Ni Yaoli, Houston-based Consul General for the People's Republic of China, addresses a group of Midlanders Monday at the Chamber of Commerce. He is Midland in preparation for a trip to China Midlanders will be taking in June.

Consul shares China's plan for growth

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

The Consul General of the People's Republic of China during a news conference at the Midland Chamber of Commerce this morning said his country plans an orderly evolution of what is potentially the largest consumer market in the world.

Ni Yaoli, who assumed his duties as consul general in Houston about three weeks ago, estimated it will take about 200 years before citizens of his country realize annual earnings close to that enjoyed by U.S. citizens today.

Expansion of individual income, currently about $800 a year, will be allowed to expand to perhaps $1,000 per year over the next 50 years or so. This, he said, will be part of a very long-term plan aimed at controlling expansion of the country's consumer market that, even now, threatens to exceed production capabilities.

Ni said the slump in oil prices has impacted on China's oil exports and decreased export revenues. However, because the country has a significant energy shortfall, there have been no layoffs of people involved in oil production, such as has occurred in the U.S. In fact, China has been increasing its production for domestic consumption purposes. China currently produces about 100 million tons of oil annually and plans to increase production to 150 million tons by the year 2000, he said.

Explaining the anticipated benefits to be gained through the sister city relationship between Midland and Dongying, the consul general said he hoped visits back and forth between the two cities would promote "a deepening of understanding" of the cultural, social and economic differences between the two countries.

Ni said there is a considerable difference between the structure of city government in the U.S. and that of China. The boundaries of Dongying, he said, encompass three districts and three counties and the mayor of Dongying, which was established in October 1983, is the top official for the entire area. The mayor of Dongying is responsible, essentially, for planning his area's quality of life, ranging from developing plans for economic development, sanitation and population control.

The purpose of Ni Yaoli's visit to Midland is to educate the business community on reforms that are occurring in China.

The purpose of his visit to Midland, he said, is to educate the business community on reforms that are occurring in China and that the opportunities these reforms will produce for those interested in doing business in China.

The consul general and his wife this morning were scheduled to tour the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, then be guests of honor at a noon luncheon at the Midland Center with Midland cultural and business leaders. They are slated to return to Houston this afternoon.

Madam Ni said, through an interpreter, she was enjoying her visit to the U.S.

The couple has two boys, ages 18 and 13, who have remained in China. She explained that the older son was capable of caring for himself, while the younger son was left with her sister in Shanghai. She and her husband decided not to bring their sons to the United States, she said, because the normal tour of duty is about two years and, especially in the case of the younger son, they didn't want to interrupt his schooling.

The response to questions by Madam Ni, who speaks only Chinese, was interpreted by her husband.

China building economic base

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

The People's Republic of China is the home of about 1.04 billion people, more than four times greater than that of the United States.

The land area of the country, nearly 3.7 million square miles, is only slightly larger than that of the United States.

Yet, the gross domestic product of the U.S. in 1981 was slightly more that $2.6 trillion, nearly five times greater than that of China. Per capita income in the U.S. in 1979 was $8,612, about 4.4 times greater than China.

If China's emerging economic development had reached the stage of the U.S., with equal per capita income, the gross domestic income of the Far Eastern giant would be slightly more than $11 trillion.

What this means, from a purely marketing standpoint, is that China represents the world's greatest potential consumer market.

According to Ni Yaoli, Houston-based Consul General for the People's Republic of China, Japan has already met some consumer needs for such items as black and white television sets, washing machines, electric fans and many Chinese citizens save up to buy refrigerators and are replacing their black and white TVs with color ones.

But, during a short break Monday in a meeting with a group of Midlanders, some of whom will spend about two weeks in China in June, Ni said the primary interest of the Chinese government at the present time is creation of the firm economic-industrial base required to support a population expected to reach 1.2 billion by the year 2000.

It is for this reason China, with the Cultural Revolution of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung behind it, has actively moved to improve relations with many nations, including the United States. Ni observed that, since 1979, the relationship of the United States has improved significantly, having signed agreements concerning the peaceful use of nuclear power and that China has entered into agreements with American oil companies for offshore drilling. According to the consul general, China will shortly allow onland drilling by foreign countries.

Six have died as result of Soviet nuclear accident

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

MOSCOW (AP) — An official said today that six people had died in the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, and a newspaper reported the stricken reactor's white-hot core had threatened to burn through the earth and into a water reservoir before experts cooled it.

Meanwhile, industrialist Armand Hammer arrives in Moscow today on a plane loaded with supplies for a U.S. medical team that has been treating victims of the Chernobyl accident.

Hammer, who has maintained contacts with top Soviet officials for decades, was instrumental in getting the Soviets to accept private American medical help to cope with the disaster.

In a report from Chernobyl, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda quoted physicist Yevgeny Velikhov, one of those leading the cleanup effort, as saying a crisis developed 10 days after a chemical explosion rocked reactor No. 4 which caught on fire.

According to his report, the crisis would have developed on May 6.

"The reactor was damaged. Its heart was a white-hot core, a scorched, active zone that was somehow 'hanging,'" Velikhov, vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, told Pravda.

Velikhov said scientists feared that a massive shield of sand, lead and other material dropped on top of the reactor to reduce radioactive emissions would force the burning core downward into a reservoir of water below, Pravda reported.

"Would we manage to keep it intact or would it go down into the earth? No one in the world has ever been in such a complex position," Velikhov told Pravda.

Scientists decided to pump out the water and then began drilling holes to create a "cooling zone" that would carry heat away from the reactor. It was not clear where the holes were drilled, but Velikhov said the experiment was a success.

In a six-sentence report issued by the news agency Tass late Monday, the Council of Ministers said "35 persons are in a grave condition, six persons suffering from burns and radiation died."

It did not say when the victims died, or mention the two who were reported earlier to have been killed in the accident itself — one by steam burns and one by falling debris. However, its phrasing appeared to indicate that the six dead were in addition to the two reported earlier.

But today, a Scandinavian reporter quoted Ivan Yemilyanov, deputy chief of organization that designed the Chernobyl reactor, as saying that a total of six people had died in the accident.

Deputy Premier Ivan S. Silayev, who also is coordinating the Chernobyl cleanup, said, "The main danger at the present stage has been eliminated."

"However a huge amount of work lies ahead to fully decontaminate the station and adjacent territory," he said.

Pravda repeated earlier reports that experts at Chernobyl, 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, were encasing the reactor in concrete and working to remove radioactive particles that were scattered by the accident on the area of the plant and the 18-mile evacuated zone around it.

Nebraska, New Jersey residents vote today

By ED HOWARD
Associated Press Writer

The most crowded gubernatorial primary campaign in Nebraska history ended today as voters faced the historic possibility of nominating women as the candidates of both major political parties.

Meanwhile, voters also went to the polls today in 32 New Jersey municipalities, including the state's largest city, Newark, where Mayor Kenneth Gibson was seeking an unprecedented fifth term, and Atlantic City, where Mayor James L. Usry was seeking a second term.

In Nebraska, eight Republicans and seven Democrats sought the nominations of their parties, the most gubernatorial hopefuls in state history. Gov. Bob Kerrey did not seek a second term and remained neutral during the primary.

Two women, State Treasurer Kay Orr, 47, and Nancy Hoch, 49, a member of the state university Board of Regents, led the GOP candidates in recent newspaper polls, with Kermit Brashear, a former chairman of the state party, within striking distance of both women.

On the Democratic side, former Lincoln Mayor Helen Boosalis, 66, was seen by party officials, and the polls, as leader in the seven-candidate field. If elected, she would be the oldest governor to take office in Nebraska.

Her leading challengers were former state Sen. Chris Beutler, 41, and Norfolk attorney David Domina, 35, who if elected would be the youngest governor in state history.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann predicted that just 320,000 Nebraskans would vote, saying a variety of factors, including the lack of constitutional amendments on the ballot and the large number of candidates, would cut turnout. It would be the lowest primary turnout since 1966.

Nebraska has never had a woman governor; seven women, all Democrats, have been elected governor in other states.

Mrs. Hoch ran a close but losing race against incumbent Democratic Sen. J. James Exon in 1984. That same year, Mrs. Orr was the first woman elected to statewide office in Nebraska.

The other Republican candidates are former Omaha councilman Monte Taylor; businessman Roger Yant; Chuck Loos, who is unemployed; the Rev. Everett Sileven; and Paul Rosberg, 35, a farmer.

Also seeking the Democratic nomination were state Sen. Marge Higgins, 54; Robert Prokop, 51, a former member of the Board of Regents; Barton Chandler, 48, a former bus driver who is now unemployed; and Mina Dillingham, 85, a self-described evangelist.

In New Jersey, both Gibson and Usry are being challenged by former allies who contend the leaders haven't done enough for their communities.

Gibson is being challenged by three men, including Councilman Sharpe James with whom the 53-year-old mayor took office in 1970.

Senate, House campaigns pass $10 million mark

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — With nearly six months remaining before Election Day, candidates for the Senate and House already have spent more than $100 million on their campaigns, the Federal Election Commission says.

The FEC figures, made public Monday, also showed most incumbent senators were far outstripping their potential opponents in fund raising.

At the top of the lists of leading fund-raisers and spenders was Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., who has raised $5.9 million and spent nearly $3 million. An aide said most of the money Packwood has spent so far was the cost of direct-mail fund raising.

Packwood has about $3 million in his campaign fund, while his likeliest Democratic opponent, Rep. Jim Weaver, has $1,550.

The FEC figures covered from Jan. 1, 1985, through March 31, 1986.

Of the 31 Senate candidates who have raised at least $1 million, 18 were incumbents.

The only case in which a challenger raised more money than the incumbent was in South Dakota where Democratic Rep. Tom Daschle has raised $1.1 million, while GOP Sen. James Abdnor took in $836,530. In addition, Abdnor faces a primary challenge from Gov. William Janklow.

In what is shaping up as one of the big money races of 1986, Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., has raised $3 million, while her Democratic challenger, Gov. Robert Graham, has received $2.3 million in contributions. Mrs. Hawkins has spent $2.3 million and Graham $1 million.

The incumbent and challenger have also raised more than $1 million in Alabama, where GOP Sen. Jeremiah Denton has raised $1.5 million while Democratic Rep. Richard Shelby reported taking in slightly more than $1 million.

Italy expels Libyan

ROME (AP) — The Italian government has ordered the expulsion of a Libyan consular official in Palermo, Sicily, for activities inconsistent with his diplomatic status, Foreign Ministry officials said today.

The officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the Libyan, Mustafa Mohamed Alarkresh, had been asked to leave Italy as soon as possible.

One Foreign Ministry official said Alarkresh would have about a week to pack up and leave. He described Alarkresh as a Libyan consular official.

The government accused the Libyan diplomat of engaging in activities "incompatible with his diplomatic status," but did not elaborate.

The order came a day after Libya announced the expulsion of 36 diplomats and staff from seven European Community embassies in Tripoli.

Indians say cuts not 'fair share'

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — There is an element of rough justice in the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law: all federal programs, save a few sacred cows, are supposed to take the same 4.3 percent cut.

Try telling that to the American Indians who run programs to prevent Indian children from being abused or forced into foster care.

To their anger, if not their surprise, they are facing cuts of 55 percent in a Bureau of Indian Affairs program that provided almost $9 million in grants to 155 tribal groups across the country last year.

"We're not fearful of taking our fair share of the cuts. But it wasn't a fair-share cut," said Bryce Washington, the child welfare manager for the Cherokee Nation in Tahlequah, Okla., one of more than a dozen Oklahoma tribes facing a shutoff of funds.

The cuts may not be allowed to stand. Back in Washington, the House has passed a supplemental money bill that includes $4.8 million to restore the BIA funds, and a Senate committee has passed word to the Department of the Interior that it cannot inflict the entire cut on the child welfare program. However, even if the supplemental — part of a $1.7 billion catchall measure — gets through the Senate, it could face a veto.

In the meantime, the social workers who run the intervention programs are confused and worried.

It is no solace that Gramm-Rudman specifically exempted welfare and foster care programs for non-Indian children.

Gramm-Rudman "took us by surprise," said Dr. Eddie F. Brown, chief of the BIA's Division of Social Services in Washington.

When the BIA checked with Congress to find out why its social service programs had not been afforded the same exemption, "Everybody said, 'Oh, we just assumed that was going to be (exempt),'" said Brown.

But he said when he importuned congressional aides for relief, he was told, "It's too late."

The reasoning behind the BIA's decision to take the entire $4.8 million Gramm-Rudman cut in social services from the child welfare grants is straigthforward: Brown wanted to keep intact two programs that provide $82 million in general welfare assistance and foster care payments to Indians, including many living in poverty on large reservations in Arizona and New Mexico.

The grants were scattered among both rural tribes on reservations and urban ones with no reservations like most of the tribes here in Oklahoma.

But whatever the particulars, it is the same old story, Indian leaders say.

Last week, the Cherokees got more bad Gramm-Rudman news: the U.S. Department of Labor targeted its Job Corps center in Tahlequah as one of six inefficient centers being shut down.

"We've been fighting this thing forever," said Ronald Burgess, the 35-year-old chairman of the Comanche Indian Tribe in Lawton, Okla. "Gramm-Rudman is nothing new to Indian tribes. We've experienced a 50 percent cut over the past eight years."

The Comanches are one of the five tribes in western Oklahoma slated to get funds for their child welfare program. A sixth is getting a partial grant, while no money is available for 10 others deemed equally worthy a review panel.

In eastern Oklahoma, the situation is complicated by the local BIA office's decision that only two of 11 proposals deserved funding, even if money were available. Several tribes are appealing the rejections.

The Comanches and the Sac & Fox tribes operate their own children's courts and can take jurisdiction from state officials in cases where Indian parents have abused their children or cannot care for them.

Richard Hernasy, director of child welfare for the Comanches, said, "It's taken us years to get the people to believe in us, to actually turn their children in and say there's something wrong. They know they drink too much. They know they don't work. But we (Comanches) have always taken care of our own."

Douglas T. Whitecloud, coordinator of child welfare for the Otoe-Missouria Indian Tribe in Red Rock, Okla., which is losing its grant, said that before passage of the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978, Indians who "went downtown and became anti-social and the kids were in the car" risked losing custody.

"Parents might never see those children again ... That was actually happening. This act turned that around," he said.

Thomas J. Dry, executive director of child welfare for the Absentee Shawnee and Sac & Fox tribes in Shawnee, Okla., said Gramm-Rudman does not change the tribes' legal right to receive notification and jurisdiction in child welfare cases.

"The budget cut has nothing to do with those two rights, but unless we've got money and got a staff around, it's very difficult to do anything about them," said Dry.

Shultz says Aquino inherited 'a mess'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz said today the Philippine government of President Corazon Aquino inherited "a real mess" from deposed leader Ferdinand E. Marcos and the United States will try to help the debt-ridden nation secure aid from other nations and financial institutions.

Shultz, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said the new government is trying to solve its financial problems, but a package of $150 million the Reagan administration recently requested in additional economic and military aid won't be enough.

"Mrs. Aquino and her government inherited a real mess from President Marcos. Their economy is in a lot of trouble," he said. "They are taking steps, I think the right kind of steps, to deal with it. But it will take time. They are reforming their military in a way that seems to us to be very much the right way to go about it. So they're trying to correct the problems they inherited, but they are real problems and they do need help.

"I might say our level of assistance isn't $150 million. If we get the $150 million from Congress, and I think we will, it'll be on the order of $500 million altogether," Shultz said. "But they need more, there's no doubt about it."

Besides the $150 million in additional economic aid proposed for this year, the administration would provide $50 million more for the Philippine military and speed up the delivery of $200 million in aid already in the works.

Shultz said the United States will try to help the Philippine government gain the $2 billion that Mrs. Aquino has said is needed to solve the country's economic problems.

"We"ll have to try to help them piece it together from various places, other countries, Japan, European countries, Australia is ready to put up some money, and the various international financial institutions."

"We need to help do that and we'd like to get them more money from here, but the congressional picture, or the budget picture I should say, just doesn't seem to allow that," he said.

Shultz said Marcos, who has lived in exile in Hawaii since he fled Manila on Feb. 26, continues to meddle in Philippine affairs, and his involvement is causing problems for Mrs. Aquino. Marcos loyalists recently have held street demonstrations and public rallies demanding his return.

"I was interested when her spokesman got asked about the rallies and so forth for Marcos. He said, 'The sound you hear is the sound of democracy,' so I think they have a very refreshing attitude toward it, but he is causing trouble and some of it goes beyond just arguments," Shultz said of Marcos.

The Philippine government announced on May 5 that Reagan had suggested that Marcos' passport be restored, and the ousted leader's lawyer, Rafael Recto, said Marcos would return home immediately if that was done.

The Aquino government revoked Marcos' passport when he fled the country and has rejected the idea of renewing it.

Interviewed separately on "Today," Cardinal Jaime Sin, who supported Mrs. Aquino in her efforts to take control, voiced concern about Marcos being allowed to travel freely if his passport is returned.

"I think I should say that our government is trying to recover the hidden wealth and there is a law of extradition which was written by Mr. Marcos himself," the Roman Catholic cardinal said.

"If he goes to other countries, he could not be investigated and there will be no possibility for us to be able to get back the amount of money he, according to some investigators, got for himself."

Philippine officials accuse Marcos and his associates of plundering at least $5 billion in public funds while in power.

The government newspaper Izvestia has said topsoil in a "danger zone" is being removed and the area paved over with concrete. It did not say how big the zone is.

Pravda said the Kiev subway construction organization had sent a crew of tunnel workers, but did not explain what they were doing.

The paper issued an appeal for Soviet specialists who think they might be useful to make themselves available, especially drillers, excavators and crane operators.

It said volunteers from all over the country were offering their services and coming to Chernobyl from as far away as Urengoi, site of a major natural gas field 1,200 miles away in northwestern Siberia.

The Tass report late Monday marked the first announcement of deaths from radiation exposure, and was the first official word on more deaths in the two weeks since the Soviets announced the first two victims.

According to earlier official statistics, 18 radiation victims were in serious condition. A total of 204 people were reported injured.

Soviet officials have said the worst cases were brought to Moscow, where they are being treated with the help of bone marrow transplant specialists from the United States.

The head of the team, Dr. Richard Gale, did not answer his hotel telephone late Monday. He has declined comment on his work in the past, saying he had agreed with Soviet officials not to talk to reporters.

The plane bringing Hammer to Moscow also is bringing supplies for Gale's group.

The Kremlin, meanwhile, is focusing blame on local officials for the 68-hour delay in telling the world about the Chernobyl nuclear accident and for mismanaging the evacuation.

He noted his country is rich in natural resources and that some of the problems in developing them involvement transportation. China has no developed national road system, but relies on its railroad system for transportation. This prevents full development of its coal resources.

Rather than concentrating on consumer needs, which would open vast markets to western countries, he said, China wants to import technology and the expertise necessary to bring about development of a solid infrastructure and a modern industrial bsse. Doors will open wider, he said, as development increases.

Terming mutual understanding the key to increased trade opportunities, Ni said observed efforts are under way to improve his countries laws regarding the protection of foreign investments. Noting that China has come a long way in this regard, the country is developing detailed economic laws that are important to insure investment protection.

So far, he said, China has entered into agreements only with major oil companies, such as Occidental Petroleum because such companies have the necessary capital to undertake major ventures. But leaders in his country have observed, Ni said, that the bulk of business in the U.S. is conducted by, what he termed, medium-sized and smaller companies and China hopes to encourage such companies to take advantage of investment opportunities.

But, while seeking to develop economically, he said, China is determined to maintain its independence. There are presently some problems involving the export restrictions on some U.S. technological products, he said, but he expects this will gradually ease as mutual trust and understanding increases.

Two different social-economic systems have difficulty working together because of various "bureaucratic barriers" and he advised the group of Midlanders to learn patience. He termed energy as very much the bottleneck of our economic development. He termed the sister city agreement between Midland and Dongying an ideal pairing because of the dynamism of both cities. Dongying, he said, sits nearly in the center of the Shengli oilfield much as Midland sits in the heart of the Permian Basin.

Ni observed that in China provinces, which would equate to our states, are allowed a certain autonomy in developing agreements with foreign countries so, in effect, each province handles its own trade.

Dick Dunbar, chairman of the International Affairs Committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, opening Monday's seminar, said, "China conjures in us a country of mystery, of intrigue, of enchantment" and observed that to know and enjoy China "you have to appreciated China's history and to know that you have to start back 4,000 years ago.

Observing China has many things it will offer to us in the future, Dunbar said, we have many things we can offer China in the form of cultural exchange, people-to-people exchange and economic exchange. He observed that much of what has occurred so far between Midland and China has happened due to the efforts of Mary Bray Neelley, a former Midlander who graduated from Midland High School in the 1940s. She was instrumental in bringing the Peking Opera to Midland and arranging the tour of the Thouvenel String Quartet in China last year.

In the race for the Senate seat being vacated by Sen. Russell Long, D-La., Republican Rep. Henson Moore has raised $2.9 million and spent $1.3 million, while Democratic Rep. John Breaux has raised $1.1 million and spent $853,126.

Packwood, with $992,017, also topped the list of recipients of money from political action committees. Ranking second with $731,476 was Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

The top 20 recipients of PAC money included 19 incumbents and Moore.

Ranking second and third in overall fund-raising were Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., with $4.7 million, and Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., with $4.6 million.

Among the spenders, D'Amato ranked second at $2.6 million, and Cranston third about $5,000 behind the New Yorker.

The top five Senate fund-raisers were incumbents — Packwood, Cranston, D'Amato, Mrs. Hawkins and Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who has raised nearly $3 million.

Packwood, D'Amato, Cranston and Mrs. Hawkins were the top spenders, followed by a challenger, Rep. Ed Zschau, competing in a crowded field for the Republican nomination to challenge Cranston. Zschau has spent $1.4 million.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., was the top fund-raiser in the House with $1.4 million. Kemp, often mentioned as a potential presidential candidate in 1988, has spent $1 million toward his re-election this year.

Packwood is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and was widely credited with being the architect of the sweeping tax bill approved unanimously by the committee last week.

But abortion, not taxes, could be a bigger issue in Packwood's campaign.

"I'm a living and visible symbol that you can be pro-choice and survive politically," said Packwood.

Farm bill may hinge on exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — In December, U.S. farm policy took a dramatic turn in hopes that lower prices would woo back lost sales around the globe and restore the American farm economy to health.

Five months later, however, some farm state lawmakers are worried that by the time the November election rolls around, farmers will have lost patience with the new idea.

The problem is that the success of the new law is pinned entirely on increased exports, which could be years away. In the meantime, farm income is being shored up with record government subsidies, an estimated $25 billion this year.

"We don't turn the agricultural sector around on a dime," is how Agriculture Department economist Robert Thompson puts it. "We've got at least another difficult year, maybe a couple of difficult years ahead of us."

The administration is banking on American efficiency and capacity to recapture lost markets by undercutting foreign competitors. That is a departure from the past, when American prices served as a price floor for all world production.

But the reality of that policy is politically distasteful. It means, for example, projected prices for this year's corn crop as low as $1.80 a bushel, just before election time. That compares with $2.35 for the 1985 crop and could be the lowest price since the early 1970s.

Meanwhile, farmers are in their fifth year of a severe depression that has stolen away their equity, left huge surpluses of grain at weak prices and driven thousands out of business.

"You have to be more than a little bit nervous if you're from an agricultural constituency," says Lynn Daft, a Washington economic consultant. "We're testing the patience of both farmers and taxpayers."

A few Democrats in the House and the Senate see the tension as a new opportunity to sell their dramatically different policy prescription, one that would slap sharp controls on U.S. farm output to try to force commodity prices upward.

"We hope that this year we can develop sort of an appreciation of the failure of some of these policies to work, and create a climate where we can really make some changes," says Rep. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., who is making the issue part of his campaign to unseat Republican Sen. James Abdnor this year.

"We're in a permanent farm program debate until we reach some new economic and political equilibrium," says John Schnittker, an Agriculture Department policy-maker in the Carter administration and now a Washington consultant.

No one is more aware of the dangers in the present policy than Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan.

Dole, a key architect of the current law, has kept up a drumbeat of warnings to new Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng that if something isn't done — and done soon — to maximize overseas sales, there will be renewed pressure for a policy about-face.

"Conditions in Newark today are much better than they were in 1970," said Gibson, the first black mayor of a major Northeastern city. Gibson will not discuss his opponents, saying he wants to be judged on his record.

But James, a 49-year-old college professor, says residents live in fear of crime, young people have no hope, and poverty has gripped the city.

Also challenging Gibson in the non-partisan election are the Rev. Oliver Brown, 44, a member of the Newark Board of Education, and Dennis Knight, 30, a substitute teacher.

In Atlantic City, Usry, 64, a former assistant school superintendent, seemed assured of election to a second two-year term until two former supporters — Councilman Harold Mosee, 44, and Bernard B. Fulton Jr., 52, who was head of Usry's 1984 campaign — entered the non-partisan race.

State Assemblywoman Dolores Cooper, 63, also challenged Usry, becoming the lone white candidate and raising the possibility of a vote split along racial lines and a division of black voters that could defeat Usry or force a runoff.

Usry claims that under his leadership, Atlantic City has "turned the corner" toward becoming the revitalized resort envisioned when voters approved casino gambling in 1976, but his challengers disagree.

In the nation's only other primary election Tuesday, West Virginia voters have only one major race that is contested.

U.S. Rep. Harley O. Staggers is opposed in the Democratic primary by Charles Wood, a coal miner and Lyndon LaRouche supporter who doesn't live in the district and ran a $210 campaign, and by former state Rep. D.P. Given.

Reps. Bob Wise, Alan Mollohan and Nick Joe Rahall are unopposed in the Republican primary.

Peyote still gathered near Oilton

OILTON (AP) — Early in the morning, Isabel Lopez rises with the sun, dons a floppy purple hat and a pair of boots, and searches for a cactus that has survived the adversities that buckled other industries here.

Although the name may suggest otherwise, the solid money-making industry in this South Texas town is peyote — a blue-green peyote cactus sold by a handful of licensed dealers.

Oilton, located about 35 miles east of Laredo, is the only place in the country where the blue-green cactus grows. Its commerce and profit belong to three dealers in Webb County and five more to the south in Starr county.

"There are always more customers than there is peyote," said Ms. Lopez, a 64-year-old grandmother who continues the tradition started by her father.

The squat, spineless cactus contains mescaline, which members of the Native American Church consume in religious rites similar to Christian communion rites that involve wine and bread.

"I never call it peyote when the Indians are here. It's medicine. To them it's medicine," said Ms. Lopez.

The ceremonial use of peyote by Indians is believed to date back thousands of years. Its name comes from the Aztecs whose priests ritually ate the bitter fruit as one of the offerings made to their gods.

Today, only licensed dealers and the 300,000 members of the church, which has branches in 19 states and in Canada, may possess it legally.

"Peyote is a Schedule One substance, like heroin, LSD or marijuana. The substance has no medically accepted or recognized use with the exception of the religious use by members of the Native American Church," said Arnold Lochner, a Drug Enforcement Agency supervisor in Houston.

All dealers must register with the DEA and with the Texas Department of Public Safety. They may sell it only to card-carrying members of the Indian church.

Regulars mill about outside before a Saturday night performance at the Mesquite Opry House. Opened in 1981, the opry caters to fans of "old" country music.

Mesquite Opry House offers old-fashioned country show

By TOM BOONE

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — The sound of country music washes over the 250 people in the audience and reverberates off the walls of the Mesquite Opry House, a brick antique of building that began life as a movie theater 50 years ago.

Make no mistake about the music: this is real country, not the hybrid country-pop or country-rock.

There are a few teenage boys in the audience and some small children, too. But most of the 250 people who paid the $4.25 admission are past 40. They like their music the way it used to be.

On stage, Janet McBride introduces the Shipmans, father Larry and daughter Karen, who are regulars at the Saturday night foot-tapping, fiddle-crying, guitar-strumming celebration. The other member of the group, daughter Jamie, will arrive later and join them for a couple of songs. The audience knows them and greets them with a shout.

It is another satisfying night of hootin' and hollerin', and Ms. McBride loves every minute of it. In the country music trade, she is known as a "girl singer," even though she's obviously female, a grandmother now and much more than just a "girl singer." She's a yodeler, a rhythm guitar player, announcer and the woman who runs this place.

The Mesquite Opry is one of a number of small, continuing shows that have sprouted around the country as local versions of the fabled Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Tenn. In the Dallas area, probably the best known of these oprys has been the Grapevine Opry, where Ms. McBride performed before switching to Mesquite when country bandleader Burl Hughes opened the opry in September 1981.

In January 1982, Ms. McBride, 52, and her 55-year-old husband, John Ingram, bought the opry from Hughes, and they've been managing weekend performances ever since. It seemed like a natural thing to do for Ms. McBride, who has sung for fun and professionally since she was a child.

There was a period 13 years ago when she gave it up. She based her decision partly on the death of Claude McBride, her first husband and father of her three children, and partly on the fact she was tired of associ ing with drinkers.

"I quit because bars is where I had to sing, and I didn't want to sing there anymore," she says. It was the alcohol-free Grapevine Opry with its family orientation that brought her out of retirement.

Today, she gears the Mesquite Opry toward traditional country music because that's what her audiences want to hear and because, she says, many newer songs are not suitable for young people.

"If the lyrics of a song have a 'hell' or a 'damn' in them, we'll change them," she says. Performers who won't agree to change words don't get to sing those songs.

The Opry band, which has been playing for more than two years, is paid, but the performers, some who have come from as far away as Arkansas and Oklahoma City, are not. "We just can't pay them," Ms. McBride says.

The Opry's early months were a struggle, Ms. McBride recalls, because neither she nor Ingram had ever run a country music show. During the week, Ms. McBride is a bailiff in State District Judge John Ovard's court; Ingram is a Dallas County grand jury baliff.

"There were nights we'd have 13 people sitting on the front row," Ms. McBride says.

The show became more polished, faster paced and popular with time. Community support solidified in the form of the Mesquite Opry Association, a collection of about 100 volunteers who do such chores as paint, repair, build dressing rooms and promote the Opry.

"The air conditioning went out one night, and we had a member of the association up here at 7 p.m., and he fixed it," Ms. McBride said. "We couldn't have gotten anyone else up there at that time of night."

Although Ms. McBride has performed around Dallas for years, her future may lie elsewhere. Lately she has gotten fan mail from Spain, France, England and Switzerland, where traditional country music is popular and where two of her 1960s albums were recently reissued.

Whether she will follow the pattern set by country singers such as Slim Whitman and Boxcar Willie who became more popular in Europe than in the United States isn't clear.

"We'll just have to wait and see," she said.

Prisoner may see his wife's murderer die

HUNSTVILLE (AP) — Nyle Baker, a prison hospital trusty, says he spends little time thinking about the man who killed his wife and who someday may be executed a few yards from where he works.

But memories of Baker's wife, Christine, and her death four years ago can still bring tears to his eyes, he said.

"She was just too good for a joker like me," Baker said. "It seemed like I stayed drunk for a while ever since it happened."

Mrs. Baker was shot to death as she was knitting a Christmas present in front of the television with the family dog in her lap.

"It's been a long downhill road since then," Baker told the Houston Chronicle.

Robert Streetman, 25, the man convicted of killing the 44-year-old Kountze woman, was scheduled to die by injection last week, but received a stay from a federal appeals court.

If Streetman's execution is carried out, Baker will probably see the condemned man as he is escorted to the death chamber near the prison hospital at the Walls unit.

Baker, 56, is beginning concurrent five-year terms in the Texas Department of Corrections for manufacture and possession of controlled substances.

The Bakers were married in 1961. During the last years before her death, Baker ran a pipeline construction business and his wife wrapped meat at a local supermarket.

But the job drained her, and she took some time off, he said.

It was a few days before Christmas the night a bullet pierced her skull in 1982, he said.

"She was just getting back into shape," Baker said. "The holidays were here. We were looking forward to the next few years."

Tree in limestone puzzles archeologists

AUSTIN (AP) — In addition to finding bottles, coins, plates and a hog bristle toothbrush, an excavation in downtown Austin has yielded a tree embedded in limestone.

The other artifacts are giving archeologists a better picture of what life in the Texas capital was like 100 years ago. The tree has given them a puzzle.

"I've never seen anything quite like it," said Alton Briggs, an archeologist hired by the city to analyze relics found during renovation at the Old Bakery on Congress Avenue.

Portions of the tree, which will be examined by geologists, look like charcoal in white plaster.

That combination of plant and limestone normally is a geological impossibility, Briggs said.

"It's almost like oil and water. Limestone is generally found in marine environments. Trees don't generally grow in marine environments," he said.

Exactly what the combination means to the geological history of the Austin area isn't clear, Briggs said.

"I don't even know if it's important or not. It's fair to call it a puzzle right now," he said.

Easier to interpret are the more traditional artifacts uncovered at the construction site. Briggs said such things as dishes, buttons and the toothbrush are giving archeologists a more detailed picture of what made Austin tick in its early days.

"We think these sort of things, these unconscious dispositions of material they thought nobody ever was going to see, are better" than formal written histories for understanding the everyday lives of Texans in the last century, he said.

Briggs said plenty of chicken and turkey bones, along with well-preserved egg shells, indicate that poultry was part of the diet of Austinites 100 years ago.

The artifacts, some of them caked in dirt or corroded, were found in the remains of several outdoor privies behind the Old Bakery, which once was known as the Lundberg Bakery.

"We have thousands of fragments and they'll be reconstructed into hundreds of items," Briggs said. The artifacts of everyday Austin life in the 1800s will be glued together during the next two months.

The plates, serving platters, cups, bottles once used for drugs or whisky, pipes, syringes, coins, buttons and gun shells found in the old privies will be on display when the Old Bakery renovations are completed.

"We're going to learn how people in the 19th century were very much like we are," Briggs said.

Gramm: More agents will be on border

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm says the U.S. Customs Services plans to put 200 more agents on the U.S.-Mexico border in response to a study revealing new crossing points for drug traffickers.

As Gramm held a news conference in his office Monday to announce the extra agents, Customs Commissioner William von Raab was testifying before the Senate Finance Committee that his agency's budget under Gramm-Rudman would not allow Customs to "do everything we might wish to do" to combat drug smuggling in the near future.

Gramm, R-Texas, was an original sponsor of Gramm-Rudman, a new law currently being challenged before the Supreme Court, which mandates cutbacks in the federal budget to reduce the ederal deficit.

"I have been working with the commissioner on this effort and he is a strong proponent of it and in fact was very instrumental in making the decision to commit 200 personnel slots to it, which again, in an era of tight budgets is a real commitment," Gramm said.

STATE

Increased drug trafficking hurting U.S.-Mexico relations — 1D

Gramm said 125 of the new agents would be in Texas, a figure von Raab confirmed at the Finance Committee hearing.

Gramm said that the cost of the additional agents would be borne by lower priority programs in Customs. He said about 20 agents had already been hired.

The response by Customs shows that Gramm-Rudman works, forcing the federal government to make choices, Gramm said.

"When we're talking about fighting a war against those that are profiteering at the expense of the health and sometimes the lives of our children, I think that's a very high priority," Gramm said.

He said a Customs study had identified several hundred new crossing points on the border between Mexico and Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, landing sites on the Texas Gulf Coast, and the establishment of "stash houses" on the Mexico side of the border.

Gramm, who will head the Senate delegation to the U.S.-Mexico Interparliamentary conference in Colorado at the end of the month, also responded to U.S. government criticism of Mexico for not doing more to combat drug trafficking.

Von Raab was quoted in the New York Times as saying that Mexico is "doing nothing" about the drug problem and that Mexican officials are "inept and corrupt."

Gramm said he believed the higher-ups in the Mexican government want to fight the drug trade, but that the goal is severely diluted by the time it reaches law enforcement officials at the bottom of the ladder, a problem he said is found in bureaucracies elsewhere, including the United States.

"You're talking about tremendous amounts of money and clearly those engaged in drug trafficking have every incentive to try to infiltrate our drug enforcement agencies. We do not believe they have been successful in this country. We have clear evidence they have been successful in doing that in Mexico and in other countries that we are forced in a joint partnership with," Gramm said.

Land-based ship sculpture to dock at Temple

TEMPLE (AP) — From a distance, the "Prairie Ship Liberty," will appear to be sailing on an ocean of grass on a long landlocked journey across the country.

Up close it will be seen as a bunch of 112-foot masts anchored in the ground.

The "Liberty" is 11 stories tall, 200 feet long and 90 feet wide when assembled, with masts made of utility poles.

Temple is one of 10 cities where the hull-less, land-based ship sculpture will be docked on its way to New York Harbor for the Parade of Tall Ships celebrating the Statue of Liberty's 100th birthday on July 3.

It will be the chief focal point of a three-day celebration in this city of 50,000 over the Memorial Day weekend.

Artist Naj Wikoff's "Liberty" vessel uses the earth as its hull and borrowed trucks and vans to "sail" it across the country.

The city of Temple is sharing it with such urban centers as Denver, St. Louis, Chicago and New York and is the only Southwest city on the Liberty's journey.

Some 24,000 square feet of nylon fabric is used for sails. Some sails were made in Temple, while others were made in St. Louis, Tampa, Fla., Salt Lake City and Portland.

Liberty's Temple harbor May 23-25 will be at the corner of Interstate 35 and Loop 363 adjacent to Exit 304 on the I-35.

In 1982, Wikoff created the "Prairie Ship," which stood in a farmer's field for several months until weather problems forced him to dismantle it. Last year, he was invited to bring his sculpture to New York as part of the Parade of Tall Ships.

"I thought, why not sail a ship across the center of the country and get communities to help design sails, starting at the end of the Oregon trail," Wikoff said.

Each of the communities on the U.S. journey agreed to organize local celebrations surrounding the "Liberty," provide Wikoff and his crew with housing, volunteers, site permits, equipment and assistance in promoting the voyage.

The prairie ship's "launching" ceremony May 23 is expected to draw more than 4,000 Temple-area school children and dignitaries along with other spectators.

After the town's annual barbecue, and about half an hour after sundown, a Liberty Festival complete with choirs and spectacular fireworks will end the day's events.

The following day's events will include a "Prairie Ship" 10-kilometer run, a "Parade of Short Ships" and a regatta featuring sailboats on Lake Belton about 10 miles west of Temple.

Pope plans to visit San Antonio on U.S. tour

AUSTIN (AP) — Pope John Paul II will become the first pope to visit Texas when he embarks on a September 1987 trip to the Southern and Western United States, the Austin Diocese says.

The pontiff will celebrate a public mass and meet with the U.S. directors of Catholic Charities while in San Antonio, but other details of his Texas visit have not been worked out, Bishop John McCarthy said Monday.

Catholic leaders were told of the pontiff's decision to visit Texas during a meeting last week, he said.

Monsignor Louis Wozniak, pastor of St. Louis Catholic Church in Austin, said a fraternal organization of priests of Polish descent will try to arrange a papal trip to Panna Maria, a small town about 50 miles southeast of San Antonio.

Panna Maria is the oldest Polish settlement in the United States, Wozniak said, adding that the pope might also visit low-income neighborhoods of San Antonio.

In Vatican City, a source who spoke on condition of anonymity confirmed that the pope was planning a trip to the United States next year but said details on the itinerary were still being worked out.

In addition to Texas, the pontiff will visit Florida, California and possibly Arizona during the trip, he said.

McCarthy said San Antonio is an appropriate city for the pontiff to visit because of the large number of Hispanic Catholics in South Central Texas and because the area represents "the roots of Catholicism in Texas."

He said the papal visit will be the culmination of a period of spiritual renewal by the state's Catholics.

"There will be a long period of preparation. It's not a one-day event," the bishop said.

Initiation of junior high girls 'got out of hand,' principal says

AUSTIN (AP) — Junior high school girls invited to a high school "initiation party" were bound, kicked, doused with vomit and forced to repeat obscene chants in an off-campus event that administrators say got out of hand.

Austin High School principal Jacquelyn McGee said Monday that some students may be disciplined after an investigation is completed on the incident, which he said occurred April 25 on a private lot near the school.

Those found guilty of hazing will be suspended from participating in extra-curricular activities for one year, McGee said.

McGee said the victims were eighth-grade girls from O. Henry Junior High School, who will be transferring to Austin High School in September.

"It was intended to be an initiation where the older girls would pour ketchup and syrup on the younger girls," McGee said. "The older girls brought boyfriends and other friends. The mob psychology kind of took over."

O. Henry principal Johnny Brown said several students complained to school officials about the initiation the week after it happened.

"What the students were told was that it was going to be a fun activity and they would just have some laughs and tell stories," Brown said.

McGee and Brown told the Austin American-Statesman that initiations of eighth-grade girls have been held in the past but were not as dangerous as the one this year.

According to a letter McGee mailed Thursday to parents of students at both schools, the initiation took place behind a garage which is a hangout for high school students.

McGee said that the initiation involved about a dozen eighth-grade girls and up to 100 high school students, ex-students and others.

McGee's letter said witnesses reported that girls were forced to kneel and were kicked hard with cowboy boots. Dirt was kicked on them and they were "poked and hit," the letter said.

"The girls were forced to chant a lot of vulgar and obscene things," one witness said. Another witness said several boys were drunk and one vomited and others threw the vomit on the girls, according to McGee's memo.

The mother of one of the girls invited to the initiation said the party got out of hand when some of the boys began to take over.

McGee said some of the ninth-grade girls who went through the initiation last year organized the initiation this year. The initiation has been held in past years by ninth-grade girls.

"This one got out of hand," McGee said. "We felt like it was time the school had to get word out to parents that this could be a dangerous thing."

"Clearly this type of activity is totally out of line, and we want to do everything we can to discourage it," Brown said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Elderly men arrested for trying to sell drugs

DALLAS (AP) — Two men in their 60s insisted upon a Sunday appointment to sell cocaine to purported buyers from Louisiana because they didn't think drug agents would be out working on Mother's Day, officials say.

"They were wrong," Phil Jordan, a spokesman for the Drug Enforcement Administration, said after the men were arrested at a north Dallas motel when undercover agents took delivery of almost $1 million worth of cocaine.

"They delivered an ultimatum that the buy go down (Sunday)...because they said DEA agents do not work on weekends, especially on Mother's Day," Jordan said.

The men — Minor H. Andrews, 68, of Plano, Texas, and George W. McDonald Jr., 65, of Baton Rouge, La. — were arrested Sunday after delivering 4½ pounds of a white powder, Jordan said.

The two were arraigned Monday on charges of sale and possession of cocaine, Jordan said.

"It's very unusual to have men this age involved in this type of transaction," Jordan said. "This reflects the fact that you have people from every generation involved in drug trafficking."

Bull may have to be killed

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The state's Sesquicentennial mascot, a 1,524-pound longhorn with a Texas-shaped mark on its forehead, has lost the use of its hind legs and may have to be destroyed.

The animal, named Texas USA, disappeared last Wednesday on a ranch where he had been kept near Jacksboro, about 60 miles northwest of Fort Worth. He was found on the ranch Saturday, injured and unable to move.

The bull on loan from Kathie O'Brien of Denton, Neb., in honor of the Texas Sesquicentennial, was moved to the Texas A&M large animal clinic for treatment.

Dr. Jan Cornick, a veterinarian at the clinic, said the bull may have fallen or been involved in a fight and suffered a broken back.

Large bulls sometimes receive such injuries during breeding season and the injury probably occurred the day he disappeared, she added.

"The bull is a parapalegic and unable to use its hind legs," said Dr. David L. Morris, associate professor of large animal medicine and surgery at Texas A&M University's veterinary school.

Texan's trial postponed

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — At the request of his attorney, the trial of a Linden, Texas, man charged with conspiring to kill a University of Arkansas at Fayetteville law student has been postponed until Aug. 13.

Michael Wayne Jackson's trial was to begin Wednesday, but Washington County Circuit Court Judge Mahlon Gibson granted the continuance Monday after Prosecutor Kim Smith offered no objection.

Jackson is in federal custody, charged last week at Atlanta along with several others with conspiracy to commit murder in the death of Richard Braun of Atlanta on Aug. 26.

At Fayetteville, Jackson was charged in January with placing a "gun for hire" advertisement in Soldier of Fortune magazine. The charge claimed a Tulsa, Okla., businessman, Larry Elgin Gray, responded to the ad and hired Jackson to kill Norman Douglas Norwood, a University of Arkansas Law School student who was dating Gray's ex-wife.

Gray, also charged with conspiracy to commit murder, is free on $250,000 bond pending his trial June 23.

Change in weather credited with helping halt fire

Disaster declaration requested for drought-stricken Alabama

Associated Press

Gov. George Wallace asked President Reagan to declare parched Alabama a disaster area as officials said thundershowers in drought-stricken Dixie were too little and too late to save endangered crops and cut fire hazards.

"The exact amount of the loss is still being assessed," Wallace said Monday in asking for federal help.

Weekend rainfall was scattered over the Southeast, but National Weather Service forecaster Terry Murphy said Monday it brought little relief. He added that the humid but dry conditions will continue for the rest of the week, with a slight chance of showers this weekend.

"Any rain won't mean a great deal to corn farmers," said John Henderson, an agriculture specialist at Alabama's Auburn University. "The corn crop is just about gone."

Officials said peanut crops in Georgia and Alabama also are in danger without general, soaking showers.

Much of the Southeast is still more than a foot below normal rainfall for the year, and a drought alert was issued Friday for parts of Georgia, Florida and Alabama. In Atlanta, the first four months of 1986 were the driest on record.

"The topsoil is so dry it's difficult for plants to grow in many places," said weather service hydrologist Alan Gustafson, who classified eastern sections of North Carolina as being in a "moderate drought."

"Every day without rain just continues to make the situation worse," said Steve Rich, a spokesman for the Georgia Department of Agriculture.

The weekend storms were heaviest in Louisiana, where they caused minor flooding and power outages, and in Mississippi, where they brought high winds, hail and up to 4 inches of rain.

"It was a great Mother's Day gift," said Dudley Bozeman, a cotton farmer and cattleman in Flora, Miss. "The crops we had up weren't growing, and we weren't able to plant any more."

Most Southern states have escaped the large forest fires that have plagued North Carolina, but officials said it may just be a matter of time before the fire problem spreads.

"We've still got a lot of areas that are a foot below normal on rainfall. We're just pretty much expecting something to happen," said Alan Dozier of the Georgia Forestry Commission's forest protection division.

A 3,000-acre fire burned Monday in Florida's Big Cypress Swamp, but officials said forest fires in the state are actually down this year.

"The state had unusally heavy rains in the first three months of the year and we're living off that now, hoping it holds until the summer wet season," said Ron Bishop, a spokesman for the South Florida Water Management District in West Palm Beach.

Bans on outdoor watering continued in metropolitan Atlanta, and the Tennessee Valley Authority asked its customers to refrain from washing cars and watering lawns.

"Unless we get rain soon, a number of little cities that depend on surface water for their supplies will be in trouble," said Larry Hayes, district director of the U.S. Geological Survey.

Nine-day North Carolina blaze damages 75,000 acres of forest

HAMPSTEAD, N.C. (AP) — Cooler weather and calmer winds helped firefighters halt the spread of a stubborn 75,000-acre fire that has raged for nine days, and officials were optimistic today that a rise in humidity would help contain the blaze.

"We're babysitting it now more than anything else," John McInnis, Cumberland County Emergency Management coordinator, said early today of the 14-mile-long wildfire that has eluded containment for nine days.

An estimated 5,000 people have voluntarily left their homes in the course of the fire, said Joe Dean, state secretary of crime control and public safety. "It's just a question of them wanting to get out of the smoke," he said.

One death, a firefighter who died of a heart attack last week, and about 50 injuries have been blamed on the fire. Two buildings have been reported burned.

"We have a couple of units out checking hot spots. We're feeling pretty good at this point," McInnis said, notign that in addition to the temperature and wind reductions, higher humidity today should bring some relief. Officials on Monday were less optimistic.

"We thought several times we had it contained, but it was off and running again. It won't be contained until we have lines all the way around it," Tom Hegele, spokesman for the state Division of Forest Resources, said Monday.

"The fire didn't spread today," said Bob Grady of the state Forest Service. "There is not total containment on the perimeter, but we did hold the existing perimeter, which we feel is very much in our favor. It's the first day that we've been able to do that."

About 150 firefighters worked Monday night building fire lines, said Tom Ditt, a spokesman for the state Division of Emergency Management.

"We've got the heads of the fire beaten down and broken up to the point where there's no running fire," said Don Kass with the state Forest Service. "But we've got places where the lines are very weak...and a few spots where the fire went over the line."

Firefighters concentrated Monday on the northern and southern limits of the blaze, plowing fire lines and lighting backfires to try to contain a fire that started Sunday night when flames jumped the northern lines and connected with the main fire, about four miles south of Maple Hill.

To the south, firefighters labored to plow lines to prevent northeast winds from pushing the fire toward Hampstead about two miles from the front.

Hegele said the fire could be contained, but likely not extinguished, until rain hit the scorched eastern North Carolina soil. "Those ground fires could burn for months," he said. "We will have to watch this for some time."

National Weather Service hydrologist Alan Gustafson said the chances were "very, very remote" that rain predicted for western North Carolina would reach Pender County and the fire area.

A thick, cloudlike layer of gray smoke clung to smoldering remains of pine forests in Pender County, obscuring the flames from planes and prompting health warnings in surrounding areas.

Fletcher pledges 'safe' shuttle flight resumption

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Fletcher, back in command at NASA after nearly a decade away, is pledging the safe and reliable resumption of shuttle flights, even if it takes longer than the 18 months officials have planned.

"We are looking at those mistakes and we will fix what went wrong," Fletcher said Monday as he assumed command of an agency in crisis following a string of rocket failures.

The new administrator also made clear that the journey back to full flight status might take longer than anticipated. He said the 18-month estimate for returning the shuttle to flight is a "good one. On the other hand, we aren't going to fly until we are absolutely convinced it is safe.... If we don't finish in 18 months, we just won't fly."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is aiming to put a shuttle in space a year and a half after the Jan. 28 in-flight explosion of the shuttle Challenger and loss of its seven-member crew. Shuttle director Richard Truly and other NASA officials are hoping for the next shuttle launch early next summer.

Indians fighting dump

TOWNSHIP 4ND, Maine (AP) — The Passamaquoddy and Penobscot Indians are gradually regaining ownership of their ancestral hunting grounds from the white men, but a new takeover threat has them joining forces with whites to fight it.

The 92-square-mile area of rolling hills, forests and lakes in remote northern Maine has attracted the U.S. Department of Energy, which is seeking a site to store high-level radioactive wastes generated in the East.

"Why do they always pick on the Indian reserves?" asked Lola Sockabasin, 75, a tribe member who said he hunted and trapped on the land since he was a child. "Why? That's what I'd like to know."

The Indians are regaining ownership of much of the area through a land-claim settlement with the state and federal governments that was negotiated in 1980 to compensate the tribes for land they say was stolen and cheated from them by white settlers.

But part of the land, which the DOE calls the Bottle Lake Complex, is one of 12 candidates for the nuclear dump, and although no decision is expected before the turn of the century, preliminary work has already drawn the wrath of Indian leaders.

MOVE fire remembered

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Supporters of the radical group MOVE marked the first anniversary of the fire that killed 11 people and destroyed a neighborhood with a 24-hour vigil today that Mayor Wilson Goode had tried to restrict.

U.S. District Judge James Giles ruled Monday night that the demonstrators could expand their ceremony from two hours to 24, rejecting a decision by Goode that had denied them permission for a daylong commemoration. City officials had opposed the overnight vigil after complaints were raised by some residents of the neighborhood where the vigil is taking place.

The vigil to mark the anniversary of the fire, sparked by a bomb dropped on the radical group's headquarters by police, includes a planned candlelight march through west Philadelphia today.

NASA warned of seals

NEW YORK (AP) — A letter given to NASA nearly six months before the Challenger disaster warned of the possibility the seals in the booster rockets would fail in temperatures of 50 or below, according to a report published today.

The newly disclosed letter, written by an engineer for the rocket's manufacturer in August 1985, describes the results of laboratory tests designed to determine whether a backup O-ring seal can remain in contact with the rocket casing during launching, The New York Times reported.

Ruptures of both the primary and backup seals of the booster rockets have been blamed for the Jan. 28 disaster, which killed the seven astronauts aboard. The Challenger was launched in with temperatures in the 30s, colder than any previous shuttle launching. It disintegrated 74 seconds later.

Jenrette's plans unsure

GALIVANTS FERRY, S.C. (AP) — Former congressman John Jenrette said he doesn't know if he will get back into politics after the "humbling experience" of spending 13 months in jail on an Abscam conviction.

Jenrette was on temporary furlough from a federal prison in Atlanta so he could conduct family business when he got news of his early release Monday.

"I got a call from Atlanta, and they said, 'Don't worry about coming back,'" Jenrette said Monday night at a Democratic meeting at Galivants Ferry.

He was convicted in October 1980 of conspiracy and accepting a $50,000 bribe in the FBI Abscam investigation into political corruption. He was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $20,000. He began serving the sentence in April 1985.

In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Weather-wise

This is the time of year in West Texas when a sudden thunderstorm can turn a calm, peaceful afternoon into a time for residents to get a little worried.

The spring and summer months frequently bring potentially violent weather to the Permian Basin. Billowy white clouds can turn menacing in a matter of minutes and sweep across the countryside, pelting land, crops, vehicles and residents with hail, high winds and driving rain.

What's more, the West Texas weather can become even more severe as evidenced by the recent Sweetwater tornado, that killed one man. Potentially life-threatening weather, while not being an everyday occurrence, certainly can develop quickly in the Midland region.

The best way for residents to protect themselves is to stay aware of the developing weather conditions. They can do that in a number of ways including reading the forecast, listening to radio and television reports concerning the weather, and by visually observing weather changes taking place around them.

Safety experts agree that one of the greatest dangers posed to people is being unaware of weather developments around them. In many instances, people can save themselves by moving out of a storm's path or by seeking shelter, depending on the type of storm and its intensity. But lack of knowledge of developing weather can be the real killer in West Texas.

That's a shame because technological advancements have helped put weather knowledge at every individual's fingertips. Portable weather radios, television's warning signals and other devices can help safeguard people from severe storms if they will only utilize them.

Without a doubt, the weather in West Texas may not always suit residents, but if they stay alert of what's happening weatherwise, they'll be safer.

Transatlantic cooperation

Charley Reese (European 'allies', Tuesday, April 29) says he reads a lot of history. In the next column, an inch away, the "Thought for Today" was:

"What experience and history teach is that people and governments have never learned anything from history." — Hegel.

Winston Churchill said once, "The use of recriminating about the past is to ensure effective action in the future." Of the two opinions I prefer to put my hope in Churchill's.

Mr. Reese wants America to pull out of Europe because we Europeans are a dead loss. America certainly did not get the support it wanted over Libya, but the problem goes on. Rather than throw the baby out with the bathwater it would be better to continue the persuasion process, with the aim of getting better cooperation in the future.

Over 40 years there have been many crises in the Alliance — to me it would be absurd to expect that this would not be the case. There is no such thing as a European view. There are the many different views of the 15 or 16 different countries that make up the Alliance. Crises have been overcome and solutions reached by working at it, and by believing that answers could be found.

For reasons of his own, Mr. Reese chose not to mention the one European country that has been the closest ally of the United States throughout this time, in spite of the coming and going of governments with substantially different philosophies. Another point he did not mention is that American forces are in Europe not solely for the protection of the Europeans. We have common interests and need to get our transatlantic act together instead of falling out and exchanging insults.

Advice for Hance

Just wanted to offer some afterthought to the previous primary election and a tad of layman's advice to Kent Hance.

You know Kent, it seems to me that you would have learned a very valuable lesson in campaigning for public office from your prior defeat a couple of years ago, and that lesson being this: Keep your mouth shut about illegal aliens.

Now Kent, I don't know beans about political science but I have enough sense to know you can't threaten building contractors or the oil business by promising to cut off their endless stream of cheap labor. They beat you Kent, they'll always beat you.

Perhaps you would have fared better if you'd stolen a page from old Mark White's book. Lie like the dickens until you're in, then show your feathers.

Besides immigration, what did you have in mind, Kent? Why not share it. I want my job back at reasonable pay.

I'm for you, Kent, but remember, mum's the word next time. Big business is appalled by you and your desire to save Texas jobs for Texans.

Why not get on the good side of old Mark White and learn the fine art of politicking. Don't be so honest.

Thanks to media

The Midland Chamber of Commerce recently completed the most successful membership drive in its history. The campaign could have been negatively affected by Midland's economy, but instead was approached positively. We have four loyal chamber members to thank for that.

Media representatives from KTPX-TV (Channel 9), KMID-TV (Channel 2), KNFM/KMND Radio and the Midland Reporter-Telegram offered a total of more than $1,000 in free advertising to all businesses and individuals joining the chamber during the drive. Their offers opened many doors for volunteer salesmen. In the midst of slow times for many businesses came the opportunity to join the chamber and enjoy the benefits of valuable advertising.

In addition, the Midland Reporter-Telegram published a special tabloid publicizing the drive and "6 Reasons to Join the Chamber." We salute the media for their optimistic support of this community. Leaders like Charles Spence (MR-T), John Marquiss (KTPX), John Foster (KMID) and Bob Bunch (KNFM/KMND) are the reason chamber programs are supported enthusiastically by nearly 2,000 area businesses.

Defense budget ax falls on schools

WASHINGTON — The public may be confused about Gramm-Rudman cuts in defense spending, but it's really simple enough for a first-grader to understand — if the kid happens to be one of the 156,000 students who attend schools for U.S. military families overseas.

Jack Anderson

The $26.8 million lopped from the military schools' current budget amounts to a 4.9 percent cut. This translates into a whole catalog of personnel, equipment and activities reductions that affect every school-age military dependent overseas.

Here are some of the results of the cutback in funds, culled by our associate Stewart Harris from copies of recent orders issued by the Pentagon:

— Cancellation of 1986 summer schools.

— Cancellation of all field trips.

— A moratorium on purchases of new textbooks and miscellaneous equipment.

— Drastic reduction of the teaching staff by attrition. One out of three teachers who leave the system will not be replaced.

— A freeze on hiring of art, music, physical education and other "specialty" teachers.

— A 25 percent reduction in purchases of audio-visual equipment.

One program canceled as too costly — the annual Pacific region basketball tournament — was rescued by Northwest Orient Airlines. When the Pentagon canceled the tournament by cutting back on extracurricular travel, the airline flew the competing school teams to Japan from South Korea, the Philippines and other U.S. military bases.

The decision not to replace one-third of the teachers who quit or retire means that the military classrooms will be packed even tighter than they have been. Already the military's classes are more crowded than their civilian counterparts: Currently there are 24.3 students for every teacher in the military system; the average for civilian classes is about 23 children nationwide, according to National Education Association figures.

And even before the cuts, the military spent much less on its pupils than the U.S. average. Jack Rollins, president of the Overseas Education Association, said the Pentagon's expenditure this year per pupil was $2,998.40, compared with the national average of $3,814.

The Pentagon "is in essence running one of the poorest school systems in the United States," Rollins said.

In a letter to military school administrators, Joseph Larkin, director of the system's Atlantic region, made this pointed observation: "As you become aware of the cuts we have already made, you will think they are harsh. You will be right."

Footnote: In a written response to our inquiries, the Defense Department confirmed the $26.8 million, 4.9 percent budget cut. It also disclosed that the opening of the 1986-87 school year will be delayed until Sept. 5 as an economy measure. The Pentagon claimed that students in the military school system have exceeded the national average on college entrance examinations for the last 10 years.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Libyan dictator Moammar Khadafy is reportedly pondering whether to permit a Soviet base in his country as a response to the U.S. bombing attack. But it's hard to see how Libya could support many more Soviet bloc "advisers" than it already has. Congressional sources estimate the numbers this way: 2,000 to 5,000 Soviets, 18,000 Romanians, 18,000 North Koreans, 10,600 Poles, 5,600 East Germans, 5,400 Czechs and several thousand Bulgarians and Hungarians, for a grand total topping 70,000. Khadafy naively believes that it's safer to have Soviet satellite personnel than Russians.

GUEST EDITORIAL: Former Nixon aide Charles W. Colson has written a response to our recent suggestion that there is merit in Virginia Gov. Gerald Baliles' plan to require literacy as a condition of parole. Colson objects to the idea on constitutional grounds, and also faults it as unfair to the most disadvantaged prisoners. "What's more," he writes, "as an inmate I can tell you that this is the kind of thing that backfires." It would also, he says, be an expensive way to teach adults to read, considering the cost per inmate of keeping people in prison. Finally, Colson said, "Prisons ought to be to punish, not to try to 'cure' criminals."

MINI-EDITORIAL: Parents in two Florida school districts are upset — and with good reason — over revelations that their children have been subjected to polygraph tests for various suspected rules infractions. This is a perfect illustration of what can happen if the zealots who believe in so-called lie detectors are allowed free rein. Congress is now considering legislation that would forbid private employers from using these voodoo gadgets as hiring tools. We'd like to suggest that the law be broadened to keep school principals and their henchmen from intimidating the children we entrust to their care.

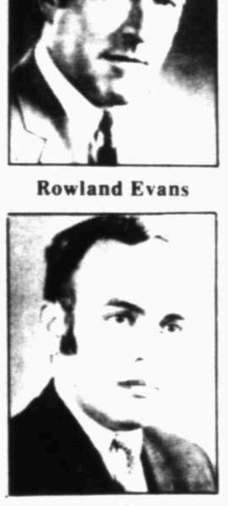
Shultz actions undermining Reagan Doctrine

WASHINGTON — Angry voices were raised when House Republican leaders told Ambassador Philip Habib behind closed doors April 29 that his pursuit of the Contadora process was a sellout of the contras and would make the U.S. hostage to phantom Sandinista "reforms."

Rowland Evans



Robert Novak

But President Reagan's Central American envoy reminded Minority Leader Bob Michel, Whip Trent Lott and other GOP leaders that he was only following Ronald Reagan's instructions: Try your darndest for a political deal to democratize the communist regime in Nicaragua. "Habib was on solid ground, considering his orders," one hard-line anti-Sandinista Republican conceded to us.

That sums up the sudden ill health of the Reagan Doctrine in Central America. Insensibly, it has become a twin brother of the "containment" theory of some congressional Democrats who also rely on the good intentions of the communists in Managua. The odd men out are the Contras.

Reagan's Hobson's Choice: If President Daniel Ortega signs the Contadora agreement promising reforms, Reagan's repudiation of it would end any chance of congressional aid to the contras. But Reagan's acceptance would — according to Habib's written promise — disband the contras; Ortega would be free to tear up the agreement at his leisure with no risk of contra reprisal.

Habib was summoned by the House Republican leaders to Michel's H-227 Capitol hideaway for a warning. Despite tough questioning by Reps. Dick Cheney and Jack Kemp among others, Habib did not give an inch. A letter from some Republicans at the meeting may soon be on its way to the president, asking a chance to make their case directly to him.

But the way the Reagan administration has played its muddled anti-Sandinista hand leaves little room for any change at this late date. Reports are circulating here that despite a cleavage in the Marxist regime on whether to sign the elaborate but unenforceable Contadora agreement of last September, both Cuba's Fidel Castro and the Soviet Union are counselling Ortega to sign.

The agreement would clear the way for a long breathing space during which the Marxist-Leninist regime could build its power, stabilize its economy and get rid of remaining internal enemies — stripping away what few freedoms remain. Time would be provided to develop new means of exporting communism through Central America. The only U.S. policy is hope that the Sandinistas will stonewall.

How did Ronald Reagan get himself locked in this box, where the future of his Reagan Doctrine appears to lie in the hands of his Sandinista enemies? A partial answer is the difference in outlook between the president and the secretary of state he trusts and admires, George Shultz.

Assistant Secretary of State Elliot Abrams, a neo-conservative political appointee in charge of the Latin American bureau, shares Reagan's optimism about rolling back the boundaries of communism and expanding the frontiers of free societies. But by persuading Reagan to name retired diplomatic troubleshooter Habib as his chief guide through the Nicaraguan swamps, Shultz seized policy control.

This is the same Shultz-Habib team that drafted the failed U.S. policy in Lebanon, when the secretary overrode experienced Mideast advisers. With Habib as his agent, Shultz forced Lebanon to accept a pact wanted by Israel that collapsed within weeks. That has led the highly-experienced and widely-respected Habib to be attacked behind his back by GOP conservatives as the "undertaker" of U.S. policy.

Perhaps partly because of Habib, State Department insiders say Shultz has no confidence in the contra solution for Nicaragua. During his unfriendly exchange with the House Republican leaders, Habib made no secret of the fact that he fears the contras will take the U.S. down a blind alley.

To congressional Reaganites, that trips up the president at a critical point in his Latin policy. They argue that if Congress had voted funds for the contras at the time they showed military muscle in swamping the March 27 Sandinista incursion into Honduras, the anti-communist guerrillas could have proved their staying power and high morale.

Methodist bishops wrong to trust Soviets

It does not surprise me that the Methodist bishops condemn nuclear weapons. The hierarchy of the Methodist Church has been way left of the average American for decades.

Charley Reese

I stopped setting foot in Methodist churches, even to visit, a long time ago. I don't support, with my money or my presence, organizations that I think are working against the interests of my country.

The question of nuclear weapons naturally is a secular subject so when the bishops or any other religious persons choose to inject themselves into secular political debate, as I believe they have a right to do, they should not expect any special treatment nor claim any special expertise.

The Methodist bishops know less about nuclear weapons and geo-political strategy than I do about the dead language of Aramaic. If they think moralizing will protect them from making fools out of themselves, they are mistaken.

The bishops have the same problem all the anti-nuclear people have: They don't have an alternative. They think all they have to do is say that nuclear weapons are a bad thing. Well, I agree. Cancer and leprosy are bad things, too. It is not a question of being for or against nuclear weapons. The question is, how do we and our children survive in freedom?

Given the fact that a very hostile Soviet Union possesses nuclear weapons, there simply is no alternative to a nuclear deterrent. If that concept is too difficult for the bishops to grasp, they might talk to a few Japanese. They have had direct experience.

If you don't like a nuclear deterrent, then you have an obligation to spell out your alternative. The only one I can think of is the same one the Japanese thought of: surrender.

Now if the bishops, allegedly out of their Christian consciences, are suggesting that Americans surrender their freedom to the Soviet Union, which is an avowed enemy of religion, they ought to say so plainly. If they do, I predict that they will empty a great many Methodist church pews.

Their claim that nuclear weapons violate the just war criteria by killing too many civilians is hogwash. Apparently they do not know that World War II, which they presumably supported, killed 55 million people, the vast majority of them civilians, with very old-fashioned chemical explosives, bullets, bayonets, gas, and rifle butts.

I am not suggesting that the bishops are disloyal. I don't know whether they are or not. But it is an obvious fact that the clergy is no more proof against stupidity than any other vocation. Liberals who love to castigate conservative preachers will understand that.

There is a biblical suggestion to the effect that by their works, you can know them, and this practical suggestion applies to churchmen and non-churchmen alike.

What the American people have to do is just apply common sense. A nuclear deterrent has prevented a world war for 41 years. A generation of Americans were able to live in peace in their own country, not because of moralizing bishops or anti-nuclear demonstrators, but because of nuclear weapons. The men and women of the armed forces, the nuclear weapons scientists like Dr. Edward Teller — they have been the peacemakers and they have a 41-year record to prove it.

If the bishops want to trust the Soviets, I suggest they move to the Soviet Union or Afghanistan. As for me, I will trust the Lord and the nuclear weapons our God-given intelligence developed to protect our children from evil men.

Deaver probe may include Fielding

By PETE YOST

Deaver

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House counsel Fred Fielding provided inaccurate information to investigators of lobbyist Michael Deaver after Deaver's company broached the subject of Fielding going to work there, a congressman says.

Rep. Gerry Sikorski, D-Minn., said Monday that Fielding may have violated federal conflict of interest laws by writing a memorandum favorable to Deaver after discussing the job possibility with a member of the lobbyist's office.

Sikorski said Fielding told the staff of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations that he and Deaver discussed possible employment for Fielding with Deaver while "both of them were still at the White House" but after Deaver had announced he was leaving.

Sikorski's comments came at a hearing of the oversight and investigations subcommittee, of which he is a member.

At the hearing, a General Accounting Office report was released that concluded Deaver, former deputy White House chief of staff, may have violated federal conflict of interest laws in connection with the Reagan administration's decision last year to appoint a special envoy to Canada on acid rain.

Deaver, a close friend of President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, left the White House and formed his lobbying company last May. In July, he signed a $105,000 contract to represent the Canadian government.

The GAO report was referred to the Justice Department, which is determining whether to recommend that an independent counsel investigate Deaver.

Sikorski says the Justice Department should review Fielding's role as well.

The congressman said the vice president of Deaver's firm, William Sittman, told Fielding over lunch Feb. 27 that Fielding "should come by and discuss" possible future employment with Deaver's firm.

The next day Fielding wrote a memo to the Office of Government Ethics regarding Deaver.

Fielding's memo said Drew Lewis, the special envoy to Canada, "had no administrative support from the White House office."

GAO investigators concluded in their own probe that Lewis, though his expenses were paid by the State Department, did receive technical staff support from the White House. Sikorski said Fielding's memo was incorrect.

Lewis' status — whether he technically worked for the State Department or the White House — is important to conflict of interest allegations against Deaver because the two men met last Oct. 25 to discuss acid rain.

One provision in the conflict of interest laws prohibits a former senior official from representing anyone before his former department for one year after leaving government.

Following the hearing, Sikorski told reporters that it was "bad enough" that Fielding wrote the memo after having the luncheon meeting with Sittman. But, "Then he signed the memo and it was inaccurate."

He said there was a "primie facie case" that Fielding had violated ethics laws.

Fielding told The Washington Post on Monday he "never seriously considered going to work for Mike Deaver. There was no job offer made on Feb. 27 or at any time." He called this "a misunderstanding of the facts and the law."

It wasn't until the first week in March that Fielding, because of the job opportunity discussion, withdrew himself from providing information to the ethics office and congressional investigators on the Deaver matter. Fielding resigned from the White House on March 31 and took a position with a private law firm.

According to the GAO, Deaver "may have violated" four different, but somewhat overlapping, provisions of the laws as a result of his involvement in the Canada-acid rain issue.

As President Reagan's deputy chief of staff, Deaver held at least 15 discussions on acid rain in the months preceding a U.S.-Canadian summit in mid-March 1985 and pushed for appointment of a special U.S. envoy to focus on the problem, the GAO told the House panel.

The Canadian government has pressed the United States to embark on a program to reduce industrial pollution, believed by many scientists to harm the environment of Canada and the Northeastern United States.

Deaver said he could support the appointment of either Lewis or William Clark as special envoy, according to the two GAO officials who testified before the subcommittee.

The GAO investigators concluded that Deaver's participation in that Oct. 25 breakfast meeting with Lewis may have constituted violation of four conflict of interest provisions because he discussed the timing for release of a pending acid rain report during the session.

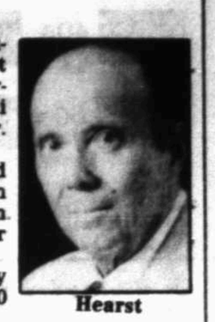
Lewis and his Canadian counterpart released the report — which recommended implementation a five-year, $5 billion U.S. program to clean up acid rain — on Jan. 8.

The GAO was unable to substantiate allegations that Deaver was discussing employment with the Canadian government while he was still at the White House, said James F. Hinchman, the GAO's deputy general counsel.

After Monday's hearing, Deaver said in a statement that the GAO report "was prepared and presented publicly without interviewing me or any of my associates" and "fails to demonstrate that I have violated any federal laws."

Younger Hearst son, 70, dies of cancer

Hearst News Service



Hearst

LOS ANGELES — David Whitmire Hearst, a younger son of newspaper giant William Randolph Hearst and the longtime publisher of the Los Angeles Herald-Express, died Monday afternoon at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center after a nine-month bout with cancer. He was 70.

The quiet, reserved newspaper executive inherited little of the flamboyance of his famous father. An officer of the Hearst Corporation, he lived quietly in Beverly Hills with his wife of 48 years, the former Hope Chandler.

Cedars-Sinai spokesman Ron Wise said family members were with him when he died about 4:20 p.m. Monday.

Before becoming a vice president of the Hearst Corp. in 1960, Hearst was publisher for 10 years of the Herald-Express, an afternoon daily that merged in 1962 with the Hearst-owned Los Angeles Examiner to form the Herald Examiner.

Frank A. Bennack, president and chief executive officer of the Hearst Corporation, said Hearst "served with distinction" within the corporation, and will be remembered "as a kindly and gracious gentleman who was always most supportive of the company's projects for growth and expansion."

"He was a quiet and really a wonderful publisher," said Herbert Krauch, managing editor of the Herald-Express during Hearst's tenure. "He was interested in things that were good for Los Angeles as a city."

Under his leadership, the Herald-Express campaigned successfully for better education, freeway medians and conservative candidates, Krauch said.

Born Elbert Willson Hearst on Dec. 2, 1915, in New York City, Hearst was considered by many the most reserved of his father's five sons. Known by the family as "Buddy," he and his twin, Randolph Apperson Hearst, now president of the San Francisco Examiner, were the youngest of the Hearst sons.

The other surviving brother, William Randolph Hearst Jr., is editor-in-chief of Hearst Newspapers.

Elbert W. Hearst, who as a teenager changed his name to David, and his twin attended St. Bernard's Academy in New York City and St. George's Academy in Newport, R.I. He enrolled in Princeton in 1933, and in 1936 joined the staff of his father's New York Journal-American as a cub reporter, covering crime and city hall.

He left the following year to become assistant advertising director and later city editor at the Baltimore News-Post.

In March, 1938, Hearst married Hope Chandler, a 17-year-old Manhattan entertainer once billed on the cover of Life Magazine as "The Prettiest Girl In Paradise" — the name of the New York nightclub where she worked. Shortly after the wedding, the young couple moved to Beverly Hills, when Hearst began his career with the Herald-Express.

At the time of his death, Hearst was president of the William Randolph Hearst Foundation, a charity which sponsors programs benefiting education, medicine and journalism. He also served on the boards of the Los Angeles County Museum and the Los Angeles Community Chest.

Hearst's father, William Randolph Hearst, built a communications empire that at its peak included 28 major newspapers, 18 leading magazines, radio stations, movie companies and castles in Wales and San Simeon. He is best known in journalism for introducing colored comic strips, social crusades, sensational crime reporting and society gossip during fierce circulation wars with publishing giant Joseph Pulitzer in the 1890s.

An enthusiastic flier, Hearst became one of the first civilian pilots to break the sound barrier, flying a F-100F Super Sabre jet at nearly 1,000 mph over the Mojave Desert in 1957.

Besides his wife, Hope, survivors include two children, Millicent Phoebe Boudjakdji, 47, who assisted her father at the William Randolph Hearst Foundation; David Whitmire Hearst Jr., 42, a Herald Examiner employee; and three grandchildren: Anissa, Sherif and Samia Boudjakdji.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the Old North Church in Forest Lawn Hollywood Hills Memorial Park.

In the 1800s, this iron fence surround the unfinished Capitol building.

Controversy nothing new when fencing U.S. Capitol

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress aghast at the idea of erecting an anti-terrorist fence around the Capitol are being reminded that in less troubled times, more than a century ago, an imposing wrought iron fence encircled the same tree-shaded grounds.

In those days, according to historians, the fence was intended to keep out wandering dogs, cattle and swine that might bespoil the landscaped gardens and walkways of the Capitol. But legislators apparently didn't like that fence, either.

The gates were closed at 9 o'clock every evening. "Congressmen, delayed at the Capitol, were often seen to pick up a convenient stone and break a lock rather than seek peaceful exit," said one account.

That iron and stone fence was designed by Charles Bulfinch, the architect of the Capitol, and built in 1829, according to documents furnished by the architect's office. The fence stood "taller than the head of an ordinary man" and featured two sandstone lodges for gatekeepers at the western foot of Capitol Hill.

The fence was partially dismantled in the 1850s to make way for construction of the present House and Senate wings, which tripled the size of the original 22.5-acre site.

The fence was completely removed by 1874, when landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted designed the open vistas of sweeping lawns and terraced gardens, bordered only by a low stone wall, that are familiar to millions of tourists today.

By Olmsted's time, the documents say, there was "improved animal control."

In this spring of heightened U.S. tensions with Libya, many members of Congress are worried about the threat of a terrorist bombing attack against the Capitol, but they're not sure that a fence is the best solution.

A new, $15.4 million security plan proposed by Senate Majority Whip Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., and his Democratic counterpart, Alan Cranston of California, calls for building a wrought iron fence atop the stone wall, standing about 8 feet high and completely enclosing the 127-acre Capitol grounds.

Inside the fence, similar to one that circles the White House, would be a secondary ring of infrared and seismic sensors and closed-circuit TV cameras to thwart anyone who might try to scale the barrier. Behind the fence's reinforced gates would be 30-inch, hydraulically operated steel blades designed to halt a suicide truck bomb.

Tourists would be required to pass through elaborate screening devices at one of three "visitors' kiosks," or police guardhouses, along the eastern edge of the Capitol grounds. Once inside, the only security precautions they would encounter would be metal detectors situated outside the House and Senate galleries.

At a Senate Rules Committee hearing last week, Cranston assured Sen. Charles Mathias Jr., R-Md., that the Capitol would not be turned into a "fortress" if the security plan were approved.

Mathias said it would be "the ultimate victory of lawless terrorists" if Americans were denied free access to Congress in the name of greater security.

Overhaul proposal has something for everyone

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate Finance Committee's tax-overhaul plan is broad enough to cover every American — not just the 9-to-5 Jane and Joe. If you're unemployed, 55 or older, work in Libya or win the Nobel Prize you would be affected.

Here are some of the less-publicized provisions in the massive bill, which is awaiting action in the Senate:

— No more deductions for "educational" travel or attending investment conventions.

— The credit of up to $100 for political contributions would die. The $1-a-person checkoff for presidential campaigns would remain.

— A child who can be claimed as a dependent by parents would lose the separate exemption on his or her own tax return.

— Unemployment compensation would be 100 percent taxable. Up to half is now taxable.

— Although preferential treatment of capital gains would end, a person 55 or older could still avoid tax, once in a lifetime, on up to $125,000 in profits from the sale of a principal home. And for a person of any age, taxes on home-sale profits would continue to be deferred if "rolled over" into a new home.

— Interest or dividends earned on a parent's gift to a child under 14 would be taxed at the parent's (higher) rate. But if the gift were from a grandparent, the tax would be at the child's (lower) rate.

— Any prize awarded for "charitable, artistic, scientific and like achievements" would be taxable unless given to charity.

— The additional exemption for those blind or over 65 would end; the standard deduction would be increased by $600 for someone blind or over 65 and $1,200 for a person who is both.

— An American working in Libya would be denied the $70,000-a-year tax exclusion available to others working abroad.

— Self-employed people could deduct up to half the cost of their health insurance.

— State and local governments would not be required (as they are under the House-passed bill) to send a notice to each person who pays a state or local income or property tax with a copy to the Internal Revenue Service.

— Brokers would no longer have to send Forms 1099 (statements of dividends paid) in a separate envelope; the statements could be included with the dividend check.

— A person who has income (such as interest) that is not subject to withholding would have to make quarterly estimated tax payments covering at least 90 percent of the estimated tax bill for the year, up from 80 percent.

— Tax credits for home energy conservation, which died last year, would not be revived.

— Tax exclusions for two worker fringe benefits — employer-paid education aid and group legal assistance — which died last year would be revived.

— A new benefit for college employees: tax-free campus lodging furnished by the school.

— Most employee awards, such as for productivity, would be taxed, but up to $400 could be received tax-free as an award.

$1 million in cash found in attic

CAMP SPRINGS, Md. (AP) — Investigators discovered more than $1 million in cash in the attic of a house where the bodies of a father and daughter were found last week, police said.

The $1,002,121 in cash — most of it in $20 bills — was discovered in two suitcases late Friday while authorities searched for clues in the mysterious deaths, Prince George's County Police spokesman Cpl. Bruce Gentile said Monday.

Police said the county can claim the cash if it can prove the money is the profits of illegal drug trafficking. The discovery of the cash was not disclosed earlier because investigators were counting the money, police said.

Eight days ago, police found the bodies of Dennis White, 33, and Donna White, 15, at their Old Branch Avenue home in Camp Springs, about 10 miles southeast of Washington, D.C.

The two had been dead about 10 days, police said. Cause of death still has not been determined, but the state medical examiner's office has ruled out shooting, stabbing and strangulation.

Judge believes Bhopal lawsuits should be transferred to India

NEW YORK (AP) — Indian courts are capable of handling lawsuits stemming from the chemical disaster that killed an estimated 2,000 people in Bhopal, and to leave the cases in the United States would be a form of imperialism, a federal judge says.

U.S. District Judge John F. Keenan ruled Monday that the 146 suits filed in the United States over the Bhopal accident, including one filed by the Indian government, do not belong here and should be transferred to India.

The decision was a victory for Union Carbide Corp., whose subsidiary owned the plant that leaked poisonous methyl isocyanate gas across a crowded slum the night of Dec. 3, 1984. In addition to the deaths, an estimated 200,000 people were injured.

The Danbury, Conn.-based company argued that with all of the victims, all of the plant workers and most of the records in Bhopal, it made little sense to hear the litigation in a courtroom on the other side of the world.

Lawyers for the victims and for the Indian government, however, contended that India's judicial system was not up to the job of sorting out the legal issues in time to do much good for the survivors.

The decision could affect the size of the eventual damages, because American courts are widely viewed as much more generous toward accident victims as well as quicker in compensating them.

Greenwood Rangers load up for state track meet

From Staff Reports

GREENWOOD — With two individuals and three relays headed for Austin's state track meet Saturday, Greenwood track coach Joe Longley has his largest contingent of state qualifiers in five years.

"We didn't have anybody to go to state last year. Since 1984 we've had one individual in two events, but this is the largest group I've had make it to Austin in my five years at Greenwood," noted Longley.

Senior Chad Longley is headed for the state meet in the long jump while sophomore Cheryl Martin will be in the 100 hurdles. This is Greenwood's last chance to compete in the Class 2A division since the school is moving to Class 3A next fall.

The Greenwood boys have two relays with Bobby Clark, Brian Underwood, Longley and Steve Popham forming the sprint relay while Todd Martin, Clark, Underwood and Longley compose the 1600 relay unit.

The Greenwood girls also a sprint relay qualification with Krissy Wallace, Martin, Amy Franks and Denisa McMullen.

Longley won his long jump shot with a 21-10 second place finish in the Region I meet and has a 22-6¼ this year, but Coach Longley isn't sure if either will be far enough in Austin.

"It depends on how Chad's steps are and how he's feeling. I think he will have to be over 23-feet to place, but then again, maybe the opposition won't jump well down there," said coach Longley.

Martin, the sophomore who has earned a state berth in her first year of high school competition, earned the right with a second place finish in the 100 hurdles with a 15.56.

"Cheryl made a lot of improvement over the season," said Longley. "She will have to improve her time to be competitive in Austin, but she has worked hard and shown an excellent attitude. There will be some she can out run. She can do everything."

Greenwood's best hopes may be in the boys sprint relay. The Rangers won the district and regional titles in that event and own a season best of 43.28. Greenwood had a 43.61 in the Region I meet.

"The only time we didn't win the sprint relay this year was at the Iraan meet where we dropped the baton," said Longley. "However, the times in Austin are real fast. Our goal was to get there. What we do now is icing. Our kids compete well and they're not going to embarrass us. I think we will compete. It's fast in Austin and everybody gets hyped for it."

Greenwood's 1600 relay also faces an uphill climb in Austin after getting out of the region meet with a second place 3:24.88, which is close to the season best of 3:24.1.

"It'll be tough for us in the 1600 relay. It will take at least a 3:20 to place, but if we run well, you never know what will happen down there," said Longley.

The Greenwood boys had an exceptional track season, winning at Wall, Wink, Big Lake and the district championship. The Rangers were also second at Iraan where they dropped the baton in the sprint relay.

"That's not too bad for a bunch of skinny white kids," said Longley.

Greenwood's girls sprint relay team is young with only Franks being a senior. Wallace is a junior, Martin a sophomore and McMullen a freshmen. They posted a 50.45 for second place at the region meet.

"They will have to get below that to be competitive," says Longley. "They've done a good job and have competed around here. They've been consistent and Franks has given some good leadership. They've worked hard and kept good attitudes and we feel like they have time to improve.

Other area athletes have won state berths in the 2A division. Reagan County's Martin Mitchell appears to be a major threat in the discus with his 161-6 region performace and teammate Leslie Gooch is an 800 threat with her winning time of 2:25.46. Stanton's Kody Newman won the region 100 title with a 12.60.

In the 4A division, Andrews' Bobby Kimbrough had a 173-3 for second place in the region meet, but with throws like that will be a contender in Austin. Lamesa's Keith Bryant won the region 110 hurdles with a 14.29.

The only area qualifier in the 3A division is Crane's 1600 relay team with a second place 3:23.83.

A bevy of area athletes qualified in the 1A division, which was led by Iraan and Garden City.

Garden City's girls qualified all three relays and one individual. Gena Schaefer returns in the 800 with a fine 2:22.19 at the region meet and will be a factor in Austin. Garden City's relays were all second place finishers as the sprint relay posted a 51.69 qualification, the 800 relay a 1:48.60 and the 1600 relay a 4:09.32.

Iraan led all area qualifiers with six individuals. Iraan qualifiers are Ted Davenport, pole vault, 13-0; Chad Floyd, 3200, 10:27.40, 100 hurdles, 15.57; Tiffany Jones, triple jump, 34-10¼; Nicole Davenport, long jump, 16-1½; and Julie Floyd, 3200, 12:42.46.

Grady's Shanna Hale will also be in Austin with a winning time of 5:41.13 at the region meet.

Midland High second baseman Jim Werner (2) has trouble finding the handle on a throw from catcher Tommy Yorkman as Pecos' David Vejil safely steals second base Monday at Angels Stadium. The Bulldogs went on to win the game, 3-2. The Bulldogs now enter the state playoffs Friday against Lubbock Monterey.

Bulldogs prepare for playoffs in 3-2 win

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

With bi-district playoffs only three days away, the Midland High Bulldogs rediscovered their winning edge Monday with a 3-2 victory over the Pecos Eagles at Angels Stadium.

And, it was a victory won by the entire team.

While the starters kept the game close, they could only manage one run, scored by Eric Boyt in the bottom of the fifth on Matt Sears' single to left for a 2-1 Pecos lead.

Boyt went to the mound for a rare appearance in the top of the sixth and became the winning pitcher in the bottom of the inning when Coach Tim Whalen's substitutes started a rally.

Artie Magness led off the inning with a bloop single to right and was replaced by pinch runner Nate Neatherlin. Kenny De La Garza followed with a walk to chase Pecos starter Tony Urquidi.

Neatherlin moved to third when Salazar reached on a fielder's choice and went to second with a stolen base. Neatherlin came home on the steal when Ponch Bafidis' throw missed the mark and Salazar scored on Craig Crawford's single to left.

In keeping with his early game plan, Whalen then put De La Garza on the mound to finish the game, giving the senior hurler a chance to notch his and the team's only save of the year.

FOR THE Bulldogs, the victory snapped a two-game losing streak and improved their record to 15-10. Pecos, which lost 3-2 Saturday in a District 2-4A playoff with Snyder, suffered its second straight loss and fell to 18-8.

However, both teams are in the playoffs and were using Monday's game as a tuneup, to help keep the competitive spirit alive.

For Midland High, the only bright spot in the game was its pitching. Using four different hurlers, the Bulldogs gave up only three hits and only one of the two runs allowed was earned.

Which brings up the weakest part of the 'Dogs game Monday: Defense. Five Bulldogs were tagged with six errors.

Also, the Bulldogs couldn't hit, collecting only six singles, two of which came from leadoff hitter Tommy Yorkman.

"We have to play better against Monterey, I know that," said Whalen. "We have to get more intense. At one point, we hadn't scored a run in 12 innings, one against Lee, seven against Cooper and four against Pecos."

"But, I think we'll play a whole lot better against Monterey because the kids know they have to. It's a matter of necessity now."

BECAUSE OF a decision he made once his team was guaranteed a playoff berth against Monterey, Whalen has become a very unpopular person up north. The Plainsmen — coaches, players and fans — aren't happy with the one-game, winner-take-all format Whalen forced.

"They've called me all kinds of names," said Whalen, who feels his team's strength is De La Garza's pitching arm. However, that advantage is lost in a 2-of-3 format even though Castaneda has had a great deal of success this year. Whalen believes the Plainsmen are deeper on the mound.

The playoffs for Midland and Monterey start Friday at 6 p.m. at Angels Stadium.

In gaining the home field advantage, Whalen discovered the secret to finally winning a coin toss.

"Let the other coach call it and hold your breath," he said.

He probably won't breath again until Friday's game is over.

M-Angels run streak to 5 straight

From Staff Reports

TULSA — The Midland Angels equaled their longest winning streak of the season here Monday night as a 5-0 shutout over the Tulsa Drillers boosted the Angels to their fifth consecutive victory.

Midland is now 4-0 against Tulsa this year and can shoot for the five-game sweep tonight. The Angels also kept their two-game buldge over Beaumont and El Paso in the Texas League West.

Rafael Pimentel and Randy Harvey combined on the five-hit shoutout. Pimentel picked up his first victory of the year while Harvey got his first save with three hitless innings of relief.

Mark McLemore's first homer of the year, a leadoff blast in the first off loser Steve Wilson, was all the Angels needed in this one. McLemore has now hit safely in 23 of the last 24 games and has run his batting streak to seven straight games.

The Angels got another run in the second when Mike Madril's sacrifice fly pladed Kevin King. Midland put the game away in the fifth with three more runs. McLemore drove in one run with a single. Billie Merrifield plated another with a sacrifice fly and another scored on an infield grounder by Glenn Walker.

Tulsa has been struggling for runs against the Midland pitching staff. The Drillers threatened in the fourth with runners at the corners and no one out, but Pimentel worked out of the jam without giving up a run.

Midland now has a shutout against every opponent it has played this year.

The Angels, who are 19-15 on the season with four straight victories to open the road trip, will travel to Little Rock, Ark., Wednesday morning to face the Arkansas Travelers for the first time this year.

Sampson Rocket key against Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Ralph Sampson's array of physical gifts has pushed his 7-foot-4 frame to the perimeter of the Houston Rockets' offensive scheme. That's right, away from the basket.

Because he passes and handles the basketball so well, Sampson has been forced to let teammate Akeem Olajuwon play the center position, the focal point of the Houston attack.

Olajuwon scored 28 points and grabbed 16 rebounds as the Rockets lost to the defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers 119-107 in the opener of the Western Conference finals. Sampson, meanwhile, wasn't the offensive force he has been this season.

He scored only two points in the first quarter and had 19 points before Rockets Coach Bill Fitch benched him with 4½ minutes to play.

"Ralph has to have a better game," Fitch said Monday prior to practice. "I look at the first game against the games in Denver and he didn't have the same quickness. But as the game wore on, he got into it.

"Over the course of the series, he's got to get into (the game) quicker."

Sampson will get that chance tonight in the second game of the best-of-7 series at the Forum.

Sampson said that instead of playing the low post away from the action, he moved away from the basket hoping to contribute in ways other than scoring points.

"When I come out and play as a passer and play facing the basket, I have to realize what I can do," he said. "I'm more involved in the offense when I play out there. That's because we run a center-type offense to the strong side and post up from there. That's the key to our offense."

For most players in the NBA, a game like Sampson had in the first game would be a nice night's work. Not for Sampson.

"I didn't play a great game," he said. "I was trying to key on playing Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar). Tuesday night, I'll have to come out more aggressively, especially on offense."

Things didn't work out at either end as Abdul-Jabbar unraveled Sampson for 31 points in the series opener.

"I think he's a great player," Abdul-Jabbar said. "He's come under a lot of criticism for the way he plays. But he plays great for Ralph."

Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Lakers pointed out the Rockets found room in their offense for both Sampson and Olajuwon during the regular season. He knows Sampson can be effective away from the basket.

Carew gives up hopes of playing baseball

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seven-time American League batting champion Rod Carew said Monday he has given up hope of playing major league baseball again.

"I don't have any hopes of anyone signing me," Carew told The Associated Press by telephone from his Anaheim Hills, Calif. home. "I'd like to play. ... I don't understand what's going on but I don't sit around thinking about it, worrying about it. I'm just going on with my life.

"If that's the way it's going to end, that's the way it's going to end. If it's not in your control, there's not much you can do."

Carew, 40, was the California Angels' leading hitter for five of the past six seasons, including last year when he batted .280. He said last year that he wanted to play the 1986 season, then retire.

The Angels, however, decided during the off-season that they would give Carew's first base job to rookie Wally Joyner and didn't offer Carew a new contract. Joyner, 23, has been a big success, hitting .316 with 10 homers and a major league-leading 29 runs batted in.

Carew earned $900,000 with the Angels last year and his high salary might have scared off potential employers, but he has emphasized that he would play for less.

"I'm enjoying myself, I've really gotten involved with my girls' softball team, trying to teach them," he said. "We're winning. It's been fun."

Carew said that Angels' standout Reggie Jackson has continued to stay in touch with him, and he appreciated that.

"I'm just sitting back and applauding what he's doing," Carew said of Jackson, who hit his 536th career home run Sunday, tying him with Mickey Mantle for sixth place on baseball's all-time home run list. Jackson will be 40 next Sunday.

Carew has a career batting average of .328. He hit .300 or more in 15 of his 19 major league seasons and collected his 3,000th career hit last August.

But, as he acknowledged, he hasn't been a power hitter and hasn't driven in a lot of runs in recent years.

The faces and the scoreboard tell the story of the Texas Rangers' record setting rampage against the Cleveland Indians Monday night. Texas kept its hold on the American League West lead with the lopsided victory.

Rangers bomb Cleveland, 19-2

Texas remains cautious as bats talk

Associated Press

The Texas Rangers have been doormats too long to get complacent, even after collecting 19 runs on 22 hits to stay in first place in the American League West.

"It's a long season," winning pitcher Charlie Hough said after Texas set team records for runs and hits in a 19-2 victory over the host Indians Monday night. "If we can sustain the intensity, I don't know if we can win it, but I think we're going to be all right."

Even rookie Pete Incaviglia, one of seven Rangers with at least two runs batted in, sounded a note of caution after the team's biggest offensive game ever.

"Right now we're swinging the bat real well," Incaviglia said. "It's a good feeling to see guys up and down the lineup hitting the ball. But we've got to forget this one now and think about winning tomorrow."

Despite the large final margin of victory, the Texas-Cleveland game was tied 1-1 until the Rangers scored eight runs in the sixth inning. Larry Parrish, who has four homers in three days, sparked the outburst with a three-run homer.

"All of a sudden, we started finding holes, and we got on a roll," Tom Paciorek, who was 5-for-6, said. "LP (Parrish) hit that ball a mile. A three-run homer with the score tied is a gamebreaker. I'm sure that knocks the wind out of their sails."

"Cleveland's got a pretty good club, so you want to get a pretty good lead against them, close the game out," Parrish said. "But when you're scoring the 15th, 16th and 17th runs, you start feeling sorry for them."

Toby Harrah drove in four runs with two doubles and a bases-loaded walk for the Rangers. Paciorek, Incaviglia, Oddibe McDowell, Scott Fletcher and Steve Buechele had two RBI each.

The previous team record for hits was 20. The Rangers had scored 16 runs five times previously.

Hough won his second consecutive game after recovering from a broken finger that he suffered when he shook hands during spring training. Hough pitched six innings and Mickey Mahler finished with three scoreless innings.

Angels 7, Red Sox 1

Rookie Wally Joyner drove in four runs with his 11th and 12th homers and Don Sutton won his 297th career game as California snapped Boston's five-game winning streak at Anaheim.

American League

Joyner hit a solo homer in the first and capped a six-run rally in the fourth with a three-run homer that gave him the major-league lead with 33 RBI. Rob Wilfong had a two-run single and Gary Pettis an RBI single for the Angels in the fourth.

Sutton, 2-3, allowed five hits for seven innings before getting relief help from Terry Forster, who allowed one hit in the last two innings.

Orioles 4, White Sox 3

Baltimore rallied for two runs in the ninth inning on Jim Dwyer's pinch-hit homer and Lee Lacy's game-winning single.

Chicago, looking for its fourth straight victory since management decided to keep Tony LaRussa as manager, took a 3-2 lead in the top of the ninth on Harold Baines' two-out homer off Orioles starter Scott McGregor.

Rich Bordi, 1-0, then retired one batter and got credit for the victory when Baltimore rallied against White Sox reliever Bob James, 1-3. After Dwyer tied the score, Mike Young walked and went to second on Alan Wiggins' sacrifice, setting up Lacy's game-winner.

"Give Jim the credit," Lacy said. "He hit the ball out of the park, and gave Mike a chance to score the winning run and me a chance to drive it in."

The game was tied 2-2 through eight innings, with Wayne Tolleson hitting a two-run homer for visiting Chicago and Larry Sheets a two-run homer for the Orioles.

Yankees 9, Twins 8

Rickey Henderson snapped an 0-for-18 slump with three hits, including a two-run homer, and Butch Wynegar hit his fourth three-run homer of the season for New York, which needed all the runs when Minnesota rallied for six runs in the ninth at the Metrodome.

Yankees starter Dennis Rasmussen, 3-1, was leading 9-2 and had a six-hitter through eight innings, but he tired in the ninth and was relieved after giving up a run-scoring single to Tim Laudner. Mike Armstrong then allowed a two-run single to Al Woods and a three-run homer to Kirby Puckett, who has 12 to share the major-league lead with Joyner.

Dave Righetti got the final out for his ninth save.

Laudner's second homer of the season gave the Twins a 2-1 lead in the second inning.

Royals 6, Tigers 5

Jim Sundberg helped Kansas City take a 6-2 lead with a three-run homer before the Royals fought off two Detroit rallies.

The Tigers, trailing 6-2, scored three runs in the eighth after loading the bases with no outs against relief ace Dan Quisenberry, who failed to retire a batter.

The Tigers took a 2-0 lead in the first inning off Danny Jackson, 1-0, before the Royals jumped on loser Dave LaPoint, 0-2, for four in the second, highlighted by Hal McRae's RBI double and Sundberg's homer

Steve Balboni added a two-run single in the fifth to make it 6-2, but the visiting Tigers scored three in the eighth on Darnell Coles' run-scoring single and a two-run single by Chet Lemon. Then they loaded the bases in the ninth before Mark Huismann retired Lance Parrish to end the game.

Mariners 6, Brewers 0

Seattle won for the third time in four games since Dick Williams took over as manager as Dave Henderson hit two homers and left-hander Matt Young allowed three hits in seven innings of relief against Milwaukee at the Kingdome.

Young, 3-2, came on to pitch in the third inning after starter Milt Wilcox pulled a muscle while warming up. Young struck out eight and walked four.

Henderson led off the second inning with his fifth homer and then came back in the eighth for another solo shot. In the fifth inning, Spike Owen doubled and scored on a double by Alvin Davis.

Steve Yeager made it 5-0 in the sixth inning with a three-run homer, his second of the season.

Blue Jays 5, A's 3

Lloyd Moseby had three hits and scored three runs and drove in one as visiting Toronto beat Oakland.

Joaquin Andujar, 4-2, took the loss, ending his personal four-game winning streak. He lasted only one inning, giving up one run on two hits, before being forced to leave because of a strained hamstring.

Winner Jim Clancy, 3-2, allowed eight hits and three runs in 6 2-3 innings, and Mark Eichhorn went 2 1-3 innings for his second save.

Jesse Barfield homered for the Blue Jays and Tony Phillips had a homer and an RBI single for the A's.

Theismann rich if he makes team

By CRISTINE BRENNAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — If quarterback Joe Theismann is on the Washington Redskins' active roster every game this season, he would be the highest-paid player in the National Football League, it was learned Monday.

Theismann's new contract, according to a source familiar with the agreement, includes a guaranteed signing bonus of more than $1 million, much of it deferred; a base salary between $500,000 and $650,000 a year; and a bonus of more than $600,000 a year if he makes the roster.

The sum of Theismann's base salary and roster bonus (approximately $1.2 million) would exceed any other player's base salary and roster bonus, according to published figures. It is believed that no other player in the league has a roster bonus of more than $50,000.

SOME NFL players, such as quarterbacks Bernie Kosar of Cleveland and Steve Young of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, will earn more over time because of huge signing bonuses or other contract deals. But none would be expected to make more this season in salary and roster bonuses than Theismann, if he can come back and make the team.

In January, two months after he broke his right leg, Theismann signed a new two-year contract with an option year. Terms of the contract had not been disclosed.

Theismann could not be reached for comment Monday night. Owner Jack Kent Cooke, with whom Theismann negotiates directly, declined to comment on the contract.

Theismann has maintained throughout his rehabilitation that he wants to return to the team this season, although he is missing the team's minicamp, which began Monday at Redskin Park. (He worked out in the weight room Monday morning but left before the rookies and free agents began their work.)

It still is uncertain whether Theismann will be physically able to play in July, when the Redskins open training camp in Carlisle, Pa. He appears to have several options: play here or with another team, go on injured reserve with the Redskins, or retire and consider doing color commentary on games for CBS-TV or NBC-TV.

If he is on injured reserve, he would receive his base salary, but not the roster bonus. If he retires, he would receive the signing bonus of more than $1 million.

In March, the Redskins talked to four teams about trading Theismann but could not cut a deal. At the time, some teams expressed concern about the size of Theismann's contract.

In April, Coach Joe Gibbs, contradicting indications the team had given all winter, said if Theismann was healthy, he would like to see him compete with Jay Schroeder for the Redskins' starting job.

Schroeder, 24, led the 10-6 Redskins to a 5-1 finish after he replaced Theismann.

But Theismann, who will be 37 in September, recently said his rehabilitation was only "80 percent" complete, and said he did not know if he would be able to play this season.

RUNNING BACK George Rogers, one of nine veterans to practice Monday, is close to signing a new contract with the team, his agent said.

"We are satisfied with our initial negotiations with the Redskins and are progressing rapidly," said Ed Holler, Rogers' attorney in Columbia, S.C.

The contract likely would make Rogers the second- or third-highest paid Redskin, behind Theismann and, perhaps, wide receiver Art Monk.

In January, Monk signed a three-year contract with a base salary of about $600,000, according to a source familiar with Monk's contract. The contract also included retroactive increases in what Monk made in 1984 and 1985.

According to an NFL Players Association survey, Monk made $190,000 in 1985. Rogers made $450,000 last season.

It is believed that Rogers would sign a new contract that would pay him close to what Monk is making, with no signing bonus.

USFL gets day in court

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States Football League finally got its 1½-year-old suit against the NFL into a courtroom Monday, but the trial got off to a balky start when nearly two-thirds of the first 145 jurors called were immediately excused.

With both NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and USFL Commissioner Harry Usher looking on, U.S. District Judge Peter Leisure opened jury selection by telling the prospective jurors that they would be expected to serve for the two months the trial was expected to take.

Then he began hearing excuses from jurors who said they couldn't serve that long — normal jury duty is two weeks — and 89 of the first group were dismissed.

The suit, which is likely to decide the fate of the four-year-old USFL, was filed in October 1984 and charges the NFL with violating the Sherman Antitrust Act by monopolizing the pro football market. It seeks $440 million in damages, which trebled, as antitrust awards allow, would amount to $1.32 billion.

The suit also asks that the NFL contract with one of the three major networks be voided and charges that the NFL pressured those networks not to give the USFL a contract when it decided in the summer of 1984 to switch from a spring season to a fall one. For the three seasons it played in the spring — it plans to begin autumn play in September — the USFL had contracts with ABC and ESPN cable network, but only the ESPN contract was transferable to the fall.

However, winning that part of the suit without the monetary award might not save the USFL, which lost an estimated $150 million in its first thre years. Even if the NFL is thrown off one of the networks, there is no guarantee that the USFL would get a contract from the one that has lost the NFL.

"The long-term future of the USFL is dependant on this trial," Usher conceded.

All of Monday was devoted to choosing the six jurors and six alternates who will hear the case.

Celtics' Parish sets snare for Milwaukee

BOSTON (AP) — Boston center Robert Parish doesn't mind being ignored. It may finally get him some attention.

He expects Milwaukee to continue taking greater notice of his more heralded mates on the Celtics' front line, Larry Bird and Kevin McHale. That could put Parish's own offensive abilities on center stage when Boston opens its National Basketball Association Eastern Conference final series tonight against the Bucks.

"They didn't double me up a lot in the regular season as much as they did Kevin and Larry," Parish said. "So I'm looking for the same type of coverage."

Although his 16.1 scoring average was third-best for the Celtics during the regular season, he ranked fourth on the club in field goal attempts and got many of his baskets off offensive rebounds.

"I've been overlooked for the last two years. That's rather obvious," said Parish, who is in his sixth season with Boston after spending his first four pro years with Golden State.

But he claims his subordinate role in the Celtics' attack doesn't trouble him.

"My only concern is winning," he said. "Whenever they give it to Kevin, he's producing. Whenever they give it to Larry, he's producing. The bottom line is to win and that's my only concern."

He concedes, however, that "there's a chance" he'll get more shots against Milwaukee than he did in most games this season. "Only time will tell."

A lot depends on the distribution of playing time among Bucks' centers Randy Breuer, Alton Lister and Paul Mokeski and whether Milwaukee relies primarily on a small lineup featuring Sidney Moncrief, Paul Pressey, Ricky Pierce and Craig Hodges.

Although Boston's offensive strength is the inside game, Coach K.C. Jones isn't sure the Bucks will go with their big men.

"They're ready to adjust to anything," Jones said.

Cincinnati becomes streak buster

Mets start another streak in 1-0 win

Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds are having trouble starting a winning streak this season. But they are finding ways to stop them.

Eddie Milner's two-out home run in the ninth inning Monday night lifted the Reds to a 4-3 victory over Montreal, snapping the Expos' eight-game winning string.

The triumph gave Cincinnati its second straight victory, matching its longest success streak of the season. On Sunday, the Reds ended New York's seven-game winning skein.

"We've won two in a row, so that's pretty encouraging for us," Cincinnati player-manager Pete Rose said. "The more games you win, the more confidence you get. Maybe we'll start getting some breaks to go along with it."

The Reds still have the worst record in the major leagues, 8-19, and are eight games behind Houston in the National League West.

"Things haven't been going our way yet, but that doesn't mean we can't turn things around," Rose said. "If we can start winning two out of three, and three out of four in some series, you'd be surprised how fast you can get back into it."

MILNER'S FIRST home run of the season came against reliever Bert Roberge, who was making his first appearance for Montreal since being recalled from the minors May 1.

"He just got a forkball up," Milner said. "I wasn't trying for a homer, I was just trying to hit it hard."

Ted Power, 1-3, pitched 1 2-3 hitless innings for the victory.

The Reds took a 1-0 lead in second inning on Andy McGaffigan's bases-loaded balk, and Montreal tied it in the third on Andre Dawson's RBI infield hit.

Milner singled home a run and Dave Concepcion drew a bases-loaded walk in the fifth. Tim Raines, who extended his hitting streak to 16 games, singled and scored on Dawson's groundout in the fifth and Al Newman hit a sacrifice fly in the eighth that made it 3-3.

In New York, Ray Knight led off the bottom of the ninth inning with a double and scored easily when Tim Teufel followed with a single up the middle. The victory was the Mets' 19th in the last 21 games.

New York starter Sid Fernandez and reliever Roger McDowell combined on a four-hitter, the second time the pair has teamed for a shutout this season.

Fernandez worked seven innings, giving up four hits, and striking out 10. McDowell, 3-0, got the victory, finishing up with two hitless innings and fanning three.

Atlanta starter Rick Mahler pitched 6 1-3 shutout innings. Reliever Paul Assenmacher, 1-1, escaped a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the seventh, but got tagged for the loss in the ninth.

"I was still thinking that I had move the runner over," Teufel said. "I figured with the count in my favor, with the pitcher being a lefty, the odds should be in my favor. But with the way I've been hitting, I wasn't sure whether anything could ever be in my favor."

Phillies 5, Astros 1

Von Hayes hit three doubles and drove in two runs and Shane Rawley pitched a seven-hitter as Philadelphia won in the Astrodome.

Hayes, 11-for-24 in his last eight games, doubled in the fourth inning for the Phillies' first hit off Jim Deshaies and scored on a single by Juan Samuel.

Ron Roenicke hit a two-run single in the fifth and Hayes added an RBI double later in the inning. Hayes hit another run-scoring double in the ninth.

Rawley, 4-3, pitched his third complete game of the season. He struck out three and walked two.

"I had three good pitches tonight," Rawley said. "I made good pitches at the right time. The guys played great defense behind me. Three double plays helps a lot."

MONEY

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar recovered slightly from a post-World War II low against the Japanese yen today, but was lower against most other currencies in early European trading. Gold prices fell.

The dollar closed at 160.95 yen on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market, up from Monday's record postwar low of 160.20 yen. Later in London, it was stronger, selling at 161.65 yen.

European dealers said the dollar was down slightly in light trading as the market continued to look for indications of U.S. policy on the dollar.

Dealers said they expect the U.S. currency to fall in the near term, testing the announced intention of the West German central bank, the Bundesbank, and the Bank of Japan to intervene to support the dollar if it begins to slide.

T-BILLS

Rates stable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities showed little change in Monday's auction, matching rates in effect last month.

The Treasury Department sold $7 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 6.07 percent, the same as last week. Another $7 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 6.10 percent, up from 6.09 percent last week.

The rates for three-month bills this week and last were the lowest since they sold for 5.86 percent on April 21. The six-month rate was the highest since 6.14 percent on April 28.

Federal Reserve appointee gets praise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is receiving high praise from economists for his selection of an international financial expert to fill a vacancy on the Federal Reserve Board.

The president announced Monday he was nominating H. Robert Heller, an economist at Bank of America, to a position on the seven-member governing board of the nation's central bank.

Reagan also said he planned to elevate Manuel Johnson, currently a Fed board member, to the post of vice chairman.

Both appointments, which must be confirmed by the Senate, were viewed by many analysts as moves which will strengthen the power of Fed Chairman Paul Volcker.

The spot on the board and the vice chairmanship became vacant in April when Preston Martin, considered a Volcker rival, abruptly announced his resignation to return to private business in California.

Heller for the past eight years has been senior vice president and director of international economic research at Bank of America in San Francisco, the country's second largest bank holding company. Before that, he was chief of the financial studies division at the International Monetary Fund.

This experience, analysts said, will prove useful to the Fed, which has taken a leading role in trying to resolve the international debt crisis.

Johnson, formerly assistant Treasury secretary for economic policy, has only been on the board since February. He and Wayne Angell, a Kansas banker and economics professor, were appointed by Reagan earlier this year in a move which gave the president a four-member majority on the board.

Both men joined with Martin and Reagan appointee Martha Seeger in February to hand Volcker his first defeat in seven years as Fed chairman on a crucial vote on lowering a key interest rate.

The four-member Reagan majority had pushed Volcker to relax his tough anti-inflation stance in favor of an easier monetary policy which would stress stronger economic growth.

But with the depature of Martin and now the appointment of Heller, many analysts predicted Volcker will be back in the driver's seat.

"More than ever, it looks like Volcker is in control," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers, a New York-based investment firm. "Bob Heller is philosophically more likely to be close to Volcker than anyone else."

In a statement, Heller said he was looking forward to working with Volcker and the other Fed governors "in providing a stable monetary environment conducive to fostering economic growth and prosperity."

Joseph Hurd, economist at Crocker National Bank in San Francisco, said Heller was a "good, non-dogmatic economist who is well-versed in his specialty of international economics.

Bill would assist oil suppliers

From Staff & Wire Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — A CIA study and proposed bill by Texas Lloyd Bentsen could provide a measure of relief for the ailing petroleum equipment industry.

A declassified CIA report suggests that the 1979 embargo on oil equipment sales to the Soviet Union was futile and only damaged the U.S. oil industry, says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Bentsen said Monday he was introducing legislation, cosponsored by Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., to lift the embargo because the Reagan administration had failed to do so.

The Bentsen bill which would leave in place restrictions based on national security, comes on the heels of a strong lobby effort by the Petroleum Equipment Suppliers Association.

William J. Sallans, executive vice president of the Association, said the petroleum suppliers had been singled out to remain on the embargo, while other countries were permitted to resume trade with USSR. He also said that the equipment in question was not sensitive equipment, but jusr ordinary petroleum equipment.

The embargo was imposed by the Carter administration after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and has been maintained by the Reagan administration.

"The current controls on the export of oil-field equipment to the USSR are useless in terms of foreign policy impact and very damaging to a key U.S. industry that is in deep trouble," Bentsen said.

"The futility of these controls has been documented by the Central Intelligence Agency in a study entitled, 'Soviet Needs for Western Petroleum Technology and Equipment,'" said Bentsen.

The CIA report said that of 34 categories of oil-field equipment needed by the USSR, 32 categories of equipment were available from countries other than the United States and seven categories of equipment were available from non-U.S. sources.

Houston independent oilman George Mitchell used visual aids depicting the 3,700-rig collapse in the national rig count to 809 since the December 1981 peak of 4,530 to support his arguments calling for a $10 per barrel import fee.

Mitchell, Gov. White call for $10 import fee

HOUSTON (AP) — Gov. Mark White and independent oilman George Mitchell said Monday the United States needs to impose an oil import fee or face an increasing dependence on foreign oil that could undermine national security.

"Enactment of an import fee on oil, gas and petrochemicals is essential. The fee is the quickest and best solution to this serious national problem," said Mitchell, chairman of the Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. of Houston.

Mitchell called on President Reagan to set a $10-a-barrel import fee.

"If structured to encourage natural gas development, an import fee will permit us to be 80 percent self-sufficient by the end of the century," he said.

White said Reagan, who in the past has not supported such a fee, would change his mind once he realizes what the country's dependence on foreign oil will do to national security.

"We have just recently seen an example of the impact that oil dependency can have on our national defense capability," White said. "During military actions against Libya, we were denied the use of air space by France, Italy and Spain. Only England supported our mission.

"I think there is one clear explanation for this. England has its own supply of North Sea oil ... France, Italy and Spain are dependent on the Middle East," the governor said.

White and Mitchell said the Hughes Tool Co.'s rig count of 809 — the lowest since April 1943 — is a true indication of how dependent the U.S. is on foreign oil.

GM to offer home loans

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp.'s financing subsidiary said Monday by the end of this year it will begin to sell home mortgages to its 8 million car loan customers.

The program, offered through General Motors Acceptance Corp., will be tested in Michigan. It comes at a time when applications for new mortgages at banks and saving institutions are running strong because of the general decline in interest rates.

"We've been lending money for 67 years and we feel we can be competitive in the home loan business," GMAC spokesman Chuck Newcomer said.

The GM unit expanded its financing and leasing business last year by acquiring the mortgage service portfolios and some related financing activities of Norwest Mortgage Inc. and the Colonial Group in separate transactions.

With the acquisitions, GMAC Mortgage Corp. was formed, which now services 357,000 residential and commercial mortgages totaling about $2 billion through about 70 offices nationwide.

Newcomer said the mortgage experiment probably will use direct mailings to offer carbuyers a chance to finance their homes.

Brief filed in Texaco case

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A Texas trial judge misunderstood New York law as it was applied to an $11 billion judgment against Texaco, Inc., for its purchase of Getty Oil Co., New York's state Attorney General Robert Abrams argues.

Abrams on Monday filed a friend of the court brief with the Texas Court of Appeals in support of the White Plains-based Texaco in its lawsuit with Pennzoil Co. of Texas. A Texas District Court jury awarded Pennzoil an $11 billion judgment against Texaco over the purchase of a controlling interest in Getty Oil Co.

During the trial, the oil companies agreed that one of Pennzoil's key claims had to be decided by the Texas jury's application of New York law because Texaco is based in New York.

Pennzoil attorneys had argued that Texaco wrongfully interefered with Pennzoil's contracts with various Getty entitites to purchase Getty's shares of stock. Abrams argues that Texas District Court Judge Solomon Casseb misunderstood and misstated New York law in his instructions to the jury.

New York law, Abrams said, doesn't grant the same protection from interference to pre-contract negotiations as it does to a written agreement. The charge to the jury, the attorney general added, failed to draw the critical distinction.

Massad retires from Mobil

NEW YORK (SWN) — Alex H. Massad, a director and member of the executive committees of both Mobil Oil Corp. and its parent Mobil Corp. and president of Mobil Oil's exploration and producing division, has elected to retire in September after 40 years of service, Allen E. Murray, chairman and CEO, announced today.

Mr. and Mrs. Massad plan to reside in Austin, where he will remain active in industry affairs.

Murray announced three top executive positions as a consequence of Massad's retirement:

Paul J. Hoenmans, president of the marketing and refining division, will replace Massad as president of the exploration and producing division. Eugene A. Renna, vice president, planning and economics, for both corporations, will replace Hoenmans as president of the marketing and refining division, and Lou A. Noto general manager Middle East and chairman of Mobil Saudi Arabia Inc. will succeed Renna as vice president, planning and economics, for both corporations on July 1.

Murray noted that under Massad's leadership, "Mobil's exploration and producing activities have expanded on a significant scale, both domestically and abroad, which have in turn led to an equally significant contribution to Mobil's financial and operating results. Advanced exploration and producing technology has also been developed that is currently at the forefront of the major international oil companies."

State seeks expansion of order

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Monday the state has asked a federal judge to expand an order involving Exxon overcharges to include weatherizing state buildings.

The motion was filed Friday in Washington.

Texas received $157,187,986 March 6 in an oil overcharge case against Exxon. The federal court found Exxon guilty of up to $2.1 billion in overcharges for oil from the Hawkins Field in East Texas.

The order by U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery said the money refunded for the overcharges could be used only for five specific energy conservation uses,

The new motion, Mattox said, would allow state buildings to be weatherized through the State Energy Conservation Program

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Canyon lime yields 100-barrel discovery

Abilene-based Sojourner Drilling Corp. completed its No. 2 Schwertner, four miles west of Rowena in Runnels County, as an Upper Canyon limestone discovery flowing 100 bpd of 40 gravity oil with no water.

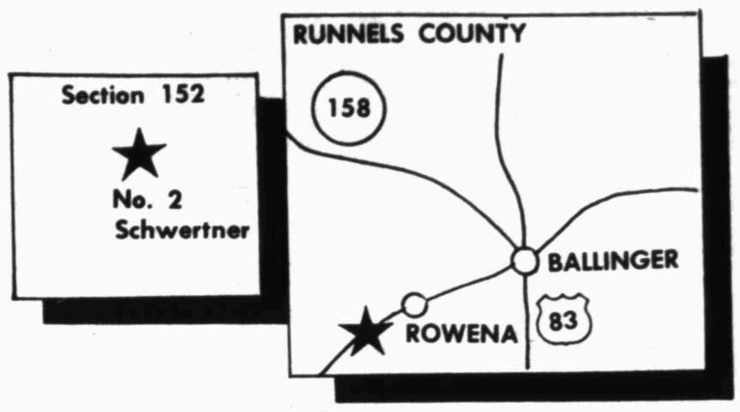
The discovery is 3/4-mile east-southeast of the depleted Koger (Upper Capps) oil field.

Gas-oil ratio in the discovery was 500-1.

The well produces from open hole between 4,053 and 4,059 ft. through a 10/64-in. choke. Four and one-half inch casing is set to 4,053 ft. in the well.

Ground elevation of the well is 1,736 ft. Formation tops are: Canyon, 3450; Dog Bend, 4,020; and Upper Capps, 4,040.

The well location is 1,624 ft. fnl, 1,680 ft. fwl in Sec. 152 of the WCRR Survey.



Penn extension well tests for 375 barrels

Pennsylvanian pay in the Robertson multipay field in Gaines County was extended a half-mile northwest with recompletion of Exxon Corp.'s No. 7 Harold H. Kendrick. The former Devonian producer was completed pumping 375 bo and 26 bw daily from perforations between 8,850 and 8,909 ft.

Total depth in the original well, completed in August 1985, was 10,480 ft. and was plugged back to 10,270 ft.

Location of the well, nine miles southwest of Seminole, is 1,980 ft. fwl, 467 ft. fnl in Sec. 8, Block A-24, PSL Survey, Abstract 1433.

Gunn Management finals three in King

Wichita Falls-based Gunn Management (formerly Taubert, Steed, Gunn & Medders) has completed three producers in southeastern King County. The most prolific producer is the company's No. 13 S.B. Burnett Estate-RRR, which flowed 155 bpd of 36 gravity oil through a 16/64-in. choke. The well is the fourth Strawn Reef producer in the Big RRR multipay field, 11 miles southeast of Guthrie.

Perforations are at 5,344 to 5,352 ft. Formation tops in the well, which has a ground elevation of 1,721 ft. are: Coleman Junction, 2,254; Cisco Reef, 3,608; Twin Peaks, 5,180; Strawn Reef, 5,312; and Conglomerate, 5,806.

The well was permitted to 6,300 ft., drilled to 5,920 ft. and plugged back to 5,730 ft. Five and one-half inch casing is set to 5,919 ft. in the well located 1,898 ft. fnl, 1,005 ft. fwl of Abstract 3 of the J. Axtel Survey.

In the Burnett multipay field, 18 miles southeast of Guthrie, the company's No. 9 A.B. Burnett Estate-AAAA was completed as the third Conglomerate producer in the AAAA North area. On test the well pumped 49 bpd 36 gravity oil plus 57 bwd. The natural completion produces from perforations at 5,779 to 5,782 ft.

Permitted to a total depth of 6300 ft., the well was drilled to 5,899 ft., where 5 1/2-in. casing was set. The well is plugged back to 5,840 ft.

Location is on the south line, 660 ft. fwl of Sec. 13, Block X in the R.M. Thomson Survey.

Gunn's third producer, the No. 12 S.B. Burnett Estate-RRR, is the ninth Conglomerate oil completion in the north area of the multipay Big RRR Field. It pumped 28 bpd of 36 gravity oil and 179 bwpd from a natural completion between 5,876 and 5,881 ft.

Slated to 6,200 ft., the well was drilled to 5,990 ft. and plugged back to 5,935 ft., with 5 1/2-inch casing set to 5,988 ft.

The well, with a ground elevation of 1,778 ft., topped the Twin Peaks sandstone at 5,308 ft.; Strawn Reef at 5,381 ft.; and Conglomerate at 5,860 ft.

The well, 11 miles southeast of Guthrie, is located 630 ft. fnl, 830 ft. fwl, of Mrs. L. Upton Survey, Abstract 1191.

Strawn wildcat flows 30 barrels for Exxon

Exxon Corp. completed its No. 1 T.O. Midkiff Estate, 23 miles southeast of Midland, as a Strawn discovery flowing 30 bpd of 52.8 gravity oil, 346.7 Mcfd and 6 bwd through a 16/64-in. choke. Flowing tubing pressure on the test was 480 psi.

Production is from perforations at 10,895 to 11,039 ft.

Drilled to a total depth of 11,525 ft., the well has 4 1/2-in. casing set to 9,453.

From a ground elevation of 2,768 ft. formation tops were: Spraberry, 7,330; Pennsylvanian, 10,470; and Strawn, 10,762.

The well is located 1,120 ft. fnl, 1809 ft. fwl of Sec. 34, Block 38, Township 4 South, T&P Survey.

Forecasting firm says lower oil prices 'unambiguoulsy beneficial'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lower oil prices are "unambiguously beneficial" for global economic growth, Chase Econometrics said in a special forecast.

In assessing the impact of cheaper oil on 58 economies around the world, the forecasting firm used three hypothetical oil price scenarios: $22, $18, and $13 a barrel oil through 1986 and 1987.

The industrialized nations as a group would reap the greatest windfall from $13-a-barrel oil, but the heavily indebted oil exporters such as Nigeria, Venezuela and Mexico would sustain major losses in oil income and economic growth, the report said.

"Our forecasts indicate that lowered oil prices are unambiguously beneficial in terms of global growth," said Romualdo Roldan, international vice president and co-director of the project.

"Over the two-year period of 1986 and 1987, global economic output would increase approximately 0.6 percent, or $80 billion in 1985 dollars more under the $13 scenario than under the $22 price," he said.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Coastal posts $52 million first quarter loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Dwindling oil prices are being blamed for the Coastal Corp.'s $52 million net income loss for the first three months of the year, compared with a $36.4 million gain for the same period of 1985, company officials announced.

The loss amounts to $2.03 per share, unlike the $1.20 per share during the first quarter of 1985. The loss, however, does not include American Natural Resources Co. which merged with Coastal almost 14 months ago.

Operating losses in the company's refining and marketing segment totaled $176.1 million, including a mark-down on oil inventories as of March 31, officials said. The company earned $27.2 million in operating profits during the first quarter of 1985.

Coastal also reported a $5 million operating loss in its trucking branch.

Operating profits for the first quarter were $29.8 million compared with $104.4 million a year ago while operating revenues were $1.9 billion this quarter and $1.5 billion the first quarter of 1985. Funds from operations were $20.2 million compared with $71.2 million in 1985.

In other company divisions, the natural gas and coal sectors performed well with natural gas operating profits increasing from $62.2 million to $191.7 million. Coal earned the company $8.7 million in operating profits, up $3 million from the first quarter last year.

Despite a net loss, company officials say they expect to report a profit for the full year.

Enex program buys East Texas production

KINGWOOD, Texas (SWN) — Enex Resources Corp., on behalf of certain partnerships in its Oil & Gas Income Program II, purchased working interests in a total of 34 oil and gas wells for $6,100,000.

The wells, locacted in 16 fields in South and Southeast Texas, were purchased from Hanson Minerals Co., a Houston-based independent oil producer. These working interests range from 1.5 percent to 48 percent with net acquired reserves of 64,000 barrels of oil and condensate and 6,600 million cubic feet of gas. The purchase has added potential through infill drilling.

These properties were acquired by Enex Resources Corp. in its ongoing acquisition program for its Enex Oil & Gas Income Programs, for which it serves as general partner.

More than half of Kirby loss due to SEC ruling

HOUSTON (SWN) — Kirby Exploration Co., Inc. reported a net loss for the first quarter ended March 31, 1986 of $8,180,167, or $.34 per share, which compares with a net loss of $1,292,670, or $.05 per share, for the 1985 first quarter. Consolidated revenues for the 1986 first quarter were $17,327,782, down 11 percent from the $19,538,993 for the first quarter of 1985, due principally to lower crude oil prices and a decline in natural gas sales resulting from curtailments by certain purchasers.

Approximately $4,700,000 of the 1986 first quarter loss resulted from a write-down in the carrying value of the company's oil and gas properties in accordance with the Securities and Exchange Commission's requirement that the carrying value of the oil and gas properties not exceed a ceiling test based on prices prevailing at and subsequent to the end of the reporting period. The carrying value of certain other oil and gas assets, consisting of certain undeveloped acreage, has been written down because of management's view that the reduced oil and gas prices may be of indefinite duration.

Cerebral Palsy Center receives horse for therapy

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Slowly but surely, the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center is jumping hurdles in its efforts to firmly establish an equestrian therapy program.

The program, which uses the simple act of horseback riding to teach children with muscular disabilities how to better control those muscles, has depended mostly on the good will of Midland Polo Club members and other community citizens who would bring their horses over for two days a week.

The center, which first began offering the therapy several times a year, appears to be on the right track. According to spokeswoman Debbie Newcum, they now have their very own horse.

"She's a 4-year-old sorrel mare named Dolly," said Ms. Newcum. "Steve Faskin donated the horse, trailer and the feed."

Ms. Newcum added the horse was being stabled by Clovis Chapel about one mile from the facility.

The therapist said the addition of Dolly has meant a plus for the program.

"It's really upped our potential," she said. "We were having to borrow the ponies. We still have to borrow a pony but with two of them we see 20 to 30 kids a day."

Ms. Newcum added the program is now being conducted two full days a week.

"Since last year we've doubled the number of kids we can see," she said.

The addition of Dolly has meant changes not only for the children who attend the CP Center, but also for another person — the director.

"Jim (Crawford) drives the trailer to bring Dolly in," said Ms. Newcum. "He really loves horses and enjoys doing it."

Ms. Newcum said Crawford sometimes rides Dolly into town from the stables near the Polo Club.

The Midland Polo Club has played a big part in the development of the Therapeutic Horseback Riding program, particularly with funding.

Currently the Polo Club and the CP Center are sponsoring their Second Annual Green Spring Fling Polo Tournament being held on alternate Sundays. The first match was played Sunday with future matches to be held Sunday and June 1. The games are played at noon, 1:30 p.m. and final matches at 3 p.m.

"We had a much bigger turnout this year," said spokeswoman Pam Harper. "We're hoping to raise several thousand dollars."

According to Ms. Newcum, the event raised about $1,500 last year and was attended by more than 300 people.

All proceeds from the matches benefit the therapy program. Admission is $3 for adults and no charge for children under age 12 years. Tickets are available at the CP Center, Polo Liquor Store and at the gate.

Monies from last year's event went toward the purchase of "basic equipment" said Ms. Newcum, such as safety helmets, blankets and grooming kits.

Grooming the horses is part of the therapy, she added.

"The kids love it. They also get to feed the horse carrots and water them. It's all part of the program," she said. "The human-animal bonding really helps and psychosocially they're motivated to do more."

Ms. Newcum said the horseback riding also helps with self-esteem.

"Horseback riding is something that they can do and go home and brag about. It builds ego and self-confidence," she said.

The therapist added this year's donations would go for the purchase of still more equipment.

"We still need saddles and mounting ramps," she said.

Therapeutic horseback riding helps to define muscle tone, according to Ms. Newcum.

"The horse has basically three movements that work on the extensibility of the child's muscles. A lot of CP kids have high-toned or 'tight' muscles."

The warmth of the horse's body also helps to relax the muscles, she added.

TSTA to file suit claiming TECAT racially biased

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — With the TECAT-test failing rate for minorities nearly 10 times larger than for whites, the state's largest teacher group plans to file a federal lawsuit charging the exam was racially biased.

The 96,000-member Texas State Teachers Association will announce the civil rights suit at a Capitol press conference Wednesday, TSTA spokesman Brad Ritter said this morning. "There is some reason to believe that the issue needs to to be explored in terms of disparate impact," Ritter said.

Results of the March 10 Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers show 18.4 percent of the blacks and 6 percent of the hispanics failed the exam compared to just 1.1 percent of the whites. Ritter said the TSTA will cite those numbers, the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Fourteenth Amendement to the U.S. Constitution when it files the suit in federal district court.

Texas Education Agency officials say they made special efforts to avoid racial bias in the exam teachers and administrators have to pass to keep their certificates. A 23-member review committee — composed of minority teachers, administrators, community representatives and other educators — screened all test questions, discarding any they considered biased.

"We made all the efforts we could to remove racial bias," said Carolyn Crawford, a member of the State Board of Education.

All teachers — including the minorities — exceeded initial failure projections. For example, early estimates predicted that 25 percent of the blacks would fail the reading section of the test; only 10.8 percent did.

"It was improved," Ritter said, "but something is still wrong."

A TSTA lawsuit challenging the right of the state to take away teachers' lifetime certificates is pending in an Austin appeals court.

The group has also filed a federal discrimination suit against the Pre-Professional Skills Test, which college students must pass before they can take education courses. That suit, also claiming racial bias, is pending on appeal at the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Results of the March 10 Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers show 18.4 percent of the blacks and 6 percent of the hispanics failed the exam compared to just 1.1 percent of the whites. "There is some reason to believe that the issue needs to to be explored in terms of disparate impact...It was improved, but something is still wrong."

Eight-year-old girl testifies in aggravated sexual assault trial

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

An 8-year-old Midland girl testified Monday that she was forced to perform oral sex on a 22-year-old man living with her family on the day after Christmas.

John Yusko, formerly of New York, is being tried for aggravated sexual assault against the girl who was seven when the Dec. 26, 1985 incident allegedly occurred.

At the beginning of the trial, the seven-man, five-woman jury had to be sent out of the 238th District Courtroom by Judge Vann Culp as prosecuting attorneys attempted to calm the sobbing 8-year-old victim.

After prosecutors had calmed the tearful second grader, the girl began to answer "yes" and "no" to questions posed by assistant District Attorney Tom Morgan and the jury was called back in.

Videotaped testimony was not used because prosecutors were afraid a conviction with taped testimony might be overturned in an appeals court.

"I did not want to use the videotape just in case the Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin would rule it unconstitutional," Morgan said.

On the day after Christmas the girl said she was in the bathroom, when Yusko entered and led her into his bedroom holding her hands. Yusko put her on his bed and joined her underneath the blankets where he unzipped his pants and forced her to perform oral sex, the girl said.

The victim's older sister discovered the pair and pulled the blankets off and ran to tell her mother, the second grader said.

The girl said Yusko pulled the covers back over her after her sister left the room.

The girl's mother testified that she saw Yusko and her daughter lying on the bed underneath the blankets.

"I stepped back from the doorway and I called (the victim's name).

"I wanted her out of there, but I didn't want to alarm her in any way," the mother said.

Yusko moved into the family's three bedroom trailer on south Cotton Flat Road as a friend of the victim's stepfather after Thanksgiving 1985. He had been a friend of the family for about eight years, and was sharing a room with two of the victim's brothers, the mother said.

After the alleged incident, the mother went to a neighbor's home and the woman questioned the girl about what happened.

Janice Johnson said she took the victim into a room to speak to her alone and asked her if Yusko had touched her anywhere.

"She said nothing happened. We were lying there going to sleep," Mrs. Johnson said the girl told her.

Two other children called by defense attorney Jack Chappell said the victim had told them at one time nothing happened between her and Yusko.

"I did not want to use the videotape (of the young girl's testimony) just in case the Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin would rule it unconstitutional."

— Tom Morgan, assistant DA

A 10-year-old playmate of the victim said, "All she told me is that something happened and they had brought John to jail.

"She told me a little about the incident that happened and a little bit after that said nothing had happened."

Testimony will continue through today with the defense expected to rest its case.

Midland LULAC receives two awards at convention

From Staff Reports

Midland's council of the League of United Latin American Citizens won two awards at the recent LULAC District V convention in Big Spring.

Hernandez

Midland was awarded "Council of the Year," for being "the most representative in applying the philosophy, aims and purpose of the constitution."

Also, Edia Hernandez, president of the local council, was honored as "Woman of the Year." The award goes to the most active and dedicated woman who promotes the goals and codes of the League. Ms. Hernandez stated, "Dedication of the members, sacrifices and the hard work each has endured made these awards possible. We are most appreciative of these recognitions. We will continue working to be deserving of this praise."

The recipients of the awards will be eligible for the same consideration on the state level. The Texas LULAC Convention will be in Bryan May 15-18. Midland members will be attending to promote the 1987 State Convention which will be held in Midland.

Midland County Commissioners to review bids for study of county

From Staff Reports

The Midland County Commissioners Court has called a special meeting at 9 a.m. Friday to discuss and review bids for the long-range study of Midland County.

Commissioners originally were to discuss the plan during a regular session Monday, but tabled the review until it could be studied in futher detail.

The study was authorized over a year ago by Midland County voters. At that time, voters approved a $3 million bond issue to renovate the jail, to expand Culver Youth Home and to fund a study of Midland County Courthouse and jail needs into the 21st century.

Commissioners will meet in the Commissioners Courtroom, located on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

AHA announces new research project

Doctor to study enzyme's role in hypertrophy

From Staff Reports

A research grant, named in honor of Midland attorney Michael McElwrath, is under way at the University of Texas Health Science Center in Houston to help fight heart and blood vessel disease, the American Heart Association of Midland announced at its annual meeting Monday.

The research, designed to probe the role of Ornithine Decarboxylase in cardiac hypertrophy, will be conducted by Dr. Ulka Tipnis, researcher with the University of Texas Health Science Center in Houston. The project is funded by the American Heart Association and named in honor of McElwrath who is vice president of the State Board of Directors.

Ms. Tipnis explained the purpose of the project, saying the increase in the size of the heart (cardiac hypertrophy), which occurs in response to a variety of physiological and pathological stimuli, is well recognized as a common and nearly constant feature of chronic congestive heart failure. Other morphological and biochemical alterations have been identified in hypertrophied heart, but the significance of any of these remains conjectural. The identification of these specific alterations which contribute to myocardial growth and failure therefore would be of considerable interest for understanding the pathology and prevention of disease.

Ms. Tipnis said one of the striking and early changes that marks the onset of heart hypertrophy is an increase in the enzyme Ornithine decarboxylase. ODC is a growth-related enzyme believed to participate in some way in the control of hypertrophy.

In her research, Ms. Tipnis plans to study the role of this enzyme in cardiac hypertrophy by using a rat model of isoproternol or thyroxine induced hypertrophy. She proposes to study the changes in enzyme level in each region of the heart. "A drug, that inhibits ODC activity, will be used to investigate whether it prevents hypertrophy. An immunefluorescence technique also will be employed to identify the cell types containing ODC and a technique of in situ hybridization will be used to investigate which cells contain the message RNA that directs the sythesis of ODC."

Ms. Tipnis said she will address the general question of cellualar and molecular events associated with hypertrophic growth and hopes these studies will characterize an early pathological event and will increase understanding of the cause of the disease.

The long range benefit of this work, she said, is that it will "contribute to our knowledge of the changes which occur inside the heart cell which allows it to increase in size. A potential future benefit of this type of work is that it may aid in divising drug therapeutic regimes to control pathological heart growth."

T-shirt depicts non-Texans who helped defend Alamo

GRANBURY (AP) — A Chicago-born electrician has designed a T-shirt he hopes will make gloating Texans realize the major role that residents of other states and other countries played in the 1836 battle for Texas' independence from Mexico.

Bob Stanley said he thinks it a shame that so many people — particularly proud Texans — either forgot or never knew about all the outsiders who participated in the struggle of 150 years ago.

Stanley, who is a graphics artist on the side and designs monograms for shirts and hats, has come up with a T-shirt design that points out that of the 188 people who died defending the Alamo, only eight were native Texans. And technically, even they were citizens of Mexico.

His Alamo design commemorating the Texas Sesquicentennial won second place in April for "most outstanding shirt with a transfer" at the Northwest Active Sportswear Celebration and Trade Show in Seattle.

Two foreign countries — England and Ireland — had more defenders at the mission, and 21 states other than Texas were represented at the battleground, he points out.

"There were 12 (defenders) from Ireland and one from Illinois," said Stanley, who is of Irish descent himself. "So right off the bat, there were more of me there" than native Texans.

Tennessee led all states with 33, Virginia had 13, Kentucky 12, and Pennsylvania 10. The British crown had 17, including Wales and Scotland; Germany two and Denmark one.

Stanley made his basic Alamo T-shirt design for the 22 states and six foreign governments represented at the battle.

The design depicts the Alamo, a poem and three flags. Two of the flags are the same on each shirt — the American flag and the 1828 Mexican constitutional flag.

The third is the one that flew over each of the 22 states and six foreign countries in 1936, the year Texas won its independence. Also, the names of the defenders from that state or country are inscribed.

Granbury artist Jim Calhoun converted Stanley's idea into the final product.

"One reason I did this is because it's part of the forgotten history of Texas," said Stanley, 56. "Texas is as big a melting pot as the United States."

AP Laserphoto

T-shirt designer Bob Stanley won second place in a national sportswear competition with a T-shirt depicting the outsiders that died defending the Alamo.

Stanley said his wife, Barbara, found the poem he used in a book. The anonymous author wrote in 1836:

"Rome's glory by way of the Greeks came,
"America's by cutting the English cord,
"But Texas was sired by fighters
"And a nation was born by the sword... "

Drug bust leads to charges of possession of child pornography, suspected indecency

From Staff Reports

A Friday drug bust which led to a man being arrested for possession of child pornography later led to the arrest of another man on suspicion of indecency with a child, and that arrest is expected to lead to the secohd man's being charged with possession of LSD, according to Midland Sheriff's Office reports.

Frank Matthew Hill, 24, 513 Homsley, was arrested about 10:30 p.m. Friday in the 600 block of Mitchell Street after sheriff's officers searching a home for drugs obtained his permission to search his car, which was parked nearby, reports said.

They found no drugs in Hill's car, but did find pornographic photographs of a 15-year-old Midland girl, who was 14 when the pictures were taken, according to reports.

Hill was charged with possession of child pornography, a misdemeanor, and released on bond Saturday. He was re-arrested that night after allegedly threatening the girl, according to reports, and he remained in county jail this morning in lieu of a $50,000 bond after being charged with retaliation, a felony.

Also in county jail this morning was a 32-year-old Midland man being held in lieu of $100,000 bond after being charged Monday with indecency with a child.

The charge stems from an alleged molesting incident involving the same 15-year-old girl, according to Sheriff's Office reports.

After arresting the man, sheriff's officers obtained a warrant to search his northwest Midland apartment for evidence. According to reports, they found more pornographic photos of the girl, and also found 250 tabs of suspected LSD, with an estimated street value of about $2,000.

The man was expected to be charged today with possession of a controlled substance, reports said.

Bonds were set by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine.

Pilot, TV station employee die in crash

PINE SPRINGS (AP) — A Dallas television station's operations manager and a pilot died when KDFW-TV's helicopter crashed in gusty winds at the Guadalupe Mountains National Park, officials say.

The Bell Jet Ranger was returning from Van Horn and preparing to land Monday night when it crashed about 250 yards east of a small field used as a helicopter pad, park manager Ralph Harris said.

He identified the victims as Irving Patrick, 54, a contract pilot for KDFW, and Scott "Buster" McGregor Jr., who was projects manager for Channel 4 on a remote crew that was filming in West Texas' Guadalupe Mountains.

The national park along the Texas-New Mexico border is on 77,500 acres. It is about 70 miles north of Van Horn and 45 miles southwest of Carlsbad, N.M. Established in 1966, it includes the highest point in Texas, Guadalupe Peak, 8,749 feet above sea level.

"It was a severe impact," park ranger Bob Valen said. The helicopter "is totally destroyed. The starboard side of the ship is totally crunched in, and one of the rotor blades was sheared at the rotor head.

"They were on approach to the helipad and were about 200 yards away," Valen said. "My only guess is that it was either a strong wind or a severe down draft."

Jack Brown, a KDFW-TV reporter, witnessed the crash.

"Everything appeared normal, and it made a circle like it always does. But as it completed part of the circle, it started picking up speed and going straight down," Brown said.

"Then it kind of vanished behind a sand dune and we saw a big cloud of dust. And I said, 'Let's go over there fast.' And I hoped to God that I was wrong. But I knew in my heart that I was right that that helicopter had crashed," Brown said.

Valen said, "This is a high wind area. The Guadalupe Mountain Range is known for some really treacherous winds. In the history of this area, there have been a number of aircraft that have gone down."

Valen said his wife, Janet, watched from their home as the helicopter descended toward the helipad. Her attention was distracted for a moment, then she saw the chopper on the ground "in a cloud of dust," he said.

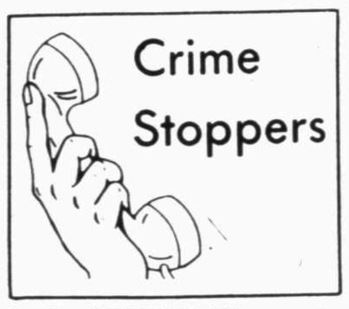
Vandalism information sought



This week, Crime Stoppers is seeking information on a rash of vandalism cases which hit West Midland last month.

During the nights of Friday and Saturday, April 18 and 19, vandals randomly broke out windows in over 40 cars. Most were shot out with a BB or pellet gun, but some were broken with rocks. Police believe the same person or persons were responsible for these acts of criminal mischief, which caused thousands of dollars in damages.

Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 cash for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this vandalism. Crime Stoppers will also pay cash rewards for information leading to the indictment of other felony offenders. Call 694-TIPS in Midland or 333-TIPS in Odessa, and remember callers need not reveal their identities.

In April, Crime Stoppers received 128 phone calls, which led to the arrest of five suspects and the clearing of 15 offenses. Two rewards for a total of $650 were paid, and stolen property worth $12,297 was recovered.

Man tries to break in through roof

AUSTIN (AP) — The call to police said a man's legs were dangling through the ceiling of the restaurant.

"That's what my wife saw," said Stan Adams, manager of the Brick Oven Pizzeria, where a man apparently attempted to break in through the building's roof.

"We were in the office at the end of the night, and somebody started kicking through the ceiling," Adams said. "I ran out (of the office) and by the time I got back with a light, he started climbing back out."

Officers discovered that the man had climbed into a vent on the roof and into an attic space just above the ceiling.

When officers arrived, they saw a man moving along the roof, apparently looking for a way to get down.

The officers told the man to halt, then ordered him to get down off the roof, police reports said.

The man threw down a pocket knife, climbed down and surrendered.

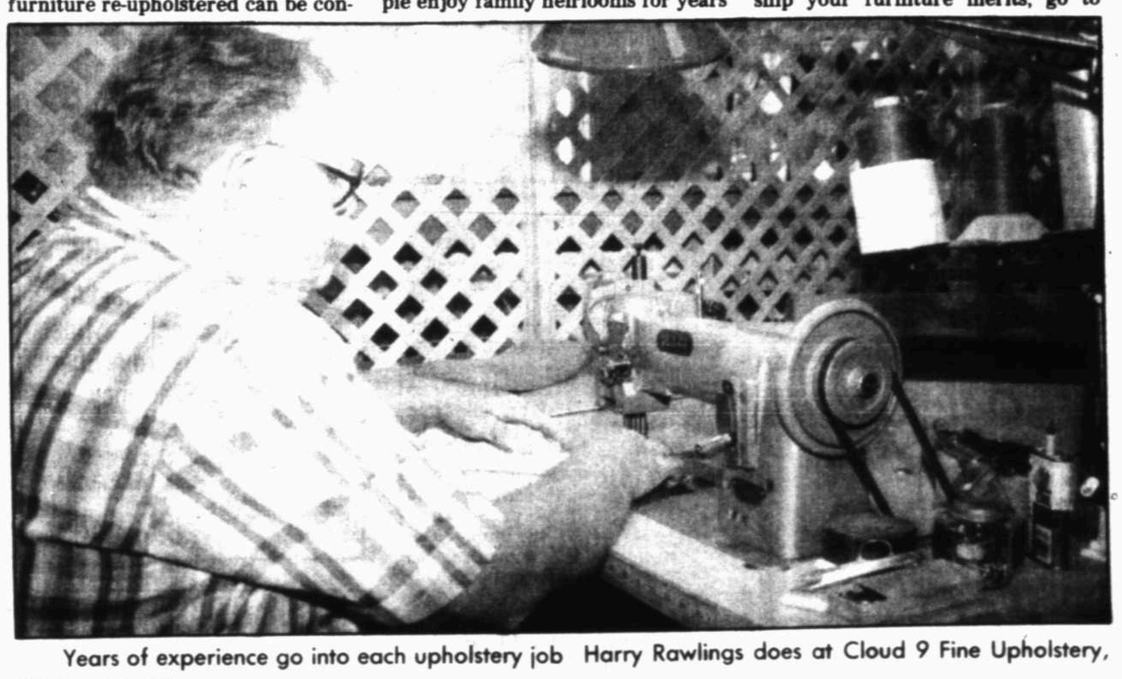
Cloud 9: If your furniture isn't becoming to you it should be coming to us

Harry Rawlings, owner of Cloud 9 Fine Upholstery at 4313-A W. Illinois, points out that having quality furniture re-upholstered can be considerably more economical than buying new furniture of high quality. Re-upholstery can also help people enjoy family heirlooms for years and years. Whatever your reason for having upholstery work done, make sure you get the quality craftmanship your furniture merits, go to Cloud 9 Upholstery.



Years of experience go into each upholstery job Harry Rawlings does at Cloud 9 Fine Upholstery, 4313-A W. Illinois.

Years of experience go into Harry Rawlings work. In 1963, when Rawlings was working as a park ranger at Yosemite, he began doing upholstery work as a hobby. Rawlings said that his furniture became old and "dilapidated." The Rawlings lived at the park, and "it was so hard to transport it to town, I thought, 'What the heck, I'll do it myself.' "

By the time he finished his own chair and sofa, Rawlings said the neighbors had begun to say, "Well maybe this old boy has got something going." The work began to pour in.

Finally, Rawlings left the park and bought a shop on the coast. He worked with several master craftsmen and learned even more about quality upholstery work. While in California Rawlings and his wife did upholstery and drapery work for a number of celebrities.

If you watch Rawlings work you won't be surprised that he is well known as a fine craftsman.

He has a wide selection of quality fabrics for his customers. Some fabric is in stock and designs that must be order will generally arrive within a few days. Once a customer has selected a fabric Rawlings can give an estimate. To assure accuracy he will make an appointment to go to the customer's home and see the furniture to be covered. (He does offer free pickup and delivery.)

When he is ready to start work he picks up the furniture and takes it to the shop. Then, he begins by stripping all the old fabric off the furniture. With the frame exposed he begins rebuilding the furniture. Webbing, springs and padding are checked. If this process reveals problems that could not be seen when the estimate was given, Rawlings will call his client to get approval on additional work. Webbing can be replaced, springs re-tied, more padding can be added and the frame can be strengthened. So that when Rawlings finishes in three to four days, the item will look AND feel like a new piece of furniture.

Headboards, cornice boards, lawn chairs, office panels and walls can even be professionally upholstered at Cloud 9.

Rawlings is usually in the shop from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., but it is best to call 694-1980 or 697-7306 before you go. He may have to be out giving an estimate. This way keeps overhead down, thus offering his customers quality work at reasonable rates.

Best of all, when you sit on a piece of furniture that Rawlings has done, you will feel like you're on Cloud 9.

Quality Automotive Repair certainly lives up to its name

One of the most frustrating experiences of any car owner is trying to find a good mechanic that will give them a fair deal. And, with all the new electronic auto gadgets it's hard to know whether or not you are being treated fairly. At Quality Automotive Repair, 607 S. Big Spring, you can count on owner Hank Petrilla to be honest and fair with you.

Hank, who has close to 15 years of experience as a mechanic with much of that time being spent in the oil field, opened the shop in November, 1985. He says they pride themselves in doing good work, whether the repair is minor or major, for a domestic or foreign automobile.

Though price is important, there's more to a fair deal than that. A cheap price for cheap parts and slip-shod work is hardly a bargain. That's why Quality Automotive Repair uses the name brand parts, recommended by each auto manufacturer. And, when Quality does a tune-up, you get more than a new set of spark plugs.

The experts at Quality Automotive Repair are also careful in their diagnosis of your car's problem. Hank explains that many customers have mistaken a rough ride as evidence that a tune-up was needed. Though this is true in many cases, in newer models it may indicate that there is a electronic component failure. For that reason Hank says, "We are trying to educate the public about the problems involved with these new computer cars."

Hank has completed a training school and is constantly attending auto seminars to be able to skillfully repair cars with electronic components.

The people at Quality Automotive Repair realize that doing without your car while it is being repaired is tremendously inconvenient. For that reason, they make every effort to get your car out by 5:30 the day you bring it into the shop. Parts may slow this down, but you can count on them to do their best.

Hank says they open each morning at 7:30 and close at 5:30 p.m. Quality Automotive Repair's convenient location just a few blocks from downtown makes it easy to drop your car or pickup off on the way to work. However they also offer free pick-up (unless towing is necessary) and delivery service.

Of course, their prices are also fair. "They'll get a fair deal out of it. I think most of the time if they'll compare our prices, we're comparable or a little less expensive," Hank says. To make payment even easier, MasterCard and VISA are accepted.

Estimates are free, so next time you need a tune-up or repair work done, go to Quality Automotive Repair. You'll find they certainly live up to their name.

Permian Basin residents count on Alarm System's Inc. for protection

A year ago when Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Townsend had their retirement home built, they personally selected Alarm Systems Inc., owned by Charles Noll, to install an electronic security system.

Mrs. Townsend said they felt a great need for an alarm system, because one of them is often at home alone. She knew it would make them "feel safer."

The Townsends said they researched the market, visiting with representatives from a number of alarm companies. They wanted a quality system that offered superior protection, yet simplicity in operation was also important. Alarm Systems Inc. offered a solution that was "not so complicated," Mrs. Townsend said.

After Noll explained the operation of the infrared detector system, "I felt like I could handle it," Mrs. Townsend said.

Noll's expertise enables him to explain sophisticated systems in easy-to-understand terms. Noll worked with electronics in the Navy and was closely associated with a computer company before starting Alarm Systems, Inc. in 1982. By that time Noll felt like the Permian Basin had become a center of wealth and consequently a target for thieves. He started the company to meet the security needs of Permian Basin residents, such as the Townsends.

For the Townsends, Alarm Systems Inc. installed an interior protection device. Infrared detectors sense motion up to 35 to 40 feet away from the detector which is discreetly placed in a strategic corner along the ceiling. Should an intruder cross the watchful eye of the motion detector, a siren alarm will sound and in less than 30 seconds a message will be sent to the monitoring station via existing phone lines. Panic buttons are an integral part of the system.

Like Alarm Systems' other customers, the Townsends were concerned that the system not distract from their home's decor or interfere with their lifestyle.

"We are careful and sensitive to the home decor. All the wiring is hidden. We go to the extra trouble because we know that people want their homes to look nice," Noll said.

To help the Townsends and other customers avoid false alarms, a tone reminds them to turn off the system when they return home.

"We try real hard to make sure that the system doesn't false alarm. Owners shouldn't expect a false alarm. In fact, our objective is no false alarms. If there is one, we want to know why," Noll explained.

Since the Townsend's system has been installed, Mrs. Townsend said, "We've been real happy with it."

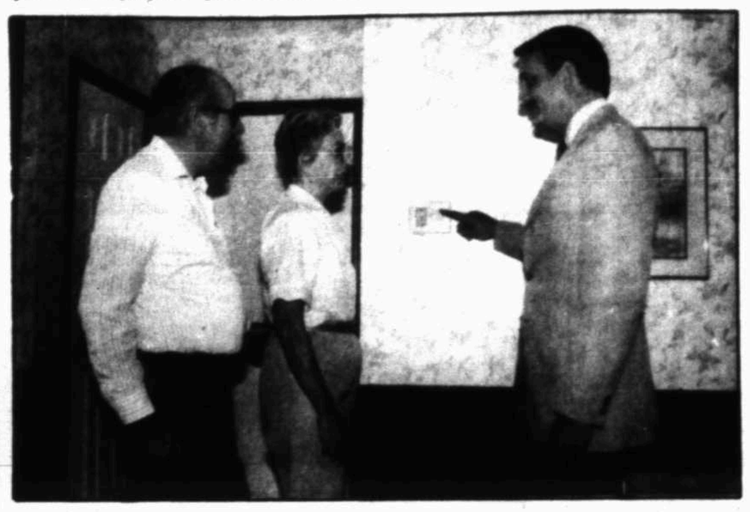
Noll encourages other Permian Basin residents not to wait until their home has been burglarized to invest in a quality security system.

To find out how Alarm Systems Inc. can help you protect your home, your family, your possessions, call 563-4050. They will do a free security analysis of your home or business.

With computerized monitoring systems, closed circuit TV, electronic surveillance systems and controlled access systems, Alarm Systems Inc. is ready to offer the Permian Basin quality equipment and materials.

The company is also licensed by the State Fire Marshall to provide fire systems.

For your protection, this bonded and insured company complies with the regulations of the Texas State Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies (License No. B-3526).



Charles Noll, president of Alarm Systems Inc., explains to the Townsends that a sophisticated security system does not have to be difficult to operate. Call 563-4050 for a free analysis of your home or business security needs.

Make your voice heard through Shoppers' Hotline

Midland is a special community. O.K., you already knew that. But, did you know that your opinions will have a direct impact on the future of the American marketplace?

You now have a "hotline" into the headquarters of major manufacturers. Your community is one of many in the nation where the new Shoppers' Hotline consumer program has been established. Shoppers' Hotline is a unique consumer panel that provides an important link between the shopper and the manufacturer.

Shoppers' Hotline consumer panel is made up of local residents like you. Your household is now speaking for thousands of other homes just like yours. Your preferences will help determine which products should be offered to the entire country and which products should be removed from store shelves.

Cooperating in the Shoppers' Hotline program is very easy. Each participant receives an I.D. card which is shown at the checkout lanes of your local participating supermarkets and drug stores. With the aid of UPC codes and computerized scanning systems, Shoppers' Hotline keeps a record of your purchases at no inconvenience to you. You are never bothered about what you purchased or why, nor is your name divulged to manufacturers. Your purchase information is used for statistical purposes only.

It's that simple! Thus, every time you show your Hotline card, you're telling the manufacturer through actual sales what products you like and dislike. Nothing speaks to a manufacturer like actual sales results.

In addition, as a Shoppers' Hotline member, you have the opportunity to participate in marketing research studies. A representative of Shoppers' Hotline will call you about once a month to set up an appointment in the convenience of your home. You will then be shown concepts for new products and asked to evaluate them. Additionally, you may actually be given a sample of a test product and asked to use it. Later, a representative will telephone you to ask your opinion of the product. It's that easy!

By participating you'll receive cash gifts!

All Shoppers' Hotline members are eligible for monthly cash gifts.

If you show your Hotline card weekly at participating supermarkets, you'll receive a check in the mail for up to two dollars every month. You could easily receive up to twenty-four dollars a year as thanks for your participation in Shoppers' Hotline.

But that's not all! Shoppers' Hotline members are eligible for monthly prizes. Every time you show your card, you receive a chance in a monthly prize drawing. Shoppers' Hotline gives away hundreds of prizes every month, including dream vacations, color TVs, microwave ovens and cash.

Consumers need to speak up about what they like and don't like. You count! Tell manufacturers, through your actions, which products have a future throughout the country. There is no better way to make your voice heard than through active participation in Shoppers' Hotline.

To find out how you can become a Shoppers' Hotline member, call 683-9156 or complete and mail the coupon in the Shoppers' Hotline ad on today's Business/Industry pages.

Super-Stone: a very beautiful surface, tougher than concrete

With nice spring weather here, many people are contemplating remodeling and fixing up around the house. Super-Stone of the Permian Basin suggests starting with natural stone surfacing. Not only is it strong and practical, it will also greatly enhance your home's drive-up appeal. This may be particularly important if you are planning to sell your home.

Perhaps you driveway or sidewalk is cracked or freeze damaged. Maybe your pool's cool deck has worn thin. Or, maybe you ar planning a new pool, patio, driveway or walkway.

Super-Stone, a decorative natural stone surface of unexcelled beauty with stronger than concrete toughness, will give your home a special appeal.

E.O. "Gene" Duke, president of Super-Stone of the Permian Basin, Inc., explains that this durable surface is a unique, porous surfacing material designed for patios, pool decks, walkways, steps, driveways and other outdoor areas. It is also used on indoor areas, where slip-proof qualities are important. It can even be applied vertically on walls.

Super-Stone is applied over concrete - covering up unsightly cracks and stains. It is composed entirely of the world's most beautiful natural stones, pebbles or crushed marble, granite and quartz. So you have your choice of over 30 colors.

When the work is complete you wil enjoy a beautiful surface, so much in keeping with today's indoor-outdoor natural look.

And, you will enjoy it for years and years to come, because an "invisible shield" of crystal clear epoxy resin coats each stone. This resin system bonds each stone to the stone next to it and bonds all the stones to the subsurface to form a permanent locked-in-place surface that is considerably stronger than concrete.

This resin also protects the stone from the effects of salt, chemicals, gasoline, oil, other petroleum products, fertilizers, moisture and poisons.

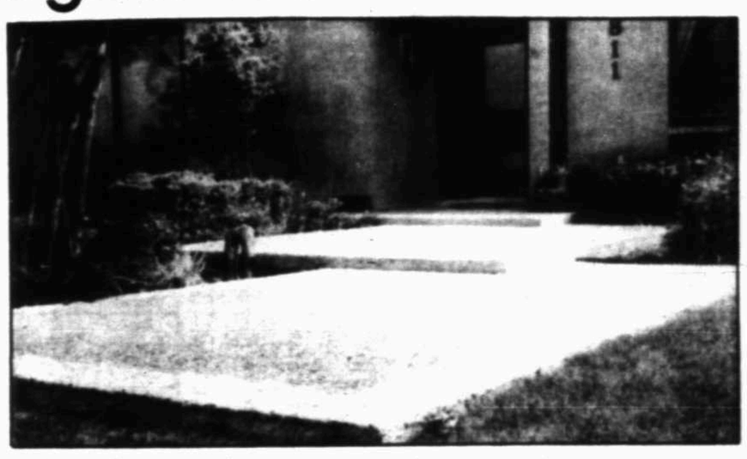
Super-Stone is so beautiful on driveways and so stong that it is even used in parking areas for tractor-trailer trucks.

In fact, this incredible surface in unaffected by ice, snow, sleet, freeze or thaw. It's coating won't get tacky or soft. It's hard and solid at all times, and the stone and epoxy surface is fire proof.

Moreover, it's almost totally maintenance-free. About all you'll ever have to do is hose it down.

Start your spring improvement now by calling Super-Stone at 683-6063 or 333-6198. It's a great way to make your home "stand out."

Before you know it, you will have a beautiful stone surface. You can walk on your beautiful new surface just eight hours after installation and within 48 hours you can drive your car on it. SUPER—STONE!



Super-Stone, a decorative natural stone surface designed for sidewalks, cool decks, driveways and more, will enhance the beauty of your home. Make it your first spring improvement project, call Super-Stone, 683-6063.

Bridge is one of the chief activities aboard cruise ships. This hand was played recently aboard the S.S. Noordam, one of Holland America Line's luxury ships playing the Caribbean.

North's double of the two-diamond overcall was negative—in theory, a takeout double for the unbid suits. When South showed a balanced minimum, North made an inspired decision when he elected to bid four spades rather than three no trump. The latter contract stood no chance; the former needed excellent defense to defeat it.

Expecting to find a somewhat more unbalanced hand in dummy, West led a low spade. Declarer guessed correctly when he rose with the king, then started out on the right track by running hearts.

If West does not ruff the third heart, declarer can lead a fourth heart and sluff a diamond from hand. The best the defenders can then do is to collect two spade tricks and a diamond. If West ruffs low, when declarer gains the lead he simply exits with a trump, and the ace and queen tumble together. Since the king of diamonds is safe from attack, the defenders are held to the same three tricks.

There is a solution to West's dilemma, and he found it at the table. Declarer's line of play suggested he did not have the queen of trumps (since he did not simply draw trumps). So West ruffed with the ace of spades and returned a trump. In with the queen, East had no difficulty in finding the diamond shift that netted the defenders two diamond tricks to go with their two trump tricks—down one.

Reagan awards Medals of Freedom

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actress Helen Hayes, scientist Albert Sabin and five others were presented with the Presidential Medal of Freedom in a White House ceremony at which President Reagan called them originals who "made America better."

Following a luncheon Monday, Reagan and his wife Nancy presented the nation's highest civilian award to Sabin, who developed the oral polio vaccine; Miss Hayes; Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.; Gen. Matthew Ridgway; former West Point football coach Earl "Red" Blaik; journalist Vermont Royster, and former ambassador and publisher Walter H. Annenberg.

"You're a group of happy rebels," Reagan said, reminding the group that author George Orwell had once said, "Freedom is the right to say no."

Reagan said the honorees had chosen to say " 'no' to the conventional wisdom...to limitations on yourselves and others." Instead, he continued, they said "a big 'yes'...to courage, the untried, the supposedly impossible."

"You're all originals....You all made America better," Reagan said.

Sabin, 79, was born in Poland and came to the United States as a boy. "No one could have known that he would number among the most prominent immigrants of our century," his award citation said.

"From an early age Sabin devoted his life to medicine and by the 1950s his research had resulted in a breakthrough," it added. "In the years since, the Sabin vaccine has helped to make dramatic advances against the scourge of poliomyelitis."

Miss Hayes was cited as "a great actress, a great patriot and a great soul."

"Peerless actress, peerless star, she has excelled in stage, screen and television playing everything from virtuous young ingenues to Victorian queens," her citation said.

Ridgway was supreme allied commander in Europe, then commander of U.S. forces in Europe and, after retiring as Army chief of staff, emerged as a critic of U.S. military involvement in Vietnam.

His citation said, "Greatness is often born in quiet, in stillness: so it was that night in June of 1944 when Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway prayed the words God spoke to Joshua: 'I will not fail thee nor forsake thee.' D-Day saved a continent and so, a world; Ridgway helped save D-Day."

Ridgway retired in 1955 and complained a year later that politics was influencing military decisions at the Pentagon. Later, he voiced public skepticism of the Nixon administration's plan to wind down the Vietnam war, and in 1971 called for the withdrawal of all American troops.

Goldwater, ending a 30-year Senate career this year, was cited as a soldier and statesman at the center of American history. "Respected by both ally and adversary, Barry Goldwater's celebrated candor and patriotism have made him an American legend."

Royster, who retired as contributing editor and columnist for The Wall Street Journal, was cited as a journalist, author and teacher who, over half a century, "illuminated the political and economic life of our times. His common sense exploded the pretensions of 'expert opinion,' and his compelling eloquence warned of the evils of a society loosed from its moorings in faith."

Annenberg, former head of Triangle Publications — which included "TV Guide", "Seventeen" magazine and the "Daily Racing Form" — was cited for "a brilliant career in publishing and pioneering the use of television for educational purposes."

Blaik, as football coach at West Point, "rallied the Black Knights from a record of devastating defeats and spurred them on to some of their greatest victories, winning the esteem of his cadet players and the admiration of his vanquished rivals."

Blaik was part-time coach at West Point from 1927 to 1934 and director of athletics from 1949 to 1958.

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Joan Rivers, whose new late-night show this fall will challenge Johnny Carson on his home ground, has canceled an appearance on NBC's "Late Night With David Letterman," which is co-produced by Carson's production company.

"She's just not feeling funny these days," her agent, Richard Grant, said Monday.

Grant said Miss Rivers spoke to Letterman, and they agreed that she'd come on his program in the fall, which would be after she started her own show, "The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers."

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Cosby, one of America's most popular TV dads since Jim Anderson knew best, says immortality was not the reason he and his wife had five children.

"And we also did not have them because we thought it would be fun to see one of them sit in a chair and stick out his leg so that another one of them running by was launched like Explorer I," Cosby says in his new book, "Fatherhood," excerpted in the June issue of Good Housekeeping.

Cosby

"I guess the real reason that my wife and I had children is the same reason Napoleon had for invading Russia: It seemed like a good idea at the time."

Cosby and his wife, Camille, have four daughters and a son.

Sounding a lot like Dr. Heathcliff Huxtable, father of five on "The Cosby Show," the actor explains some of his theories of fatherhood in the new book, to be published in late May by Doubleday.

"No matter what you tell your child to do, he will always do the opposite. This is Cosby's first Law of Intergenerational Perversity," he says.

NEW YORK (AP) — Country singer Dolly Parton was so depressed a few years ago that she put her career on hold and even contemplated suicide, she says.

Parton

Her problems began in 1982, when health problems forced her to cancel some concerts and that prompted some lawsuits, she said in a recent interview with Ladies' Home Journal. She also received death threats and was in the midst of family problems, she said.

"It was devastating to be in that depressed state of mind," she said. "I don't think I'd have done it, killed myself, but I can't say for sure.

"I have greater wisdom now, more tolerance and patience for people who are struggling with liquor or drugs or suicide or being in prison."

Miss Parton, 40, who starred in the movies "9 to 5" and "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," said she is happier now than she's ever been.

"But I think you have to work at being happy, just like you have to work at being miserable," she said.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana has authorized a denial of a report in the national-circulation newspaper Today that she is expecting a third baby.

The newspaper said today that the 24-year-old princess is expecting a baby in November, but aides accompanying the princess and her husband, Prince Charles, in Japan quickly moved to deny the story.

Today said "her happy secret" explained a fainting attack she had last week in Canada and tiredness while the royal couple has been visiting Japan.

Obsolete flattop hairstyle back 'in' again

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — The flattop feels like a rug, bristles like a brush, lays as level as a helicopter landing pad and ranks as the most conservative haircut possible.

Until lately, that is.

In an ironic twist of fashion and fad, the flattop has returned as a mainstay of hip style.

"It fits with today's clothing styles. It's neat, but a little different — at least compared to what this generation is accustomed to," said Daniel Portillo, a 25-year-old flat-topped graduate student.

The generation in question — predominantly males under 25 — don't remember when a thicket of short, straight hair could doom a teenager to high school nerd status.

They weren't around when parents begged their children to shear that Beatles mop top for something more along the lines of Gomer Pyle. They don't know that after the Eisenhower era, the flattop was strictly for dorks.

The flattop was out for so long that Tom Commerford, a barber for 32 years, stopped stocking butch wax in the early '70s. "I never thought I'd see the flattop come back," says Commerford.

But, in the last year or so, high school and college kids started trickling in for that early Rick Nelson look. Commerford really knew something was up when a trendy hair salon down the street asked him for instructions on how to trim a head to the evenness of a golf green.

"It's considered kind of a New Wave haircut," said Barron Brewster McNulty, whose salon now specializes in the flattop. "But a lot of people realize that it's appropriate for the office, as well."

Hip but conservative, the flattop fit neatly into the Yuppie code — makes a fashion statement without jeopardizing the Volvo payments.

"I feel kind of rebellious in a flattop," said Paul Neves, a 22-year-old accounting major and hotel valet. "But because it was once such a conservative haircut, my employers can't really say much. In fact, they tell me I look like the All-American boy."

Many appreciate the flattop's wash 'n' wear convenience, especially athletes.

"I can ride a bike for 20 miles and my hair will still look the same," said 24-year-old Bruce Angel, a fitness club membership counselor who considers himself a fashion conservative. He said he was attracted to the flattop from his years in the military.

Even men think it's attractive, says Anita Williams, 24, who wears her blonde hair in a flattop: "I've had guys stop me on the street and tell me how much they like my hair. Plus," added the fitness instructor, "it's great for athletics."

In high schools and grade schools, the flattop is most popular among the most confident, although the style is not restricted to any one clique of students. Still, the flattop is most likely to appear on a guy wearing surfer shorts, topsiders and a Maui or Ocean Pacific T-shirt.

But despite its cool status these days, despite its convenience and versatility, the flattop may again retreat to the realm of television reruns.

As Ken Morris, a 21-year-old surfer and model commented: "I like my flattop. I've gotten a lot of compliments on it. But long hair is supposed to be coming back. And I'm starting to let my flattop grow out."

Products turn Goldilocks pink

Copley News Service

Purple tips on black curls or blue waves undulating down long blond hair. Sound like something from MTV?

No, it's just a high school girl getting ready for a date.

It seems that makeup doesn't do what coloring mousses and gels can do — turn Goldilocks into Electric Blue-, Hot Pink-, Red Dazzle- or Quicksilver-locks.

"Think of it as a cosmetic like nail polish, eye shadow or blush," said Susan Valentine of Clairol in New York. The company features the "Pazazz" line of mousses and gels in shades of gold, bronze, copper and rose.

Manufacturers are marketing the gels and mousses as strictly fun and games. The colors in these new gels wash out after just one shampoo; the mousses fade away after several washings. Both are foamed or combed on. Adding a thick layer creates brilliant color; brushing it through creates a softer shade.

Hot pink hair doesn't match your shoes? Wash it out and start over with another color.

New hair trends predicted

NEW YORK (AP) — The overall look in hair for spring and summer '86 calls for longer and straighter styles, though many women may prefer staying with the short bobs, which are virtually maintenance free.

La Coupe salon of New York and Montreal has predicted that hair will be long and sleek "reminiscent of the '60s but with '86 shape and drama."

To help acheive that goal, La Coupe has marketed the "La Coupe Hair Straightener," a thermostatically controlled device that makes hair "stick straight."

But Susan Valentine, a spokeswoman for Clairol, said short styles will probably abound "basically because it's so much easier to take care of."

She also predicted that the "tousled look and straight bob will probably be in again."

To get the tousled look, Clairol offers a twist on the electric curlers — little rubber, heated rods that twist and bend into any shape. "You put them in your hair and get real tousle curls. You don't comb it through. It's finger-styling, and it's all toward this trend of easy maintenance hair," she said.

There is news also for the fuller-faced woman this season: Glemby hair salons nationwide are styling cuts designed specifically for the plus-size woman.

The right style for a slim person and a bigger person is not the same, said Glemby's Brigitte Grosjean.

"Hair should not be too long on a bigger person because then she'll look big all over," Grosjean said. "It should be no longer than the shoulder. But even when it's shorter, it should be worn towards the face."

Like La Coupe, she believes styles are straighter because curly hair is harder to style toward the face.

"With bigger people, it's proportion that counts," Grosjean said. "It's also better to have some height on the crown to give it that longer shape and to make a woman look taller."

DEAR ABBY

New Mexico's consent law is claim to shame

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You were wrong in your answer to "New Mexico Mess," the grandmother who was concerned about her 15-year-old grandson's sexually active relationship with an 18-year-old girl. You stated that the girl could be charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Abby, New Mexico's claim to shame is that the age of consent in this state is 13!

My heart goes out to the grandmother. Tragically, the type of situation she describes is not uncommon. I know of one case where a 13-year-old girl became involved with a 40-year-old man against her parents' wishes. The authorities could do nothing about it because the child had given her consent!

As a state senator, I have twice carried a bill to our Legislature that would raise the age of consent to 16 for both boys and girls — 18 when force is involved. Twice, Abby, I have come back empty-handed.

I intend to keep carrying this bill back to Santa Fe until I get it through. Perhaps if this appeared in your column it might help. — SEN. W.P. VANDERGRIFF, NEW MEXICO STATE SENATE

DEAR SEN. VANDERGRIFF: I'll try! This is a plea to all my New Mexico readers: Phone or write to your state legislators and let them know that you think the age of consent should be raised to 16.

Are you with me, Alamogordo, Albuquerque, Carlsbad, Clovis, Farmington, Gallup, Hobbs, Las Cruces, Portales and Roswell?

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can help us come to some kind of agreement. When my husband and I go to a restaurant or a public place and he holds the door open for me, I walk on in. About that time, another couple or even some women walk up, and he continues holding the door open for them. He says I should wait until all the others have gone in. I say he should follow me in and let the others open the door for themselves. (If there's another man, he should hold the door open for his lady.)

When my husband and I get separated — which is often when he keeps holding the door open for people — he gets upset.

Should I wait, or should my husband turn the door over to those who walk up and follow me? — LEE IN QUARTZSITE, ARIZ.

DEAR LEE: Your husband should hold the door open for you, and those who follow closely on your heels — be they men or women. If he's holding the door for so many that you and he become separated, he's overdoing it. And if this is the biggest problem you and he ever have, you're lucky.

DEAR ABBY: I am the writer of the original "Forgotten Parents" letter, and having read the follow-up letters you have published since, I would like to clarify a few points:

Perhaps I did not make myself clear when I stated that our son owed us (his parents) $10,000 and has made no effort to repay any part of it. We merely wondered if it had any bearing on the fact that he had severed his relationship with us.

We do, in fact, have a promissory note, which we would never, under any circumstances, put into force. I am sure my son knows this. We have no idea why he did not repay the money. The money is insignificant in comparison with the loss of our son and grandchildren.

To clarify further, I would like your readers to know that we did send our son several written messages, asking for an explanation, but received no answer. I telephoned his wife and asked her what was wrong, and she said there wasn't anything wrong, and was reluctant to discuss the situation.

I have only one consolation — that I am I, and he is he — for I would not want to have his guilt when either his father or I dies. Unless, of course, he has no conscience, which I do not believe is possible. — FORGOTTEN MOTHER

Wardrobe not worn

NEW YORK (AP) — The average American woman wears only 20 percent of her wardrobe 80 percent of the time, fashion experts say, largely because of color, style and care.

In a recent nationwide competition, leading students of fashion design worked on the solution. The result: More colorful mix-and-match separates in cotton, linen and wool blends, and all machine washable, according to the maker of Cheer detergent.

Hezbollah: U.S., French abductions 'justified'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The country's most militant Shiite Moslem group said today that the kidnapping of American and most French hostages was justifiable, but condemned all other "mobbish abductions" in Beirut.

"We did not condemn the kidnapping of Americans and Frenchmen because that happened in certain specific conditions when America and France tried to corner the oppressed, confiscate their freedom and their right to self-determination," said the statement from Hezbollah, which was published in Beirut's leading daily newspapers.

"So they (the oppressed) had no other alternative but this method and we found it justifiable," said the statement.

"But this postition of ours should not be construed to cover the rest of mobbish abductions that have lately jolted west Beirut, involving an invalid Frenchman, a professor or a doctor or a journalist or Lebanese or foreign students," it said.

Hezbollah is made up of Shiite fundamentalists advocating the creation of an Islamic republic in Lebanon patterned after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary Iran.

The statement was the first time the party has tried publicly to justify the kidnappings, and follows an uproar among Moslem politicians and university students over last week's abductions of an 85-year-old Frenchman and 38-year-old Christian Lebanese professor in Moslem west Beirut.

WORLD

The Frenchman, Camille Sontag, a retired car dealer who has been living in west Beirut for more than 40 years, was half-deaf and needs a hearing aide, his wife said.

He was seized by two gunmen last Wednesday as the elderly couple drove through a crowded seaside boulevard to the post office to pay their telephone bill.

The professor, Nabil Matar, was kidnapped the same day as he walked from his house to the American University of Beirut, where he worked.

No group has claimed responsibility for either abduction.

Classes have been suspended at the American University of Beirut since Thursday to protest Matar's abduction.

Professors and students have been staging protest marches in town and sit-ins on campus, demanding an end to terrorist attacks against AUB's faculty, staff and students.

Hezbollah's statement said "kidnappers practicing such abductions are not connected with the Islamic fervency. They are either cheap mercenaries of operatives of security bodies hostile to the Islamic fervency."

"Their acts, especially when teachers are involved, are ugly crimes," the statement said, adding that the kidnappers were of various nationalities.

Hezbollah, or the Party of God, is supected of masterminding Islamic Jihad, a shadowy group that in the last two years has claimed the abduction of five Americans and four Frenchmen.

Islamic Jihad, or Holy War, claimed in separate incidents to have killed two of the hostages, William Buckley, U.S. Embassy political officer, and Michel Seurat, a researcher at the French Center for Studies and Research of the Contemporary Middle East. But neither of their bodies ever were found.

The other American and French hostages still missing are:

Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest; David Jacobsen, director of the American University hospital; and Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the American University.

Marcel Fontaine, vice Consul at the French embassy in Beirut; Marcel Carton, the embassy's protocol officer; Jean-Paul Kauffmann, journalist working for the French weekly L'Evenement du Jeudi.

Tutu: Some papers do disservice to country

Tutu

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Bishop Desmond Tutu said Monday most white-owned South African newspapers, seeking to preserve advertising and white readership, soft-pedal news of the anti-apartheid struggle and do a "catastrophic disservice" to the country.

"Our white newspapers have by and large fallen down very badly" in reporting the conflict and in providing a means of communication between deeply divided racial groups, Tutu told the opening session of a three-day International Press Institute meeting on problems of news coverage around the world.

In Johannesburg, South Africa, however, newspaper editors said they tried to convey black concerns to white readers.

More than 300 delegates from about 40 Western and Third World countries are attending the meeting at the Hofburg, Austria's former imperial palace. The press institute is a London-based group advocating freedom of the press.

The group's director, Peter Galliner, said foreign correspondents are in greater danger than ever before because they are the easiest targets in war situations.

He said the group noticed some negative developments last year, such as South Africa increasing restrictions on reporters and Indonesia closing 26 periodicals.

But on the positive side, journalists gained more freedom in the Philippines, India, Argentina, Brazil, Bolivia, Peru and Uruguay, Galliner said.

In his address, Tutu said, "It would be quite untrue to give the impression that the South African newspapers have been totally spineless (and) guilty of this catastrophic disservice.

"Sadly, most of our white newspapers are actually trying to shield white readers from the realities of our situation," said the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize winner.

Rex Gibson, acting editor-in-chief of the independent Johannesburg daily The Star, said, "We constantly strive to improve that communication...I believe the better newspapers in South Africa also seek those aims."

He said the paper was doing an "effective job of acting as a bridge between black and white, but not a perfect one."

Harald Pakendorf, editor of the Afrikaans-language daily Die Vaderland, said his paper tried to report on the demands of the black community and the conditions in which blacks live.

Increased drug trafficking hurts, U.S., Mexico relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp increase in narcotics trafficking from Mexico is causing strains in U.S.-Mexican relations, with each country accusing the other of not doing enough to resolve the problem.

State Department deputy spokesman Charles Redman said Monday that "deeply entrenched corruption among (Mexican) officials nominally engaged in anti-narcotics programs" is partly responsible for the increase.

But Mexican Embassy spokesman Leonardo Ffrench said his government is doing its best to fight drug trafficking and pointed out that 300 Mexican agents have died or been wounded in the struggle over the past decade.

The two countries normally try to resolve differences in private, but one U.S. official said Redman's statement reflected a conscious decision to be more open in discussing problems with Mexico.

Given the magnitude of the drug problem and other issues, "We're going to look pretty stupid if we soft-pedal too much," said the official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

The assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, Elliott Abrams, was scheduled to testify about drug trafficking and other issues today in an appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on Western Hemisphere affairs. Also on the witness list was William Von Raab, the U.S. Customs Commissioner.

Speaking to reporters Monday, Redman said, "Mexico may now be the largest single foreign supplier of heroin and marijuana, and increasing amounts of cocaine are transiting Mexico into the United States."

In addition to alleged official corruption in Mexico, Redman said the increase in drug trafficking also is the result of Mexico's deepening economic problems dating back to 1982 and of near perfect climatic conditions for drug production.

Ffrench said the United States could do more to help itself resolve the problem.

"Sometimes it seems unfair that a country like the United States, with almost unlimited resources, has not been able to solve the drug problem within its own territory and keeps on blaming countries like Mexico with a lot fewer resouces," Ffrench said.

"It expects them to solve not only their own drug problem but that of the United States as well."

Ffrench said his government insists that the only possible way to succeed in the anti-drug war is for the United States and Mexico, which share identical goals, to strengthen cooperation and "stop blaming each other's efforts."

Lack of cooperation, he said, benefits only the drug traffickers.

As an example of U.S. inattention to the drug problem, Ffrench said that according to a report by the pro-marijuana lobbying group, the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, U.S. marijuana production reached $18.6 billion last year, exceeding all other products, including corn and wheat.

He also said the President's Commission on Organized Crime has stressed that "demand and consumption" are at the core of the drug trafficking problem.

WORLD IN BRIEF

West Germany honors Horowitz

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — West Germany gave Vladimir Horowitz the country's highest public service award Monday, a day after the 81-year-old pianist gave his first concert on German soil in 54 years.

Horowitz received the German Order of Merit in a ceremony at City Hall. On Sunday night, he stirred 1,800 spectators in the city's concert hall with a 2½-hour performance — receiving standing ovations before and after the performance.

Horowitz listened to Mayor Klaus Dohnanyi's praise with a mixture of seriousness and amusement.

When Dohnanyi called him "the greatest (musical) interpreter of our century" and praised his concert as "unbelievably beautiful," Horowitz beamed and said, "Oooh!"

Horowitz last month returned to the Soviet Union, his birthplace, for the first time since leaving 62 years ago.

Horowitz, now a U.S. citizen, last performed in Germany in 1932 in a six-concert series in Hamburg. His concert Sunday included works of Liszt, Schumann and Chopin.

German court rules in frogs' favor

SCHLESWIG, West Germany (LAT) — A state supreme court here Monday gave the go-ahead for a group of local frogs to keep on croaking to their hearts' delight, despite a protest from residents.

After about two years of legal wrangling, the supreme court reversed a lower court verdict against the frogs, who live in a pond belonging to electrician Lars Wendt in the Pinneberg area northwest of Hamburg.

The court rejected the protests of a married couple and a widow who said that their sleep was disturbed by the frogs, in particular by the green water frog that characteristically has a powerful voice.

Although the judges in this town about 70 miles north of Hamburg believed that the noise did not seriously affect the plaintiffs' use of their property, they conceded that it might be more difficult for residents to fall asleep on warm nights during the frogs' mating season of May and June.

However, the judges ruled that the defendant's pond preserved part of the region's environmental history.

Soviet official criticizes import ban

MOSCOW (NYT) — A Foreign Ministry spokesman Monday strongly criticized the Western European ban on the import of agricultural products from the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Calling the ban by the European Community "totally unjustified," the spokesman, Vladimir B. Lomeiko, said "this sensationalist hullaballo, this hysteria, is very close to creating an anti-Soviet psychosis."

Lomeiko reiterated his earlier assertion that "we did not knowingly conceal information" about the disaster. According to a reconstruction of the accident given last week in the Soviet press, there was a nearly three-day lag between the accident and the first official report.

In the midst of his denunciation, Lomeiko, who had been in the United States during the first days after the report of the accident, held up a copy of the New York Post headlined "Mass Grave — 15,000 Reported Buried in Nuke Disposal Site."

Volcano spewing sand, steam

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Tacana volcano, which straddles the border between Mexico and Guatemala, continued spewing hot sand and steam but poses no threat of an immediate eruption, the government news agency Notimex said Monday.

Guadalupe Torres, head of a local government emergency agency in southern Mexico, said the 13,506-foot volcano posed no danger at this stage, according to the news agency.

Nevertheless, 17,000 people have left their homes, mostly tiny villages on the mountain slope, press reports said.

The volcano blew a 33-foot crater early last week, sending sand and steam in a plume 4,000 feet high, and caused local tremors daily, some of which registered 5 on the Richter scale.

Phone lines to the towns closest to the volcano are primitive and it was not immediately possible to contact authorities there.

Costa Rica doesn't want Marcos

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — President Oscar Arias Sanchez has refused a request to allow former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos to live in this Central American country, a Cabinet minister said.

Minister of the Presidency Rodrigo Arias said Monday the government received the request during the final days of the government of President Luis Alberto Monge.

Monge did not want to handle the request because he was leaving office, the minister told The Associated Press. The new president, who took office last Thursday, rejected the request for reasons of "national suitability," the minister said.

Marcos has been living in Hawaii since he fled the Philippines at the end of February.

Giant panda may be pregnant

TOKYO (AP) — A giant panda at Tokyo's Ueno Zoo may be pregnant, a zoo official said Monday.

The official, Hiroshi Sugiura, said 13-year-old Huan Huan is showing indications of pregnancy such as a smaller appetite and slower actions. However, he said, "we haven't confirmed the pregnancy."

Huan Huan was artificially inseminated on Jan. 31 after she and her companion, 19-year-old Fei Fei, failed to mate earlier that month.

Huan Huan gave birth June 22 — 110 days after being artificially inseminated — but the first panda born in Japan died 43 hours later, accidentally crushed to death by its 220-pound mother.

Huan Huan was presented to the zoo in January 1980 and Fei Fei in September 1982 by China.

Thirty-one people die in bus collision

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A truck carrying passengers from a stalled bus collided with another bus on a Pan-American Highway bridge and 31 people were killed, officials reported Monday.

They said the accident occurred Sunday night near the village of Talpetate, 30 miles west of San Salvador.

A police report said the first bus had developed mechanical trouble and about 50 passengers left it and and boarded a two-ton truck to continue their trip. The second bus involved in the collision was not carrying any passengers, according to the report.

National Police Cpl. Andres Borja Caceres said 31 people were killed and nine were injured.

Britain unveils memorial to Eagle Squadrons

Hearst News Service

LONDON — Praising them as young men who came to Britain's defense in "her hour of greatest need," Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Monday unveiled a monument here to the legendary Eagle Squadrons, the American volunteers who fought in the Royal Air Force before the United States entered the second World War.

Mrs. Thatcher, speaking to a large audience of Eagle Squadrons' veterans, as well as American and British dignitaries, seized on the dignified and quietly moving ceremony to strongly reaffirm Anglo-American solidarity "in the cause of freedom."

The Eagle Squadrons' memorial, a tapered stone monument bearing a lone eagle poised for flight, was sponsored by The Hearst Corporation. It was sculptured by one of Britain's most famous artists, Dame Elizabeth Frink.

The Eagle Squadrons were formed by Charles Sweeny, a young American businessman and close friend of William Randolph Hearst, Jr., Editor-in-Chief of The Hearst Newspapers.

Hearst was presented with a special plaque by the Eagle Squadrons' Association for his role in bringing the memorial to fruition. He was named only one of three honorary members of the Eagle Squadrons' Association.

In her brief speech, Mrs. Thatcher explicitly linked the part played by the 244 American pilots of the Eagle Squadrons, more than a third of whom lost their lives in air combat, to a more recent example of Anglo-American cooperation, the use last month of British bases by U.S. Air Force bombers to strike at Libya.

Referring to the World War II pilots, she declared that "we are grateful to them as the few who were in the vanguard of the many Americans who followed to fight in the air from our shores in the cause of freedom, a freedom which America still defends unsparingly the world over."

U.S. Ambassador to Britain Charles H. Price II pointed out that the memorial had been erected close to the U.S. embassy in Grosvenor Square where only two weeks before protestors against the U.S. retaliation raid on Libya and the British government's support of it, had come "not to praise our Anglo-American relationship but to denounce it."

China holding two Taiwanese

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PEKING — China is in effect holding two crew members of a hijacked Taiwanese airliner as hostages in an attempt to force Taiwan into negotiations, diplomats said here Monday.

The diplomats predicted that the maneuver would not work and that if China persisted in holding the two men, it could turn what was a propaganda coup into a public-relations fiasco.

The windfall came with the defection of a Taiwan-based China Airlines pilot, who flew his Boeing 747 cargo plane into the southern Chinese city of Guangzhou May 3. The pilot, Wang Xijue, asked to be reunited with family members living in China.

The other two crew members, co-pilot Dong Guangxing and mechanic Qiu Mingzhi, made clear that they wanted to return to Taiwan.

On May 3, China asked the Taiwanese airline to send a representative to Peking as soon as possible to discuss with China's national airline how to deal with the plane, cargo, and two crew members who do not wish to stay.

Taiwan has rejected the idea of sending an airline representative to Peking. It tried to get the Hong Kong-based Cathay Pacific Airways to act as an intermediary.

A Western diplomat said, "...There is pressure on Peking. The longer they don't do anything with those two crew members, the more it looks like they're holding those two men as hostages."
