Reagan chooses optimistic theme

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a State of the Union address brimming with optimism, proclaimed an American economic and military reawakening and vowed to push "to the finish line" for U.S. support of rebel movements in Nicaragua, Afghanistan and elsewhere.

Seeking a fresh start with Congress, Reagan invited both Democratic and Republican leaders to the White House today to discuss their legislative agendas.

The president called during the nationally broadcast speech Monday for new assistance to Contra rebels battling the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua and for U.S. support of democracies elsewhere.

As he stood before senators and representatives in the House chamber, Reagan sounded the same upbeat tone that has marked previous addresses. He talked of an "economic and social revolution of hope" in the United States and "global democratic revolution" around the world.

But Democrats immediately dismissed much of the speech as irrelevant.

"We've come to the end of an era," said Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va. "The 'feel-good' slogans have gone flat with time."

Reagan promised to go ahead with plans to submit to Congress on Wednesday a request for new assistance for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, saying "the struggle has extra meaning because that nation is so near our own borders."

He asked for quick Senate confirmation of Supreme Court nominee Anthony M. Kennedy, sought prompt ratification of the U.S.-Soviet medium-range missile treaty and offered a mocking critique of the congressional budget-making process that even brought laughs from some of the lawmakers.

Holding aloft several last-minute money bills that he said represented "43 pounds of paper and ink," Reagan said: "Congress shouldn't send another one of these, and if you do, I will not sign it."

But Democratic leaders declared that Reagan will not be able to set the national agenda in his final year in office.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said Reagan has failed to do enough to protect Americans' economic interests.

"As important as our commitments abroad may be, our first obligation is to the American people and to their future," Wright said. "We can't build a vibrant economy by just delivering pizzas to each other."

Reagan dismissed suggestions that he will be a lame-duck president by promising "a full agenda" in his remaining year in the White House.

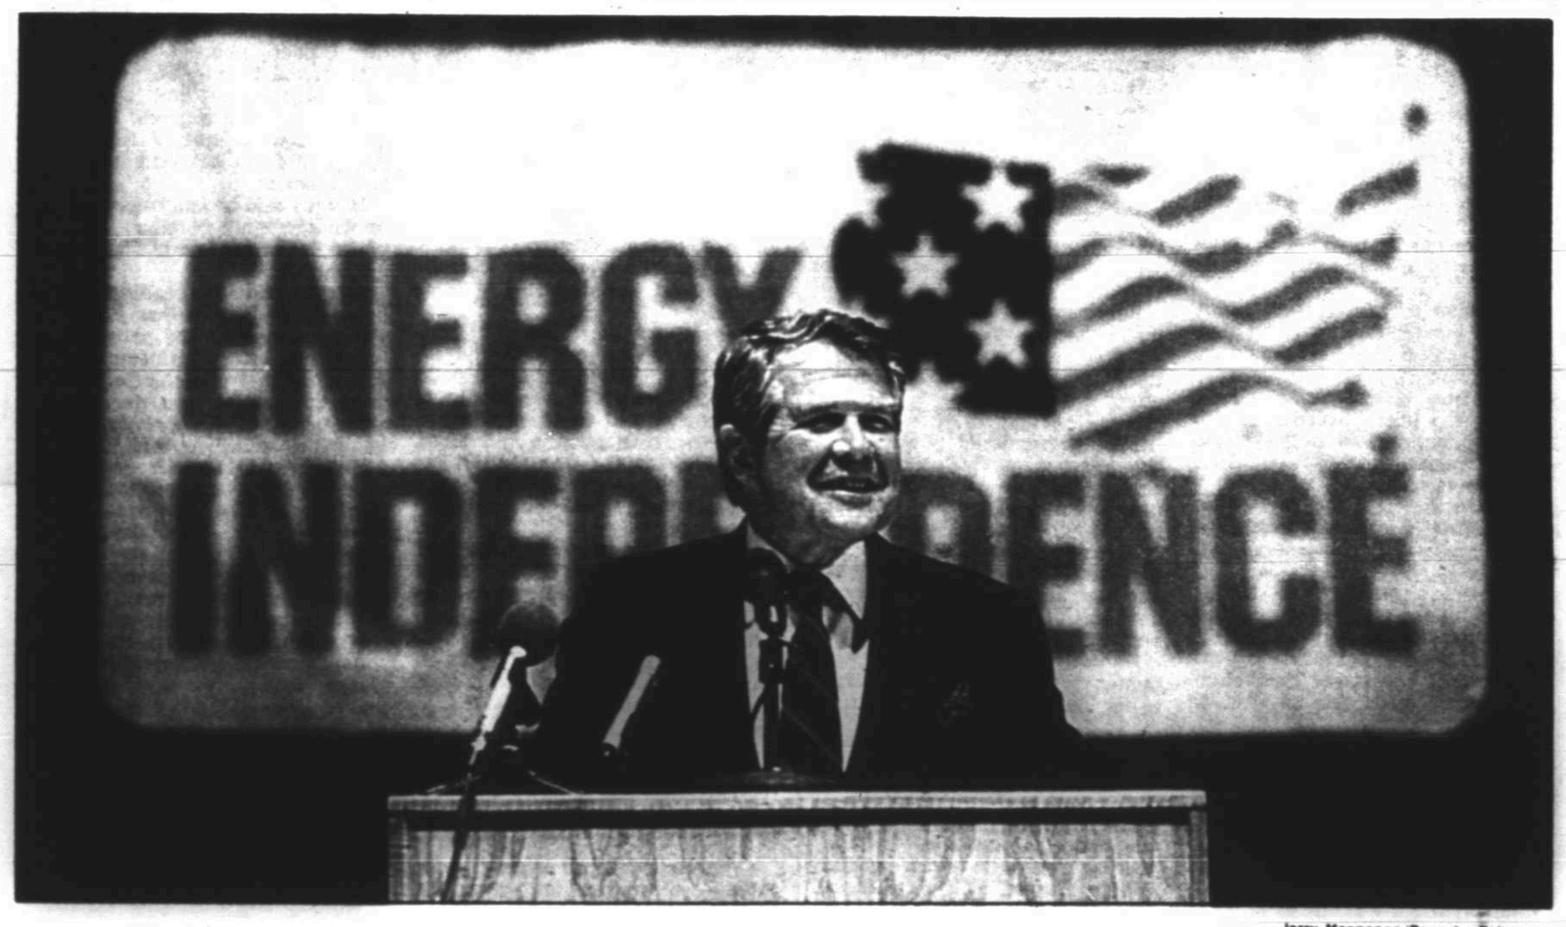

"It's all out, right to the finish line," he said. "I don't buy the idea that this is the last year of anything.... We're not talking here tonight about registering temporary gains, but ways of making permanent our successes."

Reagan, who has used previous State of the Union addresses to honor people he considered national heroes, this time singled out his wife, Nancy, for her "Just Say No" anti-drug campaign. She beamed as the lawmakers stood to join in his tribute.

He announced few new initiatives, except for a suggestion that the executive and legislative branches of government revise the budget-making process with "a joint agreement that sets out spending priorities within available revenues."

The address, otherwise, was studded with references to longtime Reagan goals — a balanced budget amendment, a line-item veto for presidents, a school prayer amendment, welfare reform, and an anti-abortion amendment.

In an accompanying written message to Congress, Reagan said he will seek $1.5 billion for the fight against AIDS — a ten-fold increase over 1985 funding levels.

Republican presidential candidate Pat Robertson outlines his "Energy Frontier" plans, which he said would make the United States energy independent and help restore America's stature as the world's leader in power and freedom.

Robertson issues energy challenge

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Presidential candidate-evangelist Pat Robertson in Midland Monday said that the world's stage is set for an "Energy Frontier" to help make the United States energy independent and re-establish world leadership.

"Though I am convinced that the petroleum industry currently holds the key to our present survival here on Earth," Robertson told a throng of supporters in Midland Center, "I further believe that nuclear fusion holds the key to our long-term survival."

In flying into Midland to round out a day's tour of Texas, Robertson evoked images of President John F. Kennedy by recalling the slain president's call for the United States to cross "the space frontier," which "confirmed America's pre-eminent leadership among the powers on Earth."

The space program "developed the resources of our people and our land, and it proved, once again, that, by God's help, the America people can overcome any challenge placed before them," Robertson said.

Kennedy 26 years ago "jump-started the American spirit by challenging America to put a man on the moon and return him safely to Earth before the decade (of the 1960s) was out," the candidate said.

Robertson was in Midland to drum up support for his Republican Party delegate-winning powers on Super Tuesday, March 8, and to bring in cash and pledges to fuel his campaign.

The 57-year-old founder of the Christian Broadcast Network and CBN University, Southern Baptist, charismatic and Yale University law school graduate said the "new frontier" which needs to be crossed is the "Energy Frontier — that promised land of freedom from the bondage of foreign oil."

His proposal includes:

— energy conservation incentives for industry,

— an increase in strategic petroleum reserves from 500 million barrels to one billion barrels,

— declaration of a "tax holiday" on all new oil wells drilled in the continental United States for two years,

— a return of the oil depletion allowance to 27½ percent and preservation of the full tax deduction for intangible drilling costs in the year in which they occur, and — a call for the U.S. Congress to "immediately repeal" the Windfalls Profits Tax Act.

Robertson said that the "tax holiday" would "ensure that the income off of all new wells is tax exempt for two years.

Efforts in Michigan, Hawaii draw candidate's criticism

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Republican presidential hopeful Pat Robertson Monday accused George Bush supporters of "outright fraud" in Michigan and compared Hawaii's Republican leaders running of the party to "one of the Central American banana republics."

The former televangelist also said the Texas GOP should continue checking signatures on other candidates' filing petitions.

During a short press conference after delivering an energy speech at the state Capitol, Robertson said his expected strong showing in Michigan and Hawaii would create "a very embarassing thing" for Vice President George Bush so close to the Iowa caucuses. He said the Hawaii Republican Party's postponing its caucuses is "something that perhaps only would happen in Argentina."

Congressman finds Reagan 'on line'

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Midland's delegate to the U.S. House of Representatives feels President Reagan's State of the Union performance Monday night proves the president is no lame duck.

"I think a lot of people expected Ronald Reagan to coast, to ride into the sunset, but what he's done is to saddle up and to come into town with his guns blazing," said Lamar Smith, a Republican whose district spans from San Antonio to Midland.

"I expected no less," he said. "There is much left to do."

The 21st District's congressman mentioned in particular the president's call for budgetary reform as a major area where he intends to offer support.

Smith called the manner in which the House considered a 1,000-page, 15-pound spending bill the the week before last Christmas "a complete travesty of the budgetary process" because of the three hours alloted for discussion.

Spending bills need full debate "in the light of day, not in the dark of night," Smith said.

The bi-partison support which the idea of budgetary reform seems to enjoy is one reason why the president's legislative momentum has not stalled despite his lame duck status, said Smith.

Another item on the coming Reagan legislative agenda which the congressman termed "right on line" is education reform.

Those reforms should "leave decision-making in the hands of parents and teachers and local communities," the congressman said.

Reagan still nesting his 'old eggs'

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan hopes to soar through the final 12 months of his presidency like a bold American eagle rather than simply flutter like a wounded lame duck.

But if Monday night's State of the Union address is to be read as a harbinger of things to come, the president's role will be that of a proud mother hen, seeking to hatch the old eggs that have accumulated over the years rather than producing new ones.

Entering the final phase of his tenure, Reagan proposed almost nothing in the way of fresh initiatives. Instead, he urged Congress to complete his agenda of past proposals.

The speech was not a valedictory. Reagan has a busy year ahead of him, including journeys to Mexico, Western Europe and the Soviet Union. Next week, he will face a volatile showdown with Congress over his proposal for additional aid to the Nicaraguan Contras. Next January, before departing the White House, he will have one final shot at depicting the state of the union.

Bush-Rather confrontation draws complaints for CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS affiliates around the country were swamped with calls in support of Vice President George Bush after he and anchor Dan Rather engaged in an argumentative exchange during the "CBS Evening News."

"The lines lit up like a Christmas tree," said Wes Mills, a reporter for an affiliate in Arkansas.

Bush complained he was told Monday night's live interview would be part of a profile, not a "rehash" of his involvement in the Iran-Contra affair.

But Rather pressed Bush on the subject. During much of the interview, both talked at once, making it difficult to hear what either was saying.

"I don't want to be argumentative," Rather said at one point. Bush chuckled and said, "You do, Dan."

"Mr. Vice President, you set the rules for this talk, I didn't mean to step on your line there, but you insisted that this be live and you know I have a limited time here," Rather said at another point.

"That's why I want to get my share in on something other than what you want to talk about," Bush responded.

Department of Education to study LFHS anti-drug efforts

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The U.S. Department of Education (DOE) has chosen Robert E. Lee Freshman High School — over two other recognized Midland high schools — to be one of five stops in Texas it makes on its tour of 200 "model" drug abuse education programs in the nation.

DOE officials will tour the campus and community Wednesday and Thursday.

Lee Freshman — as well as Midland Freshman High School and Robert E. Lee High School — comprised one-third of the nine schools nominated by state groups for the DOE recognition.

The program — sponsored by the DOE's National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth — will formally recognize the top 100 school drug abuse programs in April.

The Austin-based Texans War on Drugs nominated Midland's two freshman high schools — and no others in Texas — for the national recognition award.

Lee High School was one of the Texas Education Agency's seven nominations to the national recognition program.

In addition, the TEA gave a special award to Lee Freshman for its "outstanding" drug abuse program.

"I think it is a huge honor," Midland Independent School District Superintendent Joe Baressi said this morning.

Attribution for the distinction was given to district personnel as well as efforts from community groups such as Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs (NABD) and the Council Against Substance Abuse (CASA), Baressi said.

"I think its the unification of the city's efforts and the fact our community is a 'can-do' community," the superintendent said.

The district has been actively involved in its war against drug abuse for about the last six or seven years, but began an intense concentration on the problem after a University of Texas at Austin study — conducted two years ago — found the community wanted more done, Baressi said.

Programs MISD involves in its quest to curb drug abuse include the ALL-STAR program, the QUEST program which educates junior high students about the dangers of drug abuse, and various programs in the elementary level sponsored by the Junior League of Midland, Baressi said.

In addition, Midland schools have PUSH (Prevention Using Student Help) and "Just Say No" clubs, the superintendent said.

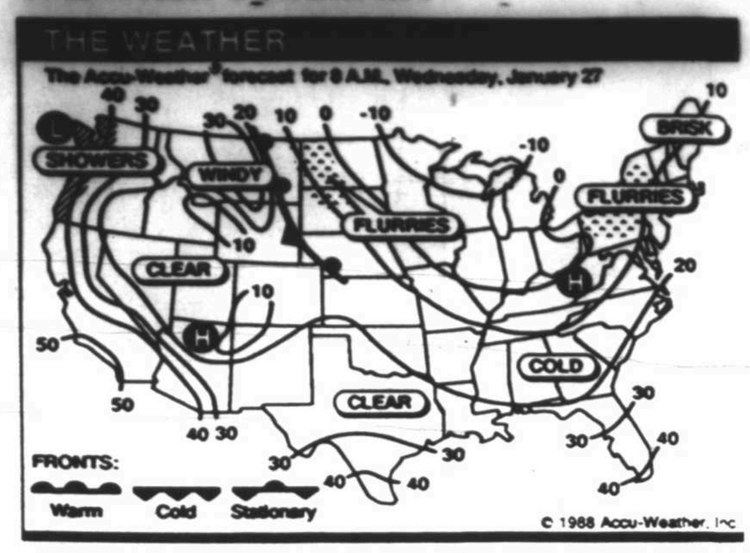

Financial help from the community and the MISD Foundation has helped the district support the variety of drug abuse prevention pursuits, he said.

Midland Police Department drug-sniffing dogs make routine, unannounced visits to Midland schools as well, Baressi said.

Statistics show there is a national decline of teen usage of cocaine and marijuana, and Baressi said he's noticed a "noticeable reduction of drugs on campus."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Clear skies, low in mid-20s forecast for Permian Basin

Skies will be clear tonight with the low expected in the middle 20s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Winds are expected to be light and variable.

Temperatures for Wednesday should be a little warmer with sunny skies. The NWS has predicted the high to be near 60. Light winds will blow from the west at five to 15 mph.

Monday's high of 51 was 32 degrees cooler than the record high of 83 set for that date in 1952. Today's low of 22 was seven degrees warmer than the record low of 15 set for this date in 1940.

STATE

High pressure continued to keep skies clear and temperatures cool to cold across all of Texas.

The trend is expected to continue at least through Wednesday, forecasters say.

It will be clear and cold tonight and sunny and cool statewide Wednesday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 30s, ranging from near 20 over the panhandle to the mid 40s in the Valley.

Highs Wednesday will be in the 50s and 60s across West Texas except in the Big Bend area where readings will climb into the mid 70s, in the 50s in North Texas and in the 50s and 60s in South Texas.

It was clear and cold across the entire state at dawn today with freezing temperatures recorded as far south as Houston and Corpus Christi.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 20s and 30s, ranging from the upper teens in the higher elevations of the Trans-Pecos region to the 40s in extreme southern portions of the state. Extremes ranged from 19 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to 42 at Laredo.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 25 at Amarillo, 32 at Wichita Falls, 27 at Fort Worth, 32 at Waco, 37 at Austin, 30 at Houston, 31 at Houston, 37 at Brownsville, 34 at San Angelo, 34 at Lubbock, 23 at Midland and 28 at El Paso.

NATION

Snow extended today across much of the Atlantic Coast, Appalachian region, Ohio Valley, Great Lakes states and northern Plains, as strong winds whipped up heavy snow and sent temperatures falling in the upper Midwest.

Many roads were closed Monday night in southeast Wisconsin with a foot or more of new snow.

New snow covers at midnight included 13 inches at Palmerton, Pa., Shokan, N.Y., and West Hurley, N.Y.; 12 inches at Allentown, Pa., High Point, N.J., and East Jewett, N.Y.; 11 inches at Philmont, N.Y., and Schodack, N.Y. There was also a foot of new snow in the eastern Catskills and middle Hudson Valley of New York State.

Warnings for heavy snow and advisories for snow this morning extended from much of Maine across the remainder of New England, New York state, much of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, the Virginias, eastern Kentucky and the North Carolina mountains.

Warnings of heavy snow this morning were also posted in southeast Wisconsin, with advisories for snow and blowing snow in the remainder of eastern and central Wisconsin, the northern half of Illinois and north-central lower Michigan.

Advisories for blowing and drifting snow were also posted for the mountains of Colorado.

Wind gusts reached 96 mph near Rollinsville, Colo., on Monday evening, and 67 mph at Boulder, 66 mph at Squaw Mountain west of Denver and 54 mph at Lakewood.

As the storms that have caused much of the snow in recent days moved north out of the nation's weather picture, winds from the northwest arrived, dropping temperatures across the nation's heartland.

Warnings for a hard freeze this morning were posted in northern Florida.

Snowfall during the six hours ending at 1 a.m. EST included 8 inches at Albany, N.Y.; 7 inches at Lebanon, N.H.; 6 inches at Glens Falls, N.Y., and Montpelier, Vt.; and 5 inches at Allentown, Pa., and Columbus, Ohio.

Snow was forecast for today in New England, New York state, Ohio, northern Indiana, West Virginia, western Virginia and eastern Kentucky. Strong and gusty winds were predicted in the Carolinas and Wyoming.

Dallas residents exhibit support as slain policeman memorialized

DALLAS (AP) — Hundreds marched on City Hall and motorists turned on headlights to show support for police as authorities prepared for a memorial service for an officer gunned down by a man officials say was egged on by onlookers.

Thousands of people were expected at today's memorial services for 25-year-old Officer John Chase, who was shot to death with his own gun Saturday after a struggle with a deranged vagrant who was later fatally shot by other officers.

Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot and oilman Ray Hunt have offered planes to transport officers to Chase's funeral Thursday in Des Moines, Iowa. Fort Worth-based American Airlines offered a jet to fly officers and family members to Des Moines.

"What's occurred today is unprecedented in terms of the calls, the expressions of support and sympathy for officers," police spokesman Ed Spencer said late Monday.

Investigators today also planned to re-interview some of the 45 bystanders to try to identify the two to 10 onlookers who according to witnesses yelled "Shoot him, shoot him," during the confrontation, said Spencer.

Capt. John Holt said bystanders may be prosecuted if police find they did goad the vagrant on.

Saturday morning's killing was the second fatal shooting of a Dallas police officer within two weeks.

Although Chase was white and the 34-year-old vagrant, Charles Dudley Williams, and many of the onlookers were black, police do not believe the shooting was racial.

However, the predominantly white department has been criticized for several shootings of non-whites and accused of being out of touch with minorities.

Police Chief Billy Prince pointed to the critics as a factor behind the shooting.

"The feeling and atmosphere of controversy and criticism that permeated this past year...you take someone a little mentally deranged, and the circumstances are just right and they're on the edge, it makes them just bold enough to attack an officer," he said.

Initially, leaders of the Dallas Police Association said critics, in particular two black City Council members, wouldn't be welcome at today's service. But they changed their mind after Mayor Annette Strauss met with Chase's relatives and said she would attend.

The mayor also denied that criticism of police led to the shooting. She said City Council granted many police requests during last year's budget negotiations despite lean revenue.

In response to the Chase shooting, Dallas residents formed police booster groups and organized pro-police events.

On Monday, hundreds marched 1⅓ miles between the John F. Kennedy Memorial and City Hall, with some carrying signs reading "God Bless Our Men and Women in Blue" and "Police Are People, Too."

One group sought to have a monument to police erected, while another planned to hold a vigil in front of City Hall. The Dallas Crime Commission announced a "Thumbs Up" bumper sticker campaign. Groups also are distributing black ribbons and asked motorists to turn on headlights in a silent daytime show of support.

ROBERTSON

The holiday "would not only encourage oil investments, but it would help push our oil producers beyond the economic hazards of fluctuating oil prices," Robertson said. "And it will do so without costing the federal government one single dime."

All the while, America must broaden its "energy horizons" by exploring other energy sources, including nuclear fusion, the candidate said.

Robertson also reminded oil producers that they are "not in the oil business; you are in the energy business.

"Energy in general has a much greater future than oil alone," he said.

Robertson asked the United States "energy industry to commit itself to being the first nation to develop nuclear fusion" as an energy source.

"If we can develop an energy source not dependent on a nation's natural resources, then we can offer a better way of life to all mankind," he said.

He added that irrigation systems could be powered in the desert lands of Africa to provide food for "starving humanity."

And Third World countries could produce the energy needed to supply hospitals and to building adequate communication and transportation systems.

"Here in America, low cost, never-ending fuel could keep our cities warm even in the coldest of winters," he said.

While the challenges of the "mountains and valleys" of the Energy Frontier are being met, the United States must explore "clean ways to burn coal, one of our most abundant natural resources," he said. In addition, the Sunbelt states should "further pursue" solar power for energy uses, he said.

Robertson set 1992 as a goal to make America energy independent.

"If we mean to stay free, the frontier of energy independence must be ours."

Over the past 15 years, America has been "rendered powerless" by the desert monarchs" in the Middle East, he said. Robertson said that almost five barrels out of every 10 barrels consumed in the United States is produced on foreign soil — in Canada, Mexico, Venezuela, and the Middle East. Domestic oil reserves are declining at an average of 6 percent per year, he said.

He said that the United States is facing "a clear and present danger to our liberty and our American way of life. We are accustomed to unrestricted mobility; adequate warmth; instant food, and dignified working conditions."

Robertson's appearance in Midland Center was preceded and followed by the playing of taped patriotic music, from "Yankee-Doodle" to "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Slogans, both printed and aired, proclaimed "Go Pat Go," "Pat Power," "Pat Wears Well," and "West Texas Welcomes Pat Robertson."

Robertson advocates held the presidential candidate as a "true Southerner" who holds academic degrees in law and divinity, who seeks "godly wisdom," and whose forefathers signed the Declaration of Independence and served in the United States Congress and Senate.

SPEECH

Robertson questioned Texas GOP Chief George Strake's authority to call off a campaign to verify questionable signatures on the petitions four of his opponents filed to get on the ballot. "I really insist that they continue checking," he said.

"If the state party, in convention, changes the rules, I will abide by them."

Meanwhile on the Democratic side, supporters of Michael Dukakis' presidential bid unveiled a list of 1,200 South Texas endorsements for the Massachusetts governor in an attempt to counter Sen. Albert Gore's coup among 19 South Texas county judges.

Led by a half dozen Democratic state and local officials, the Dukakis supporters emphasized his record on jobs and education. Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, downplayed the unofficial endorsement Gore received from a coalition of the county judges.

"You hear so much about top-heavy endorsements that don't filter down," Truan said. "I think you're going to find this with the other candidates. ... It's not there at the grass-roots level."

UNION

Yet the message he conveyed Monday night was one of summarization. He broke no new ground, pioneered no unexplored areas. He reiterated the philosophy that has guided him since he entered politics a half century ago and repeated the precepts of government by which history will judge him.

In glowing rhetoric, the president described the achievements of the "Reagan Revolution" and said the nation is strong, prosperous, free and at peace; that, he said, is the state of the union in January, 1988.

He rejected the theory that his administration is at an end, that its task is done. "Put on your work shoes," he advised the members of the Democratic-controlled House and Senate. "we're still on the job."

But the job appeared less challenging than in the past. Reagan did not excite the Congress or the nation with daring plans for accomplishment as he has done previously. Rather, he reviewed a litany of proposals, which either have been rejected or are now pending on Capitol Hill, and asked their approval.

For weeks, conservatives and moderates within the White House sparred over the thrust and tenor of Reagan's speech.

According to presidential aides, the conservatives sought to "keep the ideological flame burning" by concentrating on such issues as abortion, school prayer, welfare reform and further diminution of the federal role in America life.

The moderates, led by Chief of Staff Howard Baker, reportedly felt the president should adopt a conciliatory attitude toward Congress and make arms control and deficit reduction his priority items.

Reagan himself revised parts of the text of the speech at Camp David last weekend. The result was an accommodation between the concepts advanced by the feuding forces at work in the White House; the president damned government programs which he said hurt the family, increased poverty and burdened taxpayers. But he also asked Congress to join him in a bi-partisan effort to prove "that democracy works even in an election year."

Four objectives were listed by Reagan: continued economic growth, an attack on social problems, support of "exciting economic and democratic revolutions" around the world and the maintenance of peace.

"This is a full agenda," said Reagan. "It's meant to be. You see, my thinking on the next year is quite simple: let's make this the best of eight. And that means: it's all out, right to the finish line.

"I don't buy the idea that this is the last year of anything; because we're not talking here tonight about registering temporary gains, but ways of making permanent our successes."

Yet there was little enthusiasm for the Reagan agenda in the Democratic-controlled House and Senate, where legislators have grown increasingly independent of presidential leadership.

The president emphasized his desire for Congress to reform the manner in which it handles spending bills and to pass constitutional amendments to balance the budget, outlaw abortion and permit prayer in public schools.

He called upon Congress to overhaul the welfare system so that it will protect rather than disrupt family life, encourage improved education at the local level, continue the fight against drugs and reject trade protectionism.

Renewing his bid for the line-item veto, he said he would ask Congress to reconsider a series of items that it included in its recent massive fiscal 1988 spending package.

A continued fight against drug abuse — a program for which the president during his speech offered a bow to first lady Nancy Reagan — also is an important part of the president's coming legislative program, Smith said.

Republican State Rep. Tom Craddick was unavailable for comment this morning.

At least one local Democrat — state Rep. Gary Watkins of Odessa — was not impressed by what he called "a typical Reagan speech."

"I guess being a Democrat, it bothered me somewhat that he talks about cutting back on paperwork, government involvement and taxes," said Watkins.

"He hasn't done anything about it," the state representative said. "He talks about the deficit, but he's only doing something now that he's almost out of office."

David Mandell, president of the Midland Young Democrats club, was also unimpressed with what the president had to say.

"I was amazed and disappointed," said Mandell. "This is the same rhetoric we've been hearing for seven years."

Two other local Democrats — county Democratic Party Chairman Janet Massey and County Commissioner Scott Welch — said they had not seen the speech and did not feel comfortable offering comment.

One aspect of the president's speech Mandell termed "hypocritical" was Reagan's call for reducing the budget deficit.

"His administration created the budget deficit, and it's doubled over the seven years he's been in office."

The Democrat noted that of the eight budgets Reagan has submitted to Congress, "none of them have ever been balanced."

Mandell said he's "all for" increases in health and education programs called for by the president, "but at the same time, he's decimated our social programs."

The Democrat guessed that election year politics was the prime motivation for the increased attention to social programs.

BUSH

Kristin Taylor, a spokeswoman for the Bush presidential campaign, said CBS News senior political producer Richard Cohen "assured us that while Iran-Contra very likely would come up ... (the interview) wouldn't focus entirely on Iran-Contra. We had an understanding that it would focus on the vice president's national agenda."

CBS, however, said the Bush campaign insisted the interview be live instead of taped and that the network had prominently promoted the segment by promising Bush would be asked about the Iran-Contra affair.

"We were pretty flabbergasted when the vice president opened with, 'You misled me on what this is going to be' and the confrontational tone," said "CBS Evening News" executive producer Tom Bettag.

After the broadcast, CBS affiliates around the country reported they were flooded with calls.

Redmond Althoff

Man implicated in 37-year-old murder case

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Nebraska man was heading here today to face murder charges after incriminating himself in the strangling of an 8-year-old girl whose body was found at a Pennsylvania carnival 37 years ago, authorities said.

William Henry Redmond, 66, spent most of Monday and this morning traveling by train from Nebraska with a Pennsylvania state trooper who said he located Redmond shortly after the investigation was reopened in 1985.

Redmond, who operated a Ferris wheel at the carnival, "has made a statement to police inculpating himself" in the April 1951 slaying of Jane Marie Althoff, Delaware County District Attorney William Ryan said Monday.

An arrest warrant in the case was issued for Redmond in January 1952 but apparently was never served because he left the carnival and could not be located, police said.

Redmond, who has been arrested twice on child molestation charges, was arrested Friday in Grand Island, Neb.

Redmond was a Ferris wheel operator with the Penn-Premier Show carnival that had stopped in the nearby town of Trainer in late April 1951. Jane Marie was found dead on the front seat of a truck at the carnival grounds on April 26, 1951, Ryan said. She had been strangled the previous night, he said.

The truck cab was covered with fingerprints matching those of Redmond, police said.

Redmond, bent by age and slowed by emphysema, sat quietly during a Monday evening stopover in Chicago. The state trooper, Malcolm Murphy, would not let Redmond speak to a reporter.

Murphy said he had been working on the case since October 1985 after police in Trainer told him about the girl's death.

Murphy said after reading the file he came to believe that Redmond was responsible for the girl's slaying.

"Because I knew his name and his date of birth I was able to run his name through the computer, and his name turned up in the Nebraska motor vehicle files," he said.

Murphy said he talked to Redmond on Friday and arrested him on the basis of that conversation. He would not characterize Redmond's statement as a confession.

Redmond will be charged with criminal homicide, murder, involuntary manslaughter, kidnapping, simple assault, unlawful restraint and endangering the welfare of children, Murphy said.

NABD will sponsor a luncheon Thursday at the Petroleum Club for the visiting DOE officials, said that group's president, Kingdon Hughes.

Midland Police Department Chief Richard Czech, District Attorney Al Schorre, County Attorney Mark Dettman and Sheriff Gary Painter will be among the luncheon speakers, Hughes said.

The program will give those men and other citizens involved in the city's war against drugs the opportunity to discuss what each of their departments does to battle juvenile drug abuse, Hughes said.

Shultz says treaty not 'invitation to cheating'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz today dismissed concerns that the intermediate-range nuclear weapons treaty lacks adequate safeguards against Soviet cheating, saying the pact's verification provisions are "extraordinary."

Shultz, speaking one day after the Senate Foreign Relations Committee opened hearings on the treaty, said "there is no evidence at all" that the Soviets already are violating it.

"It's not an engraved invitation to cheating, quite to the contrary," Shultz said on CBS-TV's "This Morning" show. "The verification regime which is spelled out in the treaty...is really an extraordinary one."

"I think we can catch any cheating," Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci assured the Senate Armed Services Committee on Monday. Adm. William Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the same panel, "I think it is adequately verifiable."

Speaking before the foreign relations committee, Shultz said the treaty's anti-cheating provisions, which include authorization for on-site inspections, comprise "the most stringent and comprehensive scheme of verification in the history of arms control."

But those promises Monday weren't enough to satisfy conservative Republican critics.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., told Shultz: "This treaty is an engraved invitation to cheat. I am confident that the Soviets, right now, have plans to cheat. In fact they are cheating — right now."

Helms offered no evidence for that contention, but he did wave a document at Shultz which Helms said proves the Soviets are cheating. He declined to reveal details of the document, marked "TOP SECRET."

The INF treaty, signed by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in December, provides that within three years of ratification both nations will eliminate all of their nuclear-tipped missiles with ranges from 315 to 3,125 miles.

To win ratification, it will need the support of 67 members, two-thirds, of the Democratic-controlled Senate. A vote in the full Senate is expected by March.

Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said late Monday that he thought the INF pact would be easily approved. "I'd say by about an 88-12 vote," Dole said after Reagan's State of the Union speech. He didn't name the 12 senators he thought would vote against the pact.

While Shultz was grilled by Helms, Carlucci faced similar queries from Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., who said he sees "potential major loopholes" that may "come back to haunt us unless we pin them down."

Quayle's chief complaint was with Article 14 of the treaty, which says both nations won't enter into any "international obligations or undertakings which would conflict with its provisions."

That restriction needs to be more clearly defined, said Quayle.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., also said verifying Soviet compliance was his major concern.

For example, McCain said, "there are major contradictions between virtually all of the data" the panel was given last year on Soviet nuclear weapons and new information provided in the treaty's annex.

Shultz pledged to "react vigorously to questionable Soviet activities."

Dukakis takes offensive on home ground

BOSTON (AP) — A newly aggressive Michael Dukakis is charging straight at his Democratic presidential rivals, suggesting they have done little for the homeless and that one, Gary Hart, is "very naive" in the timing of his budget proposals.

The Massachusetts governor grabbed the home-court advantage in a candidates' debate held Monday only blocks from his statehouse office, using the Faneuil Hall forum to trumpet his executive experience over opponents' legislative skills.

"You've never been through the process," Dukakis told Hart in one testy exchange. "You've never been a chief executive...You're very naive if you think you can put a budget together now for what you are going to face in January 1989."

Dukakis' new attacks also were aimed at Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, since he and they are locked in a tight race in Iowa.

It was six of the Democratic hopefuls in a third debate in three days. The other candidate with statehouse executive credentials, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, was absent, having flown home after his father's death late Sunday.

This debate was seen in Iowa, with its Feb. 8 caucuses, and in New Hamsphire, with its Feb. 16 primary. The debate was carried on WBZ-TV in Boston, which reaches much of New Hampshire, and WHO in Des Moines, which covers much of Iowa. WBZ and the Boston Herald sponsored the debate.

Moderator Marvin Kalb often struggled to keep order as the Democrats traded barbs for 90 minutes, with occasional timeouts for mutual compliments.

Jesse Jackson won praise from the other candidates for his fight against drug abuse and Hart was defended by others against charges of campaign finance irregularities.

Dukakis previously has been criticized for an almost withdrawn style in the frequent candidate debates. But Monday, he was in the thick of the battle. He slammed his rivals with congressional experience for not doing more for the homeless after all had talked about their concern for America's poor.

"All the words I have heard on the stage in the last few minutes sound terrific," Dukakis said. "But it wasn't just the president who walked away from housing for families of moderate income and low income and the homeless. It was the Congress as well...What have you folks been doing for the past seven years?"

Hart was the first to return the volleys.

"I was fighting Reaganomics and Gramm-Rudman and all these things when a lot of Democrats weren't. So don't lecture me," the former Colorado senator said.

"I wasn't," Dukakis said calmly.

Then it was Gephardt's turn.

"We've done the best we can with what we've had," said the Missouri congressman.

Hart's support fading in key states, observers say

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Gary Hart, who soared in the polls when he re-entered the Democratic presidential race last December, is being described six weeks later as a fading contender in the early battleground states.

Many party officials, political professionals and campaign rivals say Hart has been damaged by debate performances that failed to live up to expectations, by lingering questions about his private life and new charges about campaign financial irregularities, and by a skeletal political organization in Iowa.

Hart still runs strongly in nationwide surveys of Democrats. But polls in Iowa and New Hampshire point to diminishing support for him in the two states that will provide the earliest tests in the 1988 Democratic presidential campaign.

Hart shrugged off plummeting poll numbers in Iowa while campaigning in New Hampshire on Monday, saying "I'm still ahead of where I was four years ago."

But a Des Moines Register survey published last weekend indicated his Iowa support has been cut in half with only two weeks to go until the Feb. 8 precinct caucuses. A survey in New Hampshire, which holds the first primary on Feb. 16, put his support in single digits.

"He's sinking into the pack and perhaps even lower," says Phil Roeder, a Democratic Party official in Iowa. "The one advantage he's had for the past month was he was above the race. Now he's part of the race and he doesn't have the resources or the organization to compete."

Bonnie Campbell, chairwoman of the Iowa Democratic Party, says she recently completed a two-week tour of the state conducting workshops in advance of the Feb. 8 precinct caucuses. Among the activists who attended, she said, "there is nothing for Gary Hart."

The Iowans and others say that Hart's performance in his first debate since rejoining the race, in Des Moines on Jan. 15, did not live up to expectations.

"When you do something as dramatic as he did (in suddenly rejoining the race) you've got to do something to back it up," says Robert Beckel, who was Walter F. Mondale's campaign manager in 1984.

Adds Frank Greer, another Democratic campaign consultant who is not affiliated with any of this year's candidates, "After the debate, I think he's going to be more and more of a non-player."

The other contenders have refrained from attacking Hart, normally a sign they don't regard him as a threat.

Ruling lets states prohibit display of explicit books

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has left the door open for states to prohibit the display of sexually explicit books and other materials where anyone under 18 might see them.

The justices, in a unanimous ruling Monday, did not decide the constitutionality of a Virginia law restricting display of works deemed "harmful to juveniles." Instead, they ordered the Virginia Supreme Court to determine just what materials are banned from displays.

Writing for the court, Justice William J. Brennan said the Virginia law may not violate free-expression rights if applied in a way that has minimal impact on adults.

The justices barred enforcement of the law pending further study of its constitutionality, but the ruling is still a partial victory for Virginia officials. Previous federal court rulings had invalidated the law, which outlaws the display of sexually explicit material where anyone under 18 "may examine and peruse" it.

The Virginia attorney general's office conceded that the law should be struck down if it applies to more than "borderline obscenity." But it said that such is not the case under the Virginia statute, and that works of significant literary merit are not covered by the ban.

Virginia authorities initially said the racy popular novel "Hollywood Wives" would have to be placed in an adults only section of a bookstore. But they revised that interpretation before the case was argued last November, when a state lawyer told the justices that the book was exempt from such restrictions.

'Prince Charming' turns out to be 'King of Thieves'

Sawaya

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Short, pudgy and balding, Lee J. Sawaya was an unlikely Casanova.

So investigators are puzzled how the middle-aged man with droopy "puppy eyes" allegedly charmed scores of women and bilked them for millions of dollars in phony investment deals.

Detectives unraveling the coast-to-coast caper allege Sawaya spent his adult life as a devious "Prince Charming" who may have swindled as many as 1,000 victims before he was arrested Jan. 11 at a San Francisco restaurant while dining with his wife of three days, a woman he proposed to the day they met.

"He was not that attractive. He was short and overweight, but he had a way about him," said Sawaya's wife, "Sarah," who asked that her real name not be used. The 47-year-old Marin County real estate broker had never married when she met the man introduced as Franklin Rossi and married him Jan. 8 after a whirlwind courtship.

"Some of my friends were absolutely crazy about him," she said. "I had a piano and he would play classical and jazz and anything very well. He was charming, a little rough around the edges, but he...seemed to be sensitive and concerned about people."

Bart Stinson, a Marin County sheriff's detective, said "maybe a dozen agencies want to talk to him, coast to coast," including police in Arizona, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Florida, Louisiana and New York. A warrant is outstanding in Virginia, authorities said.

He is also wanted on federal charges of income tax evasion and wire fraud in New Jersey, where he is charged under the name Anthony Lamonica with defrauding investors out of $2.3 million since 1983.

Authorities in New Jersey say Sawaya duped victims into thinking he could buy cheap casino shares, used their "investments" at the craps table and shared complimentary services granted high-rollers with his investors.

Opening lead: Four of ♠ An innocent overcall by East paved the way for declarer to make a contract that would probably have been defeated otherwise. A lead-directing double at the other table proved as revealing.

North's powerful auction allowed South to judge that his spade control justified bidding slam. He was a little surprised to find that North did not have a singleton spade, but he showed good technique in landing his slam.

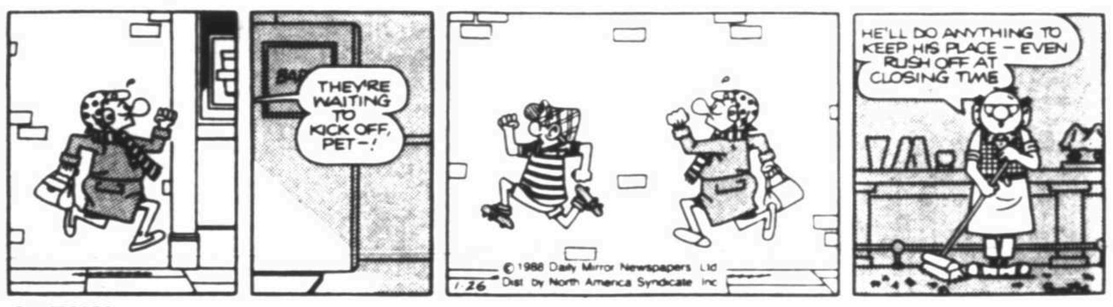

Had there been no interference bidding and assuming a normal red-suit lead, declarer would probably have relied upon two club finesses for his slam, with disastrous results. But since both black-suit kings were marked off-side by the overcall, declarer found a far more appealing line of play. He followed low from dummy and won with the ace. After drawing a trump in hand, declarer cashed the ace-king of hearts and ruffed a heart. He got back to the table with a trump and ruffed the last heart. Now he exited with a spade to the queen. In with the king, East had a choice of losing options—he could either lead a spade and concede a ruff-sluff, allowing declarer to get rid of his club loser, or lead into dummy's club tenace.

At the other table East doubled six diamonds for a club lead, but it helped not a whit. Declarer won the club lead with the ace, drew trumps, cashed the high hearts and ran all his trumps. That produced a three-card ending where declarer held A-2 of spades and a club, and dummy had Q-9 of spades and the queen of clubs. Since East had to keep the guarded king of spades, he was forced down to the bare king of clubs. Declarer tucked him in with the club, forcing a spade lead away from the king into the combined tenace. Declarer lost only a club trick.

Travis takes home music trophies

Travis

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The night belonged to ex-dishwasher Randy Travis, who got four American Music Award trophies, but winners ranging from silky blues artists to heavy metal bands also scored with the public.

The 15th anniversary edition of the presentations shown Monday night on ABC-TV also recognized the talent of Anita Baker, Whitney Houston and Paul Simon, the only other multiple winners with two apiece.

Luther Vandross, Reba McEntire, Janet Jackson, Michael Jackson, the country band Alabama and hard rockers Bon Jovi also were winners, reflecting the contrast in musical tastes of 20,000 people polled nationwide.

"It's just country music. I try to sing 'em with as much emotion as I can," the painfully shy Travis said backstage.

Travis was voted top male country singer, his album "Always and Forever" was picked best country LP, and his single and video "Forever and Ever, Amen," were judged the favorites in those categories.

Miss Baker won favorite female soul-rhythm and blues singer and favorite album in that category for her nearly 2-year-old "Rapture" LP.

Miss Houston did win favorite pop-rock female vocalist and her "I Wanna Dance With Somebody (Who Loves Me)" won favorite single in the same category. Borrowing from the oft-stated phrase by multiple-winner Lionel Richie, she shouted, "This is outrageous," when she won her second trophy. Last year, Miss Houston won seven American Music Awards.

Miss McEntire won the favorite female vocalist in the country category and accepted via a satellite hook-up from a Nashville recording studio. Simon, who didn't attend, won favorite pop male vocalist. His Grammy-winning "Graceland" won favorite pop-rock album.

No-show Michael Jackson, winner of 11 previous American Music Awards, won in the soul rhythm and blues single category for "Bad."

Other winners included Bon Jovi for favorite pop-rock group, Cameo for favorite soul-rhythm and blues group, and Alabama as favorite country group.

For Alabama, it was the group's sixth American Music Award in that category and 11th overall.

Janet Jackson, who like brother Michael also skipped the show, won the combined pop-rock, soul-rhythm and blues favorite video category for "When I Think Of You."

Vandross won for favorite male soul-rhythm and blues male vocalist.

After the competitive awards were handed out, the remaining 18 minutes of the three-hour Shrine Auditorium show was dedicated to the presentation of the Award of Merit, given to the quintessential surf-rock group the Beach Boys.

Letterman

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's "Late Night with David Letterman" will originate from London for four days in May, says host David Letterman.

Last summer, the show originated from Las Vegas, Nev., and the producers made tentative inquiries about going to Cuba, but that idea was scrapped.

Letterman said Monday that England came up because, "We wanted to go to a country where the language was English."

"The show has aired in some form or another in London for a little bit and we thought, well, maybe it would be fun to go over there to do the show," he said.

John

LONDON (AP) — Rock star Elton John will sell part of his art and furniture collections in a multimillion-dollar auction this autumn.

Sotheby's, the auction house, said Monday the collection is expected to bring around $5 million.

"The sale will include 19th and 20th century decorative art, paintings and items of memorabilia, part of an enormous collection Elton has accumulated over the past 20 years," Sotheby's said.

Lord Gowrie, chairman of the auction house, said one reason for the sale was that the 40-year-old singer wants to move from his 10-bedroom mansion near Windsor to a more rural location in southern England.

Reeve

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christopher Reeve, best known for his starring role in "Superman," is taking to the stage in a move he says is risky.

He will co-star with Christine Lahti in Tennessee Williams' "Summer and Smoke," Feb. 19 through April 10 at the Ahmanson Theater. He says he made the decision on the spur of the moment after a production of "Bus Stop" was canceled because its star, Mark Harmon, had to have shoulder surgery.

Although Reeve has extensive stage experience, he's candid about how difficult it can be compared with film.

"(In a movie), you could almost take take somebody off the street and put them in the right part and with careful support you can make them look terrific," he said. "You really can't put them on the stage and make them look terrific. It's more dangerous to go out there and I'm attracted to those stakes."

The Superman role also was risky, he said. "A lot of people were saying 'You wouldn't want to play Superman; you'd be in blue forever.' "

Moore

PASO ROBLES, Calif. (AP) — Colleen Moore, a major star of the silent screen era who epitomized the flapper craze with her trademark bobbed hair, short skirts and movie roles, died Monday of cancer. She was 85.

Miss Moore appeared in about 100 films from 1917 to 1934. At the peak of her career, Miss Moore commanded a million-dollar salary and helped start a fashion craze when she cut her dark hair in a Dutch Boy bob during the Roaring 20s.

Miss Moore also appeared in a half-dozen talkies.

CHICAGO (AP) — Denis Quinlan, 54, a former news editor at the Chicago Tribune who completed his career as a public relations executive, died Sunday. Quinlan was a reporter for City News Bureau and the Chicago Tribune before joining the army for two years in the mid-1950s. He returned to the Tribune in 1958 and worked there as a reporter and then editor until 1963.

After leaving the Tribune, he worked for two public relations firms.

'The Last Emporer' betrayed Japanese

When Japanese moviegoers flocked to theaters last weekend to see "The Last Emperor," Bernardo Bertolucci's grand portrayal of China's last sovereign, they saw a film that is 30 seconds shorter than the version seen elsewhere. What has been cut is footage depicting some of the atrocities committed in China by the Japanese army during World War II.

Shinji Serata, a spokesman for the film's Japanese distributor, said the scenes were taken out because "we wanted to avoid any troubles inside and outside the theater." The distributors presumably believe that Japanese audiences would be insulted by a graphic reminder of their army's less-than-glorious past.

What nonsense. The deletion suggests that Japanese audiences are not intelligent enough, or sufficiently mature, to face what is historical fact. Moreover, it insinuates that the Japanese ought to be protected from dealing forthrightly with a bloody and disgraceful episode in their country's recent history.

The facts are indisputable. When the Imperial Japanese Army entered Nanking, the former capital of China, in 1937, it was allowed, some say encouraged, to run amok. More than 400,000 Chinese men, women, and children were brutally murdered. Butchered would be more accurate. Newsreel footage taken by the Japanese themselves records grisly scenes of captured Chinese soldiers, their arms tied behind them, being bayoneted to death by Japanese troops.

The Rape of Nanking, as the horror has come to be known, was one of the most gruesome events in a war noted for its atrocities. What makes the tragedy even more embarrassing for Japan is the belief among some historians that Emperor Hirohito himself ordered the sacking. It is easy to forget that the shy and retiring marine biologist whom today's generation of Japanese revere as a symbolic emperor was at one time worshiped as divine. Hirohito played that role to the hilt.

The Japanese public has been done a grave disservice. Every nation has appalling episodes in its history that it would just as soon forget. Many Japanese today have no memory of World War II, and those who do are prevented by official censorship from knowing the truth. The future cannot be faced if the shameful past is not confronted and rejected, rather than absorbed with all its poison into the living present.

Stop importing crime

Midland County has more than enough crime without Sheriff Gary Painter importing international crime to our community. According to Sheriff Painter, two of his part-time reserve deputies, based in Austin, obtained information regarding a so-called arms dealer. Sheriff Painter chose to invite this activity to take place in Midland by fabricating information that military parts (barrels of gravel) were located in Midland.

If the information was obtained by officers based in Austin, why wasn't the four-month investigation conducted in Austin at Austin taxpayers' expense? Shouldn't Sheriff Painter's correct response to the Austin information have been to refer it to an appropriate agency that has training, equipment, manpower, and experience to investigate foreign arms dealers? Sheriff Painter could then have used four months of investigative time, paid for the Midland taxpayers, solving burglaries, murder, and any other real crimes committed here.

It is obvious that Sheriff Painter is more concerned with promoting his own political interests than with the needs of Midland citizens. Mr. Fonseca sat in Midland County Jail for over four months, when apparently he had not committed a crime. In the future when Sheriff Painter determines that it is politically expedient for his own self gain, what then is to prevent Sheriff Painter from holding an innocent Midlander in jail who has not committed a crime?

I certainly hope that the latest Midland County Jail building proposal to the voters does not include a television studio for Sheriff Painter because Midland County taxpayers shouldn't have to bear production of "The Futher Adventures of Sheriff Painter" or "The Gary Painter Show" reruns.

Sheriff showed devotion

On Saturday, Jan. 16th, the Midland Reporter-Telegram ran an article entitled, "Iranians arrested allegedly trying to buy missile parts" on page 9, section C. This article was datelined Boston and was about a father and son that attempted to purchase guidance systems for Stinger and Hawk missiles.

I wonder why this article was hidden in the back of the paper where few people would see and read it, rather than being on the front page where it would provide credibility to our fine sheriff. It seems to me that Sheriff Painter was unduly criticized for enforcing the same law when Victor Fonseca was arrested last August.

I realize that in both cases, a federal law was broken and that is the reason Fonseca could not be prosecuted by our district attorney. This does not mean that he was innocent, only that he did not violate any Texas laws.

However, when Gary Painter assumed the office of sheriff, he took an oath to defend, protect and enforce the laws of the United States, as well as the laws of Texas. I am proud of our sheriff and I am glad that he takes his responsibilities seriously. Congratulations Sheriff Painter to you and your fine department for your devotion to duty.

Government unfeeling

In regard to the criticism from a government agency of Jessica McClure's mother, Cissy, doesn't it strike rather like an aged spinster telling her niece, a mother, how children should be raised? It also proves how unfeeling government can be.

Unfortunately, our society is being led to believe that someone is always to blame; there are no "accidents".

A child literally cannot be watched 100% of the time. That is called hovering. The child will not develop normally and his caretaker will be a nervous wreck!

What really needs to be stressed here is the joy of a recovered child and the way your community members gave so much to help. Thanks for your example, Midland, Texas.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 26, the 26th day of 1988. There are 340 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 26, 1802, Congress passed an act calling for a library to be established within the U.S. Capitol. The collection would become a forerunner of the Library of Congress.

On this date:

In 1784, in a letter to his daughter, Benjamin Franklin expressed unhappiness over the choice of the eagle as the symbol of America. Franklin's own preference: the turkey.

In 1837, Michigan became the 26th state with the signing of a statehood bill by President Andrew Jackson.

Billboard industry has 'rough rider'

WASHINGTON — History hasn't left us with the name of the first congressman to attach an obscure rider to an unrelated bill. No doubt his colleagues were piqued — first because he did it, and then because they didn't think of it themselves.

Jack Anderson

A legislative rider is like an ugly baby. It's such a shame until it's your own. And nobody knows riders better than Rep. Jim Howard.

The New Jersey Democrat was the first to trash other lawmakers for sneaking increased highway speeds into a spending bill before Christmas. But Howard was busy at the same time squiring around his own ugly baby — a rider that would benefit the billboard industry, one of his most generous contributors.

Howard pulled no punches when he criticized his colleagues over the rider permitting 65 mph speed limits on some state highways built to high-speed interstate standards. He is a strong supporter of the 55-mph speed limit. "What outrages me is that this major policy change happened in an appropriations bill," Howard huffed to Time magazine.

Howard's outrage is understandable. Advocates of good government often say a spending bill is no place to decide policy issues that deserve plenty of debate and the hot lights of media attention.

Our associate Stewart Harris traced just how far Howard's outrage went. Not far. Howard managed to swallow his outrage long enough to try to attach his own rider to the same appropriations bill, and then to a budget reconciliation bill. The rider, which failed to make it into either bill, would have allowed billboard owners to collect money whenever local governments order them to reduce the size of their signs. As Howard sees it, reducing the size of a billboard is tantamount to taking someone's land, and the billboard companies should get some money out of it.

But Jim Howard and his pro-billboard colleagues on the House Public Works Committee are about the only ones outside the sign industry who think that way. The Transportation Department recently told Howard that current law leaves the question of compensation up to the states.

In a letter to Howard, the new secretary of transportation, Jim Burnley, said that billboard owners are supposed to be compensated when the federal government tears down a sign in the name of the federal Highway Beautification Act. The law does not say anything about what happens when local governments reduce the size of signs based on local laws. Courts have repeatedly upheld Burnley's view.

This is not the first time Howard has pushed a law that benefits billboard barons while ignoring court decisions and advice from the Transportation Department.

After we exposed him in 1986, Howard retracted a proposal that would have paid a North Dakota sign owner for billboards slated for the wrecking ball. The sign owner had waived his right to compensation in exchange for permission to put up the signs. A state court had ruled that the man had no right to compensation, and the U.S. Supreme Court had refused to hear the appeal, letting the ruling stand. That didn't stop Howard from trying to get the man his money through an act of Congress.

Why is Jim Howard so gung ho for the billboard industry? A look at Federal Election Commission records shows that Howard got about 8 percent of his campaign money — $49,225 — from the billboard industry in 1985 and 1986. Close to half of all the people on Howard's list of contributors during that time were connected to the billboard business, the records show.

Howard's staff told us the contributions have nothing to do with his support of the billboard industry.

ARMS FOR POLAND — Would the United States give $30 million in military aid to the communist government of Poland? That's what the fine print said on the State Department's foreign aid wish list.

The fiscal year 1988 list presented to Congress stunned the founder of Solidarity, Lech Walesa. His contact in the United States called us and asked us to find out if this country was really helping to oppress the people he had been supporting.

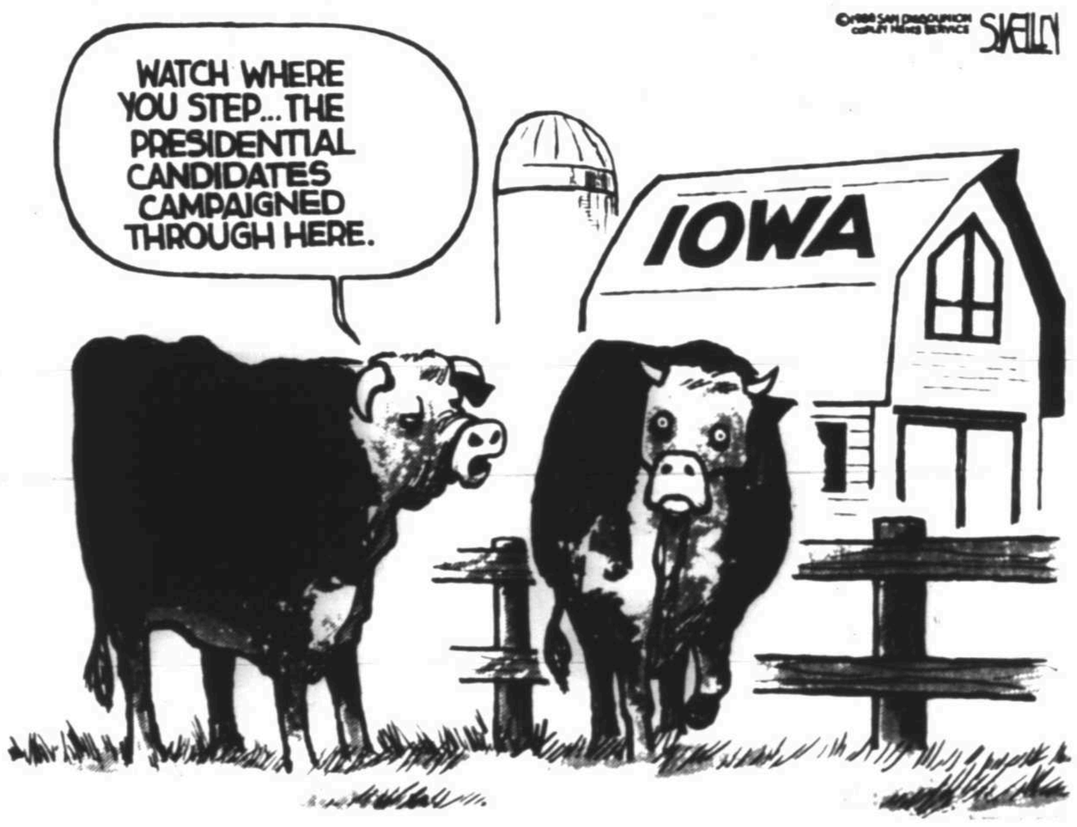

As it turned out, the $30 million in military aid was "strictly and purely a typographical error," according to John Metelsky, a spokesman for the U.S. Agency for International Development, which prepares the foreign and military aid budget requests for the government. The typo was corrected in a revised aid list, and no military funds went to Poland.

"There could be hundreds more of these (errors) in here," said Metelsky, pointing to the 911-page aid document. Officials at AID and the State Department claimed that such mistakes never make it into reality. The only aid finally approved for Poland in the 1988 fiscal year was $3.1 million in food passed to the Polish people through a Catholic relief service.

MINI-EDITORIAL — This advice admittedly comes from Yankees, but it's time for Alabama to take the Confederate flag off its capitol dome in Montgomery. The South lost that war. The flag is a symbol of a bloody, senseless struggle and of a time when blacks were considered property. If it is also a symbol of Southern pride for some, then so be it. But it does not belong on the capitol building, where it daily offends the senses of those who were oppressed even long after the war for their freedom ended. We agree with a recent editorial in the Birmingham News, which said that the best thing to do to end the current flap over the flag is to "take the thing down, put it in a museum and shut up about it."

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Evans and Clark could have tamed 'jungle'

I wish O.P. Evans had lived long enough to have known of controversial "Crazy Joe" Clark, the Patterson, N.J., high school principal who took over an urban school with a reputation for drugs, fights, stabbings and rapings and turned it into a model institution where students now actually are learning something.

Grizzard

O.P. Evans was principal of Newnan, Ga. High School, where I was a student from 1960 until I graduated in 1964.

Mr. Evans, and I cannot refer to him in any other way, was a tall, reed-like man with dark hair, bushy eyebrows, and there was a certain commanding presence about him.

He opened each of his many addresses to the student body by pulling forth an old tattered Bible he had carried since his Army days. It was held together by a rubber band and the Lord's will.

"When I was a child ..." he would begin reading from the Scriptures with his deep, foreboding voice. God must have been quite pleased to hear his messages delivered in such a striking manner.

Mr. Evans did not have as tough a job as Joe Clark has. He principalled in a simpler time. His students, during my enrollment, were all white and mostly middle-class who still feared and respected authority.

But had he ever been confronted with Joe Clark's problems, I think he would have handled them in the same manner as Crazy Joe.

■ Joe Clark carries a baseball bat at Eastside High.

■ Mr. Evans' paddlings were legendary.

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for I have already been paddled by Mr. Evans and nothing could be worse," quoth one who emerged from the paddling chamber, still smarting from the pain.

■ Joe Clark expelled 60 students he referred to as leeches, for having no interest in graduating. Some of these "leeches" were as old as 21.

■ Certain members of the Newnan boys basketball team were involved in the theft of a small amount of fireworks at a roadside restaurant where the team had stopped while returning home after a game.

Mr. Evans kicked each player involved off the team, suspended him from school, and then called in the sheriff. To my knowledge none of the boys involved stole again.

■ Joe Clark chained a firedoor shut to keep drug dealers out of his school.

■ Mr. Evans made a grocery store adjacent to the school grounds off limits because some students were slipping off to the store during the lunch period and buying candy — the sugar which, Mr. Evans said, was responsible for poor nutrition, bad teeth, acne, and a shortening of the attention span.

■ Joe Clark sees girl students in the hallways of his school and advises, "Don't go getting pregnant."

■ Mr. Evans invoked the ruling at Newnan High that male and female students walking the hallways together must maintain a separation of 6 inches at all times.

■ Joe Clark is a hero to the students in his school who want to learn.

■ I know of no man I've ever respected as much as I did O.P. Evans.

Together there would have been no blackboard jungle they could not have tamed.

CHARLEY REESE

Footprints of Great Depression visible today

The 20th century is nearing its end and it's high time. It's become become boringly repetitious.

If ever there were a people in the mostly interesting but not overly encouraging history of mankind, who not only could not learn from their own mistakes but could not even find their own footprints, it is 20th century man.

Charley Reese

I was reminded yet again of this by a little book published in 1931 which a reader was kind enough to send me. It's titled "A Bubble that Broke the World" and it was written by a man named Garet Garrett.

It is a story of the foolishness involving debt and credit that came out of the turn of the century and which resulted in the Great Depression. It could be the story of today for the exact same process is again underway.

In describing the great delusion about credit, the author breaks it down into three parts. You will easily see no one learned anything from the Great Depression just as no one seems to have learned anything from the pacifism and appeasement of the 1930s.

First, is the idea that the panacea for debt is credit. You can certainly see that part of the delusion continues to thrive. All the proposals to eliminate the foreign debt which cannot be paid is to extend the debtors more credit. This, of course, only increases the total debt. If any pundit or professor or wizard of finance knows of any nation which has ever borrowed its way out of debt, please inform me.

There are, of course, no such nations. In the end, the debt when it becomes unpayable is always repudiated or liquidated.

The second part of the delusion is "...a social and political doctrine, now widely accepted, beginning with the premise that people are entitled to certain betterments in life. If they cannot immediately afford them out of their own resources, they are entitled to them neverthless and credit must be provided."

We can all see that this delusion is firmly entrenched. Suggesting someone must lower their standard of living is tantamount to a hostile act. Young people used to begin marriage with few possesions and a little savings. Typically today they begin marriage with lots of possessions, lots of debt, and virtually no savings.

The third part of the delusion is that prosperity is a product of credit whereas for most of man's history people knew perfectly well that prosperity was the product of an increase and exchange of wealth and that credit was a by-product of this.

Garrett writes again in words perfectly applicable to current dogma that the wizards of finance decided that the way to solve international debt problems was to inflate international trade by increased international credit.

Eventually, of course, interest costs become so high the products cannot be sold at a profit and trade collapses. Then everybody decides that if they repudiate the debts and thus free their industry, they can sell cheap and wreck their competitors. But everybody decides this at the same time and raises trade barriers.

It is fashionable to argue that trade barriers caused the Great Depression but in fact, as Garrett writes, trade barriers were and are a reaction to a credit collapse which has already occurred. Common sense tells you this if you think about it. It's when the agriculture has already collapsed, when unemployment has already begun, when industries are already failing, that the political pressure for tariffs builds up. Thus, the trade barriers are a by-product, not a cause of bad times.

The instigators and the only people who make a profit out of these bubbles have, of course, a vested interest in confusing the public. They are the bankers — not your local banker but the big money center banks. They were peddling worthless foreign bonds in the 1920s and they are peddling worthless foreign bonds in the 1980s.

Future voters will have greater chance to voice opinions

EDITOR'S NOTE: In a special 10-part series for the Associated Press, John Diebold, an internationally acknowledged authority in technology and management, predicts the future in letters to his 2-year-old daughter who will be 25 in the year 2010.

By JOHN DIEBOLD

Dear Emma:

Your grandmother, Emma, grew up at a time when women did not have the right to vote. As an adult, you will have much more than the right to vote. Democracy in the U.S. will be more participative than ever.

You will voice opinions on many issues from a computer in your home; this will enable your elected officials in federal, state and local governments to determine public opinion directly, without media interpretation. You will vote on many more laws and referenda than is now possible.

For example, even in other countries, public opinion can be weighed before a U.S. military base is established on foreign soil. But governments won't be the only ones surveying public opinion. What if journalists wee able to survey, quite precisely, what citizens in other countries believed about issues of mutual importance?

I can only imagine what would happen if journalists had such power today, in 1988. Might they ask the people of Central America directly if they supported or resisted their government leaders? And if the majority of the people supported their current regimes, how could our administration justfy the funding of an anti-government resistance movement?

Emma, I can only hope that such technology will bring greater understanding among nations, and lessen the chances of war in your lifetime. If Americans knew that the Soviet people shared many of the same values, and if they could communicate with each other quite simply, I think that the Cold War might end once and for all.

At the same time, though, I suspect that technology will make the job of governing more difficult. Lawmakers will face an increasingly complex job as they try to weigh more and more opinions into their decision-making process.

Too many opinions, too many political constituencies, can block action. In the increasingly complex society of your future world, government will be in a state of transition, trying to seek out new institutions, new forms and structures that fit the new technological and political realities.

Looking to the future
— Part Seven —

Will the bipartisan government be approriate in your day? Will the Constitution be rewritten? I am writing less than a month following the bicentennial year of a document that has served our country well, but it may face the first real impetus for revision in the technolgical age of the future. The Constitution set forth a system of checks and balances, a division of power designed to avert tyranny. But will such safeguards be necessary in an age when every citizen's wishes can be heard directly, through advanced communcations channels?

And how will we balance our newfound ability to give instant opinions on issues, via electronic channels — against the greater need for long, careful contemplation in a highly complex society?

I would anticipate several improvements in the legislative process, including artificial intelligence computers acting as "aides" in Congress. Their ability to sift through mountains of data would offer each policyholder the ability to see the consequences of their choices. For example, a move to increase spending in one area will force cutbacks in other areas — the computer can list an array of options. It could even suggest a course of action!

At the same time, these machines could keep track of already enacted laws, to see if they produced the desired effect. Today, Emma, we have no way of following up on a new law, to make sure its effect matches its intent. And the unintended side effects can be horrendous!

There will be fewer government workers. Computers will reduce the work of paper handling, and many of the more operational aspects of goverment will be farmed out to competitive tender. The private sector will be a powerful ally of government; many of the things we now consider the province of government — housing, education, social services — will be administered by businesses.

Thus, technology will free Congress to concentrate on what your father always believed to be its most important task: setting policy, establishing directions and political priorities — rather than fussing over every operational detail.

Your 21st-century society will be much more global in its outlook. While this is generally a positive trend, international relations will be difficult and complex. Many of our multinational corporations will be intertwined with foreign governments.

Perhaps, Emma, your generation will seize on the new opportunities to become involved, to vote on as many issues as possible. Sadly, my own generation took too little advantage of its right to vote.

New problem found in engine part of shuttle

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA engineers, investigating cracks in a critical shuttle main engine part, discovered an unrelated problem in which two seals were not properly welded together, the space agency disclosed today. The problem may cause further delay in the first post-Challenger flight.

"It is not known to what degree the condition of the seal might limit its acceptability for flight," said Jerry Berg, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Alabama. "All of the high-pressure fuel pumps currently are being examined."

Top NASA officials met Monday to set a flight date but adjourned with word that the decision would come later in the week. David L. Winterhalter, the agency's director of systems engineering and analysis, claimed following an engineering meeting that there were no new problems with the shuttle's propulsion system.

But Berg said the agency was aware on Friday of the cracks in the shuttle's three main engines. Two of the engines were mounted in the shuttle Discovery on Sunday and the third was put on last week.

Berg pinpointed two problems:

— Cracks apparently caused by rocket firing were found in a portion of the engine called a fish-mouth seal. The seal is in the turbine inlet of a high-speed fuel turbo pump and is designed to keep hot gases from escaping.

— While investigating the cracks, engineers found a manufacturing problem. A seam sealed by an electronic beam weld apparently failed to fully join two metal pieces.

"The seal is in the turbine of the fuel pump," said Berg. "It can be replaced but not easily. We are still assessing what options are available there."

Berg also said a flawed weld was found in the aft skirt of the shuttle's solid rocket boosters and ultrasonic inspection has been added to the normal X-ray examination.

"Two of the skirts inspected are showing something unusual in weld areas near the bottom," he said. "It is not yet known what's actually being seen or whether it's a potential problem."

Berg said that there are 30 aft skirts available now for the first post-Challenger flight and six have been inspected.

Evaluation of the engines and other hardware must be completed before a new launch date is established for the shuttle, officials said.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1988 Regional Spelling Bee March 26 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 25. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

chat'ər-boks' chatterbox — (noun) Someone who talks continuously or nonstop is called a "chatterbox." It is a compound word based on the words "chatter" (derived from the middle English word "chatteren") and "box," probably alluding to the "voice box" or larynx, the part of the body which aids the process of speech. The word is not complimentary. A chatterbox likely is not a teacher's favorite student.

Former city engineer Harvey Hansen was appointed this week by the City Council to fill a new administrative position as Streets, Traffic and Engineering director.

Official to study street improvements

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Changes are being planned, but won't be immediately noticeable on Midland streets, said newly appointed Streets, Traffic and Engineering Director Harvey Hansen Monday.

"I wouldn't look for any immediate changes," said Hansen, 39, who has served at city engineer since December 1983.

Improvement in streets and traffic should be noticed within a year, said Hansen, who explained he will have to study each of the three divisions he supervises before he can recommend anything specific.

While Hansen is studying ways to improve the system under its new organization, he said he will continue with street rebuilding projects and plans to improve drainage.

Hansen was selected by the City Council this week at annual salary of $50,000 to fill the administrative position created last summer that divides up responsibilities under the Public Works Department.

Under the new organization becoming effective next Monday, Hansen will oversee 87 employees in the traffic, design and construction and street maintenance divisions with a budget totaling more than $4 million.

Public Works Director Fred Baker will supervise fleet services, building maintenance and the field operations director.

The new organization should improve communication within each department, Hansen said.

"It was really too much for one individual to handle," Hansen said of the old organization grouping all the divisions under Public Works.

With only about $3.6 million remaining in street improvement bonds, Hansen said he will be working with the city street commission to propose a new bond issue of up to $10 million for the next five years.

"There's not enough money to do everything we'd like to do, but we'll do the best we can with what we got to work with," he said.

Hansen said projects he would like funded by future bond money include widening the northwest drainage channel from Maxwell Drive to Haynes Avenue and installing larger box culverts along the channel at Midland Drive, Haynes Avenue and Maxwell Drive.

With no major improvements being made on Wadley Avenue in the last 30 years, Hansen said the street's reconstruction is another project he would like to see completed.

The new director said the main north avenue should be reconstructed with just a nuisance drain down its middle because recently proposed plans to take water off the street faster are not cost effective.

"I think they realize (the public) it's a drainage ditch and will always remain a drainage way," Hansen said.

Hansen added that the inconvenience caused by the flooded street lasts only for a short duration and the million dollars needed to improve drainage could be spent on fixing up other streets.

A study on improving the city's light synchronization program will also be undertaken, he said.

Group's head says alcoholism 'eats' into society

By ED TODD

John Reed

Alcoholism is an insidious disease that often is associated with the skid-row bum. However, it eats much further into society, said John Reed, new executive director of the Midland Council on Alcoholism/Drug Abuse.

"Alcoholism is just like any other disease," said Reed, 60. "It is no respecter of persons or of age, sex, race and background, including educational, economic and social. The rich and famous have the same percentage of alcoholism as does the common laborer."

Reed, who has been "involved in volunteer service in the area of alcoholism" for 12 years, recently was appointed executive director by the council's board of directors.

He indicated that he has developed maturity in his approach to alcoholism and drug abuse much more so than a person who is filled with enthusiasm after his recent conversion to the sober, spiritual life represented in recovery programs.

"You see so many people who get sober, and they want to go out and save the world," Reed said, "but they find out they are not suited for it."

Reed, who has lived in Midland since 1971, had spent 27 years in oilfield equipment sales throughout the Permian Basin and in Venezuela before he retired last year. Prior to that, the Graham native served in the United States Army in World War II and attended North Texas State University in Denton and Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls.

THE ALCOHOLIC IS not pegged by his dress, demeanor or station in life, Reed said.

"One of the popular stereotypes is the skid-row bum lying out in the gutter with an old Army coat over him and an empty bottle of wine in a brown paper bag — the human derelict."

In fact, said Reed, the bottomed-out skid-row bum represents only 3 percent of the alcoholic community.

"The rest of the alcoholic community is a cross-section of society, including the judicial, the high-paid, high-tech professionals, engineers, doctors, lawyers, the clergy, the white-collar and blue-collar workers," Reed said. "Like any other disease, alcoholism doesn't make any distinction."

The council's role is to provide referral, educational and informational services to alcoholics, other drug addicts, problem drinkers, and those whose lives are touched by the alcoholic and other drug addicts. Reed said that between 10 and 15 percent of the population in the United States is "afflicted with the disease of alcoholism or drug addiction."

The council is headquartered in Room 223 of The Permian Corporation Building, 1509 W. Wall Ave., Midland. The telephone number is 682-4721.

"The only way they (alcoholics, problems drinkers and drug addicts) will seek help," Reed said, "is the result of a crisis in their lives."

MANY PEOPLE reach that crisis through the dissolution of a marriage, loss of a job, arrest for driving while intoxicated, misdemeanor or felony offenses committed under the influence of alcohol or other drugs, or confinement to a hospital for drug abuse, Reed said.

Herb Wales, president of the council's board of directors, noted that viewing alcoholism as a moral issue could be fatal.

"When alcoholism is regarded as an illness," he said, "people get well. When it is regarded as a moral issue, people die."

The Midland Council on Alcoholism/Drug Abuse was organized in 1958 "by a couple of concerned doctors," said Wales. "They were concerned about the problem of alcoholism in the community." He described Reed as a "beguiling and incisive" executive director of the Council. "He can be direct and to the point."

Wales noted that 98,000 Americans died "directly of alcoholism" in 1986.

Windowpane area families will be getting city water

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

About 60 Midland families could start receiving city water as soon as July after County Commissioners Monday accepted a plan to lay water pipes in a southside neighborhood.

A bid of $146,836 from Darnell & Dixon of San Angelo was accepted by the commissioners to set lines in a windowpane area bounded by Gist Avenue on the north, Baird Street on the west, Forth Worth Street on the east and Longview Avenue on the south, said Gary Harris, engineer with Parkhill, Smith and Cooper.

A windowpane area is commonly defined as an unannexed pocket of land surrounded by the city limits.

The county will pay for the work through a grant from the Texas Department of Coummunity Affairs, Harris said.

On Feb. 24 the county will apply for another state grant through the Midland Regional Planning Commission to lay sewer lines in the same area, Harris said.

Commissioners Monday also deferred action on forming a Housing Authority Board until liability insurance can be provided to its members.

County Housing Executive Director Jerrie Westmoreland told commissioners she will investigate the cost of insuring the five-member board.

Members have not been chosen yet to fill the board's seats, Ms. Westmoreland said.

The money to pay for insurance would come out of federal housing grant administration allocations, she said.

The county is considering forming a board to directly oversee its housing program.

"The commissioners feel like we've grown since we've been here and we'd like to initiate a board," said Ms. Westmoreland of the housing program that has distributed federal money to aid low income people with rent since 1980.

Odessa sisters sentenced on drug charges

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Two Odessa sisters were sentenced to the federal penitentiary on Monday by U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton for conspiring to deal in the narcotic heroin.

Earlier, on Jan. 15, Bunton sentenced their father, Fred Moreno White, 60, to six years in prison for conspiracy to possess heroin with the intent of distributing the drug. White was the first defendant Bunton had sentenced in Midland under the new Sentencing Reform Act of 1987.

The father and his daughters pleaded guilty to the charges.

Bunton sentenced 29-year-old Sandra White, alias Linda Gonzales, who admitted to being addicted to heroin and selling the narcotic to support her $300-a-day drug habit, to 84 months — seven years — in prison.

Her 31-year-old sister, Suzie White, also known as Jessica White Woods, was meted out a 10-month sentence. She claimed that she was not addicted to heroin, was not in the business of dealing in heroin but was pressured into giving a measure of the drug to an undercover Drug Enforcement Administration agent's "girl friend" who needed the heroin, as she was undergoing the pangs of withdrawal.

Suzie White's attorney, Tom Morgan, said that she was pressured to provide the heroin by her sister and by the undercover DEA agent.

In her plea for mitigation of sentence, Sandra White admitted that she "had a habit" to satisfy but said "I don't believe in stealing."

"I'M VERY SORRY," she said. "I'm very sorry for the people I got involved."

Her attorney, W.H. "Woody" Leverett Jr. of Midland, said there was "no excuse" for Sandra White to deal in dope. He said that Ms. White, who had dropped out of school in the seventh grade, was "not going to find any kind of a job to support a $300-a-day habit."

Leverett noted the influence of her father, a self-employed mechanic who previously had served a prison sentence for dealing in narcotics.

"Mr. White did not set a very good example for his children," Leverett said. "I think there was some of that ('right-and-wrong' morality) lacking."

Leverett highlighted his client's earlier life which led to "the road to ruin. She was selling drugs to support that habit." Nevertheless, he said that Ms. White was a "compassionate individual" who had offered to take much of the blame for dope-dealing as a means to effect a lesser sentence for her sister. "I think it's a commendable quality," Leverett said.

Record spring enrollment expected at MC

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland College officials are expecting a record spring enrollment and encourage students needing financial aid for the Fall 1988 semester to apply now.

Although statistics won't be final until Feb. 2 — the last day of enrollment — MC is expecting a 5 to 6 percent increase over last spring's totals, said Dee Windsor, MC registrar and associate dean of students.

As of Monday, there were 3,345 students enrolled for spring semester classes. That figure is up 124 from similar statistics at this time last year.

Last fall, total semester enrollment at the college was recorded at 3,785.

Mirroring statewide figures, MC enrollment usually is lower in the spring than in the fall because some students tire and don't re-enroll, Windsor said.

About 85 percent of the students are from Midland County. The remainder includes about 40 students from outside the United States, mostly from Canada, Iran and Great Britain.

About 50 percent of the foreign students participate in athletics such as tennis or golf, Windsor said.

An estimated two-thirds of the spring class is expected to attend classes part-time or take less than 12 semester hours of classes, the registrar explained.

Windsor said MC often doesn't attract Midland high school graduates, but those students frequently return to the city for academic or financial reasons.

The average age of an MC student is 28.

There is one dormitory facility at Midland College, which houses both male and female athletes, Windsor said.

The lack of an on-campus student population is one reason why most students shy away from extracurricular activities, he said.

Nearly 800 students last fall — about one-quarter of the expected spring population — already had one collegiate degree or had more than 60 course hours under their belts, Windsor said.

Fall 1987 enrollment percentages generally are reflective of those expected in the spring, he said.

About 40 percent of the students at Midland College participate in financial aid programs, said Bill Burns, director of financial aid.

Lawyer questions Dowler's friends about using chloroform

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The attorney representing a 34-year-old Midland man accused of murder in the June 1987 chloroform poisoning death of Leza Kay Chandler began his defense of David A. Dowler Monday afternoon.

Tom Hirsch called eight witnesses.

In his continuing effort to challenge the state's allegation that Dowler killed Ms. Chandler by administering a fatal dose of chloroform, Hirsch questioned three friends of Dowler who stated he instructed them on how to use chloroform for various reasons but never actually administered it to them.

Tasha Day, a receptionist-secretary for a Midland oil company, stated she purchased chloroform for Dowler and experimented with it at least 10 times out of "curiousity, I suppose."

Showing Ms. Day a bottle of chloroform entered into evidence, Hirsch asked her if she could demonstrate chloroform use for jurors. "Sure," she said.

However, the judge nixed the demonstration, saying, "Let's not use chloroform."

On cross-examination, Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen asked Ms. Day if Dowler had ever told her in 1985 that Lisa Blythe Krieg, who was found dead Aug. 10, 1983, had not died of anorexia, but rather of cyanide poisoning, a fact not know to police until September 1987. She said, yes, Dowler had told her that.

Charles Edward "Charlie" Gibson, who worked for Dowler at his photographic developing business in Midland and said he was a friend, even after being fired for being too outspoken. He said he had an insomnia problem and used chloroform to help overcome it.

Gibson stated Dowler instructed him in its use but never administered it to him or anyone else he ever saw use it in Dowler's presence.

Patrick Carter of Midland said he had known Dowler nine or 10 years, having met him while playing softball in Odessa.

Saying that he had stayed with Dowler and his family for awhile, Carter related that he had arrived at the Dowlers' about 7-or-7:30 p.m. the night of June 27, 1987 and he and Dowler sat around and watched television until Dowler left about 8-or-8:30 p.m.. Carter said Dowler returned about 10 p.m. and there appeared to be nothing unusual about him.

Responding to a question from Hirsch, Carter said he went to sleep on a couch in Dowler's living room and, since he was a light sleeper, it would have been impossible for Dowler to have left the house after 10 p.m.

Carter testified he had used chloroform to help relax back muscles after Dowler instructed him in its use.

He said Dowler had tried to pop his back but couldn't because the muscles were too tight, so Dowler suggested he use the chloroform.

Carter stated he went into a deep sleep for about 10 minutes and woke up with his back relaxed. He also said he had bought chloroform for Dowler.

Attempting to overcome suggestions Ms. Chandler may have died because she fell asleep or became unconscious and left a chloroform-soaked rag over her nose and mouth, Hirsch asked Carter how quickly chloroform evaporates.

Saying he had fallen asleep with a chloroform-saturated rag on his face, Carter stated he was "not adversely affected." He said the chloroform evaporated and the rag was dry in a minute or less.

Dennis Peterson, who operates an Odessa photo service, said he has known Dowler for about three years.

On Feb. 12, 1988, Peterson said, Dowler called him about 11 a.m. and asked him to go over to Tony Cuilin' apartment and wake him up, that he hadn't shown up for work.

Fire clean up

Midland firefighters Ken Whiting and Bill Wiley clean up at the site of a storage shed fire Monday at 1010 N. Loraine St. No injuries were reported in the blaze, which broke out about noon, reports said. The cause of the fire is undetermined, officials said.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

The Problem Isn't How Little We Care. The Problem Is How Little We Do About It.

We think of ourselves as a nation of caring people. And, in principle, it's absolutely true. Most of us contribute money to at least one cause. Nearly half of us contribute time. Confronted with direct appeal, we respond instinctively with help.

The trouble is that, too often, it's not much more than token help. A dollar here, an hour there, and then it's back to the concerns of our own lives. But think about it for a minute. If we all gave just a few hours a week to the cause we care about, it would be like mobilizing a force of more than 20 million full-time volunteers nationwide.

It has to start with somebody and not somebody else. So take a look around your own community and find something that needs doing. Or make that next donation a little bigger than usual. But, whatever you do, do something. After all, one person may not be able to make that much difference. But 200 million people can make all the difference in the world. What you can get back is immeasurable.

The Volunteer Center of Midland has many jobs on file. If the Center doesn't have the perfect job for you, then they'll try to find one. The Vounteer Center has the following jobs available for that special someone, perhaps you.

- Learn some new skills, meet new people, build your resume — while coordiniating volunteer services for a worthwhile agency.
- Gain leadership skills, feel good about helping others, maybe even earn school credit for assisting with health related educational trainings.
- Your clerical skills can be very useful to a very needy community agency. This is the perfect way to use your gifts, talents, and skills!
- Do you want to have some fun and still help with a good cause? Change the world...be a role model and/or mentor for a disadvantaged youngster. If you do, the people you help won't be the only ones who'll feel better.
- Minorities needed to share their culture, language, and skills to the various community agencies. Advocate for human rights, show your patriotism, gain leadership skills, by serving on boards, monitoring the courts, conducting educational trainings for youth and health organizations.
- Cut costs for an agency — share your public relations skills, straighten out the bookkeeping, write columns/articles, and much more!

For more information on how you and/or your group or organization can become involved, give the Volunteer Center a call at 684-5866.

"That doesn't include the many, many indirect deaths, such as (those caused by) drowning, heart attacks, strokes, and fires," Wales said. "Alcohol remains by far the No. 1 killer. We do know that it is one of the major health problems in this country. It ranks with cancer and heart disease. This community needs to be concerned about it."

THE COUNCIL IS "not a temperance league," Wales said.

"We seek to serve those in the community who need help of any nature in this area," he said.

Depending on their perceived problems, those who seek help may be directed to support organizations which offer programs of recovery. They include Alcoholics Anonymous, Narcotics Anonymous, Cocaine Anonymous, Adult Children of Alcoholics, Al-Anon for suffering families and friends of alcoholics, Alateen for teen-age children of alcoholics, co-dependency groups for addictive personalities, and Palmer Drug Abuse Program for young people who seek a recovery program.

"We are not opposed to drinking per se," said Wales. "But we do try to point out the dangers of excessive and abusive drinking of alcohol."

In alluding to the council's referral services, director Tom Sloan noted that "there are some super good organizations in the community that address problems," such as child abuse, rape, marital disputes and suffering of mind, body and spirit.

"Good gracious, that (child abuse) to me is the epitome of horror," Sloan said.

"IN MANY CASES, the direct cause is because of alcohol or drug abuse," he said. "In a lot of other cases, it may be related things," such as people growing up in a dysfunctional-alcoholic family "even though they don't drink."

Sloan said that some people's drug problems may have sprung out of innocence.

"They begin to take Valium (diazepam, a prescription tranquilizer) for a little while..., and the first thing they know, they become addicted to it and become like another addict — only they buy their drugs by prescription instead of off the streets."

Karolyn Hendrix, who also is a council director, said that the increased visibility of recovery programs, such as the spiritual-oriented AA and Al-Anon, offers hope to many, including the often-reclusive female alcoholic.

"The poor old woman alcoholic out there hiding doesn't have to hide," Mrs. Hendrix said. "She can be treated and returned to a normal, functional role in society. She doesn't have to isolate herself anymore."

Mrs. Hendrix said that women are "the biggest abusers of prescription drugs, and they (often) don't even know it. If they are using prescription drugs for the wrong reasons, they are abusing them."

The social stigma attached to the female alcoholic often leads to suicide, Mrs. Hendrix said. "They (women) are isolated," she said. "That's the worst thing they can do."

SISTERS

In the two months since Sandra White was arrested and jailed for dealing in heroin, she has "kicked her habit — at least her physical addiction," Leverett said.

In arguing for his client, Morgan said that Suzie White was not "arrogant or cocky...Her role in this was extremely minor."

MORGAN SAID that his client had fared "pretty dog-gone well" despite the influence of her family. The lawyer said that Suzie White is involved in community service, is a good mother and wife, is a "trustworthy" and "well-rounded individual," and had given the heroin to a woman "out of pity" and pressure from her sister.

"She (Suzie White) has no drug dependency whatsoever," said Morgan, who noted that she "did not profit by this (dope deal) in anyway, shape or form." He said that the married woman, who now is in her fourth month of pregnancy, "has already been punished by the shame she has felt."

In sentencing the sisters, Bunton told Sandra White that she "pretty well blotched your life and some other people's, too.

"I do not understand why people will abuse themselves by getting on heroin," the judge said. "If anybody I (ever) sentenced needed counseling on drugs, you need it."

BUNTON SAID that he could "see some hope" of rehabilitation for the woman. "There may be some hope for you," he said. "I certainly hope so."

He said that Sandra White, who was "the principal one involved" in the drug-dealing episodes, would be serving "a rather lengthy period of time" in prison.

Bunton told Suzie White that she is "different from your sister" but that she still ran afoul of the law.

Her sentence of 10 months is about one-eighth of her sister's 84-month sentence.

Since Suzie White is pregnant and the baby is not due to be born until about June, Bunton said that the woman could wait until Sept. 1 to begin serving her sentence.

UNDER THE NEW federal sentencing guidelines, a defendant must serve the literal time — "real" or "hard" — ordered by the judge, noted Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery.

Parole is no longer allowed in the federal system.

"The sentences appear to be smaller than they were (prior to Nov. 1, when the Sentencing Reform Act took effect)," Beery said, "but you have to multiply that parole factor by three."

Multiplying a sentence under the Sentencing Reform Act by three would yield a comparable sentence under the old guidelines, which allowed parole.

Under those old guidelines, Sandra White would have had to be sentenced to 21 years to serve seven years. Actual time served would be about one-third of the sentencing time.

Though no parole is being offered under the Sentencing Reform Act, a convict may earn up to 54 days of "good time" per year after serving a full year. The cumulative good-time days would be deducted from the sentenced time to compute "hard" or "real" time served in prison.

The Sentencing Reform Act's guidelines are to help make sentences throughout the federal judiciary uniform.

DOWLER

Peterson said Kyle Chandler showed up about the time he got there and they entered the apartment and found Casillas lying face down on the kitchen floor. Chandler went to Casillas, rolled him over, told him (Peterson) to call for an ambulance and began administering cardio pulmonary resuscitation. Chandler told him to call Dowler and tell him what had happened.

Peterson said he couldn't make Dowler understand. He said he kept telling him Casillas was sick. Chandler grabbed the phone, he said, and told Dowler that Casillas was dead and it looked like foul play.

Hirsch also called Dr. Juan Garcia, a psychiatrist who had counseled Chandler for about three weeks in February-March 1987, and Ms. Chandler's father, J.D. Snyder, who has been an ECISD teacher for more than 30 years.

Garcia stated Chandler was depressed because of marital problems and he prescribed an anti-depressant and mood stabilizer.

Asked if Chandler's emotional-mental state might translate into violence to third parties, the psychiatrist said, "not necessarily."

Snyder, when asked if he had been aware his daughter was contemplating the use of chloroform, said no and stated Leza had never been one to use drugs or alcohol.

Questioned about the fact an autopsy showed an alcohol blood level of 0.19, Snyder said he "felt the alcohol was forced on her."

Hirsch called Kerri Middleton and asked her if the statement she gave Odessa police following Ms. Chandler's death indicated she was afraid of Dowler. She said "no," but that there were a lot of things not in her statement.

Previous testimony by Ms. Middleton, as well as police investigators, have indicated she agreed to have meetings with Dowler electronically monitored by police because she was afraid for her life.

Hirsch has contended she was acting under instructions from police in an effort to gain information about the death of Ms. Chandler and, therefore, Dowler's constitutional rights were violated during the audio-video recording of about 9½ hours of conversations.

Indications Monday were that Hirsch could finish the defense case today. Hirsch, Augesen and McCoy will then begin formulating instruction to jurors that will guide their deliberations.

MC

Of that 40 percent, about 17 percent receive funds for tuition, fees and book from the Abell-Hanger Grant program, which guarantees $325 to each Midland or Lee High School graduate who attends Midland College, Burns said.

In addition, the Abell-Hanger Foundation has three other financial aid programs.

Midland's Fasken Foundation also is one of the college's biggest supporters in the tuition area, Burns said.

Most students who opt for loans participate through the federally backed Guaranteed Student Loan program, he said.

Processing of financial aid applications can take anywhere from six to 16 weeks, he added.

Burns said many prospective Fall 1988 students already have begun applying for financial aid.

Those who have not yet started the application process need to begin soon, he said.

The Permian Basin economy has contributed to the four-year statistical enrollment increase the college has seen, both men agreed.

In 1973 — the year MC opened — the college allocated about $55,000 in financial aid for the entire school year, Burns said.

During the 1987-88 school year, that figure should top $1 million, he said.

Burns is hopeful programs like the Abell-Hanger Foundation grants will continue through the coming years.

WATER

The board would make all decisions for the county housing program and report once a year to the county commissioners, she said.

The commissioners also agreed Monday to extend an agreement with the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Under the agreement the county will continue to certify that homes are above the high water mark for an 100-year flood or a storm dumping 6.75 inches during a 24-hour period, said county engineer Bill Harral.

The certification is required for prospective homeowners applying for federal home loans or flood insurance, Harral said.

In other action, commissioners:

— accepted a bid of $12,570 for a one-ton pickup from Roger Ford Sales Inc. for the County Extension Service.

— deferred choosing a long distance telephone service from two contenders, ClayDesta Comminications and MCI Telecommunications Corp.

— authorized the county auditor to advertise for bids for about six cars for a regional drug task force funded by a grant from the state Criminal Justice Division.

— approved of the Midland Central Appraisal District's purchase last year of less than an acre of land and a 10,000-square-foot building to house its new office at 4631 Andrews Highway.

— approved of $1,300 for landscaping around the Culver Youth Home, 3800 Lamesa Road.

Delegates to the Communities Organized for Public Service protest the proposed sales tax increase to fund the $158 million Alamodome, a 65,000 seat domed stadium proposed for San Antonio. COPS leaders said the public monies could be better spent on basic needs.

Organization opposes tax increase to fund $158 million stadium

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A community-based group that has fought for the poor has voted to oppose a proposed $158 million domed stadium because taxes would have to be raised to pay for it.

In a voice vote Sunday, Communities Organized for Public Service gave a resounding "no" to a proposal that would raise the VIA Metropolitan Transit Authority's sales tax by a half-cent to pay for the proposed 65,000-seat Alamodome.

The Rev. Rosendo Urrabazo, one of the five co-chairmen who head COPS, said the organization wants any tax increase to be used for basic services.

"We believe the spending of public funds is a public trust," Urrabazo said. "We are not against taxes when they are used for the public good."

Urrabazo said the city needs to address the problem of housing, jobs and much-needed capital improvements before public funds can be used on the Alamodome.

"The risk should not fall on the backs of our people," Urrabazo, a Catholic priest, told about 1,000 people at the COPS rally.

Mayor Henry Cisneros, the stadium's chief proponent, said he had expected the negative vote.

"I don't know of any other way that this facility can be built but with the sales tax hike," Cisneros said later Sunday.

"I have researched ways to build this facility for six years. What is being proposed is the only configuration that is available," he said. "Delaying or covering old ground won't change that."

The mayor said the tax increase would be about $18.63 a year for a family of three with an income of $10,000.

"That's roughly one 21-piece barrel of Kentucky Fried Chicken with trimmings per year," Cisneros said.

He said the stadium would be built in three years and paid for within five years.

Councilman Frank Wing, who said he supported the sales tax, said the tax-increase proposal has merit.

Island may be returned to park system

BRAZOS ISLAND (AP) — A 216-acre piece of beach that generated controversy when the Texas land commissioner tried to lease it to a developer may be returned to the state's parks system.

Negotiations begin this week to return Brazos Island to the state parks system, but Playa del Rio Inc. apparently will retain a road easement granted by the General Land Office, said Andrew Sansom, coordinator of land acquisition and management for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The piece of beach near the mouth of the Rio Grande became the subject of controversy in 1986 when Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro attempted to lease it to Playa del Rio, which plans to build a 12,500-acre, $8 billion resort development to include areas north and south of Brazos Island.

"We would very much like to take it (Brazos Island) back and manage it on some basis as a park or a preserve," Sansom said.

Sansom described Brazos Island, known locally as part of Boca Chica Beach and actually a peninsula, as "one of the nicest sets of intact sand dunes anywhere."

Environmentalists have fought development of the area, maintaining it is a sensitive wetland and part of a shrinking wildlife habitat in the lower Rio Grande Valley. Others, however, see the ambitious development by the Brownsville-based company as a source of jobs and economic stimulus.

The state Legislature in 1957 proclaimed the area as a state park, and it has been known since then as the Brazos Island State Recreation Area.

A camper sets up his trailer on the Brazos Island State Recreation area near the mouth of the Rio Grande in south Texas. The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is negotiating with the General Land Office to return to the parks system the 216-acre island.

But in 1986, the General Land Office, whose purpose is to earn money from state lands, took the land back. The 1957 transfer to the parks system had been deemed invalid because the parks department never paid the land office for the property, as required by the state.

Then in May 1986, after the land office's plans to lease the Brazos Island area to Playa del Rio brought sharp protests from environmental groups, the company revised its plans, and Mauro offered to return the land to the parks department.

In the process, however, Playa del Rio was granted a 200-foot easement through Brazos Island for a road to connect parts of the planned development, Sansom said.

"We think the easement is potentially damaging to the resources there, but the easement exists," Sansom said.

A Parks and Wildlife staff report said the road would "threaten the integrity of the narrow barrier island system itself."

Parks officials are hoping to lease Brazos Island from the land office and work with Playa del Rio on alternatives to building a road through the park, he said.

"We will take the land subject to the easement, because it's a done deal," Sansom said, adding the department has not decided whether to develop the park or leave it in its natural state.

A.C. Nelson, executive vice president of Playa del Rio, said he would like to see the parks department develop Brazos Island as a full-fledged park.

"It would provide some facilities for the public that they haven't had before," Nelson said. "If they are going to leave it like that (undeveloped), we would hope they would at least put in an education center and some restroom facilities."

Nelson said the company is still seeking U.S. Army Corps of Engineers approval for the Playa del Rio project.

Weslaco resident Cyndy Chapman, a leader in the Frontera Audubon Society and longtime opponent of Playa del Rio, said Brazos Island never should have been taken out of the state parks system.

An undeveloped Brazos Island would serve the public and wildlife better than a developed park, she said.

"The wonderful thing about that park is that it is not developed, but it's utilized and has a lot of wildlife value," Mrs. Chapman said.

Experts to try and halt migration of killer bees

HOUSTON (AP) — The northward spread of the so-called killer bees may reach southern Texas within two years, but officials from the United States and Mexico are working together to try and slow that migration, experts say.

In addition, the bee industry is the "front line" of defense against the killer bees, said Darrell Wenner, a California beekeeper and chairman of the research committee of the American Beekeeping Association.

"This thing is a serious pest, and it does need to be dealt with," he said. Wenner and other bee industry members from around the nation are attending the association's annual convention in Houston.

On Monday, convention participants heard panel discussions about the threat posed by Africanized honey bees, or killer bees, and steps being taken against it.

Under a new program, $1.3 million of U.S. Department of Agriculture funds have been authorized for a number of techniques to slow the movement of the bees northward from southern Mexico, said Ralph Iwamoto, a USDA spokesman.

Among the most significant are attempts to interbreed the aggressive Africanized bees with tamer bees in a bid to dilute them genetically.

The bees, introduced to Brazil from Africa in 1956, have been slowly migrating north ever since. The bees, which visually are hard to distinguish from other honey bees, make less honey and are more aggressive than other bees when disturbed.

Cyclist dies after being shot by angry motorist

DENTON (AP) — A Denton man has died at a Dallas hospital after being struck on the head by a bullet fired by an angry man he didn't even know, authorities say.

Jack Eric Blanchard, 21, died at Methodist Hospital Monday.

Police said Blanchard was shot in the head with a .25-caliber pistol while he and a friend were riding a motorcycle north on I-35 near here early Monday.

Jeffrey Allen Hill, 26, an oilfield worker from Yukon, Okla., was arrested at the Cooke County line. He was held in the Denton County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond following an arraignment on a charge of attempted murder.

The charge will be upgraded to murder today, a Denton police official said.

Jim Anderson, 25, a passenger on the motorcycle, told police someone in a passing van shot at Blanchard and the bullet pierced his helmet.

Police Capt. Bill Cummings said Anderson saw the van pass at a high rate of speed and shortly afterward, Blanchard pulled the motorcycle to the side of the road and fell over.

Anderson said he heard a shot as the van passed. He then noticed blood coming from Blanchard's helmet.

"Dude, you've been shot," a friend quoted Anderson as saying to Blanchard.

"Jack looked at him and said, 'This isn't cool,' " the friend said.

Hill told officers he had been involved in a brawl with a co-worker near Buffalo and was angry as he drove home.

"He had left Buffalo, Texas, mad," Cumming said. "Supposedly he was shooting his gun on the way up on Interstate 45."

"He (Hill) just said he'd been shooting. He didn't say if he had been shooting at anybody," Cummings said. "He says he doesn't even remember shoting inside the city limits of Denton."

Donnah Whitworth, owner of DJL Detail Auto Center, has more than 10 years of experience in car detailing. Donnah and her staff, including daughter Janna (right), will make your car look 'showroom' new, and free pickup and delivery is available by calling 682-8475.

Give your car that 'showroom' look with a complete detail from DJL Detail Center

Get your car in "showroom" shape with a complete detail from DJL Detail Auto Center.

DJL Detail can make your car look like new with a complete detail that includes a wash, wax and buff. Steam clean the engine and treat the tires, plus an interior shampoo and treatment that will remove 99 percent of all stains.

Donnah Whitworth, owner, has more than 10 years of experience in car detailing and she even offers you free pick-up and delivery anywhere in Midland.

"The harsh West Texas weather can make your car look older than it is," Donnah said. "Detailing can make your car look like new and even run better."

Steam cleaning the engine of your car keeps the engine cooler in summer and warmer in winter and in some cases, can improve mileage and reduce noise.

"I recommend steam cleaning twice a year," Donnah advised. "And when we steam clean your engine we treat the hoses with a chemical that will prolong their life by resisting cracking."

Here's what Pam K. Porter, Director of Operations for Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems said about the service she received from DJL Detail, "Customer satisfaction is critical to your particular business, and I congratulate you in having achieved that goal."

If you have kids, or maybe just clumsy guests, riding in your car you know how quickly the upholstery can become stained. Ninety-nine percent of those stains will be removed with a shampoo and treatment from DJL Detail. And to prevent further spills from staining, DJL Detail offers a Scotchguard treatment that has a three-year guarantee on new vehicles and a one-year guarantee on older cars.

DJL Detail uses the latest equipment to assure you get the best-looking shine possible. Panther and ALCO chemicals that are designed to combat the West Texas climate will protect your car from further damage. That includes a wax sealant that protect the color and finish of your car from the West Texas sun. This sealant will keep your car vibrant and smooth for three times as long as other treatments, "and will hold up through 50 car washes," Donnah added. "The manufacturer guarantees it."

Donnah has ten years of experience working with cars that have been damaged by oilfield "crud". "We can remove the grime and sand without hurting the finish," Donnah said.

And if you are thinking about selling or trading in your car, a complete detail can help you get a better price, and increase the value of your car as much as $500.

A complete detail from DJL Detail is only $50 and that price includes steam cleaning the engine, wash, buff and wax, shampoo and treat interior, treat tires, and clean the trunk. Pickups, station wagons and small vans are $65 and full-size vans, Bronchos and larger vehicles are $80.

DJL Detail has gift certificates available, and these would make great Valentine's Day Gifts for that car owner in your life.

DJL Detail, located in the Midkiff Business Center at 1308 S. Midkiff, is open Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. To have your car picked up call 682-8475 and get ready to have your car look "showroom" new!

AAA Septic Service: For all your drainage needs

Don't be embarrassed by a backed up drain or toilet. Call AAA Septic Service and have your septic tanks cleaned before you have an embarrassing mess on your hands.

AAA Septic Service can clean your septic tanks, cesspools, grease traps, sand traps and oil sumps. "We clean anything with non-hazardous waste," said Nickey Grimes, owner.

"These systems are not maintenance free," Nickey reminded. "All these systems should be cleaned regularly before solids get down into the system and a whole new drain field must be dug."

Signs to watch our for include slow drains or gurgling noises. "When these two things start you should call us immediately," Nickey said. "Another sure sign is a bad smell, which means the system is backing up."

Nickey recommends a thorough annual cleaning for a system which serves a family a four. "We have a lot of calls around the holidays," Nickey explained. "A system that needed cleaning is overloaded by holiday guests. Can you think of a worse time to have a backed-up system?"

AAA Septic Service is available 24-hours a day, seven days a week. Nickey guarantees his work and offers competitive prices, which start at $45 for septic tanks and grease traps.

"We are fast and efficient," he pointed out. "We try to be there within an hour of receiving the call." And if AAA Septic drains your tank, they will unstop the lines at no extra charge, if needed.

AAA Septic has been doing business in the Midland area for ten years and is licensed by the Department of Health.

For a free inspection or estimate call 682-7476. And remember, better safe than sorry.

Nickey Grimes, owner of AAA Septic Service, and Bud McVay, service technician, are on duty 24-hour to answer your emergency calls. Cathch those problems ahead of time with a free inspection from AAA Septic. Call 682-7476 for a free inspection or estimate.

City leaders hope to convince ABC to air show set in El Paso

EL PASO (AP) — Business and civic leaders say they plan to begin a letter-writing campaign to persuade ABC to resurrect "Juarez," a police drama set in El Paso that was canceled before the first show was broadcast.

The show, which starred Benjamin Banda as Rosendo Juarez, an El Paso County sheriff's deputy, would have been the first dramatic series on a U.S. network to have a predominantly Hispanic cast. The pilot originally was scheduled to be shown Jan. 16, then was slated for February.

ABC executives told executive producer and director Jeffrey Bloom about the cancellation just three days after they saw the pilot and ordered four more shows. The first two episodes already had been filmed and were being edited in Los Angeles.

"There was definitely some difference of opinion on what the show should look like," Bloom said Monday in a telephone interview. "They started hitting us with, 'Where's the Southwest style?'

"By 'Southwest style,' they're talking about this Beverly Hills conceit of what the Southwest should be. Everybody should have this adobe house with a cactus and white walls and a Navajo rug...They wanted, probably, Santa Fe."

Bloom showed a rough cut of the pilot to leaders of two Hispanic arts organizations, Nosotros and the Hispanic Academy of Media Arts and Sciences. Richard Yniguez, Nosotros president, said he liked the show, as did Ivy Orta, chairwoman of the Hispanic Academy.

Yniguez said the groups will ask their members to write letters to ABC. Leaders of both groups want to meet with executives of ABC and Columbia Pictures Television, which produced the show.

El Paso, an industrial border city of 500,000, bears little resemblence to Santa Fe, a picturesque, art gallery-filled town of about 50,000 high in the Rockies of northern New Mexico.

"El Paso doesn't have that sort of rarified, beautified atmosphere they were looking for," Bloom said. "They wanted more of an upscale look, and there's not much of an upscale look in El Paso."

Robert Knight, director of El Paso's film commission, agreed. "Probably one or two (ABC executives) have been to a party in Santa Fe and think that's what the Southwest is all about," he said.

Luz Taboada, general manager of Cimarron Media Services in El Paso, said she would like to join the Hispanic Academy's campaign, partly because she has a stake in the show. She helped cast some extras.

Ms. Taboada said CBS viewers set a precedent when they wrote enough letters to keep "Designing Women" and "Cagney and Lacey" on the air after the network announced the cancellations of those shows.

ABC spokesman Jim Brochu said the series was shelved because of scheduling changes and creative differences with Bloom. The network still is interested in producing a series with mostly Hispanic characters, he said, adding that ABC might go back to the drawing board with "Juarez."

Bloom and Ms. Taboada said network officials might have been skittish when they watched the show and discovered that about 90 percent of the cast was Hispanic, even though they ordered the show to appeal to the fast-growing minority group.

"If they're worried about selling the advertising time, the Hispanic market is one of the biggest," Ms. Taboada said. "We haven't been wiped off the map as far as I know. We still have to buy cars. We have to eat; we have to go to McDonald's."

Knight said location filming of the series' two episodes contributed about $2 million to the local economy, and that he had been talking to network officials about building a sound stage in El Paso so the show could be filmed entirely in Texas. The shows' indoor scenes were shot in Los Angeles.

Family's business really rocking now

DENTON (AP) — Lewis Jewell doesn't like modern plastic toys that run on batteries.

The native of northern Minnesota grew up playing with handmade wooden trucks and toys that ran on imagination.

So when he decided five years ago to build his grandson a rocking horse, he wanted to make sure it was perfect.

"You go buy toys for kids for Christmas and they're made out of plastic and they run on flashlight batteries and they fall apart by Jan. 15," he said. "Kids never have anything that they can keep and say 'This was mine when I was a child.' That's what I wanted to make. I'm not a woodcarver so I can't make a carrousel. But I didn't want something made out of sticks and plastic."

Jewell, who moved to Double Oak from California two years ago, began looking at various patterns for rocking horses. He couldn't find one he liked so he decided to build his own.

He based his design on an encyclopedia picture of a race horse.

"The hardest part was getting the right curve on the rocker," he said. "It has to balance when it's just sitting there, but it also has to balance when a child gets on it."

His years of engineering at IBM came in handy. After about 100 hours of trial and error, he developed a design he liked.

And he soon found that other people liked it as well.

A neighbor wanted to buy one. Co-workers came by to trace the wood parts so they could build their own.

"We decided if people liked them that well, maybe we could sell them," he said.

So Jewell copyrighted the pattern and instructions and began selling them through a magazine advertisement.

"We printed 4,000 (copies of the pattern) and thought that would last a lifetime," said Jewell, who retired last year after 35 years with IBM.

"We just printed another 12,000 and those are nearly gone. This was going to be my retirement hobby, but it has put me to work. I even had to buy a computer to keep up with it all."

With the help of his son, Russell, Jewell made several models of the horse to place in various craft stores to help advertise the horse.

But it wasn't until about two years ago when the horse was featured on the cover of a children's furniture book that Jewell really began making money from the project.

"That gave us national recognition," he said. "It had been an expensive hobby, but after that it started to pay me."

It was about that time that the Jewells decided to begin marketing the pattern. Jewell's wife, Phyllis, went to the library and found the names of dealers to whom she sent pictures, a sample set of plans and prices.

"I never was a marketeer," Jewell said. "I couldn't sell coffee to Eskimos, but she's been my chief critic and marketing manager."

The horses are now featured in 120 stores nationwide and in five craft catalogs. The design has been listed as the best-selling rocking horse pattern in the United States by the craft magazine Shopsmith.

"It seems to appeal to both woodworkers and to kids," Jewell said. "Grandfathers like to build something they can be proud of and something the kids will like. That's what it all comes from."

And Jewell finds a sense of personal satisfaction in the success of the model horse pattern.

"In a big company, you always work as a task force and four or five people work together and when you're finished, each person feels like they've done it.

"You could never say, 'This is mine.' But with this, I design it. I print it."

Lewis Jewel, right, his son Russell, center, and grandson, Christopher, create rocking horses in their workshop in Denton. What started out as a hobby has now become a small industry for the Jewells.

STATE IN BRIEF

MHMR board extends period for commissioner applications

AUSTIN (AP) — The search for a new state commissioner of mental health and mental retardation is taking longer than scheduled because so few people have applied for the job.

Nineteen people, including four physicians, have applied to head the largest public agency in Texas, according to a list compiled by the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

One of the applicants is a woman, Jan Ducker, 59, of Sunapee, N.H., executive director of Northeast Alcohol and Drug Services, a private company that operates two hospitals and three outpatient clinics in New England.

The MHMR board decided last week to extend the application period until the end of February rather than closing it on Jan. 31, as planned, said Board Chairman Roger Bateman.

The job will become available March 31, when Commissioner Garry Miller is scheduled to resign from the post he has held for six years.

Bateman said the board decided to extend the application period, "because we want to make sure there's a broad group" of applicants. "We thought there'd be a lot more applicants, but they just haven't come in."

The commissioner's job pays $72,612 a year for a nonphysician and up to $100,000 a year for a physician.

Defendant flees before verdict

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A defendant on trial for the strangulation death of a teen-ager left a Bexar County court to go to the restroom and never returned to hear the jury's verdict in the case, officials said.

Authorities were searching late Monday for Pernell Dale Bratcher, 22, who was found guilty of the murder of Debora Sue Cotton.

"I told him I'd see him after lunch and when I came back he was here," said Douglas Daniel, Bratcher's court-appointed attorney.

Daniel said he left the courtroom to tend to some other business in the courthouse and Bratcher was missing when he returned.

Bratcher, who was free on $25,000 bond, was convicted of the May 7 strangulation of Miss Cotton, 19. Her body was found stuffed in an empty Christmas tree box that was dumped in a field.

District Judge James Barlow said Batcher will be sentenced today. The conviction carries a maximum life in prison sentence.

Auto rate increase re-calculated

AUSTIN (AP) — The staff of the State Board of Insurance has recommended an increase totaling $68 million, or 2 percent on average statewide, in automobile insurance rates.

The recommendation has been re-calculated since Friday, when the staff said the percentage increase was 3.1 percent, according to board spokesman Lee Jones. The discrepancy was caused by "a glitch in the computer program," Jones said.

The board has scheduled a Thursday public hearing on the rates.

The insurance industry plans to release its rate recommendation on Wednesday, said Rick Gentry of the Insurance Information Institute.

Last year, the board approved a 9.8 percent average increase in automobile insurance rates. The increase followed two years of board-ordered rate decreases and brought premiums back to 1984 levels.

Auto insurance rates vary across the state. Separate rates are set for 66 territories by the board, and many companies are granted permission to charge lower rates than those set by the board.

Mattox calls ATVs 'dangerous'

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox, one of 10 state attorneys general to issue a safety report on all-terrain vehicles, says the vehicles are among the most dangerous products sold.

"In the past five years alone, over 900 people have died and 330,000 people have been injured in ATV-related accidents," Mattox said.

The attorneys general called on Monday for tougher prohibitions on all-terrain vehicles, saying an agreement between the federal government and manufacturers fails to adequately protect young riders.

Mattox agreed. "Stronger action than is proposed in the decree has been taken by the federal government following far fewer deaths associated with the use of other consumer products," he said.

Lawmaker to visit Central America

AUSTIN (AP) — State Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, will represent the Mexican American Legislative Caucus as a member of a fact-finding delegation to Central America.

Cavazos will visit Nicaragua and Costa Rica from Wednesday through Monday.

He said in a statement the six-member delegation will gather data on United States policy in Central America and the impact of that policy on the Central America peace plan.

Suspect freed from TDC two days before slaying

FORT WORTH (AP) — A man who had been released from prison two days before an accountant was slain has been charged with capital murder in the rape-strangulation slaying.

Ricky Joseph Martin, 21, of suburban Haltom City, was charged with capital murder Monday in connection with the Jan. 16 slaying of Deborah Leugemors, 34, whose body was found Jan. 17 in an office complex where she had been working late.

Martin was ordered held in the Tarrant County Jail without bond following an arraignment.

Fort Worth homicide Lt. Tommy Swan said Martin gave investigators a statement Sunday, but Swan declined to discuss the statement.

Leugemors was reported missing Jan. 17, when she failed to return home from working overtime at her office the night before.

Her car, which had been set afire, was discovered about 9:30 p.m. the night of the slaying by police in Haltom City, but Fort Worth police investigators did not learn of the car's discovery until the following Monday.

Martin was arrested at his parents' home, only four blocks from the parking lot where the burning car was found.

Records at the Texas Department of Corrections show Martin was released from prison Jan. 14 after serving six months on a three-year burglary conviction. A TDC spokesman said an additional 14 months he served in the Tarrant County Jail waiting for his case to come to trial were applied to his sentence.

Police said Martin might have been planning to burglarize the office building when he was surprised by Leugemors.

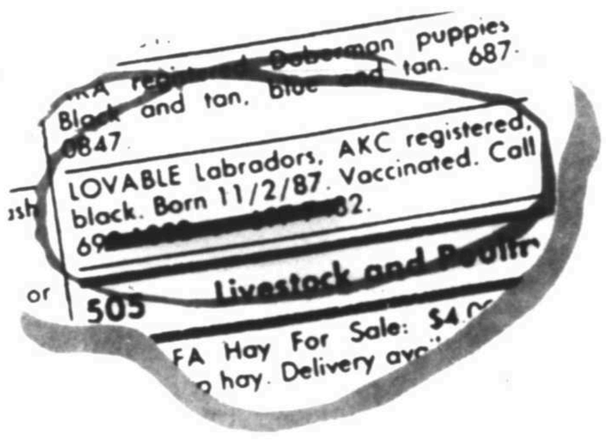

"We believe the murder was a crime of opportunity, that he took his chance when he found the victim alone there," Swan said.

Leugemors was sexually assaulted and strangled with a thin cord or belt, according to an autopsy report.

The victim's husband said his wife was working late on the night of Jan. 16 when he last talked to her. He said that as they finished the conversation, he heard her say "hey" or "hello" as if she had seen someone in her office.

Martin was arraigned Monday on a capital murder charge and ordered held in the Tarrant County Jail without bond, Swan said.

Denver develops tunnel vision; Washington 'loose'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Washington Redskins and Denver Broncos are heading for the same objective from different directions. Losing a Super Bowl can do that.

Last year's Super Bowl loss dominates the Broncos' thoughts, words and approach. Just hours after they arrived here, they were vowing this NFL championship game would have a more successful ending.

"The feeling of last year's loss stuck in all our craws," quarterback John Elway said. "That's the last thing we want to feel again. Nobody has to bring it up. We all remember what it was like in that locker room."

So the Broncos have developed a tunnel vision toward this year's Super Bowl.

"We're all business this time," defensive end Rulon Jones said. "We need a good focus on the way we play football and what we have to do on the field Sunday. Nothing else."

THE REDSKINS, who lost in their last Super Bowl appearance in 1984, aren't so single-minded.

"We're pretty relaxed and loose and excited to be here," said offensive tackle Joe Jacoby, one of 18 Redskins to make it this far before. "We're keeping it all in perspective, but we're trying to enjoy it, soak it all in. You just got to enjoy it but get the job done.

"It's another game to win and go out big time."

For the Redskins to have a big time Sunday, they're willing to observe a curfew — something Coach Joe Gibbs did not institute when Washington won the 1983 Super Bowl and lost in '84. But they won't ignore the festivities around them, just as they couldn't ignore a moderate earthquake that shook the area Monday morning.

"That's a strange way to get started," defensive end Dexter Manley said of the earthquake. "But that's what you get in Super Bowl week.

"The memory of what happens in this game lasts forever. Our job is to have fun and produce."

The Broncos seem to have eliminated the enjoyment in their approach. Hours after their arrival, they spoke of how they will handle this week.

"Last year, we made it like a once-in-a-lifetime thing, like it might never happen again," Jones said. "You don't see any of us carrying around video cameras this time."

"We will win the football game, whatever it takes," linebacker Ricky Hunley insisted. "There will be no celebrations until then. We don't want to carry around the feeling for two years of what it would be like to win a championship.

"I think most of the guys were caught in the festivities last year. We weren't as confident going in. This year, we expect to win. We are destined to win."

The experience of losing the NFL's ultimate game apparently will dominate both teams' thoughts. That might not be such a bad thing.

"After we lost to the Raiders in '84, I was on the flight to the Pro Bowl with some of them," Jacoby said. "It leaves a really bad taste in your mouth. It's something you want to forget but you're better off if you remember how bad it was, how much you hated it.

"I don't want us to be that other team, the one who loses the Super Bowl and everyone forgets about you."

THE BRONCOS felt like a forgotten team after being routed by the New York Giants. It hurt.

"Losing the Super Bowl gave us more resolve to get back," Vance Johnson said. Johnson is one of the Three Amigos who will try to dominate Washington's fine secondary the way his two partners — Ricky Nattiel and Mark Jackson — overmatched Cleveland's excellent defensive backs in the AFC title game. Johnson missed that game with a ruptured artery in his groin that makes him questionable for Sunday.

"I think to make it back, to go to the Super Bowl two years in a row, you have to be real good and real lucky. And you have to have the right approach.

"It's always been for Vance that the power of suggestion works."

What is he suggesting will work this week?

"I want to go on a positive note," he said. "Nothing but positive thoughts."

Chaparrals bust 100-point barrier

Henry, Jones ignite FPC rout

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

After last week's turmoil, this was a get-well game for the Midland College Chaparrals as Coach Reggie Franklin made some adjustments and gave some new people greater responsibility.

The only trouble was that MC looked so robust in defeating Frank Phillips College, 103-72, at the Chap Center Monday night, it seemed a shame the opposition wasn't more formidable.

It was a 8-8 four minutes into the game and 34-15 with nine minutes left in the half.

By midway in the second half, MC, on its way to win No. 16 in 21 games, led 76-49 and was so in control, the game had turned into a clinic.

"FRANK Phillips is an outside (shooting) oriented team," explained Franklin, "and that helped us out a lot."

Carlos Harris wound up with 35 points for the night to lead FPC and the Chaps in scoring, but "he was 5 for 16 in the first half."

Harris, a 5-10 sophomore guard from Chicago, was much better in the second half, hitting 7 of 9 from the field as he scored 21 points, but the outcome had long since been settled.

Franklin was especially pleased with the play of 6-5 Clifton Jones, Texas City LaMarque sophomore, and Sydney Rice, his 6-10 freshman from Houston Madison.

"They both played great games," Franklin praised.

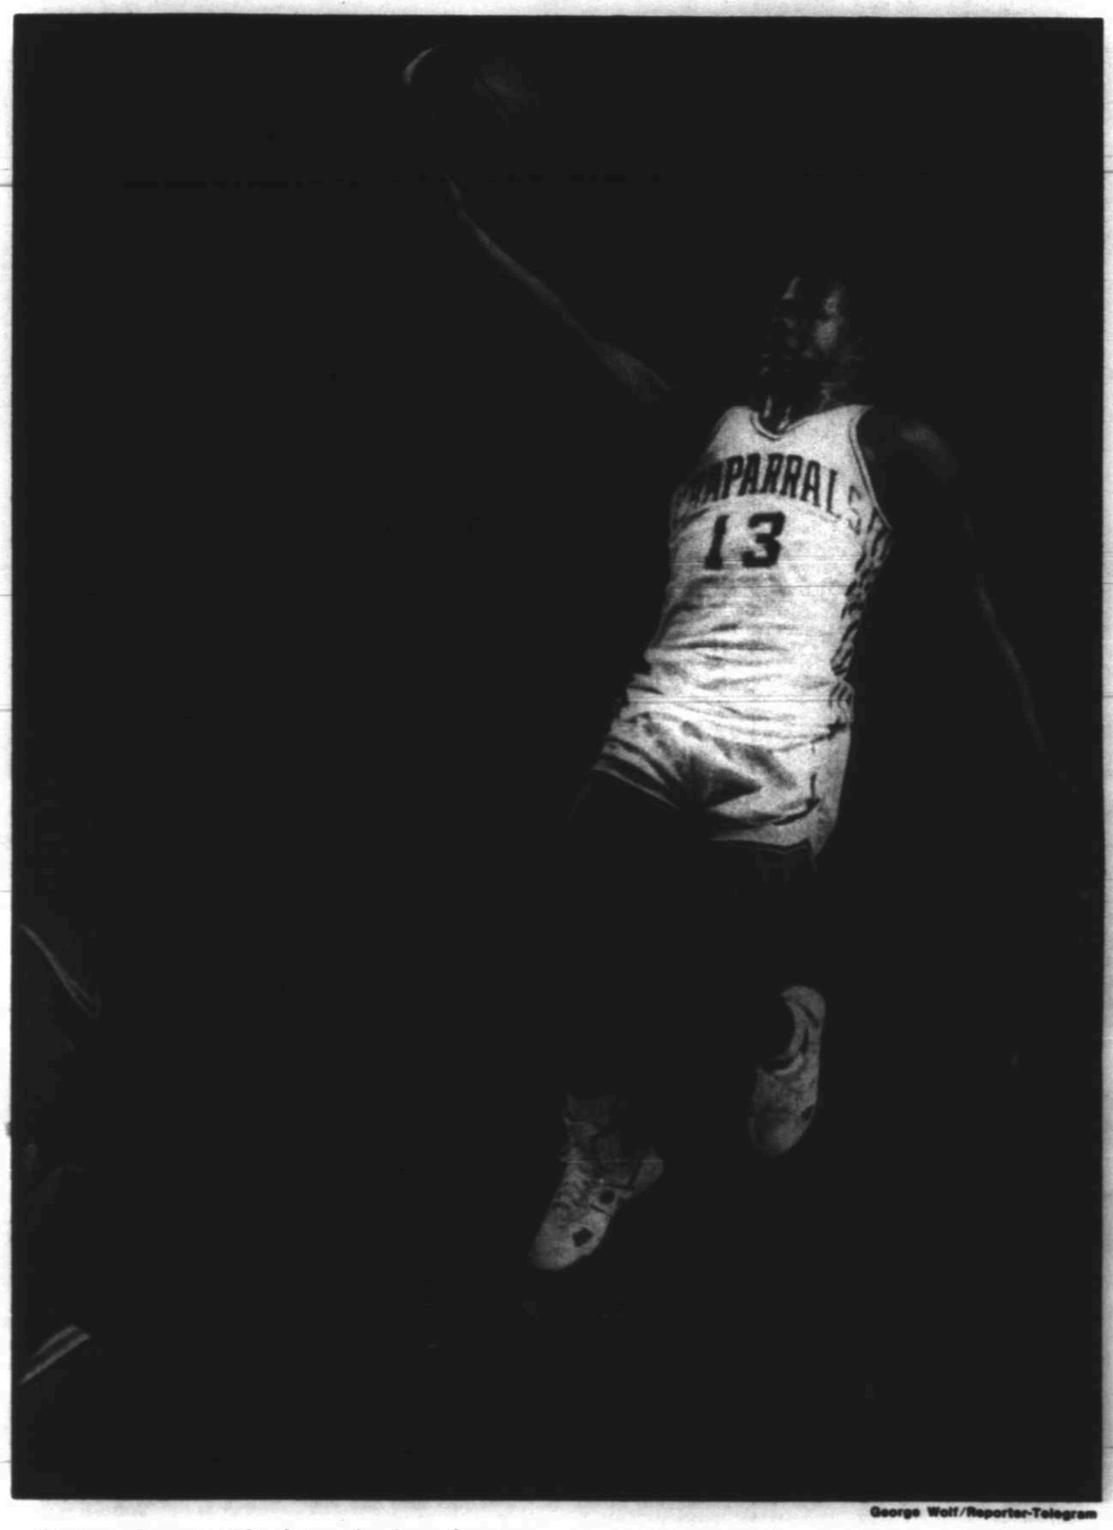

Jones led the Chaps with 22 points, sinking 10 of 11 shots from the floor. Rice had 11 points in helping Midland dominate inside.

THE GUY who got Midland off to a flying start, however, was 6-7 Herman Henry. A week ago in a win over Western Texas College, he missed his first seven shots of the game before windup up with 23. Monday against FPC, he was 6 for his first 6 and the first three shots were three-point goals.

Henry wound up with 21 points for the night, going without a field goal in the second half, but converting all six free throw attempts.

"Henry played a great game tonight. I think it was his best game for us since he has been here," Franklin commented.

Cowboys pay Walker double his teammates

DALLAS (AP) — Running back Herschel Walker will make more than twice as much as any other member of the Dallas Cowboys in 1988 with total compensation of $1.8 million, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

The next highest would be quarterback Danny White, at $775,000 if he starts eight games, the newspaper said.

The salary figures, obtained from sources close to the team and in part from the NFL Players Association salary survey, show Walker, entering the third year of a five-year, $5 million guaranteed contract, will have a base salary of $800,000 and collect the final installment of his $1.4 million signing bonus.

Walker, who signed Aug. 13, 1986, after the rival USFL folded, has base salaries of $400,000, $500,000, $800,000, $900,000 and $1 million in addition to the $1.4 million signing bonus.

The Heisman Trophy winner from Georgia also received $400,000 of the bonus in 1987 and will get the final $1 million in 1988. Last season, Walker stayed on strike with the majority of his teammates and lost $125,000, or 25 percent of his $500,000 base salary.

White, who broke his right wrist in the ninth game of the 1986 season, signed an unusual contract last season protecting the team against his recurring physical ailments.

His base salary of $725,000 remained intact as long as he started eight games; he started nine in 1987. Had White, 36, started fewer than eight games, part of his base would have been prorated at a base of $500,000.

White has the same type deal in 1988 and 1989. He will make $775,000 if he starts eight times in 1988 and $852,000 if he starts eight times in 1989.

Part of his salary will be prorated at a base $250,000 lower if he doesn't start eight. Steve Pelluer is considered the favorite to start for the Cowboys next season.

Randy White ($550,000), Tony Dorsett ($500,000) and Everson Walls ($500,000) follow Walker and Danny White as the Cowboys' highest-paid players in 1988.

Dorsett may be making his money from another team, with coach Tom Landry saying he will try to honor Dorsett's trade request. In addition, the final $2.4 million of Dorsett $6 million annuity will be funded over the next two seasons.

Free safety Michael Downs, backup middle linebacker Steve DeOssie, No. 3 quarterback Paul McDonald and guard Kurt Petersen, who has missed the last two years with knee problems, are the only Cowboys without contracts. They will become free agents Feb. 1.

Strong safety Bill Bates is among several Cowboys who accepted the team's offer to pay up to $3,500 for a certified financial planner to work on investments.

Players have the right to pick the planner from a list the team provides.

Question time for local cagers

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

Midland High and Midland Lee are headed in opposite directions in the District 4-5A basketball race, but both teams have to answer some burning questions tonight as loop play resumes.

The Bulldogs of MHS have dropped three games in a row since opening the district season with back-to-back victories. At 8 p.m. today at Chaparral Center, the Bulldogs take on Abilene Cooper, a team that is winless in the district race.

If the Bulldogs expect to turn the tide from this rough stretch of road, MHS must win tonight or the Pack's basketball party is all but over for 1988.

AGAINST COOPER, the Bulldogs will show just how far the team has fallen. Is it that far or can the losing turn into winning against a team MHS should beat?

"We've made it pretty tough on ourselves in the district race," MHS coach Jack Stephenson said of the three straight losses. "We've got to get this thing turned around before we face Cooper."

On the other hand, Lee has won three straight games, heading into tonight's road game with second place Abilene High. This is a game that features two teams with winning streaks in the league.

AHS has reeled off four consecutive victories since an opening night loss to Odessa Permian and can share the first half leadership with 5-1 Odessa High with a win over the Rebels.

Lee, 3-2 after the winning streak, can be taken seriously with a win over AHS by moving into a second place tie with the Eagles. Can the Rebels beat one of the major contenders on the road? That is the question the Rebels must answer positively tonight.

"We hadn't beaten Permian in their home gym since 1982 and we went over there and did that this year," said Lee coach Paul Stuechler. "Now we have to go to Abilene High and that's always a tough road trip. We just have to go down there and see what happens. There is no doubt that it would be a big win for us."

San Angelo, a team picked to finish third overall in the district, is off to a rugged 2-3 loop record after losing to Lee Friday. The Bobcats will host 2-3 Permian tonight while OHS takes the night off.

THE 4-5A girls race continues today also with 7-0 San Angelo and 6-1 Abilene Cooper holding all the early aces. Midland Lee, at 4-3, is the only threat to upset one of those carts.

The Lee girls will host 3-4 Abilene High in an 8 p.m. game at the Lee gym and the Lady Rebels can just about forget any playoff ideas with a loss here.

Lee coach Shirley Stephenson put it best, "We're to the point where we have to win the rest of our games and we may still need a San Angelo win over Cooper and playoff victory against Cooper to get into the playoffs."

Lee would like a little help from Midland High's Lady Bulldogs, who face Cooper in Abilene. But these two teams have opposite records since MHS stands at 1-6 with the most youthful team in the league.

"It's been a tough season for us," said MHS coach Jane Young of her defending champion basketball team. "We are very young and, hopefully, we are learning a few things every time out. We just have to look at it as a building year."

The Lady Bulldogs, however, seem to have taken a step backward in the "improving" quest. MHS opened district play with their only victory over Odessa High, but lost to the Lady Broncbos Friday in the second meeting. Now they face one of the league biggies on the road. It's a tough challenge.

San Angelo travels to 1-5 Permian in the other girls game and the Lady Bobcats appear to headed for an 8-0 district mark.

'Ironhead' Heyward to leave Pitt for NFL

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Opposing coaches say tackle-sized Pitt tailback Craig "Ironhead" Heyward should be playing in the pros rather than in college. Apparently, Heyward agrees.

Heyward, a junior All-American running back who ran for 1,655 yards last season, said Monday he will pass up his senior season at the University of Pittsburgh and petition the NFL to include him in a supplemental draft.

The 6-foot, 280-pound Heyward — football's biggest running back and also one of its most productive — can't be selected in the regular National Football League draft in April because he has college eligibility remaining and hasn't graduated.

Heyward was the only junior to finish in the top five in the Heisman Trophy balloting last season and would have been a frontrunner for the 1988 award.

"I plan to petition the NFL," Heyward said. "As of now, I'm considering myself for the NFL. I think that's the goal of each guy in high school who performs very well and goes to college and performs very well."

Heyward, who gained more yardage the more he gained weight, is one of only eight NCAA Division I backs to gain at least 100 yards in every game his team played in a season. Heyward was the nation's second-leading rusher last fall.

Heyward fueled speculation he would turn pro when he failed to begin second-semester classes Jan. 6. Then, it was reported last weekend he flew to Washington, D.C., to meet with Bruce Allen, although Heyward has denied signing with the Phoenix-based sports agent.

The second-leading rusher in Pitt history, Heyward announced he would turn pro Monday night, shortly after Coach Mike Gottfried tried to talk him into staying in school.

Only minutes after Gottfried held a news conference to accuse agents such as Allen of being "vultures, leeches and bloodsuckers" who prey upon immature college athletes, Heyward went on television to announce his decision.

"He tried to persuade me to come back and to finish the educational part of it and I had my mind made up I wanted to turn pro and he had a somewhat hesitant reaction to it," Heyward said.

Heyward said Gottfried's insinuation he had under-the-table dealings with agents in apparent violation of NCAA rules and a well-publicized arrest by campus police prompted his decision to leave Pitt.

"It all boiled down that I've had enough of Pittsburgh and it's time for me to move on," Heyward said. "My reasons for doing that are being a father (of 2½-year-old Craig Jr.) and coming from a family of eight — you know, a low-income family — so I think the decision I'm going to make is the decision for me," he told WPXI-TV.

Utah's Green hits 3-pointer to add to trivia logbook

Associated Press

It's trivia time.

Who broke Bob McAdoo's scoring record at Vincennes, Ind., Junior College?

Who was runner-up to UCLA's Marques Johnson in The Associated Press Player of the Year voting?

Who holds the career assist record for the Utah Jazz, more than double that of Pete Maravich?

Who scored the 5-millionth point in NBA history?

If you answered Rickey Green to any of the above, you were right on all of them.

Green hit a 3-point shot at the buzzer to end the third quarter Monday night, giving the Jazz a 92-67 lead and the NBA its 5,000,001st point since the league began play in 1946. Utah went on to defeat the Cleveland Cavaliers 119-96.

"I'm happy that a veteran player got it and that it was a good shot. It's another record the Jazz have that can't be broken," Utah Coach Frank Layden said.

It was only the third 3-pointer for Green, playing in his 10th NBA season, this year and his only field goal of the night. He finished with six points, the other three coming on free throws.

"I'm very happy for Rickey," teammate Marc Iavaroni said. "Yesterday I thought, wouldn't it be neat to score the five-millionth point. Now we're all on the team that scored it, something to look back on and tell all my grand-kids."

The landmark field goal ended the countdown monitored by the NBA through radio hookups to the Cavs-Jazz game in Salt Lake City and the Milwaukee Bucks contest at the Golden State Warriors, which were being played simultaneously. Green's basket came as the Bucks and Warriros were in a late first-quarter timeout.

Before the fourth period began, there was a ceremony for the sellout crowd of 12,212 at the Salt Palace and Green autographed the ball, which will go to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Jazz 119, Cavaliers 96

Karl Malone paced the Jazz with 36 points, while John Stockton, who took over Green's starting role this season, had 20 points and 13 assists. Leading 52-51 at halftime, Malone and Stockton scored 10 points apiece as Utah outscored the Cavalaiers 29-7 in the opening 9:36 of the third quarter. Utah outscored Cleveland 40-16 in the third period.

"We came out in the third quarter and were able to do some good things, and we got our transition game going," Layden said. "Any time you hold a team under 50 points in a half, you have a good chance of winning."

Bucks 108, Warriors 105

Milwaukee scored the final seven points of the game to come from behind and defeat Golden State. Paul Pressey gave the Bucks the lead with 26 seconds remaining on a driving layup. After Sidney Moncrief hit two free throws for Milwaukee, the Warriors threw away the inbounds pass to assure the Bucks' victory, which broke a three-game losing streak, their longest of the season.

The Warriors led 105-101 with 59 seconds left. But Terry Cummings hit a 20-foot jumper and Jack Sikma added a free throw, setting the stage for Pressey's go-ahead basket.

Bullets 118, 76ers 117 OT

Moses Malone scored 26 points and Bernard King had 22 as the Washington Bullets won their seventh straight home game since Wes Unseld was named coach and their third in the past week over Philadelphia.

"Considering we haven't had a close game in a while, considering we have had blowouts, it's always good to see how a team is going to respond," King said. "You need the experience, being put in the position where the team can get the confidence that it can win in a tough situation. ... It was a great confidence builder."

After Gerald Henderson hit a 3-pointer for a 114-113 Philadelphia lead, Moses Malone scored on a dunk with 23 seconds to play in the extra period. King grabbed a rebound of Mike Gminski's missed shot, was fouled and made two free throws. Malone added another free throw with 10 seconds left to give Washington a 118-114 lead before Henderson hit his second 3-pointer of the overtime period.

Washington has now won eight of 10 games under Unseld, who took over for Kevin Loughery earlier this month.

Charles Barkley had 37 points, including 14 of the 76ers' final 16 points in regulation, and 15 rebounds.

Bellard lands high school job

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Texas A&M and Mississippi State football coach Emory Bellard was named head coach at Westfield High School.

Bellard, who replaces Ron Anders, returns to coaching after leaving Mississippi State two years ago. In six and half seasons at Texas A&M, Bellard guided the Aggies to a 48-27 record, including 10-2 campaigns in both 1975 and 1976.

A former president of the Texas High School Coaches Association, Bellard spent 15 years coaching in Texas high schools and compiled a 139-35-4 record at Ingleside, Breckenridge and San Angelo Central.

His 1958 Breckenridge team won the state title by beating Kingsville 42-14 in the finals and then shared the 1959 crown after a 20-20 tie with Cleburne.

He has been living in Kingwood since leaving Mississippi State.

Bellard will assume his duties at Westfield on Feb. 1. The Spring Independent School District school is in Class 5A and had a 2-8 record last season.

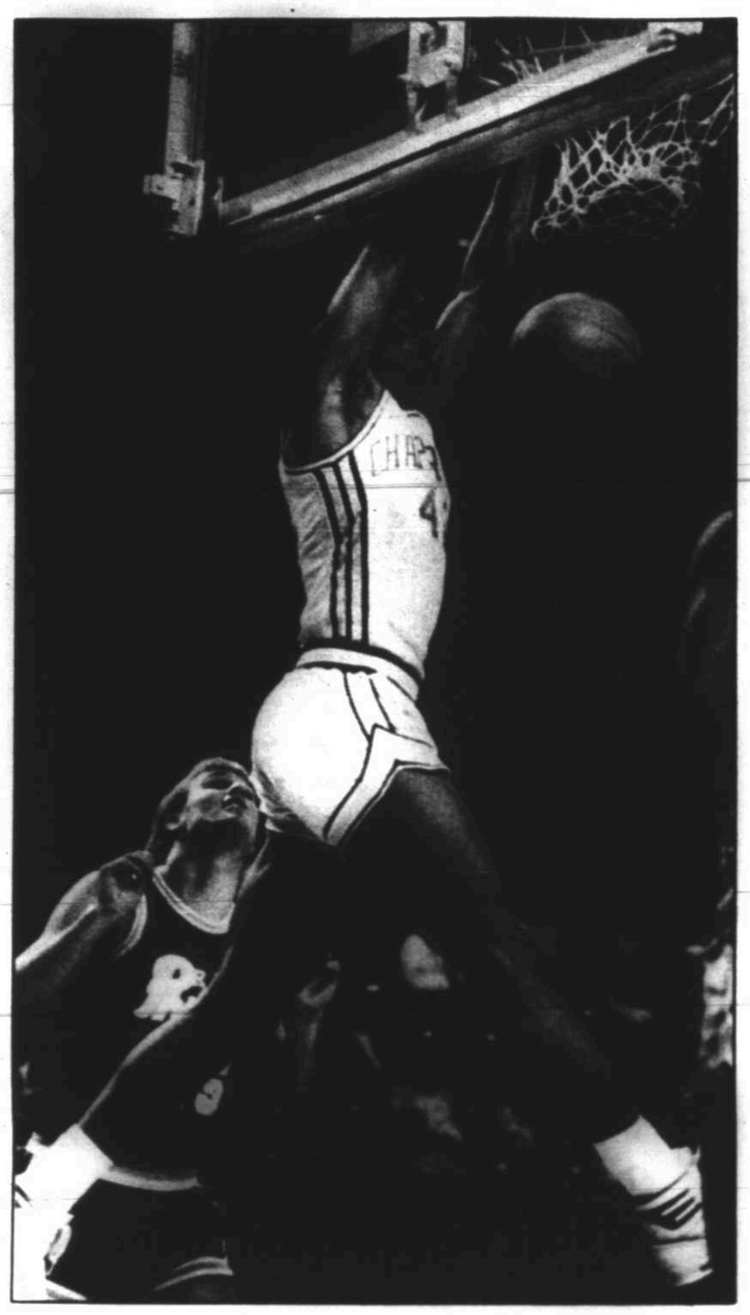

Sherrill given professor status

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M University Athletic Director Jackie Sherrill was awarded the additional title of professor of athletics Monday by the A&M University System Board of Regents.

"It's an honor for me just to be at Texas A&M and it's certainly a great honor to be designated a professor with tenure," said the head football coach in a statement.

Sherrill was informed of the honor Sunday but was unable to attend Monday's board meeting.

The resolution bestowing the professorship says Sherrill has served "with an exceedingly high degree of effectiveness and distinction since joining the Texas A&M University staff on Jan. 19, 1982, as athletic director."

Arizona keeps on rolling

Associated Press

AP Cage Poll

While all those around them were losing their games, the Arizona Wildcats just kept winning. That's why they are the near-unanimous choice as the No. 1 college basketball team in the land.

Arizona, 18-1, received 59 first-place votes in balloting for this week's Associated Press poll, missing by only four votes of being a unanimous selection. During a week of upsets, the Wildcats beat Southern California and UCLA in Pacific-10 Conference games.

Arizona accumulated 1,256 of a possible 1,280 points in outdistancing Purdue, 17-1, which climbed to No. 2 by running its school-record winning streak to 16 games. The Boilermakers, whose winning streak is the longest in the nation, beat Michigan State to remain unbeaten in Big Ten Conference play, then stepped outside the league to beat Louisville on the Cardinals' home floor.

Three of last week's Top Twenty dropped out, to be replaced by one team — Florida — which had been ranked earlier in the year, and two — Villanova and Southern Mississippi — making their first appearances of the season. Southern Miss, in fact, made its first Top Twenty appearance since the school joined the major-college ranks in 1965.

North Carolina, 14-2, surrendered its No. 2 ranking of last week after losing 70-69 to Duke. The Tar Heels came back to beat North Carolina State 77-73, knocking the 20th-ranked Wolfpack out of the poll after a one-week stay.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 17-1, improved from eighth to fourth after handing Temple its first loss of the season. The Runnin' Rebels also had Pacific Coast Athletic Association victories over Utah State and San Jose State.

Duke improved to fifth, followed by Temple, Brigham Young, Michigan, Kentucky and Oklahoma.

BYU, the only remaining unbeaten major-college team, had an impressive week on the road, beating No. 18 Texas-El Paso and New Mexico, the only team to beat Arizona.

Michigan, 16-2, fell one spot after losing to Ohio State, then came back to beat Wisconsin and Indiana. Kentucky, 13-2, was beaten 58-56 by Florida, the Wildcats' second home loss this season.

Oklahoma beat Colorado and then-No. 6 Pittsburgh, which dropped to 11th.

Following Pittsburgh in the Second Ten was Iowa State, Illinois, Florida, Georgetown, Iowa, Syracuse, Texas-El Paso, Villanova and Southern Mississippi.

Last week's Second Ten was Oklahoma, Brigham Young, Illinois, Syracuse, Georgetown, Kansas, Wyoming, Texas-El Paso, Iowa and North Carolina State.

Florida, 14th in the preseason poll, ranked as high as seventh during six weeks in the early polls, beat Tennessee and Kentucky on the road last week to improve to 14-4.

Villanova, the leader in the Big East with a 6-1 record, has beaten three ranked teams this season — Illinois, Syracuse and St. John's. The Wildcats beat conference foes Connecticut and Seton Hall last week.

Stetson scares No. 5 Duke

Associated Press

College Basketball

On paper, the game had the makings of a breather for Duke. But the fifth-ranked Blue Devils were nearly breathless after another narrow escape against unranked Stetson.

"It was like a typical three-point game with Stetson," Coach Mike Krzyzewski said Monday night after Duke beat the Hatters 81-78 at Daytona Beach, Fla.

He wasn't kidding. A year ago, Stetson scared Duke before dropping a 62-59 decision at Durham, N.C.

"Stetson did a heckuva job," Krzyzewski said. "They were very confident and took the game to us. Every time we got ahead, they came up with a big offensive play. They kept pressure on us throughout the game."

But pressure is something Duke is thriving on these days. The victory was its third on the road in five days. Other victims were third-ranked North Carolina and Wake Forest, two Atlantic Coast Conference foes.

Perhaps a contributring factor in Duke's lackluster play was the demanding schedule of the last week. The Blue Devils slowed the tempo with four minutes remaining.

"I thought we did a decent job on the stall," Krzyzewski said.

Still, Krzyzewski was not satisfied, especially in view of Stetson's recent play. The Hatters came in having lost three straight in the Trans America Athletic Conference — hardly the caliber of the ACC.

"We have shown we can play two great games, then have an emotional letdown," Krzyzewski said. "We kinda helped Stetson's cause tonight. They outplayed us, but we won because we have better talent."

Stetson Coach Glenn Wilkes also had been unhappy with his team's play.

"This game lets us know that we can compete better than we have in the past three games," he said. "Duke seems to bring out the best in our team."

No. 11 Pittsburgh 90, Providence 56

Jerome Lane had 17 points and 17 rebounds, but it was his backboard-shattering slam-dunk — that halted the game for a half-hour for repairs — that was the main topic in Pittsburgh.

"It was like a dream. I was waiting to wake up," Lane said. "I just tried to dunk it as hard as I could to fire up the crowd. When the rim came down, I just said, 'Yeah!' After everyone gave me high fives, I felt like I could break three more."

The 6-foot-6 Lane broke down the right sideline, took a lead pass from freshman guard Sean Miller and began a soaring descent to the basket at the foul line. Nearly his whole right arm extended over the rim as his karate-like dunk snapped the rim and shattered the backboard into tiny pieces.

Pitt's 4-1 start in the Big East is its best since the Panthers entered the league.

Providence, 8-8, lost its fourth game in a row and fell to 2-4 in the conference despite Steve Wright's 14 points.

No. 16 Iowa 104, Wisconsin 89

B.J. Armstrong and Al Lorenzen keyed a 26-6 surge in the first half as Iowa raised its record in the Big Ten 10 to 4-2. Amstrong scored nine of his 19 points during the burst and Lorenzen had seven of his 18 as Iowa took a 45-22 halftime lead.

Roy Marble scored 21 points for Iowa, 14-5 overall. Bill Jones added 17 points and 10 rebounds.

Trent Jackson led Wisconsin, 2-4 in the conference and 8-8 overall, with 24 points. Tim Locum and Tom Molaski added 16 points apiece for the Badgers.

Other Games

Freshman Brent Price scored a career-high 29 points to lead South Carolina to an 80-72 victory that snapped Florida State's six-game winning streak and moved the Gamecocks into a three-way tie for first place in the Metro Conference. South Carolina, 12-4 overall, shares a 3-1 league mark with Southern Mississippi and Florida State.

George McCloud scored 23 points and Tony Dawson added 19 for Florida State, which fell to 11-5 overall.

John Evans had 24 points to lead Rhode Island to a 101-78 victory over the University of Massachusetts to raise its Atlantic 10 Conference record to 6-1. Massachussetts, 3-6 in the conference,got a career-high 30 points from Lorenzo Sutton.

Brett McNeal scored 26 points to lead Western Kentucky to a 78-69 victory over North Carolina-Charlotte in the Sun Belt Conference. The victory boosted Western to 3-2 in the conference. North Carolina-Charlotte, which got 16 points from, Frank Persley, fell to 3-1 in the Sunbelt.

Damon Williams scored 24 points and Virginia Military Institute, shooting a season-high 61.9 percent from the floor, posted a 77-63 Southern Conference victory over The Citadel.

Jeff Himes scored 30 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead Davidson to an 81-75 Southern Conference victory over East Tennessee State.

CHAPS

Also in double figures were David Martin, 15 points, and Charles McCovery with 13 as Franklin used every player on his bench.

"We worked the press and took away their down the middle game," the MC coach said.

IT WAS A 15-2 run midway through the first half that fueled Midland into a 34-15 lead and took the game out of the contest category. The ramrods were Henry and Jones, who combined for 11 of those points.

It was during that spurt that Henry and Rice combined for the play of the night. Henry had just hit from 17 feet and Rice flicked the ball away from a dribbler just over midcourt, passed to Henry who fed Sydney soaring in from the right side for the thunderous dunk.

The only off key note was the four point production of Billy Ray Smith, the 6-5 sophomore from South Garland. "Everybody is playing the zone against us to stop Billy Ray, and it bothers me that he isn't getting as many opportunities," Franklin said.

In a way, it's an awkward compliment to Smith's skills...stop Smith and you stop the Chaps...but it doesn't work out that way when Henry and company exploit the defenses the way they did Monday. And through it all, Smith continues to play his usual floor game, rebounding, forcing turnovers and setting up teammates.

THE WIN raises MC's Western Junior College Athletic Conference record to 5-3 with Clarendon College coming up Thursday at the Chap Center. That marks the start of the second half of WJCAC play.

While the Chaps were bouncing back from an overtime loss to South Plains College last Thursday, Odessa College and New Mexico JC were battling for first place in the WJCAC at Odessa with the Wranglers extending their league record to 8-0 with a 91-83 win. NMJC is now 6-1.

Phil Niekro wants to play baseball

ATLANTA (AP) — Phil Niekro has a problem even more tricky than catching his knuckleball.

After he was released by Toronto late last season, Niekro was signed by Atlanta to pitch one last game in a Brave uniform.

He did that on Sept. 27 against the San Francisco Giants and left to a standing ovation and a probable journey to the Hall of Fame.

There may be a detour to Cooperstown, though.

Niekro, 48, is currently an executive vice president with a Georgia firm that produces fishing equipment, but as spring training nears, he says he can still win in the major leagues.

Niekro, however, promised he would retire when he agreed to make his farewell appearance with the Braves.

"I gave my word to the Braves that would be my last game," Niekro said of his September salute in Atlanta. "But there's no doubt in my mind that I can still pitch."

There was never much doubt in the minds of the opposition, either. Niekro was 318-274 in 22 seasons — 18 with the Milwaukee and Atlanta.

"There are a lot of teams looking for a fourth and fifth starter who can win 10 to 12 games.

Soviet Union to join Little League if U.S. builds fields

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — The Soviet Union will join Little League Baseball in 1989 if the U.S.-based organization builds baseball fields for the communist country, Little League President Creighton J. Hale said Monday.

Hale said he would try to raise $250,000 from U.S. corporations capable of building six or seven fields either in Moscow or in the Soviet Republic of Georgia further south.

"The biggest problem they have in Russia is they know nothing about baseball," said Hale, who returned to the United States Sunday from three days of meetings with Soviet sports officials in Moscow on the invitation of Ramaz Goglidze, president of the USSR Baseball Federation.

Despite the Soviets lack of knowledge about the American pastime, Hale predicted the Soviet Union could win the European Little League championship to make the Little League World Series in as few as four or five years.

Only 30 baseball teams and no baseball fields exist in the Soviet Union, said Hale, who watched a game between two university teams on a converted indoor soccer field.

"It wasn't very sophisticated," Hale said. "They couldn't make the double play. They really didn't know how to slide. They didn't throw to the right base."

Still, Hale predicted the Soviets would develop baseball the way they advanced their basketball program.

"What impressed me most was their enthusiasm," Hale said of the game he watched. "They enjoyed every minute of it. That's why it's going to succeed."

He predicted the Soviet Union would be able to compete with the best amateur teams in the world in 15 to 20 years.

During his trip, Soviet officials said they would donate the land for baseball fields if Little League agreed to build them, according to Hale.

"They don't have the financial wherewithal to develop fields, (or) buy equipment," he said.

Hale said Little League also will provide technical assistance to the Soviets.

Soviet interest in baseball has been sparked by the introduction of baseball as an Olympic sport, Hale said.

Only seven NFL teams show profit after strike

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In great part because of the NFL strike last fall, only seven of the league's 28 teams showed a profit this past season, according to a published report.

The strike cost the owners more than $104 million in potential income, the Los Angeles Times reported in its Monday editions.

The four teams which profited the most — Indianapolis, Miami, Minnesota and the Los Angeles Rams — have all changed stadiums in recent years.

According to the Times, Indianapolis realized a profit of $5,464,852; Miami made $5,131,090; Minnesota had a profit of $3,151,270, and the Rams made $1,263,105.

Other teams to show a profit were Philadelphia, $470,711; Denver, $464,744, and Cleveland, $145,000.

The two biggers losers — the New York Jets, $6,003,182, and the Los Angeles Raiders, $5,492,442 — have the highest payrolls in the NFL, the Times said.

The third-biggest loser, San Francisco at $5,084,790, has the fourth-highest payroll, and the fourth-biggest loser, Seattle at $4,921,894, has the sixth-highest payroll, it was reported.

The Times said that the players' losses in the strike, all from unpaid salaries, was $94 million.

"Both the owners and players are going to feel the financial impact for several more years," Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said.

Comparing salaries? Bank on John Elway

By CLARK JUDGE
Copley News Service

Can Denver quarterback John Elway beat the Washington defensive backs? He can if they're racing to the bank.

Elway, who signed a six-year, $13 million deal earlier this season, is the highest-paid player on the two teams playing in Super Bowl XXII.

Elway was scheduled to earn $1 million in base pay this year, with another $3 million kicked in as a signing bonus.

That beats the starting secondary for Washington — cornerbacks Darrell Green and Barry Wilburn and safeties Todd Bowles and Alvin Walton — by several steps. Those guys would have earned $817,000 in base pay this year, with another $18,000 in bonuses.

Would have? The 24-day strike cost most players four paychecks, meaning Elway lost a cool $250,000 in the walkout — or more money than 28 of the 43 other starters in Sunday's Super Bowl.

There are two starters — Bowles and Denver center Mike Freeman — who could bank more money through a Super Bowl win than they did through the season.

Each member of Denver and Washington stands to earn $64,000 if his club wins, a total accumulated through three playoff victories. That's more than both Bowles ($63,750) and Freeman ($61,500) earned this year.

Mark Jackson, a starting wide receiver for the Broncos, narrowly escaped the cutoff, making $66,500. Six others, all subs, didn't. They are:

Denver defensive back K.C. Clark, who made $62,500.

Denver quarterback Ken Karcher, the replacement quarterback, who made $61,250.

Denver tackle Keith Kartz, who made $59,750.

Washington tight end Joe Caravello, who made $53,750.

Washington defensive back Clarence Vaughn, who made $63,500.

Washington defensive back Dennis Woodberry, who made $56,250.

If it's what's up front that counts, then put your money with the Redskins. Owner Jack Kent Cooke did. On a 16-game schedule, his offensive line averages $328,000 a man, with right guard R.C. Thielemann weighing in at $500,000, tops for offensive linemen in the Super Bowl and tied for tops — with Chicago's Jim Covert and Cincinnati's Anthony Muoz — for offensive linemen in the league.

Denver's top-paid offensive lineman is left guard Keith Bishop, who, in 16 games, would have made $286,000 in base salary.

If Washington running back George Rogers ever runs into Denver defensive end Rulon Jones, it should be a draw. Rogers was scheduled to pull down $665,000, while Jones looked at $675,000 in base salary and $50,000 in bonuses.

Oil firms report higher profits

Exxon, Arco show quarterly improvement

Associated Press

Exxon Corp. says its profit rose by 5.1 percent in the fourth quarter, helping lessen a decline in annual earnings stemming from rising oil prices that squeezed profit margins for refined products.

Separately, Atlantic Richfield Co. Monday reported its fourth-quarter profit quintupled from a year earlier, and Ashland Oil Inc. posted sharply higher first-quarter profit, due partly to a big one-time gain stemming from accounting changes.

Exxon — the nation's biggest oil company — reported net income of $1.56 billion, or $1.12 per share in the three months ended Dec. 31, compared with a profit $1.48 billion, or $1.03 per share, in the same period of 1986.

The latest quarter included $7 million loss on the sale of assets, while the 1986 quarter included one-time gains of $486 million from asset sales.

Revenue during the fourth quarter rose to $22.6 billion from $19.1 billion a year earlier for New York-based Exxon.

Los Angeles-based ARCO posted a fourth-quarter profit of $940 million, or $1.86 per share, compared with $64 million, or 35 cents a share, in the year-earlier quarter. Revenue rose to $4.6 billion from $3.6 billion.

Ashland, based in Ashland, Ky., reported a profit of $71.1 million or $2.50 per share in the three months ended Dec. 31, its first fiscal quarter. That compared with a profit of $27.2 million or 83 cents per share a year. Quarterly revenue rose to $1.93 billion from $1.5 billion in the year-earlier period.

Exxon's fourth-quarter earnings were better than expected by a number of industry analysts — many of whom had projected a profit in the range of $3.25-$3.30 per share — largely because of the drop in crude oil prices during the period.

For example, the near-month futures contract for West Texas Intermediate — the benchmark grade of U.S. crude — fell to $16.70 on Dec. 31 from $19.62 on Oct. 1.

Lower crude prices during that period slashed the oil companies' costs of making refined products, such as gasoline, thus strengthening their profit margins in that important area.

Exxon reported its fourth-quarter earnings from refining and marketing rose by 23.3 percent, while worldwide exploration and production profit rose by 22.9 percent from a year earlier.

That contrasted with the three previous quarters, when refining and marketing profits tumbled due to the rebound in oil prices to more than $22 a barrel from their lows below $10 in 1986.

Worldwide refining and marketing profit fell by 74 percent to $491 million in 1987, while exploration and production — which benefits from higher crude prices — rose by 23 percent to $3.77 billion.

For all of 1987 Exxon earned $4.84 billion or $3.43 per share, down from $5.36 billion, or $3.71 per share in 1986. Annual revenue rose to $84.1 billion from $76.5 billion.

ARCO said its fourth quarter included a $186 million gain from an initial public offering of stock in its ARCO Chemical Co. subsidiary. The gain was offset by charges of $53 million from the company's withdrawal from an Alaskan gas pipeline project; $45 million in interest on unsettled tax issues; and $95 million reserved for environmental cleanup costs incurred by certain chemical businesses.

For the full year, ARCO had a profit of $1.22 billion, or $6.68 per share, compared with $615 million, or $3.38 per share, in 1986. Annual revenue rose to $16.8 billion from $15 billion.

ARCO's annual exploration and production profit more than doubled to $835 million due to rising crude and natural gas prices, while refining and marketing profit fell by 57 percent.

Ashland's latest quarter included a $31 million gain from a tax accounting change, making Ashland's first-quarter profit from operations $40 million, or $1.41 per share, the company said. The 1987 quarter reflected $3.5 million in losses from lost tax credits and other one-time factors.

Ashland's chairman and chief executive, John R. Hall, said strong performances by the company's chemical, coal and engineering and construction operations helped offset declining profitability at its petroleum operations.

Chinese visitors explore Basin history

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

A delegation of six geologists from the Republic of China is in Midland to study the geological and exploration practices of the Permian Basin.

The Chinese geologists' trip is sponsored by People to People a program for cultural and technological exchange founded by President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The group began Monday with a visit to Meridian Oil Inc., where exploration manger David Pilkington, gave the geologists a briefing on the regional geology of the Permian Basin, exploratory plays, production engineering and seismic exploration techniques.

A field trip to a seismic location, a tour of the Museum of the Southwest, and KMID-TV and a Mexican dinner at El Chico were other events planned for Monday afternoon.

Today, the group watched a slide presentation on the geological history of the Permian Basin given by Mary Vanderloop, senior geologist. This was followed by a tour of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, and the day concluded with a dinner at Golden China Restaurant.

Members of the Chinese delegation include: Wang Liansheng, senior geologist and leader of the group; Kang Yuzhu, vice president of Xinjinang Society of Geology; Lu Qing, senior geologist and director of the petroleum committee of Xinjiang Society of Geology; Jia Runxu, senior geologist and vice presdident of Xinjiang Society; Cheng Gualin, senior geologist; Chen Feipeng, senior geologist and Yong Guo, interpreter.

Task force recommends S&L changes

AUSTIN (AP) — A state task force, saying 40 percent of Texas-chartered thrifts are insolvent, has given Gov. Bill Clements its report on ways to improve the savings and loan industry.

"This report is a first, big step in a reform effort that will take much work and cooperation on the part of the industry, the Legislature and the Texas business community as a whole," Clements told a Monday news conference.

The insolvent institutions among the 213 state-chartered savings and loans "remain open through regulatory forbearance," says the task force report.

Many of the insolvent thrifts are being operated under federal or state supervisory programs "largely due to the capital inadequacy of (Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp.) which prevents it from liquidating these institutions," the report said.

"To fund their asset portfolios, the insolvent institutions must continue to compete for deposits. This has caused a significant increase in the cost of deposits for all Texas savings and loan associations," the report says.

Clements said he will use the report in developing his recommendations to the 1989 Legislature, or to a special session this year if necessary.

"If we can come to a set of concise, definitive recommendations that would make a significant difference in the S&L climate in the state of Texas prior to January 1989, I would not be hesitant to call a special session. I really wouldn't," Clements said.

"But that's also a way of me telling you that there are no solutions in sight at this point," he added.

Hertz admits auto repair overcharges

NEW YORK (AP) — The Hertz Corp. has admitted overcharging individuals and insurance companies by $13 million for auto repairs by using phony damage claims, altered documents and inflated repair bills for seven years.

The car rental company said Monday it has been cooperating in a federal grand jury investigation here.

Hertz said it halted the practices immediately when top management learned of them in 1985 and fired an executive in charge of accident damage claims. It said it will refund all payments made under questionable circumstances.

The company said it already returned about $3 million of the estimated $13 million it "collected by these improper practices," and told federal authorities of its plans to return the full amount.

Durable goods, auto sales stronger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories for "big ticket" durable goods soared 6.7 percent in December, the biggest gain in 15 months, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said that orders for durable goods totaled a seasonally adjusted $118.7 billion last month, an increase of $7.4 billion from the level of demand in November.

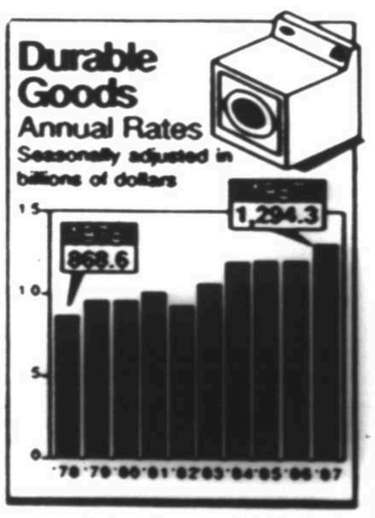

Almost three-fourths of the increase came from a big jump in orders for aircraft, reflecting a huge order received by the Boeing Co. of Seattle.

While most of the strength came in a single category, analysts said the advance was still a good sign for the economy, showing that manufacturing demand remained strong in December, two months following the record 508-point collapse of stock prices on Oct. 19.

In other economic reports, auto sales jumped in mid-January, but sales of existing single-family homes fell last year for the first time since the recession of 1982.

Mid-January sales of domestic cars and light trucks were up 32.7 percent from weak results a year ago, the automakers said.

"We've been expecting a more even (sales) pattern and this looks like what we're getting" compared with sales during much of 1987, said Jeannette Garretty, industry analyst with Bank of America in San Francisco.

The National Association of Realtors said home sales dropped about 1.3 percent to 3.52 million units last year, compared with a seven-year high of 3.57 million homes that had been resold in 1986.

Sales fell 3.8 percent in December, the group said.

Analysts said the decline in sales for the entire year had been expected after two exceptionally strong sales years. Sales in 1986 had been the highest since 1979.

The December advance in durable goods orders was the largest increase since a 6.9 percent rise in September 1986. It followed a 0.1 percent increase in November, which reflected a revision from an earlier report which had orders declining in November.

The December orders figure closed out the best year for American manufacturers since 1984. Orders for the last 12 months totaled $1.3 trillion, a 7.8 percent increase over 1986. It was the best showing since a 13 percent rise in orders in 1984.

By contrast, orders edged up a slight 0.5 percent in 1986 and 0.7 percent in 1985, two years in which American businesses were losing domestic and overseas sales to foreign manufacturers.

Congress urges look at market regulators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government needs to reevaluate how it regulates the nation's financial markets to help prevent a repeat of October's stock market crash, the director of a congressional study said today.

In remarks prepared for delivery to lawmakers, Charles A. Bowsher also said steps must be taken to make sure that individual investors are treated as fairly as large institutions, and that the rest of the economy is better protected from the spillover effects of plummeting stock prices.

"The October crash was a crisis that nearly became a disaster," Bowsher, chief of the General Accounting Office, said in testimony prepared for delivery to the House telecommunications and finance subcommittee.

"We will probably never know how close we came to the disaster," he said. "But we can — and must — learn from the last crisis."

The preliminary report by GAO, Congress' investigative arm, is the second major government study of last October's events on Wall Street, including the 508-point drop of the Dow Jones industrial average on Oct. 19.

The first study, conducted by a panel appointed by President Reagan and headed by investment banker Nicholas F. Brady, called for limits on price fluctuations, coordinated trading halts by various markets, and one agency to oversee a few regulatory issues common to the nation's various markets.

Bowsher said there have been increasing links in recent years among the nation's various markets, such as those that trade stocks and others that trade futures. There also are closer relationships between U.S. markets and those overseas, he said.

Crude price boosted by heating oil

Associated Press

Energy futures on the New York Mercantile Exchange were boosted by strength in the distilled products, particularly heating oil.

"The buying reflected anticipation of cold weather in the East starting later today and continuing through Thursday," said Jim Ritterbusch, Chicago-based vice president of energy futures for PaineWebber Inc.

West Texas Intermediate crude oil settled 8 cents to 17 cents higher with March at $17.09 a barrel; heating oil was .29 cent to .94 cent higher with February at 50.13 cents a gallon; unleaded gasoline was .30 cent to .58 cent higher with February at 45.10 cents a gallon.

Dollar, gold drift in listless trade

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed in early European trading today, rising against the British pound and Italian lire, holding steady against the French franc, and falling against other major foreign currencies.

Gold prices also were mixed in quiet trading.

In Tokyo, the dollar gained slightly against the Japanese yen, closing up 0.10 yen at 127.55. Later, in London, it was quoted at the same level.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

—1.6760 West German marks, down from 1.6775.

—1.3575 Swiss francs, down from 1.3595.

—5.6495 French francs, unchanged.

—1.8805 Dutch guilders, down from 1.8825.

—1,230.60 Italian lire, up from 1,230.375.

—1.2780 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2797.

One British pound cost $1.7695 in London this morning, compared with $1.7735 late Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $470.80 a troy ounce, up slightly from late Monday's $470.50. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $471.40.

In Zurich, the bid price was $471.35, down from $472 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $4.27 to close at a bid $473.18.

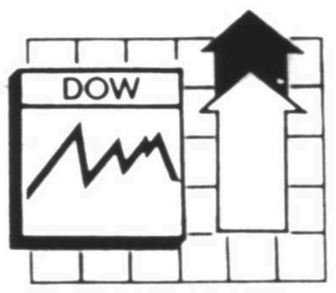

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.61 a troy ounce, down from Monday's $6.71.

Heavy trade pushes Dow 42 points

NEW YORK (NYT) — Stock prices surged in heavy trading Monday and the Dow Jones industrial average recaptured much of last week's loss, climbing 42.94 points, or 2.3 percent, to 1,946.45.

Last week, the market's most closely watched indicator lost more than 52 points.

Analysts said stock prices benefited from the steady bond and dollar markets, as well as from buying in the pharmaceutical, retail and technology sectors.

A total of 1,133 issues advanced in price, while 446 declined. Broader measures than the Dow were solidly higher. The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 2.82 points, to 141.51, while the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index climbed 5.67 points, to 252.17.

Volume on the Big Board, at 275.3 million shares, was the highest since Dec. 18 and far above the 147.1 million shares traded on Friday.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Campeau offers $47/share for Federated

NEW YORK (AP) — Federated Department Stores Corp. received a $4.2 billion buyout offer from Campeau Corp., the Canadian company that a year ago acquired and began to break up Allied Stores Corp.

Campeau's $47-a-share cash offer Monday came nearly two weeks after Federated reported that developer Donald Trump had told federal regulators he might acquire at least 15 percent of the 89.65 million outstanding shares in Federated.

But analysts viewed the Campeau bid as a more viable threat to Federated.

Analysts boo Kodak's Sterling acquisition

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Eastman Kodak Co.'s $5.1 billion agreement to buy Sterling Drug Inc., maker of Bayer aspirin and Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, has brought a chorus of boos from stock analysts.

The news, announced after the stock market closed on Friday, took the financial world by surprise and sent Kodak's stock into an immediate tailspin when trading resumed Monday.

Kodak stock fell $4.25 a share Monday to $44.87½ in consolidated New York Stock Exchange trading. Meanwhile, Sterling's stock soared $9 a share to $87.75.

Crash impact shows on Wall Street's titans

NEW YORK (AP) — Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc. reported a sharp decline in its fourth-quarter profit and Shearson Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc. posted a net loss, showing the impact of the October stock market crash on Wall Street's two biggest firms.

Analysts said they were surprised Merrill Lynch did not lose money during the period and said earnings for the year surpassed their expectations.

Merrill Lynch's net income for the quarter plunged 98 percent. Shearson reported a net loss of $95 million, compared with earnigs of $106 million in fourth quarter 1986.

Murdoch gets reprieve in Post sale case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court granted a stay to publisher Rupert Murdoch that will give him a temporary reprieve from having to sell the New York Post by March 6.

A U.S. Court of Appeals panel said Monday Murdoch would not have to comply with newspaper-TV cross-ownership rules for 45 days after the court issues a final ruling, said Richard Bozelli a Federal Communications Commission lawyer.

Meanwhile, a White House aide said President Reagan planned to ask Congress to repeal a law aimed at forcing Murdoch to sell media properties in New York and Boston.

State AGs call for tougher ATV agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — A task force of state attorneys general called for tougher prohibitions on all-terrain vehicles, saying an agreement between the federal government and manufacturers fails to protect young riders adequately.

Consumer and health groups on Monday filed a challenge to the recent agreement in U.S. District Court, urging a delay in any decision on approving the agreement until a hearing is held.

Last month, the Justice Department, Consumer Product Safety Commission and the industry agreed on a requirement that manufacturers stop selling the three-wheeled vehicles.

Ector field gains two producers

From Staff Reports

RUST OIL CORP. has added two new Cisco producers to the Cowden field of Ector County, including one that's a northeast extension.

On potential test, the No. 3 Cowden Ranch "6" flowed 276 barrels of 39 gravity crude, 181 Mcfd and no water on a half-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 410 psi. The well flowed from perforations 8,835 to 8,837 ft.

Rust also completed the No. 1 Johnson Ranch "43", originally scheduled as a 10,000 ft. wildcat. The well is a northeastern extension to the field. It was potentialed to pump 12 barrels of 39 gravity crude, 16 Mcfd and 110 barrels of water from perforations 8,839 to 8,840 ft.

Ector producers

Rust Oil Corp. has added two producers to the Cowden (Cisco) field. One, originally a 10,000 ft. wildcat, extends the pay northeast, and the second flows 276 barrels of 39 gravity crude.

Crane project nets Glorieta extension

The C-Bar West field of Crane County has gained new Glorieta production and a north and slightly western extension.

WOOD, McSHANE & THAMS, Monahans, completed the No. 3 Henderson to pump 64 barrels of 34 gravity crude, 35 Mcfd and 120 barrels of water from perforations 4,572 to 4,692 ft. The interval was acidized with 5,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe. Gas-oil ratio is 547:1.

Permitted as a 7,200 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 4,770 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 4,733 ft.

The well topped the San Andres at 3,560 ft. and Glorieta at 4,484 ft. on ground elevation of 2,803 ft. Pay was topped at 4,582 ft.

Location is 2,310 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 17, Block B-22, PSL survey, five miles west of Penwell.

Midland reentry flows 125 barrels crude oil

A Midland County reentry has yielded new Atoka pay in the Desperado field for PRIMARY FUELS, INC.

Primary reentered the No. 1 Brooks, a Devonian producer in the Azalea field, completing the well to flow 125 barrels of 48 gravity crude, 281 Mcfd and no water on an 8/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,150 psi. Production is from perforations 10,717 to 10,910 ft., which had been acidized with 2,300 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 32,000 gallons of gel and 52,000 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 2,248:1.

Originally drilled to 12,000 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 10,970 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,677 ft., include the Fusselman at 11,825 ft., Devonian at 11,378, Mississippian Lime at 11,210, Atoka at 10,639, Strawn at 10,303, and the Wolfcamp at 8,904 ft. Pay was topped at 10,717 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 2,310 ft. from east lines of Section 30, Block 38, T-2-S, T&P survey, 11 miles southeast of Midland.

The Brooks was potentialed March 1, 1987 for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.2 Mmcfd from perforatins 11,396 to 11,473 ft.

Stellar Energy adds to Sterling production

STELLAR ENERGY & INVESTMENT CORP. has completed one of two wildcats it has drilling in Sterling County as a new Pennsylvanian producer in the Conger field.

On potential test, the No. 1 Mesa flowed five barrels of 43.5 gravity crude, 200 Mcfd and 14 barrels of water from perforations 7,889 to 7,979 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 97,360 gallons of gel and 158,700 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Permitted as an 8,200 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,100 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 8,041 ft.

The well topped the Wichita Albany at 3,757 ft., Cisco at 6,920, and Canyon Sand at 7,483 ft. on ground elevation of 2,466 ft. Pay was topped at 7,752 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and east lines of Section 2, Block 22, H&TC survey, 10.5 miles west of Sterling City.

The well is slightly southwest of the No. 2 Mesa, a 6,200 ft. wildcat also being drilled by Stellar Energy.

Operator completes 108 barrel producer

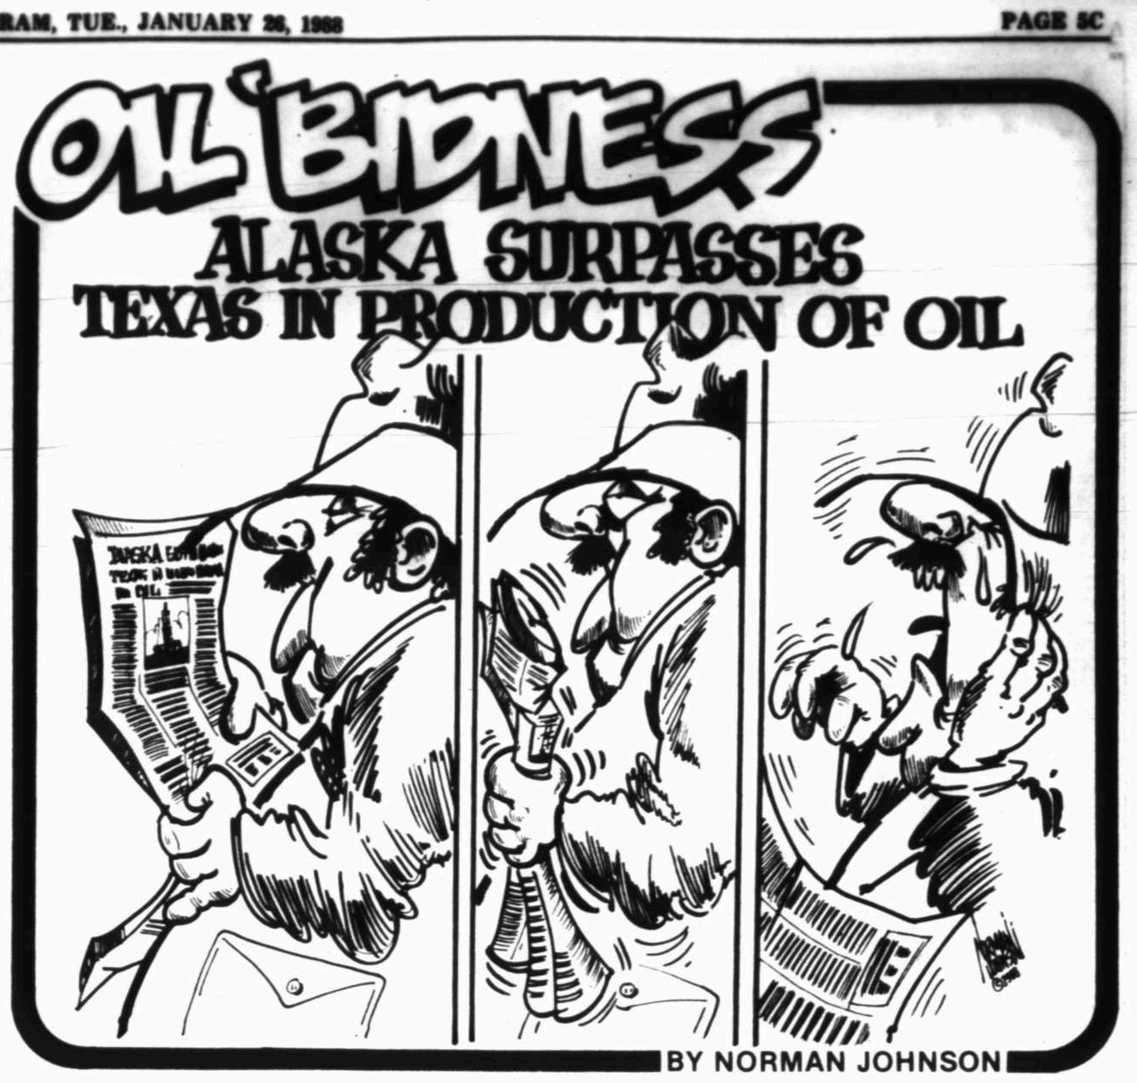

The Rhoda Walker (Canyon 5900) field of Ward County gained a new producer as MELZER EXPLORATION CO. completes activity in the area.

Melzer finaled the No. 1 Bush to flow 108 barrels of 38.1 gravity crude, 210 Mcfd and 315 barrels of water on a 24/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 350 psi. The well flowed from perforations 6,744 to 6,814 ft., which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 33,000 gallons of gel and 90,000 lbs. 12/20 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 38:1.

Permitted as a 7,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to and 5 1/2 inch casing was set at that depth, and wa plugged back to 6,988 ft.

The well topped the Delaware Mountain at 5,006 ft. and Cherry Canyon at 5,858 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,625.5 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from northwest and southwest lines of Section 95, Block 34, H&TC survey, 5.5 miles south of Pyote.

More firms testing for drug use

By ELIZABETH M. FOWLER
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Drug testing of prospective employees has become almost routine at many major companies, according to results of a new survey issued by the Interface Group, a Washington recruiting concern. Meanwhile, a survey made by the University of Michigan finds that the use of cocaine among young adults has declined, perhaps partly because of fears about testing by employers.

In the study done for Interface by Targeting Systems, about 48 percent of 252 respondents from Fortune 500 companies — typically vice presidents and directors of personnel — reported that they test job applicants for drug use, and 20 percent more indicated that they were considering such tests. A decade ago few companies tested new employees for drugs.

William H. Marumoto, president of Interface, said he was not surprised by the increased use of testing. "Five years ago I would have been greatly surprised at drug testing, but in today's environment I'm not surprised," he said. "Frankly, I am amazed that there isn't a higher amount of testing."

Even so, during much of the last decade, drug testing by companies has not increased as fast as drug use among young adults. One reason has been complaints from civil liberties groups that such testing violates individuals' right to privacy.

As a management recruiter who for 20 years has found people to fill middle and top management jobs, Marumoto said, "I have never had someone rejected for drugs."

Nancy Bonner, manager of recruiting and university development for the General Electric Co., reported that about a year and a half ago the company began drug testing for job candidates fresh from college or graduate school. She said 1 or 2 percent of those tested showed indications of drug use. Also, some experienced middle management applicants are tested, she said, but figures on them are not available.

The University of Michigan's Institute of Social Research, in its 13th annual drug survey, has just issued its findings indicating "the first substantial decline" in cocaine use among high school and college students and other adults up to age 29. The downturn comes after several years of publicity campaigns indicating the dangers of using drugs.

The Michigan researchers concluded that the decline in cocaine use reflects a drop in demand rather than any difficulties in obtaining supplies.

Despite this trend, the university researchers warn that the United States still has the highest rate of young adult drug use of any industrial nation.

If the prevalence of drug testing did not surprise Marumoto, some other findings about corporate hiring did. "There is a common perception that physical appearance is very important," Marumoto said. Management recruiters have long stressed that candidates for middle and top management jobs should be well dressed and have good manners.

But Marumoto was surprised, he said, at how low appearance ranks on the priority lists of corporate personnel experts.

Bonner of GE said: "One is more inclined to view the total package. In hiring, you want to make sure the individuals will present themselves with a professional image. We want well-presented people."

In addition to drugs, general health was on the minds of personnel officers in the Interface survey. A substantial number — 41 percent — said they try to determine health during an interview and 34 percent said they would not be likely to hire someone in poor health.

With rapidly rising medical costs confronting companies, their interest in employees' health seems to have a sound business basis.

Although 86 percent believe that regular exercise improves productivity, the survey found, only 5 percent said they asked about exercise habits. So it might be a good idea for job applicants who are joggers and tennis players to mention such activities. Perhaps nonsmokers should speak up, too.

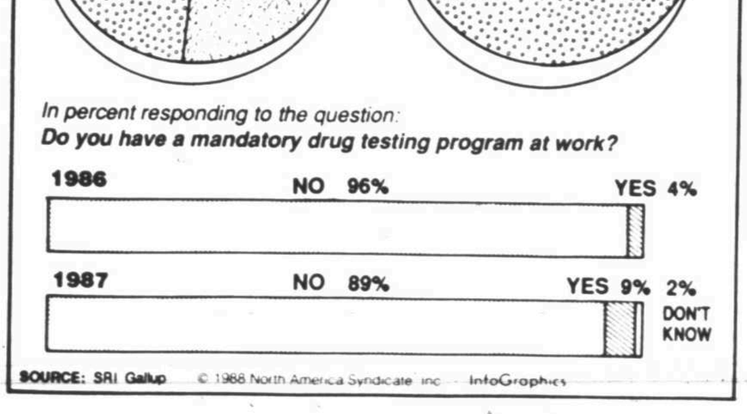

What the personnel experts emphasized, Marumoto said, was "job performance" as a major criterion although it is not easy to measure.

Growing support for testing for drugs in the workplace

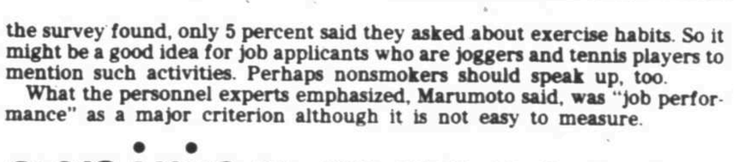

In a 1986 Gallup Poll, 47 percent of those surveyed supported mandatory drug testing programs in the workplace. By 1987, this had risen to 69 percent. In 1986, only 4 percent had mandatory drug testing at their place of work, compared to 9 percent in 1987.

Advice available to aspiring managers

By ELIZABETH M. FOWLER
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Like advice to the lovelorn, helpful words for job losers and job seekers are widely available. Now an economist and a forecaster offer some advice for middle managers who have lost their jobs and for people with new MBA degrees who are looking for their first jobs.

The economist is David Bostian, who is president of Bostian Research Associates in New York. In an interview last week, he said: "Two immediate things come to mind. The economy in 1988 will be export-driven, with a shift away from the service-type economy, and companies will emphasize the ongoing trend to upgrade quality." To him, that means job-seeking managers should improve their knowledge about international marketing and international economics or concentrate on product improvement skills.

This year's lower tax rate, trimmed-down staffs at many companies and lower interest rates later in 1988 will encourage more capital investment, Bostian predicted.

"I am not nearly so pessimistic about the service sector as some others," he said. He thinks many Wall Street firms used the stock collapse "as an excuse for trimming" and perhaps made some excessive cuts.

"We think that the bond and the stock markets will have a good year in 1988," he said, predicting new opportunities in the financial services sector.

He also urged middle management job hunters to seek out more opportunities involving technology, research and development.

"If a job opens up for a person at a Midwest steel business, and one is offered in biotechnology, take the one in the biotech field," he said. Although salaries might be lower, he said, the future could be brighter.

The forecaster is Marvin Cetron, who heads Forecasting International Ltd., a suburban Washington firm. With so many levels of middle management being eliminated or thinned, he said, there will be fewer opportunities for people with a master's degree in business administration. About 70,000 students earn MBAs every year although middle management openings are declining.

For those who have taken courses in entrepreneurship and small business operations, Cetron suggested: "Take jobs first with a large company. Seek out a problem area, and try to offer a solution."

New marketing techniques might be suggested for a product in small demand, he said. Or the MBA could suggest an entrepreneurial effort within a large company — a separate profit center to produce and market the problem product. If the suggestion fails, the MBA could leave the company and organize a new one to make and sell the product.

Another approach to middle management success is for an MBA to gain enough experience in computer programming to become an expert on systems management. With fewer levels of middle managers between computing operations and top managements, systems managers could supply data and ideas directly to top management, gaining a more responsible role.

Cetron also considers real estate an area open to MBAs, and he urges students working for the degree to take some real estate courses. Other opportunities exist in the hotel, restaurant and travel areas, he said.

"Also leisure time companies might be a good source of jobs," Cetron said.

Other areas to consider, he said, are professions that were long low-paid but have been getting higher-than-usual pay increases, including nurses, teachers, librarians and medical technicians.

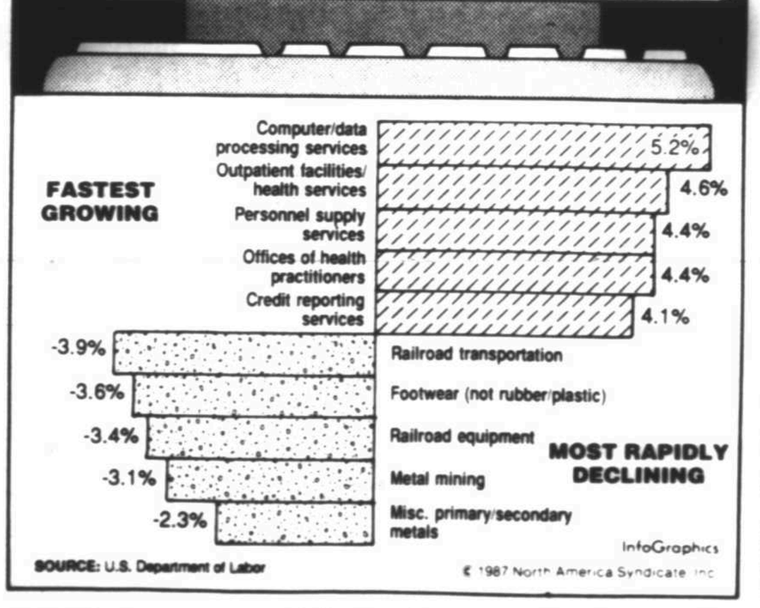

Most jobs like these have traditionally been held by women, but supervisory jobs in the same fields — nursing school director, school superintendent, chief librarian and chief of medical technicians — have often been held by men.

"There will be more stress on areas within corporations that have long-term payoffs — research and development, education of employees and training on the job," Cetron added.

U.S. employment trends

Employment in the computer and data processing services industry is expected to grow at an average annual rate of 5.2 percent between 1986 and 2000 — the fastest-growing U.S. industry according to Labor Department projections. Railroad transportation industry employment is expected to decline steadily, falling 3.9 percent per year until the year 2000.

Where will jobs of the future grow?

Associated Press

Whether you're a teenager thinking about your future career or established in one now and thinking of keeping or changing it, you should know where the jobs will be in the future.

Workers will have to become more mobile to take advantage of new job opportunities. David Birch, director of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Program on Neighborhood and Regional Change and head of his own consulting firm, Cognetics, believes the U.S. will have to do a better job of exploiting the chief competitive advantage it has over the rest of the world: brainpower. That, in turn, will mean a competitive advantage for cities near universities or other research facilities.

Birch's scenario goes something like this: Universities will attract brains, which will generate ideas, which will give birth to new companies, which will create more jobs. Already, he says, all the growth in new jobs is coming from middle-sized and small companies. Among the cities on Birch's list of places most likely to succeed: Atlanta; Albuquerque; Austin, Texas; Huntsville, Ala.; Manchester-Nashua, N.H.; Orlando, Fla.; Phoenix; Raleigh-Durham, N.C.; Tucson; and Washington, D.C.

As the entrepreneurial climate increasingly determines which regions are going to flourish, Sunbelt-Frostbelt distinctions will blur. Steven Malin, regional economist for the Conference Board, told Changing Times magazine he expects Texas to rebound from its oil slump and become an economic powerhouse by the end of the century. But Oklahoma and Louisiana will have a tougher time because their economies aren't as broad-based. In Malin's view, Florida has perhaps the brightest future of any of the 50 states. "If someone asked me where to go to find a good job in the next 10 years, I'd send him to Florida and Florida," says Malin.

Meanwhile, areas like New England, New York and New Jersey, which have built a strong base of business and financial services, will continue to flourish, but their growth rates will slow inevitably as they bump up against the limits of expansion: high land and labor costs and a shortage of workers, especially in New England.

A number of cities in the country's industrial heartland will get a new lease on life. "We've seen nice comebacks in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Columbus," says Malin. And cities like Omaha, Des Moines, Kansas City, Mo., and Chicago have the potential to become major financial centers.

Coastal areas will continue to be the most promising job markets, but with better times in the oil patch and agricultural and manufacturing areas in the Midwest, economic growth may well become more evenly spread. Still, Sunbelt cities are conspicuous by their presence on lists of fast-growing regions. Among the 25 metropolitan areas with the fastest-growing job markets identified by the National Planning Association, 14 are in Florida and California.

It's important to keep in mind the distinction between the rate of job growth and the number of new jobs expected to be created. The Los Angeles-Long Beach area doesn't even appear among the 25 fastest-growing job markets, yet in terms of sheer numbers it will provide more jobs than any other metropolitan area between now and the year 2010. Other metropolitan areas on the list: Chicago, Philadelphia, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Detroit and Baltimore.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Rear-end' contingency fee part of loss when cashing in mutual fund

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I lost money in an investment plan, even though I got out a week before the stock market crash.

I invested $90,000 in a "government securities" mutual fund on Jan. 30, 1987, and cashed out on Oct. 13. The value of the shares had fallen to $82,276.92. I was charged a $4,113.84 penalty for redeeming. I received $78,163.08, making my total loss $11,836.92

During the nine months I held that investment, I received dividend checks totaling $5,914.35, which I know I must report as income on my 1987 income tax return.

But how much of my loss can I deduct on my return? Is the penalty I paid part of a deductible loss, or do I have to swallow it?

Doyle

A. Report the entire $11,836.92 as a capital loss on Schedule D, Form 1040. What you call a "penalty" — technically termed a "contingent deferred sales charge" and, in fact, a "rear-end load" — was part of your loss.

You could use that capital loss to offset capital gains, if you had any in 1987, and thereby reduce your taxable income and the number of dollars you pay the Internal Revenue Service.

If you had no capital gains, you can use $3,000 of the capital loss to offset other 1987 taxable income and carry the rest of the loss forward and use it to offset future capital gains or $3,000 of other income per year.

Q. Hopefully, you can explain the contingency fee that was deducted from the amount we received when we redeemed our mutual fund investment. The fee amounted to 4 percent.

What firms and/or individuals split that fee? I wrote to the broker through whom we made this investment and the fund's transfer agent, but I have received no satisfactory reply.

A. That fee was a contingent deferred sales charge. Like some other mutual funds, the one in which you invested charges 5 percent if shares are redeemed within one year after being purchased, 4 percent the second year, 3 percent the third and so on down until that rear-end load disappears.

Arrangements on such fees vary greatly among different funds. In general, however, those fees go to the company that manages the mutual fund and that management company uses the money to pay brokers who sell the fund's share.

When a mutual fund has a rear-end load, the details must be spelled out in that fund's prospectus. Smart investors study the prospectus and steer clear of mutual funds with such charges.

Q. You have pointed out that mutual fund per share prices are printed in many daily newspapers. My broker tells me that up to 5 percent of those listing are wrong every day. Can that be possible?

A. Almost anything is possible. After close to 40 years of newspapering, I've seen my share of errors. But your broker's statement is way off base.

Here's how mutual fund price quotations reach newspapers. Each fund is "priced" after 4 p.m., eastern time, every business day. That's done by adding up the value of the fund's assets — mostly securities it holds as investments — subtracting any liabilities and dividing by the number of fund shares outstanding.

The resulting number is the fund's asset value per share. That number is reported by the fund or its custodian bank to the National Association of Securities Dealers, which then sends quotations for all mutual funds to the Associated Press and United Press International. Those wire services transmit mutual fund and other securities price tables to newspapers.

All this is accomplished by computers and wire. True, mistakes can get into the system — but not to the extent your broker claims.

MARKET

"We believe these developments reveal the need for an integrated regulatory structure for the linked markets within the U.S. and the need to search for ways of harmonizing regulation across national boundaries," he said.

The Federal Reserve did an admirable job in October of protecting the economy from the effects of the crash by managing the money supply, Bowsher said. But he said that if Congress decides to allow banks to participate more in the stock market, the Fed's role "would become significantly more complex and difficult."

THRIFT

Meanwhile in Dallas, a Federal Home Loan Bank Board spokeswoman said a comprehensive plan for merging and closing involvent Texas S&Ls may be finished next week, although the proposed manifesto remains the focus of debate among federal regulators.

The three-man board, which oversees the federal thrift regulatory bank board system, has had two meetings on the so-called Southwest Plan, including one session Monday. Bank board spokeswoman Martha Gravlee said the board expects to meet at least twice more to discuss the proposal.

Clements said he is looking for a new savings and loan commissioner following the resignation of L.L. Bowman. Bowman, who last year turned in his resignation in order to open a private consulting firm, said his departure was unrelated to reports that he was a partner in a real estate company with the former chairman of the failed Vernon Savings Association of Dallas.

The Governor's Task Force on the Savings and Loan Industry said Texas can improve its savings and loan institutions by putting distance between the industry and its regulators.

"We have a problem, frankly, in the in-bred relationship between the regulators and the industry, and we have made recommendations in the report that will provide a further separation between the regulatory process and the industry," said Bayard Friedman, task force chairman and former Fort Worth mayor.

Supervision of state-chartered savings and loans has been weak, Friedman said, but the weakness is the fault of the system rather than individuals.

US, allies may trim banned equipment list

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and its allies are working on a two-edged plan to cut the number of high-tech products banned for sale to the Soviet Union while stiffening enforcement of remaining controls.

A State Department official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that representatives from NATO countries and Japan will meet in Paris at the end of the month to discuss changes in rules established by their Coordinating Committee on Export Controls (COCOM).

The agency coordinates national efforts to keep Soviet bloc countries from getting militarily usable technology.

Under a plan favored by the United States, the meeting will dwell on what the U.S. official called "streamlining" the list of sensitive products. He said items removed from the list would be "at the lowest level of technology, leaving only those things that are significant to military use."

At the same time, countries will be asked to increase their surveillance of potential violators and perhaps enact uniform penalties for people and companies who send items remaining on the list to the Soviets, the official said.

Donald Hasfurther, director of East-West trade at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said exporters would welcome reductions in the COCOM list.

"We have argued that the list is too long and encompasses items available in other countries and items no longer applicable for military use," Hasfurther said.

He said reducing the list would help enforce controls on remaining items because "they could then focus on stopping exports of equipment that is truly sensitive."

For years, exporters of computers and other high-tech products from allied countries have complained that many of the products on the embargoed lists are readily available to the Soviets from non-COCOM countries in Europe and Asia.

They also assert that the list has not kept pace with advances in military technology, resulting in lost sales of products no longer used in high tech weapons systems.

The U.S. delegation to the conference will be led by Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead, a former investment banker knowledgeable about the exporters' arguments. Whitehead, who has special responsibility at the department for relations with Eastern Europe, is familiar with those nations' arguments that Western controls are hurting East-West trade.

HERTZ

Reports of the investigation first appeared on WNBC-TV Monday evening and in today's editions of The New York Times.

It is not known how many people were affected. The Times, quoting unidentified Justice Department sources, said the practice of inflating damage claims was introduced in the company's New York region in the early 1970s and was being spread around the country later in the 1970s.

"Hertz deeply regrets that these practices existed and is committed to ensuring that they do no recur," Hertz said in a statement Monday night.

Hertz said it "eliminated all practices revealed by its investigation and subsequently investigated by the federal grand jury." It said it revamped its system for computing and making damage claims and consolidated the operation under "the direct control of Hertz's central corporate insurance staff."

Hertz spokesman Joseph Russo said most of the $13 million can be traced to the practice of charging individuals and insurance companies the retail cost of a repair — while Hertz actually pays about 25 percent less because of volume discounts on parts and labor.

Russo said the practice is common in the industry. Since 1985, Hertz has passed the savings on to its customers.

"In a smaller number of incidents, there was falsification of documents," Russo said.

WNBC said Hertz's accident control offices altered repair forms, inserting a higher, false amount for the repair and billing the driver or his insurance company for the higher amount.

The scheme also included double billing, fictitious repair shops, forged signatures of damage appraisers and made-up estimates for non-existent damage, according to WNBC.

It costs about $10 a day for a "collision damage waiver" when renting a car from Hertz, which frees the driver from liability in any accident, as long as the driver operated the car within the rules of the rental agreement.

If an individual does not pay for the waiver and the car is damaged, the driver is liable for up to $3,000 in repairs, Russo said. In most cases, the driver's personal insurance — or the driver of another car involved in the accident — would pay for repairs.

If the driver lacked insurance, payment would come out of the driver's pocket.

Richard M. Kessel, executive director of the state Consumer Protection Board, told the Times he would propose legislation requiring rental car companies to disclose the actual cost of repairs.

New skin care products introduced

Manufacturers aim for more beautiful new year

By LISA LEBOWITZ
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

Resolve to take better care of skin, eyes and lips in 1988 using products and treatments created with both your long- and short-term beauty needs in mind.

In December 1987, Ultima II introduced PhotAging Shield, a PABA-free lotion designed to protect skin from ultraviolet radiation, to the American Academy of Dermatologists. It will be in department stores in early February to help women control photoaging, an accelerated form of tissue breakdown that occurs from year-round sun exposure. The lotion can be worn alone or under makeup and moisturizer to minimize premature wrinkling, skin discoloration, age spots and leathery skin. It has an sun protection factor (SPF) of six that makes it ideal for daily protection.

While women today are knowledgeable about the sun's aging effects on skin, it is less known that sunlight can damage the eyes. Ultraviolet light can accelerate the formation of cataracts and cause serious damage to the retina, according to a recent issue of Vogue magazine. For maximum protection, choose glasses that are 100 percent ultraviolet protective for sunning or skiing. One choice: Ellesse Sunwear by Marchon glasses.

Sun exposure or cold temperatures can cause sensitive lip tissue to chap and split. For a time-tested antidote, Guerlain offers Baume de la Ferte, a soothing lip balm that has existed in France since 1882, but only recently arrived on this side of the Atlantic. Apply this product overnight as a lip treatment, under lipstick for day, or wear it alone for a hint of natural beige color. A key ingredient is Bordeaux wine that contains tannin, a soothing, natural antiseptic.

PUPA TAKES a colorful approach to lip care with Liptriss trilayer lipsticks that provide color, protective ingredients and shine in one stick. A layer containing calming ingredients like karite balm and vitamins A, E and F, soothes the lips, while a second layer adds long-wearing color, and a third heaps on shine. The net effect: strong, shiny color that protects. Liptriss comes in 16 shades and is available in department stores.

Makeup expert Ilana Harkavi, creator of Il-Makiage cosmetics, knows that busy women literally use cab time to apply makeup. Taxi Makeup, her newest creation, is a complete makeup kit designed for quick application in transit. A yellow vinyl envelope-style makeup case, with a black checker border, and "rear view" mirror inside the flap, contains pressed powder foundation, mousse rouge that you apply with your fingers, two eye pencils and lip gloss. Apply your own moisturizer before you leave — it helps makeup go on smoothly — and wait for a light to apply eye makeup. The kit retails for $25 and can be ordered by calling (800) 722-1011.

Custom-blended makeup is worth the wait. Visage Beaute cosmetics, available in salons and department store boutiques in Nordstrom's and Bendel's, will tailor-mix powder blushes and eye shadows to flatter you. Go with a clean face, or tissue off makeup, and watch as makeup is mixed. A sample will be given to you at the store, but the makeup will arrive a few days later by mail, packaged in compacts and inscribed with your name in gold. Visage Beaute ingredients are imported from Paris and Milan, and packaged in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Faces, a cosmetic and make-over boutique in Manhattan's Bumble + Bumble hair salon, offers star-quality makeup, and experts to make you over. Fine cosmetics not carried in department stores have long been available to models and stage and screen actors. Faces, developed by makeup artist Barbara Sansone, makes these cosmetics available to you. William Tuttle cosmetics, Diego Della Palma colors, and M.A.C., a Canadian line of makeup, are just some of the treasures to be discovered at Faces.

Maybelline introduces Shine Free Oil Control Loose Powder to add a matte finish to your face. The oil-blotting properties of powder have been known for centuries, but the new, non-comedognic Maybelline formula blots oil without clogging pores. The loose powder comes in an hourglass container that's capped with a powder brush. Choose the shade that best suits your face from Satin Ivory to Pink Angel Satin to Satin Beige. Shine Free Powder will be available late this month.

VALENTINE'S DAY Preview: A truly precious scent, Eau d'Hermes comes in a 16-ounce lead crystal flacon, for $550. To ensure handling with extra care, the new Hermes perfume is hand delivered to the lucky recipient. A mini, travel-size bottle is delivered, too, as an added extra.

Make your favorite perfume last with Perfixe, a futuristic mixture that allows your scent to linger. Apply a bit of Perfixe before dabbing on perfume, and its ingredients extend your scent's staying power.

'Great Glasses Search' fact of life for many

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

As I was cleaning the bathroom last week, it came as a shock to me to discover that for the last three months I have been spritzing my underarms with hair spray.

It only serves to reinforce my suspicion that without my glasses I have become not only a threat to myself, but to everyone else.

I can no longer be trusted to put gas in the car, dial a phone number, take medication or pick my mother out of a crowd. You don't want to hear what I do with a TV channel tuner control in my hand. If the volume doesn't kill you, the flashing subliminal programs will.

For those of you without a shred of compassion who say, "So, why don't you wear your glasses?" I will only offer this explanation.

There's a large group of people like me who roam the earth too chicken to put in contact lenses and too proud to wear glasses all the time. Every day of our lives, we begin anew the great glasses search.

We are a pathetic tribe who, if we could see to find our glasses in the first place, wouldn't need glasses in the second place.

Some of us store them on the top of our heads, but usually the mind goes at the same time the eyes go, so this is unwise. Others hang them on a string around the neck, but that's like labeling false teeth, so I subscribe to the theory that the more glasses you own, the better your odds are of stumbling over a pair. I have found extra glasses as bookmarks, on the back of the commode, in sewing baskets, in the car visor, on top of the mailbox, in coat pockets and in my husband's sports coats where he has stored them for me.

Had I planned better (or not panicked), I would have married a man who did not possess the same astigmatism as I. I am now at the stage where I ask, "What am I eating?" and he says, "I'm not sure. Did you take your napkin out of the ring?"

"Yes."

"Then it's asparagus at 9 o'clock."

The other night I distinguished something moving in the room and said, "How nice of you to drop by."

My husband said dryly, "Who are you talking to?"

"I thought someone just came into the room."

"A plane just went over the house and cast a shadow," he said.

Somehow, I find no comfort in the fact that I've beat the frizzies under my arms and that when I've run out of gas, the curl is still holding. I only know it's going to get worse.

Paris bares limbs before winter weather

By SYDNEY RUBIN

PARIS (AP) — Winter is raging, pitting fashion against common sense. While temperatures are falling fast, skirts are on the rise.

Paris has spoken and it has said short. Paris has called for sex. It didn't have to call twice.

"I love miniskirts," says one lithe lady in mid-thigh black leather, as secure in the line of her leg as a Swiss innkeeper in the beauty of his surroundings.

"It's sexy without being vulgar, it's young," she said. "You can't be sad in a miniskirt."

But you can be cold. The wind whips off the icy Seine and sensible people put on slacks and long coats. Still, many of the women whose limbs are as bare as the trees seem to have male companions to help them keep warm.

An older businesswoman emerges from an office building on the Avenue Montaigne in a pinstripe suit cut to mid-thigh, lacy black stockings and spiked heels. There is a spring to her walk, a briefcase in her hand and a dark, handsome man on her arm. He hails her a cab.

Under wintery skies on the Champs Elysees, a tall student with a ponytail, blue-jean jacket and purple sweatshirt displays about 4 inches of black, pleated skirt over a pair of carelessly beautiful bare legs. As she pauses to windowshop, her boyfriend stands between her and the wind.

Not since the 1960s has there been so much leg on the streets.

"There's a sense among a certain age group, women in their 30s, that they can be taken seriously in their jobs and still have fun," said an American writer who works both in Paris and New York. Women in Manhattan as well as Montparnasse have "a new confidence."

Paul Audrain, a business partner of Christian Lacroix, Paris' hottest designer, agrees.

"New social values and cultural trends have put the values of the 1970s into reverse," says Audrain. "Ten years ago any kind of personal expression was at a low point. Everyone wanted to dress down ... there was little visible difference between the sexes.

"All that has changed. There is a new emphasis on sexual values and individuality."

Women are throwing caution to the wind.

"Maybe we want one last teen-age fling before we get to be 55 and have to worry about our knees," said Rebbeca Voight, a fashion writer.

French women don't seem to worry and France is gripped less by the tedious creed that only young girls are sexy. Because they are not obsessed by the thought of looking miraculously young, they often do. Women of any age wear their hems where they like.

The most popular length hovers around the knee, but the hovering is ever higher. With all this bare leg when snowflakes are in the air, what will we see come spring?

"You wouldn't believe some of the sorry legs on some of my clients," said seamstress Yarka Seidlova, whose shop is in a comfortable Right Bank neighborhood. "Shortening skirts is practically all I'm doing these days. There is beaucoup work, but sometimes I feel guilty on the way to the bank."

The new style, she said, has put a lot of money in her pocket and in the bank accounts of big fashion houses which have been in a financial pinch.

All the dynamic designers of costly ready-to-wear lined up behind leggy luxury for spring 1988, beginning with Yves St. Laurent and ending with newcomer Patrick Kelly.

"People needed a break, miniskirts are a rebellion against conservative clothes," said Kelly. "For fashion houses the money is in selling short, to make long will hurt you this year."

Winter minis, he said, are meant to be worn with long coats and tights. But cold weather accessories are often beside the point.

"Did you see that woman in the plaid wool cap?" asked an office worker of her male colleague.

"No. What woman?" he replied.

"That woman who was just here, she had on 4 inches of skirt."

"No wonder I didn't notice her cap," he said.

Make-up tips help hide winter cold

Associated Press

Red, watery eyes, runny nose, blotchy skin and chapped lips can leave a woman ready to hide under the covers all day. But there's no need to let a nasty cold wreak havoc with your looks. Instead, learn to camouflage a cold with some instant makeup cures.

To wake up a pasty, tired complexion, Ladies' Home Journal recommends a gently cleansing scrub to rev up circulation and make skin glow. Apply only to nonirritated areas of the face. Hydrate with an oil-free moisturizer, reapplying frequently, to soothe soreness around nose.

Counter redness with a green color corrector. Then damp-sponge on a sheer liquid foundation to even out skin tone. Hide undereye circles with a lightweight concealer one shade lighter than skin tone. Whisk on palest pink loose powder all over and follow with bright rosy blush on temples, cheeks, chin and browbone.

Over-the-counter drops will perk up red eyes. Concentrate eye makeup on upper lids, using khaki or gray-brown shadow to neutralize redness. Add a dose of blue waterproof mascara to upper lashes. Moisturize lips with a combination lip balm-hydrating lipstick.

Master these easy tricks and face the world looking terrific despite the sniffles.

'The nose' makes scents of Paris fragrance industry

Associated Press

Annick Goutal is a professional "nose" — the most promising new personality on the Paris fragrance and skin care scene.

A nose is a person who composes perfume and, according to an article in the current issue of Connoisseur, most of them work in anonymity.

But the name Annick Goutal has become an international secret, better known as customers pass it from chic to chic.

She has outlets in Paris, elsewhere in France, New York, Montreal, London and Melbourne. Her business is now run by the Taittinger group, which owns hotels and the champagne company.

Goutal, 42, is a nose who became a nose comparatively late in life. A former model, she went into business with her former mother-in-law in 1980. Their idea was to sell beauty cream, but first they had to give it a scent to make it more appealing.

Goutal met with Henry Sorsana, head perfumer at Robertet, the fragrance laboratory that supplies scents for Patou, Chanel and Guerlain, and chose a scent she liked.

"This man had the kindness to open the whole formula up for me," she said. "Thirty-seven components. To see my reaction. I left my meeting with 10 vials of raw materials to take home and memorize. When I went back, it was to begin seven years of working with that man. Every time when I smelled some new ingredient, I felt this rush of emotion."

She built her olfactory memory by sampling tens of thousands of products, taking down her impressions in notebooks full of the metaphors of personal associations.

When Goutal's husband, cellist Alain Meunier, told her to do the scent of the dunes on the Ile de Re where they vacation, she did so and added the scent of Earl Gray tea that he likes with breakfast. The scent, Sables (French for Sands), is popular with musicians such as Mstislav Rostropovich and Claudio Abbado.

The basic note of Goutal's own signature scent is tomato leaf.

"Young, fresh, a little acid," she said. "Completely tonic."

Although Taittinger owns her distributorship and half her creative operation Goutal maintains the spirit of a boutique.

"A lot of young perfumers would be more creative if they were not working for a big house," she said.

DEAR ABBY

Students learn life's lessons when free to choose

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am the president of the Associated Students of the University of California at Berkeley. Your column regarding behavior in college dorms was forwarded to me by a campus administrator. I can speak only for the students here, but I think your readers' letters were somewhat hysterical on several counts.

First, even if college authorities wanted to provide a morally sanitized atmosphere for their students, they could not. Students, like other Americans, are entitled to constitutional privacy rights, which prevent university officials from peering over their shoulders at all hours of the night and day. Most university dorms, including Berkeley's, forbid use of drugs or alcohol in public areas — but universities cannot and should not control what students do in the privacy of their own rooms. If your readers have a problem with the Constitution, they should write to their congressmen.

Second, the existence of co-ed bathrooms hardly converts dormitories into "brothels." We trust young adults to vote for our presidents and die for our country; I hope we can also trust them to use adjoining bathroom stalls without being overcome by their hormones. In fact, living in the close quarters of a residence hall is not particularly conducive to romance: The existence of roommates usually presents more of an inconvenience to sexual adventurism than an incentive. Furthermore, based on my observation of both co-ed and sexually segregated dorms at Berkeley, co-ed dorms actually foster sincere respect and dialogue between young men and women. It is when men and women are forcibly separated on all but social occasions that they view each other as nothing but sexual objects.

It is the business of colleges and universities to educate students. It is also their business to provide an atmosphere where students wishing to refrain from sexual behavior, drinking or drug use can do so without harassment or embarrassment. But universities are not monasteries; they are not equipped to be moral policemen. Therefore, some college students do drink and have sex, just as they did when your readers went to college. Behavior hasn't changed all that much; students today are simply more honest about it. — MATTHEW DENN

DEAR PRESIDENT DENN: Thank you. I agree, and I'm sure you speak for many.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe you can help me on this. A wife inherits money from a wealthy relative. Is it hers to spend as she wishes? Or does her husband have a say in the matter? We live in a community property state. — WINDFALL

DEAR WINDFALL: In a community property state, only money EARNED must be shared between husband and wife. Money INHERITED belongs to the person to whom it was left.

DEAR ABBY: While I was in college in 1972 in Orlando, Fla. (Florida Technical University), my roommate was in a financial bind and he sold me his grandfather's Civil War saber. My roommate's name was Charlie Wheatley. I would like to return the saber because it's an heirloom and really should be owned by someone in Charlie's family, but I've lost track of Charlie and can't locate him.

I would be ever so grateful, Abby, if you would print this. Maybe Charlie or one of his friends or relatives will see it and write to you. I hope so. — DOUG FRAZEUR (NOW IN MINNESOTA)

DEAR DOUG: I don't usually do this, but I'll make a stab at it. Anybody out there seen Charlie? If so, please contact me.

DEAR ABBY: You keep hearing about how hard women work to stay trim and slim until they get married, then after the wedding they let themselves go.

Well, how about the men? I'll bet if the truth were known, men put on just as much weight — maybe more — than their wives after the wedding. Check it out. — FAT AND SASSY LADY

DEAR LADY: I checked it out with the American Dietetic Association. I was told that after 13 years of marriage, the average American woman will have gained 23 pounds, while her husband will have put on 18.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 23 and have been dating the same man for eight years. We have decided to get married soon. The problem: My fiance has a group of buddies — most of them he has grown up with and they are very close. When one of these buddies gets married, they have a traditional bachelor party, including strippers.

I don't approve of this at all and asked my fiance how he felt about it, and he said he didn't care for that sort of thing either. When he told the organizer of this party that he didn't want strippers at the stag, he was told it wasn't up to him, it was up to the guys giving the party, and they wanted strippers.

One of the wives said it was no big deal, but I disagree. What's the solution? — PRUDE

DEAR PRUDE: Your fiance should inform his buddies that if they insist on having strippers, knowing how strongly he feels about it, they should not be surprised if he skips out when the strippers shimmy in.

Is your social life in a slump? Lonely? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. Send a check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Reagan seeks total of $35.6 million in aid for Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will ask Congress for $32 million in non-lethal assistance to Nicaraguan rebels and $3.6 million for replenishment of ammunition and antiaircraft missiles, House Republican leader Bob Michel said today.

Michel also said that the $3.6 million in military aid would be held in escrow until March 31 pending a determination by the president that a cease fire is in place between the rebels and Nicaragua's Marxist-led Sandinista government.

If there is no cease fire, Michel said he assumed the military portion, including shoulder-fired Redeye missiles, would be released to keep pressure on the Sandinistas for a settlement.

Michel said the package was designed to cover a four-month period.

He said he believed the proposal could prevail in Congress now that it has been scaled down from earlier suggestions of figures as high as $270 million over 18 months.

"We have got good grounds to sell the members," the Republican leader said. "I am counting on it." He added, however, "It is not going to be an overwhelming win."

He said Lt. Gen. Colin Powell, the president's national security adviser, assured the Republican leaders who met with the president that there would be consultation with leaders of Central American democracies and that their views would "have a bearing" on administration actions.

"The president feels we have a moral obligation to keep supporting that resistance and have the pressure keep up until we are sure that President (Daniel) Ortega is irreversibly going down the road to democracy," Powell said in another forum.

"The focus is on the Sandinistas, their promises and their actions," Reagan said Monday night in his State of the Union speech, the most visible lobbying platform he will have before the Contra aid request goes to a showdown vote in the House next week.

White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show, said Reagan was committed to additional Contra aid because "this is exactly the wrong time for Congress to consider cutting off that aid as the freedom fighters are about to enter into those negotiations."

Secretary of State George Shultz, who appeared on CBS-TV's "This Morning" show, said the rebels had played "an important part" in progress toward peace in Central America, "so we must continue to support them if we are really going to support peace."

Powell, interviewed on NBC's "Today" show, said that no major increase in aid was expected, but that "the request that the president will be sending up tomorrow will be a level that will sustain freedom fighters in the field at the level they have been operating for the last several months."

In a statement, the Nicaraguan government denounced Reagan's decision to ask for more aid, saying he is opting "for war and impoverishment in Central America, instead of for peace and prosperity."

Both Reagan and Contra opponents are trying to woo the three dozen or so House members who remain undecided on the issue, and both sides say the Feb. 3 House vote to decide the future of U.S. policy in Central America will be extremely close.

Those who oppose aid gained momentum 10 days ago when Nicaragua's president, Daniel Ortega, agreed to a series of concessions in order to keep alive a peace plan signed by Nicaragua and its four neighbors.

Democratic opponents of new aid to the Contra rebels have been eager for a showdown vote on the administration aid request, believing they can derail Reagan's policy.

But while Ortega has made moves toward fulfilling his promises to negotiate directly with the Contras and to restore civil liberties, few on Capitol Hill trust the Nicaraguan leader to sustain the promised reforms. Voting against Contra aid could open Democrats to charges that they abandoned the Contras and took the pressure off Ortega.

NATION IN BRIEF

National testing program may be heading for an 'F'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of a federally financed student testing program that bills itself as "the nation's report card" are afraid that it — and not the youngsters — flunked on the latest round of reading exams.

The National Assessment of Educational Progress is postponing release of the 1986 test results because it cannot explain a sharp drop in reading scores for 9- and 17-year-olds.

In the meantime, says executive director Archie E. Lapointe, the organization will retest 2,500 youngsters with both its 1984 and 1986 exams to see if the 1986 test itself was responsible for the drop.

Lapointe said Monday that the inexplicable drop occurred in the reading scores on the exam given to 70,000 youths in 1986. Scores fell for 9- and 17-year-olds, but not for 13-year-olds.

"It's such a sharp loss that had it occurred, just about every teacher of those youngsters in the country would have perceived (it)," he said. Calling that "an incredible, unbelievable loss," Lapointe said flatly, "We don't believe the data."

The testing program is run under a $4 million-a-year federal contract by Educational Testing Service of Lawrence Township, N.J.

Group seeks confrontation

MARION, Utah (AP) — Leaders of a polygamist clan barricaded 11 days spurned a goodwill gesture and told a friend they remained firm in their belief that confrontation will bring about the resurrection of their dead patriarch.

The 15 people who have been barricaded since the Jan. 16 bombing of a Mormon chapel were visited Monday by Ogden Kraut, who delivered milk and a box of baby cereal as a show of good faith by authorities. He returned with no concessions.

"Frankly, I'm somewhat disappointed," said Doug Bodrero, deputy state director of public safety.

He said Kraut would return to the stronghold today "to further open up dialogue."

Kraut, a Salt Lake photographer, has known the Singer family for about 18 years, ever since the Singers read his religious writings. Kraut, like the clan, is independent — not associated with any of the major polygamist organizations.

"He says the people inside are...still resolved that a confrontation of some type is necessary for their revelation to come to pass," Bodrero said.

Parents protest blackface

NEW YORK (AP) — Several parents have demanded disciplinary action against a white teacher in Howard Beach who allowed a white student to paint her face black to portray the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. in a school play.

"They went back to Al Jolson to portray Martin Luther King," said Cal Hunter, co-chairman of the Community Partnership, a group of parents and residents of the Queens neighborhood who came together following a 1986 racial attack there that drew national attention.

School District 27 Superintendent Colman Genn said the skit, performed Jan. 14, featured a white third-grade girl who wore black gloves and blackface to portray the slain civil rights leader.

"I think it's ridiculous," Betty Wilson, a black parent with two children in the mostly white school, said Monday. "Martin Luther King wasn't about color, he was about content. The child could have portrayed him without wearing blackface."

GREENFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Hundreds of youngsters applauded when their elementary school received a donation of 300 stainless steel placesettings, ending student protests against plastic forks and knives in the lunchroom.

Restaurateur William A. Sandri, who graduated from Four Corners Elementary School 30 years ago, drew cheers from 250 children in the auditorium Monday when he announced his gift.

Mecham borrowed funds despite advice, panel hears

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Evan Mecham ignored advice from his chief of staff that it would be "foolish" to borrow money from the governor's protocol fund, House members considering whether to impeach him were told.

Mecham reiterated through his spokesman Monday that he intends to serve out his term. He was scheduled to meet this afternoon with Secretary of State Rose Mofford to get the official word that he must either resign by Saturday or face a recall election in May.

Mrs. Mofford, a Democrat who would replace the Republican governor if he quit or was forced from office, certified 301,032 recall petition signatures Monday, well over the 216,746 needed to force a recall vote.

Democrat Carolyn Warner, who lost to Mecham in November 1986 in a three-way race, is the only recall election opponent so far. John Rhodes, the former U.S. House Republican leader, has been urged by business leaders to run but has not indicated whether he will.

Mecham, 63, faces a criminal trial March 9 on charges he concealed a $350,000 campaign loan.

A House select committee is considering whether to impeach him on that issue as well as the claim that Mecham's auto dealership illegally borrowed $80,000 in what House special counsel William French contends was state money from the governor's protocol fund.

Mecham is expected to be the last witness before the panel, either late this week or early next week.

House investigator William Woods testified Monday night that he had interviewed former Mecham chief of staff Jim Colter, who wrote the checks from the protocol fund. Woods said Colter had said he advised the governor against borrowing money from the fund.

"His (Colter's) point was that that was foolish to do," Woods testified, but Colter reported that the governor ordered him to do it anyway.

The governor's protocol fund was created with money raised by Mecham's inaugural ball.

Deputy Maricopa County Attorney Howard Schwartz testified that his office dropped a civil investigation into the inaugural funds after Mecham campaign finance officials promised to turn the money over for use as a protocol fund. If the agreement hadn't been reached, he said his office would have sued to recover the money for state use.

The loan to the governor's auto dealership was "totally contrary to our agreement," Schwartz said, adding that he considered the protocol fund to be state money.

Democratic districts may be losing population

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional districts represented by blacks and Democrats are suffering population declines as Americans shift toward the Sun Belt, a private political consultant reports.

Nearly every House district will have to undergo some kind of redrawing after the 1990 Census, Kimball Brace, president of Election Data Services Inc., said Monday.

Of the current districts, those held by Democrats are more likely to have lost population, while gainers tend more often to be districts in Republican hands, he pointed out.

Population changes appear likely to give six more House seats to California, according to 1990 population projections done by Temple University, he added, with Texas expected to gain four seats and Florida three.

On the other hand, New York could lose three seats, and Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania two apiece.

"Of the 177 Republican members of the House of Representatives, 86 percent have gained population, while only 73 percent of the current (258) Democratic members have done likewise," Brace reported.

Using Census Bureau estimates of the 1986 populations of each congressional district, he pointed out that of the 50 districts suffering the largest population losses, 44 are represented by Democrats.

And, he added, of 21 districts with 40 percent or more black residents, 16 lost population. On the other hand, he noted, of the 37 districts with 20 percent or more Hispanic populations, 33 gained population between 1980 and 1986.

Questions remain, however, about how the shifts will affect future elections.

If people moving into Republican districts adopt the outlook and politics of people there, it could benefit the GOP, Brace noted. On the other hand, shifting Democratic voters into Republican districts could change the balance in those areas.

Brace reported that the House district suffering the largest population loss is that of George W. Crockett, D-Mich. It has lost nearly 70,000 people, a 13.6 percent decline.

Other districts suffering major losses include those of Reps. William Coyne, D-Pa.; Henry J. Nowak, D-N.Y.; John Conyers, D-Mich., and Robert Garcia, D-N.Y.

Brace said that while Democratic-held districts are more likely to be losing people, there are some notable exceptions in the farm belt, including a 28,326-resident loss in Illinois' 18th district, represented by House Minority Leader Robert Michel.

On the plus side, the biggest gaining district was the 26th in Texas, represented by Republican Dick Armey, the study showed. Population there increased by 41.7 percent, gaining nearly 220,000 people.

Other seats with major increases included those of Reps. Bill Nelson, D-Fla.; J.J. Pickle, D-Texas; Al McCandless, R-Calif., and Don Young, R-Alaska.

Brace's estimates of shifting seats in the House are based on projections of what the state populations will be in 1990. The national Census will be conducted April 1, 1990, with the count to be announced on Dec. 31 of that year.

The seats in the House will be divided among the states based on the new population estimates, with state legislatures then drawing the new district lines, probably in time for the 1992 elections.

Nationwide, House seats will have to average over 550,000 people each, according to Census estimates.

Battleship, copter carrier to leave gulf, reports say

WASHINGTON (AP) — A battleship and a helicopter carrier will be withdrawn from the Persian Gulf as part of a reduction in forces authorized by Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci, Pentagon officials say.

The officials, who insisted on anonymity, said Monday that Carlucci has authorized a slight reduction in the number of Navy ships in the gulf, and a realignment in remaining forces.

"Our commitment to protect commercial ships flying the U.S. flag is unchanged," said one source. "It's just that we don't need certain types of ships at the moment."

At least 30 U.S. ships are now assigned to the Middle East region, 17 inside the Persian Gulf and the others in the northern Arabian Sea.

The officials said the force reduction would begin around Feb. 18 and eventually reduce the number of ships on Middle East duty by three or four.

The Navy will allow the battleship Iowa to steam for home without replacing it with another battleship, and will do the same with the amphibious helicopter carrier Okinawa, the sources said.

The Okinawa's departure from the Persian Gulf will mark the withdrawal of Navy mine-sweeping helicopters from the region and a complete reliance on mine-sweeping ships, officials said.

Pentagon sources said during the weekend that Britain, France and Italy have reached an agreement to coordinate their mine-sweeping activities in the gulf under a joint command. U.S. mine-sweeping ships will also continue operations.

In addition to the reductions, a number of regular, one-for-one rotations will take place over the next month, officials said.

The aircraft carrier Midway will be replaced by the carrier Enterprise in the northern Arabian Sea and four other ships now operating inside the gulf will be replaced, the sources said. The cruiser Turner and frigates Carr, Elrod and Gallery will be replaced by the cruiser Wainwright and frigates Williams, Roberts and Simpson.

The rotations started over the weekend. The amphibious dock ship Portland arrived in the gulf and will soon replace the Mount Vernon, another amphibious dock ship, one official said.

The Portland will probably remain in the gulf at least through February and will be joined soon by the amphibious transport Trenton. Current plans call for the Trenton to replace both the Okinawa and Portland, dropping the number of U.S. Navy ships inside the gulf from 17 to 16.

The Navy now expects the Okinawa to leave the area around Feb. 20. The battleship Iowa, meanwhile, will probably leave the northern Arabian Sea with two escorts.

1 million people may have AIDS by '91, expert says

LONDON (AP) — The first global AIDS summit opened today with a prediction that the number of people suffering from the deadly disease will reach 1 million in the next three years.

Also, Princess Anne urged an immediate war on AIDS and Britain helped set a tone of urgency by announcing an $8.1 million grant to developing countries to combat the disease.

Dr. Jonathan Mann, director of the World Health Organization's Special Program on AIDS, told the 600 delegates "several hundred million people" may be vulnerable to AIDS because of their sexual behavior.

"Let us remember that we are still in the early phases of a global epidemic whose first decade gives us every rational reason for concern," he said.

Using the conservative estimate that there are now 5 million carriers of the AIDS virus worldwide, Mann predicted "a cumulative total of 1 million AIDS cases would be expected by 1991."

Health ministers from 122 countries and senior advisers from 28 others, including the United States, gathered for the three-day meeting at the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Center, opposite Westminster Abbey.

The gathering aims to map a global strategy for combating AIDS, which has spread to at least 130 countries since it was identified in 1981. It is co-sponsored by WHO, a Geneva-based U.N. agency, and the British government.

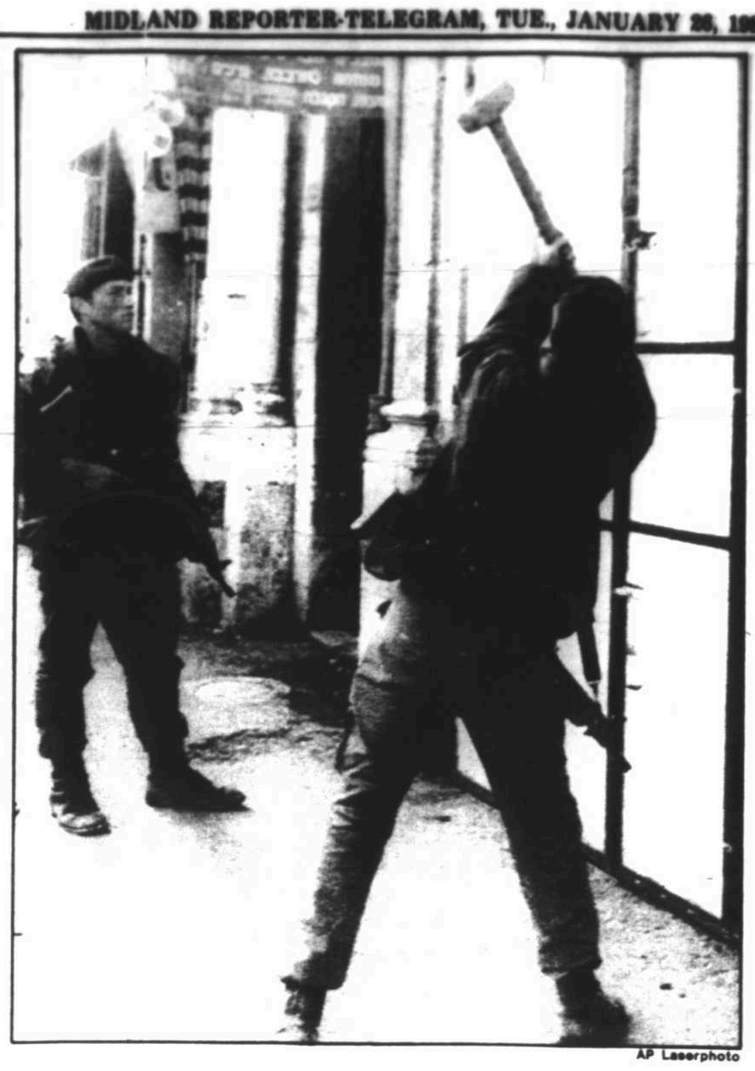

Princess Anne told the delegates: "The global response to AIDS has been characterized by a series of delays.

"World summits are not quick or easy to organize and don't always produce results. Please make this one work. Make this summit be the forerunner of the most genuine international cooperation ever seen."

Dr. Halfdan Mahler, the WHO's director-general, spoke after the princess, saying that by uniting, "courageously and vigorously, we will demonstrate that a global effort can — yes will — stop AIDS.

Anne recalled being told as a child that "prevention is better than cure." With AIDS, she said, "when there is no cure, prevention is the only answer" and public education is the key.

Health Secretary John Moore announced Britain's $8.1 million contribution to its Overseas Aid Program.

An Israeli soldier wields a sledgehammer to break a lock on a shop in Gaza City, in the Israeli-occupied Gaza strip. Arabs closed their shops Monday to protest Israeli policies in the Occupied Territories, but soldiers opened the shops using force. If shopkeepers persist in closing their stores, the stores' entries can be welded shut and the shops forbidden to open.

Israeli police shoot protester; Army forces shops open

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli border police today shot and wounded a Palestinian demonstrator in the West Bank town of Jenin while soldiers forced open shuttered stores in an effort to break commercial strikes by Arab merchants.

The Palestinian man was shot in the leg when dozens of protesters, their faces concealed with kaffiyeh headdresses, attacked the Israeli patrol in the Jenin refugee camp, the army command said.

A military spokesman said the patrol first used tear gas and rubber bullets and then opened fire when their lives were endangered.

Gen. Ehud Barak, deputy chief of staff, said the army would reimpose curfews and beat protesters if unrest persisted, Israel radio reported.

Responding to criticism of his policy of beating demonstrators, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said soldiers would only use physical force "against perpetrators of violence during the violence."

"There is no policy of punishing by beatings," Rabin said. "The orders are against using force such as beatings even in hot pursuit...If (the perpetrator) doesn't resist, the soldiers won't use force."

Stores in Nablus, the largest town in the occupied West Bank, and Al-Ram, 10 miles north of Jerusalem, were closed today, the army command said.

In east Jerusalem, stores were closed for the 20th straight day to protest the army's handling of violence that broke out Dec. 8 in the territories occupied by Israel in the 1967 Middle East War.

In Ramallah, reporters saw soldiers open stores by lifting metal shutters whose locks had been broken earlier by the army.

In Gaza City, stores opened, and Israel's Itim news agency reported nearly all the 50,000 Palestinians from the Gaza Strip who work in Israel went to work.

Aryeh Pikl, spokesman for the Ministry of Labor, said a survey of 224 Israeli business employing 6,000 Palestinians indicated attendance was near normal, ranging from a low of 68 percent in services such as hotels to 94 percent in agriculture.

"The absences did not cause harm except for firms that were in trouble anyway. People managed. They improvised," Pikl said.

Labor Minister Moshe Katzav said if strikes persist he will consider allowing more workers to sleep in Israel if security officials agreed and employers provided reasonable shelter.

Less than two weeks ago, more than half the Gaza employees stayed home because of unrest.

The Palestine Press said leaflets signed by the Palestine Liberation Organization and the United National Leadership of the Uprising called for a three-day general strike in Jerusalem and the occupied West Bank starting Sunday. It was to commemorate the 38 Arabs who have been killed by Israeli gunfire since Dec. 8.

Similar strike calls were made in Gaza.

In an unprecedented move, the leaders of Christian sects in Jerusalem signed a statement calling for a day of prayer and fasting in solidarity with Palestinians.

"The recent painful events in our land which have resulted in so many victims, both killed and wounded, are a clear indication of the grievous suffering of our people on the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip," the Jerusalem Post quoted a leaflet given to worshippers at St. George's Anglican Cathedral in Jerusalem as saying.

Israeli military leaders, meanwhile, said they would continue to use force to maintain order.

Three U.S. citizens filed complaints with the U.S. Consulate in Arab east Jerusalem, charging that they were beaten by Israeli soldiers, consulate spokesman David Good said.

He refused to identify the complainants but said two of them were Arab-Americans.

Workers pull more bodies from mine

LAS ESPERANZAS, Mexico (AP) — Workers pulled more bodies today from the charred depths of a coal mine after an explosion and fire, and the miner leading the rescue effort said 33 men died and at least 10 more were believed trapped.

"We don't believe there's a possibility that anyone remains alive," said Felipe Perez Ortiz, the miner heading the rescue team at the northern Mexico mine. He said the work was going on about 100 yards below ground.

Asked how much longer they would work, he replied: "It will take awhile because of the difficulty of working there. There's a lot of debris. These places don't have any air and there's a lot of gas."

Perez Ortiz cautioned that he is not an authorized spokesman for the mining company or the government.

Federal authorities said earlier that at least 20 miners died, 18 were missing and 50 were injured in Monday's fire and explosion. An investigator said 138 men were in the mine at the time of the fire.

Friends and relatives of the buried miners huddled around campfires overnight outside the mine's entrances, about 80 yards from the mine shaft where workers were bringing victims to the surface.

As bodies were slowly recovered, guards at the gates called for family members to come inside and identify them.

Jorge Antonio Bonita said he was asked to identify a body believed to be that of his brother.

"We couldn't tell who it was," Bonita said. "He didn't have a crown (on his tooth), so maybe it wasn't him."

Disaster struck in "Mine 4½," operated by Compania Hullera Mexicana, at 8:30 a.m. Monday, about 1½ hours after the first of the day's three shifts of workers entered it.

Gerardo Acosta Garcia, an investigator with the federal Public Ministry, said 138 men were inside when an electric transformer at one of the mine's substations short-circuited and caused the explosion and fire.

Twenty bodies were recovered, and 18 miners were unaccounted for, Acosta said early today. Authorities said then it was possible some of the 18 men had walked away.

Acosta said 50 men were injured, five of them seriously, and about 50 others "walked out of the mine by themselves."

"We don't know how many more (bodies) we'll recover," he said in an interview at the gates outside the mine. "It's very difficult to say exactly how many are down there."

The mine is about 70 miles southwest of the Texas border community of Eagle Pass and a couple of miles outside this mining town in northern Coahuila state.

Acosta said the bodies, many burned beyond recognition, were being identified by family members or by the identification numbers of the lamps they carried with them underground.

Rebecca Alfaro, mother of one of the missing workers, said she learned of the explosion on the radio.

Mrs. Alfaro said her 18-year-old son, Juan Hilario Redondo, started working at the mine just two months ago.

"We've been here since 11 in the morning (Monday), and we still don't know anything about him," she said before dawn today.

Aron Alfaro Garza, Redondo's uncle, complained that mine authorities were not giving family members information.

"It's total anguish. We see all the ambulances coming and going, and they don't tell us anything," Garza said.

More than 100 firefighters from towns as far away as Monclova, about 50 miles south of Las Esperanzas, battled all day Monday to put out the fire.

Sharon stirs emotions in Moslem quarter

By DAN IZENBERG

JERUSALEM (AP) — Former Defense Minister Ariel Sharon's move to an apartment in the busy Moslem quarter of Jerusalem's Old City has stirred tensions between Israelis and Arabs and even among his neighbors.

The move last month also highlighted a program by a little-known yeshiva, or religious seminary, to establish a large Jewish community in the Moslem neighborhood.

Over the past six years, the Ateret Cohanim Yeshiva has bought dozens of apartments from Arab tenants in the quarter and used them to house their 160 students or rented them to Jewish families.

The yeshiva says Palestinans sell because they are offered good prices. Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization view such Arabs as traitors and have issued death warrants against them.

Sharon, now the trade minister, and his wife, Lily, are the yeshiva's most recent and most prominent tenants.

The three-story building in which they live is topped by a giant, nine-branched Jewish candelabrum.

Sharon moved in after Arabs killed two Israelis in the neighborhood, where 23,000 Arabs live. He said he intended to demonstrate that Jews had the right to live anywhere in Israel. He hoped other Israelis would follow his example.

But Sharon's presence bodes ill for Jewish-Arab relations in the city. It already has changed the lives of some of his Arab neighbors.

Fatmeh Kawasmeh lives with five of her children in an apartment opposite Sharon's. Below her apartment, two armed border policemen and a plainclothes guard are stationed permanently in front of the building's metal entrance.

Mrs. Kawasmeh told The Associated Press that since Sharon moved in, the guards have harassed relatives and friends who have come to visit. The guards prevented her son-in-law, Farid, from going upstairs to pick up his wife, she said.

"When I first saw Farid was having trouble, I went down with my daughter to see what was wrong," said Mrs. Kawasmeh. "I started to shout at them to let Farid up, and the guards sprayed us with tear gas."

Police arrested Mrs. Kawasmeh and Farid, releasing her after two hours and Farid after 48 hours, she said.

"I have been living here for almost 50 years, since the days of the British," said Mrs. Kawasmeh. "My husband and I raised three boys and six girls here."

Now, Mrs. Kawasmeh said, members of the yeshiva are trying to persuade her to sell.

"But we don't want to leave," she said. "We want to stay here." Making a sawing motion with one hand against the other, she added: "Even if they cut us and order us to leave by force, we won't go."

Turmoil in Israel hurting nation's military, image

New York Times News Service

JERUSALEM — Palestinian-Israeli turmoil over the last six weeks has done significant damage to Israel, according to officials and analysts here. Although at least 30 Palestinians and no Israelis have died in the clashes, the state of Israel has been hurt in several clear ways:

— Lowering the general military readiness of the army, whose main infantry units have been preoccupied with policing the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

— Severely hurting, at least in the short term, Israel's image as a humane and democratic society, thereby hurting the country's international stature even with its close ally the United States.

— And imposing economic costs on parts of the agricultural sector — which is dependent on Arab labor — and the tourist industry — where bookings have dipped as potential tourists delay or cancel trips.

"It has had a definite effect on our readiness," said Capt. Ari, an infantry battalion commander who declined to give his last name.

"We have no choice, but the fact is that we have been tied down here (in the West Bank) instead of being on the front or going through our regular training maneuvers," declared the 28-year-old officer.

"It also costs a lot of money keeping all those helicopters in the air," he noted, referring to the army and police use of the helicopters as a reconnaissance tool and to disperse tear gas on rioters in Palestinian refugee camps spread over a wide area.

The exact economic and logistical cost to security forces is being kept a closely guarded secret, but Police Minister Haim Bar-Lev has asked for a budget increase in order to hire 600 more policemen.

Some army generals have indicated that Israel has more than tripled its army units in the West Bank and Gaza, but some officers say the figure is even greater — involving all of the standing army's infantry units.

Autopsy shows Colombian official killed after abduction

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Attorney General Carlos Mauro Hoyos was killed hours after his abduction by a fusillade that shattered his skull, an autopsy showed today. Drug traffickers claimed responsibility.

President Virgilio Barco, in a nationwide television and radio address Monday night, said the government would not "cave in to vile blackmail and infamous threats" from Colombia's cocaine barons.

A group calling itself Los Extraditables said they killed Hoyos on Monday because he persisted trying to extradite Colombians to the United States to face drug charges. A man who called the Caracol radio network with the claim told reporters where to find the body.

Bogota newspapers today urged Barco not to back down in the war on drugs.

The daily El Espectador, whose editor, Guillermo Cano, was killed by drug traffickers in December 1986 for speaking out against them, said the nation has been issued an ultimatum by the "narcotraficantes" and should not surrender.

Hoyos, 49, was kidnapped at 7:20 a.m. near the Medellin airport by at least six men in three jeeps and a car who sprayed his Mercedes Benz with submachine-gun fire, killing his two bodyguards.

"The prosecutor did not die as a result of the wounds he received during the abduction, but several hours later, finished off by gunfire," said Education Minister Antoni Yepez-Parra, a physician, who assisted in the autopsy in Medellin.

Yepez said Hoyos was killed at about 4 p.m. The attorney general's handcuffed and blindfolded body was discovered about an hour later in a pine forest 13 miles southeast of Medellin. Bullets had shattered his skull. Twelve bullets were found in his body.

During the abduction, Hoyos was shot in his right foot and a lung. "They were serious wounds, but not necessarily fatal," Yepez told reporters.

When he was kidnapped, Hoyos was on his way to the airport for a flight to Bogota.

While searching the countryside around Colombia's second-largest city for Hoyos, security forces stumbled upon and freed a Bogota mayoral candidate who was abducted by narcotics traffickers Jan. 18.

The candidate, Carlos Andres Pastrana, was unharmed and police said they captured one of his kidnappers. Pastrana, 34, is the son of former President Misael Pastrana.

Both Pastrana's kidnapping last week and Hoyos' murder were claimed by a group calling itself "Los Extraditables," which on Sunday declared "total war" on efforts to extradite drug traffickers.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Australians throw party around Sydney harbor

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Two million Australians threw a party around Sydney's harbor to wish their country a happy 200th birthday today in a wild celebration attended by the heir to the British throne.

Thousands of aborigines, meanwhile, staged their biggest demonstration in the nation's history to protest past wrongs by Australians of European ancestry and what the aborigines claim is ongoing discrimination.

Celebrating spectators camped overnight to gain good vantage points and marked Australia Day with champagne, beer, barbecues and a $150,000 fireworks spectacular over the harbor.

Waterfront households held lawn parties to watch a grand parade of sails, including a fleet of ships that re-enacted the voyage of the first European settlers — convicts from England.

In his bicentennial message, Prime Minister Bob Hawke called on Australians to reflect on the country's heritage and multicultural makeup and said the nation should not feel collective guilt about past wrongs done to aborigines, the country's original inhabitants.

About 11,000 aborigines converged on Sydney from across Australia's outback and staged a peaceful march through the city of 3.3 million, waving banners, demanding land rights and shouting "Shame! Shame!"

Mexican bond sale set

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government's first bond auction under its new foreign debt exchange program will be held Feb. 19, says Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricioli.

"In principle, we believe that the reaction (to the program) has been positive, but we should wait until the first auction for the final results." His remarks at a late Sunday press conference were printed in local newspapers on Monday.

Petricioli said the government is realistic in its goal of selling as much as $20 billion in bonds to help unload part of its foreign debt of about $105 billion, the second highest in the developing world after Brazil.

The program involves exchanging some of the debt the government owes foreign commercial bankers for new, 20-year bonds that will be issued by the government.

The bonds will be backed by $10 billion worth of special securities to be issued early this year by the U.S. government. Mexico is expected to pay about $2 billion for the 20-year, U.S. zero coupon bonds, which pay no interest but are issued at a sharp discount of their face value.

French, Italians deny reports

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — French and Italian officials denied their navies will join Britain's to hunt mines in the Persian Gulf under a unified European command, but they said their search for the explosives has not stopped.

Reagan administration sources in Washington said Sunday that Britain, France and Italy had agreed to work together under a single command to sweep mines in the gulf.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, declined to say who would oversee the arrangement, but one source said a British naval officer at one point had been selected to lead the joint command initially.

A British Defense Ministry spokesman in London on Monday refused comment on the existence of any such agreement, saying he could not discuss "operational matters."

A French diplomatic source, demanding anonymity, said there was no basis for the report that the French navy would operate under command of any foreign navy.

Quakes hit Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Two earthquakes cut off telephone lines and made people rush into the streets in panic in southern Yugoslavia but caused no damage or injuries, the state Tanjug news agency reported today.

Both quakes measured 3.6 on the Richter scale, the report said.

The first one struck at 8:23 p.m. Monday (2:23 p.m. EST) in Niksic, a town 48 miles northwest of Titograd, the capital of the republic of Montenegro, part of the Yugoslavian federation.

Tanjug said the tremor caused "real panic in the city, interrupting telephone lines and sending many people fleeing into the streets with their children."

Thirty minutes later, another tremor struck at Neum, a resort on the Adriatic Sea in Bosnia, halfway betwen Dubrovnik and Split.

Tanjug said the second quake also caused panic in Neum and nearby Metkovic, but no damage was reported.

Haitian opposition calls for annulment of elections

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haitian opposition leaders today called for a nationwide strike to demand the annulment of elections they say were rigged by the military-dominated junta.

"The Committee for Democratic Agreement is calling on all Haitians to participate in a warning strike Thursday to demand the annulment of the recent electoral parody," said a statement signed by four former presidential candidates.

The four political leaders — Louis Dejoie II, Marc Bazin, Sylvio Claude and Gerard Gourgue — said they refuse "all collaboration...with a government that the force of bayonets has hoisted into power."

The leaders, who ran in independently-run elections Nov. 29 that were aborted because of violence that killed at least 34 people, boycotted the government-run balloting Jan. 17.

The committee, along with 50 peasant, labor, student and religious groups, organized the national strike that shut down most of Haiti the day before the Jan. 17 election and the boycott that kept most Haitians away from the polls.

The committee and two defeated presidential candidates rejected President-elect Leslie Manigat's offer for reconciliation, saying the vote had been rigged in his favor by the army.

"Mr. Manigat was nominated, not elected. This is a coup d'etat by the ballot boxes," Hubert DeRonceray, one of the four leading candidates in the government-run election, said in a telephone interview.

DeRonceray and lawyer Gregoire Eugene, another candidate, have said they will contest the results.

Manigat, in his first news conference held Monday in the garden of his home six miles from the capital, called on all Haitians to reconcile their differences and praised the junta led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy for carrying out the elections peacefully.

"I've stretched my hand out to the opposition, the ball is in their court," Manigat said. "If they want to be intransigent, it is their right. Every democracy has an opposition."

He said he was optimistic the United States and France would resume aid to Haiti, cut off after the November election debacle.

The junta has promised to hand over power to Manigat Feb. 7, 1988.
