TURLOCK, Calif. (AP) — The 23 volunteer firefighters in this town couldn't come up with $180,000 needed to buy new replacements for two aging trucks. So they decided to build their own, and in the process saved a bundle.

To replace their tanker truck, they bought a 1977 International Harvester lumber hauling truck for $16,000, and added $35,000 worth of modifications by a local truck tank builder and lots of volunteer labor.

The 3,000-gallon tanker truck is almost ready, at a cost of $56,000.

Fritz blitz Mondale mounting tax attack

GRAND MARAIS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale on Saturday accused the Reagan administration of concealing a secret plan to raise taxes after the fall election campaign.

Beginning a five-day fishing vacation, the Democratic presidential candidate also said that if he is elected, he would

WALTER MONDALE have to make additional cuts in domestic programs because of huge federal deficits accumulating during President Reagan's first term.

Of the likely administration tax increases, Mondale said: "They don't want the American people to see it because it will be above all an unfair program that will sock the taxes to average Americans who got no relief the first time around and cut programs such as Social Security."

As evidence for what he called "a secret plan that they will announce after the campaign," Mondale cited indications by Treasury Secretary Donald Regan that the administration is studying either a national sales tax or a flat income tax to be proposed to Congress if Reagan is re-elected.

"No wonder they don't want to tell people," Mondale said.

"I demand again that Mr. Reagan table his plan. Let's not have any secret, sour surprises after the election. Let's talk about it right now," he added, repeating his call for a debate with the president before the November election.

Asked about Mondale's charges, White House assistant press secretary Robin Gray noted that deputy press secretary Larry Speakes had responded to similar accusations on Friday.

"There is no secret plan to raise taxes," Speakes said. While refusing to rule out the possibility of a tax increase in a second term, Speakes said no decisions would be made until after completion of a tax reform plan due after the election.

A Tale of Two Cities

Enrique "Henry" Sanchez, 49, is a product of el barrio — hard and tough but, at the same time, considerate and understanding.

It was the times of issues of 1965 which dictated what Sanchez now feels and believes. It was the time of social change and upheaval. One issue of the day produced a brewing battle between the residents of Big Spring's Northside and the Big Spring school district — the closing of Kate Morrison School. Neither party to the dispute was aware of the impact this event would have on Sanchez, then 30.

Sanchez, who represents District 1, is the first Mexican to be elected to the Big Spring City Council. His election in April came only after the city began selecting representatives from single-member districts, breaking tradition with the at-large election process.

Sanchez's uphill battle for Mexicans' rights in Big Spring and the betterment of the Northside of Big Spring began in the mid '60s, he said. With the passing of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the time was ripe for change for Mexicans in Big Spring and Sanchez was in a position to lead that change.

The tall and angular Sanchez vividly recalls the period and events that would ultimately shape the role of Mexicans in Big Spring — some 20 years later.

It began when the Big Spring school district started proceedings to close down the neighborhood school that served the barrio children, he said. The two-year battle for Sanchez and a close-knit group of 300 barrio residents ended in defeat and the school was closed, Sanchez said.

Postal workers without contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal employees worked without a contract Saturday after talks between the U.S. Postal Service and four unions representing 600,000 workers reached an impasse as the old labor agreements expired.

Federal law outlaws strikes against the Postal Service and the breakdown of negotiations triggered a fact-finding period that could lead to binding arbitration that may not be resolved before Dec. 10, said Postmaster General William F. Bolger.

Representatives of the two biggest unions left the talks late Friday, shortly before the contracts expired at 12:01 a.m. Saturday, as Postal Service negotiators continued to press for a three-year wage freeze. After the talks broke down, each side accused the other of failing to bargain seriously for new contracts.

Moe Biller, president of the American Postal Workers Union, urged his members to "keep your cool," as the Postal Service extended its final offer until 6 p.m. The unions said they will ignore that bid.

"Continuing bargaining is always an option but there would be no point to go back to the same nonsense," Biller said.

"Remain cool, be strong and solid," Biller advised postal workers.

The APWU and the National Association of Letter Carriers represent about 500,000 postal workers. The average union-covered postal worker earns $27,892 annually in wages and benefits.

Assistant Postmaster General Mary Layton said Saturday that talks had also reached an impasse with two smaller unions that represent 100,000 postal workers.

Biller and Vincent Sombrotto, president of the letter carriers' union, said their organizations would consider whether to strike when they hold their national conventions Aug. 19.

Big D bracing for convention

DALLAS (AP) — Image-conscious Dallas is anticipating the Republican National Convention like a nervous hostess getting ready for her first big party — preening for guests and girding against gate crashers.

Convention planners expect at least 25,000 to 30,000 visitors — almost half of them members of the news media — to converge on Dallas for the city's first national political convention, which opens Aug. 20.

President Reagan is coming, of course, and so is Vice President George Bush. Opera star Luciano Pavarotti will be here, and so will the Moral Majority's Rev. Jerry Falwell.

Dallas will play host to 2,235 delegates, an equal number of alternates, about 500 people referred to as "party dignitaries" and at least 13,000 representatives of news organizations.

And then there are the others, the uninvited guests. William Simmons, coordinator of the Dallas March and Rally Committee, says the protest group coalition hopes to attract between 5,000 and 10,000 "counter-conventioners."

The coalition, he said, has invited the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Dr. Benjamin Spock, activist Angela Davis and others to various events that delegates won't find on their official programs.

Fred Meyer, chairman of the local welcoming committee, says the protesters won't be local people, as were many at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco.

"We don't grow those kinds of people here," he said. "That's not our style. Philosophically, this

Sunny skies stay

By The Associated Press

Most of Texas was sunny and dry Saturday as a ridge of high pressure remained the key weather factor over the state.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered over the mountains of far West Texas and thunderstorms were widely scattered over the Coastal Plains.

Afternoon winds were mostly from the southeast at 10 to 15 mph.

High temperatures were in the 90s over most of the state, with only a few locations along the Rio Grande reaching 100 degrees. The clouds and rain cooled temperatures in the mountains of West Texas into the upper 60s and lower 70s.

The National Weather Service was calling for isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms over the southern two thirds of the state this rest of this weekend. Otherwise, partly cloudy to fair skies were expected over the rest of the state.

Daytime temperatures will continue to be hot through Monday.

Lows were expected to range from the middle 60s in the Panhandle and the mountains of West Texas to near 80 at the coast.

Highs Sunday and Monday were expected to hit the middle and upper 90s over wide sections of the state. Forecasters said the mercury would top out near the 105-degree mark in the Big Bend region.

Thunderstorms dumping more than an inch of rain flooded roads in Phoenix, Ariz., on Saturday, while more showers pelted the sodden East Coast, leaving record rainfall in Lynchburg, Va.

Sunny skies prevailed across the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley to much of the Great Plains, where temperatures reached into the 90s. Hill City and Garden City, both in Kansas, had reached 99 degrees by mid-afternoon, while Pierre, S.D., reached 100 degrees.

Chopper bank bandits linked to Louisiana heist

VALLEY VIEW (AP) — The FBI released a videotape Saturday of four men who robbed a rural Texas bank and fled in a helicopter with another suspect after the daring daylight heist.

The robbery of the Valley View National Bank was strikingly similar to the holdup Feb. 15 of a Leesville, La., bank that was not equipped with cameras, authorities said.

Investigators said they believe the five bandits Friday were the same ones who took $163,000 from the Louisiana bank.

An FBI agent said he expected the videotape to be compared to composite sketches that were made of the Louisiana robbers.

"I would assume that's going to be done," said FBI agent Joe Gray.

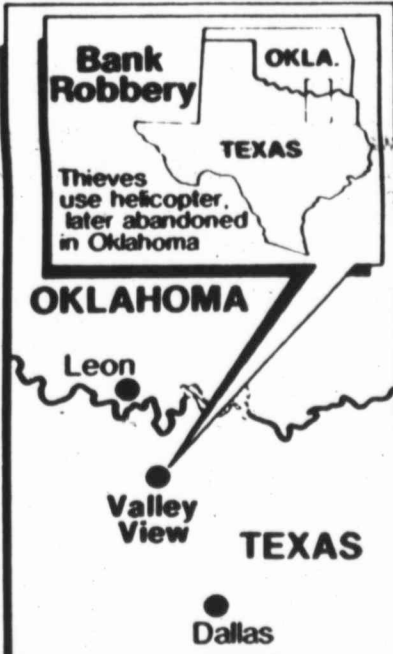

Investigators said the five bandits swooped down on a pasture near the small Valley View bank about 9:30 a.m. Friday and robbed the bank of an undisclosed amount of cash without firing a shot from their automatic weapons.

The Bell Long Ranger helicopter — which was stolen Thursday night in Galveston — was spotted later near Leon, Okla., where the robbers dumped some empty cash boxes, the FBI said.

Gray said that the search for the robbers had spread across several states, but he declined to discuss any possible leads.

The helicopters in both robberies were stolen from Scholes Field in Galveston. The helicopter used in the Leesville robbery was recovered six days later from Catoosa, Okla., near Tulsa.

The FBI said the apparent ringleader was described as white and stocky, about 5-10 and 190 pounds, with blue eyes, brown hair and greying sideburns. The man wore dark glasses and a wide-brimmed western hat. He may have worn a baseball cap inside the bank, the FBI said.

The pilot was described as white, between 30 and 35 years old, 6-2, 190 pounds, with a mustache and neatly trimmed hair. He smoked cigarettes.

"The pilot seemed familiar with experimental aircraft, especially in the Reno, Nevada, area," the FBI said. "He and others in the group also indicated a familiarity with Denver, Farmington, N.M., and Marshall and Nacogdoches, Texas, areas."

The FBI said the Leesville robbery was apparently the first time bank robbers had used a helicopter as a getaway vehicle. As a result, it became an instant legend.

area is 70 percent conservative." Dallas, its name synonymous with wealth and intrigue because of a well-known television show, is the nation's seventh largest city.

The city has been anxiously sprucing up for months. A civic clean-up drive began with junk cars in February, moved on to litter, and call to prayer meetings. Tours are available that retrace former President John F. Kennedy's last trip — he was assassinated here in 1963 — as are trips to art museums or the Southfork Ranch, home of television's Ewing family.

Local Republicans, who have said that almost every delegate and alternate will be entertained in a private home, have been vying for the services of fashionable caterers. The New York delegation will be treated to an evening at Billy Bob's, a cavernous "cowboy" honky tonk in Fort Worth.

"There wasn't much point in taking people from Oklahoma there," Meyer said.

Dallas set out to be the only city to host a national political convention without spending local tax money.

An ambitious fundraising effort so far has raised more than $3 million from private sources.

Nearly $600,000 was pledged at a single meeting of wealthy local businessmen recently.

Convention spokesman Gary Hoitsma said another $8 million in federal funds will be spent by the Republican Party.

The biggest headache, he said, is preparing the convention hall.

Inside the Dallas Convention Center, work crews on Tuesday began the task of filling 200,000 square feet of empty exhibition space with a podium, seating for more 4,000 delegates and alternates and 18,000 guests, and a new lighting and sound system.

Outside the convention center, a controversial 6-foot chain link fence to keep protesters at bay is going up. The Dallas March and Rally Committee has sued the city, saying the fence violates constitutional free speech guarantees.

County officials have said they may place concrete barricades and gravel trucks around county buildings, which lie between the protesters' campsite and the convention center.

There also will be a "tent city" at least 3,000 campers at the Trinity River Greenbelt Park, about a half-mile from the convention center, is the sanctioned campsite. Mayor Starke Taylor personally guaranteed that portable restrooms, showers and drinking water would be provided.

Official and unofficial visitors alike will confront the relentless summer heat. Temperatures in Dallas routinely soar to 100 degrees or above in the summer.

Police spokesman Bob Shaw said a massive security effort is being mounted for the convention. Dallas police will work 12-hour shifts, and hundreds of Secret Service and FBI agents will be in town.

Mondale

community, Mondale was asked if the rapidly increasing deficit won't also cause him to make deeper cuts in federal social programs than he had previously proposed.

Mondale agreed that additional cuts would be necessary without identifying specific programs. "We have to stand up to the reality of these deficits," Mondale said. "The difference is I will do it fairly, he (Reagan) will do it to protect his rich friends."

Instead of agreeing to a debate where there would be a free exchange of ideas between the candidates, Mondale predicted that Reagan will run a "flim-flam" campaign financed by millions of dollars to pay for television advertising.

"They are going to try and win by public relations," said Mondale. "We are going to appeal to the best judgment and instincts of the American people. I am not trying to hide."

"I am going to stand up and answer questions and be accountable to the American people." Fresh from his nomination at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco, Mondale and his family spent Friday at their North Oaks, Minn., home outside Minneapolis, then flew by small plane to this tiny community on the edge of Lake Superior.

From there, the Mondales motored through deep forest land to Gun Flint Lake in the boundary waters region of Minnesota.

"I'm gonna do what Minnesotans do best," said Mondale. "I'm going fishing."

In order of preference, Mondale said he hoped to catch walleye, northern pike, bass, lake trout, "and anything else that's in there."

Mondale said decisions on when to begin active campaigning against President Reagan are yet to be made, but some appearances are planned late this month and in early August before the Republican National Convention convenes in Dallas on Aug. 20.

Intensive campaigning for Mondale will not begin until Labor Day, his aides said.

"I don't think Americans want that," he said. Gun Flint Lake was recommended to Mondale by Francis Befera, owner of a Duluth Television station and a companion from previous fishing expeditions.

After five days in the woods, Mondale planned to return to North Oaks where there was a possibility he might be joined late next week by Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, his vice presidential running mate. She is now spending time with her family in Queens, N.Y.

On Friday, Mondale met with the Rev. Jesse Jackson before leaving San Francisco.

The presidential candidate said no conclusive decisions have been made on what Jackson's role will be in the fall campaign.

Author of running book dies at 52 while jogging

HARDWICK, Vt. (AP) — Jim Fixx, whose best-selling The Complete Book of Running helped push millions of people into sneakers and the jogging craze, collapsed and died of a heart attack while jogging in northern Vermont, authorities said Saturday. He was 52.

Fixx, a resident of Greenwich, Conn., collapsed Friday on Route 15 in this rural village and died immediately of a heart attack caused by serious heart disease, said Vermont's chief medical examiner, Dr. Eleanor McQuillen, who performed an autopsy on Fixx Saturday morning.

His body was found by a passing motorcyclist at 5:30 p.m., police said, about 50 feet from the motel where he checked in an hour earlier.

Deaths

Reba White

Services for Mrs. Doyle (Reba) White, 38, who died Friday, will be at 11 a.m. Monday in Nalley-Pickle and Welch Rosewood Chapel. The Rev. Jack Collier of the Birdwell Lane Baptist Church will officiate. Burial will be at Mount Olive Memorial Park.

She was born Jan. 10, 1946 in Stamford. She was the daughter of E.J. and Bea Thomas. She grew up in Big Spring and was a life-time resident of the city. She married Doyle White June 11, 1961 in Big Spring. She was a member of the Birdwell Lane Baptist Church.

Survivors are her husband; two sons, Rickey White and Eddie White, both of Big Spring; her mother and stepfather, Bea and Harvey Mansfield of Coahoma; one brother, Bruce Thomas of Big Spring; three stepbrothers, Roy Mansfield of Austin, Benny Mansfield of Coahoma and Joe Mansfield of Gardendale; and two stepisters, Beverly Grant of Big Spring and Pearley Meacham of Big Lake.

Other survivors include one niece, Lisa Thomas; and four nephews, Richard McEvers, Daniel Thomas, Michel Thomas, and D.J. Thomas. She was preceded in her death by her father, E.J. Thomas; and three brothers, E.J. Thomas Jr., Edward Wayne Thomas and Michel Jay Thomas.

She said Fixx apparently didn't have any warning signals that usually accompany a heart attack, such as severe chest pain, that he apparently didn't know of his condition and that he died immediately.

"He never had any warning. If he did, he ignored it," she said.

Fixx's best-selling book on the mechanics of running was a huge success in the United States in 1978 and was translated into 12 languages. It earned him over $1 million, and put the former magazine editor — who used to smoke two packs a day and got into running when he hurt a leg — in great demand as a lecturer on running.

He had been running near Caspian Lake, according to his second former wife, Alice Kasman Fixx, who said he ran 10 miles a day.

"He had serious heart disease affecting two major arteries to the heart. They were completely blocked off," Ms. McQuillen said.

Tennis match love even

FORT LAUDERDALE — The love match between tennis star Chris Evert Lloyd and her husband, British tennis pro John Lloyd, is back in full swing, according to a newspaper report Friday.

The Lloyds, who announced a trial separation Jan. 28, said they have been back together since last month but did not reveal their new doubles arrangement during the Wimbledon tournament because they wanted to be left alone, The Fort Lauderdale News and Sun-Sentinel said Friday.

CHRIS EVERT

"It would have been chaotic," Lloyd said Thursday, shortly before the couple left Fort Lauderdale for a vacation. "Chris and I weren't hounded too badly over there because the writers had other interests. We were able to concentrate on our tennis. We just want to be normal."

The couple said their reconciliation is one of the reasons they are playing better tennis, the newspaper reported.

"We decided to do this before Wimbledon," said Ms. Evert, 29, ranked No. 2 in the world. "It really happened at the French Open. We were watching each other's matches, and we already knew something nobody else knew."

NAIROBI — Actress Brooke Shields had a good reason for passing up a sip of fresh cow's blood offered to her by some Masai tribesman — she's a vegetarian.

The 19-year-old actress and Princeton University student has been in this east African nation filming a television show and on Friday traveled to a Masai village in the Rift Valley north of the capital.

She watched the tribesmen partake of the cow's blood, but demurred when "somebody told me I was offered the blood."

"I passed on that one. Anyways, I am a vegetarian and have been for the past six years. It's not a religious thing, just a matter of choice."

Canada paying for pope

OTTAWA — Pope John Paul II's Canadian visit is still two months away, but his likeness already is competing on store shelves with images of rock superstar Michael Jackson.

Despite the efforts of church officials to control the immensely popular trade in papal souvenirs, dozens of unauthorized products bearing the pontiff's image are hitting the shelves and display windows of smoke shops, department stores and supermarkets.

One downtown Ottawa smokeshop features a bust of the pope surrounded by the unlikely trio of E.T., Miss Piggy and a bald eagle. Dozens of other retailers are selling merchandise ranging in price from 50 cents to $450 (Canadian).

No charges filed in student hoax

LAVAL, Quebec (AP) — No criminal charges will be laid against students who poisoned more than 50 of their classmates with a mixture of alcohol and Aspirin last month, Laval police said.

Police Sgt. Marc Demers said the poisoned students, who became ill while at a Laval rollerskating rink, were victims of pranksters from their own school who slipped the alcohol and headache pills into their classmates' soft drinks.

All were rushed to hospital and later released.

BEIRUT LANDING — A Middle Eastern Airlines jet hijacked by a Lebanese man lands at Beirut International Airport, where negotiators persuaded the hijacker to surrender and release the passengers and crew.

Shiite pirates plane to tell 'my side of the story'

BEIRUT (AP) — A lone Shiite Moslem hijacker waving a fake Molotov cocktail took over a Middle East Airlines plane carrying 146 people Saturday, but later released all aboard unharmed and surrendered to police in Beirut.

Lebanese Information Minister Joseph Skaff, who headed the team that negotiated for two hours with the air pirate, said the man — identified by state-run Beirut Radio as Atef Zein, from south Lebanon — hijacked the jetliner because he was denied an entry visa to the Persian Gulf emirate of Abu Dhabi.

The plane, a Boeing 707-B720, was flying from Abu Dhabi to Beirut when it was seized. The hijacker tried to force it to land at Damascus, the capital of Syria, for refueling, but Syrian officials refused the plane permission to land and it went on to its original destination, Beirut.

"He (Zein) also told negotiators he wanted to dramatize the plight of south Lebanon under Israeli occupation," said Skaff.

Israel has occupied south Lebanon since June 1982. The hijacker first freed about 90 women and children passengers and then agreed to let the rest go in exchange for being allowed to hold a planeside picture-taking session with journalists, airport officials said.

But when he stepped off the plane, police immediately grabbed him and handed him over to the prosecutor-general's office, where he was held in custody.

Police said a soft drink bottle the hijacker toted was found empty after he surrendered, and there was no sign it had been filled with gasoline.

Police said Zein was in his mid-50s and had flown to Abu Dhabi on Friday after a friend there promised he would arrange for a visa for Zein at the airport. But Abu Dhabi authorities refused to allow him to enter the country and sent him back on the same Middle East Airlines plane on which he arrived. He seized control of the plane on the flight home, police said.

State radio said Zein had told Beirut airport control tower he had two other armed hijackers with him, one in the pilot's cabin and one at the rear of the plane. But negotiators who went on board at Beirut discovered he was alone in the hijack and that his "firebomb" was harmless, according to the radio.

Earlier, state radio and the privately owned station Voice of Lebanon had said three hijackers were involved and were demanding to return to Abu Dhabi. They said they needed to land in Beirut for refueling, the radio station said.

The Voice of Lebanon said Zein had threatened to "detonate an explosives bottle" aboard the plane if landing clearance at Beirut was denied.

A young woman passenger, Hala Hashem, said the hijacker frequently assured all passengers that he meant no harm to anyone.

"I am Lebanese. I am not going to hurt you," she quoted him as telling the passengers. "You will hear my side of the story in Abu Dhabi."

An official government statement said Zein staged the hijack apparently to force his way back into Abu Dhabi, where he wanted to work. It said he planned to hold a news conference there to explain his need for an entry visa.

Beirut airport had reopened July 9 after a five-month shutdown during the latest round of Lebanon's civil war.

Building back what's burned

Fire killed more than 165 Texans, injured at least 1,540 and damaged $189 million in property last year. Even with adequate insurance, fire means a tremendous loss to a property owner. Those who have felt that loss deserve sympathy, not another headache. But after the fire is out, there remains a responsibility to take reasonably prompt action to rebuilt or raze, as the situation may demand.

The gutted remains of several sites in Big Spring offer mute evidence of that need. Empty houses, burned beyond repair and structurally weakened, are open invitations to injury for inquisitive children. From an aesthetic perspective, they are eyesores.

The city's role does not end with the squelching of flames by firefighters. City officials should work with owners to ensure unsafe structures are rebuilt or removed. Just as the city is cracking down on owners who neglect vacant lots under public nuisance ordinances, so too should it follow through to ensure public safety in seeing that burned out buildings are tended to.

A bad trade

From the reactions to the Federal Trade Commission's new regulations on used car sales, you'd think dealers have been granted the same powers over customers as the Mongol hordes would exercise over a conquered populace. Outrage is rampant because the FTC failed to require sellers to reveal all "known defects" in their wares. Those of us who venture into used car lots wrapped in innocence can only pray for mercy.

Actually, the FTC didn't exactly do nothing, though it should have. The rule it adopted does impose several disclosure requirements.

First, a notice on each car must state if it's being sold with or without a warranty and, if so, what the terms are. Those cars sold "as is" must be labeled that way, with an explanation that the dealer won't pay for repairs. Second, the required notice recommends that customers get an independent inspection of the car before buying. Third, it advises buyers that "spoken promises are difficult to enforce" and urges them to "ask the dealer to put all promises in writing."

Having done all this, the FTC is reviled for what it didn't do. But the issue is a technical one, not a matter of principle. The FTC had plausible fears of the probable litigation over "known defects." No dealer can know everything about a car. But what buyer, on finding his engine in pieces in the driveway, will believe he wasn't taken? Battalions of lawyers have gotten fat off less fertile orchards.

The agency also worried that the rule would seduce buyers into thinking that a car without any posted defects is perfectly sound. Buyers might be worse off, since a dealer could avoid knowledge of defects by simply not inspecting his cars. The more conscientious the dealer, the more defects he will have to advertise and the greater his potential liability if he overlooks one.

The best gauge of a car's quality is whether the seller is willing to provide a warranty. If so, the buyer can figure the dealer believes it to be defect-free. If not, the buyer can deduce the opposite. Under the new rule, then, the customer is guaranteed enough information to make an intelligent judgment. Why that guarantee must be furnished by the FTC is another question. The agency apparently regards customers as helpless dupes, forced to accept whatever the most conniving shyster will stoop to. Hence they require the aid of the national government.

In fact, all Americans are taught from birth to distrust used car salesmen. The most credulous bumpkin approaches a used car lot with extreme wariness, suspicious of every word he hears.

Most important, the used car market is frenetically competitive. One of the means by which dealers attract buyers is by guaranteeing what they sell. The FTC says from 30 percent to 40 percent of used cars sold by dealers have warranties. Many of the rest carry service contracts — which amount to a warranty, only with the cost explicitly borne by the buyer. It's not even unusual to see dealers allowing unconditional returns for a brief period after the sale.

Of course, some car lots give the buyer no protection at all. But no one would shop there if they didn't get lower prices in return. In effect, these buyers bet the price difference that the car is sound. That may not be a good gamble, but buyers who want to take it (or who can't afford a warranted model) ought to be free to do so. Those who are more cautious can shop elsewhere.

Regulating this market is bound to be a messy business. Neither of the rules would have covered sales by individuals, which make up half of all used car transactions. The stricter the rule, the more used cars will be sold by individuals rather than dealers — which will increase consumer uncertainty, not reduce it.

The proponents of the "known defects" rule start from the premise that the used car market is an affront to the national conscience. It is actually a complex market that furnishes an array of choices at assorted prices to a wide range of customers. Nothing the FTC can do is likely to improve it. Here, as elsewhere, the consumer is better protected by competition than by regulation.

Pepper's gray power people

Three cheers for the over-60 activists. Whether they unite under a "gray power" banner, or as the currently popular "Pepper's People," they realize the last one-third of their lives is no time drop out. Senior citizens are, after all, the wisest segment of society since they have accumulated the most life experience. If that wisdom isn't put to use, it is lost.

RSVP and NARP — retired senior volunteers and the association of retired persons — are but two examples of the effectiveness of collective action by seniors. In the political arena, possibly the most visible unifying force is that of Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Florida. The oldest person on Capitol Hill, Pepper is ranking member of the House Select Committee on Aging and an advocate for older Americans. Among his vehicles is a nationally syndicated column dealing with the rights of older citizens.

Another forum is a series of big-city rallies he has sponsored across the nation since last fall, and he calls the resultant marshaling of forces an awakening of "the sleeping giant of American politics."

They have become "Pepper's People," and Pepper says of the loose-knit alliance: "There are no dues. There is no organizational structure. There is simply a growing grassroots movement I feel honored to lead." Describing the "treatment" of senior citizens as "cold, hard," Pepper urges his constituents to "rise up and forcefully make their needs known." We're not talking armed rebellion here, but Pepper is asking that the considerable clout of a senior bloc be brought to bear. As a politician, he knows how important voting solidarity can be.

Pepper offers these statistics to support the need for activism:

- One out of every four senior citizens currently has an income level below or near the poverty line. The median income for the elderly is about half that of the non-elderly.

- Unemployment among the elderly is at the highest level ever. Older workers constitute 38 percent of the long-term unemployed. If those who have become discouraged and stopped looking for work are added, the total number comes to about 1.1 million.

- The elderly are hospitalized about twice as often as the rest of the population. They stay in the hospital twice as long and use twice as many prescription drugs. More than 80 percent have at least one chronic health condition. By 2020, 21.6 million will have chronic health conditions that keep them from functioning independently.

- Because of the increasing cost of services not covered by Medicare and the increasing cost to senior citizens of services that are covered by Medicare, these Americans now spend as much of their income for health care as they did in 1965, when Medicare was enacted — about 20 percent.

Add to these concerns the tenuous future of the Social Security system, and much of the "safety net" for the elderly appears to be unraveling. Pepper wants to see activism: Organize neighbors, petition elected representatives and work and vote for supportive candidates. That's the key to the U.S. political system: organized activism. I say, right on.

Avoid temptation

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I want some help with a problem I am having. My husband travels a lot and I get very lonely. There is a man in our apartment house who has been paying a lot of attention to me and wants to go out with me. I don't intend to get deeply involved, but do you think it would be wrong to go out with him once in a while? — Mrs. S.G.E.

DEAR MRS. S.G.E.: I strongly urge you to avoid this situation at all costs. No matter what your intentions may be (to say nothing of his intentions — which may be very different from yours), you are playing with fire. Every day my mail brings many letters from women (and men) who have become caught in a wrong relationship and are filled with heartbreak and pain. They find themselves emotionally involved and, seemingly, it became too late.

When you and your husband were married you took a vow — not just before the people who gathered at your wedding, but before God. You vowed that you would be faithful to your husband "as long as we both shall live." God gave marriage to us, and the Bible warns, "Therefore what God has joined together, let man not separate" (Matthew 19:6).

God wants to help you with this problem. You need His strength to resist the temptations you feel, and you need His guidance and presence to help you deal with your loneliness. Open your heart to Christ. You can do this by a simple prayer of faith, asking Him to forgive your sins and come into your life.

Then seek ways to overcome your loneliness. When you know Christ, He is always with you. You also are joined to other believers. Find a church where Christ is preached, and you can discover many other people who will help you overcome your loneliness in the right way.

Billy Graham's religious column is distributed by the Tribune Company Syndicate.

Recently I had a problem concerning the arrest of my son. I met with Rick Turner (chief of police) and Don Davis (city manager). We were able to work out the problem in a very professional manner. Around The Rim

By KEITH BRISCOE

Well said

If any image shall linger from the Democratic National Convention, I fear it shall be that of Geraldine Ferraro. She has a pretty face, but the picture painted of her masks the best and the worst faces of the Democrats in action last week.

Most significant at this gathering was the high state of oratory and low state of exploitation.

Not since JFK's phraseology have I delighted to such rhetorical flourish. Not since the GOP's balanced budget ballyhoo of 1980 have I witnessed so much energy wasted on an irrelevant subject.

In the beginning of the convention was the word, and in the end of the convention were the initials.

The words of Mario Cuomo's opening day speech from the podium were flooring, and Ferraro's insistence that her nomination in consequence entails approval of the ERA amendment raised political mediocrity to the roof of the Moscone Center.

If the November general election were decided on the quality of speech making, the Republicans would rue the day. No weapon the GOP possesses, not even the big gun of Ronald Reagan, could match the firepower evidenced by Cuomo, Jackson and Kennedy.

The richness of rhetoric was so impressive (Mondale even managed a good delivery) that even if the barrage were bombast, we should not have listened in vain. But these were hallowed words, not hollow ones; the specter of FDR loomed large.

Unfortunately, the election will hang more on sin taxes than syntax, and so the Democrats must follow their artillery of articulation with the infantry of issues.

What will not serve the Democrats' campaign is their obsession with the errant ERA, which reached a crescendo of irrational frenzy with Ferraro's acceptance speech.

A shame, too, because Ferraro has the stuff of a good lieutenant. But her nomination took on the ugly dimension of groveling before women who, contrary to democratic tradition, seek not equal rights but special privileges.

The 14th Amendment already guarantees equal rights for everyone. True, the 14th doesn't mention women. Neither does it mention left-handed Mongolians.

Why do these people demand a special Constitutional amendment of their own? They must want privileged treatment, as if one redundant addendum to our basic law will annoint them with power, prestige and promise.

One more note: The convention chutzpah award goes to Mondale, who came right out and told the delegates, the nation and even Republicans that he would raise taxes.

Honestly, Fritz. Honestly.

Sanchez: Northside voice

NSUI and Sanchez never looked at the setback as a defeat, but rather as a lesson in awareness and, as such, a step in the right direction, he said. It was the best of times and the worst of times for an idealistic Sanchez during the '60s.

Sanchez's biggest task now will be to reunite the barrio with the rest of the community, a task he says will take time and effort by both parties.

"It will be a gradual change," Sanchez said, intermingling Spanish with English. "I have always thought that it will take everyone participating in a combined effort. If they don't do it, the people will grow even more distant."

"I'm not placing the blame on the (Mexican) people. They have had their problems in the past when they were discriminated against. It is very hard to forget something like that. Some of them may never forget for generations to come."

"But the local government will listen to all the people now. The council wants to work with the barrio. But it took the people to do it and we are growing. They don't have to tell us what is good and right for us; we already know."

The work to improve the living conditions in el barrio and the fight for minority rights began in the mid '60s for him. Nearly 20 years later, a court lawsuit forced the city to provide representation for specific geographical areas.

"When they began integrating the schools, we had to change our status on our report cards from Mexican to White so Blacks could be integrated into the school," he said.

NSUI was told by the school board the school was not fit to house children and could possibly be condemned, Sanchez said. But instead, the school was used for a government-funded Head Start program for several years and later was sold to a local Catholic church.

The key to integrating the barrio with the rest of the city lies in educating the people, he said. Sanchez said he feels the younger people are the future of the barrio.

"We have a long way to go," he said. "We have to educate the people on the issues of the city and the barrio. The people will have to stand up and become involved. And I think they are beginning to understand this."

"But it will be very difficult because they have never done something like this before."

The older people of the barrio lack communication skills to go before the council and voice their complaints, Sanchez said. They just don't know how to go about it, he said.

"But these (older) people were treated like dirt before," he said. "I believe the majority of the senior citizens, Hispanics and some Blacks feel they are not a part of Big Spring because of what happened years ago."

"That's it — they feel divided. But the younger generation has a different outlook. They have been educated in school and college and now live in different neighborhoods in Big Spring."

Sanchez said he thought education plays the key role in the future of the barrio. Mexicans need to know the issues and have the desire to take part in projects like "Heart of the City," he said.

His appeal 20 years later is no longer aimed solely at his Mexican constituents but to all of Big Spring, Sanchez said.

And despite his past strife and confrontations, Sanchez is now in the ideal position to work with the power structure and its concepts instead of against it.

With pride in his voice, Sanchez said he feels the best of times still lie ahead — for his barrio as well as all the people of Big Spring.

Q.: You've mentioned several different types of alternative financing used in home buying. Are there others besides taking back a second mortgage and variable mortgages?

A.: Yes, there are. One of the most popular "unconventional" mortgages is a variation of the assumable loan called a "wraparound." In this type of financing, the seller retains title to the property or inserts a foreclosure clause in the sales contract. This gives the seller protection in giving the buyer a first mortgage for the entire sales price, less a down payment. The seller continues to pay off the old original mortgage at the original interest rate. The buyer stipulates that he will honor his contract with the seller for a set number of years, then pay off the old mortgage with a balloon payment.

Brief history about AJRA

It's rodeo time again in Big Spring. Seems like the big boys were holding their annual shindig just the other day and now the youngsters are set for their annual affair.

It's time for the 28th Annual Big Spring American Junior Rodeo Association and Local Area Contestants Junior Rodeo to be held at Big Spring's Rodeo Bowl July 25-28. Over 400 youths ages seven through 19 are expected to be on hand for the four night spectacle which will start at 8 each night.

Big Spring's annual rodeo for the cowboys and cowgirls of tomorrow is almost as old as the organization which helps sanction it. The AJRA recently celebrated 32 years in existence.

The AJRA was founded by Alvin Davis of Lubbock in 1952. Davis wanted to form an association made up of both young people and adults interested in their affairs. So in June of '52 in Levelland Davis formed the AJRA. The AJRA National Finals were not held until 1954 in Snyder where they have been held every year since. Davis presents an annual Founder's Award at the Nationals.

After formation of the AJRA, a headquarters building was established in Post. Post always held the largest junior rodeo in the country and for that reason the city was chosen as headquarters.

Contestants competing as AJRA members pay their dues just like their older and professional counterparts. Each and everyone pays a membership fee. They pay their own expenses and entry fees per event at each rodeo. Points are kept on number of dollars won and world champions are determined on the basis of greatest amount of dollars won. With the titles go such awards as saddles, buckles, merchandise awards and scholarships.

Howard County can boast of several world champions during the vious stages of life by the AJRA. Some of those have been Robert Crenshaw in tie down calf roping, Wacey Cathey and Hank Adams in bull riding, Brad Jenkins, Christy Adams and Sissy Doss in optional roping, James Doss in tie down calf roping, Kyle Ditto in calf roping, and Terry Himes and Kristi Taylor in barrels. In fact Sissy almost grabbed three titles, finishing in the runner up spot twice. Her brother James, just recently finishing fifth in the National College Rodeo Finals, won two tie down championships.

AJRA members choose their own officers and directors and also the adult directors who help govern the organization. The directors in turn choose a secretary-manager who makes the decisions, approves rodeos, checks memberships, keeps points and handles publicity. Leslie McFadden of Rankin has served in that capacity since 1970.

Tied for British Open lead

Watson fires 66 to move into first

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson used "one of the best rounds of golf I've ever played" to move into a tie for the third-round lead and take another step toward golfing history Saturday at the 113th British Open.

The defending champion, a five-time winner of this ancient event but never at St. Andrews, crisply stroked his way to a 6-under-par 66 on the historic Old Course.

Watson, who started the day five shots off the pace, completed 54 holes over the centuries-old links in 205, 11 shots under par, to tie with Ian Baker-Finch, the 23-year-old Australian who led after two rounds.

Baker-Finch, winner of two titles in his brief career, nursed home a 71 in the brisk breezes and saved a share of the top spot with an escape from the Valley of Sin, the deep depression in front of the 18th green.

The two will be paired together in the last group off the tee in Sunday's final round — Watson, trying to equal a record of six British Open victories, and a previously obscure player making his first appearance in one of the game's Big Four championships.

"I've never been in this position before," said Baker-Finch. "I'm not surprised to be leading."

"But, he added, "I'll be surprised if I win."

Watson, however, was taking nothing for granted going into a match-up that appeared to be heavily weighted in his favor.

"He'll be trying to do what he wants to do best — win the golf tournament," Watson said. "So will I."

Only two shots back and still very much in the race were Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Seve Ballesteros of Spain, who were tied for third at 207.

Langer had a third-round 68, which included a spectacular save of par on the 17th, the Road Hole, where he had to play a third shot from an extremely awkward position while standing in a deep bunker.

Ballesteros, twice a Masters champion and a previous winner of this title, had a 70.

It was another five strokes back — and seven back of the co-leaders — to the trio tied for fifth at 212, Hugh Baiocchi of South Africa, Lanny Wadkins and veteran Lee Trevino.

Baiocchi had a 70 in the brisk, cool breezes. Wadkins had a 73. Any hopes the 44-year-old Trevino may have had of achieving a third British Open crown were dashed when he drove into one of those dreadful little pot bunkers on the 13th fairway, which led to a double-bogey 6.

He lost another stroke on the next hole, the par-5 14th which both Watson and Jack Nicklaus said featured "the most difficult pin position I've ever seen."

That pair of 6s sent Trevino reeling to a 75.

Nicklaus, who had won the last two British Opens played here, managed a 68 that was, he acknowledged, too little and too late. He was at par 216.

Nick Faldo of England, playing in the last group with Baker-Finch, had an embarrassing 76 before a record British gallery of 38,000 and was at 213.

Masters title-holder Ben Crenshaw was 70-217 and U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller was 71-214.

Greg Norman, the Australian who had been on such a rampage through the American Tour and shared the first-round lead here, had a 74 and was out of it at 215.

Scotsman Bill Longmuir took himself out of the race with a 79-217.

Watson, the only three-time winner on the American Tour this season and in his customary position as the year's leading money-winner, will attempt to equal the record of six British Open crowns set by Harry Vardon with his last victory in 1914.

"Any thoughts of what it means, any thoughts of winning the championship, winning the sixth British Open, equaling the record, winning at St. Andrews, will have to come after the fact," Watson said.

In addition to Watson only James Braid and J.H. Taylor — contemporaries of Vardon — and Australian Peter Thompson have won this title five times.

"I'd hate to be the one to keep Watson from the record," Baker-Finch said, "but I'll be trying."

Watson has an opportunity to accomplish a feat unique in history — a sweep of the Scottish courses used for this championship, which he calls "the World Series of Golf."

His previous British Open triumphs have come at Carnoustie (1975), Turnberry (1977), Muirfield (1980) and Troon (1981), all in Scotland, and last year at Royal Birkdale in England.

Now he's in position for a shot at still another one.

"That's the best round I've played this year," he said. "The round the day before is No. 2. I just hope that progression continues."

After matching an opening birdie with his only bogey of the day, he began his move toward the leading Baker-Finch with a 10-foot putt on the third hole.

He reached the par-5 fifth in two and 2-putted for birdie. On the next two, he flipped sand wedge second shots inside of 5 feet, birdied both and reached the turn in 32.

He drove the green on the 342-yard 10th hole and 2-putted for birdie, then got another sand wedge shot to point-blank range on the 12th and birdied again.

Then, coming back to the great stone pile that is the clubhouse of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, with the wind in his face, he parred home.

Baker-Finch, who said he "was surprisingly calm and relaxed" in his unaccustomed role as a leader, dropped a pair of 25-foot putts and 2-putted the fifth to go 3-under early in the day.

But he bogeyed the ninth from a bunker, 3-putted for par on the 10th, then 3-putted again, this time for bogey, on the 11th.

He got one shot back with a 12-foot birdie putt on the 12th, led by two at that point but couldn't hold it.

He drove into a fairway bunker on the 14th and bogeyed. He was short in two on the 17th and bogeyed, falling back into a share of the lead and retained that only with a good 2-putt from the Valley of Sin.

Olympics starting under cloudy skies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Athletes and journalists are pouring in by the thousands, flags and banners color the urban landscape, and Olympic electricity is flowing.

After six years of planning, the first Summer Olympics on U.S. soil in 52 years — and the first ever staged by a private organization — open next Saturday under a cloud of politics as well as weather.

From tiny Andorra to war-scarred Lebanon, from farms, armies and aristocratic bloodlines, a record 7,800 athletes from 141 countries are set to compete, covered by a record 8,200 journalists.

It will all happen against the backdrop of the Soviet-led boycott involving many potential medal winners, last-minute litigation and concerns about terrorism.

The weather has been a concern all along, but some early arrivals said it was even worse than they expected.

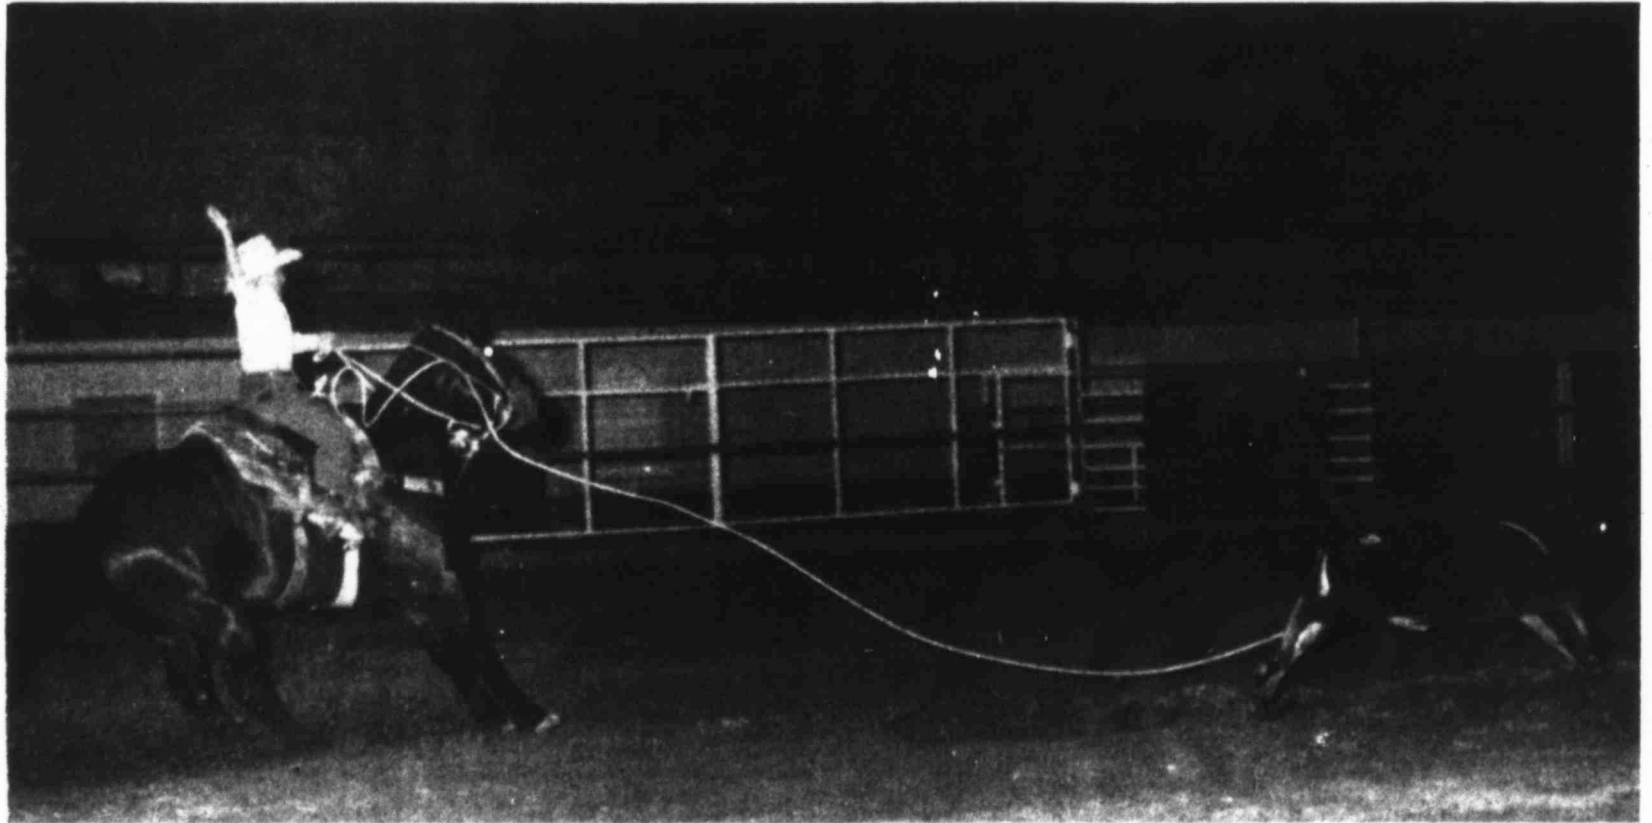

"We're surprised to find it's hotter here than where we just left," Mohammed Redwan Khari, the Egyptian team coach, said.

It was 96 then, in the midst of a 12-day heat wave which sent temperatures as much as 12

A similar heat wave during the Games could make conditions "intolerable" for the athletes, said Arthur Lessard, meteorologist in charge of the National Weather Service of Southern California.

The mercury dropped closer to the normal mid to high 80s Wednesday, but the forecast offered little hope that would continue.

CATCH AS CATCH CAN — Shannon Crenshaw catches his calf during a run in an AJRA rodeo in Del Rio and holds hopes of doing well when he goes before the home folks in the Big Spring junior rodeo. Crenshaw practices on about a dozen calves every day and will be in the 12-and-under division.

Young cowboys gearing for AJRA rodeo

By BILLY NABOURS
Sports Editor

Parents in the Howard County Area don't put much stock in the jingle, "Mommies, don't let your babies grow up to be cowboys," — or cowgirls for that matter.

That's because there will be a horde of fresh-faced youngsters invading Big Spring next weekend for the 28th Annual Big Spring American Junior Rodeo Association and Local Contestants Rodeo. Their numbers are expected to exceed 400 with at least a dozen of those hailing from directly within Howard County.

Two of those are Shannon Crenshaw and Dane Driver, both age 10. Crenshaw will be competing in calf roping, breakaway roping and barrels while Driver has his sites set on doing well in pole bending, ribbon roping and breakaway roping. And both 10-year olds have the capabilities and credentials for success.

Crenshaw is the son of past AJRA World Champion calf roper Robert Crenshaw and his wife Nancy. Crenshaw is the grandson of Raymond Phillips — who roped in the first junior rodeo held in Big Spring.

Driver is surrounded by a heavy rodeo influence in the fact that his father Skipper is a calf roper and mother Wanda competes in area barrel racing. The elder Driver also currently serves as president of the 4-H adult leaders association while Wanda is the secretary for this year's junior event that will run four nights at the Rodeo Bowl beginning July 25.

Both young wranglers have been participating in AJRA sanctioned competition since turning seven.

After three years, Crenshaw said with hesitation that he, "likes calf roping best of all." He said, "I rope every night, usually 12 calves in all."

The dedication sometimes pays off and sometimes doesn't according to Crenshaw. But for the most part rodeo, "is fun and there is some money in it," according to Crenshaw. In his most recent rodeo, at Carlsbad, New Mexico, Crenshaw took sixth place in calf roping. He is in Waxahachie before taking part at Big Spring.

There was a time when Crenshaw competed in more than the three events he will be in at Big Spring, however.

"I've retired forever from steer riding though," he said with emphasis. "I got my head stepped on one time and it took nine stitches," added Crenshaw.

Winning or losing and all hazards aside, Crenshaw said, "my parents encourage and help me a lot." He added that he hopes to rodeo for a long time, through college and maybe on the pro tour.

DRIVER'S SEAT

Driver holds similar aspirations of rodeo glory and said, "experience gained in junior rodeos is the best way to learn." This year marks the first time Driver has competed as an AJRA member, however.

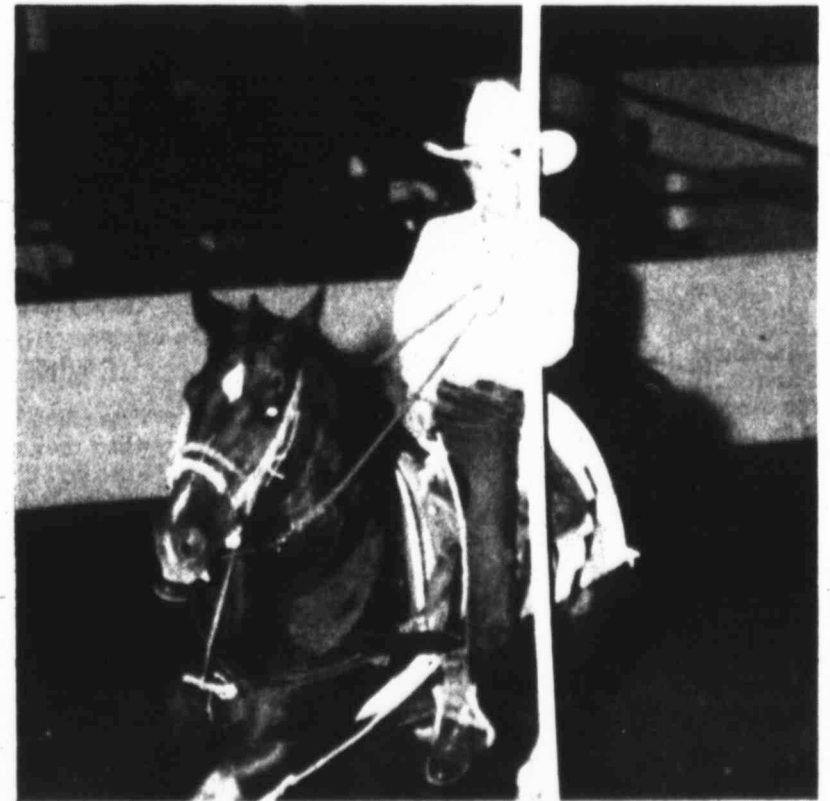

Driver, "practices a couple of hours a day," for his events and uses two different horses. His pole bending horse is named Brady and has been around in light of its 22 years. For roping purposes Driver uses a mount named Papoose that is 14-years old.

Driver estimates he has already competed at about eight rodeos this year counting one at Roby this weekend. He said the traveling isn't what gets to him sometimes though. "It's staying up all night that can get you down," he said when referring to the fact some junior rodeos turn into slumber party type affairs. He cited Sweetwater's AJRA event that averages 600 to 700 contestants each year.

He's been to Sweetwater, Snyder, Gail, Odessa and Roby to name a few rodeos, but said, "Big Spring is one of the better junior rodeos in the area."

Asked if he ever feels any pressure to perform exceptionally well since he comes from a rodeo oriented family Driver said, "sometimes I do (feel pressure), but it's the type I put on myself." He added that his, "parents are real supportive, and he wouldn't try his hand at pro rodeo in a few years."

POLE POSITION — 10-year old Dane Driver during pole bending competition at the Odessa AJRA rodeo atop his 22-year horse Brady. Driver is one of about a dozen Howard County youngsters expected to help make up the field for Big Spring's own AJRA event. In all some 400 young cowboys and cowgirls are expected to compete in the four night event that begins July 25 at the Rodeo Bowl.

Expos rally to down Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Tim Wallach belted two doubles, drove in a run and scored a run to lead the Montreal Expos to a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday night.

David Palmer, 4-3, gained the win, only his second in his last 13 starts, giving up eight hits in six innings. Mike Scott, 4-8, was the loser, allowing four runs on seven hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Trailing 1-0, Montreal scored four runs in the sixth. Tim Raines led off with a triple and scored on Andre Dawson's sacrifice fly. Gary Carter then tripled and after Mike Stenhouse was hit by a Scott pitch, Wallach doubled Carter home.

Derral Thomas' single drove in Tony Scott, pinch-running for Stenhouse who had left the game with an injured elbow, and Wallach.

Houston took a 1-0 lead in the fourth. After Jose Cruz reached on a fielder's choice, he took second on Jerry Mumphrey's single and scored when Enos Cabell bounced a single up the middle.

The Astros added a run in the seventh after singles by Terry Puhl and Mark Bailey put runners on first and third. Kevin Bass, pinch-hitting for reliever Vern Ruhle, drove in Puhl with a groundout.

BRAVES 5, PHILLIES 3

ATLANTA (AP) — Rick Camp surrendered only two hits over seven innings, and Claudiell Washington singled home the lead run in the fifth inning to pace the Atlanta Braves to a 5-3 victory Saturday over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Camp, 5-2, fell behind early when

Juan Samuel hit a two-run double in the first inning, but he allowed only one other hit and had a career-high seven strikeouts to go along with seven walks. Donnie Moore earned his 10th save by checking Philadelphia on two hits over the final two innings.

With the Braves trailing 2-1, Glenn Hubbard led off the fifth with a single against Philadelphia right-hander Kevin Gross, 5-5. One out later, Hubbard was sacrificed to second by Camp.

Hubbard scored the tying run on a single by Jerry Royster. Ken Oberkfell's single sent Royster to third, and Royster scored on Washington's single.

The Braves got their first run in the second on Brad Komminsk's RBI groundout.

CUBS 4, GIANTS 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Thad Bosley hit a tie-breaking single with two out in the 11th inning, powering the Chicago Cubs to a 4-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

With one out in the 11th, Jody Davis singled and was forced when Larry Bowa bunted. Bowa then stole second and scored as Bosley lined a single down the left-field line off loser Greg Minton, 1-7. Rick Bardi, 4-1, was the winner.

The victory kept intact the Cubs' perfect 7-0 record in extra-inning games. The Giants are now 4-8 in overtime.

Dusty Baker's two-run single off Lee Smith with two out in the eighth inning tied the score 3-3. With one out, Gene Richards, hitting for pitcher Bill Laskey, sing-

ed. One out later, Manny Trillo doubled, and both runners scored when Baker singled to left.

The Giants' rally denied Dick Ruthven, who worked seven innings, a chance to break a personal six-game losing streak.

Ruthven had retired 10 straight and was working on a shutout before Baker singled in the seventh. Chili Davis forced Baker, went to third on a double by Scot Thompson and scored San Francisco's first run as Steve Nicosia grounded out.

The Cubs scored a run in the second when Leon Durham doubled, stopped at third on a single by Keith Moreland and scored on a single by Ron Cey.

METS 2, REDS 1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Hubie Brooks and Darryl Strawberry each singled in a run and Doug Sisk provided strong relief pitching to lead the New York Mets to a 2-1 decision over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday night.

Winner Sid Fernandez, 2-0, allowed six hits, walked none and struck out seven through 6 1-3 innings. Fernandez had retired 10 batters in a row from the second to the sixth inning. But after Dave Parker homered to open the seventh and Nick Esasky tripled one out later, Sisk came in and snuffed the Reds' rally by getting two pinch-hitters on ground balls.

Sisk went on to pitch hitless relief, with the help of a diving catch by left fielder George Foster in the ninth on a ball hit by Dave Concepcion, and posted his 14th save.

Franco, Mike Hargrove and Mel Hall, but Chicago starter LaMarr Hoyt retired the next 15 Cleveland hitters.

Ron Kittle tied the score with his 23rd home run, a second-inning solo shot, and the White Sox took a 2-1 lead in the third on singles by Rudy Law, Roy Smalley and Greg Luzinski.

BREWERS 7, A's 4

OAKLAND (AP) — Jim Gantner, who wasted an opportunity to win the game one inning earlier, stroked a two-out, two-run single to break a 10th-inning tie and give the Milwaukee Brewers a 7-4 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday.

Chuck Rainey, 0-1, gave up a leadoff single to Ben Oglivie and Ed Romero's sacrifice bunt moved Oglivie to second. After Sundberg struck out, Rainey walked Dion James and Rick Manning to load the bases, setting the stage for Gantner's single to right. Robin Yount drove in the third run of the inning with a single.

Rick Waits pitched 3 1-3 innings of scoreless relief to even his record at 2-2, and Rollie Fingers got the final out for his 22nd save.

The Brewers, trailing 4-1, rallied for three runs in the eighth off four Oakland pitchers.

Yount started the rally with a triple and scored on Cecil Cooper's sacrifice fly. After Ted Simmons doubled, Oakland starter Larry Sorensen left, and Tim Conroy came on to walk Oglivie. Keith Atherton then came in, and Romero singled to load the bases. Pinch-hitter Jim Sundberg drew a walk to force in a run and bring on Rainey.

Griffin headed to HPU

Coahoma basketball standout Jana Griffin has recently signed a scholarship agreement with the Howard Payne University Lady Yellowjackets in Brownwood.

Griffin, a 5-5 guard helped lead the Coahoma Bulldogettes to a berth in the Class 3-A Region 1 Tournament. She averaged 12 points per game and was named to the 3-A All-District squad. She also made first team All-Region and second team All-State.

First-year Howard Payne coach Nancy Cobb calls the acquisition of Griffin a "tremendous asset to the team." "We are real excited to get Jana. She is the type of player that will fit into our program. She is a team player that has good court sense. We can definitely use her outside shooting."

Jana Griffin

Howard Payne is a member of the Lone Star Conference and last year won the conference tournament.

PULLING IN THE BALL — Kansas City Royals leftfielder Darryl Motley uses both hands to pull in a fly ball hit by Baltimore Orioles' Benny Ayala during the top of the third inning in Kansas City.

Stephenville Cowboy leads Frontier rodeo

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Dave Appleton's horse fouled him at the chute but made up for it by helping the Stephenville, Texas, cowboy to a bareback bronc score of 79, the highest on the first day of the 88th annual Cheyenne Frontier Days rodeo Saturday.

It took the judges several minutes to decide whether the horse fouled Appleton enough to warrant a reride. Appleton said he was pleased with the decision. "I've got no choice but to be happy, as much as this son of a gun pays," he said. He guessed the difference to him could be about $2,000.

A purse of $430,000 and 1,145 entrants maintain the Daddy of 'Em All rodeo as the richest and largest of the regular season of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association. Finals are July 29.

Steer ropers got started Friday morning, and the top three times were intact by the end their first go-round Saturday afternoon. Bobby Kirkwood of San Antonio, Texas, had the best time of 13.7 seconds and earned a $5,128 payoff.

Robert Koch of Umbarger, Texas, received $4,142 for his 13.8-second roping, and checks of $2,564 went to Rees Jackman of Thermopolis, Wyo., and Wade Lewis of Hereford, Texas. Each had times of 13.9 seconds.

The top saddle bronc score of 78 belonged to Kent Cooper of Delco, Idaho, who currently holds a $14,000 lead in world saddle bronc standings.

Marty Melvin of Holabird, S.D., who was all-around cowboy at the 1983 Daddy of 'Em All rodeo with winnings of $7,665.18, had the contestant number of "1" Saturday, and he showed why.

His bullriding score of 82 assures him a payoff in the first go-round, and he turned in creditable performances of a 61-point score in bareback bronc riding and wrestled his steer's feet off the ground in 11 seconds.

Throughout the day, cowboys chipped away at the previous best steer wrestling time, which ended up 7.3 seconds, belonging to Charlie Lowry of Summerville, Ga., who was the all-around cowboy at Cheyenne in 1982 with a single-rodeo record of $16,564.

Doug Hanover of Bryan, Texas, had lowered the mark to 7.4 seconds just a minute before and had the second-best performance of the day.

Tigers beat Rangers again

DETROIT (AP) — Chet Lemon and Howard Johnson dove in two runs each during a five-run fifth inning Saturday night to lead the Detroit Tigers to their eighth victory in nine games, a 7-6 triumph over the Texas Rangers.

Tom Brookens walked to open the fifth, took second on a wild pitch and scored on Rupert Jones' one-out single. Walks to Kirk Gibson and Darrell Evans loaded the bases and Lemon followed with a two-run double to tie the score 5-5.

Danny Darwin relieved Texas starter Dickie Noles, 1-1, and Johnson greeted the reliever with a single to score Evans and Lemon.

The Rangers took a 5-2 lead in the third against Detroit starter Glenn Abbott on a two-run triple by Mickey Rivers, Pete O'Brien's two-run homer, his 11th of the season, and Tommy Dunbar's RBI groundout.

Texas added a run in the seventh on Buddy Bell's RBI groundout.

The Tigers scored twice in the second on Dave Bergman's RBI single and a throwing error by Texas right fielder Larry Parrish.

Sid Monge, who relieved Abbott during the Rangers' five-run third inning, gained his first victory against no defeats. Willie Hernandez worked the final two innings to earn his 19th save.

RED SOX 16, ANGELS 4

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Bill Buckner hit a grand slam home run in the sixth inning, and Jim Rice hit a three-run shot in the fifth to power the Boston Red Sox to a 16-4 victory over the California Angels Saturday.

The Red Sox had 20 hits off three California pitchers, including starter Tommy John, 5-8, who gave up nine hits in just 4 1-3 innings' work.

With the Angels leading 3-2 on a pair of home runs by rookie Mike Brown, Wade Boggs led off the fifth with a double against John. Dwight Evans walked before Rice boomed his 17th homer to straightaway center field. Tony Armas followed with his 26th homer.

After Juan Beniquez's RBI single in the bottom of the fifth made the score 6-4, the Red Sox jumped on reliever Curt Kaufman for five more runs in the sixth. Singles by Boggs and Evans preceded an RBI double by Armas, and Mike Easler was walked intentionally before Buckner hit his third career grand slam over the right-field fence. The homer was Buckner's third of the season.

The Red Sox scored four more runs in the ninth. Boggs tripled home two, and Rick Miller and Ed Jurak had RBI singles.

Hurst pitched his ninth complete game of the season, giving up seven hits, striking out five and walking none. Hurst also hit one batter, Reggie Jackson, in the ninth, causing a brief bench-clearing incident when Jackson charged the mound. No punches were thrown, and Jackson was ejected.

WHITE SOX 4, INDIANS 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Pinch-hitter Jamie Quirk, called up from the minors only two days earlier, snapped an eighth-inning tie with a sacrifice fly, lifting the Chicago White Sox to a 4-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

With the score tied 3-3, Vance Law started the winning rally with a one-out walk from Tom Waddell, 2-3. Pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston then doubled to send Law to third and knock out Waddell in favor of Ernie Camacho.

Quirk, recalled from the White Sox's Triple A affiliate in Denver on Thursday, then hit a sacrifice fly near the warning track in left, allowing the White Sox to move over the .500 mark at 48-47.

Jerry Don Gleaton, 1-0, who also was called up Thursday from Denver, pitched 1 2-3 hitless innings for the victory. Ron Reed finished up to earn his sixth save.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on singles by Julio

Internationals lead way in Austin bowling

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — International bowlers Mats Karlsson of Gothenburg, Sweden, and Amleto Monacelli of Barquisimeto, Venezuela, held down the top two spots after Saturday's first round of the $125,000 Aqua Fest Mr. Gatti's Open.

Karlsson, a rookie on the Professional Bowlers Association circuit, opened with games of 244, 225, 236, 262, 243 and 236 for a total of 1,446 and a 20-pin advantage over Monacelli.

Both bowlers are seeking their first titles, although Karlsson, recognized as the top amateur in the world before joining the PBA this year, won the 1983 AMF Grand Prix of Tenpin Bowling in London.

Brian Voss, of Tacoma, Wash., a one-time PBA winner, was in third place with 1,390, while Norm Duke, of Mt. Pleasant, Texas, and defending champion Marshall Holman, of Jacksonville, Ore., were tied for fourth with 1,379.

SWING TIME

One of the worst faults made by beginning golfers is to speed up their backswing when they are faced with attempting extra distance. Slugging forces you to exceed your swing capabilities. The distance you might get is just not worth the harm done to your timing. Timing is, of course, very important in golf. The hands must be times with the hips. Hand action cannot be speeded without also speeding up the hip turn. Swinging harder than normal makes this timing impossible and, so, defeats its own purpose. Distance is the direct result of timing and not, as many people seem to think, the result of a harder swing.

Stars, Bandits give Londoners a treat

Big Spring (Texas) Herald, Sunday, July 22, 1984

3-B

USFL takes its act to another country

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — A week after they won the United States Football League title, the Philadelphia Stars posted a 24-21 victory over the Tampa Bay Bandits Saturday in the second-ever

U.S. pro football game ever held in Europe. Quarterback Tim Riordan threw three touchdown passes to lead the Stars.

The postseason exhibition game at London's Wembley Stadium was a distinct disappointment to organizers. The game drew just 21,000 fans, compared with 37,000 a year ago when the Minnesota Vikings and St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League clashed on the same turf, scene of the annual British soccer championships.

The turnout belied the increasing acceptance of the American game in soccer's heartland. Highlights of NFL games are now a regular fixture on Channel 4, Britain's second independent TV network, and the first amateur league started this spring.

After the Bandits took the field clutching British Union Jack flags and the two teams stood at attention for the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner" and "God Save the Queen," Tampa Bay struck first.

Gerald Healey took a 10-yard pass from John Reeves to cap a 73-yard scoring drive, the Bandits' first possession. With six seconds left in the half, Wayne Peace tossed a 4-yard pass to fullback Marv Christain, and Zenon Andrusyshyn converted to give Tampa Bay a 14-0 lead.

But the league champions battled back, scoring on a pair of Riordan tosses, one of 3 yards to Victor Harrison at 6:00 of the second period and a 15-yarder to Herbert Harris at 9:35 of the third.

Tampa Bay regained the lead on a 40-yard pass from Jimmy Jordan to wide receiver Spencer Jackson.

But the Stars pulled away on a 27-yard field goal from Dave Trout, who had earlier missed from 44 yards, and a 15-yard TD pass from Riordan to tight end Ken Dunek at 3:20 of the final frame.

The contest was peppered with fumbles and interceptions.

"It's postseason, of course, and we're trying to get some of the younger players some playing time," explained Stars spokesman Bobby Moore.

But the British fans seemed to enjoy it.

"It's really physical," said Roy (Sleworth, 24, who described himself as a diehard backer of the Tottenham Hotspur soccer team of the English League. "I like the way they really crunch on the tackles. You can hear the sound of it way up in the grandstand."

Other soccer stalwarts, though said football American style seemed a bit slow-paced. "There's all these stoppages of play," Bill Courtney observed during one, a television time out — the game was being broadcast on cable in the United States, as well as in Germany and the Philippines.

"Every time they gain a few yards, the whistle blows and play grinds to a halt. And the changing of squads seems interminable."

Unlike last year, when women were recruited at U.S. air bases, local talent was hired. Twenty British dancers, models and aspiring actresses were personally chosen by promoter John Marshall for their "looks, length of leg and dancing ability."

Londoner Caroline Hemming, 23, said it was all "good fun." Debbie Boreham, 21, of Romford, said it wasn't just the 150 pounds ($200) that attracted her: "You can't say no to meeting all those strapping footballers."

China high jumper heads Prefontaine track meet

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — World record holder Zhu Jianhua of China cleared 7-feet 3-4 inches on his fourth try Saturday to win the high jump at the Prefontaine Classic track and field meet.

Zhu, who set the world mark at 7-10 in June, defeated Jimmy Howard of the United States in a jump-off after both cleared 7-6 1-2.

Zhu, jumping for the second time in the western hemisphere and first time since a junior meet appearance at the age of 18, missed three times at 7-7 3-4 before his successful effort.

He cleared 7-1, 7-3 and 7-5 without a miss in the high jump competition, which was hastily arranged after the Chinese star decided earlier this week to compete in the meet.

Howard missed at the winning mark four times.

Zhu was one of 78 Olympians competing in the Prefontaine meet.

Another was Brian Diemer, who pulled off a major surprise in upsetting U.S. steeplechase standout Henry Marsh in a relatively slow 8 minutes, 33.09 seconds. Marsh was second at 8:34.47 and said he has been bothered by a virus since the U.S. Olympic Trials, where he was first and Diemer second.

"I'm disappointed. That's the first time I've been beaten by an American in about three years," Marsh said, "but I had to find out what I had."

Marsh said he is unsure whether he will train hard or take it somewhat easy between now and the Olympics. Either way, he said, he'll be taking a risk.

"But these are the Olympics," he said. "You've got to take risks."

Joaquin Cruz, the University of Oregon runner and Brazilian gold medal hopeful at 800 meters, won the 1,000 meters Saturday in 2:14.54, the fastest time ever in the U.S. in the seldom-run event. Jim Spivey, U.S. Olympic Trials 1,500-meter winner, was a distant second.

Dave Laut won the shot put at 68-11 3-4, one-quarter inch ahead of his U.S. Olympic teammate Michael Carter.

Karin Smith of the U.S. took the women's javelin in 195-3, while Christina Boxer of Great Britain captured the women's 800 meters in 2:02.53.

A strong west wind bothered the runners throughout the competition.

Elvis Forde, an Olympian from the Bahamas, took the men's 200-meter dash at 20.89 seconds, while Dave McKenzie of the United States recorded a personal best to defeat his two U.S. Olympic teammates, among others, in the hammer. His winning mark was 246-feet.

Australia dominates Federation Cup

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Australia upset the United States and Czechoslovakia beat Yugoslavia Saturday to move into the final round of the $250,000 Federation Cup.

The Australian doubles team of Wendy Turnbull and Elizabeth Sayers beat Americans Kathy Jordan and Anne Smith 7-6, 6-4 to vault Australia into the championship round. Czechoslovakia swept Yugoslavia 3-0.

The Australians took advantage of numerous errors by the Americans in the decisive doubles match.

In the first set, the Australians used strong serves to win 7-2. In the second set, Jordan and Smith could not take advantage of several service breaks. At 4-5, Smith made an unforced error and the Australians clinched the match.

In singles action, Australia's Anne Minter upset Kathy Horvath, the 11th-ranked woman in the world, 6-3, 6-4. Jordan, No. 5 internationally, tied the competition by beating Turnbull 6-3, 7-6 (7-3).

In the opening singles, Horvath's numerous errors and Minter's two service breaks gave the Australian the first set. Despite a good baseline game in the second set, Horvath was no match for Minter, who again broke the American's service twice.

Jordan's perfect serve and beautiful net game gave her an easy win over Turnbull in the second singles. Turnbull, playing her first match of the tournament — involving 32 countries and considered the Davis Cup for women — had trouble returning serves and volleys in the first set.

In the second set she regained her rhythm, forcing Jordan into a tiebreaker, where Jordan's serve proved decisive.

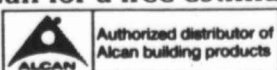

But the Australians then won the doubles.

"We are very satisfied with our surprising victory," said Australian Coach Judy Dalton.

Whitworth takes lead in Rochester golf

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, seeking a record 85th professional golf title, shot a 71 Saturday to move into a 1-stroke lead over streaking Rosie Jones and faltering rookie Cathy Marino after three rounds of the Rochester International LPGA golf tournament at Locust Hill Country Club.

Whitworth overcame a four-stroke lead held by Marino, who ballooned to a 76, as she moved into position to break out of a tie with Sam Snead as the winningest professional golfer of all time.

She stood four strokes under par after rounds of 73, 68 and 71 on the par-72, 6,162-yard course. The third round was played under sunny skies on dry fairways and fast greens.

Jones, who lost the U.S. Women's Open last weekend on the final hole, birdied the tough par-4 14th hole to move into a tie with Marino, the leader for two rounds. She added a birdie at the 16th to go ahead, but then bogeyed the 18th by missing a four-foot putt to fall a stroke back. She finished with a 2-under-par 70.

Whitworth, playing in a threesome with Marino and Laurie Peterson, narrowed her four-stroke deficit after two rounds to two strokes on the first three holes, then marched ahead of the faltering Marino in spite of bogeying the fifth and 10th holes.

Whitworth's birdies came on the 1st, 3rd and 16th holes.

Marino, 23, of Enid, Okla., 36th on the LPGA money list, topped her fairway shots for bogeys on the 13th and 14th holes to lose her lead over Whitworth and Jones.

Joy to the World

The year of the melon

By JOY CULWELL
C-City Correspondent

Hey, watermelon and cantaloupe lovers!

The Turner melons of Colorado City are ripe and in area stores. My family is already enjoying them, and they taste like a little bit of heaven.

Travis Turner planted 10 acres of melons on April 10, and his late crop was planted July 10. The luscious yellow and red meat beauties will adorn many a table this year. The cantaloupes will also come off in a continuous flow because Travis planted 4 acres every 2½ weeks until July 10.

In other years, Travis is a cotton farmer — "when and if it rains." This year the melons are about all the crop he has. They are irrigated. There is a bigger demand this year than ever because the word has gotten around to consumers that the Turner melons are so special.

Melons have been a family business since Travis' father, W.M. Turner, grew them in the late '20s, '30s and '40s. Travis followed his Dad in the business and has been a grower for 27 years. For the last 15 years he has also produced cantaloupes.

Dewey Turner also grew melons, but he died in 1974. Now Travis' son, Tony, 22, is following the Turner tradition and loves every phase of producing the prize-winning melons. Daughter Robyn is going to attend Western Texas College in Snyder in computers this fall. She, too, may soon be in the business end of the melon producing family.

It takes 85 days from planting to harvest. The main reason Turner continued to grow watermelons and cantaloupes year after year is because people love them so. They are always asking Travis when they will be ripe and pride themselves on getting some of the first off the vines.

I asked Travis to tell me when they were ripe this year, and he just brought me two. I tested them out by having a "watermelon slicing" in my back yard. I can give you the results: This year they are the greatest ever. Seems like I said that last year. If you get a chance to buy a Turner watermelon, go ahead. You won't be sorry.

You can tell this melon producer at a glance if he is in town because his personalized license plates read "MELONS." Travis, please stay in the melon business. You are appreciated.

Cowboy cops corral coke

AUSTIN (AP) — Two off-duty cops dressed in Western garb and wearing cowboy hats said they were interested when a man approached them in a restaurant and offered to sell some cocaine.

But Williamson County Chief Deputy Jim Wilson was out of his jurisdiction, so he and his companion, a Drug Enforcement Agency agent, told the man they didn't have enough money with them.

"I told him, 'When I get to my office in Georgetown, I'll fix you up,'" Wilson said Friday of the Thursday incident.

Wilson and the agent followed the man outside to his car.

"He asked us if we were police officers," Wilson said. "We said, 'Yeah, our blue and white (patrol car) is down the street.'" The man took the comment as a joke.

All three got into the man's car, with the DEA agent at the wheel, and drove to a north Austin residence, where the man allegedly picked up the cocaine.

The three then drove the 18 miles to Georgetown, the seat of Williamson County. The officers finally showed their badges when they approached the back of the Williamson County Jail.

"When he realized we were at the jail, he almost passed out," Wilson said.

Gary Overley, 34, of Austin, was being held under $25,000 bail on a charge of delivering of a controlled substance.

Jacksons' Florida tour looking for some 'gator aid

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — About 100 tickets remained unsold early Saturday as superstar singer Michael Jackson and his brothers prepared to open the third stop of their spectacular Jacksons Victory Tour.

Officials, however, predicted all 45,000 tickets available for the performance at the Gator Bowl would be sold by showtime at 9 p.m. About 17,000 tickets were still available for shows Sunday and Monday.

The Gator Bowl holds 80,000 people for football games, but the Jacksons' sound stage, which stretches from the 30-yard-line to the goal line, blocks out about 28,000 seats.

Three Miami women drove up Thursday and slept two nights in their car waiting for the celebrated performance, which uses 18,000 amps of electricity — an amount tour publicists say is enough for a small town.

"People said there was going to be lots of traffic and people camping out, but when we got here, we were the only ones here," said Sonia Ordenez, 18, who made the seven-hour drive from Miami with her sister, Sandra, 21, and Marlene Castillo, 18.

"We're the true fans," said Ms. Castillo.

POLICEMAN'S WIFE — Bethany Everett, wife of police officer Oskar Lee Everett, has adjusted to the complex lifestyle associated with officers' families. She doesn't fear for her husband's life and puts him "in the Lord's hands" daily. Everett has been an officer for five years with two of those years in Big Spring.

'I didn't really know what was involved and was a little afraid. But if that was what he wanted to do, then I was all for it.'

Officers' lifestyles portrayed by wives

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

"I've never been afraid when he goes to work. I just put him in the Lord's hands everyday and expect him to be back," Bethany Everett said about her police officer husband Oskar Lee Everett. According to Keva Morgan, wife of officer-in-training Bruce Morgan, "You've just got to learn that everyday they could be in a life or death situation and have to accept it."

AN OFFICER and his family's lifestyle is characterized by much stress, some fears, awareness of potential danger, irregular hours, days of not seeing one another, little social life outside the force and some communication problems.

"I didn't really know what was involved and was a little afraid," said Mrs. Everett about her husband's decision to become an officer five years ago. "But if that was what he wanted to do, then I was all for it. Because he's the kind of man that he is, I don't worry about him. He can take care of himself."

Everett has been with Big Spring's police department two years. Previously, he was with the Coleman Police Department for three years.

The few times when Mrs. Everett listened to a police scanner to keep up with her husband's activities, it made her uneasy. "There was a shooting at a bar once and (the scanner) said Officer Everett was headed that way," she said. "It was hours before I heard from him, and I was very anxious to hear from him."

The scanner kept the thought of danger before her constantly. Today she doesn't keep a scanner and feels less fearful. "I (don't) have a scanner so I (don't) keep on top of things," Everett shares what events of his day he can with her when he is home.

"That works well for me not to know what's going on except what he tells me. It just takes a lot of faith. It helps to not know his life's being threatened," she said.

"He's well qualified, well trained, very alert and could take care of himself. He wouldn't put himself in a situation that he didn't know what all was going on. He would be in control of himself."

THE MORGANS HAD been married six months and were expecting a baby when they moved to Big Spring in November. Morgan joined the Big Spring Police Department as an officer-in-training and began attending the Midland Police Academy. He completed his training this week.

"He's always wanted to go into police work," Mrs. Morgan said. "I guess I felt like if that's what he wanted then that would be all right with me." She believed she couldn't keep him from doing what he wanted to do.

Mrs. Morgan has not had a reason to fear for her husband's life, yet. "I never have been afraid of it yet because he hasn't been in any life-death situations," she said.

"I feel like going to the Midland Academy has prepared him for (his work). He's been with good training officers, and I feel like he's equipped and knows what to do in every situation," she said. "I don't have a fear of him going out, but every woman has to worry. It's just a part of you. I don't think I'll ever stop worrying completely. But time is what we need."

Having an officer in the family affects the family's lifestyle primarily by the officer's irregular hours and the almost monthly shift changes.

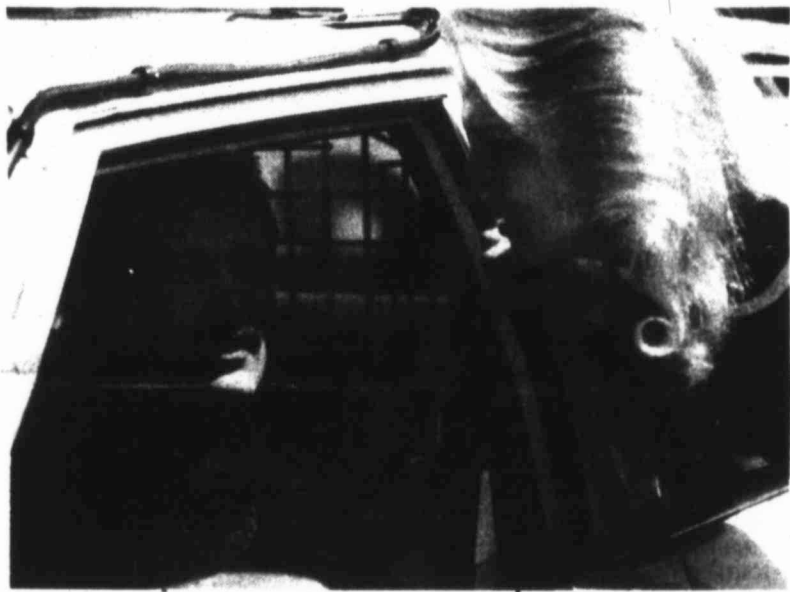

With the shift he's on now, Everett and his wife kind of pass each other by. He comes home from work about the time she leaves for work and vice versa. Since it's summertime and their children are home, Everett has been able to visit with his children in the mornings this month. The family has one day a week together. If they do anything together, it's on that day.

"SOMETIMES THE KIDS go four or five days without visiting with their father, although he is there sometimes but asleep," Mrs. Everett said. The irregular hours also keeps the couple from having a social life outside the police force. "We don't have much of a social life with other people. It's hard to plan any kind of social life, especially any regular thing," Mrs. Everett said.

When Morgan began his officer training, he would wake up about 5 a.m., leave home for Midland about 6 a.m., spend about two hours in physical training and the rest of the time at the academy in classes, come home about 7 or 8 p.m., eat supper, and study until about 10 p.m., when he would go to bed. Mrs. Morgan saw her husband long enough to feed him. They had many arguments during that time, she said. In addition to his training, they were still adjusting to marriage, to a new home with no friends, and just beginning to experience pregnancy.

Mrs. Morgan was lonely. At Christmas, a month after they came to Big Spring, she had a miscarriage. She had no one to talk to, didn't understand what was happening to her body and was away from her family's help. She was depressed.

Morgan has spent the last 14 to 16 weeks with training officers. "That time hasn't been bad," his wife said. She got to know his training officers and their families when the Morgans socialized with them.

A NEW LIFESTYLE — Big Spring police officer Bruce Morgan and wife Keva visit briefly while Morgan is on duty. Morgan completed his officer's training Thursday. The Morgans are still adjusting to a new lifestyle they inherited when he began a new law enforcement career and joined the Big Spring Police Department.

The Morgans' time together also is limited due to conflicting job schedules. And when he has time off, he spends much of it with his fellow officers. "If I had children I think I'd have someone at home to talk to and to take care of, and maybe it would be different...not so lonely," she said.

THE WOMEN NOTED that their husbands have changed since becoming an officer. They tend to be "suspicious" and "analytical," they said. "He tends to be analytical about situations and circumstances...or judgmental," Mrs. Everett said. "He has to notice things and be aware of things going on around him. He seems to be a little more negative than he was before...maybe suspicious is a good word."

Dr. Cowper serves community for 50 years

By RHONDA WOODALL
Lifestyle Writer

"I've enjoyed being a doctor's wife," said Mary Joy Cowper who has been married to Dr. Roscoe Cowper, general practitioner, for 47 years. She believes being a physician is a fine profession.

The Cowpers were married 47 years ago in Denton. They met while Mrs. Cowper was teaching school in Big Spring.

Cowper began practicing medicine in Big Spring 50 years ago this month as an associate of Dr. Charles Bivings. At the time, Dr. Bivings had a hospital on Main Street, Mrs. Cowper said. After working with Dr. Bivings for two years, Dr. Cowper opened an office in the Petroleum Building. He practiced there from 1936 until he built his hospital in 1940.

Cowper will be honored Sunday with a reception for 50 years of service to the medical profession and local residents. The reception will be held at Canterbury Retirement Center, 1700 Lancaster, from 2 to 4 p.m.

Cowper was raised in Raleigh, N.C. He graduated from the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, N.C. and the University of Pennsylvania Medical School. He did his internship at Old Blockley Hospital in Philadelphia.

Cowper came to Texas because "the depression was still going strong, especially on the East Coast," said Mrs. Cowper. "He had a cousin in Texas who told him of the opening here. Dr. Bivings' partner was moving away. Dr. Cowper applied for the job and got it."

To get to Big Spring, Cowper bought a train ticket with the money he earned by writing a paper for the American Medical Association Journal. "Things were tight in those years," Mrs. Cowper said.

Cowper's starting salary was $200 a month and his first expense was a new car costing $750, which he needed to answer house calls.

When Cowper began his career, making house calls was common. Doctors seldom make house calls now, his wife says. Making house calls were difficult. Often, Cowper answered house calls in sandstorms, rain and mud. "The roads were absolutely terrible. There were very few paved streets to drive on. The sandstorms were also terrible in those days."

While on house calls in the country, Cowper's car often got stuck in the mud, she said. He would have to get someone to pull him out of the mud with horses or a tractor.

Mrs. Cowper said she found it inconvenient to have one car, because Dr. Cowper relied on the car for transportation to house calls. However, she adjusted. "I did have to bum a ride home a lot of times, because he would get called away from functions. When I went shopping, I had to call back every 30 minutes to see if he needed the car for an emergency. What I would have given for a beeper in those days."

Before Dr. Cowper's hospital was built, Big Spring had two hospitals: Dr. Hall's and Dr. Bivings'. Dr. Cowper built his hospital "because there was not adequate space for patients that he had to take to the other hospitals. They were not very large. There was not enough bed space and sometimes could not accommodate his patients," she said.

COWPER CLINIC — Dr. Roscoe Cowper built Cowper Clinic to accommodate his patients. The hospital has had two additions since it was built in 1940.

"He needed to assure room for patients when they needed hospitalization," she said. "The clinic started out rather small and grew as the need developed. At its top capacity Cowper (Clinic and Hospital) had room for five doctors, now (Dr.) Cowper is the only one left." The clinic has had two additions to it since the original was built.

"He started the hospital by himself and he has no plans to retire now," she said. "He doesn't think he would like it (being retired). Cowper continues to practice medicine because he loves it. That's his life."

Over the years, Cowper has kept up with new technology in medicine by reading articles, attending meetings and by taking courses. The Cowpers have stayed in Big Spring because "it's been a good town to us," Mrs. Cowper said. "It has a lot of nice people in it. It's a good place to get started. We've just stayed here always because we've put down roots."

The Cowpers have four children and seven grandchildren. Their children are: Sally Sheppard, who manages the Cowpers' ranch in East Texas; Jane Henson of New Canaan, Conn.; Brenda Smith of Austin; and Roscoe Bennett Cowper Jr. of California.

Cowper has served his family as doctor handling the ordinary illnesses, Mrs. Cowper said. However, other doctors delivered the children. The Cowper children continue to call their father frequently to ask questions when they have a sore throat or upset stomach, Mrs. Cowper said.

Aside from being a doctor, Cowper has been member of Kiwanas, Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, Big Spring Country Club, the Permian Basin Medical Association, the American Medical Association, the LAURI CHURCHWELL and her crew at the Dance Gallery have been busy lately attending workshops and conventions. Lauri, LESLIE WILLIAMS and MARLEEN CROCKETT attended an aerobic exercise convention in San Diego, Calif., June 7-10. It was the first International Dance-Exercise Association meeting to be conducted. Guest lecturers included DR. LEONARD SWARTZ, inventor of "Heavyhands", BOB ANDERSON, author of best seller Stretching, and other popular individuals in the fitness world today. DEBBIE REYNOLDS made a guest appearance and entertained the audience at a formal dinner.

Lauri, her husband TOMMY

CHURCHWELL, and some of her dance students attended a dance convention in Dallas July 9-12. The students were: LEE PATTERSON, SUNNY FRASER, LAUREL MCDOWELL, JILL BEALL, CHARLENE RODRIGUEZ, HEATHER FARRIS and MARTINE WOLF.

The girls danced from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. every day of the convention, learning new routines every 45 minutes. They got a lot of good experience seeing professional dancers and taking lessons from them, Lauri said. The pros are choreographers of Broadway shows and movies, many of which had worked with well-known choreographer BOB FOSSE. Tommy goes on these trips to enjoy Dallas, not to dance.

The unexpected happened to the group while in Dallas. It's a good thing Tommy has insurance!

Tommy went out to load up the Churchwell's car at their hotel Thursday following the convention.

He couldn't find the car and asked Laurie where they had parked it. It turned out the car had been stolen.

They reported the loss and then headed for the airport to try and get everybody home the best way they could. In the meantime, state highway troopers stopped a car in Arkansas, Thursday. The troopers suspected the driver of being involved and put him inside the patrol car. He noticed that a dealer's plate had been placed over the car's license plate with magnets. He called in for a check on the car's license numbers and discovered that it was a stolen car.

The trooper tried to handcuff the man and the two got into a scuffle. The man almost choked the trooper to unconsciousness when the trooper shot him.

The car turned out to belong to the Churchwells, and they flew up to Arkansas Friday to pick it up. They were told the story and found out the man had keys made to match the car's locks.

Intraocular Implantation

Dr. Harvey DuBiner prepares to remove a patient's cataract-clouded lens. The new technique he uses replaces that lens with an artificial one which will enable the eye to focus by itself.

This patient's first intraocular implant several months earlier had improved his cataract-impaired vision from 20/200 to 20/25. The surgery about to take place improved vision in his remaining eye from 20/80 to 20/20 without glasses.

Malone and Hogan Clinic's ophthalmology department makes no charge for initial examination and consultation of patients who believe they may benefit from intraocular implants. Medicare and Medicaid pay most fees associated with the surgery. Most implant patients enter the hospital the morning of surgery and return home that afternoon since the procedure is done under local anesthesia.

Dr. DuBiner's professional affiliations include the American Academy of Ophthalmology, the Contact Lens Society, the Intraocular Lens Implant Society, New Orleans Academy of Ophthalmology, Periman Basin Medical Society, Texas Medical Association, and American Medical Association. He holds an assistant clinical professorship in the Department of Ophthalmology at Texas Tech University's School of Medicine.

Police

"He's not particularly looking for anything wrong but is aware of anything out of the ordinary," she said. "He watches people's license plates and notices the expired ones; whereas, most people don't pay any attention to them."

"Before he was an officer, he wouldn't notice these things or if he did they were of no importance to him. It's his job to prevent things that are wrong before they happen or while they are happening."

Mrs. Morgan realizes that even while her husband is off duty, he is on duty. "He is still on the job and has to be aware of things happening around him. If he sees someone breaking the law, he will call it in," she said. Like Everett, Morgan watches inspection stickers on cars. These actions keep the officers in practice of being good observers.

When the Morgans watch a police show on television, such as T.J. Hooker, "he gets emotional and screams at the TV," Mrs. Morgan said. "He says something like 'Yeah. Turn on your siren and let them know you're coming.' They do things on TV they don't do in real life."

"On TV, the good guy is always on top and always has what he needs to help him. In real life you are not going to have that. In the field, you are not always going to come out the winner."

BEFORE BECOMING An officer, Morgan "was real shy if he didn't know you. But having the authority of being a cop has taken the shyness away," Mrs. Morgan said. "He is more comfortable with talking with others. He's learned to think both sides of a story out."

"In public," she said, "he knows he is expected to act like a police officer all the time on or off duty. In time, he will learn to be himself at it. Any new job he's got, he tries to do overboard."

At one time in Everett's career, he was a detective for about six months. "He was a lot more critical of our kids then," Mrs. Everett said. (He was) having to deal with kids who were in trouble." He worked primarily with juvenile and sex crime cases.

Everett began setting higher standards for his children and wanted his children to do the same for themselves, his wife said. "It caused some static between he and I...He was wanting them to be near perfect. Because he was so involved with kids in trouble he sat high standards with less room for faults or mistakes or being normal."

Everett is back on patrol but maintains these high standards, she said. "Sometimes it's hard for them to live up to (his standards), and for me too. He feels that they (the public) are watching us closer and we ought to set an example for others."

POLICE WORK IS highly stressful, says Sgt. Fred Pace of the Big Spring Police Department. He reports that high divorce and suicide rates exist among the nation's police forces.

Mrs. Everett agrees. "(Everett) holds things in because they (the officers) can't talk about a lot of things about their job." If they did, it could blow a case in court, she said. "Their lives are in danger constantly. They have to be alert all the time for themselves, the other officers and the public. It would have to be a high stress job," she said. "The shift changes and not being able to talk are probably a lot of the reason for the high divorce rate."

Mrs. Morgan believes this as well. "(Morgan) was always one in school that wasn't the best with grades, and that bothered him. He had to pass with an 80 percent (at the academy) and had to make an 80 to be an officer. The book work was hard and the physical training was tiring."

Officers-in-training gradually take over all of the work on their patrols, 25 percent of it at a time. "If they needed to have help in a certain area they are put back in a loop for a week or however long (the training officers) think it will take you to progress. He didn't want that to happen," Mrs. Morgan said. "There's the stress of going out on his own and doing things right with no errors. And there's the routine job stress."

Morgan often brought his stress home, his wife says. "I don't see how there's any way a couple couldn't have arguments about it. And I work eight hours, so we both let it out. But it blows over." As Morgan's training got better, the pressures eased and made life at home easier.

A BOND AMONG OFFICERS is often portrayed on TV by close working relationships, the protection of fellow officers, and socializing together while off duty. Their lifestyles are common, and they are often able to discuss their work with each other when they can't always talk about it with families.

Everett's closest friends are in the police force, his wife said. "The hours and not being in the police department make being buddies with others inconvenient."

"(Morgan's) been with training officers the whole time here and there is a bond there," Mrs. Morgan said. "We've done things with them." Policemen don't always ride partners, she said, but when they do and know the other officer is in trouble they do everything they can to protect his life as well as their own.

"He's happy, so it was a right move for him to become an officer," Mrs. Morgan said. "It hasn't been easy, but I'm glad (he's an officer)."

Improving running times

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My running times stay the same no matter how hard I try to improve them. I've been running the 10-kilometer distance at the same speed for two years. Do you think my present times represent the full potential of my leg muscles? — F.K.

You're probably not training correctly. I doubt you've reached your full potential unless your speeds are really impressive. You didn't send them along.

I can tell you this: You need more than leg muscles to break your present times. You have to increase your aerobic capacity, and that's done by increasing the mileage you log every week, say, to around 100 miles a week. That will bring aerobic capacity to its fullest. And your training runs must include periods when you run at your fastest competitive speeds, the ones you get during actual 10-kilometer runs. A long, slow training run won't get you any faster.

And if it's your legs that concern you, this kind of training will make them stronger as well. Perhaps you could use some leg weight training or general weight lifting. That, too, will help chop minutes off your runs, unless, as I mentioned, you are already making sports-page headlines at your present speeds.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I enjoy lifting weights, which I know is not good aerobic exercise. But I still like pumping iron. — T.F.

Enjoying an exercise is reason enough to do it. And you can get some of the same effects from pumping iron that you get from aerobics. Let me give you an example.

With 16 weeks of weight lifting blood levels of cholesterol and low density lipoproteins (the "bad" blood cholesterol carriers) drop. Those kinds of lipoproteins are the ones that lead to plaque formation within arteries. And that is one of the reasons for doing aerobic exercise — to keep blood flowing to the heart muscle. So your weightlifting is giving you some of the same results of aerobic exercise.

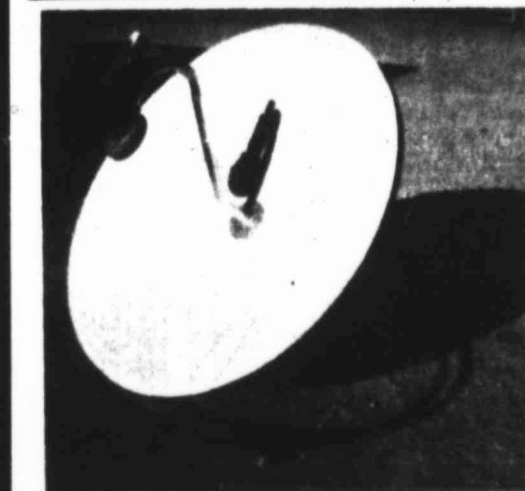

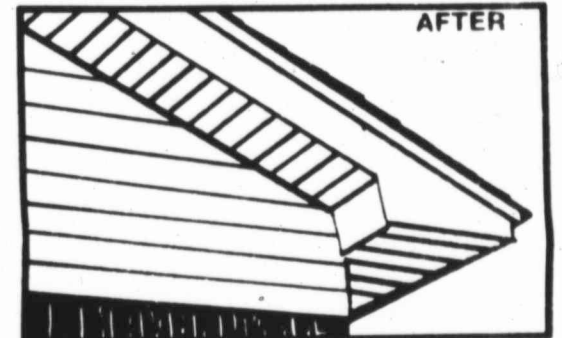

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

At Mr. G's,

Climate Adaptation

Is The 1st Step To

Successful Landscape

Gardening...

Bill and Joyce Crooker grow roses, tomatoes, peppers and shrubs in a greenhouse, exposing seedlings and cuttings to the sun and heat which makes for strong stems and a healthy root system.

The growing process begins in two large green houses the Crookers maintain south of town. Joyce & Bill have been successful in growing bedding plants that thrive in this part of the state. It has been a real challenge for the Crookers to grow such beautiful and productive plants that have adapted to our climate. They truly enjoy their business and have made a hobby of the greenhouse work.

Their business is named "Mrs. G" to greet you at the door. She is an established member of the staff and enjoys her job. Bill and Joyce are also pleased to be located at Highland Mall. There's a sun room, a greenhouse and some more land-scaping. Since they've become popular landscape gardeners, the store has to wait. They offer a wide variety of established lawns and the Crookers keep plants and trees on a schedule of planned plant rotation to be the best all around look.

Bill and Joyce are planning the most exciting Christmas store ever. They've carefully selected colors and plants to coordinate with the latest interior design colors. The new Christmas decorations are available by appointment and will be offered at a special price.

The new studio furniture you'll find at Mr. G's are available in a wide assortment of finishes. Delivery and service is provided with each one. Bill and Joyce stock all the plants and flowers from concrete garden animals to houseplants and rock pottery.

After all, Crookers, Karen and Dori, and one boy, Bill, they've turned their nurturing instincts toward the green-ing of this area. Bill and Joyce Crooker are part of the family of friendly home town merchants you'll find at Highland Mall.

Dear Abby

Dirty money gets clean bill

DEAR ABBY: "A Friend in Millbury, Mass." wrote to say that money is a notorious germ carrier — that each time paper money passes from one pair of hands to another, it becomes filthy. "Friend" went on to say that he would not eat in an establishment where the person who handles the money also handles the food.

As a 30-year owner of a fast-food restaurant, I have heard this story many times. It is not true. To support my statement, I submit this article that appeared in the Rochester (N.Y.) Times-Union in April 1973:

"MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Greenbacks dirty? No more than the silverware you eat with.

"A year-long study by Memphis and Shelby County health officials of 150 Memphis restaurants and food stores concluded that dollar bills are often cleaner than the knives and forks. 'Frankly, I was flabbergasted,' Don Daffron, who directed the study, said this week.

"Everything I had studied in microbiology told me money was always covered with bacteria. But it was relatively clean."

"He said $1 bills average 8,686 organisms per half side, less than knives and forks checked by food inspectors.

"Dimes and pennies averaged only 63 organisms per side, while quarters had 1,050, nickels, 1,430 and half-dollars 268.

"Daffron theorized that there were fewer bacteria on pennies and dimes because copper and silver may retard bacteria growth.

"Daffron said the investigation was designed to find out how much bacteria was being spread by food servers who also run cash registers."

—TOM WAHL, AVON, N.Y.

DEAR MR. WAHL: Now we know there's no need to launder dirty money. Thanks. And keep the change.

DEAR ABBY: While I agree with "A Friend of Millbury, Mass." that food service personnel who handle money should not handle food without washing their hands, your writer might be interested to know that all U.S. currency (paper bills only) is treated with an antibacterial agent that leaves it germ-free for the life of the bill.

Incidentally, the United States is the only country in the world to so treat its currency.

—PETER FULTON ROSS, AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR MR. ROSS: It's good to know that U.S. currency is germ-free. But if it weren't, even a germ would have a hard time living on a dollar these days.

Lifestyle policies

We will be pleased to announce the news of your engagement, wedding, silver or golden anniversary in the Lifestyle section of the Big Spring Herald. We try to use the story on the date you request, but sometimes space does not permit this.

The information must be submitted to us on a form available at the Herald no later than Wednesday noon before the Sunday it is to be published. The form must include a name and telephone number of a person whom we can reach during the day for more information.

We will use a picture of the couple in the announcements. Or in the case of engagement announcements where a picture of the couple is not available, we will use one of the bride-elect. The picture must be a professional quality studio photograph. We prefer a 5 x 7 glossy black and white print. We ask for this kind of photograph so that it will reproduce well in the newspaper. Following the picture's publication, it may be picked up at the Lifestyle department.

The information for the story may be brought to the Lifestyle department of the Herald, which is located at 710 Scurry. Or it may be mailed to Lifestyle Department, Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720. Call us at (915) 263-7331 if we can help with more information or clarification of our policies.

ENGAGEMENTS

Information on engagement announcements must be submitted to the Lifestyle department of the Herald anytime after the engagement is a reality until at least three weeks prior to the wedding. Anything closer than three weeks will not be published. The engagement form must be submitted no later than Wednesday noon prior to the Sunday it is to be published.

If the bride-elect, prospective bridegroom or their parents do not now or have never lived in our area, we need to know why you are submitting your engagement to the Herald. If only grandparents live in our area, please, give their names and addresses.

WEDDINGS

If a wedding writeup is submitted to the Herald after the wedding has occurred, the space allotted to it will diminish according to the length of time that has passed since the wedding.

Friends of
Dr. Roscoe B. Couper
