers seemed only a day ago? The only time they smiled this night was when ABC and Keith Jackson, working his last broadcast, mercifully signed off.

After his Ohio State team had beaten Texas A&M in the Sugar Bowl, coach John Cooper pleaded one more time with voters in The Associated Press poll. His argument: If No. 2 Florida State barely beat top-ranked Tennessee, he wanted the sports writers to consider the Buckeyes for the national title.

Herd

around, the Whitefaces had the 6-3 senior figured out.

Marshall scored only 13 points and had a miserable night shooting the ball, hitting only 5-for-15 from the field. Marshall went 10-for-17 in the Tulia win over Hereford earlier this season.

"Mikey missed some shots early he doesn't usually miss," Tulia coach Tommy Miller said. "That I think hurt his confidence. And Hereford played him real well. They were physical with him under the basket."

It was a tough night early for the Hornet guard. Marshall missed his first six shots from the field and went 1-for-7 for three points in the first half.

"I think we were a little more familiar with what they were going to try to do," Dean said. "We made a little more concerted effort maybe to know where he was on the floor. . . . He's a good athlete and a good basketball player. If we held him to 13 points, we obviously did a pretty good job with him."

Marshall wasn't the only Hornet who had a tough night shooting the ball. The Hornets — who shot 52.3 percent from the field in the first meeting — had a cold night at the trigger, shooting 17-for-51 (33 percent).

But the Hornets did find one spark — a spark that almost turned the game in their favor in the third quarter.

While his teammates were throwing up bricks, Sims found the range from long range in the third quarter. Sims was 3-for-4 in the second half from beyond the arc and almost got the Hornets' offense humming.

"He's one of our two returning starters, so we expect that from him," Miller said. "Especially when Mikey's not having a good night. We need him to make big plays and tonight he did. He gave us a chance to win the game."

But it was a Sims' pass, not a shot, that almost got the game going the Hornets' way.

Tulia started to trap in the third quarter and were able to produce some Hereford miscues. The Hornets closed to three points on several occasions, capitalizing upon Hereford turnovers that Tulia turned into dunks on the other end.

The first jam on an assist by Sims got the Tulia contingent going, but the Hornets weren't able to sustain the momentum and began trading baskets with the Whitefaces.

"I think that's been something we've been looking for with our team all year, the composure and the leadership on the floor," Dean said. "I saw some guys who did the talking to each other. . . . We responded. That kind of slows the momentum they had built from the dunk."

Marshall had six points in the third quarter and he grabbed four rebounds, but the Hornets still trailed by seven — 39-32 — heading into the final period.

"(Hereford) did a good job on defense," Miller said. "And they executed their offense very well when they needed to. The determining factor I felt was they hit their free throws in the fourth quarter."

The Whiteface went 13-for-15 from the line in the game. Slade Hodges was 8-for-9.

Game

After watching this game, maybe Cooper should have made that argument the other way around. Ohio State might have forced Tennessee to play like the national champions they're now being labeled. Beating a depleted Florida State team didn't require the Vols to do much more than show up in time for the kickoff.

At times, it seemed the Seminoles put an offense on the field just to buy the defense a Gatorade break. Florida State's first scoring drive was three plays for 3 yards. Its second was 10 plays for 10 yards. The Seminoles fumbled four times. Their quarterback, 20-year-old sophomore Marcus Outzen, seemed reluctant to throw the ball. He had a good reason.

Starting only his third game because of an injury to frontliner Chris Weinke, he completed just 9-of-22 throws to his guys. He completed two more to the other guys. Still, it was better than running — Outzen carried 18 times for minus-1 yard.

But give him credit for this much: He didn't use any of the dozen excuses available to him.

"I probably played like it was the third start of my career," he said. "A lot of our offense played like it was the third start of their careers."

The Volunteers had the shorter layoff. That might explain why they were less inept. Tennessee was penalized nine times for 55 yards, all but one of them for illegal motion by the offense.

"People were not hearing me," quarterback Tee Martin said.

But coach Phil Fulmer didn't buy the alibi. He knew sloppy football when he saw it.

"You could understand aggressive penalties," he said. "But those kinds of things will drive you crazy and make you an old man quick."

A few more games like this and coaches, aging by the minute, will be retiring in droves.

What this proved once more was that college football needs a playoff. It needs a playoff to build drama, to weed out pretenders, to make sure the national champion ends the season with an exclamation point, not a question mark.

Take all the arguments the BCS, its predecessors and allies have been making against a playoff system and pile them on top of each other on one side of the scale: A playoff cheapens the regular season; it commercializes the game too much; it trivializes the bowls that get left out; it puts too much pressure on the kids and coaches.

Put a videotape of this game on the other side of the scale and ask yourself whether it was a worthy national championship game. Then remind anybody who answers yes that sometimes justice really is blind.

Falcons, Reeves get prepared for 49ers matchup

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

SUWANEE, Ga. — Three weeks after undergoing heart surgery, Dan Reeves sounds like he'll be back with the Atlanta Falcons for the playoffs.

The NFL's coach of the year received a clean bill of health after an examination Monday morning, then spent the rest of the day huddled with his assistants, working on a game play for Saturday's divisional game against the San Francisco 49ers.

Reeves broke away from the meetings long enough to speak by telephone on his weekly radio show.

"I had a great day," Reeves said on WGST. "My energy level is getting better and better. ... Hopefully, I will get a good night's rest and be ready to go (today). I have a chance to be on the sidelines Saturday. We'll just have to wait and how it goes during practice this week."

Reeves, who is taking blood thinner medication, may have to work out of the press box coaching booth because of all the bodies flying around on the sidelines.

But he has resumed driving himself to the Falcons' suburban training complex. Last week, doctors instructed him to use a driver and sit in the backseat, lessening the chance of injury if there was a wreck.

"Knowing coach Reeves, I would speculate that he'll probably be in the booth somewhere," Anderson said. "I don't think he'll be on the sideline because of the risk."

Defensive coordinator Rich Brooks has been the acting head coach since Reeves underwent quadruple bypass surgery on Dec. 14.

"I don't know exactly what Dan will be involved in this week," Brooks said. "Last week, he just told me to keep doing what I'm doing. I guess that's what I'll do until he tells me otherwise."

Reeves and the rest of his NFC West champion Falcons got a chance to relax over the weekend.

The answer didn't come until Sunday evening, when Terrell Owens grabbed a 25-yard touchdown pass with three seconds remaining, giving the San Francisco 49ers a 30-27 victory over the Green Bay Packers.

"I think we have the advantage by the fact that we were able to watch and rest up this weekend," All Pro running back Jamal Anderson said. "I didn't do anything. I left my house maybe three times. I just rested."

The 49ers, who finished two games behind Atlanta (14-2) in the division, handed the Falcons one of their losses. In the third game of the season, San Francisco built a 31-7 lead by halftime at 3Com Park and cruised to a 31-20 victory.

In the rematch, with the teams tied for the NFC West lead, the Falcons responded with a 31-19 victory on their home field, snapping a five-game losing streak against the 49ers. Atlanta finished the regular season with a nine-game winning streak to claim only the second division title in team history.

Rout

Tulia missed its first three shots and committed four turnovers.

The Lady Whitefaces built their margin to 20-7 at the end of the first quarter on 9-for-14 shooting from the field as Tulia went 1-for-6 for the quarter. Guzman led Hereford with nine points in the quarter and Walker added six, hitting 3-for-4 from the field.

Hereford then went on a 13-0 run to start the second quarter. The Lady Whitefaces bombed the Lady Hornets, who had switched to a 2-3 zone defense. Hereford hit its first three 3-point shots in the quarter and took a commanding 40-12 advantage into halftime.

After shooting 15-for-26 from the field in the first half, the Lady Whitefaces cooled off in the final two quarter, scoring only 19 points in the second half.

Both teams had trouble finding the range in the second half — Hereford went 9-for-24 in the last two quarters while Tulia struggled as well, shooting 4-for-15.

PBS series captures essence of Mississippi River through songs

By John Rogers
The Associated Press

When they set off down the great spine of the Midwest, John Junkerman and Elijah Wald worried that all they might be doing was recording the epitaph for something that was dying, Mississippi River music.

"We entered this thing with some trepidation, thinking all we would find in the Midwest was Wal-Marts and malls," says Junkerman, producer and director of an ambitious new PBS series, "The Mississippi: River of Song." It airs tonight and the three following Wednesday nights at 9 p.m. CST.

"There was some concern that we were just kidding ourselves that there was still music out there to be listened to," he said in a recent phone interview from the pair's home base, the Boston area.

"And I think one of the really surprising and exciting things for both of us was, that with only a couple of exceptions, what we were finding doesn't seem to be dying at all," Wald, the program's musical consultant and writer, said in a separate conversation.

"It was very exciting," he added with a laugh, "to go in looking for the remains of a dying culture and to find out it wasn't dying."

If "River of Song" says anything about American culture, it is that while the great U.S. melting pot experiment may not have come to fruition yet, at least where racial tolerance or economic parity are concerned, it is humming right along when it comes to music.

Its development there is seen in the performances of Manny Lopez, a Mexican-American trumpeter from Davenport, Iowa, who grew up playing mariachi music, and whose name was the one Junkerman and Wald heard repeatedly when they asked around for a horn player who best represented the city's annual Bix Beiderbecke Jazz Festival.

And it is seen again in the music of Louisiana's Christine Balfa. The daughter of the legendary Cajun accordion player Dewey Balfa does a song called "Un Cadien de Grand Basile," whose lyrical refrain translates from Cajun French into, "I'm content to be a Cajun from Grand Basile."

After much listening, Junkerman and Wald discovered the melody to be a slightly altered, Cajun-inflected, but still very-much-recognizable variation of one performed by Merle Haggard when he sings, "I'm proud to be an Okee from Muskogee."

"Nobody, including Christine Balfa, knew that," Junkerman recalls excitedly. "She said this is just considered to be a Cajun song."

It turned out the connection clearly made sense.

For just up the river from Balfa's Louisiana bayou country, Junkerman and Wald had filmed Haggard singing at a 98th birthday party in Shreveport for former Gov. Jimmie Davis, the man who gave the world the song "You Are My Sunshine."

"It just serves to illustrate the way music crosses barriers of language and culture and continues to be reinterpreted and revised," Junkerman said. "And people take it for their own, and the origins of the music become lost in time. But then there they are. That's a wonderful organic process."

It's one that gets repeated up and down the Mississippi as "River of Song" takes viewers on a journey through nearly a dozen states and into scores of cultures, where songs are sung in uncounted variations of Spanish, French and English.

The trip, narrated by folk-rock musician Ani DiFranco, unfolds over four hour-long segments that are scheduled to air on PBS stations across the country on successive Wednesday nights starting tonight. A companion CD, a seven-part radio series and a book on the project are also scheduled for release this month.

Along the way, Junkerman, a veteran documentary filmmaker, and Wald, a music writer for The Boston Globe, uncover seemingly every American musical form, from blues to bluegrass, gospel to jazz, Cajun to zydeco, rock to folk, Indian chants to inner-city handclaps.

DiFranco, meanwhile, makes mention of seemingly every prominent musician who ever trod the banks of the Mississippi, from Bob Dylan of Minnesota to Elvis Presley of Memphis to Chuck Berry and Josephine Baker of St. Louis.

Save for a few exceptions, such as Haggard and alternative rockers Soul Asylum of Minnesota, the spotlight rarely falls on the famous. It is directed instead at the working-class musicians, the ones who sing and play in the clubs, the roadhouses, the streets.

They include the likes of Sonny Burgess, the greatest rockabilly musician to never leave Arkansas, and Irma Thomas, the great New Orleans soul singer whose "Time is on My Side" was an early hit for the Rolling Stones.

And they include groups like the Bottle Rockets, a blue-collar contingent from Festus, Mo., that got together to meld the musical styles of Hank Williams and Aerosmith.

Put it all together and it's a snapshot of real life. Real life from a place the Bottle Rockets' Brian Henneman calls, "That mysterious land in the middle."

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Clinton

Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr.

Senators, if they chose, could disqualify Clinton from seeking federal office again. Such punishment would take a separate, majority vote in the Senate, after the two-thirds vote required to convict and remove the impeached president.

"I think that's unlikely, and it's piling on, but the Senate could do it," said Dennis W. Johnson, a George Washington University political science professor who teaches a course on the relationship between the White House and Congress.

Clinton could also face criminal prosecution for perjury or other charges related to his relationship with a former White House intern. Several impeached federal judges were criminally prosecuted in addition to being thrown out of office by the Senate.

"We have never had a president that was removed from office, so there's no specific precedent," said Mark Klugheit, Senate special counsel during the 1989 impeachment trial of former federal judge Alcee Hastings.

In that case, the Senate convicted Hastings of bribery charges and removed him from office even though he had been acquitted years before in a criminal trial. He is now a Democratic House member from Florida.

"Criminal prosecution depends on a bunch of things, including whether Starr believes impeachment is enough, or if he feels further prosecution is warranted," Klugheit said.

Starr has indicated he might not press for criminal prosecution, and such an assurance could be part of any negotiated deal to censure Clinton.

Still, criminal prosecution is probably the heaviest sword over Clinton's head, since it carries the potential for a felony conviction, jail time and loss of voting rights and other privileges.

The House impeached Clinton on Dec. 19 on charges of perjury and obstruction of justice in the investigation of his relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

Trial

On the final vote on the articles of impeachment, "I could go either way based on the evidence as I've seen it or heard it. And I've followed it pretty closely," he said in an interview on the C-Span cable TV network.

According to Senate sources who spoke on condition of anonymity, Lott said in closed-door meetings during the day that following Thursday's largely ceremonial events, he wants opening arguments presented the following Monday by representatives of the House and the White House.

Craig said he envisioned giving each side three or four days to present its evidence. Each could then submit a list of witnesses for the Senate to subpoena, subject to a vote.

But Daschle, who agreed the ceremonial opening was likely for Thursday, told reporters his preference was for no witnesses. He added he wants a vote on censuring the president after an expected rejection of the articles of impeachment.

But Daschle told reporters at days' end that neither he nor Lott would be presenting formal proposals in separate closed-door caucuses of Senate Democrats and Republicans.

Meanwhile, the 13 House Republicans who will act as prosecutors in the Senate trial gave their take on the debate during a meeting Tuesday night, the eve of Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde's meeting on logistics with Lott.

No consensus was reached on just whom to call as a witness, said Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla. But he estimated that the House would need two or three weeks in the trial just to present its case against Clinton.

The House approved articles of impeachment on Dec. 19, alleging that Clinton committed perjury and obstructed justice as part of a months-long campaign to cover up his sexual relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

U.S., British expect 'challenge' by Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — American and British warplanes patrolling the "no-fly" zones over Iraq may well be facing "a period of challenge" from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, the Clinton administration says.

"For Saddam Hussein, defiance is his only strategy," Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon told reporters at the Pentagon, discussing the third clash with Iraqi forces within the past two weeks.

Western planes patrolled the northern and southern Iraqi skies today without incident, said U.S. defense officials. "It just seems pretty unpredictable," Lt. Col. Rick Craig, a spokesman for U.S. Central Command, said of Iraq's airspace challenges.

On Tuesday, four U.S. Air Force and Navy jets fired on — and missed — four Iraqi MiGs testing the no-fly zone over southern Iraq. It was the first such air confrontation in more than six years.

Economy: New-home sales surge to record in November and 1998

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new single-family homes soared 7.6 percent to a record in November, propelled by low interest rates, unseasonable warmth and a strong economy.

Americans purchased new homes at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 965,000 in November, surpassing the previous record rate of 919,000, set in July, the Commerce Department said today.

November's increase, the third in a row, was the largest in a year. And, even without December's number, the 823,000 homes sold during the first 11 months of the year have already established an annual record, surpassing the 819,000 homes sold during 1977. The department began tracking sales in 1963.

November marked the 15th consecutive month of sales rates above 800,000, also a record.

According to economists, a variety of factors have come together to make 1998 such a strong year for housing. First, jobs are plentiful, with the unemployment rate this year averaging around 4.5 percent, a 28-year low. Second, mortgage rates have remained below 7 percent since June, a stretch unseen in 30 years. Third, the stock market, though tumultuous, has increased many Americans' wealth.

Analysts believe unusually warm weather in November gave sales an added boost for the month.

In November, sales jumped 9.9 percent in the South to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 432,000. They rose 5.4 percent in the West to a rate of 292,000, the highest in 19 years; 2.5 percent to 88,000 in the Northeast and 0.6 percent to 172,000 in the Midwest. The median price of a new home was $148,700 in November, up 2.6 percent from a year earlier. The number of homes for sale at the end of November totaled 292,000 — 3.7 months supply at the current sales rate. That's a record low inventory.

Clinton sees $76B surplus for the year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration today projected a budget surplus of more than $76 billion for this year. "We can say the era of big deficits is over," President Clinton said.

The president, convening a White House ceremony to tout the figure, immediately squelched any speculation that the extra revenue would be used to cut taxes.

"Like any family with long-term financial needs and a little more earnings than we expected, we can't go out and spend the surplus today. We have to plan for the future," said Clinton.

"Before we consider any new spending or tax cuts, first we must set this surplus aside until we save Social Security for the 21st century." He also cited "investment needs" in education and health research.

The administration's Office of Management and Budget released its latest forecast for fiscal 1999, bringing the projected size of the surplus — for the budget year ending Sept. 30 — closer to congressional estimates of about $80 billion.

The administration's newest estimate is significantly higher than its analysis last year, which estimated a fiscal 1999 surplus of $54.2 billion.

"We can say the era of big deficits is over. We are now entering the second year of an era of surpluses," Clinton said. He noted that when he took office in 1993, the fiscal 1999 projections were for a $404 billion deficit.

The Congressional Budget Office is due to release its own projections later this month, in advance of the president's annual budget submission to Congress. In its August update, CBO was even more optimistic than the president's budget analysts, projecting an $80 billion surplus for fiscal 1999.

U.S. Mint shipping out new quarters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Mint is shipping out the first batches in a new series of quarters that will eventually feature a different picture on their tails side for each of the 50 states.

But it could be spring or summer before you find one of the new coins — which start with a design commemorating Delaware — among your pocket change.

"It's hard to say where they're going to show up first," said mint director Philip Diehl. That's because they are going into stockpiles at regional Federal Reserve banks around the country and will be distributed as needed, Diehl said.

On Monday, the mint sent the first truckloads to the central bank's regional branches in Baltimore, Chicago, Jacksonville, Fla., and Philadelphia, which serves Delaware.

Collectors' sets won't be available until sometime this summer, but in the meantime, the mint will track sightings of the new quarters via the Internet.

"That's really part of the fun of this: the treasure hunt of looking for each of these coins in pocket change," said Diehl.

The first new quarters to roll off the mint's presses in Philadelphia and Denver commemorate Delaware because it was the first state to ratify the Constitution. On their tails side, the American eagle is replaced by Revolutionary War figure Caesar Rodney, mounted on a galloping horse.

Predictions

confirmed stay-at-homes."

But some writers got it all wrong. One said the disappearance of horse carriages would eliminate house flies and street noise, another predicted that "smooth, sanitary pavements used by posterity will be kept thoroughly clean," and one headline proclaimed "Science may find means to bring dead to life."

Some observations from the Eagle show how little things have changed, such as this one: "The poor are dependent for their education on the public schools ... The rich select the best private schools where their sons may receive careful personal attention of teachers such as it is impossible for the overburdened public school teacher to give to the members of her larger class."

An article on sports complained about the "chaotic state" of baseball, blaming the owners for exploiting the players. The article also predicted that Brooklyn's baseball team would be "forced out" despite an argument that "the city is big enough to maintain two clubs."

One article predicted the "imminence of aerial transport" consisting of "the motor-driven balloon and ... the aeroplane."

A page on global affairs got a few things wrong. Writing 14 years before World War I, one writer said the development of an "international court will prevent war." He also forecast the emergence of a French-Italian state and said Turkey would join with Hungary to "become one of the four first-class powers of Europe."

But the same writer also got a few things right, predicting that England would be "shorn of power," Japan would "become mighty" and that Germany would annex Poland and merge with Austria.

It's time to get with the program.
