Trials Moved

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) - Attorneys for 19 men indicted in connection with alleged misuse of federal manpower funds are being notified that the trials will be moved to Corpus Christi.

A spokesman for State District Judge Harry Lewis said here today that letters notifying the lawyers of the change of venue were being placed in the mail.

The men were indicted after a court of inquiry here investigated the program and related matters. The rare court of inquiry proceeding received widespread media coverage.

Lance Denies Gain

ATLANTA (AP) - Bert Lance, who received the "good ol' boy" seal of approval from President Carter during and after his fight to remain federal budget director, has been accused of covering up questionable loans to himself and his relatives made through two Georgia banks he once ran.

But spokesman for Lance, who reportedly was in Australia and unavailable for comment, say he realized no "personal financial gain" from the transactions.

Man Held In Holdup

MESQUITE (AP) - The First State Bank of Mesquite was robbed today, but police had three units on hand almost immediately and arrested a man within three blocks of the bank.

A substantial amount of money was found in the man's automobile. Officers said they found a pistol they believe was used in the holdup.

Open To Job Offers

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - Arkady N. Shevchenko, the Soviet U.N. official who broke with his government and refused to go home, has indicated that he's open to job offers after resigning from the United Nations with a year's severance pay in his pocket and a book contract to fulfill.

The SDN Column

You've probably heard the expression that there's bound to be some good in nearly everything if we take the trouble to look for it.

So, we should not have been startled to see a strange statement concerning water and pollution. It came from an environmental pollution expert and is included in an article published in "Ecolibrium," a publication of Shell Oil Co. The author is Philip W. West, identified as a man who has worked all of his life on pollution detection.

"If the Mississippi River, passing Baton Rouge and New Orleans, were distilled water, Oysters Rockefeller and Oysters Bienville would never have been invented, because there would be few, if any, oysters in the Gulf to challenge the epicure. The polluted river provides the copper, iron, zinc and organic matter required for the growth of oysters. Also shrimp, crab, pompano, trout, red snapper, red fish, grouper, flounder and the many other delicacies that abound in the Gulf waters derive their nutrition from the murky, contaminated, or polluted waters that feed into the sea...."

On the other hand, the same writer says that commercial fishing is not profitable in the clear, lovely Bahamian waters, and the sport fishermen visiting the islands drop their hooks in the passing Gulf stream to find the swordfish, bonita and tarpon they seek.

Pollution has long been considered an ugly word and it has become even more of an irritant in recent years as concern for the environment has attracted attention. But it is obvious that man cannot live without it, provided it is harnessed with acceptable quantities and is put to proper use. Such minerals as copper and zinc especially are notorious as toxic materials, yet the human body requires some of both to function properly, or even exist. The problem is that man doesn't do a good job of managing these resources. Thus, we find ourselves eliminating minerals from certain items and at the same time taking supplemental vitamins, etc., to make up for a lack of trace minerals in our diet.

Scaffold Accident Kills 51

ST. MARYS, W. Va. (AP) - A metal construction scaffold inside a power company cooling tower collapsed and plunged about 150 feet to the ground today, killing at least 51 workers, state police said.

"They just fell like dominoes," a witness said.

"I looked up and men were screaming and hollering."

State Police Corporal R.J. Taylor, in charge of operations at the scene, said at least 51 were known dead and rescuers still were searching for more bodies at the base of the huge circular tower. Police said some of the victims were trapped beneath the debris.

Frank Keeton, local office manager for Research Cottrell, the Bound Brook, N.J. company that had subcontracted to build the tower, earlier had confirmed 45 fatalities.

"There are at least that many," Keeton said.

Monongahela Power Co., for whom the tower was being built, said the structure was about one-third completed. A spokesman said the diameter at the base was 360 feet and the tower was to be 430 feet tall when finished.

Witnesses said the scaffold, which spanned the inside of the circular water tower, started peeling away before it fell.

George Morrison, an engineer, said "I was on the ground when it started making noise. It was just a roar."

Another witness said of the doomed men. "They knew what was happening, but there wasn't anything they could do about it."

A short time after the disaster, 21 bodies wrapped in khaki blankets were lined up on plastic sheets at the site near this town on the Ohio River in northwestern West Virginia.

Harry Morgan, chief of volunteer fire department at Belmost, confirmed that the station was being used as a temporary morgue, but refused to say how many bodies were there.

Asked whether there were any survivors of the fall, Morgan said, "I don't think so."

St. Marys City Manager Clifford Cunningham said authorities "called for all the emergency equipment we have in the county."

Stock Market Pulls Back

NEW YORK (AP)-The stock market ran into some selling today and pulled back a bit after the explosive rally of the past two weeks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen more than 70 points over the last 10 sessions to its highest closing level in nearly five months, slipped 4.68 to 832.29 by noontime today.

Coup Staged Against Daoud

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - Rebel forces launched an attack against key government buildings in Kabul today with tanks and small arms in an apparent coup attempt against Afghanistan President Mohammed Daoud's government, diplomatic sources in New Delhi reported.

Fighting was reported concentrated around the Defense Ministry and the Royal Palace compound, which includes Daoud's residence. Bodies were seen scattered throughout the vicinity.

The French Consulate was destroyed by fire from several tanks, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

They said the fighting began about noon local time - 2:30 a.m. EST - as rebel forces using tanks and armored personnel carriers rushed the Royal Palace, the Defense Ministry and the army's First Corps headquarters. Heavy exchanges of gunfire lasted three hours, then lessened, they said.

Daoud foiled a coup bid by the military in December 1976.

A lieutenant general, he took power in a military revolution in July 1973, deposing the king, Muhammad Zahir Shah. Daoud, the king's cousin and brother-in-law, had served previously as head of government in 1953-63.

Afghanistan, a mountain-and-desert nation of 20 million people wedged between Pakistan, the Soviet Union and Iran, was ruled by a monarchy for centuries before Daoud's 1973 coup. It is generally regarded as one of the world's most isolated, tradition-bound and poorest nations.

The Afghans have long followed a neutral foreign policy, receiving aid from both the Soviets and the Americans. Afghan-Pakistani friction in the past has been a major problem for the Kabul government, but Daoud in recent years has improved relations with Afghanistan's southern neighbor.

Military Drug Study Is Urged

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Saying the use of hard drugs among U.S. servicemen "is increasing at a serious rate," the White House urged Congress today to reinstate a currently prohibited program of random testing of military personnel for heroin addiction.

White House drug abuse official Lee Dogoloff made the request in testimony prepared for delivery to the House Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, which is holding a hearing on military drug abuse.

Dogoloff told the committee that the White House considers random sampling of military personnel as a reliable tool in the fight against drug abuse.

"We are convinced of the efficacy of random urinalysis as a deterrent based on the overwhelming experience" of military and civilian law enforcement personnel, he said.

Involuntary urine tests for evidence of drug abuse was common in the early 1970s, but was challenged in military courts on grounds it violated the constitutional rights of soldiers. Congress ordered the random tests stopped in 1976.

Dogoloff said surveys of enlisted personnel in Europe showed they had no objection to random testing as long as everyone participated. And supervisors said they would welcome the tests, he added, because it relieved them of the responsibility for selecting - and thereby possibly prejudging-servicemen for drug tests.

In a White House memo released today, Dogoloff's boss criticized the Defense Department for doing too little to discourage drug abuse among American GIs, especially those in overseas assignments.

The memo from President Carter's chief adviser on drug abuse, Dr. Peter Bourne, to Defense Secretary Harold Brown cites a series of indicators of worldwide increases in drug use among American servicemen and women.

Polling Place For Box 18 Is Moved

The polling place for Precinct 18 in the Democratic Party Primary has been moved across the street to Snyder Junior High School, Hilton Lamber, County Democratic Chairman, has announced.

Originally, the El Paso Avenue Fire Station had been designated as the site for Box 18 voting This precinct covers Southwest Snyder north of 37th Street.

Lambert said there will be more room in the junior high building than in the fire station, and the additional space prompted him to move the polling place. However, he had to cut through some red tape to accomplish the move. Finally, he was put in contact with David Hunter, attorney for the voter section of the civil rights division of the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C., who okayed the move.

Lambert said Box 18 voters will cast ballots in the hallway of the junior high building and the precinct convention will be held in the junior high auditorium. Precinct conventions for voting boxes in Snyder are set for 7 p.m. on the primary election day, May 6. Those in rural areas will hold their precinct conventions at 2 p.m.

Report Due On Building Plans

Cogdell Memorial Hospital's board of managers is due to get a report on plans for the new addition to the hospital at their regular session tonight. Cy Miller, administrator, said he hoped to have a report on several last-minute details.

The plans are due to be ready to go to prospective bidders early next month.

Also, the board is due to consider an application for an addition to the hospital's medical staff.

The meeting is set for 7 p.m. in the board room at the hospital.

New Taxes Not Issue, Bitsy Hill Declares

"New taxes are not an issue in the governor's race," said Elizabeth "Bitsy" Hill, wife of gubernatorial candidate John Hill, in a campaign speech this morning at the Scurry County agricultural strike office. Jim Baum, candidate for 17th District Congressman, also spoke at the informal coffee attended by about 50-60 people.

Mrs. Hill told the assembly, composed primarily of farmers businessmen and teachers, that John Hill will veto any tax increases or proposed new taxes if he is elected governor. "You will find that John Hill is a tight manager" she said.

The Attorney General's wife said that as governor her husband would be a leader for the farmers. "A farm policy insuring farmer's a fair price should have been worked out two or three years ago. Briscoe should not have waited until the thing reached a crisis level."

She said that another farm policy should be started now since the present one has achieved only limited success.

She also said that Hill would work for property tax relief for farmers and ranchers and would push for reduction of the inheritance tax which she said was pushing young farmers off their families' land.

Education would be Hill's top priority during the 1979-81 legislative sessions if he were elected governor, she said.

"Our teacher's salaries and fringe benefits are not keeping pace with national averages. Unless we maintain strong support for education at the state level, our homeowners, farmers and other property taxpayers will continue to bear larger tax burdens to finance the local share of educational costs."

John Hill's wife said that the petroleum industry was a cornerstone of the state's booming economy.

"We live in the number one oil and gas producing state in our nation. Yet our governor has failed to make our voice heard in the drafting of a national energy policy."

She said her husband believed in a production-

WTC Paper Third In JCPA Contest

Western Texas College's Western Texan staff placed third over-all in newspaper sweepstakes in Division I of the 26th annual Texas Junior College Press Association Conference April 24 at Arlington. Grayson College earned first with 47 points, and McLennan Community College was second with 44. WTC totaled 22, followed by Blinn College 21, Temple Junior College 11, San Jacinto College Northeast 8, and Midland College 2.

Other two-year schools in the division did not score.

Staff members winning first places were Rocky Alexander, San Angelo freshman, advertising, and Kay Ellington, currently Angelo State University sophomore from Snyder editorial writing.

Second place awards went to Cody Bell, Rankin freshman, news photography, and Jill Palmer, Big Bend National Park former student, feature writing.

Students winning third places were Diane Wright, Brownfield sophomore, page makeup; Joe Boldon, Lubbock freshman, sports photography and Kathy Spencer, Anson graduate, in-depth writing.

The Western Texas staff also received third place in headline writing for an entire issue.

Attending were Alexander, Bell and Wright. Mike McBride, associate professor of journalism, accompanied the group.

Student Hit By Auto Near High School

Reportedly returning to school from her lunch break early Wednesday afternoon, 16-year-old Denisa Palmer was involved in a car-pedestrian accident as she was attempting to cross a street near the high school, police reported.

She was listed in good condition late Thursday morning at Cogdell Memorial Hospital. A hospital spokesman reported the girl was being held for observation.

The mishap occurred at the intersection of 38th St. and Tiger Drive, and involved a 1966 Chevrolet driven by Jina Sumruld.

The mishap was logged at 12:33 p.m. yesterday.

In other reports, Elaine Brooks told officers that a set of $50 hubcaps were removed from her car while the vehicle was parked at Cogdell Hospital. That incident was reported to police at 7:39 p.m.

Two other traffic mishaps were also investigated Wednesday.

One occurred in the parking lot of the College Ave. Dairy Queen at 2:56 p.m. Involved in it were a 1970 Ford driven by Laura Rollins of Ira and a 1971 Plymouth driven by Lethia Sparks.

The other mishap took place at 4:11 p.m. in the 2200 block of 37th St. and involved a 1973 Chrysler driven by Ivory Grear and a 1970 Oldsmobile driven by Hilda Contreras.

Officers Find Tools Valued At $1,000

Covered by foliage in a part of the Green Hill Addition in North Snyder, an estimated $1,000 worth of tools were recovered by police last night.

The tools, officers said, are believed to be the same tools taken from Jerry Loper last week. Loper reported the theft to police early Saturday morning. Reports filed at the time of the theft indicate the tools were removed from Loper's pickup truck parked at his 907 24th St. home.

Although not formally arrested, a 20-year-old man was taken into police custody, questioned, and released. Charges against the man are expected to be filed later, officers said.

Local AAM Delegates Are Back

Returning from a National meeting of the American Agriculture Movement in Oklahoma City, Okla., this week Bill Houston reported that several resolutions were adopted dealing with organizational financing within the movement.

Houston, a striking local farmer, attended the meeting Monday. "Basically," he said, "we adopted some resolutions for financing the movement in the future and adopted a national policy of keeping two people (AAM representatives) in Washington, D.C., at all times."

The Oklahoma City meeting was important, he said, because it showed that agriculture is still a paramount issue.

"It (the meeting) means that we had three or four thousand people to take enough interest to attend. The movement hasn't died. It's still growing," said Houston.

Also attending the meeting from Scurry County were Bo Robinson and Jimmy Robinson.

4-Month Jail Term Levied

A guilty plea yesterday in 132nd District Court netted Pedro Perez Silva a four-month term in the Scurry County jail and a $500 fine.

The guilty plea was entered to a felony charge of driving while intoxicated. Silva was arrested on the charge Feb. 11.

Brownsville Bank Application Filed

AUSTIN (AP) - An application for a new state bank in Brownsville has been filed with the state banking department.

Banking commissioner Robert Stewart said the proposed Sunrise Bank would be located on Farm 802.

It would have capital of $650,000, surplus of $650,000 and reserves of $200,000.

Effort To Free Hess Rekindled

AUSTIN (AP)-An Austin lawyer has rekindled his three-year effort to have Nazi war criminal Rudolph Hess released from Spandau prison in West Berlin.

"Rudolph Hess, we feel, is a man who has been forgotten by history," attorney Merrell Frazer Jr. said Wednesday. "Rudolph Hess was the only man in history indicted, tried, convicted and imprisoned for crimes against peace."

Frazer and Hollywood writer-producer Eugene Logan held a news conference on Hess's 84th birthday. Logan has completed a film script about Hess and flew here to talk with Frazer after seeing him on the NBC "Today Show."

"I have high hopes that if anything will get Hess released, it's a film. Because it's something you can see," said Logan.

Although Spandau prison is in the British sector of West Berlin, the prison is controlled by the United States, France, Great Britain and Russia.

Hess' release must be agreed upon unanimously, but Russia is holding out, Frazer said.

Jim Baum who is running for the congressional seat being vacated by retiring Omar Burleson, told the crowd that he was backing farmers 100 per cent.

"Although I'm being outspent 300 to one by one of my opponents I'm now running in the top three because people believe the same way I do."

Baum said he was for a firm deregulation policy on oil and gas. "We must have something better than the wish-washy policies the congress is now kicking around." He said that a seven per cent inflation rate is intolerable and that the 45 million dollars that went to the OPEC nations was a prime factor behind that high inflation rate.

The Big Spring broadcaster said he also wanted to stop the drift toward becoming a welfare state and to curtail bureaucracy.

"The taxpayers are getting caught in the middle," he said.

Baum said his door-to-door campaign to the 33 counties of the 17th District was going even better than he had planned. Baum voiced support for the causes of school teachers but said he would not support a law allowing teachers to strike.

Rubin Plans Private Wedding

NEW YORK (AP)-Jerry Rubin, who has made some news himself, is to marry someone whose work is the news.

The wedding, however, will be very private. So private that the reception will be held May 21, three weeks after the wedding, says his fiancee, Mimi Leonard.

Rubin, 39, who gained fame as a student revolutionary in the 1960s, looked very clean-cut as he posed for photographers on Wednesday.

Political Power Can Save Bases

WASHINGTON (AP)-Thirteen years ago the Pentagon said the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard would be closed. The defense secretary said his decision was "absolutely, unequivocally without qualification, irrevocable."

The shipyard, near Portsmouth, N.H., is still at work and apparently out of danger. But it shows how a base tagged by the Pentagon for elimination can be saved by the application of political power.

That power-some call it clout-will get another test soon, as the Pentagon has proposed base cuts and combinations at 107 installations in 31 states to save an estimated $337 million a year.

Congressmen from many of the affected areas already are attacking the plan, announced on Wednesday, that would result in the loss of 23,200 jobs-14,600 military and 8,600 civilian.

The Portsmouth facility isn't alone in having come close to extinction only to gain new life and live on for years.

Take Fort Dix, N.J. over the years, the fort has repeatedly come close to making the Army's "hit list." It landed there in 1973. Army officials said it was saved by pressure from Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J.

Fort Dix is vulnerable again. In his announcement Wednesday, Defense Secretary Harold Brown said the Army is thinking of shutting the base's training facility - its reason for being. But there's a chance that the fort may survive as home for elements of the 2nd Infantry Division, scheduled for withdrawal from South Korea.

In the case of the Portsmouth Shipyard, it was ordered shut in the mid-1960s after a special study board had singled it out as "the best shipyard to close" because of various shortcomings.

But Democratic Sens. Thomas McIntyre of New Hampshire and Edmund Muskie, whose Maine constituents work at the Portsmouth yard, appealed to President Lyndon B. Johnson. He overrode the order and the yard stayed open.

In a reported effort to help re-elect Republican Rep. Lewis Wyman, President Richard M. Nixon proclaimed later that year that the shipyard would remain open because it is important to national defense. Its future seems assured.

President Carter has been involved at least twice in bringing about reconsiderations of base cutbacks ordered by the Ford Administration. Less than a month after Carter promised a Massachusetts town meeting last year that he would look into the situation, the Army reversed plans to heavily cut operations at Fort Devens, Mass.

At a briefing yesterday, Assistant Defense Secretary John White acknowledged what many of his predecessors also came to realize-congressmen pull two ways on the base closing question.

"In the general sense, they recognize our problem-that is, we have too many bases, and they have urged us to make reductions," White said.

"On the other hand, obviously they do not want to see reductions in their particular area that affect their constituents."

Charges In Marijuana Case Filed

The three persons arrested in a Tuesday marijuana raid conducted by the Scurry County Sheriff's Office have been charged.

Charged with possession of less than two ounces of marijuana are Carl R. Crumbley, 21, Brenda Jane Holcomb, 24, and James Roy Malone, 24.

The charges stem from a raid conducted Tuesday afternoon in which 138 marijuana seedlings were confiscated. The seedlings, deputies reported, were found in a garden beside a house approximately 6½ miles northeast of Snyder.

Misdemeanor charges were filed in the case because the aggregate weight of the marijuana seedlings was less than four ounces.

Possession Charge Filed

Larry Joe Wall has been named in a complaint filed by the district attorney's office charging him with a felony count of possession of a controlled substance.

Wall, 25, was arrested April 13 when city police found in his possession a white, powdery substance. A lab analysis of the substance indicated it was cocaine, officers said.

Wall was released from jail shortly after his arrest when he posted a $500 bond.

'Godfather' Walks Out Of Prison Free Man

CANON CITY, Colo. (AP) - Three times, Sylvester Lee Garrison "took the walk," headed for the Colorado State Penitentiary.

Fourteen times he outlived dates set for his execution for what the Colorado Supreme Court called "a cold-blooded and revolting murder."

But after 20 years in prison, he walked through the gates Wednesday a free man, 45 years old, with $100 in his pocket and a new suit of clothes.

"First, I'm going to sit on the porch and watch the people for a little while," he said shortly before his release. "Watch the cars go by. I'll need a little time to put things behind me."

Garrison's death penalty was lifted in court several years ago and he was given a life sentence instead. He accumulated enough time in prison to qualify for parole, which he was granted in January.

Neighbors identified Garrison as one of two men who pistol-whipped Mort Freelander, 79, to death on the morning of April 25, 1958. The second assailant was never apprehended.

Although Denver police said Garrison confessed to the crime a number of times, he said in court that he was not guilty.

Behind the walls of Canon City, Garrison earned the nickname "The Godfather" for his work with younger inmates. Someday, he says, he would like to be a child counselor - maybe work with juvenile delinquents.

"I've sat in this hell-hole a long time - yeah, a long time," he said. "I've seen some intelligent kids come and go, and then come back again."

All he really learned inside, he said, was how to roll cigarettes well.

Garrison says he is not going back, that he wants a permanent job in his future.

"I hear these fools brag about having 200 jobs in 40 years. Big deal.

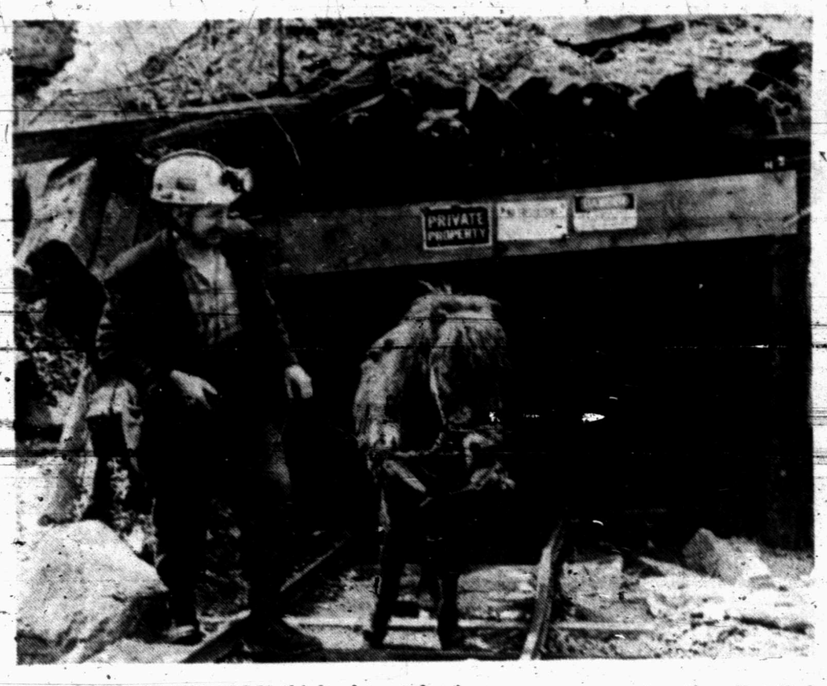
"It's the guy who works the same job for 40 years - yeah, that's something. A man can set his watch by the way he comes and goes. I like that idea. It means you can have something in this world, and leave something for someone else."

His stride was different as he walked out the gates. He was looking forward to going home to Denver and getting a chicken dinner at his mother's house.

Three times in the two decades before, he had chosen fried chicken as his last meal. Fried chicken - cooked "but not over-cooked" - onions, a side of fries and "real" - not prison-variety - coffee.

Three times he had eaten that chicken before the last-minute reprieves came. Three times.

This time, the meal would be different.



ONE DOESN'T USUALLY think of a coal mine as a one-man operation. But Ted Spewock singlehandedly gathers the black ore from his Latrobe, Pa., mine, with only his pony, Smokey, for company. After 16 years on the job, Smokey is about to be retired. But 57-year-old Spewock says, "I plan to mine coal till I die."

With Prison Site...

Hill Is Said Playing Politics

EDINBURG (AP) - A state prison official who is working in Gov. Dolph Briscoe's re-election campaign says John Hill is playing politics with a proposed Hidalgo County prison site.

"Yes, sir, I'm sorry but that's the way it appears to me," Joe La Mantia, secretary of the State Board of Corrections, said about Hill's Wednesday ruling.

The attorney general blocked the $8 million purchase by citing portions of the 1978-79 appropriations bills and a 1955 statute.

Hill, a Briscoe opponent in the Democratic primary, said the appropriations bill requires that prison land purchases be made with funds raised from the sale of Blue Ridge Farms prison property in Harris County. And, Hill said, a 1955 statute states that money received for that tract must be used to buy land within 75 miles of Huntsville.

"I don't think the intent of the legislature was to limit the Board of Corrections to owning land within a 75-mile radius of Huntsville," La Mantia, co-ordinator of the Briscoe campaign in the Rio Grande Valley, said.

He added that he did not want to "second guess" Hill but said East Texas is not a logical site for a new facility.

"From a practical standpoint the most reasonable and economical way for Texas to feed and clothe the inmates sent to us by the citizens is to go where you can produce the most," he said.

The Corrections Board had planned to use inmate labor to grow food and fiber at the Hidalgo County site.

"East Texas is limited to what it can produce and when it can produce it. They primarily produce it in the summer months there. But people eat 12 months a year," The McAllen resident said.

La Mantia feels the next step in the search for a new prison is to go back to the legislature.

Spokesman for Big Five Farms, current owners of the land, have said the state offer for the land expired April 1. That deadline passed without a signed agreement between the state and the current landowners.

Hill's ruling was welcomed by Edinburg Mayor Ronald Case.

Man Wants To Keep Marriage

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)-A Knoxville man who lost his pants, wallet and $180 because of an "encounter" with a woman may still have his marriage, thanks to a judge.

The 46-year-old man testified in General Sessions Court that he met the woman in a bar last Friday and that after the two of them went to a motel together, she ran off with his trousers, the wallet containing $180 and his car. When the car was found, its hubcaps were missing, he said.

His complaint against the woman was dismissed at his request Tuesday by General Sessions Court Judge Jewell K. Watson.

"I'm afraid my wife will find out if I prosecute," he said. "I've been making up stories for four days."

"I don't want to run the risk of your wife finding out," the judge said. "After all, you've had your car, hubcaps, money and pants stolen. Case dismissed."

Just Another 89 Day

by BILL McCLELLAN

SOMETIMES THINGS just don't go right. Know what I mean?

Like the day before the biggest tournament of the year, and you shoot a three-under par 69 despite the gusty, rain-whispered winds and the fact that it's almost dusk and you can barely see. Of course you're alone. Comes time for the tournament, 9 a.m. tee off...not a breeze...beautiful weather...and you turn in an 89. It's just not fair.

Well, sometimes that happens to sports writers, too. And to the athletes they write about.

AT THE top of page seven Monday, in a pretty easily located place really, we ran a small story which told of one of Snyder's athletes taking second place in vaulting at the state gymnastics competition. Unfortunately, we shot an 89 on that one.

Looking it over, I'm agree Rita Black deserves more attention than a couple or four inches worth of copy for her efforts. And while gymnastics is not as well embraced around these parts as football, baseball, track or...well, you name it...it's certain that Rita merits a photograph at the least.

After all, taking second at state "isn't bad," as her coach, Doug Fitzjarrel understated. I'll agree with that. Rita is the first Snyderite to accomplish the feat in high school gymnastics, and the fact that Snyder has been in gymnastics competition only two years lends special credit to her and Coach Fitzjarrell. Congratulations, Rita, and hopefully this will put myself and the local gymnasts a little closer to par.

GETTING BACK to basics, an interesting form of competition has instituted here by Dick Stallcup and Gene Bowling. They are searching for 10 cap-and-ball shooters and 10 modern shooters interested in staging a rifle match. The men plan on scheduling the old versus new tournament - rifles only, please - sometime in mid-May. Anyone interested in competing in the meet should contact Gene (modern rifles) at 573-2323, or Dick (cap and ball rifles) at 573-2455. They'll be holding the meet at Dick's private range, and the public will be invited to watch. Further details will be announced later.

THANKS.

Blazers Being Fizzled Away

SEATTLE (AP) - The noose around the Portland Trail Blazers' neck was cinched a notch tighter Wednesday night.

One more slip by the proud but ailing Blazers and the Seattle SuperSonics will squeeze the defending National Basektball Association champions right out of the playoffs.

Rookie forward Jack Sikma, playing with the savvy and finesse of a veteran, scored Seattle's last seven points, including a baseline jumper with nine seconds left, lifting the Sonics to a wild 100-98 victory over the Blazers and a 3-1 lead in the Western Conference semi-final series.

The Sonics, who won their 16th straight game at home before a Coliseum sellout crowd of 14,098, can win the best-of-seven series with a victory in Game 5 Sunday in Portland.

It was the 6-foot-11 Sikma's fierce rebounding and velvet touch from the field in the final quarter that sent the Blazers tumbling to their second straight loss in Seattle.

Sikma scored 11 of Seattle's final 12 points and 13 in the fourth period, which began with the Blazers ahead 81-73. The Sonics trailed by as many as 14 points on three occasions in the third period.

While Seattle and Portland have until Sunday to ponder their fifth game, the Denver Nuggets and Washington Bullets both will have the homecourt advantage as they attempt to win their quarter-final playoff series Friday night.

The Nuggets, leading 3-1, bounced back from a lopsided 143-112 loss on Sunday to beat the Milwaukee Bucks 118-104 Tuesday night to pull within one game of ending the series.

It wasn't as close as the final score indicated, either, as Denver held Milwaukee scoreless for 5½ minutes in building a 90-61 lead after three periods.

The Bullets missed out in an attempt to eliminate the Spurs on Tuesday night when San Antonio won 116-105. "This puts a great deal of pressure on us now," said Washington Coach Dick Motta, because if the Spurs win Friday, the seventh game of the series would be played in San Antonio.

Even though they have never won at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md., the Spurs are confident.

"We've got to keep running," said NBA scoring champion George Gervin, the Spurs' 6-foot-7 guard, after Tuesday night's victory.

WTC Golfers Slated To Open 7th Tourney

ROSWELL, N.M. - Western Texas College golfers - who have already clinched a third consecutive league championship - will compete in the 7th Western Conference Tournament here Friday and Saturday.

The tournament, which stands as the final conference meet of the season, will be held in conjunction with the Region V Golf Tournament. The conference tourney will consist of the initial 18 holes played Friday, while the Region Tournament will include 36 additional holes. The top two finishers at region qualify for the upcoming NJCAA National Tournament.

The Westerners boast four golfers in the top six conference-wide, and have won four of six Western Conference tournaments this season. They clinched the league title last weekend with a second-place score of 301 at Hobbs, N.M., three strokes behind New Mexico Junior College. The Westerners racked up six conference points however, giving them a seven-point 39½ going into the 7th Conference Tournament here. Odessa College stands in second place with 32½ points. NMJC has 31½.

Leading WTC through its paces are Miller Scott, the top WAC golfer with a 71.2 average; Chris Brown, rated second with a 72 average; Ronald Koerth, rated fourth with a 72.4 average; and Terry Kendrick, sixth, with an average of 73.8.

Bob O'Day coaches the troop.

Lamesa To Host Cats 4 p.m. Friday

LAMESA--Snyder High School baseball team will battle the Tornadoes in a District 3-AAA game here Friday at 4 p.m.

The Tigers, 20-5 for the year, collected the league round-one championship last week, and hold a 1-0 mark in round-two play.

Sid Everton, 4-1 with two saves and an ERA of 2.48, will start on the mound for Snyder.

Snyder will host Lamesa at 4 p.m. Tuesday as district play continues.

JAY WESSON

Snyder Duo Set For Regional Play

Jay Wesson and Zane Sterling, boys doubles team, will represent Snyder High School in the Regional Tennis Tournament at Odessa, April 28-29.

The duo took runner-up honors two weeks ago at the District 3-AAA tournament, falling in the finals to Barron and Bristow of Lamesa, who will also be competiting in the tourney.

Snyder's Margaret Womack won the regional meet here last weekend, and will advance to state competition in Austin on May 5-6.

State competition for boys will be held May 12-13.

Warwick Turns Another Upset

LAS VEGAS, Nev.-Unseeded Kim Warwick of Newport Beach, Calif., scored his second surprise victory in as many days by defeating John Lloyd of England 6-4, 6-2 in the second round of the $250,000 Alan King Tennis Classic.

Demaret To Cash In At 'Legends Of Golf'

AUSTIN (AP) - For the first time in his career, last place looks mighty good to Jimmy Demaret.

The 67-yar-old Demaret, three times winner of the Masters, will cash a $20,000 paycheck if he and his partner, Lionel Hebert, finish last in The Legends of Golf beginning Friday.

"Dead last is three times more than I ever won in a tournament," said the fiesty Demaret, Wednesday. He was the leading money winner in professional golf in 1947 and won the grand total of $27,936.

"I remember Byron Nelson won 11 tournaments in a row and it didn't even total up to $20,000," said Demaret.

Demaret said, "I think it's just fantastic that for once we have a chance to play for that kind of money. I mean $400,000... that's a lot of bread. And $100,000 to the winners - that's something."

The unique 54-hole tournament will be played over the friendly fairways of the Par 70 Onion Creek Golf Course under a two-ball format. In other words, Demaret and Hebert will be matching their best score per hole against the field.

The field does not include Ben Hogan, who declined to play, but it has Sam Snead, indeed a legend, who won only $35,000 in 1950, the last year he was the leading money winner.

"And I never hid my money in tomato cans either," said Snead. "All that bull was started by Demaret."

The players, all over 50, will be given their choice of walking or riding electric golf carts in the tournament.

Tigers Fourth At Region Meet

ODESSA - Snyder High School golf team shot a 315 here Wednesday to claim a fourth standing mid-way through the Regional Golf Tournament.

The annual event, held at Golden Acres Country Club near here, was to be completed with the final 18 holes this morning.

In current positions, Borger I leads with a 301, followed by Fort Stockton 305, Sweetwater 307, Snyder, Borger II 329 and Andrews 330.

Benny Parnell paced the Tigers with a low round of 74. Parnell tied with Borger's Mike Ray and stands one stroke behind co-medalists Phil Kuss of Sweetwater, and George Gonzales of Fort Stockton who hold 73's.

Other Snyder scores included Lance McMillan 79, Clint Baack 79, Walt Williams 83 and Randy Chambers 87.

Snyder Bass Club Qualifies For State

A six-man team representing the Snyder Bass Club placed fourth in the Texas Region 2 Bass Club Tournament held the past weekend at Twin Buttes Lake at San Angelo.

A.C. Floyd Jr. of Snyder had the largest bass and the largest string of bass in the tournament.

The top four teams in the regional tournament, which include Concho Bass Club of San Angelo, Permian Bass Club of Odessa, Hi Sky Bass Club of Midland and Snyder Bass Club, in order, are now qualified to compete in the State Tournament to be held June 3-4 at lake Palestine.

In addition to Floyd, the members of the Snyder team were Jerry Brooks, Mark Stephens, Larry House, Hack Hicks and Danny Chastain.

Oilers Pick Up Booter

HOUSTON (AP) - A 15-year veteran punter who has been with the Kansas City Chiefs since they were the Dallas Texans has been acquired by the Houston Oilers for an undisclosed 1979 draft choice.

The deal is contingent on Jerrel Wilson's making the team.

Oiler coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips said Wilson's acquisition has nothing to do with Oilers' punter Cliff Parsley, a second-year man who punted 77 times last season for a 39.4 average. Wilson's career average is over 42 yards.

"He's got a helluva leg," Phillips said. "Having two good punters is better than having one good punter. It has nothing to do with Cliff. We just would like to give him (Wilson) a chance to play here."

Kings Still Look For New Coach

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) The Kansas City Kings will probably name a new coach within the next two weeks, a spokesman for the National Basketball Association team says.

Joe Axelson, president and general manager of the team, said a deadline of May 1 has tentatively been established for hiring the new coach.

The new coach would replace Larry Staverman, who has served as interim coach since Phil Johnson was fired in early January. Staverman will return to his duties as assistant general manager.

Axelson said he has narrowed the list of candidate to three, but he declined to identify them.

Let's have better management in County Government. County Government is an arm of the state law and cries for effective leadership. I can and will give you that leadership.

Alexander Shuts -Out; Shuts Up

ARLINGTON (AP) - Doyle Alexander's six-hit, 3-0 shut-out of the Cleveland Indians was a masterful exhibition. But we'll have to let Cleveland Manager Jeff Torborg tell you about it because moody Doyle isn't talking.

The Texas Rangers right-hander, who had been struggling with a 5.29 earned run average after three poor 1978 performances, scattered four singles and two doubles to run his record to 1-1. He retired nine consecutive batters at one point.

But afterward, Alexander continued his season-long refusal to talk to the media. He even refused to appear on the "Star of the Game" post-game radio show with one of the team's announcers.

"I don't have much to say tonight. As a matter of fact, I don't have anything to say," said Alexander, a former Dallas Cowboys' running back Duane Thomas. "I'm not mad at anything. I haven't said anything all year and I'm not going to say anything now."

Thomas, of course, went the entire 1971 season without speaking to teammates or reporters. Alexander's muteness apparently extends only to the media.

Torborg, meanwhile, was not at a loss for words.

"He (Alexander) was in control all the way," said Torborg, who caught Alexander while both were with the Los Angeles Dodgers organization in 1970. "He pitched an excellent ballgame. We didn't have very many opportunities. He kept us at bay all night.

Alexander had issued seven walks in only 17 innings this season, but walked only two Indians. Control is vital to Alexander's finesse style of pitching.

Cleveland's Rick Wise also pitched a brilliant complete game, only allowing five hits and retiring 12 of the final 13 Texas batters. But two of those hits were home runs by Mike Hargrove and Richie Zisk.

Jays 3, Royals 1

Roy Howell hit a two-run homer in the ninth as Toronto beat Kansas City. Paul Splittorff walked Willie Upshaw leading off the ninth and, one out later, served up Howell's blast; only the fourth Toronto hit.

First baseman John Mayberry, whom the Royals shipped to Toronto in a controversial trade at the close of spring training, blasted a 420-foot homer in the fifth for the first hit off Splittorff.

Padres 2, Astros 1

Gaylord Perry and Rollie Fingers combined to limit Houston to seven hits. Perry struck out four and walked one but needed Fingers to get the final out of the game after Bob Watson had doubled and Joe Ferguson had singled for the Astros' only run. Fingers retired pinch hitter Wilbur Howard on a fly ball to end the game.

Cards 12, Expos 2

The Cards pounded 19 hits in their first game under interim Manager Jack Krol. Keith Hernandez belted a double and three singles, driving in two runs and scoring three, while Ken Reitz belted his second home run of the season and a single and drove in three runs for the Cards. Jim Dwyer also homered for St. Louis while Lou Brock had three hits.

Moret To Begin Work

ARLINGTON (AP) - Left-hander Roger Moret, hospitalized in a psychiatric facility since falling into a "catatonic" trance in the clubhouse April 12, is due to resume workouts today on an out-patient basis with the pitching-starved Texas Rangers.

"Roger will start working out with us tomorrow," Manager Bill Hunter said Wednesday after telling the team about Moret's progress in a meeting before Texas' 3-0 victory over Cleveland.

"It will give the doctor the opportunity to observe his reaction getting back into his normal situation," added Hunter. "Somewhere down the road, we'll determine when and if to activate him.

DST Is Returning...

DOT Will Take Away One Hour This Sunday

By I.F. HYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)- Question, fair reader: Which government department gives us the time of day?

Answer: The Department of Transportation.

Ah, but we get ahead of ourselves. As most of us must, by exactly one hour.

The government programs its own version of 60 Minutes on two Sundays each year, one to give and one to take away.

This coming Sunday, it takes away. Maybe you lose an hour's sleep, get to church late, things like that.

Here's the official release from the Department of Transportation:

"Daylight saving time is returning. At 2 a.m. Sunday, April 30, clocks should be moved forward one hour to begin six months of daylight saving time.

"Under the Uniform Time Act, which DOT administers, daylight saving time is observed in the United States and its territories from the last Sunday in April until the last Sunday in October, which this year is Oct. 29.

"That is, unless you live in Arizona, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, American Samoa or that portion of Indiana within the Eastern Time Zone. These areas don't observe daylight saving time during any period of the year."

So there you have it. Time marches on. Spring forward, fall back.

Daylight saving time began in the United States, Britain and Canada during World War I to make more efficient use of daytime. But it fell into disuse after the Armistice, only to return in World War II.

After the war, summer time in the United States became a hodgepodge, as some states retained the plan and others did away with it. In 1966, Congress passed the Uniform Time Act to standardize daylight savings from the last Sunday in April to the first Sunday in October.

Then, in January 1974, under the energy strain of the Arab oil embargo, Congress mandated year-round DST in an attempt to save fuel.

But protests, especially from farmers and parents of school children who had to leave home in the dark, led to repeal 10 months later.

In 1975, eight months of daylight time became the law of most of the land. It reverted to a six-month schedule in 1976.

Since then, legislative proposals have come along calling for a seven-month period, but so far none have drawn much support.

So check your local listings for further changes. It's all a matter of time.

Glad To Be Home...

Miner Sour On Russia

By GARY MIHOCES
Associated Press Writer

GLASSPORT, Pa. (AP)- After too many months in the Soviet Union, 87-year-old Charley Puka took a two-hour nap and rejoined old friends at American Legion Post 443.

"I don't go no place no more," grumbled the retired coal miner and World War I veteran, who was thrust into the international spotlight by his efforts to get back to this southwestern Pennsylvania town.

"I didn't like nothin' in Russia. That country's no damn good. I didn't eat nothin' but beans and bread over there," said Puka, who lost a pot belly and 36 pounds from his normal weight of 170 while in the Soviet Union. At the Legion post he enjoyed ginger ale, cold cuts, cake, and hand of poker and lots of kisses from women friends.

The 5-foot-2 Puka, sporting a fresh shave, a blue suit and a polka dot bow tie, packed that same suit and bow tie and left for his native Ukraine eight months ago.

Just what kept Puka in the Soviet Union is uncertain. Published reports here said he applied at the Soviet Embassy in Washington for a travel visa but instead was issued a Soviet passport. When he arrived in the Soviet Union, his American passport was taken from him and he was sent onto his village, Velyatino.

But a priest in nearby McKeesport says Puka wanted to live out his days in the Ukraine.

"Charley applied for permanent residency," said the Rev. Dimitri Ermakov of St. Mary's Russian Orthodox Church. Ermakov said he helped Puka fill out residency papers and counseled him about his decision.

Puka himself won't say what happened that so soured him on Soviet life. "I won't tell you. Go over and find out yourself," he said.

In any case, Puka decided he wanted out. He got his wish after his letters and efforts by the American Legion led to intervention by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

"Great to be back," Puka told dozens of reporters after arriving Wednesday at Kennedy Airport in New York.

Puka looked weary and haggard when he arrived at the Pittsburgh airport. A friend removed Puka's wrinkled coat and helped him into a red American Legion jacket before driving him back to Glassport in a black Cadillac.

After a nap, Puka made a celebrity return to the Legion Hall, located across the Monongahela River from a steel plant.

Puka strolled inside carrying a brass cane given him by a nephew in the Ukraine.

"Hi people," he said as his friends applauded and rushed to pat his back.

Horse Needs Lights, Pick Up Service

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP)-Two Davenport men were arrested on charges of riding a horse on a sidewalk, riding a horse without lights and failure to pick up manure.

With the price of gasoline what it is, "if you can't ride horses, what are you going to do?" said Robert Haller, 28, one of the men arrested Wednesday.

Haller and Thomas Finch, 19, were arrested in the downtown area about 3:30 a.m. Police said the two were spotted riding the horses about midnight and were told they had to keep off the sidewalk and to have lights on the horses if they rode at night.

Haller's version of what happened is somewhat different. He said the two were stopped and they asked police whether they were violating any laws. After checking, police recommended they get rear lights for the horses. But Haller said he did not realize they would be arrested for not getting them immediately.

When Haller appeared in court, he discovered an additional charge had been filed-failure to pick up manure. The two horses had defecated while the men were inside

Low Turnout Seen May 6

By The Associated Press

Suppose they hold an election and no one voted.

Well, it won't be that bad, but Texas Secretary of State Steve Oaks says there may be fewer Texans voting in the May 6 primary elections than the meager 29 per cent turnout for the 1974 primaries.

Speaking at a news conference, Oaks said "Unless there is a terrific turnabout in absentee voting, there will be less voting in this primary than the 1974 primary the last statewide primary elections not affected by presidential campaigns.

Most absentee voting reports are "running way below" previous years, Oaks said. The deadline for absentee voting for the Democratic and Republican primaries a week from this Saturday is Tuesday, May 2.

The Democratic primary turnout would be only 1 million to 1.2 million, Oaks predicted, compared to the 1.5 million who voted in 1974. Previous estimates had been around 2 million.

The turnout for the Republican primary, he said, likely would be 100,000 to 150,000, compared to previous estimates of about 200,000. The 1974 turnout was 69,000 with no big contests to attract voters.

Texas now has from 5.2 million to 5.5 million registered voters, according to an estimate by Oaks. The deadline for registering for the May 6 vote was on April 6.

Much of the attention continues to center around the race between Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Attorney General John Hill for the Democratic Party's gubernatorial nomination.

Briscoe told a San Angelo crowd Wednesday that Hill wants the taped interview with the Texas State Teachers Association (TSTA) kept private because Hill fears he will lose teachers' votes to Briscoe.

The TSTA endorsed Hill after all the candidates held interviews with the organization's political arm. Briscoe wants the tapes made public because he claims Hill promised the teachers raises.

Speaking in Beaumont Wednesday, Hill said he has already purchased a "veto" stamp to use in the event any new tax bill ever reaches the governor's office while he's there.

"I've had a little trouble getting through to Governor Briscoe that I would veto any tax bill," the attorney general said.

Rep. Bob Krueger, a Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate, told a Houston audience that Texas should be actively involved in developing the final version of President Carter's national urban policy.

"Houston and other Texas cities stand at a crossroads," he said. "We can take the path of the older cities and make their same mistakes or we can blaze a new trial to guarantee solutions to our present problems and eliminate the threat of falling victim to the same problems of the Northeast."

Joe Christie, Krueger's opponent, claimed Wednesday he was ordered off the ARCO plant property in Houston Tuesday after his staff had received permission from company officials for Christie to talk with workers at the gate.

"It looks like big oil has come out and made their endorsement of Bob Krueger public today in the U.S. Senate race," Christie remarked.

Family Dollar Goes Farthest In Austin Today

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dollar for dollar, a family of four lives better in Austin, Texas, than in any other metropolitan area, a 40-city government survey shows.

On the other hand, New York and Boston are about the worst places for the economically minded, the Labor Department says.

In its annual report on urban family budgets, the department said Wednesday that an average urban family of four must earn $10,481 a year to maintain a low standard of living; $17,106 for a middle standard of living and $25,202 to enjoy a high standard.

The income levels represent the cost of three hypothetical lists of goods and services, including taxes, drawn up in the mid-1960s to portray the three relative standards of living.

The survey showed that a dollar goes the farthest in Austin, where a family can maintain a low standard of living on $9,286 a year, a moderate standard on $14,776 and a high standard on $21,727.

But if that family moved to Boston, it would cost $20,609 to maintain a moderate standard. And in metropolitan New York, it would take $31,655 to keep up a high standard. Both figures are the highest of the area surveyed among the 48 contiguous states.

The San Francisco-Oakland area is the most expensive place for a family to maintain a low standard of living, requiring an annual income of $11,601 a year.

Living costs in Alaska and Hawaii are much higher than elsewhere in the country, but they are not comparable because of unique transportation costs that drive up the price of goods.

In general, the survey reported, costs were lowest in small Southern cities and highest in large Northeastern cities.

The figures, based on a survey conducted last fall, were adjusted to reflect rising prices and changes in taxes since the 1976 survey.

In 1976, the government said, it cost an average of $11,041 a year to maintain a low standard of living, $16,236 for a moderate standard and $23,759 for a high standard.

By 1977, a typical family of four needed to earn 4.4 percent more money to maintain a low standard of living, 5.4 percent more for a moderate standard and 6.1 percent to keep up a high standard.

The U.S. Census Bureau estimated that the median income for a family of four in 1976 was $17,315. Figures for 1977 are not yet available, but they are expected to rise.

The family income levels are based on a hypothetically typical family that includes a 38-year-old husband who is working full-time, a non-working wife, a 13-year-old boy and an 8-year-old girl.

The budget needed to maintain the three living standards include expenditures for food, housing, transportation, clothing, personal and medical care, recreation, education, entertainment, miscellaneous items and taxes.

The income needed to maintain a low standard of living was not represent a minimum level of income needed to avoid poverty, the government said. A family of four is said to be living in poverty if it earns less than $6,200 a year.

Wife Is Charged In Zimmerman Slaying

UVALDE (AP) - The death of a prosecution witness who testified at last year's widely publicized eagle-hunting trial has been blamed on his estranged wife.

Annie Zimmerman, 41, was in Uvalde County Jail, this morning in lieu of $50,000 bond set Wednesday when she was charged with the murder of Real County ranch foreman Alfred Zimmerman.

The woman surrendered to authorities in the office of a San Antonio attorney. Charges were filed after an investigation by Uvalde Texas Ranger Joaquin Jackson, Real County Sheriff John Elliott and state police.

Zimmerman was found early Monday by his son, Cecil, on the floor of the foreman's quarters at the Eagle Ranch in the northwest part of the county. Police said he had been hit by a shotgun blast.

Elliott and Jackson had questioned Mrs. Zimmerman at her home in Kerrville Tuesday night. The couple was separated and a divorce action was pending in district court at Leakey.

Jackson said he is convinced the shooting is unrelated to Zimmerman's testimony, which helped convict a Real County commissioner and two other men. All three were found guilty of conspiring to kill the federally-protected eagles last December and received fines ranging from $1,000 to $3,000.

It was Zimmerman's call to a state game warden in December 1975 that touched off a state and federal probe of airborne eagle hunting over ranches in rugged Real County.

Zimmerman testified at the federal court trial in San Antonio that he called a game warden after hearing shots fired from a helicopter flying over the ranch in pursuit of a golden eagle. He also told the court signs at the ranch were vandalized after he notified state officials of the hunting incident.

Later, he told authorities his life had been threatened.

Gag Order Lifted On Silkwood Case

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) U.S. District Judge Frank Theis lifted a gag order on pretrial publicity in the Karen Silkwood lawsuit case Wednesday, but the day's session ended with Theis inviting the the public to leave the courtroom.

The Wichita, Kan., judge examined some mysterious Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation files in his chambers during the session, and then returned to close the hearing.

He said, "The court has gone over this material and I am somewhat troubled by it...I do think it needs to be turned over" to the Silkwood attorneys. He then said he wished to ask questions on relevancy in private.

The only indication given as to the nature of the material was that it pertained to an investigation of Ms. Silkwood separate from the tests performed on marijuana found with her at the time of her fatal 1974 car accident.

The Silkwood case was filed against the Kerr-McGee Corp., company officials, Nashville journalist Jacque Srouji and two FBI officials.

The suit alleges Ms. Silkwood, a Kerr-McGee nuclear plant worker, was contaminated with plutonium at the company's crescent facility because of company negligence, and that her civil rights were violated by illegal surveillance.

IS SNYDER REALLY BEATING SWEETWATER?

Statistics mean little unless you compare apples to apples, which is difficult at best. The following economic barometers will give you some idea of our standing with Sweetwater.

Sweatwater's election was September 5, 1975. The first license was issued October 9, 1975.

Sales Tax Rebates	1974	1975	1976	1977
Sweetwater	187,380	217,773	289,255	336,200
Snyder (Sept. 30)	226,776	325,851	411,244	432,445
Percentage of Snyder Lead	21 Percent	49.6 Percent	42.2 Percent	28.6 Percent

.....And Sweetwater's doing this without our oilfield pumping millions of dollars into their economy.

Satchel Page once said, "Don't look back, they might be gaining." But we'd better look. They are gaining. And what's frighting about it is that Sacroc production fell from 160,000 barrels per day to 140,000 in 1977 alone, a decrease of 12½ percent.

Bank Deposits	1974	1975	1976	1977
Sweetwater - 1	69,656,450	87,502,877	110,778,743	116,720,010
Snyder	55,695,015 [2]	65,560,213 [2]	106,327,276	116,398,915

Note 1 - Figures do not include Colorado City Savings & Loan Branch.
Note 2 - Savings & Loan totals not included for these years.

Building Permits	1974	1975	1976	1977
Sweetwater	1,179,630	5,877,385	6,878,979	9,352,184
Snyder	2,243,860	3,419,383	5,483,517	7,692,413
Snyder's Lead in Dollars	+451,230	-2,458,002	-1,395,462	-1,659,771

Sweetwater's taken a more aggressive stance toward attracting retail sales and payrolls.

All things considered, the plain truth is they're beating our sox off, folks.

Consider these statements:

"Sweetwater has experienced a dramatic pattern of growth since going wet. Sales tax receipts, real estate sales, all business indicators are way up. There may be other reasons, but going wet has certainly been a part of it."

"I can't see any difference in crime. You hardly notice a difference anywhere. As far as I can tell, the results have all been good."

Jere M. Lawrence
Mayor
City of Sweetwater

"I'm very pleased with what's happened here since the town's gone wet. Things are definitely better now than they're ever been."

"We had literally dozens of bootleggers siphoning money away from all the other legitimate businesses. We have eliminated that problem, along with the other unfavorable influences it caused. Some of these guys also sold pills, pot, and the other things we worry about."

..Beer and liquor is now being sold by taxpaying businessmen operating from nice stores. There are eight or nine places, I guess, selling beer or the rest of it, all with employees, all pretty well maintained. Some of them remodeled old buildings, some built new buildings."

"Pinkey's built a very nice store. They tore down a bunch of old buildings, and probably did more to clean up the East entrance to town than anything that's ever happened."

"Sales all over town are a lot better. We're drawing people into town from Colorado City, Loraine, Snyder, Roby, everywhere. People we didn't get before. This kind of thing really helps."

Ehrlichman Is Released From Prison

SAFFORD, Ariz. (AP)-John Ehrlichman, grinning broadly, walked out of Swift Trail Federal Prison Camp after sunrise today, 18 months after he was imprisoned there for his role in the Watergate affair.

The former domestic affairs adviser to President M. Nixon drove off for an unknown destination in a maroon Chevrolet with Phoenix Ariz. Gazette reporter Lois Boyles, driven by her son, Vance.

Ehrlichman, 53, dressed in casual slacks, a windbreaker and a baseball cap, was followed by nearly 50 reporters and photographers as he walked from the front door of the minimum-security facility. He posed for pictures, but declined to answer any questions.

Asked how he felt, Ehrlichman said: "Can't you see how I feel?"

Gazette City Editor Vic Thornton had said prior to Ehrlichman's release that Mrs. Boyles would be on hand at the prison.

"I don't know if we'll get a story or not," Thornton said. "She's got this personal involvement. She's very sympathetic toward him."

Ehrlichman is separated from his wife, Jeanne, who lives in Seattle where he formerly practiced law. Mrs. Boyles is reportedly separated from her husband.

Ehrlichman was convicted of conspiring to hide White House involvement in the Watergate burglary. He entered the prison in eastern Arizona on Oct. 28, 1976.

Ehrlichman is expected to return to Santa Fe, N.M., where he lived before beginning his sentence.

Wayne Leaves Hospital Feeling Great

BOSTON (AP)-Actor John Wayne, wearing a wide-brimmed hat and saying, "I feel great, wonderful," left Massachusetts General Hospital today amid tight security. He had undergone open-heart surgery three weeks ago.

Wayne, 70, rode in a limousine out of a basement service entrance of the hospital. Guards walked alongside the car.

As the few reporters on hand gathered around his car, Wayne rolled down his window and waved and smiled.

"Wonderful," he said. "I'm okay and Boston is wonderful."

Wayne, wearing a yellow sport shirt open at the collar, was riding in the front passenger seat.

At Logan International Airport, where a private jet waited to take him to California, Wayne told reporters, "I feel great, I couldn't feel better. I feel like a new man, that's all I know. It's a wonderful feeling."

Wayne said he was returning home and feels he has the strength to carry on the life he led before the surgery.

'King Penguin' Still Tracks Elusive Birds

EDITOR'S NOTE - His field guide is synonymous with bird watching, his illustrations are collector's items. He's traveled to some 80 countries and all seven continents. But Roger Tory Peterson, approaching 70, continues to search for the elusive.

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

OLD LYME, Conn. (AP) - Roger Tory Peterson, America's best-known naturalist, has been a dedicated bird-watcher since seventh grade yet he's seen less than half the world's species.

Not that he's been dallying. Of the 8,600 listed, he's seen about 3,500 and is still counting. "I hope during my life to see at least half," says Peterson, who will be 70 in August.

The "King Penguin" of bird watchers, sets his sights on the elusive between writing a book about penguins and working on the fourth revision of his popular "Field Guide to the Birds," both to be published next year.

The guide, last revised in 1947, will contain all new illustrations and more of them, plus more color and maps.

"It's not that the birds have changed so," says Peterson. "But I've changed during those 30 years. I certainly am more skilled at drawing and painting and my experience with these birds is greater."

Peterson says he remains as obsessed with birds as he was more than half-century ago when he was inspired by his seventh-grade teacher in Jamestown, N.Y.

"From then on my life revolved around birds. They were wonderful things. They seemed to have a great deal of freedom. They could go where they wanted, when they wanted; and when I was a boy, I certainly wished I had that freedom. I didn't like school as much as I should have."

From his first classroom illustration - a blue jay - and his first photograph - a screech owl captured with a camera he bought with money made as a paper boy - grew a profession that has taken him to more than 80 countries and to all seven continents.

He has 80 books to his credit - eight as author, artist or editor, which have sold nearly 8 million copies. He has painted 4,000 birds - portraits that have become collectors' items.

He says the field guide, originally published in 1934, "broke the ice for a great many people," and has sold some 2 million copies.

Peterson's friends call him "King Penguin."

"There is a group who likes to give bird names to each of us. When they asked me what bird I'd like to be, I said either a wandering albatross or a penguin.

"The king penguin is so unusual looking and you find them in great masses in the Antarctic. They're quite elegant. They intrigue me, mostly as an artist, I guess."

Peterson and wife Virginia live in an eight-room house on 70 acres of land in this early American rural community just off Interstate 95, midway between his publishers in Boston and the Linnaean Society and the art centers of New York.

His living room is a gallery of reproductions of his bird paintings. His studio, a converted stable with picture windows overlooking a frog pound, has a fireproof vault containing nearly 2,000 bird skins and stuffed birds.

A collection of some 4,000 bird books is scattered among studio, home and office, where two secretaries work.

White-haired and trim at 6 feet and 175 pounds, Peterson keeps fit by jogging, walking, doing calisthenics and sticking to a vitamin regime.

His accomplishment with the most impact, he says, is his "Field Guide to the Birds," in which he devised a schematic system for identifying birds by critical field marks.

He spent three years putting it together while teaching drawing and painting at the Rivers School in Brookline, Mass. The guide was published in 1934 by Houghton Mifflin Company of Boston after four other publishers had rejected it.

"That was at the time people were selling apples on street corners in New York," he says. "It was the bottom of the depression and I was an unknown author."

He estimates that anywhere from 2 million to 30 million people are bird watchers, depending on how you define it. "They tend to have a bit more awareness about the whole environment. With some people it's an escape. Identifying birds is a kind of sorting out."

Some new trends, he reports, include bird tourism promoted by travel agencies, collecting bird prints and a surge of interest in bird photography.

"Bird photography is a substitute for the rifle," he says. "It is a matter of stalking and getting your quarry, but you don't have bag limits, you don't have seasons. It's another form of the chase."

Careless use of rifles and pesticides have sent many species to the brink of extinction. Pesticides, he says, caused a drastic decline of the osprey, or the fish hawk, in Connecticut and the peregrine falcon in the eastern United States.

"The osprey dropped almost to the vanishing point, but now the few remaining ones are beginning to raise young again.

"The peregrine is in very great danger. Every last bird nesting in the East disappeared during the '50s and '60s. But now they're raising captive birds under controlled conditions at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y. from stock that was derived elsewhere.

"The main thing is to educate people and to set aside inviolate areas for those birds that have specialized needs. Some birds can live with man easily and other birds can't."

And some birds are more accessible to man than others.

Peterson says the most elusive bird he has tracked was an ivory billed woodpecker in the wilds of Louisiana in 1941.

"That was one of the last ones I've ever seen. That was the last place they were seen regularly. We spent the greater part of four days tracking it down. We knew where it was supposed to be and almost didn't see it.

One that still eludes him is the bachman's warbler.

Maybe it'll be among the 700 species he still hopes to see in his lifetime - in a pursuit he can't fully explain.

"I just react to birds. They excite me. It's just like any other pleasure in life."

Wallace Body Guards Approved

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)-The Alabama Legislature has approved a bill assigning two state police body guards to Gov. George Wallace for as long as he thinks they are necessary.

The 58-year-old Wallace is paralyzed in both legs from bullet wounds suffered in an assassination attempt at Laurel, Mi., on May 15, 1972. At the time he was shot, Wallace was campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Wallace, who leaves the governor's office in January, has said he will enter this fall's senate race, seeking to succeed Sen. John Sparkman, who is retiring.

The Roman emperor Gaius Messius Quintus Traianus Decius was the first of the Roman rulers to begin an organized persecution of Christians.

Here is a good hand to try out on your friends. See if any one of them make six diamonds.

If they do, congratulate them. If they go down, don't laugh at them. We watched a world-class player blow the contract.

It didn't take him much time. He took his ace of clubs and led the 10 of spades. East took his ace and returned the seven of hearts. South was in with the ace. He tried to ruff a heart in dummy, but East over-ruffed and another slam had gone to the port of no return.

Expert South wasted no time on complaining of bad luck. He just apologized to his partner for carelessness.

South should have cashed his ace of hearts at trick two. Then, when East took his ace of spades, East would have had no way to keep South out of dummy.

Suppose East had started with two hearts? Then the play of the ace of hearts wouldn't have been necessary. Suppose East had no hearts at all? Then the careless play would have worked and the careful one failed.

Girl Scouts Gives Awards At Luncheon

The Girl Scout Leaders Recognition Luncheon was held in the fellowship hall of Colonial Hill Baptist Church recently with approximately 30 leaders and guests in attendance. Elois Pruitt was master of ceremonies.

Presentation of awards were made by Lou Voss. Thelma Deere and Jane Donaldson were presented a certificate of appreciation for outstanding service in Girl Scouting for many years. Jo Ann Nunley was given a certificate of appreciation for outstanding service in publicity. Charlie Yoast received a certificate of appreciation for keeping the grounds clean and mowing around the Girl Scout Hut.

Mrs. Gene Knapp of Abilene was speaker for the luncheon. She emphasized the importance of volunteers in scouting. Louise Ward, field director from the Abilene Council was a guest at the luncheon.

Patsy Sitton, acting service unit chairman, and Lou Voss, public relations chairman, presented the leaders with a leader's patch. Mothers of Girl Scouts prepared the meal for the luncheon and Sharon Farmer, Bobbie Gray, Mildred Rhoten and Joan Tate decorated the tables in spring colors.

Jaycee-ettes Plan Installation

Scurry County is in need of families who are willing to accept foster children, according to Ms. Kay Saunders, foster care worker.

Ms. Saunders presented a program on Foster Parenting to the Jaycee-ettes at their April meeting. She indicated that the procedures for a family to be accepted as a foster family are quiet thorough but are relatively simple. She encouraged the members to become aware of foster parenting and to encourage others to do so.

The business meeting was conducted by Jo Ann Urban, president. Reports were given concerning the Jaycee-ette state project competition in Irving, in which four members are to attend. They will judge state entries.

The installation banquet will be April 29 with special guests, Charles Cotton, Texas Jaycee President, and Barbara Greer, State Jaycee-ette President, attending.

Superkids set for May 6 is being organized. Both Jaycee-ettes and Jaycees coordinate this project to benefit the Lung Assn.

The election of officers for the coming year were held. They are Margaret White, president; Kitty Richards, vice president; Anita Felan, secretary-treasurer; Darlene Beard, reporter-historian; Helen Richardson, director, and Jo Ann Urban, state director.

Special guests at the meeting were Lynda Lawrence and Barbara Jones.

where our money goes

The National Science Foundation, financed by the federal government, is spending $78,000 of taxpayer money for two professors to study -- would you believe? -- the love, sexual and working relationships of couples; two-thirds of whom will be homosexual.

Commenting on the project, foundation official Herbert Costner said, "I would say that heterosexual couples have something to learn from homosexual couples."

To find participants for the study, which will involve 300 married or unmarried hetersexual couples, 300 lesbian couples, and 300 male homosexual couples, the researchers are putting notices in bars, restaurants, and other public places.

If pleased with the project's progress, NSF expects to fund it for a second and third year, making a total of $234,000 spent on the "study."

Another National Science Foundation project will spend $53,000 to study the sex life of the Aplysia snail, which, we understand, has both male and female reproductive organs.

Says grant-recipient James Blakenship, "We're interested in what determines which role the animal is going to take - male, female, or both."

Want more?

Writing in the March Reader's Digest, Wisconsin Senator William Proxmire cites a single study prepared for the Department of Transportation that cost $225,000; or, as the senator put it, the entire federal tax payment of 120 of his constituents.

The purpose of the study, Proxmire noted, was to forecast transportation needs in the year 2025.

Its findings? We hope you're ready for this: "That automobile use would be risky in the event of urban guerrilla warfare; that if people missed having children there might be a population surge; and that people will move to the South and Southwest if a new Ice Age develops."

"When the national debt is growing at the rate of $1 billion every week and interest on that debt is the third largest item in the federal budget," Proxmire charges, "such studies are frivolous, to say the least."

But, according to the Wisconsin senator writing a greater length in the Digest article, such frivolous studies are only a small part of the irresponsible spending madness afflicting official Washington. In addition to such wasteful projects, which exist in every department at almost every level, Proxmire contends that, "Billions of dollars are squandered each year simply because existing programs are inadequately monitored."

He cites, for instance, a Veterans Administration benefit program for Filipinos who served with the U.S. Armed Forces during World War Two. In one case, and by no means an isolated one, Proxmire charges, "A Filipino veteran who been shot when he was AWOL received a 100 per cent disability pension. He has, nonetheless, fathered 26 children and garnered more than $89,000 in (U.S. taxpayer-provided) benefits from the U.S. Treasury. The VA has done nothing to curb massive fraud and abuse in the program."

"All too often," the senator concluded, "we on Capitol Hill toss millions or billions of dollars at a problem, then make no effort to see how the money is spent."

a joker in the deck

Whether agreement by Senate-House conferees on provisions of the natural gas section of the energy bill is progress, as Senator Jackson from the State of Washington declares it to be, is debatable to say the least.

Price controls will be eased in steps until 1985 when they are scheduled for removal. Much can happen in seven years. And there is a joker which authorizes the President to delay removal of price controls for a period up to 18 months in case of national emergency.

As an incentive to encourage exploration for new sources of the wonder fuel the compromise leaves much to be desired. The situation is further clouded by the possibility that controls may not be removed before 1987, if we have a President who shares the ultra-liberal views of people like Senator Jackson.

At this juncture it is not unrealistic to foresee 1985 roll around with an intensified energy problem, unless some unforeseen public awakening to realities of the situation takes place in the meantime.

our light is out

The vexations of any given day are likely to distort our responses.

As a matter of personal discipline, I am careful never to make important decisions when I am physically tired.

An I try not to take it out on you those days when the car won't start or the zipper snags or the toast is burned.

So I've saved what I am about to say until our President returned from gallivanting around Africa and resumed tending the store.

When our own dollar was wasting away to historic worthelessness on world money marts, I found it impossible to share his preoccupation with the "needs" of other nations.

While a Chicago woman was kidnapped, raped and murdered by a guy who was out on bond from a previous kidnap-rape - and my own parked car was stolen and methodically stripped and abandoned - I found it very difficult to share our President's indignation over the civil rights of South Africans and Rhodesians.

So I waited until I cooled down before saying this: Mr. President, please stay home and mind the store. And, Sir, the next time you get an urge to pontificate about people who live in terror and unjust confinement - go to Detroit without your bodyguard.

Visit there with the taxpayers who have had to lock themselves up to escape the tyranny of the streets.

I don't know who sold our President on the notion that he should be the first American President ever to visit black Africa.

With such acute homefront problems unattended, I can only deduce that his political advisors thought that our southern-born President needed further to nail down his image as a friend of blacks. It didn't work.

While in Africa the President blasted the racial policies of South Africa as "evil."

He denounced Rhodesia's new integrated regime as "illegal" and demanded, instead, a new conference within one month to negotiage total black rule for Rhodesia.

But his indignation over those situations left blacks at home unimpressed.

President Vernon Jordon of the Urban League and Sen. Ed. Brooke (r-Mass.) and The Rev. Jesse Jackson - all told U.S. News & World Report that many blacks who helped elect Carter would not again.

In South Africa, the government-owned radio publicly reminded President Carter that the very day he was lecturing the rest of the world on morality, he was being hosted by Nigeria's military dictator whose own record includes the grossest violations of human rights.

I don't know what it's going to take, but we must somehow get it through the heads of future candidates that we want a President of the United States to be President of the United States.

As a lighthouse we once led the world by example.

But our own light has gone out.

my turn

by john long

Although inflation has emerged as a serious problem, many consumer goods cost less today than they did a decade ago, according to a news story run by National Enquirer.

The National Enquirer story was based on a study conducted by U.S. News & World Report which showed that workers today work less than they did a decade ago to earn the money to buy consumer goods.

Take, for example, a new car. The study shows that 31 weeks of paychecks were required to purchase a new car in 1967, compared to the paychecks of 22½ weeks in 1977.

About 5½ weeks of work were needed to buy a color television in 1967, and about three weeks of work went to buy a comparable set in 1977, the study shows.

Another finding of the study was that a man's year-round suit sold for 39½ hours of work in 1967, but only 27 hours of work in 1977.

Of course, some things have stayed the same, and some things now cost more.

Two and a half hours work were required to pay for filling a dental cavity in 1967, and the same time is required today. A man's haircut costs a one hour's wage in 1967, and a one hour's wage in 1977.

In 1967 a new house cost a worker the paychecks of 272 weeks, and today a new house costs its owner some 311 weeks of paychecks. Reshingling the roof of the same house used to cost 98½ hours of paychecks, but costs 121 hours in 1977.

The study was based on average earnings after federal income and Social Security taxes for a worker and three dependents.

No sooner than I get used to the time of day then that time changes.

It is the time of the equinox, spring change, or clock meddling; I don't know which. All I know is that we are somehow scheduled to lose an hour this coming Sunday. Where that hour goes, and what happens to it after it gets there, is something I have never quite fathomed.

All I know is that we are scheduled to move our clocks ahead one hour this coming Sunday morning at 2.

WASHINGTON - (NEA) - The United States today is in the midst of a potentially profound social change - the massive movement of people out of the nation's major metropolitan areas and into middle-size cities, small towns and rural communities.

That little-noticed development represents the first fundamental change in the country's migration habits since the World War II boom experienced by big-city suburbs brought tens of millions of people into those communities.

Throughout the 1970s, entire metropolitan areas - not only the cities but also their suburbs - have been steadily losing population to the non-urban areas.

Calvin L. Beale, a leading authority on the dramatic population shift, notes that public opinion surveys have shown that "millions of people presumed heretofore to be happily content in their big-city and suburban homes...prefer to live in a rural area or small town."

Beale, a population expert with the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service, believes that "major demographic trends are rarely confined to the span of a single decade" and suggests the phenomenon will continue into the 1980s.

The problem of precisely defining the extent of the population shift lies in the fact that the suburbs continue to sprawl outward, with many people relocating in a county immediately adjacent to - but just outside - the Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (SMSA) used by the Census Bureau to officially designate as urban area.

After analyzing census data, Deale has concluded that about five-eighths of all non-metropolitan growth during the current decade occurred in those "exurban" counties adjacent to SMSAs.

But the remaining growth occurred in counties not adjacent to any metropolitan areas, giving them a 1970-76 growth rate of 7.3 percent.

In contrast, the national growth rate during the same period was 5.6 percent and counties inside metropolitan areas had an even lower population increase of 4.7 percent.

Among the fastest growing areas are those near cities with populations ranging from 25,000 to 50,000, while urban areas with populations as high as 750,000 remain attractive to those fleeing congested cities with millions of residents.

Other areas of exceptional growth identified by Beale:

Counties attractive to retirees and those seeking recreational opportunities, including Florida, the Southwest, the Rockies, the Upper Great Lakes, the Ozarks, the hill country of central Texas, the Sierra Nevade foothills of California and the east Texas coastal plain.

Counties containing state colleges and universities, many of which burgeoned when a teachers' college or "normal" school was transformed into a full-fledged institution of higher learning.

Counties in the Rockies and elsewhere in the West experiencing mining booms. As a result, the 1970-77 growth rate in California (9.6 per cent) fell behind the rest of the region (16.8 recent) for the first time in more than 50 years.

The serious problems associated with that vast movement have not yet been fully considered by most people or the nation's leaders. Most obvious is the fact that many of the bigger, older cities are shriveling.

From 1970 to 1976, the Cleveland-Lorain metropolitan area lost 4.0 per cent of its population while New York City and its suburbs declined by 2.8 percent.

Travel in non-urban areas invariably involves far greater distances than in metropolitan areas, thus consuming more fuel in an era of petroleum scarcity. In the West, limited water resources cannot sustain unlimited growth.

The right to relocate anywhere within the country always has been - and should remain - one of our most cherished freedoms. But this restless nation ought to at least understand and consider the ramifications of its current nomadic proclivities.

federal meddling

NEW YORK (AP)--The Justice Department antitrust division "wants IBM to bring fewer new products to market and charge higher prices," says Frank Cary, the computer company's chairman.

This position, Cary said at IBM's annual meeting this week, is inherently inflationary and thus in direct opposition to President Carter's goal of greater production and price stability.

Cary's remarks are hardly isolated, fitting instead into a matrix of increased frustration over attempts by the Justice Department, the courts and the Federal Trade Commission to refashion the marketplace.

Eastman Kodak Co. is appealing a federal court verdict involving a claim that Kodak's introduction of new products made obsolete those of smaller companies. It should give warning, the court ruled.

Borden Co. has been told by a Federal Trade Commission judge that it should license other companies to make its highly successful ReaLemon product, because that product has such a large share of the market.

The same agency has been arguing that the big cereal makers share an oligopoly because they unfairly compete through a proliferation of brands--sometimes called consumer options--that shut out competitors.

Cary's ire is aroused over the government's antitrust suit, now nine years old, a suit that "has outlasted six attorneys general in three past administrations," a suit in which IBM has yet to begin a defense.

"When you look at the record," he said, "I believe you can come to only one conclusion: "It's the Antitrust Division, not IBM, that has turned U.S. vs. IBM into the Methusaleh of antitrust trials."

The government filed its case January 17, 1969. "For nearly three years they did nothing, until late 1971 when they fielded a new team of lawyers," said Cary.

IBM insists it isn't a monopoly, a contention that may be debated in view of the fact that monopoly is not clearly established solely by percentages or dollars amounts. But it does seem to have a defense.

"Thirty years ago it (the industry) didn't even exist," Cary said. "Today in the United States it includes more than 4,000 companies," although many are active in only limited segments of the market.

Perhaps more impressive is what Cary next called attention to--that of more than 800 computer companies deposed in the suit, more than 200 entered the so-called monopolized industry since the suit began.

Letters to Editor

To The Daily News:

We have all heard the expression, "We had to rob Peter to pay Paul." This is what a lot of families will have to do if Snyder is voted wet. The only ones to benefit are the ones who sell it. As an individual, I don't know of one way I will benefit from it, but I can think of a lot of ways it can hurt. I could write a book on the hurts caused by alcohol. I was raised up in it. Both my parents were alcoholics. It killed my Dad at the age of fifty-eight, and my mother went through a living hell on earth before she finally stopped drinking.

I know all the arguments, taking a drink now and then doesn't make you an alcoholic, and if a person wants it bad enough they will get it, and why not keep the money at home. I love to eat, and I am constantly fighting the battle of the bulge. I do very well if I'm not surrounded by food, but when I take the first bite, I may as well forget about diet. I am human and I am weak. If Snyder is voted wet, I would like for one person to tell me how they benefitted by it.

But you can bet there will be a lot of heartaches, divorce, abuse and even death because of it. Personally, I don't see how a family can afford the added expense. It takes everyone in my family working just to get by and buy food. From where I sit, it looks like Snyder is doing very well without alcohol and why clutter up our town with billboards and signs that read Beer and Wine? When we travel, we don't stop at places where these signs are displayed. You might think about this, Mr. Merchant. There are a lot of good, Christian people who live in Snyder. You may want to count the cost before you decide you want to sell it.

Blood pressure medicine

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm 73 and have a medical examination every two years. Last year my blood pressure was 200 over 100 so my doctor gave me Aldomet. Later on I found it was a disqualifying medication and the Federal Air Surgeon didn't approve of my pilot's license.

I had to find another doctor and he switched me to Hydrochlorthiazide, 50 mg, one pill every morning with a glass of orange juice. Now my blood pressure is 130 over 80, heart rate 72, no abnormal sound, no murmur, no abnormality in size, lungs appeared normal. And I did a nine minute test on the treadmill. The Federal Aviation Agency gave me back my license and I'm flying again as a Sunday pilot. My doctor retired and I want to know how long must I take my pill.

DEAR READER — Sounds like you have done very well. It is impossible to know, but your pressure may have been temporarily up on your first examination. Aldomet is an effective medicine in many instances, but if you can get by with a diuretic and orange juice, as you have, that is better. Just keep your weight down, avoid salt and drink your orange juice. It won't hurt you to continue your medicine. That lower blood pressure can help to protect your arteries from disease for some time. Don't stop it without permission from a doctor familiar with your case.

You must get another doctor, however. Everyone should have a family doctor and the best time to get the right one is when you have time to look for one — not when you have an emergency in the middle of the night. Meanwhile, I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-8, Blood Pressure. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I've never seen anything about carpal tunnel surgery in your column. I must have this type of surgery on both hands. Any information you can give will be appreciated.

DEAR READER — The problem is usually manifested by pain, tingling and numbness in the hand, particularly of the thumb, index and middle finger. Aching pain may also be referred to the forearm. There are lots of causes for such symptoms; one must not conclude just because they have these symptoms it is a carpal tunnel syndrome. A careful examination is necessary to establish what is really going on.

The carpal tunnel is at the base of the hand-wrist area. Look at your wrist and feel these tendons at the front of it. There are eight tendons there that must pass through a narrow space at the base of the hand to enable you to bend your fingers or make a fist. The back of the space is bounded by wrist bones and the front is laced over with tendons and tough fiberous material.

Because the space is small to begin with, anything that encroaches on the space may cause pressure on the tendons and particularly the nerves passing through the area. This can be simple swelling.

If the problem is not temporary, such as swelling from fluid that can be controlled, or if there is evidence of damage to the nerve, it is often necessary to relieve the pressure. The surgeon frees the fiberous tissue and opens the constricted area to release the pressure. That is the operation you are likely to have. Of course if there were a mass or abnormal bone growth, that might be removed and allow you more movement.

ASTRO-GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

April 28, 1978

Even though your ambitions may appear to be a bit too lofty for others this coming year, you'll know where you're going. Big things are probable because you will plan wisely.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Trimming away the frills and getting to the heart of the matter is your strength today. Success is assured because of your practical approach. Find out who you're romantically suited to by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) An obligation will be due for payment today. Don't think of it as an inconvenience. Ridding yourself of it will bring you freedom.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There are two sides to every issue, and all problems have alternatives. You won't encounter opposition if you'll only see the other person's viewpoint.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're more eager to work hard today than you were yesterday. You'll get a bigger kick out of being productive than you will wasting time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't put a damper on your fun today by worrying about things that may never happen. Enjoy yourself and the company of others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This is a good day to devote as much time as possible to finishing projects. Clear the tracks so you can enjoy the weekend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll recognize a good idea today. Tips passed on to you that could prove personally advantageous won't collect dust in your gray matter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Normally you're a rather indifferent spender, but today you'll be very value conscious. If it's not on the bargain counter, the store isn't likely to make a sale.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This should be a productive day for you because you're not likely to wait on others to do things you can handle yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It may be difficult to come out of your shell today, since you won't feel as at ease as you usually do. Make the effort anyway.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Because you temper your dreams with realism today, you won't build yourself up for a letdown. You'll know exactly what's obtainable and what isn't.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You take things seriously today and are prepared to go after what you want. Determination and fortitude will help you win.

'Good' Girl Gets Bad Reputation

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a normal 16-year-old girl with very strict parents. The only time I get away from home is to spend the weekend with my girlfriend, and then I run with a pretty wild crowd. I've never been busted for pot or gone all the way with a guy, but most of my girlfriends have, and I know that a girl is judged by the company she keeps.

I finally got a date with a decent boy for a change, and I acted as nice as I knew how. All he got from me was a good-night kiss. After two dates, he stopped calling me. He must have heard about my reputation and it scared him off.

Abby, how can I let him know that I'm really not that bad and that I have a bad reputation only because of my friends? I like him very much and wonder if you can help me get him back?

BROWN EYES BLUE

DEAR BLUE: Unfortunately, a reputation can be damaged overnight, but it can't be repaired that fast. You earned your reputation, so now you'd better set about living it down and building up a new one.

Only by consistent good behavior and strictly staying away from "bad" company can you prove to people that you aren't the kind of girl they thought you were.

DEAR ABBY: We were given a dog as a gift, and everything is just fine, except for one matter.

After we have dinner, my husband gives the dog his plate to lick clean.

I think this is a disgusting practice that could be dangerous to our health. My husband says that as long as all the dishes go into the automatic dishwasher and are rinsed in boiling water, it doesn't make any difference. What do you think about this?

SQUEAMISH

DEAR SQUEAMISH: Tell your husband that if "it doesn't make any difference," you'd just as soon have your own dishes and let the dog have his.

DEAR ABBY: Tom and I have been married for two years. (No kids.) Another young couple moved in near us, and we liked them at first. But once I got to know the fellow (I'll call him Frank), my feelings changed.

Frank is the type who never stays home. Of course, it was none of my business, except when he started coming over here and getting Tom to go with him. I finally found out where they went when the two of them took off—they would steal, just for the fun of it. Or rather Frank would do the actual stealing and my husband would "help" him. Frank sells this stuff, and he and Tom split the profit.

Tom never stole a thing before he met Frank. I told my husband if he got caught, he would be as guilty as Frank, but he doesn't believe me. I also told him I hate Frank, but he said Frank is his friend, not mine. I worry all the time, but there is nothing I can do. Please help me.

TOM'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Tell your husband to choose between his friendship with Frank and his marriage to you. And if he chooses Frank, consider yourself lucky to be rid of a bad deal before there are children to consider.

Holocaust Puts NBC On Top

NEW YORK (AP)-"Holocaust" swept the top three places in the week's ratings race, A.C. Nielsen Co. figures show, and thrust NBC into first place in the network standings for the first time since November.

In contrast, ABC, which had been first in the standings all but four of the 32 weeks this season, was third behind NBC and CBS for the week ending April 23. It was ABC's first last-place finish since last summer.

NBC suffered disastrous ratings on "King," its miniseries in February on the life of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and had banked on a strong showing by "Holocaust." The network estimated after the miniseries completion that 120 million people had seen all or part of "Holocaust."

That would put the NBC series behind only "Roots," ABC's record-breaking miniseries of January 1977, in total audience. ABC estimated 130 million people saw some of "Roots."

In addition to the last three chapters of "Holocaust," a four-part miniseries on the plight of the Jews in Europe during World War II, NBC listed the fourth most-watched show of the week, "Little House on the Prairie."

The first installment of "Holocaust" was No. 4 in the ratings the week before.

The concluding episode of "Holocaust" was the week's most-watched show, with a rating of 34.9. Nielson says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 34.9 percent watched at least part of that installment.

NBC last won the ratings race the week ending Nov. 20, with it's four-part miniseries that included the feature films "The Godfather" and "The Godfather, Part II." Even then, ABC listed the week's two top shows, "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley."

NBC's rating for the week was 21.2. The networks say that means in an average prime time minute, 21.2 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to NBC. CBS was second at 16.7, followed by ABC at 16.1.

CBS claimed four of the bottom five spots in the ratings. The network's Wednesday movie, "Posse," was No. 64, followed by "Another Day," ABC's Monday evening baseball, and two more CBS shows, "Maude" and "CBS Reports."

Here are the week's Top 10 programs:

"Holocaust," Part IV, with a 34.9 rating representing 25.4 million homes. "Holocaust" Part II, 32.7 or 23.8 million, "Holocaust" Part III, 30.3 or 22.1 million, and "Little House on the Prairie," 24.8 or 18.1 million, all NBC; "Alice," 24.7 or 18 million, CBS; "Happy Days," 24.4 of 17.8 million, and "Laverne and Shirley," 24.3 or 17.7 million, both ABC; "All in the Family," 24.2 or 17.6 million, and "60 Minutes," 23.3 or 16.9 million, both CBS, and "Three's Company," 22.7 or 16.5 million, ABC.

Armory Must Honor Contract

CONCORD, N.H. (AP)-The Clamshell Alliance has won permission to hold a dance in the National Guard armory where hundreds of members were jailed last year after a sit-in at the Seabrook nuclear plant.

Superior Court Judge John King ruled Friday that the National Guard had to honor its $100 contract to rent the facility for the April 29 dance.

Drug Smuggling Big Business In Florida

EDITOR'S NOTE - The figures sound impressive: Hundreds of millions of dollars of marijuana seized by agents in South Florida. Maybe 70 per cent of the nation's total for the year. Yet it's only about 10 per cent of what makes it past our shores.

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) - Dollar for dollar, drug smuggling may have already surpassed tourism as South Florida's No. 1 business.

Consider the following:

-A rag-tag collection of 70 ships and 10 planes crowding dockyards and airfields in the Mjami area, all seized in connection with smuggling operations over the past year.

-Beer trucks plying the roads out of Key West carrying cargos of pot.

-Groups of "mother ships" lie off the coast, loaded to the scuppers with marijuana.

Customs agents recount the story of one smuggler, searching for his mother ship off the coast of Fort Lauderdale one night during the busy Christmas season. He accidently rendezvoused with another vessel - also carrying pot.

"That sort of sums it up," says Jim Dingfelder, a public affairs officer with U.S. Customs in Miami.

While national figures for the year aren't available, the Drug Enforcement Administration estimates that the 700 tons of marijuana seized by federal agents in the Southeast in 1977 represents at least 70 per cent of the pot seized in the United States. Nearly 500 tons of that was taken in or off the coast of South Florida.

And the statistics don't include what local authorities reaped.

Florida's proximity to the marijuana fields and coca groves of South America makes it a prime stop for smugglers.

Trafficking in cocaine is more lucrative than not and even more elusive. According to Customs officials, 485 pounds of cocaine were seized last year. At an estimated street value of $250,000 per pound, the cocaine seized cost smugglers $121 million. But officials say they have no idea how to gauge their success.

Since early December, the Coast Guard, working on tips from other agencies, has stopped nearly 20 boats in the Caribbean, confiscating more then 500,000 pounds of marijuana worth more than $135 million.

But the bigger question is how much pot is getting into the country.

"We just don't know," says Dingfelder. "It's illegal, so how do you get a handle on it?"

Congressional studies using a formula of supply and demand say only 10 per cent fo the marijuana smuggled into this country is seized. Based on that figure, a million tons could be coming into the country each year worth $6 billion.

It's an awesome figure considering South Florida's tourist industry brought in $1.75 billion last year.

"It's incomprehensible to me that 1.4 million pounds only represents 10 per cent," says Dingfelder. "If that's the case, we have to ask ourselves what we're doing here."

John Van Diver, who recently left his post as DEA regional director, puts it in a more graphic way: "If we're only getting 10 per cent, that would mean enough pot for 8 to 10 billion marijuana cigarettes is getting through. I would hope we're getting 40 to 50 per cent of it."

But whether 10 to 50 per cent is being stopped, smugglers still make fantastic profits while facing minimal risks and losses even when a shipment is seized.

"Oh, I guess they could consider it a business loss," says Cmdr. Curt Ikens, head of intelligence in the Coast Guard's Miami office. "But if these guys send out three boats and one gets through, they're still $1 million ahead."

And even when a boat is seized, its crewmen are rarely prosecuted in this country.

Federal agencies, including the DEA, Customs and the Coast Guard, sharpened many of their anti-smuggling skills during Operation Buccaneer, begun in 1973 in conjunction with the Jamaican government in an effort to stop drug traffic between the two countries.

Spurred by the success of Operation Buccaneer, six federal agencies set up Epic, a nerve center in El Paso, Texas, where intelligence reports are shared and counter-measures planned.

Coast Guard and Customs also gained another weapon when an obscure law - the Hovering Vessel Act - was dusted off and put to use in 1975.

The law allows U.S. authorities to board mother ships without awaiting permission from the flag countries when it is proven that there is interaction between the ship and the U.S. shore.

Despite inroads made, enforcement officials like Van Diver say the only way to stop the traffic is with tougher laws.

"We're not going to stop smuggling by catching them out in the ocean because it's a big ocean," says Van Diver, who is now at the University of Goergia on a federal exchange program. "Stiffer penalties and mandatory sentences are needed."

DEA officials say of 1,285 arrests in the United States last year, there were 237 convictions in federal courts, 99 in state jurisdictions. The rest of the cases ended in either dismissals or aquittals.

Most of those found guilty faced sentences of no more than 5 years.

"A lot of these people are getting out in 1½ to 2 years," says Van Diver. "In that time he can become a millionaire. What does he care if he has a criminal record?

"Pot has been portrayed as a harmless drug and the people we're fighting are seen as harmless little old pot smugglers. But what people don't realize is the big profits being made are going untaxed. It's staggering just in terms of its financial impact on society."

William Willett, a Chelsea builder, originated the idea for daylight saving in Great Britain in 1905. The British government, however, did not adopt the method until May 17, 1916.

HemisFair Made Many Changes In San Antonio

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP)-Ten years ago, the first of more than 7 million visitors to HemisFair '68 were cramming into San Antonio for a world's fair that six months later left the city with a $7 million debt.

But businessmen who pledged to cover the cost picked up the tab and today, most city leaders agree that HemisFair is responsible for dramatic changes in Texas' third largest city.

"HemisFair made San Antonio mature as a metropolitan city instead of the sluggish town it had been," says Jerome K. Harris Sr., who first proposed the idea of an international fair here in 1957.

The most visible change to visitors, even today, is the 700-foot Tower of the Americas which dominates the San Antonio skyline from its fairgrounds platform.

But HemisFair left other, more important changes in the city.

-A new convention center complex.

-A new theater for the performing arts.

-A new arena that brought the city a winning professional basketball team and a new sense of pride.

-The Institute of Texan Cultures, which grew from the Texas Pavilion.

-And, a new federal building-courthouse complex that was created from the U.S. Pavilion at the fair.

The fair also revitalized downtown San Antonio and awakened businessmen to a tourist trade that is today one of the city's major industries. About 4,000 new hotel and motel rooms were built for the fair.

"HemisFair was a downtown dream," says Congressman Henry B. Gonzalez, who is credited with making a reality of Harris' idea for the fair. "Downtown San Antonio, wherever it has been touched by HemisFair, has been transformed."

The fair made downtown San Antonio the center of the city.

"The River Walk and its environs awakened in earnest and have continued to develop. During the fair, business boomed, the town was vital and alive and downtown became the center of the city in every sense," said Harris.

San Antonio voters approved two separate bond issues to help launch HemisFair. The first, in 1964, paid for the $14 million Convention Center complex, including the Theater for the Performing Arts and the Arena. The second bond issue, passed in 1966, allotted $5.5 million for the construction of the Tower of the Americas.

Urban renewal funds were used to reroute the San Antonio River so an arm of it would extend from the center of downtown to the Convention Center. And 92 acres of downtown land were cleared for the fairgrounds.

That activity led to about $500 million in new commercial building in San Antonio while the fair was being readied for its six-month run, according to a U.S. Department of Commerce report.

"It (HemisFair) strengthened the overall economy and quality of life in San Antonio," said Eldin Schofield, vice chairman of the Chamber of Commerce's economic analysis panel.

Tourists, who numbered 2.7 million to San Antonio in 1967, totaled 7.3 million in 1976 and they generated spending of $259 million, according to figures from the Convention and Visitors Bureau.

"HemisFair put us in the national spotlight as a tourist destination and created facilities for tourists. The legacies HemisFair left were important in terms of long-range effects-River Walk improvements, new restaurants and hotels," said Sharon Eason, visitor relations manager for the bureau.

The Convention Center now handles more than 2,000 events a year and since it opened has brought about $30 million annually into San Antonio, said Francis Vickers, manager of the complex.

Gonzales, Harris and others who worked for the fair believe, however, the events's real legacy to San Antonio was in unifying the city's diverse ethnic and economic elements.

"It was a miracle of unity," said Gonzalez. Rich, poor, conservative, liberal-all worked for the fair, he explained.

"It was the first time all elements of the city came together to get something done," agreed Marshall Steves, the local businessman who helped organize the fair's financial underwriters and later served as fair president.

What about the future of the fairgrounds itself?

Harris-the idea man-says he hopes HemisFair Plaza, the now vacant midway of the fairgrounds, can be turned into a cultural center, a kind of "parade of nations" that would portray the ethnic diversity of San Antonio.

More than half the city's million residents are Mexican-American, about 10 percent are black and the rest are Anglos.

"HemisFair was like an injection of new blook into San Antonio in 1968. I think revitalizing HemisFair Plaza would do the same thing today."

Stroll Pleasure

NEW ORLEANS (AP)-It was a half hour of pure political pleasure for Vice President Walter Mondale: serenades by high school kids and ragged street musicians in the famed French Quarter.

Mondale, here for a speech Tuesday at a convention of federal judges, arrived in a limousine convoyed by motorcycle police. Mondale's "happening" was staged mainly for tourist and local news cameras.

There was no advance public buildup for his "stroll" through the Quarter, but a small crowd was attracted by the cluster of cameramen.

Colorado's Sunset Law Hasn't Been Profitable

By CARL HILLIARD
Associted Press Writer

DENVER (AP)-Two years ago, Colorado became the first state requiring its agencies to justify their existence perfodically to the Legislature and face summary execution should they fail that test.

This pioneer "Sunset law" was greeted as a breakthrough in the battle against needless bureaucracy, but so far it's hardly been a bloodbath - more nibble than bite, and a nibble that cost more tax money than it saved.

Under the Colorado statute, every board and agency is automatically abolished after six years unless legislative review determines that it serves a useful purpose. Sunset laws are a favorite objective of Common Cause, the Washington-based public interest lobby, and, by the numbers they've been a huge success. Since 1976, 24 states have followed Colorado's example, although the laws are operating in only a few so far.

In Colorado, most observers agree that Sunset needs time for a shakedown. After the first year of review, three agencies of the 13 scrutinized were eliminated. Their combined annual budget was $6,810. The cost of the review precedure to eliminate them was $200,000.

The Legislature has created one new agency and is considering creation of another one.

Sunset's cautious debut in Colorado has produced mixed reviews, and no one is more aware of that than Common Cause.

"The disappointment has been that the legislators have lacked the courage to stand up to lobbying efforts to retain or perpetuate these agencies," says Rosalie Schiff, director of Colorado Common Cause.

"But I think for the most part the Sunset law has been successful here, perhaps more in requiring the legislature to do the oversight work not done in the past, and in requiring accountability from state agencies. Maybe that's more important than getting rid of them."

All 41 state agencies are reviewed over six years. A third are up for scouting every two years.

It works this way: The state auditor's office reviews each agency, sometimes with help from outside consultants, then submits recommendations to the legislature, where they often undergo additional review by legislative employees and committees. The legislature makes the final decision.

Legislators at one point recommended scrapping the Board of Mortuary Science. They backed down after industry protests. It's still being thrased out in the legislature, as is the fate of the other four agencies. All are expected to survive.

One man who has a dual vision of Sunset is Michael March, a public administration professor at the University of Colorado who helped prepare several reviews.

"The concept was good but its actual structure was poor in two respects," he said.

"First, there was not enough time for completion of preliminary reports, but they've fixed that. Second, the criteria for continuation or discontinuation of agencies were and are too narrowly focused on accountability, not on the need for a program and its protection of the public."

March says the legislative process was disorganized and the assignment of bills to different committees, almost by chance, was a poor way to handle it. He recommends that a single Sunset Review Committee with an adequate staff examine agencies and boards.

Senate President Fred Anderson, one of those who pushed hardest for the plan, thinks that overall, the concept has worked. He wants Sunset to be written into legislation for new programs, to assure they don't continue without review forever with increased funding each year. He points out that Legislators are now doing that.

"I honestly think it's a success," Anderson said. "I never said it was going to be a be-all and end-all as far as government is concerned. But its the first time we've had a positive effort to really review programs."

Acknowledging Sunset's slow beginning, Anderson says "I think it is wise to start with the smaller ones and work up, and I've told other states that.

Humor Is Vital At Auditions

NEW YORK (AP)-What an actor needs most is humor. What an actor needs least is chewing gum.

"You'd be surprised how many get those things reversed," says Michael Shurtleff.

As casting director for 60 Broadway shows and such films as "The Sound of Music," "The Graduate" and "The Sand Pebble," he has seen thousands of performers sweat through the ordeal of trying out for parts.

"It's something they don't learn in drama school," Shurtleff explains. So a few years ago he began giving courses in how best to impress director, writer and producer when summoned as a role candidate.

That Samaritan sideline, perhaps inevitably, has led to "Audition," a book in which he sums up the subtleties of his research, so actors everywhere may learn.

The text was hailed by such eminents as Bob Fosse and Josh Logan-he has worked for both-and has stirred others to different reactions.

His puckish humor includes directors-"a lot of them just want to tell people what to do"-and the players he wants to help.

"To go into acting," he says in the book, "is like asking for admission to an insane asylum. In my card file are 50,000 actors. I would hazard to say about 500 of them earn a living acting.

"From any rational point of view, to become an actor is an act of insanity. Why would anyone go into a profession in which it is nigh onto impossible to earn a living?"

After in-person work with hundreds of students during the intensive three-month course he has developed, Shurtleff in "Audition" has been able to compress basics into a dozen "guideposts."

Their range strikes an outsider as esoteric and abstract, running from such topics as "the moment before" to "opposites," "competition" and "mystery."

"I find if an actor has humor, he has to have intelligence. It tells me a lot about him. If he doesn't, I worry a lot."

Ringo Starr Has Two Lives

LOS ANGELES (AP)-Ringo Starr says he has two lives: one as Ringo Starr, who was created by other persons, and his real life, that of Richard Starkey.

"I'll talk about my game," he says as Ringo, the former Beatle now on his own as an entertainer. As Starkey, he adds, "But certain things, I'm sorry, it has nothing to do with you. My private life is private.

"People see me as a hell of a nice guy in a wicky-wacky, wonderful way," he said when asked to define his public image. "I was the clown, the one with the funny name, the funny face, and played the drums.

"The image was created by other people. I was just doing what I was doing," he adds.

Starr made the comments while talking about "Ringo," his first television special, which aired on NBC at 9 p.m. EST Wednesday.

Self-Proclaimed Doctor Enters Plea

BLUE RIDGE, Ga. (AP)-A self-proclaimed doctor who treated patients with water, lemon juice and carrot juice for arthritis and cancer has been fined $4,000 and placed on three years probation.

Carey A. Reams, who operated the now-closed Interfaith Christian Church in Hell's Hollow, pleaded guilty Monday before Superior Court Judge Richard Neville to a felony charge of practicing medicine without a license and three misdemeanor charges.

WE MUST ATTRACT BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY AS OUR OIL DECLINES

MOST OF US WHO HAVE BEEN ACTIVE IN CITY AND CIVIC AFFAIRS HAVE BEEN AWARE FOR A NUMBER OF YEARS THAT THE INEVITABLE DECLINE IN OIL PRODUCTION WOULD NECESSITATE OUR BUILDING A STRONG TAX BASE, INDEPENDENT OF FOSSIL FUELS.

THAT'S WHY OUR CITY COUNCIL, CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, AND COUNTY BOARD OF DEVELOPMENT HAVE BEEN WORKING SO HARD THE PAST YEARS MAKING PROPOSALS TO PROSPECTIVE INDUSTRIES, DONATING LAND, AND BUILDING BUILDINGS.

THE CROWNING SUCCESS OF OUR MOST RECENT EFFORT IS THE NEW NORTHERN ELECTRIC PLANT NOW OPERATING IN SNYDER.

IT IS AWARENESS, INTELLIGENT LONG-RANGE PLANNING AND PLAIN HARD WORK--WHICH WILL ENABLE SNYDER TO CONTINUE ITS GREAT RECORD OF PROSPERITY.

TO TRY TO TIE LEGALIZED LIQUOR TO AN "IMPROVED BUSINESS CLIMATE" IS A LITTLE TOO MUCH, EVEN FOR PEOPLE WHO ENJOY LIQUOR IN MODERATION. GOING WET WITH BEER ONLY IS ENOUGH TO DISCOURAGE ECONOMIC GROWTH, IF THE LESSONS OF HISTORY MEAN ANYTHING.

LIQUOR HAS NEVER BEEN ANY TOWN'S BOON. LIQUOR HAS BEEN THE BUST OF MANY. MAYBE THOSE OF YOU WHO DO NOT STAND TO GAIN FINANCIALLY CAN SEE THE PICTURE A LITTLE MORE CLEARLY THAN CAN THE TINY MINORITY WHO WOULD REAP A PROFIT.
