HIGHTOWER

Hightower asked to pay telephone bill

AUSTIN (AP) - Former Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said he thinks he reimbursed the state for long-distance calls to his campaign office during his losing re-election bid.

The Austin American-Statesman reported Tuesday that Hightower - a Democrat who lost last year to Republican Rick Perry - was asked to repay $367.

"The internal auditor found the calls as part of a routine review and, because they were obviously not state-related, the state should not have paid for them," said Geoffrey Connor, the Agriculture Department's general counsel.

The newspaper also reported that the case has been referred to Travis County prosecutors. State law prohibits personal use of state phones.

Hightower described the incident Tuesday as "the same old horse hockey."

"As best we can tell, the state has been reimbursed," he said. "There's a political agenda here - it's nothing but politics."

Connor said the inquiry was not politically motivated.

Documents obtained by the American-Statesman under Texas' Open Records Act show that the calls were made between August and early November 1990 from two cellular phones owned by the Department of Agriculture.

The records show the calls at Hightower's campaign office, the newspaper reported.

Connor said both phones were checked out to Hightower. One was carried by the commissioner, and the other by his aide. An internal audit found that $29.52 of the calls were made from the phone assigned to Hightower, and $337.62 from the other phone, the newspaper reported.

Babbling Brooks

I have been hypnotized.

It really felt pretty good.

You may have seen the ad in the Sunday Brand about Dr. Michael P. Reeves, N.D., C.B.T. (whatever all those initials mean) coming to town to conduct hypnosis sessions for smoking and weight control.

I've lost five pounds, but I'm up to two packs a day.

Just kidding. Old, old, old joke.

Actually, I should have taken advantage of both sessions and was too broke for either. However, $39 to stop smoking is less expensive than my tobacco bill for the month.

There were no dangling, swinging gold chains or medallions, although he did have this weird ring on his right hand that had a spiral pattern on it. Look at it long enough and you...

(Snap!) Actually, we never, ever, ever fell asleep. We were totally conscious the whole time, and I'm sure I wouldn't have walked the railing on the second floor of the Red Carpet Inn no matter what he had told me.

It was a pretty interesting session. He explained the power of suggestion, telling us to do certain things with our fingers and touch our chins. Well, he touched his cheek with his fingers, so we all touched our cheeks, too.

He explained to us that he could not, with hypnosis, make us do anything we didn't want to do. We wouldn't crow like a rooster or bark or any of that other stuff, unless we wanted to crow or bark or whatever. All he could do was make suggestions to us: what we did was totally up to us.

The one thing that will be a big dividend was the high state of relaxation. I may buy me a pack tomorrow, or maybe never smoke again. But the deep, deep relaxation may have been the best "sleep" I've had in a year. We never went to sleep, but I definitely felt more relaxed than I had in a long, long time.

Who's the victim?

Brian Wilson, right, gets a firm grip on his pig as Hereford Junior High Principal Raymond Schroeder prepares to kiss the pig Tuesday. HJH students responded to a special challenge at a pep rally Tuesday, and their reward was to see Schroeder kiss the pig. Earlier, assistant principal Terri Souter was the "winner" in a month-long challenge at the school. The events benefitted United Way of Deaf Smith County, raising over $200 for the current fund drive.

Soviets want big response for arms deal

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union is taking steps to match President Bush's announced nuclear weapons cuts as well as secure central control over a nuclear arsenal increasingly threatened by republics' moves toward autonomy.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's spokesman said Tuesday "it would be a sin" to miss the historic opportunity to scrap nuclear arms.

Also Tuesday, a Soviet military official was quoted as saying the Kremlin will slash its army by roughly half in the next three years and may oppose efforts by the republics to create their own armies.

The nuclear situation seemed to be summed up in a commentary on the Russian television program "Vesti," which warned that some republics may see nuclear weapons on their territory as a guarantor of independence.

The Kremlin must quickly reduce the numbers while it still has some control over the splintering nation's nuclear might, it said.

"Bush's unexpected move among other things gives Moscow an opportunity to keep control of nuclear weapons before it is too late," the newscast commented.

Gorbachev spokesman Andrei Grachev said Bush's announcement Friday of unilateral U.S. cuts in short-range and other nuclear weapons offered "a historic chance for a new breakthrough in nuclear disarmament."

He said Gorbachev had instructed government officials to clarify certain points of the American proposals and has set up a special group to maintain contact with the U.S. government.

"We believe that those cuts in the nuclear potential of the United States are very important. As a followup, we may (say something) about a cut down of the Soviet nuclear potential," Grachev said.

Meanwhile, the 12 remaining Soviet republics said they had agreed to joint control of the nation's nuclear weapons, a move that would prevent either Gorbachev or Russian President Boris Yeltsin from having complete control.

The vague, brief announcement by the republic leaders was part of a broad, tentative accord that would form the basis for future economic union.

It said the republics agreed that all signatories to a final declaration of cooperation "will jointly control nuclear weapons out of a common control center in the interests of collective security."

"Common control center" likely would be Gorbachev's weakened Kremlin.

Cattle Rustlin' in the 90's

There's still a lot of thieving going on, but rustling, like everything else, is high-tech.

By Jennifer Dixon
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Today's cattle rustlers no longer wait for new moons and inky night skies to rope an unsuspecting herd.

Instead, they have dropped their chaps and lariats to engage in a lucrative white-collar crime with phony investment schemes, bad checks or illegal sales at livestock auctions.

They even use cattle sales to launder drug money, an investigator says.

Producers and investors may be losing millions of dollars, according to ranchers, law officers and a lawmaker who is investigating the apparent increase in modern-day cattle rustling and the government's response.

"We've still got the old rustling - that may be glorified in the West of the past - but in addition, we've got the white-collar crime and a certain amount of this new activity with laundering drug money by buying cattle," said Jack Sedgwick, administrator of the brand enforcement division at the Montana Department of Livestock.

"All of a sudden, we have more of this white-collar fraud," added Jody Henderson, special assistant to the general manager of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

A case announced this week by the Agriculture Department's Packers and Stockyards Administration illustrates the kind of money at stake.

The agency's deputy administrator, Calvin W. Watkins, said three partners in a Texas company were charged with failing to pay for more than $640,000 worth of livestock. They were accused in a federal administrative complaint of using bad checks.

Henderson said authorities in Texas and Oklahoma recovered $1.8 million in stolen cattle last year and $4 million in 1989.

The Packers and Stockyard Administration, which celebrated its 70th anniversary last month, is responsible for enforcing the Packers and Stockyards Act, an antitrust, fair trade practice and payment protection law. It is designed to assure free and open competition and to prevent unfair and deceptive practices in the marketing of livestock, meat and poultry.

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on livestock, is investigating the agency's ability to protect producers and investors from today's swindlers.

He believes a cattle-rustling case now under investigation could show a "breakdown" in the regulatory process.

"I hope to be asking questions on what we think happened ... why the protections we have in place were not adequate," Stenholm said.

Harold Davis, director of the livestock marketing division at the agency, confirmed an investigation is under way but refused additional comment.

Davis said, however, there are no indications that illegal cattle dealing is any more prevalent today than over the past 10 years.

Stenholm said he is concerned about whether the Packers and Stockyards Administration has the muscle and the authority to police illegal livestock sales, and he plans hearings on the issue.

"I want to see, in this new modern livestock world, what should be the responsibility of the federal government in the area of oversight regulation," he said.

One problem cited by Stenholm is producers who are not paid for their cattle. With stockyard prices running around $70 per 100 pounds, a typical steer may fetch $700 to $800.

Stenholm said there have been instances when a cattle owner entrusted a herd to someone who is supposed to care for the animals but then sold them illegally.

"We're supposed to be able to keep that from happening," Stenholm said. "We have reason to believe the system is not working as well as it should. If it occurs at a livestock auction, certain questions have to be raised - why didn't (Packers and Stockyards) catch it, why didn't you question the brands."

Another technique used by rustlers involves kiting checks to pay for cattle. By the time the bad check clears, said Henderson and Sedgwick, the buyer and the herd are miles away, often in another state where brands may not be carefully checked.

Sedgwick and Henderson said they're also familiar with another relatively new cattle rustling scheme - selling cattle that exist only on paper to out-of-state investors.

A group of Denver investors was duped when it decided to buy out-of-state cattle that Sedgwick believes never existed. When the investors took charge of their herd, they discovered that 6,000 head were missing in Montana and South Dakota.

Sedgwick said his Montana livestock agency is also poised to open several investigations into cattle sales apparently financed with illegal drug profits.

"It's becoming a problem," he said. "There's no question in my mind about it."

Childress investigating teen's 'suicide'

CHILDRESS, Texas (AP) - The failure of three witnesses to appear before a Childress County grand jury about the 1988 hanging death of a Childress teen-ager has left authorities in limbo.

The death of 17-year-old Tate Rowland had been ruled a suicide, but authorities have reopened the case to determine if the death was part of a cult ritual.

"It's a quagmire," Childress County District Attorney David McCoy said Tuesday. "There's enough evidence that you can't ignore the case, but there's not enough to bite your teeth into."

McCoy said one of the three individuals who failed to testify Monday is an 18-year-old man who claims to have witnessed Rowland hang himself five miles outside of Childress on July 26, 1988.

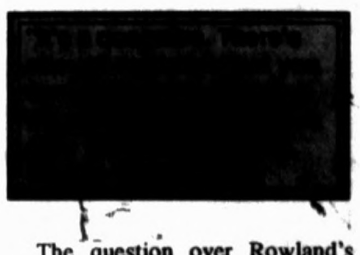

"We have three separate written statements from this witness saying that he was at the scene when Tate died," McCoy said. "But by his not showing up Monday I would have to think he is avoiding service."

McCoy said the grand jury will attempt to subpoena the three absent witnesses and at least two others when the grand jury meets again Oct. 28.

The grand jury also asked Monday that the body of Rowland's sister, Terri Trosper, who died at the age of 27 in May, be exhumed. McCoy said the grand jurors are interested in exploring whether the deaths are related.

An autopsy was performed on Trosper after she died, and a pathologist ruled she choked on her own vomit. Her blood-alcohol level was measured at 0.23 percent, officials said.

A level of 0.1 percent is considered legally intoxicated in Texas.

The question over Rowland's death was raised when reports that youth was the victim of a sacrificial killing began to circulate amongst some teen-agers in Childress.

One teen-ager, detained by Childress police for stealing a car, told officers that he was involved in the ritual killing of Rowland, McCoy said. The teen-ager has since recanted the statement, McCoy said.

Authorities exhumed Rowland's body in August based on statements from family and friends that Rowland was happy and would not consider suicide.

An autopsy revealed traces of Elavil, an antidepressant, in Rowland's body.

Sparks Veasey, a pathologist in Amarillo, has said the pattern of rope marks on the boy's neck were inconsistent with suicide.

Oldest nuclear plant shutting down

Brittle-with-age vessel prompts action

ROWE, Mass. (AP) - The oldest operating nuclear plant in the country began shutting down after the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff said the reactor's brittle-with-age containment vessel could rupture.

The move Tuesday at the Yankee Rowe plant cast a shadow over the nuclear industry and its 111 plants just months before several are expected to apply for unprecedented renewals of their 40-year operating licenses.

The 31-year-old Yankee reactor boasted one of the industry's best safety records when the Union of Concerned Scientists charged earlier this year that the containment vessel could rupture. At the time the NRC said the plant was safe.

The scientists' group and other critics applauded the shutdown and said it signaled greater concern for safety at the NRC.

"It seems we have turned a corner," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

The Yankee Atomic Electric Co., which operates the western Massachusetts plant, accepted the staff's decision under protest. The report was to have been presented to the full commission today, but that meeting was canceled when plant managers agreed to the shutdown without waiting for the commission's vote.

The NRC staff report said tests suggested "a much greater risk" of failure of the plant's 30-foot-high containment vessel than previously believed.

The vessel, which surrounds the reactor core, has grown increasingly brittle from decades of radiation. The report said there was too great a chance it could crack and release radiation if flooded with cold water in an emergency.

The NRC said the plant will remain closed until the agency is satisfied it can operate safely.

"There is no way to say now what is needed to do that," said Karl Abraham, regional spokesman for the NRC.

The NRC and plant officials will conduct more tests that could not be done with the plant operating. Those tests might show that the plant is safe and can reopen with no major work, he said.

Critics said containment vessels in other aging U.S. reactors also could be brittle and have said Yankee Rowe should close permanently.

Robert Pollard, a nuclear expert with the Union of Concerned Scientists, attributed the NRC staff's turnabout to willingness to admit error and to the appointment of a new commission chairman, Ivan Selin.

"The message to the other utilities is that public safety's going to have a higher priority than it has in the past," Pollard said.

Selin, named by President Bush to the NRC chairmanship this summer, has said the commission's handling of Yankee Rowe would guide its decisions on scores of other plants expected to begin seeking license extensions next year.

Yankee Rowe employs about 200 people. Spokesman William McGee said there would be no immediate layoffs. The plant's management hopes to bring it back into service within weeks, he said.

"In my opinion, it's no less safe than it was yesterday. I think it's largely political," said David Pike, manager of special projects.

The 185-megawatt plant sits in the Berkshire Mountains, four miles from Rowe and near the Vermont state line. It is the smallest nuclear plant in the country.

The plant, financed by a consortium of 10 New England utilities, generates about 1.3 billion megawatts of electricity a year - or enough to power a city of 180,000 people.

Officials have said there is a power surplus in western Massachusetts, so the loss of Yankee's electricity is not a major concern.

Cleanup of base sites will take years

WASHINGTON (AP) - Long after three Texas military installations have been shuttered - felled by the budget ax - the waste and by-products generated by those facilities will remain behind.

Although Carswell Air Force Base, Bergstrom Air Force Base and Chase Field Naval Air Station are expected to be closed by late 1993, environmental cleanup and monitoring will continue for several more years.

In a preliminary report issued Tuesday, the Defense Department said 16 sites need to be cleaned up at Carswell, 11 at Bergstrom and four at Chase Field.

The sites range from radioactive wells to fire training areas, where combustible fuels were set aflame so crews could simulate extinguishing airplane fires.

The cleanup at Carswell, located near Fort Worth, will continue beyond 1997, the report said. Targeted sites include landfills, a fire training area, drainage ditch, stream, pesticide rinse area, fuels handling area and a site where drums filled with waste were buried.

Also targeted for cleanup at Carswell are a tank farm, gas station and radioactive well, said Strategic Air Command spokesman Maj. Don Planalp, stationed at Offutt AFB in Omaha, Neb.

"I don't have much information, except I think it is low-level radioactive hospital waste, as in radium," Planalp said Tuesday.

The cleanup should begin in 1993, with monitoring and additional work to continue for at least a decade.

"Many cleanup operations take time. It's not a matter if you throw money at them you can do it faster," Planalp said. "I do know some procedures there's a time element involved that can't be sped up."

Bergstrom, near Austin, has a radioactive waste area, landfills, fuel spill sites and a fire training area that need cleaning up, said 1st Lt. Tom Wessels, Bergstrom spokesman.

The cleanup will continue beyond 1997, the Defense Department estimated.

Wessels said only a small quantity of radioactive waste needs to be removed.

Chase Field, near Beeville, has two landfills and two firefighting burn pits contaminated with hazardous or toxic materials. The cleanup should be completed by October 1997, the report said.

Carswell, Bergstrom and Chase are among 34 military installations nationally recommended for closure by the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission. President Bush in July approved the independent panel's recommendation to close the bases and realign 48 others by 1997.

According to the report, Carswell's active duty personnel will be gone by September 1993. The 7th Bombardment Wing will be deactivated, its B-52H aircraft redistributed by December 1992 and its KC-135 aircraft redistributed by March 1993.

Bergstrom is due to be vacated by September 1993. Its 67th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing will be inactivated, Wessels said. Air Force Reserve units will remain on a portion of the base if Bergstrom's airport is converted to civilian use.

Bergstrom's 12th Air Force Headquarters, 602nd Tactical Air Control Center Squadron and the 12th Tactical Intelligence Squadron will transfer to Davis-Monthan AFB in Tucson, Ariz., by March 1993. The 712th Air Support Operations Center Squadron will transfer to Fort Hood in Central Texas by March 1993.

Chase's command will be deactivated by the end of September 1993, with training squadron operations relocated to Kingsville NAS in Kingsville and Meridian NAS in Meridian, Miss. by October 1992.

Attorney General Dan Morales organized a workshop today with federal, state and local officials involved in the transfer of military sites to civilian use.

Public hearing shows CIA tensions

WASHINGTON (AP) - Confirmation hearings for Robert Gates to head the CIA are offering a rare public glimpse at tensions within the agency, as witnesses recall heated battles over the nature and seriousness of the Soviet threat.

The Senate Intelligence Committee saw a replay of bitter intra-agency fights that have led to charges that Gates "cooked" intelligence assessments to suit hard-line Reagan administration policies.

Jennifer Glaudemans, a former CIA Soviet analyst scheduled to appear before the panel today, told in testimony released Tuesday how Gates had once "stormed" into an analyst's office to take issue with a paper concluding that economic sanctions against Libya would be ineffective.

"How can you say this when this is inconsistent with administration policy?" Gates shouted, according to Glaudemans.

But another former agency official, Graham Fuller, defended the CIA's analysis process as one that reached out to include views that diverged from the agency's conventional wisdom, even though some inside the CIA felt threatened by such solicitations.

He described Glaudemans' reaction to one such outreach effort as "paranoid," and criticized the "introverted character" of the CIA's intelligence directorate.

The new controversy over manipulation of analyses threatened to further extend the nomination hearings, already into their third week.

It also seemed to energize Gates' Democratic opponents, who had been resigned to the likelihood that Gates, now President Bush's deputy national security adviser, ultimately would be confirmed.

"I think some Democratic members have been badly shaken," Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., told reporters.

But Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, said he did not believe any votes had been changed by the testimony.

"This is a tough one," said Intelligence Committee Chairman David Boren, D-Okla., who has spoken favorably about the nominee. He said Gates, who is scheduled to reappear before the panel, "will end up being the most important witness. He'll either pass the test, or he won't."

Other testimony and documents released Tuesday strongly suggested that Gates did quash dissent at the agency in the preparation of a 1985 assessment of Iran that supported U.S. arms-for-hostages policy, then denied to Congress that there had been any disagreement.

Fuller wrote the assessment to warn that Moscow might exploit instability inside Iran to sell arms and gain dominance in that country - a position at odds with previous assessments by the CIA Soviet analysis office.

Fuller said he took the draft to Gates, then chief of analysis, who agreed with him. But the incident triggered an internal storm, reflected in several memos addressed to Gates complaining bitterly about circumvention of normal procedures.

Another witness, former analyst Mel Goodman, said Fuller's findings were unsupported by any evidence.

The Draper Club will host the October meeting.

'Wayland Nights' set Oct. 10

Wayland Baptist University admissions, financial aid, alumni and denominational relations personnel will bring college information and a free meal to hundreds of prospective students and their parents through the "Wayland Night" program beginning in October.

Thirty-three communities in Eastern New Mexico and the Panhandle and South Plains of Texas will host the Wayland Nights during the 1991-92 academic year, according to Bobby Hall, executive directory of university relations at WBU.

"While we welcome visits to our home campus in Plainview, we also realize that it is often more convenient to bring Wayland to the student in his or her own environment," said Hall. "Students attending these programs will have a chance to talk to current students and faculty members, have questions answered about financial aid and admissions, and learn more about the institution."

The Wayland Night program touches prospective students through a variety of sources, including alumni, high school counselors, local media, ministers, and youth groups in the selected communities.

Seven evenings were conducted last spring on a trial basis, attracting a total of 417 participants.

"We at Wayland realize that Eastern New Mexico and the Panhandle/South Plains area of Texas are among our most important constituents, and it is a natural outreach of the University to visit these communities," said Hall.

In 1991-92, 13 events are scheduled during the fall semester, followed by 20 in the spring. Hereford is scheduled for Oct. 10.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A woman who says Mike Tyson fathered her son filed a $12 million palimony and paternity lawsuit against the boxer and his promoter, Don King.

Natalie Fears, 26, a Los Angeles real estate agent, asked for a $5 million trust for 1-year-old D'Amato Tyson, $5 million in support and punitive damages of $1 million each from Tyson and King.

She claimed in the Superior Court lawsuit filed Tuesday that Tyson reneged on a promise to support her, said her attorney, Marvin Mitchelson.

"Tyson loves Ms. Fears' son D'Amato as if he were his own child and has spent a great deal of time with him," said Tyson's attorney, Robert Hirth.

Asked whether Tyson was denying he is the child's father, John Solberg, a spokesman at Don King Productions Inc. in New York, said: "I don't think it's a denial. I don't think it's been proven."

Tyson faces trial next year on charges he raped an 18-year-old contestant at the Miss Black America contest in Indianapolis.

Spikers blast Borger for first district win

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Lady Whitefaces breezed through the Borger Lady Bulldogs 15-3, 15-3 Tuesday in a Dictrict 1-4A volleyball match. Hereford's record improves to 1-1 in district and 16-3 overall. Borger is now 0-2 and 13-8.

After losing to Dumas Saturday, the Herd found Borger much easier to deal with, but Hereford coach Brenda Reeh said she thought the team also played better.

"Our whole attitude about playing was different," she said. "We were having fun (Tuesday); celebrating the good things and not dwelling on the bad things.

"We passed the ball really well. Out of 18 times (Borger) served, 16 were passed to our setter," Reeh said.

Brek Binder led the Herd in several statistical categories with six kills, 10 service points and two aces. At one point in the second game, it seemed she was hitting everthing that came over the net.

"Brek got like 2 or 3 oversets. Those are always fun to hit," Reeh said. "She pushed Lori (Sanders) out of the way for one. At this point, I'm ready to see my hitters fight for the ball. That shows how bad they want it."

Shantel Cornelius had five kills, Kyanne Lindley had four and Jennifer Hicks added three. At the service line, Teresa Baker had three aces and seven points. Lindley and Cornelius each served for six points.

The junior varsity Herd also had little trouble with Borger, winning 15-6, 15-5.

"We just had a good match," coach Jill Harrison said. "We did well taking care of our jobs. Robyn Watts did a good job hitting; she had about four kills.

Harrison praised the serving of a pair of back-row substitutes: Audrey Tijerina and Claudia Ramirez. Tijerina had seven points in the second game. Michelle Brock, a starter, had nine points in the first game.

In other District 1-4A varsity action Tuesday, Dumas dispatched Pampa 15-6, 15-4 and Randall outlasted Caprock 7-15, 15-7, 15-5. Saturday's action had Caprock beating Pampa 15-8, 15-8 and Randall besting Borger 15-13, 15-9.

Through two matches, Dumas and Randall share the district lead at 2-0, while Hereford and Caprock are next at 1-1. Pampa and Borger both are 0-2.

The Lady Whitefaces travel to Pampa Saturday, with the junior varsity squads scheduled to start at 2 p.m.

If a volleyball could feel pain...

...it would as Hereford's Shantel Cornelius slams the ball into the block of Borger's Melinda White (12). The Herd won 15-3, 15-3 Tuesday in Whiteface Gym.

Meyer fired as Colts' coach

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Rick Venturi, with just one victory in his previous head coaching stint, is the new coach of the winless Indianapolis Colts.

Venturi replaces Ron Meyer, who was fired Tuesday, two days after an embarrassing 31-3 loss to the Seattle Seahawks dropped the Colts to 0-5. The Colts are one of only three NFL teams still winless this season.

Colts general manager Jim Irsay introduced Venturi, the team's defensive coordinator, as the "head coach for the next 11 games."

Venturi, 45, joined the Colts in 1982 as linebacker coach after going 1-31-1 in three years as head coach at Northwestern. On Tuesday, he vowed to bring "soundness and intensity" to the Colts.

His 10-year tenure with the Colts marks the fourth longest continuous stint with the team among the 107 coaches the club has had.

Also fired Tuesday was offensive coordinator and quarterback coach Leon Burtnett. Irsay said it was possible the Colts would bring in a quarterback coach and another position coach to fill out the staff.

Venturi said that while he will continue to work with the defense, he will also spend some time with the offense.

Venturi served as an assistant coach at his alma mater, Northwestern, Purdue and Illinois before becoming the head coach at Northwestern in 1978.

Meyer, who held an impromptu news conference in the parking lot outside Colts headquarters following the announcement of his firing, said his first indication that he was being dismissed came at 7 a.m. Tuesday when he saw Irsay in the office.

"Usually when a general manager shows up at seven in the morning on a Tuesday, it's not good news for the coach," Meyer said.

The Colts were 9-36 in Indianapolis before Meyer took over and compiled a 36-36 mark. He is 54-52 overall as an NFL head coach, including an 18-15 mark with the New England Patriots from 1982-84.

"I leave here with my head held high," said Meyer.

3 White HJH teams fall

Hereford Junior High's White football teams played Tuesday, with the eighth-graders in Canyon and the seventh-graders hosted Canyon. The eighth grade "A" team played to a scoreless tie, while Hereford's other three teams lost.

"We didn't score when we had the chance. We had plenty of opportunities," coach John Nino said of the eighth grade teams, adding that they played well defensively. The "B" team lost 6-0.

Coach Key Harrison's seventh grade "A" team fell 14-6. Hereford's Anthony Puente scored on an 8-yard run in the first quarter. The "B" team lost 18-0.

Man O'War was an odds-on favorite in each of his 21 races, winning all but one.

The winner of the 1985 Belmont Stakes, Creme Fraiche, was the first gelding to win the event.

Who's next? 3 others oh-fer

How long can an NFL coach survive an oh-fer?

For Ron Meyer, fired as coach of the Indianapolis Colts on Tuesday, 0-5 was enough for GM Jim Irsay to pull the trigger.

The other coaches with zeroes in the win column so far are Sam Wyche in Cincinnati (0-4), and San Diego's Dan Henning and Tampa Bay's Richard Williamson, both 0-5.

A week ago, when the Colts were 0-4, Irsay said, "The key is to progress the franchise, not make rash changes through frustration or anger."

That dreaded vote of confidence also has been extended to Henning, Williamson and Wyche.

San Diego has dropped eight straight over two seasons. Henning, in the guaranteed third year of a five-year contract, fired offensive coordinator Ted Tollner after losing the opener. But nobody is going to be firing Henning, according to GM Bobby Beathard.

"Dan is doing his best to make this a better team," Beathard said. "When you see how close we are, everybody in the organization would

"We hired him to do a job and gave him a two-year contract. We expect him to have a good team within that time frame. I think we have assembled some decent talent, but the spark has not quite ignited. I have a lot of confidence in the staff."

Cincinnati GM Mike Brown knows Wyche is feeling the 0-4 heat.

"Sam is the focal point now," Brown said. "I sympathize with him. I know how that feels."

Henning said he believes he can turn the Chargers around.

"If it were a fact that this situation was completely my responsibility, then I ought to go," Henning said. "If that's the feeling of the people who make the decisions, then I ought to go. But I don't think it is.

"There's been a lot of turnover here. There's been turnover in the front office and a drastic turnover in personnel. There hasn't been a coach in the league in the last three years that has coached more active players than I have.

"Certainly, it's not even close on offense. There's no coach who's played two or three years with basically a rookie quarterback. I'm not using that as an excuse, I'm just doing my job and I evaluate my job the way I do it. And I hope that the people who have the power to make decisions evaluate it the same way. If they stick to it, I think they'll win."

like to see what happens when we do win a game or two.

"We were supposed to be better this year than we were last year. Once this team has a win and gets going, let's see if that's true. The fans seem to think it's Dan. I don't agree with that. It's hard to pinpoint the exact problems.

"We've made a commitment to Dan. Like we said earlier, at the end of the year we'll evaluate everything. But I personally can't see any advantage to doing anything right now."

Tampa Bay general manager Phil Krueger said Williamson is not under fire for seven straight losses, five of them this season.

"I have a strong feeling that the ownership of this team is trying to develop continuity, and I don't think you develop continuity by constantly changing," Krueger said. "But as far as commitment to Richard, it's a full commitment.

Steinbrenner bumped by USOC

ATLANTA (AP) - Robert Helmick's resignation as president of the U.S. Olympic Committee has bumped controversial New York Yankees principal owner George Steinbrenner from his seat on Atlanta's 1996 Summer Olympics committee.

But Steinbrenner's replacement on the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games said Tuesday night he will search for a way to reinstate Steinbrenner.

Steinbrenner, learning of his ouster from reporters, said he is "not disappointed" by the decision by ACOG attorneys. "I got stuck in a matter of machinery."

Helmick had served in a dual capacity on the ACOG board, both as USOC president and International Olympic Committee member. Helmick retains his ACOG seat by virtue of his IOC membership.

But Steinbrenner loses his seat because room must be made for interim USOC president William J. Hybl.

Dodgers keep one-game lead

By The Associated Press

If the Los Angeles Dodgers and Atlanta Braves are feeling pennant pressure, they're sure not showing it.

With four games to go for both teams, Los Angeles still leads by one game in the NL West.

All Atlanta did Tuesday night was rally from a 6-0 first-inning deficit against Cincinnati's Jose Rijo, who hasn't lost a game at Riverfront Stadium all year. David Justice hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning off Rob Dibble to give the Braves a 7-6 victory.

"Any time you're in first place or fighting for it, you've got to have games like this," said Braves manager Bobby Cox, who repeatedly shook his head in disbelief. "You've got to have your share of them."

Meanwhile in Los Angeles, the Dodgers took the field for the third straight night knowing they needed a victory to keep sole possession of first place. They got it as Darryl Strawberry homered for the second straight night and Bob Ojeda pitched 7 1-3 innings to beat San Diego 3-1. Mike Scioscia also homered for the Dodgers.

"The main thing for us to-do is win ballgames," Strawberry said. "We have four games left, we're playing good right now. If we win the next four, it will be ours. That's how I'm approaching it."

Of the Braves' four last-inning comeback wins, this one faced the longest odds of all.

The Braves fell behind 6-0 in the first, highlighted by Joe Oliver's first career grand slam.

But Atlanta used a couple of ragged plays by Mariano Duncan, making his first career start in center field, to get within a run at 6-5 in the seventh. Then Justice did the rest.

Dibble (3-5) came on in the ninth and gave up a lead-off single to Mark Lemke. Deion Sanders pinch-ran and stole second - his second stolen base during his dual role as NFL cornerback and baseball player.

One out later, Justice came to bat and pulled his 21st homer deep over the right-field wall, only the fourth homer that Dibble has allowed this season, to keep the heat on LA. For Dibble, it was his fifth blown save in six chances.

"I think somebody wants us to win this thing other than our teammates," Braves catcher Greg Olson said. "It's tough enough to do it one time against Dibble. It's hard for you to understand and hard for us to understand. It's something you just don't do against the best relief pitcher in the game."

Mike Stanton (5-5), the fourth Braves pitcher, got the win by retiring the four batters he faced. Alejandro Pena pitched the ninth for his 13th save.

Pirates 2, Mets 1

John Smiley became a 19-game winner in a relief role. Smiley (19-8) came into a 1-1 game to relieve Zane Smith in the fourth inning by design. The Mets' Howard Johnson stole a base to reach the 30-30 club for the third time in his career.

Cardinals 3, Expos 1

Lee Smith set an NL record with his 46th save. Smith, who got the last three outs, broke the mark of 45 set by the Cardinals' Bruce Sutter in 1984.

Phillies 6, Cubs 5

John Kruk's run-scoring single with two outs in the 13th inning lifted Philadelphia past Chicago.

Giants 6, Astros 4

Matt Williams hit his 33rd home and Will Clark his 28th as San Francisco beat Houston.

Jays need win to clinch division

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

A lot of people have been waiting a long time for what could happen tonight in Toronto.

Like Joe Carter.

"We're almost down to the final say-so," Carter said after the Blue Jays clinched a tie for the AL East title Tuesday night. "It's something I've been waiting for my whole career."

Like Tom Candiotti.

"I think any pitcher here would wish he had the chance," said Candiotti, who will start this evening against California.

Like the fans.

"To have 4 million fans brought into this ballpark and not clinch in front of them would be a little disappointing," said Duane Ward, who got his 21st save in Toronto's 5-2 victory over California and preserved rookie Juan Guzman's team-record 10th straight victory.

The Blue Jays have enough advance ticket sales for tonight's home finale at SkyDome to become the first team to reach the 4 million mark in attendance. They can wrap up the title with either a victory over the Angels or another loss by Boston to Detroit.

The Red Sox lost to Detroit 8-5 Tuesday night, cutting Toronto's magic number to one. The Blue Jays lead by 4 1/2 games and have just four games left, while Boston has five remaining.

"I know Boston has to be disappointed right now. You can't taken anything for granted in baseball, but you know they're down a bit. You know they're down a lot," Toronto's Roberto Alomar said.

Guzman (10-2) gave up one run on five hits in seven innings.

Kelly Gruber hit a pair of RBI singles off Mike Fetters (2-5). The Blue Jays scored three runs in the fifth for a 4-0 lead, capped when Pat Borders bowled over catcher Ron Tingley with an elbow to the face, knocking him out of the game.

Tigers 8, Red Sox 5

Roger Clemens lost for the first time in eight weeks.

Pete Incaviglia hit a three-run homer, Dave Bergman hit a two-run drive and Travis Fryman had a solo shot.

Clemens (18-9) lasted only five innings and left trailing 6-0. The Red Sox tried to rally against Frank Tanana (12-12), finishing him with three unearned runs in the sixth.

Wade Boggs' second double of the game set up Jody Reed's two-run in the ninth. But Detroit reliever Mike Henneman closed it out.

Athletics 4, Royals 0

Jose Canseco hit his 44th home run, moving one ahead of Cecil Fielder for the major league lead.

Canseco hit a solo home run in the fourth inning. Mark McGwire later added his 22nd homer, helping Mike Moore (17-8) win.

Moore gave up five hits in 7 1-3 innings. Joe Klink and Dennis Eckersley completed the shutout, with Eckersely getting his 43rd save. Mark Gubicza (9-12) was the loser.

Twins 3, White Sox 2

Kirby Puckett's solo home run broke an eighth-inning tie.

Puckett hit his 15th homer off Melido Perez (8-7). Reliever Mark Guthrie (7-5) was the winner and Rick Aguilera got his 41st save.

Shane Mack singled home a run in the seventh off Chicago starter Wilson Alvarez, tying it at 2.

Mariners 8, Rangers 1

Jay Buhner hit his 26th homer and Greg Briley lined a three-run triple.

Dave Burba (2-2) allowed three hits in six innings. Calvin Jones pitched three innings for his second save. Oil Can Boyd (2-7) took the loss.

Yankees 3, Orioles 2

Pinch hitter John Ramos hit a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the 11th inning.

Jim Leyritz opened the 11th with a pinch-single, took second on Randy Velarde's sacrifice and moved to third on Kevin Maas' single off Jim Poole (2-1). Ramos' fly came against Mark Williamson.

Rich Monteleone (3-1) was the winner.

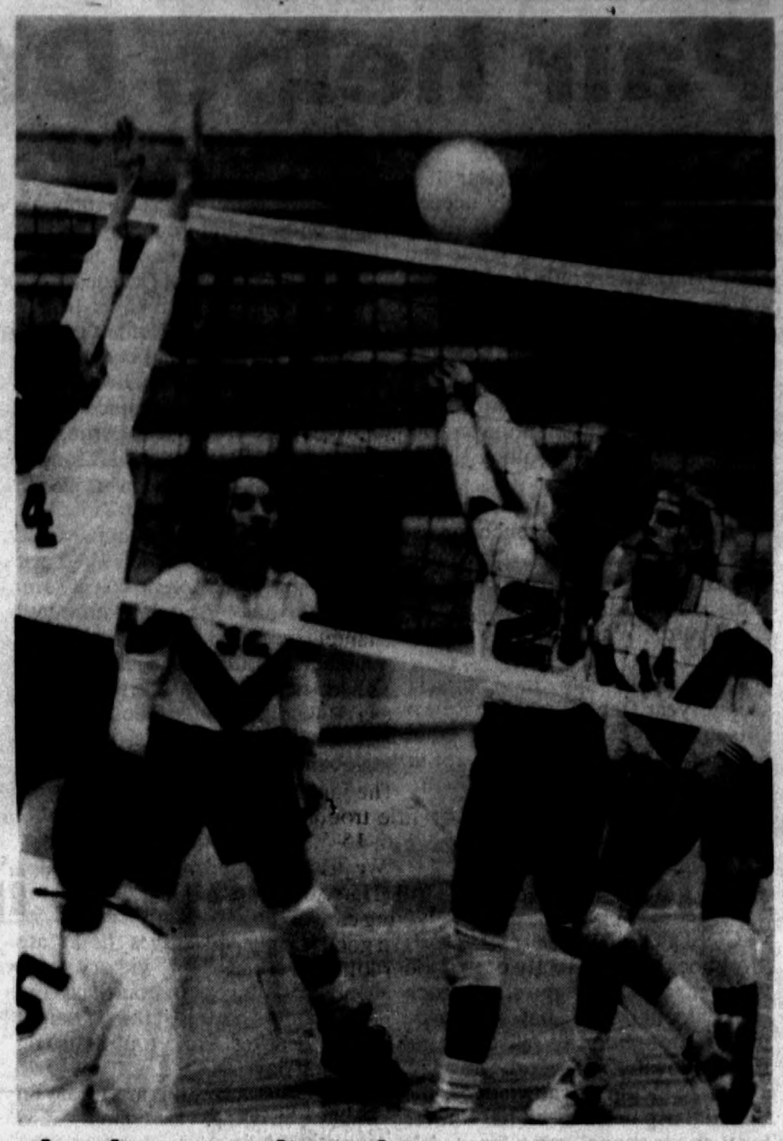

Brewers 11, Indians 0
Indians 6, Brewers 2

Cleveland tied a team record with its 102nd loss in the opener, but bounced back to avoid - temporarily, at least - setting a mark for futility.

Milwaukee took the first game as Bill Wegman (15-7) won his fourth straight decision. He pitched a seven-hitter.

Paul Molitor singled twice during a six-run fifth inning that finished Rod Nichols (2-11).

In the second game, Reggie Jefferson scored the go-ahead run in the sixth inning on a wild pitch by Darren Holmes (1-4). Dave Otto (2-8) won despite allowing 12 hits in seven innings.

Junior varsity wins

Hereford's Traci Deckard sends the ball over the net in the junior varsity's 15-6, 15-5 win over Borger Tuesday in Whiteface Gym. Looking on are Hereford's Michelle Brock (32) and Heather Kleuskens (14).

New football league formed

NEW YORK (AP) - If this all sounds vaguely familiar, that's because it is.

In the very same room where the ill-fated United States Football League was launched in 1982, another spring football league arrived Tuesday.

This one is the Professional Spring Football League, with 10 teams planning a 16-game schedule to begin on Feb. 29, 1992.

Only nine of the franchises were identified. They are Salt Lake City; Portland, Ore; Las Vegas; Albuquerque, N.M., and Little Rock, Ark., in the West and Boston, Tampa Bay, Miami-Fort Lauderdale and Columbia, S.C. in the East. The 10th team will be chosen by Nov. 1 according to Vincent Sette, president and founder of the league.

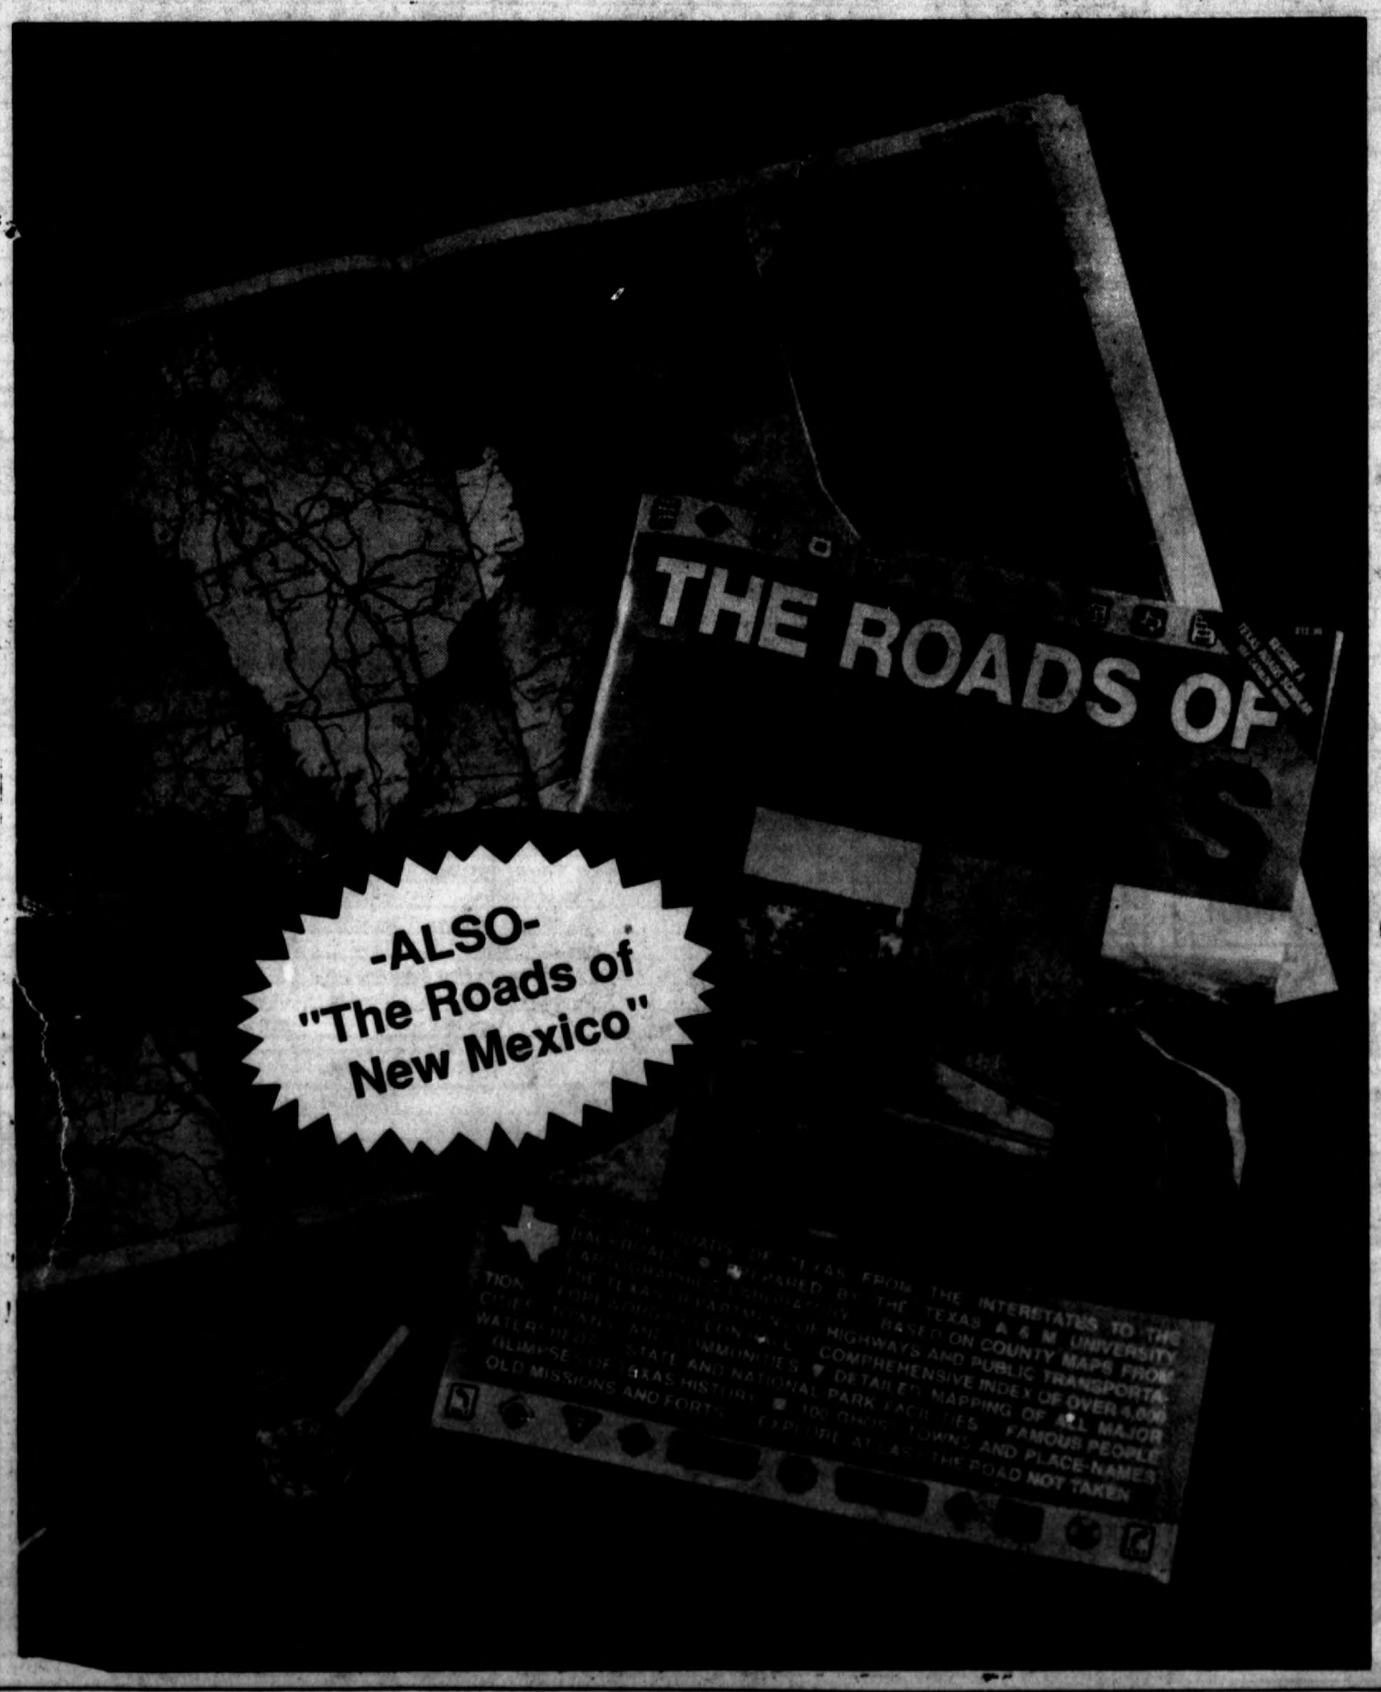

Franchise fees are $250,000 and the league will operate with a $2 million salary cap per team.

Sette, who has a background in computer sales, said there was no interest in challenging the NFL. "They are IBM," he said. "We want to be Apple."

Two veterans of the USFL wars - Judge Peter Spivak and ex-coach Walt Michaels - are on the organizational chart of the PSFL. Spivak functions as chairman of the board of directors and Michaels is the director of football operations.

Spivak questions whether the USFL really failed. "I don't think the USFL did not succeed as originally structured," he said. "It did very well. The mistake was challenging the NFL. This league makes sense. It has a different marketing approach, bringing the sport to markets that don't have it. This is like a business expansion."

Pair helps Del Valle end losing streak

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer

If Del Valle desparately needed leaders to avoid stretching its losing streak to 14 games, Eric White and James Harris were only too happy to oblige.

The duo combined for six touchdowns Friday night, boosting the Class 4A Cardinals to a 43-14 walloping of 5A New Braunfels. The effort earned them mention in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

White completed 14 of 32 passes for 275 yards and five touchdowns, including four to Harris, who caught 11 passes for 236 yards. In addition to his scoring passes of 64, 25, 12, 33 and 7 yards, White ran for a 2-yard score.

"It's right on time," said second-year Del Valle coach Rance Olison. "When you run that run-and-shoot you know it's got to click sometime and it finally clicked."

Olison said the Cardinals took advantage of single coverage against Harris.

"They were trying to play us man-on-man and you can't do that with a player like James," he said.

Marcus Sanders of Denton wasn't even sure he would recover from a knee injury in time for Friday's match against Lewisville, but he ended up playing the game of his life.

Sanders, who had strained a knee the previous week against Arlington, rushed for 213 yards and all four of the Broncos' scores in a 28-25 victory.

"He responded to treatment and was able to begin working out Wednesday," Denton coach Jim Bateman said. "We didn't know until Thursday if he'd be ready to go."

The 5-11, 205-pound junior carried 35 times, including scoring runs of 4, 2, 2 and 53 yards. The 53-yarder came with 6:23 remaining and proved to be the game winner.

"He's a tremendous athlete with good quickness and good speed," said Lewisville coach Ronnie Gage. "It just seemed like the more he got the ball the tougher he was. I felt like he was the difference."

Cedric Coleman of Grapeland scored six touchdowns in a 52-16 victory over Centerville. Coleman, who carried 11 times for 164 yards, scored on runs of 23, 49, 7, 6 and 9 yards. He also returned an interception 20 yards for a touchdown.

In other outstanding performances:

-Running back Chris Waskom of Corpus Christi Flour Bluff carried 21 times for 224 yards and a touchdown in a 41-6 victory over Laredo Martin.

-Isaiah Lee of El Paso Andress ran for 317 yards and touchdowns of 72, 58, 28, 87 and 3 yards in a 40-14 victory over El Paso Jefferson.

Aggies have trouble in Lubbock

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Lubbock hasn't exactly been good to the Texas A&M Aggies, and coach R.C. Slocum says that should be reason enough for his players to get fired up to play Texas Tech Saturday.

But, Slocum acknowledges, the biennial trip to Lubbock has "never been an emotional game for us. It's never been a big rival game for us."

And the results have shown that.

Since 1979, Tech has won four of the last six home games against the Aggies, and all six have been decided by less than a touchdown.

The Aggies haven't beaten Texas Tech in Lubbock since 1985. They lost 27-21 in 1987 and 27-24 in 1989.

"I want it to be as big a game for us as it is for them," Slocum said.

The No. 23 Aggies (2-1) are coming off a 34-7 victory over hapless Southwestern Louisiana. The Red Raiders have lost three straight since beating Fullerton State on opening day.

"We just have to concentrate on what we're doing," said senior A&M quarterback Bucky Richardson, who is still hobbled by a sprained arch but will start for the second straight week.

"We've let their crowd get to us in the past. We know what to expect now. We've played before a lot bigger crowds."

Slocum said a lack of motivation has played a key role in the Aggies' losses in Lubbock.

"In the past we just kind of show up, go out there and play," Slocum said. "Most of our players have never been to Lubbock. The only time our players even think about Texas Tech is once a year when we play them."

Tech is 0-1 in the SWC after falling 30-16 to Texas Christian at home last week.

The Aggies not only are healing from injuries but are trying to cope with the death of kicker James Glenn, who collapsed at practice last week.

"I think we're back to normal," Slocum said. "But as a team, we're still feeling our way right now and that worries me."

The Aggies, nevertheless, have scored at least 34 points in each of their first three games and are leading the conference in scoring with a 37.7 average.

Toastmasters win awards

Area III Governor for Toastmasters International Jigger Rowland (c) presents Chris Leonard (l) and Roy Shave (r) with first place trophies won in the are contest held recently in Canyon. Leonard competed in humorous speaking and Shave in evaluations. They will compete in the division competition in Amarillo. The three men are member of Hereford Toastmasters.

If the sun of all starlight that falls on the Earth could be concentrated in one object, it would equal a 100-watt bulb seen from a distance of 613 feet, or the length of two football fields.

The ballpoint pen was invented by two Hungarian brothers—George and Ladislao—who agreed on the advantage of quick-drying ink for use in pens. They constructed the prototype and in 1938 applied for a patent.

Accent on Health

After taking giant steps forward in virtually cradicating contagious childhood diseases, America recently slipped backwards as evidenced in a nation-wide measles epidemic of at least 45,000 cases and 120 deaths reported during 1989 and 1990.

While 70-80 percent of American children routinely receive their immunizations on schedule, only 50 percent of the children in some inner-city and rural areas are vaccinated by their second birthday. Medical experts agree that children must begin the immunization process at two month old in order to be protected when they are most vulnerable to disease.

The nurses, vaccines and programs to inoculate all children are readily available as demonstrated by the fact that more than 95 percent of children are vaccinated before they enter school. While free and local health care is affordable and available, these services are not always utilized by at-risk groups.

The single most crucial component of the immunization campaign is to educate and involve parents. Many parents are unfamiliar with the possible fatal complications of measles. With single-parent families so prevalent and with too many parents submerged in problems such as drugs and alcohol abuse, AIDS, and homelessness, a child's immunization is neglected. For some immigrant parents, language and cultural differences stand in the way of their children getting adequate immunizations.

The second vital component is to make the vaccine accessible to preschool children. All 50 states and the District of Columbia have immunization laws or requirements for school entry and almost all require immunization for children attending day-care centers.

Since vaccines may not be readily accessible to all preschoolers, extraordinary efforts must be taken to ensure that the children get their vaccinations at an early-enough age.

The Centers for Disease Control (CDC) is experimenting with a variety of approaches-- "express lanes" for vaccinations in public clinics, making vaccinations available in emergency rooms, and making vaccinations a service available through the Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) and Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

States and cities, with federal assistance, have approached the measles crisis with aggressive public immunization programs. For instance, vaccinating all unvaccinated infants starting at six months of age whenever they are brought into public clinics, sponsoring Kids Care Fairs where children are immunized and screened for health problems, and mobilizing well-baby clinics to give inoculations.

Some clinics are also extending their hours for working parents or they are setting up outposts in local churches, schools and housing projects.

To supplement personal involvement, the Bush Administration has launched an unprecedented Immunization Initiative. The Centers for Disease Control (CDC) immunization budget has more than doubled from over $98 million in 1988 to a current budget of $218 million. President Bush has also requested an additional increase of $40 million for 1992 for the immunization program.

Included in the Administration's plan is a focus on Immunization Action Meetings to facilitate the development of local plans to immunize at least 90 percent of the Nation's infants before their second birthday.

Local, community-wide efforts combined with the federal initiative have a chance at reaching the most "unreachable" children, but their effectiveness depends on the publics involvement. As stated by the National Immunization Campaign theme, "Before it's too late. Participate."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Some time ago, you printed a letter from a woman in Madison, Wis., whose husband hadn't paid taxes for seven years. She was worried that the Internal Revenue Service would catch up with them and wrote to you. You said, "Consult a tax expert."

I came across the enclosed article by Susan S. Katcher in "Gargoyle," the bulletin of the University of Wisconsin Law School. I thought your readers might like to see what happened.--Z.S.R. II, Sparta, Wis.

DEAR Z.S.R.: Thanks for your sharp eye. Here's the article:

"Last year the anguish that tax problems can cause was brought to the attention of columnist Ann Landers, in a letter signed 'Worried in Madison, Wis.'

"Anne Irish, wife of Charles Irish, professor of tax-related courses at the University of Wisconsin Law School, brought the letter to her husband's attention and suggested that perhaps the law school might offer assistance.

"We contacted Ann Landers' office and learned that the desperate letter writer was anonymous. The letter was attributed to Madison, Wis., because of the postmark. Professor Irish's assistant called Genie Campbell of the Wisconsin State journal, who printed this sidebar four days later:

"Legal aid offered to "Worried" who didn't pay taxes. Help is offered by the UW-Madison Law School to the woman who is frightened because she and her husband haven't paid taxes in seven years. She asked Ann Landers for advice. Faculty members in the law school will represent this couple without charge. If you are that couple, contact Genie Campbell, features editor of the State Journal. She will refer you to the right people. Confidentiality guaranteed.'

"Meanwhile, Professor Irish told his students that he would offer credit to any interested students willing to help the letter writer. Three second-year students signed on: Val Bailey-Rihn, John Fricke and Kevin Whitmore. They were joined by a third-year student, Walt Skipper. Both Val and Walt were certified public accountants. Kevin had worked in an IRS office before going to law school.

"The identity of the letter writer remained unknown for only a short while. Genie Campbell got many responses. She referred two to the law school. One was the person who actually wrote to Ann Landers, the other was a family whose story was so sad that Genie asked the law school students to help them. They did.

"As for the woman who wrote to Ann Landers, the law school helped her and her husband complete federal and state tax returns for 1989, which enabled them to deal with their outstanding tax years. The law school dropped out of the picture after the woman contacted the IRS regional office and arranged an ongoing pay-back schedule. The second family found out they had a refund coming.

"With the combined help of the Wisconsin State Journal, Genie Campbell and the law students, the law school was able to help two distraught families."

Dear Readers: Howzat for a day brightener? What a great place, that University of Wisconsin! I'm proud to say I received an honorary degree from the U. of W. in 1985.

Bless you, Professor and Mrs. Irish. Ditto those terrific students who signed on to help, and kudos to that compassionate features editor, Genie Campbell. She certainly came to the rescue.

Foundation problems common in Texas

Cracked walls and unexpected split level floors have prompted the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the college of Architecture at Texas A&M University to do some groundwork for the state's consumers.

Foundation problems in many Texas homes can cause damage and loss of property value, but there are some alternatives and solutions for consumers.

"Aesthetic qualities attract many buyers to a home, but a stable foundation is the most important," said Dr. Susan Quiring, housing specialist with the Extension Service.

"Buying a home is the largest single investment that many people will ever make," she said. "And a home is only as good as its foundation."

"A house with cracked foundation decreases in value about two-thirds, sometimes overnight," said Dr. Charles Godwin, structural engineer and senior lecturer in the construction science department at Texas A&M.

"It's like a big broken cookie and those pieces have little resistance to external forces. Once a foundation cracks, it's difficult to recover."

The Extension Service and the construction science department have produced three publications with basic information on foundations to assist homeowners, potential homebuyers and homebuilders: "Maintenance of Existing Foundations on Expansive Clay Soils," "What Prospective Custom Homebuyers Should Know About Foundations" "Homebuilder Recommendations for Slab-on Grade Foundations."

"These articles warn the homeowner, buyer and builder to upgrade the design, construction and maintenance of foundations os that they will have a better chance of avoiding frequently experienced problems," Godwin said.

Some Texas areas are free of foundation problems, Quiring said. Unfortunately, much of the state has clay soil which expands with enormous pressure when wet and shrinks when drying. This causes foundations to settle and crack, buckle in the middle or move laterally.

"Distress cracks in brick veneer exteriors and gypsum boar interior wall surfaces ar usually the first indicators that foundation movement is occurring," Quiring said. "Signs inside the house include cracked floors, walls and ceiling, door and window jamming and many other problems."

Clay soil is not the only culprit of foundation problems, the publications indicate. Newer methods of construction also contribute to the woes of homeowners.

"Difficulties with residential foundations have plagued Texas for years, but problems associated with foundation movements have intensified since the introduction of the slab-on-grade foundation in the late 1940s," said Godwin.

Today most builders in the state have accepted this standard type of foundation designed to support heavy brick exterior walls and resist the movement of the soil under the foundation, according to Godwin. However, some "slab-on grade" foundations are built to minimal standards only.

In areas with expansive clay soil, this can result in problems for the homeowner long after the builder has finished and warranties, if any have expired.

"Meeting the minimum building codes," Godwin said. "If we do nothing else, we need to upgrade the codes to better prepare the site and make the foundation, itself, sufficiently stiff with good construction to better resist inherent soil movement."

The problem exists in virtually all areas of the state where expansive clay soil occurs near the surface, including the Dallas, Houston and San Antonio areas, according to Godwin.

Slab-on-grade foundations are more economical and quickly construction, he said. But modern heavy brick exteriors and gypsum wall and ceiling coverings crack when foundations shift.

Many of the older wood frame homes in Texas were made with wood sheathing or siding that were more flexible. The wood frame homes were built on short masonry piers or wooden posts and could be re-leveled and repaired much easier than those on concrete slab foundations.

"The single most important thing to remember in maintaining foundations on grade is to keep the moisture content in the bearing soil constant all year round," Godwin said. "During long, dry summers, foundations crack due to soil shrinkage because the owners fail to keep the areas adjacent to the foundation continually damp--a critical factor."

The foundation publications can be ordered through county Extension Service offices at a cost of $1 to $2 each.

Richards proclaims activities week

AUSTIN, Texas- With just under 1.3 million Texas high school students taking part in University Interscholastic League (UIL) programs, Governor Ann Richards has declared the week of October 13-20 as Texas High School Activities Week.

"Participation in activities such as athletics, speech, music, debate and drama generally leads to positive development for students and often to superior achievement," Richards said in announcing Texas High School Activities Week.

The governor also added that "participation in extracurricular activities often contributes greatly to the social development and interaction of all high school students. This social development benefits local communities by channeling young people's interests and talents into positive efforts and instilling in them an early sense of civic duty and community pride."

This years event marks the twelfth observance of National High School Activities Week. National High School Activities Week was developed by the National Federation of State High School Associations as a means to increase the public's awareness of values and needs of activity programs.

Each day during he week has been designated to receive special recognition. October 14 has been designated as "Officials Day", October 15 as "Speech and Music Day", October 16 as "Chemical Health Awareness Day", October 17 as "Sportsmanship Day", October 18 as "Coaches Day", and October 19 as "Fund Raising Day."

The UIL is the oldest and largest state high school organization of its type in the nation. In its 82nd year, the UIL offers programs ranging from typing to tennis, cross to calculator contest. So sweeping is the UIL program that one out of every tow graduation seniors participates voluntarily in a UIL contest prior to graduation. School officials put that number at half a million students participating annually.

Hints from Heloise

Q. The salad greens I buy spoil before I get a chance to eat all of them. How can I keep them fresh longer? — Linda Frederick, El Paso, Texas

A. It's usually best not to wash any vegetables before storage because the moisture causes them to deteriorate. However, if you do, be sure they are completely dry and place a couple of paper towels in the plastic bag with them to absorb any excess moisture.

Lining the bottom of the veggie drawer with newspaper and then with layers of paper towels will absorb moisture and help keep the greens and vegetables from spoiling quickly. — Heloise

STICKY PLASTIC WRAP

Dear Heloise: Plastic wrap was driving me crazy! I was forever losing the end, and trying to find it was impossible, so I ended up throwing the box right into the garbage.

Now I have found that if I wrap some tape around three of my fingers with the sticky side out, take the roll of plastic wrap out of the box and roll it around in my hand, the cut end will come apart and stick to the tape.

This makes it easy to unroll. — Virginia Kelley, Colorado Springs, Colo.

HANDY RECIPE HINT

Dear Heloise: I seem to collect cookbooks and like to read them as one does a novel.

When I decide to use a recipe, I date it and write any changes I might make (the container used, how many it makes or serves, etc. — some recipes don't have this information). I also indicate whether it's worth using again.

If it is really good and I think it might become a favorite, I type it on a file card and put it in my box of tried-and-true family favorites. — Anna Jean Wilson, Ashland, Kan.

CHOPPING HARD-BOILED EGGS

Dear Heloise: I was in a hurry to chop hard-boiled eggs for egg-salad sandwiches. I spied my wire pastry blender in the drawer and decided to use it. I actually enjoyed chopping them and it took half the time. — Mrs. M.C.P., Ft. Myers, Fla.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: You are my last hope. I have tried desperately to get medical information on what alcohol abuse will do to a person. Everywhere I call or go has only information on AA or Al-Anon, but nothing on what really happens to your body and brain.

I've tried doctors and they either didn't have anything written or it was in medical terms I could not understand. You had a column once that briefly mentioned impotence and damage to nerves to the legs.

My fiance has been abusing himself with alcohol for 12 years. I have tried every possible way to get him to realize he needs treatment. He complains of pains in his legs after a weekend binge. He also throws up blood and has blood in his bowel movements. His DTs are so bad he honestly thinks he's going to die. He vomits so hard he can barely breath in between.

Why would a person abuse himself this way? But it's a disease, which is why it can't be controlled, right? If you have any information on what it does to your liver, kidneys, stomach and brain — anything — please send it.

DEAR READER: Your fiance is a drug addict. People who are that dependent on alcohol are addicted. They need to be treated in a center that can help them recover from alcohol abuse. If you can, get him to check into such a facility for help.

I am a strong supporter of Alcoholics Anonymous, but when a person has such medical problems as well, he will need medical support and perhaps later such a support group.

Alcohol is damaging to almost all cells in the body. It will cause your brain to shrink and can be a cause of premature senility. It can cause inflammation of almost all nerves in the body, causing leg pains and can damage even skeletal muscles.

Many men are given pause when they realize alcohol significantly decreases their masculinity. They often don't realize how bad their sexual performance is because they are like the drunk driver who thinks his driving is improved, when in fact he is a menace on the highway.

Alcohol is the most common cause of cirrhosis of the liver, which is one of the leading causes of death. It damages the heart muscle and can even cause heart failure.

You will find exactly what you are looking for in Special Report 84, Understanding Alcohol and Its Effects, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/84, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have a fatty tumor in front of my left ear at the jaw hinge. It is about the size of the end of my finger and not very noticeable. It has been there for more than 20 years. For cosmetic reasons, I would like to have it removed. What type of doctor should I consult?

DEAR READER: Just ask your family doctor about it on your next regular visit. I presume you do have one annually. If it is a simple sebaceous cyst, he may be able to remove it with a small incision. A sebaceous cyst is formed by the closure of a sebaceous gland. The cyst accumulates the sebum. They are rather common. If not, he may wish to refer you to a surgeon.

Again, it makes a difference what causes the lump. If it has been there for 20 years without change, I would not consider it to be important other than for cosmetic reasons. If it should involve the parotid gland in front of your ear and at the angle of the jaw, care would be necessary to be certain the facial nerve fibers are not damaged if surgery is done.
