No break in Iran crisis seen

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — In a flurry of commentaries on the 52 American hostages, Tehran Radio said Saturday that it was "totally improbable" they would be freed before President-elect Ronald Reagan takes office Jan. 20 and that the issue then "will remain as it is now, at an impasse."

The official radio renewed threats of hostage trials, saying they would occur if the U.S. government failed to meet Iran's terms in the mistaken belief the conditions might be softened after Reagan took office. It accused both Reagan and President Carter of not really wanting freedom for the hostages, who begin their 15th month in captivity Sunday.

The statements came in the latest of a stream of commentaries on the hostage crisis broadcast since Friday by Iranian state radio, which is controlled by the Islamic fundamentalists who have consistently maintained a hardline position against freeing the Americans and have pressed for hostage trials.

The three commentaries Saturday appeared in part to be a reply to President Carter's statement that time was running out for solving the crisis under his administration, contained in the latest U.S. reply to Iran delivered Friday by Algerian intermediaries.

U.S. officials in Washington said the reply also rejected Iran's demand that $24 billion be deposited in Algeria's Central Bank before the hostages are freed, but offered to deposit about $12 billion to meet Iran's money demands.

Like other editorials over the past two days, the commentaries also reflected concern over Reagan and how he would handle the crisis after taking office. Reagan could presumably scrap the current negotiating process if agreement is not reached by Inauguration Day.

"It does not make any difference whether the problem is solved during the Carter-Democratic Party administration — which seems totally improbable — or during the term of office of the next Ronald Reagan-Republican Party government," said one of the commentaries.

In the first of three commentaries broadcast Friday, Tehran Radio praised the Carter administration for its "calm tone" and said Reagan's comments were the rantings of a "political cowboy." The second said the U.S. government had accepted all Iranian terms and suggested the crisis might soon be resolved.

But a third commentary said America was not prepared to take steps to end the crisis. Then, the second commentary was re-broadcast and monitors in Beirut said both times it appeared to have been pulled off the air.

An official at the state-run radio in Tehran, reached by telephone Saturday from Beirut, explained the seemingly conflicting themes by saying the first two commentaries aired before Algerian intermediaries delivered the latest U.S. reply. The hardline commentary came after the reply was received, he said. He did not comment on why the second commentary was later repeated but denied that its broadcast was interrupted.

Despite financial health, housing shortage exists

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

The new year has rung in and with it local financial statements, showing that Pampa has managed to sidestep some financial woes being experienced across the country, but housing remains in short supply.

Although the federal census takers do not agree, Pampa is experiencing growing pains.

According to local utility records, 377 new residences were serviced in 1980. Estimating three persons to each home, the total number shows an increase of 1,131 persons within the city.

The official census indicated that in 1980 Pampa had a population of a mere 21,000, about 6,000 below chamber of commerce estimates.

For anyone needing a place to live in Pampa, the housing problem has been compounded this year for many reasons.

"There are homes on the market, and sales this year have doubled," local realtor Janie Shed said.

"The big bugaboo is the high interest rates," Roy Sparkman of Security Federal Savings and Loan said.

"There were 144 home sales in Pampa during the first six months of 1980, totaling a value of $5,070,925," Sparkman said.

"But the high interest rates are keeping people from qualifying to buy, and rental property has become a big thing around here," Sparkman said.

The oil servicing business, is the largest growth industry in this area, banking and industrial statistics indicate.

"We are really growing, and we are always looking for help," Dwight Chase of Chase Oil Service said.

"Everyone around here that wants to work is working right now. We can't even get enough qualified help for our business. And there is one man working here right now that needs a place to live," Chase said.

The growth of oil - related industies has added to the housing woes of Pampa.

The oil industries need employees, but once here, where can they go to live?

"We have been looking for another place for six months, and I have just given up," Mrs. Patsy Brown said.

"When the housing ad says no pets, they usually also mean no children," Mrs. Brown added, "and with two young children, it is important where you live."

"If you can find a nice place to rent, the price is usually higher than it should be," Mrs. Brown said.

"Every time I find a home to look at, there are two or three people waiting in line for this one," she said.

With the higher interest rates, home building locally has slowed.

"There are a few homes being constructed locally right now, but they are not selling too fast," a representative of Top of Texas Building Company said.

"It has been slow for the entire year. Most young people cannot afford to invest in a new home. The new homes are mainly purchased by established people usually being transferred by a company in the Pampa area," the building representative said.

"We are showing homes to people who are just living in motels until they can find a place," a local realtor said.

The construction of a 150 - unit apartment complex, Caprock Apartments, in Pampa is expected to ease some of the housing problems.

"I have had at least 186 calls from persons who would qualify," Caprock Apartment manager Mrs. Jo Abbot said.

"The rental market here is very different than other places," Abbot said.

"A lot of those looking here are not really apartment people. They are used to living at home or in homes. They are looking for anything — from the efficiency apartments to the three bedroom ones," she said.

"Many of the rental properties that are being offered locally are just not first rate," she said.

Local money lenders say that the housing and real estate market is just standing still due to the fact that generally, people are waiting to see if the Reagan presidency will have any effect on interest rates.

Local banks showed an upward trend in the amount of deposits and in the amount of loans for 1980.

There was $101,225,385 in total local deposits and $45,165,724 in loans, according to chamber of commerce 1980 information.

"There has been an increase of home improvement loans this year. We have made $400,00 of this type in 1980," Roy Sparkman said.

"It is just easier for local people to fix-up what they have than to go looking for a new home with such high interest rates," Charles Lockhart of

Smith murder and trial named top story

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

The murder of 31 - year - old Dennis Smith, a city restaurateur, by his young wife, Cathy Darlene, and the ramifications resulting from the act were chosen by the members of the Pampa News staff as the top news story of 1980.

The controversy over and the failure of the $4.8 million street bond issue placed second in local importance, according to staff balloting.

Filling out the top ten were: 3) the capital murder of Hemphill County Sheriff's Deputy Corkie Guthrie; 4) the large number of arsons in the city; 5) the controversy concerning the formation of the Gray County Tax Appraisal Board; 6) the number of traffic fatalities on I-40's "Death Alley;" 7) the purchase of Cabot Machinery Division by Ingersoll - Rand; 8) the huge pipeline fire in the Canadian River Valley north of Pampa; 9) the disappointing 1980 census results for Pampa; and 10) the four Phillips refinery explosions in Borger.

The shooting death of Dennis Lee Smith in his mobile home at 504 Finley on Jan. 13 was the first killing in an unprecedented year for murder in Pampa — eight killings were reported within the city limits during 1980.

In a bizarre turn of events, Mrs. Smith — arrested and charged with the crime — was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the murder, sentenced to five years in prison, and then received more than $30,000 of her husband's life insurance benefits.

Mrs. Smith was arrested and charged with her husband's murder in February, almost a month after the shooting.

And the usual legal processes began...

A change of venue hearing held in 31st District Courtroom here in Pampa on April 25, set the scene for the sensational murder trial soon to follow.

Mrs. Smith's first attorney testified during the hearing that an oral confession had been given by the tall, attractive woman to a polygraph operator in Lubbock before her arrest.

At her arrest, however, Mrs. Smith had a new attorney — White, a Borger lawyer who unsuccessfully defended one of the two men charged with capital murder in the death of a Stinnett jailer in 1979.

Change of venue was granted by Judge Grainger McIlhany and on a warm, sunny day in the sleepy hamlet of Lipscomb, Cathy Smith went to trial for the murder of her husband.

Trial testimony unveiled a number of circumstances building over the years until they erupted into the shooting of Dennis Smith.

The volatile situation included a type of a love triangle between Mrs. Smith, her husband, and a Texas Highway Patrol trooper, Wayne Williams; sexual perversion, spouse abuse, drugs and drinking.

In her own words, Mrs. Smith told jurors she shot Smith after nine years of submitting to his sexual idiocyncrasies and domination of her whole life.

The Lubbock polygraph examiner testified Mrs. Smith told him her husband was "smothering" her in the marriage and would not let her out of it.

Concluding the three days of testimony, the 10 - woman, two - man jury of Lipscomb County residents declared Mrs. Smith was guilty of voluntary manslaughter and recommended five years in the Texas Department of Corrections for the woman — non - probated.

This was not the end of the Smith saga, however.

First, White filed for a new trial for Mrs. Smith which was denied.

Then he appealed the murder conviction to the state criminal court of appeals. The criminal conviction is currently on appeal.

In addition to these legal moves, Mrs. Smith and her attorney were preparing to go to civil court over a $200,000 life insurance policy taken out by Smith one year before his death.

Last April, Mrs. Smith and Smith's parents, Betty Hayden and William Smith, had filed conflicting claims for the insurance money.

The insurance carrier, Western National Life — perplexed as to how to distribute the money — filed a suit against the two parties. After a summary judgment hearing on the civil suit in early July, the Amarillo insurance company backed out and let the co - defendents battle over the benefits.

Once again, White tried for a change of venue, but this time, 223rd District Judge Don Cain denied the request.

At the completion of jury selection for the civil trial on Dec. 2, the co - defendents agreed to settle out - of - court.

The settlement involved an 85 - 15 percent split of the $200,000 which had been sitting in a local savings and loan drawing interest since April, 1980. Smith's parents received 85 percent of the $200,000 plus interest which totaled more than $190,000.

Mrs. Smith was paid 15 percent of her dead husband's life insurance benefits — a total of more than $31,000.

STREET BOND ISSUE

Sensational as the Smith murder and trial were, Pampa citizens were actively involved — whether for or against — the $4.8 million street bond issue presented by city officials last spring.

As badly as the city claimed it needed the funds, Pampa citizens — apparently frightened by a rise in taxes — downed the bond issue in the April 25 elections.

The bond election was presented to voters in two parts — both were soundly defeated.

Proposition 1 called for $320,000 for sewer improvements — 1,156 citizens voted for the issue and $1,489 voted against it.

Proposition 2 involved $4,480,000 in street improvements throughout the city — 1,754 voted against and 877 voters indicated their approval.

Voter turnout on the springy Saturday was moderate and rather disappointing to election officials.

The elm tree boulevard down Somerville was a hotly disputed facet of the bond issue. Somerville residents passed out petitions, paid for advertisements with the local media, and frequented city commission meetings in an effort to save the leafy lane.

If the bond issued had passed, the trees would have been sacrificed for a wider lane of macadam.

An 8.9 increase in the ad valorem tax rate probably contributed to the street bond issue's defeat more than the trees, however.

If the vote was any indication, Pampa citizens, finding their pocketbooks were already stretched to the limit, and saw no need to voluntarily add to their financial burdens.

With the defeat of the bond issue, Pampans will continue to bump their noggins when bouncing over drainage dips in city streets,and city fathers are searching for the money to pay for sewer improvements to annexed land for which the city is legally responsible.

GUTHRIE MURDER

The summer of 1980 was blistering after days and weeks of 100 degree plus weather. Violent crime was erupting everywhere in the Panhandle in the wake of the fiery heat wave.

The preoccupation with the summer's hot blast was shattered, however, when the kind, rather gentle, Hemphill County Deputy Corky Guthrie was cold - bloodedly shot to death by a known drug addict, crippled by a nervous disorder.

Guthrie, 52, was shot three times with a 12 - gauge shot gun when he surprised a burglar in the act of breaking into a Canadian drug store in the early morning hours of July 12.

Hemphill County Sheriff C. H. Wright, arrived on the scene of the shooting, shortly after Guthrie — in a last effort before becoming unconcious — called in to the dispatcher that he had been shot. The call was logged at about 3:30 a.m.

The rotund deputy was lying in his vehicle which had struck the front of Lad's Pharmacy. Guthrie had been shot in the face, in the side and, fatally, in the left side under the arm.

A massive manhunt began immediately. Law enforcement officers in a three - state area rallied to find the deputy's murderer.

Luck was on the law's side, however. A tip to Amarillo authorities identified the killer and the direction he was traveling.

Sixteen hours after the shooting, Paul Berry Bush, 27, of Amarillo was captured by Dumas police near a Dumas apartment building. He was charged with capital murder and held without bond.

Like a game of hopscotch, Bush — far from being an ideal prisoner — was transferred from one jail facility to another. While awaiting the murder trial, the tall, skinny man with skimpy blond hair was bandied about from Potter County Jail, Gray County Jail and Hemphill County Jail.

After receiving a drug conviction and determined as

Former Pampan's careers marked by diversity

By Elaine W. Ledbetter
Guest Writer

Hearing Johnny Cash's first record on KPDN in 1955 eventually, although indirectly, led to the creation of a smash - hit magazine and an invitation to a state dinner at the White House in 1980 for former Pampan Russell D. Barnard.

Barnard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Barnard of 2505 Christine and a 1956 graduate of Pampa High School.

Recalling that experience, Barnard says, "Hearing Johnny Cash for the first time was roughly like having a 110-volt power supply connected to each end of your spinal cord and turned on for three minutes — hard to forget."

Frontiers of Achievement

In 1972, Barnard started "Country Music Magazine," which soon became the fastest growing magazine in the United States, currently with over 2 million readers each issue. He sold the magazine in 1979. Although he declined to comment on the price, sources close to the magazine place the figure at $3.5 million. Barnard continues to manage the editorial and publishing operations of the magazine from his New York office.

Because of President Carter's interest in country music, Barnard was invited to a state dinner at the White House in February 1980, honoring the Prime Minister of Italy. When asked if he was impressed, Barnard said, "Not really — because I figured the guest list was made up by some entertainment secretary. But when I arrived and found myself shaking hands with the President and mingling with people like Cyrus Vance, I have to admit I was impressed. I kept the invitation as a souvenir."

Barnard did not start out to be a publisher.

After graduation from Pampa High School, he entered Yale University where he earned a degree in chemical engineering in 1960. Later that year, he was employed by Sinclair Oil Company in their Chicago headquarters office. His first major assignment was to design a $25 million petrochemical plant. He was then sent to the Houston area to oversee construction and start - up operations for the plant he had designed. This was in 1961, and he felt the full force of Hurricane Carla.

In 1963, the company moved him to New York where he was promoted to the office of assistant president of research and development. At that time, Sinclair was the seventh largest oil company in the world.

In 1964, Sinclair wanted Barnard to move back to Chicago where they had created a job tailormade for him. He would have been in charge of all computer operations with a staff of some 150 people.

Commenting on this opportunity, Barnard says, "When I entered Yale, I thought if I could achieve a position like this in 20 years, I would consider myself a success. This step up the ladder had come quickly. However, I had taken a hard look at corporate executives and decided that this was not for me. My goals had changed, and I wanted to get into the field of music. So I resigned."

While considering his resignation, Barnard called a friend who worked at the Columbia Records Division of CBS and inquired if they had any openings. Two days later, he was offered a position. He was the only person in the company who possessed modern technological skills, so he moved up rapidly.

Barnard was placed in charge of inventory management and worked in the area of manufacturing records and tapes, research and development and production. In 1966, he was made vice-president in charge of marketing for the records division of CBS, a position he held for three years. In this position, he managed a staff of 500 and acquired the additional titles of assistant to the vice - president of operations, director of inventory management and director of planning. He left Columbia Records in 1969.

When asked why he left such a promising position, he said, "I wanted to do consulting and to become an entrepreneur. CBS was one of my first clients. I became a consultant to the magazine

correction

In a photo caption on page 2 of the Dec. 31 edition of the Pampa News, Bill Waters was mistakenly referred to as a member of the board of directors of the Pampa Community Day Care Center Inc. This was in error.

Waters is actually chairman of the M. K. Brown Foundation and was representing the foundation during the presentation of a check for $150,000 to the day care center. Waters is not a member of the day care center board.

Texas weather

A weak, dry cold front edged its way southward over Texas on Saturday afternoon but the temperatures remained mild and skies sunny over most of the state.

Temperatures behind the front, which extended from near Texarkana to just south of Waco and west to near Wink, were mostly in the 50s. Ahead of the front readings were mostly in the low to mid 70s.

Bush convicted of deputy's murder

an habitual criminal by an Amarillo jury in August, Bush was taken to Huntsville to serve a life term.

His court - appointed attorneys Ken Fields and Rowdy Bowers balked at this move, however, and again Bush was returned to the Potter County Jail.

On a venue change, Bush's capital murder trial was moved to Wichita Falls where after three weeks, the jury convicted him of capital murder in Guthrie's death and sentenced him to death by injection.

Bush's attorneys have filed an appeal of the conviction.

Bush is serving his life term in Texas Department of Corrections, awaiting the appeal decision by the Criminal Court of Appeals.

PAMPA ARSONS

Arson flared during the summer heat. Five arsons occurred in the city limits during a two - month period. A number unheard of by city fire officials.

An elderly Pampa woman died in one of the arsons.

Jewell Hawthorn, 74, of 220 Gillespie was found lying across the bed in the back bedroom of her burning home the morning of July 23. The fire had been started by an arsonist.

Despite the exhaustive investigation of police and state fire officials, no one has been been arrested in connection with Mrs. Hawthorn's death.

A rent house at 212 Gillespie, owned by Mrs. Hawthorn, was also the victim of an arsonist's whim. The house blazed five days before the fatal fire two houses down.

On July 12, a fire was reported at 533 Doyle. Steven Austin McConnell, 25, of the same address, was arrested and charged with arson in connection with the house fire.

In August, two more incendiary house fires were reported to the Pampa Fire Department. No one has been charged with the crime in either case.

TAX APPRAISAL BOARD

The most difficult - to - follow story which developed in 1980 involved the dispute between six Gray County taxing entities over representation on the Gray County Tax Appraisal Board — a board set out by Senate Bill 621 to monitor appraisals for ad valorem tax purposes.

The controversy began in October 1979 when the smaller county taxing entities joined forces against Pampa and Pampa Independent School District for larger representation on the appraisal board.

Using the three - quarters rule outlined in the bill, McLean and Lefors city and school districts, school districts of Alanreed and Grandview - Hopkins, passed resolutions changing the five - member board to a seven member board.

During 1980, the entities cussed and discussed the board, with the membership fluctuating between 5, 7 and 9 members.

The final action of 1980 was a judgment hearing by Judge Don Cain where he dismissed the case between Grandview - Hopkins and the city and school district of Pampa, reverting the board back to the original five members.

DEATH ALLEY

A 10 - mile stretch of road construction on Interstate 40, west of Alanreed, was dubbed "Death Alley", after nine persons died in horrific traffic accidents on the two - lane highway in 1980.

The worst month was May 1980 when "Death Alley" claimed six victims. Kevin Kiefer of Missouri, Jean Elizabeth Young of Arkansas, Paul Joseph Larson of Nevada, and Carolyn Jean Gatrell of Arizona were among those who died during the tragic month.

In October 1980, however, "Death Alley" was put to rest when all four lanes were open to traffic by the Texas State Highway Department.

INGERSOLL-RAND

Many Pampa workers were affected when Cabot Corporation sold their Machinery Division to Ingersoll - Rand of New Jersey for $130 million in cash.

The ultimate affect of three major change - overs for Cabot in three years, was a combined increase of 69 employees in the Cabot and Ingersoll - Rand companies.

A total of 1,222 persons are now employed by the two firms here.

GAS FIRE

A spectacular natural gas fire seen in three states is one news event which will not soon be forgotten by Pampans.

The combined effect of the magnitude of the fire and prevailing weather conditions produced an orange glow that was reportedly seen as far as Kansas and Oklahoma, in addition to the surrounding area.

While citizens were sitting down to watch the evening news on Oct. 20, a 60 - inch mainline, owned by Northern Natural Gas Company, located 33 miles north of Pampa, exploded into a spiral of flames into the overcast night.

Firefighters from 12 area towns were called to combat the blaze. No one was injured in the blast.

CITY CENSUS

City officials were — to say the least — disappointed in the official U.S. Census Count conducted April 1, 1980.

According to government reports, Pampa has a smaller population today than it had ten years ago. The 1980 count was 21,414 — 312 persons less than 1970 figures.

A local count conducted by volunteers showed an increase of 5,000 persons from 1970.

City officials have repeatedly presented the revised census results to government representatives, but to no avail.

The official count released in December, indicated Pampa has a population of 21,414 persons.

"Anyone can look at Hobart Street and tell that isn't true," City Manager Mack Wofford said.

PHILLIPS BLASTS

The past year was definitely not a good one for Phillips Refinery in Borger — the scene of four explosions in 1980.

The first major blast occurred early one icy Sunday in January — injuring 40 employees and residents of nearby Phillips. Ten of the injured required hospitalization.

The approximately 200 residents of the small company town were forcefully awakened at 7:45 a.m. Jan. 20 when a series of explosions shook their homes, blasting out windows as far as Borger.

On July 21, six months later, two more blasts rocked the Phillips refinery complex. Ten were injured in when an ethylene cylinder exploded while two chemists were filling them.

A second cylinder exploded, injuring would - be rescuers of the two stricken men.

On July 23, a furnace that heats crude oil exploded injuring yet another employee. The last blast was relatively minor in comparison to the earlier incidents.

Phillips Petroleum was fine 1,000 after the January explosion by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration who admonished the company for failing to provide a safe work area for it's employees.

Cheryl Ladd marries songster Brian Russell

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Cheryl Ladd of the "Charlie's Angels" television series was married Saturday to composer Brian Russell, 35, at a Colorado ranch, according to her press representative, Richard Grant.

It was the second marriage for Miss Ladd, 28, and for Russell.

Miss Ladd was married in 1973 to actor David Ladd and divorced in 1980. They have a 5-year-old daughter named Jordan.

Russell, a native of Falkirk, Scotland, was married in 1973 to singer Brenda Russell and was divorced in 1978. They have a 4-year-old daughter named Lindsay.

The two young daughters acted as flower girls at the wedding held at the Puma Paw Ranch in Rifle, Colorado, said Grant. The ranch is the home of Wally Ganzi, who owns the Palm restaurant chain and served as best man.

Miss Ladd's sister, MaryAnn Eichman, was matron of honor.

The bridgroom's father, the Rev. Henry Russell of Parkdale Prebyterian Church in Toronto, Canada, performed the ceremony.

Grant said Miss Ladd will return to Hollywood Tuesday to resume filming "Charlie's Angels." The couple will live in Beverly Hills.

Interest rate affects mobile home sales

Gray County Abstract Company said.

An Amarillo mobile home dealer said that the recent high interest rates have also slowed their business. "The economy really dictates our sales. We find that young marrieds just cannot afford the new homes, and many times customers turn to mobile home living for an alternate."

"There are presently five mobile home parks within the city limits and five parks just outside the city," Pampa City Manager Mack Wofford said. "These parks have from five spaces for mobile homes to one hundred spaces."

"There are certain areas within in the city that are zoned for individual family fixed dwellings and would include mobile homes. But there are also certain areas with actual deed restrictions that would prohibit mobile homes."

"We are trying to alleviate the rental property situation in the city to the best of our ability," Wofford said.

Males born in '62 to register for the draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — Males born in 1962 must register for the non-existent draft this week, though they need not give their Social Security numbers and the status of their registration is in doubt.

Those turning 19 this year must sign up at the nation's post offices, joining nearly 4 million men born in 1960 and 1961 who registered last summer to begin forming the pool of youths eligible for a draft, should the need for such a conscription arise.

The very act of registration, meanwhile, may face challenges both from the White House and the Supreme Court.

The week of registration should sign up nearly 2 million men if the 95 percent turnout experienced last July is repeated.

Men born in 1962 can sign up at post offices any day during the week. But they were urged, to avoid long lines, to register in this order: those born in January through March, Monday; April through June, Tuesday; July through September, Wednesday; and October through December, Thursday. Friday and Saturday would be makeup days for people who couldn't get in earlier in the week.

Following the week-long registration, males will be required to register within 30 days after they reach age 18.

Registration was resumed last summer, five years after the draft was ended after the tumultuous protests of the Vietnam era.

President Carter requested the renewal of registration — though, it was emphatically stated, not the draft itself — saying it would increase military preparedness and send a signal to the Soviet Union after the Soviet march into Afghanistan.

President-elect Ronald Reagan, however, said during his election campaign that he opposed draft registration in peacetime and that he doubted it actually would speed up a draft.

Following Reagan's victory, Selective Service officials and others quickly raised the question of whether to go ahead with the January signup in view of his campign statements. They received no formal response from Reagan's transition officials, and so are proceeding with the program, which was funded and approved by Congress.

In a recent letter to Reagan, 83 members of Congress asked the president-elect to continue draft registration.

Deputy Draft Director Brayton Harris noted that unlike last summer, the agency can now show it would save at least four weeks time in an emergency draft because of the large response to the earlier sign up.

Yet another question on the future of the program rests with the Supreme Court, which has agreed to consider a suit challenging registration because of sex discrimination.

A U.S. District Court in Philadelphia held the draft is unconstitutional because it requires men to register but not women. Congress rejected Carter's request for registration of both sexes.

Barnard reaches youth with music

"Rolling Stone," which started in 1968. This was especially satisfying to me because we could reach the young people who were at that time rebelling against the establishment. We did this primarily through our music, but we were able to also influence them in the areas of politics, social issues, drugs and the Vietnam war."

Barnard had heard that Harper's magazine was having problems. He approached the executives about purchasing the magazine. He learned that because of a large shakeup in personnel, they were looking for new people to fill the vacuum. As a result, in 1972 Barnard become president and publisher of Harper's, the oldest magazine in the United States, begun in 1850.

While he was president of Harper's, it won the national magazine award. It was also at this time that Barnard started "Country Music Magazine." In 1975 he published the book, "Pilgrim at Tinker Creek," which later won the Pulitzer Prize.

In 1976 Barnard became the youngest vice-president of the Hearst Publishing Company where he was in charge of acquiring and starting new magazines. He remained in this position until 1977 when he resigned. About this change he says, "I was bored and more importantly, I do not like working for large companies. I wanted to devote more time to 'Country Music Magazine' and do some things of special interest to me."

When Barnard left Hearst, the circulation of "Country Music Magazine" was 250,000. Under his closer supervision, the circulation doubled in two years.

Barnard has been a Johnny Cash fan since that day in 1955 when he heard Cash's first record. They have been close friends for several years, so when Cash celebrated his 25th anniversary in show business this past year Barnard had a special guitar custom-made for Cash and inscribed with a silver plate. He presented this to Cash during his anniversary concert in Nashville at the Grand Old Opry House.

The television version of the Johnny Cash movie, "The Pride of Jesse Hallum," is to be aired in late February or early March 1981. Barnard has a walk - on part in the movie.

Barnard married Helen Pullman in 1961. She is a Vassar graduate, and they had met while he was a student at Yale. They have three children: Annie, 10; John, 6; and Christopher, 3. The Barnards live in New York in the winter and have a summer home in Connecticut. Mrs. Barnard is an administrator in a private school near their home.

When asked to name his proudest achievement, Barnard said without any hesitation, "My children."

Presently Barnard maintains a Park Avenue office in New York where he is a partner in the firm of Killion, Barnard and Oettinger. These entrepreneurs initiate and manage a large variety of business enterprises. Barnard is planning to launch three new magazines in the near future.

What advice would he offer to young people who want to succeed? "Tell them to be willing to take calculated risks and not get too upset when things don't work out."

As a senior at Pampa High School, Barnard won the Texas Chemical Award and was named top high school sports writer in the state of Texas.

This writer had the privilege of being his chemistry teacher in high school. He found his "unknowns" so rapidly that he was given a sample of distilled water with just a touch of carmine dye to give it a pinkish cast. Barnard worked with this for two days and turned in this report: "Distilled water plus color." This report was tremendously pleasing — he had used his scientific training to let the evidence speak for itself and had not jumped to unwarranted conclusions.

The fact that Russell D. Barnard is listed in "Who's Who in America" attests to his national reputation. Few people achieve such amazing success in so many widely diverse fields in such a short period of time. Pampa can truly be proud of this former resident.

Brzezinski stays out of Haig 'witch hunt'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, said Saturday the White House will not "be partners to some indiscriminate witch hunt" into the background of Alexander M. Haig Jr.

At the same time, Brzezinski said if there is something in the White House files which can help the Senate in its hearing on Haig's nomination to be secretary of state "we would be delighted to provide it."

Brzezinski also said he thinks there is a danger the incoming administration of Ronald Reagan "will emphasize only confrontation" in dealing with the Soviet Union. He said he still believes an accommodation can be worked out with the Soviets if it is based on both firmness and mutual restraint.

Appearing on "Newsmaker," a Cables News Network televised interview, Brzezinski confirmed that Sen. Claiborne Pell, senior Democrat on the Foreign Relations Committee, had asked the Carter administration for information on Haig, who served in the White House during the Nixon administration.

"I am absolutely certain that Senator Pell, who is a gentleman, who is an honorable person, has no interest in participating in a witch hunt," Brzezinski said.

"I rather suspect there may be some people outside of the Senate — perhaps people who write stories — who would thoroughly enjoy a spectacle of that sort."

Some Democrats on the Foreign Relations Committee want to question Haig about his role in shaping foreign policy and in wiretapping as deputy director of the National Security Council and about his part in the Watergate scandal under former President Richard M. Nixon.

"We are not going to engage in simply an indiscriminate search designed to dig something up," Brzezinski said. "If there is something in the files which can be helpful, which can be indicated to us that it is needed, we would be delighted to provide it."

On world problems, Brzezinski said the danger of a Soviet invasion of Poland has not receded even though troops have not crossed the border. "They can maintain a high state of readiness for some time to come, therefore the danger still exists," he said.

Brzezinski also expressed doubt that the Reagan administration will correctly handle U.S.-Soviet relations.

"I think there is a danger that the new administration will be one-dimensional in its approach," Brzezinski said.

The risk, he said, is that "it will emphasize only confrontation, focus excessively on hardware and weaponry, overlook the ideological aspects of the competiton — for example, ignore entirely the very worldwide significant appeal of the human rights policy."

Bangkok flu hits U.S.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Bangkok flu has spread to 36 states this winter, but health authorities say the disease has not yet reached epidemic proportions.

Outbreaks are "widespread" only in New York state, the national Centers for Disease Control reports.

Elsewhere, outbreaks of the A-Bangkok influenza strain are less severe and "the data does not support the conclusion that there is a nationwide epidemic," John-Paul Brennan, public health adviser for the CDC, said Friday.

Brennan said a disease is considered "widespread" when it appears in counties containing more than half of a state's population — as in New York.

Significant influenza activity, the CDC said, has been reported in Alaska, Arizona, California, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Texas and Wyoming.

And sporadic outbreaks of the disease have occurred in Georgia, Alabama, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin, the CDC said.

U.N. group says Israel blasted bodies

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops stacked the bodies of five Palestinian guerrillas killed in a Christmas Day shootout, placed an explosive charge on top of them and blew them apart, according to Dutch U.N. peacekeepers who said they witnessed the incident.

Israel denied the charge, which came in a statement issued Friday night by the U.N. peacekeeping command in Beirut.

Six mortar rounds fell on the southern Lebanese port city of Tyre Saturday 15 minutes after a rally honoring the five slain guerrillas, Lebanese provincial authorities said. They reported no casualties.

The U.N. account appeared to confirm earlier reports of the destruction of the bodies from Western diplomats in the Lebanese capital.

"Israeli soldiers searched the bodies, then piled them one over the other," the U.N. statement said. "After spraying them with an undetermined liquid, an explosive charge was placed over this human pile, which soon went off and was followed 10 minutes later by another exploding charge."

The Israeli army spokesman who denied the charge said grenades were thrown by boths sides during the firefight, which occurred in southern Lebanon, and speculated one of them may have set off explosives carried by a guerrilla.

The Israeli military command said last week its forces killed five guerrillas on Dec. 25 as the Palestinians tried to cross into Israel for a terrorist raid.

According to the U.N. statement, 30 Israeli soldiers took part in the shootout near the village of Shama in the southern Lebanese border enclave held by pro-Israeli Christian militiamen.

The Dutch U.N. troops watched the battle and its aftermath from their nearby positions, the U.N. said.

The statement said the United Nations asked the International Red Cross to investigate the incident. But a Red Cross mission failed to appear by Dec. 29 and the United Nations dispatched a team to "bury the bodies, or what remained of them," the statement said.

It claimed some 35 Israeli troops fired warning shots and prevented the U.N. team from reaching the area. The Israelis then placed the remains of the five bodies in plastic bags, boarded trucks and drove off toward the border, the statement said.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

A tale of two industries

By Don Graff

Japanese cars to the right, Japanese cars to the left and down on the docks more coming off the boats by the hour.

Imports up 24.6 percent during the first half of 1980 with panicky domestic automakers pressing for restrictions.

Yes indeedy, the crisis sounds familiar. Only in this instance we are not discussing Detroit's desperate battle against the Japanese onslaught but the almost identical plight of Western Europe's auto industry.

The Toyotas and Datsuns have also landed at Bremen — and Liverpool and Le Havre and Genoa. Japanese exports to the nine - member European Economic Community, after a somewhat later start, have been climbing as rapidly as to the United States.

While the Community - wide figures are impressive enough, for some individual countries they are, from the local point of view, horrendous. Japanese sales during the year's first half were up 43.3 percent in West Germany. Japanese vehicles accounted for 15.5 percent of total German sales during the period. In Britain, imports were up 15.5 percent and the Japanese share of the market hit 12.3 percent. (Figures courtesy of the American edition of "Europe," the Community magazine.)

Why? The Europeans, unlike Detroit, have a long tradition of building the smaller, fuel - efficient cars that are the wave of the present the Japanese are so successfully riding. But Europe also has a tradition of fragmented, jealously national enterprises and of government intervention that may start out with the best of intentions to aid troubled manufacturers but more often than not ends up preserving obsolete operations that can't make it on their own in a competitive market.

Britain being the most painful case in point. World - famous MG, a welfare case for years, earlier this year joined the lengthening list of closed plants. The British industry, once number two, is no longer a real contender in world markets.

As a consequence of the piecework nature and uneconomic structure of much of the European industry, it finds itself at a disadvantage in the confrontation with the Japanese who have, as "Europe" observes, "the right product at the right time, at the right price and just about everywhere."

The twofold European response to the challenge is instructive. A holding operation American automakers would dearly like to copy discourages imports. France and Italy are holding the tightest line, with the first setting a limit of 3 percent of the total French market and Italy mandating a ceiling of 2,200 vehicles annually. Britain imports to 11 percent of the home market. West Germany, wich has had not restrictions, is under increasing pressure to join its neighbors.

The more important self - help effort is in another area, however. The European producers are making strenuous efforts to break out of their self - created self - containment, expanding and internationalizing operations. They have realized, again in the words of "Europe", that "not only are small cars beautiful, but bigger companies are better."

Multi - national deals are being consummated all over the place. Renault is acquiring a 20 percent interest in Volvo of Sweden and the two, with Peugeot of France, are joint owners of a new high technology engine plant. Renault has also acquired a major interest in American Motors. Italy's Fiat is committed to a multi - billion dollar integration of Italian, Spanish, Polish and Brazilian facilities. The Japanese challengers are also involved, with British Leyland and Honda planning a joint British operation and Alfa Romeo and Nissan parties to a similar Italian - based partnership.

The Europeans are also updating their assembly lines, introducing the robot technology that contributes so heavily to Japanese efficiency. With consequent reduction in the labor force. The future industry will be technology intensive, but offer far fewer jobs.

The purpose of the Europeans is survival, not to give lessons. But such are there to be drawn.

Meanwhile, back in the United States, there are Japanese cars to the right, Japanese cars to the left and down on the docks...

Conservative trend in American youth

Amid the news coming to us about wars and crises abroad, earthquakes, fires and hideous crimes, there was an intriguing little story about the swing of American teenagers to conservatism. Depending on the point of view, this perceived development could be seen as a ray of light in the dark storms or just one more calamity. It should come as no surprise that we are encouraged by this particular tiding.

The publishers of "Who's Who Among American High School Students" have just conducted an extensive nationwide poll of high school students and found a surprisingly large percentage support the conservative viewpoint on current issues, reflecting the national swing in the Reagan landslide. Although the poll makes no claim at being scientific, it's sheer size in numbers — more than 24,000 returned questionnaires — lends authenticity enough.

By majorities ranging as high as 88 percent, the young respondents said they want to control inflation, spending and taxes, they oppose the Equal Rights Amendment and legalized abortion, they favor mandatory draft registration and nuclear power, and 71 percent attend church regularly.

In short, the poll indicates today's teen-agers believe strongly in morality, the work ethic and other traditional American values. The pendulum has come far indeed from the 1960s when these youngsters were born amid an anti-traditionalist wave, raging anti-war protests and burning neighborhoods.

It is hard to know the cause and effect that brought this about. For, of the presidential administrations they can remember, the Nixon - Ford years offer about as little persuasion to become a conservative as the Carter years argue for liberalism. Moreover, the rightward passage of these students' parents need not have been decisive inasmuch as teenagers often rebel against the known beliefs of their elders, as young rebels proved especially during the 1960s and early 1970s.

We'd like to believe this latest generation of teenagers has finally learned to avoid the gross error of so many of their predecessors. That error is confusing idealism with liberalism — the mistake of believing conservatives are less concerned than liberals for the needs of people. The American teenager today seems to have grasped the real issue of our time and that is whether the government or private enterprise can best operate society.

In any event, the conservatism being detected among our teenagers today suggests a ripe opportunity for Reagan Republicans to add a large share of the nation's youth to their emerging consensus.

Diversity in intelligence

One of the Carter administration's major blunders in the intelligence field was the decision to grant the CIA a virtual monopoly on the collection, flow, analysis and distribution of intelligence information.

In effect, this decision gave Carter's CIA director, Adm. Stansfield Turner, absolute control over what inelligence data and estimates went to the president and the National Security Council.

Thus the entire intelligence community spoke with one voice. Dissenting views or countervailing information from the Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency or the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research never reached the White House. If Turner's judgments were in error, and several of them certainly were, there was no system of checks and balances to protect the president and his top advisers from acting on flawed intelligence estimates.

The Reagan transition team is reliably reported to be recommending a return to the kind of multi-agency intelligence effort favored by the Pentagon, the State Department and more than a few officials in the CIA itself.

This diversified approach no doubt offends those, like Turner, who imagine that the inexact science of intelligence-gathering and analysis can be refined and enhanced by imposing rigid centralization. The seasoned CIA veterans who Turner ignored or cashiered could have told him that diversity may be messy at times, but is also essential if national policy is to be formulated on the best available intelligence assessments.

WASHINGTON -- Some people send Christmas cards -- others send tomes. They are Xeroxed letters, catching you up on everything that has gone on in the family for the past year.

Harlequin decided to send one out this year which would take care of the holiday epistles once and for all.

"Dear Buchwalds,

"Well, it's been a very eventful yer for the Harlequins. Clint Jr., who just graduated from Med school, traded in the old Pinto for a new Mercedes-Benz 450.

"Julie, our oldest daughter, got married to a very nice boy from Houston who is in business with his father, selling and buying tankers. The kids found a lovely four - bedroom, Spanish - style house in Beverly Hills for $46,000, with a mortgage of 5¾ percent.

"Teddy, our oldest son, is studying to be a genetic engineer at Harvard. He has loved splicing genes ever since he was a little boy.

"Everett, our middle daughter Connie's husband, won his second Pulitzer Prize for fiction and is now working on a novel about a secret romance between Winston Churchill and Mrs. Joseph Stalin, which takes place when they both find themselves at loose ends with a free weekend at Yalta.

"Ellen, the youngest daughter, is 23 years old now and has volunteered to have a baby for a childless couple in Columbus, Ohio. She's the one in the family who is always thinking of new ways to help people. The baby should be born sometime in February. If you have naughty thoughts about this, forget it. Ellen was impregnated artificially at New York Hospital.

"Janet, my wife, is now being investigated by the FBI for an important job with the Reagan administration. There is some talk about her becoming ambassador to the Court of St. James, but I'm hoping she gets Peking, because we both love Chinese food.

"Derek, our youngest boy, is still in high school and scored 642 points as fullback in his senior year. He's had offers from Notre Dame, the University of Southern California, Alabama and Oklahoma. We told him it was his own decision and we didn't care if he played in the Rose Bowl, the Sugar Bowl or the Cotton Bowl as long as he was happy.

"Lots of visitors from abroad. Princess Grace stayed with us for Thanksgiving, and Prince Charles was our house guest when he came over to play polo last spring. Bjorn Borg visited us on his way to the U.S. Tennis Championships, and Pavarotti showed up unexpectedly one evening with his suitcase and said he hated the hotel they had put him in. Naturally, we said he could stay as long as he wished.

"The only sad news is that we had to withdraw Far Flung from the Kentucky Derby because of a bruised ankle.

"Our trainer decided to put him out to stud for a $5,000 fee.

"As for myself, I lucked out this year. I found some wonderful shelters, so I only had to pay $50 in income taxes last April. A Saudi Arabian sheik bought our farm in the country for $1.5 million and the computer company I invested $25,000 in last year just went public and my stock shot through the roof. The Lear jet was in the shop for two weeks, but we should have it out in time to go to Bermuda.

"All in all, it's been a quiet year, but we have nothing to complain about. Hope you have a wonderful holiday season and a great 1981.

"Love from all the Harlequins.

Free wood for the hauling

By William Steif

Many Americans are investing in wood stoves and new fireplaces to beat the high cost of heating with oil, gas or electricity.

But once you get your stove or fireplace you still have to buy wood. That can get expensive. A cord of wood (8 feet long, 4 feet wide, 4 feet high) costs at least $100 around Washington, D.C., and even more in other metropolitan areas.

Here's a way to beat the high cost of wood, if you don't live too far from a national forest. Get it from the forest, free.

There are 154 national forests, covering 183 million acres, in the country. Back in 1973, during the first oil crisis, the chief of the U.S. Forest Service (part of the Department of Agriculture) opened the forests to those who wanted free wood. The response was almost immediate. In 1974 about 195,000 persons took away 448 million board - feet. (A board foot is 12 inches long, 12 inches wide, an inch high.) The numbers have been rising ever since. In 1979 almost 700,000 persons carted off 1.6 billion board - feet.

The wood comes from downed or dead trees.

But there are restrictions and exceptions, and you've got to do some work. Diane O'Connor, of the Forest Service, points out that to get free firewood you have to:

—Get in touch with your local district ranger's office for a permit, in person, by phone or by mail. In a few cases you may not even need a written permit, just verbal permission.

—Restrict yourself to areas the district ranger designates.

—Limit your load to the amount the district manager says you can take, which may vary from forest to forest.

—Agree not to sell any of the wood commercially.

Eleven states are without national forests. They are Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota and Rhode Island. Southern California's four national forests, where trees are scarce, are not open to free firewood. Northern California's forests are open.

John Coleman, district ranger for the northern part of Virginia's George Washington National Forest, has much experience with people wanting free firewood. He says many folks "labor under a great misconception. They think the wood is stacked at the roadside and all they have to do is load it and take it away."

Coleman, based at Edinburg, Va., less than 100 miles from Washington, says getting free wood "requires a chain saw, a truck for hauling and some knowledge to identify what's dead and not dead." He warns chain saws can be dangerous and adds that "most of the easy wood is gone, so you have to hunt what you want and carry it." Sometimes, he says, it may not be economic to drive long distances for a small load of wood.

On the other hand, Coleman thinks "many people consider wood - gathering a form of recreation." He says that at his forest some areas of living trees are designated for "thinning" — for $5 people can go in and cut green trees, which they can haul home and age.

Those who live close to national forests, obviously, are in luck.

But you may not know if you're within hailing distance of a forest, and it may be to your advantage to drive 150 miles, round - trip and spend $13 on gas to cut and haul $100 worth of free wood. You can find out what you need to know by:

—Looking in the phone book under U.S. Government and finding U.S. Forest Service listed under U.S. Agriculture Department. The Forest Service employees can refer you to the nearest of the 600 - plus district rangers.

—Writing U.S. Forest Service, c-o U.S. Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 2417, Washington, D.C., 20013, and asking for information about the free firewood program and for a list of national forests.

Letters

To the Editor

We would like to thank the men and ladies of the VFW and DAV. If not for the grocery contributions and all the other things, we would not have had any kind of Christmas. As it is now we have had a beautiful Christmas dinner and have plenty of canned goods to last for quite a while. We didn't know where to turn because my husband is disabled and has not worked for seven months, but, thanks to the good hearted people of these organizations, we are now a lot better off for knowing there is always some one somewhere, when the time comes God leads us to call the right person.

Kissinger returns to Mideast shuttle

JERUSALEM (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, on an unofficial exploratory mission for the incoming Reagan administration, returned to Israel Saturday and stirred memories of the days he pushed the Mideast into its first steps toward peace.

Kissinger told reporters at Ben-Gurion airport, where he arrived so many times in his shuttle diplomacy of 1973-75, that he would not get involved in day-to-day Arab-Israeli peace talks.

"I am willing to do special missions at critical periods," Kissinger said after arriving from Egypt, where he met with President Anwar Sadat.

Kissinger has scheduled two days of meetings here before flying to Saudi Arabia Tuesday. From there he will travel to Oman and Morocco before returning to the United States to report to Reagan.

Kissinger, who has not been set for an official position in the incoming administration, said he expected slow progress toward an expanded Arab-Israeli peace since it is an election year in Israel.

"The imminence of elections tends to slow things down somewhat," he commented.

"You all know my attachment to the security, the safety and the peace of Israel," said the man who orchestrated the disengagement pacts after the 1973 Arab-Israeli war. "It means a great deal for me to come back here."

Kissinger was to meet Sunday with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and planned to visit the Sinai's Etzion air base, which Israel is slated to relinquish to Egypt in April 1982.

"Nostalgia, more than any political feeling, surrounds Kissinger's visit," the Labor Party daily, Davar, wrote in an editorial Saturday.

Kissinger touched some raw Israeli nerves during his days of shuttle diplomacy while persuading Israel to give up valuable real estate in exchange for Arab promises. He triggered impassioned demonstrations by Israelis who believed the concessions he demanded threatened their safety.

Before leaving Cairo on this visit, Kissinger said he had gained "a very good insight" into Egyptian views on Soviet expansionism and the stalled Israeli-Egyptian negotiations on autonomy for 1.2 million Palestinians living in Israeli-occupied territory.

Referring to the Palestinian talks, deadlocked since the summer, he said, "I believe success is achievable within a reasonable period of time." He also predicted Jordan would join the negotiations when they had achieved a "certain measure of success."

Earlier Saturday, Kissinger said the United States risked losing its allies in the Mideast and Africa unless it stood up to the Soviet Union.

"It isn't tolerable that the Soviet Union and its proxy forces engage in expansion in Africa and the Middle East without opposition," Kissinger said.

Carter activists promise return to government jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a novel idea Jimmy Carter had four years ago. Instead of staffing the government with the usual appointees — former congressmen, professors, business executives or lawyers — he brought in critics of government, the reformers, the discontented. He hired outside agitators and made them inside agitators.

He brought Sam Brown to run ACTION. Brown had organized the Vietnam Moratorium and managed peace candidate Eugene J. McCarthy's 1968 presidential campaign.

Carter put Joan Claybrook in charge of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. She had been a lawyer with Public Citizen Inc., sponsored by Ralph Nader.

To be assistant secretary of agriculture for food and consumer services, Carter named Carol Tucker Foreman, who had been executive director of the Consumer Federation of America.

And he drafted Gus Speth from the Natural Resources Defense Council to run the Council on Environmental Quality.

All told, by one estimate, Carter named more than 50 public interest advocates to high positions. Did it make a difference?

They think so. The organizations they left behind, for the most part, praise the work they did.

Nader, who has become something of a national scold, dissents.

"I think that many of them worked hard. They tried to do a good job," Nader says. "But it was more than they could handle."

He says Carter put activists in some showy places, but "he didn't put them in charge of the Justice Department, or the Treasury, or the bank-regulating agencies" that had real power.

The activists in government agree that reform sometimes looked easier from the outside and compromises were required.

"Once I had to testify against legislation which I had helped set in motion (before entering the government)," Speth says. "One of my jobs here has been to support the president's program even if he didn't go our way."

From his perspective as a government-watcher, Fred Wertheimer, senior vice president of Common Cause, said the gain of having advocates in government will be realized "5, 10, 15 years from now," when the same people return to top government jobs.

Sam Brown, praising Carter for the opportunity, agrees. He says of Carter: "He trained a whole generation, which will be back."

Former Giants football player was teller during Arkansas bank robbery

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Several thousand dollars was stolen Friday from a Fayetteville branch bank by a man who jumped onto the bank counter and demanded $10,000.

William E. Kell, special agent in charge of the FBI in Arkansas, said he could not release the exact amount of money taken in the robbery.

The man apparently was armed with a small automatic pistol and was wearing a ski mask, Kell said.

There were five bank tellers on duty and several customers in the First National Bank's University Branch when the robbery occurred shortly before 6 p.m., Kell said. There were no injuries.

The man dashed into the building, jumped up on the counter and screamed out that he was serious. He handed Marsh White of Fayetteville, a bank teller, a plastic white bag and demanded $10,000.

White, a former University of Arkansas fullback and former New York Giants football player, said Saturday that he was not scared. "I just gave him what he wanted," White said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. He said the entire episode took about 30 seconds to unfold.

"It's just a sign of the times," White said of the robbery.

White said the robber, who was described as being a black male in his middle 20s, 6-foot-2 and weighing about 230 pounds, left "almost as fast as he came in."

When asked if his football career, facing the onslaught of large defenders might have prepared him for the threat of the robber, White said it was possible, but that he also had sensed recently that something bad was going to happen.

Soviets open '81 with warning to Poland

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union starts 1981 with new ominous warnings to Poland's free trade union and the Red Army reportedly still alerted for possible intervention in the Warsaw Pact nation shaken by economic problems and the effects of last summer's labor unrest.

Despite an apparent holiday lull in Western concern over a possible Soviet intervention, the Kremlin remains harshly critical of the Polish "Solidarity" independent trade union movement in its present form — independent of Communist Party control.

The Soviet news agency Tass said New Year's Day that "anti-socialist forces" were urging Solidarity to "assume a sort of counterbalance to the official (Polish) organs of power, to become an organization of a political kind."

The unsigned commentary, published by Pravda and read on Soviet television, denounced "provocative demands" and "subversive aims" which it said were bringing "chaos in the economy."

A Western diplomat in Moscow commented, "There's still a 50-50 chance that the Soviets will intervene in Poland in some way, even if it is officially described as aid requested by the Polish government.

"It's certainly premature to say now that the crisis is over," he said.

In Washington, Pentagon intelligence analysts said Friday Soviet troops on the Polish frontier were remaining in "an increased readiness posture" and that "low levels of mobilization continue."

A selective callup of reservists to flesh out some of the divisions in the western Soviet Union, next to Poland, has been noted by Western intelligence in recent months.

President Carter and other administration officials reported in early December that the Soviets had completed preparations for a military intervention.

The Tass denunciation of Polish labor developments followed a report in the Soviet Defense Ministry newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda (Red Star), hinting at contingency plans for an intervention. The article was published the day after Christmas.

In an apparent effort to rally the Soviet public around its claim of alleged NATO interference in Poland, the newspaper listed possible Western countermeasures" to Soviet action in Poland.

Citing Western news reports, Krasnaya Zvezda claimed a U.S.-inspired plan included breaking off all talks with Moscow on disarmament, economic and financial matters; halting "high level (diplomatic) contacts" and freezing "special relations" between NATO ally West Germany and Soviet ally East Germany.

Western observers in Moscow regarded the newspaper report as another Kremlin effort to create the impression of an embattled Soviet bloc surrounded by subversive Western forces bent on overturning its communist system.

Back-to-the-earth magazine finds prosperity

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Back in the heyday of the back-to-the-earth push, 1969 to be exact, a young aviation editor in Ohio named John Shuttleworth ignored a slim bank account and overwhelming odds to package his philosophy of self-sufficiency in a do-it-yourself magazine.

He invested $1,500 and a year of his time to turn out the first issue. He gave away most of the first 10,000 copies.

A decade later, The Mother Earth News is a far cry from its boot-strap beginnings. It has a worldwide circulation of 1.2 million subscribers and keeps a staff of 150 people busy putting out six issues a year plus special issues and books.

Prosperity has permitted the publication to buy 622 acres of prime mountain land in neighboring Transylvania County — the site of an "eco-village" featuring an array of energy research projects.

The magazine also owns a subsidiary dehydrated-food company and runs Mother's Bookshelf, the world's largest collection of ecological information.

Mother Earth News, which moved its headquarters from Indiana to North Carolina in the mid-1970s, was recently bought by a corporation formed by three former Shuttleworth employees.

But the new management, TMEN Inc., says it has no plans to change the successful formula Shuttleworth used to sell his magazine.

"We pretty much go by the old saying, 'If it's not broke, don't fix it,'" said editor Bruce Woods, one of the new owners. "We've made a few minor changes, such as tighter editing and a little different language. And maybe it's a little less countrified, but it's not in any way a slick, commercial package."

The bearded, 33-year-old Woods said soaring energy costs "have suddenly brought us to a lot of people's attention."

Mother Earth News put out a special 175-page home energy issue this past fall, with 50 articles on saving energy, making your own fuel and building fuel-efficient homes.

The magazine also just published its first book, entitled the "Alcohol Fuel Handbook." It is "a can-do book for people who want to use and make alcohol fuel," Woods said.

Meanwhile, the magazine has moved from teaching self-sufficiency through magazine articles to taking its ideas to people with on-the-road seminars. Workers in the new seminar department recently returned from a nine-week, coast-to-coast tour in which they introduced people to Mother Earth research projects, particularly energy projects.

Ben Fleming, head of the department, said he believes the seminars will promote "the neighbor-helping-neighbor" concept.

The seminar department will go back on the road in March 1981 with a program entitled "Self-Reliant Living: Creating A Reasonable Alternative." The tour will hit several large cities, including Richmond, Va., Boston and Hartford, Conn.

Mother Earth News last year began a summer seminar program at its eco-village. For about $50 a person, participants can camp out on the land and learn to build a log house, grow an organic garden or run a hydroelectric plant.

"So far, the seminar department is too new to have made any money for the company," Fleming said. "We may have broken even, I don't know, but I think this is a very important idea, one that puts people in touch with ideas to live in harmony with the Earth."

While the seminar department may not be making a profit, the idea of self-sufficiency is a best-seller in these days of worsening inflation and rising energy costs. Mother Earth News has tripled its circulation in the past five years and brings in more than $12 million a year in sales.

Company president and co-owner Dave Adams was reluctant to discuss the magazine's financial picture but said, "We're doing very well." Adams said most of the profits are plowed back into research projects.

"Everything we do goes back to the book, to the idea of being as self-sufficient as you can reasonably be in a modern world," Woods said. "Everyone here believes in it, and we believe it can work. Our magazine simply shows you how to make it work for you."

"Sesame Street" to be shown in Isreal

NEW YORK (AP) — "Sesame Street" is extending its boundaries to Israel.

A Hebrew-language version of the award-winning television series, which is already carried in nearly 50 countries, will be produced by Children's Television Workshop in cooperation with the instructional Television Center of Israel under a $750,000 grant from the Charles H. Revson Foundation.

The joint production will result in 65 half-hour programs in which Israeli and U.S.-produced material will be integrated in a Sesame Street with its own individual Israeli stamp, according to CTW President Joan Ganz Cooney. The Israeli portions of the series will go into production next year, and the program will be broadcast daily in Israel beginning in 1982.

HOMEMAKER'S NEWS

By Elaine Houston

VERSATILE VELOUR KNITS

Versatile velour knits can range from elegant to sporty, depending on the selection of pattern style. Velours make excellent jogging suits yet become the perfect evening dress for a special occasion. Although velour knits are sometimes a bit "tricky" to sew, a few basic principles of working with knits will reduce frustration when sewing.

When selecting velour, check the label for fiber content and recommended care. Ask for a care label to sew into the finished garment. When selecting a pattern, notice the suggested fabrics on the envelope and in the pattern book. Select styles that are "fuss free," with few pieces, no top stitching or fussy details. Avoid buttonholes and zippers, if possible. Since velour knits vary in degrees of stretch, compare the stretch of the fabric to the stretch gauge on the pattern envelope. The fabric stretch should fit with the stretch built into the pattern.

Before sewing, pre-shrink the fabric by washing it as you would the final garment or have it drycleaned. This helps "relax" the fabric and remove chemical residue which can cause skipped stitches when sewing. Also, gather all the necessary equipment for making a velour knit garment. These include: long staple polyester thread or cotton covered polyester thread; ball point or all-purpose needle, size 11 (or 70-75); a roller or even-feed presser foot to assist in making pucker-free seams; sharp shears; and pattern weight or long, thin, ball-point pins.

Use the "with nap" directions on the direction sheet for layout. All pattern pieces should go the same direction, either with the nap or against it. When cut with the nap, the fabric will look smooth and shiny. The surface will look darker and rougher when cut against the nap. Decide which appearance you like best and cut all pieces going that direction. Consider using pattern weights instead of pins to hold the pattern in place. Pins often get lost in the pile. Use sharp shears to cut out pattern pieces. Transfer markings with chalk or use tailor's tacks.

Set the machine correctly for velour fabrics. Experiment with a double thickness swatch of fabric before takling the "real thing." In general, set the machine for 10-12 stitches per inch (or per 2.5 cm). This corresponds to a number three on most machines.

Slightly reduce thread tension and decrease presser foot pressure. If fabric slips when stitching after the above adjustments, use an even feed presser food or stitch with a layer of tissue paper between feed dog and fabric. Also, be sure to pin the fabric carefully on the seam line to control the fabric at the seam when sewn.

Stitch with a straight stitch or narrow zig zag in direction of nap. To finish seams, press to one side and make a second row of straight or zig zag stitches. Trim excess allowance to prevent rolling. If using fusible interfacing, test the results on a fabric scrap. The fusing process may crush the pile, so a sew-in interfacing may work better.

Nylon or polyester zippers which are lightweight, strong and flexible are recommended for stretch velours. Before hemming a garment, let it hang for 24 hours in case stretching occurs. Then level and hem the garments with stretch lace, tape or sew one-fourth inch from edge and catch stitch. Velour is hard to topstitch on, but if carefully done, hems can be double topstitched.

To press velours, use a scrap of velour, a terry cloth towel or a needle board. Press lightly on the wrong side. Light steam held over the fabric right side will restore the nap. Use strips of paper under seam allowances to avoid press marks.

HINTS FOR HOMEMAKERS

To take hard-water marks out of a bathroom bowl, use vinegar. Scrub with vinegar to remove hard-water deposits from anything else, too — especially from the dishwasher interior.

Need an extra-wide seam gauge on your sewing machine? Make one yourself. Tie an elastic band around the free arm of the sewing machine to use as an adjustable seam gauge for extra or unusual widths.

Liquefy granulated honey in the microwave oven. Microwave a few seconds until the granules begin to melt. Then stir. Microwave longer, if necessary.

Need information on an old insurance policy? Anyone with an old insurance policy can seek help from the insurance commissioner of the state in which the policy was purchased. In a letter to the commissioner, give the date of purchase, the full name of the company and its last known address.

Ski goggles are a "must" on the slopes as a shield against bright sunlight and weather. Various shades serve different situations, such as gray for bright sun and yellow for haze. If "fogging up" is a problem, consider goggles with vents or rub a film of soap inside and out, then polish with a clean, lintless cloth or paper toweling. Also, anti-fog sprays are available.

Keep perishable foods, such as cream pies, seafoods, and dishes made with eggs, fish, meat and poultry cold (below 40 degrees F.). Do not let these goods stand at room temperature more than two hours.

Zinc is an essential mineral for humans, but it is also can be toxic. As little as two grams of zinc can produce toxic side effects, such as gastrointestinal irritation and vomiting. Chronic zinc supplementation of more than 15 mg. per day over the amount ingested in food is not recommended without medical supervision.

Homeowners policies don't usually provide protection for personal treasures, coins, stamps, jewelry or silver. However, a separate insurance policy — a personal-property floater — will cover the items you want covered at appraised value.

Protect medicines from intense light, heat and moisture. Also, store them out of the reach of children.

If a credit card is lost or stolen, notify the credit card issuer immediately. An individual is responsible for any charges up to a $50 limit before the card is reported stolen.

Some of the most important duties a parent can perform include choosing a competent guardian for the children, getting approval form the person and recording the agreement in a will.

"Floater" is delightfully funny

FLOATER. By Calvin Trillin. Ticknor & Fields. 204 Pages. $9.95.

A "floater" in Calvin Trillin's new novel is a writer for a weekly newsmagazine who is not tied to one department but moves about from week to week filling in wherever a writer is needed.

The floater in this case is Fred Becker, a nice, intelligent guy with a handy way with words which makes him equally at ease in writing tight little stories about economics as well as handling skillfully items about complicated surgery.

Fred, a bad marriage behind him, is now single, but hardly swinging since the only thing he seems to dote upon is the rent-controlled apartment he occupies in an area near New York's Greenwich Village.

He is relatively happy with his life, although he does now and then have glimmerings that he could better himself. So, when a once-in-a-lifetime chance to do so presents itself, Fred is torn. It all hinges on a tip from a friend who could be an undercover agent and then again might not be. The tip: the President's wife is pregnant and trying to conceal the fact.

As Fred sees it, if he can prove the tip is true it could give him an exclusive story that would improve his position at the magazine. In addition, it could give him the material for a best-selling novel — which Fred writes in his head as the book progresses and which is hilarious.

How it all comes out really isn't all that important. It's getting there that counts, and Calvin Trillin lays out a delightfully funny path for the reader to follow.

There are plenty of funny people around today but not all of them can write that well. Trillin is one of the few who can draw from all sorts of humor and encapsulate it in a few well-chosen words.

If you enjoy good pickin' and singin' and hillbilly comedy then you won't want to miss spending an evening with the Ozarks Country Jubilee.

They'll guarantee a smile on your face and a warm spot in your heart before you go home.

This show is made up of nine of the most talented musicians and vocalists (not to mention the funniest comedian in show business today) that you'll ever want to meet.

Patients overcome stuttering

NEW YORK (NEA) - "I've been a stutterer as far back as I can remember. In my senior year at NYU, I went on 42 job interviews before I got a job. My stuttering was the only thing that separated me from the other applicants.

"I'm an insurance claims adjuster now but I always wanted to go to law school. I didn't because I knew a stutterer couldn't. I do plan to go next year, however, because I have not stuttered since May 22, 1980."

That's when Barry Hartglass, 23, enrolled at New York's National Center for Stuttering and learned to stop stuttering. He learned to start in the first place, according to Dr. Martin F. Schwartz, executive director of the center. All stutterer do, Schwartz contends.

"Stutterers are born with the tendency to focus a great deal of stress-induced tension on the muscles of the vocals cords while others may focus that tension in the face, the stomach, etc.," he says. "So we have a young child who at a given moment under stress focuses so much tension on his vocal cords that they lock, and his speech suddenly becomes interrupted. The child panics and struggles to release the lock. That struggle, which quickly becomes learned, is what the world sees and hears and calls stuttering. If we can keep the vocal cords apart and relaxed, the stuttering will abort. I teach stutterers to do that through a technique called 'air-flow.'"

Developed during a three-year period and based on Schwartz' work at New York University Medical Center where he is a research associate professor in surgery, the technique involves "the learning of a passive, silent outflow of air prior to the start of a sentence to keep the vocal cords apart and relaxed. That's followed by the production of a slowed first syllable to prevent quick starts which produce tension and cancel out the relaxation caused by the passive outflow."

Approximately 2,400 adults and countless children have learned the technique, he says, from public school therapists and private speech therapists trained by the center, or from Schwartz himself who conducts seminars monthly in New York, several times a year in Chicago, Atlanta, Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle.

The success rate, he says, based on feedback from approximately 624 adult patients, is 94.3 percent. "We define success as meaning that one year after start of treatment, the patient doesn't stutter or substitute words or avoid situations in all daily, routine speaking events. Yes, he can get caught every once in a while, but he can recover by practicing the technique."

And practice is crucial. Simply learning the technique is a snap, he says. "Fluency is immediate and patients are delighted after two days, but I'm unimpressed. There's no way a two-day-old habit can compete effectively with a stuttering habit that may be 30 years old. To make a permanent alteration in the subconscious and to make the new habit automatic requires months of practice."

Therefore, for 100 weeks following the two-day learning seminar, the patient must do homework. "Every week the patient gets an assignment of some sort that takes about an hour a day to complete," Schwartz says. "A couple of minutes of that hour are recorded on a tape casette which is mailed to me at the end of the week. The cassettes are evaluated and returned, with the results and the following week's assignment recorded on them."

Schwartz' small staff processes about 120 cassettes weekly, he says, from all over the world, in all kinds of languages. "The air-flow technique works in every language because we don't have to know what they're saying, simply how."

Working on one problem at a time, the stutterer practices until he or she can speak comfortably in the basic stress-and-stuttering producing situations: on the phone, in public, in stores, with authority figures, etc.

It's a heavy investment of time and effort. And money. For $1,500 — paid up front but all-inclusive, Schwartz says — the patient is taught the technique, given written materials and a microphone for pacticing proper air-flow, and access to hot lines, refresher and booster sessions, plus membership in local self-help groups and the 100-week cassette follow-up program.

At best, they gain more than fluency. They're able to do what all others do unthinkingly: order what they want in a restaurant instead of what they can pronounce; converse spontaneously instead of mentally racing ahead to anticipate unspeakable sounds or words; pick up the phone, an instrument of terror to most stutterers. They can, in other words, behave like human beings.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

"DEAR LOUISE: What do you do when you're so worried that you're almost flaked out?

"I'm 66 and my husband is 68. He takes life as it comes and is philosophical about trouble. He thinks I ought to be like him and he gets mad because I can't be.

"My disposition is different from his. I'm sensitive and I agonize over the heartbreaking things that happen to me.

"He says he has stood my crying and carrying on for the first 40 years of our marriage but he's not going to put up with it much longer.

"He just doesn't understand my worries and responsibilities. He was an only child and his folks died years ago.

"But my mother is still alive at 90 and is terribly possessive of me. We keep her in her own home but she calls me a dozen times a day over nothing.

"Then my cousin, who grew up in my folks' home, is 69 and is alive in body but not in mind. She had brain surgery three years ago that left her unable to reason or remember anything for more than a minute at a time.

"She's on the other side of town and calls all the time, asking the same thing over and over, wanting me to drive over there to see if here stove is turned off, if she has money in her purse (she always does but can't find it until I show it to her) and to hunt the key to her house.

"I'm about to lose my mind from all the heckling. I owe loyalty to my mother and my cousin because they took care of me till I married. But I also owe loyalty to my husband, whom I love sincerely. I love all three of them dearly.

"So I'm asking you, what do you do when your worries get you down? B.L."

DEAR B.L.: I pay current bills. That may sound simplistic, but it's my therapy, my relief from heartbreak.

My childhood and youth were the years of tight money. Sometimes my folks had to let a bill ride a little while, and I always cried over every one that wasn't paid the day it was due.

Now that I can pay bills when they come it, it's a blessed relief to me. If all the current ones are paid and I get stymied by worries (like you, I have chronically ill relatives who usurp my time and patience but whom I cannot abandon), I get out of the house and drive around town, paying bills in advance.

If you can latch onto something that gives you a personal lift, the worries will lesson, I believe.

It has been said that middle-age is when you stop worrying about your children and start worrying about your parents and other older relatives. You and I know this is true.

I give my first loyalty to my husband, Otis. I meant it when I vowed, in our marriage ceremony over 43 years ago, to forsake all others and cling to him alone.

If I have a conflict of loyalty, I choose him. The others must come second.

I believe that, since your beloved mother and cousin are taking you away from your husband and causing him to threaten your marital happiness, you should look at once for a clean, comfortable, well-kept, sympathetic retirement home for your unhappy ladies.

Since your mother is over-possesive and your cousin cannot remember, they need physical and mental help that a qualified home could provide. They could, and probably would, be happier there than they are now. And for sure you would.

You say you "keep" your mother now, so a home would not add a lot to your financial burden. The same may be true of your cousin.

Above all, keep your marriage intact. You and your husband have had 40 years together, years during which your long-suffering husband has watched you worry.

Surprise him by turning your crying into smiling.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 68-year-old widow, having lost my husband four years ago. Ira is a 70-year-old widower who lost his wife last year. She and I were good friends.

Ira has invited me to accompany him on a Caribbean cruise — all expenses paid. He says the rates are practically the same for a couple, and he would appreciate having my company. He said there will be no hanky-panky, as he has been impotent for 10 years. This suits me fine.

Even though we would be sharing husband and wife-type accommodations (twin beds), he says I may travel under my own name, he under his, and nobody will care as it's being done a lot these days.

My children (both married) say, "Go!" My friends say, "Go!" I really want to, but, Abby, how do you think it will look?

YETTA IN THE BRONX

DEAR YETTA: It will look like you and Ira are sleeping together.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, an older male relative started taking a great deal of interest in our 3-year-old daughter. It never entered my mind that something could be wrong because this man enjoys a fine reputation and is a well-liked, prominent citizen.

After putting several incidents together, they all added up to one thing. Child molesting! When it finally dawned on me, I didn't know whom I hated more, the relative, or myself for having been so stupid.

Because I never actually caught him in the act, I decided to say nothing, but to watch him very carefully to make sure he never was alone with our child for even one minute.

I hope he reads this. I will be happy when he dies, then I won't have to worry anymore. Please print this so other mothers will be on the lookout for sick people who are around them every day.

OHIO MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Waiting for him to "die" is no solution. (He may outlive you.) And making sure he isn't alone with your child "for even a minute" isn't the answer either. What's to stop him from molesting other children? Confront him with the facts as you know them and insist that he get professional help. He is sick!

DEAR ABBY: One of the girls in the office is getting married next month. Her fiance is in prison and won't be released until 1983. They will be married in the prison with only a few people attending.

Is a bridal shower appropriate under the circumstances? This girl has very few close friends as far as we know. Should we in the office give her a bridal shower? We want to do the right thing.

NOT SURE

DEAR NOT SURE: I think it's a lovely idea. Give her a shower.

DEAR ABBY: Please ask your readers to use a little common sense when they write personal messages on their Christmas cards.

My 85-year-old mother received a Christmas card from a nephew who lives in another state. On the card he scribbled, "Every year we hold our breath wondering if we will hear from you."

Last year, this same idiot nephew wrote, "Your Christmas card was the first to arrive this year. We pray it won't be your last."

Abby, please point out that elderly folks do not need to be reminded, especially at Christmastime, that they are not immortal.

Don't use my name or city, as this nephew is not deliberately unkind. He's just stupid.

Apple pie recipe adapted from New England magazine

My friend Jonathan Dudley adapted this delicious dessert from a recipe in a New England magazine.

¼ cup unbleached all-purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
Unbaked 9-inch pie shell with a crimped edge
3½ medium McIntosh apples (1 pound, generous) pared, cored and halved
½ cup heavy cream mixed with ½ cup milk
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon mixed with ¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg

Stir together the flour and ¼ cup of the sugar; sprinkle over bottom of pie crust. Arrange 6 of the apple halves around the crust and put the remaining apple half in the center. Sprinkle the remaining ½ cup sugar, then the cream-milk mixture around the apples. Sprinkle the cinnamon-nutmeg mixture over the apples. Bake in a pre-heated 425 degree oven for 15 minutes; turn control to 375 degrees and continue baking until pastry is brown and apples are quite soft — a knife inserted in the custard mixture around the apples will not come out clean — about 45 minutes. Let stand on a cake rack until set and warm. Makes 6 servings.

PEEKING at PAMPA

Wasn't this Christmas a gorgeous time? The city decorations, the home lights on eaves and windows, the hundreds of poinsettias we gave and received — they were more than I can possibly recount. It was a memorable, happy, religious season for all of us.

Even those who got less than they had expected for Christmas, even those whose relatives didn't get here as hoped for, all of them seemed to manage to have a good Christmas from all I heard as I went about town.

Most of the churches were bedecked with magnificent poinsettias, many of which were later delivered to shut-ins or to the hospital, passing on the joy of the season.

Incidentally, did you get any unsigned cards? I did, several of them. There was no address on the envelope, no signature on the card. So, from me, who cannot know who you are — to you, who don't remember what cards you didn't sign, thank you for the spirit. That's what counts. And every card added brightness to my day.

Hope your Christmas dinner was all you wanted it to be. I had my husband all worked up to taking me out to eat since we had no visiting relatives — and then I learned that all of the eating places we frequent were closed for the day. I approved of the closing since I believe that all possible employees should have that special day to spend with their families.

And I didn't mind being reduced to cooking turkey and the trimmings on Christmas Day. After all, when you cook at home, there is turkey left at home for at least a week. Nice saving on money and effort.

Some of our citizens took out for warmer climates. Charles Cook left to spend a few days in Phoenix with his daughter and her family. Is likely back home by now.

The Jack Reeves entertained for friends on the 21st. They always manage something new and different. As part of the goodies, Jack used his new smoker to smoke the turkey himself. He wore a Santa Claus vest and the most intriguing Santa cap, complete with jingling tassel. Kathy was attired in a Christmas apron that was most festive and attractive. Their beautiful home, with its free-standing fireplace, is a dream and always pleasant to visit.

Churches were reported to be overflowing with decorations and good will, perhaps more than ever before.

First Methodist had a Christmas Eve communion service that will be long remembered, with the church packed with communicants and ending with a candle-lighting service that was highly impressive.

Heard that Jerry Lane, fairly new in town, has been giving Christmas programs (and other programs too, I should think), around the area. He's a business man here — and also a man with a fine voice, already one of Pampa's musical artists. He's a nephew of Don Lane and Josephine Lawrence, a grandson of Mrs. Ada Lane.

Heard of a Sunday School class dinner where the seating arrangement bears repeating, so let me pass it on. Usually church dinners have chairs in long rows so that the ones on either end can't see, much less converse with, each other. These tables were in large squares, with everybody in each square facing each other. Reports were that the joviality was twice what the long-table arrangement would have been. Somebody must have been resourceful — so our congratulations to them.

Heard that George Newberry gave a party, which really was completely George's doing. Wife, Jessie, had to work all day in her profession as a nurse. So George readied the house and prepared the food single-handedly. The lucky guests reported that George had a marvelous get-together — and that Jessie cheered him on.

Jessie also treated guests to a showing of her collection of Barbie doll clothes she is making for her granddaughter, Joy Lynn Newberry, who is 8 years old. The daintiest of outfits for every occasion was much admired by the viewers. Seems Barbie can now have almost anything you want to name — costumes, houses, cars, vans, etc. A far cry from the paper dolls we used to play with!

Did you see the Mac Davis special on Christmas Eve? Was especially impressed, as I always am, that Mac never forgets his roots in Lubbock. His tribute to his home town and his family was most touching.

All in all, it's been a great month. From the Dec. 1 parade, in which the girls of The Pampa News won first place with their attractive float (incidentally, they dressed up the lobby of The New beautifully, too) to the end of the holidays, we should have no complaints. If we're alive and able to get about, if we have someone to love or to remember loving, if we put out kindness to our neighbors and friends, we are holding fast to the Christmas spirit. May it stay among us through 1981! PAM.

"Queen of Shaba" is almost human

QUEEN OF SHABA: The Story of an African Leopard. By Jo Adamson. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich. 173 Pages. $14.95.

Joy Adamson — the lioness lady of "Born Free" fame who wa murdered in her African camp last January — here chronicles th life and times of a leopardess named Penny which she raise released and tracked through Kenya's Shaba wildlife reserve.

The drama of the book turns on whether Penny, adopted as a 2-(3-month-old cub, can overcome her "imprinting" by humans ar learn to live and love in the wild. Will she hunt? Will she pick home safe from natural enemies? Can she mate? And the b question — is she pregnant? The author spends two years trackin the Queen of Shaba to find the answers.

Though Mrs. Adamson's account gets bogged down in confusin details of Penny's peregrinations, her fans should delight at he characteristic attribution of near-human characteristics to th leopard. Penny is "affectionate." Penny is "puzzled." Penn "expresses proud fulfillment and immense happiness which sh wanted to share."

"Indeed," the author writes, "I think that Penny is gifted with sense of humor as well as reason."

Unfortunately, the text and the 83 photos don't back her up Penny seems nothing more than a sleek, cat-like leopard with pose similar to her cousin the tomcat. Another drawback of Mrs Adamson's final book is the rather cold and dismissive treatment o the occasional humans (camp workers and tourists) who appear i the pages.

Larger fashions can be chic

COLLEGE STATION — Larger women no longer have to confine their wardrobes to darkly colored polyester pantsuits and loosely fitting housedresses, says Beverly Rhoades, a clothing specialist.

"Women can be big and still be chic because now many ready-to-wear fashions are available for the larger women," she says.

Miss Rhoades is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Also, the larger woman who sews has more options because pattern companies are creating more fashion-oriented pattern designs especially suited for her.

Larger women should forget the cliches that say they can't wear fashion-conscious clothes, Miss Rhoades insists.

"Instead, they now can develop a positive attitude about their looks.

"Looking one's best is simply a matter of taste and appropriateness — for any size person," she stresses.

To look one's best, Miss Rhoades offers several guidelines — and even if the larger woman aspires to change her size, she will look her best while she slims down.

Avoid heavy bulky fabrics. Ideal fabrics for classic tailored styles are soft tweeds, wool challis, gabardine, poplins, stretch wovens and crepes.

Know how to choose prints and plaids. They are no longer "off limits" for larger women as long as they are chosen carefully and used appropriately. When picking a print or plaid, don't choose something small and fussy or the largest pattern. Either extreme will make you look larger.

Keep surroundings in mind and wear colors that blend with the background rather than colors that stand out and define your shape.

Choose fabric colors that are flattering to your personal coloring and use texture and color to create an illusion of slenderness. Try some of the rich, jewel-tone colors on the market now. Avoid stark colors, such as all-white or all-black and avoid bright colors, such as fire-engine red.

Create height illusions by choosing fabrics or styles with vertical (up-and-down) lines and subtle stripes. These help slenderize the figure.

Choose stles and fabrics that don't add bulk.

If you are short and plump, never choose fluffy or fussy styles that add bulk. Instead, wear loosely fitted, soft fabrics that produce gentle vertical lines. Also, lightweight fabrics are more comfortable. But avoid those that cling!

If you are tall and robust, choose simple loose-fitting styles that suggest the body rather than tight-fitting styles that actually define it.

Layered clothes are ideal on the tall woman: tunics over pants and soft wraps. Thicker fabrics for coats can work well, too — if they float loosely over the figure without adding a feeling of bulk.

However, keep clothes well defined — even if they're loose fitting. Uncontrolled fullness always exaggerates size. For example, voluminous caftans conceal body details but they also make the entire silhouette look bigger.

Also, stay away from tucks and pleats, especially around the bust and hips. Avoid flounces around the neck that make it look fuller. Simple trimmings and flat laces around cuffs and collars look best.

Strive for a low-keyed look and avoid making a dramatic statement with your clothes.

Dress fashionably but simply and play up your assets.

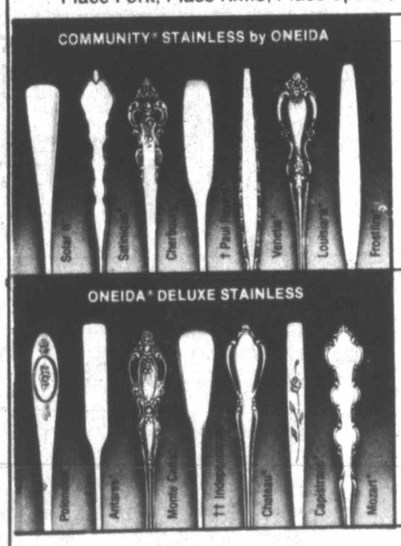

Wear clothes with well-placed design lines that lead the eye where you want it.

Finally, analyze your larger figure realistically and follow fashion when it's right for you.

WOMEN MUSICIANS

WILMETTE, Ill. (AP) — More women are playing instruments formerly considered "male," reports the American Music Conference. In the past 10 years, the percentage of women playing clarinets and saxophones is up at least 10 percent, and the number of women trumpet players has increased slightly.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

January 5, 1981

There are some new beginnings in store for you this coming year, although some of your old patterns may die hard. Be willing to change and you'll see that the alterations or revisions are an improvement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Make yourself scarce if you can today and avoid bumping heads with authority figures who may not be in the best of moods. You fare better when left alone. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You enjoy working on humanitarian projects or those large in scope, yet not everyone is as idealistic or visionary as you. Team up with those who share your philosophies.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Let bygones be bygones. Don't let anyone rehash old problems or mistakes that could disrupt you in getting started on a new path. Turn a deaf ear.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your imagination is extremely keen today, but that doesn't necessarily mean all your ideas are practical. Use some judgment when presenting them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If the day begins on the wrong foot with co-workers, you can turn things about by maintaining a good philosophical attitude. Charm, not criticism, wins them over.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It behooves you to employ all the diplomacy you can muster today when dealing with friends. You can tu even those most difficult around with your winning ways.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Perhaps a change of procedure is called for if you wake up today feeling bored with your routine. Use your imagination and do things a little differently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Not everyone is going to agree with your ideas 100 percent of the time, but if it's important to you today that they do, don't argue. Prove it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's fun to live in a dream world but when it comes to spending money, that world could get pretty expensive. Don't kid yourself into spending what you don't have.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Tread softly today. People in general tend to be difficult to get along with. When trying to accomplish your purposes, use large doses of honey.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The choice is yours today: You can go through the day feeling depressed, or you can take charge of yourself and begin thinking positively.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't feel you have to stay with individuals who are dragging you down. Find a kind method to break away and begin to do your own thing. It'll pay off.

Houlik classic saxophonist

NEW YORK (AP) — "I play a Vivaldi sonata," James Houlik says, "that Vivaldi wrote on the dustcover could be played by violin, flute, oboe, hurdy-gurdy or ancient bagpipe. With my trusty crayon, I've added 'and saxophone.'"

The saxophone, well known for seductive melodies, breathy rasps and sudden honks in jazz, is the instrument on which Houlik plays classical music. With joie de vivre, a blithe "I'll-show-'em" spirit and a certain quixotic earnestness, he's out to play, promote and right the wrongs done the instrument he loves.

He sees people come to afternoon subscription concerts, settle themselves in the front row, look at the program announcing a saxophone player and get up and move to the back of the room. For them, Houlik plays his versatile tenor sax as delicately as a flute.

He walks on to a platform to join an orchestra, when he's been invited for a piece calling for saxophone, and he says the cellists snicker and the violinists look haughty. "I do my level best on those things. I practice far in excess of what is required."

Houlik says, "By the 1840s, the orchestra's instrumentation was well established. They think the saxophone isn't a legitimate orchestral instrument. I always ask them who invented the violin. It is not known. I say, 'Adolphe Sax invented the saxophone. We think of him as our father. I don't know where that leaves you.'

"It's my only defense. I' isn't worth anything, but it's fun to say."

Only a handful of musicians go around giving classical concerts on the saxophone.

"I think the instrument deserves a better chance. The only way to do it is to thrust yourself in front of the public." To that end, hoping for maximum publicity, he gave a Lincoln Center concert last November on Adolphe Sax's 166th birthday.

"I do have a sense of humor," Houlik says. "I find myself caught up in a cause, whether I wanted to be or not."

Houlik didn't take up the saxophone because he wanted a cause. He liked the sound of it and the recognition it brought his uncle, who had a dance band in their home town, Islip, on Long Island.

Today's saxophone is the same instrument that Adolphe Sax invented in Belgium about 1840. The difference in sound between his and a jazz player's, Houlik says, is the breadth of tone. "I don't let it spread out. I don't play in the slack-jawed way often heard in jazz and dance music. I use a centered tone.

"It is so easy to blow. I've got a book, 'The Five-Minute Saxophone Method,' printed in the 1920s. It says, 'The sax, with its primitive moan and snappy syncopation, is welcome anywhere.' It became a social instrument. Sax meant it to be a classical instrument.

"I don't think he could have envisioned John Coltrane. I don' think jazz players abuse the instrument. I just think they use it another way. It is only the neglect of the other, classical side that concerns me."

Houlik plays baroque music, impressionist, contemporary and ragtime. Some 60 pieces have been written for him. "If it makes the sax look good, I don't look back," he says. "I had a saxophone teacher from the Midwest tell me I ought to look into Von Weber's 'Adagio and Rondo.' I did and it works like a charm. It's really a barn-burner virtuoso piece. If I get a tip, I go to work on it."

"I listen to new records as they come out and try to identify the master composers of t..e future. I knock on their doors. I told Gregory Kosteck I'd be playing in Washington, D.C., and if he'd write me a piece I'd play it there and I'd champion his music. He did and the reviewer gave him about a third of the whole review, as being the most interesting piece on the program."

HOME SWEET HOME. Lynn Anderson, country music star, is shown at home in Lake Charles, La. She says she is spending more and more time at her home, trying to become better known as Mrs. Harold "Spook" Stream III, mother of two. (AP Laserphoto)

'Tess' proves rewarding film

TESS is as rewarding a film as you'll encounter all season. It has a veracity to its period that matches "Tom Jones" and a pictorial beauty that is breathtaking. The story itself is sometimes as plodding as the original, Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the d'Urbervilles" and the length (170 minutes plus intermission) is challenging. But director and co-author Roman Polanski keeps the narrative flowing, and he is a keen judge of character and dramatic fidelity. Nastassia Kinski is radiant as the tragic heroine, her beauty mindful of a young Ingrid Bergman. Hollow-eyed Peter Firth is perfect as her outraged, later repentant husband. A superlative achievement. The rating is PG, with a brief rape scene and a breast feeding sequence.

Motion Picture Association of America rating definitions:

G — General audiences. All ages admitted.

PG — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

R — Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

X — No one under 17 admitted. Some states may have higher age limits.

SOUND COUNTRY

by Doug Davis

The Osborne Brothers and Dolly Parton may seem like a most unlikely combination on record, but Sonny and Bobby Osborne can be heard with some upfront harmony on the 'Hush-A-Bye Hard Times' cut on Dolly's newest RCA LP, 9 to 5. The harmony, plus some tight guitar licks, make this one of the better cuts on the album. The '9 to 5' title cut is a country girl's story of the trouble and hard times involved in making an honest buck between the hours of 9 and 5. 'Sing For The Common Man,' a Freida Parton and Mark Anderson tune, could have been a much better track if given a true country treatment. The other two cuts on side A, 'The House Of The Rising Sun,' and 'Deportee,' would have been just as well left undone.

Dolly Parton

'Working Girl,' another Parton composition, is overproduced, but she gives a better than average version of the Mel Tillis standard, 'Detroit City'—even including the 'downtune' guitar lick. Dolly also 'downtunes' the leading of the chorus and does an unconvincing recitation on the track, but it still comes off as one of the best of side two. Dozens of artists have done a 'so-so' job of the Mike Settle tune 'But You Know I Love You,' and Dolly's offering of the song also falls into that category.

You can finally hear a steel guitar on Dolly's voicing of the Merle Travis standard, 'Dark As A Dungeon.' It comes off as a fair version, with Dolly and a flattop guitar intro-ing the song. Dolly turns 'Poor Folks Town' into a nice singalong song, but one that has too much of a rock sound, and you keep listening for something like a dobro, or banjo, which you never hear. But the upbeat tune is carried well by Dolly's enthusiasm.

Dolly has a long way to go to get completely back into the country vein, but this LP is a small step in that direction.

People who are proving that the old songs can hit all over again include: Gene Watson, hitting with the Fred Rose/Mel Foree country standard of 'No One Will Ever Know' on Capitol; Gail Davies, who is up the charts with the tune that hit for Ray Price in 1954 titled 'I'll Be There,' written by Rusty Gabbard and Ray Price; Hank Cochran's version of his own tune 'A Little Bitty Tear,' which jingled the cash registers for Burl Ives in 1962; The Ray Price and Willie Nelson single of 'Don't You Ever Get Tired of Hurting Me' (also a Hank Cochran tune) is also a hit all over again after hitting as a solo single for Price in 1965; and Slim Whitman, who has put the Jimmy Long/Gene Autry standard, 'That Silver-Haired Daddy of Mine,' back on the charts.

Kenny Rogers

Kenny Rogers Greatest Hits is still one of country music's biggest selling albums, and seems to be less available in medium and small markets than any current hit product. Readers who have been searching with no luck may obtain the album in LP, eight-track or cassette for $8.98 from Super Slab Hits, Drawer 890, Dearborn, Michigan 48121.

City gets reprieve from gas system cutoff

DAISETTA, Texas (AP) — A state district judge temporarily blocked an order that would shut down this town's natural gas system Saturday while Mayor Harold McCann and a group of volunteers worked frantically to repair leaky gas lines in the city-operated system.

State District Judge W.G. Woods Jr. granted the city's request for a temporary restraining order that will keep the gas lines open until Jan. 9.

The city is battling Friday's order from the Texas Railroad Commission that the system be shut down immediately because it is unsafe.

"What we've been doing is fixing leaks and trying to get by," McCann said Saturday afternoon. "The citizens are being very nice. They know we're doing everything we can to keep it going. But if we lose on the 9th, they will, in fact, cut it off.

"Then, I don't know what. It looks like they just got us. If they shut us down, these people can't secure propane tanks or go electric in that short a time."

Wood granted the restraining order after city officials argued at a Saturday morning hearing in Liberty that 90 percent of the town's 1,100 residents depend on gas for heating and cooking.

"We've got a lot of old people ... we've got a high school that would be shut down," McCann said before taking his shift on the volunteer crew repairing Daisetta's gas line.

McCann, two city councilman and a handful of other volunteers have been working "7 a.m. to midnight" trying to patch leaks and replace a section of the line they removed under RRC orders last Tuesday, the mayor said.

"The RRC said we had to have somebody with special certification to fuse the lines, so I went down ... and took a course with the Texas Gas Association and got certified so I could do it," McCann said. "We've got a councilman running a ditcher and another one on the backhoe right now."

The three-member RRC issued the emergency order Friday afternoon after commission safety engineer M.Y. Hibler and Gas Utilities Division Director Jeffery Hill completed on-site investigations and recommended immediate shutdown.

"We felt we had no choice," said Commissioner Buddy Temple, who was sworn in only hours before the hearing. "They have an awful lot of problems."

Hibler said his investigation started after McCann called and asked the state for help in locating a gas leak seeping into a sewer line and into some homes.

He told the commissioners the Daisetta system was "one of the worst I have investigated in more than 30 years of work in the gas distribution safety field.

"A prudent operator would have shut down the system before the Railroad Commission got involved," he said.

McCann said he has applied for a federal loan to replace the system, a process he says will take at least a year.

The natural gas system, which serves about 390 customers in this Southeast Texas community, was sold some time ago to Southwest Gas Distributing Inc. The franchise reverted to the city in October when Southwest allowed its payments to lapse because of expensive system modifications demanded by the RRC.

Commission Chairman James E. Nugent said the Daisetta problem had deteriorated so much recently that the order had to be issued.

"We have been working with them and trying to effect beneficial corrections for at least six months," he said.

"That's the part I just can't understand," McCann said. "We've been working at it. We haven't been laying off. This system hasn't gotten any worse in the last year.

"The help I asked for has turned into harassment."

Teachers' issue may topple Begin regime

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin, whose government already hangs by a thread, is facing a crisis in his Cabinet over teachers' wage raises. The issue threatens to topple him.

The Cabinet, due to meet Sunday, is locked in what looks like an irreconcilable dispute over wages for Israel's 58,000 teachers.

Finance Minister Yigal Hurvitz vows to quit if the raises are approved. The teachers, backed in their demands by Education Minister Zevulun Hammer, pledge to close all schools if they are rejected.

Either way Begin appears in trouble. His Likud coalition now controls just half the 120 seats in the Knesset, Israel's parliament.

A defection by either Hurvitz's three-man Rafi wing or by Hammer's 12-seat National Religious Party could bring down the government.

The opposition Labor Party, watching the squabble from the sidelines, says it may well present a motion to dissolve the Knesset and hold new elections in 100 days if Hurvitz quits. Begin's normal term expires next November.

"There is no solution," says Hurvitz of his dispute with Hammer.

Hurvitz claims the wage hikes would trigger a chain reaction of demands by other professionals, whose pay is linked in a multi-year collective wage agreement. He says the increases would crush the last barriers to uncontrollable inflation, which was 131 percent in 1980.

But the teachers insist that the government accept the arbitration report drawn up by Supreme Court Justice Moshe Etzioni, which recommends sweeping reforms in wages, pensions and work conditions.

A high school teacher with a college degree and nine years' seniority today earns the equivalent of $480 a month, says the Education Ministry. His gross income would rise to $546 if the government accepts the Etzioni report.

The average monthly wage for all workers is about $630, according to the Histadrut Labor Federation to which nearly all Israelis belong.

Etzioni was commissioned to arbitrate teacher labor problems after a crippling 52-day strike two years ago. Many Israelis believe the government could not survive another walkout of that magnitude.

The teachers have offered to compromise by accepting a phased introduction of the reforms that would soften the blow to the economy. But Hurvitz refuses.

Begin is asking the three-man Ahva faction, an independent splinter of the Likud, to rejoin the coalition and preserve his majority.

Begin's coalition, once numbering 78 seats, was battered by defections mainly over economic issues but also over foreign policy. Five ministers left the Cabinet, including Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman.

2545 PERRYTON PARKWAY PAMPA MALL

Pampa falls to Perryton, 62-57,

BORGER-Hot-shooting Perryton broke away from Pampa in the second quarter to post a 62-57 victory Saturday night in the finals of the Borger Holiday Tournament.

The score was tied at 12-all at the end of the first quarter, but the unbeaten Rangers hit 13 of 17 floor shots and three of three from the foul line in the second quarter to pile up a 41-29 advantage at halftime.

Pampa turned things around in the third period by outscoring Perryton, 14-7, by downing seven of eight shots, but the Rangers' lead was too much to overcome.

Perryton led by five, 48-43, after three quarters and built up as much as a 12-point lead in the final stanza.

Pampa, now 9-5 on the season, was led in scoring by Charles Nelson's 20 points. Mike Nelson contributed 16, followed by Jay Henson with nine, Terry Faggins, eight; Damon Fleming, three, and Jimmy Barker, two.

Perryton, 13-0, was paced by Russell Osborne with 23 points. Jeff Greenway added 10.

The Rangers nipped previously-unbeaten Borger, 53-52, Friday night to gain the finals opposite the Harvesters.

Pampa's next outing will be at Borger again when the Harvesters meet the once-beaten Bulldogs (15-1) Tuesday night in a regular-season contest.

The Nelson brothers combined for 35 points to lift Pampa past Vernon, 67-61, in the semi-finals Friday night.

Mike tallied 20 points while Charles added 15 to offset a 33-point performance by Vernon's Ireland Scott.

After a seesaw first-half which saw the lead change hands 11 times, the Harvesters broke away from a 30-30 tie at intermission to score 11 unanswered points in the third quarter.

Damon Fleming's foul shot gave Pampa an 11-point advantage, 54-43, three minutes into the fourth quarter, but the lead dwindled to one, 57-56, as Vernon's fullcourt press forced the Harvesters into nine turnovers.

But a flurry of six straight points, including two baskets by Charles Nelson and one by Mike Nelson, gave Pampa a comfortable 63-56 edge with 1:20 to go.

Walker gives command performance for Carter

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was like a command performance, and Herschel Walker, a talented youngster, produced his finest hour for a fellow Georgian, the President of the United States.

The 18-year-old freshman wonder from Wrightsville, Ga., propelled the Bulldogs past brawny, bull-strong Notre Dame 17-10 in the Sugar Bowl Thursday as President Carter and the 77,894 other guests watched.

With the Bulldogs' air arm completely stifled, Walker carried the ball 36 times for 150 yards and two touchdowns. He was unstoppable.

Fans will be cheering for this rare athletic marvel for years — three more seasons as a collegian, if Walker keeps his vow — then as a sprinter in the 1984 Olympics and finally as a professional cut in the mold of such legends as Jim Thorpe, Red Grange, Jim Brown, O.J. Simpson and Gale Sayers.

Yet, as people watched this 6-foot-1, 218-pound thunderbolt smash his way through a forest of Notre Dame behemoths, shedding them as he might rose petals, questions abounded:

How can this remarkable talent, already good and mature enough to make any pro team in the land, continue three more seasons as an undergraduate with pro millions beckoning?

Isn't he just the talent needed to test in court the National Football League's rule not to draft a player before his college class graduates — a policy that pro basketball was forced to scrap.

Isn't some maverick, such as Al Davis of the Oakland Raiders, apt to draft him just to challenge the establishment?

And maybe after another year or so, mightn't Walker be softened up enough just to give it a fling, realizing the future is mined with perils as well as gold? "No, sir," Walker insisted again, after Thursday's game. "I intend to finish college. I think it's the best thing I can do."

The President sat behind bulletproof glass in an upper tier with a telephone hotline within arm's reach. Introduced before the kickoff, he and and his wife, Rosalyn, moved to the front of the balcony, smiled and waved to the crowd.

Just above a sign read: "Thank God for Mrs. Walker."

Georgia tops final AP poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

As expected ever since their 17-10 Sugar Bowl victory over Notre Dame, the Georgia Bulldogs, the only team to go through the entire season with a perfect record, are college football's runaway national champions for 1980.

It marks the first national championship for the University of Georgia, which began playing intercollegiate football in 1892, and whose best previous finish was runner-up to Ohio State in 1942.

In dethroning Alabama, which started the season in quest of an unprecedented third consecutive national crown but wound up in sixth place, Georgia gave the Southeastern Conference its third national championship in a row and ninth since The Associated Press ratings began in 1936.

The Bulldogs were ranked 15th in the preseason AP poll and gradually worked their way up. They appeared in The Top Twenty every week, rising from 15th to 12th to 10th and eventually to eighth in the fourth week of the regular season.

That triggered a 12-week stay on the Top Ten, capped by a No.1 ranking for the final five weeks of the regular season. The Sugar Bowl triumph completed a 12-0 campaign and earned Georgia 58½ of 63 first-place votes and 1,251½ of a possible 1,260 points from a nation-wide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

One voter named Georgia and Pitt as co-No.1 teams, while two others listed the Bulldogs second, one had them third and another fifth.

Pitt, which trounced South Carolina 37-9 in the Gator Bowl and climbed from third in the final regular-season poll to second, was a distant runner-up. The Panthers received 3½ first-place votes and 1,187½ points.

The remaining first-place ballot went to Florida State, an 18-17 loser to Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. The setback dropped the Seminoles from second place to fifth, still the highest they have ever been in the final rankings.

Oklahoma jumped from fourth to third with 1,100 points. It was the Sooners' third consecutive third-place finish and their 10th in a row in the Top Ten. Michigan whipped Washington 23-6 in the Rose Bowl and went from fifth to fourth with 1,033 points, followed by Florida State with 970 points.

The rest of the Top Ten consists of Alabama, Nebraska, Penn State, Notre Dame and North Carolina.

In the final regular season poll, Georgia led Florida State 60-4 in first-place votes and 1,274-1,208 in points.

"I'd like to thank the large majority of the members of the news media who voted us No.1," Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said when informed of the final vote. "That's great. I'm really happy for our players and the whole state and all the Georgia people. It's a great thing for Georgia."

The Second Ten consists of Southern California, Brigham Young, UCLA, Baylor, Ohio State, Washington, Purdue, Miami (Fla.), Mississippi State and Southern Methodist.

Alabama, which was ninth at the end of the regular season, jumped to sixth in the final ratings with 928 points following a 30-2 rout of Baylor in the Cotton Bowl. Nebraska trimmed Mississipi State 31-17 in the Sun Bowl and climbed from eighth to seventh with 879 points.

Penn State went from 10th to eighth with a 31-19 licking of Ohio State in the Fiesta Bowl. The Nittany Lions received 797 points. Notre Dame, Georgia's Sugar Bowl victim, slipped from seventh to ninth with 699 points while. North Carolina defeated Texas 16-7 in the Bluebonnet Bowl and rose from 13th to 10th with 665 points. Despite only one setback, the Tar Heels had been in the Second Ten for the final six weels of the regular season.

The final regular-season Second Ten consisted of Ohio State, Southern Cal, North Carolina, BYU, UCLA, Washington, Mississippi State, South Carolina, SMU and Miami.

Southern Cal and UCLA were ineligible for bowl games, while BYU edged SMU 46-45 in the Holiday Bowl and Miami downed Virginia Tech 20-10 in the Peach Bowl. South Carolina fell out of the Top Twenty while Purdue moved in.

Purdue, which was ninth in the preseason ratings, did not appear in the Top Twenty over the last four weeks of the regular season. However, the Boilermakers beat Missouri 28-25 in the Liberty Bowl.

Pampa girls drop 52-51 heartbreaker to Borger

Pampa dropped a 52-51 heartbreaker to Borger Friday night in Harvester Fieldhouse, but the nip and tuck struggle was almost like a win for the Lady Harvesters, who lost by 28 points to the Lady Bulldogs in the third game of the season.

"It was a good ballgame for us," said Pampa coach Jerry Johnson. "We hung in there all the way which helped us a lot in that aspect."

Pampa, paced by a 25-point night from Bobbie Skaggs, trailed by seven points when the first quarter ended, but took over the lead, 38-37, going into the fourth quarter.

"That first quarter was the difference in the game for us," Johnson said. "We let them get out to a pretty good lead."

The score was tied three times in the furious fourth quarter, but Borger took the lead for good, 50-48, with 1:30 to go on a bucket by Marie Brooks, who collected 24 points for the Lady Bulldogs.

After Brook scored again on a layup to make it, 52-48, Skaggs was fouled after scoring and completed the three-point play to make in the final 52-51 with four seconds to go.

Debbie Young also finished in double figures for the Harvesters with 16 points. Jeanette Britt added four points while Ladina Honeycutt, Sharolyn Salisbury and Tamra Wilson had two points apiece.

Britt pulled down a dozen rebounds. Young and Skaggs had eight each.

Pampa, now 3-12, will play Tuesday night at Lubbock Coronado.

Street may be named for Watts

EUFALA, Okla. (AP) — Quarterback J.C. Watts may oust President Andrew Jackson from street maps of this eastern Oklahoma town.

The City Council on Monday will consider changing the name of Andrew Jackson Street here to J.C. Watts Street in honor of the quarterback who guided the fourth-ranked Oklahoma Sooners to an 18-17 come-from-behind Orange Bowl victory over the now second-ranked Florida State Seminoles on New Year's Day.

Watts graduated from high school here in 1976. His parents, Helen and J.C. "Buddy" Watts, still live here, on Andrew Jackson Street. The quarterback's father is a preacher and former Eufala policeman.

Watts was virtually a Chamber of Commerce emmisary for Eufala at Miami. "We're proud of him and the fact that he recognized us, even when he was hyped up by the game," Mayor Joe Johnson said Friday.

Jackson Street would be the "logical one" to name for the quarterback, because Watts's parents still live there, the mayor said.

Watts would not be the only hometown football hero to have a street of his own in Eufala.

Selmon Road is named for the Selmon Brothers — All-Americans Lucious, Leroy and Dewey — who graduated from Eufala High School and became the backbone of Oklahoma's strong defense in the mid 1970s.

Roles reversed in Atlanta-Dallas game

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons meet the Dallas Cowboys in a second-round National Football League playoff battle for the second time in three years Sunday, but the situation is reversed from that meeting in 1978.

Then, Atlanta was the wild card team and the Cowboys were the East Division champions, and Dallas came away a 27-20 winner.

Sunday, however, the Falcons will be host to the Cowboys as NFC West Division champions after Dallas earned its way with a 34-13 wild card thrashing of the Los Angeles Rams a week ago.

The Falcons are a three-point choice in the game, which is a sellout. More than 60,000 tickets have been sold for the 4 p.m., EST, nationally televised contest at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"We're a better team talent-wise than we were when we played the Cowboys then. Two years ago we didn't have William Andrews, we didn't have Lynn Cain and we didn't have Junior Miller," said Tom Braatz, Falcons director of player personnel.

"They were an excellent team in 1978 and we were a team that was just trying to come up," said Atlanta Coach Leeman Bennett, whose 1980 squad had a 12-4 record that included a nine-game winning streak.

The Falcons also enter the playoffs against the two-time Super Bowl champions with five All-Pros — quarterback Steve Bartkowski, tackle Mike Kenn, running back Andrews, center Jeff Van Note and Miller.

Bartkowski enters the playoffs with club records for yards passing, 3,544; touchdowns, 31, and completions, 257.

"Steve had a great season in every respect," said Bennett. "He did not play a bad game during the entire season and kept his mistakes to a minimum. Much of the credit should go to him, but credit also goes to the people around him."

The Falcons' offensive line reduced its sacks this year to 35.

Fouts rallies Chargers past Bills

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Quarterback Dan Fouts fired a 50-yard scoring pass to seldom-used wide receiver Ron Smith with 2:08 remaining in the game to rally the San Diego Chargers to a 20-14 victory over the Buffalo Bills in the National Football League playoffs Saturday.

The Chargers will meet the winner of Sunday's Oakland-Cleveland game on Jan. 11 for the American Football Conference title. The winner of that contest will meet the NFC representative on Jan. 25 in New Orleans in Super Bowl XV.

Smith, who had caught only four passes since joining the Chargers early this season, caught the ball near the Buffalo 25 and raced untouched into the end zone.

That spoiled a game performance by Bills quarter Joe Ferguson, who reinjured his ankle on the fifth play of the game. Ferguson missed five plays while the ankle was retaped, but limped back onto the field with his team trailing 3-0 and rallied the Bills to a 14-3 halftime lead.

On the Bills' second possession, Ferguson directed a 72-yard march for a touchdown, capped by a 1-yard run by Roosevelt Leaks, and added a 9-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Frank Lewis with 16 seconds left in the half.

San Diego, which had jumped into a quick lead on a 22-yard field goal by Rolf Benirschke after the Chargers' first drive stalled at the Buffalo 4-yard line, was muffled the rest of the half.

And Buffalo got a boost late in the half when a jarring tackle by cornerback Charles Romes knocked the ball loose from San Diego wide receiver Charlie Joiner and Buffalo safety Bill Simpson recovered at the Chargers' 33. Four plays later, Ferguson found Lewis near the back of the end zone for the score.

San Diego came alive offensively in the third period, driving 70 yards in four plays to open the second half with its first touchdown. Fouts hit Joiner on a 9-yard scoring toss that narrowed Buffalo's lead to 14-10 with 13:26 left in the third period.

Another 22-yard field goal by Benirschke then narrowed the margin to one point early in the fourth period, setting up Fouts' late-game heroics.

San Diego's game-winning drive started after Buffalo's Nick Mike-Mayer was short on a 49-yard field goal attempt with 3:59 remaining. The winning march took just four plays.

San Diego safety Glen Edwards intercepted Ferguson with 1:16 remaining, allowing the Chargers to run out the clock. It was Edwards' second interception of the game.

The triumph was San Diego's first postseason victory in 17 years and made the Chargers the home team in next week's conference showdown.

Skinner first in Lubbock moto cross

Marvin Skinner Jr., who spent the past ten weeks recuperating from a broken leg suffered in a raceway accident, recovered to win two first-place trophies in the Lubbock Trik Trak Moto Cross last weekend.

Competing in the 100 cc class, the Pampa driver took second in the first moto and first in the second moto for the overall win. In the 125 cc novice class, Skinner placed first in both motos for the overall win.

James Skinner placed third in the mini-mini class with two third-place motos and third in the 80 cc junior class with a fourth in the first moto and a second in the second moto.

Roy Rippetoe won the 122 cc intermediate class with a second in the first moto and a first in the second moto.

Two Pampa drivers were recently awarded plaques for their consistent performances in the Amarillo Indoor moto cross races held throughout the year.

Doug Youree was awarded the 100 cc class points champion plaque for the 1980 ARC series while James Skinner received the 60 cc class points champion plaque for the series. Both were consistent winners in the two classes to capture the overall championship plaques.

Several local riders will be competing in Houston's Astrodome in March for the GNC championship finals.

They include James Skinner, mini-mini; James Skinner, 80 cc jr.; David Youree, 80 cc sr and 80 cc stock; Marvin Skinner, 100 cc; Doug Youree, 125 cc novice and Gary Griggs, 250 cc intermediate. James Skinner took 16th in the finals a year ago.

Meagher breaks record at U.S. International meet

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Mary T. Meagher of Louisville, Ky., broke the American record in the 100-meter butterfly and set up a battle with American rival Tracy Caulkins and Olympic champion Caren Metschuck of East Germany at the U.S. Swimming International Meet Saturday.

Meagher, who set a world best when she beat Olympic gold medalist Ines Geissler of East Germany in the 200 butterfly final Friday night, was clocked in 1 minute 0.39 seconds in the 100 butterfly preliminaries to break Dianne Johannigman's American mark of 1:00.66.

Caulkins, of Nashville, Tenn., was the second best qualifier in 1:00.91, and Metschuck was fourth in 1:02.09. They were to meet in the final Saturday night.

The versatile Caulkins also set a world best Friday night, one of five registered on the first evening of the three-day meet, in the 100 breaststroke. She finished second behind Meagher in the 200 butterfly. In addition, Caulkins was scheduled to face Olympic champion and world record-holder Petra Schneider of East Germany in Saturday night's final of the 400 individual medley.

Twenty nations are competing in the meet, which is being contested over a 25-meter pool, in which world records are not recognized. Americans won seven of 12 events Friday night, and in each of the victories, they beat Olympic gold medal winners.

Sara Linke of Walnut Creek, Calif., and Paolo Revelli of Italy were the top qualifiers ahead of Ines Diers of East Germany and Sergei Koplikov of the Soviet Union in the women's 400 freestyle and men's 200 freestyle, respectively.

Diers, who won four individual freestyle medals in the Olympics, including the 400-meter gold, also was the second qualifier in the 200 freestyle behind Cynthia Woodhead of Mission Viejo, Calif.

David McCagg, also of Mission Viejo, the winner in the 100 freestyle Friday night, was the surprise No. 1 qualifier in the 100 butterfly, and Olympic gold medalist Vladimir Salnikov of the Soviet Union had the best qualifying time in the 400 freestyle, ahead of world record holder Peter Szmidt of Canada.

U.S. Olympic hockey coach resigns to enter business

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — Herb Brooks, coach of the U.S. Olympic gold medal-winning ice hockey team, has resigned as coach after six unsuccessful months with the Davos team, but said Saturday he has "no regrets" and no immediate plans to coach in the National Hockey League.

In a telephone interview with The Associated Press, Brooks said the primary reason he resigned was to go into private business — running a hockey camp in the St. Paul-Minneapolis, Minn., area.

He said he and his family planned to leave early this week after a farewell party with his team.

"My future is in the United States, in hockey or out of hockey, and I feel I must go," he said.

Brooks said after recent negotiations to become coach of the New York Rangers fell through, his first inclination was to stay until the end of the season. "But that was not possible," Brooks said.

He said terminating the contract with Davos in midseason posed no difficulties and that it already had been discussed when the New York job was under consideration.

He declined to comment on why he did not reach a deal with the Rangers. "It was for many reasons," he said. Asked whether Davos' attitude was responsible, he again said he would rather not comment.

He reiterated, however, that he had "no regrets" about having accepted the Davos post. "The players were great to work with. But my plans were never to stay in Switzerland, so I think I must make the move now," he said.

In New York, Bill Jennings, president of the Rangers, said Brooks' resignation at Davos "has nothing to do with nothing." Jennings said Craig Patrick would continue in the Rangers coaching spot through the end of the season.

Sonny Werblin, president of Madison Square Garden, which owns the Rangers, said the team's coaching situation would be evaluated at the end of the season, not ruling out the possibility of hiring Brooks at that time.

Eagles tumble Vikings, 31-16 to move into NFC title clash

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Reggie Wilkes' fumble recovery, one of seven turnovers committed by the Minnesota Vikings in the second half, led to Wilbert Montgomery's 5-yard touchdown run that put Philadelphia ahead for the first time and triggered the Eagles to a 31-16 victory in a National Football League playoff game Saturday.

The victory moved the Eagles into the Jan. 11 National Football Conference title game against the winner of Sunday's Dallas-Atlanta clash for the right to represent the NFC in Super Bowl XV at New Orleans on Jan. 25.

Philadelphia trailed 16-14 after a third-period sack of quarterback Ron Jaworski in the end zone by Doug Martin and Matt Blair. Minutes later, however, Eddie Payton fumbled a punt and Wilkes, a linebacker, recovered for the Eagles at the Vikings' 18.

It took the NFC East champion Eagles 2 minutes 19 seconds to score. Jaworski passed 6 yards to Harold Carmichael, and Montgomery ran twice for a Philadelphia first down at the Minnesota 5.

Montgomery then swept left behind a crushing block by fullback Leroy Harris for what proved to be the game-winning touchdown with 1:18 left in the third quarter.

The Eagles fell behind the NFC Central Division winners 14-0 with 5:36 remaining in the first half as Minnesota scored on a 30-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Tommy Kramer to wide receiver Sammy White in the first period and a 1-yard scoring dive by Ted Brown.

The Eagles tied the score on a 9-yard touchdown pass from Jaworski to Carmichael with 54 seconds remaining in the half and an 8-yard scoring run by Montgomery with 12:20 to go in the third quarter.

The Eagles got a 33-yard field goal from barefoot kicker Tony Franklin with 7:31 left in the game after linebacker Frank LeMaster intercepted a Kramer pass. LeMaster returned it 7 yards to the Vikings' 15.

Still another pass interception, this one by cornerback Herman Edwards, led to Philadelphia's final score, a 2-yard run by reserve running back Perry Harrington. Edwards' interception put the ball at the Minnesota 31, from where Philadelphia score in eight plays.

The Vikings fell apart in the second half with all seven turnovers either resulting in Philadelphia scoring or aborted offensive Minnesota drives.

The Vikings wasted little time moving to a 7-0 lead, scoring on the pass from Kramer to White with just 2:40 gone in the first period. A turning point in the seven-play, 70-yard drive came on a third-and-5 at the Minnesota 35. Kramer connected with Tucker, who attempted a lateral and fumbled with the Eagles recovering. But pass interference was called on linebacker Bill Bergey, and the Vikings had a first down at the Philadelphia 45.

After two plays picked up 5 yards, Kramer hit tight end Joe Senser for 10 and connected with White for the score.

Minnesota made it 14-0 in the second period on a 10-play, 69-yard drive, capped by Brown's short dive. Four Kramer pass completions, the last one a 22-yarder to Senser for a first down at the 1, set up the score.

Philadelphia finally got on the board in the final 5½ minutes of the half on a 13-play, 85-yard drive, climaxed by Jaworski's strike to Carmichael. Jaworski completed six passes in the drive, including throws of 12, 15, 13, 8 and 10 before the scoring toss to Carmichael.

The Eagles took the second half kickoff and marched 66 yards in eight plays to tie the score at 14-14. Jaworski completed an 11-yard pass to Billy Campfield for a first down at the Philadelphia 41.

With 7:28 remaining in the third quarter, Eagles rookie Royell Young intercepted a Kramer pass at the Eagles' 7. On first down, Montgomery lost 4. Then a Jaworski pass fell incomplete. Jaworski tried another pass but was down in the end zone for a safety that put the Vikings on top 16-14 with 8:29 on the third-period clock.

It was a rugged defensive battle, no way reminiscent of the 42-7 lacing the Eagles gave the Vikings in the second game of the regular season in September. The Vikings, who were 3-5 in the first half of the season, came back with a 6-2 second half to win their division.

New Mexico still struggling for prison reform a year after riots

By BILL FEATHER
Associated Press Writer

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The beginning of the decade of the 1980s was an eventful period for New Mexico, and without question the most significant occurrence was the Feb. 2-3 riot at the state penitentiary.

The aftermath of this tragedy will continue through most of the decade, as the state works toward complete reformation of the corrections system and the courts resolve myriad criminal and civil cases arising from the riot.

Ten months have passed since the riot, and the state is well on its way to accelerated prison reform.

It took about 20 minutes for inmates to gain total control of the penitentiary after they took four guards hostage in a south wing dormitory in the early morning of Feb. 2, 1980.

Before authorities regained control 36 hours later, 33 inmates had been murdered, several guards had been assaulted and abused and the huge institution was a shattered wreck, unfit for human habitation.

The attention of the nation centered on New Mexico during the riot and the state received severe criticism for neglect of the corrections system.

Before the riot, New Mexico actually had initiated a prison reform program, but it had moved slowly through the normal government processes.

At the end of 1980, Gov. Bruce King was able to pinpoint a few benefits resulting from the tragedy. The riot speeded up the corrections reform program, King said, and made it painfully apparent to the New Mexico public and the Legislature that the time for change is now and not at some indefinite future date.

A number of accomplishments have been made in the 10 months since the inmate uprising. These include:

—The penitentiary has been restored, with a few exceptions, to its pre-riot condition and there has been some relief of the problem of overcrowding which was a factor in the riot. There were 1,156 male inmates at the prison on Feb. 2; on Dec. 30 there were 611 men incarcerated and it is unlikely the population will exceed 700 ever again.

—The state accelerated completion of a new medium-security prison at Los Lunas, which was being constructed at the time of the riot, and has awarded a contract to expand this facility to increase its capacity from 288 to 490 inmates.

—The attorney general has completed an investigation of the riot in two phases. The first report, issued early last summer, was a chronological account of what occurred during the riot. The second report pinpointed the causes and made recommendations for reform to prevent a recurrence.

—An investigation by the Santa Fe district attorney of crimes committed during the riot has resulted in seven inmates being indicted for first-degree murder. More indictments will be returned in 1981 and District Attorney Eloy Martinez said recently his preliminary estimate that from 75-125 inmates would be charged with crimes still appears realistic.

—The old Criminal Justice Department has been restructured into a Department of Corrections and Criminal Rehabilitation, headed by Roger Crist, a veteran corrections expert who was hired after an extended nationwide search. The penitentiary is expected to have a new warden by mid-January.

—A comprehensive master plan which identifies New Mexico's corrections needs by 1990 and makes recommendations on how to achieve these needs is nearing completion. It will be presented to the Legislature when it meets Jan. 20.

King, the target of much of the criticism over prison conditions, made a personal commitment soon after the riot to devote the remainder of his administration to development of a model corrections system in the state.

He will ask the 1981 Legislature to approve laws and funding to enable the state to proceed immediately with many of the programs recommended by the master plan.

A preliminary draft of the master plan, released last month, included an estimate it would cost $156.6 million in capital construction to improve and expand prison facilities to meet the needs by 1990. An estimate that it would cost $70.6 million to make major renovations at the penitentiary was questioned, particularly by Crist and Attorney General Jeff Bingaman.

Crist called the architects back to the drawing board and said late in December the cost estimate had been revised downward, to about $50 million.

Much of the burden of the corrections reform program was borne during 1980 by Belarmino (Bill) Giron, a top aide of King who was named last February to coordinate the prison recovery program mandated by the Legislature. Giron took on a dual responsibility in June, when he was named acting corrections secretary following the departure at King's urging of Adolph Saenz.

Saenz, a former federal official, had been appointed corrections secretary the week before the riot and arrived in New Mexico to take over the job while the rebellion was still in progress.

With Crist on the job since late November, Giron has returned to the governor's office, where he is involved in putting together King's legislative package for corrections.

Giron said four of the many projects recommended in the master plan carry top priority for consideration by the 1981 Legislaature. These are beginning of renovation of the penitentiary, construction of a 144-bed intake and classification center, construction of a 128-bed women's prison, and appropriation of the money needed to complete the addition to the Los Lunas medium security prison.

The first work to be done at the penitentiary would include conversion of the south portion of the institution into the state's maximum security prison.

Giron said this will entail conversion of eight dormitories into single-cell units.

"The south wing would be all maximum security, with a capacity of probably 400," Giron said. "It would fully comply with all standards, those laid down in the consent decree and of the American Corrections Association."

Atlantic City casinos show loss in December

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — For the first time since casino gambling began, Atlantic City's six operating casino hotels may show a loss for the month of December, according to industry officials and experts.

The traditional industry-wide business sag between Thanksgiving and New Year's, increased competition, harsh winter weather, fixed operating expenses and the start-up of two casino hotels are expected to combine to put Atlantic City's new casino hotel industry in the red for the first month since May 1978.

"It is going to be Resorts' first losing month," predicted H. Steven Norton, executive vice president of Resorts International Inc., whose Resorts International Hotel Casino has taken in more than $575 million and was once dubbed "a Boardwalk money machine."

Norton, president of the Atlantic City Hotel-Motel Association, predicted that other casino hotels also would post operating losses for December.

William Downey, executive director of the Atlantic City Casino Hotel Association, said the red December will help prove the industry's recent argument that over-regulation by New Jersey gaming authorities is costing it millions in unnecessary operating expenses.

"These casinos are not bottomless pits and are not absolute money-makers," Downey said.

December's casino win figures, which show the amount lost by gamblers at the table games and slot machines, are expected to be released this week by the New Jersey Casino Control Commission.

Win figures dipped significantly in December 1978, when Resorts International held a monopoly on East Coast gaming, and in December 1979, when only Resorts International and Caesars Boardwalk Regency were open in Atlantic City.

Win figures do not show profit, but can be compared to a business' gross revenues and does not include taxes, salaries, complimentaries, debt repayment and other expenses.

Profit margins differ greatly among casino hotels and usually cannot be accurately determined before quarterly reports are issued.

Two casino hotels — Harrah's Marina and the Golden Nugget — are expected to show wins below their winter potential because they were starting up in December. Harrah's Marina opened Nov. 23 and Golden Nugget opened Dec. 12.

Industry officials are expected to use the losses as ammunition for a loosening of strict state regulations in the non-gaming areas of their operations, particularly staffing requirements imposed by New Jersey authorities.

Marvin B. Roffman, analyst for Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. of Philadelphia, predicted the December losses "are going to alarm a lot of people."

Nat Diamond, a Dean Witter Reynolds vice president in Atlantic City, said the casino industry is at a "maturing state."

"Sooner or later there are probably going to be a casino or casinos that won't be able to manage their affairs in the proper way," Diamond said, "but in general it seems the strong individual casino operators will continue to do well in this market."

'Over the Hill Gang' suspected in holdup

DALLAS (AP) — Investigators say they believe the "Over the Hill Gang" has struck again — this time making away with $1,200 from a eastside supermarket.

The team of bandits — nicknamed the "Over the Hill Gang" because witnesses say they are from 30 to 60 years old — is believed to be reponsible for a string of grocery store hiests in suburban areas of North and Central Texas and southern Oklahoma.

Police said three men approached manager Alan Adams just before 2 p.m. CST Friday at the Tom Thumb Super Market and announced: "This is an armed robbery. We want all the money."

The men lifted their shirts to reveal pistols stuck in their whistbands. One gunman, described as a gray-haired man in his 60s, forced assistant manager Norm Sullivan to empty a cash drawer in the cashier's booth.

Another robber, described as a Latin-American man in his 50s, then ordered Sullivan to empty the safe. Sullivan and Adams said the third gunman, a red-haired man in his 30s, waited outside and drove the robbers away in a green-and-black sports car.

The car later was discovered to be stolen and was found abandoned at a department store parking lot.

Last month, lawmen from several Texas and Oklahoma cities met to compare notes on a rash of supermarket hold-ups. Investigators said they discovered several similarities in the hiests, including the use of a stolen vehicle for a getaway car which later is abandoned.

Performance means profit

BRENHAM -- Performance is the name of the game, especially when it means more dollars for cattlemen. And bull performance leads the way.

"Every cattleman knows that it's important to have a good herd bull, but few realize just how much difference a top performing bull can make," points out Dr. Larry Boleman of Bryan, area livestock specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Just how much difference there can be was clearly demonstrated in a four - year study on the Mayfair Ranch near here.

"Two performance - tested Santa Gertrudis bulls were chosen for the demonstration. From a visual standpoint, they were relatively close," notes Boleman, "but there's where their similarity ended. At one year of age, one weighed 912 pounds while the other tipped the scales at 1,221 pounds."

The true test of these bulls came a year later with their first fall calf crops (from Brahman - Hereford heifers). Heifer calves sired by the heavier or high - performing bull were 52 pounds heavier at weaning than heifer calves sired by the lighter bull. And steer calves from the heavier bull weighed 25 pounds more than those from the low - performing bull.

The bulls' spring calf crops (from Brahman - Hereford or Santa Gertrudis - Brahman - Hereford cows) also showed significant differences in favor of the heavier or high - performing bull, notes Boleman. His heifer calves averaged 39 pounds more at weaning than those from the low - performing bull while the steer calves averaged 12 pounds more.

Averaging all calves from both crops sired by each bull, calves from the high - performing bull weighed 31 pounds more at weaning than those from the low - performing bull.

Peanut shortage ups price

COLLEGE STATION -- Such all - American favorites as peanut butter, peanut candy and salted peanuts will cost consumers more in the months ahead.

Why? Because peanut supplies are short due to this year's drought.

"Peanut products will not only be higher at the supermarket, but some may even be scarce," points out Johnny Feagan, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. He expects this situation to last until new crop peanuts start coming in next August.

Just how short are peanut supplies?

Production of edible grade peanuts is down about 50 percent in the United States this year, points out Feagan. Texas production should drop about 45 percent.

Supplies of edible grade peanuts for the 1980 - 81 marketing year, which ends next Aug. 31, should total about 2.5 billion pounds, down from 4.4 billion pounds the past year.

With normal demand, usage of edible peanuts during 1980 - 81 should be near 3 billion pounds -- 2.1 billion pounds consumed in this country and 800,000 pounds exported. So, when compared with the total supply, this means a deficit of about 20 percent.

Tri - State farmers to collect

COLLEGE STATION--More than $21 million will be paid to New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas farmers on this year's low crop yields, the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation announced today.

"This was one of the worst years in history for U.S. farmers. In this region, farmers were faced with everything from hot, dry weather to hurricanes. Every crop we insure and almost every area of the region was hit by some disaster. Claims have been filed on over 33 percent of our insurance units. With the cost-price squeeze farmers are facing today, the FCIC indemnity many receive is going to be the only way they can continue operating," explained Ben. A. Jordan, Jr., College Station Regional Director.

Texas farmers will receive more than $18 million of FCIC indemnities while some $2.4 million will go to Oklahoma farmers and over $400 thousand will go to farmers in New Mexico.

Nutritionists advise hay test

COLLEGE STATION -- Hay is now being fed in many areas of the state, yet most producers don't know the quality of hay they have. Since much of the 1980 hay crop was of low quality due to dry conditions, producers should consider having their hay tested for protein content.

A hay test to determine the protein content is helpful in several respects, points out Don Dorsett, forage specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Protein content relates to production practices which influence quality, such as maturity and fertilization, and also provides a guide as to feeding such hay according to its nutritional value.

Different classes or types of beef cattle have different nutritional requirements, emphasizes Dorsett. Animal nutritionists say that beef cattle cannot meet their requirements for protein when hay is 7 percent crude protein or below. Yet a recent summary of hay tests conducted for producers of the Coastal bermudagrass hay tested 7 percent or below. The summary also indicated that more than 69 percent of such hay as Bahiagrass, sudan, sorghum, bluestem and Johnsongrass tested 7 percent crude protein or below.

Because of this variability in crude protein levels, Dorsett encourages producers to have their hay tested.

Shattercane is normal sorghum gone wrong by intercrossing

LINCOLN, Neb. -- Shattercane is normal sorghum gone wrong through chance intercrossing in the field, says U.S. Department of Agriculture geneticist William M. Ross. And the most practical control for this "weed" is rotating out of sorghum.

"Its parents carried genes responsible for a sorghum plant whose seeds, usually with the glumes attached, spontaneously fall off or are easily knocked off when the plant is physiologically mature," Ross explains.

Sorghum growers have been familiar with tall - growing shattercane for 25 years. They have pulled these plants by hand or, more recently, eliminated them with the non - selective herbicide glyphosate.
