Iran Denies Iraqi Claims

By STEVE K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP)- Iraq offered to negotiate a cease-fire with Iran on its own terms, claimed capture of the capital of Iran's oil province and said its troops had entered other key cities along the battle front.

Iran denied the Iraqi claims, and its envoy in Moscow offered counter-proposals for a cease-fire, including the resignation of Iraq's president and the surrender of its army.

The U.N. Security Council unanimously adopted a resolution calling for a cease-fire in the week-old war between the two Persian Gulf oil powers. President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq of Pakistan went from Tehran to Baghdad on his peace mission after Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr told him: "We will continue to fight until the last aggressor is driven from our territory."

President Saddam Hussein of Iraq in a broadcast from Baghdad said Iraq would stop fighting if Iran recognized Iraqi sovereignty over all of the Shatt al-Arab estuary at the head of the Persian Gulf, returned to Arab control the three small islands at the mouth of the gulf seized by Iran in 1971 and called off the propaganda campaign by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his supporters to incite a Moslem uprising against the Iraqi government.

Iraq made the same demands last week after escalating border fighting with Iran, and the Iranians rejected them.

Hussein said he was ready to negotiate directly with Iran or though any third party or international organization to reach a "just and honorable" settlement that would recognize Iraq's "legitimate and historic rights."

Iran's ambassador in Moscow, Mohammad Mokri, told a news conference his government might agree to a cease-fire if Hussein resigned, Iraq's army surrendered, the city of Basra was turned over to Iranian control pending a plebiscite there, and Iraq's Kurds were allowed to vote in a referendum on whether they wanted autonomy or to join with Iran.

On the battle front, Iaq reported ground fighting along a 200-mile invasion front, running north from Abadan on the Shatt al-Arab to Mehran.

Iraqi communiques claimed the capture of Ahwaz, the capital of oil-rich Khuzestan province 70 miles north of the Shatt al-Arab and 50 miles from the border, but Iran said the report was "a great lie."

Ask Us

Q. - Is there an adage, or legend, that says we will have as many days with freezing temperatures in the winter as we have 100 degree days in the preceding summer, and how many 100 degree days did we have this year.

A. - We know of no such legend, although there may be one. Actually, the record probably would show that on the average, we have many more days of freezing weather than we do of 100 degree days. Our records show 27 days this past summer with temperatures of 100 degrees or higher. The highest was 108 degrees on June 28.

Bush, Rosalyn Come To Texas

By The Associated Press

Republican vice presidential candidate George Bush and Rosalyn Carter campaigned for Texas' powerful 26 electoral votes with visits only hours apart to Fort Worth today.

The visit by the first lady comes at a time when the latest national polls show President Jimmy Carter struggling seven percentage points behind Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan.

Bush will be reminding folks in Fort Worth that he's a good ol' Texas boy despite his Eastern demeanor, while soliciting votes for the GOP.

September Sets Rainfall Record

It's official now.

This is the wettest September ever recorded in Snyder.

Rainfall over the weekend added 3.82 inches, pushing the total for the past seven days to an official 9.73 inches and the total for the month to 11.89 inches.

And the rains ranged far enough to the west for Colorado River Municipal Water District Lakes to reap one of their best harvests ever.

Lake J.B. Thomas, 20 miles southwest of Snyder and the city's source of water, already had caught some 26,500 acre feet and prospects were that the catch would ultimately mount to 37,500 feet. This would put the lake above the 60,000 acre-foot mark, the highest since 1976.

Lake Thomas had a vertical rise of approximately eight feet over the weekend, with the elevation at mid-morning standing at 2230.64 feet above sea level.

The Colorado River was still flowing 14 feet deep at the Farm Road 1205 bridge at the upper end of Lake Thomas, and Bull Creek was flowing six feet deep into the lake.

Lake E.V. Spence, the larger CRMWD reservoir at Robert Lee, also was on the rise. Its elevation was 1866.52 at 8 a.m. today, accounting for a total of 172,000 acre feet of water, or a gain of 16.500 acre feet over the weekend. Prospects appeared good for a vertical rise of two or three more feet, would increase the catch by 40,000 or more acre feet. That would put Lake Spence at an all-time high, with over 200,000 acre feet of water impounded.

Elsewhere, Lake Colorado City was reported flowing over the spillway 1½ feet deep.

Deep Creek was still flowing some four feet deep through Snyder this morning, and its flow will eventually wind up in Lake Spence. The Colorado River was reported some 15 feet above the CRMWD's gauge at Colorado City this morning.

Some areas had more rain than the total recorded in the official gauge in Snyder. C.C. Allen reported 11½ inches the past week and a total of 13.7 inches for the month 3½ miles west of Snyder. Generally, reports ranged from around nine inches to 12 inches for the past week.

The September rains have pushed the official total of the year in Snyder to 23.26 inches, with over half of it falling this month.

SNYDER TEMPERATURES: High Saturday, 65 degrees; low, 49 degrees; reading at 7 a.m. Sunday, 59 degrees; precipitation, 2.00. High Sunday, 57 degrees; low, 49 degrees; reading at 7 a.m. today, 52 degrees; precipitation, 1.82; total precipitation for 1980 to date, 23.26.

West Texas - Flash flood watch southern and southeastern portions today. Scattered thunderstorms, a few locally heavy south and southeast. Widely scattered thunderstorms most sections tonight.

President Tells Labor He's Got Union Label

NEW YORK (AP) - President Carter urged a liberal labor union today to "look for the union label" when shopping for a presidential candidate.

Vying with Republican challenger Ronald Reagan for the support of blue-collar workers, Carter told the staunchly Democratic garment workers union: "I am proud to stand before you as the standard-bearer of the one political party that represents the historic concerns of America's working people."

In a speech emphasizing his support for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, Carter sought anew to underscore difference between himself and Reagan. In this case, the subject was the economic issues facing working men and women.

His audience, the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, represents an important segment of New York politics and has long been connected with the state's Liberal Party, which is backing John B. Anderson's independent presidental candidacy.

"Five weeks from tomorrow, the American people will make a choice that will affect every gain you have made over these 80 years from the minimum wage to human rights," Carter said.

"It should be an easy choice - because all you have to do is follow the same good advice the ILG has been giving for years. When you pick a candidate and a party, just 'look for the union label'," he said, repeating the theme of a union advertising jingle.

Referring to the ERA, the president said, "The new Republican leaders have turned their backs on American women. Some of them say they're not opposed to women's rights - they just want the states to do it."

The president's one-day visit to New York included a planned tour of the Metzger Group garmet factory.

End Near To 1st Phase Of Brilab

HOUSTON (AP) - Prosecutors said they hope to wrap up their bribery and extortion case against House Speaker Billy Clayton and two Austin attorneys this week, ending the first phase of the Texas Brilab trial.

The government has presented two weeks of testimony centered on secret tape recordings played for the 7-woman, 5-man federal court jury.

Defense attorneys have not objected to the wiretap recordings, but indicated they would try to keep off the record tapes made from the telephone of labor leader L.G. Moore in January and February of 1980.

Clayton, Moore and attorneys Donald Ray and Randall Wood were indicted by a federal grand jury June 12 on charges of extortion, conspiracy, bribery and racketeering.

The charges arose from an alleged insurance kickback scheme involving the multi-million dollar state health program.

FBI informant Joseph Hauser, the key witness for the prosecution, ended his testimony last week and the defense surprisingly declined to ask him any questions.

Hauser had secretly taped scores of conversations with the defendants, including a Nov. 8, 1979, meeting with Clayton.

The government claims that at this meeting Clayton accepted a $5,000 bribe to use his influence in reopening bidding on the rich state insurance contract.

Clayton said he thought the money was a campaign contribution from Moore and that he planned to return it at a later date.

Hauser now is serving a 30-month sentence for insurance kickbacks and fraud.

Defense attorneys have indicated they would call all three defendants to the stand to testify in their own behalf, extending the case for at least three more weeks.

Painting Rogers House Is Real Family Affair

When the family of Wade and Elry Rogers gets together to paint a house they come from far and near and do it.

For the occasion, children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren gather together, and that's what happened during this weekend.

The Rogers house at 3112 Ave. I was in need of repair, and raining though it was, family members got together to paint and rework the inside. More family members are expected to come in another two weeks or so to do the outside of the house.

Working on the house this weekend were Raymond and Mavis Kirkland of Austin, Doris and Red Sutton of Hobbs, N.M., Peggy and Doyle Chandler of Snyder, Carol Waid of Austin, Donald and Laurie Chandler, Vickie Chandler of Snyder, D.D. Chandler of Snyder, and Sarah Sibert of Austin.

In all, 17 family members were there working on the house at one time or other.

The job of painting the house had been neglected for years, and the Rogerses were unable to do it themselves.

"You don't realize how bad it is until you stop and look. Then you realize it's been years since you've picked up a paintbrush," said Mrs. Sibert of Austin, a granddaughter.

"We decided this would be one way to show our appreciation for everything they've done for us," she said. "It was out of an act of love that everyone decided to get together and help."

Winnebago Rally Draws 81 Units

Eighty-one Winnebagos departed from the Scurry County Coliseum grounds Sunday and early today, closing a three-day rally of the Texas W Winnebago group.

Although total attendance was less than expected and weather conditions were mostly unfavorable, the visitors participated in a variety of activities during their visit here.

The Snyder Chamber of Commerce and Board of County Development hosted the rally. They conducted tours and arranged for entertainment, which featured a Gospel Trio, the SCAMPS and Sunshine Choir from the Scurry County Senior Center on Friday night, and Robert Allen and the Country Boys western band on Saturday night.

In response to a survey conducted by the chamber and BCD, the visitors indicated that they spent about $150 per unit with local business firms during their three-day visit here, said Bill Warner, chamber manager.

VP Debate In Doubt

WASHINGTON (AP)-The debate tug-of-war between President Carter and Ronald Reagan threw a scheduled vice presidential debate into limbo today.

The League of Women Voters had invited representatives of the vice presidential nominees, Republican George Bush, Democrat Walter F. Mondale and independent Patrick J. Lucey, to a meeting to work out details and a format for their debate, tentatively scheduled for Oct. 2 in Louisville, Ky.

But because Reagan, the GOP presidential nominee, has refused to debate Carter alone without the guarantee of a subsequent debate between Carter and independent candidate John Anderson, Bush has refused to take part in planning a vice presidential debate.

Moreover, Mondale has made his acceptance conditional on a Bush acceptance. Lucey, like Anderson, is grateful for any chance to debate and thereby increase his public exposure.

Big Profits For Insiders

CHICAGO (AP)-An Iowa congressman today called for tightening rules on trading of cattle futures on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange because he says those with inside information are unfairly reaping millions of dollars in profits.

The overhaul was urged by Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, after he released a 16-month study which he said shows that 23 officers of the meat packing, grain and feedlot companies made average profits of $2.5 million apiece from trading cattle from January 1978 to April 1979.

Most Suicides In Nevada

WASHINGTON (AP)-Nevada, with its casines and easy divorce laws, has the nation's highest suicide rate, government figures show. And statistics are keeping an eye on New Jersey's rate, which was the nation's lowest before legal gambling was introduced there.

Nevada has 24.8 suicides for every 100,000 residents, a rate termed "astounding" by Joan Keemer of the National Cemter for Health Statistics.

Texas White House Sold

LA PORTE (AP)-The Sterling Mansion, a replica of the White House overlooking Galveston Bay, has been bought by two unidentified "European aristocrats," realtors said.

Jamie Suttles, sales associate for a Houston real estate firm, refused to disclose whether the new owners paid more or less than the $975,000 list price for the three-level mansion built in 1925 by the late Ross S. Sterling, founder of Humble Oil Co., now Exxon.

Realtors said it was one of the few homes on the market to sell for less than the original cost.

Sterling, governor of Texas from 1931-32, paid $1.4 million to have the huge structure built 55 years ago. Today, realtors estimated, it would cost $11 million to duplicate the grande manse.

riders serve purpose

Members of the House of Representatives who wish to resist the ongoing expansion of statist power in this country have found an effective device during this Congress: the attachment to appropriations bills of amendments that restrict the government from certain practices. The congressmen employing this strategy have won majority support on repeated roll calls on the House floor and have thus been able to move toward substantial changes in federal programs while bypassing the committee structure controlled by the Democratic hierarchy.

One of the recent victories came on an amendment by Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, which stipulates that federal employees may no longer use their health-plan benefits to pay for abortions. Taxpayers contribute directly 60 percent of the premium costs for the health program, and Ashbrook argued that his proposal was the next logical step in stopping the use of tax money for operations that many Americans consider morally reprehensible. The famous Hyde Amendment already had imposed a similar restriction on medical subsidies to those classified as poor.

A Baltimore Sun report last year said that about 20,000 abortions had been performed on the offspring of federal employees in 1978. Supporters of the program claim that the women affected by a cutoff would be denied a reasonable choice about their futures, but it is hard to imagine that any federal worker is paid so poorly that she couldn't afford the few hundred dollars that abortions cost these days. And, of course, there is the argument that a woman and her lover made a choice about her future at the time of conception; what's more, another party to the equation is left with no choice about his or her future in the event of abortion.

When Ashbrook brought his amendment up, the chair ruled that it was defeated in a voice vote. But after Ashbrook requested a recorded tally, the result was different: 228-170 in favor.

Ashbrook's rider now accompanies the health-plan appropriation to the Senate. If the forces favoring reduced state can similarly overcome the entrenched spenders in that body, a particular linkage of deaths and taxes may become a little less inevitable.

capital comment

by robert j. wagman

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The Department of Energy has made a slight miscalculation of about $31 billion, every dollar of which is coming out of the pockets of American consumers. But Jimmy Carter's re-election campaign is not sure whether to ignore the error or to boast about it.

The miscalculation was in the cost to U.S. consumers of the phased-in deregulation of domestic crude-oil prices, which had been kept artifically low by government regulation. The Carter administration hoped that bringing those prices up to world levels would decrease crude-oil imports and encourage domestic production.

Energy Department experts initially advised Carter that phased-in deregulation would cost consumers about $16 billion from its beginning in June 1979 through its completion in September 1981. Now, halfway through the period, the experts have raised their estimate of $47.4 billion.

Why? An Energy Department spokesman says the $16 billion figure was based on a projection of world oil prices that was much too low. Since the original estimate was made, world oil prices have doubled, causing domestic prices to increase far more rapidly than had been anticipated.

For some oil companies, phased-in decontrol has been a profit gusher. Take Standard Oil of Indiana, which may emphasize domestic production over imports to a greater extent than any other major oil company. Three-fourths of Standard's crude comes from its domestic reserves.

In the first half of this year, the company's profits were up $364 million over the first half of last year; an estimated $85 million of that increase was from domestic production. The average price Standard received for its domestic crude was 35 percent higher during the first six months of this year than during the same period of 1979. Even taking into account the windfall-profits tax, Standard cleared an additional profit of $1.80 for every barrel produced.

The result: Standard was able to boost its quarterly dividend by 22 percent while allocating $250 million more to its domestic-exploration budget for this year than it had originally planned to spend.

Which brings us to Carter's political problem.

Ronald Reagan is sharply attacking the administration for "holding down" domestic production by deregulating prices over two years rather than immediately.

Carter could largely rebut Reagan's charges by citing recent figures from the Energy Department showing how well the phased-in deregulation is working in terms of drilling starts and increased domestic production. Domestic production is 50,000 barrels a day higher than the department estimates it would have been without deregulation. Drilling of new wells is at a record level; at least 60,000 new oil and gas wells will be drilled this year, up 10,000 from last year. The department calculates that deregulation will increase domestic production by 350,000 barrels a day by September 1981.

So why is the Carter campaign hesitating to crow over these accomplishments?

Deregulation was strongly opposed by many in Congress — especially Democratic liberals and moderates — during the two years that the administration agonized over the issue. In finally ordering the phased-in deregulation, Carter argued that the country was suffering energy and foreign-exchange crises, that increased domestic production was desperately needed and that his $16 billion plan would be cost effective.

Given the substantial opposition to deregulation, it might be difficult politically for Carter to brag that consumers are putting almost three times the original estimate into the pockets of domestic producers eventhough his doing so would refute much of Reagan's argument. Carter's dilemma is compounded by the current oil glut, which makes the need for increased domestic production seem considerably less desperate than it did a year and a half ago.

It appears that the Carter campaign will try to challenge Reagan by simply citing the figures on increased drilling and production while neglecting to tell voters exactly how much that increased production is costing them.

I watched four hours of television commercials the other night and didn't see a single face -- just fannies.

Hour after hour, jeans-covered rumps marched across my 21-inch screen. They swayed from side to side, twirled around, karated, bent, stretched, rode horseback, discoed, kicked and breathed. They all had two things in common: all the fannies were signed and the pants fit tighter than the skin of a clinched fist.

Frankly, I cannot believe my luck. For years, I've killed myself working at being "just another pretty face" and now no one cares. All the emphasis is on the part that leaves the room last.

Not only have the back of my knees never been my "best side," I have yet to find a pair of jeans that fit like the ones worn by the models on TV.

Those four hours of fashion shock have prompted me to write an open letter to Gloria Vanderbilt.

Dear Gloria:

I hope you do not feel that out of all the jeans designers, I am singling you out. The truth is, I like you. I bought four of your one-size-fits-all wine glasses and they fit wonderfully.

When you came out with jeans designed for the full-figured woman, there were tears in my eyes as I called my friends and said, "Rejoice, sisters! Gloria has just discovered a cure for the overblouse."

Gloria, the woman who went with me to the fitting room the day I tried on your corduroys...went temporarily blind.

Maybe I could shed some light on what constitutes a "problem figure." Imagine, if you will, that women are not built long and narrow like the state of California, but rather like the state of Texas. Envision our head as Amarillo and our bust like Lubbock. The boundaries for our waist, hips and thighs are the same -- spanning the Mexican border on the west to the Louisiana border on the east. The legs extend from Laredo to the Gulf of Mexico.

You can see that we are talking about an ample area.

Now, look at your jeans and try to thread San Antonio, through Corpus Christi. Trust me, Gloria, there isn't a zipper in this world strong enough to hold all of that in.

I know you are sincere about wanting to bring fashion jeans to the wide screen, but know the hazards. Never sell corduroy jeans to a full-figured woman. When she walks, she could start forest fires. Never assume because waists are "in" that everyone has one. Jeans made to "hug" hips often get carried away and cut off blood supply to the kidneys.

Under separate cover I am sending you a topology of a full-figured anatomy. Do not become discouraged.

NEW YORK (AP)-One of the safest political positions today is to stand foursquare, forthrightly, 100 percent, absolutely behind small business and, as they say, everything it stands for.

The White House now has a "small business advocate," and early this year it threw a huge conference on small business that produced 60 recommendations, 11 resolutions and a reaffirmation of goals.

The Small Business Administration busily schedules get-togethers on small business topics, the latest of which, "A Conference on Small Business and Senior Citizens," was completed in Phoenix last week.

In Denver last month the National Governor's Association unanimously committed itself to "cooperation in working at both state and national levels to encourage growth and development of small business."

And nothing less than a substantial volume could list all the legislators, mayors and city officials who have orated on their undying devotion to the principles and accomplishments of small business.

Why, then, does small business continue to feel harassed by the very institutions represented by mayors, governors, senators and presidents.

One obvious answer is that conferences, recommendations, resolutions and promises don't of themselves solve problems. Another is that many officials seem ignorant of small-business needs. And a suspicion also exists that perhaps the bureaucracy is somewhat out of control.

Two esteemed researchers, Kenneth W. Chilton and Murray L. Weidenbaum, document what seems to be "a naive belief on the part of some government policymakers and much of the public that the regulatory system is neutral with respect to the size of the business firm."

In their study for the Center for the Study of American Business, they say one of the most serious threats to small firms is the need to make big capital expenditures to meet environment or safety standards.

Typically, they say, a small company must rely on relatively short term debt to finance its operations, and this reliance tends to make it a poor candidate for increased debt to meet regulatory requirements.

To illustrate: If a big company with access to bond markets borrows $1 million for 20 years at 10 percent to meet regulatory expenditures, its amortization and interests costs would be $96,000 a year.

The same amount of money borrowed by a small firm on a 10-year term loan at 15 percent a year would require principal and interest payments of $193,000 a year, or about double that of the larger company.

The inconsistency doesn't end there. A small firm, they continue, doesn't have the same ability to pass along its increased costs. Its larger competitor can often do so with only small unit price rises.

Fall, Winter Fashions Aim For Individuality

COLLEGE STATION - Fall and winter fashions this year will be full of their wearers' individual creativity, a clothing specialist predicts.

"Many fashion options are allowing the individual to create her own special look for fall and winter," says Ann Vanderpoorten.

Ms. Vanderpoorten is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

This year, choose one look to build an entire wardrobe around, or select different styles for your different moods, the specialist suggests.

Two popular fashion trends are the "total look" and the "separates look," Both are "easy to wear," Ms. Vanderpoorten says.

The "total look" strives for chic elegance.

It is based on a collection of suits, dresses and coat-with-skirt combinations.

Colors are muted but not dull. Textures are smooth and crisp.

The mainstay of the "total look" is a trio of items: classic suits with narrow fitted jackets, Chanel suits and one-piece sweater dresses.

Today's "separates look" depends on cardigan jackets, sweater sets and waist-length jackets coordinated with skirts or pants.

Textural interest is important - with fabrics that are nubby, lacy, napped, and, for contrast, shiny.

Argyles and Fair Isle patterns are popular for sweaters and knee socks.

Casual elegance describes this classic look.

Great wardrobe extenders for either look are a ruffled or lace-trimmed blouse, a pleated skirt and a blazer, Ms. Vanderpoorten says.

Whether you choose a single fashion trend or select from several, one thing is certain: now is the time to create a wardrobe that is uniquely yours.

Beef Prices Are Rising

As the cherished cut of beef makes its way from ranch to supermarket meat counter, it confronts increasing costs all along the line. Wages and taxes are up. The costs of materials, equipment and supplies are up. Obviously, the retail price of beef must reflect these effects of inflation on the total economy, points out the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Oswald: "West's three-heart call was preemptive. North's double is a good example of the negative doubles we have been discussing in our Saturday articles. Many experts play these negative calls as high as the four level."

Alan: "South was interested in a slam and showed his ace of hearts. North went to four spades and after South corrected to five clubs North gambled on the slam."

Oswald: "South won the first trick with the ace of hearts and thought for some time."

Alan: "If West had not made that three-heart call, South would simply ruff a heart in dummy at trick two and lead toward his king of diamonds. As you readers can see, West would lead a third heart and unless South ruffed with the ace of clubs he would be down one. A ruff with the ace of clubs would work because clubs broke 2-2, but the play would have been silly indeed."

Oswald: "Byron Greenberg of Tulsa who held the South cards found a better line. At trick two he led his king of diamonds. West took his ace and led a second heart. Byron ruffed in dummy, led a club to his king and another back to dummy's ace. Then he ruffed a low diamond and ran off all his trumps discarding down to K x of spades and Q x of diamonds in dummy. West had never held more than two spades and poor East had to discard down to two spades to keep the jack of diamonds protected. Byron led a spade to dummy's king, discarded his last heart on the queen of diamonds and made the last two tricks with his ace-small of spades."

Kitchen Tools Are Diet Aids

When you decide to diet, these kitchen tools will be a big help — a postal scale for weighing portions; a pan with a non-stick surface for fat-free cooking; an ice cream scoop for doling out the right amount of cottage cheese or yogurt; an egg poacher for delicious eggs lower in calories than fried; a blender for skim milk shakes, pureed fruit and other low calorie drinks.

If you color your hair at home, you should test the dye for any allergic reaction before each and every time you use it. Take a small amount of the dye and dab an inch-square patch on the inside of an arm. Leave it there for 24 hours. If the skin becomes mildly inflammed, you're allergic to the dye and you shouldn't use it on your hair. If no reaction, the coloring is safe for you.

For instant refreshment on hot, sticky days, splash on cologne or after-bath lotion that's been chilled in the refrigerator. Choose a citrus or green scent for the coolest tingle. When going out, take along a chilled cologne stick and dab it on several times during the evening. Keep your astringent in the fridge, too. Use it after cleansing or anytime your face gets hot and oily.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Low blood pressure

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter has very low blood pressure and several doctors have told her that there is nothing they can do. Rest is all that can help. She gets so tired that all she can do is lie down. She has days when she feels good but maybe the next day she's exhausted. The doctors say they can help high blood pressure but there is no medicine for low blood pressure.

DEAR READER — I wish you had included the blood pressure levels found in your daughter's case. A lot of people have relatively low readings and have no symptoms at all. These may be as low as 90 over 60 and the person will still be perfectly healthy and without any symptoms.

Low blood pressure is affected by the same three basic mechanisms that affect normal blood pressure and high blood pressure. These include the amount of blood the person has, the action of the heart as a pumping organ and the amount of constriction of the vessels, specifically the arteries and veins.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 15-8, Your Vital Blood Pressure, which will explain to you the mechanics of blood pressure. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

We usually don't set a lower limit of normal for blood pressure but rather judge whether it's abnormal in accordance with how if affects a person. The most common symptom of low blood pressure is feeling faint or a tendency to faint upon standing. These symptoms can be helped by wearing pressure garments on the legs, which can include various pressure stockings or even properly applied elastic bandages.

Low blood pressure can be associated with a variety of medical disorders. A classic one, of course, would be a loss of blood which alters the amount of blood volume present. But it can be associated with such things as abnormal function of the adrenal gland. Low blood pressure on standing may be associated with some abnormal nerve mechanisms.

I have not really accepted your statement that your daughter's symptoms are caused by her low blood pressure. There are many people who experience fatigue and exhaustion who have perfectly normal blood pressure. Your daughter's diet may not be proper. She may be one of those rare people who tends to have low blood sugar. Or she may have periodic episodes of being exhausted because of psychological reasons. Fatigue or lack of energy is a common complaint and in 80 percent of the people who have it, there's no underlying medical disorder.

Yes, it's true that modern medicine can treat high blood pressure. The problem is different for low blood pressure. Just because you have a low reading doesn't mean it even should be treated, unless you have definite symptoms that are specifically related to the low blood pressure such as fainting.

12 Dead In Bombing

MUNICH, West Germany (AP)-A powerful bomb ripped through crowds of revelers streaming from the Okotberfest at closing time, killing at least 12 people, including two girls and a boy, and injuring 140 others, many of them critically, officials said.

Authorities said early today they believed a Swiss and a Briton were among the dead. They were not identified. Officials also said they believed foreigners were among the injured, but they, too, were not identified.

Winston Churchill became a Knight of the Order of the Garter in 1953.

Clements Marked Man With Texas Democrats

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Republican Gov. Bill Clements is a marked man with Texas Democrats.

"He is arrogant, insensitive and a know-it-all," outgoing State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg said of Texas' only Republican governor this century. "In 1982 we are going to slide him out of office on his own oil slick."

"Texas cannot have a government for and by the people if it is led by Bill Clements," the Houston Democrat told the closing session of the party's second state convention Saturday.

The new state chairman, Sherman attorney Bob Slagle, elected after a hot race with Rep. Luther Jones of El Paso, agreed.

"Now let us move forward, healing all past divisions, and keep this one thing in mind - beat the Republicans," said the victorious Slagle.

While much of the convention talk was aimed at the 1982 gubernatorial race, party leaders said they did not want to forget a more immediate goal: beating Ronald Reagan.

"Our top priority is Nov. 4, the presidential race," Goldberg said.

Those delegates who stayed for the entire two days of slow proceedings elected Slagle over Jones Saturday 2,194 to 1,487. Both are considered political moderates.

Travis County Commissioner David Samuelson, who claimed he represented moderate-conservatives, got only 57 votes.

Incumbent Deralyn Davis of Fort Worth defeated Margaret Gomez of Austin, a challenger put up by the Mexican-American Democrats organization, 2,138 to 1,420 for the vice chairman's seat.

Pic Rivers of Houston, president of the Texas Federated Democratic Women's Club, got 127 votes.

Mrs. Davis' new 2-year term will make a total of 10 years that blacks have held that post, which carries an automatic seat on the Democratic National Committee.

In the final minutes of the convention, when a large portion of the 3,900 delegates had departed, gay rights activists were successful in passing a resolution asking the Legislature to repeal the state's sodomy law. A similar resolution failed by a narrow margin int the June state convention.

Richard Perkins of Dallas was re-elected party secretary and Jack Martin of Austin was unopposed as treasurer, succeeding Daniel Anchodo of El Paso.

There was a turnover of about two-thirds in the newly named 64-member State Democratic Executive Committe.

Slagle had been backed by former state chairman Calvin Guest, a close friend of National Democratic Chairman John White, and endorsed by the Texas AFL-CIO board. Jones was supported by former Attorney General John Hill.

Hill and White are expected to be among Democratic candidates in 1982 wanting to challenge Clements.

Dear Abby

AirLifeLine Flies On Stronger Wings

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: On July 17, I printed an item in my column about Tom Goodwin, a Sacramento businessman. While enjoying the view from his airplane one day last year, he was struck by the notion that pilots who fly for a hobby should be able to use their time, talent and aircraft for something more productive than just flying around and burning up fuel.

Then it occurred to him that many lives have been lost because delivery of vital organs and rare blood types is delayed while physicians and transplant centers try to arrange commercial transportation — a service not always available in many isolated areas of tne state. So Goodwin organized a non-profit organization of licensed pilots that works with doctors and hospitals to provide free airfield-to-airfield service in medical emergencies.

Thus was born AirLifeLine — a network of private pilots who donate their time, aircraft and fuel for this purpose. I added, "There is no charge to the patient, donor, physician or medical facility, so if there are any 'angels' out there, your tax-deductible contributions will be welcomed with open wings. And wouldn't it be wonderful if this idea caught on in other parts of the country?"

Today I received the following day-brightener from Tom Goodwin:

"Dear Abby: Your kind column of July 17 brought 48 new pilot members to AirLifeLine and has given us contacts for the establishment of AirLifeLine chapters in Arizona, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Nevada, New Mexico, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas, Virginia and Washington!

"The generosity of 'Dear Abby' readers was also overwhelming. In one month we've received $3,319.94 in donations from your readers in every part of America. This money will enable us to accept several additional missions that we would not have been able to fly without your help and your readers' kindness.

"To show our appreciation, the AirLifeLine board of directors has voted you an Honorary Life Membership in our organization (the first in our history).

"Thank you, Abby, from all of us at AirLifeLine and especially from the hundreds of people who will benefit because you care."

SINCERELY YOURS, TOM GOODWIN

CONFIDENTIAL TO "RETIRED AND BORED": In these days of a lagging economy and a tight labor market, opportunities for voluntary service are golden for those in their golden years. Hospitals, nursing homes, programs for the handicapped, parks and recreation departments reach out for volunteers. The older citizen, possessing the wisdom and patience of age, can help smooth out the wrinkles of community endeavor by committing his or her time and experience in the time-honored American tradition of "volunteerism." When life gets boring, the bored come to life — voluntarily.

Language No Barrier To Refugee Romance

MIAMI (AP)-Steve Faken had to use a Spanish-English dictionary to pop the question and needed permission from his boss for the first kiss.

Now the 24-year-old Marine from Vermilion, Ohio, is engaged to Sara Teresa Paruas Alen, one of 450 Cubans who sought refuge from a pro-Castro mob in the U.S. Interests Section in Havana last spring.

They plan to get married within the next few months. Before they can exchange wedding vows, however, she'll have to learn some English - or he some Spanish.

"It's a fairy tale," said Faken.

"I'm very happy," Miss Alen said in Spanish. "We have the same disposition."

The couple left Cuba for Miami on Friday and flew to Ohio on Sunday so Miss Alen could meet her future in-laws. All the Cubans have been allowed to leave the Interests Section, either for the United States or for home.

Faken's mother, Helene, says she is "absolutely ecstatic for Stephen and Sara."

"I talked to Sara on the phone. All I could say was, 'Hola,'" said Mrs. Faken.

Miss Alen's mother, who now lives in Boston, and her sister Maribel, of Miami, also say they're happy about the match.

The 20-year-old bride-to-be first saw Faken last spring, when she heard Marines had been assigned to the U.S. Interests Section in Havana. She and Maribel were curious, since they'd been told Marines were the cream of American men - big and handsome.

She spotted her Marine right away: "The fat one with the glasses."

Faken didn't notice her until a few weeks later when Cubans moved into the U.S. building. Sara was caught there while helping her aunt get a U.S. visa.

"I saw her and went, 'Wow!'" he recalled.

He saw her again a few days later.

"I snagged her and pointed to a chair," he said. "I got one of the refugees who could speak English and we talked for about 15 minutes. We didn't get anything done."

It wasn't love at first sight for her, though: "I thought he was a bit forward."

They began meeting on a concrete bench in the Interest Section's little park, always with a dictionary.

Miss Alen stopped complaining that the Marine was forward. She wanted him to kiss her, but he had his orders: no fraternizing with the nationals. So Faken went to Wayne Smith, the former Marine who heads the interest section.

"I told him: 'Look, I know we have this rule. But I like this girl a lot...He said it wasn't a problem."

So they kissed "in the park," said Faken.

"Next to the nursing station," put in Miss Alen. "It was about time."

In June, he consulted the dictionary again and memorized a phrase:

"Tu quieres casarte conmigo?" which means "Do you want to marry me?"

Students Demand More Democracy

WARSAW, Poland (AP)-Poland's colleges and universities begin the new academic year this week amid calls by some students for the same decentralization and greater democracy demanded by the independent trade union movement.

Student representatives from all over Poland met over the weekend in Gdansk, the Baltic strike city, and decided to form the Independent Student Association to rival the Socialist Union of Polish Students, to which about 70 percent of the country's 480,000 students belong.

Fired-Up Packers Fall Short, 28-7

MILWAUKEE (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys volunteered compliment after compliment for the Green Bay Packers Sunday, but the charity was understandable.

For while the Packers played markedly better than they had in recent weeks, when reports swirled that Coach Bart Starr was about to be fired, they still came up 21 points short of the Cowboys.

And the main reason was Danny White, the Cowboys' young quarterback who has the thankless role of replacing retired Roger Staubach. He was more than sufficient for the role Sunday as the Cowboys beat the Packers 28-7 in a National Football League game.

White completed 16 of 20 passes for 217 yards and two touchdowns, and set up another touchdown with a 48-yard run on a fake punt.

Tony Dorsett and Robert Newhouse scored for the Cowboys on 1-yard runs as White directed ball-control scoring drives of 70, 70, 90 and 48 yards.

Coach Tom Landry was less than ecstatic about the play of his Cowboys, 3-1, and he insisted the Packers, 1-3, had something to do with that.

"We did some good things," Landry said. "But we really weren't very consistent. We were making a lot of errors. You don't do the things we did, jumping offside and things like that, when you're mentally ready to play football.

"But I don't think they (the Packers) are a bad team," he said. "They're just getting bad breaks."

"They didn't hit like they were an unhappy team," Dorsett said. "I know they're unhappy that they're losing, but they went out and played some pretty good football, defensively. They didn't play like a team that lost 51-21 last week."

"They were like a wounded animal, vicious and ready to play," said Charlie Waters, Dallas' veteran safety. "They played with a lot of heart and they executed well. They looked like a lot better team today than they looked on film. I feel sorry for Bart and everyone involved."

Starr said condolences would be out of order, despite the banners draped atop the left field bleachers at County Stadium. "Bye-Bye Bart," read one. "No interim coach - we want George Allen now," another proclaimed.

"I felt that in the early stages you could see the effort and dedication our team generated," he said. "I feel the score does not justify their efforts. Our people don't have anything to hang their heads about. I think they deserve credit for preparing themselves in a fashion to play as they did."

Bruins Flexing Muscles After Bruising Victory At Lubbock

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

One of the larger questions circulating the Southwest Conference recently was just how good are the Baylor Bears.

Real good, says their coach, the coach of the Texas Tech Red Raiders and R.C. Slocum, Texas A&M defensive coordinator.

The Bears played an intimidating defense that set two school records Saturday night in an 11-3 victory over the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

Baylor is now off to its best start since 1960 when the Bears started the season 5-0.

Defending SWC champion Houston comes calling in Waco Saturday night and the struggling Cougars will need a superb effort to handle the unbeaten Bears.

"This is really a pretty good football team we've got," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "I wasn't ready to say that before but I think we're pretty good. We really played well.

"Tonight (Saturday) was the first big test for our defense. We were ready and we played well so I think we've got a pretty good team. It looks like this team will do what it takes because we did it tonight."

What Baylor did was sack Texas Tech quarterbacks 12 times for a school record 121 yards in losses. The Red Raiders, partly because of two poor center snaps which resulted in safeties and lost yardage, ended up with a minus 36 yards rushing.

Tech Rex Dockery said "We just got whipped. Their defensive front people just dominated us. I thought we could move the ball on them but they were just too physical."

Slocum, who was scouting the game for the idle Aggies, said "Baylor impressed me. They are very, very good on defense and their offense is a lot better than it looked tonight. I think the rain bothered them some."

It marked the first time since 1966 that a Baylor team had escaped Lubbock unscathed.

"I came home and won one finally," said Teaff, a former assistant at Texas Tech. "It was a good feeling."

Houston won its first game of the season, defeating North Texas State 24-20.

Rice provided the biggest shocker, upsetting Louisiana State 17-7 before 41,000 fans in Rice Stadium. Quarterback Robert Hoffmann's 15-yard scoring pass to Frank Wilson and Calvin Vance's 24-yard touchdown run pulled off Coach Ray Alborn's biggest victory as headman of the Owls.

In other games, Arkansas escaped Tulsa 13-10, Texas bombed Oregon State 35-0, Georgia beat Texas Christian 34-3, and Southern Methodist riddled Texas-Arlington 52-16.

SWC regular season play swings into high gear Saturday.

TCU is at Arkansas while Texas Tech meets Texas A&M which will be starting quarterback David Beal in place of Mike Moseley.

Texas is at Rice and SMU is at Tulane in other games involving league teams.

Roaches Rescues Oilers

CINCINNATI (AP)-Carl Roaches was driving an ice cream truck when the Houston Oilers gave him a tryout this summer.

The 5-foot-8 kick returner put his new teammates in good humor Sunday, returning a punt 68 yards to set up Toni Fritsch's game-winning field goal in a 13-10 National Football League victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

Roaches took a Pat McInally kick on his 12-yard line, spun off a few tacklers and tight-roped the right sideline until Nathan Poole caught him from behind on the Cincinnati 20. Houston went on to post its third straight victory since an opening loss to Pittsburgh.

"I got an arm on him and I forced him to the sidelines," said Bengal linebacker Andrew Melontree. "But he's a real good athlete. He made something out of nothing."

The return was Houston's biggest offensive play of the day. Minus fullback Earl Campbell, the Oilers managed just 42 net yards rushing on 26 plays - a miniscule 1.6 yard average.

Deprived of the ground attack, quarterback Ken Stabler, master of the short passing game, nibbled at the Cincinnati defense with tosses to seven different receivers. He rolled up 241 yards, completing 26 of 34 attempts, but wasn't happy with the offense.

"They used a new wrinkle which gave us trouble. They moved in a fifth man to pass cover our receiver. We didn't play well against it," Stabler said.

"They only scored 13 points on us," said Bengals cornerback Louis Breeden. "They didn't make a lot of big plays on us. They completely abandoned their running game.

"Our coaches warned us Stabler was a control-type passer. I think you can count on one hand the number of times he threw downfield longer than 10 yards."

Dodgers Fail To Gain On Houston

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The California sun has a lot of beneficial effects, but Sunday it hurt the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The sun got in Davey Lopes' eyes, causing the Dodger second baseman to lose a pop fly at a crucial moment and resulted in a 7-5 loss to the San Diego Padres.

"I've got no excuse," said a dazed Lopes. "I don't know where it was, I don't remember. It's tough answering questions right now. I can't think about what the loss means.."

The misplay occurred in the bottom of the eighth inning, after the Dodgers had taken a 5-3 lead in the top of the frame. The Padres tied the score on an RBI single by Luis Salazar and a bases-loaded walk to Broderick Perkins before Lopes let Barry Evans' pop fly fall in front of him, allowing San Diego's winning run to score.

"The ball in the sun is a tough break, but nothing can be done about it," said losing pitcher Steve Howe. "Today is over. Fortunately, Cincinnati beat Houston, and we are still very much in it."

The Dodgers remained two games behind Houston in the National League West after the Astros were beaten 8-5 by Cincinnati. In another crucial game, Montreal beat Philadelphia 7-3 and moved back into first place in the East by a half-game over the Phillies.

Elsewhere in the NL, Chicago tripped Pittsburgh 3-2 and eliminated the 1979 World Champions in the East and New York blanked St. Louis 8-0. Rain washed out the San Francisco-Atlanta game.

Reds 8, Astros 5

Ken Griffey collected four hits, including a two-run homer in the fifth inning and a game-winning double in the seventh, to rally Cincinnati over Houston.

Volleyballers Top Stockton Squads

FORT STOCKTON-Joyce Elrod's volleyball squads left Fort Stockton players high and dry Saturday in two rounds of competition.

The varsity won 15-1 and 15-2 in the first round and the junior varsity won 15-2 and 15-12.

The first match counted as a first half district game and the second match counted in the second half of district play, said Coach Elrod.

Scoring for the varsity in the first round were: Sherry Mayes, 8; Kathy Northcott, 7; Ann Melton, 5; Lisa Cobb, 5; Shana Koonsman, 4; Kelly Dryden, 1.

"Lisa Cobb played a strong offensive game logging eight spiking kills," said Ms. Elrod.

Scoring in the JV game were: Sabrina Robinson, 8; Becky Harrell, 7; Susie Lee, 4; Becky Pylant, 4; Lisa Waller, 4; Lisa Loyola, 3.

In the second round, Snyder varsity downed Fort Stockton 15-5 and 15-10. Coach Elrod credited Ann Melton, Sherri Mayes, and Lisa Cobb with a superior defensive game. "The front line blocking was outstanding."

Sherri Rich was also singled out for her successfull efforts of setting up the ball for the spikers in all four games.

Scoring in the second round were: Melton, 12; Rich, 6; Koonsman, 5; Northcott, 3; Cobb, 3; Mayes 1.

The JV won its second round, 15-10 and 15-4. Scoring were: Lee, 10; Robinson 9; Harrell, 5; Loyolla, 4; Pylant, 1; Waller, 1.

The next game will be here Tuesday against Andrews. The Freshmen will begin at 5 p.m. and the JV game is slated for 6:15. The varsity game will follow.

The varsity is now 4-0 in district play for the first half and 1-0 for the second half. The varsity is 18-0 for the season, and the JV is 8-1 for the season.

If Snyder defeats Andrews, it will be 50 straight wins on the home court.

Lamesa and Snyder are the only teams undefeated in the district. They will clash a week from Tuesday.

Spend Money Wisely As Food Prices Rise

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Food prices are on the rise again, and it's time to dust off your money saving skills.

The summer drought has damaged crops like corn and soybeans used for animal feed. Higher grain prices mean higher meat prices.

Millions of chickens died during the hot weather, including many valuable breeder hens. Fewer chickens mean higher poultry prices.

Sugar production is not increasing fast enough to keep pace with rising demand. And that means higher sugar prices.

And the farm prices tell only part of the story. Billions of dollars are added to food bills on the road from farm to supermarket. The amount varies from item to item. On the average, however, two-thirds of the money spent on U.S. farm produced foods goes for marketing costs - transportations, packaging, labor, etc. The farm value accounts for only about one-third of the final price tag.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is still predicting that retail food prices at the end of 1980 will be 8 percent to 10 percent higher than they were a year ago. The most likely increase, says the department, is right in the middle - 9 percent.

But the department also warns that the rate of increase during the second half of the year will be much steeper than it was during the first half, when the Consumer Price Index showed that the cost of food at home rose less than 2 percent. And prices next year could rise by 11 percent to 15 percent as the full impact of the dry, hot weather works its way to the retail level.

Start your saving program by looking at where your money goes. How much of your food bill, for example, isn't really food at all?

According to Supermarketing Magazine, a trade publication, Americans spent $162.6 billion in grocery stores in 1978, the latest year for which figures are available. About 78 percent of the money went for food and beverages. The rest of the money - 22 percent or almost one dollar in four - was spent on non-food items like paper goods, pet foods and health and beauty aids.

Learn to be a smart shopper at the supermarket. Don't assume that a special display means a lower price. Compare products on the regular shelves with the ones in those free-standing arrangements at the end of the aisles, to make sure you get the best deal.

To cut costs without cutting meat from your diet, watch for specials and compare price per serving instead of price per pound. The cheapest items is not the most economical if a lot of what you pay for is fat and bone that winds up in the garbage.

As a general rule, you can expect three to four servings per pound from flank steak, ground beef, round steak, lean stew meat, boned roast, liver, center cut ham, veal cutlet and fish steaks.

You'll get two to three servings per pound from roasts, ham, poultry, dressed fish and most steaks and chops.

Vandalism Case, Shooting Probed

A shooting, a criminal mischief complaint, and two minor traffic accidents are under investigation by city police.

In the shooting, Charles Allen King, 21, was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital with a gunshot wound to the left leg. He was treated and released, with the incident being reported to police about 5 a.m. Sunday. However, officers said, King declined to tell them much about the incident and the matter is still under investigation.

Saturday, police were dispatched to U-Rent-Em where a windshield had been broken out on one of the U-Haul trucks. Damage in that vandalism was estimated at $125.

At 7:10 p.m. Saturday, police were dispatched to the site of what was Ken's Pizza to work a two-vehicle traffic accident involving a 1972 Ford driven by Russell Don Loveall and a 1969 Chevrolet pickup driven by Monty Jack Anderson. That accident was investigated by Buz Woolsey.

At 7:35 p.m. Saturday, Woolsey investigated a one vehicle accident occurring at Towle Park Road. In it, a 1973 Ford driven by Scott Sharp of Ira struck a tree and guard post. Extensive damage was reported to the vehicle.

Officers reported that a $200 ring reportedly stolen from a dormitory room at Western Texas College last week, has been found. Officers said it was only lost and not stolen.

Farm Pest Management

By BILL JANY
Scurry-Mitchell Entomologist

GENERAL SITUATION: Fall appears to have arrived on schedule bringing more moisture to Mitchell and Scurry counties. Bollworms are still posing problems in late maturing cotton fields but, for the most part, pose no serious threat to most county fields. Boll weevils are increasing as indicated by our trap catches and armyworms are destroying many acres of small grains.

BOLLWEEVILS: Our trap data and field infestation data show that the majority of boll weevils in Scurry County are centered around Dunn and China Grove. Other areas to the west of Dunn also harbor boll weevils. During the latter part of this week and next week, fields in these areas will be surveyed for the presence of boll weevils. A decision will then be made whether a diapause spray program will be conducted this year.

ARMYWORMS IN SMALL GRAINS: Armyworms in large numbers are causing a large amount of damage to small grains in Scurry County. As soon as small grains begin to emerge in Mitchell County, damage from these insects can be expected. All types of small grain are susceptible. Damage from these insects is characterized by skeletonization by young instars and defoliation as the larvae grow larger. The dominant species causing this damage appears to be the fall armyworm. These larvae vary in color from light green or tan to nearly black. Most of the larvae I have seen have been nearly black. They have three yellowish-white hair lines down the back from head to tail. On the sides next to the yellow lines is a wider dark stripe and next to it an equally wide somewhat wavy yellow stripe splotched with red.

This insect cannot overwinter in areas where the ground freezes hard. Each year, in the spring, the adults must migrate from the more tropical regions of the country to the northern areas. The number of generations per year then depends on how long a period between frost dates. In this area of the state the possibility of three or more generations a year exist.

The adult moths have a tendency of flying many miles from the area they came from before alighting to lay eggs. Eggs are laid in masses of up to 150 eggs and covered with scales from the adults. A single female can lay up to 1000 eggs. The newly hatched larvae feed down near the ground, especially in the heart of the plant. They usually are not observed until they are 1-1½ inches long and are causing a lot of damage. Fall armyworms attack most plants in the grass family including corn, sorghum, and small grains. But they also will feed on cotton, alfalfa, tomatoes, and other vegetables.

The fall armyworm has the habit of marching in large numbers devouring many acres of food material over a relatively short period of time.

Fall armyworms can be controlled mechanically or with insecticides. If you have a field that has been severely damaged by these larvae, a high larval mortality can be achieved by discing your field and replanting 3-4 days later. If you observe a migration of armyworms from an adjacent field into your field, the application of an insecticide laced bait to the field margin the larvae are entering can also provide control. The plowing of deep furrows in front of their line of advancement and the application of a contact poison to these furrows will aid also. If the soil in this furrow can be worked into a fine dust mulch by dragging a heavy object back and forth in this furrow will aid in preventing these larvae from reaching your field.

Bombing Suspects Released

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP)-An investigating judge today released the leader and four members of a banned neo-Nazi group for lack of evidence that they were connected with the deadly bomb attack on Munich's Oktoberfest.

A sixth, unidentified suspect remained in investigatory custody pending further questioning, a spokesman for the federal prosecutor's office said. German law permits police to hold suspects 48 hours for questioning before an investigating judge must decide whether to release them or file charges.

Karl Heinz Hoffmann, 43, a signboard painter who likes to wear Nazi-type uniforms, and the five members of his Military Sport Group Hoffmann were taken into custody after Friday's bomb blast which killed 12 persons, including the alleged bomber, and injured 213.

Police said they were directed to Hoffman's organization by papers found near the body of Gundolf Koehler, the 21-year-old student suspected of planting the bomb in a trash can near an exit of the crowded Oktoberfest fairgrounds Friday night. The fascist group was banned in January after several truckloads of rifles, grenades, uniforms and other military equipment were found in Hoffman's home.

Authorities speculated the powerful bomb went off before Koehler could get away. A search of his parents' home in Karlsruhe, 150 miles northwest of Munich, turned up bomb-making materials and chemicals, authorities said. They said grenades, mines and explosives were found in the homes of other group members.

Authorities said they could not say yet what might have been the motive for the bombing.

Bavarian Interior Minister Gerold Tandler said border police confiscated three trucks and three personnel carriers belonging to the Hoffmann group Saturday night at a crossing into Austria.

West German police earlier cast doubt on a claim that an Italian rightist group was responsible for the Oktobertest bombing. An anonymous woman telephone caller with a French accent had said the bomb was set off by the "Right of Bologna," an apparent reference to the August bombing of the railway station in Bologna, Italy, that killed 84 people and injured more than 200, police said.

SMALL GRAIN + INSECT ALERT:
Many fields of small grain are being damaged by army worms. In many cases the crop is being killed or severely set back depending on the extent of infestation and age of the small grains.

Large numbers of very small worms (¼ inch) are found in the whorls of plants. The first indication of trouble is areas beginning to turn brown and fade out. The leaves are skeltonized and much of the leaf surface gone.

Producers should watch the small grain fields closely for the presence of armyworms and when damage is apparent and losses exceed what a producer feels he can stand, then apply control measures.

Several chemicals are available for control. The two most common are Parathion (at lower recommended dosage ½ pint per acre) and Lannate (1 pint per acre) has given good control. Producers who are planning to use small grain for winter pasture will need to watch especially close before a lot of damage occurs.

In instances where stands are destroyed by armyworms, producers can tandem the old grain. Wait a minimum of three (3) days then replant if desired. This should put the grain beyond the date for another generation to cause damage.

COTTON DESSICATION:
Although the cotton in Scurry County is poor to fair, it still might be economically feasible to dessicate some cotton for harvesting. Cotton that is already open (80 percent or more) could possibly be wasted by harvest time, especially if squares have been put on since the rain and it appears they will not mature by frost.

Harvesting droughted out cotton while it is still green (before dessication or frost) is very risky. Usually you will loose as much or more than you gain and most ginners will be very reluctant to gin green cotton. You might check with him before you strip green cotton.

Arsenic acid and paraquat are the two dessicants recommended. James Supak, Area Agronomist, recommends arsenic acid at the rate of 1½ quarts per acre plus accelerate (1½ pints) as a good tank mix. If cotton is less than 24 inches tall three nozzles per row will do a good job. This should be applied in 20-25 gallons water per acre.

Paraquat should be applied at 1-2 pints per acre with a surfactant. Spray volume in the amount of 10-15 gallons should do a good job.

Producers should spend a little time to determine whether the crop should be dessicated or wait for frost.

Bilingual Teaching Programs Being Challenged

CUMBERLAND, R.I. (AP) - Rose Fino's dark eyes flashed as she scooted forward in her chair, then spoke fervently in defense of bilingual education in public schools.

"Without it, I would have quit school right away," said the 17-year-old immigrant from Mangualde, Portugal. "I came here to school when I was 14. They put me in all-English classes. I didn't know what I was doing."

Miss Fino, now a junior at Cumberland High School, said she learned nothing until she entered Cumberland's new bilingual program. There she took the usual high school courses from a teacher who taught in Portuguese, giving Rose time to master English.

But Rhode Island state Rep. John Assalone, whose father came from Italy as a boy, contends bilingual education programs are a waste of taxpayers' money:

"It's been shown that when you hand people something, even language, on a silver platter, it doesn't work. Immigrants should learn English like my father did, without burdening the American taxpayer to support expensive and failing programs."

Assalone and Miss Fino reflect two sides of a debate taking place in many states. This month, the U.S. Department of Education concludes hearings on a plan to broaden bilingual education in public schools for an estimated 3.5 million pupils whose primary language is not English.

Bilingual programs, which have sprouted in schools across the nation since 1968, are under attack from opponents who, like Assalone, campaign under the banners of tax relief and local government control.

Proponents are having to fight for programs once considered secure.

"One of our biggest problems is the lack of hard data on either side to prove whether bilingual programs work. We can see they work, but we have no real studies to confirm that," said Virginia da Mota, a consultant for the Rhode Island Department of Education.

The controversy flared in Rhode Island last winter, when backers failed to win passage of a bill to expand bilingual education at a cost to the state of $2.6 million. Assalone led opponents.

The eight programs in Rhode Island are supported by a combination of federal and state funds. Similar programs can be found from Alaska to Maine and Minnesota to Texas, where immigrant children are taught in languages ranging from Japanese and Spanish to French and Navajo.

Many of the programs have been around since 1968, when Congress enacted the Bilingual Education Act.

The new Department of Education proposal, which aims to address "one of the most serious barriers to equal opportunity education," comtemplates spending up to $592 million on bilingual instruction for children who score below the 40th percentile in standardized tests.

The Department of Education currently spends about $169 million to $2325 million for 831,000 students in bilingual programs. The proposal to boost that figure has aggravated an already sore subject in many states.

In California, for example, bilingual proponents recently fought off an effort to revise the state's program and are girding for a fresh attack next year.

Opinion is also divided in Rhode Island, which draws large numbers of Portuguese, Colombians and other Hispanics to work in its textile and jewelry industries.

"I see the new swing away from bilingual instruction as another sign that the New Right is gaining a foothold in this country," said Charles Santos, director of Cumberland's bilingual edcuation program, which offers 215 Portuguese students classes in their native tongue.

"Statements like that do not address the issue," said Assalone. "The fact is that studies show these programs do not work. Taxpayers are wasting millions of dollars to fund a Job Corps for bilingual teachers."

"We can show results here in Cumberland," countered Santos, who said about 50 Portuguese students have been "mainstreamed" into all-English classes since his program began two years ago.
