Texas House votes to redraw lines

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Amid anger, tears and a threat of a court challenge by Mexican-Americans, the Texas House today passed a bill drawing new state representative districts to reflect population shifts shown by the 1980 census.

The bill passed, 118-22, at 4:25 a.m., some 7½ hours after the legislators began work on it.

House action sent the measure to the Senate, which passed a senatorial redistricting bill more than a week ago. Each chamber is expected to pass the other's bill before the lawmaking session ends at midnight Monday.

The House bill adds representation to seven areas, mainly suburban areas outside of Houston.

Gaining a House seat were Williamson and Burnet Counties north of Austin; Brazoria and Fort Bend Counties south of Houston; Hidalgo County; Denton and Collin Counties north of Dallas; Grimes County plus parts of Montgomery and Harris County; and two new districts in Harris County.

Sixteen members were forced into situations where lawmaker must campaign against lawmaker if all run for re-election in 1982.

The pairings are:

Speaker Bill Clayton and Pete Laney, D-Hale Center. Clayton says, however, he will not run for the House next year.

David London, D-Bonham, and Smith Gilley, D-Greenville.

Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, and Bill Keese, D-Somerville.

Larry Shaw, D-Big Spring, and W.S. Heatly, D-Paducah.

Joe Hernandez and Tommy Adkisson, both San Antonio Democrats.

Lanell Cofer and Steve Wolens, both Dallas Democrats.

Doyle Willis and Bobby Webber, both Fort Worth Democrats.

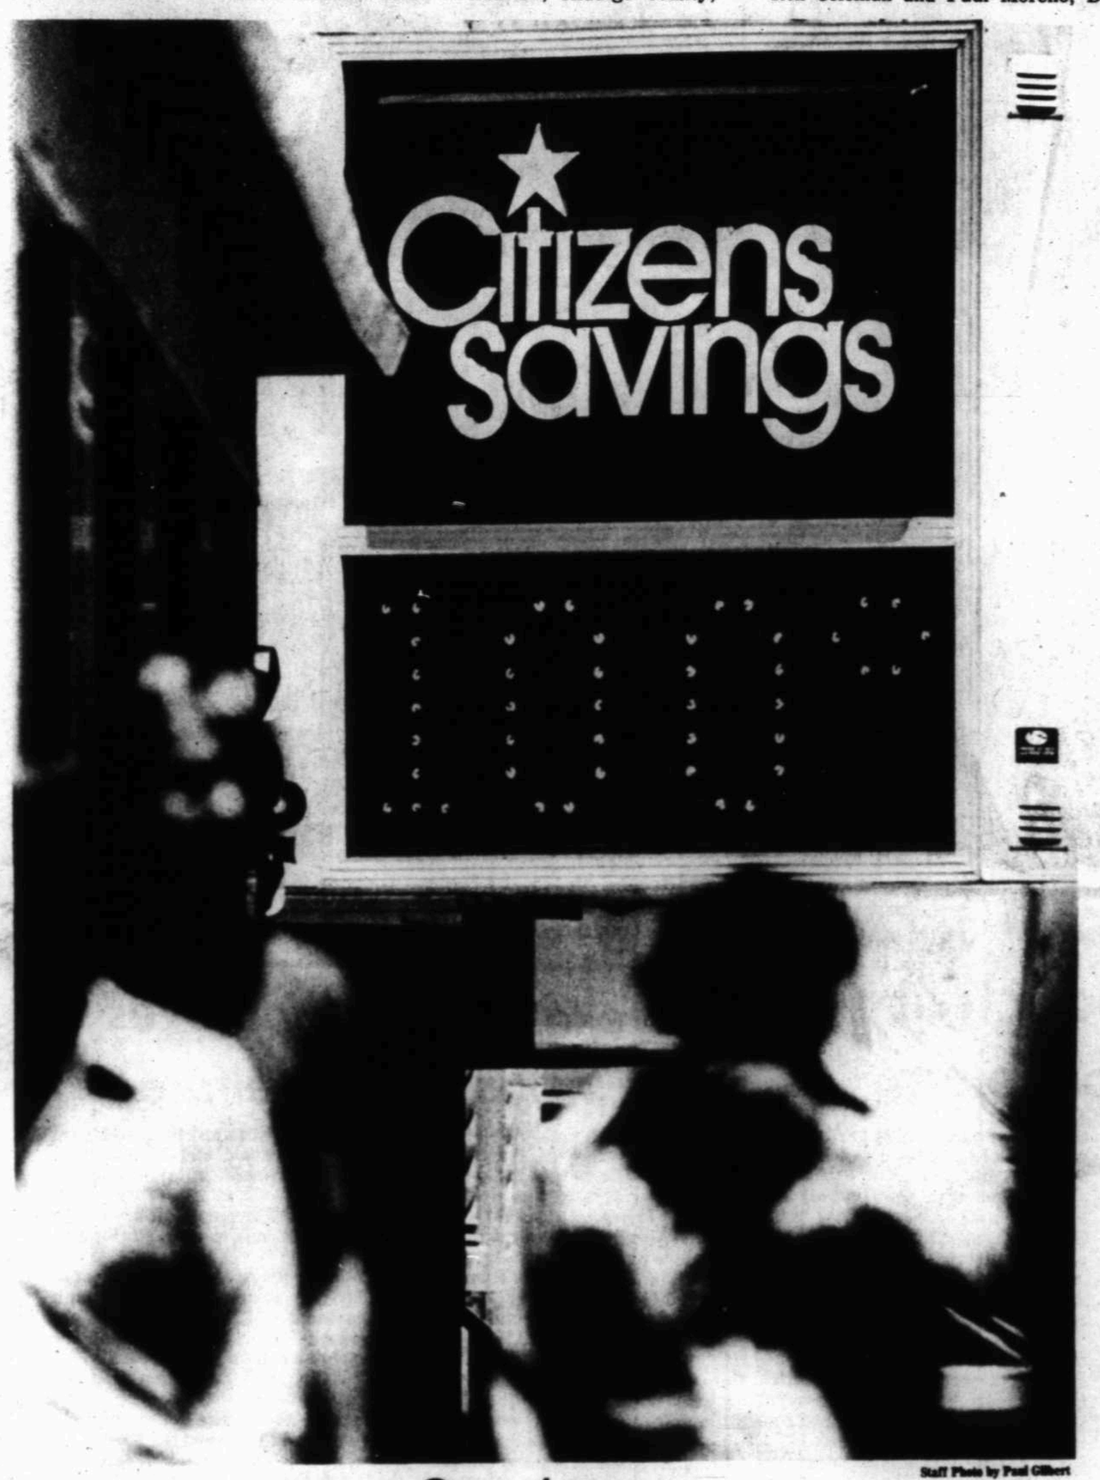

Ron Coleman and Paul Moreno, D-El Paso. Coleman said he probably would move to a vacant district.

Most of the long night's floor battles dealt with attempts to change or eliminate the pairings or to create more districts likely to elect Mexican-Americans.

Attempts to carve out additional Mexican-American districts in El Paso and Houston were defeated, and Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, failed wth a series of attempts to unpair Hernandez, his former law partner, from Adkisson.

"This is a sad day for the Chicano.... I accuse the leadership of this House of the insensitivity it has shown the Mexican-Americans. The Democrats of this House are a disgrace to the Democratic Party," Moreno said

He promised the redistricting bill would be challenged in federal court by Mexican-Americans, particularly because it provided lower percentages of Hispanics than it could have in El Paso districts.

A spring heatwave has descended upon the Permian Basin this week, with the thermometer reaching the 100-degree mark Wednesday afternoon. Some relief is in sight, however, with the high expected to be in the mid-90s on Friday. See related story, Page 2A.

Quick action urged on UT land swap

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A proposed West Texas land swap could be the "best" or "worst deal in the world," says a senator whose district includes the land the state would get.

At the request of Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson, D-Midland, the Senate on Wednesday directed University of Texas regents to "promptly consider" the land swap, which was negotiated by Gov. Bill Clements.

Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, suggested Clements should mind his own business.

"I don't think it is the prerogative of the chief executive to go out and cut a deal for the University of Texas," said McKnight. "I want UT regents to make their own trade."

The proposed deal would trade 190,000 acres of UT land in Hudspeth County for 190,000 acres owned by the Diamond "A" Cattle Co. near the Big Bend National Park.

The company's land in Presidio and Brewster counties would be used for part of a state park or wilderness area, with the state paying rent to the university.

"This may be the best deal in the world, it may be the worst deal in the world. I'm not in position to judge what it is," said Snelson.

As I understand it," said Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, "this would be the first time in the history of the state that the university would be giving up state land."

McKnight said the "clean way to do it, the honorable way to do it, the fair way to do it, the above-board way to do it" would be for UT to write a check for the land, with no swap.

McKnight asked Snelson if he was "somewhat apprehensive this might be setting a precedent that might be followed" as far as trading other school lands. "Does that concern you, senator?"

"I'm always concerned about any major decision as this would be," said Snelson, "but I don't think this would color their (regents') judgment one way or other."

"You haven't had any great groundswell for this, have you?" asked McKnight.

"No sir, I haven't," replied Snelson.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, asked if the regents might not act if lawmakers failed to indicate the "sentiment of the Legislature."

"I would expect they would not view that as encouraging," said Snelson.

The resolution was returned on voice vote to the House, which already has approved a resolution urging the exchange of land.

Clements called the Big Bend-area parcel of land a "marvelous acquisition for the people of Texas." He discussed how he had personally negotiated the trade with owner Robert Anderson at a May 14 news conference.

Tax conferees trying to pin down compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairmen of the congressional tax committees discussed tax cuts with Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan today and indicated agreement may be near on a substitute for the president's proposed three-year, 30 percent reduction in personal tax rates.

"We had a good give-and-take session," Regan told reporters after his breakfast meeting at the Treasury Department with Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee,, and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who heads the House Ways and Means Committee. "We think the ball was advanced."

The three officials refused to discuss any agreements that might have been reached, but they indicated there still is dispute over the timing of the tax reduction.

Asked if the Reagan administration is prepared to back away from its insistence on a three-year tax cut, Regan replied, "I'm not in a position to say. I haven't talked to the president — that's for him to say."

"I prefer to think we are in agreement much more than in disagreement," said Rostenkowski, who planned to meet later in the day with Democratic members of his tax-writing committee.

Dole, too, said he must discuss the negotiations with members of his committee. "I feel we are quite close but again we could be a long way off," he said.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, who met with Rostenkowski Wednesday evening and again today after the session at the Treasury Department, sought to play down any appearance that a compromise was near.

"Progress has been vastly overstated by the press," O'Neill told reporters today. But the Massachusetts Democrat declined to comment further on the issue, saying he would wait until after Rostenkowski has met with Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee.

Rostenkowski and Dole and met privately on Wednesday and Dole said at that time, "We felt we were close enough that we ought to discuss it with the administration."

Even so, Dole and Rostenkowski said, they have not agreed on two major points in President Reagan's program: enactment this year of tax cuts for three straight years and giving the same percentage rate reduction to rich and poor alike.

Rostenkowski and Dole decline to talk publicly about points on which they agreed.

Social Security: 'We're still talking about doubling...the tax rate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security payroll tax will have to be increased to 10 percent or more during the next century even if all of President Reagan's proposed benefit cuts are approved, says a former chief actuary for the system.

And Budget Director David A. Stockman told the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security today that critics of the administration package have been "irresponsible" and "do not fully understand the magnitude of the crisis facing Social Security."

"The question is not whether those who seek to retire over the next few years will receive 100 percent or 80 percent or 55 percent of what they have previously anticipated," Stockman said. "The question before the Congress is whether the 36 million Americans who currently depend on Social Security can count on any check at all less than two years hence."

Meanwhile, A. Haeworth Robertson, former chief actuary for the Social Security system, says the Reagan administration ignored the rising costs of Medicare in its long-term projections for keeping Social Security solvent.

"Even with the Reagan administration proposals, we're still talking about a doubling and maybe even a tripling of the present tax rate," Robertson told reporters Wednesday. "People are going to have to retire later and work longer in the next century."

The Social Security payroll tax is now 6.65 percent and is scheduled to increase to 7.65 percent by 1990. A little more than 1 percent of the current rate pays for Medicare, the federal medical program for the elderly.

Stockman, defending the Reagan cuts, told the House panel that the package of sharp reductions in early retirement, disability and other benefits was "a judicious mix of reforms" that would weed out some welfare elements and "auxiliary benefits" and provide a break for taxpayers.

Stockman said the old age and survivors fund "will bankrupt in October 1982. At that point, $14 billion in monthly benefits cannot be paid."

He declared: "This administration refuses to gamble...with the continued financial survival of 36 million Americans."

The administration ignited a firestorm in Congress with its proposal to cut benefits for early retirees by up to 40 percent starting next Jan. 1 and eventually lower all future retirees' benefits by an average 10 percent. On the other side, the plan also envisions limiting future increases in the payroll tax.

President Reagan, in a letter to congressional leaders last week, emphasized that he is willing to compromise on all aspects of the plan.

Aircraft carrier Nimitz headed toward shore

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The USS Nimitz, its deck strewn with 20 damaged planes, steamed toward its home port of Norfolk, Va., today for repairs and an investigation into the jet crash on the carrier's deck that left 14 servicemen dead and 48 injured.

The bodies were airlifted to Portsmouth Naval Hospital this morning, the Navy said.

Despite the damage to the aircraft, estimated at more than $60 million, damage to the nuclear-powered ship itself was "not extraordinarily heavy," according to Capt. Larry Hamilton, chief public affairs officer for the Atlantic Fleet.

"The carrier will most likely will be able to do a quick turnaround," he said.

The Navy said results of an official investigation into the crash of the electronic warfare jet may not be available for six months. But a Navy spokesman who asked not to be identified said the jet apparently "landed a little right of the center line and on a carrier deck there isn't any room for an error like that."

Twenty-one crewmen were airlifted to land-based hospitals for treatment. One crewman, listed in critical condition, was at St. Vincent's Hospital in Jacksonville, and four burn victims were airlifted to the burn unit at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, Texas, a spokesman there said. The others were treated at the Naval Regional Medical Center at Jacksonville, none with critical injuries.

Of the 27 injured aboard the Nimitz, all but four have returned to duty, officials said. The four still in sick bay were not in serious condition.

Midland, Lee highs to graduate 965

Some 965 high school seniors will receive diplomas in graduation ceremonies scheduled Friday at Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus.

Lee High School ceremonies are scheduled at 6 p.m. with Midland High to follow at 9 p.m.

Valedictory addresses by Lee High School's Jon Franke and Midland High School's Susan Louise Green will be presented, as well as remarks by LHS salutatorian John Kimberley and MHS salutatorian Melanie Beth McMurry.

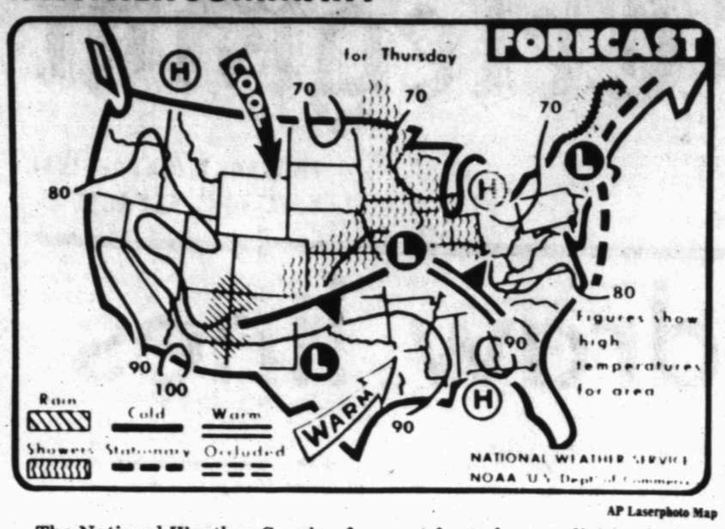

Announcements of scholarships and honors will be given and bands from both high schools will perform.

LHS grads will receive their diplomas from school board members Parker Humes and Gary Hopper, while trustees Ed Runyan, Bill Jackson and Ann Page will present diplomas to the MHS class.

Superintendent James Malley will certify the class at Lee High School. Joseph Baressi, assistant superintendent, will certify the class at Midland High School.

The ceremonies are open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Chamber plans ahead on parking

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Where to go from here is the next step for the Midland Chamber of Commerce after releasing the parking study report during its monthly meeting on Wednesday.

The report was prepared by Walter Moore and Associates, Inc. of Houston after a team came to Midland and studied the downtown parking problems.

The group looked at the current supply, the office buildings planned for the future and their effect upon parking, and what would be needed to meet the demand by 1990. Joe Kloesel, a past president of the chamber, related that Midland will need 22,400 parking spaces by 1990.

Today, however, there are only 11,147, and more than 90 percent of these are occupied throughout the day. Looking at it on an hourly basis, the study showed that at 3 p.m., 102.8 percent of these are occupied.

The recommended procedure to ease the parking squeeze called for the city to install more parking meters and raise the prices and for the chamber to encourage construction by private developers of eight-story parking garages.

Kloesel asked the chamber's executive committee to meet after the directors session to decide what tactics would be needed to accomplish the recommendations.

In other action, the chamber directors heard an update on the Objectives for Midland revitalization program, redistricting and an image campaign.

Mike Williams with the Objectives program displayed maps of a 65-block area in east Midland which is targeted for the first efforts of the revitalization program. An old landfill in the center of the area concerns the Objectives committee, said Williams, because houses can't be built on top of that area.

Looking at who owns property in the targeted area, Williams said most persons who own homes live in them. And often family members live in the same area. Many of the occupants are about 65 years old. Average family income is $15,000 and the average family size is four persons.

Williams said there is a need for rehabilitation on homes in this area, but we "need to find some creative ways to finance this."

Williams said he now has 30 days to figure out what to do with the area.

Chamber President William Ortloff said the executive committee is opposing the plan to move Midland out of the 19th Congressional District into the 21st. The group has nothing against U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, who is the 21st District's congressman, but the chamber believes Midland has more in common with the rest of the Permian Basin area, Ortloff said.

Under the state's proposed plan, Midland would be at the north end of the 21st District, and San Antonio would serve as the southern boundary.

Jim Servatius reported the chamber will begin an image campaign next fall based upon the Objectives for the 80s program. Theme will be "Your future is our objective."

The chamber's public relations committee also is working on a centennial celebration for Summer 1985, he said.

Anita North was not injured Wednesday evening when the car she was driving collided with a parked vehicle on Neely Drive about 100 yards west of Midland Drive. The mishap occurred about 8:20 p.m.

Area temperatures expected to drop, but only to mid-90s

After a near record high of 100 degrees Wednesday, temperatures are expected to "cool" just a bit to the mid-90s on Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The forecast is calling for temperatures to drop to the mid-90s on Friday after an overnight low in the upper 60s.

Winds will be from the south tonight at 5-10 mph, increasing to 10-15 mph on Friday.

There also is a 20 percent chance of rain through Friday to cool off the heatwave.

Wednesday's high of 100 was only one degree off the record high of 101 degrees set in 1945.

This morning's low of 65 was 15 degrees off the record low for today of 50 degrees set in 1973.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast for this afternoon and tonight for western sections of Texas.

The National Weather Service warned that some of the thunderstorms may become severe over the South Plains and Panhandle.

The remainder of the state was to have clear to partly cloudy skies and warm to hot temperatures. Highs were to be mostly in the 80s and 90s except in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas where the mercury was expected to approach 105.

Cloudy skies were reported early today over South Central Texas, Southeast Texas and southern sections of North Central Texas and Northeast Texas. Some patchy fog was reported along middle and lower sections of the coast. The remainder of the state had mostly clear skies

Early morning temperatures ranged from the 50s in the mountains of Southwest Texas to the 60s in the Panhandle and the 70s elsewhere. Extremes ranged from 56 at Marfa to 79 at both El Paso and Laredo.

Heavy thunderstorms crashed today across the western Great Plains, with locally heavy rains, strong winds and hail. Minor flooding was reported in North Carolina where up to 6 inches of rain fell.

"The creeks around here are up so high that they've overflowed and washed away several fields of mine planted in pole beans and tobacco," said Rick Sexton, a truck farmer and dispatcher with the Ashe County sheriff's department in Western North Carolina.

"There's water springs popping up all over the place because there's so much water, it's got to come out somewhere," Sexton said Wednesday afternoon. "It looks like it's about to start pouring again and I've got to run cut some ditches so the water'll have some place to run. The ground can't absorb no more."

Showers and thunderstorms reached across the mid-Missouri Valley, while widely scattered showers and thundershowers fell over Utah and the southern Plateau, as well as over the eastern Ohio Valley, the lower Great Lakes, northern Maine, Virginia and the Carolinas.

Scattered showers and thundershowers were forecast for the southern Plateau to the central Rockies and the western central Plains, as well as over the northern Plains and northern Minnesota and the middle and north Atlantic Coast states.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 36 in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to 81 in San Antonio, Texas.

Declining productivity seen as big problem

ATLANTA (AP) — Most Americans believe declining productivity is a serious problem, and almost one-third see it as one of the two or three most critical economic problems of the 1980s, according to a Louis Harris survey released Wednesday.

The poll, conducted by Louis Harris & Associates Inc. for Sentry Insurance Co., included a cross-section of 1,201 adults interviewed in December 1980. In addition, 791 leaders in business, labor unions, Congress and consumer and environmental groups were interviewed separately.

The survey found that 79 percent of Americans believe declining productivity "is at least a serious problem for the next several years," the report said. Thirty-one percent of the cross-section said it is "one of the two or three most serious problems" facing the nation in the next decade.

About 80 percent of those surveyed said failure to improve industrial productivity will lead to fewer jobs, 75 percent said it will result in a lower standard of living and 64 percent said it will lead to greater dependence on other countries.

Output per man hour of work has been declining slowly recently in the United States. Economists generally agree that increases in salaries without corresponding increases in productivity have helped fuel inflation in recent years.

Of the groups interviewed separately, only labor union leaders assigned less importance to productivity, the report said. Forty-one percent of the union leaders said the problem is "one that's often exaggerated."

The survey found that Americans "are more likely to single out the federal government than any other group or institution as having a major responsibility for the nation's poor productivity performance."

"Fully 78 percent of the pubic believes decreased government spending would make a major contribution to improved economic growth," the survey found.

Texas Senate approves proposal on welfare

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas senators have stamped their approval on a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow the welfare ceiling to rise gradually after 1983 to keep up with inflation and the number of recipients.

The Senate proposal by Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, differed from the House version, which wiped out Texas' $80 million-a-year ceiling on state payments to welfare recipients.

The Department of Human Resources had requested a change because Aid to Families With Dependent Children is pushing against the limit now. The average monthly AFDC payment is $33.83 per month per recipient, and a $2.50 a month increase — as recommended by the Legislative Budget Board — would reach the ceiling in two years.

Texas is the only state with a welfare ceiling, and the current limit was set in 1970.

Brooks' proposal would change the ceiling to a figure not exceeding 1 percent of the state budget, except for 1982 and 1983, when the $80 million limit would remain in effect.

The proposal was returned to the House Wednesday for action on the changes, 23-7.

Amtrak president optimistic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak President Alan S. Boyd says he expects a congressional budget compromise to provide the passenger railroad with enough money to continue operating at least some of its long-distance trains.

He told Amtrak's board of directors Wednesday he is optimistic because of approval by the House Energy and Commerce Committee of a $725 million appropriation for the railroad in fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1.

The figure is $112 million more than proposed by the Reagan administration and expected to be authorized by the Senate. The lower amount would limit Amtrak's operations to the Northeast corridor and eliminate all long-distance routes, according to Boyd.

"There will be some compromises (between the House and Senate), and I believe the compromises will allow us to continue to operate a national system," Boyd said, adding that even the House version is about $245 million below what Amtrak needs for fiscal 1982.

Even with the expected compromise, Boyd said, Amtrak's long distance system might have to be reduced. He did not say what routes might be curtailed or eliminated.

Boyd also told the directors that legislation before the House calls for restructuring Amtrak's board to reflect interests ranging from labor unions, business, commuters and the elderly.

Official: Blue Cross solvent, but rates will be higher

DALLAS (AP) — Consultants have been hired to untangle its knotted finances and subscribers will pay higher rates to ease 1980's $45 million loss, but Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas is not about to go out of business, says the company's acting president.

"We feel like we've come through the storm," Gene Aune said at a press conference here Wednesday. "...We want to reassure our subscribers out there that we can pay claims."

Although the company posted a $5.5 million loss for the first four months of 1981, Aune said officials expected a profit for the month of May. But the deficit — combined with inflation — has forced the company to raise rates for some customers by as much as 40 percent, he said.

While admitting the deficit compounded a credibility problem caused by the service delays, Aune said he hoped the company's long history of service would keep subscribers from losing faith.

"I think our credibility was mainly impaired because of the lack of service in 1980. But we're a company with a 50-year history and I'd like to think people would be fair and judge us on the long haul," he said.

Aune attributed the $45 million loss to inflation, unprecedented numbers of claims in 1980 and miscalculations by actuaries, but said computer problems played a minor part in the loss.

However, the company would try to make up the loss gradually, Aune said.

Problems arising from computerized claims processing are being solved and more than 90 percent of the claims now are processed within 14 days, he said.

City sells $7 million in bonds

The city of Midland sold $7 million in bonds Wednesday morning during a bid opening in City Hall Council Chambers.

The $3 million in general obligation bonds went to Underwood, Newhouse and Associates. With an interest rate of 9.333719 percent, the city will pay $2,517,770 in interest through 1996.

The $4 million in revenue bonds went to Rowles, Winston Division, Cowen and Co. With an interest rate of 9.7846 percent, total interest paid will be $3,703,182.28 on the 15-year period.

General obligation bonds will be used for street improvements. The revenue bonds are scheduled for sewer and water system improvements. These bonds are part of the bond issue approved by voters in September 1979.

The market has improved in recent weeks, according to a bond salesman. Midland fared better on its interest rates than either Abilene or Fort Worth, which sold city bonds recently.

$10,000 worth of jewelry reported stolen

The reported theft of $10,000 worth of jewelry was under investigation by city police today.

Karen Carameros of 4727 Dengar told officers five pieces of jewelry were taken from her residence while she was out of the house Wednesday. There was no sign of forced entry, police said.

In a reported burglary, Sara Ramirez of 1614 English Drive said $1,650 worth of jewelry was taken from her home after someone entered it through a bedroom window.

An employee of Braniff Airlines at Midland Regional Airport reported the theft of $2,257 from a company safe, and an employee of Budget-Rent-A-Car at the airport said a cash box containing an undetermined amount of money was stolen after someone pried open an office door.

In another burglary complaint, Allen Kallum of 2107 W. Washington told police several items, including a Polaroid camera and a vacuum cleaner, were taken from his residence. There was no sign of forced entry. Total loss was placed at $535.

Fire of a suspicious nature did moderate damage to a car owned by Martin Rolleg, 2307 Auburn Place. The blaze broke out in a stack of firewood next the garage about 1:45 a.m. today and also damaged the eaves of the garage. Police said the fire appeared to have been set.

Another car fire near the intersection of McDonald and Cuthbert Streets about 5 p.m. Wednesday did heavy damage to the motor and wiring of a 1975 Chrysler, the owner of which was not immediately known.

Forcing ministers to talk unconstitutional: lawyer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state law that lets judges force ministers to testify about talks with their parishoners is unconstitutional, a lawyer for a Collin County clergyman says.

Rev. Ron Salfen is appealing his contempt of court citation to the Court of Criminal Appeals. Salfen, pastor of the Trinity Presbyterian Church in the North Texas community of The Colony, refused to answer questions during his secretary's April 29 bond reduction hearing.

The appeals court took no immediate action after Wednesday's arguments.

In refusing to answer questions, Salfen relied on a Texas law that gives ministers' conversations with parishoners broad protection. The clergy-penitent privilege has existed since the second century, said James Stewart, Salfen's attorney.

"Texas has recognized this fundamental human need to disclose flawed acts" to clergymen, Stewart said, but he added that a proviso in the law allows judges to compel testimony for "the proper administration of justice during trials."

Asking the court to declare the proviso unconstitutional, Stewart said it "burdens and inhibits the free practice of religion," thus violating the first amendments to the U.S. and Texas constitutions.

"To reveal a confidential communication would be a sin, a violation of a sacred trust," Stewart said.

He said Salfen could be "stripped of his ministry" if he disclosed what was said to him in confidence.

Stewart also argued that a bond reduction hearing is not a "trial," and the proviso, even if constitutional, should not be applied to Salfen.

Salfen was held in contempt of court on May 14 and ordered jailed and fined for refusing to answer six questions put to him during the hearing for Maud Williams, his secretary.

Salfen had a dual relationship with Miss Williams, Stewart argued, that of employer-employee and of minister-penitent. The latter is privileged, he said, and its secrecy was not breached when Salfen testified in his capacity as her employer.

A.M. Hart, a regional church official who accompanied Salfen to the hearing, said the church strongly supported Salfen's stand.

Testifying would be "a breach of his responsibility as a minister," Hart said. "It would be ineffectiveness and lack of faithfulness to his responsibility."

Salfen said the case had surprised him.

"I was surprised it came up in the first place, surprised at the severity of the judge's response, and surprised at all the attention," he said.

Miss Williams was accused of jumping bail because she went to East Texas without permission. She faces a retrial on a two-year-old drug charge. Salfen said he had talked to Miss Williams about her drug problem before hiring her, and could not reveal the conversation because it was part of pastoral counseling.

Group challenges new creation law

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Saying they want to prevent classrooms from becoming battlegrounds for religious zealots, a coalition of church groups and educators has filed suit challenging a new law requiring the biblical version of creation to be taught side-by-side with evolution.

Critics of the state law, which takes effect in the fall of 1982, claim it violates the constitutional separation of church and state as well as academic freedom and is constitutionally vague.

"Creation scientists have tricked so many," Philip Kaplan, an attorney for the 23 plaintiffs, told reporters after the suit was filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court.

But Kaplan said the issue is not one of religious people against anti-religious people.

Two-thirds of the plaintiffs are members of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish groups. Their participation, Kaplan said, puts the issue before the public in the proper perspective. Other plaintiffs include the Arkansas chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, teachers and parents.

The federal suit was filed against the state, the state Education Board, the director of the state Education Department, the state Textbook and Instructional Materials Selecting Committee, the Pulaski County Special School District and its board and superintendent.

"We're not depriving any teacher or student of any constitutional right by forcing them to teach creation science," said Attorney General Steve Clark, who will defend the law.

Clark said he would try to prove that creationism is a science, not a religion. "The creation science bill expressly prohibits the teaching of creation from the book of Genesis," he said. "Creationism is a science predicated on carbon dating and scientific testing."

The suit called the act the latest step "in a long-tanding attern of the state of Arkansas to promote religion in its public schools, to establish a particular religious dogma and to disparage science when it is deemed to conflict with or be antagonistic to that religious dogma."

So far, Arkansas is the only state to enact a creationism law. But similar bills are pending in several other state legislatures.

The Arkansas Legislature approved the creationism bill with little debate during the closing days of the 1981 session. The bill calls the creationist view creation-science, which contends that scientific evidence supports the theory of sudden development of life.

Evolutionists say life developed slowly during millions of life.

Meanwhile Wednesday, the president pro tempore of the state Senate, Ben Allen, said he would propose a resolution asking Gov. Frank White to allow legislators to reconsider the law during a special legislative session.

White has said he will not ask the Legislature to repeal the law.

Excommunication eliminated

HOUSTON (AP) — Presbyterian leaders are urging northern and southern factions of the church to abolish excommunication as a punishment for heresy or other infractions, saying the church's mission "is for building up and not for destruction.

Concurrent governing assemblies of the southern Presbyterian Church U.S. and the mostly northern United Presbyterian Church approved revised rules Wednesday that would eliminate excommunication as a discipline. The new rules still are subject to regional ratification.

Excommunication, which excludes members from membership in or taking the sacraments of a church, hasn't been exercised for decades in Presbyterianism. But provisions still are on the books of the southern church.

"The power which Christ has given the church is for building up, and not for destruction, for the dispensing of mercy rather than of wrath," says a preface to the new rules, jointly drawn up in anticipation of a reunion of the two denominations in 1983.

Presbyterian leaders said the penalty no longer is considered appropriate in contemporary society. But the revised disciplines retain provisions for rebuke, temporary suspension from office or removal, after due process trials.

"The traditional biblical obligation to conciliate, mediate and to adjust differences without strife is not dimenished," the revision noted.

Meanwhile, William P. Thompson, chief administrator of the northern church for the past 15 years, was unanimously re-elected for another five years Wednesday.

The one-time Wichita, Kan., attorney said a "new and hopeful trend has been established" in the church, noting a marked increase in the rate of infant and adult baptisms.

"Once again we are reaching out to people who have not accepted the gospel," he said, noting the contrast with a past declining trend. "We ought to rejoice at the signs of unity in our household and commitment to our true calling to be Christ's witnesses."

The southern denomination's new moderator, Dorothy Barnard of St. Louis, said the assembly "has affirmed the directions we are going." That, she added, includes reunion with the northern body.

Even those averse to the prospect, she said, are developing a "mood that it's really kind of inevitable and say, 'so let's get on with it'."

Mrs. Truman improving

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former first lady Bess Truman remained hospitalized in fair condition today, three weeks after undergoing surgery to repair a fractured right hip.

The 96-year-old widow of Harry S. Truman had been listed in serious or critical condition since her May 7 surgery, but her condition was elevated to fair on Wednesday.

"Her vital signs are stable and I feel there is a favorable prognosis," said Dr. Wallace Graham, the long-time Truman family physician. "She still has a problem absorbing food, but she is gradually taking more food orally."

Coal industry, union bargainers sound optimistic

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Union and industry negotiators, fresh from their longest nonstop bargaining session in recent weeks, are finally making optimistic sounds about reaching an agreement that could settle the 2-month-old coal strike.

Nearly six hours after representatives of the United Mine Workers and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association went behind closed doors in a downtown hotel suite Wednesday, both sides emerged with upbeat reports.

UMW President Sam Church, in an effusive mood, said an accord could be reached today if the two sides resolved their remaining differences, which he suggested were minor.

"We made a lot of progress," Church told reporters after Wednesday's long session. "We've still got some unresolved problems but I'm optimistic. I feel much better than I have in quite some time."

One day earlier, Church had indicated agreement was reached on the issue that had proved most difficult up until Tuesday — the question of unionized coal companies subcontracting work to outside, non-union personnel.

The chief industry negotiator, Bobby R. Brown, is reserved by nature and has been reticient about talking with reporters during the contract talks.

His reactions to questions Wednesday was decidedly different. "We're making progress," he said. "I'm not pessimistic."

Church's 39-member bargaining council was scheduled to meet after today's negotiations.

The BCOA, the industry bargaining group representing 130 member coal companies and some 980 others, had faced a threat by Church to break off the talks if management failed to improve its contract offer.

On Tuesday, Church and his three-member union negotiating team turned down a contract package from the industry committee.

Church said he was giving the industry representatives 24 hours to come up with a package that union leaders and 160,000 rank-and-file miners could accept. If that didn't happen, he said, the union's bargaining council, kept on standby here since last Friday, would be sent home.

The industry's latest proposal came in the form of a package responding to demands made by the union after rejection by its rank and file of an earlier tentative accord.

Besides the "work standards" job security provision — limiting the extent to which unionized coal companies can hire outside, non-union labor for certain work at mine sites — the UMW has sought restoration of a contract provision requiring coal companies to pay a royalty into union health and retirement funds for each ton of non-union coal purchased for resale.

Hard-coal industry, miners strike tentative agreement

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — Negotiators for the hard-coal industry and striking miners, who have been off the job 28 days today, have reached tentative agreement on a proposed contract that reportedly would boost salaries 26 percent over three years.

The 2,000 workers represented by District 25 of the United Mine Workers Union probably will vote on the agreement by this weekend, according to William Savitsky, the union's chief negotiator.

"It's been a long 27 days, and this is about the best we can get," he said Wednesday, noting the proposed agreement contained "substantial increases."

Wednesday's settlement includes modest pay increases over a contract proposal rejected by union members last month that would have hiked wages and benefits together by 33 percent, the Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader reported.

It also offers more sick and personal days off for the miners but reduces proposed increases in sickness and accident benefits, the paper said.

"There have been some concessions, improvements in the economic package," Savitsky said. "I'm not at liberty to discuss them now because it is subject to a ratification vote."

Word of the tentative agreement also was announced by James Tedesco, president of Jeddo-Highland Coal Co. of nearby West Pittston and chief negotiator for the anthracite operators.

Tedesco also declined to discuss details of the package, saying it would be inappropriate to do so until the union membership had been informed of its provisions.

"There was give and take on both sides," Tedesco said. "There was an adjustment to positions on both sides."

The Times-Leader, however, said the miners' average total hourly pay increases over the next three years would total about $2.18, up from $2.08 in the rejected contract. There was no report on the amount of increase in benefits.

The miners made about $8.50 an hour under their old contract.

Savitsky said he was "optimistic" about the pact's chances for approval.

About 96 percent of the nation's anthracite is mined here in northeastern Pennsylvania by approximately 3,300 miners.

The union miners went on strike May 1, shutting down about half of the area's hard-coal mines. Non-union mines continued to operate. Hard coal, used mostly for home heating, totals less than 1 percent of all coal mined in the United States.

The walkout was called a day after the union members rejected a three-year contract offer containing a 33 percent wage-and-benefits increase.

The negotiators met Tuesday for 3½ hours, but no progress was reported in the first talks since May 20. They met again Wednesday and at mid-afternoon announced the agreement.

Coal strike could hurt steel industry

NEW YORK (AP) — The 2-month-old strike by Eastern coal miners is hurting the U.S. steel industry but still has not forced cutbacks in production, says the chairman of the American Iron and Steel Institute. But he says things could worsen this summer.

William J. De Lancey told reporters Wednesday after an annual membership meeting that the coal strike, coupled with recent tight-money policies of the Federal Reserve Board, has slowed the steel industry's recovery from its 1980 slump.

But he said, "I see no problem in continuing at present production levels," through June. If the strike, which started March 27, lasts past June, however, and interest rates remain high, steel orders likely will fall off, he said.

High rates — the prime lending rate has reached 20.5 percent at most major banks — have damaged steel-related industries such as auto manufacturing and housing. That in turn has limited the growth in new steel orders.

Coal, which is used in the steel-making process, supplies 65 percent of the industry's energy needs.

Most steel companies say they have been partly shielded from the strike's effects because they stockpiled coal in anticipation of the walkout. Their operating profits, however, have been pinched because of the need to conserve coal.

Although raw-steel output by the nation's mills fell 1.1 percent to 2.58 million tons last week, the level of production was 28 percent higher than the 2.02 million tons produced in the same week last year, according to the steel institute.

Bus, train lines sliding to halt

CHICAGO (AP) — The Regional Transportation Authority has gone broke and bus and train lines in the Chicago area are starting to shut down, threatening to leave more than 1 million riders without service as state politicians wrangle over a rescue plan.

The RTA ran out of money Wednesday because of higher costs and declining sales tax revenue, which it uses to subsidize commuter railroads, buses and subways in six counties.

One subsidized bus company has announced it is shutting down. Other rail and bus systems, which said they could not go on without the subsidies, threatened to close and another bus company was kept open only with a court order.

In Springfield, the Illinois capital, Republican leaders were to consider a rescue plan today, but Gov. James Thompson predicted a total shutdown before agreement could be reached.

The RTA was formed to subsidize transit in the six counties in 1974 after the Arab oil embargo sent fuel costs soaring. The seven commuter railroads, subways, city buses, 47 suburban bus systems and elevated trains collect 2.4 million fares a day.

Receipts from the sales tax — 1 cent on the dollar in Cook County and Chicago and ¼ cent in the five surrounding counties — have been falling off because of weakness in the economy. Meanwhile, labor and fuel costs have been rising, leading to the financial crisis.

Spokeswoman Peggy Kent said the RTA has set aside $2.5 million for insurance and security costs but that payment of $7.3 million to carriers and suppliers Wednesday was expected to be the last sent out until mid-June, when the RTA will receive about $20 million in sales tax receipts.

Meanwhile, a Cook County circuit court judge issued a temporary restraining order Wednesday preventing a bus line in south suburban Oak Lawn from suspending service when RTA subsidies run out.

Fraser says labor leaders should be above suspicion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roy Lee Williams should not be a candidate for president of the Teamsters union until he is cleared of bribery charges, United Auto Workers Union President Douglas Fraser says.

Labor leaders, Fraser said Wednesday at a luncheon with reporters, "should be like Caesar's wife: above suspicion. If indicted, they should stand aside until they are cleared."

Williams, the interim Teamsters president, and four other persons were indicted in Chicago last Friday on charges of attempting to bribe Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., to block legislation to deregulate trucking.

Ascent of Mount McKinley can be a dangerous walk

DENALI NATIONAL PARK, Alaska (AP) — The ascent of Mount McKinley, a looming, snow-covered giant that is North America's highest peak, is "basically a walk," depending on the route to the summit.

"Of course it may be one of the most dangerous walks in the world," adds Bob Gerhard, chief moutaineering ranger for Denali National Park, just south of the 20,320-foot mountain.

That danger was highlighted last week with the report of the death of a Columbia University graduate student in a glacial crevasse and the rescue of a fellow climber at the 8,400-foot level.

Another climber is missing on the mountain, and there have been two other rescues since the climbing season began in April with nearly two dozen people challenging the peak.

In 1980, eight people died on Mount McKinley. At least 659 tried for the summit, and Gerhard said "it looks like there'll be at least that many" before this season ends in August.

There have been a few successful winter ascents, but most climbers try for the top in summer — if one can use the word summer in connection with temperatures hovering around zero at the summit, snow and winds that often vary between 70 and 100 mph.

"It's always winter up there. I was on the summit on the Fourth of July one year and it was below zero," said Paul Denkewalter, who runs a mountaineering equipment store in Anchorage. To those in Anchorage, 135 miles south of the mountain, McKinley appears as a soft pyramid on the horizon.

Denkewalter, who ascended McKinley in 1971, said the 15-mile West Buttress route — which requires no rock or rope skills — is considered the "tourist" climb, adding, "It's a lot of work too."

About two-thirds of the climbers are Americans, but others come from nearly every European country, Japan, Taiwan, Korea and many communist-bloc nations, Gerhard said.

Over the years, requirements imposed on climbers have varied — expeditions once needed certification by park officials and mountaineering clubs. This year climbers merely must register, which helps the National Park Service keep track of them.

"I figure the average smart climber will continue to carry a radio," Gerhard said of the decision to drop a rule that climbers carry radios. "Those who climb without a radio are basically choosing the option that if they get in trouble they may be there forever."

In any case, Mount McKinley is not the stuff of a Sunday stroll. Climbers need gear which would be used only in winter in other parts of the United States, and the altitude and weather are formidable foes.

Climbers unaccustomed to high altitudes must beware of the low atmospheric pressure and reduced oxygen. The low pressure can cause altitude sickness, in which body nitrogen is released as gas bubbles that block veins and arteries and collect in the tissues, causing vomiting, pain and paralysis.

The mountain is always covered with snow and ice, temperatures can drop to 30 below even in summer, and high winds — and accompanying wind chill — pose a significant threat. Last year, 27 climbers were hospitalized for frostbite.

"If anything, it (the wind) is worse than the cold. You can't hide from it," said Denkewalter.

Gerhard said even experienced climbers get into trouble on the peak, which was first scaled in 1913. "Some of the best are dying on Mount McKinley," he said, adding that short of closing the mountain, he doesn't know how to make it safer.

Most climbers leave from Talkeetna, 60 miles from the peak, where two rangers run a station for climbers. Most climbers are flown to Kahiltna Glacier, just outside the park boundary at 7,000 feet. That's the start of the West Buttress route, where Gerhard says "you may see 100 other climbers along the way."

Other routes, like Cassin Ridge on the southeast face, and the South Face, are more rarely attempted.

Most expeditions take 2½ to 3 weeks, although two veteran climbers went from 10,000 feet to the top in 19 hours in 1979. The size and cost of expeditions vary.

In Europe, Gerhard notes, most climbers carry insurance to pay for rescues and there are more and better-equipped rescue units.

"A rescue on McKinley, there's nothing certain about it," he said. "We don't go out and initiate rescues. We don't have a rescue team or rescue organization as such."

Don't subsidize strikers

The nation's food stamps program ostensibly is a means by which the taxpayers help to provide the basic nutritional requirements of those unable to properly feed themselves.

All federal government programs are susceptible to abuse and, unfortunately, the welfare program, which includes the food stamps program, is one of the most abused.

The Reagan administration, of course, is attempting to eliminate as much of that abuse as possible, while retaining as much of the true, justifiable benefit as can be retained.

A proposal currently before the House calls for the denial of food stamps to any striking worker who was not eligible for food stamps prior to walking off his job. That proposal should be passed.

It was never the intent of the food stamps program to provide for the needs of such individuals. In fact the public treasury should not be tapped for either side during a labor-management dispute.

Abuse of the food stamps program by strikers, in effect, forces taxpayers to contribute to the particular union's war chest. Such use of tax monies makes no more sense than donating tax funds to the treasuries of corporationes hit with a strike to keep the employers' profits from suffering.

It is abuses like this one that have soured the taxpayers to the welfare system in this country. This is certainly not the only way to help clean up the system and trim the welfare budget in the process. But it is a good start and could help led the entire welfare program back to a level of respectability.

The people of the nation — who are the taxpayers — would appreciate both a lower cost welfare program and a respectable one.

Reagan's reform plans

It would have been heresy a year ago if anyone had suggested putting restrictions on the Freedom of Information Act or tampering with the government's right to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate alleged wrongdoing of an official.

Heresy or no, President Reagan and his aides believe some of the restrictive laws passed in the tenseness of the post-Watergate days may have gone overboard, and ought to be liberalized. They are putting a package of proposals together to correct what Attorney General William French Smith calls legislative "overreaction."

Although the proposals are tentative at the moment, the administration is thinking along the lines of abolishing the system under which a special prosecutor is appointed. Mr. Smith views the post as too powerful, and unnecessary. The Freedom of Information Act reform would make it more difficult for citizens to get their hands on government documents. Even requirements for financial disclosure by government officials under the 1978 Ethics in Government Act are being questioned as too much of an imposition on privacy.

Less heretical than the above are the Reagan plans to do something about the ability of the Federal Bureau of Investigaion and the Central Intelligence Agency to gather intelligence. A wave of anti-FBI and anti-CIA sentiment after Watergate led to measures making it more difficult to get the goods on the enemies of our society and our country.

Knowing full well some of these restrictions are sacrosanct to many a self-appointed civil libertarian the Reagan administration plans to take a good hard look at them, and see if it isn't time for reform.

This is not just a Republican plot to get even with the previous administration. Some members of the Carter government became skeptical of too-restrictive laws, among them Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti.

In a speech prior to Mr. Reagan's inauguration, the former attorney general said: "If we can draw any lesson from our study of the post-Watergate reforms, it is the lesson of the unintended consequence." For this reason he believes the nation should "look critically" at these laws.

That, precisely, is what Mr. Reagan is planning to do, and thanks to Mr. Civiletti it is not a narrowly partisan issue.

ART BUCHWALD

Anti-Secular Humanism Committee must be formed

Art Buchwald

The new threat to this country, if you believe the Moral Majority and the television preachers, is not Communists or fellow travelers, but "secular humanists."

The "secular humanists" are the ones who are brainwashing our children with books about evolution, sex, race relations, ERA and naughty words.

This means we have to get the books out of the schools and libraries. The book censors are starting to organize, the moral crusade has begun and the hunt for secular humanists is on.

I am always intimidated by book-burners, so I want to get on the bandwagon as soon as possible.

My problem is, unlike the Red-baiting witch hunts of the McCarthy days, I find it impossible to know who a secular humanist is.

It was easy to tell a Commie or fellow traveler in the '50s, because he always carried a "Daily Worker" under his arm, and didn't bother to shine his shoes. He never had a nice thing to say about Sen. Joe McCarthy or Roy Cohen, and he kept taking the Fifth Amendment when he was called in front of the House Un-American Activities Committee. Also, you could check up on him by finding out if he once belonged to one of the hundreds of subversive organizations listed by the government as being for the violent overthrow of the government.

But a secular humanist is a different breed of cat. From what I can gather, he is much harder to identify unless he openly admits he thinks Darwin's theory of creation makes sense.

Secular humanists are not joiners. They don't have cells where they plot anti-American and anti-God propaganda. Most of them work alone, doing historical research, writing textbooks and novels, and explaining how babies are born. They pollute children's minds with how the world is, rather than how the anti-humanists would like it to be.

What makes them so dangerous is that secular humanists look just like you and me. Some of them could be your best friends without you knowing they are humanists. They could come into your house, play with your children, eat your food and even watch football with you on television, and you'd never know that they have read "Catcher in the Rye," "Brave New World" and "Huckleberry Finn."

Of course there are some who flaunt their humanism, and will brag they're for abortion, and against prayers in public schools. You can throw them out of the house.

But for every secular humanist who will tell where he or she stands on a fundamentalist issue, there are 10 who keep their thoughts to themselves and are working to destroy the American family.

No one is safe until Congress sets up an Anti-Secular Humanism Committee to get at the rot. Witnesses have to be called, and they have to name names of other secular humanists they know.

Librarians and teachers must be made to answer for the books they have on their shelves. Publishers have to be held accountable for what they print. Writers must be punished for what they write.

The secular humanists should be put on notice that they can no longer hide behind the First Amendment.

If we're going to go back to the old moral values that made this country great, we're going to have to do it with search- and-destroy methods. First, we must burn the books — and if that isn't enough, then we must burn the people.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

ABSCAM probe reveals 'securities scam'

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The FBI's handling of its famous ABSCAM investigation grows curiouser and curiouser. There is shocking evidence that the bureau's chief undercover operative, convicted con man Mel Weinberg, may have instigated the creation of more than $1 billion worth of counterfeit securities — which he was then given credit for turning over to the FBI.

Moreover, FBI Director William Webster, in testimony to Congress last October, boasted of the "recovery" as a beneficial spinoff from the undercover operation. He told the House Judiciary Committee that $1.5 billion in "potential economic losses were prevented" — a pitch to get further funding for ABSCAM-type operations.

Internal FBI memos show that Weinberg was paid more than $130,000 for his role as middleman between ABSCAM targets and FBI agents posing as Arab sheiks in need of political favors. In addition, he was given a $15,000 lump-sum reward for helping to recover nearly $2 billion worth of phony certificates of deposit and letters of credit.

Supposedly, Weinberg got the counterfeit securities — which are easily negotiable — "off the street." But my associate Indy Badhwar has dug into overlooked court documents that suggest Weinberg may instead have solicited the forging of the securities, taught ABSCAM targets how to manufacture them and then "recovered" them for the reward money. What's worse, the documents also suggest that Weinberg may have worked his securities scam with the knowledge of his FBI employer.

Here's how it worked, according to court documents:

Weinberg would approach individuals in need of money and offer financing from banks in the Middle East. But, he would say, the banks required collateral — and fake securities would do the job.

"He was interested in knowing whether we could supply stolen securities, stolen or forged bonds, CDs or letters of credit," testified William Rosenberg, another con man whom Weinberg had offered to help with "Arab" money. Rosenberg swore that Weinberg presented him with $1.2 billion of blank fake securities and "told us how to fill them out and what rates of interest to show on the letters of credit, how they were to be worded and so on."

Asked why Weinberg hadn't simply filled out the certificates of deposit himself, Rosenberg testified: "His answer was that if his employers learned of his participating ... or doing this himself, he might be in danger of his life or losing his job."

Another witness, Jack Morris, testified at Rep. John Jenrette's trial that he printed $200 million worth of counterfeit CDs at Weinberg's orders. Then, when he delivered them to Weinberg in the Red Carpet Room at La Guardia Airport, Morris was arrested by the FBI.

Morris was charged with just a misdemeanor for this $200 million fraud and was released on personal bond. Later, he testified, Weinberg suggested he seek help from his congressman — Jenrette. He quoted Weinberg as saying Jenrette was a lush, so "give him a few drinks, he'll do anything." To which Morris, a member of Alcoholics Anonymous, said he replied, "Go to hell, you s.o.b."

FBI memos dealing with the fake securities operation indicate that one of its ultimate targets was Jenrette, who was described as "financially in bad shape."

Bob Weir, a former ABSCAM prosecutor, testified recently that the FBI probably knew that Weinberg had himself supplied the counterfeit securities. He quoted an FBI agent as saying the use of such a scheme was a technique the bureau has used in the past to create the impression that its undercover agents are involved in illegal operations.

And an FBI memo of February 1979 states that "the CDs serve as a vehicle which leads these people to introduce undercover agents to corrupt politicians."

EMBATTLED BUREAU: Morale among the working stiffs in the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms is reportedly suffering badly from proposed budget cuts and what agents feel are unfair attacks by the gun lobby.

"Some agents in the field would like to go on the attack ... maybe take out a full-page ad or something," acknowledged Mike LaPerch, an ATF bureau chief who supervises 450 agents in the Northeast.

An example of the criticism the ATF agents complain of was a statement by an aide of Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, that the bureau's "abuses of civil liberties have made felons of businessmen and others who have nothing to do with the violent, criminal misuse of guns." Yet ATF has never been found guilty of violating anyone's civil liberties.

Similarly, the Gun Owners of America (GOA) accused ATF of raiding an Arizona gun shop, frisking its employees and confiscating its stock — though the raid was actually made by another federal agency. The GOA also accused former ATF Director Rex Davis of proposing a nationwide gun registration file that would compile names and addresses of individual gun owners — which neither he nor ATF ever recommended.

The unhappy field agents reportedly want the current director, G.R. Dickerson, to be more outspoken in answering the ATF critics. LaPerch disagrees. "For him to go on the attack would be counterproductive," LaPerch told my reporter Ben Lay.

WATCH ON WASTE: The National Guard has a picturesque way of currying favor with those it regards as "centers of influence." The Guard awards them color reproductions of paintings depicting famous military events like the Battle of Bunker Hill and the Normandy invasion. There are nine different scenes. The framed prints the Guard sends to its influential friends typically cost about $53 apiece.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, May 28, the 148th day of 1981. There are 217 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 28, 1940, more than 300,000 Allied troops began evacuating Dunkirk, France, as Belgium surrendered to the German invaders during World War II.

On this date:

In 1933, the Nazi Party won the Danzig elections in Germany.

In 1934, Oliva Dionne gave birth to quintuplets in a farmhouse near Callender, Ontario.

In 1961, the Paris-to-Bucharest "Orient Express" train made its final trip after 78 years.

And in 1962, the New York Stock Market took its biggest loss since October 1929.

Ten years ago: the Soviet Union launched a five-ton spacecraft toward Mars.

Five years ago: the United States and the Soviet Union signed a treaty limiting the size of underground nuclear explosions set off for peaceful purposes.

One year ago: thirty-one of President Richard Nixon's 950 Watergate tape recordings were made available to the public for the first time at the National Archives.

Today's birthdays: Publisher Barnet Rosset is 59 years old and Turkey's former premier — Bulent Ecevit — is 56.

A CHANGING WORLD

Alaska's former governor Hickel optimistic as usual

John Pinkerman

ANCHORAGE — No visit to this pioneer and largest of all states is complete without a visit with its greatest rooter — Walter Joseph Hickel.

As one of this man's favorite Americans, it is gratifying to report that at 62, the former governor (1966-69), U.S. secretary of the interior (1969-70), unsuccessful candidate for governor (a couple times) is as bouncy as ever, optimistic on the future of his state and nation and candid in his assessment of current political and economic conditions.

Hickel also still reflects in his actions and his responses the quotation that appears with his biography in Who's Who in America: "We shall never understand peace, justice and the living of life until we recognize that all people are human and that humans are the most precious things on earth."

Of more mundane pertinence, Hickel, now deep into the construction and development endeavor that political office-holding interrupted, is through with campaigning.

"No," he said in an interview in his office in the Captain Cook Hotel, which he owns, "I will not be running for office again. I will, however, stay active in national and world affairs, mostly speaking out on the problems facing our nation and the free world, principally the problems of energy and inflation — and they are closely related."

Concerning these problems, he supports President Reagan's economic programs."What President Reagan is doing and what British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is doing must succeed," he said. "If their programs do not succeed we won't recognize the free world's political structure in the future. We must restore responsibility and productivity to the economic processes of the free world."

Energy and capital investment in Alaska's and the nation's future are important in Hickel's thinking, and he spares no words in setting forth his ideas. "On energy," he said, "President Carter's ideas were absolutely unrealistic. He concentrated 100 percent on conservation and that sent the country down an impossible road.

"We simply have to develop and produce in our energy areas. Mr. Reagan and Jim Watt (James Watt, current secretary of the interior) are taking the opposite course of the Carter regime and this policy will balance out favorably, eventually.

"Watt is somewhat on the arrogant side sometimes but his philosophy of increasing energy sources is a correct one. I think he will moderate his rhetoric, correct some of the abrasive personal approaches he indulges in and come up with solutions acceptable to most Americans.

"For myself, I am convinced that there is an abundance of fossil fuels in the United States, particularly Alaska, and that they can be developed in a manner compatible with environmental protection policies."

As for his own frontier state, Hickel is not fully satisfied with the way economic development is being handled but is optimistic about the future. "Our arctic areas," he said, "have a tremendous potenbe seriously damaged, however. Drained of many middle-class pupils, they would be likely to beplaced on a starvation diet by state and local governments as voters would be reluctant to tax themselves for schools their own children no longer attend."

Using the tax system to encourage a flight from the public schools is bound to make those schools educational ghettos, removing incentives to improve them.

If public education is to be saved, it will not be enough just to fight the tuition tax credit. Those schools will have to achieve the excellence they are capable of. They will have to become more accountable to parents, and to make the internal reforms that allow them to serve today's poor as yesterday's schools helped earlier generations get the skills that enabled them to rise from poverty.

The answer to the nation's educational problems lies in improving public education so that all have equal educational opportunities, not in subsidizing unequal opportunities and class division.

The Newspaper BIBLE

LIFE BEGINS AT 80!

One day as Moses was nearing his 40th birthday, it came into his mind to visit his brothers, the people of Israel. During this visit he saw an Egyptian mistreating a man of Israel. So Moses killed the Egyptian. Moses supposed his brothers would realize that God had sent him to help them, but they didn't.

The next day he visited them again and saw two men of Israel fighting. He tried to be a peacemaker, "Gentlemen," he said, "you are brothers and shouldn't be fighting like this! It is wrong!"

But the man in the wrong told Moses to mind his own business. "Who made you a ruler and judge over us?" he asked. "Are you going to kill me as you killed that Egyptian yesterday?"

At this, Moses fled the country, and lived in the land of Midian, where his two sons were born. Forty years later, in the desert near Mount Sinai, an Angel appeared to him in a flame of fire in a bush. Moses saw it and wondered what it was, and as he ran to see, the voice of the Lord called out to him, "I am the God of your ancestors--of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob." Moses shook with terror and dared not look.

And the Lord said to him, "Take off your shoes, for you are standing on holy ground. I have seen the anguish of My people in Egypt and have heard their cries. I have come down to deliver them. Come, I will send you to Egypt."

And so God sent back the same man His people had previously rejected by demanding, "Who made you a ruler and judge over us?" Acts 7:23-35a

Soviets suspend manned space shots

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has suspended manned shots while its experts decide on the next step in exploring space, scientists said today.

"In coming months, there will be no such flights. After we analyze everything, we will adopt a decision," said Alexei Yeliseyev, head of space mission control.

"We must now analyze all work done in the preceding five years, then determine what should be done," Yeliseyev added at a press conference on the last of nine missions in the Intercosmos series.

He made it clear there were no immediate plans to replace the orbiting space station, Salyut-6, with a newer version of the space lab, Salyut-7.

"Salyut-6 will continue for a long time to be able to accept crews on board," Yeliseyev said. "It has been switched to pilotless mode and will continue carrying out a number of scientific experiments."

He declined to give a launch date for Salyut-7, saying only that such a space station may be sent up if scientists determine that it is needed.

Yeliseyev said the Soviet space exploration program will continue to rely on orbiting stations with changeable crews and using manned and unmanned space ships to supply them.

Soviet crews have worked as long as 186 days aboard the Salyut-6 "with no changes in the body that would prevent flying longer," he said.

Quaalude — A case of mistaken identity

SELLERSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — The trademark Quaalude, like the illegal drug that masquerades under its name, has been widely abused — on the streets, in the newspapers and by the police.

It's all a case of mistaken identity. But still, some doctors are afraid to prescribe it and some patients worry about taking it. There's a twin sister — same stuff, different name — for them.

Sanka became "Sanka brand" to fight off generic use of its trademark. Xerox reminds journalists that not every photocopy is a "Xerox copy."

But few companies have the trademark woes of the Lemmon Co., a Sellersville-based concern that makes the hypnotic-sedative methaqualone, available by prescription under the name Quaalude.

For more than a decade, Quaalude has been wrongly associated with overdoses of illegally made methaqualone, wild drug parties, swarthy drug dealers and underground laboratories.

"There's no doubt we've lost a considerable amount of business because of" the substitution of the trade name for the generic name, said Elliot Fisher, lawyer for Lemmon.

He writes 25 to 50 letters a week to newspapers and police agencies, complaining that they have said "Quaaludes" when they meant "illegally manufactured methaqualone" or "counterfeit Quaaludes." Some respond with apologies, and many are surprised to learn that Quaalude is a trademark, Fisher says.

Lemmon has taken out advertisements in medical journals urging physicians "not to permit the abuses of illegal users to deprive a legitimate patient of the drug," Fisher adds.

Lemmon's market research indicates doctors are skittish about prescribing Quaaludes because of the adverse publicity, and patients worry about taking a drug whose name is associated with arrests and death on the street. In 1980, 117 people died after taking illegally purchased methaqualone, federal officials say. That's up from 87 deaths in 1979.

In 1978 Lemmon introduced Mequin, identical to Quaalude except for the name, "for physicians who are sensitive to improper newspaper publicity, identifying phony pills as Quaaludes," Fisher said. One of 10 methaqualone tablets the company makes is marketed as Mequin.

Taken under a doctor's supervision, the methaqualone tablets made by Lemmon are a daytime sedative or, in larger doses, an aid to sleep.

The illegal drug wrongly called "Quaaludes" usually contains methaqualone in varying quantities. When users fight sleep, it makes them feel euphoric or "high," drug officials say.

The illicit drug is being used more widely than ever before, the Drug Enforcement Administration says. Some 40 million illegally made methaqualone tablets are expected to hit the streets this year, up from 20 million in 1980, according to the DEA's "conservative estimate." Others have estimated the figure at as high as 1 billion.

The tablets, most smuggled in from Colombia and many made to loo like Lemmon's product, go for $2 to $5 each on the street, the DEA says.

At pharmacies, where a Quaalude tablet runs about 50 cents, sales have dropped off in recent years, the company says. Although Lemmon, a privately held company, declines to discuss sales figures, it says it made 30 million Quaalude tablets in 1978 and "definitely less" than that last year.

William H. Rorer Inc. made Quaalude until 1978, when it sold the rights to Lemmon. "Quaalude accounted for less than 2 percent of our sales but created 98 percent of our headaches," said John Eckman, Rorer chairman, in a 1978 report to stockholders. "Continued publicity about the abuse of this product was hurting the reputation of the company."

Lemmon was aware of the illegal methaqualone market when it bought the rights to Quaalude, but "we considered it an excellent sleeping pill and it still is today," Fisher said. A Rorer spokesman agrees Quaalude is "a darn good drug."

But the counterfeiting of Quaaludes continued, and the number of newspaper stories about seizures of the drug did, too.

"The first six months of 1980 it seemed to be in the newspapers constantly," Fisher says, adding he believes the company's letter writing efforts have been successful.

"Our campaign isn't going to stop the street sale of illegal methaqualone, but when drug dealers are caught we are hopeful news stores about the drugs seized will not mention the name of Quaaludes if it's not the product that was seized," Fisher said.

David Hoover, a DEA spokesman in Washington, says Lemmon's "sensitivity is well taken here. We always try to refer to methaqualone as methaqualone.... Quaaludes have a legitimate medical purpose."

Several times a week, Lemmon fields calls from drug agencies or does laboratory work to verify that a confiscated drug is not Quaalude. The DEA says 95 percent to 99 percent of the methaqualone it confiscates is not Quaalude.

Methaqualone first was produced in India as an antimalarial drug, and its effects as a sedative soon were discovered. Illicit use of the drug grew in the United States in the 1960s and 1970s, and it became known as a "love drug," "Vitamin Q" or simply "Q."

There are many dangers in illicit methaqualone.

Synthetic insulin tests under way

By LINDA ROCKEY
Hearst Special News Service

SEATTLE -- Synthetic insulin is being tested on a handful of diabetes sufferers.

About 300 of the 10 million diabetics in the United States will be selected to take part in the two-year study.

The artificial human insulin is produced using genetic programming techniques with bacteria--"gene splicing."

Virginia Mason Medical Center here is one of six in the country testing the new insulin for Eli Lilly Company, the firm that pioneered production of the bug-made hormone with a technique developed by Genentech, a California firm specializing in gene splicing, or recombinant DNA, techniques.

"Medicine has been working with bugs a long time to make penicillin, vitamins and other drugs. Now we can fool a bug into thinking it's a cell so it makes insulin," says Dr. Robert Nielsen, endocrinologist and chief investigator for the research project at Virginia Mason.

Fearing a possible shortage of insulin produced from animals -- the current source of insulin for human diabetics -- in the next few decades, researchers hope that the new bacterial insulin will eventually cost less, be easier to produce and not cause allergies sometimes experienced by diabetics.

The artificial insulin may also enable doctors to "better fine-tune the patient's insulin levels," says Nancy Becker, nurse clinician at Virgina Mason.

Lilly wants each center eventually to recruit 50 patients for the two-year clinical trial.

If the new insulin works as well as doctors expect, Lilly will submit its data to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for approval at the end of the two-year study.

Patients are not easy to find. For the study, they must be "insulin virgins" -- diabetics who have never received animal insulin. Only diabetics whose disease was recently diagnosed, or those for whom dietary restrictions and oral medication no longer work, are possible candidates.

As part of the study, a patient is required to come to the clinic every other month for blood and urine tests. But like most diabetics, each will administer insulin shots at home. A patient also pricks his finger and measures his blood levels himself twice a week with a dextrometer, a calculator-like instrument that tells how well his body is metabolizing sugars.

Bill Reeves, 55, said that all of his diabetes-caused symptoms dropped off since he started taking synthetic insulin two months ago and limited the amount of sweets he eats. The only drawback he's found, he said, is that he has to wake up early on weekends.

"I have to get up at 6 a.m. to toot myself with insulin," he explained.

SS agents still guard empty house

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Neither President Reagan nor his wife Nancy has been to the couple's $1.9 million Pacific Palisades home since it went on sale in January, but taxpayers still pay for round-the-clock Secret Service surveillance.

"There is a Secret Service agent on the (Pacific Palisades) property 24 hours a day," said Secret Service spokesman Dick Hartwig in Washington. "It's a temporary detail that will be there until we feel there is no occasion that the president will go there."

Meanwhile, the real estate firm that has the listing for the home says it has been taking prospective buyers through at the rate of about one a day.

"Last week we had six showings," said Joe Peterson of Coldwell Banker, "That's kind of typical. There are a lot of times we can't show the home because the housekeeper isn't there."

He said the president and Mrs. Reagan have not visited the home since they moved out, but "some of their furniture is still in there.

"And as far as the protection is concerned, I think it's kind of easy to understand. We get a lot of phone calls from people who are just curiosity seekers and the house has to be under protection by somebody from people who might try to break in."

Secret Service officials decline to say how much it costs to station guards in a trailer at the top of the hillside home's steep driveway and house the agents at the luxurious Century Plaza Hotel when they're off duty.

But officials say they don't believe the cost will exceed the $10,000 limit set by federal law for security at any president's home other than his main private residence — in Reagan's case, his ranch in Santa Barbara, Calif.

"We feel we're within the law by providing the security we're providing," Hartwig said.

The Presidential Protection Assistance Act of 1976 was passed by Congress after complaints that $17.1 million was spent during President Nixon's term on security and security-related improvements at Nixon's two homes on Key Biscayne, Fla. and at the famed Casa Pacifica in San Clemente known as the Western White House.

The House Government Operations Committee reported that $10 million of that money went for fixed improvements, including a $66,000 replica of the White House fence at one of the Key Biscayne homes. The remaining $7.1 million went for personnel costs.

The 1976 law says the House and Senate Appropriations Committees must approve expenditures of more than $10,000 for security on a president's secondary homes. Security expenditures on the president's primary home are unlimited under the law.

The law was unclear about whether salaries are included in the $10,000 limit and what term — one year or four years — it covers.

The Treasury Department has asked the committees for $4.6 million to hire 76 additional Secret Service agents "to protect the president's principal residence and that of the four Reagan children and grandchildren." But Bill Smith of the House appropriations subcommittee, which handles the Treasury Department, says no additional money has been authorized or sought for the Pacific Palisades home.

DOE workers back in Tennesse plant

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — Workers at an Energy Department uranium-enrichment plant were allowed back inside after a two-hour evacuation that followed a low-level radiation leak, officials said.

The leak Wednesday forced the evacuation of 125 workers. Harvey Cobert, a spokesman for Union Carbide Corp.'s nuclear division, which operates the plant, said no radiation was released outside the plant Wednesday and there apparently were no injuries.

Cobert said three mechanics who were near the cell when it leaked were taken to the plant's clinic for tests to see if they had picked up any radiation. Test results were not expected until today.

Caesar praised in various ways by contestants

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Friends, Romans, good buddies, I have been buried under a passel of praise for Caesar in mod, way out, jargon-filled versions of Mark Antony's funeral oration.

Since announcing the first annual "Do It Yourself With a Bare Bodkin" contest to update the language of some of Shakespeare's most memorized soliloquies, the postman has rung in twice a day around here with a double hernia.

The mail has been so heavy with Elizabethan eulogies from points as far away as Anchorage, Alaska and Charlotte Amalie in the Virgin Islands, to say nothing of at least a dozen entries from Killeen, Texas, which has got to be the Shakespeare rewrite capital of the world, the finalists will have to be presented here in two sections, like the Boston-bound Greyhound out of the New York Port Authority. One column could not do justice to the best of them.

I have heard Caesar buried in soul-talk, C.B. lingo, John Wayne-ese, genuine redneck, backwoods preacher-style, Caribbean calypso, hippie Karma talk and Birdland beebop, just to name a few funereal styles.

In fact, the response has been so gratifying, I have decided to extend the contest closing date to July 31. So grab your prose shovels and heap in on Big Julie. Winning entries (and there could be dozens) will receive, as herein previously stated, a lifetime cure for insomnia: a casette recording of the columnist reading from his own works.

Now, a word or two from some of the finalists.

Russ Parrish of Atlanta, Ga., who describes himself as "poet, mover, fool," contributed two fine funeral orations for Caesar. One "as performed by a Baptist minister in Snellville, Ga. circa 1981...":

"Hey! Y'all pay attention, now ... y'hear?
I am present on this auspicious occasion
At this point in time to funeralize Caesar
Not to brag on him.
Y'know, when folks do bad, it kinda hangs on
Like the aromer of three-day old-chitlins;
When they do good, it sometimes gets plowed under
Like a medder muffin in new ground..."

Poet Parrish also gave his version of how an actuarial conference might introduce a moment of silence for departed colleague Caesar. It wound up thus:

"... At this time, given the concurrence of Mr. Brutus
And the ad hoc Committee on Solonar Affairs, which I am
Certain will be forthcoming, as they are all really fine fellows,
I shall get to the bottom line and construct for this audience
A viable scenario vis-a-vis the mortality termination ceremonies
Impacting the prior-mentioned Julius Caesar."

Carol J. Bagnall of Conneaut, Ohio, cast John Wayne in the Mark Antony role on location in Monument Valley. Roll 'em:

"All right, Pilgrim,
Listen and listen up good,
This here Bozo Caesar bit the dust
And I'm just here to shovel a little dirt on his grave,
No good words for him..."

Constance James of Copperas Cove, Tex., via the Killeen Daily Herald, accorded the noblest Roman of them all a hippie funeral:

Hang in there, people, while I tell you where I'm at
And where I'm coming from.
I'm here to deep six old Caesar, not give him strokes.
You know it's always the bad Karma you notice
When it comes back 10 times, not the good Karma
Caesar took all his good vibes with him...

Dorothy Hawkinson of Vallejo, Calif., buried Big Julie back in the piney woods in authentic redneck:

"Brutus tried to tell y'all that Caesar got uppity
And how it's a sin to be so high an' mighty
But that boy wouldn't pay him no mind...
That Brutus, he's a good ol' boy,
They's all good ol' boys."

In Norwalk, Conn., Evangeline Weil buried Caesar in a Mother Goose nursery rhyme:

"Julie was a little lamb
His fleece was black as soot
And everywhere that Julie went,
His sooty-footy put..."

Finding us all guilty of Caesar's death, Wanda White of Gainesville, Ga., saw it as a problem for the sociologists and editorial writers:

"It is time to eulogize violence,
Rather than see America destroyed by it.
An attitude of violence prevails long after
The recognition of an individual act has passed into oblivion.
In the interest of survival we must employ multiples
Of positive action to counteract the negative.
So let it be with our society."

Among the many who rendered Caesar's obsequies in finger-snapping jive talk, I liked this version of "Mark the Knife Antony's oration" from Rose Evelyn Jones of Weston, W.Va.

"All you cats, bend me a flap,
We gotta ace this dude not put him on high
Man, he flaked out on us, so let's lay it on him...
Brutus laid it down like it is and we knelt, man...
So we gotta get our act together or I'm gonna
Be putting on old Caesar's cement sandals.

That's it for this edition. More finalists to come. The morning mail just brought a couple of dozen entries from the entire advanced freshman English class at Cedar Ridge High School in Old Bridge, N.J. ods bodkins!

Pulitzer-winning pair selling their newspaper

POINT REYES, Calif. (AP) — The couple who own the Pulitzer Prize-winning Point Reyes Light are selling the weekly for $135,000, saying newspaper ownership has strained their marriage.

Pubishers David and Cathy Mitchell said in a front-page editorial Wednesday that "we are giving up a newspaper we have loved to the point of obsession."

The newspaper won a Pulitzer in 1979 for its investigation and coverage of Synanon, a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center once headquartered in Marin County.

Mitchell is joining the San Francisco Examiner as a reporter, and Mrs. Mitchell will continue teaching journalism at Santa Rosa Community College.

Armadillo bill having a tough time

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Elementary school students trying to get the Legislature to honor the armadillo have a few days to convince a San Antonio senator that the critter is not the "God-awful animal" he says it is.

Earlier this session the House approved a resolution naming the nine-banded armadillo the official state mammal. That was the easy part for the Oak Creek Elementary School students who persuaded Rep. Don Henderson to carry the resolution.

The little lobbyists lost a similar battle in 1979 when the measure died in the Senate.

Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, perceiving possible trouble on his side of the rotunda, tried to appease armadillo-haters. He offered a substitute resolution which would make the armadillo the "recognized mascot" of Texas.

The Ogg version made it to the Senate local calandar on Wednesday, where it looked like it would breeze through with other uncontested measures — until Vale and Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, had it pulled from the list, according to Ogg aide Hilary Hylton.

"We've had problems all the way through," said Ms. Hylton.

Vale aide Pam O'Connor said her boss just doesn't like armadillos.

"He said he is against the armadillo being named the official anything," she said.

The armadillos' last stand could come Saturday in the Senate. Ms. Hylton said it's on the 8 a.m. local calandar. Quick approval could give the measure enough time to make it back to the House for consideration of the change from "state mammal" to "recognized mascot."

The legislative session ends Monday.

"It's given us more grief than redistricting," Ms. Hylton joked.

Blanton denies taking liquor license payoffs

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former Gov. Ray Blanton took the witness stand in his conspiracy and extortion trial and denied taking payoffs for liquor licenses or telling officials who should get licenses.

But Blanton testified Wednesday in U.S. District Court that Clyde Edd Hood Jr., his former special assistant, gave a list of administration friends to a former director of the Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

And Blanton testified he told the commission that he would count on them to help his friends.

Blanton, Hood and Blanton's 1974 campaign manager, James Allen, are nearing the end of the trial, with testimony from Hood and Allen scheduled for today and Friday.

The defendants have pleaded innocent to charges of extortion, conspiracy and mail fraud.

Judge Bailey Brown told the jury, "I'd certainly think we would get it in your hands the early part of next week." The trial began April 20 and concerns 12 suburban Nashville liquor store licenses approved for Blanton friends April 23, 1976.

A flood of license applicaions pourd into the ABC after the state Supreme Court ruled that cities no longer could restrict liquor stores to downtown areas.

Asked by assistant U.S. attorney Bob Lynch if it came as a surprise that the licenses went to friends of the administration, Blanton replied, "It did not."

Allen received one, but Blanton said he learned this by reading about it in a newspaper. Another went to Jack Ham, a strong Blanton supporter who as chief government witness testified he paid $23,000 on a bank loan to Blanton as a payoff. Blanton denied he was paid off, although Ham "told me that he wanted a liquor store ... I referred him to the Alcoholic Beverage Comission."

Blanton said he never told Hood, Allen, the three-member ABC or any of its staff to approve any liquor license. But Blanton said, "I am sure that I charged the commission, as I did all boards and commissions when I swore them in, that all things being equal, I would count on them to help my friends."

Sometimes bristling at Lynch's questions, Blanton said Hyden asked Hood "to point out the friends of the administration." Blanton's one-day stint on the witness stand was his first public forum since he left office on Jan. 17, 1979.

Blanton said he more than likely discussed the Nashville licenses, individually and collectively, with Hood. He said he did not know several of those who received licenses — but it was Hood's job to know his supporters.

Smith plans prison policy changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, changing policies of the Carter administration, plans to play a less active role on behalf of inmates suing about overcrowding and other allegedly unconstitutional conditions in state and local prisons.

Attorney General William French Smith said Wednesday in a memo that the Justice Department will no longer attempt to impose federal prison standards on states and localities.

Smith said any remedies the department suggests to courts about prison conditions "should each be derived from the totality of circumstances at an individual penal institution, rather than from a predetermined set of minimum standards."

Shortly before leaving office, the Carter administration issued standards for federal prisons covering everything from cell size and grievance procedures to food and health conditions.

It said federal facilities were virtually in compliance with them and that states would be urged to attain the standards, which are more stringent than what courts have said are constitutionally required.

Smith said in a statement that under the new policy "the Bureau of Prisons will be able to provide the practical point of view of a prison manager but will be careful not to establish its own standards as the uncompromisable norm for the many varying conditions in state and local prisons and jails."

Federal officials have estimated that it would cost more than $10 billion for state and local facilities to meet a federal standard requiring 60 square feet of living space for each prisoner.

"The federal prisons must serve as models for the state and local prison systems," Smith said. "In this way the important objective of improving prison conditions can be fulfilled without a massive intrusion into state and local prison management that would come from imposing a single set of federal norms oblivious to local conditions."

Some 26 large penal systems have been sued by inmates charging that they are unconstitutionally overcrowded or otherwise denied prisoner rights. The Justice Department has joined as plaintiff in some suits, including one against the nation's largest system, the 31,000-inmate Texas system.

A federal law enacted last year gave the Justice Department more authority than ever to bring suits on behalf of prisoners denied rights in state and local prisons.

Smith, however, ordered the civil rights and criminal divisions and the Bureau of Prisons to consult with each other before the department takes any action in prisoners' rights cases.

In a speech to a police group Wednesday evening, Smith said this was formerly done but, "in more recent years, this salutory practice has fallen into disuse. As a result, the department has sometimes urged state standards in greater and more onerous detail than required by the Constitution. If there is to be meaningful respect for the principles of federalism, that kind of action must end."

The Texas case recently saw some shift in departmental position. The Carter administration had sought to bring the state system close to the federal standards.

But Deputy Attorney General Edward C. Schmults joined the state in an unsuccessful attempt to convince a federal judge to delay his ruling for 30-days to permit the Justice Department and state to negotiate a settlement of the case.

The judge, however, basically ordered Texas to do what the Justice Department had asked during the Carter administration.

Texas has 3,000 inmates who sleep on floors. The court ordered the state to stop housing three men to a cell by Aug. 1 and to attain single-celling by August 1983. As a result, Texas has been erecting tents in its prisons.

Activist sentenced

MOSCOW (AP) — A Ukrainian Jewish activist, Vladimir Kislik, has been sentenced to three years in a labor camp after being convicted of malicious hooliganism in Kiev, informed sources said today.

The 46-year-old physicist was arrested March 19 and charged with attacking a man and a woman at a bus stop in Kiev, the capital of the Ukraine. Kislik's friends said the charge was trumped up.

Kislik has been active in the Jewish emigration movement since 1973.

Compromise talks planned on bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas lawmakers will have compromise talks over a bill that would let Gov. Bill Clements dispense $18 million in anti-crime funds to local governments.

"We want this to be a non-political law enforcement fund not the governor's slush fund, said Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin.

The Senate refused Wednesday to approve the House-approved measure 17-14, and asked for a conference committee. Shortly afterwards the House agreed and the 10 negotiators began work on their differences.

Basically the measure would create a Criminal Justice Division to administer anti-crime grants to Texas law enforcement agencies which have been receiving money from state and federal sources.

"I think the governor has gone back on his word to the Senate," protested Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler.

McKnight said he, Sens. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, and Bill Meier, D-Euless, met with Clements early in the session to discuss substitution of a state program for the fading-out federal program. A state advisory committee would make recommendations to a State Funding Committee on who would receive grants.

The Senate passed the bill with the funding committee made up of the governor, lieutenant governor and comptroller. In the House, the bill was changed, with support from Clements, to let the governor alone dispense the grants.

"I recall very well the governor didn't want the attorney general (Mark White) on the funding committee but he said he would agree to the lieutenant governor and comptroller being on the committee with him," Brooks said.

"I talked with the governor today," Meier said, "and the governor told me that he does not remember making any agreement to include the lieutenant governor and comptroller and said if he did make that statement he would not honor it."

The decision on the funding committee is very important, Meier said, because it is the one who will determine which law enforcement groups in Texas get grants for help in their anti-crime activities.

Most of the state financing of the bill will come from an increase of $2.50 to $5 in the fee charged for each convictions in Texas courts. Meier estimated the fee would bring in about $18 million during the next two years.

SCA executives deny mafia link

WASHINGTON (AP) — Executives of one of the nation's largest waste disposal firms say charges the company is linked with organized crime are "unfounded, unwarranted, unsupported and untrue."

Thomas C. Viola, president of the Boston-based SCA Services Inc., told a House committee that allegations made by an informant for a New Jersey organized crime strike force were unsupported by either government or private investigations, including a Freedom of Information search of FBI files.

In testimony prepared for delivery today, Viola said references by informant Harold Kaufman to a "Viola family" of the mob were "particularly ludicrous."

"The Tom Viola family consists of my 75-year-old mother, my brother, two sisters, my pregnant wife, one son and three daughters," Viola said. "Any suggestion that these quiet, law-abiding individuals constitute a criminal enterprise is outrageous."

Viola and SCA Board Chairman John M. Fox were testifying today before the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee, which is exploring alleged mob involvement in the disposal of toxic wastes.

Others witnesses were scheduled to testify prior to Viola and Fox, but the subcommittee, citing security, refused to identify other witnesses in advance or to describe the nature of their testimony.

In testimony last December, with similar security precautions, Kaufman told the subcommittee under oath that organized crime dominates the waste disposal business in New Jersey and is rapidly moving into the field of toxic chemical disposal.

Kaufman said the mob has found toxic chemicals to be a lucrative business. Legitimate industries will pay thousands of dollars for proper disposal of deadly chemical wastes, he said, but corrupt disposal firms can simply dump the wastes on lonely roads or at ordinary landfills and pocket the premium pay.

During his testimony, Kaufman implicated SCA — a $230 million conglomerate traded on the New York Stock Exchange — as having close ties with organized crime. Although he gave few details, he said SCA owns "some of the toughest organized crime companies in the world" and was connected with two New Jersey murders.

Viola bitterly denied the charges. "When your investigation is complete, I'm sure you will come to recognize Mr. Kaufman's allegations for what they are: unfounded, unwarranted, unsupported and untrue," he said.

He said Kaufman "offered absolutely no support at the hearing for any of his claims. He did not have any documents or any other tangible evidence. ... He simply offered vague allegations and speculations regarding long unsolved crimes."

The SCA president charged that Kaufman was "a life-long criminal" with more than 40 convictions, including five separate armed bank robberies.

"How can you possibly credit his claims against the sworn testimony of the president of a New York Stock Exchange company who has never been convicted in his life and about whom the FBI has not a single adverse entry?" Viola asked the panel.

Board Chairman Fox, who also sits on the board of IBM Corp., said outside directors of SCA responded to the December charges by establishing an independent investigations committee and hiring an outside special counsel with full access to all company files.

Two gunned down in restaurant

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A man identified as a member of the "Greek mob" and a woman were killed by two masked men who opened fire with handguns inside a crowded restaurant, police said.

The Wednesday night shooting occurred just one day after the decomposed body of Harry M. Peetros, 52, identified as a leading member of the area's Greek mob, was found stuffed into the trunk of his car in suburban Delaware County.

"It's all under investigation, as far as to whether there is any connection,' said police Det. Jack Mulligan.

The assailants fired into a group of eight diners seated at a table in the front of the Meletis Restaurant, and then fled by car, police said.

Steven Bouras, 50, died from a bullet wound to the forehead, and Jannette Curro, 54, from gunshot wounds to the head and neck, police said.

The 1980 Pennsylvania Crime Commission report described Bouras as a member of the Greek mob who was in frequent contact with an associate of reputed Philadelphia mob boss Angelo Bruno.

Bruno was fatally shot outside his home last year.

About 30 patrons and employees were in the south Philadelphia restaurant when the shooting occurred, police said. The restaurant, which specialized in Greek cuisine, opened last month.

Marcy Kohler, a barmaid, said the two men went directly to the table where the victims were seated.

One of the men wore a ski mask, while the other's face was concealed by a woolen scarf, Ms. Kohler said.

"All you could see was their eyes," she said. "They didn't say a word. They just opened the door, didn't even shut it, and started shooting."

The gunshots sent patrons scurrying for cover. Ms. Kohler said she screamed, dropped behind the bar, pulling a telephone down with her to call police.

Also at the table with the victims were Raymond "Long John" Martorano, 54, a Bruno associate, and ex-disc jockey Jerry Blavat, Detective Sgt. Robert Snyder said. Blavat served as a doorman at Bruno's funeral.

Millionaire Telex chairman slain at country club

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Roger Wheeler, the millionaire chairman of Telex Corp., had just finished a round of golf at an exclusive country club and was leaving in his car when someone shot him in the face at close range, killing him, officials say.

Wheeler

The gunman, who police said wielded a long-barreled, large-caliber handgun, jumped into a car occupied by at least one other man and sped off, said Police Sgt. Larry Green.

Police and friends were baffled after the Wednesday shooting at Southern Hills Country Club. There was no reason to believe robbery was the motive, police said.

Wheeler was alone in the car, they said.

"It is unexplainable at this point," said Mrs. Lester Nienhuis, a close family friend. "There was ... no reason to feel there was any danger. Mrs. Wheeler was certainly not aware of any. Whether he was, we'll never know."

Wheeler's wife, Patricia, was treated for shock at a Tulsa hospital. The couple's four sons and one daughter no longer live at home.

Mrs. Nienhuis said Wheeler, 55, had played a round of golf with a regular foursome and was leaving the club. He was seated in his luxury car in the country club parking lot. A car pulled up to block his car and then the gunmen truck, authorities said.

Club members who saw the shooting — most of them youngsters at the swimming pool about 60 yards away — either refused comment or were taken to police headquarters for questioning.

Green said a witness supplied a partial license number, and the plates were thought to have originated near Duncan, in southern Oklahoma.

"It's a big mystery," Mrs. Nienhuis said. "It's such a waste. He was a very vital person. He's done a lot for the community and a lot for his church." Wheeler was described as a devout Presbyterian.

Jack Bailey, vice president and general counsel of Telex, described Wheeler as a "very mild-mannered guy. He just didn't like to talk to the press. He didn't like to have his affairs in the press."

Bailey said he had no clue to the motive, but "we don't think it has anything to do with Telex."

"We don't know who did it right now. And we don't know why," Green said.

Wheeler was a former electro-chemical engineer who started his first business when he was 14. Telex, which makes computer terminals, tape decks and other electronic items, had 1980 sales of $186.49 million.

Wheeler also owned seven companies dealing in resources ranging from oil to magnesium.

In 1979, he paid $50 million for Miami-based World Jai-Alai Inc., which has Florida frontons in Miami, Tampa, Ocala and Fort Pierce and another fronton in Hartford, Conn. He told The Miami Herald at the time of the purchase that he had never seen a jai-alai game and had "mixed emotions" about the purchase for philosophical reasons.

Wheeler rarely granted interviews and told a Miami reporter in a 1979 interview he was worried newspaper interviews would draw the interest of kidnappers.

"What would I gain by an interview like this in Tulsa? I have enough golf buddies. It doesn't make me a dime," he said. "You're exposing yourself to trouble."

Wheeler employed several former FBI agents, and asked that it be noted in the story printed after the interview.

"I feel comfortable surrounded by FBI types," he said. "We have six in the company here."

But Richard Donovan, president of World Jai-Alai, said the former agents apparently weren't employed to protect Wheeler.

"I guess I've known Roger Wheeler for going on five years, and I've never known him to have a bodyguard with him," he said.

Elderly patient accused of being Nazi

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A nrsing-home paient accused of advising Adolf Eichmann on the persecution of Jews in Nazi Germany says he worked for American intelligence during the war and will fight the government's attempt to strip him of citizenship.

The Justice Department filed a three-part civil complaint in Sacramento on Wednesday against Otto Albrecht Alfred von Bolschwing, 71, accusing him of hiding his membership in the Nazi Party and the elite Nazi SS corps when he obtained American citizenship 22 years ago in New York City.

The Justice Department's Office of Special Investigations, which specializes in tracking down Nazi war criminals in the United States, says von Bolschwing was a Nazi SS captain in World War II and served as an adviser to the intelligence departments of the SS and Gestapo.

"I will respond to it (the complaint) in court," von Bolschwing said in a telephone interview. "It's not true. I never served in the SS or Gestapo or SD. I did serve in the OSS for the Americans, and I did parachute into Austria."

The government claims von Bolschwing advocated "the use of physical intimidation against Jews and the use of anti-Jewish propaganda to achieve the forced emigration of all Jews from Germany."

If the courts determine von Bolschwing concealed his affiliation with the Nazi groups, which were outlawed by the Allies following World War II, he could lose his citizenship and face deportation.

But Agnes von Bolschwing, 73, who married von Bolschwing 16 months ago, said her husband "was a double agent (for the Americans) in the Tyrol directing Allied operations behind the lines at that time."

"He's such a special guy," she said, weeping, after first learning of the federal action from a reporter. "We were hoping for a normal married life — he's such a wonderful person."

She said her husband, a retired "international consultant," has been in a nearby nursing home since February suffering from a variety of age-related ailments "and is getting worse and worse."

According to the U.S. authorities, von Bolschwing joined the Allgemeine (General) SS, an elite Nazi unit, in 1940 and rose to the rank of captain the next year.

The government said he was an official of the SD, the intelligence arm of the SS, from 1934 until 1941. His wife, however, said Wednesday that Bolschwing came to the United States in 1938, then returned to Germany as a lieutenant colonel for the Office of Strategic Services, the forerunner of the modern Central Intelligence Agency.

From 1937 to 1939, the government said, von Bolschwing was an employee of Office II 112 of the SD and "provided information and advice to the SD and in particularly to Adolf Eichmann.

Polaroid has new sensation

NEW YORK (AP) — Polaroid Corp. has again stunned the photo industry with a new development — a color film and camera that offers the greatest color sensitivity now available. Industry analysts now question whether the new gadget can boost flagging camera sales.

The new "Instant 600 System," introduced Wednesday to 200 securities analysts, offers a film with an ASA rating of 600 — four times faster, or more sensitive, than Polaroid's Time Zero film and 50 percent faster than 35mm color film now on the market.

Peter Kleim, Polaroid's vice president for research, said the new system offers more natural colors and clear, sharp pictures in a greater range of lighting conditions.

The new system, to be marketed as the "Sun Camera," has a more powerful battery built into the film pack to power all functions of the camera, including the strobe unit. Polaroid officials emphasized consumers would not have to buy separate batteries as they do with other cameras.

As with Polaroid's SX-70, the new cameras eject a photograph that develops outside the camera. Similar in appearance to the SX-70, the cameras will list for $95 and $70. SX-70 cameras currently list for $35 to $189.

But reaction to the announcement was mixed.

Ma Bell's appeal denied

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — More than four million Texans will be divvying up $22.5 million in refunds and paying less for talking on the phone after the Texas Supreme Court rejected Southwestern Bell's rate appeal.

Jon Dee Lawrence, Bell general attorney for Texas, says the phone company will begin charging lower rates today and that the lower rates "will be reflected on bills dated within the next several days."

"We also will immediately begin preparations to refund about $22.5 million in higher rates charged under bond," he said. "The first refunds will appear on customer bills probably in mid-July. ... The refunds primarily will be in the form of credits on customer bills. The refunds will include 10 percent interest for the time the higher rates have been charged."

The Supreme Court rejected the Southwestern Bell rate appeal Wednesday. Bell had asked the court May 20 to block a Public Utility Commission rate order lower than the increase Bell already had started charging.

The PUC order would allow Bell to raise rates by $114.3 million, about $38 million less than the rates Bell put into effect in November.

Bell had asked for a hike of $326 million in its original application in July 1980.

On Feb. 28 the PUC ordered the company to implement the commission's lower rates and start making refunds. The trial court refused to issue an injunction, and on May 6 the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals here upheld the trial court.

Bell asked the Supreme Court to reverse the appeals court and to let the company continue charging the higher rates under bond until the trial court has decided the company's case against the PUC.

"We're disappointed that the Supreme Court did not see fit to allow us to continue rates under bond," said Lawrence.

Jaycees take top awards at convention

The Midland Jaycees received several top awards at the Texas Jaycees state convention held recently in San Antonio. Attending were more than 20 Midland members.

The Midland organization was recognized as the most outstanding chapter in the state by receiving the Henry Gissenbier Memorial Trophy.

Several Midlanders received Jakes, which are awarded to outstanding individual Jaycees and Jaycees projects.

Recipients were Guy McCrary, outstanding local vice president; and Jim Morris, outstanding local director. Other Jakes were given for chapter management, individual development and community action.

Alan Hale received the George O. Wilson Memorial Award as outstanding local president. He was nominated for the national Local President of the Year Award, which will be selected by the U.S. Jaycees.

Midland chapter received awards for recruitment and several first places for individual projects conducted in the community last year.

Gunmen give up, release bar patrons

DETROIT (AP) — Two gunmen held as many as 18 patrons hostage in a Detroit bar for up to six hours after police responding to a silent alarm shot a third robber as the gang tried to escape, police said.

One of the gunmen walked out of the bar at 6:15 a.m. EDT after police repeatedly shouted to him over a bullhorn to "throw down your guns and come out with your hands up."

After talking with the gunman, Sgt. William Presley, 37, volunteered to enter the bar and arrest the second gunman. Presley said he arrested him after a brief struggle. Police found a sawed-off shotgun and two handguns.

The two gunmen may have taken about 18 hostages at one point, said Deputy Chief Joseph Areeda, but nearly all were released before the gunmen were arrested.

Two hostages walked out of the bar just before the two gunmen were arrested. Shortly before that, a third hostage walked out, telling police he had been sleeping on the floor, awoke and walked out without being challenged.

"These things turn out to be a matter of time," said Areeda. "You just wait them out."

One of the gunmen, an unidentified 19-year-old man, was wounded in the chest and stomach during an exchange of gunfire with police, Lt. Fred Williams said. He dropped a bag of money outside the bar, Areeda said.

The gunman was in serious condition at Mount Carmel Hospital, according to a nurse in the emergency room who refused to identify herself.

At least three gunmen entered Mister C's Lounge in northwest Detroit shortly after midnight today, announced a holdup and demanded money, Williams said. James Bannon, executive deputy police chief, said there may have been a fourth robber who escaped.

Police arrived quickly after a silent alarm was triggered and exchanged shots with the gunmen, he said.

Bannon said the gunmen at no time threatened the hostages. Toward the end of the siege, police refused to comply with the robbers' request for a car.

"They don't want to hurt nobody," the bartender told police by telephone at one point during the standoff. "Back off and let these guys out of here." The unidentified bartender added that the gunmen promised not to hurt anyone "and so far they haven't."

Three jailed in alleged bomb plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three more persons have been arrested in connection with an alleged Ku Klux Klan plot to bomb a synagogue, TV transmitting tower and Jewish-owned pawnshops in Nashville, the U.S. Bureau Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms announced today.

The arrests of two Tennessee men and an Alabaman late Wednesday night brought to six the number of persons charged in the still-developing case, according to G.R. Dickerson, director of the agency.

"The investigation continues and other arrests may be made," Dickerson said, adding that all arrests resulted from information supplied by an informant.

He identified the latest three suspects as David B. Garrett, 31, of Lacey's Springs, Ala.; Bobby Joe Norton, 32, of Murfreesboro, Tenn.; and James Nellums, 40, of LaVergne, Tenn.

They were being held pending bond hearings this morning in Huntsville, Ala., and Nashville, Dickerson said.

All six suspects are believed to be members of the Confederate Vigilante Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, according to Dickerson.

The Nashville case is the second such alleged KKK plot reported by the bureau in a week.

On May 21, 10 persons were arrested in Maryland and Delaware for allegedly plotting to bomb the suburban Baltimore meeting place of a branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"I have no reason at this time to connect the two cases," Dickerson said.

On Wednesday, Charles Lowe, a bureau agent in Tennessee, said that Bob Vance, 28, of Nashville approached authorities two weeks ago with information about the alleged bomb plot there.

Lowe testified at the bond hearing for the first three suspects.

U.S. Magistrate Kent Sandidge III set bond at $150,000 each for Gladys Girgenti, 50, of Madison, Tenn., and Charles Boyer, 28, of Nashville. Bond of $100,000 was set for William C. Foutch, 48, of Madison.

Authorities said the three were charged with possession of an explosive device, manufacturing a bomb, conspiracy to bomb a building and aiding and abetting a criminal conspiracy.

Lowe said Vance told agents that he, Mrs. Girgenti, Boyer and Foutch attended a meeting May 10 at Mrs. Girgenti's home to make plans to bomb The Temple, a synagogue.

Mrs. Girgenti and Boyer, accompanied by the informant, were arrested Monday on The Temple grounds, according to Lowe, who said Foutch was not present because of personal problems.

Two get scholarships from Angelo State

SAN ANGELO — Two Midlanders are recipients of scholarships for the 1981-82 academic year at Angelo State University.

Melinda Hohenberger, a graduate of Lee High School in Midland, will receive a $1,000 Carr Academic Scholarship, while Jacqueline Toller will receive a $250 Millard Cope Scholarship for journalism study.

The Carr stipend has been awarded to Ms. Hohenberger on the basis of her outstanding academic record and personal achievements through funds provided by the Robert G. Carr and Nona K. Carr Scholarship Foundation.

Ms. Hohenberger, who plans to major in education as ASU, has been active in the honor society, FHA and basketball events. She also served as drum major.

Ms. Toller, a December graduation candidate, will serve as editor of the Ram Page for the fall semester. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Toller of Midland.

87,000 hours spent on child deaths cases

ATLANTA (AP) — Authorities have not determined how or why the 28 young blacks killed in Atlanta were selected, but police are not stumped, Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown says.

Although members of a special police task force have devoted 86,739 hours in 10 months to the case without solving it, Brown said Wednesday, "I would not agree with the characterization that we are stumped."

Brown conceded, however, that the task force, which started last July with a handful of Atlanta officers and has been expanded since to include more than 90 officers from Atlanta and other metro police agencies, has not yet determined how or why the victims are selected.

"There is no evidence to suggest that someone is driving a car, jumping out and grabbing people (at random)," Brown told reporters at a weekly briefing session on Wednesday.

The first 21 victims in the string dating back to July 1979 were children, ranging in age from 7 to 17. "Now we have some adults," Brown noted, "but we find, for example, that there were certain characteristics of at least four of the adults that fit the children as well — their physical stature, et cetera."

The 28th victim, however, was 27-year-old Nathaniel Cater, whose body was pulled Sunday from the Chattahoochee River. Cater had been asphyxiated, like at least 16 other victims, but the young man, at 5-foot-10, 150 pounds, was older and larger than any other victims.

Of that case, Brown said, "We are still in the process of conducting an investigation to make some determination of what relationships the case would have with the other cases."

Meanwhile, Ella Wilson said Wednesday her slain 7-year-old daughter Latonya, the youngest victim on the task force's list, knew Cater.

Mrs. Wilson said her family met Cater when they moved in June 1980 to an apartment building where Cater lived at the time.

Two weeks later, Latonya reportedly was abducted from the Wilson apartment in the middle of the night. Her body was found last fall by volunteers searching the northwest Atlanta neighborhood. The cause of death was not determined.

"I met him after I moved over there. He seemed to be a nice, friendly person," she said. "It's possible it's just a coincidence, but I don't know. I just really don't understand what's happening. This guy wasn't retarded or nothing."

Five of the last seven victims were over the age of 20, but the other adult victims were smaller in stature than Cater and had either a mental difficulty or physical attribute that might have made them appear as teen-agers. Cater, however, was smart enough to skip a grade in grammar school, according to his brother.

Also during Wednesday's press briefing, Brown said the task force members had devoted "approximately 86,739 regular and overtime hours" to solving the cases, including 14,667 regular hours and 712 overtime hours during the month of April alone.

Brown said the city would not, despite suggestions from some area police officials, use some of the $1.5 million in federal money pledged to the probe to pay overtime to officers from other agencies involved in the investigation. He said the money pays for "support services" that are available to all agents on the case.

Measles outbreak strikes Harris County children

HOUSTON (AP) — Four more children came down with measles Wednesday, bringing the list of victims in Harris County to 48 so far this year. Health officials said called it a "sizeable outbreak."

There were 29 cases in the county in all of 1980. The current outbreak began about two months ago.

Since then, city health officials have opened 40 special measles outbreak control clinics to give inoculations in public schools and day care centers, including nine new clinics opened in the past week.

"Even though most schools will be starting summer vacations this week, (we) will continue our aggressive efforts to stop this sizeable outbreak from spreading," said Dean Mason, immunization administrator of the City Health Department.

He said if the outbreak continues, clinics will be set up in places besides schools and nurseries. "We'll go to recreational centers, parks, swimming pools, and other places to protect those people considered at high risk for measles," he said.

The newest cases of red measles or rubeola struck three pre-school-age boys and an 11-year-old girl. Nearly a fifth of this year's cases have required hospitalization, and two children suffered pneumonia as a complication, Mason said.

Defense sees Brilab witness as villain

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Defense strategy for a former state official accused of taking a bribe from a reputed Mafia boss appears to be an effort to paint FBI informant Joseph Hauser as a villain. There's a lot to work with.

So far, jurors have heard only tape recordings of Hauser's rumbling bass voice — sometimes whining, often dishing out the most outrageous flattery.

The tapes make up most of the prosecution's evidence in the Louisiana end of a widespread investigation called Brilab.

Hauser, the slick, twice-convicted insurance con man, is just a name and a voice thus far to the jury in the eight-week-old trial of reputed Mafia don Carlos Marcello, former Commissioner of Administration Charles Roemer and three others.

A few preliminary licks in the effort to discredit Hauser were struck Wednesday during cross examination of Los Angeles FBI agent Michael Wacks, one of two agents who worked with Hauser and posed as crooked insurance salesmen.

With Hauser as their contact man, they traveled around during 1979, ready to offer bribes in exchange for insurance contracts — and secretly recording everything possible.

The trail led to Marcello, in New Orleans. The prosecution says Marcello then took over as the director of a bribery conspiracy that reached Roemer.

The others on trial with the 71-year-old "Little Man" Marcello in the bribery and racketeering case include I. Irving Davidson, 59, a Washington "arranger," Vincent Marinello, 43, of New Orleans, and Aubrey Young, 58, of Baton Rouge.

Noting that Hauser stole $5 million in a previous insurance scam involving the Teamsters Central States Pension Fund, Fawer asked Wacks if he had not been warned that as an undercover man he would practically be living with "a thief of the greatest magnitude."

No, said Wacks, he was simply told that Hauser was an insurance swindler.

Wacks also denied that he was warned that Hauser, now serving a 32-month prison term, "is a notorious liar."

Fawer woried the "lia" issue at some length, over prosecution objections, arguing that he was entitld to establis that the FBI relied at times on the word of a man that only a fool would trust.

The dossier on Hauser includes the fact that he once tried to fake a Brilab conversation, talking into the concealed tape recorder as though Marcello was with him, when actually he was alone.

When the tape was played earlier in the trial, U.S. District Judge Morey Sear referred to it as the "bathroom soliloquy."

"He was making up an incriminating conversation, was he not?" Fawer asked in cross examination Wednesday. Wacks refused to agree to "incriminating" but acknowledged that Hauser was trying to pull a fast one.

The phony tape was detected. Hauser was warned never to do anything like that again, Wacks said. However, he testified that Hauser was suspected of trying the trick one more time.

"It was difficult to tell," said Wacks. "He was either talking to himself or he was talking to Marcello." He added that, insofar as he knew, the tape was not among those played for the jury.

And Marcello sat stony faced in court as he listened to a tape in which Hauser exclaims: "Carlos! Would I have secrets from you! I have no secrets from you, Carlos!"

Reagan tells graduating cadets they'll be getting higher salary

NEW YORK (AP) — It was every worker's fantasy: the boss gets up and tells everyone they'll be getting a well-deserved raise.

This time, the scene was West Point and the boss telling the cadets they should have a higher salary was the commander in chief.

"You deserve better than a bare subsistence level of pay," President Reagan told the graduating class of 906 in his address at the military academy Wednesday morning.

The just-commissioned second lieutenants cheered. After all, their base pay will be $11,091.60, plus housing and other benefits. They'd earn about $5,000 a year more if they decided to become school librarians instead and more than $13,000 more if they went into chemical engineering.

Offers like that go to other college graduates with bachelor's degrees, not military officers. But the Reagan administration vows to sweeten things a bit, by proposing a 5.3 percent increase for July and a 9.1 percent raise for October.

"May I say that we intend that you shall find better working conditions, tools adequate to the tasks you're expected to perform and pay somewhat more commensurate with the responsibilities you assume than has been the case in recent years," Reagan told the graduates.

But even with steady raises and a climb up the ranks of the military, the cadets can't have the same financial expectations as the first-year intern who might only be paid $13,600 to $16,000 to start, but whose salary might be 10 times as much in 10 years.

According to the "salary survey" of the College Placement Council Inc., engineers topped the list of high starting wages for jobs offered to college students earning BAs.

The survey, which the Council said was incomplete and would be published in July, was based on offers to college students submitted throughout the year by 184 placement officers at 161 colleges and universities in the United States.

Chemical engineers averaged starting salaries of $24,276; mechanical engineers were offered average starting salaries of $22,584; electrical engineers, $22,104 and civil engineers began at $20,952.

The survey found that those entering accounting were offered starting salaries of $16,956, while those preferring general business began at $15,948.

Computer sciences had starting salaries of $19,968 and positions in physical and earth sciences started at $21,912.

David Harrop, who pried loose the best-kept financial secrets of workers from doctors to plumbers, corporate executives to call girls, gives some starting salaries for college graduates with bachelor's degrees in his book, "America's Paychecks."

For example, a reseacher or assistant to the editor at Newsweek or Time was paid $14,000 to start in 1979. The average elementary school teacher started at $16,917, while school counselors earned an average of $17,698.

The beginning salary for a radio or television announcer was $14,000. Assistant buyers in department stores earned $18,000 a year. Media buyers — those who purchase ad space in newspapers or on television or radio — started at $16,000.

Company escapes indictment

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal grand jury ended its term Wednesday without issuing any indictments in the massive PCB contamination of a field in a Houston suburb.

The Environmental Protection Agency asked the U.S. Attorney nearly a year ago to seek criminal charges against Gulf Electroquip Inc. in the polychlorinated biphenyls case.

Under EPA supervision, Gulf Electroquip eventually sent more than 100 truckloads of contaminated soil to an authorized landfill in Alabama.

PCBs are rated extremely hazardous to to human health and the environment. They were once widely used as insulating fluid in electrical equipment.

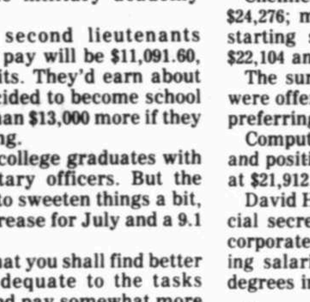

Diana Dutton, general counsel for the regional office of the EPA, said the agency will probably consider further administrative action against the electrical equipment firm.

The EPA can impose civil penalties of as much as $25,000 a day for PCB violations.

Gulf Electroquip was already facing a $64,800 civil penalty when EPA investigators, acting on a tip, found four large transformers leaking PCBs into the field. The firm owned the 44-acre tract.

What's cooking?

Michael Towne

By LOREN BERGER
Lifestyle Writer

When Michael Towne, 2438 Whitmire, turned 30 earlier this year, he decided to mark the event by shunning a junk food existence and adopting a back-to-basics living style which brought an end to drive-through lunches and dinners.

As a newly-converted vegetarian, Michael, started on his meatless course with a 22-day fast, living only on herbs and large quantities of lemon juice to cleanse his system of impurities. "It was like a breath of fresh air," he says.

After the fast, Michael made less trips to the grocery store and began to grow his own food by sprouting garbanzo beans, alfalfa sprouts, lentils and bean sprouts in cylindrical containers which he keeps stocked on his pantry shelves.

"I'm not really a staunch advocate of vegetarianism," he says. "It's not for everybody. But, it donned on me when I was reading medical reports that it wasn't bad not to eat meat and now I just don't have a craving for it anymore."

For those who are die-hard vegetarians or would just like a change of pace from the standard meal of meat and potatoes, Michael suggests the "Poor Man's Potpourri" recipe as a main course which can be supplemented with white wine, bread and a side dish of vegetables.

"The meal is especially good for hot days," Michael says. "It's light and easy to throw together and filling. But, it doesn't leave you lying on the floor afterward, groaning, 'Oh, God, I wish I hadn't eaten so much.'"

POOR MAN'S POTPOURRI

2 cups of brown long grain rice or wild rice
1 can of condensed golden mushroom soup
2 cups of fresh broccoli or spinach, diced or whole
2 cups of grated swiss or cheddar cheese
1 cup of blanched almonds or sesame seeds
2 cups of alfalfa sprouts, garbanzo beans and bean sprouts
2 tablespoons of tarragon

Boil rice in 4 cups of water. Combine condensed golden mushroom soup, tarragon and rice in bowl and spread half of the mixture in thin layer over bottom of lightly greased 8" casserole dish. Lightly steam broccoli or spinach and layer over rice. Spread one cup of grated cheese over vegetables and add nuts if desired. Spread alfalfa sprouts, garbanzo beans and bean sprouts in thin layer and top with remaining rice mixture and cheese.

Bake dish at 350 degrees F. in oven for 10-15 minutes or until cheese is melted.

Serves 4 to 6.

"The recipe is called 'Poor Man's Potpourri' because it can be built around anything that's available," Michael says. He suggests cooks follow the basic guidelines but are free to select any vegetable or cheese of their own preference. "Your imagination is all that limits you."

DEAR ABBY

Fear of witches not to be ignored

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I don't know which appalls me more — your patronizing tone, or your completely incorrect answer to E. IN PHILADELPHIA, who complained of being under the control of "some kind of witch." You give me the impression you've already decided that "they ain't no sich animal" as hexes and spiritual oppression. The danger with such an attitude is that if just possibly there is such a thing, you'll completely ignore the only right answer.

You should have advised E. to find a good Bible-believing minister and tell him or her the problem. If it really is only in E.'s mind, the minister could send him to a good psychiatrist. But if it's a spiritual problem instead, there isn't a psychiatrist in the whole world who can do a thing.

Sorry, Abby. You blew it. — OKINAWA

DEAR OKINAWA: A "good Bible-believing minister" may be an authority on spiritual matters, but he isn't qualified to evaluate one's mental condition. That's a psychiatrist's job, and that's why I sent E. to a psychiatrist.

If the psychiatrist finds E. to be mentally sound, then E. should find a person of deep religious faith and conviction who will call upon God to deliver him (or her) from the clutches of evil.

DEAR ABBY: Today a young man in his 20s came into our office and applied for a job. We always hire a few extra people for the summer season. He won't get a job. His application went into the wastebasket as soon as he left.

He misspelled the town he lives in, the school he attended and the month he was born, plus several other words. His penmanship was so bad the manager couldn't figure out his last name or telephone number.

Considering the unemployment in this area, we're sure he needs a job. He is married and the father of one. I hope the young people who read this letter will make a special effort in school or on their own to improve the skills that will get them jobs. We don't have time to teach a high school graduate how to spell and write. Even starting at the bottom is better than no job at all. — CONCERNED IN IDAHO

DEAR CONCERNED: Well said. Students?

DEAR ABBY: What can be done about a devout cheapskate? There are several people in our office, and we all take turns bringing in doughnuts or other pastries for breakfast. One person always helps himself without being invited, but he never brings in a thing. Also, when there's an office party and everyone either brings a dish or contributes toward phe purchase of an item, he never has "change," or he has some other excuse, but he always shows up to eat.

It's embarrassing to have to ask him for the money, so most of the time he gets by without paying at all. By the way, he is in a higher position than the rest of us and makes at least twice the salary we do.

This must be a problem in many offices. What is the solution? — IN THE HOLE IN LOUISVILLE

DEAR IN THE HOLE: The solution is for SOMEBODY to ask old freeloader for his fair share of the doughnuts, pastries or whatever. If nobody has the courage to corner him, don't blame El Cheapo for getting away Scotch-free.

CONFIDENTIAL TO GEORGE IN ST. LOUIS: WORK is the yeast that raises the kind of dough you're looking for.

Study says diabetics can reduce birth defects

BOSTON (AP) — Birth defects are a major hazard when diabetic women become pregnant, but this danger may be substantially reduced if they carefully control their disease during the first weeks after conception, a study shows.

Doctors at the Joslin Diabetes Center in Boston discovered that almost all the diabetic mothers who delivered deformed babies had high blood sugar in the first weeks of their pregnancy.

"What this means for a woman considering pregnancy is that if she can get in good control of her diabetes before she conceives, or at least very soon thereafter, the incidence of birth defects could be markedly reduced," said Dr. John W. Hare, who directed the study.

Agriculturists urged to grow horseradish

By LINDA DUFFIELD
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — The horseradish that adds zing to a corned beef on rye can also put cash in a farmer's pocket, according to a spokesman for the Maryland Department of Agriculture.

In an effort to increase production of the horseradish root in Maryland, Brad Powers of the department's marketing division has spent two years telling farmers in the state about the value of growing the white-flowered herb on a few acres of land.

"We are talking in terms of loosely $1,000 an acre after expenses, not counting labor," said Powers of the possible financial reward of growing horseradish as an alternative crop.

Despite that fact, before the agriculture department got involved, there were virtually no farmers in the state who regularly grew horseradish, he said. The exceptions were a few Amish farmers who sought an alternative crop to tobacco because of the possible health hazards connected with that crop.

By last year, about 30 farmers in the state — most them from southern Maryland — had begun to grow horseradish, according to Powers. He said that number could possibly triple by the end of the year.

For the most part, farmers who are growing horseradish are doing so on "relatively small acreage," noted Powers. The largest horseradish plot in the state is about 20 acres, with most covering between one and 10 acres, he said.

The small acreage planted in horseradish is probably linked to the sizeable amount of hand labor involved in harvesting the crop, Powers indicated.

But he pointed out there are also advantages to growing horseradish.

For instance, he said, about 500 pounds of horseradish root can be planted on an acre of sandy loam soil, and will yield from 6,000 to 8,000 pounds of the root.

Famed photographer clicks off on politics

NEW YORK (AP) — Nature photographer Ansel Adams, who has scaled the peaks and trails in Yosemite National Park, is facing another uphill climb: he's leading a campaign to oust Interior Secretary James Watt.

"This man is halting 100 years of growth of the national park system, halting two decades of progress in protecting areas near major cities," says Adams, interviewed in this week's edition of People magazine.

The Sierra Club, acting on Adams' suggestion, has collected more than 80,000 signatures in five weeks on a petition calling for Watt's removal.

The 79-year-old landscape photographer, who was awarded a Presidential Medal of Freedom last year, recently refused to take President Reagan's picture for a magazine because of his choice of Watt as Interior head.

"I don't like Reagan," said Adams. "I can't ignore my feelings and just come down and make a pretty picture."

Poultry prices all-time low

U.S. consumers often complain about rising inflation and high food prices, but poultry prices are lower than those in most other countries.

"Even with grocery prices soaring, food takes a smaller bit out of pocketbooks in the U.S. than in any other country," said Dr. Dave Mellor, poultry marketing specialist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

In early 1980, poultry prices were low because of large supplies. These low prices combined with mid-summer signs of rising feed costs led poultry producers to begin cutting back their flocks. These cuts now mean higher poultry prices, Mellor explained.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Bag laundry for washing machine

DEAR HELOISE:

If you dislike washing by hand, and don't have a gentle cycle on your washing machine, make a handy little laundry bag to go right into the washing machine.

Take an old T-shirt and stitch up the bottom and sleeves. Thread a drawstring through the neck and you've got a bag for washing pantyhose, lingerie, delicate blouses, assorted socks, sweaters, etc.

No tangled straps, knotted pantyhose, or lost socks. Simple, huh? — Mrs. Vernon

+ + +

I'll say! That would be a handy thing for each kid to use to gather up his or her own washing on wash day. — Heloise

HANDY REMINDER

Dear Heloise: I use my pocketbook as a reminder instead of the old string-around-the-finger trick.

Since my car keys are always in my pocketbook, I never leave the house without it.

So...if I'm taking something out of the fridge with me. I place my pocketbook on the handle of the refrigerator to remind me.

Same goes if something is in the oven that I'm taking to a luncheon, or such, my purse is sitting in front of the stove.

This has saved me many a trip back home for forgotton items. — N.A.H.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: Thank heaven for bedroom doors — especially if that room belongs to a teenager!

All you have to do is just close the door and you don't have to look at all that mess.

I've discovered if I can't see it, it doesn't bother me as much. — Learning

DRAINING TUNA

Dear Heloise: A quick and simple way to drain the oil off of canned tuna fish is with a potato masher.

Just insert the masher into the opened can of tuna, pressing against the tuna while pouring off the oil. — Leslie Smith

EXTENSION CORDS

Dear Heloise: I put two or three little cup hooks in the back of my television set and stereo.

The extra lengths of cord are draped over these hooks, thus keeping them off the floor and out of the way when vacuuming.

Looks much neater as the cords are not strung out all over the floor. — Laverne

SAFETY FIRST

Dear Heloise: I use an empty matchbook cover to hold razor blades in my sewing basket.

The blade slips down inside where the matches were orginally, and the cover folds down over the blade.

The blade's edge is safely tucked away and no more cut fingers from reaching down into the basket. — Jenny Leigh

New zucchini main dinner dish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

My young friend Christy Pines, who is getting married soon, is rehearsing her cooking. Recently she had a supper party for six.

Christy and her friends are, for the most part, vegetarians. When I asked her what she served for the supper-party main dish, she told me she had adapted a recipe from the April 1981 issue of Cuisine magazine. It is made with zucchini plus other vegetables and has a creamy ricotta topping. Christy accompanied it with buttered egg noodles flavored with minced fresh dill. She also served a salad Cuisine recommended to go with the zucchini dish. For dessert a friend brought an apple pie.

Christy made two of the main dishes, so each of the six eaters could have "seconds," but she said the double offering would have served eight because there was some left over.

We tried it at our house and found Christy's zucchini discovery delightful.

ZUCCHINI RICOTTA MAIN DISH

28-ounce can whole peeled Italian plum tomatoes
4 tablespoons unsalted or slightly salted butter
1 tablespoon olive oil
¾ pound zucchini (ends trimmed, unpeeled and sliced ¼-inch thick to make about 3 cups)
¾ pound (about) onion (chopped medium-fine to make about 1½ cups)
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ teaspoon crushed dried basil leaves
Pinch of ground or freshly grated nutmeg
Salt and pepper to taste
2 large eggs
1 cup ricotta cheese, sieved
1 cup heavy cream
¾ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Turn the tomatoes into a wide-mesh strainer to drain; with a kitchen scissors quarter each; continue to drain until there is 1¾ cups juice. Use juice in some other dish. Reserve tomatoes.

In a 12-inch skillet over medium heat, heat 2 tablespoons of the butter and the olive oil until the foam subsides; add the zucchini and cook, stirring several times, until tender-crisp — 5 to 7 minutes. With a slotted spoon, remove zucchini to brown paper or paper toweling to drain; reserve.

Over medium heat, melt the remaining 2 tablespoons of butter in the skillet and add the onion; cook, stirring often, until wilted — about 8 minutes. Stir in the garlic, tomatoes, basil, nutmeg, salt and pepper. Cook over medium-high heat, stirring often, until most of moisture evaporates — about 8 minutes.

Wisk together the eggs just enough to blend yolks and whites; whisk in the ricotta, cream and Parmesan.

Arrange half the reserved zucchini in the bottom of a shallow 2-quart oblong or square baking dish (11¾ by 7½ by 1¾ inches or 8 by 8 by 2 inches). Spread with tomato mixture; top with remaining zucchini and pour the ricotta mixture over it.

Bake in a preheated 450-degree oven for 15 minutes; reduce oven temperature to 375 degrees and continue baking until top is browned and slightly puffed — about 25 minutes longer for the oblong dish and about 30 minutes longer for the square dish. Let stand 5 minutes or so before serving. (There may be some juices in the bottom of the baking dish.)

For easy removal with a wide spatula or server, cut into eighths — 4 servings, 2 portions apiece.

Phyllis George sheds 50 pounds after baby

NEW YORK (AP) — Although she's now 50 pounds lighter thanks to dieting and exercise, Phyllis George says she can't understand why there was such a flap over her weight following the birth of her son.

"People were saying, 'Have you seen Phyllis?'" Miss George says in the current issue of People magazine. "How insulting for any woman to have to put up with that kind of public scrutiny! I feel healthy as heck, and I still can't understand why this is such a big deal."

Miss George, the wife of Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. and a former Miss America and television sportscaster, said she had a "tremendous water retention problem" while she was carrying son Lincoln. She also said she "enjoyed every pound I put on" during the last month of her pregnancy by indulging in mounds of chocolate cake.

Despite the furor over her weight gain, Miss George says she wants another child, and "I'm prepared to go through it all again if I want to."

Elderly a fast growing segment

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than one American in 10 is aged 65 or older and the elderly are becoming one of the fastest growing segments of the population, the Census Bureau reported Sunday.

The new statistics from the 1980 head count confirmed earlier reports that the median age of the U.S. population is now 30, meaning that half of all Americans are 30 or older.

The report said that persons aged 65 or older now constitute 11.3 percent of the population, up from 9.8 percent in a decade earlier. The median age in 1970 was 28.

Florida, the mecca for retirees, had the highest median age at 34.7 years, but other states with high median ages tended to be concentrated in the Northeast.

The lowest median age, 24.2 years, was recorded in Utah.

The end of the "baby boom" and improving medical care for the elderly have been the prime contributors to this general ageing of the American population.

Older persons live longer, adding to the elderly end of the spectrum, while young people choose to have fewer children, reducing the number of very young.

This is a trend expected to have major effects in coming years, already evident in the strains on the Social Security system.

And the growing political clout of the elderly also may have surfaced in the Senate rebuff to President Reagan's proposed Social Security cuts.

Currently payments from three workers provide benefits for one retiree, but if the pay-a-you-go system remains unchanged two workers will have to support each retiree in 30 years, according to a study done last fall for the Population Reference Bureau, an independent research organization.

That, speculated researcher Beth J. Soldo of Georgetown University, may require restructuring of the system.

Such moves could include incentives to keep working after age 65, concentrating benefits among those who had the lowest earnings and renewing the emphasis of Social Security as a supplement to retirement income rather than the sole source of that income.

The census report found that white Americans had the highest median age at 31.3 years. By contrast, the median age for blacks was 24.9 years and for Hispanics it was 23.2 years. The median age for American Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts was 23 years, and for Asians and Pacific Islanders it was 28.6 years.

Data from census surveys reported last year that the nation's median age had climbed to 30.0, second highest in the nation's history.

The 1950 census reported a national median age of 30.2 years, but it slipped back into the 20s as the post-war baby boom got underway, flooding the country with children.

Before 1950, the median age had climbed gradualy upwards from 16.7 in 1820, reflecting improving nutrition and medical care allowing people to live longer.

The baby boom caused it to dip to 29.5 in 1960 and 28.0 in 1970, but then the "baby bust" got underway as young people postponed having children and the population began to age, to 28.2 in 1971, 28.7 in 1975 and now to 30.

Here is a regional and state-by-state breakdown by median age:

NEW ENGLAND (31.2):
Maine, 30.4; New Hampshire, 30.1; Vermont, 29.4; Massachusetts, 31.2; Rhode Island, 31.8; Connecticut, 32.0.

AT WIT'S END

Absent-minded dishonesty

By ERMA BOMBECK

I came out of a store the other day to see my husband poised in front of our rental car with the hood up, staring at the motor.

That scene wouldn't have choked me up except when you know that a mechanic once said to him, "You're losing a piston," and HE said, "I don't follow basketball that closely, but who is it?"

So I said to him, "What's the matter with the car?"

Nothing's the matter," he said, slamming down the hood. "So what are you doing staring in at the motor?"

"I thought I was releasing the brake and the hood went up instead. I had to get out and pretend I released it on purpose."

Aren't men silly? Why can't they be honest like women? Ever see a tennis player miss a shot who didn't immediately stop the game and tug at the strings of the racket to make sure they were all there?

Oh, and don't forget the Academy Award performance of the golfer who positions his feet, checks his wrists, flexes his knees and swings and then when he misses the ball pretends he was only doing a practice stroke.

This is not the first time I have seen him go to elaborate means to cover up a mistake. I've seen him turn an enthusiastic wave (to someone he thought he knew) into a hair pat, a neck massage, a fly swatter, a collar smoother, a label fixer, and once he tried to tell me he was winding his watch.

Another time he was talking to me and when I wandered away from him he asked a strange woman what we were having for dinner. Instead of leveling with her, he whispered, "If you don't want me to come over, just say so and I'll understand."

The other night I walked into a dining room and came face to face with a woman wearing a dress exactly like mine. We looked like bookends. I wanted to throw a tablecloth over her and arrange four chairs around her. I looked at her sweetly and smiled, "So, you bought the other one."

My husband growled, "Now, THAT'S honest!"

Corps stirs up memories

By KATHLEEN M. NORTON
Associated Press Writer

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — They write of the poor, desperate times they shared. A time when there were no jobs, no money, no future.

Their struggles a half-a-century ago bear little resemblance to the lives of their children and grandchildren, who have come to expect government relief in time of economic hardship.

But for the men of the Great Depression, a federal program born of despair under President Franklin Roosevelt's administration was the saving grace that rebuilt them and their country.

During its nine-year existence, the Civilian Conservation Corps opened countless roads and bridges, planted billions of trees and reconstructed some of the nation's most beautiful recreation spots.

Skiers swooshing down the slopes of Vermont's highest mountain give little thought to the fact that CCC workers built the first trails at Mount Mansfield, helping make the state the ski capital of the East.

And campers pitching tents in Yellowstone National Park in Montana don't realize that CCC workers rested under the same skies nearly 50 years ago, after a day building picnic and swimming areas.

The experiences of some of the 3 million men who left farms and slums for the chance of a better life are chronicled by Perry Merrill, a former Vermont CCC official, in "Roosevelt's Forest Army."

"It's about time people knew what the CCC amounted to," says Merrill.

Through excerpts of hundreds of letters he received after advertising nationwide, the 87-year-old Merrill tells of the men who traded their labor for three square meals a day.

Shortness advantage for human trademark

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

TAMARAC, Fla. (AP) — Bill Albaugh doesn't mind one bit when he's teased about his short stature. He only hopes that if you're going to give him a nickname, you'll call him "Squirt."

That's easily explained. For 33 years, he's been the living trademark for a soft drink bearing that name.

Albaugh is what the uninformed refer to as a "midget" or "dwarf," but like the thousands afflicted with a quirk in the human growth process, he prefers being called a "little person."

"You kind of learn to accept the teasing," says the jovial 4-foot-7-inch Albaugh, who was born in Mingo Junction, Ohio. "The only people who are cruel are those who are ignorant. But "little people" learn to develop a sense of humor; otherwise, life would be tough."

He admits his career with Squirt & Co. began as a novelty because of the coincidence with its name and his size. But, his knack for salesmanship proved him to be of double value for his employer. He now travels three weeks of every month, not only as a "living trademark," but also to help train salesmen, solve account problems and handle public relations.

"We're very fortunate to have Bill with us," said J.W. Brookes, the company's executive vice president, from his office in Holland, Mich., "not only because of the clever twist between his size and our product, but because he is very able. He's an unusual, sensitive person and one of our most experienced salesmen."

At home, Albaugh is a veritable giant standing next to his wife, Marie. He teases that he's grown seven inches during their 23 years of marriage while she's still 3-foot-11.

The two are very active in helping other "little people." Albaugh founded the South Florida Mini-Gators 10 years ago, and the group now has more than 50 members.

"We help each other on where to buy clothing or shoes and things like that," explained Mrs. Albaugh. "After all, it's not easy to find a cocktail dress for someone 3-foot-11."

The Mini-Gators also tackle more serious problems — like helping parents cope with the shock of learning their child is a "little person."

"'Little people' also have a problem accepting themselves," said Albaugh. "Sometimes they are told they can't do anything and then they believe it and hide from the world."

The Albaughs are good examples that being small is detrimental only if one lets it become so. "We've led a normal and very good life," said Mrs. Albaugh. And their home is no different from anyone else's.

"People think everything will be little in our house," said Mrs. Albaugh, "but our friends and relatives aren't small. It would be uncomfortable for them if everything was made to accommodate us."

The only concession Mrs. Albaugh allows herself is a small ladder she uses in the kitchen. "That's the only exercise I get," she laughed, "going up and down that ladder."

Group tries to deter rapists by publishing names

By ANN EHRENBURG
Copley News Service

Rape victims around the country, faced with rising crime statistics and a legal system they consider unresponsive, are taking matters into their own hands.

Women are publishing names and descriptions of known rapists and they are confronting their attackers in personal encounters to tell them, "We know who you are, and we aren't going to take this anymore."

Disillusioned with police and prosecutors — and working without official sanction — a group called Santa Cruz Women Against Rape has forged a movement that involves direct, nonviolent action against attackers.

"I think it's fairly common that violent men will continue to be violent as long as they're not stopped," said Gale Groves of Women Against Rape. "That includes men who are put in prison and come out and rape again.'

The movement — which sponsors say has been spreading to Berkeley, Calif., Columbus, Ohio, and other cities — has drawn criticism from police for lack of cooperation with law enforcement authorities.

It has also brought up questions regarding possible false identification of alleged rapists and the safety of the women engaging in confrontations with accused attackers.

Groves' Santa Cruz group tries to warn potential victims by printing handbills with descriptions of men believed to have assaulted or harassed women in the Santa Cruz, Calif., area.

"These are published at the request of the women who call us," Groves said. "If they want, we will print the name of the man. We see this as one of the ways that we can take care of ourselves."

A recent handbill contained such items as:

"Rape-Peeping Tom. This man has peeped into the homes of 40 different women. He attempted a rape in September of 1978 and soon after threatened a woman with a knife and raped her."

(The item contained the man's name, address, work place, auto license and description.)

"Rape. Week of Nov. 2, 1980. Man asked woman to dance just before closing time at a local bar and then drove her to her home and raped her."

(Item included name, vehicle description and man's description.)

Asked about the possibility of mistaken identities of false reports of rape, Groves replied, "That hasn't happened. We are very sure before we print anything.

"We believe it takes a brave woman to come forward and say she's been raped, and if a woman has enough courage to accuse a man of rape, she really means it. Men, in order to protect themselves, have built up the assumption that women lie about being raped."

Women Against Rape does not require verification of the reports by police. Those who contact Women Against Rape are not asked whether the attack has been reported to police. In fact, group volunteers do not suggest victims contact authorities.

"It's up to them whether they want to report it," Grovec said. "Our basic assumption is the woman is telling the truth, and we have never found anyone to be lying. Women are the ones who know if they've been raped or not, or whether they were willing or not. It's up to the woman to define rape, not up to the authorities."

Santa Cruz police do not approve of this independent attitude.

As Deputy Chief Don Marketello explained, "I don't agree with their withholding information on crimes. If they don't tell us, we can't help them. We're always willing to work with anyone, but we need better cooperation from them."

Time-Life TV still on the block

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "The report of my death was an exaggeration," Mark Twain advised a newspaper reporter more than a century ago. Nancy Dockry might extend that sentiment today to Time-Life Television.

"I think a lot of people assumed we had been shuttered up," said Ms. Dockry, vice president for network TV for Time-Life Television. "I think what happened was the big announcement came out in February that we were closing our doors and selling out to Fox.

"The Fox thing fell through," she said, "and management found it wasn't as easy as closing up shop."

In fact, Time, Inc., did eliminate its Time-Life Films division, of which Time-Life TV once was a part, early this spring, after a difficult run at the box office. Time-Life Films produced movies, like the current "Fort Apache, The Bronx."

Time-Life TV still is on the block — Columbia Television appears a likely buyer — but Ms. Dockry said her division has 75 scripts in various stages of production, all of them funded by the commercial networks.

SHOULD COLUMBIA, or anyone else, buy Time-Life TV, the production unit presumably would merely assume new management, rather than disintegrate entirely.

Time-Life Television is perhaps best-known by viewers for its co-production of all of Shakespeare's plays, with the British Broadcasting Corp. Co-productions like that one and the recent "Shock of the New" series on modern art, for public TV, are not Ms. Dockry's responsibility.

Ms. Dockry's division — she took charge last October after a stint as vice president at MCA-Universal, another big producer — has a reputation for quality in the TV industry. Recent network productions include "The Bunker" and "Crisis at Central High," both based on actual historic events, and "Dial M for Murder," a TV remake of the Alfred Hitchcock classic.

While at MCA-Universal, Ms. Dockry dealt largely with ABC. She previously worked in production and with major advertising agencies, and wrote for daytime television.

THE CURRENT WRITER'S strike — and the anticipated director's walkout — has clouded the production picture in Hollywood, and the networks are more deliberate than usual in their dealings with producers. But Ms. Dockry said Time-Life TV has at least three projects ready to go.

Two are movies for CBS, "The Princess and the Cabbie," and "Dream House," and the third is a six-hour miniseries, also for CBS, based on the best-seller "The Life and Times of Robert F. Kennedy."

"We also have a three-hour production of 'The Wall,' based on John Hersey's novel, scheduled to start in September or October," she said, "but of course, that's dependent on what happens with the strikes."

Huntington Beach hair stylist Pierre Oritz takes a break Tuesday in the barber chair after setting an unofficial new world record at hair cutting for 350 hours. The old record was set in Dover, England, in 1979 at 341 hours and 58 seconds. Allowed to sleep only two hours per 24 hour period, Pierre estimates he cut over 300 heads.

Connery in peak form in 'Outland'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

OUTLAND launches the Ladd Company with a winner in the tradition of "Star Wars" and "Alien." This time it's "High Noon" on the Venus moon Io, with the bad guys arriving on the next space shuttle instead of the 12 o'clock train. Sean Connery plays the federal marshal who has to fight evil aboard the space mine after everyone deserts him. He does get some help from a crusty woman doctor (Frances Sternhagen). The familiar saga is treated with first-class sets and effects, and directed in fine style and almost unbearable tension by Peter Hyams, who also wrote the script. Connery is in peak form and Sternhagen is an ideal foil. Rated R, with violence, gore and a sprinking of four-letter words.

Motion Picture Association of America rating definitions:
G — General audiences. All ages admitted.
PG — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.
R — Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
X — No one under 17 admitted. Some states may have higher age limits.

Champion fiddler announced

ODESSA — Playing before a near capacity crowd, Roy V. Adams of San Angelo was named the Grand Champion Fiddler at the Odessa Brand New Opree's 4th annual fiddler's contest held Saturday.

The top winner from each age category in the competition competed for the grand champion slot. In addition to being named grand champion, Adams won first in the over 60 category. Other winners included Buster Payne of Eunice, N.M., second; Raymond Brown of Lubbock, third; and J.D. Kilgore of Ozona, fourth.

In the 19- to 60-year-old division, first place was awarded to Clint Keys of Midland, second to Lindy Durham of Hobbs, N.M., third to Carolyn White of Uvalde and fourth to D.A. Penny of Midland.

In the under-19 group, first went to Michelle Singleton of Carlsbad, N.M., with Shane Keys of Midland placing second, Chris Duke of Odessa placing third, and Paula Benham of Roswell, N.M. placing fourth.

Midland Community Theatre to present 'On Golden Pond'

"On Golden Pond," a new American comedy by Ernest Thompson, will be presented by Midland Community Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., Friday through June 13.

Winner of the Broadway Drama Guild's Best Play Award in 1979, "On Golden Pond" has become a favorite of regional professional theaters and community theaters alike. The play is a tender exploration of love, encompassing that between an aging couple, the couple's adult child and a young friend.

The play opens with the return of Norman and Ethel Thayer to their summer home on Golden Pond in Maine, a place full of memories and fleeting shadows of the past. This year is different, the atmosphere is heavy with the sense of mortality as Norman, the sharp-tongued curmudgeon approaching 80, is convinced this will be his last summer.

To celebrate his birthday, Norman and Ethel are joined by their 42-year-old daughter, Chelsea, her new fiance, Bill Ray, and his son, Billy.

Appearing in MCT's production are Glen Thomason (Norman), Pat Griffith (Ethel), Gloria Stephenson (Chelsea), Jim Hicks (Bill Ray), Don Stroud (Billy), and John Phillips as Charlie, the mailman with a leftover-from-childhood crush on Chelsea.

The playwright, Thompson, is from Vermont. He studied theater at the University of Maryland, Colorado University and Catholic University. An actor as well as a writer, Thompson has been seen frequently on television. His next play, "West Side Waltz," is scheduled for a Broadway opening next fall.

MCT's production is directed by the theater's executive director, Don Bachmann, and is funded, in part, by a grant from Compressor Systems Inc.

Nine performances are scheduled with the June 4 and 11 performances set for 7:30 p.m., Friday and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and a 2:30 p.m. June 7 matinee.

For reservations call the box office at 682-4111.

UTPB offering varied courses this summer

Hurdle cleared for TV shopping

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The day when an average American can sit down at his TV set and receive the news, do his banking or order theater tickets, all at an affordable price, is a step closer to reality.

After years of uncertainty over what type of so-called videotext technology would take root in America, the fledgling industry has drafted minimum technical standards that will allow different systems to "talk" to one another.

The compromise was unveiled last week at a special conference in Toronto, where French and Canadian officials, American Telephone & Telegraph and CBS embraced technical standards to ensure compatibility among different systems.

Removing the major technical roadblock was all it took for most of the participants in the latest telecommunications field to rally together and predict that Americans could turn videotext into a $12 billion market by 1985.

"Everybody has been milling around the race track and now they're in the starting gate," said Jonathan Miller, managing editor of Communications Daily, a newsletter that tracks the electronic communications industry.

"This potentially opens the door to an electronic revolution of which the public is only dimly aware," Miller said. "The industry is now ready to move into the phase of developing a product that consumers will be interested in."

Videotext is a generic term for an electronic delivery system by which all manner of printed and graphic material can be transmitted via telephone or cable TV lines and called up on a TV set or computer terminal.

Such systems are also "two-way" interactive, meaning a consumer could call up information from a store catalogue and then turn around and place an order without getting out of his chair.

Another technology known as teletext allows a consumer to call up such information on a TV set but does not include the two-way capability of videotext.

ENTERTAINMENT

It was the development of videotext that spawned grand predictions of a coming electronic "Information Age." But the different, incompatable systems developed thus far have kept those predictions from moving toward reality.

There are three major types of videotext systems, each developed by agencies of foreign governments. The British have their Ceefax-Oracle system; the French their Antiope; and the Candaians their Telidon. None has made much headway in the American market.

Although videotext systems do not require any type of regulatory approval, teletext standards for TV transmission must be set by the Federal Communications Commission.

Manufacturers and programmers have been reluctant to embrace a single videotext system when the FCC — without any industry agreement to guide it — might pick a competing system for teletext and make it impossible for consumers to use the same equipment for both.

The situation was further clouded by CBS, which has been the most ardent advocate of teletext and developed a modified system of its own based on France's Antiope.

When AT&T announced last week that all the major players except the British had reached agreement on "commality standards," the prospects for commercial development brightened.

"There would probably be only limited market penetration if each system required its own unique terminal," said AT&T's Samual Berkman. "With that limited penetration, there would be insignificant revenues to support comprehensive and sophisticated data bases."

AT&T is looking to videotext as a major new market for its equipment and transmission facilities. The prospect of offering its own "data bases" such as an electronic Yellow Pages also is attractive to the Bell System.

The newspaper industry is challenging that latter idea, making it even more important to AT&T that other videotext providers at least follow standards that match its own for using the phone lines.

Most observers agree that consumers will be unlikely to pay even a relatively low price of $400 to $500 for videotext equipment unless they are offered a wide range of services.

"Now we can quit worrying about the problems of incompatibility and focus on the central issues that affect videotext's future — the creative, business and marketing aspects," said CBS' John S. Suhler.

New Broadway play confused

NEW YORK (AP) — "I Won't Dance," a three-character play which opened Sunday afternoon at Broadway's Helen Hayes Theater, is fairly unusual but can't seem to decide what kind of play it wants to be.

It goes off in several directions and never brings them, as should happen with a multifaceted play, into some kind of overall unity needed for understanding.

First, it's a murder mystery.

Second, it's a look at the world of a wheelchair-bound person. Dom, played by David Selby, is in a wheelchair in his apartment, above the Los Angeles house where his brother and wife have been slaughtered. He had been dependent on them financially. Now, he will inherit, but wants somebody else to take him on. "I like family life," he says. He is frequently lectured that a crippled man should learn to go it alone.

Third, it's a comedy. Some of the lines are very funny, though this isn't consistent, and pert Arlene Golonka is so good she makes some of her lines funnier than they are. A lot of the jokes are at the expense of Los Angeles and about sex.

Fourth, it may be a fantasy. When nobody is around, Dom walks. Eventually it is explained that walking was in his mind. This device doesn't work very well.

The characters of two young women are fully drawn, which is good. Gail Strickland is cool as Lil, sister of the murdered wife, in love with Dom when a teen-ager, now refusing to take ovzr responsibility for him. She lives in New Mexico with a construction engineer.

Miss Golonka is earthy, sexy, cute and funny as Dom's girlfriend. She has no talent as an actress or office worker, never winning auditions for the first and often fired from the second. The dead brother has been giving her checks for pretending affection for Dom.

Nobody loves anybody in this play and one waits for that to sprout — in vain — like one waits for the murderer to be discovered.

Showtime features to feature closed caption transmissions

NEW YORK (AP) — Showtime, the pay TV network, has announced plans to caption certain films for hard-of-hearing viewers, beginning with the June 3 transmission of Neil Simon's "Chapter Two." The captions will be available to viewers with TV-set decoders for closed captions.

Showtime said Wednesday that so far, other films to be captioned under an agreement with Columbia Pictures include "Close Encounters of the Third Kind — The Special Edition," and "The China Syndrome."

Midlander's works shown

The works of Midland artists Julie Rogers, Patricia Aycock and Marjorie Scull will be on exhibit in the lobby of the Country Squire Dinner theatre, located east of Odessa on Highway 80, through June 16.

The show consists of fiber work by the three artists. All works are available for purchase at the box office. The exhibit opens at 9 a.m. daily.

Currently showing at the Country Squire is the Neil Simon comedy "Come Blow Your Horn." Playing the lead role is Doug McClure, star of television, movies and stage.

For reservations call the theater's box office at 563-4111.

Polish film gets top Cannes award

CANNES, France (AP) — "Man of Iron," a Polish film inspired by the workers' uprising last summer that brought sweeping changes in Poland's Communist society, won top honors today at the 1981 Cannes Film Festival.

The movie, directed by Andrzej Wajda, was a surprise entry in Europe's most prestigious movie competition. Its screening at Cannes was film's first showing anywhere, Wajda said at a news conference Sunday night.

"Man of Iron" was inspired by the discontent in the Gdansk shipyards last summer and portrays in fictional form the measures Warsaw authorities took in hopes of quieting dissent.

Director Wajda said he would shorten the film, which ran two hours and appeared roughly edited.

Twenty-one films were entered at the 34th Cannes festival, and the special prize went to "The Years of Light" by Swiss director Alain Tanner.

Winning the best actor prize was Italy's Ug(Tognazzi for his performance in "The Tragedy of a Ridiculous Man." French star Isabelle Adjani wa: named best actress for work in two films — "Quar tet" by James Ivory and "Possession" by Andrze, Zulawski.

This year's Cannes jury was headed by Frenc director Jacques Deroy and included American ac tress Ellen Burstyn.

Guards defy orders

BOSTON (AP) — Jail guards in four counties defied legal orders and called in sick today, despite passage of a bill by the Massachusetts House that would raise salaries for them and correctional officers in four other counties.

At least one group of guards vowed to remain off the job until Gov. Edward King signs the bill.

The House passed a pay-raise bill Wednesday that would provide raises this year for union and non-union jail employees in eight counties from special funds, subject to controls by county commissioners and state officials. The bill was sent to the Senate.

The guards — there are 560 in the eight counties — have not received cost-of-living increases since 1977, although contracts providing for pay hikes have been negotiated. Approval of the money has been bogged down in a dispute between the Legislature and King.

The guards' current average salary is $15,000 a year.

The entire eight-member overnight shift at the overcrowded Worcester County House of Correction in West Boylston called in sick for the third night Wednesday, about six hours after the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission ordered them back to work.

For a second night, a fire blamed on inmates erupted at the facility. No one was injured in the blaze, which was set in mattresses and toilet paper.

State police and sheriffs were helping to staff the jails.

Edward O'Brien, lawyer for Worcester Sheriff Francis Deignan, threatened to go to Worcester Superior Court for a temporary restraining order against the guards and other union employees of the country jail.

But spokesman said most correctonal officers also called in sick at the Norfolk jail in Dedham and the Middlesex jail in Billerica. Guards at the Bristol jail in New Bedford also stayed off the job despite a court's back-to-work order.

Correctional officers in Billerica County have decided to remain off the job until King signs the bill, which was sent to the state Senate after the House vote, said Butch Deschenes, a representative of the guards' union.

Restraining orders were issued by courts in Salem and Lawrence prohibiting sick-outs, even though the guards there have continued to work.

The jails in the eight counties hold nearly 1,900 inmates, most serving two years or less. According to county officials, recommended maxium capacity for the jails is 1,500.

Socialite to finish prison term

MIAMI (AP) — Josette Bauer, a one-time Swiss socialite and confessed drug courier for the infamous "French Connection," has been deported to complete a murder sentence over her objections that she'll be killed when she returns to her homeland, officials say.

Mrs. Bauer, 45, was taken to Miami International Airport under heavy guard Wednesday night and placed aboard a flight to New York, where she was to catch a plane to Switzerland.

Federal authorities in Miami reportedly were told by the State Department Wednesday to surrender Mrs. Bauer for deportation. Her last avenue of recourse — the U.S. Supreme Court — refused to hear her case Tuesday.

Mrs. Bauer escaped from the Hildenbank Prison in Berne, Switzerland, in the mid-1960s after serving 5½ years of an eight-year sentence for complicity in the bludgeon slaying of her wealthy father.

"It was a rush job," U.S. Marshal Donald Forsht of the Southern District of Florida told The Associated Press.

"The Swiss government, through its embassy in Washington, had asked that she be flown to New York to be put aboard a plane there leaving for Switzerland," he said.

Forsht said three deputy marshals from New York came to Miami to accompany Mrs. Bauer to the airport.

Mrs. Bauer, also known by her maiden name, Josette Geisser, and as Louise Fallai, was arrested by U.S. Customs agents in Miami in 1967.

She and Willy Charles Lambert were indicted on charges of smuggling heroin into South Florida with a street value of $9 million, according to government agents.

Also indicted was Jean Robert Mori, named by the U.S. government as the "kingpin" of the French Connection drug-smuggling operation. Mori was nabbed in Paris, tried in Miami and sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Mrs. Bauer and Lambert testified against Mori in return for sentences not to exceed seven years with the understanding that they would be released after three years.

"The U.S. government promised I would never be sent back to Switzerland in return for my help in convicting Mori," Mrs. Bauer said in an interview earlier this year from the Women's Detention Annex of the Dade County Jail in Miami.

"I live in fear of Mori or one of his associates. He has sworn that he will take revenge on me, not only for my testimony but for other things, personal matters that I don't want to get into," she said.

In the February interview, Mrs. Bauer said she had been informed Mori was given time off for good behavior, released shortly before Christmas 1980 and deported to Europe. The Swiss newspaper Lausanne reported earlier this year that Mori had died. But Mrs. Bauer has said she feared his associates would carry out his revenge.

Two years after her conviction in the French Connection drug case, Mrs. Bauer escaped from a federal prison in West Virginia, was recaptured in Albuquerque, N.M., and served 18 months until her release.

Then in 1976 the Swiss government stepped in, demanding her extradition to complete her term there. Although a federal judge at first blocked the extradition, the Swiss persisted.

On Nov. 18, 1980, Mrs. Bauer surrendered, saying she felt the U.S. government would honor its promise. A federal judge ordered her release a month afterward, but the Swiss government secured a stay. Since then she had been imprisoned in Miami, where she remained until Wednesday night.

Her defense attorney, William Marchiando, was not available for comment in Albuquerque.

Japan's auto exports reach record high

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese motor vehicle exports in April reached an all-time high for one month, 558,981 units, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers' Association said today.

The April total of overseas shipments of cars, trucks and buses was 4.2 percent higher than in the previous month and an 11.1 percent increase over the same month last year.

Exports to the United States were up 5.6 percent to 218,947 units. The Japanese government agreed during the month to hold down its U.S. exports voluntarily by 7.7 percent, to 1.68 million, this fiscal year.

The Japanese government is negotiating with car manufacturers on allocating the reduction in exports to the United States, its biggest overseas market.

Exports to Canada, which is also asking for voluntary restraints, rose sharply to 23,067 units — a 58.8 percent increase over April 1980.

Setsuo Kashiwagi, general manager of public relations for JAMA, said the largest percentage increases were in exports to South America and Southeast Asia.

Pertini asks Forlani to form new government

ROME (AP) — President Sandro Pertini today asked caretaker Premier Arnaldo Forlani, a Christian Democrat whose center-left coalition collapsed two days ago, to try to form Italy's 41st postwar government.

Forlani's four-party coalition collapsed Tuesday over a scandal which broke last week when the government published a list of 953 men, many of them prominent, who allegedly belonged to the secret Masonic lodge called Propaganda Due or P-2.

The decision by the 84-year-old president, a Socialist, was announced after a 30-minute meeting with Forlani at the Quirnal Palace. By tradition, the president gives an outgoing premier first chance to form a new government.

"The president asked me to form a new government and I accepted with the customary reservations," Forlani said, meaning that he could not assure Pertini that he would be successful.

If he fails, Pertini may turn to another Christian Democrat before giving the mandate to a leader of another party.

Forlani immediately began his consultations, meeting separately with Nilde Jotti, the Communist speaker of the Chamber of Deputies, and Amintore Fanfani, the Christian Democrat president of the Senate. He is to confer with leaders of other parties Friday.

The Christian Democrats, who have dominated the Italian government since the end of World War II, have suggested a five-party coalition — adding the small Liberal party to the present lineup of the Christian Democrats, Socialists, Social Democrats and Republicans.

But Forlani's effort is likely to run into a stiff opposition from the Socialists, who hold the balance of power as the third-largest political force in Italy after the Christian Democrats and the Communists.

Forlani's 7-month-old government was forced to resign when the Socialists rejected his plan to make only minor Cabinet changes to deal with the scandal, replacing three Cabinet members who were linked to the Masonic lodge.

A parliamentary committee investigating the lodge claims it was involved in bribe payments, tax evasion in the oil industry and a plot to set up an authoritarian regime in Italy.

Match these leaders with their cars

Presidents and chiefs of state always have ridden in style, from the Pope's litter carried on the shoulders of the Swiss guard to the elegant fairy-tale coach used by the British monarchy.

See if you can match the names of these chiefs of state with the limousine in which they rode, now in the transportation collection of Henry Ford Museum, Dearborn, Mich.

Take one point for identifying each chief of state correctly, two points for each you match with the correct limousine and three points for each vehicle whose year of manufacture you identify.

A. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt B. King George VI C. General Dwight D. Eisenhower D. President John F. Kennedy

1. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt's 1939 Lincoln "Sunshine Special" was the most photographed presidential limousine to that point in our history. It was seen by millions who crowded parade routes, military installations and airports around the world. The car, which was armored and weighed a hefty 9,300 pounds, accompanied Roosevelt to conferences in Yalta, Casablanca, Tehran and Malta. Now on display in Henry Ford Museum at Dearborn, Mich., the car was retired from presidential service in 1950.

2. This massive 1950 Presidential Lincoln was first used by President Harry S. Truman and then by Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson. It is best known for the bubble-top fitted over the rear passenger compartment. During its 18 years of service, the car transported the nation's first families and dignitaries from all over the world. President John F. Kennedy rode to his inaugural with First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy in this car. The car was presented to Henry Ford Museum in 1968 by Lincoln-Mercury Division of Ford Motor Company.

3. The 1940 Chrysler parade car used by New York City was a Crown Imperial Phaeton with a hand-made Derham body. It carried General Dwight D. Eisenhower on his triumphal return to New York on June 19, 1945, after World War II. The eight-cylinder vehicle was given to Henry Ford Museum at Dearborn, Mich. by Chrysler Corporation after being retired from service.

4. This Lincoln V-12 convertible sedan was custom built for the visit of Britain's King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to North America in 1939. It was used again in 1957 by Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip in their visit here. The custom LeBaron body incorporated shatterproof glass surrounding the rear compartment, extra high seats and a powder blue broadcloth upholstered interior. It was given to Henry Ford Museum by Ford Motor Company after the 1957 visit of Elizabeth and Philip.

SCORING: Give yourself one point for each chief of state correctly identified (maximum of 4 points). Take two points for each chief of state you correctly matched with the correct limousine (maximum of 8 points). Add three points for each vehicle you identified by year of manufacture (maximum of 12 points).

18-24 = Excellent
12-17 = Very Good
4-11 = Good
0-3 = Poor

Car of 90's: Lighter and more efficient

More fuel efficient. Lighter in weight. Loaded with electronics. Smaller in size.

That's a start.

Because of rapidly-changing technology and an increasing number of external influences, no one can say exactly how that new car you buy in the year 2000 will look.

There are some indications, however, in projections of how the cars being built in the next 10 years or so will shape up—in design, in powerplants, in materials. A composite picture comes from members of the Society of Automotive Engineers, a nonprofit, technical organization with nearly 40,000 individual members in 79 countries, the Automotive Information Council, the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association and, yes, the automakers themselves.

Many of the concepts for these vehicles of the future already are on the drawing boards. The final decades of the 20th century should prove exciting and challenging for the people whose job it is to develop the car you'll choose to drive a score or more years from now.

Because of the massive amount of initial engineering design work, testing, and retooling that is necessary (all of which require large capital expenditure), the lead time to bring a new vehicle to the driving public is measured in years.

Brave new world

Many of the new breed of front wheel drive 1981 cars, for example, began to take shape on drawing boards as early as 1974.

This new series of cars, which include the Ford Escort and Lynx, the Chrysler K-cars, and the GM X-cars, are the automotive engineer's response to the realities of a new world. It is estimated that it cost in excess of $3 billion to bring these cars to market.

While consumer preferences and desires once dictated most changes, design today is primarily influenced by four external forces—energy, environment, economics, and government regulation.

Because these forces will continue to dominate the future design of passenger cars, the innovative automotive engineer will lead the way and the stylist will have to conform.

Much engineering emphasis is currently being placed on developing new powerplants—ones that will not only use less fuel, but different types of fuel—and drivetrains with radically different ways of translating combustion into power. Through the end of this century, it is probable that the engines familiar to us today will continue to be our predominant power plants.

V-8 reign ends

Clearly, the reign of the V-8 engine as king of the highway is over and, if it survives in any form at all, it will be in the form of the 8-6-4 variation introduced on some 1981 Cadillacs.

The main reason for these changes is the federal regulation that requires each car company to achieve an average of 27.5 miles per gallon across its full line of 1985-model-year cars. This compares with the 19-miles-per-gallon requirement for 1979 cars.

Still, manufacturers are optimistic they will beat the 1985 standard by at least three miles per gallon.

The cost of revamping facilities and products over the next five years to produce such a fleet average amounts to $60 billion, making fuel efficiency the No. 1 goal for the domestic automakers.

Tomorrow's engines are likely to be 25 to 30 percent smaller than today's standard powerplants and will use superchargers and turbo chargers to boost their modest output.

More sophistication

The future may place more emphasis on diesel engines and more sophisticated electronically-controlled gasoline engines. Some turbines and electric cars also may debut, such as the electric vehicle General Motors is talking about introducing in 1985.

But GM still is seeking a good supply of nickel powder and better lightweight plastics for its batteries, lower fabricating costs for plates and separators, more efficient motor designs, better speed controls and an inexpensive, reliable way to monitor the supply of energy remaining in the storage batteries.

Look for some hybrid engines to emerge, too, combining, say, a liquid-fuel engine with an electric motor.

Already the six-cylinder engine has replaced the V-8 in many cars, but sometime during the 1980s, the four-cylinder powerplant probably will dominate the highway. It is now the chief source of power for the subcompact and compact entries.

Weight's the enemy

Weight also is a key factor in fuel economy. Hundreds of pounds have been shed from cars since downsizing started in the mid-'70s and manufacturers project that the average car will be in the 3,000-pound weight class by 1985—nearly 25 percent lighter than today—and the average 1990 car will weigh in at around 2,400 pounds.

Engineers are studying the expanded use of aluminum, plastic and other lightweight materials. Because of advancements in metal treatment and painting, car owners of 1990 will no longer need to worry about rust. Better lubricants and bearings will help increase economy and improved tires will reduce rolling resistance and boost traction.

Perhaps the most dramatic changes, however, will be in the area of electronics. While most 1981 cars include some helpful electronic components, cars of the near future will include a variety of electronics that will control fuel metering, door locks, exhaust gas recirculation, ignition systems, and steering systems.

On-board computers will monitor system-wide sensors including those on bearings, brakes, suspension, steering, and even tires. Electronics will enable cars of the later '80s to double present-day fuel efficiency. The dashboard of these vehicles is likely to have a black matte finish aglow with red light-emitting diodes delivering messages from the on-board computer.

Aerodynamics key item

Designers are paying particular attention to aerodynamic styling to reduce wind resistance—another fuel economy foe. Wind tunnels to test styling concepts have been employed to a far greater degree in the last few years.

Rooflines in the late '80s will stay where they are, but hoods and trunk lids will rise steeply to meet them. Chrome hood ornaments and intricate wheel covers will disappear from most models. Cars will become very slippery, yet aesthetically pleasing. The engineers' wind-tunnel and the styling studio will cooperate to produce cars that will be lithe, efficient, and roomy.

While it was once felt that the most efficient design for combating wind resistance was a long hood and a short rear deck, the cars of the late 1980s and 1990s will have a small hood, small rear deck, and a large passenger compartment. With a wind drag rating half as much as current sedans, 1990 cars will not only be more fuel efficient but also will be much quieter.

It won't be long until upright grills and the stubby box shapes and opera windows that now express luxury disappear.

Grills may even become extinct because they hinder aerodynamic efficiency.

Ride a flat to safety and keep a kit handy

Fump, fump, fump. It never fails. You're already late for work because you stole a few well-deserved extra winks. Fump, fump, fump. You've got a station wagon full of restless sixth graders and the day-long downpour that washed out their field trip is still going strong. Fump, fump, fump. There's no good time for a flat tire.

According to figures compiled by a leading tire manufacturer, an astounding total of more than 50 million Americans each year hear that aggravating sound. Although a flat tire is bound to put a kink in your day, champion racing crew chief Maurice Petty has some hints to help you prepare for a tire failure and to make your changing job easier, quicker and safer.

Tire changes are Maurice Petty's stock in trade. He's the younger brother of famed car racing champion Richard Petty whose 192 career victories and $4 million in winnings have put the Petty family in an exclusive bracket, unapproached by the competition.

As crew chief for the STP/Petty Engineering team, Maurice is responsible for fast, safe pit stops. Tire changes are the cornerstone of almost every racing pit stop and a slow one can quickly change the story of a race. Nobody does them better than the Pettys.

In 1979, they became the first National Pit Crew Champions in NASCAR history by winning a season-long competition sponsored by the Craftsman Tool Division of Sears, Roebuck and Co.

"A special timing team clocks all pit stops of the 10 fastest qualifying cars," Petty explains. "The winner is the team whose finishing car spends the least total time in the pits.

Safety's the key

"Even though we're straining to save every fraction of a second in the pits, safety is the essential element in any stop," emphasizes the bearded Maurice. "On pit road or beside the highway, cars come by fast, often close enough to feel like they're trying to suck the wallet out of your hip pocket, so safety must be the first consideration.

"As soon as you know you've got a problem, start looking for a safe place to park. One that's level, hard-surfaced and well off the highway. I've decided that it's better to risk ruining a tire rather than to stop immediately in a potentially dangerous spot.

"To help protect you from oncoming traffic, be sure you carry reflectors or, even better, flares for nighttime or rain."

So you've rolled to your unscheduled stop. How much time and energy you burn up will depend on just how well you are prepared. "It is impossible to do any job effectively and safely without the proper tools," continues Petty.

"In addition to reflectors or flares, your tire change equipment should include 'chock' blocks, medium flat-bladed screwdriver, lug wrench, jack and flashlight. A set of oversize coveralls isn't a bad idea either.

"The 'chock' blocks I carry are 12-inch pieces of 4 x 4 lumber. I use them to block the front and back of the tire that's diagonally across from the tire I'm changing. The screwdriver is for prying the hubcap loose.

Summer is no vacation for your car.

Get a spring tune-up now and save gas all summer long.

Traditionally, Americans drive more in the summer. After all, it's vacation time.

So, naturally, Americans use more gasoline in the summer. As the graph on the left clearly shows, we use substantially more gas from May through August.

That's why, as summer approaches, it's good to remind yourself that a tune-up (including Champion spark plugs) can save you one to two gallons of gas per tankful.

Considering how many more tankfuls you're likely to use at this time of year, there's no better time to realize the savings from a tune-up than now.

Safe summer starts with auto tune-up

Proper preventive maintenance is key to season of carefree driving

Harrisburg, Pa., Chevrolet Dealer Greg Sutliff's experience says it all about the importance of preventive maintenance in trouble-free motoring.

He offers his own basic five-year warranty to all his customers who buy standard cars, stipulating only that they get regular oil changes and lubes at the time he prescribes. To maintain that warranty, Sutliff asks only that they bring the car back annually for a free validation.

The program, which covered more than 10,000 cars over the last 10 years, worked out to an average cost of a mere $10 for each car covered under Sutliff's original warranty.

Sutliff's experience graphically illustrates the point that, if people routinely care for their cars, they can reduce the high cost of repairs caused by neglect. Today's cars, he says, are the best ever.

Proper maintenance is particularly important before that long vacation trip. It's no secret that more gas is consumed during the peak summer months than at any other time of the year as people take that well-deserved vacation. Proper maintenance—including a pre-trip tune-up—is more important now than at any other time.

Champion Spark Plug Company's director of automotive technical services, David L. Walker, summed it up this way:

"An engine may do the job adequately in everyday driving situations, such as to and from the job and the supermarket, but what's going to happen when that same car attempts to pass another car at 55 or 60 miles an hour on a busy two-lane highway? That's when performance really counts.

"In normal driving, the owner may not be aware his engine has a miss. Yet, on the road at sustained highway speeds, the miss becomes evident and also affects fuel economy. Aggravating the problem is the fact that this deterioration of performance is so gradual that it's hard to notice!"

In all this, there is mounting evidence that today's cars may very well be in the worst shape ever. It was Champion that late last year identified a nationwide tune-up gap indicating that, because of tight money and an easy 1979-80 winter, tune-ups fell off dramatically—more than five million, in fact, below normal.

This tune-up gap proved costly for motorists last winter—in higher gasoline bills, wasted time, frayed tempers, costly emergency work and additional exhaust pollution.

What to do

But tune-ups are just one phase of putting your car in shape for safe, dependable trouble-free driving this summer. Here's the complete set of guidelines recommended by American Automobile Association for most passenger cars:

- Points, plugs, fuel and air filters, condenser, ignition wires and engine timing should be checked and cleaned, replaced or adjusted as part of a routine tune-up.
- Engine oil should be replaced with proper grade summer weight or a multi-grade oil. The old sludge-filled oil filter also should be replaced.
- Check coolant level in the radiator and its strength with a hydrometer (an inexpensive tool available at most auto or discount stores). The coolant level can be checked visibly on autos with overflow tanks. Check for cracks or holes in the cooling system hoses.
- Battery should be checked for fluids and charge. Clean any corrosion on battery cables with baking soda and water.
- Tires should be checked for proper pressure and tread wear. If the car is pulling to one side, have the wheel alignment and shock absorbers checked.
- Lubricate the car to help guard against corrosion of vital parts from moisture collected during the winter and spring.
- Check these engine fluid levels: Automatic transmission, master brake cylinder, power steering and windshield washer reservoir.
- Check the tension of all drive belts and look for fraying. Press your thumb on the middle of the belt; if it gives more than a half-inch, have it tightened or replaced.
- Inspect windshield wiper blades and replace if necessary.
- Turn on all headlights and turn signals to insure proper working order.
- Look underneath vehicle for muffler or tailpipe damage.

One recent AAA survey found four of every five cars failing to meet all checklist items. Biggest culprits were insufficient oil and coolant levels on 34 and 31 percent of the vehicles, respectively.

"Most procedures can be checked in less than a half-hour in the owner's driveway," said an AAA spokesman. "A few well-spent minutes now could spare many motorists the inconvenience of vehicle failure and huge repair bills."

Typical of the new breed of scaled-down motorhomes is this Caper XL mini, constructed by Coachmen Recreational Vehicle Co. on a truck chassis equipped with six-cylinder powerplant. Twenty feet long with a rear dinette floorplan, this miniature RV boasts a patented laminated construction with strength, durability, corrosion resistance, good insulation and light weight.

New designs, materials boost RV mileage figures

Slick aerodynamic design combined with some conscientious weight-reducing diets on the assembly line are bringing new shape, new size and—more importantly—new economy to America's recreational vehicles.

It represents an all-out effort by the recreational vehicle manufacturing industry and its suppliers of materials and components to put themselves in fighting-trim condition.

Although there's still room for improvement, the campaign already is effective.

For example, when one manufacturer found that at 55 miles an hour the box-shaped trailer it was building required 45 horsepower just to overcome airdrag, it hyped the design and won fuel savings payoffs to boot: The horsepower requirement dropped dramatically to 30 percent, neatly achieving in the bargain a 15 percent savings in fuel.

It's a fight for survival for an industry that—despite its comparative youthfulness—has seen scads of makes falling by the wayside since the fuel crunch began to dig in back in the early '70s. And lightweight metals and plastics are king in this revolution in design, manufacturing techniques and construction materials.

How they do it

Take some of these recent slimming-down efforts as cited by the Recreation Vehicle Industry Association:

- One company eliminated all steel on structural portions and converted to lightweight honeycomb materials wherever possible in furniture and flooring areas.
- Another found that it was using such a large proportion of aluminum, it acquired its own aluminum fabricating company.
- A well-known manufacturer developed and marketed two trailers weighing only 1,000 pounds each—easily towed by a compact car. A competitor quickly met the challenge with a trailer weighing 950 pounds.
- A seven percent saving in weight was reported by one maker; another was aiming at 20-25 percent less. Yet another looked to a 13 percent reduction. A 2,000-pound reduction was reported in another case; and, to wrap it up, its competitor claimed a full 50 percent reduction in weight compared with its 1973 model, according to RVIA.

Aerodynamic era

The new aerodynamic styling being phased in on these former behemoths of the American road are having a dramatic effect on the miles-per-gallon yield.

RV makers have become keenly aware that air resistance—even at 40 miles an hour—can account for as much as half of the total drag in a vehicle. As a result:

- One recent entrant into the motor home market scrapped $100,000 worth of its original fiberglass molds when it found a more efficient design that improved its aerodynamics, reduced its weight and achieved an 80 percent improvement in its miles per gallon.
- A luxury-class motor home manufacturer spent $40,000 in a streamlining redesign.
- A single-year change in shape produced .8 mpg improvement in another case.
- Meticulous details can be involved in many design changes such as adding a streamlined belly-plate to cover the airflow-disturbing vehicle frame.

Suppliers help, too

Suppliers of components and appliances also have an increasingly important role to play in all this fat-trimming. For instance:

- A furnace manufacturer has reduced the weight of one model by 66 percent since 1973. It produces a 20,000 BTU furnace—compared with 100,000 or more BTUs needed in a medium-sized permanent home—but the RV model weighs only 17 pounds.
- An electrical generator's weight has been reduced 34 percent while its output has increased 10 percent and the size cut 30 percent.

All this activity already is starting to pay off in the marketplace as makers of recreational vehicles late last year began reporting a return to better times.

Equally as good news, some makers started calling back laid-off employees.

Self-service station shouldn't be driver's only service stop

Unless you really know what you're doing or like to do your own work, total reliance on self-service gasoline stations may be dangerous.

Motorists who have been won over to the self-serves like to crow about the savings—and, admittedly, the pennies per gallon they gain by filling their own tanks add up quickly. But for the unwary, there are inherent penalties.

"So they saved 50 cents on a tankful of gasoline," posed one service station association spokesman. "It will cost them $25 to get towed in when their cars break down." They could be asking for trouble unless they arrange to monitor their cars themselves.

And the lack of regular maintenance checks can spell trouble in the blistering hot days of summer just ahead.

Good personal service

Many operators of full-service stations take a personal interest in the cars of regular customers. As one of them noted:

"We can tell at a glance about the oil, the tire pressure and a few other things. And we check the battery water every two to three weeks."

Complacency about such things can be costly. The service station operator recalled the time a woman brought her late-model automobile in for a grease job and his mechanics discovered the car had two bad tires—"one super bad." He also knew of two instances in as many years where motorists ruined their engines for lack of oil.

In one AAA survey, nearly 80 percent of the 237 vehicles checked had at least one deficiency out of a possible dozen with:

- 34 percent at least one quart low on oil.
- 31 percent low on radiator coolant.
- 28 percent weak antifreeze.
- 27 percent low on windshield washer solvent.
- 22 percent with corroded or damaged battery cables.
- 22 percent improper tire pressure.
- 13 percent low on power steering fluid.
- 11 percent low on battery fluid.
- 5 percent with loose or frayed fan belts.
- 5 percent with defective lights or turn signals.
- 4 percent with unusable spare tires.
- 3 percent low on brake fluid.

Why does less cost you more?

Why does unleaded gasoline cost more than leaded, even though the leaded product is higher in octane and includes an extra ingredient?

Processing.

To produce a fuel with the desired octane without adding lead, premium-grade gasoline base stocks are combined with regular-grade stocks. This means additional refining steps and this, says Amoco Oil Company, is why unleaded fuel costs the way it does.

Antifreeze, anti pooch

When fresh water isn't readily available, dogs sometimes are tempted to quench their thirst by lapping up pools of spilled antifreeze. That's why, when draining or filling the radiator, it's important to mop up promptly any toxic fluid that inadvertently ends up on the ground.

A couple of tablespoons of antifreeze could be a potent and very lethal cocktail for your pet.

The way we were

Everybody else rides, so why don't you?...To own a motor car means that you have increased the measure of your life tenfold, not by tacking on so many more years to those you have already lived, but by living that much faster while you do live...

Again, there is your health. When you motor you breathe in great lungfuls of oxygen—that wonderful magnetic gas which, if it is not life itself, is the great sustainer of life; and this helps to give you physical strength, to preserve your mental poise, and to increase your power so that when you get down to the routine of business again you are a regular dynamo for work.—From Keeping Up With Your Motor Car, by A. Frederick Collins (1917)

Elitch Gardens a Denver oasis

DENVER, Colo. — Back before the turn of the century when the city of Denver was a comparative youngster, it was often thought of by those traveling the long road west as an "oasis."

From that time and to this very day there has been an oasis within the oasis, Denver's Elitch Gardens, a unique amusement part that has served as a refreshment spot for Denverites and travelers alike. Elitch Gardens is unique in that it has been owned and operated by only two families since its inception in 1890, when the late John Elitch converted it from a farm that was then on the city's outskirts.

The current familial group, now in its fourth generation, has seen to it that the park has grown as has the city, modernizing it with the passing years, yet keeping some of the valuable old, sot that a short walk through the facility from east to west can provide the visitor a minisucle history of summertime Denver entertainment through the years.

Elitch Gardens was a theme park long before the word was used in that context. Each year the more than one million flower plantings used in the park in the summertime are grown in the park's own greenhouses.

At the west end is the famed Elitxh Theater, opened in 1890, now a historical landmark and still operating every summer, making the oldest continually operating summer theater in the United States. The venerable theater, with its turn-of-century gingerbread trim, opened on the park's second day of operation with a vaudeville performance in which many of the audience, as well as the cast, were famous entertainers of the day, including P.T. Barnum.

By 1897, the theater had beguns into own productions and famous names that have trod the boards include Sarah Bernhardt, Edward G. Robinson, Frederic March, Douglas Fairbanks Sr., Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Sylvia Sidney, Grace Kelly (now Princess Grace of Monaco), Ginger Rogers, Mickey Rooney, Sid Caesar, Gig Young, Shelley Winters, Jose Ferrer, Sandy Dennis, Patty Duke and Lynn Redgrave.

Moving to the center of the park you see some of the modernizing that is ongoing, and area developed just four years ago. It is here you begin to see the direction the present owners, Jack and Budd Gurtler, and their sons, John Jr. and Sandy, have chosen to make Elitch Gardens far more than just another amusement park.

The area where the famed Tracadero Ballroom once stood, along with some other attractions, was cleared. Dirt was excavated to form a pond at one end and used to build a mountain at the other end. Twelve waterfalls splash down the mountain, rush through a brook that is crossed by a curved footbridge, and into the pond. The pond contains delicate fountains, lighted at night, and in the center stands an old-fashioned gazebo. Groups of young entertainers perform free concerts there in the evenings.

The entire area is surrounded by beautiful flower plantings with hanging baskets seemingly everywhere. There is comfortable bench seating all around the pond, inviting the visitor to pause and enjoy the surroundings and happenings.

Another part of the Tracadero was used to build a sleek fast-food restaurant. Squares of oak wood from the famous dance floor were used to make table tops with old dance bills laminated into the tops.

Still another part of the area was turned into a Victorian-looking "gambling den" complete with flocked wallpaper and crystal chandeliers, housing bank after bank of skee ball machines.

A bit north of park centers is another holdover wooden building. It has a quaint turreted front and is an open-air summer restaurant called The Orchard Cafe. It was built about the same thime as the theater and was designed to provide sit-down dinners for theater patrons. It got its name because John Elitch built it in the middle of an apple orchard. In 1979, the cafe became Don the Beachcomber's "summer satellite," a welcome offshoot of Don's downtown facility, housed in the Plaza Cosmopolitan Hotel.

A few steps west of the cafe is Fryer Hill, covered with shade trees, pathways and rock masonry picnic areas, each one named for a silver mine of the Leadville, Colo., mining boom era.

Fryer Hill overlooks a well-kept Kiddieland featuring 12 rides for the pint-sized mob and with close and easy access to the picnic area.

Moving to the east end of the park you discover the latest and most exciting ride in all of Elitch Gardens. It is a flume water ride called The Splinter, and was built at a cost ome than $2.5 million. The 6-passenger boats, built to resemble logs, ride the quarter-mile-plus flume. There are 23 boasts, insuring easy access, with one leaving about every 10 seconds.

As they move along at about four miles per hour, passengers are treated to a visual history of the lumbering industry.

Capitol, culture and Longhorns in Austin

BY GORDON M. QUARNSTROM

AUSTIN—When the Texas football team has a Saturday game, this capital city gets a touch of gridiron madness. When the game is at home, the cavernous stadium scene might just be out of a movie. You have to see it to believe it.

Yes, Austin is a sports-minded city, and rooters had much to cheer about with championship football and basketball teams.

But there is more to the University of Texas, that oil rich institution, than sports. The Super Drum, a drum-shaped structure opened last year for basketball, actually is a multi-purpose structure, and here are presented on a year around basis some of the finest singers, dancers and musicians.

There is a Symphony Square, too. Four limestone buildings were saved from extinction, a 500-seat amphitheater was added, and now the city has an urban restoration project that provides a home for an excellent symphony orchestra. The revitalization halted the decline of a downtown city area. There are concerts and other presentations, for children as well as adults.

Texas' Capitol is an imposing structure, second in size among such buildings only to the U.S. Capitol in Washington. Nearby is the Governor's Mansion, which also is open during certain hours for visitors who want to see rooms and furnishings in the historic structure. The University of Texas is home to the Lyndon B. Johnson Library, which brings scholars from all over the nation, and the world. It houses a spectacular collection of presidential papers and political memorabilia and truly is an imposing structure, one which I have visited time and time again.

Austin is proud of its country western music, including that of Willie Nelson, acclaimed on a national magazine cover for his talent. The Austin Sound became popular around the world some years ago and remains big, with many musicians in various halls and clubs. Austin has excellent hotel and motel facilities, but the fact the city is growing so rapidly and attracting so many visitors means that advance reservations are suggested, especially during a home sports event.

An excellent new hotel is the Marriott just off the expressway north of the city. It opened in 1978 with 300 deluxe rooms and four suites and became an immediate success. The hotel has free parking for more than 500 cars, a unique dining room called Diamond Lil's, 13 meeting and banquet rooms, Austin's largest hotel ballroom, a swimming pool and sauna, and many other features. It is within 10 minutes of the busy Austin airport, the University and downtown. The hotel is built of native stone and brick, reflecting its Texas hill country surroundings.

Other hotels include the Hilton Inn, Sheraton-Crest, a pair of excellent Holiday Inns, the venerable (but restored) Driskill in downtown Austin. There are excellent motels, including the Quality Inn at the south entrance to the city on the highway leading from San Antonio.

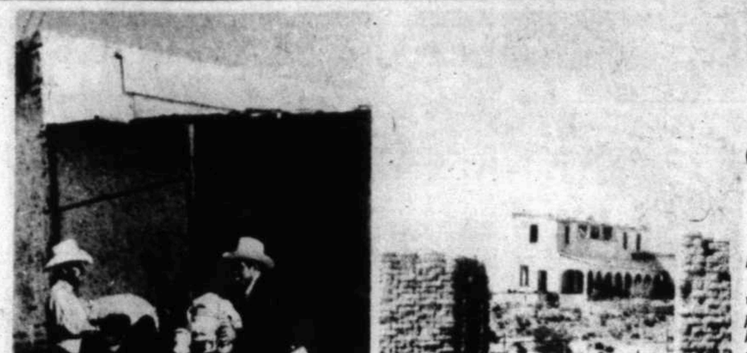

The Austin Chamber of Commerce can furnish information about the city and its accommodations, while you can get full data about the entire state by writing to Dept. GW, Texas Highways Dept., at Box 5064, Austin 78763.

For full information about Texas you should ask for "Texas-Land of Contrast", a 160-page illustrated book.

If your time permits, do visit Barton Springs, which I consider one of the finest recreation pools in the U.S. Springs feed the giant pool, which during the summer attracts swimmers and sunbathers of all ages, and which has the same water temperature , 68 degrees, all year around. This permits use by hardy bathers even in the winter months. Texas Monthly recently had a fine feature on Barton Springs, saying "Young and old, rich and poor, naked and demure all mingle in peace at the best place to swim in America, and a few even swim there."

Well, I saw the Texas Monthly photo of the braless young nymph beside the pool, but on my visits I have have seen nothing more revealing than bikinis. And I have seen hundreds of swimmers in the crystal clear water. The pool is located in a great public park, with play and picnic areas only two miles from the Capitol in the city's heart.

Austin is served by several airlines. There is Amtrak service on the Inter-American, slicing through mid-America from Chicago on the north to Laredo at the Mexican border. There is bus service, and if you drive, you'll find Austin about four hours south of Dallas-Fort Worth and about two hours north of San Antonio on wide expressways.

There is contrast at Lajitas in the Big Bend area. Near a modern motel, the Cavalry Post, and the start of a resort development are an old-time trading post, shown at left, and a crumbling mansion amidst the broken ruins of an adobe boom town at Terlingua.

Big Bend of Texas is historic area of vast distances

BY GORDON M. QUARNSTROM

BIG BEND—Here along the Rio Grande which is the border between the United States and Mexico is an area so vast you find it hard to believe it's only one part of the State of Texas.

The mighty Chisos Mountains appear on the distant skyline as tiny uprisings. When you reach them, you find they are tall and rugged, among the most beautiful mountains in America.

There are ghost towns, strangely beautiful desert vistas, Mexican border towns, the restored Fort Leeton, the little village of Castolon and a modern camp with comfortable accommodations.

The National Park Service and the Texas Tourist Development Agency recommend enough time to take the five tours which are outlined in the Road Guide available from the National Park Service.

One tour takes you over Burro Mesa and to the mouth of the Santa Elena Canyon, where the Rio Grande has carved its way through the granite over countless years.

Another drive is from the Basin junction to the Basin campsite, affording views of the mighty Chisos Mountains and a chance to climb along well-marked trails to view sights of rare beauty.

The little Rio Grande Village and Boquillas Canyon, also reached by excellent paved highway, are on yet another easy drive.

Variety, indeed. And let me recommend the Boquillas trip. The route is only 24 miles long and offers majestic late afternoon panoramas. The cliffs of Mexico's Sierra del Carmen are a fantastic backdrop to the vast expanse of Chihuahuan Desert wilderness.

It is wise to begin your park visit with an orientation session at the National Park Headquarters, centrally located at Panther Junction. Here you get assistance in planning your visit or special information about Big Bend's unique geology, plants, mammals, reptiles and birds.

Big Bend National Park is 1,100 square miles of sweeping desert landscape that encircles the deep canyons and rugged spires of the Chisos Mountains. It is easy to reach via excellent Texas highways, and the Park Service roads are very good, as well.

Fall and winter are good times to visit, when the weather is cool. In springtime the desert is abloom with millions of flowers.

Questions and some car care answers

By Paul Brant

Dear Mr. Brant:

Recently I bought a 1978 which has been giving me one particular problem–the engine keeps running after I shut it off. I understand this is a common problem and there's nothing I can do about it. Would you have any answers for me?

Running On

Dear Running On:

This is known as dieseling or run-on and has been common with certain cars such as yours. It's seldom incurable. Be sure that you're using the right grade of gasoline and have the idle speed set properly. An engine that's idling too fast may want to keep running when the ignition is turned off.

Also be sure that your ignition timing is set properly.

There are very few engines that will continue to run-on when they are properly tuned. Hopefully, yours is not one of the stubborn ones.

***

Dear Paul:

We have a drive-through short-order restaurant and would like to post signs suggesting our patrons shut off their engines while waiting in line. At what point is it economical to shut it off and start it again?

ABC

Dear ABC:

We're always glad to hear from someone who's promoting fuel economy. Authorities tell us the cut-off point is somewhere between 30 and 60 seconds depending upon the car, outside temperatures, etc. Not only is it energy-foolish to idle an engine for a long period, but it's also a contributor to air pollution. Besides, long periods of idling can be hard on an engine.

***

Dear Mr. Brant:

As a driver ed instructor I would like to warn my students about the dangers of starting grass fires with cars parked off the road. Can you tell me what causes these fires?

PE

Dear PE:

The culprit often is the catalytic converter, part of the car's emission control system. This can reach temperatures of between 500 and 700 degrees. When a car is pulled off the road and the hot converter touches anything combustible, the chain of events is obvious.

***

Dear Mr. Brant:

Please help resolve this question: How often should I have my wheels aligned? We are wondering about this because just two months ago we had the job done and the car was fine for a while. Then, suddenly, it was pulling to the right. Shouldn't a wheel alignment last for at least six months?

Toe-Out

Dear Toe-Out:

The question "How long should wheels stay in line?" is like asking "How long should a guitar stay in tune?"

If all parts involved are in good condition and the car is driven normally, there's no reason why the wheels should not stay in perfect alignment for from six months to a year . . . even longer. However, any unusual impact—against a curb, chuckhole or other obstruction—could cause misalignment.

***

Dear Mr. Brant:

My neighbor and I have virtually identical cars. He says I'm foolish to spend the kind of money I do in preventive maintenance; that it won't make much difference when I take the car in for trade. I disagree. What do you think?

P.M.

Dear P.M.:

Auto auctioneers say a well-maintained car is worth at least several hundred dollars more at trade than one that's been neglected. Even more important than resale value, I believe, is the benefit of driving a better looking, safer, more efficient car. So even if you lost 100 percent of your preventive maintenance investment at trade-in time, which is very unlikely because of the fuel economy achieved, you're still ahead of the game.

Check tires often for debris, signs of irregular tread wear

When you check the tire pressure once a month, make a habit of looking closely at the tires themselves.

Remove small pebbles, bits of glass and other foreign objects which may have become wedged in the tread grooves and could work their way deeper into the tire.

This is one of the hints on maintaining your tires for maximum safety and economy in a new, 12-page booklet, Five Keys to Better Tire Mileage and Safety, published by Tire Industry Safety Council. Free copies are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed business-sized envelope to Keys, care of TISC, Box 1801, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Among other hints in the regular inspection category, TISC suggests that if any tire continually needs additional air, you should have it checked to determine the cause of the slow leak and correct it.

Irregular treadwear can be a costly and dangerous situation.

If your tires are wearing out faster in the outer edges of the tread, it may mean the tires are underinflated.

Texas city noted for colorful floral displays

BY GORDON M. QUARNSTROM

TYLER—This East Texas community really is a city of flowers.

In the early spring the city is alive with color. Azaleas, dogwood, redbuds, thrift, daffodils and other flowers create such a scene of beauty that visitors come from near and far.

Seventy-five home gardens are shown during the Azalea and Spring Flower Trail, a civic undertaking of major proportions. This is held in late March each year, with the exact dates depending on the time Nature selects for the blooms to be at their peak.

And then come the roses, so many the Tyler Area Chamber of Commerce calls the city the "Rose Capital of America." There are roses in private gardens, in the city parks and in the municipal rose garden, called the largest in the world. It is a magnificent scene from early spring through the summer, drawing great numbers of rose fanciers and others who just admire beauty. The municipal garden consists of 38,000 bushes in 500 varieties on 22 acres. The colorful displays are open to the public with no admission charge.

The Texas Rose Festival is a gala affair late each October. There are four days of coronations, a rose show, a parade and other events. Each year more than 3,000 persons join their efforts to stage this great community extravaganza in tribute to the city's giant rose-growing industry.

Tyler is in the Piney Woods of East Texas, with large lakes nearby to provide recreational resources of great variety. Lakes Tyler, Tyler East and Palestine furnish boating, swimming and excellent fishing. Other attractions include the Goodman Museum, Rudnall Planetarium, Caldwell Children's Zoo, the Tyler Museum of Art and a convenient state park.

There are more than 1,400 motel and hotel rooms in addition to campgrounds.

Tyler is located east of Dallas. One can take Highway 20 as far as Route 69 and then travel a short distance south to the city. Highway 20 stretches from Dallas to Shreveport. It is a beautiful route through rich farmlands, rolling countryside and green pine forests.

For information you can write to the Tyler Area Chamber of Commerce, Box 390, Tyler 75710.

For information about the area you may write to Dept. GW, Texas Tourist Development Agency, Box 12008, Austin, Tx., 78711.

A booklet, "100 Great East Texas Weekends", now in its 14th year, tells about Tyler and other East Texas destinations. It is available from the East Texas Chamber of Commerce, Box 1592G, Longview, Tex., 75601.

That trip necessary?

More than 20 percent of all household driving could be eliminated without any great personal sacrifice, according to motorists polled in an oil company survey.

The Amoco Oil Co. survey showed that the total annual mileage of the average household increased a whopping 11 percent over one recent four-year period.

Significant increases occurred in several driving categories including commuting and business driving and recreational driving.

But the respondents indicated that only 78 percent of their driving was essential.

Check those headlights

Dirty or improperly aimed headlights or electrical problems may cause a decrease in the needed amount of light, making night driving more difficult.

Aimed either too low or too high, headlights fail to do their proper job and put an extra and unnecessary burden on your vision—and that of on-coming motorists.

For trouble-free summertime motoring, keep those headlights clean and functioning well.

Big savings

If American motorists began saving one gallon of gasoline per vehicle per week, an estimated 5.7 million gallons would be conserved annually, according to one major oil company.

Wet fun for the whole family.

Kawasaki Jet Ski.

Reg. $2399

Now $1999

Until you've ridden a Kawasaki Jet Ski., you don't know how much fun the water can be. Just climb on, grab the handlebars, hit the electric starter button and get ready for good times. The Jet Ski's engine, a reliable 440 twin, provides plenty of thrust through safe water jet drive. Simple controls, low weight and a stable Coast Guard-certified hull make it easy for the beginner as well as fun for the expert.

You can tote the Jet Ski in the back of a station wagon or van, so it's far less trouble than a boat. And far more fun!

Classic Kawasaki.

Now $1799 — KZ440 LTD Was $1899

Stylish, sporty, classic. Ten years ago that meant a British Twin. Now it means the Kawasaki KZ440LTD. We've increased the power, efficiency, and reliability without increasing the valves, cams and cylinders. It's simplicity redefined with electronic ignition and electric starter. Gassed and ready it comes in at under 400 lbs. The KZ440LTD is economical, runs strong and handles easy. Classics never go out of style. Kawasaki just makes them better.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, May 29, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of American Revolutionary orator Patrick Henry and President John F. Kennedy. Also sharing this birthday with you: entertainer Bob Hope. The year ahead holds much promise for those who are ambitious and quick to make up their minds. Trips to far-off places will result in financial gain and fascinating new friendships. Family ties are strengthened by the understanding you show for loved one's problems. A born peacemaker, you often are cast in the role of mediator both at work and home. Do not let the petty quarrels of others drain your energies. Spend more time with romantic partner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look forward to a wonderful weekend. Romance is happier than in the past. Make a gesture of good will towards contrary business associate. It will help ease tension and impress higher-ups.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Use your common sense today. A practical attitude could pay off at the bank. You solve a tricky personal problem. Open up new lines of communication at place of business.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Today's developments call for a forceful approach. You cannot afford to be shy when it comes to financial matters. State your case clearly and concisely.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Recover from one job before starting another. Project the best possible image at a business meeting. You could receive an attractive offer. New romance is exhilarating.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your carefree ways may put you at odds with someone who has a more serious attitude. Tend to work responsibilities before turning your attention to social activities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.22): Others may not share your expansive mood. Move cautiously. Practical details must be settled before a financial matter can be resolved. Ask for further information.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Catch up on paperwork before starting a fun weekend. You enter an exciting period for romance this evening. You may have to make compromises to win mate's support.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your high-powered, dazzling personality draws many interesting people into your life. Newcomer will have a positive effect on both finances and romance. Welcome suggestions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pace accelerates at office. Organize your time carefully so that you can meet important deadlines. Impulse buying could lead to regrets. Resist the urge to splurge!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cement a productive collaboration and line up support for your ideas. Joint monetary affairs merit close scrutiny. Romance takes on deeper meaning. You find yourself in a delightful quandary!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Reconcile opposing forces. Profits will increase as a direct result of your intervention. You emerge the biggest winner of all! Raise or promotion is in the wind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Introduce new ideas or work methods. Co-workers are receptive to changes that will make better use of their time. Influential person is impressed by your proposals

When a defender tries a deceptive play, he usually runs the risk of fooling his partner, which could cause the defense to go awry. Declarer labors under no such handicap. He can manipulate his cards any way he chooses, secure in the knowledge that he cannot mislead dummy!

Normally, you need a maximum no trump opening bid to accept partner's invitational raise. In this case, however, South decided to push on despite his minimum 16 points because the wealth of nines and tens he held gave his hand excellent texture.

West led his fourth-best spade, and East played the jack. Declarer saw that all was well if the club finesse were to succeed. By using diamonds as entries to take three club finesses, he could collect nine tricks in the minor suits alone. But what if the finesse failed? It was too much to hope that the defenders would continue spades of their own free will, and a heart shift would surely defeat the contract.

Declarer decided that the defenders needed a carrot to make them continue spades should the club finesse fail. Therefore, he smoothly won the first trick with the ace of spades!

A diamond to the king put declarer in dummy for a club finesse. West won the king and, sure that his partner held the queen of spades, he continued with a low spade. He was greatly surprised when declarer won this trick with the queen and then cashed his minor-suit winners to emerge with an overtrick.

At the very highest level, perhaps, declarer's little subterfuge would not succeed. When in with the king of clubs West should lay down the king of spades in the expectation that his partner would unblock the queen, if he had it. When the queen does not appear, the heart shift becomes obvious.

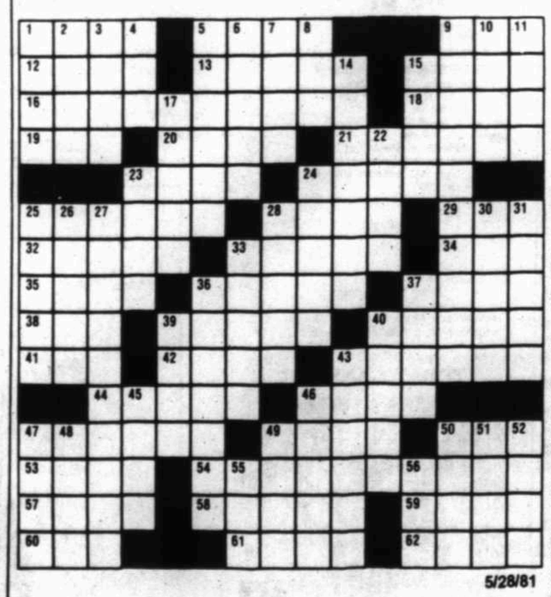

But would you have defended that way?

Judge asked to delay strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge in New York was to be asked today by the National Labor Relations Board to keep major league baseball players from following through on their threat to strike over the free agent compensation dispute after tonight's games.

At the same time, a court-ordered postponement could give the players a legal way around the deadline imposed by the basic agreement reached last year when it was established that if the players did not strike by June 1 over the issue, they could not do so for the reminder of the life of the agreement.

THE NLRB, acting on the request of its general counsel William A. Lubbers, said Wednesday night it would seek a temporary restraining order in U.S. District Court in New York to postpone the walkout for 48 hours to allow time for filing and study of an injunction request aimed at further delaying the strike.

The Board said in a statement Wednesday night that it wanted to give further study to an unfair labor practice charge lodged against the club owners by the players association.

The player group's complaint, charging the owners with not bargaining in good faith, is aimed at obtaining financial data from the club owners. The players group maintains such data is essential in their current negotiations on the degree of compensation teams should receive for losing free agents in the re-entry draft.

Lubbers declined to say whether the NLRB will ask the judge to order the owners to release their financial files.

THE BOARD has scheduled hearings on the players' charge for June 15 in New York before an administrative law judge.

Unless there was a dramatic change in today's negotiations — Wednesday's session lasted only seven minutes — court action would seem the only way of heading off a walkout.

The board's decision to seek a temporary restraining order was immediately challenged by the Player Relations Committee, the owners bargaining unit.

"There is no basis for an injunction in this matter. The decision to seek such relief is an intrusion in the process of collective bargaining where the parties must ultimately resolve their differences," said a statement issued by Ray Grebey, director of the committee and chief negotiator for the owners.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association, declined comment until he had seen a copy of the board's decision.

However, some players saw the NLRB's decision to go for an injunction as a hopeful sign.

"I think it's very favorable, said Montreal Expos pitcher Steve Rogers, who was optimistic about the players being able eventually to get the owner's financial data. "A delay (in the strike) means nothing compared to what we can gain by having access to the owners' books."

MARK BELANGER, Baltimore Orioles player representative, said of the NLRB decision: "I hope it gets people to sit down and talk again."

Orioles General Manager Hank Peters commented: "If the injunction is granted, I guess that buys additional time for further negotiations. That may sound silly after 16 months of talking, but the added pressure on both sides might lead to a negotiated settlement.

Kenneth E. Moffett, the federal mediator, who has been overseeing the negotiations, said Wednesday before the NLRB's announcement that both sides had agreed to return to the bargaining table today "no matter what happens in Washington."

Grebey agreed that he would be back at the bargaining table, calling the NLRB deliberations "an ancillary activity."

The player association's executive board was scheduled to meet in New York tonight to, in Miller's words, "make the final decision on a strike." The comment was made before he knew of the impending court action.

Fans fed up with strike talk

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball players have maintained that the average hot dog-eating, ticket-buying fan would be on their side if they understood the issues that threaten to end the season with a strike.

"We don't have our hands out. We just want to keep things as they are now," goes the Major League Players Association party line.

But interviews with New Yorkers and visitors from out-of-town Wednesday revealed that most of those who realize that free agent compensation is the No. 1 issue still believe in the idea that players are getting enough money and don't need any more.

"In the old days, the players were slaves. They needed their freedom and they got it," said John Bonner of New York, who described himself as a serious, passionate baseball fan. "But now the pendulum has swung too far and the players are running baseball.

"Players deserve a piece of the pie," Bonner said, "but they're asking for too big a piece."

Allen Weisbord of Cherry Hill, N.J., a Philadelphia Phillies season ticketholder, said owners' "greed" originally created the current situation, but players took advantage of the situation and are now "ruining the game when a player like (Atlanta's) Claudell Washington can get $750,000 — and he's not worth half that.

Weisbord said owners "have to stick to their guns and get a system of compensation like the NFL. If they don't people will only come to the parks in cities where they have contenders. Tickets, parking, beer ... it's just getting too expensive for the average fan."

Weisbord finally concluded that neither owners nor players care about the fans. "If they can't keep ticket prices down, then the game will go down the tubes and no one will come to the park."

Bonner also said he favors the owners on the compensation issue because "free agency is a farce with players jumping all around."

He said a compensation system like pro football's would not mean salaries would go down. "They may remain at the present level, but this level is way ahead of what it should be."

Bonner said it would be a "bum summer" without baseball, and a long strike will mean "interest will wane if you don't have baseball from June to March.

Paul Hoch of Carlisle, Pa., a Pittsburgh Pirates fan, recommended that owners continue the season with minor-league players and said that "fans would watch if they have a winner. Fans are fed up and players should realize that. I do my job as well as they do theirs and I don't get a million dollars."

J.R. McCarthy of New York said he finds it "strange that second-line players can make six-figure salaries" and said a strike would prove the reality that baseball is "just a business. Fans would be unhappy if there's a strike, but we can live without baseball. We still have to pay the rent."

Not everyone interviewed had grasped the compensation issue as the key one.

Jim Mathis of Indianapolis saw the main issue as "rights for lesser players. I think the lower paid players are being had a little bit. There's not enough money to go around."

Many of the highest-paid players have said they would go on strike not to protect the current compensation rule for themselves, since their futures are secure, but for lesser-known players and future stars.

Mathis, a Dodgers and Reds fan, said he has been "tolerant of players problems, but now I've heard these problems for three years and I'm tired of hearing about them. I have problems of my own."

Everyone, of course, is not a baseball fan.

Nicholas Gish, who lives on Cape Cod, Mass., a hockey follower, said, "I hate baseball. It's way too slow and a waste of time."

If at first you don't succeed..

Giants Manager Frank Robinson rants and raves, above, and for his theatrical display is bypassed for an Oscar in favor of a dismissal thumb from umpire Ed Montague. Employing a different tact, below, with umpire Lee Weyer, Robby bows and scrapes to "his worsship" and still winds up losing the argument.

Irvine's grand slam paces El Paso victory

By The Associated Press

Eddie Irvine had a grand slam home run as the El Paso Diablos defeated the Jackson Mets, 16-10, in a Texas League baseball game Wednesday night.

In other Texas League action, Tulsa defeated Amarillo, 6-1, and San Antonio beat Arkansas, 5-1.

El Paso and Jackson got off to a fast start with Irvine's grand slam in the second inning giving El Paso a 12-8 lead at the end of the second inning.

Mike Davis and Marvell Wynne had solo homers for Jackson.

Chuck Valley, 4-0, was the winning pitcher. Tom Thurberg, 3-4, was the loser.

Unser claims Gentlemen's agreements are myths

By STEVE HERMAN

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bobby Unser, saying that "gentlemen's agreements in sporting events don't exist," claims Indianapolis 500 stewards had no rule to use in stripping him of victory in Sunday's race and giving it to Mario Andretti.

It was the stewards' contention that Unser improved his position considerably by passing a line of cars on the track as he came out of the pits during a caution period.

The deadline for filing an appeal with the U.S. Auto Club is midnight tonight.

Unser, who crossed the finish line five seconds before Andretti, was penalized one lap and fell to second place. Unser said there was no formal rule against coming back onto the track the way he did.

"In this case, there was no rule to cover what happened," he said. "Usually, the procedure is to slow way down and wait for the cars to go by when there is no hole to go in. It only looked bad because there was an open hole which I did go in."

TO GET TO the open spot on the track, however, Unser had to pass at least a half-dozen cars — while riding beneath the line separating the main part of the track from the apron.

The controversy won't be settled "until they write a rule because of this big stink," said Unser.

The existing rule, appearing in a bulletin signed by Chief Steward Tom Binford, makes no mention of where a car must fall into the pack except that it must not "return to the track ahead of the pace car or the leader of the pack."

Although Unser passed the line of cars, he rejoined the field behind the pace car and the leader at that point. Binford said there was a "gentlemen's agreement" at a pre-race drivers' meeting that a car exiting the pits could pass one or two cars but no more.

"What he refers to," Unser said, "is (passing) when you do come back in the field."

REFEREE ART Meyers said the "gentlemen's agreement" that Binford referred to at the pre-race meeting was that "a driver looks to his right, picks a spot and blends into that spot. Tom gave them one or two cars (to do that). A car is coming out of the pits at 125 mph and the pack is running 80. One or two cars are okay. That was what was said in the meeting."

Unser disputes that.

"There is no set rule on passing from leaving the pits," he said. "You're just supposed to blend into the line by the time you get to the second turn. I knew what I was doing and I openly admit to passing those cars, but it wasn't a mistake because Mario did the same thing. But why is it okay for Mario to do it and not okay for Bobby?"

Unser said his big worry now was whether he would get a fair hearing from USAC in view of his affiliation with the rival Championship Auto Racing Teams. His car owner, Roger Penske, was an organizer of CART, but so was Pat Patrick, owner of Andretti's car.

Cubs lose again with bases full

SHREVEPORT — The Midland Cubs pounded out 11 hits, including two homers, here Wednesday night, but ended up leaving the bases loaded in three innings and stranding 13 runners on the base paths to drop a 6-4 decision to the Shreveport Captains in a Texas League game.

The loss left the Cubs with a 1-5 record on the current road trip and 3-20 for the season on the road. This was the first game of a five-game set with the Captains.

Shreveport jumped to a 6-0 lead in this one as the Captains touched starter Craig Lefferts for all the runs in the first four innings of play. The Captians scored an unearned run in the first and got an RBI single from Bob Cummings in the third for a 2-0 lead. The Caps put the game away in the fourth with four runs as Jim Wojcik and Ron Quick both drove in two runs each with a single and double.

Bob Blyth came in at that point and pitched 4⅓ innings of shutout relief, but the Cubs couldn't make the comeback. The Cub hitters didn't help by leaving the bases loaded in the fourth, fifth and ninth innings.

The Cubs got their first run in the sixth when Carmello Martinez hit his fourth homer of the year and Fritz Connally drove in three more in the seventh with his first homer of the season.

Mark Dempsey ran his 1981 record to 6-0 with 6⅔ innings of work. The two homers chased him from the game, but he had thrown 134 pitches before being pulled. Dempsey lost only one game all last year. He shutout out the Cubs through the first six innings of play, but pitched his way out of major jams in the fourth and fifth innings when the Cubs loaded the bases against him.

Wayne Dunn got the save in the ninth when he got a ground ball with two outs and the bases loaded again.

The two teams tangle again tonight. The Cubs return home Wednesday to begin a six-game homestand with Amarillo.

Cliff Gustafson will call on Tony Arnold Saturday

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — University of Texas baseball coach Cliff Gustafson said Wednesday that Tony Arnold will probably be his starting pitcher Saturday night in the Longhorns' first-round College World Series game against Arizona State.

"I have some reservations about whether he can bounce back," Gustafson said of Arnold's availability Saturday night. "He pitched two complete nine-inning games on short rest (in the regional), and he's not used to doing that."

If Arnold is not adequately rested, Gustafson told the Omaha World-Herald that he would start senior right-hander Robert Culley (5-1).

Arnold, a junior right-hander, has pitched 142 23 innings, a University of Texas record. His last two decisions were victories in the Central Regional in Austin.

In the windup Monday night, Arnold pushed his record to 17-0 with a 10-2 victory over Stanford — with just two days' rest.

Control is a forte of the 22-year-old Arnold. He has walked only 19 batters this spring. He went 7-0 in Southwest Conference play, and the league office called to see if Arnold's figure of only four walks in those games was a typographical error.

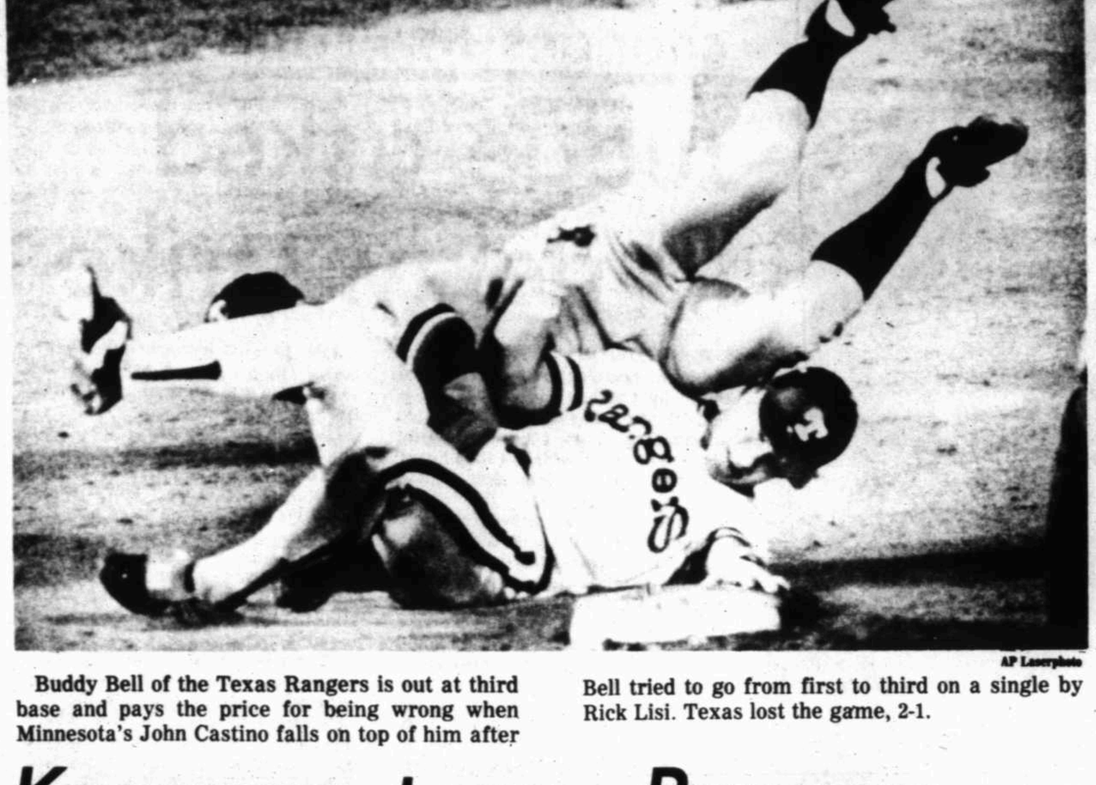

Arnold has been especially valuable since Texas lost its two top pitchers to the professional draft last season. As a sophomore in 1979, Arnold was 4-0 for a Texas club that finished fourth in the CWS. Arnold did not pitch in that CWS.

A wicked curve was his main pitch at Irving (Texas) High School, where he once struck out 31 in 15 innings. In college, he has added zip to his fastball - and developed an uncanny ability to throw strikes.

Here are the first-round pairings for the series:

Saturday — Michigan (41-18) vs. Mississippi State (45-12); Arizona State (50-12) vs. Texas (58-9-1).

Sunday — South Carolina (44-13) vs. Oklahoma State (49-15); Miami (Fla.) (60-8) vs. Maine (32-12).

Koosman tames Rangers

By The Associated Press

Veteran pitcher Jerry Koosman is the player representative for the Minnestoa Twins, which means he is responsible for informing his teammates regarding the negotiations between the Major League Players Association and the team owners.

But Wednesday night, he also was the starting pitcher, which meant he was responsible for getting the slumping Twins a win over the Texas Rangers.

HE SAID he did the one by forgetting about the other.

"If you don't let yourself get so worked up about it (the negotiations), it's easier to get your mind off it," said Koosman, 3-6. "Right is going to prevail and I'm just not worried about it."

Koosman scattered 10 hits over eight innings and, with relief help in the ninth from Doug Corbett, posted a 2-1 win that halted the Twins' four-game losing string.

"I had to work hard to keep them from scoring more than one run on those 10 hits — and so did my teammates," Koosman grinned after the game.

Texas starter Danny Darwin, who had a no-hitter through five innings and did not let a Minnesota runner past first base until the eighth, was philosophical about pitching well but losing.

"I don't think anybody feels too bad about this one," said Darwin, 5-4. "I thought I pitched well. I like to pitch in the close ones — seems like I pitch better. It just wasn't meant for me to win."

THE RANGERS had scored a run in the first, when Bump Wills singled and scored on Al Olivers' booming triple to right field, and for seven innings Darwin appeared to need no more than that.

But Danny Godwin led off the eighth by drilling a fastball into the right field seats to tie the game. The Twins' first baseman later seemed surprised at the feat.

"I tell you, after the first time he (Darwin) pitched to me, I had no idea what I was going to do to hit him," said Goodwin. "His fastball was moving — it would start inside on me and then rise and then break over the plate for a strike — when a ball moves like that, you just have to take what you can get. I was only trying to drive the ball hard, I wasn't thinking home run."

The winning run came in the top of the ninth when Rick Sofield walked, Rob Wilfong sacrificed him to second and centerfielder Mickey Hatcher scored him with a single to left.

Corbett set the Rangers down in order in the ninth to snap a five-game Texas winning streak.

RANGER BACKUP man Bill Stein, who started in left field Wednesday, extended his personal hitting string to 15 consecutive games with a sixth-inning single. On Tuesday, Stein set an American League record with his seventh successful pinch hit in a row.

In other American League action Wednesday, Terry Crowley produced a bases loaded single in the ninth inning to give Baltimore a 6-5 victory over New York. Chicago's Ron LeFlore drove in one run and took away two with a great catch, leading the White Sox to a 3-0 victory over Oakland.

Jim Rice belted two homers and Rick Miller and Dwight Evans one each as Boston rode a six-run fourth inning to a 10-5 victory over Cleveland, snapping Bert Blyleven's six-game winning streak.

BEN OGLIVIE hit a two-run single and Charlie Moore had three hits and scored twice, leading Milwaukee to a 5-1 victory over Detroit.

In late AL action on the West Coast, Willie Aikens' three-run homer highlighted Kansas City's four-run first inning and the Royals held off the Seattle Mariners 8-5.

Alfredo Griffin singled for one run and John Mayberry clubbed his seventh homer of the year as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the California Angels 3-1.

Martin threatens player fines

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Manager Billy Martin threatened to punish any Oakland A's player who misses the team's scheduled flight to Toronto Thursday — and most of the players said they planned to miss it unless their strike threat is resolved by that time.

"I will go to the heaviest extremes to fine them" unless the players' association orders them to skip the 12:40 p.m. PDT commercial flight, Martin told reporters following the team's 3-0 loss to the Chicago White Sox Wednesday.

He conceded that he probably can't legally fine the players for missing the team plane itself. But he warned any signs of jet lag would be severely punished.

"If they arrive at 4:30 (Friday) and the game starts at 7:30 and I see any guy not running a ball out ... I'm going to do the damndest things ...," Martin warned. "No more favors. No more Mr. Good Guy."

Astros win again, 1-0

Reds swim over Giants

By The Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds and San Francisco Giants played a game in weather more suited for ducks than baseball players Wednesday night. But Mario Soto made it through the rain.

"I think after he came back from the rain delay, he threw better," said Cincinnati catcher Mike O'Berry after Soto pitched the Reds to a 3-2 victory in soggy Riverfront Stadium.

The game was delayed three times by rain — the last in the top of the first for two hours and 18 minutes after the Giants scored twice off Soto. He then came back to shut out the Giants the rest of the way for his fourth complete game, scattering eight hits.

"He threw mostly fastballs (after he came back)," said O'Berry. "He got away from throwing changeups. As long as Mario stays ahead and doesn't try to fool around too much, he's a powerful pitcher."

Soto, who spent the two-hour, 18-minute rain delay by reading a book in the Reds clubhouse, said he had trouble loosening up when play resumed.

"The first time I warmed up, I was ready for the game," Soto said. "It didn't look like I was ready. The second time I went out there my body was kind of tight."

Dave Collins scored one run and doubled home another to help Soto improve his record to 4-5. Collins broke a 2-2 tie in the fourth when he singled home Ray Knigho, who had doubled to lead off the inning.

The Giants had scored twice in the top of the first. Enos Cabell singled, stole second and scored on Joe Morgan's single. Jack Clark then doubled to score Morgan from first.

When the rain finally subsided, the Reds quickly tied the game in the bottom of the inning. Doubles by Collins and Dave Concepcion, who had three hits, produced one run. Johnny Bench singled for another.

Astros 1, Padres 0

Bob Knepper recorded his fourth shutout in five decisions and catcher Luis Pujols drove home the winning run as Houston blanked San Diego to sweep their three-game series.

Knepper, 5-0, retired 15 of the first 17 batters he faced and scattered six hits. The Houston starter did not allow a hit until Ozzie Smith led off the fourth with a single. Knepper struck out five and walked one.

First baseman Dave Roberts led off the Astros' fourth inning with a single off Padres starter Chris Welsh, 2-3. Roberts stole second base and scored on Pujols's base hit.

"I didn't get tired, I just got a little sloppy at the end," Knepper said. "Pujols was very good it keeping me sharp."

Pirates 3, Cubs 2

Tony Pena drove home the winning run with a two-out single in the ninth inning as Pittsburgh beat Chicago. Pena's base hit brought home pinch-runner Matt Alexander from second base, giving the victory to Pasqual Perez, 2-0.

With one out, Mike Easler drew a walk from Rick Reuschel, 2-6. Alexander ran for Easler and Phil Garner advanced him to second with a grounder before Pena came through with his second RBI of the game.

Perez fired his second straight complete-game victory, scattering nine hits.

"He pitches like a veteran," Pirate Manager Chuck Tanner said of the 24-year-old Perez. "He's just been outstanding."

Braves 3, Dodgers 2

Terry Harper's leadoff homer in the ninth inning carried Atlanta over Los Angeles. Harper drilled his second homer of the season on a 2-0 pitch from Dodger reliever Steve Howe, 4-2. The victory went to Rick Camp, 5-1, who retired the Dodgers in order in the ninth.

The Braves had tied the game 2-2 with a run in the eighth. Bruce Benedict led off with an infield hit and took second when third baseman Ron Cey threw wildly past first on the play. Benedict was sacrificed to third by Rafael Ramirez and scored on pinch-hitter Claudell Washington's dou.le off reliever Dave Stewart.

"I was just hoping Dusty Baker wouldn't jump up and catch it," Harper said of his homer. "Last year he caught one on me in Los Angeles just like that."

Expos 4, Cardinals 1

Chris Speier smashed a run-scoring single and Tom Raines delivered a sacrifice fly in a two-run seventh inning that snapped a 1-1 tie and carried Montreal over St. Louis.

Tim Wallach ignited the winning rally with a single on the first pitch from John Martin, 1-1. After Wallach moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Larry Parrish, Gary White drew a walk and Speier singled sharply to score Wallach.

Bob Pate, pinch hitting for starter Charlie Lea, 4-1, drew a walk off Martin and Raines, facing reliever Jim Kaat, hit a line drive to center field to produce another run.

Mets 3, Phillies 1

Dave Kingman slugged a tie-breaking home run, his ninth of the season, and Pat Zachry tossed a six-hitter to lead New York over Philadelphia.

Kingman lined a 1-0 delivery from Phillies right-hander Larry Christenson, 1-5, into the left field bullpen in Shea Stadium in the fourth inning to break a 1-1 tie.

Steinbrenner threatens changes for Yankees

BALTIMORE (AP) — Owner George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees threatened changes, hinting that Manager Gene Michael's job may be in jeopardy, after the Baltimore Orioles completed a three-game sweep Wednesday night.

The fiery Steinbrenner, who watched the series finale in the private box of Baltimore owner Edward Bennett Williams, erupted soon after Terry Crowley's ninth-inning single gave the Orioles a 6-5 decision.

"I'm worried that we're falling so far behind Baltimore in the loss column," Steinbrenner said after the Yanks dropped 4½ games behind the leaders of the American League East with 120 games remaining.

"I'm not going to allow it to happen much longer," Steinbrenner said. "If change is what is necessary, that's what we're going to decide. We just can't keep going like this. There will be some things happening, very shortly."

Asked if the changes could involve non-playing personnel, Steinbrenner said, "they could be."

"I'm not yelling or I'm not mad at Gene," Steinbrenner said of his rookie manager. "He's doing the best he can. But he's having a tough time making the right decisions."

Steinbrenner noted that when Michael left pitcher Gene Nelson in Tuesday night's game, the rookie yielded a three-run homer to Crowley. When Micheal replaced starter Rudy May on Wednesday, reliever Ron Davis gave up a two-run homer to Doug DeCinces.

"Unfortunately, Gene's been snakebit with his decisions," Steinbrenner said. "But he has to live and die with them."

Steinbrenner blamed Wednesday's loss on Rick Cerone and Willie Randolph, taking another swipe at Michael because Cerone was batting second in the order.

"Cerone just came back from an injury," Steinbrenner said. "What he's doing batting second, I don't know."

Cerone grounded into a bases-loaded double play in the third inning, when the Yanks failed to score, and grounded into another twin killing in the eighth before New York rallied for three runs to tie the score 5-5.

In the ninth, after Bucky Dent opened with a single, Randolph lined into a double play after trying unsuccesfully to bunt.

"I don't know why we can't be taught to bunt," Steinbrenner said.

Steinbrenner also contended that right fielder Reggie Jackson should have been charged with an error Tuesday night when he shied away from a ball near the wall and it fell for a double. Crowley followed with his three-run homer.

Jimmy Connors: 'I feel like a duck'

PARIS (AP) — Black rain clouds have darkened the horizon in Jimmy Connors' search for a major European clay court tennis championship.

"I feel like a duck," Connors, the No. 2 seed in the French Open, said after his first-round victory over France's Christophe Roger-Vasselin that was twice interrupted by downpours Wednesday. "It's rained every day I've been here. It's made practicing difficult."

The rain-plagued French Open, the first Grand Slam event of the season, moves into its fourth day today on the clay courts of Roland Garros Stadium.

Sweden's Bjron Borg, the favorite to win the two-week tournament, meets Cassio Motta of Brazil in a second-round match today, while American Chris Evert Lloyd, No. 1 seed among the women, faces Argentina's Claudia Casabianca in her second outing.

Connors, ranked third in the world after holding the top spot for five years, comes up against Gabriel Urpi of Spain in another second-round match today.

The 28-year-old American, who missed a shot at the Monte Carlo title last month because of rain, worked hard Wednesday in posting a 6-1, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3 triumph over the towering Roger-Vasselin.

In the day's top upset, Ecuador's Ricardo Ycaza, 23, ranked 52nd in the world, toppled ninth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States 4-6, 6-2, 7-5, 7-5.

Gerulaitis, who fell to Borg in the finals at Paris last year, was the third seeded player to be eliminated in first-round action. Americans Harold Solomon, No. 8, and Eliot Teltscher, No. 10, already have been ousted.

Other major seeded players survived their matches Wednesday. Fifth-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia eliminated Australia's John Fitzgerald 7-5, 7-6, 6-4, while seventh-seeded Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina beat Switzerland's Heinz Gunthardt 7-5, 7-5, 6-1.

American Andrea Jaeger, seeded third in the women's singles, barely survived a determined upset bid by Andrea Temesvari, a 15-year-old Hungarian making her first appearance at the French Open. Jaeger, making her debut on center court, staved off match point and fought back to win 4-6, 7-6, 6-3.

Temesvari played steadily on the slow surface, waiting for her opponent to make mistakes, while Jaeger continually hit long. It was not until late in the second set, when she faced defeat, that Jager, also 15, found accuracy with her ground strokes.

The daughter of a former star on the Hungarian national basketball team, Temesvari, playing in her first major tournament, displayed a generous backswing and powerful forehand.

Connors was hampered Wednesday by the damp clay courts that slowed his notorious fast shots.

"Rain delays are tough," said Connors. "It worked out well today, but I'll get better. I'm getting better on clay all the time."

Connors has never won a title on the French Open clay courts. The best he has done is to reach the semifinals in the last two years.

With a style marked by increasing patience, Connors made it to the finals of the Monte Carlo Open in April. Rainy weather, however, canceled his title match against Argentina's Guillermo Vilas. It had been the American's first chance for the championship on the slow European red clay courts.

The organizers of the Monte Carlo tournament had hoped Connors and Vilas could finish their match, which was halted at 5-5 in the first set, after the French Open.

"That may be very difficult to do," Connors said Wednesday. "We're both going to want to leave Paris quickly to start getting ready for Wimbledon."

Are teams 'partners' or 'competitors'?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Are the 28 National Football League teams "partners" or "competitors?"

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and Los Angeles Coliseum Commission attorney Maxwell Blecher expressed different opinions on the subject in U.S. District Court.

Rozelle's repeated description of the league's members as "partners" rather than competitors was challenged by Blecher on Wednesday at the antitrust trial in which the Raiders and the Coliseum Commission are suing the NFL over the team's proposed move from Oakland to Los Angeles.

Rozelle claimed that as partners, the team owners had every right to vote against the Raiders' move to Los Angeles, which they did.

"I feel very strongly it's a partnership," testified the commissioner. "I want to stress it because I believe in it and I want the jury to understand it."

But Blecher said "partners" was a "buzz word" which Rozelle began using only after the lawsuit was filed and antitrust became an issue.

Blecher claims that the movement of a team often benefits the team individually through income that is not shared with other members of the league. An example, he said, was the move of the Los Angeles Rams to nearby Anaheim before the 1980 season.

Rozelle agreed with Blecher that the only major benefit to the league was increased income, because visiting teams get a 40-percent share of gate receipts. Visitors' receipts jumped by $100,000 per game when the Rams moved.

By the end of Wednesday's session, NFL attorney Patrick Lynch had begun his questioning of Rozelle.

Rozelle commented that he believed it was possible that the Coliseum "blew it" by not trying hard enough to keep the Rams. Rozelle said he had been hopeful that Carroll Rosenbloom, the late owner of the Rams, could work something out with them.

If Rosenbloom had been given one-quarter of what was offered Al Davis, the managing general partner of the Raiders, the Rams would still be in the Coliseum, Rozelle said.

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the second of a two-part series involving sharks.

There are some 250 species of sharks, ranging in size from six inches to 45 to 60 feet. Fortunately the two largest--the basking shark and the whale shark--are gentle plankton-eaters. But the whale shark, pushing its huge mouth through the water to filter 400,000 gallons an hour for plankton, takes in all sorts of objects, from discarded crates and trunks to other large fish that follow the plankton into the huge maw.

Of the other species and subspecies, no one is quite certain just how many should be considered dangerous to man. In the International Shark Attack File maintained by the U.S. Navy and the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C., 39 species are listed as having been implicated in attacks on humans. Those that are most frequently placed in the man-eating category are the formidable great white; the tiger; the mako and its relatives; the deadly gray nurse of Australian and South African waters; the hammerhead; the sand shark; and a collection of villians, lumped under the appropriate family name of requiem sharks, that includes the brown, the dusky, the great blue, the blacktip, the whitetip and the lemon.

THERE IS one recognized fresh-water marauder, the bull shark, also called the Lake Nicaragua shark, which inhabits a 100-mile-long lake of the same name in Central America. It is also known as the Ganges shark, which has developed a taste for the cadavers of pious Indians ceremoniously committed to that sacred river and its tributary, the Hooghly. This species seems to make little distinction between the quick and the dead and goes after bathers as well as corpses.

Among all the man-killers of river, lake and sea, the great white shark (Jaws) fully deserves the title as most deadly. It is the biggest of the man-eaters, the largest specimen ever caught measured 21 feet and weighed more than three tons. It also is the most powerful and the most voracious, standing convicted in the Navy-Smithsonian Shark Attack File of the greatest number of assualts on human beings of all sharks. The great white attacks in warm waters and in cool; in the shallows and in the depths; nearly always without warning and frequently with fatal results due to the power of its charge and the size of its teeth and mouth. A report from Australia has it that one great white was taken with the remains of a whole horse in its belly. In 1916 a shark fatally attacked four bathers and mutilated a fifth in a few days along a stretch of the New Jersey coast, setting off the greatest shark hunt in the nation's history. Although the fish was never caught, based on available evidence, most experts concluded that the culprit was a great white.

THE GREAT white is the archetype of the carnivorous shark. During World War II literally thousands of victims of ship disasters were consumed by sharks, but by far the greatest number of authenticated attacks occurred with the victims standing in waist deep in or swimming within 10 to 50 yards of the shore.

Tiger Shark: The tiger shark, a distinct species from the sand tiger, is easy to recognize by the striped markings that are prominent in the young and become paler as the fish ages. Growing to a length of about 20 feet, the shark usually moves lethargically, but in pursuit of prey it becomes a determined and swift swimmer. The tiger shark is common to tropical waters and is especially feared in the coastal areas of the West Indies, Australia and India, where it habitually roams shallow waters for food. It has been known to eat anything from stingrays to chicken coops.

Nurse Shark: The nurse shark is a large (up to 10 feet long), slow-moving creature with a short, rounded snout. Its small teeth and powerful jaws give it a dentition better suited to crushing than bitting. In many attacks on humans th nurse shark has demonstrated this by clamping its jaws so tightly onto its victim that only by killing the fish could it be dislodged.

Grey Shark: The grey reef shark is found in the Indian and Pacific oceans, where it has been implicated in a number of attacks on humans.

White Tip: The oceanic whitetip shark is an inhabitant of the warm waters of the Atlantic, Gulf of Mexico, the Caribbean and the Pacific. These little fish, who like to hitch a ride from time to time, remove the annoying parasites that plague sharks and feed on the sharks' scraps.

Hammerhead: The hammerhead shark, with its flattened and elongated had, resembles no other fish in the sea. An eye and nostril are located at each end o the hammer-shaped head. It is believed that this distinctive form acts as a balancing and steering aid for the hammerhead was well as helping it hunt more effectively by giving it a wider path of water to sample. The largest of the nearly dozen species of hammerheads grows to 18 feet and weighs over 1,000 pounds. There have been many reported attacks on humans by hammerheads. They are a vicious creature, will eat almost anything and are considered one of the most dangerous to humans in the sea.

The most common of the dangerous sharks off the Texas Gulf Coast include: Blacktip, Bull, Lemon, Tiger, Great Hammerhead and Shortfin Mako.

Rassett captures NCAA golf lead

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Joe Rassett took a 3-stroke lead in the individual competition and led Oral Roberts to a 2-stroke lead over New Mexico in the first-round at the 84th NCAA Golf Championships.

The leading team from the school in Tulsa, Okla. had a 286 total and held a 2-stroke lead over New Mexico. Houston was third, three stokes back. Rassett shot a 5-under par 66 Wednesday, and was followed in the individual race by Purdue's Rick Dalpos who opened with a 69.

Defending individual champion Jay Don Blake of Uah State,who was playing with a painful strained back muscle, had a 70 on the 6,835-yard Stanford University course and was tied for third with Mike Putnam of New Mexico. A group at 71 included two Houston players, Ray Barr and Donnie Burwell, and Don Hurter of New Mexico.

"I couldn't play much better, or luckier, than I did out there," said Rassett, a senior from Turlock, Calif. who was fifth in the NCAA tournaments last year. "My longest putt was an 18-footer for a birdie and I think I hit the rough only once all day."

He had six birds and narrowly missed on two putts for eagles. His only bogey came at the 14th hole where he three-putted for a 4.

Dalpos, winner of the Northern Intercollegiate tournament this year, had only one birdie in his round. Blake was three under par through nine holes before struggling on the back side, where he had three bogies and one bird.

The team scores are determined by counting the four best rounds for each five-man teams, and Oral Roberts threw out a 77 by Bill Glasson. The other Titans all were at 75 or better, with Bryan Norton at 72 and Jim Kane at 73 both among the individual leaders.

Texas A&M and Pacific-10 team champion Arizona State were tied for fourth at 293 after the first round. At 294 were Georgia, Brigham Young, Texas and San Diego State.

Shoe captures 8,000th, then adds three more

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Amid the floodlights of television cameras, soft-spoken Bill Shoemaker told his feelings on winning the 8,000th race of his illustrious career in thoroughbred racing.

Then, just as calmly, he took over for two sick fellow jockeys and won three more races at Hollywood Park Wednesday.

His 8,003 career triumphs may never be equaled, but the 49-year-old Shoemaker said, "I think someone will do it again."

Shoemaker became a jockey as a teenager. Born prematurely in Fabens, Tex., on Aug. 19, 1931, he weighed 2½ pounds and was incubated in a shoebox placed in an oven.

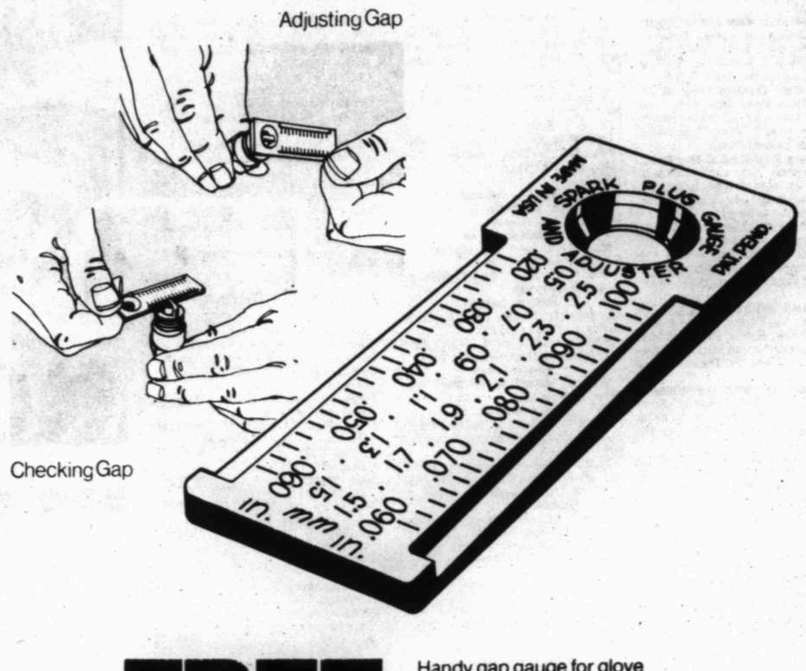

"It took me 32 years to get 7,999 and I knew I would get 8,000," he said. "But originally, I didn't think I would get 5,000 or 6,000 or 7,000.

Shoemaker broke John Longden's world record of 6,032 lifetime winners on Dares J. on Sept 7, 1970, and the retired Longden remains No. 2 on the list of winning jockeys.

Eddie Arcaro is third nearly 2,000 behind and Arcaro has also retired.

"I'm not entertaining any thoughts of retiring," said Shoemaker, whose mounts have won $81,930,976 for the owners of horses he has ridden. Long ago, he became a millionaire on his own and he admits that on the three occasions when he was injured, he thought of quitting.

Now he is most proud of his physical shape. Standing 4-feet-11, he weighs about 100 pounds.

Julius Erving receives MVP honor over Bird

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers beat Boston Celtics star Larry Bird for the National Basketball Association's Most Valuable Player award in voting announced Wednesday. Now he's setting his sights on the team title.

Erving received 28 first-place votes and 454 points in the MVP balloting to 20 first-place votes and 423 points for Bird. But it was Bird's Celtics who rallied from a 3-1 deficit to beat Philadelphia in the playoff semi-finals and eventually win the league championship.

"Since I'd been in the NBA, just two things had not happened — being named MVP and winning a championship," said Erving, the 76ers' star forward. "Now there's only the one, and I feel it could happen soon.

"I think the 76ers were the best team in the league this year, but we just didn't prove it in a seven-game series," added Erving. "Boston did and that's why they were the champions and we watched the finals on television.

"Without collective accomplishment in a team sport like basketball, individual achievement means very little. We're still in the same position we have been for several years now. It's an all-or-nothing situation in Philadelphia — and I hope next year we get it all."

Erving, 31, became the first non-center since 1964 to win the Maurice Podoloff Trophy as MVP. The award was based on voting by a panel of 69 media members, three from each league city, and balloting was completed before the playoffs.

Each voter picked five players in the MVP balloting and points were assigned on a 10-7-5-3-1 basis. In three other awards catagories, voting was done for one person.

Guard Darrell Griffith of Utah edged Kelvin Ransey of Portland, another guard, 19-18, to win Rookie of the Year honors, and Indiana's Jack McKinney topped Stan Albeck of San Antonio 27-25 in the race for Coach of the Year.

'Unusual' earthquakes shake Northwest areas

SEATTLE (AP) — An "unusual" pair of moderate earthquakes early today shook the Goat Rocks Wilderness in southwestern Washington, an area of the Cascade Mountains where seismologists say there are no known active faults.

The first quake at 1:56 a.m. PDT measured 4.0 on the Richter scale of ground motion. A second tremor at 2:10 a.m. measured 4.8 and was followed by smaller aftershocks, according to Steve Malone, a University of Washington seismologist.

"We haven't had events of this size in that area before," said Malone, who was called to the university's geophysics center to interpret seismograph readings. "It's a bit unusual.

"There are no known active faults in that area," he said.

The Goat Rocks Wilderness is about 20 miles southeast of Mount Rainier and about 50 miles northeast of Mount St. Helens.

The quakes were not directly related to the volcano, but could be indirectly caused by stress in the earth's crust since the May 18, 1980, eruption, Malone said.

"It could be a response to a regional stress field, perhaps changing now," he said.

The U.S. Geological Survey earthquake center in Golden, Colo., reported the larger quake at 4.5. The distance could account for the different measurement, Malone said.

The ground shook in Longview, Kelso and Olympia in southwestern Washington where radio stations telephoned the geophyics center in Seattle. The quake also was reported in northern Oregon, Malone said.

Although a quake of 4.8 could cause damage in a populated area, it was unlikely there was any damage in the wilderness area, Malone said.

The quake was the largest in Washington since a 5.5 earthquake Feb. 13th in the Elk Lake area about 12 miles northwest of Mount St. Helens, said Priscilla Walker, a geophysics center spokeswoman.

A number of quakes have occurred in the Elk Lake area since the eruption of Mount St. Helens, and scientists have said they may be indirectly caused by the volcano. The latest Elk Lake quake occurred Wednesday morning and measured 3.0 on the Richter scale.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 5.0 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 4.0.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in a local area, 4 can cause moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 can be severe.

The 1964 Alaska quake which killed 131 people measured 8.4 on the Richter scale, while the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 was estimated to register 8.3.

Lefever may be called for more questioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ernest W. Lefever is on notice that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee may call him back for more questioning next week on his nomination as President Reagan's human rights adviser.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Fairbanks confirmed Wednesday that the committee's staff advised him Lefever may be called for several hours of closed-door questioning, possibly Tuesday or Wednesday.

Lefever acknowledged this week that the committee may vote against his nomination but said he remains confident the full Senate will confirm him as assistant secretary of state for human rights.

Fairbanks said the committee did not specify what it wants to ask but said Lefever will be available for "whatever they want to ask him questions about."

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., said he intends to ask the committee to reopen full-scale hearings on Lefever's association with the Nestle Corp., and any role he had in the U.S. vote against international restrictions on selling baby formula

"Unless we do that, we'll basically be voting blind because we have a nominee who clearly does not volunteer information," Tsongas said.

Lefever testified at his confirmation hearing two weeks ago that there was no connection between $25,000 in Nestle contributions to his Ethics and Public Policy Center and the center's decision to circulate an article favorable to Nestle.

But The Associated Press reported Tuesday that Nestle paid for the mailing list Lefever's center used to circulate a magazine article favoring sale of baby formula by Nestle and other companies in poor countries.

The article challenged the contention of a coalition of organizations that the baby formula sales should not be encouraged in poor countries because breast feeding is cheaper and safer.

Tsongas accused Lefever of giving the committee a false impression that the center paid for the mailing list, although Lefever was not specifically asked who paid for the list.

"When I raised the question of Nestle with him, he waxed indignant that the center was not for sale and there is no mixture of funds and obligations," Tsongas said.

"Obviously, that's not the case," the senator said.

Tsongas said he also wants sworn testimony on whether Lefever had any role in the U.S. decision to vote in Geneva last week against World Health Organization restrictions on baby formula sales.

Tsongas and Democratic Sens. Alan Cranston of California and Christopher J. Dodd of Connecticut, said last Friday they would ask for the full-scale hearings if Lefever did not withdraw his nomination.

Tsongas said he has written a letter formally asking Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., the committee's chairman, for the hearings.

He said he will ask Cranston and Dodd to sign it when the Senate returns next week from its Memorial Day recess.

Senate votes not to concur with House amendments on Snelson education

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Wednesday voted not to concur with House amendments to Midland Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson's bill to set funding levels for certain public education components.

Snelson's Senate Bill 180 would provide an allotment of $139 "or a greater amount provided by the General Appropriations Act" for each student in average daily attendance. SB 180 also would provide $44 or greater for each educational disadvantaged pupil in school districts which receive aid under the national school lunch program.

Snelson asked the Senate to send the bill to conference committee to remove the House amendments, which would allow a school district to charge tuition to a student who is not domiciled in Texas and resides in military housing and would direct the Texas Education Agency to conduct a study of urban school financing.

Snelson was appointed to chair the Senate conferees.

Commission to consider application

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission was to consider at its weekly session today an application from Midland Memorial Hospital to provide CT whole body scanning capabilities through conversion of its Pfizer 200 CT head scanner.

The session was scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. today at the commission's office, 1600 W. 38th St., Suite 305, in Austin.

Busing avoided

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has sided with the Galveston Independent School District in a ruling which allows the continued use of a magnet elementary school rather than beginning a busing program.

U.S. District Judge Hugh Gibson Wednesday removed a 1978 court-imposed timetable that called for Morgan Elementary School to have 50 percent or fewer black students by Sept. 30.

Black children now make up 66 percent of the school's students. The school district is 43 percent black.

Gibson's ruling endorsed the magnet school approach currently being used, under which special programs are offered at Morgan in an attempt to racially balance the school.

The U.S. Justice Department and lawyers for the plaintiffs in the original 1959 lawsuit had asked for a required busing program.

School officials argued that such a plan would only lead to "white flight."

Ex-lover gets no free ride

WASHINGTON (AP) — When he was a budding lothario, Chia-Chia, the London Zoo's giant panda, had no trouble getting a free flight to Washington to woo Ling-Ling, the unloved lady panda at the National Zoo.

But as a failed lover, nobody wants to give him a free plane ride home.

"No one has volunteered free passage," says Robert Hoage, special assistant to the National Zoo's director. "It looks grim for that type of promotional flight back."

Hoage was referring to Chia-Chia's hoopa-filled arrival in March on a British Airways plane to rendezvous with Ling-Ling as a substitute for Hsing-Hsing, the National Zoo's unromantic and disinterested resident male panda.

John Lampl, a British Airways spokesman, said the airline never intended to fly Chia-Chia back to London, where zoo officials want him as a tourist lure this summer.

"No arrangements were made to return the panda at the time, nor have we been contacted about returning the panda," Lampl said.

National Zoo officials, disappointed that all Ling-Ling got from her English suitor was pawing and biting, say they are trying to work out a deal with two U.S. airlines which operate cargo flights to London's Heathrow Airport.

Neither Pan Am nor Flying Tigers, however, are talking freebie.

Drillsite is five miles southwest of the 10,132-foot No. 1 Hubbard abandoned Feb. 12, 1961.

WINKLER COUNTY

Wm. E. Hendon Jr. of Midland will test the GPM (Pennsylvanian) field with the No. 1 Hogg, a 9,200-foot field test in Winkler County, 4.5 miles southeast of Kermit.

Location is 1,980 feet from the north line and 467 feet from the west line of section 14, block B-10 of the Public School Lands survey.

The site is 3,500 feet west of the abandoned 8,800-foot No. 1 Hunter-Hogg and 4,000 feet southwest of a 10,303-foot Pennsylvanian discovery.

Dist. 7-C announces two finals, wildcats

Two completions and two wildcats have been field in the District 7-C counties of Concho, Menard and Crockett.

CONCHO COUNTY

North American Exploration Co. of Abilene has completed the No. 2 Moriss Miller as a Goen oil discovery 11 miles southwest of Eden in Concho County.

The well was calculated to flow 720 barrels of 44 gravity oil on a six hour potential test with no water through 14/64 inch choke from perforations at 4,052 to 4,062 feet.

Drilled to 4,250 feet with a 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,233 feet, it was plugged back to 4,133 feet.

Location is 467 feet from the south and east lines of section 34, block 8 of the H&TC survey.

MENARD COUNTY

Terra Resources Inc. of Houston has completed the No. 1 Madlyn Pfluger "A" as a Strawn III sand discovery in Menard County 13.4 miles northwest of Menard.

Potentialed to pump 14 barrels of 26.4 gravity oil per day plus nine barrels of water, production was gained from perforations at 2,941 to 2,950 feet which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons and fractured with 22,000 pounds of sand.

It was drilled to 3,147 feet with a 5 1/2 inch casing set at 3,146 feet and plugged back to 3,106 feet.

Location is 2,000 feet from the north and west lines of section 6 of the F. Rau survey.

The discovery is 1 3/4 miles south of the Celery multipay Strawn field.

CROCKETT COUNTY

Getty Oil Co. will drill the No. 1 University 22-5, an 11,770-foot wildcat in Crockett County, 12 miles southeast of Rankin.

Location is 660 feet from the south line and 1,540 feet from the east lines of section 22, block 5 of the University Lands survey.

The site is 2 5/8 miles east-southeast of the 11,801-foot Upton County Vickers Petroleum No. 1 University abandoned Aug. 24, 1953.

****

Michaelson Production Co. of Midland will drill the No. 1 University 15, a 2,0000-foot wildcat in Crockett County, 17 miles north of Ozona.

Location is 467 feet from the south line and 2,286 feet from the west lines of section 15, block 45 of the University Lands survey.

Ten wildcats planned for District 8-A counties

Ten wildcats have been filed for the District 8-A counties of Cottle, Garza, King, Kent, Scurry and Crosby.

COTTLE COUNTY

Taylor Operating Co. of Bridgeport will drill two 7,300 foot wildcats in Cottle County seven miles northwest of Swearingen.

The No. 1 Portwood is located 1,400 feet from the north line and 600 feet from the west line of section 60 of the B.A. Forsythe survey abstract 442.

The No. 2 Portwood is located 1,900 feet from the south line and 2,000 feet from the east lines of section 58 of the B.A. Forsythe survey abstract 442.

The location is 7/8 mile southwest of a 7,723-foot failure and nine miles northeast of the Cee Vee field.

KING COUNTY

Taylor Operating Co. of Bridgeport will drill two 6,500-foot wildcats in King County, 16 miles northeast of Guthrie.

Both projects are in the section 55 of the F.P. Knott survey, abstract 941.

The No. 1 Masterson Ranch is located 660 feet fromt he south and west lines of the section and is 1/2-mile east-northeast of Prudence (Atoka gas) field and one mile east of the 6,200-foot Gus Edwards No. 1 Gibson Estate abandoned Nov. 7, 1975.

The No. 2 Masterson Ranch is located 1,500 feet from the north line and 800 feet from the est line of the section and is 1 3/8 miles northeast of the Prudence field and 1 1/8 miles southeast of the 6,310-foot Bass Enterprises Production Co. No. 1 Masterson Estate, abandoned August 24, 1977.

GARZA COUNTY

Stringer Oil & Gas of San Antonio will drill the No. 1 J.D. McCampbell, a 3,300-foot wildcat in Garza County, seven miles north of Post.

Location is 700 feet from the north line and 1,737 feet from the west line of subdivision H of the Isaac Scott survey, abstract 454.

The site is 3/8-mile east of the 3,850-foot SKM Oil & Gas Co. Ltd. No. 1 Marks, abandoned June 29, 1976 and is 1 1/2 miles northeast of the Huntley, East (San Andres oil) field.

****

Hilliard Oil & Gas Inc. of Midland will drll the No. 1-X Anderson, 70 feet southeast of and a replacement for its No. 1 Anderson, 8,200-foot wildcat, which is being juncked and abandoned in Garza County, three miles southwest of Justiceburg.

Location is 2,050 feet from the north and west lines of section 30, block 6 of the H&GN survey and is 1 1/8 miles east of the Rocker A, South multipay field and three miles southwest of Justiceburg.

Contract depth of the project is 8,200 feet.

KENT COUNTY

Natomas North America Inc. of Midland will drill the No. 1 Swenson, an 8,000-foot wildcat in Kent County, 17 miles northwest of Clairmont.

Location is 1,980 feet from the north and east lines of section 7, block 2 of the H&GN survey.

The site is 7/8-mile south of the 7,807-foot Marshall R. Young No. 1-18 Swenson et al abandoned Feb. 28, 1976.

SCURRY COUNTY

JEM Petroleum Corp. of Midland will drill the No. 1 Beck, a 7,500-foot wildcat in Scurry County, six miles north of Hermleigh.

Location is 1,350 feet from the south line and 1,700 feet from the west line of section 53, block 3 of the h&TC survye.

The location is 1 1/4 miles northwest of the Strawn re-opener of the current two-well Hermleigh (Strawn) field.

CROSBY COUNTY

The Superior Oil Co. will drill the No. 1 A.O. Smith, a 7,000-foot wildcat in Crosby County, eight miles north of Lorenzo and 16 miles south of the Ha-Ra (Clearfork) field.

Location is 660 feet from the south line and 467 feet from the west lines of section 33, block C of the H&OB survey.

Synthetic fuels are slowly being reborn

By JOANNE OMANG
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The synthetic fuels industry, using technology that helped fuel the Nazi Luftwaffe, is slowly being reborn on a dusty mesa outside Rifle, Colo., and in a dozen other towns. Its mission is to turn the arid American West into a fountain of a trillion barrels of oil.

Its proponents are considerably less optimistic than they were six months ago, however, because of the Reagan administration's decision to cut $1.2 billion in direct federal subsidies to the industry from the budget. Although $17.5 billion in federal loans and guarantees will still be available, the cost of building and starting up the enormous synfuels operations raises the question of how far the industry can progress without an all-out government commitment.

ENERGY

If it comes close to its advance billing, the synthetic fuels industry, part of the effort to reduce America's dependence on imported oil, will be unprecedented in cost and size and in its impact on the West. It seeks nothing less than the transformation of coal into 500 billion barrels of oil and gray shale rock into 600 billion more barrels, more oil than is known to exist on the rest of the planet.

This eventually could mean the construction of about 30 massive plants, each costing about $3 billion and pumping out 50,000 barrels of oil a day, a total of about 1.5 million barrels daily. At that rate, synfuels would account for about 9 percent of U.S. domestic oil production and could cut imports by about 20 percent by the year 2000.

Although synfuels technically include fuels from manure or farm products, as well as oil from heavy tar sands, the developing commercial industry primarily involves the production of oil from oil shale and coal liquefaction and a form of natural gas from coal gasification.

It's under way but it still faces severe hurdles — environmental, organizational and economic. Oil and gas from shale and coal always have been more expensive than natural gas and oil from petroleum, and the cost of producing the sythetics always seems to rise fast enough to maintain the gap.

And, while synthetic fuel is the major industry born with environmental safeguards already on the books, the environmental problems it will entail, including the creation of new carcinogens and mountains of shale waste, are enormous.

As a sophisticated conservation movement watched closely, Exxon and The Oil Shale Corp. (TOSCO) started work a year ago near Rifle, in western Colorado, on the side of an 8,000-foot mesa where a layer of oil shale 100 feet thick runs through the mountain like frosting through the middle of a birthday cake. Working under the rules that control surface mining, the bulldozers of the Colony Shale Oil Project are shouldering an access road up the hillside and building a sort of shelf there, the future workspace for huge mining machines.

Sometime in late 1983, if all goes as planned, diesel-powered drillers and front-end loaders will bore into the shale, creating the familiar rooms and pillars of deep mines. But the rooms will be 60 feet high and 60 feet square, vast caverns compared to the cramped coal pit rooms, and the pillars holding up the mountaintop will be 60 feet across.

The shale will come out of the mine in 85-ton trucks, be crushed fine on the shelf and loaded onto conveyor belts for the trip up the mountain to a plant on top of the mesa, where the oil will be extracted through a heating process. The plant was located according to the provisions of the Clean Air Act.

"The basin here has temperature inversions," explained Ron Jarvis of Colony. "If you put the plant in the valley, the pollutants wouldn't dissipate and you wouldn't get your PSD permit."

PSD stands for "prevention of significant deterioration" of clean air, a goal of the Clean Air Act and the Environmental Protection Agency. The technologies and alphabet soup of laws, regulations and watchdog groups concerned with oil, gas and coal are partly relevant to synfuels, but there is a lot that isn't covered. That's partly because it is hard to grasp the size of what's coming, despite the historical precedents.

Hitler's Third Reich built 22 plants to liquefy coal into gasoline that supplied the Luftwaffe, but subsequent U.S. efforts were flooded out by Mideast oil and the powerful lobbyists of the U.S. oil industry. As early as 1813, the British had processed coal with steam to produce a gas they first used to light the London Bridge. Street lights in East Coast cities in the United States used "town gas" from coal until the 1930s. They switched to the higher-heat, cheaper natural gas when pipelines were laid after World War II.

Watt considering longer oil exploration leases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James G. Watt says an extension of the initial five-year offshore oil lease period may be in order for some Outer Continental Shelf exploration and development.

Watt expressed that sentiment in a letter to Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., who had expressed his reservations about a planned offshore oil lease sale in the Mid-Atlantic region later this year. The congressman made a copy of the letter available Wednesday.

The secretary told Hughes he was considering using "an initial lease term of up to 10 years when necessary to encourage exploration and development in areas because of unusually deep water or other unusually adverse conditions."

He noted that he has proposed 10-year leases for tracts that lie in water depths of 400 to 2,100 meters — roughly 1,600 feet to 7,000 feet — in a sale in the South Atlantic.

"While technology doesn't currently exist to produce in the very deep water, it is our belief, based on testimony from industry, that the offering and leasing of deep-water tracts will stimulate and accelerate the development of appropriate technology," Watt said.

Hughes, whose district includes the southern New Jersey coast, had told Watt earlier this year that the proposed December sale in the Baltimore Canyon Trough off the coasts of New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia would "only encourage speculative bidding by the industry."

He said about 20 percent of the 253 tracts involved are in depths of water 6,600 feet or more. That is 1,600 feet beyond the reach of current technology, the congressman said.

In reply to Watt's letter, Hughes wrote a second time.

He said the proposed lease sale would be "highly unlikely to attract much in the way of bonus bidding or oil industry interests."

The leasing of tracts which cannot be developed under current technology "will not lead to any increase in our nation's oil supplies, but such leasing will mislead people into a false sense of security or a belief that we are making progress when the contrary is true."

He said if it turns out that there are substantial reserves of oil or natural gas in the deep-water tracts of the sale area, "the oil industry will undoubtedly and justifiably view the sale as the bargain of the century."

No lines at gas stations this summer

NEW YORK (AP) — Two years after Americans fumed in gasoline lines, the outlook for the summer is for supplies of gasoline so ample that price wars could break out.

For the oil industry the irony is that although they have plenty of gasoline to sell, American drivers may not want to buy it.

"This summer may be a severe disappointment" for the oil companies, says Dan Lundberg, whose Los Angeles-based newsletter follows the gasoline industry.

Until 1979, a big increase in summer driving was taken for granted as families climbed into their cars to visit relatives and see America. But the pattern was disrupted by gas lines during the summer of 1979 and failed to return last year, when supplies were adequate.

In 1978, for example, sales during the summer months were 6 percent to 10 percent greater than average monthly sales. By 1980, they were up 3 percent to 4 percent in July and August, and actually a little lower than average in June.

The industry isn't acting like a surge in gasoline sales is expected. In previous years, one way to tell that Memorial Day was approaching was to watch gasoline prices, which always rose a penny or two a gallon before the holiday. This year, wholesale prices dropped half a cent in the two weeks before the holiday.

"This is absolutely unprecedented," says Lundberg, who compiled the figures.

This week's meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is seen by experts as having assured that supplies will be more than adequate and that prices will not rise. Saudi Arabia, the largest — and lowest price — oil exporter, refused to either raise prices or reduce production.

Even without new increases, driving won't be cheap this summer. According to Lundberg, the average retail gasoline price across the nation this month is $1.36 a gallon, up about 10 percent from just over $1.23 a year ago. Previous OPEC price hikes and the end to U.S. price controls ld to the increase.

The situation varies by region, with the tightest supply situation on the West Coast, partly because of a fire that cut production at a Socal refinery. Socal raised prices by a penny a gallon in the West on Wednesday, five days after it cut prices by two cents a gallon along the East Coast.

Buildings at Marquette State Prison in Marquette, Mich., smolder early Wednesday after inmates rioted and set fire to several buildings in the prison. The Marquette prison houses prisoners moved from other prisons because they caused trouble there.

Hot summer expected in prisons

By RON DZWONKOWSKI
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Rioting that wrecked living areas and schools at three Michigan prisons left inmates — housed as many as three to a cell — with little to do for the summer, and state officials say there is no money to make repairs.

Even without more trouble, Director Perry Johnson said, the Michigan Department of Corrections is braced for a "long, difficult summer." "It's not just restoring order," Johnson said Wednesday as the three prisons remained tightly secured. "It is, 'How are we going to function?'

"We were lucky we had no loss of life."

But other losses were huge from two riots at the Southern Michigan Prison in Jackson and from inmate uprisings at the Michigan Reformatory in Ionia and the state's maximum-security prison at Marquette. The four riots broke out within a week.

In all, about 75 prisoners, 68 guards and 10 police officers or firefighters were injured.

The second Jackson riot, the worse of the two, erupted Tuesday and was followed by the trouble at Marquette. Jackson, the largest walled prison in the world with 5,600 inmates, also was the scene of a riot Friday that was followed the same day by the outbreak at Ionia.

In a preliminary reort Wednesday to Gov. William Milliken, the governor's legal counsel, Peter Ellsworth, said an illegal "mutiny" by Jackson guards sparked the first riot, and news accounts of the trouble contributed to the melee at Ionia.

Ellsworth said the guards "acted in direct defiance of orders" by attempting to lock inmates in their cells.

The guards said they wanted to lockdown the inmates so they could conduct a thorough search for weapons in an effort to stem a rising tide of assaults on the staff. Fred Parks, director of the guards' union, said no orders ever were issued not to conduct a lockdown.

The second Jackson riot prompted "visible measures" to step up security at Marquette, and apparently led inmates to move up plans to take over the institution, Ellsworth said.

Michigan's prisons already have several hundred more inmates than the 12,874 capacity set by Ingham County Circuit Court. The inmate limit was set after a number of lawsuits claimed overcrowding amounted to cruel and unusual punishment.

Overcrowded Jackson lost nearly 300 beds as flames destroyed modular housing. Officials were trying to decide how to house the prisoners whose beds were lost.

James Pogats, administrative assistant to the warden, said some Jackson prisoners were doubled-up or tripled-up in one-man cells because of the lost housing.

The prison's two newest buildings, a school and mess hall constructed in the mid-1970s for $7 million, were heavily damaged, although not beyond repair. The inmate store was destroyed.

Warden Ted Koehler said damage at Marquette, where a school, factory and counselor's office were torched, was $3 million "just to the buildings alone."

Damage at Ionia has been estimated at $750,000.

Officials are not sure what they will do with the inmates who normally attend the gutted schools or work in the damaged factories. "We have to assess what we can use and what we can't," Jackson Warden Barry Mintzes said.

"There isn't any money for repairs," said state Rep. Dominic Jacobetti, chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee.

With the state budget already strained as government revenue declines amid Michigan's prolonged economic slump caused by auto industry troubles, "we need this like we need another hole in the head," he said.

Milliken was to name a nine-member task force today to study the causes and effects of the chain of riots.

Both daylong Jackson riots ended with inmates leaving prison yards voluntarily. Marquette and Ionia were recaptured by armed guards.

Several knives and a meat cleaver were discovered at Marquette by officers conducting a cell-by-cell search Wednesday, said guard Capt. Wayne Stine.

Habib's recall should give Saudia Arabia a chance to negotiate peace

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are emphasizing they expect a tenuous peace between Israel and Syria to hold while President Reagan's special Mideast envoy is in Washington plotting the next move in U.S. efforts to defuse tensions between the two countries.

Part of the strategy in temporarily recalling Philip Habib appears to be designed to give Saudi Arabia at least a temporary free hand to negotiate a solution.

Habib spent Wednesday night in Paris and was due in Washington this evening. He was expected to report to the president soon after his arrival, or on Friday.

Reagan said he will dispatch Habib back to the Mideast after a few days of consultations. Habib has said he expects to be back there next week.

EVEN THOUGH the anti-aircraft missiles that sparked the immediate impasse remained in Lebanon after three weeks of shuttle diplomacy by Habib, Reagan and other administration officials rejected suggestions the special envoy's mission had failed.

Reagan said Habib did "a remarkable job" in averting an outbreak of fighting betwen Syria and Israel that had appeared imminent after Syria installed Soviet-made SAM-6 missiles in Lebanon on April 28.

But Israeli radio said Habib informed Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin on Wednesday that Saudi Arabia was unable to convince the Syrians to withdraw their missiles.

There also appeared to be differences beween the approaches being taken by the United States and Saudi Arabia, with the administration concentrating on defusing the immediate crisis represented by the missiles while the Saudis emphasize steps that could lead to a broader resolution of Lebanon's problems.

STATE DEPARTMENT spokesman David Passage said, "While it probably would be premature to say that the mission was a success, it certainly would be incorrect to say it was a failure."

A senior State Department official said the Habib mission at least helped calm the tense atmosphere and bought more time for a solution.

"The time frame we had initially envisaged for success or failure has been drawn out," said the official, who asked not to be identified.

"We have no reason to believe that the Israelis are going to strike the SAM sites just because Phil Habib is coming back to Washington," he added.

Reagan told reporters he considers Habib's return "a kind of a pause, where everyone considers where they are. We felt that it was necessary now for him to come back here to see us and then he will go back."

But it appeared part of the strategy was to withdraw Habib to allow Saudi Arabia time to pursue an independent diplomatic effort.

The outline of a permanent solution sought by the Saudis is vague, said one U.S. official, but it would be aimed at strengthening the hand of the Lebanese central government and restoring stability to the divided country so neither Israel's nor Syria's interests will be threatened.

THE ADMINISTRATION had hoped Saudi Arabia would use its influence to get the Syrians to promptly withdraw their missiles before Israel decides to attack them. While that approach hasn't worked yet, officials were still hopeful it could be accomplished as part of a broader solution.

Saudi Arabia has decided to send its ambassador back to Beirut after an absence of two years, an action seen as giving support to Lebanon's central government.

The Reagan administration's immediate goal is to return to the status quo that existed prior to the outbreak of fighting between Syrians and Christian militiamen in April.

It also favors an over-all solution to Lebanon's problems, but contends that solving the missile problem is the most pressing priority.

Habib said upon his departure from Tel Aviv that he is "convinced that all involved wish to avoid hostilities." He said he will return to the region next week.

The senior official who briefed reporters said, "It is very important in our view that as the diplomacy continues, that all parties will exercise maximum restraint."

Pope making slow progress

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II's recovery from gunshot wounds is progressing slowly, and he will not be allowed to return to the Vatican this week, his doctors said today.

"The general condition of the Holy Father is progressing, but slowly," said the first medical bulletin issued since Saturday. "It is noted that there are some signs of tiring in the course of the activity that he has started and maintained. It has been decided, therefore, to continue observation of the patient in the hospital."

Local newspapers reported earlier that the pontiff might be able to return to his Vatican apartment on Saturday. But Dr. Emilio Tresalti, the chief medical officer at the Gemelli Polyclinic Hospital, said the doctors decided to keep him in the hospital because he was becoming too active.

"We must keep him here because of his overactivity ... He's becoming too active," Tresalti told reporters.

For nearly 10 days, the pope has been receiving guests, celebrating Mass and taking regular exercise including a walk outside his hospital suite.

Tresalti said part of the fatigue apparently was caused by the switch from intravenous feeding to a normal diet three days ago. But he said thedoctors believe his excessive activity is largely responsible for his feeling tired.

Poland's scandal expanding

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Ousted Communist Party chief Edward Gierek's radio-television chief is to be put on trial, the government has announced less than a week after the suicide of two former cabinet ministers.

Prosecutor General Lucjan Czubinski said following a long corruption investigation that charges would be brought against Maciej Szczepanski, Warsaw Radio reported. He did not say what the charges would be or when the trial would begin.

Szczepanski, a close associate of Gierek, was fired and Gierek was replaced in the purge that followed last summer's nationwide labor unrest. Szczepanski was arrested shortly after, and the government said it was investigating allegations of corruption and mismanagement by him.

Walesa invited to U.S.

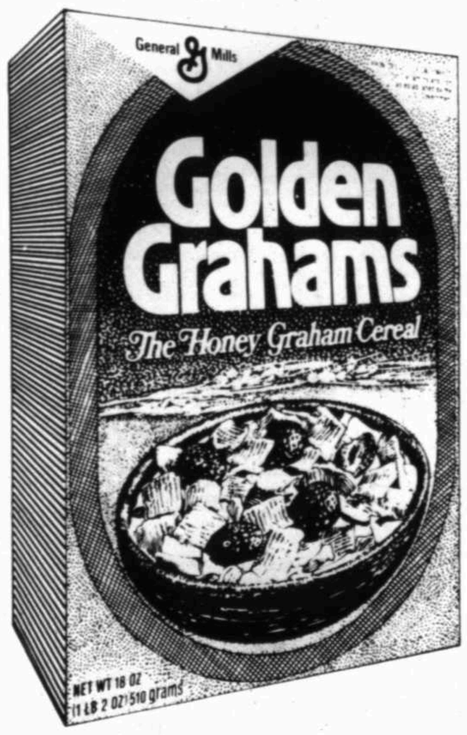

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Frozen fish magnate Edward J. Piszek says he's trying to "knit together" a visit to the United States by Polish union leader Lech Walesa to help raise $100 million in donations for food to Poland.

Piszek, the head of Mrs. Paul's Kitchens, visited Poland last week and presented an invitation to Walesa to come to Philadelphia on July 4 to accept the city's Freedom Medal.

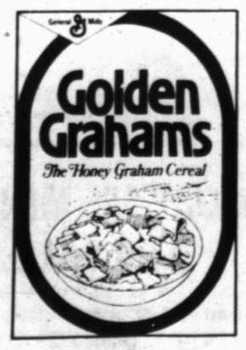

Piszek said the head of Poland's nationwide Solidarity union is expected to visit Philadelphia, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee and Pittsburgh, as well as Washington, D.C., during a seven-day tour beginning July 3. However, Piszek said details for the trip have not been completed.

Members of the Japan Socialist Party stage a protest rally outside Sasebo port in Kyushu where three guided missile destroyers of the U.S. Seventh Fleet entered Tuesday. The three warships were refused to enter a Kyushu port for allegedly damaging Japanese fishing nets in joint Japan-U.S. naval drills in the Japan Sea..

Japan asked to block ship's return

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — City officials of Yokosuka, home port of the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway, today asked the Japanese government to bar the ship's return to port until the controversy over reports that it and other American ships carry nuclear weapons into Japanese waters dies down.

The Midway was scheduled to return to Yokosuka, 35 miles south of Tokyo, about June 5 after a 2½-month cruise.

Japanese opposition parties and former U.S. officials set off a storm here with allegations that U.S. warships regularly bring nuclear weapons into Japanese ports, a violation of Japan's total ban on the introduction, manufacture or possession of such weapons.

Asst. Mayor Iwao Sugiyama of Yokosuka met with Deputy Cabinet Secretary Tsutomu Kawara early today. Foreign Ministry spokesman Shohei Naito said the government "will assess the situation and decide what steps should be taken."

A U.S. Navy spokeswoman, Lt. Ruth Noonan, said the Navy had not heard directly from the Yokosuka government.

"There is no alternative," she said, to the Midway's docking at Yokosuka, the headquarters of the U.S. 7th Fleet. A total of 9,346 U.S. Navy and Marine Corps personnel and their 4,800 dependents are stationed there.

The Midway, which left Feb. 23 for a cruise that took it to Australia, Singapore and the Indian Ocean, now is at the Subic Naval Base in the Philippines.

Yokosuka Mayor Kazuo Yokoyama said Wednesday he considers it "inappropriate" for the carrier to return while the nuclear weapons controversy continues.

He did not claim the Midway carries nuclear weapons. But he said if it returns while the controversy is still raging, relations between the Americans and the local population could be damaged.

The mayor visited the U.S. naval base today and handed an appeal to Rear Adm. Donald L. Felt, commander of the U.S. Navy in Japan, the Kyodo news service reported.

"It is fitting that the American military show consideration at a time when city residents have worries and doubts over the nuclear issue," Yokoyama told The Associated Press earlier in an interview.

Meanwhile, the Japan Socialist Party said it will ask former U.S. Ambassador Edwin O. Reischauer to testify before the Diet, Japan's Parliament. Reischauer touched off the nuclear controversy by telling a Japanese reporter that U.S. Navy vessels regularly carry nuclear weapons into Japan despite the nuclear ban.

Students continue protests

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Hundreds of students, some throwing rocks, clashed with riot police today on the campus of Seoul National University in demonstrations against President Chun Doo-hwan.

Witnesses said about 600 students gathered on the campus at noon for a second consecutive day of demonstrations, chanting "Down with Chun Doo-hwan." A group of students charged from the campus into the streets at one point, but were dispersed by police.

A 22-year-old senior plunged to his death from the fifth floor of the university library Wednesday while fellow students demonstrated to mark the first anniversary of the crushing of a bloody 10-day rebellion in the southern city of Kwangju.

The student shouted "Down with Chun Doo-hwan" several times before leaping to the concrete pavement below, witnesses said.

The demonstrations at Seoul National University were among several anti-government protests by students this spring, despite laws barring unauthorized assembly or demonstrations.

IRA hunger striker ends fast

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — An off-duty policeman was shot and killed in the border town of Whitecross, an Irish Republican Army stronghold, while in Belfast an IRA hunger striker ended his fast after two weeks because of a perforated stomach ulcer.

The IRA said such a speedy death wouldn't have put enough pressure on Northern Ireland's British rulers.

The 45-year-old police officer, who was not immediately identified, was hit several times by gunshots fired from a nearby car as he was getting into his own vehicle Wednesday night in Whitecross, in South Armagh County, police said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the killing.

He was the ninth policeman killed this year in sectarian violence in Northern Ireland and the 149th slain in the province since August 1969.

Brendan McLaughlin, 29, called off his fast Wednesday night, the first of the current crop of hunger strikers to quit short of death. The IRA was expected to name another convicted guerrilla in the Maze Prison today to fast in his place.

Four other hunger strikers — Bobby Sands, Francis Hughes, Raymond McCreesh and Patrick O'Hara — have died this month after about two months of fasting. Their deaths touched off rioting in Roman Catholic sections of Belfast, Londonderry and other cities. But the widespread sympathy for the prisoners and criticism of the British government which their deaths produced in Western Europe and American was of much more importance to the IRA than the violence in Northern Ireland.

Three fasting convicts who replaced Sands, McCreesh and O'Hara are not yet in critical condition, prison officials say.

Sands began the hunger strikes March 1 to drum up support for the IRA's demand that guerrillas jailed for their fight against British rule in Northern Ireland be given the status and privileges of political prisoners, including exemption from prison work, free association with each other and the right to wear their own clothes instead of prison uniforms.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher adamantly refuses to grant the demand, contending that special status would legitimize the IRA Provisional wing's terror campaign to unite the Protestant-majority province with the predominantly Roman Catholic Irish Republic to the south. The opposition Labor Party as well as her own Conservatives support her stand.

The IRA's goal after unification is a Marxist Ireland. It is outlawed in therepublic as well as in the North, and its members are denied the status of political prisoners there also.

McLaughlin, serving a 12-year sentence for illegal possession of a hand grenade, began his fast May 13 to replace Hughes, who died the day before. His stomach ulcer perforated last week and he was moved from the Maze to the military wing of Belfast's Musgrave Park Hospital.

Doctors advised him Monday that he had only four or five days to live without medical assistance and on Tuesday he agreed to accept treatment, reportedly including a blood transfusion. Sinn Fein, the legal political arm and mouthpiece of the IRA Provos, said he was continuing his fast.

The next day the government's Northern Ireland Office announced that McLaughlin's had told his doctors "that he wishes to end his hunger strike and accept full medical treatment."

Sinn Fein said it fully supported his decision.

"To have continued in his condition would have meant almost immediate death before the effects of a long hunger strike would have drawn in and built the necessary pressure to break the British government's intransigence," it said.

Meanwhile, a Protestant militiaman killed in an IRA ambush Monday, Pvt. Allan Ritchie, was buried in Magherafelt, County Londonderry. Speaking at the funeral, the Rev. Selwood Graham said the hunger strike was "obscene. This is a disgrace and it is shameful that God's sacred gift of life should be surrendered in this way to further political aims."

In England, the third of five British soldiers killed last week by an IRA mine was buried in his home town of Abindon.

"If the IRA thinks that it will weaken the resolve of the army or sap its morale, then it is quite mistaken," the Rev. Roger Keat said in his eulogy for 25-year-old Michael Bagshaw.

Odenssan indicted for tax evasion

A 54-year-old Odessa businessman who allegedly failed to report and pay the U.S. Internal Revenue Service almost $6,400 in employee taxes has been indicted by a federal grand jury in Midland on five counts of income tax evasion.

If convicted, the man, William H. Hopkins, who owns and operates Basin Sheet Metal Supply in Odessa, could be sentenced to a five-year prison term on each of the five counts and fined $10,000 on each count.

The government is alleging that Hopkins actually paid taxable wages of $31,925.51 to his employees in a five-month period in late 1978 and early 1979 but reported to the IRS only $3,936 in taxable wages for that period. The government also is accusing Hopkins of reporting income taxes and the Federal Insurance Contributors Act taxes of $811.29 for that period when taxes should have been $7,201.43. The tax difference is $6,390.14.

The government claims that Hopkins signed false and fraudulent employer's tax return Form 941-M and stated:

—That taxable wages paid employees in September 1978 was $1,098 and that taxes withheld totaled $228.35. The government claims that Hopkins should have reported $7,791.26 in taxable wages and $1,685.18 in taxes.

—That taxable wages for October 1978 totaled $884 and taxes withheld was $178.56. The government is claiming that taxable wages should have totaled $6,686.50 and taxes amounted to $1,552.42.

—That taxable wages for November 1978 amounted to $884 and taxes withheld totaled $178.56. The government is alleging that taxable wages paid employees totaled $6,238 and taxes amounted to $1,435.92.

—That taxable wages for December 1978 amounted to $1,070 and taxes withheld totaled $225.82. The government claims that taxable wages totaled $8,321.50 and taxes amounted to $1,901.49.

—That no wages were paid for January 1979. The government claims that taxable wages amounted to $2,888.25 and taxes due totaled $626.42.

The case was investigated by special agents of the IRS's Criminal Investigation Division in Lubbock.

Hopkins is free under a $10,000 bond.

His defense attorney in the case is William Haden of Odessa.

House tables Shaw's redistricting changes

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Freshman Rep. Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring, who finds himself paired with 26-year veteran Bill Heatly of Paducah under a House redistricting proposal, failed in two attempts to alter the plan Tuesday morning during a marathon House session.

In short order, House members voted to table both of Shaw's amendments to the House redistricting proposal spearheaded by Rep. Tim Von Dohlen of Goliad and supported by House Speaker Bill Clayton.

Shaw's first amendment would have paired Heatly with Rep. Walter Grubbs of Abilene composing District 150 of Cottle (Heatly's home county), Dickens, Fisher, Foard, Haskell, Jones, King, Knox, Nolan, Stonewall, Wilberger counties and Grubbs' part of Taylor County.

Shaw's district 79 would have included Borden, Dawson, Garza, Howard (Shaw's home), Kent, Lynn, Mitchell, Scurry and Sterling counties.

After that one was defeated, Shaw proposed another plan, this one to pair himself with Grubbs. Shaw's district would have been the counties of Dawson, Borden, Howard, Mtichell, Sterling and Nolan, and part of Grubbs' part of Taylor County. Heatly's district would have incorporated the counties not included in that of Shaw and Grubbs.

As it stands now, District 150 encompasses the counties of Wilbarger, Foard, Cottle, Knox, King, Dickens, Stonewall, Kent, Garza, Lynn, Dawson, Borden and Howard.

District 79 includes Sterling, Mitchell, Nolan, Scurry, Fisher, Jones, and Haskell counties and the rural part of Taylor County.

Polish cardinal dies at age 79

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, leader of the Roman Catholic Church in Poland during more than 30 years of communist rule and mentor of Polish-born Pope John Paul II, died here today of cancer. He was 79 and had been ill for about six weeks.

The pope, in a Rome hospital recovering from a May 13 assassination attempt, was told of the cardinal's death by Vatican officials, reports from Rome said.

In death, Wyszynski was hailed as a "patriot" by the communist regime that once confined him to his residence.

"The death ... has cast into mourning millions of believers in Poland," PAP added.

A medical bulletin signed by the cardinal's five doctors said death was caused by a scattered "tumorous process of the abdominal cavity of extraordinary malice and rapid progress."

Death occurred at 4:40 a.m. — 10:40 p.m. EDT Wednesday — the bulletin said.

When Tu Anh Ngoc Tran left Siagon two years ago as a frightened 16-year-old, she knew little English and less about the American way of life. Tuesday, she was graduated as valedictorian of her class at Austin's Lanier High School.

Refugee took refuge in studies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Tu Anh Ngoc Tran remembers her first classes at Austin Lanier High School as confusing sessions in which she copied everything on the blackboard and hoped to have it translated for her later.

That was two years ago when she was a 16-year-old refugee who had fled Saigon by boat. Now she has graduated from Lanier as the top student of her class.

"When we went, chances were 50-50 whether you would make the trip alive or die on the way," she said of the week-long boat trip that took her, two older sisters and a younger brother to Malaysia.

Her parents, both pharmacists, stayed in Vietnam with two younger children.

Miss Tran knew little English and less about American life when she arrived here. She and her sisters worked to support themselves and their brother.

But she managed to get top marks in three subjects many American students consider difficult — calculus, chemistry and advanced French.

In her graduation address Tuesday, she thanked the 375 classmates she said helped her "to take my destiny into my own hands."

"The students in class made a warm atmosphere around me. That has encouraged me a lot," she told her classmates.

She said her biggest regret was that her parents could not be in Austin to see her graduate.

Lanier Principal Rodger Wiley said Miss Tran racked up a grade average of 97.2.

"We averaged her grades both ways — for the two years she's been here and for her whole high school career. Either way, she won," he said.

Miss Tran plans to work this summer for the city's electric department and study electrical engineering at the University of Texas in Austin in the fall.

"She not only has ability, but she has great determination," said friend and English teacher Georgeann Burnett. "No one has had her in a class that hasn't come away smiling."

Liverpool finally ready to honor 'Fab Four'

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Nearly a year after the idea came up, this city where the Beatles were discovered more than two decades ago has moved a step closer to naming streets after the Fab Four.

The City Councils' Highway Committee voted 10-9 Wednesday in favor of naming streets after Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr, George Harrison, slain John Lennon and the Beatles' late manager, Brian Epstein.

The proposal, to be voted on next month by the full 99-member council, also would name a sixth street Beatles Way.

Epstein, who died of a drug overdose in 1967, discovered the Beatles in 1961 at The Cavern, a Liverpool nightclub which since has been razed. There currently are no streets, buildings or monuments in this city of 500,000 named after the singing group.

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Princess Grace and Prince Ranier of Monaco will attend their son Albert's graduation at Amherst College on Sunday, a college spokesman says.

"They're truly coming as proud parents to see their son graduate," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified. "The prince's parents will be lost in the crowd with the other parents."

Prince Albert Grimaldi will be among 400 graduates to be honored at outdoor commencement exercises. During his four-year stay at the exclusive liberal arts school, he has been shielded from publicity at his family's request.

The school would not reveal the prince's major course of study.

The college spokesman also declined to release any details of the royal family's visit to Amherst, but said they would not be part of any special ceremony or presentation. He said they would be treated no differently from other graduates' parents.

"Our concern is to keep it a family affair," the spokesman said.

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — President Reagan has used another commmencement program for a brief reunion with an actor friend.

Reagan, speaking Wednesday at the commencement of the U.S. Military Academy, had a brief chat with 81-year-old actor James Cagney — a Hudson Valley neighbor of the corps of cadets.

Earlier this month Reagan shared a platform at the University of Notre Dame graduation with Pat O'Brien.

Cagney co-starred with Reagan in the 1938 movie, "Boy Meets Girl."

BUENA VISTA, Ga. (AP) — Billy Carter's once-famous service station in nearby Plains will be going on the auction block next month after the brother of former President Carter pulls up stakes and moves to Alabama for a new job.

Carter announced Tuesday he is relocating to Haleyville, Ala. to accept a public relations job with Tidwell Industries, which manufactures mobile homes.

"I think it's a good job, and I'm going over there. They've asked me to start on the first" of June, Carter said in a telephone interview from his home here.

Besides the service station in downtown Plains, also being sold is the baseball diamond where the president played softball while in office.

The younger Carter said he also expects to auction his 7,700-square-foot home here and a modest home in Plains. He also owns 58 acres of land in Marion County, but he said that may not be sold for some time.

For Gilley, it may be 'no picnic'

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — A proposed Fourth of July party hosted by this Houston suburb's most famous nightclub owner has upset some residents — and it's not because they weren't invited.

In fact, that's the problem — everybody is invited.

Mickey Gilley, owner of the huge country and western nightclub bearing his name, is planning an 11-hour country music concert and picnic here July 3 and 4.

But the party hinges on a decision expected next week by the City Council on a proposed ordinance aimed at stopping it.

Some residents, who have complained to the council the past two Tuesdays, fear the concert will attract "a bunch of drunks" who will disturb the peace. Gilley's lawyer insists the crowd will be kept under control.

"This won't be another Willie Nelson picnic or an acid rock concert," said lawyer J.L. Jay, who represents Gilley and concert promoter Sherwood Cryer. "Two or three off-duty officers handle 5,000 to 6,000 people every night at Gilley's. I'm sure three or four more can handle this."

But Don Francis, administrator of Pasadena Bayshore Hospital, told councilmen the expected noise and traffic jams would be "totally disruptive" to his staff and 400 patients.

"Our patients are recovering from heart attacks, strokes and major surgery," Francis said. "I'm an accomplished musician and a great country music fan, but I think this would effectively shut the hospital down."

He said the site of the proposed concert — the 21-acre grounds of Gilley's nightclub — is too close to his hospital. Gilley's Club abuts one edge of the tract and the hospital abuts the opposite side.

Cryer said loud speakers used at the concert "will be turned away from the hospital."

Justice of the Peace Larry Wilson said noise would not be the only problem Pasadena would have to deal with if the concert is allowed.

"We're not talking about 5,000 or 6,000 sober people," he said. "To a large degree we're going to be dealing with a bunch of drunks."

Beauty pageant gets viewers, helps win CBS top ranking

NEW YORK (AP) — More people watched CBS' broadcast of the Miss U.S.A. Pageant than any other program in the week ending May 24, and the big audience helped the network regain first place in the weekly ratings race, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

CBS, in fact, listed five of the week's 10 highest-rated prime-time shows, including two movies — the theatrical film "Silver Streak" in second place and a made-for-TV movie, "The Violation of Sarah McDavid" in fifth — and compiled a rating for the week of 16.5.

ABC, which grabbed first place from CBS the week before, registered a rating of 14.3, with NBC third at 13.9. The networks say the figures mean in an average prime-time minute during the week, 16.5 percent of the TV-equipped homes in the country were watching CBS.

The rating for CBS' broadcast of the beauty pageant was 22.8. Nielsen says that means of all the nation's homes with television, 22.8 percent saw at least part of the show.

All three networks got help from movies and specials, with much of prime time taken by reruns.

"Bitter Harvest," an NBC movie, was No. 10 for the week, with an ABC film, "She's In the Army Now," tied for 11th and another movie on ABC, "Freedom," 21st. A CBS film, "Rivkin: Bounty Hunter," finished in a tie for for 24th place.

CBS and NBC each had two shows among the five lowest-rated. "The Incredible Hulk" on CBS was No. 52 for the week, followed by a movie on NBC, "National Lampoon's Animal House," a CBS special called "Fog," "NBC Magazine" and a special on ABC, "Mysteries of the Sea."

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

"Miss U.S.A. Pageant," with a rating of 22.8 representing 17.7 million homes, Movie-"Silver Streak," 21.1 or 16.4 million, and "M-A-S-H," 20 or 15,6 million, all CBS; "Three's Company," 19.7 or 15.3 million, ABC; Movie-"The Violation of Sarah McDavid," 19.3 or 15 million, CBS; "Happy Days," 19 or 14.8 million, and "Too Close for Comfort," 18.7 or 14.5 million both ABC; "The Jeffersons," CBS, and "Laverne and Shirley," ABC, both 18.2 or 14.2 million, and Movie-"Bitter Harvest," 18 or 14 million, NBC.

The next 10 programs:

"Dukes of Hazzard," CBS, and Movie-"She's In the Army Now," ABC, tie; "House Calls," CBS; "Diff'rent Strokes," NBC; "60 Minutes," CBS; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC; "Real People," NBC, and "Hart to Hart," ABC, tie; "Facts of Life," NBC, and "That's Incredible," ABC.

Pageant sponsor sues ousted Miss New York

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Because Miss New York State "tarnished" a sponsor's reputation by getting kicked out of the Miss USA pageant for wearing a padded bra, the company has sued her and pageant promoters for $1 million, according to court papers.

The image projected by Deborah Fountain of the Bronx "is not what I would have liked for our company," said Vincent Dima, president of Future Craft Enterprises of Westbury. "I wanted a wholesome Miss New York, and I feel our image is tarnished."

The suit names Miss Fountain and Jeffrey Alan Associates of New York, the promoters.

Future Craft also is seeking a court order to stop the airing of the Miss New York-Miss New Jersey USA pageant on WOR-TV, scheduled to be shown at midnight Thursday. The company is upset that the program was scheduled for showing after last week's national Miss USA contest was telecast.

Something to crow over

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A runaway rooster with nowhere to go suddenly found its world had gone to the dogs and decided life with canines is something to crow about.

The rooster was collared in a cemetery by police over the Memorial Day weekend and languished in the Portland dog pound Wednesday. Apparently upset by the strange environment, the cock has crowed virtually non-stop.

Cowtown 'puts on dog' for classical culture

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Say hello to Cowtown, the "Texas-most" city, home of the world's biggest beer joint, the stockyards and the Van Cliburn Competition.

The what?

Yep, right here in Fort Worth, held once every four years or so since 1962: The Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, one of four major keyboard competitions in the world.

The contest is totally lacking in such Texas trademarks as Lone Star Longnecks and homegrown rednecks. It is wine and black ties, classical music and beautiful people. Even the piano tuners are imported.

It could expose Fort Worth as one of America's best kept cultural secrets. But that's another story, as is Billy Bob's Texas, a huge country and western nightclub.

Some 38 contestants from 17 nations began competing May 17 for a plethora of riches, the least of which is a $12,000 cash prize. At the Cliburn, the real plum is critical acclaim — the winner will give concerts worldwide, including New York's Carnegie Hall, which even Billy Bob has heard of.

The contest is named for famed pianist Van Cliburn, now 46, who grew up in Kilgore, Texas, and became a sensation in 1958 as the gold medalist of Moscow's Tchaikovsky Competition. He's a familiar figure around Fort Worth during the event that bears his name.

"To be an artist is a sublime vocation," Cliburn said once. "If a young person enters the classical field solely to seek monetary reward, he is in the wrong profession."

This year's final events will be televised Sunday night by the Public Broadcasting Service — an event the music world anxiously awaits.

Said one critic: "It is, indeed, difficult to convey the tension and thrill of an event which will select one of the world's best pianists and turn him or her into an overnight sensation with a full-fledged solo career."

The five previous Cliburn winners became household words in houses where classical music is heard. They were Ralph Votapek, the only American winner, in 1962; Radu Lupu of Romania, 1966; Cristina Ortiz of Brazil, 1969; Vladimir Viardo, Russia, 1973; and Steven De Groote, South Africa, 1977.

None has yet matched Cliburn's fame, which inspired the co-founders of the National Guild of Piano Teachers, Dr. and Mrs. Irl Allison, to launch the contest. Presumably, a competition for classical pianists would be most at home in a place like New York City, or perhaps Boston or Philadelphia.

But Grace Ward Lankford asked a question that changed all that. Mrs. Lankford, then president and co-founder of the Fort Worth Piano Teacher's Forum, called Allison in Austin, Texas, to pose a succinct question:

"Why not Fort Worth?"

Fine, said Allison — provided it could be carried out "on a scale and in a manner the importance of the event warranted."

And so it was: Mrs. Lankford won support Texas Christian University, the Chamber of Commerce, the teacher's forum and the National Guild of Piano Teachers. Later, the Junior League joined in.

Now, many observers insist the contest in this city of 400,000 people rivals the Tchaikovsky Competition.

"It was Texas' answer to the Tchaikovsky," wrote pianist Arthur Satz, adding one of the "...most curious coincidences has been the consistent awarding of first or second prize to a Moscow-trained contestant...."

The winners are picked by a jury that this year includes judges from Italy, Romania, France, New Zealand, Japan, the Philippines, China, Brazil and the United States. Madame Lili Kraus, a famed pianist, has been on every jury since 1962.

The judges and contestants are social prizes for Fort Worth, and they are wined and dined day and night for two frantic weeks. Many social lions and lionesses buy pianos to lure contestants.

The ticket that is perhaps the most sought after is Van Cliburn's traditional lake party.

Other residents of this city of 400,000 support the Cliburn financially and serve on committees, but prefer not to house contestants.

"It's like keeping a kid for two weeks," said a woman who knows, asking anonymity. "He's gotta be chauffeured around and taken care of day and night. And all he wants to do is practice.

"There can be language problems and food problems and they get homesick, and of course they're nervous and tense to begin with. Some people want them, some badly, but I'm not one of them."

The contestants range in age from 18 to 30 and have an average of 13 years proaround the world whose performances are screened on video tape by a separate jury.

"We have the cream of the crop here this tioundation. "They are all good."

Contest 'a giant step' for China

By SYLVIA LEE
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Van Cliburn International Piano Competition is more than a contest to the musical representatives of the People's Republic of China — it is another big step away from the Cultural Revolution that kept them behind closed doors for so many years.

"It is nice that China is now open and we have the chance to make cultural exchanges with other countries," said Zhou Guang-Ren, a concert pianist and teacher, the first to represent China as a Van Cliburn competition juror. "It is a great honor and a pleasure," she said.

Mme. Zhou is vice dean of the piano department at Peking's Central Conservatory of Music, forced to close its doors for four years during Mao Tse-tung's Cultural Revolution, when radical Communist party members demanded a return to revolutionary ideals that did not include traditional music education.

Zhu Da Ming, 29, a Cliburn finalist, made his concert debut at the Theatre of Peking Exhibition in 1971, the year the Peking conservatory closed. He and Yu Jin, 24, who also represented China in the Cliburn preliminaries, were taught pivately a home in Shanghai during those turbulent years.

Zhu said he and Yu were "very happy and very proud" to have been chosen from a field of 126 Cliburn competition hopefuls who were screened in videotape auditions. The winners of the quadrennial competition that began May 17 will be announced in a nationally televised awards ceremony Sunday night.

"It is very good experience for a young pianist to take part in the competition even if they don't get a prize. Our representatives have had a demanding repertory and they have tried their best. It is constructive for them to learn, to listen to others and to have the chance to play themselves," Mme. Zhou said.

"We hope to take part in more international competitions in the future," she said.

Mme. Zhou herself won first prize in the Schumann International Competition in Berlin in 1956, and made numerous appearances in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union in the 1950s.

Now she is enjoying her role as a member of the judging panel. "We don't quarrel...we have a friendly, cooperative jury, very openminded. The standard of this competition is very good."

Animals held hostage

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — About 150 horses and 600 greyhounds are languishing in pens at the Juarez Race Track -- the victims of a strike by track workers.

Wednesday was the 24th day that the animals had been held hostage at the track. Under Mexican law, the gate of the track is closed to all traffic because of the strike. Strikers say they are allowing the owners to deliver food and supplies, but they're not letting the animals leave.

The owners, almost all United States citizens, say it is costing them to feed and care for the horses and dogs while they are not racing.

"The biggest thing is that half of them could be running at other tracks," said Dr. Robert Butchofsky, who has 38 dogs at the track.

The strike began May 4 after workers became afraid for their jobs because of a planned change in who holds the concession to run the track. The track has been operated since it was built in 1965 by Espectaculos Fronterizos, S.A., on a lease from the government.

But the lease ran out four weeks ago and the Mexican government has not named a new concessionaire.

The decision will be made in Mexico City and the telephone wires between Juarez and the capital have been buzzing. Many of the owners have contacted Franklin Stevens at the United States consulate in Juarez, who has been in daily contact with the United States Embassy in Mexico City, but has been unable to resolve the problem.

Oscar Flores Jr., who reportedly is expected to receive the new concession, flew to Mexico City on Wednesday to work on the problems, according to business partner Ron Carpenter of El Paso. Flores, the son of former Chihuahua governor Oscar Flores, is involved in several businesses in El Paso, where he lives.

Mexican officials met Tuesday with union leaders, but the Confederation of Mexican Workers reportedly held fast to workers' demands that they keep their jobs.

"The animals are living better than us," said Juan Lopez de Alva, a ticket taker at the track for 18 years. "They comb them and they have air conditioning, but here we don't eat and the next day . . . we don't eat either."

Although the strikers have assured the owners that the animals are being treated well, reports of dogs being killed have riled some owners.

Lopez said dogs are regularly put to death via electric shock when they are too aged or injured to race. He said no more dogs have been killed than usual. However, the number killed was not available.

Begin to continue diplomatic effort

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin has assured President Reagan that Israel will not exploit U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib's recall from the Middle East to take military action against the Syrian missiles in Lebanon, Israeli newspapers reported today.

The dailies Maariv and Yedioth Ahronoth said Begin sent this message with Habib, who returned to Washington Wednesday for talks with Reagan after a three-week diplomatic shuttle that took him to Damascus, Beirut and Riyadh.

Begin's spokesmen were unavailable for comment, but another official said no formal written message was sent, and Begin's assurances were merely a reiteration of Israel's policy throughout the crisis to give diplomatic efforts top priority.

Habib's shuttle has been suspended until next week, and before his departure he urged Israel and Syria not to go to war during his absence. Begin said Habib mission has so far failed to "bear fruit."

Israel has demanded that Syria withdraw the Soviet-made anti-aircraft missiles it rolled into Lebanon a month ago, after the Israelis shot down two Syrian helicopters aiding in the Syrian offensive against Israel's Christian militia allies. Habib has been seeking a compromise solution.

Military Chief of Staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, said Israel is making appropriate preparations for war.

"I would very much like to know what the Syrians want in Lebanon," Eytan said in an Israel Television interview. "We are watching the changes and are making the appropriate preparations to meet them."

Eytan said hundreds of Libyan soldiers were training Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon and that those forces were on full alert against Israeli attack. Eytan said the Libyans were bringing weapons into Lebanon, and Israel would have to treat the Libyan soldiers "just as we treat the terrorists."

Maariv quoted military experts as saying Syria was continuing to fortify positions in Lebanon which could be quickly transformed into an offensive deployment.

Deputy Defense minister Mordechai Zippori was quoted by Maariv as saying the Syrians have completed extensive mobilization but that Israel's defenses were fully prepared.

"The army can answer any challenge," Zippori said.

Space diamonds puzzle scientists

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) -- Scientists who found tiny diamonds inside a meteorite from outer space are baffled by how they formed, but one theory holds that they are debris from a high-speed collision of two asteroids millions of years ago.

At present, no one knows for sure.

"It is a very interesting specimen and raises an old question again," said Donald D. Bogard, a senior research scientist at the Johnson Space Center.

The diamonds, which are only .004 of an inch thick -- too small to be of commercial value -- were discovered when grinding tools used to slice off thin sections of the space rock struck microsopic objects the tools had no effect on.

The meteorite containing diamonds was among hundreds found in Antarctica, and is composed mainly of iron -- which makes the discovery of diamonds inside all that much more surprising.

"This is very unusual," Bogard said. He said scientists have found diamonds before in "an odd-ball type of meteorite called urelites, which are very rare" -- but not normally in the more common, iron ones.

The only other iron meteorite known to have diamonds was the Canyon Diablo meteorite that crashed into Arizona about 50,000 years ago, forming the mile-wide Meteor Crater.

Bogard said the discovery of diamonds in the Arizona crater started scientific debate over how carbon, probably in the form of graphite, underwent the intense pressure required to turn it into diamonds.

He said the Arizona crater is so large and the impact so great the pressure could have occurred when it struck Earth. But the meteorite now under study weighs only 23 pounds and fell on relatively soft polar ice.

Bogard said the most likely explanation was the high-speed collision theory, but he said there is no proof.

U.S. accused of trying to alter global power balance

TOKYO (AP) — East German Communist Party leader Erich Honecker today accused the United States of conducting a military arms buildup in an effort to change the world balance of power.

Honecker, in an address before the Japan National Press Club, said countries must turn their backs on the arms race and commit themselves to detente.

"There is no rational alternative to the policy of peaceful co-existence," he said.

Honecker did not mention the United States by name in his speech, but clearly referred to America, saying, "A specific power is trying to change the world balance in its own favor."

He warned that if the confrontation between East and West continues it will only serve to aggravate the international situation. He said that could eventually "trigger worldwide war."

Hammering away at his theme of global peace, Honecker said East Germany would cooperate with the Soviet Union, its allies and other friendly nations in an effort "to exert our international influence."

Speaking through an interpreter, Honecker dismissed the possibility of the Soviet Union invading Poland, even if the domestic situation there continues to deteriorate.

"There is no evidence to suggest the Soviet Union will intervene," Honecker said. "Poland will remain a socialist country."

Honecker, making the first trip to Japan by an East German leader, arrived Tuesday on a six-day state visit. He met today with Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki for talks that Honecker characterized as informal.

Cut your own rug

No wonder seagrass is featured in so many home decorating magazines. It looks, feels, sounds, even smells natural. It's unique because you can buy as much rug as you want. Take measurements, drive to Pier 1 and take home the number of squares you need. Seagrass is reversible, so it takes lots of wear. And it's practically kidproof: to remedy spills, cut out stained squares and sew in new ones.

From our 9'x15' carpets you can buy as few as nine 12" squares in a strip, or as many as you'll need for a big project.
