The North American P-51 Mustang became one of the great fighters and bomber-escort aircraft of World War II. Refitted with a powerful Rolls-Royce engine, the P-51 redefined speed and agility after it was. The P-51D, dubbed Old Red Nose, in 1957 became the first of the Confederate Air Force's 150-plane squadron. The Mustang will be among World War II aircraft on display during Airsho'91, Oct. 12 and 13 at Midland International Airport.

Verbal duels air

A daily syndicated radio debate between former gubernatorial candidates Clayton Williams and Jim Mattox debuted in the Permian Basin Tuesday on KRIL AM-1410 in Odessa. The five-minute verbal duels are aired twice daily, at 8:10 a.m. and 5:20 p.m. "We feel this program will have an enormous following and great popularity with our listeners here in the Permian Basin. All the topics will be of statewide interest, but Clayton Williams' ties to the local area should gain us even more listeners," KRIL General Manager Clyde Butter said.

Relief from fatigue

CHICAGO — An experimental anti-virus drug can dramatically relieve the extreme tiredness, memory loss and other debilitating miseries of people severely afflicted with chronic fatigue syndrome, researchers said Tuesday. Doctors tested the medicine on people so gravely ill that they often were virtually bedridden, unable to get up to use the bathroom, balance checkbooks or even watch television. The study showed that injections of the medicine — Ampligen — restored patients enough so they had the strength to take care of themselves and think more clearly.

Different faces of Gates emerge during testimony

Gates

By Elaine Sciolino
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — As the CIA's top analyst, Robert M. Gates operated as both a skeptical taskmaster who demanded tightly reasoned appraisals of world events and an arrogant supervisor who bluntly rejected judgments contrary to his personal views, according to documents and testimony presented during his confirmation hearings on Tuesday.

The different faces of Gates were portrayed in more than two dozen previously classified documents that the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence made public as it reviewed whether Gates distorted intelligence reports so they would conform to the political beliefs of his superiors.

And in appearances before the committee on Tuesday, witnesses for and against the nomination of Gates as director of central intelligence revealed a secret world of inter-

Static leading indicators signal struggling recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's economic forecasting gauge was flat in August, according to a Commerce Department report Tuesday that analysts said was the latest sign that an already lackluster recovery continues to slow.

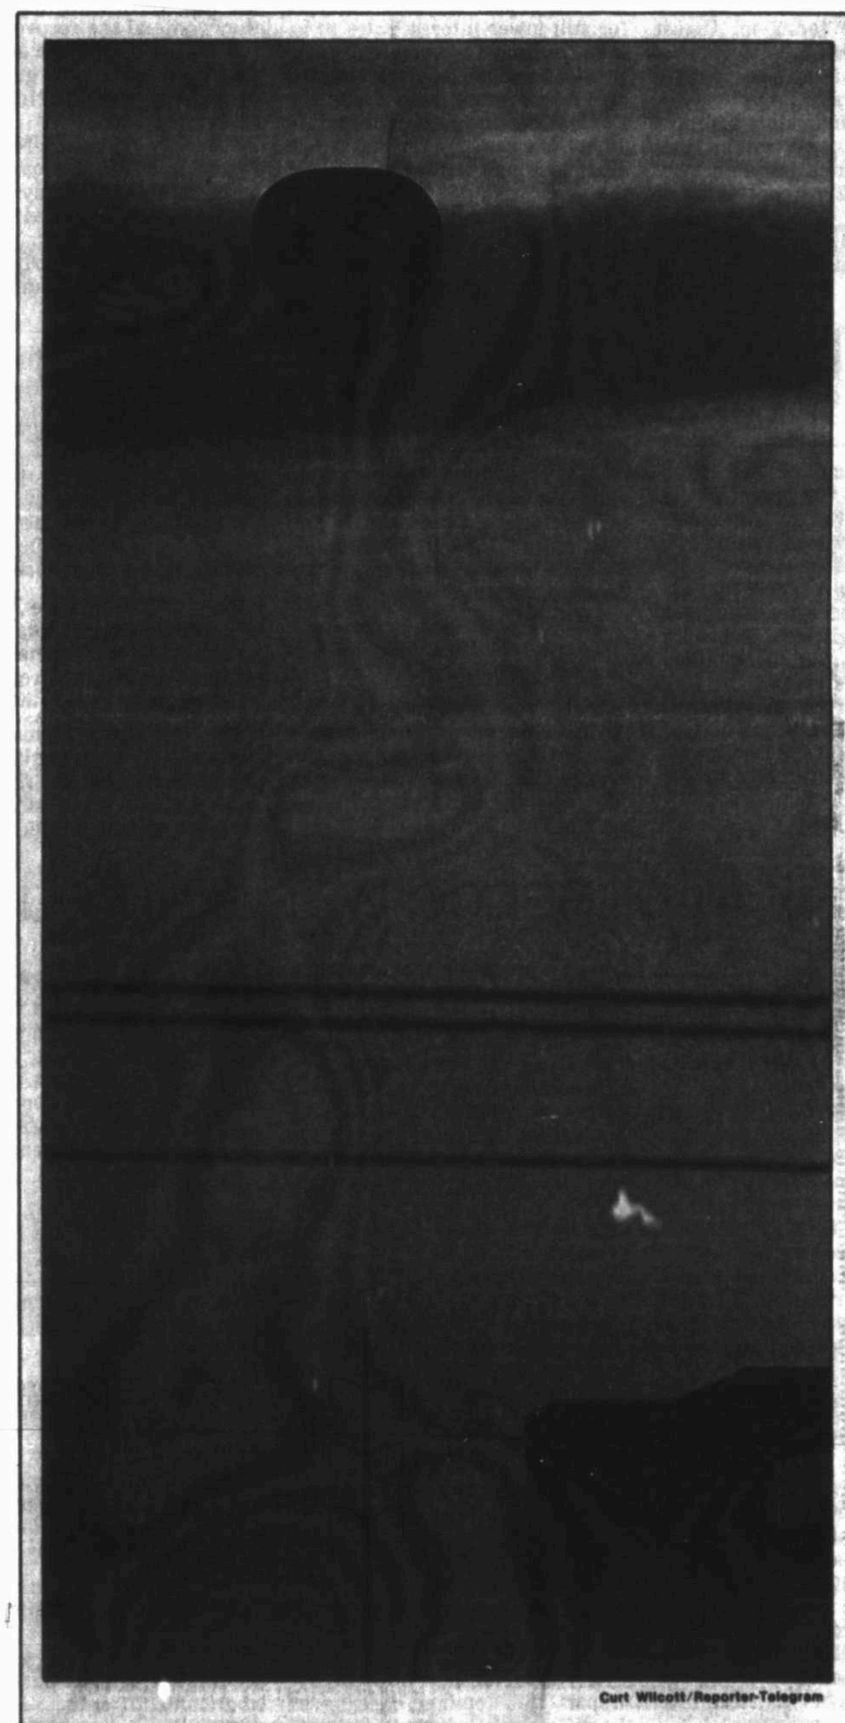

"The August Leading Indicators ... show that the recovery is continuing to decelerate," said John M. Albertine, head of a Washington economic forecasting company.

Lawrence H. Meyer, president of a St. Louis forecasting service, agreed. "This data confirm other data that we've been seeing that suggest this economy is really struggling."

Still, many economists said they believe the economy would escape a double-dip recession, although Meyer said, "we will flirt with it and come uncomfortably close."

Fate of bill for jobless in balance

■ Congress OKs unemployment package, pushing lawmakers toward veto showdown with President Bush.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Congress agreed on Tuesday to extend unemployment benefits for up to 20 weeks in some states but failed to muster enough votes to override an expected veto by President Bush.

The outcome left both sides claiming political advantage but offered little hope of additional relief for unemployed workers.

"We are engaged in a political sham," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, told his colleagues during Senate debate. "Everybody knows that the president will veto this bill."

Ignoring Bush's objections, Democratic majorities in the House and Senate approved the benefits extension in back-to-back votes after sharply partisan debate. The action gave final approval to legislation that the two chambers had passed in slightly different forms last week.

But the 65-35 vote in the Senate fell two votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to override a presidential veto. The House approved the legislation by a 300-118 margin.

Despite the Senate tally, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said he has not abandoned hope of a veto override. The Texas Democrat, who sponsored the benefits extension, said pressure from voters could force some opponents to change their minds.

"I think they'll be hearing a lot from folks back home who are having a tough time making ends meet," Bentsen said. "We don't know what's going to happen between now and when the president vetos it."

The benefits package would extend the current 26-week limit on unemploy-

Exiled Haitian leader pleads for aid, warns of bloodbath

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The military clamped down on the Haitian capital Tuesday and claimed its coup against President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was necessary to stop an "apprentice dictator." The deposed leader sent impassioned appeals from exile to his countrymen, warning of an impending bloodbath.

He pleaded for an armed U.N. force to restore democracy in his homeland, saying from Caracas, Venezuela, that Haitians "cannot resist the military alone."

The military imposed a 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew by announcing it over one of four operating radio stations in the capital. Gunfire reverted throughout the capital, with soldiers firing menacingly into the air in what amounted to a daytime curfew as well.

Port-au-Prince's normally bustling downtown area was nearly deserted.

Lewis misses court date, surrenders to authorities

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis was jailed Tuesday for about 3½ hours after failing to appear at a pre-trial hearing on his misdemeanor ethics charges.

Lewis' surrender to authorities prompted hours of legal wrangling, which eventually led to his freedom.

As he emerged from the Travis County Jail, Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said, "I think a lot of things unusual have happened about this whole case for the past 12, 18 months."

"I would not tell anybody to run for public office. I think it is absolutely ridiculous what public officials are subjected to," he said.

Lewis has been hounded for nearly a year with charges of ethical abuses, mostly spawned from a Travis County grand jury investigation into ties between lawmakers and lobbyists.

Official vows 'dramatic' Soviet reply to arms plan

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — Soviet Foreign Minister Boris D. Pankin on Tuesday promised a "dramatic" reply from Moscow to President Bush's nuclear disarmament plan and said Deputy Foreign Minister Aleksei A. Obukhov would discuss it with American officials in Washington on Oct. 9 and 10.

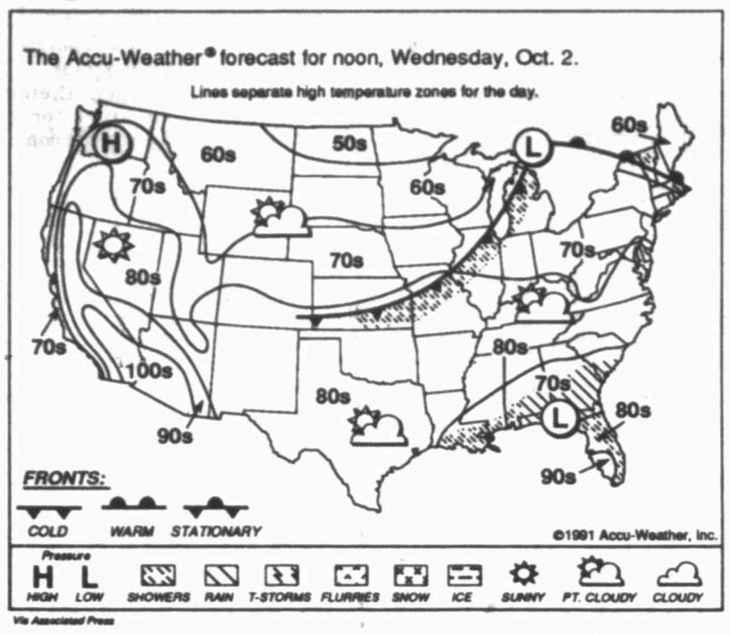

"It will be a dramatic response because we see the American plan as another link in the chain of arms control agreements and initiatives that started in 1986 when Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev called for the elimination of all nuclear arms by the year 2000," Pankin said at a U.N. news conference. He spoke before returning to Moscow after attending the opening of the U.N. General Assembly.

His remarks seemed to confirm the administration's belief that Gorbachev would offer sweeping new arms reduction proposals of his own even if his initial response was cautious, in part because another major round of disarmament negotia-

BILL: Congress approves benefits extension

(From 1A)

ment payments by seven, 13 or 20 weeks, depending on the level of unemployment in each state.

Jobless workers in Texas, which had an unemployment rate of 6.3 percent in August, would be eligible for a seven-week extension.

More than 116,000 Texans have run out of unemployment benefits during the past eight months, according to the Texas Employment Commission. The total includes more than 9,000 workers in Tarrant County.

Nationally, 300,000 workers hit the end of their benefits each month.

In arguing for an extension, Democratic Rep. Dave Bonoir tried to bring the statistics to life by reading a letter from an employed engineer in his Michigan district.

"With a wife and three children, we are living with shattered dreams and fright from day to day," the Vietnam veteran wrote. "My savings are gone, and we may soon have to put the home we worked 18 years for on the market. Is there any hope in sight?"

Bush and his allies contend that the extension would do more harm than good by adding $6.4 billion to the federal deficit. Last week, Bush called the Democratic bill "a bunch of garbage."

With a presidential veto all but certain, Republicans accused Democrats of provoking a showdown in the hope of scoring political points.

"We ought to stop this game of chicken and recognize that this bill is not going to become law," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M.

Democrats, meanwhile, pointed the finger at Bush, charging that the president is more concerned with foreign policy than the plight of unemployed workers.

"While he extends his hand overseas to help those in need, he slams it down on working families here at home," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt. "With one stroke of the pen, the president will stop us from providing them unemployment benefits when the Republican recession costs them their jobs."

LEWIS: Surrender prompts much legal wrangling

(From 1A)

The only indictments resulting from the probe, however, are two misdemeanor charges against Lewis for allegedly accepting an illegal gift and failing to publicly disclose it in state filings. If convicted, Lewis faces a maximum of 18 months in jail and $3,000 in fines.

On Tuesday, a pre-trial hearing was scheduled before State District Judge Bob Perkins on matters relating to the Dec. 28 indictments, including a motion by Lewis' attorneys to move the case to a lower county court.

Perkins had delayed the pre-trial hearing for months because of the regular legislative session and two special sessions this summer. State law provides for lawmakers who are involved in court proceedings to receive a delay due to legislative sessions.

Lewis said he did not learn until late Monday, while staying at a ranch 60 miles outside El Paso, that Perkins wanted him to be at the 9 a.m. hearing.

Lewis said he caught an 8 a.m. plane that arrived in Austin about 10:25 a.m.

Without Lewis at the hearing, Perkins attended to other cases, but by 10:45 a.m. he ordered that Lewis' two $5,000 bonds be forfeited and that the speaker be arrested.

At that time, Lewis said he had finished changing clothes at the Capitol and was almost leaving for the hearing when one of his attorneys called and told him about Perkins' action.

About 30 minutes later, Lewis surrendered to authorities at the Travis County Jail.

Lewis said he was booked, photographed, given prison clothes, and even handcuffed.

"You go through all the humiliating things you have to go through in this process. Everything that is humiliating, you go through it," he said.

After the December indictments, Lewis quietly slipped in and out of jail on New Year's Eve.

GAUGE: Index is designed to forecast activity

(From 1A)

butions to the index in August. The index is designed to forecast economic activity six to nine months in advance.

The leading indicators had posted an average 0.8 percent increase each month since last February, including a 1.2 percent jump in July.

The Federal Reserve's monetary-policy arm met Tuesday to map strategy. Many economists said the report signaled the need for still lower interest rates to insure continued economic growth.

"Clearly, this lackluster recovery needs more help from the Fed," Albertine said. Without it, "there is a real danger that it will coast to a halt before the end of the year."

The Bush administration, which also has urged lower interest rates, and many private analysts believe the recession ended during the April-June quarter. But they contend the recovery will be less than half as robust as the average 6 percent annual growth rate of other post-World War II recoveries.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady, in a speech Monday in Atlanta, said the economy continues to grow despite mixed economic reports.

"Historically, the early stages of a recovery tend to be uneven, and this particular recovery seems to be following just such a bumpy route," he said.

The Commerce Department also reported Tuesday that construction spending slowed in August to a 0.3 percent advance, or a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $406.2 billion. Outlays had jumped 1.7 percent a month earlier, the first increase since April.

Only residential spending increased.

HAITI: Military clamps down on Port-au-Prince

(From 1A)

National Penitentiary had been emptied of all 1,000 prisoners, including Roger LaFontant, a former head of outlawed Tonton Macoutes militia.

There also was a report that LaFontant — jailed after leading a coup before Aristide's February inauguration — had been killed during Monday's coup.

Haitians reported that several former Tonton Macoutes who had been imprisoned at the Penitentiary were seen walking city streets Tuesday.

Coup leader Brig. Gen. Raoul Cedras, who had been Aristide's interim army commander, went on state television Tuesday night and claimed the coup was justified to halt human rights abuses and violations of the constitution by Aristide, whom he called an "apprentice dictator."

Aristide described Cedras as a "power mad" officer who had hidden his ambitions.

There was little sign of resistance to the coup. Small groups huddled in the streets talking, and occasionally some would scamper out to rebuild barricades of burning tires.

Aristide, the first democratically elected president in Haiti's nearly two centuries as a nation, was with his family Tuesday in Caracas, after Venezuela's president sent a plane to rescue him and lead him to safety abroad.

The toll from the uprising, staged by rebel soldiers opposing Aristide's leftist policies and reforms in the military, rose sharply Tuesday.

The Caribbean Human Rights Network, based in Barbados, said preliminary counts indicated more than 100 people died. Frantz LaMothe, a photographer who visited the General Hospital morgue in central Port-au-Prince, said authorities reported 140 bodies at that facility alone.

"The military is in full control," LaMothe said. "They are driving all over town, 15 to 20 in pickups."

Richard Morse, manager of the Olaffson Hotel on a hill overlooking the Port-au-Prince harbor, said "most of the shooting today is in the air. Yesterday they were shooting at people."

American tourists holed up in the hotel, the setting for Graham Greene's famous Haitian novel "The Comedians," said they feared for their lives.

GATES: Intelligence was slanted, witnesses say

(From 1A)

nal intrigue and brutal infighting in which intelligence analyses were debated, revised and in some cases reversed before presentation to the president.

Three witnesses testified that Gates slanted intelligence analysis as a senior agency official in the 1980s, while two others defended him. The hearings entered their third week on Tuesday and may run into next week so that the senators can absorb the flood of new information provided Tuesday and cross-examine the witnesses and Gates, who was not present on Tuesday.

Although the CIA's involvement in the covert world of coups, assassination plots and spy operations has periodically come under public scrutiny, never before in the agency's 44-year history has the bare-knuckles atmosphere of its analytical side been so exposed to public view, senior officials of the agency said.

Gates' detractors assert that the slanting of intelligence was largely confined to issues involving the Soviet Union, Soviet expansionism and CIA covert operations.

The documents made public on Tuesday provide a look at only a small part of Gates' career over two decades at the agency, all of that work dealing with Soviet affairs, Gates' specialty. But the public testimony was more sweeping.

The most dramatic testimony came from Melvin A. Goodman, a former division chief in Soviet affairs. He accused Gates of imposing his political judgments on intelligence analyses without any evidence to back his views, of suppressing his analysts' conclusions, of corrupting the agency's stringent analytical process and of misusing personnel — "judge shopping the courthouse," he said — until the desired analysis was produced.

But it was the more reflective testimony of another witness, Harold Ford, although less explosive than Goodman's, which could carry more weight with the committee. Ford, a 30-year veteran of the agency who has extensively written and lectured on ethics in public policy, described his personal agony before deciding that out of loyalty to the agency, he could not support the nominee. Adding to the difficulty of his choice, Ford is a CIA contract employee who would report to Gates, if he is confirmed.

In his closed testimony to the committee last week, Ford said the effect of previous testimony, depositions and his conversations with his former colleagues had persuaded him to "tear up" his original testimony.

"I have some very difficult things to say, but I feel I must say them," said the retired senior analyst. "In brief, my message is that I think Robert Gates should not be confirmed as director of central intelligence."

Ford, who is decribed by both former and current CIA officials as a first-rate analyst with high standards of integrity, acknowledged that his decision to come forward was made more painful by the fact that his own career flourished under Gates.

Ford explained the difficulty of determining when analysis is slanted or tailored to support stated policy, saying that some of the accusations against Gates reflected genuine differences of opinion, complaints by disgruntled officials and Gates' commitment to sharpen the analytical product.

But, he added, "Other of Bob Gates' pressures have gone beyond professional bounds and clearly constitute a skewing of intelligence." Ford said Gates' "photographic memory," made it difficult to believe that he did not remember many of the details of the Iran-Contra affair. He questioned Gates' reliance on his own analytical judgments which, he said, "has ignored or scorned the views of others whose assessments did not accord with his own."

Ford said Gates might have been forgiven for that, wrong as it was, if his own views had not also been wrong. In particular, he said, the nominee's analysis of the fortunes of the Soviet Union and of Eastern Europe were incorrect.

Finally, Ford asserted that the nominee lacked "integrity of judgment," the ability to stand one's ground with the president and others when their views might differ.

He, like Goodman, also raised questions about the nominee's honesty in some of his testimony before Congress.

tions would enhance his role as Soviet president.

But the foreign minister ruled out "major decisions" at the Oct. 9 talks and made clear the Soviet Union would press the United States to ban all underground nuclear testing, although the Bush administration regards tests as essential for maintaining the credibility of United States nuclear forces.

Pankin said the two sides also would examine a recent call by French President Francois Mitterrand for a summit meeting between the Soviet Union, Britain, France, the United States and China to discuss the future of nuclear weapons in the world.

The foreign minister also announced that Soviet officials would hold additional talks with the Bush administration in Washington on Oct. 11 and 12 on ways to curb the spread of nuclear weapons around the world, but he offered no details.

Pankin said a Western team would visit Moscow on Oct. 14 to discuss the Soviet Union's emergency needs as winter approaches. The team is to comprise representatives of the 12 European Community countries, the United States, Canada and Japan and will be led by Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek of the Netherlands, president of the community's governing Council of Ministers.

Conservatives lost election nerve, labor leader says

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Neil Kinnock, his Labor Party hauled back to the center and to electability, accused the Conservative government Tuesday of losing its nerve after officials leaked word that no election will be called until next year.

"What a year it's been for the Conservatives," Kinnock declared in his keynote address to Labor's annual conference, the last before the Tory government's five-year term runs out in July.

"They started it by losing their leader," he said of ex-Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who was ousted in a Tory revolt 10 months ago. "They ended it by losing their nerve. ... You can run but you can't hide."

The Conservatives, in leaks to newspapers late Monday, quashed weeks of speculation that Prime Minister John Major would call an election in November.

Speaking anonymously, party officials said the prime minister, who picks the date, would likely wait until spring in the hope that falling interest and inflation rates will offset the electoral risk of rising unemployment.

Laborites complained that the unofficial announcement, which overshadowed news coverage of Labor's conference, appeared timed to divert attention from Labor, which is running neck and neck with the Tories in opinion polls.

Labor lost power to the Conservatives in 1979 and was soundly beaten in two subsequent elections. But it has dropped a slew of vote-losing leftist goals since the mid-1980s: widespread nationalization of industries, unilateral nuclear disarmament, punitive taxes on the better-off and withdrawal of Britain from the European Community.

In an hour-long speech, Kinnock, the 49-year-old son of a Welsh miner, mingled emotional references to the socialist heritage of his youth with a pragmatic defense of the party's new centrist platform.

"We are democratic socialists," Kinnock said, pledging that the new-style Labor Party has shed the high-spending, high-taxing traditions of the British left.

"We will not spend what the country cannot afford. ... We will not increase the tax contribution of the huge majority of the people," he added.

Labor says only the upper 12 percent of Britain's 29.6 million taxpayers would be affected by its plans to increase the top income tax rate from 40 percent to 50 percent and to increase compulsory national health and unemployment insurance payments.

The 2,000 delegates in the convention center in this south England resort applauded wildly and joined in singing, "We Shall Overcome."

Labor's week-long conference, which began Sunday, has the atmosphere of a pre-election rally, in sharp contrast to the fractious conventions of the 1980s.

Still, some disgruntled leftists protest that Kinnock has abandoned his socialist principles in his drive for power.

The Conservatives are hammering a similar theme.

"This year's Labor Party conference is being held in Brighton — unless they've changed their minds on this as well," says a Tory poster put up near the seaside convention center.

Expectations of a November election had risen in mid-August when the Tories edged ahead in opinion polls. But the Tories slipped back, and surveys show the two parties running even. In several polls during September, each averaged 40 percent support and the third-running Liberal Democrats 15 percent, with a margin of error of plus or minus three points.

The polls indicate a majority of voters still distrust Labor's ability to run the economy.

Widespread heavy fighting shatters Yugoslav cease-fire

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Fierce and widespread fighting shattered a 9-day-old truce in secessionist Croatia on Tuesday as the Yugoslav army went on the offensive in response to Croat attacks on its bases.

Statements from Croatia and the federal army said Tuesday's battles were among the worst since fighting erupted three months ago over the republic's June 25 independence declaration.

At least 600 people have been killed and six cease-fires have failed.

"All indicators ultimately point toward a military solution to the problem," said Mario Nobilo, spokesman for Croatian President Franjo Tudjman. "This is the most serious threat to Croatia so far, and it's not an empty threat."

The army seems intent in its latest drive on seizing the few remaining Croat positions in eastern Croatia before it gets bogged down by wet fall weather and low morale that has caused desertions by thousands of reservists. Nobilo said the army also was trying to sever the long, thin strip of Croatian territory running along the Dalmatian coast. The plan, he claimed, was to incorporate southern Dalmatia, including the medieval port city of Dubrovnik, into Serbia, leaving the northern ports of Split, Sibenik and Zadar in Croatia.

Zagreb radio reported late Tuesday that the walled city of Dubrovnik had been "completely cut off" and was without electricity and water after a day of heavy naval, air and artillery bombardment.

About 20 miles south of Dubrovnik, army reservists from Serbia's ally, Montenegro, overran a Croatian position, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said.

Top aides to Serbian strongman Slobodan Milosevic have said publicly in recent days that the armed forces, the country's last remaining federal institution, are in the process of being transformed into a new Serbian army.

The defection from the Yugoslav army of hundreds of Slovene and Croat officers has meant the federal armed forces increasingly are dominated by Serbians.

The fighting in Croatia began after the republic's independence declaration. In response, militant ethnic Serbs — Serbs make up 12 percent of Croatia's 4.75 million people — took up arms and in some cases declared allegiance to Serbia.

Backed increasingly by the army, the rebels now control about a third of Croatia, but Croatian officials claim the tide may soon turn in their favor because of the ethnic decomposition of the federal army.

In fighting Monday, army troops and Serb rebels fought Croats in hand-to-hand combat outside Sisak, 30 miles south of the Croatian capital of Zagreb, Belgrade radio reported.

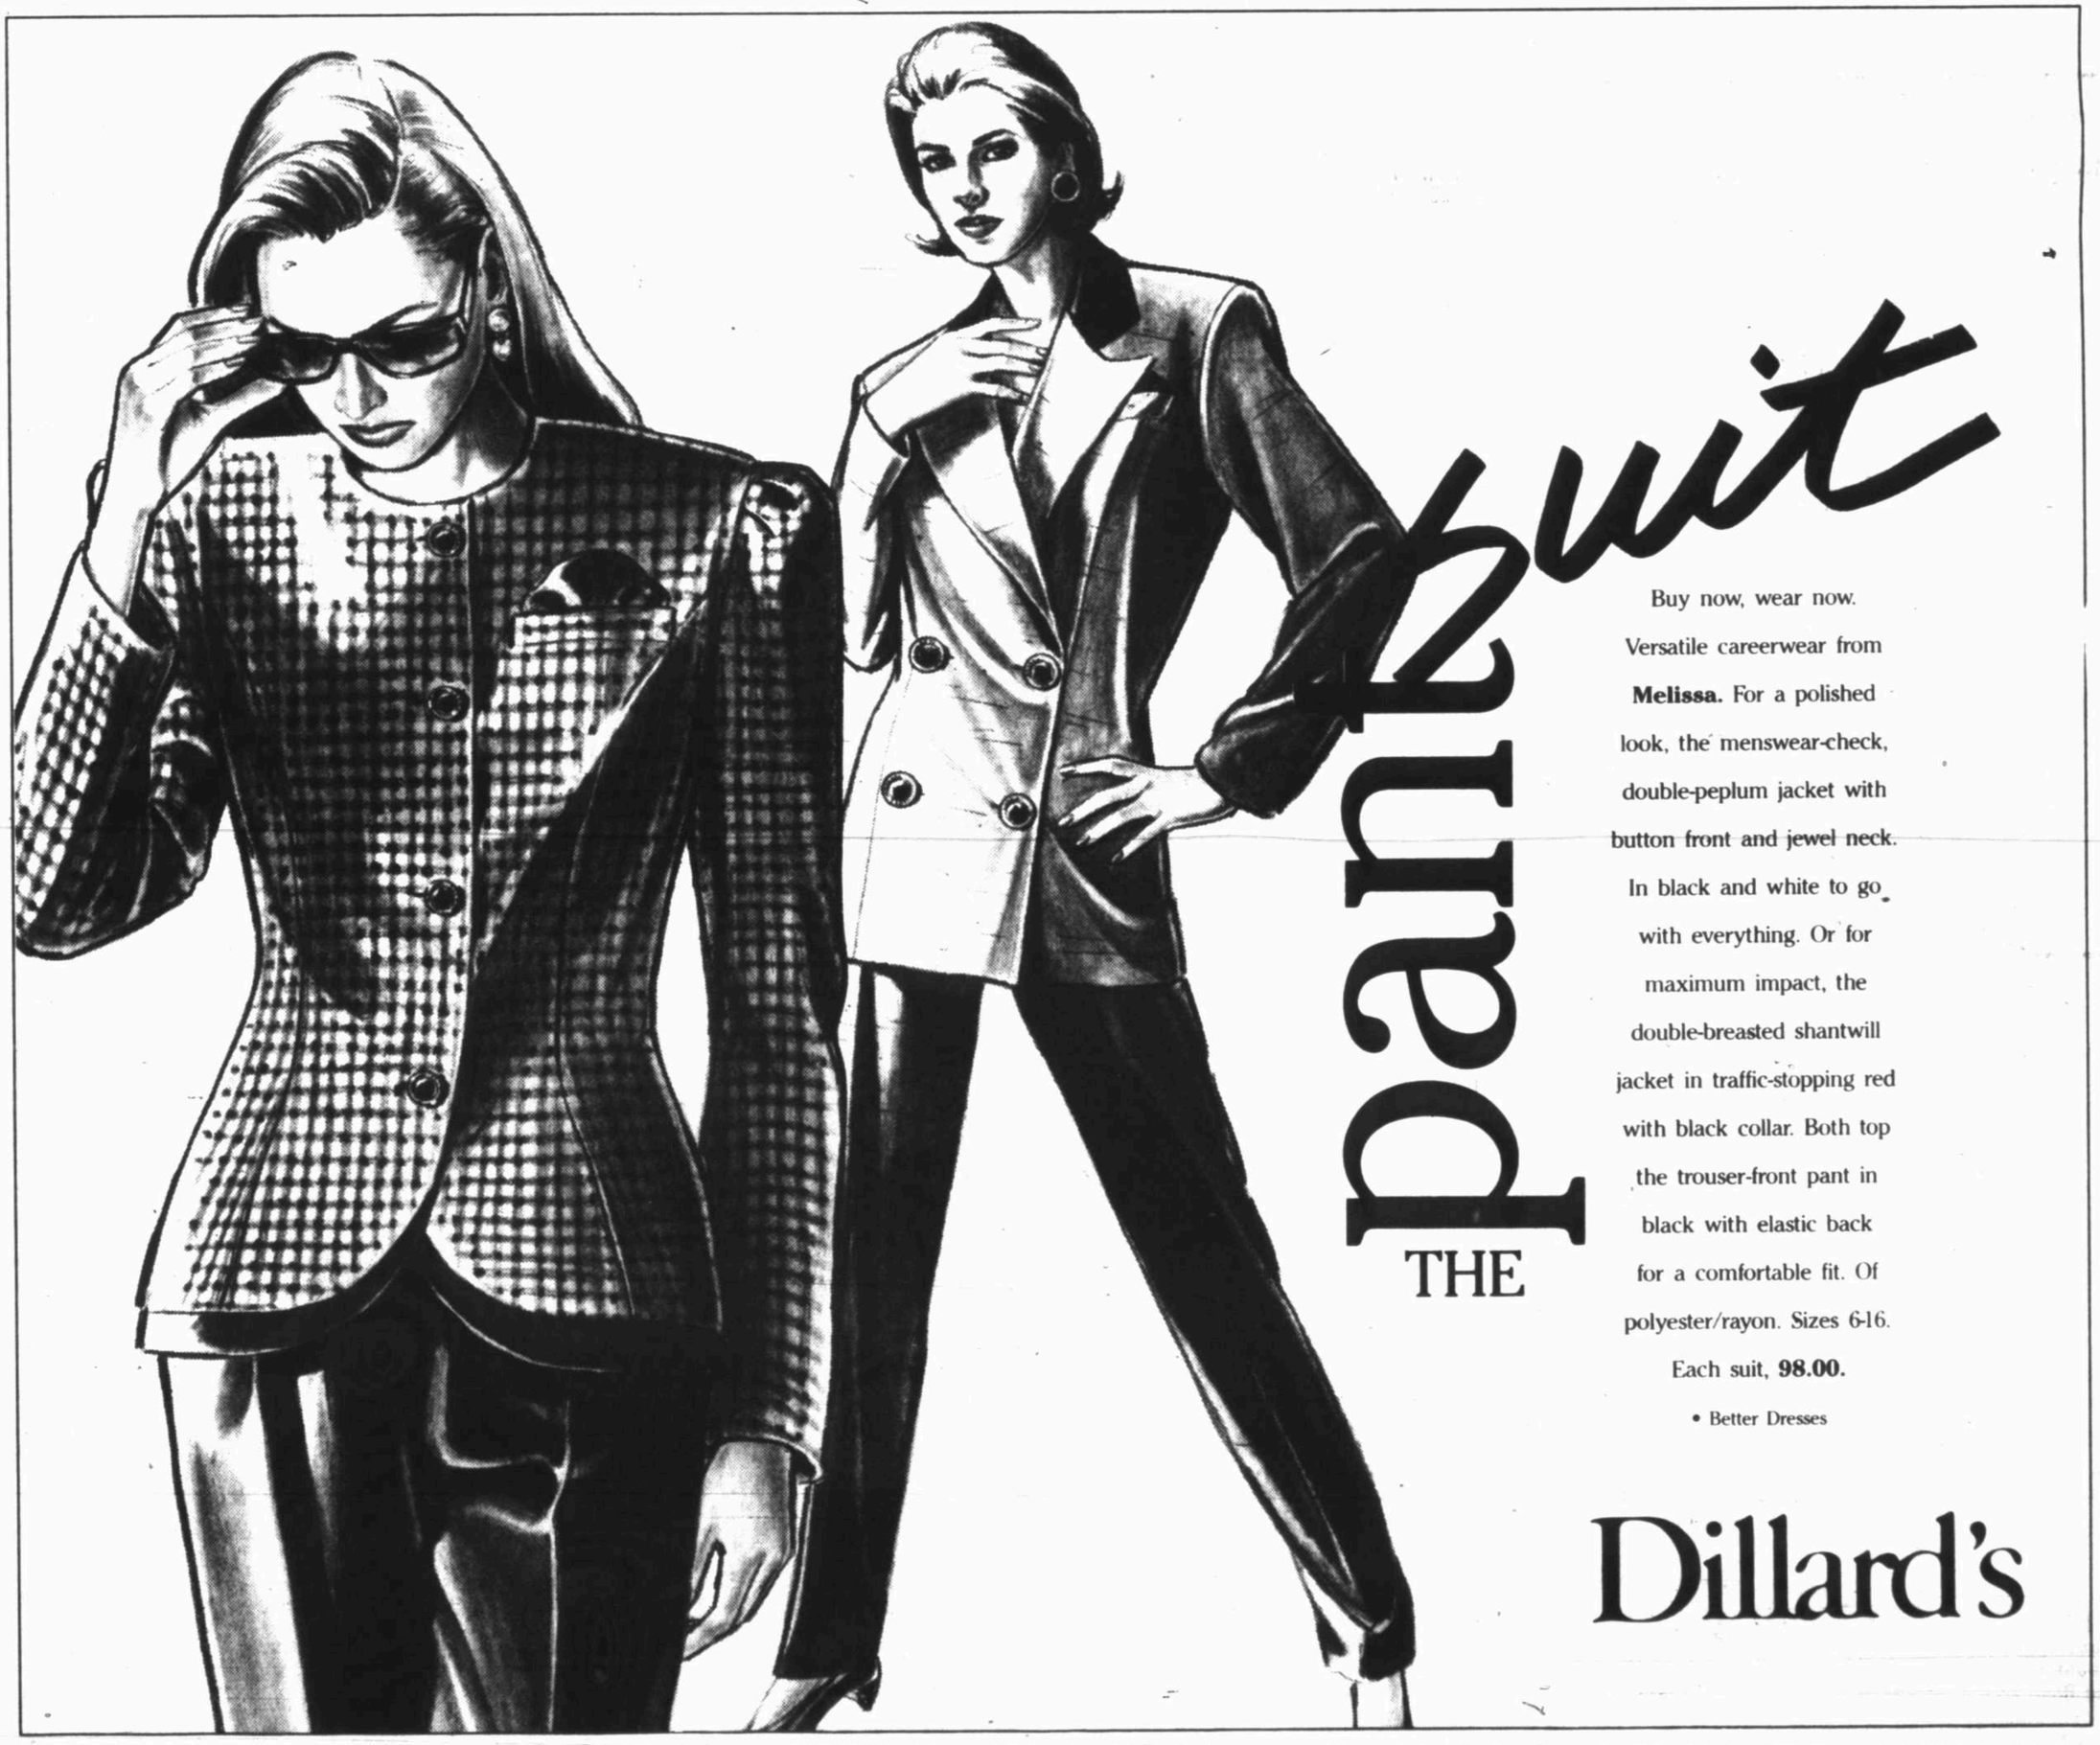

Serb militants also seized several villages while sweeping northward toward Karlovac, 35 miles southwest of Zagreb, the radio said.

The radio claimed the strategic town of Pakrac, in the western sector of the Slavonia region, also had fallen into Serb hands. But the report could not be independently confirmed.

Army demands government step down

AP/T. Dean Caple

LOME, Togo (AP) — Rebel troops twice seized the state broadcasting center Tuesday in a botched coup attempt against a civilian government trying to end 24 years of military dictatorship.

State television reported that the troops, after seizing the station in the morning, departing in a hail of bullets a few hours later and then returning in the afternoon, had left a second time — presumably for good — as nightfall approached.

Five people were reported killed in a clash between the rebels and loyalist troops who ended the morning siege of the station, according to the 25-minute newscast.

Diplomats monitoring the broadcast, who were reached by telephone from Abidjan, Ivory Coast, said loyalist troops were guarding the station late Tuesday.

The newscast said the mutinous troops seized the station in the morning and forced a journalist to broadcast demands that interim Prime Minister Joseph Koffigoh and his government resign. The soldiers sang songs on the radio praising Gen. Gnassingbe Eyadema, Togo's 24-year military ruler, and calling for his return to full power.

But they left the building before midday after Gen. Eyadema ordered them to lay down their arms. Eyadema was stripped of most of his powers a month ago by a national democracy conference, one of several held in Africa this past year.

Although Eyadema denied any knowledge of the plot, opposition leaders accused him of instigating the trouble to gain new leverage from pro-democracy forces who have left him president merely in title.

Soldiers sent to put down the first takeover fired on pro-democracy protesters who invaded the broadcasting station and threatened technicians. Several demonstrators were injured, doctors said.

Agence France-Presse, the French news agency, reported five dead and 30 injured when troops attacked their rebel colleagues at the radio station.

Baghdad gives clearance for U.N. helicopters

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Baghdad gave final clearance Tuesday for three U.N. helicopters to enter Iraq for use by inspectors tracking down Iraqi weapons of mass destruction, a U.N. official said.

Alastair Livingston, head of the regional office of the U.N. Special Commission overseeing the search, said the helicopters would make the four-hour trip to Baghdad on Wednesday. He said they should be ready for surveillance flights beginning Thursday.

The Iraqis gave in to U.N. demands last week and agreed to allow the three helicopters, supplied by Germany, to be used by U.N. inspectors for unrestricted flights to suspected weapons sites.

The inspection teams are operating under terms of the Gulf War cease-fire, which calls for elimination of Iraq's long-range Scud missiles and chemical, nuclear and biological weapons and production facilities.

A U.N. team that went to Baghdad on Tuesday will be the first to test whether Iraq will live up to the agreement for use of the helicopters. The team is searching for Scud missiles and launchers.

Previous U.N. weapons teams have had to restrict their work to the Baghdad area because they had no way to get to other parts of Iraq.

Douglas Englund, an American who leads the 20-member missile team, said he would use the helicopters to search western Iraq and supervise destruction of 28 known fixed-site Scud launchers used to attack Israel during the Gulf War.

He also intends to blow up one assembled and one incomplete long-range "supergun" halfway betwen Baghdad and the city of Mosul and plans several surprise calls on undeclared Iraqi sites where Scud missiles may be stored.

Premier-in-waiting calls for aid, austerity

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Opposition leader Etienne Tshisekedi vowed Tuesday to revamp the ailing economy when he takes over as head of the interim government.

President Mobutu Sese Seko, who has ruled Zaire harshly for 26 years, officially named his longtime opponent as prime minister Tuesday in a bid to end the unrest here.

But Tshisekedi said the nomination requires an endorsement by a conference of opposition parties due to meet Wednesday.

France and Belgium, which sent paratroopers to Zaire last week when unpaid Zairean soldiers rioted, support his nomination.

According to official estimates, 116 people died during rampages through the capital by the mutinous soldiers and rioters on Sept. 23-24.

The Belgian embassy said it was organizing emergency food shipments to avert famine in its former colony.

Life in Kinshasa returned to near-normalcy Tuesday, but food remained scarce and prices soared. Rioters had stripped stores bare of goods. Relief agencies said starvation and disease were likely to take a heavy toll.

More than 8,000 foreigners have evacuated Zaire with help from the Belgian and French troops.

In his first interview with state-run radio and television, Tshisekedi, 59, urged foreigners to return and made a similar appeal to investors who have abandoned the central African nation.

Democrat declares for Thomas; confirmation likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate confirmation of Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas grew more likely Tuesday as two more Democrats declared they would vote to put him on the nation's highest court.

Endorsements by Sens. Richard Shelby of Alabama and Alan J. Dixon of Illinois brought to 11 the number of Democrats who have pledged to vote for Thomas' confirmation.

That means Thomas appears to have the 51 votes needed to survive a floor fight, even if three Republicans should break ranks from the 43-member GOP minority, as his opponents hope.

And with at least one more Democrat said to be leaning his way, Thomas could have some room for comfort as the showdown, now expected next week, approaches.

Thomas, a conservative federal appeals judge and a black born into poverty in the segregated South, "brings a unique perspective ... that would better enable the Supreme Court to ensure that the rights and freedoms of all Americans are preserved and strengthened," Shelby said.

"Clearly, Judge Thomas' long suit is his life story, which is compelling, moving and endearing," Dixon said in a statement issued late in the day.

Dixon also said he was convinced that Thomas's thinking was not bound by rigid ideologies. "Some justices on the current court appear to have fairly rigid philosophies or ideologies. Judge Thomas does not appear to fall into that category. That suggests he may well surprise some of his opponents."

The Senate is not likely to begin debate until later this week. so a vote is not expected until next week, after Monday's start of the Supreme Court's next term. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said he was trying to work out an agreement to begin debate Thursday and vote Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Thurgood Marshall, the nation's first black Supreme Court justice, officially departed the high court on Tuesday. Marshall had originally said he would not make his retirement effective until his successor had been approved.

If confirmed, Thomas would be the first Supreme Court nominee to win approval without the endorsement of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which arrived at a 7-7 deadlock on Thomas last week but nonetheless sent the nomination to the floor.

The seven Democrats who voted against Thomas expressed doubts about his legal qualifications and whether he was candid when he said he had an open mind about abortion and other controversial issues.

Some Democrats said they couldn't believe Thomas' disavowals of writings and speeches that espoused conservative views.

But Shelby's support for the nomination was an indication that Alabama's other Democratic senator, Howell Heflin, was not pressing the case against Thomas. Heflin's opposition to Thomas helped forge the tie vote in the Judiciary Committee.

Even Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., the panel's chairman, has said that he does not plan to work actively against Thomas despite his negative vote in committee.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., an outspoken Thomas opponent, has not ruled out a filibuster to block a vote. Thomas's supporters would need 60 votes to stop the debate and opponents would only have to muster 41 to block consideration of the nomination.

Bush's arms plan didn't go too far

President Bush's unilateral reduction of all tactical nuclear arms on land and at sea in Europe and Asia caught a lot of Americans by surprise, but it was not the wholesale disarmament it is being painted.

In fact, the situation was put into perspective when Defense Secretary Dick Cheney noted, "The world has changed, but insurance is still a good idea. Under this plan, we believe we will have enough."

That "enough" is in the form of some 2,000 nuclear warheads ready to be hurled aloft by 550 intercontinental nuclear missiles, as well as more than 5,000 nuclear warheads that could be launched from 24 U.S. Navy ballistic missile submarines.

As Gen. Colin Powell put it, "We are doing nothing that would put the nation at risk."

That would not be possible, in the first place, because Americans would not stand for it. Bush recognized that fact by noting that this plan can always be reversed if the Soviets do not come through with comparable cutbacks.

Bush's maneuver was tied more to politics than to a desire to balance the scales of power. Since the fall of communism and the breakup of the Soviet Union, the lever of public relations was being controlled by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Russian President Boris Yeltsin. Bush needed a way to regain control of the "peace initiative" and he found it through the proposal to eliminate all tactical nuclear weapons in Europe and Asia, termination of the 24-hour alert status for long-range bombers and an offer to negotiate with the Soviet Union for sharp reductions in the most dangerous kinds of globe-spanning missiles.

The weapons Bush included in his plan essentially are those which would have been used in the event of an invasion of Western Europe by the Soviets. That possibility is remote now.

While Bush's plan will not detract from the international interest in what is happening in the Soviet Union, realistically it gives Bush and lawmakers a golden opportunity to capitalize on the plan put forward by President Ronald Reagan to remove nuclear weapons from the arms stockpile equation and to push ahead with Reagan's vision for the Strategic Defense Initiative, a defensive rather than offensive missile protection plan.

Remarks by U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, that Bush's plan will likely lead to cuts in spending for long-range bombers like the B-2, the "Star Wars" missile defense system and for the military budget generally, reveal that Nunn is not thinking about the nation's defense.

Any savings that result from Bush's announced cutbacks should be plowed into the SDI. The Soviet Union may no longer be a major threat to the security of the United States, but an adversary will always exist — a Saddam Hussein or someone else with the will to control the lives of others and to launch unwinnable wars. The Strategic Defense Initiative offers a realistic counter to such threats and the best way to achieve the "insurance" Cheney recognized is necessary.

United Way funds let agencies serve

Community and Senior Services (CSS) encourages public support of the Midland United Way 1991 campaign. As a United Way member agency, CSS could not provide the programs needed for its clients, including nutrition programs, homebound services and indigent home health care without United Way funding.

A major portion of the funding CSS receives from the United Way supports elderly nutrition programs, including Meals-on-Wheels, Need-a-Meal, Share-a-Meal and the Senior Centers' congregate meals. Over 108,000 meals will be served by CSS in 1991. This represents an increase of 22,000 meals from 1990 to 1991.

CSS also provides substantial funding for indigent home health care through the Visiting Nurse Service. Care is provided to patients regardless of their ability to pay, as CSS believes that quality health care is not only the privilege of some members of the community but rather a right of all residents under a physician's plan of treatment, indigents receive such specialized services as high-tech IV therapy; wound, catheter and ostomy care; physical, speech and occupational therapy; plus many other services.

United Way funding is critical to CSS. Faced with an aging population, the need for CSS' services continue to increase. The United Way has enabled CSS to meet these demands in the past, and working together, we will respond to these needs in the future. Your support of the campaign is encouraged, so that the 17 United Way member agencies can continue to provide needed programs and services for the people in Midland.

Agencies made weapon shopping easy

WASHINGTON — Iraq bought the secrets to develop a Condor II missile capable of carrying a nuclear warhead 600 miles, and, in one case we discovered, the blame rests on two U.S. government agencies that should have known what was happening for six years but sat on their hands.

Anderson

The Commerce Department was too interested in promoting trade — even the trade of sensitive weapons technology to a hothead like Saddam Hussein. And the Customs Service was too preoccupied with internal bickering over who should be in charge of the investigation into leaks of sensitive technology.

Iraq has never been able to successfully launch the Condor II, but a close look at one case shows just how easy it was for Saddam to shop for weapons of mass destruction in the United States in the years leading up to the Persian Gulf War.

According to internal Customs documents obtained by our associate Dean Boyd, the leak of technology began in 1985 when a small American company began exporting Condor II technical data abroad without an export license. Commerce did nothing, and even gave the same company a license to export something else that Iraq shouldn't have had — carbon-carbon, a heat-resistant material used as a protective coating for ballistic-missile warheads.

Commerce apparently had no qualms about licensing the export because the carbon-carbon was going to Italy. But that may not have been the end of the line. The buyer, an Italian firm called SNIA-BPD, was an important supplier of Condor II technology to front companies for Saddam Hussein, according to Gary Milhollin, a Washington-based nuclear-proliferation expert.

As early as 1986, the Defense Department warned Commerce that the Saad-16 complex was developing ballistic missiles with the help of U.S. exports, according to a congressional report. Nevertheless, Commerce continued to approve export licenses for technology — not only exports going through front companies to Iraq, but exports directly and boldly sent to the Saad-16 plant.

It was the Customs Service that, in 1987, finally began to grow suspicious about the export of Condor II data and the potential diversion of carbon-carbon from Italy to other buyers. Customs launched an investigation, but from the beginning it was dogged by turf battles and internal bickering.

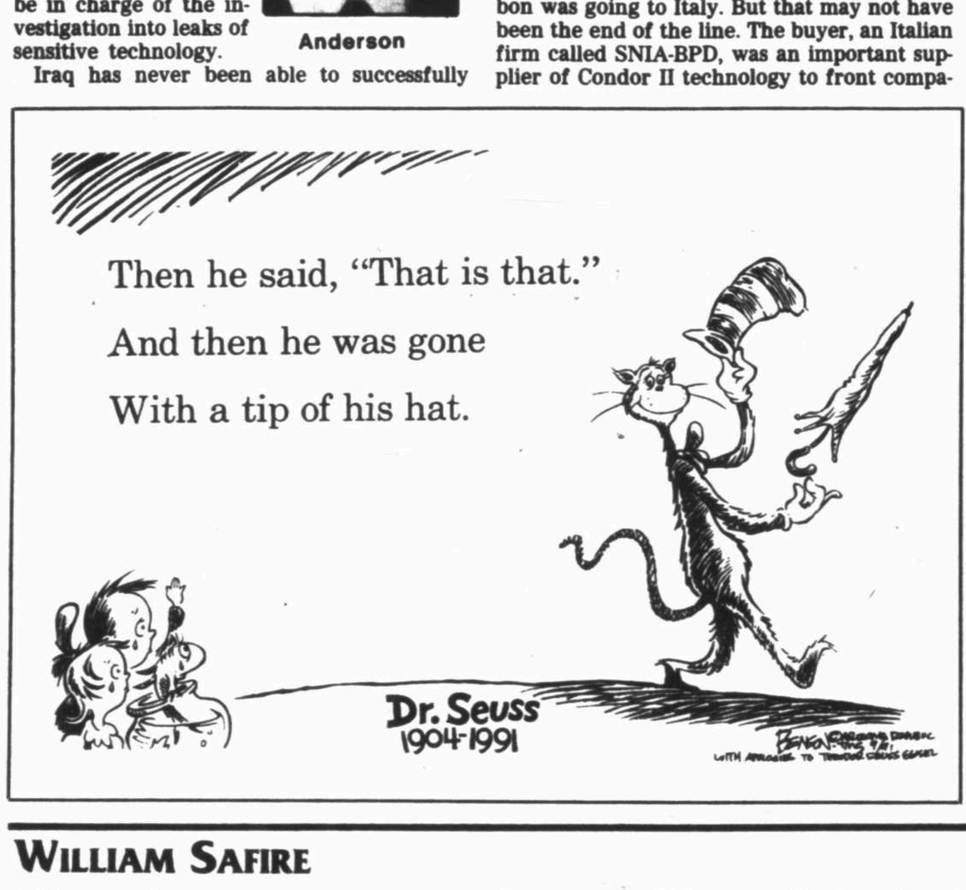

Customs documents show that agents in different offices withheld information from each other. By the third year, the lead Customs agent on the investigation had obtained enough evidence to point the finger at American suppliers, and an assistant U.S. attorney was ready to prosecute. In June 1990, missile data and hardware was allegedly found on one of the American suspects as he returned from Europe.

But internal bickering brought the Customs investigation to a standstill. One 1990 internal Customs memo says, "The investigation is approaching a standstill due to the conflict. ... Numerous attempts at resolution have failed, and it is now our opinion that this lack of agreement is having a negative effect on the development of the case."

Today, more than four years after the investigation was initiated and seven months after the Persian Gulf War ended, this Condor investigation is still in limbo. The suspects have not been charged. They are aware of the investigation, but they dismiss the allegations as "completely false," and "a crock."

The lead Customs agent would not comment on the case, or on the final destination of the Condor technology and the carbon-carbon. But experts believe that if SNIA-BPD was involved, Iraq was probably the beneficiary.

Real money, crime shouldn't be overlooked

WASHINGTON — It was a one-day embarrassment: the General Accounting Office revealed that 134 members of the House of Representatives had "bounced" some 581 checks of over $1,000 each at the House's private bank in the first six months of 1990.

Safire

The media had some fun; talk-show hosts railed at the spectacle; Speaker Tom Foley announced that the names of the check-writers would be kept confidential because "this is now a matter that is over . . . definitely concluded." On to more serious things.

But it's not over. For a score of representatives, real money and perhaps real crime is involved, which should not remain unprosecuted because the speaker decrees that the unidentified wrongdoers will "start with a clean slate".

First an idea of the scope: multiply 581 by $1,000, then nearly double the total to reflect a full year's operations, and you have about $1 million. But that $1,000 was the smallest amount counted; the average, I am told, was over $2,000, bringing the corruption to $2 million per year. The GAO killed the line in its report about the total overdrawn, thereby protecting its House bosses and staining the comptroller general's reputation as watchdog.

Next, a correction about terms: these are not "bounced checks," returned for insufficient funds. Every one of the overdrafts was paid to the person it was made out to, including members getting cash, without penalty. That means these were interest-free loans, some for over $10,000, many lasting for four weeks and then being paid and re-floated.

Go borrow 10 G's for a month, and then keep rolling it over. Some members may have done this; the interest waived is clearly income. The GAO report, with the secret addendum listing the worst offenders, has been at the Internal Revenue Service for months, but not one IRS agent has visited a House member about this undeclared income yet.

There is a word for writing a check, and especially cashing a check, in the knowledge that not enough funds are in the account, and without any backup borrowing arrangement to cover it; the word is fraud. And borrowing $10,000 or more, without disclosing it on the financial statement required of House members, is a crime for which one member has served time. But the local U.S. attorney, Popinjay Stephens, is too busy getting face time on TV to send one lonely FBI accountant over to the GAO.

A fishy odor also emanates from the flow of cash. Jack Russ, the sergeant-at-arms who runs the House bank as loosely as any BCCI manager, cashed at least one bad check for $10,000 two years ago — in effect, making an unsecured interest-free loan.

Staff members are supposed to be limited to $75 when cashing their own checks at the House bank, but I'm told that over a hundred staffers cashed checks averaging close to $1,000 each in only the first half of last year. I don't know if those checks bounced or not.

Members, staffers and even lobbyists have been using the unscrutinized bank to get quick cash in stacks. Has anyone asked the sergeant-at-arms and other big check-cashers why they need cash in such quantities right there on the Hill? What spending is best not recorded on credit card or bank statements?

Why hasn't the sergeant-at-arms been fired for, at least, ignoring the past "safeguards"? Because he is under the protection of Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, and Foley apparently feels he cannot cross him.

Two years ago, another no-names-please GAO report was given to Foley detailing similar abuses; he dutifully put in new "safeguards." It was a sham; the tax-free loan fraud went merrily on. Last week's pledges are equally meaningless; the House has shown it cannot be trusted to investigate itself.

We are not talking about the inadvertent overdrafter who quickly corrected a mistake; at large are officials who willfully and frequently abused their privilege. All should be exposed; some should be made to pay substantial taxes with penalties; a few deserve censure.

Pill dealing is becoming booming business

Years ago the big profits in the United States were made in oil. These days they come from pharmaceuticals.

The price of prescription drugs rose 153 percent during the '80s and is going still higher. Pills cost so much that Americans are now buying them for investment rather than for curing an ailment.

Buchwald

Tom Bedocs is one of the major speculators in prescription drug trading and has made a fortune. He invited me over to his house to see his pill collection.

Two burly guards searched me and escorted me into Bedocs' ornate office.

He said, "Pill dealing was never much of a business in the past. People just took pills without thinking about them appreciating in value. They are now kicking themselves for not putting their prescriptions away in a safe."

He held up a pink capsule. "Take this diuretic, for example. Originally it was made for high blood pressure and cost 25 cents. If I sold it today it would be worth $25,000. Of course, that's not all profit for me. The drug companies would get at least half."

"What's in that case over there?"

"That's a tranquilizer," Tom said. "Sotheby's sold one like it last week for $18,000. It's a big item with pill collectors."

"How do you explain the surge in prescription drug prices in the last few years?"

"It's related to the price of cotton. As you know, all prescriptions come one part pill and five parts cotton. When the price of cotton went soaring, the manufacturers had no choice but to raise the cost of their drugs. I read in a prescription drug catalogue that you can get $8,000 just for the cotton that comes in the bottles."

One of the guards brought out a velvet tray.

Bedocs picked up a magnifying glass from his desk.

"These are some of the crown jewels of prescription drugs. This green pill is made of aspirin and codeine. It was sold to us by an old lady on Medicare who found it when she was cleaning out her medicine cabinet. It was obvious that she had no idea of the value of the tablet, and thought it had something to do with pain. The company that made it offered me $11,000 to buy it back because they were planning to raise the price of it again."

He showed me a black and white capsule. "There are collectors all over the country who would kill for this muscle relaxer."

"How much is it?"

Tom laughed, "If you have to ask, you can't afford it."

"The drug companies say that they need to charge a lot of money and make unbelievable profits in order to stay in business," I said.

"They have to say that because people are starting to complain about the costs. The fact is that prescriptions are a risky gamble, and you shouldn't accept one from your doctor if you are going to complain about the bill."

The guard took away one tray and brought another.

"What are those?" I asked.

"They're over-the-counter drugs. Since prescription ones have gotten so expensive, many investors are now turning their attention to these. You can make a bonanza on them if you know what you're doing. This sugarcoated antacid pill was 4 cents two years ago and is now worth $15. I don't sell them. I just keep them around to amuse my friends."

"Aren't you afraid of keeping so many valuable prescription drugs in your house?"

"Not really. Even if the thieves got inside no one would be able to open the safety tops of the bottles."

Gay rights protesters drown out governor's speech

PALO ALTO, Calif. (NYT) — About 300 angry demonstrators, shouting "shame, shame" and blowing whistles, drowned out a speech by Gov. Pete Wilson at Stanford University in protest against his weekend veto of gay rights legislation.

Ducking an occasional thrown egg or wad of paper, Wilson could barely be heard above the screams of gay and lesbian protesters who rushed the outdoor stage he shared with Stanford officials and other dignitaries, gathered for closing ceremonies at Stanford's centennial celebration.

The demonstration came as the the bill's author said in Los Angeles that he is prepared to amend the legislation to meet Wilson's objection that it was too complex. There was no immediate response from the governor.

Assemblyman Terry Friedman, D-Los Angeles, also called on protesters not to jeopardize widespread public support for his measure, AB101.

"I think that some of the violence and excesses in demonstrations are not only risking injury to innocent people but are also politically counterproductive," he said.

In Sacramento, state police asked employees to leave the Capitol by 5 p.m. in preparation for an evening demonstration on the steps outside.

The action at Stanford followed window-smashing and fire-setting Monday night at the State Building in San Francisco by several hundred of the 7,000 people who marched in a protest rally.

Tuesday, more than 40 police officers in riot gear kept demonstrators back from the stage in Stanford University's Quad. A half-dozen U.S. Secret Service agents surrounded Wilson at the podium as he doggedly went on with his prepared address.

As demonstrators rushed forward at the start of Wilson's remarks, the governor said sternly: "I will give you some advice, this is not the time or the place for fascist tactics."

Despite several powerful amplifiers, those were among the few words of his 15-minute speech that could be heard.

His prepared remarks praised Stanford's achievements of the past century and ignored the controversy over his veto of AB101.

As he finished his remarks, Wilson turned and caught an orange that had been thrown at him from the crowd. Smiling, he tossed it back.

Democrats make call to reopen last year's budget agreement

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The speaker of the House, Thomas S. Foley, Tuesday joined a growing chorus of leading Democrats seeking to reopen last year's budget agreement after President Bush's announcement that he would destroy thousands of nuclear weapons.

Foley, D-Wash., Democrat, said that the president's action and changes in relations with the Soviet Union brought on by the failed August coup should be reflected by a shift in the way Congress views the Pentagon budget.

The budget agreement set limits on three categories of spending — military, foreign and domestic — and barred transferring money among the categories.

At the time, political leaders did not forsee large changes in any category; now that the possibility of a larger-than-expected military budget cut is being discussed, Foley and other Democrats are frustrated that the budget agreement dictates that any savings would go to reduce the budget deficit and not to supplement domestic spending.

"The budget agreement was undertaken last year in good faith by all of the parties," Foley told reporters. "The president's initiative last week is a dramatic example of how conditions have changed within the last year, how spectacularly and beyond anyone's possibility of prediction these events have changed to affect the relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union, and thus the fundamental predicate of U.S. defense and nuclear strategy for the last 40 years."

Foley said Bush's arms initiative "would have been considered totally irresponsible a year ago" when the five-year budget agreement was reached.

Serial killer gets life term

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Donald Leroy Evans, who claims to have killed more than 70 people, received a life sentence Tuesday for kidnapping a 10-year-old homeless girl.

Evans, 34, had pleaded guilty Aug. 19 to the federal charge.

A sentencing hearing had been scheduled for Oct. 24 in U.S. District Court in Biloxi but Evans asked that it be held sooner. Judge Walter Gex III agreed and sentenced Evans to life on Tuesday, said Evans' attorney, Fred Lusk.

Evans still faces a capital murder charge in the death of the homeless girl, Beatrice Louise Routh, whom he kidnapped on Aug. 1 from a Gulfport beach. Evans was arrested Aug. 5 in Louisiana and he led authorities to the girl's naked body in southern Mississippi on Aug. 11.

After his arrest, Evans told authorities he killed more than 70 people across the country and in Canada, starting after he was discharged from the U.S. Marines for health reasons in 1977.

Evans has been charged with first-degree murder in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in the 1985 murder of a prostitute. And Daytona Beach, Fla., police want to interview Evans, a drifter from Galveston, Texas, about the 1985 slaying of a pregnant transient.

But Evans' other claims haven't been substantiated. He brought officials to Arizona desert north of Phoenix in late August to search for the bodies of three women he said he killed and buried there, but the search was fruitless.

Evans could be sentenced to death if he's convicted of capital murder in Routh's death.

WAR Against Youth at Risk

The United Way has made a big difference in the way Midlanders take care of Midlanders. Our United Way is a campaign for the hearts, minds and lives of our community. By giving to the United Way we can fight the war against the forces that hurt our children, forces like alcohol, drugs, gangs and peer pressure.

The United Way's 17 agencies fight these battles every day by teaching children how to say no, by giving them self-esteem, and by providing a safe place while their parents are at work.

Agencies involved in this battle include Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire , Boys and Girls Club of Midland, Midland/Lee Youth Centers, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, YMCA Day Care and Youth Sports programs, and Salvation Army Day Care.

Victories come in all sizes, shapes and colors. With your help, talent and resources, we're going to win this war the Midland way -- The United Way.

Defense zeroes in on drug link

MIAMI (AP) — Manuel Noriega's defense zeroed in Tuesday on guns-for-drugs flights linked to U.S.-supported Nicaraguan rebels, but strenuous protests from federal prosecutors sharply limited the questioning.

The inquiry into the Contras came during cross-examination of the government's star witness, Panamanian drug pilot Floyd Carlton, who has testified that Noriega received cash bribes to protect drug flights.

"Just stay away from it," U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler finally warned lead defense attorney Frank Rubino after repeated prosecution objections. The judge has told the attorneys and jurors he wouldn't allow a political trial.

Before the defense was cut off, Carlton acknowledged that his pilots were flying arms shipments to the Contras in 1983 or 1984 with Noriega's authorization.

"Did you ever fly weapons at General Noriega's instruction for Colonel Oliver North?" asked Rubino.

Lead prosecutor Michael Sullivan jumped up to object, and Hoeveler ordered Carlton not to respond. North ran the illegal Contra supply operation under President Reagan that led to the Iran-Contra affair.

Carlton also said the same Costa Rican airstrip used to deliver arms to the Contras was used to fly drugs to the United States.

Rubino asked about Carlton's connections to DIASCA, a Miami aviation company that a drug-trafficking indictment against Carlton charged he used to coordinate drug flights and payoffs. But the government again objected.

Even after Carlton and DIASCA's Miami operators were indicted, the State Department paid the company to deliver humanitarian aid to the Contras.

The defense is apparently trying to show that Carlton and others used a secret arms supply network set up with U.S. authorization to fly drugs into the United States without Noriega's knowledge.

The defense on Tuesday also dramatically confronted Carlton with a transcript of a phone conversation he had with two Panamanian associates at the time he was testifying before a Senate committee against Noriega.

Sonny Bono to run for Senate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sonny Bono, former half of the pop duo Sonny and Cher and the current mayor of Palm Springs, announced Tuesday he's running for U.S. Senate.

Bono, a Republican, said he will do his best to establish credibility, even though he acknowledges his candidacy will spark one-liners on the late-night talk shows.

"It's no joke," Bono said at a news conference. "I may have to wear that Sonny and Cher thing for a while, but I'll overcome that. I just think that if I talk to people, I'll overcome that."

Bono, 56, is vying for the seat held by retiring Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston. He enters what is shaping up to be a colorful GOP primary race against TV commentator Bruce Herschensohn and U.S. Rep. Tom Campbell.

Bono, a moderate, supports abortion rights and a stronger U.S. energy policy that would make immediate offshore oil drilling in California unnecessary.

In an election season in which Democrats and Republicans alike are selling themselves as political outsiders, Bono appears to be the real thing. His political experience is limited to his nearly four-year stint as mayor of Palm Springs. His support from within the GOP is minimal.

NOTICE OF CONSERVATORSHIP OF
CUSTOM SECURITY MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

Pursuant to Article 21.28-A of the Texas Insurance Code, the Commissioner of Insurance issued an official order, No. 91-1400, effective September 25, 1991, placing Custom Security Mutual Life Insurance Company, Austin, Texas, in a state of conservatorship. This company is a domestic insurance company authorized to write life, accident and health insurance in Texas pursuant to Chapter 11 of the Texas Insurance Code.

The Commissioner of Insurance finds that pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5, Texas Insurance Code, the company has requested and consented to the appointment of a conservator. Supervision is inadequate to accomplish rehabilitation of the company.

Under the order, the Conservator will assume control and operation of the company and will take all steps and legal measures necessary to preserve, protect, and recover the assets and property of the company. Efforts will be made to rehabilitate the company or sell its insurance business to another insurance company for the protection of its policyholders and the public.

If you are a policyholder of this company, your insurance coverage continues in effect for as long as you pay your premiums. If the company is rehabilitated or its insurance business is sold, then your coverage will continue without interruption. If the company is not rehabilitated, or its business is reinsured, it may be placed into receivership, and you will be so notified. In either event, contractual claim obligations will be paid by the company, by the reinsurer, or by the guaranty fund subject to the limitations provided in law. The guaranty fund provides protection for covered claims up to the amounts specified in Article 21.28-D, Texas Insurance Code.

Courses of action available to policyholders include continuation or cancellation of their policies. Policyholders who wish to continue their coverage need do nothing more so long as their premiums are paid. If premiums are due, policyholders should continue to pay them in the same amount and manner as in the past in order to keep their coverage in force.

To avoid possible loss of coverage, policyholders must continue to pay premiums unless and until similar insurance can be obtained from another company. Policy provisions with respect to filing claims remain in force and must be observed.

Claims will continue to be handled in the standard process as specified in the insurance contracts issued by the company. Policyholders will be notified if there is any change in claims processing or handling.

Policyholders' rights are governed by the Texas Insurance Code, Texas Department of Insurance rules, and by policyholders' individual contracts of insurance. Policyholders with specific questions regarding policy provisions should seek independent legal advice. No action is required by policyholders under Commissioner's Order No. 91-1400. If any action should be required in the future, policyholders will be notified.

This notice is published pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5A, Texas Insurance Code (Acts 1989, 71st Legislature, Ch. 1082, Sec. 4.02, eff. September 1, 1989).

Anti-tax activist attends national meeting

■ Midlander Edna Walger, president of Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse, says she was encouraged by the stories told by representatives of similar groups.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midland anti-tax activist Edna Walger said she can't shake the feeling that she's a David facing an army of Goliaths.

As president of Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse, she recently attended a national convention of similar groups that taught her much about what it takes to win the battle against overzealous taxing entities.

Walger

"But Midland is one of the newest, smallest and least funded of all these groups," Mrs. Walger said. "I know that makes it harder for us."

The Washington, D.C., conference, organized by the National Taxpayers Union and sponsored by a number of other citizen tax-opposition organizations, included representatives from 28 states and four foreign countries.

All share a philosophy, Mrs. Walger said.

"The taxing bodies have gone out of control whether it's with ad valorem, user fees and service fees," she said. "They extract their 'pound of flesh' from the taxpayer one way or another."

Mrs. Walger said she was encouraged by others' stories of failures and successes, but she also realized how far Midland's group — operated from her home for its first 13 months of existence — has to go.

A representative from Chicago told of her group's vigil outside the mayor's office. When they saw him sneak in through a back entrance, they began pounding on the door and refused to stop until he came out to hear their gripes.

Those from another organization described their loud, obnoxious pickets in front of taxing entities. They positioned themselves near a busy street with signs that read, "If you're fed up with taxes, honk your horn," and the noise was deafening.

"All of them had encountered more failures than successes," Mrs. Walger said. "But they keep on going, fighting for the local taxpayers."

She was surprised by the age of many of the participants — middle 30s to early 40s and a few in their 20s, and about equal numbers of men as women.

The different methods used by the groups were dictated by the environment they operated in, Mrs. Walger said.

"If you have to do some of those really noisy things, march around with signs and like that, well, you have to," she said. "I don't want to do things like that here."

In the local community, Mrs. Walger described two main barriers to CATA's battles — a political "power pack" and taxpayer apathy.

"We need funding. We need active, involved members," she said. "Unless we get big, we can't compete with the big guy." She won't divulge the number of members in CATA now, but says many of them are not active in the organization's work.

"We have a problem with 'armchair activists' who want to gripe about how everything is and don't want to do anything about it," Mrs. Walger said. "We should be a group for the little people. Because like Leona Helmsley said, it really is the little people who pay taxes."

She said she plans to correspond with leaders of similar groups, seeking the wisdom of their experience.

Of operating what often seems to be a one-woman show, Mrs. Walger said "the emotional ups and downs are unbelievable."

"I try to focus on the ups, but it's hard without more members, more help," she said. But she fights her battles daily — often being the only citizen or one of very few present at regular meetings of the local taxing entities.

"I've got to do it," she said. "How can we say we're the greatest nation in the world if our representatives don't even represent us anymore?"

Across the country, the anti-tax movement is growing, she said.

"It's not a freight train, but it's gathering speed," Mrs. Walger said. "People out there are working all the time."

Majority of Houston officers moonlight

■ Because of the low salaries, 85 percent of Houston police officers work extra jobs just to make ends meet.

By Karen Roebuck
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston police officer Rick Odis often spends his time away from the force hanging around a pool hall or a fast-food restaurant or walking around his condominium complex.

But that isn't Odis' way of relaxing, it's his way of earning extra money. Like 85 percent of his fellow officers last year, Odis moonlights.

That's far more than the national average of moonlighting officers. About 30 percent, or 150,000 of the estimated 500,000 police officers nationwide, work extra security jobs, according to William C. Cunningham, president of Hallcrest Systems, a security and law enforcement research firm, and author of a 1990 U.S. Department of Justice study.

More than 95 percent of HPD officers who hold down second, third and even fourth jobs, also work in security, according to Capt. Ray Chandler, who oversees the department's personnel division.

HPD's rank-and-file officers say they have to moonlight just to make ends meet.

"We're broke, that's the bottom line," said Odis. "I have a habit to support — eating."

The 26-year-old patrolman works as a security guard at a restaurant and a pool hall and as a "courtesy officer" at the condominium complex where he lives in exchange for not paying rent.

Burglaries have dropped dramatically since he moved in — down from about 10 a month to only two in the three years he's lived at the southwest Houston complex, he said.

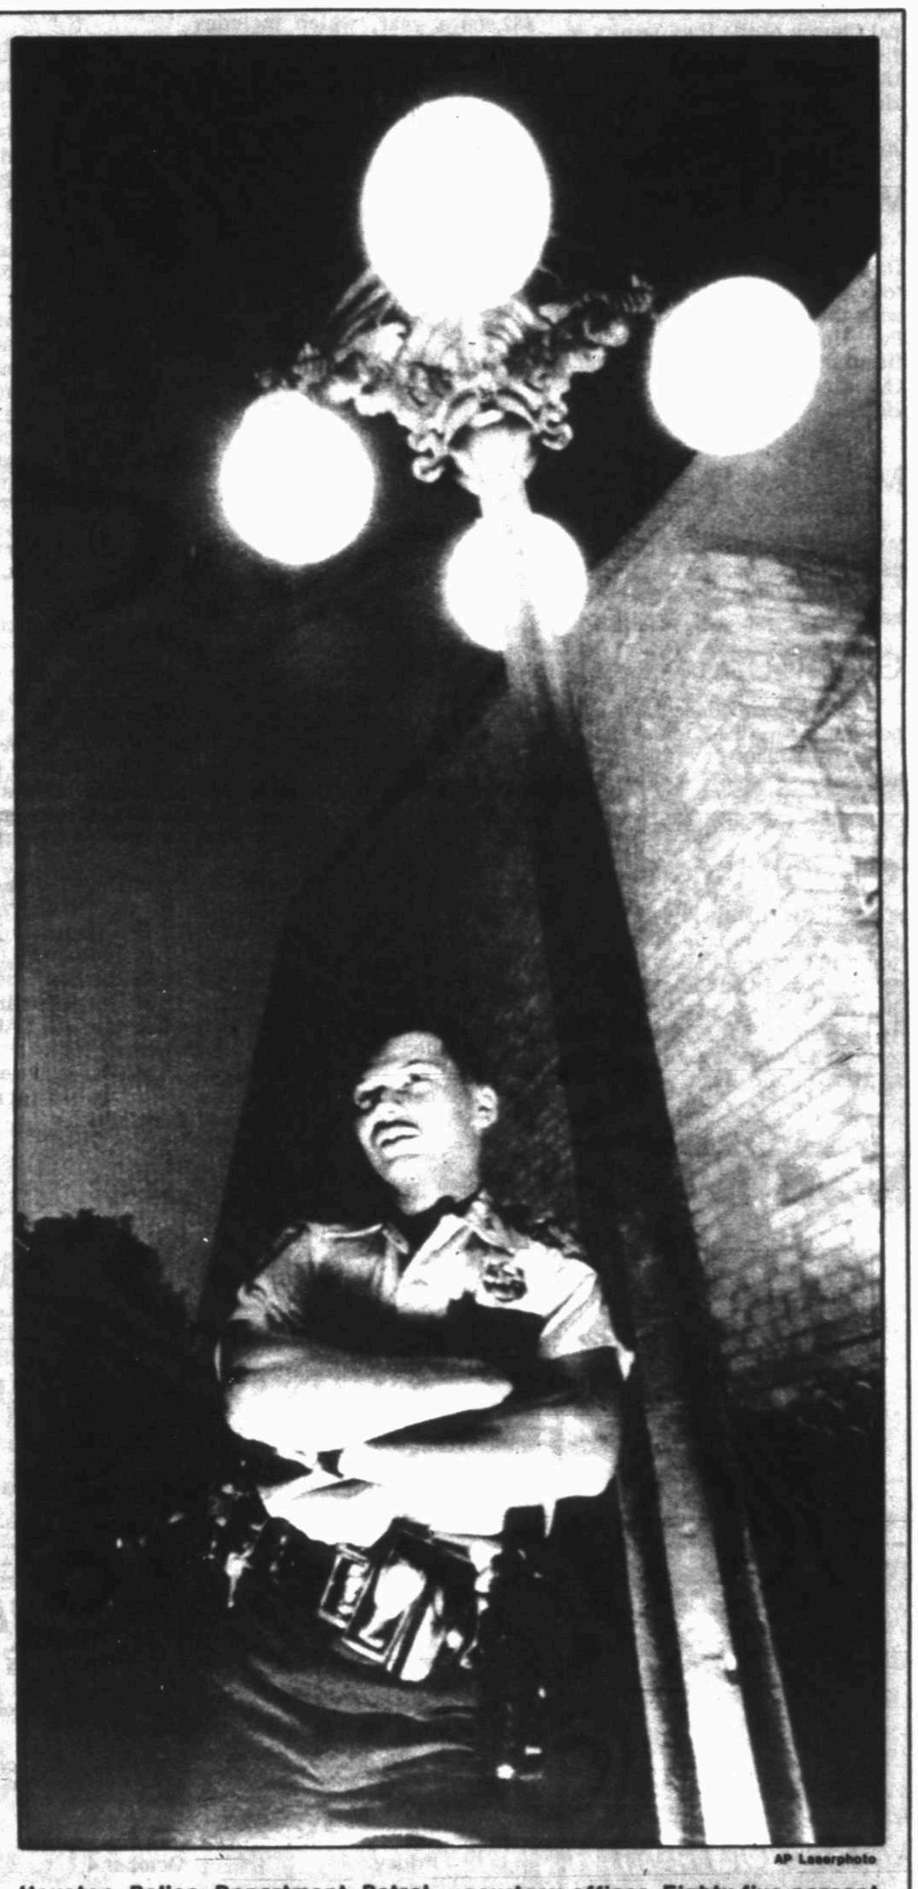

Odis, who earns $29,500 a year after being on the force for five years, said he has no trouble working four jobs and seven-day weeks, but he does have a problem with having to work that much to make a decent living.

Odis and other officers said the stress of police work and of working several jobs, coupled with little time for relaxation, takes a toll on many officers, their jobs and their families. Asked why he wants to be a police officer despite complaints of low pay and other stresses that accompany the job, Odis said: "Because I enjoy it. I'm not in it for the money, as you can tell. The extra jobs are to make up for the money."

He and other officers said they wouldn't work extra jobs — or at least as many hours — if they would get adequate raises.

First-year officers now make slightly more than $25,100 a year, while officers with eight years experience earn slightly more than $30,300 a year. An incentive-pay system enables officers to get more money, depending on their educational background.

Jury's decision expected today in Marmolejo lawsuit

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A 12-member jury is expected to reach a decision today in the civil lawsuit against the city for damages sustained when a city vehicle hit Adela Marmolejo more than four years ago.

On Tuesday, two days of testimony concluded in the 238th District Court before Judge John Hyde.

Ms. Marmolejo, 34, a Midland Independent School District trustee, seeks $280,000 in damages as a result of being struck by a pickup truck while walking across the intersection of Front and Main streets on Feb. 3, 1987.

The jury has been faced with conflicting testimony as to whether Ms. Marmolejo was in the crosswalk when hit by the truck and whether headaches and other medical problems she suffers resulted from the accident.

Cynthia Karen Hilton, a service representative for the city of Midland and the driver of the truck involved in the accident, testified Tuesday that Ms. Marmolejo was about 10 feet outside of the crosswalk.

"I looked at the crosswalk and she wasn't there," Ms. Hilton said.

Testimony on Monday by an eyewitness and Ms. Marmolejo indicated that Ms. Marmolejo was in the crosswalk.

The accident occurred when Ms. Hilton, traveling north on Main Street, turned left onto Front Street. Ms. Marmolejo was walking from the north side of Front Street.

Ms. Hilton testified she was driving about 10 mph during the turn and saw Marmolejo fractions of a second before impact.

"There was no time that I could not see where I was driving ... (although) the sun made it difficult to see," Ms. Hilton said.

The accident occurred about 5:20 p.m. and Ms. Hilton was turning westward into the setting sun, testimony indicated.

"The impact occurred and she (Ms. Marmolejo) pushed off from my truck," Ms. Hilton said. Ms. Marmolejo was positioned diagonally when hit, Ms. Hilton said.

Ms. Marmolejo testified earlier that she was struck on her left side.

The extent of injuries sustained from the accident was presented to the jury through in-depth medical testimony from depositions.

The plaintiff claimed chronic injuries — including headaches — as a result of the accident. The lawsuit filed stated that Ms. Marmolejo suffered ear, elbow, neck and shoulder injuries from the accident.

The defense presented testimony that some of Ms. Marmolejo's medical problems may have existed separate from the accident.

Various witnesses also testified about Ms. Marmolejo's appearance of ill-health since the accident.

Bomb threat delays flight

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

A report of a bomb aboard Southwest Airlines Flight No. 627 at Midland International Airport forced 27 passengers to evacuate the plane while members of the FBI bomb unit searched the aircraft for more than two hours. No bomb was found.

The plane, a 737-500 model headed for El Paso, was taxied to a remote area of the airport after Southwest airline officials received the threat, said Marcelyn Blauvelt, assistant director of the airport.

"The passengers were already on the plane when the crew was notified. They waited at the gate and were later taken out to claim their luggage," said Blauvelt.

"It was sort of frightening at first. We didn't really know what to think. I just wanted to get off the plane to see what was happening," said passenger John Burnau, 27, of El Paso.

The bomb threat and subsequent search delayed the flight for nearly three hours.

"They went through the works," said passenger Gerald Hallman of Midland. "They loaded us all on and we were about ready to leave as we were supposed to at 4:30. Then the FBI checked all of our luggage and eventually determined everything was all right."

Hallman and his wife, Sue, were headed for a vacation in Boston via El Paso.

The plane finally lifted off just before 7:30 p.m.

Old West gunfights recreated on streets of Seagraves

By John Rigg
Associated Press

SEAGRAVES — The sounds of gunfire soon will echo through the streets of Seagraves when desperadoes face lawmen in life-and-death skirmishes.

The gun battles will be staged, of course, but they may have a direct bearing on how well this community of 2,400 people prospers in the years to come.

Three months ago under the prompting of Mayor Pat McAdoo, a group of residents formed an organization called Save Our Seagraves. Their goal was to stimulate interest in the town, said Police Chief Joe Mollinary.

"They wanted something in this town to bring in some tourists and to beautify the main street," Mollinary said. "I made the suggestion that why don't we have the 1880s gunfights out here."

That led to the birth of Seagraves' equivalent of the Old Tucson movie set located outside Tucson, Ariz.

Mollinary and other town residents, including the gunfighter cast members, donated time and materials to build an Old West set complete with hotel, saloon, livery stable and a bunkhouse.

The buildings, which are fronts, are located on an old depot area of the Seagraves historical museum behind the post office.

Mollinary and 14 cast members took to the stage — after two months of rehearsals — last Friday after the annual homecoming parade.

The police chief, acting under the persona of a U.S. deputy marshal, enters the set looking for an outlaw who has a $5,000 reward on his head for killing two lawmen.

A gun battle soon erupts and dead and dying men fall to the ground. The scenario is repeated with variations in a second skit a short time later.

The skits, which Mollinary wrote, are loosely based on real incidents that occurred in West Texas in the 1880s, he said.

"He did them in five minutes. I'm not lying," Mollinary's wife, Pat, said of the scripts. "This is his dream come true. This is what he always wanted to do — the 1880s."

Each skit takes five to seven minutes to perform, Mollinary said, noting that there is some ad libbing in the dialogue.

"You want less dialogue and a lot of action. They (gunfighters) talked mean back then," he said. "They were very uneducated people. We're trying to get as authentic as we can."

Mollinary said he selected local people for the roles as gunfighters. Several of them — such as Stelvin Sanderson and Michael Adams — live real lives as ranchers or farmers outside Seagraves.

The cast members have supplied their own costumes for the skits, and each gunfighter has provided his own pistol or shotgun. All the handguns are .45-caliber single-action revolvers that use the same blank cartridges as found in the movies.

Mollinary said the skits should tie in with another local goal: to form a company of the U.S. 4th Cavalry based in Seagraves.

That dream is connected to a celebration planned next July in which residents will celebrate the town's 75th birthday and an ongoing Main Street project to beautify downtown Seagraves, McAdoo said.

Although the beautification project and the concept of a 4th Calvary unit in Seagraves still are evolving, the gunfighter skits hold the promise of bigger things for the town, Mollinary said.

Ultimately, the cast could go on the road for performances in other communities, he said.

HPD: Officers work extra jobs

(From 1B)

Salaries of the command staff range from $36,800 for sergeants to $66,900 for assistant chiefs. Most officers charge about $15 an hour for security jobs, according to Greg Bisso, president of the Houston Police Patrolmen's Union.

The Houston Police Patrolmen's Union recently asked City Council for a 25 percent pay hike, which, it argued, would make HPD salaries competitive with other departments its size.

Officers instead had to settle for a 4 percent raise, which takes effect in January.

Officer Jimmy Jones, 34, said he increased his salary by 50 percent by working four extra jobs, primarily through a 16-hour-a-week job as a security guard at a downtown office building.

All the time he spends working, though, cuts into his time with his wife and three young children.

For that reason, he said, he is studying for a civil-service exam to try to get a promotion. "Not because I want to be a supervisor, but I need a raise. I'd like to spend more time with my family while they're young," Jones said.

Jones sees a promotion as his best shot at earning more money. After 12½ years with the department, he has reached the maximum pay level for his rank — $32,900 a year, which includes $1,560 incentive pay because he has a college degree.

The council recently approved additional step increases for officers after 11 and 14 years of service, effective in January.

HPD officers not only spend a lot of time talking about needing more money, they also spend a lot of time making it elsewhere.

Under department rules, officers can spend a total of 76 hours a week working, including time spent in court, Chandler said. The department restricts the hours, he said, "so they'll stay awake on their regular jobs."

"We would like our officers to make enough money so they wouldn't have to work an extra job, because reason says he's going to be a better officer if he's only working one job," said Chandler, who works two extra jobs.

But since the city doesn't pay police officers enough, working an extra job "is a necessary evil" for most officers, Chandler said.

The officer's disadvantage is a benefit for the city, he added. Off-duty officers working security jobs arrest a lot of suspected criminals, he said.

"It's a free service that the city gets. We make a lot of arrests on extra jobs," Chandler said.

The department does not keep statistics on whether officers are on-duty or off when they make arrests, but Chandler estimated about 40 to 50 arrests are made by officers working other jobs each day.

HPD must approve all jobs and prospective employers and puts a number of restrictions on officers' extra employment, such as forbidding them to work where a strike or other labor action is going on and prohibiting them from enforcing the "house rules" of a business, such as parking restrictions, Chandler said.

Carol Whited, manager of the Chestnut Hill Apartments in southwest Houston, said the complex usually has two to three police officers living there in exchange for not paying rent.

The officers walk around the complex, respond to tenants' calls and issue tickets for violations of parking or other laws, she said.

Prospective tenants always are told that the officers live there. "It makes the residents feel better," she said. For liability reasons, however, the complex's staffers call them "courtesy officers" and emphasize that they are not there to provide security.

While about 85 percent of HPD officers worked extra jobs in 1990, only about 69 percent have held other jobs so far this year, Chandler said.

But Chandler acknowledged that the department may not know about everyone's extra employment.

In 1990, 96.5 percent of their off-duty jobs were police-related, while 98.3 percent of the extra jobs worked so far this year are police-related, he said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Escapees caught

Staff Reports

The two inmates who escaped from the Ector County Jail early Monday morning were returned to the jail Tuesday after oilfield workers discovered them sitting in a field near the intersection of Farm-to-Market Road 866 and West University Street, west of Odessa.

Terry Taylor, 27, and Jeff Schroller, 18, were still wearing their jail blues when police apprehended them at 1 p.m.

Both will be charged with felony escape, officials said.

Taylor is serving a five-year term for theft and Schroller is serving five-years for burglary of a residence.

Guilty plea

A man charged with illegally attempting to acquire, and acquiring a prescription drug in 1989 entered a guilty plea in U.S. District Court on Tuesday, federal officials said.

Michael Lyle Williams is alleged to have tried to obtain Lortab 7, a pain killer, on April 18, 1989. In addition, Williams faces five counts for illegally acquiring the drug between February and April of the same year.

Session to focus on 'managed' care

Staff Report

Companies seeking to control health-care costs through managed care are the target of a Friday seminar entitled "Managed Care in the Nineties." The seminar is sponsored by the Midland-Odessa Association of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Counselors and Glenwood Hospital.

The seminar will be from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall at First United Methodist Church, 305 N. Baird.

"Because of decreased health benefits and cost control, insurance companies have gone to a system called 'managed care' and are deciding what kind of treatment we can have and who can provide it," said Donna Rogers of Glenwood. "It's confusing for companies and their employees as well as the providers of treatment. Everyone needs to know what managed care is."

Presenting the seminar will be Margo Bishop of Houston, regional director of managed care for Healthcare International.

Among topics covered by the seminar are:

- Defining basic terms related to managed care;
- Understanding the history and predicting trends in mental health reimbursement;
- Understanding the interrelationships of EAP/PPO/UR functions;
- Giving a working knowledge of short-term treatment modalities;
- Being better able to interface with utilization reviewers;
- Deciding if the managed care philosophy is appropriate for their practice; and
- Implementation of a managed care philosophy.

Cost of the seminar is $45 and includes tuition, handouts and lunch. It also applies towards TADAC education credits.

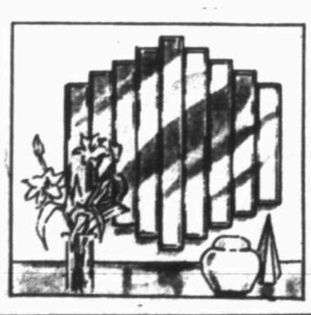

Reservations can be made by calling Rogers at 563-1200.

Hearst Jr. says WWII changed him

(Excerpted from "The Hearsts: Father and Son" by William Randolph Hearst Jr. with Jack Casserly. Part four of a nine-part series)

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

In 1928, at the age of 20, I began to cover city hall as a young reporter on the New York American. Charlie Bayer, already a star reporter on the paper, was covering that beat. He took me under his wing and became my teacher.

Charlie knew everything — not only where all the bodies were buried but even those whose funeral was coming in a month or two! He had an uncanny street savvy that could not be learned in any school. Charlie sized people up, then either swallowed them or spit them out. He was a straight, no-nonsense guy who seemed to be at home almost anywhere.

I was always after the old man for a raise. In 1936, after eight years of training in different jobs at the American, I finally got a fairly large one. My father named me publisher of the paper.

You were largely in or out in New York by the people you knew — not only the business biggies but headwaiters, bartenders, and hangers-on who knew what was happening around town. My favorite joints were the Stork Club's Cub Room in early evening and El Morocco late at night. Twenty-One was best for lunch, but I sometimes went there in early evening.

They were my three favorites because all were friendly. I never liked places that were more interested in who you were than what you were, or joints that catered to big spenders. That is why I liked the Kriendlers at 21 and Perona at El Morocco so much. Later, Toots Shor. All were regular guys who sold their booze and told their stories straight.

In 1943, I went to Europe as a war correspondent and later found myself in France.

General Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Free French resistance in England and later in North Africa, arrived in Rambouilliet, a small town about 20 miles southwest of Paris, on August 22, 1944. The choice of Rambouilliet was no accident. Its large chateau had become the customary country home of the French president.

I was lucky to get a room at the town's only hotel. The place was packed with other news correspondents from around the world. After checking in, I went to the bar to catch up on the latest scuttlebutt. Indeed, the Allies would march on Paris momentarily.

I had been there about 20 minutes when I glimpsed this GI courier out of the corner of my eye. The youngster, an Army private about 19 years old, carried a message in his left hand. He stood perplexed at the door of the bar, looking cautiously around the room. The young man seemed lost, unsure about what to do or say. He suddenly discovered his voice:

"Who's the officer in charge of this press billet?"

Hands lifted at the bar, but only those holding drinks. No one turned or answered. This was no press billet, although the hotel was crowded with war correspondents. I and other newsmen had left units because we believed de Gaulle would insist on capturing Paris, and we planned to accompany the French. Word was the operation would kick off the following day, August 24, 1944. It would be the biggest Allied victory since the Normandy invasion less than three months before.

A loud voice suddenly boomed, "I'm in charge!"

The private, a scared, skinny, straw-haired kid, walked up, saluted, and handed the bearded officer a sealed envelope. The officer signed for the message and the courier left. Only the man was not an officer. He was dressed as one, but without the insignia of rank. He was actually a civilian war correspondent. Newsmen held a simulated rank of captain, primarily to be treated as such in the event they were taken prisoner. They also were treated as officers by the military to facilitate logistics — food, lodging, and travel. In real military terms, however, reporters had no rank. They were as much civilians as a Red Cross girl passing out coffee and doughnuts.

I walked over to the correspondent and quietly said, "You shouldn't have done that. You're not in charge."

He looked up from the message, glared at me, and replied loudly, "Who says I'm not?"

With that burst, the newsmen at the bar suddenly stopped talking and drinking. This man was the head rooster and everyone knew it. When he spoke people stood at attention. He was the Press Papa — Eisenhower, Bradley, Patton, and Montgomery rolled into one.

My voice was low.

"You shouldn't because you could get that kid in trouble. He's a soldier, entrusted with a message. He clearly said it was for the officer in charge — which you ain't."

The correspondent's face reddened. He was irritated and asked again, "Who says I'm not?"

I replied, "I say you're not. You're a civilian. You're not an officer."

The big guy responded, "I AM in charge of this group. Do you want to see my credentials?"

"Yes," I said.

The correspondent was furious. Someone had challenged him. His fellow newsmen watched intently. I could see an angry fire rise in his eyes. He reached into the left breast pocket of his shirt with his right hand. My eyes were drawn there. Suddenly, like a lightning bolt, his left fist smashed into the bones of my right cheek. My head was on fire, and I fell to the floor. I lay on the floor shaking my head. The room was spinning. I tried to rise, but the fire in my head had become a patch of smoke.

I looked and saw Ernest Hemingway dimly above me. He folded the message from the courier, placed it in an inside pocket, slugged down the last of his drink, and swaggered out of the bar like a four-star general. I was still shaking off the lightning left. I could hear a high-pitched question from a newsman at the bar: Was it a sucker punch? A babble of voices followed. A debate about the punch had begun. Correspondents called for more drinks to fortify the argument. Thoughts of conquering Paris were momentarily postponed.

At dawn on August 23 the French Second Armored Division began its parade toward the capital. The Tricolor finally flew from the top of the Eiffel Tower shortly after noon on August 24.

Our group entered Paris from the south through the Port d'Orleans up the Avenue Orleans. The Parisians lined the wide boulevard and flowed into the streets. They were going absolutely crazy. Our jeeps were swamped in human traffic and we were often forced to halt. Women were kissing us wildly. Men handed us bottles of wine. The most reserved kissed us on both cheeks. Kids shook hands, waved, and smiled deliriously. Some wept as they sang the "Marseillaise." We were being overwhelmed in a sea of joyous humanity.

Later, I ran into Hemingway again in the bar of the Scribe hotel where he was holding court. He spotted me and sidled over. He said, "I hear you told some people about the other night."

I replied, "Yes, but what's your point?"

"Well," Hemingway explained, "I'm not particularly proud of that sneak punch."

I responded, "I wish you would have thought of that sooner."

That closed the chat. We met at various times later during the war and even shared a few drinks. I never felt any rancor against Hemingway, just disappointment. To me, neither the incident nor Hemingway himself ever fit the popular legend. My view was that Hemingway was a pompous stuffed shirt. I would have taken our INS guys — Jimmy Kilgallen, Larry Newman, Frank Conniff, or Bob Considine — any day. They were regular guys, and could hold a drink.

On September 10 I was back in the field with Patton. At Trier I had a long talk with Patton. We sat alone on collapsible chairs outside the tent serving as his living quarters. We looked out on flat farm fields as evening began to fall. The general talked about the roads. He said they were critical to an armored man like himself who used heavy tanks to do much of his fighting. The wrong road could slow down and even wreck an advance if tanks ruined the surface and bottled up other tanks and vehicles behind them.

He had to know those roads better than Caesar or Napoleon had because his was heavier equipment.

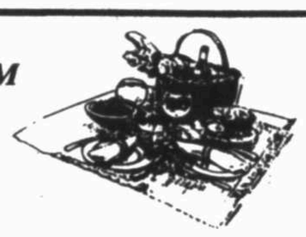

Patton talked of Alexander the Great, Hannibal, Napoleon. He seemed to become a mystical figure, harkening back centuries. He WAS Alexander. He WAS Hannibal. He WAS Napoleon. It was Patton who had crossed the Alps with thousands of elephants. Patton who led his men to such distant lands. Patton who had driven across Russia. He was marching back through history and living it himself. He was there. His incarnation. His military mind. He was the ancient warrior god. He was not talking history. He WAS history.

When the last gun sounded for me in Europe, I had changed as a person in two ways. First, new values pointed me in a different career direction. I now wanted to cover news instead of selling advertising and doing the administrative work of a publisher. I returned as publisher of the Journal-American, but it was never the same. My mind was made up. I would switch to reporting when the opportunity arose.

Second, I wanted to simplify my life and outlook. The average guy — the soldier, flyer, or sailor I had met at the front — had grown immensely in stature in my eyes. The big names and stars that had cast such large shadows over my earlier life dimmed in importance. I wanted to be a street version of a good GI Joe.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

If you know that danger exists along the way, you can usually find an alternate route. However, you have to recognize where the threat may lie to take timely countermeasures.

North had just enough to raise one spade to two. South might have tried three no trump to give North a choice of contracts, but that would have made no difference to the final resting spot.

Declarer won the opening club lead in hand and laid down the king of spades, only to learn there was an inescapable trump loser. With a potential loser in each side suit, declarer was going to have to find the king of hearts with West and maneuver an endplay to land the game.

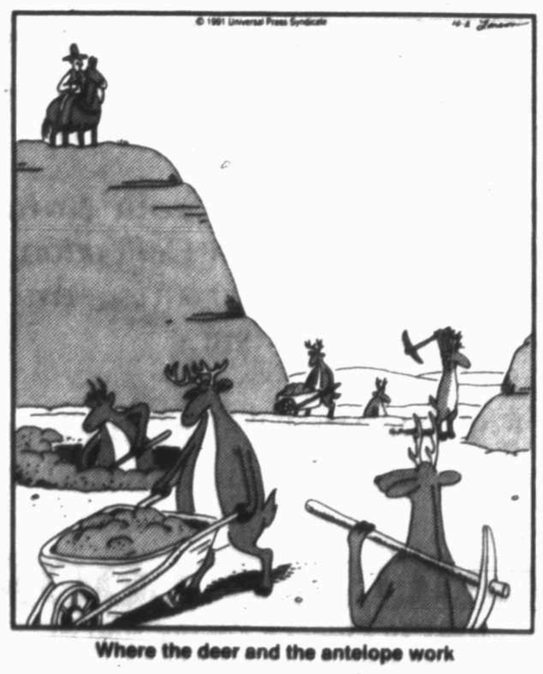

The king of diamonds lost to the ace and East defended superbly by switching to the nine of hearts, ducked round to dummy's jack. Declarer cleared diamonds, then cashed the ace of spades and threw West on lead with a trump. However, West was able to exit with a club to East's king, and East's heart return left declarer with no play.

Admittedly, declarer was unlucky to encounter a bad trump break as well as deadly accurate defense. Still, a skilled technician would have landed the contract. It required no great coup, just a simple precaution which a good player would have taken automatically even without visualizing the end position.

All declarer had to do was hold up the ace of clubs at trick one. After a club continuation the play would continue exactly as above, except that, with the club link between the defenders broken, when thrown in with the trump, West would have no safe exit. A minor-suit return would give declarer a ruff-sluff, and a heart would be away from the king into declarer's combined ace-queen tenace. Either way, the heart loser would vanish.

Music industry is in business to exploit, Billy Joel says

NEW YORK — Billy Joel has harsh words for the music industry.

Joel

"The business is based on exploiting artists, not promoting artists," he said in an interview to be shown on "The Dick Cavett Show" on cable TV's CNBC.

"Over the years, musicians, who are not historically good businessmen — which is why they are musicians — give away pieces," Joel said.

The Grammy winner said he dislikes making videos.

"I know people have possibly enjoyed the videos I've made," he said. "But to me it's like painting a mustache on your own painting."

The two-part interview was scheduled for telecast Friday and Saturday.

Red Storm Rising, a 19-month-old bichon frise owned by Francis L. Kellogg, has never been to a party before, but no matter. He is expected to be on his best behavior when he goes to Macy's for cocktails Wednesday evening. "He's very gregarious," said Kellogg, a former special assistant to secretaries of state.

The occasion is a benefit for the Bide-a-Wee Home Association. Guests were invited to come with or without dogs. (Cats were not invited; too skittish, it was said).

Mario Buatta, the honorary chairman, listed on the invitation as the king of the Canines, will bestow citations on dogs being inducted into the Royal Order of Canines.

Buatta, who will wear a cape and carry a scepter, does not own a dog. "I collect dog portraits," he said. "I don't feel that it's fair to have a dog in the city, and it's not fair to my furniture either."

KINGMAN, Ariz. — Actor Jean Claude Van Damme went to an elementary school to speak out against drug use as part of a deal to settle a speeding ticket.

He told about 800 pupils Monday at a Kingman elementary school that he rose to stardom without using drugs.

Van Damme is in Arizona filming the action adventure "Universal Soldier."

He was clocked Sept. 7 going 108 mph on Interstate 40 near Kingman. He waived fines and other penalties in favor of speaking to students about drugs.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Faith Ford was afraid her conservative relatives would be upset when her "Murphy Brown" character, Corky Sherwood-Forrest, bad-mouthed Louisiana's tough abortion law.

"I'm pro-choice, but I'm not one to go out and express my political beliefs. I stay away from anything controversial," Ford, a Pineville, La., native, said in an interview published Tuesday in The Tennessean.

Ford said she was worried about the reaction of her grandfather, a Baptist minister, but decided to stand up for what she believed.

Ford was in Nashville this week to play in a celebrity softball game for charity.

LOS ANGELES — Billy Crystal, fresh off the range as an urban cowboy in "City Slickers," will be on more familiar ground in his next movie.

Crystal

Crystal will play stand-up comic Buddy Young Jr. in "Mr. Saturday Night." The story spans 50 years in the life of Young and his brother-manager, Stan, portrayed by David Paymer.

Crystal makes his directing debut with the movie, which is scheduled for release next summer. He also is co-producer.

Julie Warner will play Young's wife, Elaine, and Helen Hunt will portray his agent, Castle Rock Entertainment said Monday.

From Jane Pauley, the television personality, to the Guerrilla Girls, who work incognito to focus on discrimination against women who are artists, the winners of the New York Woman magazine's Life of the City Awards cut a wide swath.

The magazine, which celebrates its fifth anniversary at a party Wednesday night, will honor 27 women "who are being innovative and breathing life into the city," said Betsy Carter, editor in chief.

Winners include Ganga Stone, founder of God's Love We Deliver; Wendy Wasserstein, author of "The Heidi Chronicles"; Queen Latifah, a rap musician; Elizabeth Lederer, who prosecuted the Central Park jogger case, and Linda Fairstein, chief of the Manhattan District Attorney's Sex Crimes Unit.

"We made a list of 600 prospects and kept paring and paring down," Ms. Carter said. "Thank goodness this will be an annual event, because I would hate to see this as our single statement."

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Man wanted in connection with cabbie's slaying surrenders

SAN ANTONIO — A 32-year-old man sought by police in the slaying of a taxicab driver has turned himself in and was charged with aggravated robbery, investigators said.

A 12-year-old boy already had been arrested and charged in connection with the Sept. 21 death of cab driver Curtis Raye Edwards, 33.

Floyd Hardeman, who said he is a laborer, turned himself in Sunday night and was being held in the Bexar County Jail in lieu of a $30,000 bond set by Magistrate Ron Prince.

"He (Hardeman) said he had heard on the streets that police wanted to talk with him," police Detective Rudy Garcia said Monday. "He came in on his own."

Edwin Debrow, the 12-year-old, was arrested at his home Friday. As a juvenile, he is charged with engaging in delinquent conduct in the death. The boy was turned over to Bexar County juvenile authorities.

Homicide investigators have accused the youth of shooting Edwards in the back of the head.

■ Rape suspect may be released

HOUSTON — Police on Tuesday questioned a suspect in the weekend rape of a 99-year-old woman but said it was likely the man would be released.

The nearly deaf, 85-pound woman was tied with a telephone cord, blindfolded and raped in her mobile home. She was found by a neighbor Sunday morning.

A suspect was arrested on two traffic warrants following a Crime Stoppers telephone tip Monday and continued to be questioned Tuesday, Houston police Sgt. Debi McCulley said. The man was not immediately charged, she said.

"At this point, he's going to be released without charges pending further investigation," she said. "The investigation is continuing. We are going to be looking at other individuals."

The woman remained hospitalized Tuesday at Hermann Hospital, where she was in stable condition, McCulley said.

She said officers planned to show the suspect's picture to the victim in a photograph lineup spread.

■ Man indicted in fingertip biting

HOUSTON — Harris County grand jurors have indicted the president of a University of Houston fraternity after hearing differing accounts of how he came to bite the fingertip off a woman he was trying to evict from a party.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon president Steve Ferro, 22, was indicted Monday on a felony charge of aggravated assault against Carrin Huber, 22, who lost the tip of her left little finger.

Ferro's friends contended Ms. Huber and her boyfriend, Kevin Schramm, were asked to leave the party Aug. 25 and were being escorted out of the fraternity house when a scuffle began between Ferro and Schramm.

Joe Bailey, Ferro's attorney, said Ms. Huber jumped on Ferro's back and was trying to break up the two. He suggested the finger got in Ferro's mouth when she was pulling his head from behind.

But Ms. Huber said she was trying to prevent a fight when Ferro hit her in the face and then grabbed her hand, stuffed her finger in his mouth and bit it.

If convicted, Ferro could be sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $5,000.

■ Man with machete shot by police

DALLAS — A man shot by Dallas police while wielding an 18-inch machete was in critical condition Tuesday at a local hospital.

George John Buckaloo, 40, was shot Monday afternoon when he refused to drop the knife. He underwent surgery for his wounds Monday night. He was at Parkland Memorial Hospital in the intensive care unit late Tuesday afternoon.

No police officers were injured in the shooting.

Buckaloo was stopped in front of a tire shop at about 5 p.m. Monday by officers Kimberly Rodriguez and James M. Perry. Buckaloo confronted the officers, said Deputy Police Chief Ray Hawkins. Officers exchanged words with Buckaloo and when he refused to drop the weapon, the two officers fired.

Ms. Rodriguez fired her 9mm pistol twice. Perry fired his gun once.

Hawkins did not know whether Buckaloo had the machete raised or was threatening the officers when they fired.

■ Deaf postal clerk receives award

AUSTIN — Larry Gillett of San Angelo, a postal clerk who has been deaf since he was 3 years old was honored as disabled person of the year in Texas by the Governor's Committee for the Disabled.

Others recognized at the committee's awards luncheon Tuesday included:

■ City of Beaumont-Beaumont Mayor's Committee for Employment of Disabled Persons.

■ Barbara Sloane, Waco, health care professional of the year.

■ Ralph Rouse, Dallas, public employee of the year.

■ Civilian Personnel Office-Reese Air Force Base, Lubbock, governmental agency of the year.

■ Denton McDugle, Deer Park, governor's citation for meritorious service.

■ Wal-Mart Store No. 163, Nacogdoches, small employer of the year.

■ Texas Commerce Bank, Houston, large employer of the year.

■ Agencies to fix centenarian's home

AUSTIN — The Bastrop home of a 113-year-old woman, who may be the oldest living Texan, will be repaired by two agencies, Gov. Ann Richards announced.

Maggie Thompson lives on the two-acre property with her daughter, Idamae Goines, 74, Richards said Tuesday.

She said the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs and the Lower Colorado River Authority are expected to complete the work in three weeks.

The governor described Mrs. Thompson as a "Texas treasure, and I am glad she is receiving the assistance she deserves."

State asks Hightower to pay $367 phone bill, paper reports

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower has been asked to repay the state $367 for long-distance calls to his campaign office during his losing re-election bid, a newspaper reported.

But Hightower, a Democrat who lost to Republican Rick Perry last year, said, "As best we can tell, the state has been reimbursed."

Geoffrey Connor, the Agriculture Department's general counsel, said the internal auditor found the calls as part of a routine review, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

The newspaper also reported Tuesday that the case has been referred to Travis County prosecutors. State law prohibits personal use of state phones.

Hightower described the incident as "the same old horse hockey."

"There's a political agenda here — it's nothing but politics," he said.

Connor said the inquiry was not politically motivated.

Documents obtained by the American-Statesman under Texas' Open Records Act show that the calls were made between August and early November 1990 from two cellular phones owned by the Department of Agriculture.

The records show the calls were made to the phone number at Hightower's campaign office, the newspaper reported.

Connor said both phones were checked out to Hightower. One was carried by the commissioner, and the other by an aide. An internal audit found that $29.52 of the calls were made from the phone assigned to Hightower, and $337.62 from the other phone, the newspaper reported.

Documents also show that during 1990, Hightower paid for an additional $3 in personal phone calls from his cellular phone, and his campaign paid $54.31, the agency said.

Hightower said a quick search of his records, which were stored in boxes at a warehouse, already had showed that the $29.52 and more than half of the $337.62 had been reimbursed.

Hightower said he received a letter from Connor last Wednesday, and the story appeared the following Tuesday, mentioning turning the case over to Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle.

"Even the phone company gives you 30 days to work out your bill," Hightower said.

'CJ's' letter in Ebony sparks interest in AIDS prevention

DALLAS (AP) — Health workers are staffing phones and forgoing paperwork to keep up with requests for HIV tests and information from people fearful of an AIDS-infected woman who has said she is intentionally spreading the deadly disease.

Since a letter written by a woman who identified herself only as "C.J." was read over the air by Dallas radio personality Willis Johnson, health workers said they have seen greater public interest in preventing the disease, especially in minority communities.

In the letter, published in the September issue of Ebony magazine, the Dallas woman said she was getting revenge on the man who infected her with the acquired immune deficiency syndrome through a sexual encounter.

C.J. has made the threat of acquiring the fatal disease seem "much more real" to several Dallas residents, said Alban Alfaro, education coordinator for the Dallas County Health Department.

"The ones who have been following C.J. closely, we noticed when we go out to conduct outreach, many times they would bring up C.J. and say, 'When are you guys going to catch C.J.?' "

Dallas County Health Department spokesman Michael Smerick says clinic staff has informed him that phone calls have dramatically increased since the article first appeared.

"The thing with C.J. is this person is very vocal," Smerick said. "We know this person is out there, but how many silent C.J.s are out there and how many silent C.J.s are out there that don't know they have been infected with the disease?"

Dallas County reported 3,182 AIDS cases through July 31. The first case was reported in 1981. Statewide, 13,170 AIDS cases have been reported.

C.J.'s notoriety has prompted radio stations to ask health department officials to be guests on talk shows. Church groups, especially traditionally black churches, and youth groups also have expressed increased interest in AIDS seminars, Smerick said.

"Education to me is the way (to fight AIDS) and we've hit stonewall after stonewall after stonewall 10 years after the fact," Smerick said. "We still have schools that won't let us come in and talk about condoms. We still have groups that won't let us come in and talk about cleaning your needles."

The Dallas Police Department is not searching for the woman, although at least one officer is keeping a file on her.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Longhorns may be wondering what new feat Trevor Cobb will perform this weekend in Austin's Memorial Stadium.

In three games this season, Cobb has gained 193 yards against Northwestern, 216 yards against Tulane and 240 yards Saturday against Iowa State, the latter earning him Associated Press offensive player of the week honors.

Cobb leads the nation with an average of 216.3 yards per game for the second straight week. Last season, he became the first 1,000-yard rusher in Rice history with 1,325 yards on 283 carries.

To the Longhorns' chagrin, he appears to be getting better.

"Game after game, I'm starting to see the extra yards that a good back might not get, but yards that a great back does," coach Fred Goldsmith said. "Guys get a pretty good shot at him and he still goes forward."

Texas Christian defensive end Roosevelt Collins also has had an outstanding season and earned the AP's defensive honor for the second time.

In last week's victory over Texas Tech, Collins had seven tackles, including two for nine yards lost. He returned an interception for a touchdown, broke up two passes and had one sack.

Cobb, as a junior, already is the Owls' all-time rushing leader with 2,519 yards on 555 carries, which ranked 28th on the SWC list.

Cobb would be surprised if he reached the 200-yard plateau against the Longhorns.

"I'd say 100 yards would be a good game," Cobb said. "They rush only four guys and those four do a good job of penetrating the line and creating problems.

"They will be in a hungry mood. They are 0-2 and I'm sure they'll look forward to playing us."

McMahon to miss at least 3 weeks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jim McMahon will be out of action for at least three weeks with sprained ligaments in his right knee, but the Philadelphia Eagles quarterback won't be placed on injured reserve.

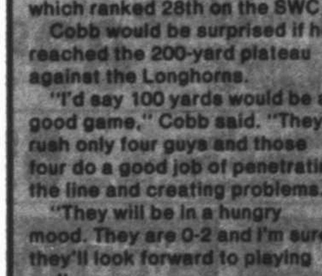

"We look for him to be back in three to four weeks," Eagles coach Rich Kotite said Tuesday. "That's all we know at this point."

McMahon's right knee collapsed under him in the first quarter of Monday night's 23-0 loss to the Washington RedsKins. He was replaced by Pat Ryan.

Kotite said Ryan and rookie Brad Goebel would work equally in practice this week and he would decide on the starter against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers at the end of the week.

TCU giddy over 4-0 start

■ Coach Jim Wacker's Horned Frogs are off to their best start since 1955.

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Texas Christian's "hot and happy" Horned Frogs will bid farewell to Southwest Conference rival Arkansas Saturday night with a bit of history on the line.

The unbeaten, Frogs (4-0) are favored to beat the Razorbacks (2-2) and become the first TCU team since 1942 to open a season with five consecutive victories.

"I was 5 years old in 1942 and I don't remember much about it," coach Jim Wacker quipped Tuesday in an upbeat report to cheering TCU alums.

"But I'm sure it was a great year."

TCU ended 19 years of anguish in Lubbock Saturday night with a 30-16 verdict over Texas-Tech that raised a few SWC eyebrows and left the Frogs rapping at the door of the AP's Top 25.

"That would be a big boost," said Tim Schade, who is alternating at quarterback with Matt Vogler since Leon Clay went down with a broken leg.

"It would show we've accomplished something. That's what we're striving for. And it's also good for the fans. It would put a few more in the stands and if they come out and cheer it's good for the team."

Schade was neither bold enough nor foolish enough to forecast a triumph over Arkansas but Wacker came close after declaring, "I ain't about to predict nothing."

He then added:

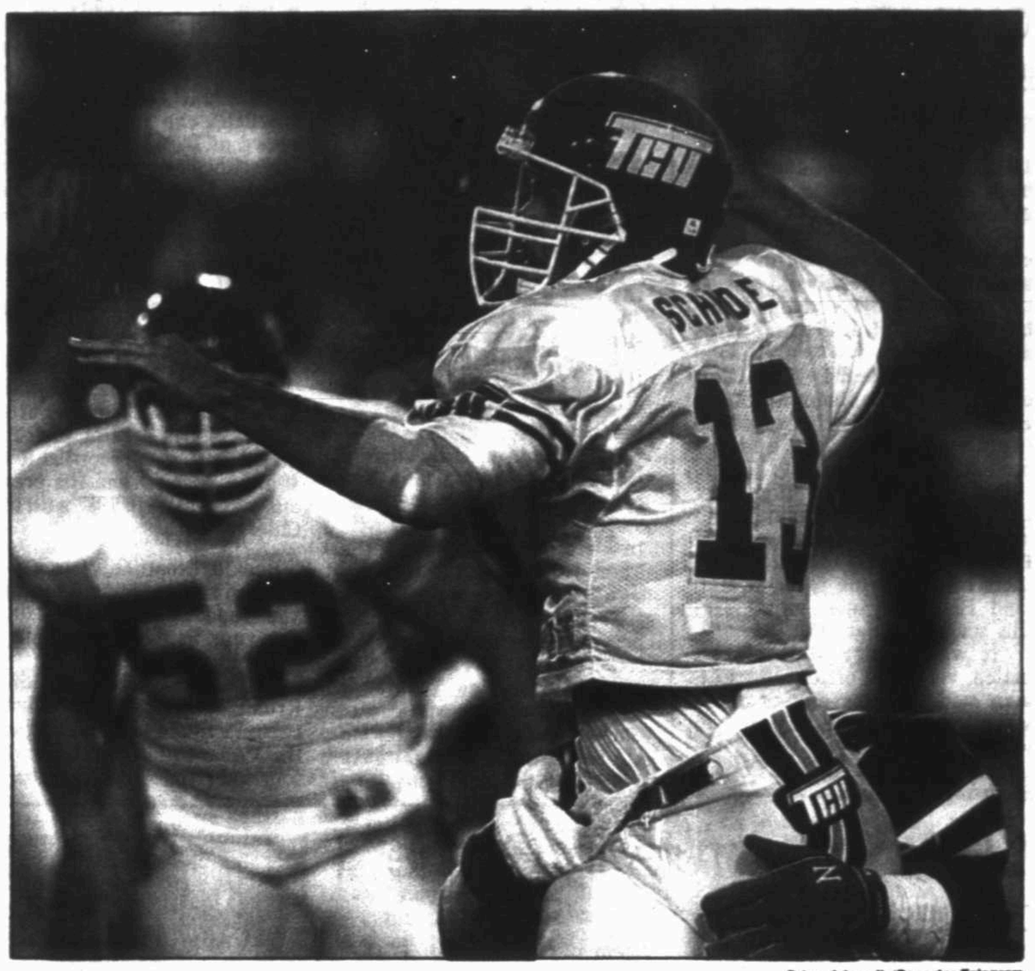

"I think we've got a good shot to be 5-0...The good news is we're on a roll. We're hot and happy."

Wacker reeled off an impressive list of individual accomplishments by both the TCU offense and defense this year but conceded later that the opposition has not been the toughest.

The Frogs shot down New Mexico, Ball State and Oklahoma State before beating the Red Raiders in Lubbock for the first time since 1972. It was also the first time since 1955 that TCU got off to a 4-0 start.

"This team has a chance to do something special," Wacker said while urging supporters to outfit themselves in TCU Purple for the Porkers.

The TCU-Arkansas rivalry, scuttled by the Razorbacks' decision to leave the SWC next year, dates back to 1920. Arkansas leads the series 42-23-2.

Rypien displeased with performance

Associated Press

HERNDON, Va. — While the Washington Redskins savor their shutout over the Philadelphia Eagles, quarterback Mark Rypien knows his lackluster effort won't satisfy critics who question his ability to come through in big games.

"I didn't feel I played awfully well, but I played well enough to make some plays," Rypien said after Washington's 23-0 victory Monday night. "We won a football game we had to win ... that's all I can ask."

Although Rypien passed for 204 yards and a touchdown, he also threw two interceptions — one in the Philadelphia end zone — and fumbled four times, losing two of them. After the game, much of the

Rebels spike Broncs

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

When Midland Lee setter Jenna Jones dumped a match-winning shot over the net that Odessa High's Marissa Sandoval couldn't make a play on, it marked the beginning of a new era at Rebel gym.

Anita Corder, first year head coach of the Lady Rebel volleyball team, recorded her first district win, as Lee downed OHS, 15-8, 15-13.

"When I coached at Abilene High," Corder said, "we'd always come out to Midland Lee and it wouldn't be a very good game. When I got here, I told these girls, 'Hang on to the seat of your pants, because we're fixing to beat Odessa High, and we're going to go on the road and beat Abilene.

"If we can get three wins in a row now, I think we can establish a winning tradition here. It took assertivenesss and control to win tonight."

It was in fairly dramatic fashion that the match was won and the 'W' posted next to Lee's name in the standings.

After dispatching the Bronchos rather handily in the first set, 15-8, the Lady Rebels had to stage a comeback to secure the second game win.

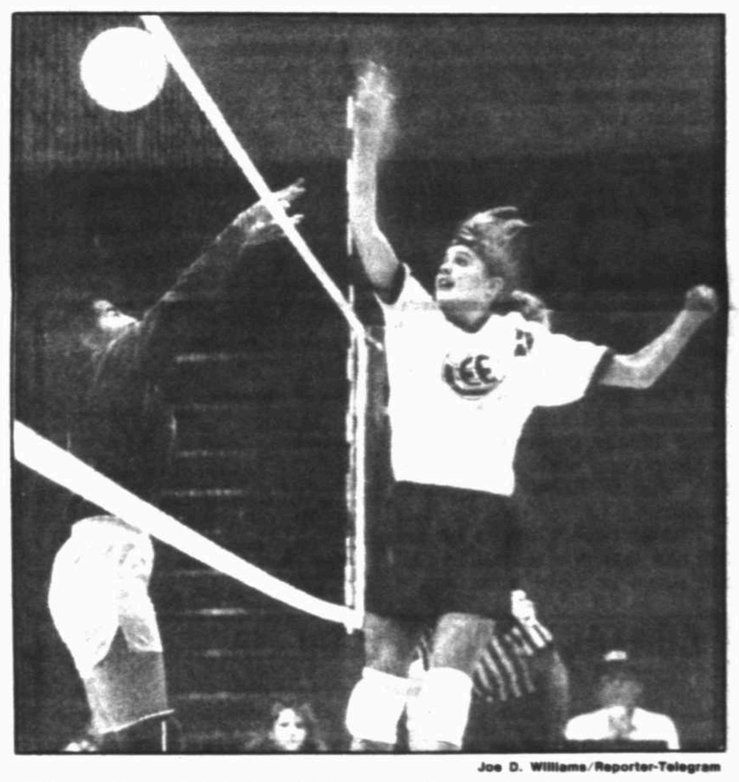

Down 13-10, the Rebels sensed a tentativeness in OHS' game. When they saw that flaw, they went for it.

"We saw a weakness," junior Tekeira Strambler said. "They weren't moving their feet, and there were a lot of holes I saw I could hit in. And my teammates were letting me know about those holes."

Carrie Zamora's play at the net got the Lady Rebs their first comeback point to make it 13-11. A Tiffany Grafa service ace followed by a dink over the heads of the OHS defensive front by Jones, and Lee had tied the game at 13-13.

Bulldogs facing life's major lesson

Let's not kid anyone. These are dark days for the Midland High football team.

The Bulldogs are off to an 0-4 start and haven't scored a touchdown this year. It leaves you searching for comparisons.

Williamson

At the current rate of offensive production, MHS is on track to score the least amount of points by a team in a season in the history of District 4-5A. Abilene Cooper's first team in 1961 scored a season low 24 points. In 1979, Big Spring, who is no longer in the league, scored 32 points in that season.

After that, there is a dramatic jump. Abilene High, who is also on the same scoring track as MHS with seven points in four games, scored 59 points in 1988 and Midland Lee had only 60 points in its early existence in 1962.

Also, Midland High has never had a winless season. The worst finish by MHS was 1-9 in 1941. The Bulldogs were 1-8-1 in 1945. All other MHS teams had at least two victories. These are not marks the current Bulldogs would like to better on the negative side.

Of course, the current plight of the MHS gridders has plenty of reasons for the current situation. Key injuries have hit often and hard. They haven't gone through a week without losing a starter — and this on a team that was woefully thin on overall depth to begin with.

But that brings us to the good news. There are still five games left in the season and you have to figure that something good has to happen down the stretch — if the Bulldogs can maintain some worthy goals.

Those goals must start this week against Abilene High. Here are two struggling and winless teams. MHS must come together now if it wants to pull this season out of the fire. And it's a worthy goal.

A victory over AHS could turn the ship around. No one really expects MHS to become a playoff team with San Angelo and Odessa Permian on the schedule, but Cooper isn't the best team in the state, and even high scoring Odessa High showed its Achilles heel against Permian last week.

In short, MHS still has a shot at finishing at the top of the second division — fourth place. That might not be easy, but achievable.

The major problem for the Purple Pack at this point in time is team attitude. Coach Davis Corley admits that the lack of scoring punch is playing on the minds of his kids. And who wouldn't be effected by all the attention surrounding the offense this year?

Still, this team can leave a lasting mark with a turnaround. But first, this team must feel like there is something to gain down the stretch. Performance of losing teams naturally begins to fall off with each mounting loss. It's the worst enemy of any team in a losing slump.

That's the enemy that MHS must defeat. The goal line and MHS opponents — not even Odessa Permian — is tougher to defeat than one's own mind.

In fact, this is the challenge we all face daily. It's a worthy effort to meet the challenge — no matter the odds or the trouble.

There are many who care for this Midland High team, but they are much like parents with a baby trying to take that first step. The Bulldogs will have to produce that first growl on their own. It's the way of life itself.

Some babies never walk and some bulldogs never growl. It's not the end of the world. It's the not trying that is the end of the world — for us all.

race Tuesday night.

After dropping the first game 14-16, the Lady Bulldogs came back to win the second and third games, 15-11, 15-13.

"It was very exciting," MHS coach Sonya Pittman said. "We scratched and scraped and clawed the whole way. We made comebacks throughout the entire match."

With a 4-1 record, MHS takes over second place behind Abilene High (4-0). Permian dropped to fourth with the loss and 2-2 record.

Last year, Midland High and Permian split the two game series with the Bulldogs winning at the Permian gym and the Lady Panthers returning the favor at Midland High. Permian visits MHS this season on Sat., Oct. 26.

"It was a very well played match, very well officiated," Pittman said. "It was one of those where you hate for any one to lose."

MHS entertains Abilene Cooper Saturday afternoon.

Justice serves Braves with win

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — David Justice capped the Atlanta Braves' most improbable comeback of their pennant-race surge with the most meaningful homer of his career.

Justice hit a one-out, two-run homer off Rob Dibble in the ninth inning for a 7-6 victory Tuesday night over Cincinnati that moved the Braves a half-game behind Los Angeles in the NL West. The Dodgers played San Diego later Tuesday in LA.

Of the Braves' four last-inning comeback wins, this one faced the longest odds.

The Braves fell behind 6-0 in the first inning, highlighted by Joe Oliver's first career grand slam. They faced huge odds against a comeback at that point — Reds starter Jose Rijo was unbeaten at Riverfront Stadium this season.

But Atlanta used a couple of ragged plays by Mariano Duncan, making his first career start in center field, to get within a run at 6-5 in the seventh. Then Justice did the rest.

Pirates 2, Mets 1

PITTSBURGH — John Smiley became a 19-game winner in a relief role as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the New York Mets.

The Pirates took the lead on Gary Varsho's tiebreaking single in the fifth inning.

Smiley came into a 1-1 game to relieve Zane Smith in the fourth inning by design. Manager Jim Leyland has been working his pitchers for specific lengths to get ready for the NL playoffs.

The win was the Pirates' 96th, their best total since the 1979 team won 98 games en route to a world championship. The crowd of 14,697 put Pittsburgh attendance over two million for a second consecutive year at 2,002,623.

Cardinals 3, Expos 1

ST. LOUIS — Lee Smith set a National League record with his 46th save as St. Louis beat Montreal.

Smith, who got the last three outs, broke the mark of 45 set by the Cardinals' Bruce Sutter in 1984. Smith became the fifth major leaguer to record at least 46 saves in a season. His previous high was 36 in 1987 with the Chicago Cubs.

Rookie Omar Olivares (11-6) gave up six hits in eight innings and Todd Zeile doubled home two runs in the first inning.

Phillies 6, Cubs 5

PHILADELPHIA — John Kruk's run-scoring single with two outs in the 13th inning gave the Philadelphia Phillies a victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Boston loss, Jay win clinch tie for Toronto

Associated Press

American

TORONTO — The Toronto Blue Jays clinched a tie for the AL East title Tuesday night, beating the California Angels 5-2 as Juan Guzman won his club-record 10th consecutive decision.

Kelly Gruber hit two RBI singles for Toronto, which cut its magic number to one and increased its lead to 4½ games over second-place Boston, which lost to Detroit 8-5.

Guzman (10-2), making a late run to steal some AL rookie honors from Minnesota's Chuck Knoblauch, hasn't lost since dropping his first two major-league starts in June. He gave up five hits in seven innings, walked one and struck out six in breaking Dave Stieb's 1988 consecutive victory mark.

Tigers 8, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Roger Clemens lost for the first time in eight weeks and the Red Sox stumbled to the brink of elimination.

Boston's seventh loss in nine games, coupled with Toronto's 5-2 victory over California, enabled the Blue Jays to clinch a tie for the AL East championship. Toronto has four games left and Boston has five remaining.

Dave Bergman, Travis Fryman and Pete Incaviglia each homered homered off Clemens (18-9), who lasted only five innings and left trailing 6-0. The Tigers became just the third team ever to hit three homers in a game off Clemens.

Mariners 8, Rangers 1

ARLINGTON — Jay Buhner, one of the stars in a pregame home run debry, connected for his 26th homer to lead Seattle over Texas.

Buhner hit three homers in the charity contest, then put the Rangers ahead with a two-run shot in the second inning off Oil Can Boyd (2-7). Greg Briley hit a three-run triple in the third off Mike Jeffcoat.

Dave Burba (2-2) held Texas to three hits in six innings. Calvin Jones pitched three innings for his second save.

Texas' Julio Franco, leading the AL in batting at .340, did not play. Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr., third in the race, went 0-for-4 and fell three points to .328.

Brewers 11-2, Indians 0-6

CLEVELAND — Reggie Jefferson scored the go-ahead run on Darren Holmes' wild pitch in the sixth inning as Cleveland beat Milwaukee 6-2 for a split of their doubleheader.

In the first game, Bill Wegman lowered his ERA to 2.85 and Milwaukee rode a six-run fifth inning to an 11-0 win. The loss was the Indians' major league-leading 102nd, tying a team record they also reached in 1914, '71 and '85. They've been shut out 18 times this season.

In the nightcap, Holmes (1-4) gave up consecutive two-out singles in the sixth to Jefferson and Jim Thome before bouncing a pitch past catcher Rick Dempsey, letting Jefferson slide home safely for a 3-2 lead.

Twins 3, White Sox 2

CHICAGO — Kirby Puckett hit a tie-breaking home run in the eighth inning and the AL West champion Minnesota Twins beat the Chicago White Sox.

With the score tied 2-2, Puckett homered off Melido Perez (8-7), his 15th home run of the season.

Mark Guthrie (7-5) allowed two hits in two innings and Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his 41st save.

Yankees 3, Orioles 2

NEW YORK — Rookie John Ramos hit a sacrifice fly in the 11th inning and the New York Yankees beat Baltimore.

Jim Leyritz led off the 11th with a pinch-single, moved to second on Randy Velarde's sacrifice and took third on Kevin Maas' single off Jim Poole (2-1).

Athletics 4, Royals 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jose Canseco hit his major-league leading 44th home run and Mike Moore extended his scoreless streak to 24 1-3 innings as the Oakland Athletics beat Kansas City.

Mark McGwire also homered, his 22nd.

LEE: Rebs rule in Game 1

(From 1C)

came through on the service line with an ace to move the Lady Rebs to a 14-13 advantage.

Jones' dump shot that sent Sandoval sprawling was the winner.

"They started having attitude problems," Jones said of the Lady Bronchos. "They started yelling at each other when they were up 13-10 and we took control."

Corder referred to the Lady Bronchos' style of play as "unorthodox," and added that she feels her Lady Rebels play better against a hard hitting, digging team.

But still, Corder said, "We felt confident coming in to the match. I think the girls knew they were going to win even when they were down 13-10."

The first game saw Lee lead from the start, jumping out to advantages of 7-1 and 12-6.

Individually, Corder said several of her players made her first district win as Rebel head coach possible.

"I haven't seen Tekeira hit the ball like that in a long time. She had seven or eight kills tonight that were so powerfully hit.

"Jenna, I've been after her a long time and she's finally starting to come along. She's completely changed her personality. You have to take on a very unselfish, giving personality when you become a setter. And physically she's very talented."

Zamora, a junior, was able to show her stuff as well, largely due to both Kim Blackburn and Alicia Furrow being on the bench recovering from recent illnesses.

The OHS junior varsity defeated the Lee JV, 15-4, 15-9.

Colts oust Meyer, offensive chief after 0-5 start

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Ron Meyer ran out of chances to make the Indianapolis Colts winners and lost his job Tuesday, one week after he was given a vote of confidence.

Meyer, along with offensive coordinator Leon Burtnett, was fired and replaced on an interim basis by defensive coordinator Rick Venturi.

In more than four full seasons coaching the Colts — at 0-5 one of four winless teams in the NFL — Meyer's record was 36-35. In recent weeks, Meyer blamed injuries for his team's poor play.

In recent years, though, the Colts did everything they could to help him produce a winner. They acquired All-Pro running back Eric Dickerson in a three-team deal in 1987. They won the AFC East at 9-6 but lost in their only playoff game under Meyer.

The Colts traded with Atlanta for the No. 1 pick in the 1990 draft and took Jeff George, hailed as the next Dan Marino. In 1990, the Colts were 7-9.

"The key is to progress the franchise, not make rash changes through frustration or anger," said Colts general manager Jim Irsay, who played under Meyer at Southern Methodist.

Irsay, who said the decision to go with a new coach was made more difficult because of his friendship with Meyer, also said he was tired of Meyer's excuses.

"I don't want excuses," Irsay said. "We'll let other people make excuses."

Meyer's firing came two days after the Colts' embarrasssing 31-3 loss to the Seattle Seahawks. Indianapolis has scored a league-low 40 points this season.

Meyer, who held an impromptu news conference in the parking lot outside the Colts' offices, again said injuries were the reason his team was winless.

He also added, "The injuries are part of the game. I can understand (the Irsays') frustration. The injuries do come with the territory."

Meyer, 54-52 overall in the NFL, including an 18-15 mark with New England from 1982-84, had earned a reputation for turning around faltering programs in short order, although few of those teams — including the Colts — achieved any lasting success.

At UNLV, Meyer took a team that went 1-10 in 1972 and in two years led the Rebels to an 11-0 regular-season record and an NCAA Division II playoff berth.

Meyer spent five years coaching at SMU from 1976-81, leading the Mustangs to a Southwest Conference title in 1981. But five years after he left for the NFL, the school received the NCAA's death penalty based on recruiting violations that took place while Meyer and his successor, Bobby Collins, coached the team. The SMU football program was disbanded for two years by the NCAA.

Cowboys place Highsmith on waivers

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys placed fullback Alonzo Highsmith on waivers Tuesday, cutting ties with the player they got in a trade with the Houston Oilers last year.

Highsmith hadn't fully recovered from knee surgery when he left the Oilers after three seasons, and he played in seven games in the first half of the 1990 season before being placed on injured reserve for the remainder of the year.

He held out of training camp this year, then was given a two-week roster exemption at the beginning of the season. He was activated on Sept. 10 and played briefly against Philadelphia and Phoenix.

"I believe that Alonzo is a talented player who can still perform in the NFL, but we were not able to work him into the lineup," Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said.

Denton RB rushes for 213 yards

Associated Press

A day before Denton's district opener against Lewisville, Broncos' coach Jim Bateman wasn't even sure his star running back, Marcus Sanders, would play. On Friday night, Lewisville was sorry he did.

Sanders, who had strained a knee the previous week against Arlington, had the night of his life, rushing for 213 yards and all four of the Broncos' scores in a 28-25 victory. The effort earned him mention in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

Bateman said Sanders' injury wasn't serious, but threatened to keep him out of the Lewisville game.

"He responded to treatment and was able to begin working out Wednesday," Bateman said. "We didn't know until Thursday if he'd be ready to go."

The 5-11, 205-pound junior carried 35 times, including scoring runs of 4, 2, 2 and 53 yards. The 53-yarder came with 6:23 remaining and proved to be the game winner.

"He's a tremendous athlete with good quickness and good speed," said Lewisville coach Ronnie Gage. "It just seemed like the more he got the ball the tougher he was. I felt like he was the difference."

Sanders, who ran for 1,122 yards as a sophomore, has 93 carries for 558 yards so far this year.

Quarterback Eric White and receiver James Harris gave Del Valle the boost it needed to overcome a 13-game losing streak.

White completed 14 of 32 passes for 275 yards and five touchdowns in a 43-14 victory over New Braunfels. He also ran for a 2-yard score. Harris caught 16 passes for 235 yards and four touchdowns in the effort.

Del Valle coach Rance Olison said his run-and-shoot offense was long overdue for an explosion.

"It's right on time," Olison said. "When you run that run-and-shoot, you know it's got to click sometime. It finally clicked."

Cedric Coleman of Grapeland scored six touchdowns in a 52-16 victory over Centerville. Coleman, who carried 11 times for 164 yards, scored on runs of 23, 49, 7, 6 and 9 yards. He also returned an interception 20 yards for a touchdown.

Shell to sell part of California plant

Job reductions could affect as many as 4,700 employees nationwide

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. is selling part of a Southern California refinery while beginning a round of job cuts that could affect as many as 4,700 people nationwide.

Shell signed a letter of intent with Union Oil Co. of California, a subsidiary of Unocal Corp., after three months of discussions, officials said Monday. The companies refused to disclose the price for part of the Wilmington refining complex in Carson, Calif.

Shell officials also did not say how many workers had been laid off.

In July, Shell said it would cut its nationwide work force by 10 percent to 15 percent over an 18-month period. That would mean a loss of as many as 4,700 jobs, including 1,800 in Houston. About 12,000 of the company's 31,000 employees are in Harris County.

Phil Carroll, Shell's executive vice president of administration, said more than 95 percent of the employees leaving had taken voluntary separation, including "a large percentage" who opted for the early retirement package offered by Shell.

Carroll said he expected that trend would continue, resulting in "relatively few" layoffs.

The job reductions "are a reflection of the ongoing environment for the oil and gas industry in this country," he said.

If the Shell deal is completed as planned, Unocal can cancel plans to spend more than $500 million to install a new hydrotreater unit that will increase the efficiency of the plant and quality of the products it produced and to reduce emissions from the plant.

"The hydrotreater at the Shell facilities would eliminate the need for Unocal to invest in its own hydrotreating plant," Unocal Chairman Richard J. Stegemeier said Monday.

The piece of equipment would enhance the company's ability to produce reformulated gasoline.

The purchase includes Shell's 125,000-barrel-a-day crude distillation unit, a coker, gas oil hydrotreater and sulfur plants, tankage and other equipment, as well as crude and intermediate product handling facilities.

Among the facilities Shell is keeping are a lube oil compounding plant and marine facility, which Shell will operate.

A catalytic cracker, hydrotreater, reformer and alkylation unit did not attract any purchasers and will be shut, a Shell spokeswoman said.

Prices steady

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices fell then rose Tuesday to finish the day about unchanged in light dealings.

Energy analysts said crude rebounded from as much as 18 cents down after a report that Saudi Arabia's oil minister said his country has no unsold oil in storage. Lower supply means higher prices.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $22.22 per barrel, down 1 cent, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Markets for refined energy products were more active, trading lower on views of oversupply. Tuesday was the first day of trading for November-delivery contracts of home heating oil and unleaded gasoline.

Natural gas prices fell, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $1.907 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 2.8 cents.

In London, North Sea Brent Blend crude oil for delivery in November settled at $20.99 per barrel, down 6 cents, at the International Petroleum Exchange.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar finished mostly higher in uneventful trading on world currency markets Tuesday.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.23 yen to a closing 133.18 Japanese yen.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7485 from $1.7525 late Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's rates, included: 1.6685 German marks, up from 1.6650; 1.4550 Swiss francs, up from 1.4505; 5.6845 French francs, up from 5.6740; 1,247.75 Italian lire, up from 1,245.75; and 1.1314 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1318.

Airline sale

HOUSTON — Continental Airlines is negotiating with a group that has made an offer to buy the carrier's interest in Air Micronesia, Continental officials said Tuesday.

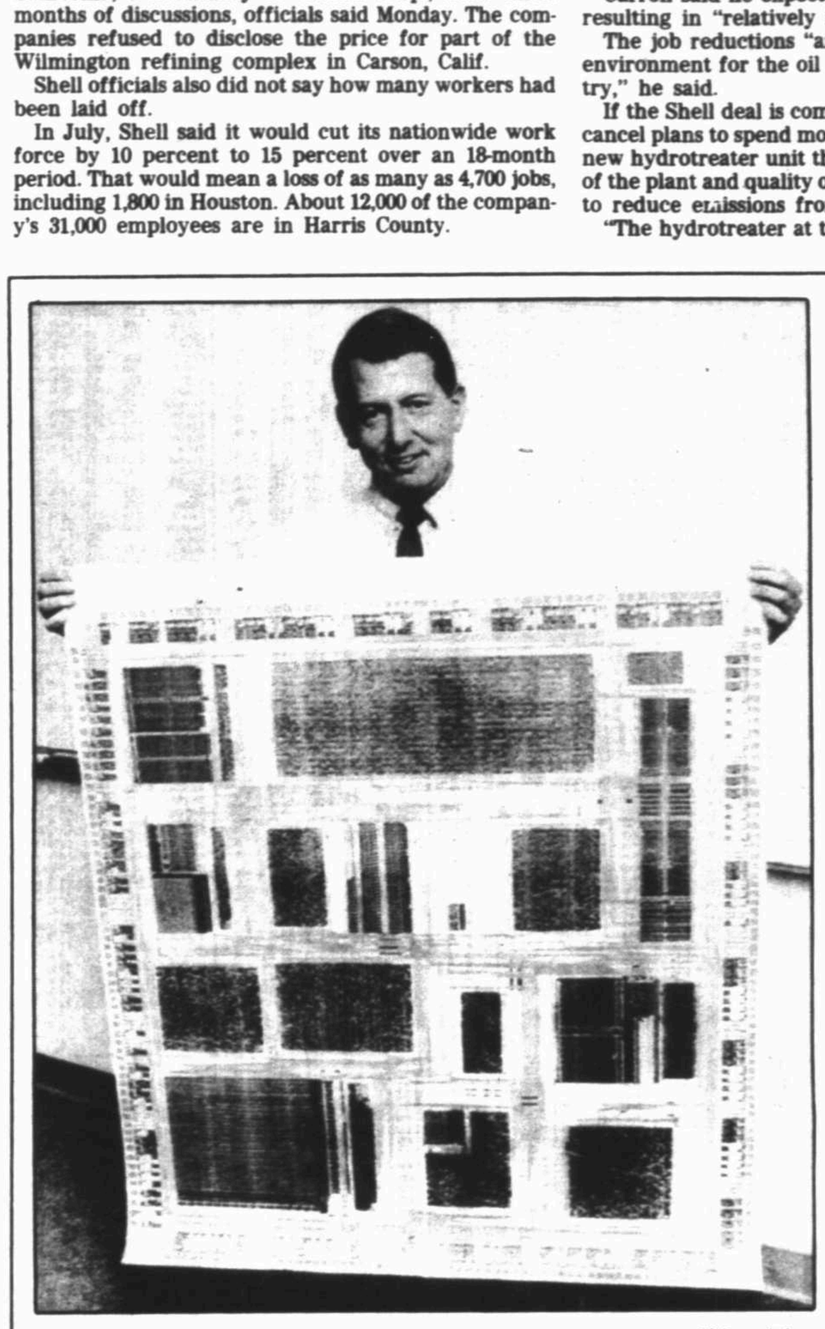

Airline spokesman Ned Walker would not identify the group or reveal the amount of the offer.

However, The Wall Street Journal reported Tuesday that Continental Airlines Holdings Inc. was expected to sell the Air Micronesia interest to an investment group for $250 million in cash and securities.

Walker, Continental's senior director of corporate communications, would say only that airline chief Robert Ferguson "did tell an employee or a management meeting last week that we had received a proposal for Air Micronesia, and that we are in discussions with that group."

Seminar to explore opportunites created by free-trade agreement

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Midland's proximity to Mexico has spurred interest in the ongoing free trade negotiations between the U.S. and Mexico.

The opportunities that would be created by a free-trade agreement are the subject of a seminar Thursday presented by Southwestern Bell Telephone, Permian Basin Private Industry Council and the Consulate of Mexico of Midland. The seminar, "Mexico and the Permian Basin: International Trade Opportunities" is scheduled to be in the Chaparral Room of the Student Center Building at Midland College beginning at 9 a.m. and concluding at 4 p.m.

"I think there's enormous potential in trading with Mexico," said Jerry Lee Jones, director, business and economic development center at Midland College and one of the hosts of the seminar. "One thing that's interesting about this seminar is we're looking at both the standpoint of Mexican businesses coming here and us going there and the trade between the two.

"I don't think we have really fully tapped that resource and this will give us the opportunity to focus on (trade with Mexico) and give us the opportunity to reach better potential in that area. The other thing is that I think the very idea of networking with other people doing something similar will be positive," he said.

Jones suggested one possibility in trading with Mexico is for the Permian Basin, in cooperation with Mexico, to become a supplier to other parts of the U.S. "Our location and proximity to Mexico, along with our unique talents and skills and expertise in the oil and gas industry really provide us with an enormous opportunity for capitalizing on trade with Mexico."

Jones cited the recent privatization of Mexico's telephone company and Southwestern Bell Telephone's investment in the company as a successful joint venture. "The government and business climate in Mexico is very positive. It's a unique time, with the free trade agreement looking promising, to embark on trade with Mexico. What better way of trading than with a close neighbor?" he said.

Local businesses interested in international trade, whether with Mexico or other countries can get assistance from Midland College through the Export Assistance Program, which provides trade leads and other information.

"One of the outgrowths of (Thursday's) conference will be a book on how to trade with Mexico," Jones said. "We'll have some of the material from the upcoming book at the seminar."

Cafeteria chain receives reprieve

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Furr's-Bishop's Inc., one of the nation's largest cafeteria chains, said Tuesday two of its subsidiaries have received waivers postponing interest payments on $180 million of debt.

The move gives the troubled Lubbock-based cafeteria chain a bit of breathing room while its subsidiaries negotiate with lenders.

Alton Smith, the chain's chief financial officer, said Furr's-Bishop's subsidiary, Cafeteria Operators Limited Partnership Unit, which operates most of the chain's 146 cafeterias, has been granted 30-day waivers for interest payments on $170 million of debt.

Cafeteria Operators was given another month to pay $7.9 million in interest on $150 million of the debt, while a commercial bank gave the subsidiary a 30-day reprieve for an interest payment on $20 million revolving credit, Smith said.

Another Furr's-Bishop's subsidiary, Cavalcade Foods Inc., which operates as a holding company for the cafeteria chain, received a 90-day waiver from a bank for interest payments on a $10 million revolving loan, Smith said.

The waivers were granted by 19 lending institutions, which Smith refused to identify.

Woods Boots readies its Midland location

By Melia McEwen

Working diligently on a new Midland store is WOODS BOOTS, which has a store at 4301 Tanglewood in Odessa. The Midland location will be in North Park shopping center next to North Park Cinema.

McEwen

Owner Paul Woods said the new store will carry a complete line of Wrangler products, a large selection of boots, women's clothing, children's clothing and boots, leather accessories and hats.

"It's going to be a nice store. We're decorating it in a Southwest motif," he said. The store has 12,000 square feet, and Woods said it will be roomier than the Odessa store.

Woods said he has been wanting to open a store in Midland for several years and felt this was a good time to come to Midland. "We get a lot of business from Midland," he said. "We have a lot of loyal customers from Midland, more than anywhere else in our trade area. We figured we could better serve them if we had a Midland store."

He anticipates the new store being open around October 15 and promises some grand opening specials.

Hours will be from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Just opened in Mission Square shopping center, Big Spring and Loop 250, is WEST TEXAS SPORTS CHIROPRACTIC CLINIC.

Owner Dr. Jim Mooring said he is not only a registered chiropractor but a certified chiropractic sports physician with postgraduate work in the specialty.

While he emphasizes that he takes all chiropractic patients, "the sports certification is an added dimension."

A graduate of Parker College and native of Louisiana, Mooring and his family have lived in Kermit the last two years while he worked for another chiropractor. He said he decided to open his own clinic "and Midland looked like it needed a sports chiropractor."

Hours, until he finishes relocating from Kermit, are 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

On the move is BIG SHOTS, from Midland Park Mall to B&J Plaza, 206 N. Midkiff across from Dellwood Mall.

Owner Dan Sherman said he hopes to be open for business in his new location by the first of next week if not sooner.

Big Shots uses a Canon Lasercolor copier and offers photo duplications or enlargements and can make transfers of photos, sketches or even paintings for T-shirts or caps and also photo inserts for plastic coffee cups. "The only thing we can't do is copyright material," he said. He hopes to be able to "enlarge the field" and offer more items in the near future.

Also on the move is CORECRAFT ETC., now located at 1112 N. Big Spring.

Owner Larry Marquez said that not only does his store offer a variety of items made with cores, but "is now a full-fledged rock gift shop."

KCRS-AM has joined over 1,200 other U.S. radio stations in a nationwide promotion campaign to introduce a new generation of high fidelity AM radios to consumers.

The radios contain circuits that make AM radio stations sound better than before, capturing the full fidelity of AM radio being broadcast under new standards adopted by the Federal Communications Commission last year.

The radios meeting these new high-quality standards will bear a certification mark — AM-monaural receives will bear the AMAX mark, and AMAX Stereo is the mark for AM Stereo receivers.

EXHIBIT I

Notice of Intent by Glasscock Commissioners Court to Reapportion County Commissioners Precincts

The Federal Voting Rights Act requires County Commissioner Courts to meet certain requirements and in order to be in compliance with the Federal statue. Glasscock County Commissioners Court has determined that new commissioner precinct lines need to be established.

The County plans to provide opportunity for all persons in the community to participate in the process by which the final boundary lines will be drawn. Comments, suggestions, and proposed plans are welcome. A public hearing on reapportioning commissioner precincts will be held on October 8th at 10:00 a.m.

Maps showing the boundaries preliminarily proposed by the County are available for no charge. These maps may be obtained from or examined at the Judge's office at Courthouse.

Any persons or group that wishes to submit a proposed redistricting plan for the commissioners court's consideration should submit the plan to the county clerk on or before October 7th, so that the plan may be inspected prior to the public hearing to be held on October 8th. The following criteria will be used by the commissioners court in assessing plans for adoption.

1. Any plan should not operate to dilute the voting strength of racial or language minority citizens.

2. Any plan should not fragment minority communities or pack them into districts in concentrations greater than needed to elect minority representation.

3. Any plan should be drawn to conform with geographic boundaries utilized by the Bureau of the Census in the 1990 census to the extent possible unless other reliable sources are used.

4. Any plan should be based on 1990 census data unless it can be shown that other more reliable sources were used.

5. Any districts should be composed of territory that is contiguous and reasonably compact.

6. Any plan, to the extent possible, should preserve historical boundaries, and should recognize clearly identifiable economic or community interests.

These criteria should be followed in any redistricting plans submitted for the County's consideration.

If anyone or groups would like to submit a plan or make comments or suggestions, the County is very much interested in receiving them for consideration during the redistricting process. Please feel free to call W.E. Bednar at 354-2382 if you have questions about the redistricting process.

New canned soup not homemade — but close

By Linda Anderson

When the weather outside is frightful — and let's face it, we're getting there rapidly — nothing tastes better than soup.

Of course homemade is the best kind, and of course most of us don't have time to home-make it anymore. And ordinary canned soups just aren't the same thing — besides, they often contain too much salt. People who are watching their sodium intake tend to stop eating canned soup altogether or buy the low-sodium kind that tastes horrible.

Anderson

Now there's a third choice. In fact, a Healthy Choice, which has introduced a line of soups that look homemade and taste closer to homemade than regular canned soups do. And, like the name says, they are supposed to be healthier than ordinary canned soups too.

How could I resist? Soup is one of my favorite foods. I bought four cans of Healthy Choice soups in four different flavors — two were chicken, one was vegetable beef and one was vegetable — and checked them out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Healthy Choice soups come in 15-ounce, two-serving cans and you don't have to add water (which is wonderful if you have to rely on Midland water). They cost more than ordinary soups — $1.65 per can — but they also are advertised as being "low fat" and "low cholesterol."

Label advertising claims the soups are "a hearty homestyle soup that's delicious and nutritious." Nutrition label shows each 7.5 ounce (half a can) serving is low calorie (chicken noodle soup contains 90 calories and vegetable beef contains 130), low cholesterol (20 mg for chicken noodle and 15 mg for vegetable beef) and low fat (3 grams for chicken noodle, 1 gram for vegetable beef).

The labels also contain a warning: "This meal is not a cure for heart disease and is only one part of a daily regimen for healthy living" and a telephone number: 1-800-323-9980 that consumers can call 10 a.m.-7 p.m. central time (that's us) Monday-Friday except national holidays, if they have questions or comments.

In the taste test, I was on my own. The young taste-testers aren't as fond of soup as I am. The soups turned out to be surprisingly tasty. I was surprised to see big chunks of vegetables and thick broth — just like homemade.

I think Healthy Choice soups are going to find their way into my pantry again. I liked them. And if they are good for me — well, it just shows that some things that are good for you taste good.

Price is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

Rice recipe folder offered free

Staff Report

Today's interest in light and healthy eating has made rice a menu star. An excellent source of the energy-giving complex carbohydrates nutritionists recommend we eat more often, rice contains no fat or sodium and no cholesterol. It provides only about 100 calories per half-cup serving.

To help make healthy eating easy and delicious, Uncle Ben's Inc., official sponsor to the 1992 Olympic Games, has created a new recipe folder titled "Light and Healthy Eating — The Winning Edge." Availble free for the asking, the folder contains great new recipes including Chicken Merengo, Waldorf Rice Salad and Rosemary Chicken Stir-fry, which rely on Uncle Ben's Brand Rice for their flavor and texture.

For a free copy of the recipe folder, send your name and address to Uncle Ben's Light and Healthy Rice Recipes, P.O. Box 11147, Chicago, Ill., 60611. The offer is good while supply lasts.

Lunch-box food not always dull

NEW YORK (AP) — What's the one, sure-fire way to make sure your children will eat what you pack for their school lunches? Select healthy foods. Really. Just make sure they like them first.

"There's no point in sending your child to school with a plum in his lunch box if he you know he doesn't like plums," says Ellen Klavan, author of "The Creative Lunch Box" (Crown, $7, softcover).

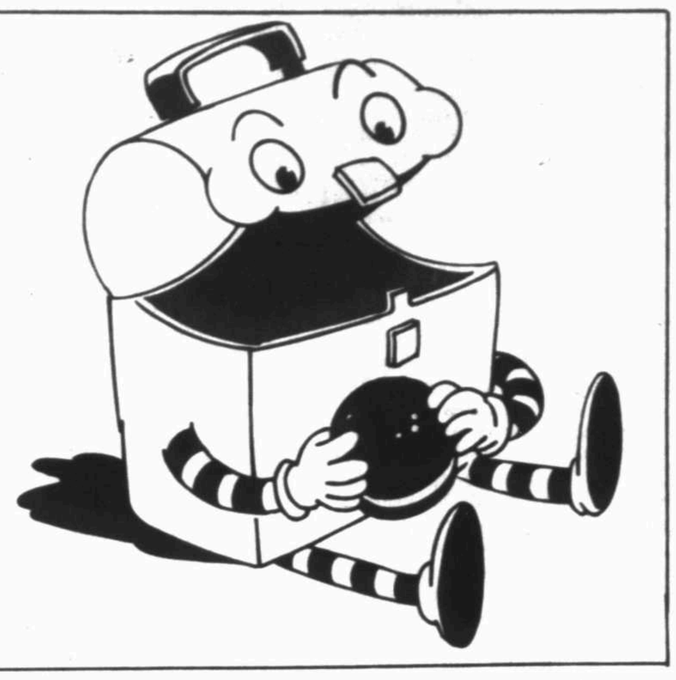

This doesn't mean letting the kids have a lunch box filled with junk food.

"Given a choice between steamed asparagus or potato chips, or between a carrot muffin and a candy bar, your child will usually self-select an unhealthy diet," Klavan says.

The trick is to find foods that meet your nutritional standards and suit your child's taste and social standards as well.

Klavan says the "basic four" food groups — meat or equivalent protein, grains, dairy products, fruits and vegetables — should be your guide.

As a rule, she says, children enjoy a sandwich or main course, "something extra," such as popcorn or celery stuffed with a cheese spread, and either a sweet like cookies or a piece of fruit.

To eliminate lunch-box boredom, use a variety of recipes that call for the foods that appeal to your children's individual tastes, such as apples, carrots or pita bread. (Klavan's recipes include Apple Crunchies, Bugs Bunny Salad and Pocket Pizza.)

If you're willing to pay for extra convenience, pack string cheese, unsweetened applesauce in 4-ounce containers, miniature boxes of raisins, or small bags of pretzels.

The following recipe from Klavan's book puts the peanut butter into the bread, instead of on top of it. If your child is a true peanut butter-aholic, spread the peanut butter bread with peanut butter and jelly. Other suggested combinations: cream cheese and raisin spread on peanut butter bread, or cottage cheese and apple on peanut butter bread.

PEANUT BUTTER BREAD

1 egg
½ cup peanut butter
¼ cup honey
¾ cup milk
2 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt

In a large bowl, beat the egg. Then mix in the peanut butter, honey and milk. In a medium-size bowl, combine the flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Then add the flour mixture to the peanut butter mixture. Mix until all the dry ingredients have been moistened. When the dough is smooth and elastic, spoon into a greased loaf pan. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for about 45 minutes.

Garlic brings flavor to chicken dish

By Pierre Franey
N.Y. Times News Service

Chicken breast is one of the most appealing foods in the supermarket because it is clean, simple to cook, low in fat and high in protein. But if one falls into a rut by simply broiling or baking the chicken breast, dinner can be mighty boring.

This recipe for chicken fingers with garlic butter is simple yet tasty. And you can vary the seasonings in countless ways.

A boneless breast of chicken is sliced into pieces ½-inch wide and about 2 inches long. They are then tossed in a blend of salt, pepper, oregano and flour. Other dried herbs can be added to the flour mixture if desired.

The chicken strips are then sauteed in butter until browned, at which time you add the tomatoes and garlic. In 3 minutes it should be done. Fresh coriander makes a fine garnish, along with some lime or lemon juice.

I recommend a side dish of puree of fried plantains. Green plantains, which are not sweet, have a texture and flavor reminiscent of certain gourds. They can be sliced and fried and eaten with a sprinkling of lime juice, or the fried pieces can be tossed in a food processor with garlic and hot pepper flakes.

CHICKEN FINGERS WITH GARLIC BUTTER

4 skinless, boneless chicken breast halves
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tablespoon chopped fresh oregano or 2 teaspoons dried
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
4 ripe plum tomatoes, skinned, seeded and diced small
1 tablespoon chopped garlic
4 tablespoons chopped fresh coriander or basil
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice

With sharp knife, cut breast halves in half crosswise, then lengthwise into strips ½-inch wide. Blend salt, pepper, oregano and flour well in flat dish. Add chicken pieces in one layer. Stir to season, keeping each strip separate.

Heat butter and oil over high heat in skillet large enough to hold chicken pieces in one layer. Add chicken; cook and stir until lightly browned, about 3 minutes. Add tomatoes and garlic and cook, stirring, for 3 minutes more. Add coriander and lime juice and continue cooking. Blend well and serve immediately.

FRIED PLANTAINS

2 green plantains
Salt to taste
2 cups vegetable oil
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 garlic cloves
⅛ teaspoon red hot pepper flakes
4 tablespoons freshly chopped coriander or parsley

Peel plantains by making four incisions lengthwise in skin. Peel skin off.

Cut plantains into 1-inch diagonal slices. Place in salted water to soak for 15 minutes. Drain well. Heat 2 cups vegetable oil to 350 degrees in fryer or skillet. Add plantains and fry at 300 degrees for about 15 minutes or until done but not brown. Remove and drain on paper towels.

In container of food processor, add plantains, 2 tablespoons olive oil, garlic and pepper flakes. Blend to semicoarse texture.

To serve hot, add remaining 1 tablespoon olive oil to nonstick skillet. Add plantains and coriander. Toss and cook 1 minute.

AVOCADO AND TOMATO SALAD

2 ripe avocados
4 ripe plum tomatoes
1 medium-size red onion, cut into thin slices
2 hard-boiled eggs, peeled and quartered
2 teaspoons finely chopped garlic
2 tablespoons red-wine vinegar
6 tablespoons olive oil
4 tablespoons coarsely chopped fresh coriander
½ teaspoon ground cumin
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Peel avocados and cut in half. Discard pit and cut each half into 4 lengthwise slices. Cut slices into large cubes. Cut tomatoes into 1-inch cubes. Add all ingredients in a salad bowl. Toss well and serve.

DEAR ABBY

Know your rights if your credit cards are stolen

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Ellen," whose 75-year-old friend was out $4,000 (her credit cards were stolen and she was duped by a phone call into not reporting it), and anyone else who has in their possession even one credit card: READ YOUR CREDIT AGREEMENT!

Van Buren

Your maximum liability for unauthorized use is $50 per credit card. Prompt reporting also helps, as you cannot be charged for any purchases made with that card after you have notified the card issuer. That could mean even less than $50.

The sob stories about people who have lost "thousands," with all due respect to this elderly woman, make me ill. Was she carrying 80 cards? Otherwise, her liability could nowhere approach $4,000. More likely, she just didn't know her rights and responsibilities. And shame on Ellen for merely reporting her plight instead of finding out what her friend's rights were.

Also, those other "wonderful" folks who offer (for a sizable fee) to keep records of all your credit cards and notify the issuer if the cards are lost or stolen are a ripoff. You can do the same thing yourself for nothing if you'll just keep a record of each card number and the telephone number to call in the event of loss, etc. The numbers are usually toll-free and are printed on your credit agreement and on the card itself. Just make sure you write it down and file it, because you won't have the card to refer to after it's stolen. — HOME ECONOMIST IN WOODRIDGE, ILL.

DEAR HOME ECONOMIST: I'm sure the woman who unnecessarily paid out $4,000 because she did not know her rights/responsibilities would have been grateful to have had your reminder at the time.

But credit card registries perform a real service for people who are not as well-organized as you — and might be too shaken by their loss to think clearly. For a small annual fee, one telephone call is all a person has to make. And for some, that can be very reassuring.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had the pleasure of attending two lovely church weddings recently. We arrived early to ensure getting aisle seats so we could get a clear view of the bride and wedding procession as they came down the aisle. (You can probably guess my question at this point.)

A few minutes before the ceremony was to begin, the usher brought some late arrivers to our row and we were then forced to move down to the middle of the pew. How rude! Abby, please inform the young or ignorant for me what is proper and courteous. I have looked in your wedding booklet and cannot find the proper way to handle this. — M.L.B. IN MIDLOTHIAN, VA.

DEAR M.L.B.: When an usher asks you to "move down, please," tell him (or her) politely and quietly that you arrived early to get an aisle seat, thank you. Then stand up and allow the latecomers to walk past you to the middle — or end — of the pew.

DEAR ABBY: I have a son who is just 2 years old. "Owen" is a very shy child and he isn't talking yet — except for a few words. My problem is my friends and relatives. They are constantly telling me that something is wrong with Owen because he doesn't talk yet. They imply that he is a slow learner or he must have a hearing problem. Owen's doctor says there is nothing wrong with his hearing, and he isn't any slower at learning than the average 2-year-old. Abby, this has caused me many sleepless nights.

What should I say to these people who insist that Owen isn't normal? — OWEN'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Tell them that Owen's doctor has said there is nothing wrong with Owen's hearing, and his learning ability is normal for a 2-year-old — and the doctor's professional opinion is the one you value most.

DEAR PATRICIA: This prayer has been around since the invention of the three-way mirror, and here it is:

CALORIE COUNTER'S PRAYER

The Lord is my shepherd I shall not want.

He maketh me lie down and do push-ups,

He giveth me sodium-free bread,

He restoreth my waistline.

He leadeth me past the refrigerator for mine own sake.

He maketh me to partake of green beans instead of potatoes,

He leadeth me past the pizzeria.

Yea, though I walk through the bakery,

I shall not falter, for thou art with me;

Thy diet colas they comfort me.

Thou preparest a diet for me in the presence of mine enemies,

Thou anointest my lettuce with low-cal oil.

My cup will not overflow.

Surely Ry Krisp and D-Zerta shall follow me all the days of my life,

And I will live with pains of hunger forever. Amen.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Tips give advice on flour choices

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

With the baking season here again, you'll find the supermarket shelves stocked with a dizzying bouquet of flours. How do you choose the right flour for your favorite pie or bread? Generally speaking, all-purpose flour works well for most recipes. But with so many specialty flours now available, you may want to choose among these for cooking and baking.

■ All-purpose flour: is the do-all flour. Use it for baking, thickening and coating. This flour is milled from soft and hard wheats, minus the bran and germ. It comes enriched with vitamins and minerals and may be bleached or unbleached. To substitute all-purpose flour for cake flour, use 2 tablespoons less all-purpose flour for each cup of cake flour called for in your recipe.

NOTE: Some all-purpose flours have more protein than others, which can affect the tenderness of yeast breads. For best results with yeast breads, be sure your all-purpose flour has 11 or more grams of protein or use bread flour. Check the package labels to see if the amount of protein is listed.

■ Bran, cracked wheat and oat bran flours: are all-purpose flours to which another grain has been added. Substitute an equal amount of any one of them for up to half of the total flour in bread, cookie, or cake recipes.

■ Bread flour: is milled from hard wheats, making it a stronger-structured flour. It's a good choice for making most yeast bread doughs.

■ Brown rice flour: is high in starch and fiber and low in protein. Try substituting it for up to one-fourth of the total all-purpose flour in quick breads.

■ Cake flour: is milled from soft wheat, is perfect for fine and feathery cakes. It's too delicate for general baking.

■ Instant-type flour: has a granular texture and blends easily into hot or cold liquids to thicken without lumping.

■ Pastry flour: is neither as coarse as all-purpose flour nor as fine as cake flour. Use it for pie crusts and pastry doughs.

■ Rye flour: contains structure-forming protein and can replace up to one-third of the all-purpose flour in recipes.

■ Self-rising flour: contains leavening and salt. Substitute it for the all-purpose flour, baking powder and salt called for in quick breads, cakes and cookies.

■ Semolina: made from a special variety of wheat called durum, is a granular wheat flour used for making pasta.

■ Whole-wheat or graham flour: is milled from the entire wheat kernel, including the bran and germ. Graham flour is a little more coarse than whole-wheat flour.
